House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

"Devote your hearts and souls to seeking the Lord your God."

"To the leaders of the nations, to those who were about to help Solomon build one of the wonders of the ancient world, the great temple of Jerusalem, King David addressed these words.

To prepare themselves for the great task they were about to undertake, David exhorted: "Devote your hearts and souls to seeking the Lord, your God."

As Members of Congress, before you undertake your tasks for this Nation, before your discussions which will affect this country and have reactions around the world, before you try to help people of your district with any lasting effect, I plead with you: "Devote your hearts and souls to seeking the Lord, your God."

Do not presume you know God or the Lord's plan or purpose for you or for this Nation. To seek the Lord is your first task, now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. Kilpatrick) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ms. KILPATRICK of Michigan led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to five 1-minute requests on each side.

IMMIGRATION REFORM

(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, this country has a long history of accepting immigrants from all over the world and offering them the potential to pursue a better life. America offers the rights, liberties, and dignity not seen anywhere else in the world.

Now the need for immigration reform has come to the forefront of our country and it is time to remove a carrot that dangles in front of the faces of illegal immigrants. As long as there is the promise of easy illegal employment, immigrants will continue to disregard our laws and penetrate our borders. We must enforce strict laws on employers who use illegal labor in order to discourage illegals coming to America looking for a free ride.

Mr. Speaker, we must do all that is possible to stop illegal immigration, and I remain committed to enacting measures that will effectively solve this problem.

VOTING RIGHTS REAUTHORIZATION ACT

(Mr. JEFFERSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. JEFFERSON. Mr. Speaker, today this body will take up reauthorizing critical provisions of the historic Voting Rights Act for another 25 years.

Every year new cases of voter intimidation are reported to the Department of Justice, and every year changes to voting laws threaten to curtail the power of minority voters. In my home State of Louisiana, the State legislature has faced objections to proposed election law changes every year since this historic bill was signed.

Mr. Speaker, my own mother had to pass a literacy test to vote just a few years before the Voting Rights Act became law, so it has special personal meaning for me. Yet, since its passage, challenges to minority voting rights continue in my home State and across the South.

It has been 41 years since President Johnson signed the original legislation that restored faith in our democracy and gave truth to President Lincoln's demand for a government of the people. After Hurricane Katrina, minorities in Louisiana face new obstacles in exercising our right to vote. The Voting Rights Act is just as relevant today as it was in 1965.

The struggle is not over, and we must not stop now. I urge my colleagues to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act now and in the spirit in which it was intended.

DHS CUTS ANTITERRORISM FUNDS FOR NEW YORK CITY

(Mrs. KELLY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise once again in opposition to the recent decision by the Department of Homeland Security to cut antiterrorism funds for New York City and Washington by 40 percent, while increasing spending for many smaller cities that are far less prone to terrorist attacks.

This week’s revelation by the DHS Inspector General about the serious flaws in the National Asset Database
VOTING RIGHTS ACT
(Ms. KILPATRICK of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KILPATRICK of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, over 51 years ago this month, President Lyndon Baines Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act. America is a better country because of the Voting Rights Act.

The right to vote is the most fundamental thing our American citizens have to participate fully in American democracy. The Voting Rights Act is our Nation's most crucial and critical civil rights victory. The law commemorates the lives of those who marched, died and participated that all we might be better Americans and live and vote in the democracy that we love.

It is important today, as we debate the Voting Rights Act, that America pay particular attention. This law was good then, this law is good now, and it is needed for our future so that Americans might rise up and live in God's best interest.

Remember, today, urge your colleagues, call your Congressperson, tell them to vote to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act for 25 more years.

COMPETITION LOWERS HEALTH CARE COSTS
(Mr. MURPHY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, did you know that a 25-year-old male in good health can purchase a policy for health insurance for $950 in Kentucky and the same policy costs about $5,800 in New Jersey? Did you know that a policy priced at $1,600 in Iowa is $2,600 in Washington State? And did you know that same policy costs about $1,000 in Massachusetts?

One reason for this disparity is that families have little or no choice when it comes to selecting health care insurance. Where there is no competition, there is very little that drives cost down. Each state has its own health insurance mandates, and some of them are good, but there are about 1,800 of them all across the Nation, including provisions for acupuncturists, massage therapists, and hair replacements.

If a family's cost were helpful, but when you add up the cost, they can put health care out of the reach of families. Congress should establish a trial program allowing consumers and families to purchase health insurance policies from other States. Let us give families a choice instead of more costs.

I urge my colleagues to learn more about competition in health insurance by looking at my Web site at Murphy.house.gov. America needs us to go work on this.

U.S. PEACE AND DIPLOMACY

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, nearly 4 years ago, this administration came before us and promoted their idea of peace and democracy in the Middle East. Their vehicle for accomplishing this? A unilateral first strike against Iraq and the subsequent occupation.

Let us reflect on this policy this morning. In Iraq, over 2,500 American soldiers have died, tens of thousands injured, over 100,000 innocent Iraqi civilians killed, and countless injured. We are mired in a civil war there, and violence is growing every day.

In Iran, international efforts at diplomacy have been undermined by our Iraq policy. This administration seems determined to repeat the disaster of Iraq in Iran, most recently by trying to link Iran to the attacks on Israel.

As a broader regional war breaks out between Israel and Lebanon, spurred on by Hezbollah, instead of trying to find ways to end the conflict by rescuing negotiations between the Palestinians and Israel, this administration, which has an unfortunate talent for war, is making statements which will contribute to escalation. Israel urgently needs diplomatic assistance. The only way the U.S. can reclaim its role as a mediator is to speak and act like a mediator. You can bomb the world to pieces, but you can't bomb the world to peace.

LONE STAR VOICE: MARIBETH BURGESS RAY

(Mr. POE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, our individual heritage of the past is important, but our future as Americans is more important. Many Americans trace their past through Ellis Island. Mrs. Maribeth Burgess Ray of Baytown, Texas, recently went there, and she says:

"While at Ellis Island, I found a profound statement. An article had a picture of a mother and her two sons. The newcomers' attire was that of the country from which they had fled. The statement was, 'If the ones who flee do not change their appearance and speech, they only bring what they fled from to America, thus changing America into the country that they were fleeing from.'"

Today, we forget what America is and what it stands for. If you what you are fleeing from is so bad, leave it behind and adapt to what it is you are looking for. Let us keep America America, with the beautiful quilt of immigrants that make it up, but let us not turn America into something it is not. Don't let our borders be penetrated by the baggage that some refuse to leave behind.

Mr. Speaker, people who come to America should assimilate and just become Americans.

And that's just the way it is.

SICK ATTEMPT TO RAISE CAMPAIGN CASH

(Mrs. MILLER of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, politics unfortunately, can be a very tough business, and the low road is often taken by political adversaries in an effort to gain power.

But the video released by the Democratic Campaign Committee hit a new low. This cynical attempt to raise campaign cash actually uses photographs of those who made the ultimate sacrifice so that the DCCC could raise campaign cash. They made that sacrifice in defense of freedom and liberty and democracy. The Democratic leadership should be ashamed, and every Democratic Member of this House should be ashamed and call upon their leadership to remove this video which is an affront to our fallen soldiers and to their families.

It is appalling that the Democrats have sunk to such a new low as to employ doctored photos and tasteless videos in their pursuit of power. The American people and our fallen heroes deserve more.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Ms. Curtis, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2872. An act to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of Louis Braille.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed concurrent resolutions of the following titles in which concurrence of the House is requested:

S. Con. Res. 96. Concurrent resolution to commemorate, celebrate, and reaffirm the national motto of the United States on the 50th anniversary of its formal adoption.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 9, FANNIE LOU HAMER, ROSA PARKS, AND CORETTA SCOTT KING VOTING RIGHTS ACT REAUTHORIZATION AND AMENDMENTS ACT OF 2006

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 910 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 910

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause (b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H. R. 9) to amend the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed 90 minutes equally divided and controlled by the Majority Leader and the Minority Leader or their designees. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The committee amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. Notwithstanding clause 11 of rule XVIII, no amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. Each such amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against such amendments are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the House shall arise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The gentleman from Florida (Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield myself 30 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

(Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, the rule provides 90 minutes of general debate, evenly divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and it also provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions. Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate to begin by quoting the 15th amendment to the United States Constitution: "The rights of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

As enshrined by the 15th amendment, there really is no more fundamental right in our democratic system than the right of each person of the United States to vote. The history of the United States is marked with occasions where minorities were in multiple ways, and by multiple ways, blocked from having their voices heard at the ballot box.

One of the great advancements in our American democracy was the Voting Rights Act. This historic legislation was the first comprehensive Federal statute to enforce minorities’ constitutional right to vote. The provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act provided swift relief to those citizens who were victims of discriminatory voting practices and provided them access in a concrete and effective way to the voting booth.

Since it was enacted, the Voting Rights Act has enfranchised millions of racial, ethnic, and language minority citizens to have access to that sacred right that is voting by breaking down barriers and permitting increased minority participation in elections for candidates at all levels of government.

After 41 years of breaking down walls, walls to participation in our democratic process, the Voting Rights Act would soon expire if not reauthorized. With this in mind, the Committee on the Judiciary began hearings to determine whether the legislation is still needed. The committee held 12 hearings on the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, hearings to elicit testimony from State and local elected officials, scholars, lawyers, representatives from the voting and civil rights communities. The testimony and evidence presented before the committee brought to the fact that even though we have made great strides to stop the discriminatory practices of the past, there is ample evidence that minorities today face discriminatory practices at the ballot box.

Mr. Speaker, in my community for decades we saw the voting power of minorities diluted to the point that they were for many years unable to elect the representatives of their preference. The Voting Rights Act helped correct that wrong, helped enfranchise countless citizens into our democratic political system. The underlying legislation will reauthorize the expiring provisions of the Voting Rights Act for 25 years.

I would like to point out one provision which I think is very important, especially to my community, as well as communities throughout the country. The bill extends section 203, the existing language assistance requirements that provide that election materials be provided in select covered jurisdictions. These provisions of the Voting Rights Act require that non-English voting materials be made available in jurisdictions where 5 percent of the citizen voting age population consists of a single language, limited English proficient minority and in which there is a literacy rate below the national average, or more than 10,000 citizens who meet those criteria reside. These provisions, brought out in the hearings, cover approximately 12 percent of the counties in the United States. It certainly has benefited the counties that I am honored to represent.
The bilingual language assistance provisions play a critical role in assisting both native-born and naturalized citizens to fully participate in our democratic form of government. Older residents, Mr. Speaker, who have been legal residents of the United States for many years and apply for citizenship, are exempt when they take their citizenship exam to become United States citizens. They are exempt under our law from the English requirements. In other words, they take the same exam as the other naturalized residents of the United States who have been there for many, many years, they are allowed to take, if they so wish, the naturalization exam to become a United States citizen in the language of their origin.

In addition, many native-born citizens have limited English skills because they primarily speak other languages and they require assistance. These citizens should be given the opportunity to understand the ballot. Whether it is a simple, but critically important, choice between two or among candidates or a complicated ballot initiative, those citizens of the United States should have the opportunity to fully participate, fully understand what they are voting on and that way be active participants in our democratic system. That is what the legislation does.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 9 was introduced by Chairman SENSENBRENNER for his hard work, diligence, and leadership as well on this legislation. I know they put long hours into this process with determination, perseverance, and extraordinary good faith.

I urge my colleagues to support both the rule and the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 8 minutes and I thank my friend from Florida for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, before going into the substance of what we are doing today, I would like to make note that a few weeks ago in the Rules Committee when we were originally contemplating this bill, I offered an amendment to the rule that would have extended general debate to 4 hours, ensuring that all Members and Democrats were afforded the opportunity to have their voices heard on the House’s actions today. My amendment, however, was defeated along a straight party line, and I did not offer it again yesterday.

However, the majority provided 2 hours of general debate in the last rule on their other circumstances, and they also provided 2 hours of general debate on their politically driven flag-burning amendment.

If the flag is the symbol of democracy, then the Voting Rights Act is the very foundation on which that flag flies. It is both troubling and telling that the majority is unwilling to extend today’s debate beyond 90 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, as debate on this historic bill commences, I am reminded of President Kennedy’s words delivered to Congress in 1962 with the first draft of what would later become both the Civil Rights and Voting Rights Acts. President Kennedy wrote, and I quote, “In this year of the emancipation centennial, justice requires us to ensure the blessing of liberty for all Americans and their posterity, not merely for reasons of economic efficiency, world diplomacy and domestic tranquility, but above all, because it is right.”

For African Americans, there exists a no more seminal piece of law, other than the Civil Rights Act, than the Voting Rights Act. Today, more than 40 years after its initial passage, Congress is again historical decision to reauthorize this mandate.

Americans have come together over the years to denounce systematic segregation and racism. Indeed, we have come a long way. But we cannot become complacent and take for granted the liberties and rights which this law provides and affords.

Today’s discussion cannot only be about preserving the right to vote for those of us who always enjoy it. It has to be about ensuring that Americans from all walks of life and countries of origin are provided with these very same rights.

There are some in this body who may argue or imply that the Voting Rights Act is no longer needed. They may call for an end to the act’s preclearance and bilingual ballot requirements. Others may go so far as to suggest that English proficiency be a precondition to voting.

For them, this is not a debate about fairness. It is about ideology. With all due respect, Mr. Speaker, ideology has no place in today’s debate.

The Voting Rights Act was enacted to break down the walls built by Jim Crow, not build them back up. There is no difference between a poll tax, a literacy test or an English proficiency requirement as a precondition to voting. All are draconian and targeted efforts to block a specific group of people from voting and, I might add, people who are registered voters and citizens of the United States.

Each attempt by a Republican Member to preclude minimum language requirements with the right to vote, in my judgment, breathes new life into a form of Jim Crow. Each attempt by a Republican Member to dilute the influence of minority voters mocks long-standing legislative and judicial precedent and mandates. When this happens, we are reminded why this law still stands today.

We will hopefully extend the Voting Rights Act by 25 years today. We should extend it beyond 100 years because some of the problems will probably continue to exist that long. No one can dispute the brutal reality that the suppression and disenfranchisement of minority voters is still tolerated today. We saw it in Florida in 2000. We saw it in Ohio in 2004, and we will probably see it again in 2006 in November and in 2008 in some other State where people require a victory regardless of the means to their end.

We should fear those who dismiss concerns, deny such problems exist, and claim ignorance and naiveté as the reason for the neglect. These are the answers given by those who have sat idly by throughout history when the rights and privileges of the weak and poor have been trampled on by the powerful. These were the very answers given by those who composed the Civil Rights and Voting Rights Acts more than 40 years ago. We will hear from their 21st century ideologues and moral duplicity and demagoguery.

I stand before you as a victim of decades of injustice rooted in racial segregation. Through these eyes, I bore witness to the absolute tyranny of those who stop at nothing to stop blacks from achieving statutory equality and the right to vote. Through these eyes, I have also seen hate and racism give way to tolerance and fairness.

When history judges our actions today, it will question whether or not we met the expectations levied by those who have come before us. Did we break down barriers or did we build up walls?

Did we start a chapter in American history aimed at addressing the challenging of multiculturalism, prejudicial discrimination, and blatant xenophobia, or permit the continued manifestation of these sad realities in our country?

Four years, Mr. Speaker, many of us have fought tirelessly to honor the memories of civil rights advocates who came before us. It is their shoulders on which I stand and my colleagues stand today, the shoulders of Fannie Lou Hamer and Rosa Parks and Coretta Scott King and Sojourner Truth and Frederick Douglass and Nat Turner and so many courageous others, white and black. It is their successes which we seek to emulate; their words through which we attempt to tie the past to the present and inspire for the future.

Colleagues, do not use today as an opportunity to congratulate ourselves.
Today is not a day of jubilation. New faces have been added to the struggle, and that struggle continues. Any attack on their right to vote is an attack on ours.

I urge my colleagues to support the underlining legislation and reject any amendments to it. We should do this not for the partisan benefit, but because, as John Kennedy said, “It is right.” Voting rights are right.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my colleague and good friend on the Rules Committee, Dr. GINGREY of Georgia.

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished vice chairman of Rules for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the rule, and I would ask my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

I ask our committee allowed the opportunity to consider four very important amendments that will fine tune the underlining legislation, ensuring that it is equally applied to all States and addresses the world as it is in 2006, rather than 1964.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my support for the amendment offered by my colleagues from Georgia, Representatives NORWOOD and WESTMORELAND. These amendments would ensure the constitutionality of the underlining bill. I also like to encourage everyone to support two very good amendments offered by Representative KING of Iowa and Representative GOMHER of Texas.

The underlining bill, as drafted now, aims to address voting patterns and the world in 1964. Mr. Speaker, a lot has changed in 40-plus years. Every State has seen changes in population and voter participation, and we should have a law that fits the world of 2006.

In 1964, my home State of Georgia not only was behind other States in voter participation, but also employed discriminatory tactics to suppress minority voting rights. And therefore, Georgia was justifiably subject to Voting Rights Act, section 5. However, in 2006, the landscape of voter participation and the number of minority individuals holding elective office is dramatically different.

In 1970, Mr. Speaker, there were 30 black elected officials in Georgia. In 2000, there were 582 black elected officials. With respect to types of elective office, African Americans have held and continue to hold some of the highest leadership positions in the Georgia legislature, county governments and municipalities.

Today, Georgia’s attorney general and labor commissioner, both Statewide elected offices, are currently held by African Americans. Georgia has four African Americans in our congressional delegation, and with California, New York and, yes, Mr. Speaker, Illinois, for the highest number. Three of seven seats on the Georgia supreme court, including the position of chief justice, are held by African Americans.

In fact, in Georgia the percentage of registered voters and voter turnout are higher, let me repeat, higher among blacks than whites. So, Mr. Speaker, I would put Georgia’s record up against every other State in this Union, like every other State in this Union, must be treated equally with a Voting Rights Act that addresses the problems of 2006, not 1966. And the Voting Rights Act must apply the same standards to each and every State.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I want to encourage my colleagues to support this fair and equitable rule. I also ask my colleagues to keep an open mind as we debate four fair, commonsense amendments after today’s general debate. I believe we need to support these amendments and send to the Senate a Voting Rights Act for the 21st century.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 2 1/2 minutes to the distinguished minority whip from Maryland, my good friend, STENY HOYER.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this bipartisan legislation to the four amendments which I perceive to be weakening. In particular, I want to commend Congressman WATT, Congressman SENSENBRENNER, the chairman of the committee and, of course, the ranking member, Mr. CONYERS, for the extraordinary work that they have done to come together on a bipartisan piece of legislation, reauthorizing key provisions of the Voting Rights Act.

Let me add, too, the Members of the Congressional Black Caucus and the Hispanic Caucus and the Pacific Caucus deserve our thanks for their instrumental work on this bill and on these issues.

This legislation is a recognition that our democratic system is not perfect. While our Nation has made tremendous strides in its ongoing quest to guarantee the ideals of our Constitution, the specter of discrimination still haunts us and our people.

And thus, we, the Members of this Congress, have a special responsibility today to be vigilant in perfecting and protecting the most fundamental expression of equality in any democracy, the right to vote.

We cannot ever forget our rights, though God-given, have been hard won. Brave American citizens have been subjected to intimidation, violence and, yes, even death, to secure the rights that are theirs under the Constitution.

Our colleague, Congressman JONY LEEVES, is a living testament to that bravery. Forty-one years ago, JOHN and his fellow marchers were brutally attacked when they simply tried to cross the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma, Alabama, on their way to Montgomery to assert to do what every American believes is a birthright, to vote.

The Declaration of Independence says that “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights.” That is what it says. This legislation is about making it so.

The people who walked across the Edmund Pettus bridge and in millions of people marched and demonstrated to challenge rank injustice in their peaceful actions still inspire us today.

Our Nation did the right thing 41 years ago. It is important for us to do the right thing today.

I urge my colleagues, vote for the underlining bipartisan bill and against those amendments which were offered, which will weaken our commitment.

We must keep faith with the promise and requirements of our Constitution. We must reauthorize these key provisions of the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FISHER).

Mr. FITZPATRICK of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 stands as one of the most important pieces of legislation ever passed by this Chamber in its distinguished history. Today, it has a distinctive opportunity to reauthorize the expiring portions of this landmark legislation for another 25 years.

The Voting Rights Act ensures that every American, regardless of race or ethnicity, has the franchise to take part in our democracy, and it is a direct response to new allegations of discrimination in our Nation.

Over the course of this year the House Judiciary Committee conducted 12 hearings on claims of discrimination in our democratic process.

The committee compiled over 8,000 pages of testimony and heard stories of disfranchisement from across the Nation. Mr. Speaker, although our Nation continues to stand as the beacon of freedom and democracy in the world, we can never lose sight of the need to protect the rights of our citizens to participate in our democracy, and it is a historic piece of legislation that has guided our Nation throughout our history.

The provisions of H.R. 9 will reaffirm our Nation’s commitment to protecting the rights of all Americans to elect their candidates of choice so that every American is equally represented under the law. This is a good bill, Mr. Speaker. It is a bipartisan bill. And I call on all my colleagues to support this rule and final passage of the legislation.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my colleague on the Rules Committee and my good friend from Massachusetts (Mr. McGOVERN).

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend the gentleman from Florida, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the Voting Rights Act is a historic piece of legislation, one that seeks to ensure that all our citi-izens can participate in this democracy.
And I want to commend Chairman SEN-
SENENBRENNER and Ranking Member CON-
YERS for their work in crafting a bipartisan agreement to reauthorize this act.

As Senator KENNEDY often says, civil rights remains the unfinished business of America. Today, Mr. Speaker, should be time for us to come together to celebrate the accomplishments of the Voting Rights Act, to affirm the fact that it works, and to remind ourselves that our work is not yet complete.

Instead, what the Republican leadership has done is to guarantee that much of this debate will be divisive and ugly.
They have decided that it is more important to placate a small faction of their base than to embrace a thoughtful, bipartisan agreement. And that is shameful. This House should be doing everything in its power to prevent discrimination and to promote voting equality.

At the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, I hope we will pass this bill without any of the poison pill amendments allowed by this rule. These amendments will only weaken the Voting Rights Act in spirit and in practice.

It has been just a few decades since many States and localities had discriminatory regulations on the books, things like poll taxes, literacy tests, and others. And, sadly, discrimination still exists in America. It is essential that today we not turn back the clock, that we not lose the possibility to prevent these laws from being passed and will ensure that minority voters continue to elect the preferred candidate of their choice.
The bill will extend the Federal observer program but retire the outdated
Federal examiner program.

I also wanted to talk about the bipartisanship of H.R. 9. I have been a member of the Judiciary Committee for 12 years now, and I will be honest, there is not a lot that is agreed upon in that community by Republicans and Democrats, by conservatives and liberals.
That is just the nature of most of the issues we take up in that committee.
But we do agree on the importance of voting rights, and because of that commitment, H.R. 9 passed the committee by a vote of 33-1.

I look forward to hearing from my fellow supporters of this legislation and would personally like to thank Mr.
NADLER for his dedication and his commitment, and Mr. CONYERS and urge my colleagues to vote for passage of this rule and ultimately passage of the bill.
Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 3 minutes to my colleague on the Rules Committee, the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. MATSUI), my friend.

Ms. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the idea of one person, one vote, regardless of race, background, or gender, is a fundamental principle of this Nation. The practical application, however, is another matter. American history is a testament to this fact. Despite the 15th amendment to the Constitution, our history is filled with efforts to prevent people from participating. From poll taxes, threats, and even violence, as my colleague and dear friend Congressman
JOHN LEWIS can attest.

The hundreds of thousands of men and women of the civil rights movement also bear witness to the fact that through effort and sheer determination, we can close the gap between the principle as enshrined in the Constitution and the reality: the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

As President Johnson once said:
"The vote is the most powerful instrument ever devised by man for breaking down injustice and destroying the terrible walls which imprison men because they are different from other men."

Now we are here for the renewal of the Voting Rights Act. Democrats and Republicans crafted a bipartisan bill.
Supporters were prepared to pass it weeks ago. But the majority leadership was thwarted by opposition within their own party. Regrettably, the Voting Rights Act, despite its storied history, apparently remains controversial among a faction of the majority party.

Most Members of this Chamber, Democrats and Republicans alike, believe in the Voting Rights Act long ago proved itself to be a force for good in this country. It is disappointing that some still need convincing.

I am particularly troubled by the amendment on the need for bilingual ballots, especially on the heels of the divisive House and Senate debates over immigration. That is why it is important to focus on one salient fact: three quarters of those who use the language assistance provision are native-born
Hispanics and the rest are naturalized citizens. So this amendment aims to restrict the rights of fully law-abiding citizens of the United States.

Since being signed into law four decades ago, this landmark legislation has successfully been used to confront discrimination at the voting booth. But we still need the tools and resources of the Voting Rights Act. It bridges the gap between the principle of one man, one vote and the reality and will re-lodge that gap to the history books.

Mr. LINCOLN-DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The revocation of one of our country’s seminal laws, the Fannie Lou
Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act, ensures that we continue to protect the voice of our Nation’s minorities.

The unprovoked attacked on March 7, 1965, by State troopers on peaceful marchers crossing the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma, Alabama, en route to the State capital in Montgomery, provided a vivid demonstration of the need for Federal legislation. Despite the existence of the 15th amendment, sadly, many Southern States simply ignored the amendment by engaging egregious laws such as the poll tax, literacy tests and blatantly discriminatory re-districting.

The Voting Rights Act passed due to the leadership of President Lyndon Johnson and Republicans and Democrats who overcame these efforts to deny minorities the right to vote. My wife and I had the distinct privilege of marching last year in the 40th anniversary march in Selma. It was an extraordinary experience for us and a reminder of how far our country has come in the last 40 years and how far we still have to go in our civil rights movement. The march even included many figures in the civil rights movement, Congressman John Lewis of Georgia, who was beaten and almost left for dead when he attempted to cross the bridge leading the original Selma march.

Today, the party of Abraham Lincoln has a unique opportunity to contribute to the progress that has been made in advancing civil rights and narrowing the gap in minority voting rights.

Before relinquishing the floor, I want to address one controversial provision in this legislation, section 203, which provides voting assistance in other languages. While I am a strong supporter of making English our country’s official language, I feel it would be important that when it comes to voting, particularly for ballot initiatives, some citizens can speak English but not read it. These are American citizens who own the right to vote, but may need the assistance provided in section 203. I applaud the leadership of Chairman Sensenbrenner and Congressman Watt, and all the Members on both sides of the aisle who have brought this landmark bill to the floor and urge support for this bill.

We need to defeat all amendments and pass this historic legislation.

Mr. Hastings of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Doggett). (Mr. Doggett asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. Doggett. Mr. Speaker, while young Americans die abroad in the name of democracy, some in this Congress scheme to undermine democracy at home by not renewing key provisions in the Voting Rights Act. They even seek a voter literacy test.

Bill Hulse of Texas, one Congressmen recently declared that “I don’t think we have racial bias in Texas anymore.” This shows not only insensitivity and indifference, it shows why we need to renew completely, without weakening, amendments, the Voting Rights Act.

President Lyndon B. Johnson had the will and the courage to secure passage of this fundamental guarantee even though he understood the price that he and the Democratic Party would pay. Now it is not only the law but the Administration’s will to enforce that law that is at stake. Overruling professionals at the U.S. Department of Justice, political appointees disregarded obvious Voting Rights Act violations in both the DeLay gerrymandering of Texas and the Georgia voter identification law. The professional employees were vindicated by the courts, but a third opinion of the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division have left.

Renewing democracy abroad begins with renewing democracy at home.

JUSTICE STAFF SAW TEXAS DISTRICTING AS ILLEGAL

(Hy Dan Egger)

Justice Department lawyers concluded that the landmark Texas congressional re-districting plan was unfair. Tom DeLay (R) violated the Voting Rights Act, according to a previously undisclosed memo sent by The Washington Post. But senior officials overruled them and approved the plan.

The memo, unanimously endorsed by six lawyers and two analysts in the department’s voting section, said the redistricting plan illegally diluted black and Hispanic voting power in two congressional districts. It also said the plan eliminated several other districts in which minorities had a substantial, though not necessarily decisive, influence in elections.

The State of Texas has not met its burden in showing that the proposed congressional redistricting plan does not have a discriminatory effect,” the memo concluded. The memo recommended rejecting a controversial Texas congressional redistricting map. Such recommendation, while not binding, historically carry the weight of an unanimous finding such as the one in the Texas case.

“I have never seen a clearer instance, where everybody agrees at least on the staff level that it is a very, very strong case,” Posner said. “The fact that everybody agreed that there were redistricting in minority voting strength, and that they were significant, raises a lot of questions as to why it was” approved, he said.

The Texas memo also provides new insight into the highly politicized environment surrounding that state’s redistricting fight, which prompted Democratic state lawmakers to flee the state in hopes of derailing the plan. DeLay and his allies participated intensively as they pushed to redraw Texas’s congressional boundaries and strengthen George W. Bush control of the U.S. Senate.

DeLay, the former House majority leader, is fighting state felony counts of money laundering and conspiracy—crimes he is contesting with committee money illegally.injecting corporate money into state elections. His campaign efforts were made in preparation for the new congressional map that was the focus of the Justice Department memo.

One of two DeLay aides also under indictment in the case, James W. Ellis, is cited in the Justice Department memo for pushing for the map despite the risk that it would not receive “preclearance,” or approval, from the department. Ellis and other DeLay aides successfully forced the adoption of their plan in Texas, despite strong concerns from legislators that would not have raised as many concerns about voting rights discrimination, the memo said.

“We need our map, which has been researched and vetted for months,” Ellis wrote in an October 2003 document, according to the Justice Department memo. “The preclearance and political risks are the delegation’s and we are willing to assume those risks, but only with our map.”

Holliday said the Justice Department’s approval of the redistricting plan, signed by Sheldon T. Bradshaw, principal deputy assistant attorney general, was valuable to Texas officials because it helped them avoid court. He called the internal Justice Department memo, which did not come out during the court case, “yet another indictment of Tom DeLay, because this memo shows conclusively that the map he produced violated the law.”

DeLay spokesman Kevin Madden called Hebert’s characterization “nonsensical political babble” and echoed the Justice Department in pointing to court rulings that have found no discriminatory impact on minority voters.

“Fair and reasonable arguments can be made in favor of the map’s merits that also refute the claim the plan is unfair or doesn’t meet legal standards,” Madden said.

“Ultimately the court will decide whether the criticisms have any weight or validity.”

Texas civil-law firm Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison demonstrated that DeLay and Ellis insisted on last-minute changes during the Texas legislature’s final deliberations. Ellis said DeLay traveled to Texas to attend many of the meetings that produced the final map, and Ellis himself worked through the state’s lieutenant governor and a state senator to shape the outcome.

In their analysis, the Justice Department lawyers emphasized that the last-minute changes made by the legislature’s conference committee, out of public view—fundamentally altered legally acceptable redistricting proposals approved separately by the Texas House and Senate. The change was not necessary for these plans to be altered, except to advance partisan political goals, the department lawyers concluded.

Jeffery R. Holland, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott, said he did not have any immediate comment.

The Justice Department memo recommends that the Texas plan as written by two analysts and five lawyers. In addition, the head of the voting section at the time, Joseph Rich, wrote a concurrence opinion saying that the department lawyers had not considered all the factors before recommending that the Texas plan be altered, except to advance partisan political goals, the department lawyers concluded.

The complexity of the arguments surrounding the Voting Rights Act is evident in the Justice Department memo, which focused particular attention on seats held in 2003 by a white Democrat, Martin Frost, and a Hispanic Republican, Henry Bonilla.

Voting data showed that Frost commanded great support from minority constituents, while Bonilla had relatively little support from Hispanics. The question to be considered by Justice Department lawyers was whether the new map was “regressive,” because it diluted the power of minority voters to elect true candidate of choice. Under the adopted Texas plan, Frost’s congressional district was dismantled, while the proportion of Hispanics in Bonilla’s district dropped significantly. Those losses to black and Hispanic voters were not offset by other gains, the memo said.

“This result quite plainly indicates a reduction in minority voting strength,” Rich wrote in his concurrence opinion. “The state’s argument that it has increased minority voting strength simply does not stand up under careful analysis.”

POLITICS ALLEGED IN VOTING CASES

(By Dan Eggen)

The Justice department’s voting section, a small and usually obscure unit that enforces the Voting Rights Act and other federal election laws, has been thrust into the center of a growing number of departure and controversial decisions in the Civil Rights Division as a whole.

Many current and former lawyers in the section say some of the lawyer’s recent departures and controversial decisions in the Civil Rights Division as a whole.

Some lawyers who have recently left the Civil Rights Division, such as Rich at the Lawyers’ Committee for Civil Rights Under Law and William Yeomans at the American Civil Liberties Union, say the Bush administration’s unusual step of publicly criticizing the way voting matters have been handled. Other former and current employees have discussed the Justice Department’s actions as an unnecessary involvement in partisan disputes. The practice ended up embarrassing
The department in Arizona in 2005, when Justice officials had to rescind a letter that wrongly endorsed the legality of a GOP bill limiting provisional ballots.

In Arizona, a federal judge eventually ruled against the voter identification plan on constitutional grounds, likening it to a poll tax flow era. There would have required voters to pay $20 for a special card if they did not have photo identification; Georgia Republicans are pushing ahead this year with a bill that does not charge a fee for the card.

Holland called the data in the case “very straightforward,” and said it showed statistically that over 90 percent of Georgians had identification and that no racial disparities were evident.

But an Aug. 25 staff memo that recommended opposing the plan disparaged the quality of the state’s information and said that only limited conclusions could be drawn from it.

“They took all that data and willfully misread it,” one source familiar with the case said. “They were only looking for statistics that would back their view.”

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend and distinguished leader from Minnesota (Mr. KENNEDY).

Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act.

Before the passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, thousands of citizens were denied their constitutional right to vote on the basis of race. While the system has vastly improved, the need for the Voting Rights Act remains.

A sacred right possessed by Americans is the right to choose their government. That is why it is so important to pass the bill today, to preserve the rights for all citizens. We have a moral obligation to ensure that no citizen is ever denied their right to vote based on race, creed, or color.

I applaud the strong leadership of Chairman SENSENBRENNER, who has never wavered in his commitment to the Voting Rights Act over his entire career.

I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS), who will be leaving us, but will leave us with wonderful words, my friend.

(Mr. OWENS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, the Voting Rights Act is just one great step forward toward the movement of our Nation toward a more perfect Union. This is a credit to Lyndon Johnson, a politician, a President of unparalleled practical genius, who fashioned this to bring to the table those people who had serious grievances.

We gave them a real constitutional democracy. It is a great leap forward for civilization. We can continue to lead civilization by improving on this model.

Half the democracies of the world, by the way, right now, do have provisions in their constitutions for representation of minorities. We have spent $9 billion, at least $9 billion, some of you can correct me if it is more, $9 billion in Kosovo, and Kosovo is still struggling to create a constitution which guarantees representation to the minority Serbs. Albanians are the majority there now, and the Serbs need to be represented.

In Iran, they have a provision which allows the minority to have a person to vote on behalf of the minority. They provide a list of voters who are2 data and that they can correct me if it is more, $9 billion in Kosovo, and Kosovo is still struggling to create a constitution which guarantees representation to the minority Serbs. Albanians are the majority there now, and the Serbs need to be represented.

In Iran, they have a provision which allows the minority to have a person to vote on behalf of the minority. They provide a list of voters who are... changing their procedures to further dilute the minority vote.

In my congressional district, in 1965, there were no black elected officials. Today, Mr. Speaker, I count 302. It was the Voting Rights Act that made it happen.

I support the rule, Mr. Speaker, and I support the underlying legislation. I urge my colleagues to defeat the amendments and pass this legislation into law.

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to my good friend from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD).

(Mr. NORWOOD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NORWOOD, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for the time.

Mr. Speaker, I certainly thank Chairman DREIER for making my amendment in order under this rule. I rise today in support of this rule, in support of the VRA, and against H.R. 9 as it presently is written.

We should all understand that in 1965, 40 years ago, when the VRA was written, part of it was intended to be permanent law and part of that bill was meant to be temporary.

The Voting Rights Act was needed in 1965, and it was a good bill. It enabled all citizens to be able to vote unencumbered. I strongly believe in that.

Now, 40 years later, we are not trying to remove the temporary part of this bill, meaning 4, 5 and on, but later this morning, they are trying to amend section 4 of the Voting Rights Act so that it may be updated, modernized and actually brought into the 21st century.

Only section 4 of the temporary part of the Voting Rights Act are we trying to amend. Section 4 of the VRA is the formula or the trigger mechanism that determines which jurisdiction, whether it be a county or State, that has broken the rules and, therefore, is to be put in the penalty box of section 5. This is the section that puts jurisdictions under the heavy hand of the Justice Department, the preclearance section of the bill.

The trigger section occurs when less than 50 percent of citizens of voting age do not vote in Presidential elections. To determine if you will be under section 5 of the VRA, the elections used are 1964, 1968 and 1972, elections 40 years ago, Presidential elections between Goldwater and Johnson. Only those who violated section 4 during those 3 years are under preclearance today. H.R. 9 wants to extend that 25 more years, using 40-year-old data, applied to the same jurisdictions, no matter how good their voting record is today.

H.R. 9 does not seem to matter that many other jurisdictions around the country have also violated section 4 of the Voting Rights Act, even in this century. Those violations are not looked upon by anyone.

My amendment, that we will have later today, changes that and updates section 4 to use the election years of 1996, 2000 and 2004. It will be incumbent upon the Attorney General, and he is so instructed, or she, to look at all jurisdictions in all States, and this information is to be reviewed after each Presidential election, using the last three Presidential elections.

If you violate section 4, you are and you should go to the penalty box, which is the preclearance section. If you are in the penalty box and have not violated section 4 in the last three Presidential elections, you get to come out of the penalty box. It is that fair, it is that just, and it is just that simple.

Listen carefully now. The authors of H.R. 9 are going to give you many reasons why my lovely State of Georgia should stay in the penalty box, even though we have one of the absolute best voting records in the country of electing black Georgians and black voting and black registration, but I bet we do not hear them talk about that.

The truth is that under my amendment all Georgia jurisdictions stay under preclearance. Under my amendment all Georgia jurisdictions, meaning counties, stay under preclearance, except 10 counties out of 159, even though all of Georgia will be treated as if we are still under section 5. They are not going to mention that 837 jurisdictions today in 16 States are under preclearance, but if my amendment were to pass, over 1,000 jurisdictions in this country will be under preclearance in at least 39 States.

I think that black Georgians who have protections under the law should give those same protections to black Tennesseans.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to talk about this all day. I appreciate the time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. KILPATRICK), my good friend.

Ms. KILPATRICK of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member CONyers, from my great State of Michigan, for your leadership, sir, thank you very much, and to thank the Speaker and NANCY PELOSI for bringing this legislation to the floor.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965, 41 years ago, has made America a stronger nation. Today, I rise in support of the rule that brings it to the floor and allows us to have this debate.

The preclearance portion of the amendments that we will be debating today allows the courts to go into jurisdictions that have a history of discrimination of voter irregularity, of violations. We must preserve that preclearance portion of the Voting Rights Act.

It is important today, it was important 41 years ago, and it allows our voting systems and all Americans to have access to clean, fair voting procedures so that the process and America’s greatness is preserved.

So I rise in support of the Voting Rights Act itself. It must be renewed, the provisions that we will be talking about today; and I ask that all America call your congressional or congresswoman and tell them today to vote “yes” in reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 1 minute to my good friend, the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS).

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, today, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act, as passed by the Judiciary Committee, and in strong opposition to the amendments, which would attack Americans’ right to vote.

The right to vote is the foundation of our democracy. The Voting Rights Act has advanced the rights of all Americans. Latinos and other minority voters have greater voice today because of the Voting Rights Act.

In 2004, a record number of 7.5 million Latinos cast a ballot for President, compared to 2 million in 1976.

We must continue protecting the rights, including section 203, which provides tax-paying U.S. citizens with limited English proficiency with needed language assistance. Section 203 ensures that all citizens have a right to cast an informed ballot and integrates non-English-proficient citizens into a system of democracy. It protects voters from discrimination and ensures a fair and equal voting process for all voters.

I urge all of my colleagues to support the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, as passed by the Judiciary Committee, and I oppose any amendments.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. How much time do I have, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has 3 minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has 2 1/2 minutes.

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON).

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, the passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act is a crowning achievement of Congress and the civil rights movement. Some say that we no longer need a Voting Rights Act, that 41 years is enough.

Others want to water down key expiring provisions in order to weaken the act. Yes, we have made considerable progress in the last 41 years. However, much work needs to be done. The sad fact is that in every national election since Reconstruction, in every election since the Voting Rights Act passed in 1965, American voters have faced calculated and determined efforts by persons and groups whose goal is to deny them the most fundamental right, and that is the right to vote.

Gone are the days of poll taxes and literacy tests. Today, however, intimidation, threats, innuendo and deception are still used to discourage voter turnout. On a list of strategies used to deny Americans their right to vote is long and varied. Please vote for this bill, attack and reject the amendments.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. RUPPERSBERGER).

Mr. RUPPERSBERGER. Mr. Speaker, I stand in support of H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act. August 7, 2006, will mark the 41st anniversary of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The Voting Rights Act has been one of the most effective civil rights laws in granting access to the ballot boxes for all Americans.

Congress enacted the Voting Rights Act in response to persistent and purposeful discrimination through literacy tests, poll taxes, intimidation, threats and violence.

The Voting Rights Act has disfranchised millions of racial, ethnic, and language minority citizens by eliminating discriminatory practices and removing other barriers to their political participation.

I want to make one point. I have been to Iraq and Afghanistan on many occasions in my capacity on the intelligence committee. U.S. soldiers of all races, religions are fighting every day in harsh climates to risk their own lives to bring basic freedoms to other people, and they are being told that they are doing what is right: fighting for freedom, justice, and liberty.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my classmate and good friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, we should be proud, because in this country with our history of slave labor, we may move forward wisely into the future. The Voting Rights Act is proof positive that America learns from its history.

Today, more Americans from every corner of our Nation, whatever their race, creed, or color may exercise their right to vote. But, Mr. Speaker, I said more, not all. Americans can exercise that right. Just 2 weeks ago, the United States Supreme Court confirmed that fact when it rejected Texas’s redistricting map because it disenfranchised thousands of Latino voters.

Mr. Speaker, we know why we have the Voting Rights Act. We know what history has taught us. We believe that we must look to the future, and we must not only reaffirm our belief in the Voting Rights Act, but reaffirm it completely and absolutely. We must reject the amendments which would undermine a tremendous accomplishment in America’s history of moving all people in America forward to exercise their right to vote.

Support this bill. Defeat the amendments. Let’s move forward with the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the death of my oldest sister a week ago Sunday took me back to Clanton, Alabama, the roots of my family. Clanton is about 40 miles from Selma, Alabama, where all of the things that my family had been through not having the opportunity to vote.

I stand here today saying to you that the Voting Rights Act must be reauthorized. And I will say to those of you who want to use 2000 and 2004 as cites for why we should do recalculation on voting, should not use those years, because we all know what happened in 2000 and 2004.

Mr. Speaker, I bring to the attention of my colleague from Georgia that only recently a Federal court and a State court found that the identification requirements set forth by the State of Georgia are just like having a poll tax, and that we cannot let Georgia out of preclearance.

Vote in support of the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT).

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, it is very important that we understand, and I want to direct my remarks to the remarks of my distinguished colleague from Georgia, Congressman NORWOOD, who is a very good friend.

But, unfortunately, Congressman NORWOOD is dead wrong in his amendment and his approach. When he talks about Georgia’s record, he is dead wrong with that record.

While, yes, we have made some progress in Georgia, I can provide a living testimony to that, the fundamental question of the Voting Rights Act is not if there has been progress made. The question is will that progress be in risk of being undone if we do not have the Voting Rights Act?

And no State gives clearer evidence that progress will be undone than my own State of Georgia. Georgia leads this Nation in the violations of the Voting Rights Act in the last 25 years. No matter more than what is currently now whistling through the newspapers and whistling through this Nation, and that is the voter ID bill that has been passed in Georgia. Twice it has come up and twice it has been ruled as discriminatory.

Yes, we have made progress. But my dear friend from Georgia, we have a much longer progress to go, and we desperately need to keep section 5 covered.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERs) who has been a leader in this fight for a substantial number of years.

Ms. WATERs. Mr. Speaker, Members, today this country will witness a debate on the floor of Congress that will remind America of the continuing struggle of African Americans and minorities to seek justice in our country.

Mr. Speaker, as I said earlier today, this is not a period for jubilation. We do not have to come here and congratulate ourselves for the reason that suggests that history is our best judge.
I also said that through these eyes I have seen the tyranny of racism. And through these eyes I have seen this great Nation change and become more tolerant. But to suggest that we have arrived at a point where we no longer need the Voting Rights Act and measures that protect minorities would be foolhardy.

The harsh reality remains that the suppression and disenfranchisement of minority voters is still tolerated. We saw it, as Ms. BROWN has just said, in 2000. We saw it, as Ms. TUBBS JONES just said, in 2004 in Ohio. And the likelihood is that we will see it in 2006 and 2008 in some other State where it seems that those in the majority require a victory regardless of the means to their end.

We should fear those who dismiss concerns, deny such problems exist, and claim ignorance and naivete as to the reasons for years of neglect. These are the answers given by those who sat idly by throughout history when the rights and privileges of the weak and poor have been trampled on by the power.

When history judges our actions today, it will question whether or not we met the expectations levied by those who have come before us: Did we break down barriers or build up walls? Did we adhere to the Biblical admonition that we are our brother’s keeper?

Mr. Lincoln Diaz-Balart of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Res. 910 and insert extraneous material thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. Lincoln Diaz-Balart of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of our time.

Mr. Speaker, I am very proud to have brought forth this legislation today. It is hard to believe. The Voting Rights Act was one of the great advancements of American democracy, something that we all should, and I think we do, feel very proud about. And we are bringing it forth today, we are extending it for 26 more years, because more work needs to be done, even though there has been extraordinary progress in the last 40 years in this country.

I want to thank again Chairman Sensenbrenner, I admire him, I think he has done an extraordinary job facing great pressures. Of course he is such a man of character, the pressure does not even get to him.

Mr. Diaz-Balart. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule because it allows the Voting Rights Act to be weakened by amendments that would strip important provisions from the bill.

Democrats and Republicans passed a Voting Rights Act Reauthorization that codifies the Act's history and strengthens and extends the Act's legacy for our future generations out of the Judiciary Committee.

Democrats and Republicans recognize that this Act is relevant to the situations of millions of Americans.

In my district, the Inland Empire, a third of the residents don’t speak English as their primary language.

In my personal experience, my father, who was born, raised, worked and raised a family in America, did not speak English well—yet he deserved, as all Americans do, the right to vote.

We must renew the Voting Rights Act—we must not allow these provisions to expire and thus disenfranchise hard-working Americans who want to do their civic duty.

If America is to remain the democracy that it has made it strong, all voters must have the opportunity to cast a ballot they can understand.
Section 203 of the Voting Rights Act has made our Nation’s democratic ideals a reality by ensuring that eligible voters, regardless of language ability, may participate on a fair and equal basis in elections.

Three-quarters of those who are covered by the language assistance provision are native-born United States citizens. The rest are naturalized U.S. citizens.

It is well documented that language assistance is needed and used by voters.

For instance, the U.S. Department of Justice has reported that in one year, registration rates for Spanish- and Filipino-speaking American citizens grew by 21 percent and registration among Vietnamese-speaking American citizens increased over 37 percent after San Diego County started providing language assistance.

In Apache County, Arizona, the Department’s enforcement activities have resulted in a 26-percent increase in Native American turnout in 4 years, allowing Navajo Code talkers, veterans, and the elderly to participate in elections for the first time.

This measure would effectively disenfranchise language minority voters through the appropriation process.

Section 203 has always received bipartisan support from both Democrats and Republicans in Congress and the White House.

Section 203 of the VRA requires that U.S. minority citizens who have been subjected to a history of discrimination be provided language assistance to ensure that they can make informed choices at the polls.

It does not offer voting assistance to illegal or non-naturalized immigrants.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this rule and pass the strong and relevant Voting Rights Act that America needs.

Mr. Speaker, cognizant of the historic nature of what we are doing and strongly supportive of the legislation that we are bringing to the floor today, I yield back the balance of my time and move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The resolution was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill (H.R. 9) to be considered shortly by my colleagues to oppose this rule and pass the strong and relevant Voting Rights Act that America needs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LINCOLN DÍAZ-BALART of Florida). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

FANNIE LOU HAMER, ROSA PARKS, AND CORETTA SCOTT KING VOTING RIGHTS ACT REAUTHORIZATION AND AMENDMENTS ACT OF 2006

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 910 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 9. □ 1132

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 9) to amend the Voting Rights Act of 1965, with Mr. LAHODI in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered read the first time.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONVIER) each will control 45 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

H.R. 9 amends and reauthorizes the Voting Rights Act for an additional 25 years, several provisions of which will expire on August 6, 2007, unless Congress acts to renew them.

I was proud to lead Republican efforts to renew expiring provisions of the Voting Rights Act in 1982, and I am pleased to have authored this important legislation to do the same thing one quarter century later.

The Voting Rights Act was enacted in 1965 to address our country’s ignoble history of racial discrimination and to ensure that the rights enunciated in our Constitution become a practical reality for all.

Since its 1965 enactment, the VRA has been reauthorized in 1970, 1975, 1982, and 1992, each time with strong bipartisan support. The right to vote is fundamental in our system of government, and the importance of voting rights is reflected by the fact that they are protected by five separate amendments to the Constitution, including the 14th, 15th, 19th, 24th, and 26th amendment.

However, history reveals that certain States and localities have not always been faithful to the rights and protections guaranteed by the Constitution, and some have tried to disenfranchise African American and other minority voters through means ranging from violence and intimidation to subtle changes in voting rules. As a result, many minorities were unable to fully participate in the political process for nearly a century after the end of the Civil War.

The VRA has dramatically reduced these discriminatory practices and transformed our Nation’s electoral process and makeup of our Federal, State, and local governments. Since its enactment, the VRA has been instrumental in remedying past injustices by ensuring that States and jurisdictions with a history of discrimination ad-dress and correct those abuses, and, in some instances, stopping them from happening in the first place.

Section 5 prohibits States with documented histories of racial discrimination in voting from changing election procedures and plans, first submitting the changes to the Department of Justice or the District Court for the District of Columbia. Section 5 has helped ensure minority citizens in these covered jurisdictions to have an equal opportunity to participate in the political process.

As a result of section 5 and other provisions of the Voting Rights Act, minority participation and elections as well as the number of minorities serving in elected positions has increased significantly, and many of our colleagues who are here today are personal embodiments of those changes.

Last summer, I along with Judiciary Committee Ranking Member CONYERS and Congressional Black Caucus Chairman WATT pledged to have the VRA’s temporary provisions reauthorized for an additional 25 years. Over the last 7 months, the Judiciary Committee on the Constitution examined the VRA in great detail, focusing on those provisions set to expire in 2007.

In addition to gathering evidence of ongoing discriminatory conduct, the subcommittee examined the impact that two Supreme Court decisions, the Bush v. Gore and Georgia v. Ashcroft decisions, have had on section 5’s ability to protect minorities from discriminatory voting changes particularly in State and congressional redistricting initiatives.

Based upon the committee’s record, and let me put the books of the hearings of this committee’s record on the table, it is one of the most extensive considerations of any piece of legislation that the United States Congress has dealt with in the 27½ years that I have been honored to be a member of this body. All of this is a part of the record that the Committee on the Constitution headed by Mr. CHABOT of Ohio has assembled to show the need for the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act.

H.R. 9 includes language that makes it clear that a voting change motivated by any discriminatory purpose cannot be precleared, and clarifies that the purpose of the preclearance requirements is to protect the ability of minority citizens to elect their preferred candidates of choice. These changes restore section 5 to its original purpose, enabling it to better protect minority voters.

In addition, H.R. 9 reauthorizes section 203 for an additional 25 years, ensuring that legal, taxpaying, language-impaired citizens are assisted in exercising their right to vote. And, in my opinion, this is particularly important in elections where ballot questions are submitted to the voters. The committee record that formed the basis for this legislation demonstrates that, while the VRA has been successful in
Mr. Chairman, I am proud to stand here with my colleagues, as I did then, to ensure that voting rights remain protected for an additional 25 years. Let Congress again make America proud by passing this historical and vital legislation without amendment.

REMARKS ON SIGNING THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1982

June 29, 1982—Well, I am pleased today to sign the bill that extends the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Citizens must have complete confidence in the sanctity of their right to vote, and that’s what this legislation is all about. It provides constitutional guarantees that are being upheld and that no vote counts more than another. To so many of our people—our Americans of Mexican descent, our black Americans—this measure is as important symbolically as it is practically. It says to every individual, “Your vote is equal; your vote is meaningful; your vote is your come-uphere, the Members of the House and Senate from both sides of the aisle, and particularly those on the Senate Judiciary Committee, for getting this bipartisan legislation to my desk.

Yes, there are differences over how to attain the equality we seek for all our people. And sometimes amidst all the overblown rhetoric, the differences tend to seem bigger than they are, but actions speak louder than words. This legislation proves our unbending commitment to voting rights. It also proves that differences can be settled in a spirit of good will and good faith.

In this connection, let me also thank the other organizations and individuals—many who are here today—who worked for this bill. As I’ve said before, the right to vote is the cornerstone of our system, and we will not see its luster diminished.

The legislation that I’m signing demonstrates America’s commitment to preserving this essential right. I’m proud of the Congress for passing this legislation, and I’m proud to be able to sign it.”

The evidence gathered by the subcommittee revealed continuing and persistent discrimination in jurisdictions covered by Section 5 and Section 203 of the VRA. The evidence found that a second generation of discrimination has emerged that serves to abridge or deny minorities their equal voting rights. Jurisdictions continue to attempt to implement discriminatory electoral procedures on matters such as methods of election, annexations, and polling place changes, as well as through redistricting practices to protect the purpose or effect of denying minorities equal access to the political process. Likewise, the oversight hearings demonstrated that citizens are often denied access to VRA-mandated language assistance and, as a result, the opportunity to cast an informed ballot.

H.R. 9 is a direct response to the evidence of discrimination that was gathered by the subcommittee. It addresses this compelling record by renewing the VRA’s temporary provisions for 25 years. The bill reauthorizes and restores Section 5 to its original congressional intent, which has been undermined by the Supreme Court in Reno v. Bossier Parish II and Georgia v. Ashcroft. The Bossier Parish II decision held that Section 5 is intended to protect the ability of minority citizens to elect their candidates of choice. Section 203 is being renewed to continue to provide language-minority citizens with equal access to voting, using more frequently-updated coverage determinations based on the American Community Survey Census data. The bill also keeps the federal observer provisions in place, and authorizes recovery of expert witness fees in lawsuits brought to enforce the VRA.

The right to vote is the foundation of our democracy and the VRA provides the legal basis to protect this right for all Americans. We know that you are committed to timely Congressional action to renew and restore this vital law and we commend you for your leadership in introducing and sponsoring The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. If you or your staff has any further questions, please feel free to contact Cherry Zicklin, LCCR Deputy Director, or Julie Fernandes, LCCR Senior Counsel, at (202) 466-3311.

Sincerely,

Chairman Sensenbrenner with overwhelming support, I urge you to support the reauthorization of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. Failure to pass a clean reauthorization of this key civil rights law will reinvigorate the political protections which protect voters from discrimination and disenfranchisement.

The House Judiciary Committee, passed the reauthorization with strong bipartisan support. By passing this clean extension of the “Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, H.R. 9” the House will be safeguarding voters’ rights.

It is especially important that the House retain language which ensures that states and counties get federal approval before changing election laws and procedures, to provide language assistance to citizens, and provisions which protect the Attorney General’s authority to monitor and observe elections. Renewal of these vital pieces of the Voting Rights Act is necessary to protect minority voters and allow full participation by minorities in the voting process.

In order to protect the rights of all voters, we urge you to support a clean reauthorization of H.R. 9, and to oppose any amendments that might weaken the bill’s historical protections by allowing discriminatory practices to occur or by putting up political barriers at the voting booths.

With kind regards,

Sincerely,

TERRANCE M. O’SULLIVAN, General President.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On behalf of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB), I write to urge prompt action on the House floor for HR 9 The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. This important legislation was reported to the House by the Judiciary Committee under the leadership of Chairman Sensenbrenner with overwhelming bipartisan support. As a co-sponsor of the bill, you know that reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act is necessary to preserve and protect the right to vote for all Americans.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND WORLD PEACE

Hon. J. Dennis Hastert,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: On behalf of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB), I write to urge prompt action on the House floor for HR 9 The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. This important legislation was reported to the House by the Judiciary Committee under the leadership of Chairman Sensenbrenner with overwhelming bipartisan support. As a co-sponsor of the bill, you know that reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act is necessary to preserve and protect the right to vote for all Americans.
Under your leadership this vital legislation can be brought to a timely vote in the House of Representatives.

The Catholic bishops have a longstanding commitment to civil rights, including the right to vote. "No Catholic with a good Christian conscience can fail to recognize the rights of all citizens to vote," wrote the Administrative Board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference (predecessor of the USCCB) in 1963. Portions of the Voting Rights Act were later renewed in 1982 with the support of the USCCB. The USCCB has continually emphasized the importance of voting and the right and responsibility of each citizen to vote, and has encouraged dioceses, parishes and other Catholic institutions to participate in non-partisan voting registration efforts.

The right to vote is essential to our democracy and HR 9 protects this right. I know that you are committed to timely Congressional action to renew and restore this vital law and I commend you for your leadership in co-sponsoring The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendment Act of 2006. Please use every resource to bring the bill up for consideration in the House of Representatives as soon as possible. Thank you for considering my request.

Sincerely,

MOST REV. NICHOLAS DI MARZIO,
Bishop of Brooklyn,
Chairman, Domestic Policy Committee.
With respect to section 5 and the covered jurisdictions, and that trigger in section 4 that the gentleman from Georgia is adamant about expanding, we found continuing patterns of discrimination in voting as evidenced by adverse section 2 findings, section 5 objections, and the wealth of section 5 submissions after requests for more information from the Department of Justice. And I just hope we can get the Department of Justice to more forcefully intervene into some of the cases that have shown their price of us coming this far. We cannot afford to go back at this point. A lot of pain and suffering has been the price of us coming this far. We cannot afford to go back at this point.

Now, with respect to section 203, we received substantial testimony from the advocacy community and the Department of Justice, supported by the litigation record, that language minorities remain victims of discrimination in voting. That is not hard to figure out why. It is hard enough for us English speakers to figure out what is on these ballots, much less to ask people who are very new and still assimilating into the language. The Senate speaks English, but they need help. And if they do, we find it is not costly for them to get the assistance that we have provided under the law.

We found in 1982 a straight reauthorization would not be sufficient to protect the rights of minority voters. Several Supreme Court cases have had the effect of clouding the scope of section 5 coverage, and so we have amended the act to restore its vitality. Reno v. Bossier is one again allowing the Justice Department to block voting changes that had an unconstitutional discriminatory purpose. Thanks to the Committee on the Judiciary for having the testimony that made it clear that this had to be done.

We have clarified Georgia v. Ashcroft, making it clear that influence districts are not a substitute for the section 5 districts where the minorities have an ability to elect candidates of their choice. These amendments are critical to the restoration of the Voting Rights Act, and so we urge your support for the bill reported by the Congress. And we want you to know that we have carefully considered in the committee the four amendments that have been added over and above the collective work and agreement of Members of both sides of the aisle. Do not accept any of these amendments. I beg you, in the tradition and spirit of those in the Congress that have gone before us to fight for civil rights, who fought for the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and the tens of thousands of people in civil rights organizations, many who have suffered, and there will never be a record in the Congress about it, but a lot of pain and suffering has been the price of us coming this far. We cannot afford to go back at this point.

So I urge my colleagues to make this a day of distinguished continuation of American history for the rights of every citizen to cast his ballot as a voter so that the Voting Rights Act remains the crown jewel of constitutional democracy of this country.

I reserve the balance of my time. Mr. SENSDENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of reauthorization. I will be inserting for the RECORD a letter from the Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Tim Kaine, supporting the act as written.

It is an unfortunate fact of our history that there are entrenched practices that served to deny minorities their franchise. Such systematic discrimination cannot stand in a country founded on the promise of freedom and equal protection under the law. Some argue that those times have passed, that there is no need to reauthorize the law. But the committee held over a dozen hearings on this and found out that there are still discriminatory practices around the country. Forty-one years ago, I thought our predecessors in the Congress put this issue to rest. They determined this legislation was the best method by which to ensure the one-man, one-vote principle would be a reality.

Much has been said about the onerous nature of certain provisions of section 5. My State, the Commonwealth of Virginia, in its entirety, is covered by section 5 in the original Voting Rights Act. But we have jurisdictions that have exercised their right to bail out under section 5. In order to bail out, a jurisdiction must have been in full compliance with the law. It can have no test or device to discriminate on the basis of race, color, language, or minority status, and no lawsuit against the jurisdiction alleging voter discrimination can be pending in any court of the country. Eleven jurisdictions, some of which are in my district, have bailed out successfully. More jurisdictions should and will follow suit. I have been assured by civil rights leaders they will support bailouts where appropriate, where jurisdictions can meet the basic requirement.

I would like to note that the justification for the continuing of this act is not based solely on old data, that, in fact, hearings have been held; and I think the record is complete showing the continued need for this.

Section 5 is important because it is still being used today to prevent changes in the law which would adversely affect minorities. In fact, section 5 was amended in 1982 than it was used before 1982. We have come a long way in the Commonwealth of Virginia and in America generally, but that doesn’t mean there still isn’t more work to be done.

I urge my colleagues and the ranking members for working on this very bipartisan bill and urge its support.
First, I want to commend the efforts of Representative JOHN LEWIS, now a Member of Congress, who shed his blood on Bloody Sunday so that the original 1965 Voting Rights Act would be passed. I want to pay special recognition to my good friend and ranking member, JOHN CONYERS, who in 1965 was here, in 1970 during the first renewal, in 1975, 1982, and 1992 he was here. And we suspect 25 years from now he will be here for the next renewal of the Voting Rights Act. It is required.

I want to pay an extra special thanks to the chairman of our committee, Representative JAMES SENSENBRENNER, who I believe will go down in history as a warrior who supported, defended, extended, and made real our democracy in this country, and he deserves our supreme thanks.

I rise today in unwavering support of H.R. 9. The bill is the product of a long-term, thoughtful, and thorough bipartisan consideration that carefully weighed the competing concerns and considerations that have engulfed debate on the Voting Rights Act since its inception. The act has been extended on four occasions, making it arguably the most reviewed civil rights measure in our Nation’s history.

H.R. 9 continues that practice of careful review, accompanied by extensive record evidence in support of its provisions. I am proud to have been a part of that bipartisan coalition that crafted this legislation and believe that it strengthens the very foundation of our democracy.

H.R. 9 restores the Voting Rights Act to its original intent to secure and protect the rights of minority citizens to participate equally in voting. The bill bars voting changes that have the purpose of discriminating against minority citizens, and it restores the ability of minority communities to elect candidates that represent their values and represent their interests as originally intended by Congress.

Now, there are those who argue that the Voting Rights Act has outlived its usefulness, that it is outdated, and that it unfairly punishes covered jurisdictions for past sins. Yet I stand here today as living proof of both the effectiveness of and the continuing need for the Voting Rights Act.

I stand here on the shoulders, in the aftermath of the recent testimony of George H. White, who rose on the floor of Congress in 1901, January 29, as the last African American in the Congress of the United States after Reconstruction when he said, “This, Mr. Chairman, is perhaps the Negroes’ temporary farewell to American Congress; but I tell you, if they rise again, they will rise again.” And he was right. But it took a long time.

You need to understand that that was not delivered in a vacuum. Listen to what happened leading up to that election. In Halifax, the registered Republican vote was 345, and the total registered vote of the township was 539. But when the count was announced, it stood 990 Democrats to 41 Republicans, 492 more Democratic votes counted than were registered in that city.

There was discrimination taking place, and I am the witness to it.

The Voting Rights Act had been in effect just shy of 30 years in 1992 when I and former Congressman Clinton became the first African Americans elected to Congress from the State of North Carolina since George H. White delivered that speech in 1901. Put plainly, nearly three decades elapsed after the passage of the Voting Rights Act before the impact of the Voting Rights Act became real in North Carolina.

We should be clear: although the successes of the Voting Rights Act have been substantial, they have not been sufficient, and we must not be complacent. Rather, the successes have been gradual and of very recent origin.

Now is not the time to jettison the expiring provisions that have been instrumental to the success we applaud today. In a Nation such as ours, we should want and encourage more Americans to vote, not fewer.

The Voting Rights Act and the renewal and restoration contained in H.R. 9 facilitate those very goals. By breaking down entrenched barriers to voter equity, this bill invites, inspires, and protects racial and language minority citizens’ full and equal participation in the governance of our Nation. We must not fear that participation; we must embrace and celebrate it instead.

Upon the introduction of the Voting Rights Act in 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson noted that the Voting Rights Act is like no other piece of civil rights legislation because “every American citizen must have an equal right to vote.” “About this,” he said, “there can and should be no argument.”

Make no mistake, voting is democracy’s most basic right. Undermining the right to vote is a fundamental wrong, one that must be eliminated.

Mr. Chairman, a Congress with far fewer African Americans, Latinos, and Asians Americans passed the Voting Rights Act of 1965 because the right to vote had been denied for too long. Congress made a moral decision that it was the right thing to do for our democracy. It is time for us to reaffirm that decision today by passing H.R. 9 without amendment today in this House. I ask my colleagues to stand up and make a moral statement that democracy lives in the United States of America.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, who held all of these hearings to show why this legislation is necessary, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the chairman and Ranking Member CONYERS for their leadership in getting us to where we are today.

Mr. Chairman, the right to vote is one of the most fundamental and essential rights that we have as citizens. Free, prosperous nations like ours can’t exist without ensuring the right of every citizen to vote. It is the cornerstone of democracy and the centerpiece of the Constitution.

Clearly, the right to vote is important to all of us, regardless of our race, religion, or ethnicity. This is reflected in the protection afforded by the 15th amendment which states: “The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.”

To protect these rights, our government must ensure that elections in the country reflect the will of the people. The Voting Rights Act is an important part of that guarantee.

The Voting Rights Act is now 40 years old. It is viewed as one of the most significant pieces of legislation to address voting rights. It was enacted after the march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama, erupted in violence, and that march is now referred to as Bloody Sunday.

President Johnson then pledged to address the issue, and 5 months later the Voting Rights Act was adopted by the Congress of the United States. In his address to Congress, President Johnson stated: “The Constitution guarantees no person shall be kept from voting because of his race or color. We have all sworn an oath before God to support and defend the Constitution. We must now act in obedience to that oath.”

As elected officials of this body, we must now act again to continue to uphold that duty and ensure that the protections guaranteed in the Constitution are afforded to all citizens regardless of skin color.

For that reason, we have given this issue more time and more attention than any single issue since I became chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution of the Judiciary Committee 6 years ago.

Starting in October last year, the Subcommittee on the Constitution held 12 hearings and heard testimony from 47 witnesses to examine the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, and we generated more than 12,000 pages of testimony to be flexible, fair, inclusive, and perhaps most importantly, bipartisan, because as Mr. CONYERS eloquently stated near the end of our hearings, civil rights need not be a partisan issue.

Mr. Chairman, it is important to note that we expect in great detail each of the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act currently set to expire. The extensive testimony from a large number of diverse organizations demonstrated a clear need to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act.

With regard to section 5 and section 203, we held multiple hearings to ensure that all of the relevant issues were examine and that they were also addressed. This past March, we held another hearing to incorporate into the record a series of State and national reports that provided additional documentation about the continuing need for the Voting Rights Act’s temporary provision.

Today, we have before us H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, the product of the Committee on the Judiciary’s work over the last 8 months. I want to thank my colleagues and those organizations who have worked with us from the start for their dedication to get us where we are today. Without a commitment by all interested parties to openness and cooperation, we would not be in a position to reauthorize this historic legislation.

As has been stated, H.R. 9 extends the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act for an additional 25 years. In addition to reauthorizing this legislation, this bill makes changes to certain provisions, including restoring the original purpose of section 5. In reauthorizing the temporary provisions, the committee heard from several witnesses who testified about the need to eliminate discrimination in covered jurisdictions.

It is also important to take a minute to touch on the constitutional questions regarding the reauthorizations of the temporary provisions. The Supreme Court in South Carolina v. Katzenbach and later in the City of Rome v. United States upheld Congress’s broad authority under section 2 of the 15th amendment to use the temporary provisions to address the problem of racial discrimination in voting in certain jurisdictions. With H.R. 9, Congress is simply using its authority under section 2 to ensure that every citizen in this country has the right to vote.

In addition to reauthorizing the committee’s necessary work to include certain changes to ensure that the provisions of the Voting Rights Act remain effective. For example, testimony received by the committee indicates that Federal examiners have not been used in the last 20 years, but Federal observers continue to provide vital oversight. H.R. 9 strikes the Federal examiner provision while retaining the authority of the Attorney General to assign Federal observers to cover jurisdictions under section 5. In addition, H.R. 9 provides for the recovery of expert costs as part of the attorneys’ fees. This change brings the Voting Rights Act in line with current civil rights laws, which already allow for the recovery of such costs.

H.R. 9 also seeks to restore the original purpose to section 5. Beginning in 2000, the Supreme Court in Reno v. Bossier Parish, and later in 2003, in the case of Georgia v. Ashcroft, issued decisions that significantly altered section 5. In the last few elections in Maryland, for example, minority voters have continued to face intimidation and fraud, and poll workers have improperly turned away voters and refused to let them cast provisional ballots for example, in 2002 flyers were distributed in some African-American neighborhoods in Baltimore City urging people to vote on the wrong day, and warning them to pay parking tickets and overdue rent before they tried to vote.

While the VRA was amended and extended. Each renewal by Congress was a confirmation of the continued need and effectiveness of the VRA’s tools.

Today, this Congress again uses its power to enforce the 15th Amendment. We must reauthorize the VRA today. Without a commitment by all interested parties to openness and cooperation, we would not be in a position to continue to protect the rights of minority voters.

The reauthorization of the VRA properly extends scrutiny in the form of federal examiners and observers who watch over the operations of elections around the country, while providing for the termination of examiners where appropriate. Examiners and observers have studied and monitored the mechanics of thousands of elections to ensure that legitimate votes are counted and eligible voters are not turned away.

Reauthorization facilitates continued enforcement of Section 4 ‘preclearance’ procedures that review changes to election laws to ensure that such changes do not adversely affect minorities. Preclearance creates a procedure to ensure that election law changes and redistricting do not discriminate against minority voters. Preclearance provides an added level of protection in jurisdictions where election laws had previously been abused. I am pleased that this legislation overturns two recent Supreme Court decisions that weakened the preclearance provisions of the VRA.

I will oppose any amendments calling for a new formula for Section 4 preclearance procedures. The applicability of the VRA does not need to be recalculated by the Congress. The original formula for determining which states and municipalities are covered by Section 4 has functioned well for 40 years. More importantly, the criteria for “bailing out” of Section 4 is reasoned, precise, and attainable. The law allows for states to graduate from the VRA’s constraints when clear evidence is offered that the state or municipality retains no lingering obstructions to electoral participation by minority voters.

Finally, reauthorization promotes access to the polls by limited-English speakers. It is crucial that new citizens be afforded all the rights and privileges of the Constitution. Citizens with limited-English speaking abilities should not be disenfranchised. In 2002, for example, the bilingual provisions of the VRA are absolutely critical. In 2002, in Montgomery County, Maryland, the County Board of Elections received notice that recent demographic data regarding the growth of the Hispanic population indicated the county would need to abide by Section 203 of the VRA. The election staff consulted with the VRA and converted signs, documents, and ballots to be bilingual. Many of Montgomery County’s 122,000 Hispanic residents benefited from the assistance. In the future, other language minorities in Maryland (such as Asian-American) may need the assistance the VRA provides.

I will also oppose efforts to reauthorize this law for less than the full 25 years. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and the rights of all Americans to vote.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLE) to respond to the ranking member of the Committee on the Constitution, who has worked in an indefatigable manner to bring us to this point on the legislation with no amendments, and I am very proud of the service he has given the committee.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, today we will vote on the most fundamental American values, the right to cast a meaningful vote in a free and fair election. We have declared to the world that this is what we stand for. It is what we have insisted other nations do. We have made great progress, but that work is not finished.

It is impossible to review the record without concluding that the Voting Rights Act is responsible for much of that progress, and that it is still necessary and will be for the foreseeable future.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, it is true when the Voting Rights Act was first passed in 1965 Georgia needed Federal intervention to correct decades of discrimination.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, let me say to my friend and to my colleagues to vote in favor of the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act without watering it down. I urge my colleagues not to allow a small group to drag this Nation back to the days of Jim Crow voting. If we are to be a beacon of democracy to the world, then we must stand by our own values.

I urge my colleagues to reject these divisive amendments. Do not water down the Voting Rights Act. Do not turn our backs on one of the noblest causes of this House. Reenact the Voting Rights Act without watering it down.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6½ minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. WESTMORELAND).

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act has a proud and important legacy in my home State of Georgia and across the United States. With minor changes that would modernize the Voting Rights Act and better reflect the reality of what is happening in the 21st century, I would be joining many of my colleagues in voting “yes” today.

But the bill we have before us is fatally flawed. This rewrite is outdated, unfair, and unconstitutional. I cannot support it in its current form. That is why I vote against the Voting Rights Act as if nothing changed in the past 41 years.

In other words, this rewrite seems based on the assumption that the Voting Rights Act hasn’t worked.

As a Georgian who is proud of our tremendous progress and proud of our record, I am fearful that this rewrite may be too timid, the wrong tool for the job.

Mr. Chairman, it is true when the Voting Rights Act was first passed in 1965 Georgia needed Federal intervention to correct decades of discrimination.

Now, 41 years later, Georgia’s record on voter equality can stand up against any other State in the Union. Today, black Georgians are registered to vote at higher percentages than white Georgians, and black Georgians go to the polls in higher percentages than white Georgians.

One-third of our state-wide elected officials are African Americans, including our attorney general and the chief justice of our Supreme Court.

The Voting Rights Act represents a grand trophy of great accomplishment for Congress, but after 41 years, the trophy needs dusting. We could have given the trophy a new shine for a new century, but sadly, that didn’t happen.

And still this bill states explicitly that my constituents cannot be trusted to act in good faith without Federal supervision. That assertion is as ignorant as it is insulting. I cannot and will not support a bill that is outdated, unfair and unconstitutional.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS).

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, let me say to my friend and to my colleagues from the State of Georgia, it is true that years ago I said that we are in the process of laying down the burden of race. But it is not down yet and we are not asleep yet.

The Voting Rights Act was good and necessary in 1965 and it is still good and necessary today. So don’t misquote me. Don’t take my words out of context.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield for a unanimous consent request to the delegate from the Virgin Islands (Mrs. CHRISTENSEN).

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, to reauthorize the expiring provision of the Voting Rights Act for another 25 years and in opposition to all amendments.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 is one of the most important pieces of legislation ever passed by this body because it seeks to fulfill the promise of our democracy—the right of every citizen to vote; a promise which sadly, today, may remain unfulfilled. Since the Voting Rights Act was passed 41 years ago, millions of minority voters were guaranteed a chance to make their voices heard in State, Federal and local elections across the country.

Mr. Chairman, the Subcommittee on the Constitution of the Judiciary Committee held more than 10 oversight hearings and assembled over 12,000 pages of testimony, documentary evidence and appendices from over 60 groups and individuals, including several Members of Congress on the continuing need for the expiring provisions of the VRA.

The committee requested, received, and incorporated into its hearing record two comprehensive reports that have been compiled by NGOs that have expertise in voting rights litigation which extensively documented the extent and nature of barriers against minorities in voting has and continues to occur.

Mr. Chairman, my constituents in the Virgin Islands hold dear their right to vote as citizens of the United States.

While we have only been able to elect our own people as Governors and representative to Congress since 1970 and 1972 respectively, we have been electing members of local legislative council and later legislature for more than 100 years.

PREVENTING AFRICANS FROM VOTING because of race, color, or ethnic origin is repugnant to the democratic process and should always be rejected. I am proud to be able to stand here today on the shoulders of Fannie Lou Haner, Rosa Parks, Coretta Scott King and the other leaders of the struggle to ensure that all Americans have the right, to urge all of my colleagues to support passage of H.R. 9 and to oppose all of the amendments which will weaken the bill.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. WESTMORELAND, tell the truth right.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, in the 40 years since its passage, the Voting Rights Act has guaranteed millions of minority voters the right to vote. As the Supreme Court noted in 1964, “Other rights, even the most basic, are illusory if the right to vote is undermined.”

Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act has been effective in eliminating schemes and barriers to the ballot box. But several key provisions of the act are scheduled to expire in 2007. This bill will reauthorize those important provisions. One is section 5, preclearance. It is crucial because it prevents election changes in covered jurisdictions from going into effect before being precleared by the Justice Department as being free from discrimination.

If preclearance expires, an illegal scheme could help somebody win elections. That person would be able to serve until the victims of discrimination come up with the money to file a lawsuit. And then, when the scheme is thrown out, the perpetrator of that crime will get to run with all the advantages of incumbency when they run for reelection. Because of preclearance, illegal plans cannot go into effect.

All of the States that are not covered by section 5, but States which are covered got covered the old-fashioned way, they earned it. They were found to have had a history of implementing barriers and schemes that were effective in denying minorities the right to vote.

Present law has a bailout provision which our hearing record demonstrates works for those who are no longer discriminating.

Another important provision to be reauthorized is section 203 regarding language. It works. When language assistance is available, more people vote. It applies only in jurisdictions where there are enough voters to actually affect the result, so it is important to have a formula where it applies. The cost of implementation is negligible.

Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act works to ensure the right to vote. We should pass H.R. 9 without amendment.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT), who was permitted to sit in on the proceedings in the Judiciary Committee in the House on the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, Mr. WESTMORELAND just very cleverly and deceitfully tried to intone and misuse the words and the actions of two of his colleagues from Georgia, JOHN LEWIS and myself.

It is very important to say that while Georgia has made great progress, I am living example of it, being elected from a district in Georgia that was only 37.6 percent African American. No question about it.

But when you tell the truth, Mr. WESTMORELAND, tell the truth right. Here is the truth of Georgia: Since 1982, Georgia trails only Texas and Alabama in the number of successful section 5 cases, 17, brought against Georgia for failing to submit voting changes for approval to the Department of Justice.

Since 1982, not since 1965, since 1982, Georgia has had 83 section 5 objections in the number of successful section 5 cases, 17, brought against Georgia for failing to submit voting changes for approval to the Department of Justice.

Since 1982, the Justice Department has deployed federal observers to 55 times in Georgia.

If there is any State that needs a continuation of the Voting Rights Act, it is Georgia.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would ask Members to rise by the time limits and heed the gavel.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Ms. WATERS), an important member on the development of the Voting Rights Act that is before the floor.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman and Members, I rise today to stand tall for the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. Chairman and Members, as an African American woman Member of Congress, I consider it my profound and welcome duty to use my voice and my vote to continue the struggle of the civil rights movement to guarantee the right to vote to African Americans and all Americans.

Mr. Chairman, I have a difficult time explaining to African Americans all over this country why the Congress of the United States has to continue to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act. The answer to that question is sad but simple and true. Discrimination.

America, we stand before you today reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act because we have to continue to have safeguards in law to prevent cities, counties, States and other jurisdictions from devising laws, practices, tricks and procedures that impede the right to vote by minorities in this country.

Mr. Chairman, I ask all of you, laws and tricks are you alluding to?

Mr. Chairman, in the past, the tricks were poll taxes, literacy tests and voter intimidation. Today, and throughout the years, the laws and tactics have changed. One is the same: Deny and prevent minorities from exercising the power of selection of candidates and laws by any means necessary.

What are some of these tactics being used today in some jurisdictions in America? Oh, they are tactics like, in Georgia, create the need for an identification card that you have to pay for that is only issued by the State.

In Florida, create databases identifying people as felons who have never ever been arrested before, change voting rights laws so that you create at-large districts instead of districts where minorities can be elected from. Minority candidates get elected by districts, and when you create these at-large districts, you eliminate the possibility of their getting elected. Place uniformed guards at polling places to intimidate voters. The list goes on and on.

The Voting Rights Act will guarantee preclearance of these attempted discriminatory acts and, hopefully, deny these kinds of actions.

I ask my colleagues, do not disrespect the civil rights movement. Do not dishonor us. Pass this voting rights reauthorization bill and show the world that America is sincere about democracy.

Mr. SENSENIBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY).

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to highlight how H.R. 9 could more effectively address the current landscape of voter participation in this country. And I want to point out to my colleague, Mr. SCOTT, my good friend from Georgia, that the Federal observers that he mentioned are actually removed in this bill.

So while the bill may seem sufficient to Members from States that will not be affected by this legislation, I feel compelled to highlight how the standards of this bill can be improved.

In the 1980 city of Rome, Georgia v. United States decision, the Supreme Court reviewed the equal protection objections to the Voting Rights Act as raised by the city of Rome, which is in Georgia's 11th district, my district. While the Court did recognize the inherent inlining of applying section 5 restrictions to some, but not all States, the Court cited lagging African American voter registration and participation in elective office as sufficient justification to uphold the Voting Rights Act, despite concerns of equal protection violations for the States because at the time the Voting Rights Act was considered a temporary law.

Well, Mr. Chairman, as I mentioned earlier in this debate, Georgia has come a long way in the past 40 years. In 2000, 66.3 percent of black Georgians were registered to vote, compared to 59.3 of white Georgians; 51.6 percent of black Georgians turned out to vote in the 2000 election, compared to 48.3 percent of white Georgians.

We have gone from 30 African American elected officials in 1970 to 582 in 2000. We have four African Americans in Congress, three African American supreme court justices, including the chief justice, and two African Americans elected as statewide constitutional officers, attorney general and labor commissioner.

Since the Supreme Court's ruling in the City of Rome v. United States, Georgia stands to standard out by the Court, and as Mr. WESTMORELAND says, should not be penalized because of voter participation in 1964.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to control the time temporarily while my colleague has stepped away.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mrs. NAPOLITANO), the chair of the Hispanic Caucus.

Mrs. NAPOLITANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise as chair of the 21-member Congressional Hispanic Caucus, and call for the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act.

This bill is about protecting the most basic and significant civil rights for all American citizens, the right to vote. I call on this House to pass the bill.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LINDA T. SANCHEZ), who is a member of the Hispanic Caucus and a member of the Judiciary Committee.

Ms. LINDA T. SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge my colleagues to oppose all four of today's amendments and pass a clean Voting Rights Act reauthorization.

The four amendments that have been made in order are poison pills. If the two immigration section 5 amendments passed, the VRA enforcement formula would be repealed, and the Department of Justice will spend its time conducting studies in jurisdictions with no discrimination, instead of actively fighting discrimination in jurisdictions with ongoing voting rights violations.

If the mean-spirited section 203 amendment passes, eligible voting-age citizens will be deprived of language assistance and lose the chance to cast an informed, accurate vote for the candidate of their choice.

If the Gohmert amendment passes, jurisdictions will wait out their obligations to end discrimination under the VRA rather than comply with the VRA, which will result in the same kind of widespread noncompliance with the VRA that we sought in the late 1970s.

All of these amendments are inconsistent with the spirit and the intent of the Voting Rights Act. The Voting Rights Act protects the most fundamental right in a democracy, the right to vote; and it is our most powerful tool to ensure that every American citizen is subject to discrimination at the polls. The Voting Rights Act plays a critical role in fulfilling the promise of American democracy. It has given voice to minority communities, and without it, many black, Hispanic, and Asian American leaders would not be holding elected office today. Passing this bill will also honor the sacrifices of the men and women who died and suffered injuries fighting for equality during the civil rights movement.

That is why reauthorization of H.R. 9 has the support of Republicans and Democrats, Senators and House Representatives, businesses, civil rights groups, editorial boards, and grassroots organizations around the country.

Let us pass H.R. 9 clean by opposing all four amendments offered today and voting "yes" on final passage.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. NORWOOD).

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I want to make it perfectly clear, I believe every citizen of this country should be able to vote unencumbered. I believe, actually, that the Voting Rights Act has been and is a good thing and it should be reauthorized. I nor anybody I know is trying to do away with section 5, though I continue to hear it over and over again.

Mr. Chairman, today we battle a phantom that has haunted this Chamber since the day it was first built. It has stalked us since before we were a Nation. It poured the curse of slavery on our infant Republic. It fed the flames of regional conflict until we suffered the most devastating war in our history. It gave birth to segregation, poll taxes, and literacy tests.

This specter embodies what is perhaps our Nation's original sin: discrimination. It is bound with a moral debt that maybe can never be fully paid. I pray that it is not the case. But then again, maybe it is only waiting for a generation with the courage to exorcise that demon out of our hearts and out of this land.

But I fear, forebears, in spite of their many blessings that they left us, failed this challenge. They had the chance with Dred Scott and instead decided that slaves were not human beings. They had a second chance with Jim Crow, but instead built a segregated society.

Today, we have a rare chance, and I mean rare, to revisit the fundamental issue, discrimination, that our predecessors avoided dealing with.

Discrimination is the creation of laws or systems that deny a person the same rights enjoyed by their fellow human beings, not because of what they do but because of who they are. In 1965 that meant white people in many areas of this country, and especially in the South, where the color of your skin kept people of color from voting. Not because of what they did, but simply because of who they were.

The Voting Rights Act, passed by this House in 1965, stopped that practice. It did so by temporarily denying the voters of my State and others their constitutional right to determine election practices without Federal interference.

This harsh measure, known as section 5 oversight, was not discrimination. It was not laid on these jurisdictions because of who they were, but because of what they did. Now, this is a profound point. Forty years later there is not a single member of my State legislature who served in 1964, particularly the Democrats, under those discriminatory laws. Seventy percent of today's Georgians did not live in Georgia in 1964. They are either dead or have moved away under these discriminatory laws. They were either unborn or have since moved perhaps somewhere else.

Yet H.R. 9 would leave all these people, who have committed no wrong, with diminished election rights. Not because of what they did, but because of who they are. This is blatant discrimination based on nothing more than where we live.

All who dwell on a particular type of soil, section 5 soil, now have their constitutional right to determine election practices without Federal interference. Is the Earth beneath our feet guilty of the crimes of man? Does it then condemn all who trod on our soil? That is the contention of H.R. 9, as it ravages the rights of the innocent, those whose only offense is in what they are. Is it not the contention of H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act did not condemn the righteous with the wicked. It reserved its penalties only for those jurisdictions where offenses had occurred and only until those injustices were corrected. It was not a life sentence and certainly not a sentence on those yet unborn.

Georgia now outperforms the Nation, outperforms the Nation, in every area of black voting: turnout, registration, the success rate of black candidates in our State. Yet H.R. 9 turns a blind eye to these facts and seeks to let the innocent continue their punishment for another quarter of a century.

Mr. Chairman, we restore their voting rights to equality, or the Supreme Court will be forced to do it for us. And the Court will do so in ways far more damaging to section 5 than any reasonable amendment that I am going to bring later today that we could devise.

The days of allowing the ghost of the past to discriminate against the living are and should be coming to an end. Our choice today is whether it will end through carefully crafted amendments or will it be through the judicial act. All we are trying to do is change section 5 so that every citizen in this country, whether you are from Tennessee, whether you are from Wisconsin, have the same equal rights that minorities in Georgia have.

And when you get time, look at these maps. On the right it shows you everybody that is in white is not under section 5. If you are in a color, you are under section 5. Everybody on the map on the left covers 39 States that actually have been guilty of section 4 of the Voting Rights Act. I do not understand how you can go home and you can say you are all for equal rights, fair rights, protections for voters in Georgia, but it is not all right to have those same protections in Tennessee or in Arkansas or in Wisconsin or in Ohio. What is wrong with looking at the whole Nation? Everybody is not going to go under it. Everybody is not going to break section 5 formula. But others are besides just us. And on that map Georgia stays under section 5, and I hate it. I wish we were not. Ten counties might get out, but they can only get out for 4 years. The Attorney General is going to be requested to look at it every 4 years and all across the country, including Ohio and including Florida. What is wrong with that? I fail to understand why anybody would find fault.

You say that we have had so many objections, meaning Georgia. I promise you an objection does not automatically mean discrimination. We have had five objections since 2000. One of them came from a majority black city council, and it was thrown out. That puts us in the penalty box for another 10 years.

Let me quote what my good friend John Lewis said in an affidavit:

The State (Georgia) is not the same State it was. It’s not the same State that it was in 1965 or in 1975 or even in 1980 or 1990. We have changed. We have come a great distance. I think that it’s not just in Georgia but in the American South. I think people are preparing to lay down the burden of race.

Clearly John is proud of Georgia’s progress, as am I.

Congressman Lewis is not alone in recognizing progress.

The State’s (Georgia) racial and political experience in recent years is radically different than it was 10 or 20 years ago, and that is exemplified on every level of politics from statewide elections on down. The election history for legislative offices in the Georgia House, Senate, and the United States Congress reflect a high level of success of African American candidates.

But this is more critical. The Judiciary Committee record seems to show that the problems that do continue to exist occur across the Nation, not just the States in the covered jurisdiction.

So why isn’t the Judiciary Committee going after these current potential violations instead of dwelling on those from four decades ago? Since 1965, there have been 83 Department of Justice objections raised to voting changes in Georgia.

And here’s a critical point for the record—a DOJ objection does not equal guilt.

DOJ itself withdrew 14 of those 83 objections.

When my State tried to satisfy one of those objections in drawing congressional districts, the district lines demanded by DOJ objection were then thrown out by the Supreme Court. So objection does not equal violation.

Fifty-five of the 83 objections were in the first 10 years as the act was being implemented, leaving 28 objections between 1975 and now.

Only seven objections have been stated since 2000, well within national averages. And again, an objection is not a violation.

It’s now been 40 years since the Voting Rights Act took effect. Georgia has a higher percentage of black elected officials than the overwhelming majority of States not included in Section 5 Federal oversight.

Yet the Federal oversight continues.

Nationwide, there are 9,101 black elected officials. Blacks make up 11.4 percent of voters, and 1.5 percent of elected officials.

In contrast, Georgia has 611 black elected officials. Blacks make up 26.6 percent of our population, and 9.3 percent of elected officials.

That’s more than double the level of black representation of the Nation as a whole.

Black elected officials make up 20 percent of our State House and Senate members, and 30 percent of our members to the U.S. House.

Georgia has a black Attorney General, elected by voters statewide. Georgia has a black Supreme Court Justice.

Georgia and the South now lead the Nation in civil rights achievements, putting to shame the record of those States who continue to point their hypocrical fingers at the grave of Bull Connor.

Yet Georgia remains on the Federal oversight list, while States with a fraction of our percentage of black elected officials per capita remain oversight free.

If Georgia remains on that list without modification, then the majority of the people of a State, who have committed no offense to minority voter rights, whose legislators have committed no offense to minority voter rights, who have one of the highest levels of minority elected officials in the Nation, will have their State’s constitutional right to determine political boundaries and election rules usurped without justification.

That’s a clear-cut violation of the U.S. Constitution. And it’s voter discrimination against every Georgian.

Connecticut, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, and Wyoming were included in 1970, but successfully filed “bailout” lawsuits that allowed them to get off the list, because no one had a political reason to object.

To successfully file a bailout, the State must prove that during the past 10 years no scheme such as poll taxes or literacy tests have been used; all changes affecting voting have been reviewed prior to their implementation; no change has been the subject of an objection by the Attorney General or the District of Columbia district court; there have been no adverse judgments in lawsuits alleging voting discrimination; there are no pending lawsuits that allege voting discrimination; and Federal examiners have not been assigned.

As can easily be seen, a simple accusation will keep a State off the bailout list for 10 years at a time.

DOJ can file an objection, then withdraw it, and that’s all that’s necessary to keep Georgia under Section 5 another 10 years.

There must be a more lawful means for the citizens of Georgia to regain voting rights equality with the rest of America.

Later today I will bring an amendment to ensure that all Americans will have equal protection under the Voting Rights Act.

Under this amendment, minority voters nationwide will have access to the same Section 5 protections, if there has been a violation of their rights.

At the same time, all voters across America will be treated the same if there has been no violation in the last 12 years.

With this amendment, the Voting Rights Act will be restored to its original intent—to end unjust discrimination in Voting Rights, for all Americans.

This amendment provides lawful means to win release from Section 5, while expanding minority voting rights protections nationally.

It is the only commonsense solution to avoiding a constitutional challenge.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds.

I say to the gentleman that when we rise in the House, it is my intention to introduce for the RECORD a copy of the decision that was entered yesterday in the State of Georgia that declared recent actions unconstitutional. Perhaps he will be convinced that this is not the history of the past but today.

CIVIL ACTION FILE
NO. 4:05-CV-0201-HLM

ORDER

This case is before the Court on Defendant State Election Board’s Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction and to Cancel Hearing [113].

On July 7, 2006, the Superior Court of Fulton County, Georgia, issued a temporary restraining order enjoining the defendants in that case from enforcing the 2006 Photo ID Act during the July 18, 2006, primary election or any resulting run-off election. Lake v. Perdue, Civil Action File No. 2006CV119207, slip op. at 3-4 (Fulton County Super.
Ct. July 7, 2006.) The plaintiffs in Lake had argued that the 2006 Photo ID Act violated the Georgia Constitution.

Defendant State Election Board has moved to dismiss Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction or, alternatively, to cancel the preliminary injunction hearing in the instant case that is scheduled for Wednesday, July 12, 2006. On July 10, 2006, the Court held a telephone conference to address Defendant State Election Board’s Motion to Dismiss Plaintiffs’ Motion for Preliminary Injunction and to cancel hearing. This Order memorializes the actions taken by the Court during that telephone conference.

The Court DIRECTS counsel for the State Defendants to file their response to Plaintiffs’ Second Motion for Preliminary Injunction, along with any supporting materials, by 11:59 p.m. on Monday, July 10, 2006. The Court also DIRECTS counsel for the State Defendants to notify the Court promptly after the Georgia Supreme Court issues its ruling on the State Election Board’s emergency motion to stay the temporary restraining order in the Lake case. If the Georgia Supreme Court declines to stay the temporary restraining order in the Lake case, the Court will continue the preliminary injunction hearing scheduled for Wednesday, July 12, 2006, until a later date.

IT IS SO ORDERED, this the 12th day of July, 2006.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE
Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), a member of the Judiciary Committee.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, today I hope that I will have an opportunity to stand on the other side of the aisle as we debate this historic initiative of America. It is initiative because, as I hold the Constitution in my hand, I want my good friend from Georgia, Dr. Norwood, to understand that, in fact, what we are doing is creating opportunities for all Americans and by oversight we enhance his constituents and all others who have been discriminated against.

The preamble to the Constitution includes that we have organized this Nation for a perfect Union, for the general welfare and the blessings of liberty. As every good friend from North Carolina, Mr. WATT just said, whom I owe a great debt of gratitude, along with JOHN CONyers, BOBBY SCOTT, Mr. SENSENIBRENNER, and the whole Judiciary Committee for rendering a bipartisan initiative, in fact, today there are still some that warrant the oversight of the Voting Rights Act.

We understand that without Mr. Norwood’s amendment there are 36 States already covered. And why are they covered? They are not covered on the whim of our political leaders or on whether we are Republican or Democrat. They are covered because of documentation that discrimination exists. That is what the Voting Rights Act is all about.

Mr. Norwood and others know these four amendments, which should be opposed and defeated, because of the thousands of pages of evidence, if we pass an amendment like Mr. Norwood’s, Mr. WESTMORELAND’s, Mr. KING’s, and Mr. G OHMERT’s that under the Constitution the Supreme Court will render them unconstitutional for many reasons, because there is no evidence, no documentation shown during the thousand of pages of hearings. So it is important to maintain an unrestrictive section 5, that one that allows oversight of discrimination under an unfeathered section 5 that allows oversight to occur if voting changes generate discrimination against anyone in the covered areas.

So I would simply ask in the name of Fannie Lou Hamer, in the name of Rosa Parks and Coretta Scott King, in the name of John Lewis, and those who lost their lives, like Viola Liuzzo, the three civil rights workers; and in the name of Juanita Jackson and Valerie Bennett, who fled Florida as young teenagers in the 1940’s my aunt and mother, in their name we must pass the Voting Rights Act without amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewomen for yielding. I rise in proud support of H.R. 9, the “Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.” Had I and several of my colleagues not heeded the requests of the bipartisan leadership of the Committee and the House, there might be an amendment to the bill adding the name of our colleague, JOHN LEWIS of Georgia, to the pantheon of civil rights giants listed in the short title.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 is no ordinary piece of legislation. For millions of Americans, and many of us on this Committee, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 is a sacred treasure, earned by the sweat and toil and tears and blood of ordinary Americans who showed the world it was possible to accomplish extraordinary things.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended, which we will vote to reauthorize today was enacted to remedy a history of discrimination in certain areas of the country. Presented with a record of systematic defiance by certain States and jurisdictions that could not be overcome by litigation, this Congress—led by President Lyndon Johnson, from my own home state of Texas—took the steps necessary to stop it. It is instructive to recall the words of President Johnson when he proposed the Voting Rights Act to the Congress in 1965:

“Rarely are we met with a challenge . . . to the values and the purposes and the meaning of our Constitution. The issue of equal rights for American Negroes is such an issue . . . the command of the Constitution is plain. It is wrong—deadly wrong—to deny any of your fellow Americans the right to vote in this country. The Voting Rights Act of 1965, represents our country and this Congress at its best because it matches our words to deeds, our actions to our values. And, as is usually the case, when America acts consistent with its vision of justice, we are able to accomplish extraordinary things.

Without exaggeration, the Voting Rights Act has been one of the most effective civil rights laws passed by Congress. In 1964, there were only approximately 300 African-Americans in public office, including just three in Congress. Now, if I could, I would pull a map of the South, and show you what is here and what is not. In 1964, of the African-Americans that were elected anywhere in the South. Today there are more than 9,100 black elected officials, including 43 Members of Congress, the largest number ever. The act has opened the political process for many of the approximately 6,000 Latino public officials that have been elected and appointed nationwide, including 263 at the State or Federal level, 27 of whom serve in Congress. Native Americans, Asians and others who have historically encountered harsh barriers to full political participation also have benefited greatly.

Mr. Chairman, I hail from the great State of Texas, the Lone Star State. A State that, by the command of the Constitution the Supreme Court will forever keep open doors that shut out so many for so long.

Section 4(a) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended, will expire, including: Section 5 preclearance for covered jurisdictions (see tables 2 and 3); Sections 203 and 4(f)(1), which require bilingual election materials assistance for limited English proficient language minorities (see table 1); and Sections 6–9; authorizing the U.S. Attorney General to appoint examiners and send federal observers to monitor elections.

Congress has extended Section 5 coverage three times: in 1970 (for 5 years), in 1975 (for 7 years) and in 1982 (for 25 years). The language minority protections of Section 203 and Section 4(f)(1) were adopted in 1975 and extended and amended in 1982 and again in 1992. Despite these past extensions, there is no guarantee that the expiring elements of the VRA will be renewed again in 2007. In fact, recent history suggests that it is likely to be a difficult legislative fight.

The problem is simple. Equal opportunity in voting still does not exist in many places. Discrimination on the basis of race and language still denies many Americans their basic democratic rights. Although such discrimination today is more subtle than it used to be, it must still be remedied to ensure the healthy functioning of our democracy.

Although the principle behind the Voting Rights Act is simple—to eliminate discrimination in voting—the mechanisms by which this goal is achieved are not. Some parts of the law are permanent, while others are set to expire. Some provisions affect every State while others are more geographically targeted. Elements of the law can apply to an entire State or only a handful of counties within a particular State and some provisions are enforced in court through private lawsuits while others are administered by the U.S. Department of Justice.

But the underlying purpose of the act is clear—to extend the franchise to all citizens regardless of race, color, national origin, or membership in a language minority group.

I urge my colleagues to vote for the bill and reject all amendments. I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. VAN HOLLEN), a member of the Judiciary.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague, Mr. WATT, for yielding.

I urge my colleagues to support the renewal of the historic Voting Rights Act today and vote for the bill that came out of the Judiciary Committee without amendment.

I am very proud of the work we did on that committee on a bipartisan basis and want to commend the bipartisan leadership of the full committee.
the subcommittee, and Mr. WATT for his leadership.

On March 15, 1965, after years of struggle culminating in Bloody Sunday, where our colleague JOHN LEWIS so bravely marched, President Lyndon Johnson cast a vote on his place and from the podium behind me, called upon the Congress and the Nation and said to us all we shall overcome; we as a Nation shall overcome years of discrimination and efforts to throw obstacles in the way of African Americans and others from exercising their constitutional right to vote and exercising their right to fully participate in this great democracy of ours.

We have come a long way as a Nation, but we have a long way to go to really overcome, as President Johnson called upon us to do.

The evidence before the Judiciary Committee was absolutely clear that serious problems in discrimination remain. The testimony made it clear that the clearance that has been used more between 1982 and 2005 than between the years 1965 and 1982. The evidence showed that since 1982 the Department of Justice has objected to more than 700 discriminatory voting changes that have been enacted by the covered jurisdictions. The evidence showed that the covered jurisdictions withdrew an additional 200 proposed changes from section 5 review and an additional 600 voting changes were revised to ensure nondiscriminatory impact.

Anyone who says that we do not continue to need the Voting Rights Act is dead wrong.

In addition, there were many other findings.

We have a long way to go, Mr. Chairman, to achieve a more perfect Union. I urge Members to adopt the bill that came out of the Judiciary Committee, without amendment.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would advise Members who are controlling time that, at some point, if Members do not abide by time, the chair may have to adjust the time charged to account for it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN), a distinguished member of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Voting Rights Act and urge my colleagues to pass it today, clean, without amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am honored to represent one of the more diverse districts in America today. My neighbors came to Massachusetts from all of the nations of Europe, Southeast Asia, West Africa, Latin America, French Canada and the Caribbean.

In Maryland, the Voting Rights Act remains a necessary tool to ensure that people are able to participate in our democracy. In fact, it is because of the Voting Rights Act that many of my Asian American neighbors can challenge voting procedures and get multilingual ballots.

It is simple. The availability of multilingual ballots mean more people will vote. Cities that have added multilingual ballots have seen double-digit increases from those benefited populations. What more could one ask from a functioning democracy than a higher participation of people voting?

By reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act without amendment, America will do more than honor its legacy. We will also ensure our future, and to do anything less than a clean reauthorization insults the hard work and blood, sweat and tears that brought us to where we are today.

Today, we have an opportunity to honor great men and women who have dedicated their lives to making America great: Dr. King, Coretta Scott King, Rosa Parks, and one of my esteemed colleagues, my friend, JOHN LEWIS.

Let us reauthorize the Voting Rights Act without these terrible amendments.

Mr. CONYERS, Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL) and recall that he was originally a member of the House Judiciary Committee and served with great distinction on it. (Mr. RANGEL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Mr. WATT for their efforts over the last 2 years together and making all Members of this House so proud to show what we can do when we do work in a bipartisan way.

I also want to thank Chairman WATT for the work that he has done with the Congressional Black Caucus, and beyond, to make certain that the commitments that have been made by the leadership of this House were kept.

We all know that there are parts of the historic republic, slavery, the stigma of slavery, prejudice, that we all abhor; but we also know that this great body not too long ago passed a Congressional Gold Medal to the Tuskegee Airmen, men who gave up their lives and put themselves at risk in order to make certain the world was safe for democracy. At the time, many of these people could not vote and their mothers could not vote and their families could not vote.

So there comes a time where certain people have the courage to stand up for it, and JOHN LEWIS was one. I think we all should get together and say that we could not march with them, but we could reaffirm the commitment that they made.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Dr. PRICE) for purposes of a colloquy.

(Mr. PRICE of Georgia asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, thank you. I would like to engage in a very short colloquy with the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER).

Do you agree with me that nothing in this legislation should be construed to allow the Supreme Court to say who is or who is not a minority community’s candidate of choice simply because of a candidate’s party affiliation?

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. I thank the chairman for his kind words and I thank him for his good work on this.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to observe that the leader of the present civil rights movement and a friend that worked in the organization of Dr. Martin Luther King is in the balcony today, the Reverend Jesse Jackson; and I am so pleased that he is watching over this activity.

Mr. Chairman, I would yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE) who has been an activist and as a legislator in California, as well as the leader of the Progressive Caucus in the House of Representatives.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Chairman, let me thank Mr. CONYERS for his leadership and for yielding and also to Chairman SENSENBRENNER and to Congressman WATT, our chair of the Black Caucus, for your leadership in ensuring that the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act did not become a Democratic or a Republican issue but an American issue.

The right to vote is the heart and soul of our democracy, and I vividly remember the days of Jim Crow and segregation, the poll tax, the humiliation and degradation of African Americans not so long ago.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 passed just 1 year after I graduated from high school, and while much progress has been made, voter suppression and voter intimidation continues.

There is no way I would be standing here on this floor as a Member of Congress had it not been for the bloodshed and the sacrifices and the deaths of so many, including our own great warrior, Congressman JOHN LEWIS, in fighting for the right of all Americans to vote.

So, in the spirit and memory of Fannie Lou Hamer and Rosa Parks and Coretta Scott King, let us pass this bipartisan legislation without any amendments so that America can be true to its ideal of liberty and justice for all.

Today, let us let the world know that we do practice what we preach and that we stand for democracy here at home. And I want to thank Congressmen CONYERS, WATT and SENSENBRENNER again for making this an American issue.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. DEAL).

Mr. DEAL of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I
In particular, in the city of Rome, the court looked at the House Judiciary Committee’s finding that “the recent objections entered by the Attorney General to section 5 submissions clearly bespeak the continuing need to this particular preclearance mechanism.”

Now, there have been objections that have been interposed to submissions that have been made in Georgia since 2000, and that is why we have to have the formula that is in section 5 and the preclearance mechanism in which have been upheld by the Supreme Court.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, could we be advised how much time remains on each side?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) has 11 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRINNER) has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JEFFERSON).

Mr. JEFFERSON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of the Voting Rights Act is informed by past history, by recent events and by current needs.

As one who grew up, watched his mother in 1963 study and struggle to try and pass the literacy test there, which she had to try and remember as best she could the Presidents in order, to recite the Preamble to the Constitution, and to compute her age to the nearest birthday, this bill is not a burden on the South. It is not to be insignificant.

The third finding is that of continued filing of section 2 cases originating in covered jurisdictions. The University of Michigan Law School report shows that since 1982 more lawsuits filed under section 2 ending with the determination of liability have occurred in noncovered jurisdictions than in covered ones; and the example being, in 1990 more court findings of section 2 violations occurred in New York or Pennsylvania than in South Carolina.

Mr. CONYERS. I would suggest this is something that if we are going to make findings of fact they ought to be true findings of fact, and just because the bill says they are the facts does not necessarily make them so.

We are proud in our State and we have worked across party lines and across racial lines; and the latest study that is cited in one of the reports is from the 2000 voter year in Georgia. In Georgia, 66.3 percent of eligible blacks were registered to vote, a 7 percent plus on those who are black. On voter turnout in Georgia in that election cycle, 51.6 percent of black voters voted; only 48.3 percent of white voters voted. So we have made substantial progress.

The right of extension of section 5 for preclearance that requires that you get Justice Department approval just to move a voting precinct from one place to another place, requires preclearance. I would suggest that this is not appropriate.

Mr. SENSENBRINNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act coverage formula and the provisions that it triggers have been upheld by the Supreme Court on multiple occasions and not just in 1966. The Supreme Court in 1980 in Rome v. United States, and later in 1999 in Lopez v. Monterey County, upheld the constitutionality of section 5.
Minories continue to face an uphill battle of misinformation over polling locations, the purging of voter rolls, scare tactics, and inescable voting locations.

Prior to the 2004 elections, students at Prairie View A&M were told they could no longer register to vote in Texas. The fear was that the 8,000 students at this historically black college may eject someone the local district attorney didn't want.

This change in voter registration was not precluded by the Department of Justice, and was ultimately overturned by the Texas attorney general and Department of Justice.

This is just one example of why we still need the Voting Rights Act.

Now is the time to reauthorize this historic cornerstone of civil rights. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, it is now my privilege to yield 1 minute to the distinguished minority leader from California (Ms. Pelosi).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Chairman, my colleagues, last August I had the honor to march in Atlanta in recognition of the 40th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act. Joining our colleagues, Congressmen BRENNER; Mr. CONYERS, thank you for their leadership. Of course, as with so many of our colleagues, we are very pleased now to recognize for 1 minute my personal thanks to the chairmen who have been so helpful in a very generous way.

Today, we have the opportunity, indeed the privilege, to honor that bipartisan commitment. In that spirit, I wish to acknowledge the steadfast leadership of Chairman SENSENBRENNER. Thank you, Mr. SENSENBRENNER; Mr. CONYERS, thank you for your leadership, the two of you for working together, and the extraordinary leadership of Congressman MEL WATT, the Chair of the Congressional Black Caucus and a member of the Judiciary Committee, who helped cobble together this compromise with his persistent, persistent leadership. Thank you, Mr. WATT.

I adjourn the Chair of the Hispanic Caucus, Congresswoman GRACE NAPOLITANO, and the Chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, Congressman MIKE HONDA, for their leadership. Of course, as with so many of our colleagues, we are very privileged to acknowledge Congressman JOHN LEWIS, the conscience of the Congress. Voting rights and civil rights in America are possible because of his courage and personal sacrifice and that of so many of our brave Americans who fought for the cause of freedom and justice.

This was an epic moral struggle in our country, and it remains our moral imperative to remove obstacles to voting and to representation for all. Among the other brave Americans are three extraordinary women. It is fitting that this legislation is named for Rosa Parks, for Coretta Scott King and for Fannie Lou Hamer. These women were constant in their pursuit of voting rights. Rosa Parks ignited the Montgomery bus boycott. Fannie Lou Hamer electrified the 1964 Democratic Convention with her speech, and there she said, “being sick and tired” and was successful in getting her African American delegates recognized at the delegation. Coretta Scott King was the keeper of the flame and one of our Nation’s greatest civil rights leaders in her own right.

Forty years ago, in one of our Nation’s finest hours, we came together to give teeth to the 15th amendment to secure the fundamental right to vote. With the passage of the Voting Rights Act, we said that we would no longer tolerate any of the nefarious methods such as poll tax, literacy tests, grand-father clauses, and brutal violence that had been used to deny African Americans and other minority citizens the right to vote.

Within months of the Voting Rights Act’s passage, a quarter of a million new African American voters had been registered. A quarter of a million new voices that had been silenced could finally be heard. They, along with millions to follow, changed the world with a vision of justice, equality, and opportunity for all.

We see its impact in the Halls of Congress: 81 African American, Latino, Asian and Native American Members. We all know that America is at its best when our bigotry is silence and when we are represented in our Halls of power. We also know that we still have a great distance to go in order to live up to our Nation’s ideals of equality and opportunity.

That is why the Voting Rights Act is still necessary, and that is why any amendments to weaken it must be rejected. I urge our colleagues to vote “no” on changing preclearance provisions, diminishing language assistance, and shortening the authorization period.

Make no mistake, the 10-year limitation on key VRA provisions seriously undermines its effectiveness. We are all familiar with the, “I have a Dream” speech of Dr. Martin Luther King, the march on Washington nearly 43 years ago. One part of the speech that I love that is not as frequently quoted is the “I have a dream” part, the part said in that speech: “We will come to this hallowed spot to rekindle America of the fierce urgency of now. This is no time to engage in the luxury of cooling off or to take the tranquillizing drug of gradualism. Now is the time to make justice a reality for all of God’s children.”

We today must reject gradualism by voting “no” on the amendment to make this reauthorization period 10 years. Any diminishment of the Voting Rights Act is a diminishment of our democracy. In America, the right to vote must never, ever be compromised. We must not rest until the expiring sections of the Voting Rights Act are reauthorized and reauthorized. This is our solemn pledge and obligation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, could you confirm that we on this side have 7 minutes remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), who has worked with the committee in a very generous way.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I also want to extend my personal thanks to the gentlemen for their work to bring this bill to the floor. As one of the original cosponsors, this today is a signal across the world. I represent the city of Philadelphia where the Constitution was written. It was clear then and stated that we needed to work towards a more perfect Union.

The work that began when this bill was passed into law in 1965, and as it has been reauthorized on a number of occasions, today we again signal to the world that we work towards a more perfect Union. As we promote democracy around the world, this is an opportunity for us to further secure it here at home.

I want to thank my colleagues as we dismiss these amendments and move to final passage later on today and thank the Congress because today we truly do represent the American people.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased now to recognize for 1 minute my neighbor and colleague from Ohio, MARCY KAPTUR.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Chairman. I rise in very strong support of the renewal of the Voting Rights Act.

Unfortunately, this great American struggle is not over. We have seen voters denied their rights in recent elections as they have been incorrectly purged from lists, their absentee votes not counted, and voting machine integrity and security not assured.

It is time for us to stand on our own two feet, to ask questions about today’s new electronic voting systems, their flawed security, their lack of transparency, their reliability and, yes, their very integrity. Who controls the security codes in these machines? How do we ensure that local boards of election and judges at the precinct level are empowered to properly count votes and not the voting machine companies who know more about these machines and how to program them than the people conducting the elections themselves.

Strong efforts have been made in Ohio to curb the authoritarianism of our Secretary of State, Kenneth...
Blackwell, as he has purged people from lists in our State in particular precincts where voters are heavily minority.

Mr. Chairman, we must pass the Voting Rights Act in its stronger form. The struggle is not over. As Reverend Joseph Lowery reminds us, ‘‘keep hope alive, extend the Voting Rights Act.’’ I am in strong support of the passage of the Voting Rights Act to protect the ability of all citizens, particularly minorities, to vote. Unfortunately, our State is not over. We have seen voters denied their rights in several recent elections as voters have been incorrectly purged from lists, their absentee votes not counted, and voting machine integrity not assured.

Ohioans have raised countless questions about today’s new electronic voting systems, their flawed security, their lack of transparency, their reliability, and yes, their very integrity. Who controls the security code for the machines? How do we assure that local elections authorities are empowered to properly count votes on the machines? In the absence of a new federal mandate, how do we assure that local election officials are empowered to properly count votes on their systems? How do we assure that local elections authorities are empowered to properly count votes on their systems?

For the record, I voted in favor of H.R. 9. However, I urge my colleagues to consider carefully expenses that will lead to a retrogression of the position of racial or language minorities with respect to their effective exercise of the electoral franchise, and that this determination shall be made with regard to any question of the effective exercise of the electoral franchise, and that this determination shall be made with regard to any question of the effective exercise of the electoral franchise.

I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. It is certain my understanding, as you have indicated, in 1976 in Beer v. United States, the Supreme Court held that, when a voting change is made in which a minority group’s ability to elect candidates of choice to office is diminished, section 5 requires the denial of preclearance.

That was the retrogression analysis on which the court, the Department of Justice, and minority voters relied for Wisconsin’s understanding that it is this standard that H.R. 9 seeks to restore to section 5?

Mr. SENSENBRNER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time. Yes, that is my understanding, as you have indicated, in 1976 in Beer v. United States, the Supreme Court held that, when a voting change is made in which a minority group’s ability to elect candidates of choice to office is diminished, section 5 requires the denial of preclearance.

In his own era, our father faced powerful opposition to the Voting Rights Act.

In his own era, our father faced powerful opposition to the Voting Rights Act, including from members of his own party. Nonetheless, he pushed forward with the legislation because he knew it was desperately needed. It was the right thing to do then. It still is.

Mr. SENSENBRNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Section 5 of H.R. 9 contains a sentence that states: ‘‘The purpose of subsection B of this section is to protect the ability of such citizens to elect their preferred candidates of choice.’’ Is it your understanding that this language in the committee report that accompanies this legislation is consistent with the understanding that the purpose of this subsection of H.R. 9 is to ensure that no voting procedure changes will be made that will lead to a retrogression of the position of racial or language minorities with respect to their effective exercise of the electoral franchise, and that this determination shall be made with regard to any question of the effective exercise of the electoral franchise?

Mr. SENSENBRNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the ranking member of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the ranking member of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

Passage of the Voting Rights Act has allowed millions of minorities the constitutional right to vote in Federal elections. One of the people for whom this bill is named is Fannie Lou Hamer. Fannie Lou Hamer was born, lived, and died in the trenches of Mississippi’s Second Congressional District.

Her history and involvement in voting education and voter participation include people like me, who stand before you as the highest-ranking African American elected official in the State of Mississippi, an opportunity that would not have been possible without the passage of the act.

This act has been in place, my father, who died in 1963, would have been a registered voter. Had this act been in place, my mother, a college graduate, would not have had to take three literacy tests to become a registered voter. As influential policymakers, it is our obligation to look beyond what is good and support the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. SENSENBRNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN).

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Mr. Chairman, 25 years ago I stood on this floor in support of this

DON’T DISMANTLE THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT

By Luci Baines Johnson and Lynda Johnson Robb

The Voting Rights Act, signed into law on Aug. 6, 1965, by our father, President Lyndon Johnson, opened the political process to millions of Americans. The law was born amid the struggle for voting rights in Selma and Montgomery, Ala., which the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. called ‘‘a shining moment in the conscience of man.’’ By eliminating barriers to registration and literacy tests, that had long prevented members of minority groups from voting, the act became a keystone of civil rights in the United States.

Now, crucial provisions of this legislation are in jeopardy. Last month, Congress seemed set to renew expiring sections intended to prevent voter discrimination based on race or language proficiency. Instead, a group of House lawmakers opposed to those sections succeeded in derailing their considerations.

The Voting Rights Act prohibits discrimination in voting everywhere in the country. But it has a special provision, Section 5, intended for regions with persistent histories of discrimination. These states and localities must have their election plans approved by the Justice Department.

Since the act was last renewed, in 1982, the federal government has objected to hundreds of proposed changes in state and local voting laws on the basis of the discriminatory impact. In recent years, proposed election changes in Georgia, Texas and other states were blocked because they violated the act. Yet states and localities are not subject to Section 5 forever. In order to gain exemption, they need only meet a set of clear standards proving that they have been in compliance with the law for 10 years and have not tried to discriminate against minority voters. In Virginia, for example, eight counties and three cities have been exempted from Section 5.

Another section of the act, Section 203, which Congress added in 1975, mandates language assistance in certain jurisdictions to promote full political participation for limited proficiency in English. There are now 466 such jurisdictions in 31 states.

No one disputes that our nation has come a long way since the Voting Rights Act was signed into law. Yet it seems set to prevent voter discrimination based on race or language proficiency. Instead, a group of House lawmakers opposed to those sections succeeded in derailing their considerations.

Mr. SENSENBRNER. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time. Yes, that is my understanding, as you have indicated, in 1976 in Beer v. United States, the Supreme Court held that, when a voting change is made in which a minority group’s ability to elect candidates of choice to office is diminished, section 5 requires the denial of preclearance.
Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased now to recognize for 1 minute the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, Mr. DANNY Wcook.

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Chairman, I strongly support the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. The true test of a democracy is the ability of all of its citizens to contribute to the decisions and actions of their government. When the American circle of democracy is widened, the democracy is strengthened. In addition, its moral voice at home and abroad becomes clear and unambiguous.

For nearly 200 years, this nation failed to live up to the test, excluding voters on the basis of race, gender, and property. The 14th and 19th amendments to the Constitution removed those restrictions from the law of the land, but discrimination against African Americans persisted in many parts of the country.

In 1965, this House witnessed one of its finest moments when Members of both parties rejected party labels and acted as Americans, joining together to declare that literacy tests, grandfather clauses, and poll taxes would no longer be allowed to intimidate American citizens from exercising their right to vote.

Getting this bill passed required decades of effort by dedicated activists who risked their lives. I am proud that this bill recognizes the names of those heroes such as Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King. The voting rights of all Americans are no less important today than they were in 1965. Working together, as our predecessors did, we can confront these challenges and continue to fight for liberty and justice for all.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased now to invite JOHN LEWIS, the conscience of the Congress, the gentleman from Georgia, the remaining time on our side.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased now to recognize for 1 minute the distinguished gentleman from Texas, Mr. JOSEPH B. CRAWFORD.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, before the Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965, all across the American South very few African Americans were registered to vote. Men and women of color stood in unmovable lines in Lowndes County, Alabama, between Selma and Montgomery, more than 80 percent of that county was African American. The Act required that those persons be registered to vote.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, the Act established a procedure to allow the Attorney General to intervene and stop any voting election that would prevent African Americans from voting. The Act was a new, strong law that was a living, moving, breathing piece of legislation.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, it is astonishing to me that some Members of Congress would try to dismantle such an important law. We have made some progress. We have come a distance. We are no longer met with bullwhips, fire hoses, and violence when we attempt to register and vote. But the sad fact is, the sad truth is discrimination still exists, and that is why we still need the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The Acting CHAIRMAN (Mr. FOSSella). The gentleman is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, before the Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965, all across the American South very few African Americans were registered to vote. Men and women of color stood in unmovable lines in Lowndes County, Alabama, between Selma and Montgomery, more than 80 percent of that county was African American. The Act required that those persons be registered to vote.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, the Act established a procedure to allow the Attorney General to intervene and stop any voting election that would prevent African Americans from voting. The Act was a new, strong law that was a living, moving, breathing piece of legislation.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, it is astonishing to me that some Members of Congress would try to dismantle such an important law. We have made some progress. We have come a distance. We are no longer met with bullwhips, fire hoses, and violence when we attempt to register and vote. But the sad fact is, the sad truth is discrimination still exists, and that is why we still need the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

The Acting CHAIRMAN (Mr. FOSSella). The gentleman is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, before the Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965, all across the American South very few African Americans were registered to vote. Men and women of color stood in unmovable lines in Lowndes County, Alabama, between Selma and Montgomery, more than 80 percent of that county was African American. The Act required that those persons be registered to vote.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, the Act established a procedure to allow the Attorney General to intervene and stop any voting election that would prevent African Americans from voting. The Act was a new, strong law that was a living, moving, breathing piece of legislation.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, it is astonishing to me that some Members of Congress would try to dismantle such an important law. We have made some progress. We have come a distance. We are no longer met with bullwhips, fire hoses, and violence when we attempt to register and vote. But the sad fact is, the sad truth is discrimination still exists, and that is why we still need the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.
of voting rights concerns in the last 4 years.

Mississippi, 112 objections since 1982, and Federal observers have been sent to this State 14 times to monitor elections since 2002, most recently last year.

Louisiana, 96 objection since 1982, eight Department of Justice objections to voting rules have been lodged since 2002, most recently in 2005, and 10 voting rule proposals withdrawn by the State in the last 4 years.

South Carolina, 73 objections since 1982.

North Carolina in the covered jurisdictions, 45 objections since 1982.

And Alabama, 46 objections, and Federal observers have been assigned to that State 380 times since 2000 to monitor elections, including 107 since 2004.

Now, I think these figures ought to make it very clear that we need this bill, and we need this bill without any of the four amendments that are about ready to be offered.

And, finally, before we get into the debate on the amendments, I would like to offer my thanks to the staff people who have helped put together this record, Paul Taylor, the chief counsel of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, Jim Betz, the subcommittee counsel; Stephanie Moore, the Democratic counsel to the Committee on Judiciary and counsel to Mr. WATT; and, most particularly, Philip Kiko, who is chief of staff and general counsel of the committee, who is part of the institutional memory, because he helped me get the Voting Rights Act extension passed and signed in 1982.

We put in the work on this, we have done the hearings, the record is complete. We need this law extended, and we need it extended for 25 years. Vote “yes” on the bill, “no” on the amendments, and let’s go down in history as the House that did the right thing.

Ms. DeGETTE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. I am honored to have an opportunity to vote for H.R. 9, a bipartisan bill which makes important changes to the Voting Rights Act and extends otherwise expiring provisions for another 25 years.

As we reaffirm the Voting Rights Act today, it is worth remembering where we were before its historic initial passage. During the end of the 19th and the first half of the 20th centuries, State and local governments, particularly in the South, used multiple schemes to deny minorities, mainly African-Americans, the ability to register and meaningfully vote. These insidious methods included poll taxes, property requirements, literacy tests, residency requirements, the changing of election systems, and the redrawing of municipal boundaries.

The real beginning of the end of this disenfranchisement was the enactment of the initial Voting Rights Act of 1965, courageously passed by Congress and signed into law by President Lyndon Baines Johnson. As applied to certain States and jurisdictions, among other provisions, it prohibited literacy tests, authorized the sending of Federal examiners and observers to make sure people could register and vote, and required changes in voting laws or systems approved by the Federal Government to ensure minorities were protected.

Over the years the Voting Rights Act has been extended and improved numerous times. Congress expanded its protections to cover language minorities, required elections services, in certain circumstances, to be provided in a language other than English, and overruled the 1980 Supreme Court case of City of Mobile v. Bolden, allowing plaintiffs to prove violations of voting rights laws by showing a discriminatory effect as opposed to requiring a showing of discriminatory intent.

The results of the Voting Rights Act have been dramatic. The registration of African-American voters in the 11 States of the former Confederacy increased from 43.1 percent in 1964 to 65.9 percent in 1982. The gap between African-American and White registration rates shrank as well across much of the South. For example, in Mississippi this gap decreased from 63.2 percentage points in March 1965 to 6.3 percentage points in 1988.

Having a meaningful opportunity to exercise one’s right to vote is no longer simply an abstract idea we talk about, but is instead a goal we strive to achieve for all. The evidence shows it is a mark we are increasingly meeting and all Americans should be proud of what we have been able to accomplish. As we celebrate our progress, however, it is important to remember that challenges remain.

Whether it is because of outdated election machinery or long lines at the polls, many people still find it difficult to vote. Too often these impediments are faced disproportionately by minorities and low-income citizens. The Federal Government must continue the role it started in earnest back in 1965, and continued through the Help America Vote Act of 2002, of working to ensure that all Americans are free to exercise their right to vote. Through its involvement and commitment to resources, I know we will succeed.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, it is shameful that Americans were once routinely denied the ability to vote on account of their skin color. All Americans should celebrate the Voting Rights Act’s role in vindicating the constitutional rights of all citizens to vote free of racial discrimination. Therefore, I was hoping I could support reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. However, I cannot support H.R. 9 because it extends the unfunded bilingual ballots mandate. In 1982, I had joined with my colleague from Iowa, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, Mr. King, in supporting an amendment to strike the bilingual ballot mandate, which was unfortunately rejected by this House. Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that a person must demonstrate a basic command of the English language before becoming a citizen, Congress is continuing to force States to provide ballots in languages other than English. If a knowledge of English is important enough to be a precondition of citizenship, then why should we force States to facilitate voting in languages other than English? A person learned in their language before becoming a citizen has a right to be offered.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, I have no desire to deny any American citizens the ability to vote. Contrary to the claims of its opponents, Mr. King’s amendment does not deny any American the ability to vote. Under Mr. King’s amendment, Americans will still have a legal right to bring translators to the polls to assist them in voting, and States could still choose to print bilingual ballots if the King amendment passed. All the King amendment did is repeal a costly Federal mandate.

In conclusion, while I recognize the continuing need for protection of voting rights, I cannot support this bill before us since it extends the costly and divisive bilingual ballot mandate.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Reauthorization Act. It was once said that “a majority has no right to vote away the rights of a minority; the political function of rights is precisely to protect minorities from oppression by majorities.” The amendments offered today by the majority seek to do precisely that; oppress the voting rights of minorities all over America to fairly and freely vote in elections.

While I am pleased to see this important, critical, and bipartisan bill brought to the floor, I cannot support the amendments that would weaken the core of H.R. 9 and would take a step backward in the fight for equality.

Since the birth of our Nation, no other right has been more important than having the ability to vote. Unfortunately, as history has shown, the denial of this right to minorities is a scar on our system of democracy. The passage of the groundbreaking Voting Rights Act of 1965 broke down barriers that stood in the way of African-Americans and minorities to vote, and we must pass H.R. 9, without the gutting amendments, to ensure that these barriers of discrimination, intimidation, and inequality will never be built again. Just as the Voting Rights Act of 1965 gave voice to millions of African American and minority men and women, H.R. 9 will ensure that voice for millions more in generations to come.

H.R. 9 would renew provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 that protect minority voters in States and districts that have a documented history of voter suppression. It would extend coverage of this bill’s requirements for 25 years, require the U.S. Attorney General to send Federal observers to monitor elections to make sure that eligible African-American and other minority voters are permitted to vote, it would extend bilingual requirements, and it would prohibit the use of any kind of test or device to deny an individual the right to vote.

Each and every Member of the House has the unique opportunity today to continue the work of the great civil rights leaders of the past, Martin Luther King, Jr., Coretta Scott King, Rosa Parks, Fannie Lou Hammer, and our own John Lewis, to overcome the ghosts of oppression and fight for a new day of equality and respect for every individual.

I urge my colleagues, Republican and Democratic, to vote for H.R. 9 and oppose all amendments.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

This historic legislation, first signed into law by President Johnson in 1965, has eliminated the most blatant forms of discrimination in voting practices and continues to send a strong message that American voters of all races have the full support and enforcement of the United States Government behind them when they exercise a basic democratic right.

Opposed to the arguments of those that believe this law is no longer necessary, the extensive hearing record that accompanies this legislation demonstrates the need is as great as ever. In Georgia alone, 91 objections to voting practices have been processed by the Department of Justice since 1982, including 4 objections since 2002, preventing discriminatory voting changes from being enacted.

Indeed, action is necessary to guarantee the right to vote. Congress has failed to address the more subtle forms of discrimination that plague our voting system and were on full display in the last two presidential elections. The right to vote doesn’t mean much to an individual who has to wait in a 3-hour line to cast a ballot or who has a hostile election worker deny their right to a provisional ballot. Nor is the right to vote honored when votes mysteriously disappear and can’t be accounted for in a recount because there is no paper trail.

In 14 States, felons are denied the right to vote even after they serve their sentences. I sincerely doubt the public would support a law prohibiting felons from freely practicing their religion after completing their prison terms. Yet we deny an equally fundamental right to millions that may have written a bad check or been convicted of a minor drug offense.

These issues are just as threatening to our democracy as poll taxes and voter intimidation, and so today cannot be viewed as the capstone, but rather the foundation of our efforts to guarantee the right to vote.

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Chairman, I strongly support civil rights and the constitutional right of each and every individual to vote unimpeded by government or any other entity. Regrettably, however, this piece of legislation is deeply flawed and offers a disincentive for many States to continue on the path to voting equality. Let me explain why.

The 1965 Voting Rights Act helped rid the voting process of structural discrimination against African Americans in every State in every region. Provisions such as section 2 of the act bar the dilution of minority voting rights anywhere in the United States. The VRA also includes a formula to impose increased scrutiny on election-related decisions in certain States or counties. These jurisdictions—all or part of 15 States covering most of the South and my State of Arizona—are required to “preclear” every election change with the U.S. Department of Justice, everything from decennial redistricting to simply moving a polling place.

The Department of Justice is tasked with determining whether election changes would diminish minority voting rights.

Today, 41 years later, the VRA’s preclearance provision still relies on the formula derived from 1964 election data. The legislation before the House today does not update the formula to include more recent electoral data, nor does it modify the formula in recognition of the accomplishments of States since that time. This portion of the VRA simply does not reflect America’s changing demographics or the progress our society has made in the last 41 years. States that last century “section 5” States, have worked tirelessly to ensure that discrimination has no place in the voting process, yet the legislation before us continues to single out these States for unique and extraordinary scrutiny and it imposes no additional scrutiny on States that have impaired minority voting rights in the past since 1964. Neither is fair.

While not perfect, I would support an extension of the Voting Rights Act to the floor today includes new requirements that minority groups must have the ability to elect “preferred candidates of choice.” The Department of Justice will somehow have to determine what constitutes a “preferred candidate of choice”—potentially concluding that a minority group is being denied particular representation. Expecting the Department of Justice or courts to determine the “preferred candidate of choice” invites electoral disaster. Prominent VRA experts, including former Solicitor General of the United States Theodore Olson, have concluded that this bill may result in the Department of Justice requiring district lines be drawn to benefit a particular party, politicizing redistricting and the VRA in a particularly egregious fashion.

The original bill theoretically allows jurisdictions to “bail out” under section 5 coverage. However, no State has ever been able to do so. If we want to encourage States to get out from under section 5 “preclearance” we must give them incentive to do so. Under the current criteria, no State will ever be able to get off the list.

Equality in the voting process is of utmost importance to me and I believe it is vital to protect minority rights. For this reason, I voted against an amendment that would strip the bill of its multilingual ballot provisions. Whether an individual is Hispanic, Navajo, or of any other background, he or she should be able to seek help when it comes to casting their vote.

Mr. Chairman, the right to vote, unimpeded, is a constitutional right for all citizens of the United States and should be protected. However, this act does not recognize the great progress that has been achieved over the past 40 years. This is a bill trapped in time; and for that reason, I ask you to join me in voting against H.R. 9 in its current form.

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Chairman, the enactment of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 marked a turning point in our Nation’s history. The statute has succeeded in combating the voting disenfranchisement that was an ugly stain on our Nation’s democratic ideals.

While there is no doubt that the Voting Rights Act was necessary when enacted, some of the bill’s provisions have turned into a costly financial burden for States affected by the law. The bilingual ballot provisions come at a tremendous social cost as well, contradicting the requirement that immigrants develop English language skills in order to become naturalized citizens.

As our Nation is founded on the influences of a wide range of ideas and cultures, the ability to share and use these ideas is facilitated by a common language—the English language. By encouraging national unity on this front, the law has also served to avoid the deep divisions which help keep certain regions of the world in turmoil.

Concerns about the Voting Rights Act are not limited to the South, nor are they limited to the preclearance provisions or bilingual ballots. The 1982 reauthorization of the law amended the act to define discrimination in terms of results rather than in terms of intent, raising serious constitutional concerns. Because of the way some courts have interpreted the Voting Rights Act, the law meant to safeguard the democratic process has become a catalyst for costly litigation for uncertain benefit.

My views on this and other portions of the Voting Rights Act are eloquently stated in an article by Roger Clegg, “Revise Before Reauthorizing,” which I hereby submit for the RECORD.

The Voting Rights Act has a long record of service to our democracy and much of it would remain in place if needed to support the measure in order to combat the pockets of discrimination that remain in our Nation. I do, however, urge our House leaders to work with the Senate to rectify the law’s shortcomings as it moves through the legislative process.

REVISE BEFORE REAUTHORIZING

(By Robert Clegg)

August 6 marks the 40th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act, and several provisions of the law are up for reauthorization in 2007. In that address to the House Republican convection, House Judiciary Committee chairman James Sensenbrenner (R., Wisc.) endorsed an across-the-board reauthorization. He shouldn’t have. While much of the act should stay in place, there are five major problems with it as currently written and interpreted.

First of all, it is bad to define “discrimination” in terms of results (i.e., whether racial proportionality is achieved) rather than in terms of intent (i.e., whether an action is taken because of race). The Voting Rights Act used to mean the latter, but in 1982 it was amended to include the former as well.

Second, the act sets out a neutral rule, without discriminatory animus, and applies it even-handedly can still be in violation of the Voting Rights Act if the Justice Department or a federal judge finds that the rule “results” in one race being better off than another and there is not a strong enough state interest in the rule.

For instance, suppose that a state decides that it wants to allow voter registration over the Internet, in addition to other ways of registering. There is nothing about race in these new procedures, nor did it was adopted with an eye toward helping one race more than another, and no evidence that it is being implemented in a discriminatory way. But suppose that for proportionately, use the procedure than blacks. The state is therefore vulnerable to a claim that its new procedure “results” in racial discrimination in violation of the Voting Rights Act.

So, the act should be changed back to its pre-1982 language, to require a showing of actual racial discrimination—people are being treated differently because of race.

Second, the Voting Rights Act now requires, more accurately, more rigorously interpreted to require—the maintenance and even the creation of racially defined districts. This is a bad thing. One would think that our civil-rights laws would be designed to end discrimination, with the happy byproduct of facilitating integration. Instead, the Voting Rights Act encourages racial gerrymandering, which is both discriminatory and leads to segregation.

Ironically, the Supreme Court made clear in a series of decisions in the 1990s that the Corporation itself does not agree to gerrymandering, meaning the creation of districts to serve racial constituencies. (Where race is used as a means to achieve politically gerrymandered districts, it has been more forgiving; in other words, it is one thing when the state figures that blacks are likely to vote Democratic and therefore zigs and zags to take this political fact of life into account—assuming that race is the best proxy for voting behavior available—but something digising and tagag is to create a black-controlled district for the very reason that the state wants a black-controlled district.) Yet much of the jurisprudence of the Voting Rights Act requires exactly that kind of gerrymandering. Under Section 2 of the act, majority-minority districts must be drawn if the three-part test of the Supreme Court’s 1982 decision in Thornburg v. Gingles is met, absent unusual circumstances; under Section 5, if a majority-minority district existed once, it—or something similar to a “special”—must be preserved in perpetuity.

So, the law should be amended to make clear that there is no requirement that districts be drawn with the racial bottom line in mind—and, indeed, that such racial gerrymandering is in fact illegal.

Third, the Voting Rights Act as interpreted by the courts literally denies the equal protection of the law—that is, it provides legal guarantees to some racial groups that it denies to others. A minority group may have a racial gerrymandered district, or be protected against racial gerrymandering that favors other groups; at the same time, other groups are not entitled to gerrymander, and indeed may lack protection against gerrymandering that hurts them. No racial group should be guaranteed safe districts or influence districts or some combination thereof unless other groups are given the same guarantee—and it is impossible to do so (and it is, in any event, a bad idea to encourage such racial obsession).

So, the act should be amended to make clear that it guarantees nothing for one racial group that it does not guarantee for all racial groups.

Fourth, in many circumstances the Voting Rights Act currently requires that ballots be made available in languages other than English—an odd provision, since the ability to speak English is generally required for naturalized citizens, and citizenship is generally required for voters. The provision does, however, remove another incentive for being fluent in English, which is the last thing the government should be doing. This further proves that discrimination is a bad idea to encourage such racial obsession.

Finally, the whole mechanism requiring some jurisdictions to ask, “Mother, may I?” of the federal government before making any changes in their voting practices and procedures needs to be rethought. We should not continue to have such a “pre-clearance” mechanism at all, and in any event surely the current law—which singles out parts of the South and just a few districts elsewhere, notably in New York City and California—is out of date. This mechanism was considered “emergency” legislation when it was passed 40 years ago: Does it really make sense now to have a different law for Texas versus Arkansas, or Maryland versus Virginia, or New Mexico versus Arizona? This provision of the act needs to be removed or, at least, rewritten, so that troublesome districts are more fairly identified.

Celebrating the Voting Rights Act—but not without updating it for the 21st century.

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the reauthorization of the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this important legislation, known as the VRA.

The VRA was first enacted in 1965. Since the passage of the VRA, many discriminatory practices and barriers to political participation have been eliminated, enfranchising millions of racial, ethnic, and language minority citizens. Sadly, in spite of these advances, this landmark legislation is still needed today. The fact remains that hate groups continue to exist in this country and unscrupulous politicians, for their own political advantage, continue efforts to disenfranchise vulnerable voters.

Just last month, on June 28, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in a ponerous and v Texas that a 2003 redistricting plan in Congressional District 23 voted the voting rights of Latino voters. The Supreme Court ruling was a resounding affirmation of the need for the Voting Rights Act.

The National Commission on the Voting Rights Act released a report which highlighted a troubling pattern of voter discrimination against minority citizens across the nation. Without a clear reauthorization of the VRA, key provisions that protect against these abuses will expire in 2007. The Voting Rights Act will expire is Section 203. Voting instructions and ballot information can be confusing even for the native-born, fluent in English. Section 203 ensures that tax-paying American citizens, who are not fluent English speakers, receive the language assistance they need to take part in the election process through well-informed choices. The ability to vote in an informed way will also encourage greater voter participation. Another key provision set to expire in 2007 is Section 5. Section 5 requires certain states, with a history of discriminatory practices, to get permission from the Justice Department prior to changing their election process. This is a necessary safeguard against the potential disenfranchisement of poor and minority voters living in these States.

Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act continues to be as relevant today as it was in 1965. While the discrimination existing today may take a different form than that of 1965, the fact remains it still exists in 2006. The Voting Rights Act is an important deterrent and protection against the disenfranchisement of thousands of American citizens. As the model of Democracy for the world, we cannot afford to lose one of the fundamental election processes—open, free and unencumbered elections. I urge my colleagues to support this bipartisan effort to renew the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Chairman, I support the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization in hopes that it will be a vehicle for true comprehensive election reform on a national level.

More than 40 years ago the Voting Rights Act was enacted as a direct response to pur- poseful discrimination by many Americans, mostly African American, equal voting rights. Currently only 16 States are covered. I am disappointed that we have not broadened our scope and our vision.

Currently Georgia is considering changes to its voter registration rolls which will fall disproportionately on its African American citizens who have long suffered discriminatory practices. This further proves that discrimination is alive and well in today’s society. We must keep the faith with the civil rights struggle. There are a number of demographics, such as low income citizens, who are still targeted by those who shamelessly continue to manipulate the system.

Reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act for another 25 years is questionable considering the changes that should be made to address the political manipulation seen in recent years in elections through redistricting and with voting machines.

For instance, in Texas a politically driven re- districting between censuses altered the political dynamic of a geographic area and its vot- ers. any professionals in the Justice Depart- ment were convinced that the Tom DeLay driven scheme had serious problems but were overridden by the political appointees who were their bosses. In Ohio, during the last Presidential election, inner-city voters had to deal with a purposeful lack of voting machines that led to lines that were hours long. The fact that these issues are not being addressed by this legislation shows its shortcomings and the need for further reform.

We should take a principled stand to make our election process work better for the American public. We need elections that are fair, where every vote is counted, and people have equal access to the polls. Without addressing concerns this symbolic effort that does little to change the overall distrust with the election process. I hope it improves during the next steps of the legislative process.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 9—bipartisan legislation to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and in opposition to the King amendment.

Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King—together with thousands of other Americans—fought tirelessly to vanquish discrimination and exclusion.

I recall their sacrifice for my colleagues, along with the observation of Dr. King during his 1957 Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington:

“All types of conniving methods are still being used to prevent the Negroes from becoming registered voters.” Dr. King declared. “The denial of this sacred right is a tragic betrayal of the highest mandates of our democratic tradition.”

Unfortunately, our nation still needs the protections that the VRA provides—I cite the states of Georgia, Ohio, and others in recent examples that represent the betrayal to which Dr. King refers.

Mr. Chairman, the four amendments approved by the Rules Committee are poison pills for the VRA. All four diminish the right to vote, are constitutionally unsound and violate the intent of the act. This amendment is no exception.

I urge my colleagues to vote to reauthorize the VRA—without the poison pill amendments.

Mr. KIND. Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 upholds the principle made in 1776 that all citizens are created equal. This historic legislation reafirms the principles of equal opportunity and treatment for which so many were willing to shed their blood or give their lives during the civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s.

Last year, I had the honor of joining civil rights leader Congressman JOHN LEWIS from Georgia on a congressional pilgrimage to visit the historic sites of the civil rights movement and retrace parts of the 1965 Voting Rights March in Alabama. During the trip, we commemorated the 40th anniversary of the march at the Edmund Pettus Bridge, the site of the violent attack on voting rights demonstrators known as Bloody Sunday.
We remember the events of the civil right movement in this country, not only to honor the courage, sacrifice, and accomplishments of those like John Lewis but also to rededicate ourselves to their ongoing work: the pursuit of justice, love, tolerance, and human rights for all throughout the world. Their cause must be our cause today. As long as the power of America’s diversity is diminished by acts of discrimination and violence because of race, sex, religion, age or sexual orientation, we must still overcome.

And in my heart, I do believe we shall overcome. In the words of Dr. Martin Luther King: “Human progress never rolls on the wheels of inevitability. It comes through the tireless efforts of men willing to be co-workers with God.” As long as we move forward as one Nation, united in our common goals, we can cross any bridge; we can overcome any challenge.

The guarantee that all American citizens have a right to be full participants in our democracy is fundamental to American ideals. It is important that we live up to our nation’s ideals of equality and opportunity for all and reauthorize the 1965 Voting Rights Act today. It is also my belief that we should make the act permanent, rather than reauthorizing it for short terms.

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 9 “The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.” I am proud to support this legislation and the bipartisan efforts that have brought it to the floor today.

The renewal of these key provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act is a critical opportunity to provide continued oversight and reform to our electoral system. This legislation will ensure that minority voters who have been disenfranchised in the past will not run the risk of facing such hurdles in the future. Though the Fifteenth Amendment of our Constitution guarantees the right of all citizens to vote free of discrimination, it is crucial that these provisions of the Voting Rights Act are renewed so as to clarify and expand this fundamental American right.

In addition to its importance on a national stage the beneficial effects of the Voting Rights Act were most locally in the Selma area, which I represent. In 1992, as a result of a Section 5 objection to Florida’s reapportionment plan, the state created a new majority-minority state senate district in the Hillsborough County area. This new seat was created to account for the more than 40.1 percent of African American and Hispanic members of the voting age population in the area. Prior to this change, the legislative record shows that the redistricting had been undertaken with the intention of protecting the white incumbent.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization, and ensuring that the right to vote is protected for generations to come.

Ms. HAMMER. Mr. Chairman, The Voting Rights Act was established to end decades of oppressive tactics used to deny millions of African-Americans, Latinos, Asians, and Native Americans from exercising their right to vote. Forty years later, it is clear that the Voting Rights Act was one of the most necessary and effective civil rights laws ever enacted. Without it, America would be a very different place.

While great progress has been made since 1965, much work is left to be done. There are still people out there who want to suppress the vote of certain groups and this legislation will make sure no voter is disenfranchised. It will take more than 40 years of the Voting Rights Act to undo more than 100 years of Jim Crow.

Prior to the Act, members of certain communities faced countless impediments to voting such as poll taxes, harassment, intimidation, and even violence when attempting to participate in elections. It is important to remember that these shameful tactics were not exclusive to the South, but common throughout the entire United States.

Thanks to the Voting Rights Act, there are more than 9,000 African American elected officials in the United States today, as opposed to only 1,479 in 1970. These numbers would have been unthinkable years ago.

In order for democracy to thrive, everyone must have the right to vote, regardless of race, religion, or income. It is not only the responsibility of every American to vote, but also to ensure everyone is allowed to exercise their right to vote.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 worked, and Congress must allow it to continue to work for future generations.

Mr. MOORE of Wisconsin, Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9 “The Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.”

Today, we are reauthorizing critical components of the Voting Rights Act that will ensure that all citizens exercise the fundamental right to vote and have the opportunity to elect their candidate of choice.

I know there has been push back from certain colleagues about certain provisions, such as the language assistance provision. I want to remind everyone that these are all U.S. citizens that are helped by this provision and a majority of the people who will benefit from these language assistance services are native born citizens.

It’s not only citizens of Spanish-speaking heritage or Asian Americans, we are also talking about American Indians and Alaskan natives. These are people whose ancestors were here long before yours or mine and deserve every assistance possible when it comes to voting.

Today, as we consider the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, let us reflect on our ancestors and those who dedicated their lives toward civil rights causes, such as Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, Coretta Scott King and her husband Mr. Martin Luther King.

Dr. King led the symbolic voting rights march from Selma, Alabama to the capital city of Montgomery, which motivated Lyndon Johnson to push Congress to pass the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Some of the provisions in the Voting Rights Act itself were first outlined in a March 14, 1965 article in The New York Times written by Dr. King.

In his speech after the Selma to Montgomery March, Mr. Martin Luther King said:

‘‘Let us march on ballot boxes, march on ballot boxes until race-baiters disappear from the political arena. Let us march on ballot boxes until we send to our city councils, state legislatures, and the U.S. Congressmen (and women) who will not fear to do justice and will be governed by the dictates of conscience (with thy God). Let us march on ballot boxes until brotherhood (and sisterhood) becomes more than a meaningless word in our opening prayer.

The Voting Rights Act empowers us to confront the deceitful tactics used to undermine minority voters.

The Voting Rights Act empowers us to seek justice and support the policies in which we believe.

The Voting Rights Act empowers us to achieve the true definition of democracy, and ensure that every American has the right to vote.

In memory of the many great civil rights leaders that have passed on and in unity with many of the great ones to come, I urge my colleagues to pass the Voting Rights Act and reject any amendments that undermine this monumental bill.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. Throughout my career in public service, I have fought to protect Americans’ most fundamental right—the right to vote. As the secretary of state of Rhode Island, I worked to ensure the accuracy of our elections and to guarantee that all eligible voters were able to participate in elections at record levels. However, while we have made significant progress, recent cases of voter intimidation and discrimination demonstrate that we have more to accomplish. We need to reauthorize this landmark legislation so that we may build on past progress.

The Voting Rights Act’s strength lies in its mandate that states not use tests of any kind to determine a citizen’s eligibility to vote, and in its requirement that states with a history of unfair voting practices obtain federal approval before enacting any election laws that may have a discriminatory effect. I am deeply disturbed that a vocal contingent of Republicans wants to weaken this bipartisan legislation by gutting the very provisions that have made the Voting Rights Act one of the greatest legislative accomplishments in our history. I strongly urge my colleagues to oppose the amendments we will consider today and to support final passage of H.R. 9 so that we may continue to protect the most precious right of Americans—the right to vote.

Mr. THORNBERRY. Mr. Chairman, “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.”

Mr. Chairman, those two sentences sum up my concerns with this bill. The first comes from the Declaration of Independence; the second from Chief Justice Roberts’ opinion in League of United Latin American Citizens et al. v. Perry, a case about this very Act.

The House Committee on Ways and Means should not just vote to weaken this landmark legislation that is necessary to uphold the American ideal of God-given equality before the law, rather than “divvying us up by race” for another 25 years, as this bill would do.
To have different levels of scrutiny apply to various states, based on judgments made 40 years ago that are no longer accurate or justified, is wrong. There is simply no reason to believe that Texas requires more Federal supervision of voting than does Ohio or Florida or any other State. The same standard should apply to every person across the country, regardless of where he or she lives.

I am anxious for the day when race and skin color is as irrelevant to voting as is hair color. Unfortunately, this bill pushes that day 25 years farther.

Mr. DAvis of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate having the opportunity to share with you my thoughts on the Extension Voting Rights Act of 1965 and the enormously positive impact it has had on our Nation. I am very gratified to know the strong support for reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act and appreciate your leadership on this important issue.

The importance and necessity of the Voting Rights Act cannot be overemphasized. We have learned through experience what a difference the vote makes to us. In 1964, the year before President Johnson signed the Act into law there were only 300 African American elected officials in the entire country. Today, there are more than 9,100 black elected officials including 43 members of Congress.

Let me be clear: expanding the opportunity to vote beyond the barriers commonly imposed ensuring that minority voters have a voice or that African American politicians get elected. The Voting Rights Act has enhanced the lives of all Americans, not just Black Americans, not just minorities. By opening up the political process, the Voting Rights Act has made available to people of all ages a broader pool of political talent, greatly improving the quality of representation for all voters. Just as important, the Voting Rights Act has been instrumental in moving America closer to its true promise and, thus, has significantly benefited every single American, regardless of their race, economic status, national origin or political party.

I've heard it suggested that the Voting Rights Acts—or certain key provisions—need not be reauthorized because its very success has rendered it obsolete. This is a fallacy—and I urge you in the strongest possible terms not to fall for it. The Voting Rights Act must be reauthorized because it works!

African Americans in the South were prevented from voting by a battery of tactics—poll taxes, literacy tests that were for blacks only, and the crudest forms of intimidation. From the Southwest to some urban areas in the Northeast and Midwest, Latinos were discouraged from voting by subtler but also effective techniques that exploited the vulnerabilities of low-income Hispanics for whom English was a second language. Both groups were also the targets of districtsing designed to dilute their ability to elect officials of their own choosing—a fundamental freedom that all too many Americans take for granted.

That is why it is so important that the Congress renew all three provisions that are set to expire: Section 5, which requires a federal approval for proposed changes in voting or election procedures in areas with a history of discrimination; Section 203, which requires some jurisdictions to provide assistance in other languages; Section 508, which makes certain forms of voting accessible to people who are not literate or fluent in English; and the portions of Section 6–9 of the Act which authorize the federal government to send federal election examiners and observers to certain jurisdictions covered by Section 5, where there is evidence of attempts to intimidate minority voters at the polls.

I am gratified at the degree of support on both sides of the aisle—for the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. I urge you to also recognize the continued need for pre-clearance and other special provisions that are so necessary for the continued progress we must make as a nation.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

We stand here today with a historic opportunity to improve and renew one of the greatest advancements in the history of our American Democracy.

In 1965, in a direct response to evidence of pervasive discrimination taking place across the country, including the use of literacy tests, poll taxes, intimidation, threats and violence, Congress enacted the Voting Rights Act. Since 1965, we have come a long way towards breaking down the many entrenched barriers to minority participation, but exhaustive hearings and testimony have clearly indicated that more can and must be done.

Opponents of this legislation make the false presumption that the Voting Rights Act has accomplished its goals and is therefore no longer necessary. Yet since its last reauthorization in 1982, the Department of Justice—under the Voting Rights Act—has objected to over 1,000 proposed changes to voting laws because they would have denied equal access to the polls.

Other Members would eliminate Section 203, which provides voters with language assistance at the ballot box. The current law requiring bilingual voting assistance was enacted because Congress found evidence of blatant discrimination against non-English-speaking voters. Many American citizens are proficient in English, but may not be able to fully comprehend the complex legal wording in ballot initiatives. It is important to remember that there are American citizens who can speak English, but not read it. Bilingual assistance is necessary to ensure that these citizens are not left out of the political process.

Today four amendments have been offered which seek to severely weaken and undermine the Voting Rights Acts. These amendments seek to turn back the clock on the advancements made since 1965 in the disfranchisement and participation of minority voters. Let me be clear, I oppose any attempt to water down the Voting Rights Act, and will oppose each and every one of these damaging amendments.

Back in the early 1970s, I worked together with Congressman JOHN LEWIS—who was one of thousands to risk his life to challenge the discriminatory voting practices of the time—registering voters in Mississippi. Since then, our country has made substantial strides in expanding and encouraging the right to vote for all American citizens, yet discrimination still exists. Cases remain where absentee votes are deliberately ignored, voters continue to be unjustly purged from voter rolls, and problems with electronic voting machines persist.

Reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act is absolutely essential as we continue to work for complete equality in the voting process. I truly believe that the Voting Rights Act is the most effective civil rights law ever enacted, and I strongly support its passage without amendment.

Mr. WELIVER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. This legislation is an important recommitment to our dedication to the principle that all United States citizens, regardless of race, have equal opportunity to cast their vote in our democracy.

Mr. Chairman, The Voting Rights Act, and civil rights in general, have always been a part of Republican legislative history. During the 152 year history of the Republican Party, we have not wavered in our fight for the freedom of individuals. Our party played a significant role in bringing an end to slavery, worked diligently to extend the right to vote to all U.S. citizens, regardless of race, gender or creed, led the civil rights legislation of the 60’s, and, today, is continuing to advance the cause of freedom around the world.

In 1866, Republicans in Congress passed the nation’s first ever Civil Rights Act. Three years later, in 1869, Republicans proposed a constitutional amendment, guaranteeing minorities the right to vote. Ninety-eight percent of Republicans voted for this amendment, which led to its passage and inclusion as the 15th amendment to our Constitution.

Continuing the Republican legacy of advancing individuals civil rights, U.S. Senator Everett Dirksen, from my home state of Illinois, was responsible, more than any other individual, for the passage of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. His leadership paved the way for its passage and the enormous support from Republicans for this Act carried over into 1965, when a higher percentage of Republicans in Congress voted for the Voting Rights Act than did their Democratic colleagues.

H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, will extend and revise the Voting Rights Act of 1965 to enhance the intended purpose of protecting the constitutional right of all citizens to vote and, in effect, their right to actively participate in the governing of our county. This bill protects the ability of all citizens to elect their preferred candidate by prohibiting discriminatory voting qualifications and prerequisites. By supporting this bill, we are not only defending the rights of U.S. citizens, we are adding to our country’s long history of protecting liberty and freedom.

I believe it is imperative that this legislation garner the strong support of the entire House of Representatives. The Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006 carries on the legacy of its 1965 predecessor and creates greater safeguards for all American voters.

I would like to thank our distinguished Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois, for his leadership on this legislation and for bringing it to a vote on the floor. I urge all my colleagues to protect our citizens, and our constitution, by voting in favor of this legislation.

Mr. HINOJOSA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9. The Voting Rights Act is one of our nation’s most effective and essential civil rights laws.
Since enacted in 1965, this law has been reauthorized 4 times—each time with bipartisan support. Today, I hope that we will reaffirm our bipartisan, national commitment to voting rights for all Americans.

I would like to salute the efforts of Chairman Sensenbrenner and Ranking Member Conyers for their efforts to produce a bipartisan reauthorization bill. The right to vote is for all Americans—it is not a partisan issue. I urge my colleagues to support the underlying bill and to reject any amendments that would weaken the protections afforded under the Voting Rights Act.

One amendment that would turn the clock back on voting rights is the Amendment being offered by Mr. King of Iowa that would strike Sec. 203 of the act, which provides language assistance for voters who need it. Striking this section is a strike to the heart of the Voting Rights Act allowing for discrimination against voters based on language. It is a backdoor attempt to reestablish a literacy test for voting.

Let us, together, pledge to fight barriers to voting. Let us say never again to the days of literacy tests, poll taxes, and intimidation and threats to voters.

Let us, together, ensure that minority communities will not have their votes diluted, costing them real representation in elected positions.

The Voting Rights Act protects our democracy. Its legacy of success is indisputable. In my own state of Texas, we went from 563 elected Hispanics in 1973 to 2,137 in 2005. The number of Hispanic elected to Congress from Texas doubled between 1984 and 2005. Yet those gains could be undone without the ongoing protection of the Voting Rights Act.

The Voting Rights Act is about securing and protecting our democracy. I urge all of my colleagues to support the passage of H.R. 9 as it was reported out of committee.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 9, the Voting Rights Act. All of us are grateful for those sacrifices which forced America to bring equality and justice to all and we must continue to uphold the basic principles and sentiments embodied in the Voting Rights Act.

The landmark Voting Rights Act of 1965 guaranteed that racism and its bitter legacy would never again disenfranchise any citizen from Texas doubled between 1984 and 2005. The Voting Rights Act is still necessary and we, as Americans, must preserve and uphold these provisions that the discrimination and intimidation that plagued voting in the past will not be tolerated in the present. The reauthorization of this bill will renew that promise to our children and grandchildren. We should not, we must not, set back the clock to 1965. We must extend the Voting Rights Act today—without amendment!

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Chairman, I have been active in the struggle for civil rights since my teenage years. In 1961, I joined the first Freedom Rides to desegregate transportation facilities in our Southern States—and was arrested and imprisoned for several months in Mississippi. In 1965, I joined our colleague, JOHN LEWIS, as he led the famous march from Selma to Montgomery and directly to Congressional passage of the Voting Rights Act. Since then, I have not forgotten my long standing beliefs and have consistently fought to uphold civil and human rights for every person in the United States.

The Voting Rights Act, adopted initially in 1965 and extended in 1970, 1975, and 1982, stands as the most successful piece of civil rights legislation ever. The Act codifies and effectuates the 15th Amendment’s permanent guarantee that, throughout the Nation, no person shall be denied the right to vote on account of race or color. In addition, the Act contains several special provisions that impose even more stringent requirements in certain jurisdictions throughout the country, including the requirement to provide bilingual assistance to language minority voters.

This Act marked the first successful Federal oversight of changes to election procedures in jurisdictions that had a poor record of respecting minority voting rights. These provisions are set to expire in 2007. Therefore, the Voting Rights Act must pass in its entirety, without amendment.

At this time, when our country has staked much of its international reputation on the ability to spread democracy and free elections to troubled regions across the globe, the importance of keeping this Act in legislation with its special provisions is very vital. I urge my colleagues to support the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act and reject all amendments.

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Chairman, I reluctantly rise today in opposition to H.R. 9, the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. The Voting Rights Act provides important guidelines to ensure the integrity of elections, yet the legislation before us chooses to reauthorize this Act with 30 year old information. I simply cannot vote to sentence Alabama to an additional 25 years under the foot of the Justice Department without just cause.

I am disappointed that the House chose not to update the 1965 Voting Rights Act when it bama continue to be punished for wrongs committed 40 years ago and the same criteria will remain in effect for another 25 years, through 2032.
Furthermore, I also oppose the Voting Rights Act’s mandate that States provide bilingual ballots to non-English speaking voters. This provision serves only to impede the assimilation of non-English speakers into our society.

The Voting Rights Act remains locked in a time-warp reflecting the voting realities of 1964, not 2006. The very constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act may be in question. The Supreme Court found more than 30 years ago that the Act’s formula, which is based on the 1964, 1968 and 1972 presidential election voting data, was constitutional because it was temporary and narrowly tailored to address a specific problem. Thirty years have since passed calling into question the basis of this ruling.

“I supported an amendment to update the formula used to determine which jurisdictions are required to obtain Federal “pre-clearance” before changing voting procedures,” said Everett. “The formula would be updated to reflect voting participation in the most recent three presidential elections as a basis for Federal pre-clearance instead of decades old data.”

I also voted for an amendment to strike the provision in the Voting Rights Act requiring States to provide bilingual ballots.

It must be stated that efforts to reform the Voting Rights Act are not designed to weaken its effectiveness in protecting minority voting rights. These rights will continue to be protected. Reforming the Voting Rights Act is necessary to ensure that it reflects our current society.

Alabama has made tremendous progress in the area of voter participation due in large part to the Voting Rights Act. Out of the 50 States, it is second only to Mississippi in the total number of African Americans holding public office. As recently as 2004, African Americans and Caucasians in Alabama were registered to vote in equal numbers.

Unfortunately, the Voting Rights Act remains focused on a core group of southern States which have long complied with its Federal mandate. Modernizing the Voting Rights Act would enable Alabama and other southern States to be properly evaluated on recent voter participation data. It also would help identify recent voter registration problems in other areas of the country that are currently hidden due to the antiquated formulas of the Voting Rights Act.

The provisions of the Voting Rights Act don’t actually expire until 2007. Accordingly, Congress has time to go back to the drawing board and create legislation that would actually update and strengthen the Voting Rights Act. Modernizing the Voting Rights Act would serve the public interest and protects the constitutionality of the law.

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Chairman, I came to the House floor today with every desire—every hope in my heart—to vote for extending the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Unfortunately, later this afternoon when the vote is actually called, even after several amendments that in my view would improve it have been voted on and, in all likelihood, voted down—it will be with a heavy heart—but a clear consciousness—that I must vote against the underlying bill.

Please allow me to explain.

Mr. Chairman, there are 160 members of this House who are attorneys by training. Some were judges and have ruled on the merits of the law; others were distinguished members of the bar in their hometowns and communities before they were elected to Congress.

All, I am certain, are more qualified than I am—as I am not an attorney—to look at the Voting Rights Act of 1965—and its subsequent extensions over the years—and argue with more authority and legal knowledge the pros and cons of Section 2 or Section 4 or Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, or whether or not Alabama should or should not remain a factor as new congressional district lines are drawn in the coming decades.

Likewise, every one of us here in this body comes to Congress with some degree of political acumen and understanding.

Many of our colleagues were former legislators back home; we have former governors and secretaries of state, former political science professors who once taught the subject in the classroom, even a former wrestling coach who serves today with great distinction as our Speaker.

Every person in this room is as qualified as I am—many are probably more so to peer into the proverbial “crystal ball” all we wish we had and try to guess whether by passing this extension, we are making our country a “little more red” or a “little more blue.”

Let’s be honest, Mr. Chairman, for many in this hallowed chamber, that is what this vote today is all about.

But while I am neither an attorney who has mastered Constitutional law nor a political expert who has extraordinary vision, I believe it is safe to say that I am the only member of this body who was born in Selma, AL, arguably one of the most significant sites in our Nation’s struggle to advance the civil rights of all Americans.

As a child of the South born in the late 1950s, it is fair to say that I watched the Civil Rights Movement unfold before my very eyes.

No. I would never pretend to fully understand as a boy what men like my colleague and friend, Congressman JOHN LEWIS, went through to advance the cause of racial justice. There is not another member of this body for whom I have greater respect or hold in higher regard than JOHN LEWIS, who, himself, is an Alabama native.

While I was a child watching the Civil Rights Movement progress, he was a young man helping to make it all happen.

And seemingly without malice in his heart, he turned the other cheek time and time again, even as Bull Conner, Jim Clark and others beat him, jailed him, spit on him, cursed him and did everything in their might to break his spirit and determination.

That, Mr. Chairman, is one reason why I have such respect for this vote.

Let me be clear about one thing: although many of our forefathers did not believe so at the time, the original Civil Rights Act of 1965 was necessary medicine to remedy an age-old ill and we Republicans can be proud—extremely proud—of the lead role our party played in its passage and enactment.

In 1965, racial discrimination was real—especially at the ballot box. In my birthplace of Selma, just over 2 percent of the registered voters were listed as African-American—even though the town of 50,000 people was over 57 percent black.

I remember hearing my parents talk about the numerous injustices that were taking place all over the South . . . of having a separate section for young blacks to watch a movie in the Alco Theater in Camden where I grew up, of having “Colored” water fountains at the Wilcox County Courthouse and other symbols—some large, some small—but all of which were intended to divide our country based almost solely on the color of a person’s skin.

Mr. Chairman, today we can say with certainty that the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was needed and it worked. It did what it was intended to do. And in more ways than we can imagine today, we can say that it has changed our country for the better.

The Alabama I grew up in—in the 1960s— was a far cry from the Alabama I am privileged to represent here in this great body today. Isn’t it fitting that the first African-American female to serve our country as secretary of state is none other than a daughter of Birmingham, a lady who, as a little girl, knew the four other children who were tragically killed when a bomb exploded on Sunday, September 15, 1963, exposing the face of evil that resided its ugly head at the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham.

Not a day passes when I am not so extremely proud to know that whether on the world stage, where there is so much strife and division, or coming back to help victims of Katrina in the Gulf, or Condeleeza Rice is a person of the highest moral standing, of the greatest integrity and is a shining example to us all.

Mr. Chairman, 50 years after she had been arrested simply for refusing to give up her seat on a bus in Montgomery to a white man, wasn’t it appropriate for our Nation’s capitol—this majestic building recognized around the world as a symbol of hope and freedom—to bestow its highest honor by allowing the body of Mrs. Rosa Parks, a former seamstress who went on to become the “mother of the Civil Rights Movement,” to lie in state for the Nation—and the world—to mourn her passing?

But, you see, Mr. Chairman, by extending the very provisions that were so necessary and needed in the 1960s—and by imposing for another 25 years the sanctions of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act on a region of the country that has changed—and has changed for the better—what we are doing today is merely celebrating the success of the Selma to Montgomery march without acknowledging that the march for justice should continue.

It should continue to Palm Beach, Broward, Miami-Dade and Volusia Counties in Florida, where many of our colleagues and even more Americans believe with all their hearts that the presidential election of 2000 was stolen by the Supreme Court and a few hundred hanging chads.

If the prescription for suppressing the voting rights of African-Americans and other minorities who were disenfranchised in the South in the 1960s worked—and it did—then why are we not continuing the march for equality and justice for the citizens in Milwaukee and Chicago and Cleveland and the other great cities of our country who, in recent elections, have protested that their right to vote was compromised and their voice in this great democracy was intimidated?

The Alabama of today can boast the fact that there are more African-American elected officials in Alabama than any other state in the nation. That’s quite a statement, Mr. Speaker, a statement of real progress over the past 40 years. I count many of these men and women as my close friends and partners as, together, we are working to build a better State and region for our children and grandchildren, regardless of the color of their skin.

One person, in particular, whom I count as just such a friend and colleague, Congressman ARTUR DAVIS. On several occasions, ARTUR and I have held joint town meetings in Clarke County, a county that we both represent, as well as shared the stage in other Alabama cities talking about the progress our home State has made in recent years.

Without a doubt, ARTUR represents the very best Alabama has to offer; he is not only a rising star on the Democrat side of the aisle, but he is truly a leader whose vision and voice this Nation can benefit from.

Regrettably, on this issue, ARTUR and I respectfully disagree with each other.

He believes that it would be unconstitutional to make Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act apply to the entire Nation. I, on the other hand, believe, if it is unconstitutional for Section 5 of this Act to apply to the rest of the Nation, then it might well be unconstitutional for it to continue to apply only to those States that were placed under it more than 40 years ago.

Last year, my hometown, Mobile, added a chapter to the story of progress that has come our way on this long and often-painful journey in that we elected our first African-American mayor, even though the majority of our citizens and the majority of the registered voters in Mobile are Caucasian.

As Dr. King said on election night, “we are too busy to be divided,” but Mayor Jones’ victory should tell us all that Dr. King’s vision of an America where “four children will one day live in a Nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character,” that America is more real today, Mr. Speaker, than ever before.

Are we where we need to be? Have we completed our journey? Of course not.

But make no mistake, discrimination does not stop at a State line and, sadly, it knows no boundaries. And that is precisely why, Mr. Speaker, I cannot vote for this particular extension of the Voting Rights Act because, at least in my humble opinion, it continues to pretend that the only vestiges of racism and discrimination exist in the nine states and the few other selected counties throughout the country that were originally covered.

And assuming that the four amendments that have been ruled in order—those by Mr. NORWOOD of Georgia, Mr. GOHMERT of Texas, Mr. KING of Iowa and Mr. WESTMORELAND of Georgia—assuming these four amendments all fail, and they most likely will—then what we have left is nothing but a hollow gesture.

It is true that some of our colleagues will most likely march to the microphone later today to declare this as a significant victory but, in all reality, it is nothing more than a very regretful missed opportunity.

Mr. Chairman, I wish with all of my heart that we had spent as much time over the past few months working to expand to the entire Nation the precious right of freedom and the privilege of voting without fear or retribution.

I regret that we were not able to be bold enough to say to the southern States which have shown so much progress that, after 40 years of advancement, we are now ready to move forward and give those areas where the sins of our fathers are no longer committed an opportunity to come out from under the burden of crawling to the U.S. Justice Department, on bended knee, and asking for its blessing to continue on the march for equality.

I truly lament the fact that, as our great Nation is in the midst of an important national debate, one that is focused on how we secure our borders and deal with the all-important matter of how to handle 12 or 20 million people who are in this country illegally, I can only wish that we had been courageous enough to say, “If you want to become a citizen of this country and enjoy the many benefits that come with that citizenship, then you need to learn English—which is our national language—and you need to become a full-fledged participant in what has made—and continues to make—us different from almost every other country in the world and that is our right to participate in free elections and self-government.

Mr. Chairman, you see for me to cast a vote for this extension is asking me to condemn my beloved Alabama to another 25 years of being punished for mistakes that are no longer being made.

I know in my heart that the drumbeat for justice must continue and the battle for equality is long from over. I know more progress can be made—and will be made—in the coming months and years. But I also believe, with every ounce of my being, that this bill will have to pass without my support. For the real opportunity to empower people—and bring credibility to the process that we hold so dear—that opportunity is one that country will not be.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today as a cosponsor and strong support of H.R. 9 the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act, and urge all of my colleagues to vote for this important legislation.

As a representative democracy the most precious right afforded to our citizens is the right to vote. Unfortunately, we are all aware that for most of America’s existence this instrumental right was denied to African Americans. And it was the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution in 1868 ensured all American men the right to vote, true equality for all voters was not achieved for another century with the passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965. This not only guaranteed the fundamental rights of minority voters but provided the necessary enforcement mechanisms to make sure that any American who wanted to exercise their right to vote would be able to.

Mr. Chairman, the Voting Rights Act of 1965 truly transformed our Nation and helped make the dream of freedom a reality. The Voting Rights Act has subsequently been renewed four times, in 1970, 1975, 1982 and most recently in 1992. Despite the success of the minority voters in this country, the Voting Rights Act continues to need to be renewed.

The legislation before us today reauthorizes three key enforcement provisions of the Voting Rights Act which have been essential to eliminating and deterring voting discrimination and preventing the denial of access to the ballot box. While progress on these crucial areas of voting protection has been made, it is clear from the mountains of evidence that the House Judiciary Committee received during its extensive hearings on this legislation that an ongoing and persistent level of discrimination still exists in our country necessitating the renewal of the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. Chairman, in my home State of California, perhaps one of the most diverse states in the Nation, the renewal of the Voting Rights Act will continue to ensure that the citizens of California can exercise their right to cast a fully informed vote. Section 203 of the Voting Rights Act will require 28 of the State’s 58 counties to provide the necessary language assistance so that over 1.5 million voters at the polls are able to comprehend the ballot before them in the booth.

My unwavering commitment to the principles of this important legislation extends to opposing four amendments considered during the debate today which would either undermine or weaken the act. I am pleased to state that I will vote for this legislation and urge all of my colleagues to join me in continuing to protect the civil rights of all Americans.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I strongly support the undisturbed right of all Americans to freely exercise their right to vote.

I support the extension of the Voting Rights Act (VRA). H.R. 9 is not extension of the Voting Rights Act. This is not your parents Voting Rights Act.

The 1965 VRA was a monumental step in the right direction—correcting past sins—and it has worked extremely well.

In Georgia in 1964 there were fewer than 25 minority elected officials.

In Georgia today there are 61 minority elected officials.

In Georgia in 1964, 27.4 percent of minority citizens were registered to vote.

In Georgia today, 64.2 percent of minority citizens are registered to vote.

In Georgia in 1964 there were NO minority statewide elected officials.

In Georgia in 2004 there were 9—out of 34—minority statewide elected officials; including the State Attorney General, our State Labor Commissioner and the Chief Justice of our State Supreme Court.

Great progress has been made. The Georgia of today is not the Georgia of 1964.

In fact, minorities in Georgia are enfranchised to a greater degree than those in many States not currently covered by the VRA—and States that will never be covered by the VRA—because of H.R. 9.

Why? Because this legislation will perpetuate the myth that nothing has changed, that no advances have occurred in minority participation in the voting process. This legislation perpetuates the right that there are no new jurisdictions in our Nation that are currently challenged in providing for minority participation in the voting process.

So how will this Nation decide whether an area needs to be included under this Bill? It will be based upon the 1964 Presidential election. That’s right! An election contested over 40 years ago! This is not a Voting Rights Act; this is a Voting Discrimination Act!

Because voters in States that are promoting and accomplishing the enfranchisement of minorities are being discriminated against—and States that currently have discriminating practices will continue to do— with no fear of being caught or covered by the same rules as those under the jurisdiction of the Voting Rights Act.

And America loses.

What is at stake today is not a renewal of the VRA. We are putting into law the unconstitutional notion that minority citizens can only be appropriately represented by members of one political party. This is a notion that should be anathema to all Americans.

The original and rightful intent of the VRA was to ensure that all Americans could exercise their legal right to vote. Recent court decisions have revealed that the judicial branch believes that the VRA should not only ensure the legal right to vote, but that it must also ensure the voter in any given election as a fait accompli.

I support extension of the current VRA—for all of America.

I support the enfranchisement of every American legally able to vote.

I look forward to the day when Members of Congress may work together positively, to solve the challenges that confront us— together.

Unfortunately, that day is not today.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

Mr. Speaker, this is an historic moment. I am honored to be on the floor of the House today as we take the next small step on the marches toward equality that Rosa Parks and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., began just over half a century ago.

The Voting Rights Act is nothing less than the cornerstone of our commitment to government of the people, by the people, and for the people—all the people. For free peoples there is no right or duty more vital than the right to vote. By enacting the most significant civil rights statute in our Nation's history, Congress spoke loud and clear in 1965 that voting is a fundamental right of all American citizens.

The VRA made it the sacred duty of the Federal Government to enforce this right not only by protecting the individual voter, but also by evaluating the actual effects of voting law changes on minority influence. In so doing, the VRA created opportunities for members of all communities, regardless of race, color, or creed, to serve their fellow citizens in government.

Today, we have the opportunity to take stock of the gains we have made and to reaffirm this country's commitment to tackling the challenges of our time. When President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the VRA in 1965, he said that "to seize the meaning of this day, we must recall darker times." Unfortunately, those dark times are not completely behind us. Despite the steady progress of the last 41 years, there is very little doubt in my mind that we are still a long way from ensuring full inclusion of all Americans in the political process.

For reminders that Dr. King's march from Selma to Montgomery is not yet finished, we need only look to recent changes to maps and voting requirements in Texas and Georgia. The Supreme Court struck down portions of the new Texas congressional map just 2 weeks ago, and a ruling on new discriminatory election practices in Georgia have seriously eroded the Justice Department's ability to enforce section 5. The bill before us today, thankfully, restores the statute to the original intent of Congress.

I should note that I represent a district covered by section 5. The VRA was conceived originally built upon the blood and activism of heroes who lived in a very different time, all of my constituents in my majority minority congressional district have a greater voice in this country today because of their sacrifices. Therefore, my Latino constituents are keenly aware that section 5 is as important to them as their political empowerment as the section 203 requirement for certain jurisdictions to provide language assistance.

Now I am aware that there is a small minority of Members here today who will try to strike section 203 from the reauthorization bill before us today. They will argue that providing language assistance at the polls somehow discourages immigrants from learning English. To this argument, I say first that I have never met any immigrant, much less one who became a citizen, that did not want to learn English or understand that learning English is their key to the American dream. In my city of New York, there are not enough English as a second language courses to go around for all the folks who want to take them.

Second, this argument ignores the fact that the majority of voters who utilize language assistance are natural born U.S. citizens. Persistent inequalities in our education systems see to it that even those who speak, read and write English in their everyday lives are not always equipped with the complex calculus of section 203 instructions. Section 203 is a measured, targeted solution that speaks to a principle that all Members of this body should agree on: that all eligible citizens, regardless of their access to education, have the right to cast an informed vote.

That is why we must renew section 203, along with section 5 and the other expiring provisions, without delay.

Twenty-five years from now, we may be able to file away voter discrimination, like slavery, before it is more than a painful memory in our troubled past.

Twenty-five years from now, the conditions that drove Dr. King and others to begin their march may be nothing more than faint scratch marks on the boots of those of us who continue that march.

Twenty-five years from now, we may live in a country in which no racism, no cultural intolerance and no partisan ambition will impel any American to attempt to strip any other American of his or her voice heard.

Twenty-five years from now, six decades after President Johnson declared with his pen that "there is no room for injustice anywhere in the American mansion," we may finally be able to declare that we have completely banished discrimination from our democratic processes. That day is not yet upon us, Mr. Speaker. For that reason, I applaud Chairman SENGRENNER and Ranking Member CONYERS for bringing this momentous renewal to the floor.

I also want to thank both of them for their receptiveness to the concerns of the Black, Hispanic and Asian Members of this body, many of whom would not be in this House if not for the Voting Rights Act.

The version of the bill reported by the Judiciary Committee is a magnificent product of bipartisanship, and I strongly urge my colleagues to support it in its entirety and reject any amendments that would weaken the commitment of this Congress to civil rights.

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 9—bipartisan legislation that will extend and strengthen the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King—together with thousands of other Americans—fought tirelessly to vanquish discrimination and exclusion.

Forty years ago, millions of Americans were excluded from our democratic process.

In many States, voters were required to pass impractical literacy tests or pay hefty poll taxes.

It was to carry the American democratic journey beyond these failings that Black citizens and civil rights workers risked unemployment, violence and death.

I recall their sacrifice for this House, along with the observation of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., during his 1957 Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington.

"All types of conniving methods are still being used to prevent the Negroes from becoming registered voters," Dr. King declared. "The denial of this sacred right is a tragic blemish on the highest mandates of our democratic tradition."

Eight years later, during the Selma voting rights marches, televised pictures of a vicious "Bloody Sunday" attack on unarmed Americans touched the conscience of this Nation—leading directly to enactment of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Mr. Chairman, this landmark legislation, often called the most important civil rights law of all, is still important in our own time.

From my own life experience, I can attest that we have come a long way toward universal justice in this country, but we are not there yet.

I note that a Federal court recently upheld a Voting Rights Act challenge to a proposed Georgia requirement that would require every voter to present a government photo ID before voting—a requirement, the court held, that would disproportionately burden minority voters.

And in the Texas redistricting cases that the Supreme Court just decided, the Court held that Texas District 23 violates the Voting Rights Act by making it more difficult for Latino-Americans to elect representatives of their own choosing.

In communities like my own throughout the country, the Voting Rights Act is the very foundation of our faith that America is moving forward toward the day when "liberty and justice for all" will truly prevail.

Americans of our own time—minority and majority Americans alike—need the continued guidance that the Voting Rights Act provides. We have come a long way, but more needs to be done.

The four amendments approved by the Rules Committee are poison pills for this bill and the sponsors know this. Any plan or scheme—by purpose or effect—that would diminish the right to vote is un-American and violates the act.

With this renewal of the Voting Rights Act, we have the opportunity to live up to Dr. King’s vision of a better, more unified country.
"Give us the ballot," Dr. King declared during that 1957 Prayer Pilgrimage to Washington, "and we will...fill our legislative halls with men of good will and send to the sacred halls of Congress men who will not sign a southern manifesto because of their devotion to the cause of justice."

Mr. Chairman, we can be those noble people whom Dr. King prophesied, the people who reaffirm and strengthen that truly American manifesto of justice that reads:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." These are inspiring and powerful words, Mr. Chairman.

Our duty is clear. Vote to reauthorize VRA without the gutting amendments.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Chairman, I ask my colleagues to join me today in reauthorizing the single piece of legislation that has been a guardian of voting rights in our democracy since its inception. Su vote es su voz—Your vote is your voice. Those people who vote on decisions in this Nation; the more people that vote the better this democracy can be. While the government literally represents the People, 'We the People,' we were actually sent here by voters, which—at best—is about half the people we represent.

It is ironic that today, the backdrop for this discussion is the Supreme Court decision on Texas redistricting recently that spoke to the unconstitutionality of how the State divided the Hispanic population in the 2003 map. While I wish we did not need the VRA and to protect minorities, we are still seeing discrimination in this country—a fact illustrated by the Supreme Court's Texas redistricting decision.

My public service began before some of you were born—not that I'm happy to admit that. My first campaign was 1964, the last election year before the Voting Rights Act of 1965 abolished literacy tests and poll taxes—both components of a time when one segment of this Nation could diminish the voting strength of other entire segments of this Nation. My mother paid $1,000 to bring me to this fortune for a migrant family in 1964—to bankroll my first campaign.

The money was mostly to help offset the poll tax for Hispanic voters, whose priority was putting food on the table for their families. We have improved our democracy since then, but our civil tone in political debates has deteriorated. And I wish we did not need the VRA and to protect minorities, which is why we continue to see discrimination in this country—a fact illustrated by the Supreme Court's Texas redistricting decision.

It is important to note, however, that the last 40 years we have not been a bad-news only story. The Judiciary Committee's report documents the continuing inequity of our electoral system and improvements made to it by the Voting Rights Act. It shows that the Voting Rights Act has been effective, but much work remains to be done. For example, between 1965 and 1988, the gap between registration of White voters and Black voters in Mississippi narrowed from 63.2 to 6.3 percent, and from 50 to 7.4 percent in North Carolina. Similar increases in Black registration were experienced throughout the States covered by section 5 during that period. Meanwhile, the number of African-American officials has increased from 1,469 in 1970, to over 9,000 in the year 2,000. Over the period from 1978 to 2004, the number of Asian-Americans elected to office has more than doubled.

The statistics also show that much work remains. The Judiciary Committee has found that in each of six southern States covered by section 5 during that period. Meanwhile, the number of African-American officials has increased from 1,469 in 1970, to over 9,000 in the year 2,000. Over the period from 1978 to 2004, the number of Asian-Americans elected to office has more than doubled. The statistics also show that much work remains. Ms. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my support for the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments of 2007. Over the years the expiring provisions of the original VRA to once again ensure the right of all Americans to vote.

It is imperative that we adopt the bipartisan bill without amendments that violate the spirit of the original VRA, including the bipartisan majority in this House and Senate and signed into law by both Republican and Democratic Presidents. In the 41 years since its initial passage, the VRA has enfranchised millions of racial, ethnic and language minority citizens by eliminating discriminatory laws. In the works of the election reform forum in December 2004, the continued necessity for the expiring provisions of the VRA.

The Judiciary Committee's report on the in- quire into the effectiveness of and continuing necessity for the expiring provisions of the Voting Rights Act. Through this process, the reports delivered by election reform experts and civil rights groups are still available on the Common Cause website.

I believe that the greatest invention of humans is our system of Constitutional democracy. It has transformed not just America, but the world, demonstrating that peaceful and productive government by the consent of the governed is possible. That consent—the very cornerstone of the system—is given by the vote. We have demonstrated that majority rule with protections of minority rights and minority influence is possible. The Supreme Court has held that the right to vote is the most fundamental right, as it is preservative of all others. The measure before us which will assure the continued life of the Voting Rights Act in the decades to come—is of monumental importance.

I am also eager to continue the fight to improve the fairness, accuracy and integrity of our electoral system as soon as this historic measure passes. I hope my colleagues will rapidly work with me towards passage of my Voter Confidence and Increased Accessibility Act, H.R. 550, to ensure that all votes are not only counted as cast, but can independently be audited so that both the losing side-actually, everyone—can and the winning side can accept the electoral results. The legislation would require a voter-verifiable paper record of every vote cast and other things to ensure the reliability, auditability, an accessibility of the voting process.

In addition, and especially because the measure before us will eliminate the further use of Federal examiners to assist in assuring the accuracy, integrity and full inclusivity of voter registration lists, I hope my colleagues will support me in my work to pass my Electoral Fairness Act, H.R. 4989, which will substantively enhance the protections afforded to voters under the Help America Vote Act and the National Voter Registration Act in connection with the voter registration process. The legislation would establish fair and uniform rules governing the casting and counting of provisional ballots; ensure that adequate staffing, equipment and supplies be equally available at all polling places to minimize wait times for all voters; and protect the accuracy, integrity and inclusiveness of the voter registration rolls.

I urge my colleagues to join me today in reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act, and committing ourselves to work to preserve and advance its legacy in every possible manner. Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 9, which reauthorizes the Voting Rights Act (VRA) for an additional 25 years.

Congress first passed the VRA in 1965 to dismantle “Jim Crow” and to respond to widespread disenfranchisement of minorities. Since then the VRA has been reauthorized numerous times in order to address other issues that impact voting access and fair representation, including congressional districting, language requirements and election monitoring.

In 41 years since the enactment of the original VRA, 95% of jurisdictions covered under this section have been relieved of preclearance. It is time to end the moratorium on preclearance.

This provision is vital to ensure that local jurisdictions do not employ tactics that discourage minority voting. Because of what is at stake, I believe it’s vital that we reauthorize the VRA and do so by an overwhelming majority.

I strongly support the legislation before us, but I would be remiss not to take this opportunity to address the challenges we still face with respect to our elections. The 2000 and 2004 Presidential elections demonstrated the work that needs to be done to ensure that the will of the people is accurately reflected at the polls.

After the 2000 election, Congress acted in a bipartisan manner to pass the Help America Vote Act which, among other things, required the replacement of outdated punchcard and lever-machines with electronic voting machines, so that voters can verify their votes prior to casting them in a reasonably timely manner if so desired. Legislation to enact these steps has been introduced in the form of H.R. 550, the Voter Confidence and Increased Accessibility Act, and is supported by over 190 bipartisan cosponsors. After we vote to pass the reauthorization, we can continue our attention to passing H.R. 550 so we can provide full confidence, fairness and transparency in our election process.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 9 and to do everything possible to make sure every vote is counted and that every vote counts in our electoral system.

Mr. LARSON. of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, after much delay and hankering by the Republican leadership about bringing this bill to the floor for a vote, I am proud to see that we have strong support of reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act. As a cosponsor of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, I urge my colleagues to respond to the request of the President, the President pro tempore of the Senate, and the leadership of the House to extend the right to vote for all Americans.

Mr. GONZALEZ. of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, which I am pleased to co-sponsor, and in strong opposition to the amendment offered by Congressman CHARLIE NORWOOD.

Over the last 40 years, efforts to renew and restore the VRA have been accomplished on a bipartisan basis. It is in that spirit that we urge all of my colleagues to oppose any amendments to H.R. 9, and to overwhelmingly pass a clean Voting Rights Act Reauthorization. Mr. CASE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006, which I am pleased to co-sponsor, and in strong opposition to the amendment offered by Congressman CHARLIE NORWOOD.

No congressional duty is more profound than ensuring that all Americans who wish to participate in the democratic process do so, and do so by an overwhelming majority. This provision is vital to ensure that the right to vote is the most fundamental right of the American people, who are the rightful owners of this American government. I urge the Members of this Chamber to reaffirm our commitment to protect democracy and support the clean final passage of H.R. 9.

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9, the Coretta Scott King, Fannie Lou Hamer, and Rosa Parks Voting Rights Act Amendment and Amendments Act of 2006. I can think of no better way to honor the legacies of Mrs. King, Mrs. Hamer, and Mrs. Parks than to pass this good, bipartisan bill.

Like many of my colleagues, I remember vividly the passage of the original Voting Rights Act of 1965. This landmark piece of legislation served as a significant milestone in the Civil Rights Movement. However, as we act to reauthorize this bill, it is all too obvious that the struggle for equal voting rights for all Americans is not over. Sadly, I know that we still need the VRA because we continue to hear reports of election-day abuses and violations.

Now is not the time to weaken or water-down the VRA. Some of my colleagues will offer amendments under the guise of modernizing the VRA. I believe that these proposed changes to the legislation will strip out some core protections that are still necessary. I urge all of my colleagues to oppose any amendments to H.R. 9, and to overwhelmingly pass a clean Voting Rights Act Reauthorization. Mr. CASE. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 9, which I am pleased to co-sponsor, and in strong opposition to the amendment offered by Congressman CHARLIE NORWOOD.

No congressional duty is more profound than ensuring that the right to vote is the most fundamental right of all Americans. As Members of this House, we cannot, we must not, be divided or indifferent in reaffirming America’s promise that everyone is created equal. The vote is sacred in this country. Throughout our history, Americans have given their lives for freedom and the right to elect their leaders, from Lexington and Concord in Massachusetts, to Seneca Falls in New York, to Selma and Montgomery in Alabama, Americans demand the highest standards; the highest confidence; the highest protection in their right to participate in the democratic process.

The fact remains that not too long ago many Americans were denied the right to vote based on their sex or their skin color and in all honesty, many still battle the remnants of this discrimination today. It has been more than 40 years since President Lyndon Johnson called upon Congress to “extend the rights of citizenship to every citizen of this land” and pass the Voting Rights Act eliminating illegal barriers to the right to vote. Since that time, the face of America has changed, but our government’s commitment to protect the integrity of every vote has not.

So today, I ask my Republican colleagues to put aside their partisanship and petty political gamesmanship and join me in protecting the most fundamental right of the American people, who are the rightful owners of this American government. I urge the Members of this Chamber to reaffirm our commitment to protect democracy and support the clean final passage of H.R. 9.
My colleague argues that his amendment will “modernize” section 5. I believe that what his amendment really does is change the very focus of the preclearance provision, as it aims to make low voter turnout and registration the issues and not a recorded history of voting discrimination.

In fact, if the Norwood amendment were enacted, it would make my home state of Hawaii—a state without any history whatsoever of voting discrimination—the only preclearance state in our nation. This demonstrates in spades that one cannot reduce discrimination nor the need for federal oversight to so simplistic and mechanistic formula.

Reauthorization of the VRA gives us an opportunity to not only to reflect upon the progress we have made, but to maintain those gains that we have achieved. Adoption of the Norwood amendment would be a giant leap backwards.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the Norwood amendment, and all other weakening amendments, and support final passage of H.R. 9, a true bipartisan bill.

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the Fannie Lou Hammer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006. I want to thank the Speaker and Majority Leader for this opportunity to go forward with this debate prior to our upcoming recess.

The 1965 Voting Rights Act changed America. It created the opportunity for minority citizens to fully participate in Democracy. Prior to the enactment and enforcement of the Act, black and white voters in the South were disenfranchised primarily because of the Literacy Tests and because of the design of election systems that submerged concentrations of black voters into large, majority-white election districts. The result was that African-American communities could not elect candidates of their choice to office.

Why? It was because black voters did not comprise sufficient numbers within the district and white voters refused to vote for candidates who were of the choice of the minority community. And so, the votes of black citizens were diluted which is a clear violation of the principal of one-person, one-vote.

The Voting Rights Act permits minority citizens to bring Federal lawsuits when they feel their vote is being diluted. Hundreds of these lawsuits have been successfully litigated in the Federal courts. In my prior life I was a Voting Rights attorney in North Carolina. As a result of court ordered remedies, local jurisdictions have been required to create election districts that do not dilute minority voting strength. The result has been absolutely incredible. When I was in law school 32 years ago, there were virtually no black elected officials in my congressional district. Today, I count 302.

The Voting Rights Act also requires some jurisdictions to obtain Department of Justice pre-clearance to any change in election procedure. This, at first blush, may appear to be unfair to those jurisdictions. But the jurisdictions that are covered have a significant history of vote dilution and this requirement of pre-clearance simply assures that the jurisdiction does not, intentionally or unintentionally, make changes in their election procedures that would discriminate. This is called section 5. Section 5 has prevented many, many election changes that would have disenfranchised minority voters.

It serves a useful purpose and should be extended.

A short story. In 1953, in my hometown of Wilson, North Carolina, the African-American community worked very hard to teach the literacy test and qualify black citizens to vote. They then organized and elected an African-American to the City Council in a district with a large concentration of black voters. That was big news. When it was time for re-election in 1957, the City Council arbitrarily and without notice or debate, changed the election system from district voting to at large voting which resulted in the ousting of black voters. The change also required voters to vote for all city council seats on the ballot. If not, the ballot was considered spoiled. It was called the “vote for six rule”.

Needless to say, that candidate, Dr. G.K. Butterfield, was handsly defeated. If Section 5 had been in place in 1957, this jurisdiction would not have been able to implement the changes and this community would have continued to have representation.

Mr. Chairman, we have made tremendous progress in this country with respect to civil rights and voting rights. We must not turn back. I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 9 as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary and require covered jurisdictions to get the Department of Justice to analyze voting changes to determine if they will have the effect of diluting minority voting strength.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of a clean version of the Voting Rights Act; a version that is free of mean spirited amendments that aim to divide this country rather than unify and protect the rights of minorities to vote.

After being delayed for close to a month, the Voting Rights Act is finally allowed the vote it deserves. However, numerous Republican members would like nothing more then to see this important legislation derailed. Hence they have offered up amendments that will taint the purity of this bill.

One such amendment would prohibit Federal funds to be used in enforcing bilingual balloting. Many of the constituents that I and my other members of this Chamber represent, would like nothing more then to participate in the basic democratic right of voting. However, many of these people who are citizens still struggle while they learn the English language and assimilate.

Let me be clear, we are not talking about undocumented residents. These are citizens of the United States. Many of whom have voted you and me into the office that we hold today.

The Voting Rights Act was passed in 1965 to protect the rights of all minorities to vote in the United States. However, many of the amendments offered today, are political tricks that only serve to continue to disenfranchise minority voters.

From not counting votes, purging legitimate voters from voter rolls, mandating ID cards to vote, and downright voter intimidation, it is clear now more then ever that the Voting Rights Act must be reauthorized as the original drafted of the legislation intended—excluding all amendments to this legislation that are being offered today.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no” on any amendment to the Voting Rights Act and vote “yes” on a clean version of this bill.

Ms. KILPATRICK of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, the right to vote—to participate fully and fairly in the political process—is the foundation of our democracy. For years after the Civil War, many Americans were denied this fundamental right of citizenship. Horrible acts of violence and discrimination, including poll taxes, literacy tests, and grandfather clauses, were used to deny African-American citizens the right to vote.

During the 1960s, many brave men and women fought against bigotry and injustice to secure this most basic right for all Americans. The Voting Rights Act, VRA, the “crown jewel” of our civil rights statutes, was born out of this struggle, struggle, struggle.

President Lyndon Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act into law on August 6, 1965. It provided protection to minority communities, and prohibited any voting practice that would abridge the right to vote on the basis of race. Any “test or device” for registering or voting was forbidden, thereby abolling poll taxes and literacy tests.

Although the Voting Rights Act is a permanent Federal law, it contains some temporary provisions, including the “pre-clearance” and the bilingual provisions.

The “pre-clearance” provisions were enacted as temporary legislation in 1965. Sections four and five address “pre-clearance” and are only applicable in certain parts of the country. These provisions were originally put in place to bolster the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act. The VRA required State and local political jurisdictions with a documented history of discrimination to submit any proposed changes to their voting laws to the U.S. Attorney General or to Federal judges for review. The changes could take effect. This process ensured that the Federal Government had the ability to prevent discriminatory voting laws before they were implemented. For example, States must receive approval before changing the closing time of polling places. Congress renewed these provisions in 1970, 1975, and 1982. The process of “pre-clearance” provision continues to protect voters today.

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

Passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act has allowed millions of minorities the constitutional right to vote in Federal elections. In 1964, only 300 African Americans in the United States were elected to public office, this included just three in Congress. One of the people for whom this bill is named is Fannie Lou Hamer. Fannie Lou Hamer was born, lived, and died in the trenches of Mississippi’s 2nd Congressional District. Her history and legacy in voter education and voter participation include people like me who stand before you as the highest-ranking African American elected official in the State of Mississippi, an opportunity that would not have been possible without the passage of this act. And, with the expiration of major provisions, section 5, section 203 and sections 6 through 9, of the Voting Rights Act rapidly approaching, Congress must reauthorize these provisions now to protect those who may face discrimination in their efforts to exercise their right to vote.

In 2001, one of the most shameful and shocking reminders of discrimination occurred in Kilichael, Mississippi. An all-white city
President Lyndon Baines Johnson signed into law the Voting Rights Act; those that were not directedly wiped away by the Voting Rights Act were defeated by cases brought before the U.S. Supreme Court by the Attorney General of the United States.

As George Santayana stated so eloquently: "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it." It is important that the House pass this historic renewal of the Voting Rights Act without amendment that would besmirch the legacy of the three women who are honored in its title. To do anything less would jeopardize many of the accomplishments that those three courageous women and thousands of others fought for: that all Americans can exercise their right to vote freely without fear.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, the passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965 was a reaction to the "exceptional conditions" of the time. Obstacles to voting, borne of racism, had become accepted practice in many States. Many of these obstacles were written directly into State constitutions. These deterrents, including literacy tests and poll taxes, were designed to exclude and restrict nonwhite voters.

As we quickly approach the expiration of provisions of the Voting Rights Act, we must stop and take a hard look at voting rights in America. Although the taxes and tests are now a memory, remnants of the prejudice and fear that conceived of them remain. In the many hearings held by the Judiciary Committee examining the expiring provisions, the committee found numerous recent incidents in which objections were raised to changes in voting law.

One of the nine States subject to the provisions of section 5, provisions that require preclearance of changes to voting law by the Department of Justice, is Georgia. Since 2002, four objections have been raised against proposed changes to laws in that State. These four objections stopped discriminatory changes in that State.

The long lines and intimidation tactics used in my home State of Ohio in 2004 are proof that this reauthorization will not, in and of itself, solve our Nation's need for voter reform. But it is a strong step in the right direction.

The Voting Rights Act is still needed in America. We have stopped many of the egregious practices that plagued our voting system in 1965, but our work is not done. I strongly support the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act and encourage my colleagues to join me in voting for this important bill.

Mr. SENSENIBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and shall be considered read.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks, and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006”.

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL PURPOSE AND FINDINGS.

(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to ensure that the right of all citizens to vote, including the right to register to vote and cast meaningful votes, is preserved and protected as guaranteed by the Constitution.

(b) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Significant progress has been made in eliminating first generation barriers experienced by minority voters, including increased numbers of registered minority voters, minority voter turnout, and minority representation in Congress, State legislatures, and local elected offices, as direct result of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

(2) However, vestiges of discrimination in voting continue to exist as manifested by second generation barriers constructed to prevent minority voters from fully participating in the electoral process.

(3) The continued evidence of racially polarized voting in each of the jurisdictions covered by the expiration provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 demonstrates that racial and language minorities remain politically vulnerable, warranting the continued protection of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

(4) Evidence of continued discrimination includes—

(A) the hundreds of objections interposed, requests for more information submitted followed by voting changes withdrawn from consideration by jurisdictions covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and section 5 enforcement actions undertaken by the Department of Justice in covered jurisdictions since 1982 that prevented election practices, such as annexation, at-large voting, and the use of multi-member districts, from being enacted to dilute minority voting strength;

(B) the number of requests for declaratory judgments denied by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia;

(C) the continued filing of section 2 cases that originated in covered jurisdictions; and

(D) the litigation pursued by the Department of Justice since 1982 to enforce sections 4(e), 4(f)(4), and 203 of such Act to ensure that all language minority citizens have full access to the political process.

(5) The evidence clearly shows the continued need for Federal oversight in jurisdictions covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and 1992, as demonstrated in the counties certified by the Attorney General for Federal examiners and observers, and the 150 visits and hundreds of Federal observers that have been dispatched to observe elections in covered jurisdictions.

(6) The effectiveness of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 has been significantly weakened by the United States Supreme Court decisions in Reno v. Bossier Parish II and Georgia v. Ashcroft, which have misconstrued Congress' original intent in enacting the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and narrowed the protections afforded by section 5 of such Act.

(7) Despite the progress made by minorities under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, the evidence before Congress reveals that 40 years has not been a sufficient amount of time to eliminate the vestiges of discrimination following nearly 100 years of disregard for the dictates of the 15th Amendment and to ensure that the right of all citizens to vote is protected as guaranteed by the Constitution.

(8) The present day discrimination experienced by racial and language minority voters is contained in evidence, including the objections interposed by the Department of Justice in covered jurisdictions; the section 2 litigation filed to prevent dilutive techniques from adversely affecting minority voters; the enforcement actions filed to protect language minorities; and the tens of thousands of Federal observers dispatched to monitor polls in jurisdictions covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965.
(9) The record compiled by Congress demonstrates that, without the continuation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 protections, racial and language minority citizens will be deprived of the opportunity to vote in federal elections, and will have their votes diluted, undermining the significant gains made by minorities in the last 40 years.

SEC. 3. CHANGES RELATING TO USE OF EXAMINERS AND OBSERVERS.

(a) USE OF OBSERVERS.—Section 8 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973j) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) The purpose of subsection (b) of this section is to protect the ability of such citizens to elect their preferred candidates of choice."

SEC. 6. EXPERT FEES AND OTHER REASONABLE COSTS OF VOTING RIGHTS ACT ENFORCEMENT.

Section 14(e) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973z-1(e)(3)) is amended by inserting "reasonable expert fees, and other reasonable litigation expenses," after "reasonable attorney's fee".

SEC. 7. EXTENSION OF BILINGUAL ELECTION REQUIREMENTS.

Section 203(b)(2)(A) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973aa-6(b)(2)(A)) is amended by inserting "the 2010 American Community Survey census data and subsequent American Community Survey data in 5-year increments, or comparable census data."
that the Norwood Amendment deserves a more careful, data-informed treatment before it is dismissed. The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 910, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD) and a Member opposed each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to submit for the RECORD an article from Dr. Ronald Gaddie of the University of Oklahoma and an article from the American Enterprise Institute.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The gentleman’s request will be covered by general leave.

MYTHS AND REALITIES OF THE NORWOOD AMENDMENT TO THE VOTING RIGHTS ACT
(By Ronald Keith Gaddie)

There is a myth abounding in the debate about the renewal of the Voting Rights Act, that the Norwood amendment guts section 5, limiting its scope only to Hawaii and largely removing Section 5 oversight in the 16 states currently covered in whole or in part. Professor Rick Hasen, with whom I largely agree, gave credence to this myth in his editorial in Roll Call. I agree with Prof. Hasen regarding the bailout amendment from Mr. Westmoreland. However, I think the Norwood Amendment deserves a more careful, data-informed treatment before it is dismissed.

This myth is simply wrong. Saying “only Hawaii” leaves the impression that the Norwood Amendment withdraws the Voting Rights Act from its original target, the South, and that it is being retired to a permanent sunshine sabbatical on Maui. The truth is far more complex, and far less threatening to the continuation of coverage by the Voting Rights Act.

In my supplemental testimony to the Senate Judiciary Committee this past June, I supported updating the coverage formula to refer to the Presidential elections of 2000 and 2004. In that testimony, I also argued that the trigger be set to the two most recent elections, so that it would have “a capacity to consider the evolution of the electorate, and that the trigger be based on the voting-eligible population—citizens. Any state or jurisdiction administering elections where participation fell below 50 percent of the citizen voting age population would be subject to preclearance.” The consequence of this trigger is not dire. Instead, most of the currently-covered jurisdictions continue to be covered, and other jurisdictions where we observe both racial strife and low political participation will fall under Section 5 preclearance.

An examination of data from the two most recent elections gives us a notion of how the Norwood Amendment would affect coverage. Norwood’s trigger, based on participation in the 1996, 2000, and 2004 presidential elections, requires Section 5 in over 1,000 counties across most of the states in the union based on participation in 2000 and 2004. Lacking data for 1996, I limit my discussion to these elections, which resembles the trigger I proposed to the Senate Judiciary Committee this past June.

Where are these counties? Of the 1,000 counties covered, 486 were not previously subject to Section 5. Of these, 58 are in states already covered in part by Section 5: twelve in California, eighteen in Florida, five in Michigan, sixteen in North Carolina, six in New York State. Another 121 are in Arkansas and Tennessee, states not currently covered by Section 5. Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and West Virginia account for another 155 counties, including any rural Appalachian counties or, in case of Oklahoma, counties with notable Native American populations. In sum, 334 new counties come from former Confederate or Border South states or from current Section 5 jurisdictions.

Another twenty-one counties come from New Mexico, where a state court in 2001 and 2002 accepted the presence of racially polarized voting in the southern part of the state and in the areas populated by Navajo and Jicarilla Apache. Of the remaining 131 new, covered counties, 67 are in Indiana and Pennsylvania, where population loss since the 1990 census might explain the presence of low voting rates. This leaves 64 counties scattered over sixteen states, including a variety of very populous counties like rapidly-growing Clark County, Nevada (Las Vegas) and also sparsely populated places such as Glacier County, Montana, the home of the Blackfeet Indian Nation, and about 14,000 residents. Many of the counties that are picked up in the new states with very few covered counties also host Indian reservations, including counties in Nebraska, Michigan, Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, and Oregon.

So where do they come from? It appears that 340 counties in currently covered states do not get picked up, plus Alaska and ten townships of New Hampshire. Of those that are not picked up by the trigger, 43 are in Mississippi, 31 are in Louisiana, and 58 are in Virginia, and result in a 55 percent reduction in covered counties in these three states. Of those participating, 20 states would not get picked up. These four states account for over half of the currently-covered counties that would no longer be covered.

An additional 118 counties come from the 284 counties of Texas, though the only major urban county to no longer be covered is Tarrant County (Fort Worth). Dallas (Dallas), Harris (Houston), El Paso (El Paso), and Bexar (San Antonio) counties and most of the South Valley continue to be covered. Jurisdictions that do not get covered tend to be in sparsely populated west Texas. Also, twenty-two of 158 Georgia counties and nine of 46 South Carolina counties are not picked up by the new trigger. Most of the Georgia dropouts are in the Atlanta urban doughnut or outside the black belt, as too are the South Carolina dropouts. Of the 12 Alabama black belt counties stay in, due to their high voter participation, and about half of the historic rural majority-black counties of Mississippi are also not picked up.

The original trigger of the Voting Rights Act was crafted to target jurisdictions with egregious voting rights and human rights problems. The updating of the trigger in the 1960s and early 1970s picked up non-Southern jurisdictions that had participation problems and also, coincidentally or not, had other voting rights challenges that might not have been addressed in the absence of an updated trigger. The Norwood Amendment trigger preserves coverage in most of those original and updated jurisdictions, and also expands coverage in a fashion similar to the 1960 and 1972 trigger updates. And, in doing so, it picks up jurisdictions where noted advocates such as Laughlin MacDonald have stated the need for greater oversight, such South Dakota, by identifying areas in partially-covered states where lower participation might indicate the need for closer scrutiny by the Department of Justice.

The politics of the Voting Rights Act renewal debate that the Norwood Amendment will not pass in the House. But on its face the Norwood Amendment is not predatory. Rather, it acknowledges a political reality of significant gains in participation in areas less-covered by the Voting Rights Act, while also continuing and extending coverage in areas where voters are not participating, and where the need for stricter scrutiny of voting and registration practices could be in order.

AN ASSESSMENT OF Racially Polarized Voting IN MILWAUKEE, WISCONSIN PREPARED FOR THE PROJECT ON FAIR REPRESENTATION, AMERICAN ENTERPRISE INSTITUTE

(By Charles S. Bullock III and Ronald Keith Gaddie)

The scope of racially polarized voting is not confined to the Section 5 states or to the South, but indeed occurs in places such as Wisconsin. During the 2002 federal trial to establish new state Assembly boundaries for the Badger State, the well-regarded University of Wisconsin political scientist David Canon entered testimony on behalf of plaintiffs arguing for the existence of racially polarized voting and significant differences in African-American versus Anglo participation in Milwaukee. The following data and analysis are drawn from Canon’s reports and affidavits.

Canon’s analysis focused on sixteen biracial elections within Milwaukee County. In fourteen of these contests, white turnout exceeded black turnout, often by double the rate of voter participation.

In his analysis, Canon found nine instances of “legally significant” racially polarized voting in black-versus-white contests: the 1992 Milwaukee County Executive primary, the 1995 state House district 5 primary, the 1996 at-large school board primary, the 1996 Supreme Court primary, the 1996 Milwaukee Mayor’s race (General election), the 1998 gubernational primary, the 1999 at-large school board election, and the 2000 Supreme Court general election. Eight of these contests were primaries or non-partisan contests, and in those eight contests, the white turnout rate was on average double that of the black turnout rate.

The average black vote for the black candidate (86.2%) in the eight polarized, primary or non-partisan contests was comparable to the average white vote for the white candidate (85.2%). These levels of polarization are comparable to levels observed in the most polarized southern elections, and exceed the degree of polarization in recent Georgia elections. Overall, in the nine instances of legally significant polarization identified by Canon, black voters cast at least 89% of votes for the black candidate on six occasions while white voters cast at least 89% for the white candidates on three occasions.

Dr. Canon exhibits an explicit concern that Republicans in Wisconsin would use districting to locate black voters in such a fashion that a Voting Rights Act violation might occur. In his criticism of State Assembly redistricting plans advanced by the Assembly Republicans in Wisconsin, Canon observed that: “the black majorities are too small in the Republican plans, black voters will not be able to elect their candidates of choice in as many as four of the six black-majority districts. The highly-polarized nature of voting in Milwaukee County and the relatively low turnout of African-American voters means that the combined minority voting age population should be at least 65% and the African-American voting age population should be at least 60% in order to ensure that minority voters have an opportunity to elect candidates of their choice . . . given the relative lack of responsiveness of the Republican Party to the particular needs of minority voters, see ‘Eliciting Candidates of Choice’ and Effective Minority Representation in the 2002 Wisconsin State Legislative Districts,” pp. 27-30, the link between the creation of majority black districts and this partisan goal, and the dilution of black voting power by making it more difficult to elect minority candidates of choice, I believe that the State of Wisconsin would have been subject to legal liability under a “totality of circumstances” test under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act.” (page 49-49)

Taken a step further, we should note that the Federal panel hearing this case sidestepped the issue of crafting a “best principles” map based on compactness and minimum population deviation. This map continued the five existing minority districts at relatively high percentages, and rejected an argument of “packing” of districts under the Democrat’s proposed maps in Milwaukee. While the argument was side-stepped, and a generally Republican map resulted from the court’s effort, they also implicitly accepted the logic of the Democrat by basing their case on the inclusion of two predominantly minority-held districts. My concern is that the Democrat’s expert recommendation.

Here, we see motive and opportunity, and we have expert analysis that demonstrates polarization akin to the South, and prescribes a remedy much more intensive than that used in many southern jurisdictions—Dr. Canon says that the 65% district is still necessary in Milwaukee, while the need for the district has passed in any southern jurisdictions—Dr. Canon says that the 65% district is still necessary in Milwaukee, while the need for the district has passed in any southern jurisdictions.

Dr. Canon then observed that the 65% district is still necessary in Milwaukee, while the need for the district has passed in any southern jurisdictions.

Please also note that while Epstein’s analysis was not accepted by the district court in Ashcroft, it was accepted by Justice O’Connor in her decision.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, when the original Voting Rights Act passed this House, it was to correct voting discrimination evident in the 1964 Presidential election. Title II election provisions and enforcement scheme in the new law were all designed around that challenge.

The specific challenges of 1964 have long ago been rectified, yet the specific enforcement scheme contained in sections 4 and 5 remains based on 1964, 1968, and 1972 Presidential elections. Here are the current rules on the VRA:

To fall under section 5 Federal oversight, a voting jurisdiction has to have committed both of the following offenses:

One, they must have maintained discriminatory tests or devices to discourage voting in 1964, 1968, and 1972 Presidential elections.

Two, they had to have fallen below 50 percent voter registration or turnout in 1964, 1968, and 1972 Presidential elections.

Note that an area must have committed both offenses back then to fall under section 5.

We have a rare opportunity today to update the Voting Rights Act and bring it back into compliance with the original intent of the bill to safeguard voting rights all across the country, not just in the current 16 States.

Instead of continuing to face legal protections on 1964 conditions, this amendment will update them to modern results and toughen the standard, and, indeed, add more jurisdictions under the Voting Rights Act.

First, instead of requiring a jurisdiction to violate both of the standards to fall under section 5 oversight, a jurisdiction is placed in the penalty box for violating either one of the two triggers.

Second, the President’s election years used to determine violations are updated to the most recent three elections, 1996, 2000, 2004. They would be automatically updated in the future to ensure that the act stays current.

Third, the penalty period for new violations is increased from the current 10-year bailout rule to 12 years, by requiring an area demonstrate three clean Presidential elections in a row in order to get out of the penalty box.

Under this amendment, the Justice Department is ordered to automatically review nationwide results and add noncomplying areas to the section 4 list or section 5 oversight after each 4-year cycle. Any jurisdiction that does not violate either trigger for three Presidential election years in a row will be automatically removed from section 5.

That is a real incentive for State and local governments to move aggressively into compliance with the Voting Rights Act. It guarantees the terms for getting off the list, without bankrupting local governments with legal bills as do the current arbitrary 10-year bailout requirements, which in many cases are impossible to meet. And it is certain that a partisan Justice Department wants to make sure you stay under there for 10 years, and with enough time we will explain how they do that.

The Justice Department will therefore determine whether specific jurisdictions are added or deleted from Federal oversight list based on their performance in 1996, 2000, and 2004 rather than 1964, with automatic rolling updates to future election cycles.

The end result of this amendment would be to substantially expedite deadlines for Federal oversight in areas with current violations, and section 5 oversight relief for areas with long-standing historic Voting Rights Act compliance.

My State of Georgia, under my amendment, will unfortunately, remain on the list since we fell below the 50 percent trigger in 1996.

There are currently 837 jurisdictions under section 5 oversight. That would be on the chart to the right. Under this amendment, there would be a minimum, with my new amendment, that would be a minimum of 1,010 covered jurisdictions all across the country in 39 States. That is indicated by the chart on my left. The white areas are people not under 5; under my amendment the colored areas are people who would be under 5 because they broke the same rule under section 4 as we did in Georgia.

In fact, there would be substantially more than that. Our researchers could only find areas out of compliance in 2000 and 2004, without spending a great deal of money in 1996, but we will know 1996. So all these areas that failed to comply in 1996 would also be added to section 5 oversight as well. We just can’t tell you for sure right now how many more that might be.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment will significantly improve voting rights protections by eliminating default amnesty for modern violations. It will provide understandable and clearly defined relief in compliance with either original trigger, and therefore encourage vigorous remedial action by those governments, and actually strengthening and updating the Voting Rights Act to go after current violations.

I do not understand why it is not important about violators in 2004, but we seem to not take that up in H.R. 9. Our citizens are living long overdue equity to the areas of our country that unjustly remain under penalty for 40-year-old violations that have long been remedied. And do not kid yourself, just because a partisan Justice Department objects to a submittal does not necessarily mean they are right. The Supreme Court has said on occasion that they are wrong. Nor does it mean that there has been any discrimination.

I urge Members to support updating the Voting Rights Act for the 21st century with this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. SENSENBERGER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment guts the Voting Rights Act, and let’s make no bones about it. It does so by altering its coverage formula to cover only those jurisdictions in which voter registration and turnout fell below 50 percent in the 2000, 2004, and 1996 Presidential elections.

Based on the Census Bureau Current Population Survey, there is not a single State, except Hawaii, with voter registration and turnout below the 50 percent level required by this amendment. That means that only the State of Hawaii in its entirety would be covered, along with random scattered jurisdictions across the country that do not have the century-long history of discrimination that we do.

The amendment not only guts the bill, but turns the Voting Rights Act into a farce.

To give you a sense of the absurdity of this amendment, let’s take the example of Montana. In Montana, the amendment would only cover Glacier County, where there has been absolutely no evidence of voting discrimination, but where voter registration and turnout fell below the thresholds established by this amendment. That is the little blue spot on the Canadian border on Mr. Norwood’s map.

The amendment, however, would not cover Blaine County, where just a few years ago a Federal District Court and a U.S. Court of Appeals found widespread evidence of discrimination against American Indians, who comprised one-third of the voters.

This amendment would also not cover Big Horn County, where a Federal court documented the virtually complete disenfranchisement of American Indian voters, nor would it apply to several other counties in Montana where voting discrimination has occurred, such as Rosebud County.

Under this amendment, similarly absurd results apply in 38 other States. So you might want to check on how this amendment affects your State before deciding whether to vote “yes” on it.

In addition, the amendment would render the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act unconstitutional. This amendment is designed to make all of the expiring provisions unconstitutional, and it simply guarantees that the Supreme Court of the United States will wipe this act off the books.

As recently as 1999, the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the current coverage formula in the Voting Rights Act. In 1999, 7 years ago, Justice v. Monterey County, the Supreme Court upheld the Voting Rights Act’s voting rule preclearance requirement finding that it “burdens State law only to the extent that the law affects voting in jurisdictions properly entitled to it.”

By radically altering the coverage formula of the Voting Rights Act in a way that severs its connection to jurisdictions with proven discriminatory histories, this amendment will render H.R. 9 unconstitutional and leave minority voters without the essential protections of the preclearance and the Federal observer requirements central to the VRA.

The elimination of these provisions would threaten to destroy the advances of voting rights the VRA has made possible to date and must continue to protect and advance in the future.

There is broad agreement on this point. Justice Scalia, in his opinion in the recent Texas redistricting case, joined by the Chief Justice, Justice Alito and Justice Thomas, makes its clear that the Voting Rights Act with its current coverage formula will be upheld as consistent with section 5 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to jurisdictions with a history of official discrimination.

The existing formula triggering coverage under the Voting Rights Act is not at all outdated in any meaningful sense of the term, and States covered are not unfairly punished under the coverage formula. Sixteen States are covered in whole or in part under the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act. The formula does not limit coverage to a particular region, but encompasses those States and jurisdictions where less than 50 percent of the citizens of voting age population registering or turning out to vote in 1964, 1968 or 1972.

But coverage is not, and I repeat “not” predicated on these statistics alone. States are not covered unless they applied discriminatory voting tests. And it was this aspect of the formula that brought these jurisdiction with the most serious histories of discrimination under Federal scrutiny.
Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Westmoreland).

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate my good friend from Georgia yielding the time to me, and I appreciate being on behalf of the Voting Rights Act during the process of this debate.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is named after Fannie Lou Hamer, Coretta Scott King, and Rosa Parks. These brave women desegregated voting by ensur- ing that everyone had access to the polls and the right to vote. It is up to us standing here today to honor their legacy by ensuring that the bill we pass to rewrite the Voting Rights Act will stand the test of time forever.

There is no question that the Voting Rights Act was needed in 1965. Georgia had a terrible record and merited the drastic remedy imposed on it by preclearance and section 5. The thrilling thing is, it worked. Georgia is not the state it was. Now, we have more than 600 elected black officials; nine of the 34 statewide officeholders are minorities, and black voter turnout in the 2000 election exceeded white voter turnout. Georgia is a changed State, changed for the better because of the Voting Rights Act.

A cornerstone of the civil rights movement, my friend from Georgia’s Fifth District, Mr. Lewis, said, under oath during a lawsuit in 2002: “We have changed. We have changed a great distance. I think it’s not just in Georgia, but in the American South, I think people are prepared to lay down the burden of race. There has been a transformation. It is altogether a different world.”

My concern is that failing to ac- knowledge the change will result in the VRA being found unconstitutional. There is no basis for continuing to single out certain States, especially when more than half of the findings of liability come from the American South outside the covered jurisdic- tions. The remedy of section 5 is no longer congruent and proportional to the discrimination that exists.

We must have a record on which to show continued drastic remedies are needed, and that record is not here from this reauthorization. The lack of evidence of State-sponsored discrimi- nation is of major concern for the future of the VRA when viewed by a court. There is a lot of paper, but not many facts or statistics to show why Georgia is different from Tennessee or why Texas is different from Oklahoma or why racially polarized voting in Wis- consin shouldn’t be addressed with a remedy such as the VRA. Updating the formula is the answer. Mr. Norwood’s amendment does not gut the VRA. It ensures its continuity for future generations. By rolling the formula, every jurisdiction is reviewed every 4 years. Low turnout generally occurs in States outside the covered jurisdic- tions. The Norwood amendment mis- takes the identical preclearance require- ments, struck a delicate balance that exists already includes provisions that allow for the expansion and reduction of covered jurisdictions as necessary, which ensures that the list of covered jurisdictions is appropriately revised and updated.

Insofar as voting conditions have im- proved in the years in the covered jurisdic- tions, that improvement is due precisely to the Voting Rights Act itself and the requirements preventing discriminatory voting rule changes from going into effect. This amend- ment would abolish exactly those pro- visions that are directly responsible for the enhanced voting protections that the VRA has secured for millions of Americans. As a result, the amendment undermines the VRA’s goal of ensuring that progress made by minority voters continues, and that America never backslides in its protection of minority voting rights.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4 minutes. I would like to simply point out that most of what the chairman said I certainly don’t agree with, and I fully expect the Supreme Court not to agree with it either.

I do believe that the formula is the answer. I can read even though I am not a lawyer. It is very clear what the mechanism in section 4 says and means to put you under section 5, and there is no reason, I think, on earth, that every jurisdic- tion in this country shouldn’t have to live under the same rule.

The scattered counties we are talk- ing about over there that would go under section 5 end up being 200 or 300 more that aren’t under there now. And, Mr. Chairman, if you think they have problems in Montana in discrimi- nating, you ought to do something about it. All I can do is have them follow section 4 of the original VRA.

Any Member who votes against this amendment whose district is covered based on this amendment is being dis- ingenuous about their views on civil rights. You argue for equal rights and the beauty of the VRA, but don’t want it applied to your State or in your dis- trict.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the Members, such as Mr. CHABOT, Mr. FITZPATRICK, Mr. McGOVERN, Mr. DíAZ-BALART, Ms. KILPATRICK, Ms. TUBBS JONES and Chairman SENSENIBRENNER, who have talked about how good this bill is, to vote for this amendment. If it is good for the South, it should be good for your State and good for your district.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all Members to support the efforts made by Mr. Nor- wood.

Mr. SENSENIBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentle- man from North Carolina (Mr. WATT). I do. Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I join Chairman SENSENIBRENNER in opposi- tion to the Norwood amendment. The amendment represents a fundamental misunderstanding of the Voting Rights Act and its structural design by arbi- trarily selecting the election of the next cycle as the starting point for con- fronting and combating voting dis- crimination. The amendment unhinges section 5 from its historical connec- tions, disrupts the delicate balance em- bodied by the act, and makes it likely that the act would be declared unconsti- tutional.

The Voting Rights Act, as amended and extended on four separate occa- sions, struck a delicate balance that remains relevant today. The act im- poses special requirements on specific jurisdictions that have a history and ongoing record of unequal policies. The Norwood amendment mis- guidedly seeks to establish a remedy where one already exists. Voters may seek redress for recent voting rights in- fractions under existing provisions of the Voting Rights Act. And where a court finds sufficient justification based on actual evidence, it may im- pose the identical preclearance require- ments that covered jurisdictions must satisfy currently. If the Norwood amendment only duplicated the exist- ing protections of the Voting Rights Act, perhaps the only complaint would be that it is redundant and unneces- sary.

In 1975, Senator Strom Thurmond of- fered a similar amendment to change the trigger to the next election, mak- ing virtually the same arguments that are being made by Mr. Norwood today. He stated: “One of the main problems with the Voting Rights Act is that it is, as presently constituted, an ex post facto law which punishes several Southern States for events which oc- curred in 1964.”

In a remarkable colloquy that ensued between Senator Thurmond and Sen- ator Jesse Helms from my home State, Senator Helms proposed yet another amendment which would have a presumption of discrimination if registration and participation of voting-age citizens exceeds 50 percent in the last election.

Like the amendment offered by Mr. Norwood, this amendment should be defeated as we defeated the ones by Mr. Helms and Mr. Thurmond back at that time.

Mr. SENSENBRBNENN. Mr. Chairman, I want to make a statement. I stand as the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment.

Under the gentleman’s amendment, which would utilize election data from 1996 and 2000 and 2004 Presidential election data, as the chairman mentioned, the only State that would be fully covered under the preclearance and Federal observer provisions of the Voting Rights Act is the State of Hawaii. Not only does this undermine the policy of protecting minority voters who have been historically discriminated against, the central crux behind the Voting Rights Act, but it threatens the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act and the progress made by minority voters over the last 40 years. And that is one of the principal things that the Subcommittee on the Constitution looked at and why we took so much testimony on this issue because we want to make sure that this stands up if there is a challenge in the Supreme Court, and there probably will be.

Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act sets forth a formula under which certain jurisdictions are subjected to voting rule preclearance and Federal observer requirements. While the formula utilizes neutral registration and turnout data from 1964, 1968, and 1972 elections, coverage is really about the documented history of discriminatory practices which is reflected in the first prong of the coverage formula that brings jurisdictions that maintain prerequisites for voting or registration under the scrutiny of the Federal Government.

Examples of such discriminatory practices include that minorities, one, demonstrate the ability to read, write, understand or interpret any matter; two, demonstrate any education achievement or knowledge of any particular subject; three, possess good moral character; or, four, prove qualification as a teacher or registered voters of members of any other class. I can tell you firsthand that the testimony gathered during the 12 hearings, which is reflected in more than 12,000 pages of record, demonstrates a continued need for the preclearance and Federal observer provisions.

The Norwood amendment, without any historical basis, would revise the coverage formula which has been upheld by the Supreme Court as recently as 1999 in Loevaz v. Monterey County.

In one amendment, the underlying policy of the Voting Rights Act would be put at risk; and the constitutionality of the remaining provisions of the Voting Rights Act would be threatened, jeopardizing the protections for minority voters and thereby possibly jeopardizing the advances in voting rights that the Voting Rights Act has facilitated to date.

I strongly urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make a statement that 43 of the people you had testify were 43 people who came in to justify what you had done in H.R. 9. Everybody has been here long enough to know how you set up hearings. There were three people in that whole group that disagreed.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDE).

Mr. LINDE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I moved to Georgia in 1969 from Minnesota, and I saw the abuses the Democratic leadership, the Democrat Governors and Democrat officeholders, were putting on black voters, restricting them the vote.

When I was elected to the Georgia house with David Scott in 1974, at one time I was one of 19 Republicans in a 180-member house.

As we started to build the Republican Party, the Democrats needed those black votes and started treating them differently; but treated them in multimember districts, and we know what that means: put a large district with four posts in it, not enough minority voters to nominate a black candidate to run, but enough to ensure that four white Democrats win.

That finally went away under provisions of the Voting Rights Act. But in 2001 our last Democrat Governor brought them back. He gerrymandered our State so badly that he created multimember districts throughout the State with four posts in a large district, giving just enough black voters to nominate a black candidate, but guaranteed enough to elect four white Democrats.

Did he get it precleared by the Department of Justice under the rules? No, he sued the Justice Department in a friendly court in Washington, D.C. and he spent $2 million of taxpayers’ money on outside attorneys to get a favorable decision. And Georgia was back in multimember districts in the elections. But if we defeat this amendment, we know that you like, but the chairman was opposed to this amendment.

But if this Voting Rights Act is good for Georgia and the 15 other States, it ought to be wonderful for the country, and you should support this amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRBNENN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Deal).

Let me just pick up from the last point: Why shouldn’t it be applied to the whole Nation? The opposition knows full well: if that were the case, it would inevitably be ruled unconstitutional. In every case, the Supreme Court was very clear that whatever the remedy is, it must fix the size of the problem where there has been documented discrimination. That is the whole purpose.

Mr. Chairman, let me quickly with my time. I want to get to this amendment because it is very important that we show why this amendment is designed to do two things: one, to make this bill unconstitutional; and, two, to kill the Voting Rights Act.

The Norwood amendment would do one important thing: it would take the list of jurisdictions currently covered under section 5 and throw it in the garbage can. It would completely disavow every known jurisdiction that is now covered under the Voting Rights Act. That alone is enough for us to have a reason to defeat this amendment.

We know that the list today are still discriminating because we heard testimony, 12,000 pages of testimony. I was there in the committee each and every day. And much of that testimony, Mr. Chairman, came directly from the State of Georgia.

As I said earlier, there is no State that needs the Voting Rights Act’s protection as does Georgia. When my colleagues from Georgia say they are being punished, who is being punished? I will tell you who is being punished. It is those African American citizens down there who year after year, as we have testified, have said that they are being punished and discriminated against because of the violations of the act.

As we sit here and debate this bill today, the Voter ID bill from Georgia gives ample evidence that Georgia is still discriminating. The power of the Voting Rights Act is the power of section 5, and the power of section 5 is to make sure these procedures are precleared. It is designed to prevent discrimination. We dare not take that protection off the books, and that is why we defeat the Norwood amendment and why we must vote it down.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, of course our amendment does not do that. It simply applies to every jurisdiction in the country equally, equal protection under the law.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Deal).
Mr. DEAL of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, today, some 41 years after the first Voting Rights Act was passed by Congress, the facts that relate to infringements on voting have substantially changed. And here we are talking in this amendment about a portion of the Voting Rights Act that was deemed to be temporary and was deemed to be remedial in nature.

The bill we are asked to pass today, however, without this amendment relies on facts that are over 40 years old, and the Norwood amendment seeks to overturn those facts and base this legislation on facts that exist today, in fact, the three most recent Presidential elections rather than the election of Lyndon Johnson.

Now, the opponents of the Norwood amendment argue that it might render the Voting Rights Act unconstitutional to do that. Doesn’t that give you some pause, some concern? If you can’t justify this legislation on the facts of 2006, base it on the last three Presidential elections and those facts will make your act unconstitutional, that alone ought to cause you to vote against it.

This is here because the 15th amendment has given jurisdiction to Congress to do certain things, and we act on those facts. But the facts are still the facts even though this bill may attempt to say they are something different.

Just because some of our Members prefer to linger in the sins of the past, it is our responsibility to legislate on the facts of the present, and those facts do not justify an extension of section 5.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. If the gentleman would yield.

Mr. DEAL of Georgia. No. I don’t have time to yield.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. FOSSELLA). The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. DEAL) controls the time.

With all due respect to my good friend, Mr. SCOTT, with whom I also served in the Georgia legislature, we are talking here about a portion of the act that was deemed to be temporary. That is why we are talking about an extension of it today, that alone, a temporary extension, something that was only 5 years in its initial duration, is now, 41 years later, being asked to make it for an additional 25 years.

I would submit that the Norwood amendment needs to pass. It is a welcome improvement to the legislation.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) to explain why Hawaii does not have a history of discrimination and should not be covered under the Norwood amendment.

Mr. CASE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment for the same reasons as have been articulated otherwise.

But I also rise in opposition because of this amendment’s specific impact on my State of Hawaii, because under his amendment, Hawaii would be, per se, subjected to a preclearance requirement solely because of relatively low turnout in recent Presidential elections.

Now, I am not proud that we have had low turnout in recent Presidential elections; but I say to the gentleman very directly, the author of this amendment, that it is not because of any history of discrimination against our citizens with respect to voting, and we should not be subjected, by application of this formula, by an administratively standardized formula unrelated in any way to the facts to section 5 preclearance.

And that really demonstrates the fallacy of the amendment, the removal from relevancy of applicable conditions in any State, past, present or future in determining who is and is not subject to preclearance. It is and should be relevant, and there are available means to come out from under preclearance.

But this amendment is not that, and I urge my friend and colleague from Georgia, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ), Mr. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Chairman, today, when walking through the Capitol, I saw President Roosevelt’s words inscribed on a wall. They stopped me in my tracks. He said, “We must remember that any oppression, any injustice, any hatred is a wedge designed to attack our civilisation.”

These words should guide us in this debate. They were deemed so important that they are literally a part of the structure of our Nation’s Capitol.

The Voting Rights Act is the most important and successful civil rights law in our Nation’s history. From poll taxes to literacy tests, States historically disenfranchised voters based on their race, their gender and educational background.

While America exports democracy around the globe, we must not deny it here at home. Sadly, many Americans have lost faith in our electoral system. From the 2000 election in my home State of Florida, or Ohio in 2004, many Americans feel like some in their government don’t want their vote to count. We must renew the Voting Rights Act to restore that lost faith.

Some say the preclearance provisions are outdated and they are wrong. Since 1982, the Department of Justice has made more than 1,000 objections to discriminatory changes in State and local voting laws. If the gentleman from Georgia’s amendment is adopted, these 1,000 objections would never be considered, and this amendment deserves to be defeated. All the amendments need to be defeated, and the Voting Rights Act should be adopted in full.

Congress passed the Voting Rights Act because millions of Americans had been intentionally denied their equal right to vote.

Some of my Republican friends also want to take away language assistance at the polls, and they speak the emotional rhetoric of anti-immigrant jingoism.

But this bill isn’t about illegal immigration—it is about Americans participating in their democracy.

The overwhelming majority of those who receive language assistance at the polls are native-born, tax-paying American citizens.

In 2004, there were 15 initiatives on Florida’s ballot. This issue is not only about distinguishing Candidate A from Candidate B. The Voting Rights Act ensures that citizens also understand these confusing ballot initiatives.

In my district voters receive assistance in Spanish, Creole, and Seminole dialects.

Instead of erecting more barriers to voting, we should identify ways to increase civic participation and make people more confident in their Government and their leaders.

I urge my colleagues to pass this bill with no amendments.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to my friend from Georgia, DR. GINGREY.

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the amendment of Mr. Norwood and colleagues. Representative CHARLIE NORWOOD.

This amendment will correct a fundamental flaw of this bill. As currently drafted, H.R. 9 will not only apply 1964 standards to the world of 2006, but it will continue to apply for the next 25 years. Mr. Chairman, I know that some claim this amendment is a poison pill designed to kill the bill. But I would say that this amendment, rather, is a disinfector that will save this bill from a constitutional challenge.

The Norwood amendment will strengthen this act by creating a rolling standard using turnout from the three most recent Presidential elections to determine a State’s compliance requirements under section 5. This rolling standard will keep every State, whether south, north, east or west, on their toes with respect to the voting rights of their citizens. Just look, Mr. Chairman, at the additional jurisdictions that would be covered by the Norwood amendment.

It makes no sense to continue the election of 1964 as a measure of voter participation in 2006, and the Norwood amendment fixes this flaw. It ensures the passage of a Voting Rights Act that is not only fair, but it also upholds the constitutional guarantee of equal protection under the law.

Mr. Chairman, in good conscience, how can we be justified in punishing the citizens of States covered by section 5 based upon voter participation in 1964? The Norwood amendment will correct this inequity and ensure that the underlying bill protects the voting rights of every citizen in every State by using a modern and accurate standard.

Mr. Chairman, again, I encourage all my colleagues, please adopt this amendment. Give this House an opportunity to renew a true and constitutional Voting Rights Act.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my distinguished ranking member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).
Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen of the committee, I think it is very, very important that we realize that the coverage formula in this bill does not need to be changed, as is being proposed by the gentleman from Georgia, in order for it to be up to date. Jurisdictions free of discrimination for 10 years can come out from under coverage. There is a bailout provision. Let’s continue to use that, because I think that is so important.

Now, during the course of all the hearings and testimony and witnesses, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Norwood) never testified before the committee.

This issue has been explored very carefully. When we crafted this bill, we wanted to make sure that it would stand the test of time, and this trigger in 4 that governs section 5 is so important.

The Supreme Court has spoken. There must be congruence and proportionality before the injury to be prevented or remedied, and the means adopted to that end.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, who has the right to close?

The Acting CHAIRMAN (Mr. BISHOP of Georgia): Mr. Chairman, I have 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin has the right to close.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to Mr. Gohmert, I am not on this committee. I am not on this Justice Committee, the facts. I have never met the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Norwood), I have been told that he came, and I appreciate the contributions that he made.

So we have not been exclusionary at all. And a lot of other committees simply do not allow nonmembers of the committee to participate. Mr. Chabot did.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I did.

But I would like to point out that much of the impetus behind this amendment comes from Georgia. I think the fallacy of the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Norwood) is that he wants base coverage exclusively on voter participation and not on any other factors, and that is what the constitutional flaw is.

The reason that section 5 does have the preclearance requirement is based on a number of factors, including the past history of discrimination and discriminatory voting practices.

In Georgia there have been 91 objections since the last reauthorization by the Department of Justice, and seven of them have been objections that have resulted in the implementation of the Voting Rights Act.

In the course now pending, the decision to condemn will be built upon the evidence now 42 years buried in history. It is not evidence or facts discovered today. The acts of the grandfather will now determine the fate of the grandchildren.

What is it that I ask? I have always found merit in the principle that where action is justified for one, it should be justified for all. Public policy should be applicable to all within jurisdiction of the government. Do we believe that discrimination ends at a county line? It is real. Does it exist in 43 other states. Is that a good geographic ratio? Where is the evidence? What are your facts? Why is it this legislation will mandate supervision of seven states, and not the whole of our Nation?

Many have been incensed even by the thought of this discussion, because they mistakenly view this legislation as all that stands between them and their right to vote. The 15th Amendment to the Constitution apparently is of no consolation, although it ensures the right to vote to every American across the entire Nation. The bill now pending leaves 43 States on a different legislative landscape. There is much in history to regret. We should not forget or fail to learn from the troubled past. But we must also think about the present. Careful, analytical thought must precede action. Action to condemn or punish should be taken only when the evidence establishes the facts. All should be presumed innocent until proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. This principle establishes our freedom from the actions of an otherwise tyrannical government.

How do we come to this moment? Am I to believe that my grandchildren, not yet born, are condemned to a life of racial intolerance? How can this be? All reason is to be cast aside?

And if, my colleagues, you believe this policy to be well advised and necessary, why is it then ill advised to make it applicable to your consciences? And failing that, would you not examine the evidence, determine the facts, before condemning my constituents?

The pending amendment by the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. NORWOOD, would remedy most of my concern. Failure to adopt that amendment will leave those in Louisiana without an opportunity for fair deliberate consideration. Without the adoption of this provision, I cannot support the underlying bill.

For those who demand justice, it is now time to demand justice for all.

Mr. SENSENBERNRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The question was taken; and the Acting Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. GOHMERT

Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The amendment is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD).

The question was taken; and the Acting Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia will be postponed.

SEC. 4. EXTENSION OF TITLES I AND II

Section 4(a) of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973b(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7), by striking “at the end” and all that follows through “1982” and inserting “before August 6, 2016”, and

(2) in paragraph (8), by striking “at the end” and all that follows through “1982” and inserting “as of August 6, 2016”.

In subsection (a), strike “1922” and insert “2016”.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 910, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHMERT) and a Member opposed each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to thank the leadership for making this amendment in order. It is a simple amendment. It just changes the resubmission period so that it comes up again for review in 2016 rather than in 2032.

The Voting Rights Act was first enacted in 1965, and at that point the original framers and drafters of this important act had it authorized for 5 years. In 1970 Congress extended it for another 5 years. They realized the importance of constant review of this important act. And then they adjusted the coverage at that point since the evidence shows that there was empanelling and new discrimination. Then in 1975 Congress extended the act for 7 more years.

It appears that Congress was getting a little tired in their obligation to continually monitor this act. So in 1982 Congress amended the act by providing that Congress “reconsider” the administrative provisions of the act in 1997 and the provisions expire in 2007. So even as lazy as they got, they still said we had better review this, reconsider it in 15 years. So we went from 5 years to another 5 years to 7 years and then to 15 with reauthorization at 25. And now this bill proposes another 25.

My amendment would simply shorten that period to 10 years from now because I believe there is empirical evidence that shows that this act needs to be reviewed much more often. The Supreme Court has unequivocally established that there is a change in the playing field and regularly change the rules.

Two recent independent studies have found the following to be true: that in Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, States covered by section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, African Americans now are registered to vote at higher rates than Caucasians. In Texas and Arizona, States that come under the Voting Rights Act in 1975, and although there are still gaps in Caucasian and Latino voter participation, the gaps are smaller than in the noncovered States such as California and New Mexico, which have a comparable Latino population. And then, finally, in States covered by section 5, the percentage of African American elected officials is actually much higher than in nonsection 5 States even where there is a higher African American population. That shows that this does need to be relooked at.

I would actually prefer to do like the original framers proposed, and actually did, and have it reviewed in 5 years and then the next in 5 years. But I am realistic. I realize that a 5-year would not pass and actually it does not get us past considering the next census data; so we are proposing 10 years from now.

Mr. Chairman, we need to review this act again sooner than 2032 to be sure that the Voting Rights Act of all individuals are being protected and if the formula needs to be readjusted in 2016 so that areas experiencing racial disparities in voting can fix those problems and even then to have a 10-year history that would satisfy all this concern I keep hearing about constitutionality of changing things.

If there are additional areas where there are increased racial disparities, they need to be addressed. Some should even be addressed now, but indications are that some jurisdictions that are in need of section 5 protection will refuse to fall under the act while cramping it down again in areas that are actually in better racial condition regarding racial disparity. This, of course, again, risks constitutional issues of equal protection, all of which point to a need for review in far less than 25 years.

I would also like to finish by saying that this is far too important a piece of civil rights legislation not to force reconsideration before 2032. The right to vote is a Lynch pin of our Republican form of government. Its protections should not be rejected or neglected for 25 years. I still look forward to the day when we can actually live Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.’s dream where individuals are actually judged by the content of their character and not by the color of their skin.

The Voting Rights Act has done a great deal of good. It has. Why would we neglect our responsibility to continue to monitor and to get it right, make it better, rather than making it punitive and neglected for too many years? I do have grave concerns.

And I understand your position is you think this is a poison pill. You think we are trying to do something that may create problems for the Voting Rights Act vote. I can assure you that is not the intent here. It has done some good. I would like to continue to see it do good. But I am telling you, you are raising issues by not addressing it more often.

So until we have the dream Martin Luther King had, then we should not neglect our obligation to monitor and reconsider what the initial drafters saw as a temporary measure for 5 years.

And I thank you for the ability to come before the floor. I appreciate the Rules Committee. I appreciate the chairman’s pushing such an important piece of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBERNRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. SENSENBERNRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First of all, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. S. ...
Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOHMERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I appreciate the chairman of the Judiciary Committee’s bringing up the period of extension that my amendment provides. It is exactly 10 years from now, 2016. That is what the amendment has said all along, 2016; and it does raise a very interesting point.

What I think most people do not realize is that the bill on the floor today does not actually reauthorize the Voting Rights Act. It actually reauthorizes the bill for 26 years from now. So that should be understood by others. And I would only submit that since evidence now exists that there is even a jurisdiction in Wisconsin, California, New Mexico, a number of places that are not currently covered, you bring this back up 10 years from right now and a 10-year additional history may very well be plentiful history to worry about historical discrimination.

If areas continue to have the discrimination that are not currently covered and it continues for 10 years, then that should be enough to effectively convince people of the necessity of the possibility that the Voting Rights Act needs to be extended and it needs to be expanded so it truly is remedial and not just punitive.

Mr. Chairman, there are others who wish to speak, and I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. WESTMORELAND).

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, I rise once again to argue for strengthening the Voting Rights Act.

When I first heard about the rewrite, I was shocked to learn that we were going to put the same States that had problems in 1960, put them under coverage for an additional 25 years without solid evidence that they continue to have State-sponsored discrimination different than any other State.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER has talked about that; we do not have enough history if we just do it for 10 years.

We have had 41 years of history, and we cannot make a judgment on that, of the States that are not under section 5. We do not know how many violations they have. Some here today have cited the number of objections in Georgia. One of the recent objections in Georgia came from Dougherty County in Albany, Georgia, where a black majority city council had their objections that were sufficient for the Justice Department to rule.

Let me just read about some of the other objections in Georgia we keep hearing about. Six of these were creation of additional judicial slots in superior and State courts, objections for which the Federal courts found no merit since they approved these additional judgeships.

Another four objections went to redistricting plans. The first three forced Georgia to draw districts that courts have found to be unconstitutional under Miller v. Johnson. The fourth involved the post-Miller plans to correct for racially drawn State legislative districts.

An eleventh objection involved Monroe County, municipal elections that a court deemed to have already been precleared.

An October 1992 objection in Union City was withdrawn, and there is no indication that the city made any changes to secure removal of the objection. That might be a twelfth inappropriate DOJ objection.

The key number is, since 2001 there have been only five objections. This is when every jurisdiction in the State of Georgia, 150 counties, 300 cities, 180 school boards, 180 house districts, 56 senate districts, were redrawn in redistricting plans. That is hundreds and hundreds of plans that only had five problems, and only four were objections to any plan, and one of those was, the objection was a plan drawn by a black majority city council in Albany, Georgia.

When we talk about these objections, let’s talk about facts. Let’s just don’t say our side talk about that most of these objections had no facts. We do not know how many objections will be brought up across this country because of racial discrimination, because in 2002 a lawsuit brought in Wisconsin said that there was more polarized voting at a higher percentage in Wisconsin than in the South.

Let’s look at this whole country, let’s look at it for 10 years, and then let’s come back and see what the results are.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GENE GREEN) for a unanimous consent request.

(Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the reauthorization and against all amendments.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to take part in an ongoing historic dialog that unfortunately, we must continue to address in the United States Congress.

The issue before us today is whether we should reauthorize certain sections of the Voting Rights Act. I grew up in the fifties and sixties when we had segregated water fountains, schools, an restrictions on voting.

We are here to decide if we should continue mandating pre-clearance for any changes in election policy in jurisdictions that are known to have a history of disenfranchising the rights of minority voters.

My home state of Texas is included on that list.

Over the last forty years, the renewal of this Act on this Floor has embodied what we hope this country will be: a Country where regard less of race, religion, or political party, we come together to ensure that the core of our democracy continues to thrive.

The right to vote is the core of our democracy and we must protect this right for all Americans.

Recently, the Department of Justice failed to pre-clear an election plan for a bond election in the area I represent.

Polling places were few, and it was the opinion of many that putting polling places only in select areas for this election was a violation of the Voting Rights Act.

DOJ agreed and the election has been postponed until a better plan can be put in place.

This is but one recent example of how the Voting Rights Act ensures people have access to the polls so their voice can be heard.

As we support an emerging Democracy in Iraq and the success of the elections that were held there, we need to remember that this Country has also struggled to achieve Democracy and one that everyone can participate in.

Let us be an example to Iraq in the world that a true Democracy includes ALL Americans and that we are committed to preventing the discrimination that millions of Americans had to endure.

I urge my colleagues to reauthorize these Sections of the Voting Rights Act and send a message that this Country is still the example of how representative government should work.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I join Chairman SENSENBRENNER in opposing the Gohmert amendment to extend the vital protections afforded by the expiring provisions of the Voting Rights Act for merely 9 years.

The gains made under the Voting Rights Act mark impressive racial progress for our Nation and should be celebrated.

But to acknowledge progress is not to disavow the continued obstacles faced by minority voters for which the Voting Rights Act provides protections. These obstacles are not easily removed or overturned. To amend Senate close to 3 decades after the Voting Rights Act was passed illustrates that 10 years is simply not enough.

If we are serious about continuing the progress all seem to praise, we must seriously about keeping in place the mechanisms that made that progress possible. Just 3 years ago, ruling on the propriety of race-conscious admissions standards, Justice Sandra Day O’Connor concluded in the affirmative action case, “It has been 25 years since Justice Powell in Bakke first approved the use of race to further an interest in student body diversity in the context of public higher education.”

Justice O’Connor went on to recognize that in the area of public education 25 years of protections were, sadly, not enough. Despite the measurable progress in that arena, the Court understood the need for continuing protection, but expressed hope that an additional 25 years would be enough to overcome our Nation’s unfortunate history of racial hostility and division.

Voting protections are just as necessary today as educational help is in the college arena. I ask opposition to this amendment. Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I rise in opposition to this amendment.

The Voting Rights Act should be reauthorized for another 25 years and not a 10-year renewal that is recommended in this amendment. That is just too short a period the last 25 years.

The reauthorization process for the Voting Rights Act is not a quick one. In fact, for the last 9 months, the subcommittee that I have the privilege to chair, the Subcommittee on the Constitution, has spent 8 to 9 months and been really immersed in these hearings to establish a significant record so the renewal will pass constitutional muster.

I said before, we have spent more time on this particular issue than any other issue that we have been involved in in the 6 years that I have had the privilege to chair that particular subcommittee. And I fear that a shorter reauthorization period could jeopardize the current work not allowing both Congress and the civil rights community to study the impact and need for the act.

In addition, traditionally, redistricting has occurred on the State level every 10 years, and if the Voting Rights Act is also reauthorized every 10 years, it makes this process even more burdensome and gives States less of an incentive to comply with the requirements of the Voting Rights Act.

The Subcommittee on the Constitution has established the need for renewing the Voting Rights Act for another 25 years, evidence like the more than 700 voting changes that have been determined to be discriminatory since 1982 as further proof of this need.

Mr. CHABOT. This amendment not only jeopardizes the carefully crafted bipartisan bill that has been offered, but could diminish its impact and, most importantly, its ability to withstand constitutional scrutiny. That is one of the chief challenges that we face. Why do we want to go into such detail, why do we have so many witnesses, why do we have 12,000 pages of testimony? Because we know that it is likely that there will be a constitutional challenge.

So I would urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

Mr. GOHMER. Mr. Chairman, I yield ½ minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON).

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman has lost the point. What we do in the U.S. Congress is important. I think what this committee has done on this bill is important. Indeed, we hear from the committee members over and over again, we had many, many witnesses, 12,000 pages of testimony. They put some effort into it.

So why is it that same committee afraid of leaving the door open for future Congresses in 10 years from taking another look? Because I can tell you that, as a member of the legislature who served on the reapportionment committee in 1991: The Voting Rights Act is fluid. It evolves, it changes.

We have seen the Bossier Parish decision. We have seen the Ashcroft v. Georgia decision. We have seen the LULAC decision in Texas. All have profound impacts on the Voting Rights Act, and therefore, I think it is important for Congress to come back in 10 years and take a look at it.

I know the committee has been a little clever with 9 years, but you guys, we could say your reauthorization is 26 years, but the intent is 10 years. We all
Mr. CONYERS, my dissapct. So I urge my colleagues to sup-

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, we have to remember one historical fact. For 400 years, we have been dealing with the problem of discrimination and racial barriers. I think it would be simplistic in this Congress that we would think, after 40 years, we do not need to worry about it that much anymore and shorten the period of time.

It is going to take a while for us to evaluate the progress that is being made, and I am proud to say progress is being made, but the bailout provision is there and it works quite well.

Now, in addition, we have to be very careful about the fact that some jurisdictions will play the wait-out game. They will wait out for the 10 years to expire, and then we will be back in a big problem again.

Keep this a 25-year measure.

That says it all. Bipartisan support. Democrats, Republicans, and the administration support this legislation.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, I rise to reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act, H.R. 9, and strongly oppose the Gohmert amendment. It reduces the 25-year reauthorization period of the expiring provisions to 10 years. The provisions set to expire in 2007 include section 5, which requires jurisdictions with a history of voting discrimination to obtain Federal approval for any new voting practice. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy.

Section 203 ensures that American citizens with limited English proficiency get the help they need at the polls. Sections 6 through 9 authorize the Attorney General to appoint Federal election observers where there is evidence of attempts to intimidate minority voters at the polls.

These provisions require the creation of a credible record. Most important, each of the expiring provisions depends upon the conduct of State elections, all of which operate independently and on schedules that do not coincide. Furthermore, lawsuits that come out of the witnesses. As he has indicated, he has taken months of testimony. This is a punishment for Southern states. It’s a pledge that Congress will work to ensure all Americans have the ability to vote and to have that vote counted.

In addition, no state is force to comply with these provisions for another 25 years. There are ways for jurisdictions to exit both Section 5 and Section 203.

The Voting Rights Act is current, necessary, and protects the rights of millions of Americans.

Now is the time to reauthorize this historic cornerstone of civil rights for another 25 years. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, the chairman for the Judiciary Committee will be closing. Is that correct?

The Acting CHAIRMAN. He has the right to close, yes.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion on this amendment, it is an amendment for 10 years. My experts tell me there is no longer a need for the Voting Rights Act. Unfortunately, this is not the case.

At every election minorities continue to face an uphill battle exercising their right to vote.

In preparing for this reauthorization, the Judiciary Committee reviewed hundreds of examples of voter intimidation and discrimination. It is unfortunate, but this level of discrimination will not be eradicated in the next 10 years.

Additionally, 10 years is not enough time to effectively review patterns of discriminatory conduct. This is not a punishment for Southern states. It’s a pledge that Congress will work to ensure all Americans have the ability to vote and to have that vote counted.

In addition, no state is force to comply with these provisions for another 25 years. There are ways for jurisdictions to exit both Section 5 and Section 203.

The Voting Rights Act is current, necessary, and protects the rights of millions of Americans.

Now is the time to reauthorize this historic cornerstone of civil rights for another 25 years. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, the chairman for the Judiciary Committee will be closing. Is that correct?

The Acting CHAIRMAN. He has the right to close, yes.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion on this amendment, it is an amendment for 10 years. I do not support the 10 years; I support the 25 years.

There are ways for jurisdictions to exit both Section 5 and Section 203.

The Voting Rights Act is current, necessary, and protects the rights of millions of Americans.

Now is the time to reauthorize this historic cornerstone of civil rights for another 25 years. It is imperative to our rights, our freedom and our democracy.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, as I understand, the chairman for the Judiciary Committee will be closing. Is that correct?

The Acting CHAIRMAN. He has the right to close, yes.

Mr. GOMERT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, in conclusion on this amendment, it is an amendment for 10 years. I do not realize originally, as did many others, that this was extending actually 20, the bill before us extending 26 years from this summer.

But let me reinforce my point earlier, and Mr. LUNGREN’s point earlier about the dangers of having this go too long. This was testimony before the Judiciary Committee from Professor Richard Hasen. He is with Loyola Law School. I don’t know the gentleman personally. But they are in Los Angeles, California. I understand he is probably not a conservative Republican.

But his position before the Senate Judiciary Committee was: “Congress should impose a shorter term limit, perhaps 7–10 years.” He said, “For extension. The bill includes a 25-year extension and the Court may believe, talking about the Supreme Court, “it is beyond congruent and proportional to require, for example, the State of South Carolina to prove a voting change no matter how minor through 2031.”

He was thinking it was 25 instead of 26. But in any event, it brings the point home. If you really want this to all survive constitutional muster, if you really want it to stay and continue to help, then why does it not make sense to continue to monitor it?

I know there are so many games that get played around this floor, but I am telling you and I am giving you my word as I stand before this body, I will work with anyone, Mr. Chairman, in this body, when there is proof of racial discrimination to help work to make this act stronger and better to stamp that out.

You run the risk of creating an unconstitutional act and undoing so much of what has already been done. We have heard, gee, it takes too long to reauthorize. I am not plauding my friend, Mr. CHABOT, who has done such great work, heard from all of the witnesses. As he has indicated, he has taken months of testimony. I would humbly say, if that it has actually taken a year less to get this thing to the floor to reauthorize than apparently was anticipated, because here we are a year before the bill was actually going to expire renewing it for more years from now.

So I am not trying to play games. We are better continuing to monitor this. This is too important to put it off and not relook at it constantly. But folks, you know, Mr. Chairman, you know if it is not coming up for reauthorization, it is hard to get anything done to fix something that is broken.

Besides that, the Supreme Court may fix it for us as ruling it more punitive than remedial. With that, I would encourage the Members of the House, through you, Mr. Chairman, to please let’s vote to extend this for 10 years from now and not for 26 years from now.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRANNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, there are three reasons why this amendment should be rejected. First of all, it flies in the face of the fact that there have been more section 5 objections lodged by the Justice Department since the last reauthorization than during the first 17 years of operation of the Voting Rights Act.

Since 1982, over 700 objections have been lodged. That means we still need this law, and we need the law on the books for a long time.

Second, adopting this amendment will effectively prohibit Congress from ever reauthorizing the Voting Rights Act again, because it will deny us, the Congress of the United States, a sufficient large set of data the Supreme Court has held necessary for the VRA to be authorized.

What the gentleman from Texas’s amendment does is, it gives Congress 16 years less data in the future by shortening the reauthorization period from 25 years to 9 years.

Finally, the amendment, if adopted, would completely nullify the current incentive the Voting Rights Act provides to encourage covered jurisdictions to have clean voting records for 10 years in order to get out through the bail-out provisions. This is only a 9-year extension. The way I was taught math, 9 is less than 10.

So there is no incentive whatsoever for a covered jurisdiction to clean up its act to be able to bail out, because the act will expire before they can have the 10 years to do it. Vote against the amendment. It is a bad one.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas will be postponed.

Amendment No. 3 Offered by Mr. KING of Iowa

The Acting CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 109-554.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. King of Iowa.

Strike sections 7 and 8.

The Acting CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 910, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. KING) and a Member opposed each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, especially I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER for the hard work that they have done to put together the framework for the re-authorization for the Voting Rights Act. And also I want to thank the sponsors of my amendment, Mr. ISTOOK, Mrs. MILLER from Michigan, Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida, Mr. SPENCER BACHUS from Alabama, for joining me in this and many others who have worked hard throughout the last 4, 5, and perhaps even 6 weeks to get us to this point where we can have debate on this amendment and end up having a vote on how to improve the Voting Rights Act.

I think it is important from a symbolic standpoint to be able to improve and vote on the Voting Rights Act. We were able to do that because also of the indulgence and the patience and the good years that come from all the leadership in this Congress, and I appreciate that a great deal.

What my amendment does is it recognizes that the Voting Rights Act was established in 1965. 1975, not as an original part of the act itself but as I would say a decade-old afterthought, came this imposition of foreign language ballots in 1975, and that came in the provision that was imposed by the Federal Government doesn’t need to be imposing foreign language ballots on any locality anywhere in this country. They can make those decisions locally.

Anyone who is a citizen of the United States that is a naturalized citizen has had to demonstrate their proficiency in both the spoken and the written English language, so they have no claim to a foreign language ballot if they are a naturalized citizen. So, therefore, there is a need for foreign language ballots unless someone is here by birthright citizenship and hasn’t had enough access to English to be able to understand a simple ballot. But in those circumstances we protect those people by allowing a right to assistance. They can bring an interpreter of their choice into the voting booth with them to do that interpretation.

So all my amendment does, the King-istook amendment, it lifts the Federal mandates imposing foreign language ballots on localities by allowing the amendment to sunset, and the mandate is due to expire in 2007.

So what my amendment does, Mr. Chairman, is it would lift the Federal mandate imposing foreign language ballots on localities by allowing the amendment to sunset, and the mandate is due to expire in 2007.

It is that simple. And the reason is this, it is consistent with federalism. The Federal Government doesn’t need to be imposing foreign language ballots on any locality anywhere in this country. They can make those decisions locally.

Anyone who is a citizen of the United States that is a naturalized citizen has had to demonstrate their proficiency in both the spoken and the written English language, so they have no claim to a foreign language ballot if they are a naturalized citizen. Therefore, it is not so temporary from 1975 until 2006, but it is set up to sunset August 6, 2007.

What my amendment does, Mr. Chairman, is it would lift the Federal mandate imposing foreign language ballots on localities by allowing the amendment to sunset, and the mandate is due to expire in 2007.

Let me make this clear. The amendments in the Voting Rights Act have nothing to do with illegal immigrants voting. Illegal immigrants are not eligible to vote. We are dealing with people who are United States citizens. And United States citizens ought to have their right to vote protected even if they are not proficient in English.

When those surveyed were asked specifically whether they supported or opposed the renewal of the Voting Rights Act with bilingual ballot provisions, 70 percent of the registered voters supported or strongly supported a renewal bill that contained the bilingual ballot provisions for taxpaying legal citizens. I ask the membership of the House to stand on the side of those 77 percent, an overwhelming majority.

When those polled were asked specifically what they thought of the VRA, 74 percent of the registered voters supported or strongly favored the VRA that required States and counties where over 5 percent of the citizens are not fluent in English to provide assistance in their native language, 65 percent either strongly favored or favored those provisions.

Section 203 of the Act affects only 12 percent of the country, it was enacted for sound reasons and is still needed to remove barriers to voting by legal taxpaying citizens who do not speak English well enough to participate in the election process. According to the 2000 Census, most of the people who are potential beneficiaries of section 203 assistance are native-born legal citizens, meaning they are not immigrants who were naturalized, they are people who are citizens because they were born in the United States of America.

The Judiciary Committee’s records shows that adults who want to learn English experience long wait times to enroll in English as a second language literacy centers. And, once enrolled, learning English takes adult citizens several years to even obtain a fundamental understanding of the English language. Even after completing literacy to reading age, not enough to understand complex ballots.

I strongly support the proposition that Americans be fluent in the English language. However, effectively denying them their right to cast ballots that they cannot comprehend will not advance this goal, but will frustrate it.

Section 203 was enacted to remedy the history of educational disparities which have led to high illiteracy rates and low voter turnout. These disparities still continue to exist. As of the year 2000, three-fourths of the 3 million to 3.5 million students who are native-born citizens were considered to be English language learners, meaning the students who speak English enough to understand the basic English curriculum. ELL students lag significantly behind native English speakers and are twice as likely to fail graduation tests. California has over 1.5 million ELL students, New York 250,000, and New York over 230,000.

The intricate complexity of many ballot initiatives cannot be understood by those who understand minimal English. Chris Norby, the elections supervisor for Orange County, California, testified that many ballot initiatives include triple negatives that confuse even fluent English speakers. In California, the June 6, 2006 ballot was written for those at the 12th through 14th grade comprehension and reading levels.

And let me point out that this type of assistance is most critical in those States that have lots of referendum questions on the ballot. It is pretty easy to determine a vote for candidate one prefers by looking at the names and marking the ballot in the appropriate way; but with the initiative questions and the referendum questions on the ballot, those have been written in many cases by Philadelphia lawyers and it is real hard to understand the true meaning of the question so that one can cast the proper vote to reflect their sentiments.

The amendment will also hurt the elderly, those who may have left school before they became legal naturalized citizens. Current law allows the jurisdiction to get out from coverage under section 203 if it shows the D.C. Federal court that the applicable language minority population's literacy rate is at the national average or above. So teach the people how to read and you are out from underneath it. If they don't know how to read and you are out from underneath it, they are twice as likely to fail graduation tests.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia. (Mr. Gingrey).

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the amendment proposed by my good friend from Iowa, Representative KING, and I would ask for its adoption.

This commonsense amendment will remove a substantial and unnecessary burden for our State and local governments by allowing the sunset of sections 7 and 8 of the bill which mandate the printing of multilingual ballots on the basis of data collected in a flawed manner by the Census Bureau.

Under current law, if the Census reports that a State’s population speaks primarily a language other than English, even though most of them can speak English quite well, then the whole State must print ballots in that language for every precinct. Oftentimes, voters to be assisted under section 203 are native-born voting-age citizens who are not fluent in English. According to the 2000 census, three-quarters of all voters covered by section 203 are native-born voting-age citizens in the United States. So this notion that this is somehow a part of the anti-immigrant movement is just a fallacy.

We need to be doing whatever we can to enable our citizens to vote, and this amendment goes in the face of that. I think we should oppose it and move on with the passage of this bill.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

I wonder if I might have been stereotypically assumed that was used in South Africa. Our government, the United States Government, encouraged the folks of South Africa to put photographs of the candidates on the ballot so that they would know who they were voting for because they couldn't read.
talking about the Voting Rights Act, and I think that is what this debate will be about on this side, the Voting Rights Act.

But I would point out that there is a reason why natural-born citizens utilize the process of the ballot more than those who do not have citizenship, and that is because of the criteria that is used to measure is the question on the census that says, Do you speak English? not at all, not well, well, or very well? And if you answer well, you still are put into the limited-language-proficient category.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. MILLER).

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, let me say that I wholeheartedly support the passage of the Voting Rights Act, the renewal of it. I think it is very, very important, critically important for this Congress to act on this issue today.

And let me say to my friends in the Congressional Black Caucus, obviously I have never had the African American experience, but I am sincerely moved when I hear such great civil rights leaders, Martin, John Lewis, and others who have spoken today with such passion about the injustices that happened in regards to voting.

Before I came to Congress, I served for 6 years as the Michigan secretary of state, with the principal responsibility as my state’s chief election officer. So I feel I have some credibility to speak to this issue, because during those 8 years I actually had the occasion to have to actually threaten legal action against an African American clerk who I thought was disenfranchising African Americans in the city of Detroit of the right to have their votes counted.

I am also very proud of the fact that in 2001 the NAACP gave me the highest grade in the entire Nation for any secretary of state for election reform and for voter integrity programs.

I am also proud to be a member of the party of Abraham Lincoln, and while I strongly believe in clean elections, fair elections, and voting integrity, I also believe in States’ rights and local control.

This amendment is all about States’ rights and local control. It has nothing to do with the immigration issue. It has nothing to do with racial equality.

It simply says that the Federal Government does not mandate to the States or the local units of government that they provide bilingual ballots. And if the State or local units decide they want to do so, fine, that is their option.

Mr. Chairman, consider for just a moment that in southeast Michigan alone we have the largest Arabic population in the Nation and we have the largest Macedonian population in the Nation. My home county has an Italian cultural center, a German cultural center, an Ukrainian cultural center, and a Polish cultural center, which are a reflection of the very proud ethnic heritage of the area. If the local election officials want to provide them with bilingual ballots, that should be their choice, not a Federal mandate. And the same should be all across our great Nation.

Voting “yes” on this amendment.

Mr. KING of Iowa. I thank the former secretary of state of Michigan, and now yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMBELL).

Mr. CAMBELL of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Iowa, and I am going to give you three reasons why we should support this amendment.

First, is that it is an expensive, unfunded mandate on local governments. The county in which I live, Orange County, California, very diverse county, in the last cycle spent $600,000 on bilingual ballots when only seven-tenths of a percent, seven-tenths of a percent of the ballots requested were multilingual or bilingual ballots.

Secondly, the current law is discriminatory. In Orange County, California, we are required under the Voting Rights Act to print ballots in five languages, but yet in the school district, which is only one city out of 35 cities in Orange County, there are 83 different languages spoken at home. So what about those other 78 language speakers?

Aren’t we discriminating against them by not putting out ballots in their languages, too?

Now, I happen to think it would be less discriminatory if they were only in English, because then everyone would have the same opportunity to understand the ballot as everyone else. But the point of this amendment is that that is for the county to decide. Some counties may not have 83 different languages, while others do. That is for them to decide.

And, third, I think it is interesting that the chairman brought up Chris Norby, a supervisor in Orange County, as being in opposition to this amendment. Chris Norby is actually very strongly in favor of this amendment. The issue that was discussed was the complexity of ballot initiatives.

Now, ballot initiatives, and California is kind of the hotbed of those things, and I personally have been involved in drafting them, but they are complex and they are complex to translate. That is the issue.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. HAYWORTH).

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague from Iowa for the time, and I would like to ask my good friend, the sponsor of this amendment, to engage in a brief colloquy.

Mr. KING of Iowa. I would be happy to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman and my colleagues, as a long-time advocate for the sovereign rights of Native American tribes and in recognition of the importance of preserving those languages indigenous to America, I do need to ask the gentleman from Iowa for a few points of clarification.

First and foremost, does this amendment restrict a tribe or local government’s ability to print a ballot in any language it deems necessary to better serve its voting population?

Mr. KING of Iowa. No, this amendment does not impose restrictions on printing ballots in languages other than English.

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Chairman, current Federal law allows a voter to receive necessary assistance from someone who speaks the language in which the voter is unable to read. This statute makes it possible for a tribal elder, who may be more comfortable communicating in an indigenous tribal language, to be aided by a translator while participating in the democratic process.

Does this amendment in any way restrict any American from receiving such assistance?

Mr. KING of Iowa. The answer is no, this amendment does not change the Federal law that allows voters to bring their own interpreter.

Mr. HAYWORTH. I thank the gentleman from Iowa for clearly stating that amendment does not infringe on tribal sovereign rights to print ballots in native languages or on the ability of a tribal member to receive translational assistance while voting.

With this assurance, I will support the, actually, the reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act. It is historic in its scope, and I admire his thoughtfulness and the dignity with which he has gone about this process.

I also rise, although in opposition, with deep respect for the gentleman from Iowa, whom I would support for anything, including Pope. Even though, from time to time, we differ on issues, he is a man of integrity and principle.

The arguments have been made today by the chairman, and they will be by others in opposition to this amendment, in a substantive way, that even though section 203 only affects 12 percent of the counties of this country, it was enacted for sound reasons and we still need it; that to support the King amendment could literally hurt the elderly, who in many cases were excluded from the English proficiency requirements of naturalization and,
I rise today to support the King amendment and to thank again the gentleman for his sinceriety.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for the highest compliment anyone has ever received on the floor of this Congress, and express the same of my friend, Mr. Pschoe.

Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of the Chair how much time I have left?

The Acting CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 9½ minutes.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. Ginny Brown-Waite), also a cosponsor of this amendment.

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding the floor.

I rise today in support of this amendment, which I am cosponsoring along with my good friend and colleague Congressman King.

Bilingual ballot requirements were not in the original Voting Rights Act. As a matter of fact, they were only added in 1975, and were always intended to be a temporary crutch, not a permanent mandate. And that mandate, by the way, is an unfunded mandate.

Now, many of you came from backgrounds in the State legislature and/or local governments, and what was the one thing we complained the most about? Unfunded Federal mandates.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is an unfunded Federal mandate.

To become a citizen today you must demonstrate that you can speak English. These requirements have encouraged new immigrants to learn our language and become part of our society. We must encourage this tradition to reunite our society and erase the divide between new citizens and those with two, three, and more generations in this great Nation.

Certainly, if you were a citizen living in Mexico, you are now required by Congress to print bilingual ballots in at least some parts of those States. In Oklahoma, it is required in Marmon County and, I have a sample of the ballots that will be used there on July 25, and this is for State and local races, not Federal elections. The candidates for county commissioner will be surprised that they have been relabeled as candidates for “comisionario del condado.”

Instead of this confusion, we need the unifying force of an official language, English, which is the language of success in America.

To become an American citizen, we require people to read, write and speak in English. That is to help them to assimilate in our melting pot, truly to become Americans. We mock that when the cherished right to vote does not involve English any more.

My father was the son of immigrants, and he grew up bilingual, but English is what my father taught me and what he spoke to me. America’s strength is not our diversity; it is our ability to unite around common principles even when we come from different backgrounds.

We have too many laws that undercut our unity. Today we can fix one of those laws, and we should. Please join me in doing what the American people want and end Texas to do. Support this amendment and support the unifying force of a common language, the English language.

Mr. SENSBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous consent to include a statement from a witness from South Dakota (Ms. Herseth).

(Ms. HERSETH asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)
saved countless lives and protected the freedoms we enjoy today.

Native Languages have always had a place in America and should continue to have a place in America. They are part of our history and have played an important role in defending the rights of Native Language speakers should continue to be protected at the ballot box through all of the protections afforded by Section 203. That is why I strongly urge my colleagues to reject the King amendment.

It is incredibly encouraging to see the strides American Indians in South Dakota have made in recent years, including in the political process. I believe that full political participation, and especially voting, is one of the keys to continuing these welcome developments. Voting is not only the expression of support for a particular set of ideas, but is also an expression of hope, and belief in the future.

One of the ways we can help ensure that these hopes become a reality is to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act, because the Act continues to play a critical role in ensuring the integrity of the political process. It helps assure not only that an effective legal procedure exists for correcting violations of voting rights, but that this will be prevented from developing. It is also a beacon that sends the message to all American citizens that voting rights must be respected.

Thus, I thank the leadership for scheduling H.R. 9 for floor action, and I urge my colleagues to give H.R. 9 their full support.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for the purpose of a unanimous consent request to the gentlewoman from the Virgin Islands (Ms. CHRISTENSEN).

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the King amendment which would disenfranchise millions of Americans.

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the Voting Rights Act is to ensure the right to vote to every American citizen.

While I oppose all of the amendments to the bill, I rise now to specifically speak to the King amendment which would deny this fundamental right to American citizens who have not yet fully-achieved English proficiency, or who are just more comfortable with their primary language.

Not only would the King amendment discriminate against the millions of naturalized citizens whose native language is Spanish, it would also discriminate against Native American languages on the ballot?

I urge my colleagues to defeat this amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous consent request to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN).

(Ms. HARMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Voting Rights Act and in strong opposition to this amendment to strike renewal of section 203, a key provision.

The Voting Rights Act is a touchstone of the American Civil Rights movement. It brought millions of people into the heart of American democracy. The Act demonstrated to the world, and to history, that we are capable of recognizing the mistakes of our past and acting to fix them.

This is a subject I know intimately. Many years ago, in the early 1970s, I served as Chief Counsel of the Special Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee. In 1975, the Subcommittee managed amendments to the Voting Rights Act, and we drafted, debated, and passed section 203 on my watch.

I knew then that section 203 was a vital protection of voting rights. It is no less important today.

By 1975, poverty, poor education, and institutionalized discrimination had combined to turn English-only ballots into a de facto literacy test. Many citizens did not register to vote because they could not read election materials or communicate with poll workers.

Section 203 helped lower these barriers by requiring that jurisdictions with a significant population of “language minorities” provide election information in more than one language. It has since been applied to 500 jurisdictions in 31 states.

The success of section 203 cannot be overstated. Study after study has demonstrated that when bilingual assistance is provided, more citizens register to vote, and more registered voters go to the polls. And since 1975, minority voter registration has continued to climb and more minorities have been elected to public office. The result is a stronger, more vibrant, and more representative democracy.

But the job is not yet done.

Today, as in 1975, millions of Americans do not speak fluent English. Some are recently naturalized citizens. Many others are native-born citizens, who may have been raised in homes where English was not their primary language. Because of school discrimination, or other factors, these citizens still may not be proficient in English.

Section 203 gives these Americans a voice, allowing them to participate in their native languages.

We must remember that the individuals protected by section 203 are citizens. They are family, friends, neighbors, and co-workers. And they are entitled to the same rights as any other citizen—including the right to cast an informed vote.

I urge my colleagues to defeat this amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART).

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time.

I would like to preface my remarks by expressing my profound admiration for the author of this amendment who I think is a great American patriot. In the Rules Committee, I supported his right to be heard on the floor today.

And I rise in opposition to the amendment. I think that we have made great progress. One of the beauties of America is we are constantly improving as a Nation. We have improved to the point that citizens, for example naturalized citizens, it is important to point out that the elderly, pursuant to our laws, when they have been residents of the United States for many years and they seek to become an American citizen, according to our laws, they can take the exam to become an American citizen in their language of preference, their language of preference.

What we said in amendments to the Voting Rights Act, those people have a right to understand what they are voting on. Whether it is a simple choice of candidate or a complex ballot issue, elderly citizens who are naturalized have a right to understand what they are voting on.

Also, there are millions of native-born Americans whose language, primary language, is not the English language. And so we believe, just like we could not be extremities of those citizens, whether they are naturalized or en route to be naturalized or native born and they defend this country, and we are certainly grateful to them and proud of them when they do so, we think they should have the right when they vote to be able to understand the ballot initiatives that they are voting on or other questions.

So I really think, Mr. Chairman, that the fairer we are as a society, the greater we are. The fairer our country is, the greater we are as a country. This is an example. We have opened an opportunity for full participation, for citizens whose primary language is other than English, to the ballot box. And I think we should be proud of that as a country.

So I again commend Chairman SENSENBRENNER for bringing forth this legislation and oppose the amendment before us at this time.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) who has worked very hard on this issue.

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. Let me ask the people, including my good friend, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART), Candice Miller was the Secretary of State of Michigan, and she told me there are 23 Arabic dialects in Wayne County, in one county, in Michigan. Now are all of you prepared to have 23 separate languages on the ballot? Is that fair?

This amendment does not infringe on anybody’s ability to cast an informed vote. States can still choose to provide language assistance and individuals can still choose to bring their friends as translators into the ballot box and help them understand.

This is simply a commonsense amendment that merely removes a Federal mandate to provide translations. Are you going to ask the Federal Government to force a State to have 23 Arabic dialects in Wayne County? It is a States' rights issue.

Let's look at what Margaret Fung of the Asian American Legal Defense and Education Fund said: "I think all of the language assistance is supplemental to what, hopefully, will happen, which is that everyone will learn English.'

Immigrants arriving on our shores add to the vibrant fabric of our Nation, but it is important as a melting pot that all of these immigrants learn to speak English.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous consent request to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE).

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the King amendment and urge its defeat.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Ranking Member JOHN CONyers for their hard work on the Voting Rights Act and for the opportunity to speak on the importance of passing this landmark piece of legislation.

I stand in opposition to the King amendment to strike sections 7 and 8 of the bill which ensure that all American citizens, regardless of language ability, are able to vote on a fair and equal footing.

Recent discriminatory actions in the States of Georgia, Texas, the Dakotas and even in my home State of New Jersey underscore the importance of including provisions such as language assistance for potential voters and the pre-clearance of electoral changes for covered jurisdictions.

In fact, in New Jersey there are approximately 1 million Spanish-speaking voters, which quite clearly exemplifies the need to extend provisions such as section 203. In 1999, the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division found that Passaic County, New Jersey, was discriminating against Latino voters by denying equal access to the electoral process.

The Civil Rights Division entered into a consent decree with the County of Passaic, and now the elections are monitored by the Federal Government to force a State to provide language assistance.

In Apache County, Arizona, the Navajos have increased their turnout; and the Navajo Code Talkers, who sacrificed their lives during World War II, were able to participate in this process.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. GARRETT).

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS).

Mr. BACHUS of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the King amendment. Mandating election materials and ballots be provided in languages other than English is a travesty and capricious attack against individuals and a half people in California who are half foreign born. That is the true American tradition, and this amendment is true to our heritage, not what has existed un-naturally for the last 20 years.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER).

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the King amendment. Without this amendment, there would be voting discrimination against individuals who may need assistance with English.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization as an original co-sponsor. I also rise in support of this amendment.

From the 1790s to the 1970s, our forefathers came to this country, America, from across the globe. They spoke a multitude of languages. They became American citizens. They exercised their right to vote, and they did so in English.

Teddy Roosevelt was right when he said: "There can be no divided allegiance here. We have room for but one flag, the American flag. We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language."

It was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our grandparents, it should be good enough for us. There is a tradition in this country. For 180 years, we voted in English, and it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers.

For us. There is a tradition in this country. For 180 years, we voted in English, and it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers, it was good enough for our forefathers.

Secondly, as already pointed out, this is in fact yet another unfunded mandate on the States. Talk to your county commissioners and they will tell you how much this costs them. And I should also point out that this amendment does absolutely nothing, nothing to require that all ballots be in English.

We simply say under this amendment that the States and localities will decide how to implement it themselves.

Third, this bill currently is an arbitrary and capricious attack against individuals by insulating the voters by simply implying that with a foreign language surname that they cannot understand the English language. I support the amendment.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 11/2 minutes to the co-sponsor of this amendment and a member of the Judiciary Committee, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS).

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization as an original co-sponsor. I also rise in support of this amendment.

Today, the House of Representatives stands at a fork in the road. On one side, we can pass the Voting Rights Act with these odious amendments. Are you going to ask the Federal Government to force a State to provide language assistance for potential voters and the pre-clearance of electoral changes for covered jurisdictions?

In fact, we are ignoring the current reality of bilingual ballots? These are Census statistics.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GONZALEZ).
July 13, 2006

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE

they are talking about. Make no mistake about what we are talking about here today.

In 1975, a bunch of brilliant people finally came up with an answer, and they said we have found a way to become inclusive, to increase participation, to make citizens more responsible, to engage them in our society and assimilate into society with a little bit of assistance at the polling place. That is what language assistance is all about. It is about inclusion, not exclusion.

Everything you have heard from the other side and the proponents of this particular amendment is about exclusion, about reducing voter participation. That is what is at stake here today.

I will ask anybody here in this body today that is considering voting for this particular amendment: Do you have campaign material in your career or on your Web site or your newsletters in another language? Let’s not be hypocrites. Let’s be honest and do the right thing today.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY G. MILLER).

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. It is interesting that individuals are required to take their United States citizenship test in English, not in another language, but in English.

It is interesting that we provide an opportunity if they want to take a translator to the polls to help them, they are able to do that also.

But in my district, which is basically Orange County, individuals received a letter which is called an outreach letter offering foreign language ballots. These were sent to any individual who had a foreign-sounding name such as Martinez or Chen. The response I received was overwhelming, and it was pure anger that the assumption was made because my name happened to be Chen or Martinez that I was not a U.S. citizen capable of speaking English.

Less than seven-tenths of 1 percent of the 1.5 million people in Orange County actually requested non-English ballots, yet they only have to provide five ballots today: English, Spanish, Korean, Chinese and Vietnamese. The next Census has predicted that they will have to produce an additional five languages. This is a reasonable amendment. I ask for aye on it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ).

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Chairman, the King amendment is a vote in favor of discrimination against language minorities. This point was driven home by a Federal court in Oseola County, Florida, just a few weeks ago.

Oseola County was purposefully denying voter registration and assistance opportunities to Spanish language voters in a predominantly Puerto Rican population. The Department of Justice sued and secured a consent decree requiring the county to comply with Federal law. In July 2002, Oseola County became covered by section 203 of the Voting Rights Act. However, the county continued to neglect its duties under Federal law. The Federal court found just 2 weeks ago that there is considerable evidence to suggest that the county’s institution and maintenance of an at-large voting system was motivated by a desire to dilute the vote of an emerging Hispanic population.

Now, we are not talking about something that happened 40 years ago. This is just a few weeks ago now, in 2006. Eliminating section 203 will encourage jurisdictions to disenfranchise emerging language minorities, which will be compounded by depriving these taxpayer-supported U.S. citizens of the assistance they need.

Really, do you think that people who speak flawless English, who can’t understand ballot initiatives that are complex, if they have a hard time, then what do you think someone who has English as a second language can do? Not very much without the assistance of section 203.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Iowa has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I yield the opportunity to close with that minute and a half.

I would speak, first of all, to Mr. PENCE’s statement that now is not the time. Now is actually the only time in a half a century where this Congress has the opportunity to have a voice on the reauthorization of this. It was reauthorized in 1982, until 2032 if the language prevails. It is in the bill. We have to do it now.

Citizens are required to demonstrate proficiency, in both spoken and written word, of the English language. They don’t have a claim. Naturalized citizens do not have a claim to foreign language ballots. American-born citizens do have, and they can make that claim locally, like they do in places like Wisconsin where the chief of Wisconsinites just determined that they would be printing ballots in the languages both of Hmong and Spanish. So they have demonstrated how local control actually works, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, then the waste is demonstrated in places like California where a small precinct, 650 people, 33 separate ballots for 650 people in languages English, Spanish, Chinese, at a cost of $100,000 for that county alone. Three hundred thousand counties are covered by this. We don’t need to be imposing this upon the American people.

The heavy hand of the Federal Government can be lifted off. People will still be voting in the languages of their choice because they will be controlled by the locale, consistent with the 10th amendment, States’ rights, federalism, fiscal responsibility, and the philosophy of the majority of this Congress, the Republican Party and the view of the American people.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, this is a poison pill amendment. It is no secret that if this amendment is adopted, the voting rights extension will be doomed because the counties covered by this bill will withdraw their support. So if you want a VRA, vote ‘no’ on the King amendment.

I would repeat the fact that we are dealing here with United States citizens. Illegal immigrants, legal immigrants who have been naturalized are not eligible to vote. Three-quarters of the people who do require language assistance for ballots are native-born.
Americans. They achieved their citizenship by birth in the United States of America. And should we deny them the opportunity to understand their ballots because their background or the educational system where they grew up did not make them functional in English?

I believe English should be the national language. I believe that English is the language of commerce, and one cannot achieve the American dream without being functional in English. But, at the same time, should we deny people who are citizens, most of them native born, the opportunity to understand the ballots because this part of the Voting Rights Act ends up being repealed or allowed to sunset?

I answer that question, “no.” And that is particularly important in States that have a lot of ballot initiatives, some of which have got triple negatives the way they have been drafted.

The registrar of voters in Orange County, California, said that ballot questions are drafted there to reflect a 12th to 14th grade level of education. Believe me, if you are not functional in English, and it is a post-high-school grade level that the ballot questions are drafted in, certainly we ought to give these people assistance.

I strongly oppose the amendment by Representative King of Iowa to repeal the language assistance provisions of the Voting Rights Act that requires certain jurisdictions with concentrations of citizens who do not speak English very well to provide language assistance to voters who need it and the American citizens who request it.

My district is one such jurisdiction. Over 34 percent of my district is made up of foreign-born American citizens. Besides that, nearly 45,000 U.S.-born citizens in my district speak some language other than English in their homes. These are Americans. They live here, work here, raise families and pay taxes here.

They vote here.

This amendment is an attack on the fundamental right to vote for millions of citizens across the country. It’s crucial that everyone in our democracy has the right to vote. Yet, having that right legally is meaningless if certain groups of people are unable to accurately cast their ballot at the polls. Voters may be well informed about the issues and candidates, but to make sure their vote is accurately cast, language assistance is necessary and reasonable in jurisdictions with concentrated populations of limited English proficient voters.

Some who vote for this amendment believe this is not about immigration. According to the most recent information from the Census, 70 percent of citizens who use language assistance are native born, including Native Americans, Alaska natives and Puerto Ricans.

Equally important is that new citizens required to speak English, they still may not be sufficiently fluent to participate fully in the voting process without this much-needed assistance. Ballots are often too complicated even for native English speakers. To deny needed assistance to American citizens goes against who we are as a democracy.

Before the language assistance provisions were added to the Voting Rights Act in 1975, many Spanish-speaking United States citizens did not register to vote because they could not read the election material and could not communicate with poll workers. Language assistance has encouraged these and other citizens of different language minority groups to register and vote and participate more fully in the political process, which is healthy for our democracy.

Some try to say that language assistance costs millions of dollars. Language assistance is not costly. According to two separate Government Accounting Office studies, as well as independent research conducted by academic scholars, when implemented properly language assistance accounts only for a small fraction of total election costs. The most recent studies show that compliance with Section 203 accounts for approximately 5% of total election costs.

Let’s examine what is at stake here:

In 2003 in Harris County, Texas, officials did not provide language assistance for Vietnamese citizens. This prompted the Department of Justice to intervene and, as a result, voter turnout doubled and a local Vietnamese citizen was elected to a local legislative position.

The implementation of language assistance in New York City had enabled more than 100,000 Asian-Americans not fluent in English to vote. In 2001, John Liu was elected to the New York City Council, becoming the first Asian-American elected to a major legislative position in the city with the nation’s largest Asian-American population.

In San Diego County, California, voter registration among Hispanics and Filipinos rose by over 20 percent after the Department of Justice brought suit against the county to enforce the language minority provisions of Section 203. During that same period, Vietnamese registrations increased by 40 percent.

Those who have tried to master a second language know the near-paralysis that sometimes grips you. Confusion, embarrassment and frustration are constant companions for those trying to change the way their tongues work and their minds think in the important and mundane sense. It is much like the tasks of ordering at a restaurant or going to the bank become challenges—every word a potential mistake in comprehension.

The language in section 203 is not about coddling immigrants, and this amendment shouldn’t be about punishing new citizens for learning a second language under fire. Section 203 is about making sure that a fundamental right, the right to vote, is without obstacle.

I urgently ask that my colleagues join me in defeating the King amendment and standing for the rights of all Americans to cast the vote they intend.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. KING).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa will be postponed.
In order to bail out, a county has to hire an attorney and sue the United States Department of Justice in Federal court in Washington, D.C. Let me say that again. My hometown of Grantville, Georgia, with a population of 2,270 people, that has never had an objection lodged against it, would have to sue the United States Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., in order to bail out.

My amendment seeks to address the bailout burden by requiring the Department of Justice to assemble a list, using its existing databases, of all the jurisdictions that are eligible to get out from under Federal oversight, and then consent to entry of judgment, letting those jurisdictions out from coverage. The genesis for this idea came from Professor Rick Hasen, who is one of the leading election law experts in the country and has carefully studied the constitutional issues surrounding renewal of the Voting Rights Act. He openly supports this amendment and urges all Members to look carefully at it.

The amendment does not change the existing bailout requirements. It does it provides an attorney and sue the United States Department of Justice in Federal court, in an action for bail out and objecting, requiring a full trial. The amendment does not get the VRA; it does not make a bill change to the bill, except to ease the process for jurisdictions that do not have problems with discrimination to get out from under coverage.

Some say this is a difficult burden to place on the Department of Justice, or that it cannot obtain all the information necessary. But the DOJ is free to request information of every jurisdiction in this country whenever it so desires. And it has the evidence of lack of objections in its possession.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all Members to carefully consider this question. We all want to preserve the legacy of the Voting Rights Act, and not giving careful consideration to the constitutionality of covering or not covering jurisdictions under the Westmoreland amendment. And remember, this means each and every one of those jurisdictions: “It has been my experience that to determine eligibility for bailout takes a rather comprehensive assessment of all aspects of the voting election process. This would include, for example, a description of the opportunities afforded minority voters to become registered voters, the extent to which minorities participate in the political process, including their success as candidates, whether they have worked in the registration office, the extent to which they have served as poll officials in the jurisdictions, etcetera.

Moreover, to assess bailout eligibility, it is usually necessary to review voter turnout numbers to determine the extent to which the electorate is participating in national, State and local elections.”

Views on the minority community are also routinely sought in bailout cases. The Attorney General would need to contact minority leaders in every jurisdiction to obtain their views on bailout. In addition, in order to assess whether a jurisdiction has faithfully complied with section 5, usually a review of all the records of the jurisdiction is undertaken to study whether any voting changes have been implemented by the jurisdiction without the requisite preclearance.”

Now, clearly, requiring such an assessment every year by the Justice Department would prevent it from its primary responsibility of enforcing minority voting rights. In reality, there are only a handful of attorneys in the Voting Section of the Department of Justice, and this amendment does not include any pennies of additional funding to hire the additional resources that would be necessary to conduct this annual assessment.

Further, under this amendment, the Department of Justice would be given the unprecedented authority to determine on its own whether the provisions of the Voting Rights Act that protect minority voters from discriminatory voting changes will remain in effect.

The amendment states: “The Attorney General shall annually determine whether each State and political subdivision that is covered under the Voting Rights Act that protects minority voters from discriminatory voting changes will remain in effect.”

The amendment invites lawsuits against the Department of Justice itself for its alleged failure to adequately conduct a review that it would be required to conduct in all 900 jurisdictions. So the gentleman’s amendment says that this has got to be done every year in all States. He does not give the Justice Department a penny to hire any additional people to conduct the review. And then it invites lawsuits against the Justice Department because they failed to do so because they do not have enough money to be able to do it.

In addition, the amendment compels the Department of Justice to prospectively take a litigation position, that it shall consent to the entry of judgment based on a determinative legal consideration even if subsequently discovered facts render the previous decision unjust. Meaning it ties the Justice Department’s hand from acting based on newly discovered evidence.

The amendment denies the Justice Department the ability to assert itself in litigation as it sees fit in court, based on its assessment of tactics and legal considerations. This directive confronts established executive litigation authority and upsets the separation of powers.

In sum, this amendment, far from being a reasonable clarification of the King amendment. What happened? Did you change your mind in 25 years? Probably so. That is legal. That is fair. That is okay if you have changed your mind concerning how you feel about that in 25 years. A lot has changed in 25 years. A lot in our State and our country has changed.

Vote for these amendments and make this thing fair, and everybody will have equal protection under the law.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to yield 4 minutes to the very fair subcommittee Chair from Ohio, who presided over 12 hearings and 46 witnesses and 12,000 pages of testimony. It is tough being fair.

Mr. CHABOT. I thank the chairman for yielding.

I, first of all, want to indicate that I rise in opposition to this amendment.

First, what are the existing provisions of the Voting Rights Act that this particular amendment applies to? Well, the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act require jurisdictions with documented histories of unconstitutional practices to preclear voting changes with the Department of Justice or the U.S. District Court here in Washington, DC, District of Columbia.

These provisions also authorize the Department of Justice to assign Federal observers to monitor elections in covered jurisdictions to protect the rights of minority voters. Together, these provisions have been crucial to the success of the Voting Rights Act and the progress made by minority voters over the last 40 years.

The current provisions of the Voting Rights Act strike the right balance expanding and contracting coverage as necessary. In fact, 11 jurisdictions have successfully bailed out of coverage while other jurisdictions have been brought under the watch of the Federal courts.

Now, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia would alter the balance contemplated by the Voting Rights Act and that is maintained by H.R. 9, the bill that we have before us.

Under the gentleman’s amendment, the Department of Justice would be affirmatively required to conduct investigations into the ballot status of the approximately 900 covered jurisdictions and to announce the results of its investigation annually, thus diverting precious resources away from its administration and enforcement responsibilities under sections 5 and 203.

Not only would this amendment shift the burden from the voting jurisdiction to the Attorney General, but the amendment would render the Department of Justice ineffective in performing any of its responsibilities under the Voting Rights Act, to the detriment of minority voters in this country.

Under this amendment, minority voters would no longer be able to rely on the protections and enforcement actions undertaken by the Department to enforce voting rights laws. Rather, the Department would be visiting each and every covered jurisdiction to review voluminous records to determine which voting law changes the jurisdiction has complied with and which ones they have not, 360 degrees of litigation.

In addition, this amendment has the effect of creating an unprecedented and what could be considered unconstitutional amount of authority to the Department of Justice to determine which jurisdictions should be removed from coverage. This is unprecedented voting rights policy that has the potential to undermine the most important civil rights law in our history.

H.R. 9 is bipartisan legislation, and I would urge my colleagues to maintain the bipartisanism and oppose this amendment.

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire as to how much time remains to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. CHABOT)?

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to my colleague from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY).

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the amendment offered by Representative LYNN WESTMORELAND and I would ask all my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

I was surprised a little earlier to hear the chairman say that of the four amendments this is the worst of the lot.

Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that it is one of the best of the lot, and with all due respect to Mr. SENSENBRENNER and Mr. CHABOT, I wish there was as much concern about the unfunded mandates that this bailout provision in H.R. 9 puts on local jurisdictions and the unfunded mandates that this multilingual ballot requirements put on local jurisdictions as their concern of the financial burden and time constraints that it puts on the Justice Department.

This amendment will facilitate States and jurisdictions that have fully complied with the requirements of the Voting Rights Act to be expeditiously removed from its section 5 restrictions as already provided by law.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment will simply require that the Department of Justice on an annual basis proactively notify States and jurisdictions once they are eligible for relief from section 5 preclearance requirements. Once the Department of Justice determines that a State or jurisdiction is eligible, the Department of Justice must promptly notify them and then consent to a streamlined judicial process for the State or jurisdiction, which in turn will significantly reduce the legal costs borne by the taxpayers.

Simply put, since the Department of Justice has the responsibility anyway to monitor and review States covered by the Voting Rights Act, the DOJ should also have the responsibility to notify States once they have qualified to be relieved from the restrictions and allow them to do so with a minimal amount of cost.

Again, Mr. Chairman, I want to encourage my colleagues to support this amendment. This may be one of the best of the four. In fact, support all four amendments.

It makes the underlying bill better and more equitable.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous consent request to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. ETHERIDGE).

(Mr. ETHERIDGE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill that came out of the committee.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 9, the Fannie Lou Hamer, Rosa Parks and Coretta Scott King Voting Rights Act Reauthorization and Amendments Act of 2006.

Ten years ago, my son Brian and I were fortunate to have the opportunity to travel with Congressman JOHN LEWIS to Selma, AL, to participate in a reenactment of the 1965 voting rights march over the Edmund Pettus Bridge. On the 36th anniversary of Bloody Sunday, the most famous civil rights confrontation of the 20th century, I was deeply moved to hear firsthand accounts from JOHN LEWIS and others about that fateful day. When the original marchers got across the bridge, the Alabama State troopers savagely attacked and brutally beat them simply for peacefully demanding their rights as American citizens.

The sacrifices at Bloody Sunday produced the most effective Federal election reform in our Nation’s history and guaranteed the voting rights of millions of American citizens.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 protects our citizens’ right to vote primarily by forbidding covered States from using tests of any kind to determine eligibility to vote, by requiring these States to obtain Federal approval before enacting any election laws, and by assigning Federal officials to monitor the registration process in certain localities. Although the Voting Rights Act is a permanent law, it contains some temporary provisions that will expire in 2007. Sections 4 and 5 pertaining to pre-clearance of congressional district maps by the U.S. Department of Justice and the bilingual provisions contained in section 203, were considered constitutionally controversial and were made temporary in order to revisit the issues.

Mr. Chairman, I support reauthorization of H.R. 9 and oppose all amendments which attempt to weaken it. With the help of the Voting Rights Act, I am proud to say that my State of North Carolina has made substantial progress in lessening voting discrimination. However, more progress can be made and because sections 4, 5 and 203 continue to be necessary in some jurisdictions, they must be reauthorized. We must continue to protect the right of all American citizens to have the opportunity to participate regardless of race, color, ethnicity or native language.

Some argue that ballots should only be printed in English; however, the fundamental right to vote must not be subject to a modern day equivalent of a literacy test. I oppose the amendment proposed by Representative King which will effectively deny some citizens the right to vote.

I also oppose the amendments offered by Representatives строковая данных.

Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act is working for North Carolina and is an important protection for our citizens. My State of North Carolina has 40 counties which are subject to preclearance by the U.S. Department of Justice. In testimony before the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights, and Property Rights, Donald Wright, general counsel for the North Carolina State Board of Elections said “...there is a consensus that the temporary provisions have had the effect of moving the consideration of adverse effects on the voting rights of minorities to the ‘front of the bus,’ as opposed to the ‘rear of the bus’ where it was for much too long. There also continue to be instances in which section 5 prevents discriminatory voting changes from being implemented in North Carolina.”

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARROW).

Mr. BARROW. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment because it will actually make it harder for the Justice Department to use its authority under section 5 to prevent discrimination from taking root.

It will do this by forcing the Department to treat those jurisdictions where the density of discrimination is in remission as though the disease was cured once and for all.

It will make it harder for the Department to do its job by forcing the Department to turn away from treating the disease where it is still rampant, and spend all of its resources reexamining and re-reexamining those places where it is in remission.

No doctor trying to eliminate a disease would regard remission as a cure, and neither should the Voting Rights Act.

No doctor trying to eliminate a disease would ignore those who are obviously sick and spend all his time treating a patient whose disease is in remission, and then move on to treatment of the other patients. It is in the same vein that I know we all know. It says, “Thou shall not steal.”

Well, this amendment does not come right out and violate or break that commandment, but it does make it easier for those folks to break that commandment.

I, therefore, urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous consent request the presence of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON). (Mr. UPTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the legislation. Mr. Chairman, I came to the Congress in 1987—the 100th Congress. We had a number of stars in our freshman class—Jim Bunning—a Hall of Fame baseball pitcher.

Passage of civil rights legislation which included the Voting Rights Act was the right step.

Today, it’s still not hard to find racism and discrimination. Yes, folks are still trying to prevent Americans from participating in our electoral process.

About a year ago, I sat on the House floor with the Dean of the House and my respected colleague, John Dingell, from the great State of Michigan.

We looked at the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and the names of Members of Congress that voted for and against the different civil rights bills of the 1960’s.

I was surprised to see how some of our former colleagues voted.

And, my bet is, that some of those that voted no then, would have the courage to vote yes now. That they would see the positive impact that those bills have brought about.

Mr. Speaker, we are the Peoples House—but we cannot be the Peoples House if we construct barriers for the people to participate. The Voting Rights Act provides protections and removes the barriers. It needs to be extended.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD).

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman and the ranking member and the CBC chair for their moving forward this equal protection under the law for all Americans.

I tell you, the gentleman who proposed this said that this is to help save the Voting Rights Act. In fact, it is an attempt to destroy it, because this amendment turns section 5 on its head under this amendment. Instead of enforcing the Voting Rights Act and stopping voting discrimination, the Department of Justice would be forced to spend nearly all of its time conducting investigations.

As the ranking member of the Committee on House Administration, which oversees Federal elections, voter disenfranchisement continues nationwide, and this is the wrong time to weaken this voting rights bill with all of these poison pill amendments.

Three Presidents cannot be wrong. The architect of this one, the late President Lyndon Johnson’s daughters are asking for this to be passed without these poison pill. We had the late Ronald Reagan, who continued this piece of legislation for 25 years, and our present administration, the President who wants to renew this.

We must move forward. We must let generations come to know that we fought hard in keeping the promise of this America.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Ms. MCKINNEY).

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Chairman, many of my colleagues have expressed some bit of surprise at the virulence coming from the Republican Members of the Georgia delegation. Well, let me just say that I am not surprised at all, because I was born in Georgia and I live there. I served in the Georgia legislature with a few of them.

But let me also say that just this week the second attempt by the Georgia legislature to impose a voter ID bill on the people of our State was struck down by the courts in violation of the Voting Rights Act.

We also learned in 2002, in my own election, with the crossover vote, that crossover voting can be used as effectively as the all-white primary was in days past. So we need the Voting Rights Act. We need it because we are looking at the State of Georgia. We see what you are doing. And now the Nation also sees that the State of Georgia desperately needs to be under the Voting Rights Act because some things still have not changed.

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, the district court specifically did not rule on the issues raised by the plaintiffs in the case that my colleague from Georgia is talking about, the Voting Rights Act.

Mr. Chairman, I have no other speakers at this time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), my distinguished ranking member.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, this voting rights bill with all of these poison pill amendments is to help save the Voting Rights Act. In fact, it is an attempt to destroy it, because this... completely workable unless the staff of the Voting Section is tripled or cuts corners in making its determination. There is no way the existing staff can possibly do what this calls for and make a binding determination of eligibility for bailout. And plus, we do not include one dime in this proposal to take care of all of this.

We turn section 5 on its head, and we will not be stopping voting discrimination.

This amendment would cripple the Voting Section at the Department of Justice, making enforcement of the Act nearly impossible. There are 900 jurisdictions covered by section 5. How could we do a report on them every year?

Reject the amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for the purposes of a unanimous-consent request to the gentleman from North Carolina Mr. WATT.

(Mr. WATT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to Mr. WESTMORELAND’s amendment.

This amendment imposes far more federalism costs on states than does the current structure of the Voting Rights Act that its opponents criticize. In short, the amendment would permit the Department of Justice on an annual basis to snip through every governance document maintained by a jurisdiction to determine whether it meets the eligibility requirements for bailout. This process will be far more time-consuming than presently imposed on jurisdictions. Now jurisdictions are in control of what they provide to the Department, both for preclearance and bail-out purposes.

The mechanism established under this amendment also requires DOJ to expend tremendous amounts of time and resources exposing nondiscrimination while leaving discrimination unabated. This amendment turns the Voting Rights Act on its head and makes a complete farce out of our principles of democracy. It should be soundly defeated.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman.

As much as things change, they remain the same, and I oppose the Westmoreland amendment primarily because it interferes and interjects the Attorney General in a partisan decision on the enhancement of rights.

Let me document for you why the Voting Rights Act is still needed today. As Lucy Baines Johnson and Mrs. Robb have indicated, two daughters of Lyndon Baines Johnson, let me suggest to you that this map says and shows all the States that are being covered by this Voting Rights Act. If the Voting Rights Act is hindered by these four amendments, what we have is the inability of these individuals who are now suffering to have redress in the courts.

Even today, the Voting Rights Act is applicable to the State of Texas because of poorly drawn districts in 2002. It is applicable to South Dakota because of the violation of the rights of Native Americans.

So I suggest to Mr. WESTMORELAND, though he may be the loyal opposition, we, in fact, do support the Voting Rights Act without the intervention of the Westmoreland amendment which undermines and torpedoed the entire bill. I ask my colleagues to join Senator Dole in her vote for the Voting Rights Act in 1965. Vote against these amendments and vote enthusiastically for the underlying bill.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield for a unanimous-consent request to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT).

(Mr. SCOTT of Virginia asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment presents a new process, which was not considered in our exhaustive hearings. In fact, testimony at our hearings showed that the present bailout process is reasonable and inexpensive—all 11 jurisdictions that tried to bailout were able to do so.

Although there is not a problem now—this amendment is a problem.

There are nearly 900 jurisdictions covered nationwide by section 5. This amendment forces the Department of Justice to conduct an investigation in each jurisdiction every year.

This amendment also reverses the longstanding requirement that jurisdictions bear the burden of establishing that they are free from discrimination, and instead places the burden on the Attorney General to determine whether each jurisdiction qualifies for bailout.

Voting Section attorneys at the Department of Justice would have to spend time developing the evidence necessary to make these determinations, rather than focusing their efforts on enforcing the Act. There is no funding for this additional responsibility.

There is no problem, so let’s not make one.

We should defeat the Westmoreland amendment.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, Mr. NORWOOD said some things change in 25 years, and he is right about it. One thing that has not changed in 25 years is that people say one thing and think another agenda.

We have heard all day that we are opposed to unfunded mandates, and now we want to put a new mandate on the Department of Justice with no new money.

We have heard, when Mr. WESTMORELAND writes about this topic in the pages of The Hill, that he wants to lift the South from the whims of Federal bureaucrats, and this amendment would empower the bureaucrats of the Department of Justice more than ever.

We heard his remarks, again on this amendment, by saying, I want to save the Voting Rights Act; and then he proposes to save it by making it harder to administer, more subject to judicial challenge, and far more complicated. It has not changed. People say one thing and have another agenda.

I close by saying the agenda today appears to be to water down this act and strip it of a lot of its power; and that is wrong.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT).

SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, this amendment by Congressman WESTMORELAND, my colleague from Georgia, is the most treacherous and dangerous of the amendments. There is no amendment that clearly points out what the desires have been for all four of these amendments. Their goal has been one thing and one thing only, and that is to kill the Voting Rights Act.

We cannot allow that to happen. We must understand what those words from Thomas Jefferson truly meant when he said that “we hold these truths to be self evident, that all men are created equal” and owed to their creator with certain inalienable rights, and among those are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.’’

And there is nothing to give us that right more succinctly and more importantly than the right to vote and to think that my colleagues from Georgia are the ones leading this dastardly fight to deny the right to vote to African Americans.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, first of all I want to thank the Chair for yielding me the time and also for his leadership. You have done a wonderful job in conjunction with Mr. CONYERS and the Chair of the Congressional Black Caucus.

I stand here, here we are at the last amendment, I come from Ohio. In 2000, we had difficulties with voting. Across the country there have been dilemmas with voting. And this is the first time since I objected to the Ohio vote that we have even talked about voting on the floor of the House of Representatives.

We are overdue. Every Member of Congress owes all of the voters of this Nation the vote in favor of renewing the Voting Rights Act. Your conscience should be bothering you if you do not feel that way. And you owe and strip it of a lot of its power, and that is wrong.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS).

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, do we want to be responsible for stabbing the Voting Rights Act in the heart? We must defeat with all that we have, with all of our power, with all of our votes the Westmoreland amendment.

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Mr. Chairman, Mr. Vice Chairman, Mr. Norwood, Mr. Chairman, you asked me to provide today a response to my amendment and, indeed, I beamed that amendment would pass the current version, as is, with a 25-year extension, there is significant danger that the measure is struck down.

Professor Sam Issacharoff was quoted saying: “To the extent that the coverage of jurisdiction continues to be triggered by what happened in 1964, it puts a great deal of constitutional pressure on the continued vitality of the act.”

Neither of these men are conservatives. Neither of these men support me. These are liberal law professors who are very learned in the election law field that support this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I think the one thing I have learned here today is that section 5, as looked at by the Department of Justice, is not really looked at. The only thing they are is a bunch of checkers. They just check things as they come in to them, rather than looking at these 900 jurisdictions.

By the way, if Mr. Norwood’s amendment passes, it would be a lot more than the 900 jurisdictions to be looked at, because of problems all across the country. But our DOJ has more attorneys on staff than the city of Granville does or the county of Coweta or the State of Georgia. If they do not know what these jurisdictions should be able to bail out, God forbid that any city, county or State does.

I ask that the Members of this House please support the amendment to the Westmoreland amendment to H.R. 9. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, I think those of you who have gotten to know me in the time I have been honored to serve here realize that the liberal law professors that instructed me at the University of Wisconsin law school about 40 years ago did not make very much impact then.

And maybe we should not listen to the group of liberal law professors that Mr. WESTMORELAND cites in support of his amendment today.

The fact is that this amendment turns the Voting Rights Act on its head, because in every one of the 900 jurisdictions, if the Westmoreland amendment is adopted, there is an army of Federal agents, if we fund them, that will come on down. look at everything that has gone on there relative to elections every year.

And of course this is an unfunded mandate, because the local officials that they have to talk are going to have to spend all their time talking to the army of Federal inspectors. There are a number of other things that are wrong with this amendment as well, because it unconstitutionally requires by statute that the Department of Justice assume a litigation position. That is a violation of separation of powers.

The DOJ lawyers represent the United States of America Government and its people, and they should not have their hands tied, being told that they have to adopt a position even though the position might be contrary to the law that has been passed by the Congress and signed by the President of the United States.

This amendment expands Federal authority by people who have been complaining about Federal authority since the Voting Rights Act was passed 41 years ago. Let’s not turn the VRA on its head. Let’s reject this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. WESTMORELAND).

The question was taken; and the Ayes appeared to have it.

Amendment No. 1 by Mr. Norwood of Georgia.

Amendment No. 2 by Mr. Gohmert of Texas.

Amendment No. 3 by Mr. King of Iowa.

Amendment No. 4 by Mr. Westmoreland of Georgia.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time any electronic vote after the first vote in this series.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. NORWOOD

The CHAIRMAN. The pending business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Norwood) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the noes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

REREFEREE OF H.R. 503. AMERICAN HORSE Slaughter PREVENTION ACT

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, H.R. 503, be referred to the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and in addition, to the Committee on Agriculture.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order for 1 minute for the purposes of inquiring of the majority leader the schedule for the week to come.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOYER. I would be pleased to yield to my friend, Mr. BOEHNER, the majority leader.

Mr. BOEHNER. I thank my colleague for yielding.

Next week, Mr. Speaker, the House will convene on Monday at 12:30 for morning hour and 2 p.m. for legislative business. We will consider several measures under suspension of the rules. A final list of those bills will be sent to Members' offices later on this afternoon.

On Tuesday, we expect to do House Joint Resolution 88, the marriage amendment.

For the balance of the week, H.R. 2389, the pledge protection bill; H.R. 5684, the United States-Oman Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act.

We do expect that if the Senate acts on the Castle stem cell legislation and several other bills that could be brought over to the House, where the House would consider the other two stem cell bills, and send all three bills to the White House. And then, depending upon what happens at the White House, whether we would vote on a veto override or not is certainly under consideration.

I do expect that we will have votes on Friday at this point. We will continue to work with Members on both sides of the aisle as the schedule develops. But the next two Fridays are scheduled. My hope is that we are able to finish our work, both next week and the following week, by Thursday night so that Members would not have to vote on Friday. But I cannot make that commitment at this point.

Mr. HOYER. Thank you, Mr. Leader, for that information.

Tuesday is the marriage amendment. Would it be fair to believe that these, they would be considered relatively in chronological order, therefore, the pledge protection bill would come on Wednesday probably, and then Oman on Thursday probably?

Mr. BOEHNER. Probably.

Mr. HOYER. On the veto override, you expect H.R. 810 to pass the Senate and then be vetoed and come back to us at that point in time, which would be either Thursday or Friday, depending upon how quickly we were doing our business.

Mr. BOEHNER. Yes. It could be Wednesday if you are a real optimist.

Mr. HOYER. If it were Wednesday, are you going to try to keep the other two bills that would come over from the Senate with that bill? Are you going to try to do all three of them at the same time, or is that not necessarily the case?

I yield to my friend.

Mr. BOEHNER. I thank my colleague for yielding.

It is expected that the House would take up the other two stem cell bills, pass them, and send them with the Castle bill to the White House, and then be prepared to deal with whatever happens from there.

Mr. HOYER. So if you were trying to keep the three bills relatively together at the White House, is that what I am hearing you say?

Mr. BOEHNER. Yes.

Mr. HOYER. Then we might pass those earlier in the week?

Mr. BOEHNER. But I do not expect that they will get here until late Tuesday, and so I think the earliest we could take them up would be Wednesday morning.

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for that information. And I appreciate what you are saying about Friday. That will be dependent upon how quickly we get the work that is before us done. I understand that.

Mr. Leader, we have had some discussions, and we still have pending, as you know, one appropriation bill, the Labor-Health bill which is pending. It has, as you know, attached to it an amendment adopted in a bipartisan fashion on the minimum wage, taking the minimum wage to $7.25 in three increments.

Can you tell me the status of the Labor-Health bill? I know it is not on the calendar, but can you tell me its status?

I yield to my friend.

Mr. BOEHNER. I thank my colleague for yielding.

There is that issue and other issues on the bill that are still being discussed. There has been no resolution on those.

But I think I will anticipate the next question with regard to the minimum wage. I have had conversations with Members on both sides of the aisle about the issue. It is clearly under discussion, but there have been no decisions made as to what to do or when to do, whatever.

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for that information. He anticipated my question, but I noted in the paper that there are some 25 or 25-plus Members on your side of the aisle who have written suggesting that we bring this to the floor. I would think if that is the case that we do have a majority. I would think, who would be for bringing this to the floor and, quite probably, a majority who might vote for a minimum-wage bill, assuming it comes to the floor as a minimum-wage bill.

Mr. BOEHNER. As the gentleman is aware, this conference is being chaired by the Senate. There has been one formal conference meeting. But I can tell you there have been consultations with Members of both parties on both sides of the Capitol with regard to many of the issues that have been agreed to and issues that are yet to be resolved, and I fully expect those conversations will continue.

Mr. HOYER. Reclaiming my time, I hope that is the case. And perhaps I will privately discuss with you whom these consultations have been with because on my side of the aisle, they have not talked to me yet. But I thank the gentleman, and I will talk to him privately.

I yield to my friend.

Mr. BOEHNER. Clearly, protecting the American people's pensions and ensuring that we get better funding of pensions are the goal of this legislation. I can tell the gentleman that I think we are very close. There is some progress. We are close. We have discussed this for months and months here. It is a very difficult bill, as you are well aware, and trying to make sure that there is balance, that we dot the I's and cross the T's, that process is under way. But I am hopeful.

Mr. HOYER. Hope springs eternal. Let's hope the bill is not eternally, however, in the conference committee.

Mr. Leader, if I could comment as well, you and I had a discussion and I think it manifested itself in some good products. But, Mr. Leader, you and I are well aware, and trying to make sure that there is balance, that we dot the I's and cross the T's, that process is under way.

I yield to my friend in hopes that he will, as he indicated he would, try to prevail on those powers that be to effect that happening, as he indicated he thought ought to happen.

I yield to my friend.

Mr. BOEHNER. As the gentleman is aware, this conference is being chaired by the Senate. There has been one formal conference meeting. But I can tell you there have been consultations with Members of both parties on both sides of the Capitol wit...
ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, JULY 17, 2006

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Monday next for morning hour debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

DISPENCING WITH CALENDAR

WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. BOEHNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT PROCESS FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2389, PLEDGE PROTECTION ACT OF 2005

Mr. GINGREY. The Committee on Rules may meet the week of July 17 to grant a rule which could limit the amendment process for floor consideration of H.R. 2389, the Pledge Protection Act of 2005.

Any Member wishing to offer an amendment should submit 55 copies of the amendment and one copy of a brief explanation of the amendment to the Rules Committee in room H-312 of the Capitol by noon on Tuesday, July 18, 2006. Members should draft their amendments to the bill as introduced on May 17, 2005. Members should use the Office of Legislative Counsel to ensure that their amendments are drafted in the most appropriate format, and they should check with the Office of the Parliamentarian to be certain that their amendments comply with the rules of the House.

EVERY COUNTRY HAS A RIGHT TO DEFEND ITSELF

(Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GENE GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to condemn Hezbollah and Hamas for their recent kidnappings and killings of Israeli soldiers.

These acts of aggression have forced Israel to defend itself and its citizens and will have a damaging effect on the prospect of peace in the Middle East. If someone attacked across our borders and killed or captured our own soldiers, you had better believe we would want to defend ourselves. Israel has the right to respond just like we would.

Israel fully withdrew from southern Lebanon in May of 2000 and from Gaza earlier this year only to suffer hundreds of unprovoked attacks from both areas since then. This is not the first time Hezbollah has taken action against Israeli soldiers. It also kidnapped and killed three soldiers in October of 2000.

These attacks are an attempt by Hezbollah to open a second front, so to speak, after the kidnappings in Gaza and their attack on Israel’s sovereignty. Hezbollah’s actions require Israel to defend itself, and Israel’s actions to take out terrorist camps along its borders to prevent this from happening again are warranted and justified. Israel has to defend itself from these terrorist organizations that want to go back to pre-1948 before there was Israel. They don’t want Israel on the map.

These countries with influence over Hezbollah must move quickly to bring the return of these soldiers.

Mr. Speaker, I condemn the acts of Hezbollah and Hamas and ask my colleagues to do so as well.

ISRAEL HAS A RIGHT TO DEFEND ITSELF

(Mr. WELDON of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, last month Israel was provoked when Hamas terrorists kidnapped Corporal Gilad Shalit, an Israeli soldier manning a check point. This was an unprovoked act of terror, an act of war against Israel by Hamas, which also controls the Palestinian Authority government.

As long as Hamas embraces terrorism and refuses to acknowledge the right of Israel to exist, terrorists will persist in the Palestinian territories.

Earlier this week, Hezbollah kidnapped two Israeli soldiers in northern Israel. Israel has responded in an effort to rescue these soldiers and diminish the possibility of Hezbollah to launch missiles into Israeli population centers.

I rise to express support for our ally Israel as it deals with yet more terrorist acts. The kidnapping of the Israeli soldiers can certainly be considered a provocation of war. Unfortunately, Israel’s withdrawal from the Gaza Strip has not led to a positive transformation of Palestinian politics or more security for the Israeli people. We need to support Israel in this difficult time.

NORTH KOREA AND THE DEMOCRATS

(Mr. McHENRY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McHENRY. Mr. Speaker, while America marked the anniversary of our independence, North Korea demonstrated the danger of oppressive regimes.

International threats are often distressing, but the silver lining in there is that there is a galvanizing effect. Threats test our mettle and express not our weaknesses but our strengths as a Nation.

And make no mistake about it, this Republican majority in the House stands strongly in defense of our Nation while Democrats have waged a two-decade-long campaign to undermine our national defense capabilities.

In May, just May, 117 Democrats voted to cut more than half the funding, $4.7 billion, from our missile defense program in the national defense authorization bill. In other words, the Democrats are applying their national defense strategy in Iraq to North Korea. It is called “ostrich” you stick your head in the sand and ignore the threats.

Well, at least there is consistency in their policy, Mr. Speaker. Maybe they will propose to cut and run from Alaska and Hawaii too because they could be attacked by North Korea with their missiles.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

VIOLENCE AND CORRUPTION IN IRAQI POLICE FORCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, for months and months we have been hearing from the Bush administration that the training of Iraqi security forces is going as planned. America will stand down just as soon as Iraq stands up, they said. A milestone which we were assured was just around the corner.

Well, now we know the truth. Not only can they not stand up; they can barely crawl. And when they do crawl, all too often they are fighting each other or U.S. troops.

The Los Angeles Times published a shocking report over the weekend about the violence and corruption that is permeating the Iraqi police. According to the Times, we are talking about “the rape of female prisoners, the release of terrorism suspects in exchange for bribes, assassinations of police officers, and participation in insurgent bombings.”

“Officers have beaten prisoners to death. They have been involved in kidnapping rings, sold thousands of stolen and forged Iraqi passports, and passed along ‘vital information to insurgents’.”

In one Baghdad neighborhood known as a militia stronghold, police tortured detainees with electricity and beatings.
I hasten to add, Mr. Speaker, that the United States and its military have no moral authority to combat such gruesome tactics. Why? Because the right to torture prisoners of war, indeed, the exhortation to torture them, was the official policy of our government, and we made the decision to turn a blind eye.

Of course, the minimum requirement of a functioning society in Iraq will be some kind of trustworthy law enforcement system. But with insurgents and militia groups having infiltrated the police, Iraqi citizens have absolutely no recourse, no legitimate authority committed to their safety and their security.

Another recent article, this one from the Washington Post, tells of a Baghdad resident who dialed the Iraqi equivalent of 911 after a Shiite militia, called the Mahdi Army, firebombed a local mosque. The call went through to the ministry of interior, which is allied with the Shia and its militias. The dispatcher told the man that he, the caller, was in a civil war.

Mr. Speaker, rather than bringing stability and rule of law to Iraq, it has turned out that we have a chaotic killing field, a hot bed of terror over there. The only law that seems to apply is the law of the jungle. The streets are controlled by thugs and murderers. The Iraqi Government is impotent at best, complicit at worst. They are in a civil war.

The least we can do is remove our soldiers from this inferno. Bringing the troops home will not be a panacea for Iraq, but it will get Americans out of harm’s way while we help facilitate the long, arduous process of Iraqi reconstruction and reconciliation.

Iraq cannot be put back together again as long as we persist with a military occupation. Every day that our soldiers are there makes it harder, not easier. Every day that the occupation continues, we move further away from, not closer to, the kind of democratic society President Bush says he wants in Iraq.

Bring the troops home. It is the right thing to do for America, and it may be Iraq’s only hope for peace and stability.

Mr. Speaker, rather than bringing the troops home, it will take the kind of democratic structure needed for day-to-day living and support systems, services and infrastructure needed for day-to-day living. It will take the kind of democratic structure needed for day-to-day living.

done. Every actor in the region knows this, yet some try to convince the world otherwise for their own selfish motives, whether it is for land, for re-occupation or to send signals to other countries.

Believe it or not, certain U.S. media outlets play right into these motives by fueling these misperceptions of which others purposely strive to further.

Example. Today, at 3 o’clock, Shepard Smith on that “fair and balanced” outlet called Fox News stated referring to the country of Lebanon, “that country known to fund Hezbollah,” and again at 3:13 p.m. today, he further stated, “Lebanon continues to fire Katyusha rockets into Israel.” It is time that this unfair, unbalanced, untrue and outright garbage be called to the carpet.

It is also time for all actors in the region to be called to the carpet, to step back and realize how disastrous their current paths are to their people and to the world. Hezbollah must stop tempt- ing fate, stop shelling across the border, must release the bodies of Israeli soldiers and/or unharmed those still alive and safe, as their leader claims.

Israel must stop their unmeasured response, realize they are creating more militants than they are destroy- ing and will never destroy every one of them, and take their grievances di- rectly to the countries involved.

It is long past time for cooler heads to prevail. It is time to ever have a chance in the Middle East.

WHY IRAQ WAS A MISTAKE

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I would like to claim Mr. McHENRY’s time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gen- tleman from New York (Ms. Boeing) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Boeing. There was no objection.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, today at 12 o’clock in the Lib- erty Caucus, which is a group of about 9 or 10 of us who meet in Mr. Ron PAUL’s office, we had retired Lieu- tenant General Greg Newbold, who spoke to us; and I have met with General Newbold in my office a couple of times. I am very impressed with this gen- tleman and his integrity and his hon- esty, and I want to read just a couple of paragraphs from a Time magazine article. It is entitled, “Why Iraq Was a Mistake. A military insider sounds off against the war and the ‘zealots’ who pushed it.”

This article is not written by a re- porter for Time magazine. This article was written by Lieutenant General Greg Newbold. Retired, and I just want to read a couple of paragraphs because I think he makes such a great point. Again, this article is April 9, 2006. I met with him in my office in May of this year.

This is paragraph one of two I want to read for the RECORD.

“From 2000 until October 2002, I was a Marine Corps lieutenant general and director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff. After 9/11, I was a wit- ness and a party to the ac- tion that led us to the invasion of Iraq, an unnecessary war. Inside the mili- tary family, I made no secret of my view that the zealots’ rationale for war made no sense. And I think I was out- spoken enough to make those senior to me uncomfortable. But I now regret that I did not more openly challenge those who were determined to invade a country whose actions were peripheral to the real threat, al Qaeda. I retired from the military 4 months before the invasion in order to express my opposi- tion to those who had used 9/11’s tragedy to hijack our security policy. Until now, I have resisted speaking out in public. I’ve been silent long enough.”

Mr. Speaker, I mention that, before I read the last paragraph, I had the pleasure, as I said earlier, to meet with General Newbold in May of this year. I had the pleasure of hearing him speak today, and he is a man of great integ- rity, like the majority of all those in our military. He had the courage to speak on the inside before we went to war in Iraq. He heard the planning, was part of the planning, and as he said to us today, he said, You know, when we first had our meeting after September 11, we were told to de- velop a strategy for Afghanistan; and then the next time we had our meet- ing, we are asked, Where is the plan for Iraq?

This is, I think, such an important part that he writes;

“Members of Congress, from both parties, defaulted in fulfilling their constitutional responsibility for over- sight. Many in the media saw the warn- ing signs and heard cautionary tales before the invasion from wise observers like former Central Command Chiefs Joe Hoar and Tony Zinni, but gave in- sufficient weight to their views. These are the same news organizations that now downplay both the heroic and the constructive in Iraq.”

Mr. Speaker, I mention this because I think we in Congress, to meet our con- stitutional duties, do have a responsi- bility for oversight. I would think and hope that my party, as well as the other party, would want to know how we got into Iraq. I think intelligence verified time after time, time after time before we committed our troops to Iraq. I think that we should know in fairness to democracy. A dem- ocracy will not stand without truth being told.

So I hoped that my side, as well as the other side, would come together and let us hold hearings. I have actually asked the chairman of Armed Services to bring in General Newbold, General Zinni and General Baptiste and bring them in to the Armed Services Commit- tee for hearings, even if it was a classified or a closed hearing, because we in Congress, in both parties, should be asking these questions.

I will close by saying that, again, it has been a pleasure that I would have the privilege to hear General Newbold today at lunchtime. He reiterated things he had said to me back in May to about 10 of my colleagues, and I do hope that we not make the same mistake in future wars.

We need to make sure that the Con- gress is informed and informed with credible evidence from intelligence that has been verified time after time before we are asked to give the authority to the President, whether it be a Republican or a Democrat, to commit our troops to Iraq.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I will close as I have many times on the floor of the House. I will ask the good Lord in heaven to please bless our men and women in uniform, to please bless the families of our men and women in uniform; and I will ask God to continue to bless America.

Yes, the President agrees that the source morally or the power of the government is an election, and he believes that the President ought to be elected. I will turn a little later to questions that have been raised about the integrity of the election process. And I think enough doubt has been raised so that we need to do more to reassure people that we are committed to protecting that integrity.

But let me take the President at his word now. After the election, he said, "Okay I have this, I see that the President honors the concept that you gain power in a democratic society by winning the election. But here is the difference."

We have historically talked about our checks, about balances, about our three branches of government. We have contrasted that to the more unitary governments in other parts of the world, even democratic ones. We have a separate legislative and a separate independent judiciary and the executive branch.

We have talked, from the beginning of this country, in the debates over ratification of the Constitution, about the benefits of checks and balances. This is an administration which considers checks and balances to be a hindrance to effective governance. This is an administration that believes that democracy consists essentially of electing a President every 4 years and subsequently entrusting to the President almost all of the important decisions.

Now, given the role of Congress, the administration, which I believe deeply holds this view, articulated most consistently and forcefully by the Vice President, they could not have succeeded in imposing it on this country and its Constitution as much as they have without the acquiescence of this Congress.

And that is why I appreciated what the previous speaker, the gentleman from North Carolina, talked about, the need for oversight. I believe we have seen an overreach by the President. I believe we have seen a zealous of power that should not have been seized by the executive branch. But executive overreach could not have succeeded as much as it has without congressional dereliction of duty.

I hope that some of the signs I am now seeing of resistance finally in Congress to that will take seed. But I do not see that yet. What we have is a President who won the election in 2004, was declared the winner of the election in 2000, much more dubiously. You know, in some ways President Bush was lucky that there was this flap over the votes in Florida. Because that obscured the fact that George Bush became President of the United States, after the election of 2000, trampling his major opponent by a larger popular vote than anybody in American history.

If you assume that Florida was counted 100 percent accurately, a very hard assumption to make, George Bush still fell half a million votes behind Al Gore, the fact that he was a minority President, that is with Ralph Nader drawing off 3 million, while Pat Buchanan only drew off a half a million. But despite that, George Bush took over because of all of the attention that had been on Florida. But from then on, he took the position that as President, he was, as he later articulated it, the "decider." That is not a word that you find often in American history. Yeah, the President is a very influential and very powerful person. But he is not the single decider. He is the most important in a system of multiple sources of power.

But thanks to the acquiescence of a Republican majority in this Congress, driven in part by ideological sympathy, he has been allowed to be the decider. So we have had a very different kind of the Pres Governance, ignore legislation to an American Government in which the President gets elected and exercises an extraordinary amount of power. It is democracy, but it is closer to plebiscitary democracy than it is to the traditional democracy of America.

Plebiscitary democracy, political scientists use to describe those systems wherein a leader is elected, but once elected has almost all of the power. Indeed, I believe it would seem to me the aspirations of the Vice President, that in some way the approach of this administration to governance interestingly has more in common with that of Hugo Chavez in Venezuela than almost anybody else.

Elect the President. Let him win and then get out of his way. Now, this has become clear to me in recent months. We had a debate here a month ago on the floor of this House on the right of the President, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, by which the President and Congress together set forward a method for wiretapping and eavesdropping in cases where we thought there were foreign threats to the U.S.

This is a case where the President and Congress together, in the Carter administration, explicitly adopted a scheme to listen in on people who meant us ill. It was followed by Presidents from Jimmy Carter through Ronald Reagan and George Bush and Bill Clinton. And then this President said, no, I do not like that. That is too confining, so I will ignore it. And I will instead use my power to do what I want to do and forget the requirements of the law, that is, he was doing here exactly what the law talked about doing in terms of goal, but ignored the method.

What Congress had decided with Presidential approval became irrelevant. Now, we debated that on the floor. And this really began to crystallize to me. And defenders of the President, opponents of our rule that said you cannot spend money to do this wiretapping in violation of the law, for the same thing the law calls for.
You know, it is one thing if the President says, well, there is no law here, I have got to do what I need to do. That is dubious and we can get to it. But where the law has been set out in a prescribed constitutional manner as to how you do something, and the President claims he is going to do it that way. I will do it my way, then you are into plebiscitary democracy. Then you are into the democracy that says no checks and balances. No, Congress, I will do what I think necessary.

Now, I wondered about the constitutional authority. And it was cited on the floor, what is called the "vesting clause" of the Constitution. And I thought, gee, that is a pretty important, clause apparently; it gives him all that power. How come I do not remember it better?

So I went and relooked it up. Here is what it says: "The executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America." That is it. That is the vesting clause. President and his defenders draw the conclusion that the President can ignore a duly enacted law of Congress if he thinks it should be done a different way. Well, that is of course totally circular. It is a perfect totality. It says: "The executive power should be vested in the President of the United States." It does not say what the executive powers are. It does say, yeah, the President is the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of State, but it does not define executive power.

So what they have done is take a simple sentence that says the President is the boss of the executive and use that then to justify the insertion or the assertion of executive power in areas which should have been legislative or judicial. And that has been the pattern in this administration.

In 2001, I voted for a resolution, the authorization of use of force in Afghanistan. You know, when my Republican friends, and some of the other Republicans talk about how Democrats will not stand up to terrorism, I am struck by how they forget the war in Afghanistan. I voted to go to war in Afghanistan because that was the place from which Osama bin Laden attacked us.

Almost everybody, only one dissenter out of hundreds of Democrats, voted to go to war in Afghanistan. In fact, I wish we were doing a better job in Afghanistan. I wish we were not misled, and the mistakes in Iraq were not driving attention, taking attention away from the war in Afghanistan.

But I voted for the war in Afghanistan. I voted for the authorization to use force. It said in there, and it was unfortunately the model here where the Republicans draft up a resolution and put it through in a way that cannot be amended and only has 20 or 30 minutes to discuss on each side, it said the President may take all necessary actions in this regard.

Well, all of us who voted for it thought we were voting to authorize a war against Afghanistan if necessary to get Osama bin Laden. The Taliban was given the option of giving him up; they would not do it. We later found the President citing that as authority to order the arrest of American citizens on American soil who would then be held with no recourse of any kind because the President ordered it.

Well, there is a statute that says you cannot in America lock up an American without statutory justification. And people said, so what about statutory justification? And the administration said, and was maintaining it until the Supreme Court majority in the Hamdi case finally repudiated it, well, it said right there in 2001, Congress authorized the President to do what he had to do to deal with the situation of the attack in America. And that outrageously, illogically was cited as support for this.

But it was in defense of this notion that the President could do whatever he wants whenever he wants to. Now some have argued, well, the President can do anything unless he is explicitly told he cannot. Not in this administration. They believe the President can do anything he wants, even if he is told he can’t. That has certainly been the case in national security.

It struck me when we recently dealt with the tracking of terrorist financing that the administration had done this pretty extensively without congressional cooperation. Now, the statute calls for them to be briefing Members of Congress. We all have seen the record of briefing.

This program started late in 2001. They briefed two people early in 2002, when the program was just starting. They briefed one person in 2003. They briefed nobody in 2004. And they briefed two people in 2005, and nobody for the first 4 months of 2006. Then they learned that the newspapers were going to publish the story. And that if it was going to become public, then they briefed 23 other people.

I was one of those offered a briefing. I turned it down because of the circumstances. They told me that they were going to tell me something that was a secret, when they told me, but was pretty soon not going to be a secret, but if they told it to me, I had to keep it a secret even if it was no longer a secret. So I said, never mind.

But it was in the Treasury Department, why are you briefing me after the fact that it was going to become public? They said, as a courtesy. Well, that sums it up. You know, the process of briefing Members of Congress is supposed to be part of the constitutional mandate for collaboration. It does not come from Miss Manners; it comes from the Constitution. It is not a courtesy. It is a requirement of collaborative government.

It is a chance to get back and forth about things. And it struck me, Congress would have clearly ratified their right to do the terrorist financing. Congress would almost certainly have given them a lot of the power they wanted with regard to the detainees in Guantanamo, perhaps more than I wanted to.

You know, we had the PATRIOT Act situation where the Judiciary Committee on which I then sat unanimously adopted a very reasonable, balanced bill which gave law enforcement full powers, expanded powers in the nature of what you needed to fight terrorism, but had some safeguards against abuse.

And that bill, having unanimously passed the Committee on the Judiciary, was reported by the Rules Committee. And then the Acting for the President, said, no, we do not like that bill. Here is a new one. And a new bill was written overnight and debated on the floor of the House with no ability to amend it.

So I didn’t like that and voted against it. It showed that Congress was ready to do what it wanted. But even knowing that it could probably get from this rather supreme Congress whatever they wanted, they haven’t wanted Congress to do it. It strikes me as to why. They don’t want Congress to agree on their ability to detain people at Guantanamo or track terrorist financing or do a lot of other things, because accepting the right of Congress to agree with them makes Congress act. And the theory of legislative government.

So we have a situation of unilateralism and a refusal even to take Congress in when Congress wants to be a willing partner. Now, there are a couple of problems with that. First of all, I voted for the balanced PATRIOT Act. I believe that the law enforcement people are the ones and we need to give them new powers when we are dealing with murderous fanatics who are ready to kill themselves. Our basic law enforcement theory of deterrence doesn’t work against people who are ready to commit suicide, although that didn’t stop us from authorizing the death penalty for suicide bombers a few years ago.

But I believe that the law enforcement people are the good guys, but I don’t think they are the perfect guys. I think there were mistakes made by the FBI in Boston, outrageous mistakes. I think of Mayfield in Oregon, Captain Yee at Guantanamo, Wen Ho Lee under the Clinton administration, a number of cases in Guantanamo of innocent people captured on the battlefield in Afghanistan because of the fog of war.

People make mistakes. What we should be doing is giving law enforcement full power, but also having some checks so that people who are unfairly accused can defend themselves and prove their innocence. Our problem is that the administration does these things unilaterally, we have no way to know whether or not those safeguards are there. When the administration asserts the right to arrest American citizens on American soil, which happened this is not a hypothetical, and lock that man up forever, fortunately the Supreme Court said, “no,” you can’t do this, this is America. But when they assert that, the problem is not that they are being tough on terrorists, it is that they are being tough on an individual who chooses terrorism who has no conceivable way to defend themselves to say that there might have been a mistake.

Shutting out the Congress means that you think you are perfect, that you think you can do these things, that you can exercise these extraordinary powers and you don’t need anybody to say, wait a minute, maybe you should do it this way or that way.

And, by the way, I do not think the argument is, well, we can’t trust the Congress. I am not familiar with any pattern of Members of Congress divulging information or leaking. Frankly, the great majority of leaks I have seen in the 26 years I have been here have come from the executive branch, not from the Congress. They were leaks because of some policy dispute and somebody wants to leverage somebody else, and that includes leaks from the Bush administration when they thought it would help them make the case with Iraq, like Douglas Feith and others.

But the problem of shutting Congress out is that you don’t get that input that allows you to exercise powers in a reasonable way, but helps you with safeguards.

In fact, what happens is this. You have things which are not, in themselves, controversial like tracking terrorist financing. Of course we should be doing that. Or surveilling foreign terrorists or wire tapping, of course, with the right reasons, you should do that. But the administration does these things unilaterally and refuses to allow Congress in and refuses to follow some of the rules that Congress has set down, they take noncontroversial things or less controversial things and make them controversial. That is when things have been trivialized. That is when over the terrorist financing tracking is not over the substance of that program, but over the secretive and unilateral and arrogant way in which the administration decided to do it and shut us out of a very important part of a system in which we want to participate.

So that is the problem with the plebiscitary approach. Yes, you elect a President and he is supposed to take the lead, but we don’t elect perfect Presidents. You elect people who are important. And then we also have a Congress and a court that are supposed to be involved as well; and this administration has time and again refused to do that.

Now, it has been especially the case in areas of national security where, with ignoring the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, or not briefing anybody seriously over terrorist financing, or taking the authorization of the use of force in Afghanistan and bending it way out of shape to make it a universal mandate to do things that no one thought it was supposed to be used for. Or arresting American citizens and holding them forever, arguing that you could do that without any court ever being involved. Having no process by which people innocently caught up in the fog of war in Afghanistan could say, wait a minute, I am not a terrorist, you can’t jail me forever, wondering around here. But they have also done it domestically.

One of the things this administration has used more than any other administration is the right to sign a bill. The Constitution says the President can either veto it or sign it. And they say, okay, here is the deal, we will sign it, but when we sign it, we will say that the President, and the President alone, will sign the other part. That is not the other parts, because we consider some of it unconstitutional, so we will ignore it. That is a wholly unconstitutional approach.

The President has a right to say, this is unconstitutional, I don’t like it. His job then is to veto the bill. But what he does is he picks and chooses; he thinks the legislation is a supermarket. He walks in, he takes some from here, some from there, he discards what he doesn’t like, he puts what he thinks is appropriate together.

That is in the domestic area. The signing statements are an assertion of the plebiscitary power in the domestic area that we have seen in the international area, the right of the President to do whatever he wants, to take laws that Congress passed and pay attention to parts of them and not other parts.

There are other examples of this. The Constitution does give the President qualifications for the executive branch. The Constitution says that but this President has abused that. They are to be used, it seems to me, in unusual circumstances. This President has regularly appointed people to office and to high court seats who couldn’t have won confirmation in Senates controlled by his own party. The pattern of recess appointments is a very, very serious one.

You also see it with regard to the people he appoints, because what they have argued is not just that Congress shouldn’t be that powerful, but it is the unitary theory of the President. I was frankly surprised when I first came across the unitary theory of the President. I had not been aware of the schizophrenic theory of the Presidency or the notion of the twin Presidencies. But what we have seen in this administration, frankly, is a downgrading of public officials other than the President.

You know, one of the great positions in American history has been Secretary of the Treasury. Very distinguished, important people have been Secretary of the Treasury. It has been a very important part of a system in which we participate in this society. The President essentially is the decision in ways that really go contrary to the notion of participation by other segments.

Yes, it is true you win an election and you gain some power. This is a very, very complex country, usually is not a good idea for one individual, even one who was legitimately elected in an election in which there was no contest, and we certainly didn’t have that in 2000, to be the decider, to dictate from on high of what’s to be done.

Now, again, I have to reiterate that this could not have happened without the collaboration of a supine Congress. Never in American history has Congress been so willing to give away its constitutional function. I know people have said, well, what do you expect, it is a Republican President and a Republican Congress. That is what happens. No, the history of the United States is that even when the same party controls the Presidency, the Congress, Congress did oversight.

Harry Truman, and people said, well, it is a war, what do you expect? Harry Truman became a national figure when he chaired a Senate committee in a Senate in which the Democrats were a majority, supervising closely the conduct of World War II by the Departments of War and Navy under Franklin Roosevelt. Can you imagine what a Halliburton would have been subjected to in World War II if given that Harry Truman was there?

And efforts by this Congress, by my colleague from Massachusetts, Mr. TIERNEY, to institute such a committee, the efforts of our colleagues from California, Mr. WAXMAN, to do oversight, they have been rejected by this Congress. So this Congress has not done oversight.

Let’s take a more recent example. When Bill Clinton was President for the first 2 years and the Democrats were in the majority, we had a very tough, emotionally searing hearing doing oversight on Waco. We had a hearing in the Banking Committee on Whitewater. Republicans thought it wasn’t sufficiently delimitatory, but they got a chance to present witnesses; we had the hearing. It is only with the exception of President Bush and this Republican Congress that we have seen a collapse of the oversight function because the President and Congress belonging essentially to the same very conservative ideological faction that now controls the Republican Party as the President, has decided that partisan solidarity, and ideological collaboration, that trump constitutional obligations.

So we have seen no oversight. That has played into the hands of the plebiscitary Presidency, into the hands of a President who is allowed more power than is healthy for a society.

And I reiterate, I am not charging authoritarianism. It still is a free country, and I encourage people to use that freedom and to be critical and to organize. But we are still talking about a very different mode of government, the mode of governance in which, instead of the checks and balances and the collaboration and the input of a lot of people, you get one man making the decisions.

Now, I understand that democracy can be messy and it is not always neat, but we have not before this had an executive branch that considered it to be more of a nuisance than anything else. I believe that that is the attitude of the Vice President. It has had a very strong influence on the President, and they really regard things like checks and balances and judicial review and the role of the media as interference with their ability to govern.

Now, we do face a terrorist enemy. And if in fact these things detracted from our ability to defend ourselves, we would have a real dilemma, but they don’t. The argument that democracy, that collaboration with the Congress, that judicial review, that an independent media, that these somehow detract from our ability to defend ourselves is not only morally flawed, it is factually wrong. This Congress would be very willing to participate with the President. And I think if a collaborative process in which thoughtful and well-informed Members of Congress who have gotten expertise in this and that area were able to meet in a collaborative way with members of the administration, that result would have strengthened what we do. Instead, what we have is controversy after controversy because this administration does not learn, and they continue to follow the pattern of we will do it unilaterally, we do it without anybody else, we will do whatever we want. And it fails.

I talked before, and I just want to elaborate the constitutional point about the President ignoring the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act. My colleagues when they defend to the President, cite certain Supreme Court decisions. They never cite Youngstown Sheet and Tube against Sawyer, the steel case. In that case, the Court made a very important point, which is that there are sort of three situations in which you can talk about Presidential power. You can talk about cases where the President and Congress act together, and there the court said, you know what is that is when America is at its strongest.

That is the point I want to make. Constitutionally, our ability as a government to assert our power, to protect ourselves, to mobilize our resources is strongest when the President and Congress work together. It is strongest constitutionally and it is strongest politically and in every other way.

Then, the Court said there is the area where Congress hasn’t said anything. Well, maybe the President can do it, maybe he can’t. But the Court also said, but you know, and when Congress has said, do it this way, the President has no right to ignore it. Well, that is of course what they did in FISA.

Now, people frequently said to me, well, if that is the case, if they are violating some constitutional principles, why aren’t they stopped? Because of the nature of our judicial system, it is very hard to bring a case before the courts. You have to have what is called standing; there has to be a specific controversy that affects you in a very particular way. This administration has exploited that. They abuse power in ways that they know cannot be brought before the courts. When they are brought before the courts from time to time, they lose, and they have lost most of the decisions before the U.S. Supreme Court about their exertion of extraordinary power. The problem is that they are able to exert that power and get away with it in some cases.

There is only one way for sure that an administration can be restrained from ignoring constitutional limitations and have that brought to court. That is by passing an appropriations amendment which says none of the money being voted here can be used for this or that or the other. That is the only way Congress can restrain a President from sending troops into battle, which was done in Nicaragua, although somewhat ignored by Reagan, but essentially it was obeyed. And, Angola and Vietnam. Only if this Congress says none of the funds appropriated herein shall be used for X will the Court enforce that. And we came close a little while ago where a majority on our side and a few on the other side said, no, let’s tell them they can’t ignore the FISA. But a majority of the House, overwhelmingly Republican, wouldn’t go along. That is where the congressional dereliction of duty comes in.

Presidents can get away with this assertion of extraconstitutional authority. Congress doesn’t have to give them the authority, all it has to do is not stop them. That is what we have done. And that is a terrible mistake, whether it is domestic or international.

And I want to repeat, with regard to national security, the problem is in many cases not what the administration has done, but the way in which they have done it.

Yes, this is a Congress overwhelmingly ready to give them the power to combat terrorism. We, almost all of us, understood after September 11 of 2001 we needed a new law enforcement mode in which we got more aggressive, that simply deterring people by the threat of punishment doesn’t work in an era of suicidal fanatics. But this administration saw this as a chance to vindicate this third way—so I think, of plebiscitary democracy that says that democracy means, you elect me and then you get out of my way; and checks and balances and congressional oversight and media scrutiny, these are reduced to their irrelevances. And the result would be very willing to participate with the President. And I think if a

So whether it is signing statements or misuse of the authorization of use of force in Afghanistan, or refusal to talk to Members of Congress on things, or exploiting the fact that it is very hard to bring judicial review to these things come together in a pattern. That is why I say, I acknowledge now that when I told friends over these past couple of years that we should just go policy issue by policy issue and not talk about the overall framework of governance, I was wrong.

It is now clear to me there is a pattern to this administration’s actions, and it is one that rejects not democracy, not the democratic and balances and participation and cooperation and collaboration that we have long known; and it substitutes the democracy of the plebiscite, the democracy of the strong man who gets the power and is the decision, to go forward without interference. And I think that is wrong both from a philosophical standpoint and also from a practical standpoint.

I think the insistence of this administration to do it by themselves and by rejecting efforts to draw in other sectors of this society weakens America and doesn’t strengthen it, that it makes things look more controversial than they need to be.

Now, there have recently been some stirrings here. I was very struck when we had a hearing of the Financial Services Committee, the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations of the Committee of which I am the chairman. The voice of the chair of that subcommittee, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. Kelly), who objected to the unilaterality of it. There were some other showings in the Senate. Some Senators have said, no, you can’t just ignore what the Supreme Court did and you can’t just put a little lipstick on this and forget about it.

I wish the administration would understand that what we are talking about is strengthening America, not weakening it; that the democracy we have had, the checks and balances, they weren’t suspended during World War II. People made mistakes during World War II, the relocation of the Japanese and others. Yes, those were terrible things, but you had the Truman Committee and you had a very active Congress.

We have not in any previous emergency felt the need to go from the America of our Constitution to a model of a one-party system and all power ceded to him. And I hope, though I doubt very much this administration plans to change its approach to this, but I hope that what we are seeing now is a willingness on the part of the American people to support the constitutional role of the Congress; not to be obstructionist, certainly not for partisanship because the Republicans control both Houses, but in recognition that an America which functions as it was intended to function, in a way in which the branches cooperate and correct each other and improve each other and work together, we are of a common goal, certainly in the area of national security.

We believe, many of us, that a process in which we work together will yield a better result; that a process which assumes that law enforcement is perfect and therefore can operate in secrecy, without any kind of input, that that will do more harm than good compared to what the alternative would be. Not more harm than good overall, but less good than you could otherwise do.

I believe there is a very strong majority in this Congress prepared to work with this administration in ways that preserve the need for discretion and in which the expertise collectively in this body on a number of issues can help us go forward with the measures we need to protect ourselves and, at the same time, preserve our liberties. And if this administration continues the pattern of these past years, it will damage our ability to come together and make this effort, and I think, over the long term, diminish the nature of our democracy, because the democracy of the Constitution is not the democratic standards, but it does not represent the full richness of a democracy in which all can participate.

Now, my last point is this. Especially for this administration, with its focus on the election of the strong man, there needs to be better recognition of the widespread unhappiness about the electoral process. The election of 2000 clearly was a shamble. Go back two years in Florida. You know, we have the man who has been declared to be ahead in Mexico, Calderon, predicting that Obrador, who is challenging the result, will muster a mob and they will march. Well, he might have been describing the Republicans in Florida in 2000, when a mob intimidated people against counting the votes.

And we had a Supreme Court opinion which did not meet the minimum standards, it seems to me, of legitimacy when they said, okay, the Republicans win this one, but please don’t pay any attention to this in future races.

Given this administration’s view that elections are all you need, it is all the more important for them to understand that we need to reassure the country that elections are fully, fairly conducted. I do not understand why people confident of their mandate, confident of their ability to win would object to some of the things that have been put forward to reassure people that the votes are counted as they are cast.

The worst you could say about that is that it would be a little unnecessary. An administration that spends money the way this one does can’t really think that is a financial problem. And we have had examples of votes miscounted. We understand the vulnerability of machines to tinkering. There is no justification for continuing to fail to adopt safeguards for the counting of votes that will reassure people.

Mr. Speaker, the democracy we have had, the checks and balances, the back and forth and interference from the standpoint of the executive, in some cases, strong-minded executives, clashing with the President, maybe being fired trying to get support in Congress, a very assertive media, we have had those for a long time, and we are the strongest country in the world. It is very hard to argue from history that these factors weaken us.

What we have is an administration that is radically trying to change the nature of our democracy. They want to simplify it, they want to neaten it. Democracy is not good when it is neat, certainly not in a country as vast as this one. No single individual, no matter how popular; can embody all of the wisdom and all of the values of the country.

The democracy we have evolved of full participation isn’t always convenient for those of us in power, it isn’t always as quick as people would like, but it has proven over time to be effective, and it could be not only effective today, but even more effective in our collective self-defense than the current model, which produces controversy wherever one is called for and division where we could have unity.

I am not optimistic that we will change the approach of this administration. But I do hope, Mr. Speaker, that our colleagues in this Congress will continue what I think are stirrings of change and reassert our historic role and restore the kind of messy and inconvenient and much better and more inclusive democracy that has been our country’s legacy.

STEM CELL RESEARCH

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announcement of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Weldon) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise on the floor to address an issue that will be in the news a great deal next week. The Congress of the United States has debated on and off for quite a few years the issues surrounding new breakthroughs in cell therapies for a variety of clinical diseases, and specifically what I am talking about here are stem cell therapies.

The debate that the Congress has been engaged in for some time now is the issue of whether adult stem cells, stem cells taken from my body, or any adult’s body, or even a child’s body, because they are considered adult stem cells, can more successfully be used to treat a variety of diseases; or whether cord blood, which is blood from the umbilical cord, or actually you can get stem cells from the placenta, from the cord itself; or whether this notion that has been put forward for quite some time now, that the stem cells taken from an embryo is actually the best hope for the future for treating a whole variety of different diseases, diseases that we today have no treatments for.

I have taken a keen interest in this issue for some time now for a variety of reasons, the first of which being I am a physician. I still see patients about once a month in the veterans clinic in my congressional district. I practiced medicine for 15 years, internal medicine, prior to my election in 1994. I spent many years treating diseases like Parkinson’s disease and arthritis and Alzheimer’s disease, diseases that we don’t have a very good policy for that people often cite as being potentially more successfully treated with embryonic stem cells.

Additionally, I have to say some of these diseases have affected my family. My father died of Alzheimer’s disease in 1994. minute and look at the data, clearly, clearly shows that adult stem cells have great promise. Cord blood stem cells have not only great promise, but they are actually being used today. We have cured people with sickle cell anemia, some things they would have not thought in my lifetime I would be able to stand up and say that we are curing sickle cell anemia. Cord blood.

Embryonic stem cells, on the other hand, not only have never been successfully used to treat any human condition whatsoever, they have not really been shown to be safe, even in an animal model. Therefore, I find it bizarre and unusual that Members of the Congress would say straight-faced, incredibly, that the embryonic stem cells have more promise and the adult stem cells don’t. The data actually suggests the absolute opposite.

And, as I said, the embryonic stem cells actually are very problematic and they are proven to be safe. They tend to form tumors, and we don’t even have an animal model yet.

Indeed, this issue has become so bizarre it has actually become a campaign issue. I thought it would be good to have a debate and not just have me get up and do a monologue and show slides, but to have some of the Democrats, the advocates of the embryonic stem cell research, to be able to stand up and say that we are curing sickle cell anemia. Cord blood.

One of the big advocates for it is the gentleman from Colorado. I asked her to debate me, and she declined. I asked the chairman of the DCCC, Mr. Emanuelli, if he would be willing to come and debate me. He told me he was too busy. I can understand why these people don’t want to debate. If you actually look at the science, look at the data, their arguments just don’t hold up. They are not there.

I would like to just cover perhaps some of the arguments that we would be getting into if they were here. One of them obviously, and I want to do some separating myths from facts, and one of which we saw a lot of in the past, and you don’t see this argument as much but it is still out there, that is the argument that embryonic stem cell research is not allowed or that it is illegal.

In point of fact, it is allowed in the United States. It is not illegal. The argument should be funded by the Federal Government.

About a year ago, we took up H.R. 810, a bill that allows U.S. taxpayer dollars to be used for the destruction of human embryos in pursuing embryonic stem cell therapy. I must digress to explain how we got to where we are today. This began back in 1996 when we passed an amendment in the Labor Health and Human Services Appropriations bill and this was signed by President Clinton, stating that no U.S. taxpayer dollars would be used for any research involving the destruction of a human embryo. We never made it illegal.

The advocates for H.R. 810 in their bill basically say we will now use taxpayer dollars for research that does involve the destruction of a human embryo, partially overriding the prohibition that has been in place for some 10 years. And they contend that we need to do this because of the great promise.

I just want to point out that we are already funding embryonic stem cell research. It was first supported in the 1990s after President Clinton signed the bill that had the prohibition in it against destructive embryonic research. Researchers began to destroy the embryos in outside labs and then send the embryonic stem cells to the NIH, and it was a violation of the spirit of the law if not the legal letter of the law.

One of the things that President Bush did immediately upon coming to office is he reviewed this policy, and he reaffirmed the policy that there is no new funding for embryonic stem cell research, and he said we would allow funding for this research using these existing cell lines because the embryos are already destroyed, but we will not permit the destruction of any more. Indeed, this issue has become so bizarre it has actually become a campaign issue called fetal farming. I have been on this argu-fertilization, there are often embryos left over. But it turns out that 88.2 percent of the embryos in those clinics are actually wanted by the couples to do future pregnancies. So you don’t have 400,000 embryos available.

It also turns out that when you thaw out the embryos, there is a certain mortality. They don’t all survive thawing. And at best, it is estimated that 2.8 percent of these, and all of this has been published and I have the publication with me right here, this was published in the Journal of Fertility and Sterility and I can make it available to any Member of the House or Senate who believes there are 400,000 embryos available for research. It is just not true. It turns out there is only a fraction of that number, and at most you would be able to get about 280 more cell lines from using the so-called left-over embryos from the fertility clinics.

Like I said, there are still plenty more cell lines at NIH. This is an unnecessary piece of legislation, and I believe it is unethical.

Another point I want to address is that it has been claimed that the cell lines at the NIH are contaminated by mouse feeder cells. You cannot grow these embryonic stem cells on their own. You have to have a layer of mouse cells growing on a plate, and then you put the embryonic cells in there, and that there is genetic contamination.

And I have the papers with me here. It turns out, you can remove all of that so-called contamination and it is really not a problem.

Another point I want to get into is a point which has been made, and maybe I can get some assistance on the next poster here, Thank you.

I have already covered this. This was mentioned by a Member of the other body, that all of these approved lines are now contaminated with mouse feeder cells. I have the publication here. It was published in Nature Biotechnology. Most embryonic stem cell researchers around the world are using NIH-approved stem cell lines, and they are able to get the mouse feeder cells out of it.

May I have the next poster, please.

This is an important point. It is another point which has been claimed, and that is supposedly because of the so-called Bush ban, and that is the term you often hear them use, the Bush ban. Under the Bush policy, there is a ban on killing more embryos, but there is not a ban on embryonic stem cell research, and that we are supposedly falling behind, the United States is no longer the world leader in embryonic stem cell research.

Here again I think the best thing to do is to look at science publications. I have done that. This is a fascinating piece of information. Actually, it really undermines the case.

Mr. Speaker, 85 percent of the embryonic stem cell research being done in the world today is using the cells at the NIH, the Bush-approved cell lines, that were derived from embryos that were killed under the Clinton administration. So this claim that, oh, we must have more embryos, we must get these embryos from the fertility clinics, we must extract embryonic stem cells from them because the cures are around the corner and we are falling behind, we see that claim, evidence that the United States is no longer the world leader in embryonic stem cell research is mounting. It is just not true.

According to Nature and Bio-technology, in 2006 the U.S. is the world’s leader in the number of published stem cell articles generally, and human embryonic stem cell articles specifically. The United States is the world leader.

From 1998 to 2004, the U.S. alone published 46 percent of all papers worldwide on human embryonic stem cells.

In the period from 2002 to 2004, the U.S. increased the number of human embryonic stem cell publications by 700 percent, using the embryonic stem cell lines approved by the Bush policy. So, clearly, that statement that the U.S. is falling behind of the Bush policy, there is no basis in science, there is no basis in fact to substantiate that.

Now, let me go to the next slide. And this is a very, very interesting point that you often hear made, that adult stem cells have been around for years, and they have an advantage in that the research has been going on for some time. And it is true that adult stem cell transplants have been done for over 20 years. I think over 25 years in humans, and the claim is made that the embryonic stem cells were just discovered in 1998 at the University of Wisconsin. Jamie Thompson discovered them, a researcher, and he didn’t really discover them. Everybody knew they existed in Nature, the model to do was to successfully extract them and grow them in a dish.

But it turns out, and here again, this was published in a scientific journal, embryonic stem cells, animal embryonic stem cells have been used for 25 years, 25 years, embryonic stem cells research in animals. And the most interesting thing about this is that they have never been shown in that 25-year period to be safe and effective in the treatment in animals. What is lacking in this whole debate is an animal model. You cannot take a diabetic rat or a diabetic mouse and do an embryonic stem cell transplant and cure that animal of its diabetes. Twenty-five years.

And the other critical thing is, embryonic stem cells form tumors. And actually it is interesting to note, that is one of the ways scientists demonstrate or validate that they actually have embryonic stem cells. They will take the embryonic stem cells, or what they think is an embryonic stem cell line that they have extracted from an embryo, an animal embryo, and they will inject it into the animal. They will inject it in the mouse, and if it forms a tumor, it is a certain kind of tumor called a teratoma, then they know it is an embryonic stem cell. And before you can ever use something like that in a human you have to turn off that ability to form a tumor. And that is why it is safe, and it has never been done. They have never demonstrated, in 25 years, that they can cure an animal of a disease and show that it can be done safely.

Now, might I digress for a minute, just to say that adult stem cells have been shown to be safe? Adult stem cells have been shown to treat a whole host of conditions. Indeed, I have had people come to my office who have gotten cord blood transplants, who have gotten adult stem cell transplants and have been cured of diseases. I mentioned sickle cell anemia earlier. I had a young lady who had paralysis, and with adult stem cell therapy, she can’t walk, but she is able to stand up. She came in my office and she told me of her doing that. That kind of research has been published. And so it is just fascinating when you actually start looking at the science here.

And now, I want to get into the issue of where is the American public on this issue, and maybe we can get the next one up there. One of the things that is often claimed by the advocates for H.R. 810, the Castle-DeGette language, is the American people really want this.

Now, one of the advocates on the Republican side of the aisle that has been advocating for an overturning of the Bush policy and more funding, that involves destroying human embryos, because they know that we are already funding embryonic stem cell research.

The Winston Group did a poll, and it showed, supposedly, that the myth, that Republican voters support expanding embryonic stem cell research by a margin of 55-38. And that was published by the Main Street Partnership, which is a Republican group that has been advocating, they have been involved in the efforts to pass the Castle-DeGette legislation.

It turned out that in that same poll, they then asked those Republican voters, if they knew that it involved the destruction of an embryo, what would happen? And 64 percent said they were less favorable. In other words, you went from a 55-38 in favor of it, and when you revealed to them that this research involves, essentially, the killing of a human embryo, 64 percent changed their mind. They changed their position.

Another myth. Every poll shows the dominant majority of Americans support embryonic stem cell research. Facts are stubborn things. Congress is considering the question of Federal funding of embryonic stem cell research from human embryos. The live embryo would be destroyed in the first week of development to obtain these cells.
Do you support or oppose using your Federal tax dollars for such experiments? That is the right question you have got to ask the American people. Well, here are the numbers. When you ask them the right question, 38.6 percent say they support that; 47.8 percent say they oppose it.

Now, granted this is not a majority. But this is certainly not a majority. It is a fallacy to say that a majority of Americans support funding research involving the destruction of human embryos. But that is not what they are doing. They have just been unable to do that.

The other thing I want to get at is another cell system. Where is it? Whether it is done with embryonic stem cells or adult stem cells, needs cloning research to make it work. And that was said in a debate in previous years by a former Member of the Congress who now heads the Biotechnology Industry Organization, or BIO, as they call it.

I think Congressman GREENWOOD, at the time, was partially right. Embryonic stem cell proponents need to clone, if they ever want a hope of using embryonic stem cells for human therapies. And the reason for that is to get over the issue of tissue rejection. You can't take an embryo from a fertility clinic and extract stem cells from it and give it to somebody else who is sick. They will reject the tissue, whereas with adult stem cells where you take it from the patient, you take nasal cells or you take bone marrow cells, you convert those in the tissue that is needed and you put them back in the patient, there is no issue of tissue rejection.

And so the only way that embryonic stem cell research would ever work, and so he was partially correct in what he said, is that you would have to do cloning. And that is where these two issues come together.

A lot of people will ask me the question, what is the relationship between cloning and embryonic stem cell research? It is a very simple one. Adult stem cells work because there are no, well, they work, first of all. Embryonic stem cells have never been shown to work. But adult stem cells can work because there are no issues of tissue rejection.

But when you talk about using embryonic stem cells from a fertility clinic, it is somebody else's cells. You are going to reject those tissues. You are going to have to take immunosuppressive drugs your entire lifetime unless, of course, you made a clone of that person, and then the belief is that you would not get tissue rejection. Actually, scientific research suggests that you would still, nonetheless, get tissue rejection.

Well, here, I think, is a poster that basically says it all. Adult stem cell research, well, this is from a year ago actually on the top here. They had 58 different diseases. These are sick people. I am not talking about treating rats or mice, monkeys. I am talking about human beings. A year ago we had 58 published in the scientific literature, different clinical conditions treated successfully.

Now, they are not all cures. There is a guy who was treated with an adult stem cell transplant for Parkinson's disease. He still has a little bit of Parkinson's disease. But he is off of most of his medicines, he is able to walk, talk, feed himself much better. He is 80 percent better.

And so I want to be honest. They are not all 100 percent cures, but 58, successful therapies; zero with embryonic stem cells. That was May of 2005. May of 2006, 72 people. I think, in a year's time, it is almost one, a little more than one a month I see, I look at these studies, I comb the research literature. It is a little more than one a month new clinical diseases successfully treated with adult stem cells, and very few with embryonic stem cells.

And, of course, embryonic stem cells, still no therapies. Amazing.

And what is really interesting behind this figure, it is not 72 people. It is the number of people that have been treated. There are some of these treatments that are being used constantly, and yet we don't have a single one using embryonic stem cells.

And this is the part that I don't understand about the debates here in this Congress. As I said, I am a doctor, and when I see these kinds of, you know, a lot of times we debate reality here. We debated a few weeks ago whether we should pull out of Iraq. I mean, that is a real honest debate. The soldiers are going in a war. I mean, I am talking. Are we going to pull out or whether we are going to stay.

But to debate that we need to fund more of this research claiming that we don't fund it, when, in reality we fund it, and to claim that it is more promising when there is absolutely no evidence of that, the opposite is the case. The adult stem cells, the cord blood stem cells; and those don't involve destroying human embryos, and Americans are just not comfortable with that.

Now, I said earlier in my introduction that there will be three bills taken up over in the Senate. One of them is this Castle-DeGette bill, which will allow the creation of more cell lines, destroying more human embryos, even though we don't need more cell lines, even though we are leading the world in research. Even though the embryonic stem cell research appears to be going nowhere, the adult and cord blood cells are showing more promise, they want to kill more embryos. And that is how H.R. 810 passed this body.

It is probably going to pass the Senate. Most of the Senators, I assume, do not read the medical literature. They just accept these arguments at face value, that embryonic stem cells are more promising. So they will, the discussion is that they will approve that bill.

But they are going to take up, and I am glad the Senate is going to be doing this, two other bills. One of them is a bill, a piece of legislation involving more research on alternatives to developing embryonic stem cell research. And I think this is very exciting. See, most of the people who want to do embryonic stem cell research are not clinicians like me. Not doctors. They are Ph.D researchers, bench researchers, and they want to study the science of this. They want to publish papers, that science can ultimately be used, maybe to better understand diseases.

I do not take that away. I think there is some validity to that argument. The reason I do not support H.R. 810, though, is because we have embryonic stem cells available through the NIH, where they can conduct research. We have private entities willing to fund dollars to be used to kill, destroy more embryos so that you can get more embryonic stem cells. We just don't need to be using Federal tax dollars for this.

But what is really exciting is there is a multiplicity of evidence emerging that you can take adult stem cells and treat them and get them to behave like embryonic stem cells. One of the most exciting groups that has approached me about this issue is a group in California that is using testicular cells, and they appear to be able to get them to do all the things that embryonic stem cells can do. And some of this is making it to the literature, Nature Magazine, and it is just a scientific just published last week, and the title was "A Simple Recipe Gives Adult Stem Cells Embryonic Powers. Reprogramming adult stem cells to repair damaged tissues may not be quite as tough as thought. Researchers have devised a chemical cocktail that makes adult mass cells behave like embryonic stem cells, and the recipe is surprisingly simple."

So the science is moving us in a direction where we do not need, basically, to kill human embryos to do this kind of research. We can create embryonic stem cells from testicular cells. We can create embryonic stem cells. Really using this evidence from this report in Nature, you can use adult stem cells. So very, very exciting things going on.

And I just want to point out that I am not the only person talking about this. If I can get the next slide here, this was at a hearing about 2-3 weeks ago in the committee. The committee chairman asked, Would you say, then, that embryonic stem cells are the best available, although all others ought to be pursued? So he was basically asking the question, we should do adult stem cell research, cord blood stem cell research, but wouldn’t you say that the embryonic stem cells are the best available?

And then the question to Dr. James Battey. He is the director of the NHI Stem Cell Task Force. So this is the man who oversees the peer review panels that look at all the applications for stem cell research, and these are the folks that approve funding, and they fund cord blood stem cell research. They fund adult stem cell research, and they are funding embryonic stem cell research and providing the cell lines, the NIH-approved cell lines, to the researchers.

And this is what he said. It is an amazing quote: “To me the very most interesting thing is this frontier area of nuclear reprogramming where you take a mature adult cell type and you effectively dedifferentiate it back to a pluripotent state.

He is saying, and this is, I think, the man who should be the most knowledgeable on this level of research throughout the world, is that you do not need embryos. You do not need to destroy embryos. You don’t have to use taxpayer dollars for the destruction of human life. This is the exciting area, nuclear reprogramming, where you can take an adult stem cell and basically get it to behave like an embryonic stem cell.

Might I just say as an aside, while Dr. Battey is very excited about this and I think it is going to bear fruit and there are going to be a lot of Ph.D. theses written using these kinds of cells, I do not think they will ever be useful in any medical treatments. I may be wrong. They may prove to be very useful. And that is because the adult stem cells are proven to be very, very useful now. I mean, there are some four, five, six different clinical trials under way now, as we speak, using adult stem cells used to treat congestive heart failure, one of the most common heart conditions that we see in the United States. Thousands of people in the United States die every year from it. And I seriously question if the embryonic stem cells would ever prove to be any better than the adult stem cell therapies that are currently under way and are being used in research.

I want a little bit more before I close about this issue of fetal farming, and why did I introduce a bill to ban fetal farming? why is that going to be introduced in the Senate. And we may not actually take up my bill, though it is identical to the Senate bill. The Senate may approve the ban on fetal farming that I think, Senator Santorum has introduced, the same bill.

Why do I want to go in this direction? Well, if you look at the scientific literature, it appears that that is the direction some researchers want to go, and that is where they are not doing research involving human embryonic stem cells. They are now implanting human embryos either in an animal or in a human being and then extracting stem cells or tissue from the fetus.

And why am I concerned about this? Well, I am still trying to think this one through. It was published back in 2002. They took a cow embryo. Actually, they took a cow egg and they did cloning. They created a cloned cow. They put that cow cloned into another cow, and then they extracted the cloned cow fetus from the mother cow and they got tissue out of it, and they used the tissue to do a tissue transplant.

Then there was another study, and I think this will be the last poster that I will put up, and this is another cow study where they did the same thing. They were looking to get fetal liver, and they were successful in doing that; and it was published in July of last year, where they are taking either cloned cows that are created through sexual fertilization, and they are putting it in a cow. They are letting it develop for 6 months, and then they are taking tissue out to get stem cells.

That is the direction I feel that some researchers will want to go in, and I think that should not be allowed in humans. I think it is repugnant. It is revolting. So I have introduced legislation to ban doing that in humans. And the legislation that is the Fetal Farming Prohibition Act of 2006, I believe, will pass the Senate. I believe it will pass the House. And, hopefully, the President will be signing it.

Hopefully, he will be signing the alternative research bill. I think we should be putting more money into ways to develop embryonic stem cells without having to kill an embryo, and certainly that would satisfy all of these researchers who want to do this research.

The President has indicated that if the Senate passes the Castle-DeGette bill, H.R. 810, that his intention is to veto it, and I certainly support him in that. I hope he does do that because it is the wrong thing to do morally and ethically. There are millions of American taxpayers who will be seeing their tax dollars used to destroy a human embryo. I am against that. They are against that. We should let the private sector fund that. The private sector will not fund it because it is probably research that is not going to go anywhere. The President should veto it. I believe we can sustain the veto. This is the right thing to do morally. This is the right thing to do ethically. It is also the right thing to do with the taxpayer dollars.

I put the poster up earlier showing all the treatments with adult stem cells and how embryonic stem cells have never been shown to be safe and effective even in an animal model, and why should we be using taxpayer dollars to fund this research when so many people find it repugnant and, as well, it has never been demonstrated to be effective.

So this will be an issue. It will be in the news next week. The Senate will take it up first, then the House. We have already passed H.R. 810. We will pass, hopefully, the ban on fetal farming this week, and then all three bills will go to the President. Hopefully, he will sign the alternatives research bill and the ban on fetal farming; and, hopefully, he will veto the Castle-DeGette bill. Of course, if he does that, the Senate may override the veto. I certainly hope the House sustains his veto. It is the smart thing to do and it is the right thing to do.

So with that I end my discussion on this issue, and I am looking forward to the debate next week and participating in it.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE
By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:
Ms. Slaughter (at the request of Ms. Pelosi) for today.
Mr. Tiahrt (at the request of Mr. Boehner) for today on account of attending a funeral.
Mrs. Jo Ann Davis of Virginia (at the request of Mr. Boehner) for today on account of personal reasons.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED
By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:
(The following Members (at the request of Ms. Woolsey) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)
Ms. Woolsey, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. DeFazio, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. Pallone, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. Emanuel, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. Brown of Ohio, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. George Miller of California, for 5 minutes, today.
Ms. Herseth, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. Owens, for 5 minutes, today.
Ms. Jackson-Lee of Texas, for 5 minutes, today.
Mr. Rahall, for 5 minutes, today.
(The following Members (at the request of Mr. Jones of North Carolina) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)
Mr. Bilirakis, for 5 minutes, July 20.
Mr. Jones of North Carolina, for 5 minutes, July 17, 18, 19, and 20.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED
Concurrent resolutions of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker’s table and, under the rule, referred as follows:
S. Con. Res. 96, Concurrent resolution to commemorate, celebrate, and reaffirm the national motto of the United States on the 50th anniversary of its formal adoption; to the Committee on the Judiciary.
S. Con. Res. 108. Concurrent resolution authorizing the printing of a revised edition of a pocket version of the United States Constitution, and other publications; to the Committee on House Administration.

SENATE ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled joint resolution of the Senate of the following title:

S.J. Res. 40. An act authorizing the printing and binding of a supplement to, and revised edition of, Senate Procedure.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 7 o'clock and 40 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Monday, July 17, 2006, at 12:30 p.m., for morning hour debate.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker’s table and referred as follows:

8539. A letter from the Executive Director, Commodity Futures Trading Commission, transmitting the Commission’s final rule — In the Matter of the New York Mercantile Exchange, Inc. Petition to Extend Interpretation Pursuant to Section 1a(12)(C) of the Commodity Exchange Act — received July 1, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

8537. A letter from the Executive Director, Commodity Futures Trading Commission, transmitting the Commission’s final rule — Foreign Futures and Options Transactions — received July 10, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

8539. A letter from the Administrator, AMS, Department of Agriculture, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Standards for Wax Cherries Grown in Designated Counties in Washington; Decreased Assessment Rate (Docket No. FV06-923-2 IFR) received June 22, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

8540. A letter from the Administrator, AMS, Department of Agriculture, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Amendment to the Peanut Promotion, Research, and Information Order (Docket No. FY-05-701-IFR) received June 22, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

8544. A letter from the Acting Executive Director, Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, transmitting the Corporation’s final rule — Electronic Premium Filing (RIN: 2212-AB82) received July 6, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

8549. A letter from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting the Office’s final rule — Training Reporting Requirements (RIN: 2220-AK46) received June 15, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Reform.

8551. A letter from the Acting Assistant Secretary, Department of the Interior, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Preparation for Sale (WO-270-1820-00-24 1A) (RIN: 1004-AD70) received July 16, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

8552. A letter from the Acting Assistant Secretary, Department of the Interior, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants; Delisting of Agave arizonica (Arizona agave) from the Federal List of Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants (RIN: 1018-AT79) received June 20, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

8553. A letter from the Deputy Secretary, Department of Labor, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Refuge Specific Public Use Regulations for Kodiak National Wildlife Refuge (RIN: 1018-AU08) received June 7, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

8558. A letter from the Administrator, Office of Motor Carriers, Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Bonus Depreciation Extension in Areas Affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma (Announcement 2006-29) received July 10, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8559. A letter from the Director, Office of Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule — Bonus Depreciation Extension in Areas Affected by Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Wilma; Notice of Availability of Final Rule and Proposed Rule (RIN: 2120-AF19) received July 10, 2006, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. POMBO: Committee on Resources. S. 1496. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to provide for cooperative efforts on land inside and outside the units of the National Park System through collaborative efforts on land inside and outside the units of the National Park System, and for other purposes; with an amendment (Rept. 109-558). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. POMBO: Committee on Resources. H.R. 854. A bill to provide for certain lands to be held in trust for the Uto Uto Gwaiit Paiute Tribe with the Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge; to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. POMBO: Committee on Resources. H.R. 5340. A bill to promote Department of Agriculture and Forest Service programs; to the Committee on International Relations.

By Mr. SHIMKUS (for himself, Mr. WYNN, Mrs. BONO, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. RADANOVICH, Mr. MELANCON, Mr. ENCOF, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, Mrs. MALONEY, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. PAUL of Kentucky, Mrs. SMITH of Kansas, Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois, Mr. MCCOTTER, Mr. BLUMENTHAUER, and Mr. BRADLEY of New Hampshire):

H.R. 5785. A bill to establish a unified national hazard alert system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. CALVERT (for himself, Mr. CAMPBELL of California, and Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California):

H.R. 5786. A bill to authorize the Secretary, in cooperation with the City of San Juan Capistrano, California, to participate in the design, planning, and construction of, an advanced recycled water system, and for other purposes; to the Committee on International Relations.

By Mr. BOEHLERT (for himself, Mr. KUENEN of California, Mr. LEACH, Mr. SHAYS, Mr. WELLER, Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. WALSH, Mr. POLKEY, Mr. KING of New York, Mr. MCHUGH, Mr. NAY, Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut, Mr. SWEENEY, and Mr. LATOURIETTE):

H.R. 5787. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 to provide for an increase in the Federal minimum wage, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

By Mr. COOPER:

H.R. 5788. A bill to amend the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 to increase awareness of accrual and long-term budgeting, and to express the sense of Congress that the Presidents’ annual budget submissions should consider accrual and long-term budgeting; to the Committee on the Budget, and in addition to the Committee on Rules, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. FITZPATRICK of Pennsylvania (for himself and Mr. SCOTT of Georgia):

H.R. 5789. A bill to amend title 31, United States Code, to modernize cash management by allowing the use of certain obligations in stead of surety bonds; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Ms. GRANGER (for herself, Mr. WYNN, and Mrs. PRIECE of Ohio):

H.R. 5790. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for demonstration projects to carry out preventive health measures with respect to colorectal cancer; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Ms. GRANGER (for herself, Mr. ENGLE, Mr. KUHL of New York, and Ms. BALDWIN):

H.R. 5791. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for the consolidated coverage of hospice care under part B of the Medicare Program; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce, and in addition to the Committee on Ways and Means, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin (for himself, Mr. PETRI, Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin, and Mr. SENSENBEIN):

H.R. 5792. A bill to designate the Department of Veterans Affairs outpatient clinic in Green Bay, Wisconsin, as the ‘‘Milo C. Huempfner Department of Veterans Affairs Outpatient Clinic’’; to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

By Mr. JINDAL:

H.R. 5793. A bill to require the Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the Secretary of Homeland Security and State governments, to develop detailed operational plans regarding Defense Support to Civil Authorities missions; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. JINDAL:

H.R. 5794. A bill to make property demolition and rebuilding activities eligible for assistance under the flood mitigation program under section 1306 of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968; to the Committee on Financial Services.

By Mrs. LOWEY (for herself, Mr. WAXMAN, Mrs. CAPPS, Mr. RYAN of Ohio, Mr. CROWLEY, Ms. MCCOLLUM of Minnesota, Mrs. MALONEY, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. OWENS, Mr. BALDWIN, Mr. FABR, Mr. NADLER, Mr. SCHAKOWSKY, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. STARK, Ms. SOLIS, and Mr. CON Vers):

H.R. 5795. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to expand access to contraceptive services for women and men under the Medicaid Program, help low income women and couples prevent unintended pregnancies and reduce abortion, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California:

H.R. 5796. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to exclude and defer from the proposed pool at the Folsom South Hydroelectric Project the reimbursable capital costs of the Folsom south Hydroelectric Project; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. MCCOTTER (for himself, Mr. PAYNE of Michigan, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, Mr. RYAN of Arizona, and Mr. CONVERS):

H.R. 5797. A bill to amend the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, to prohibit a person from acting as an agent of certain terrorist entities; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MERCER:

H.R. 5798. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to modify the program... for the sanctuary system for surplus chimpanzees by terminating the authority for the removal of chimpanzees from the system for research purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. MILLER of Florida (for himself and Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida).

H.R. 5791. A bill to provide for the Secretary of Agriculture to release the reverence of the United States on certain land in the State of Florida if encroachments, trespassing and encroachments on that land, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

H.R. 5800. A bill to amend the District of Columbia Home Rule Act to establish the Office of the District Attorney for the District of Columbia for a local independent District Attorney, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mr. PASCRELL (for himself, Mr. HOLT, Mr. SCHWARZ of Michigan, Mr. GUTIERREZ, Mr. ROTHMAN, Mr. GARDNER of New Jersey, and Ms. DELAUBO):

H.R. 5801. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to direct the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to correct and prevent variances in disability compensation payments made by the Department of Veterans Affairs; to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

By Mr. PEARCE:

H.R. 5802. A bill to amend the National Park Service Concessions Management Improvement Act of 1996, to extend to additional small businesses the preferential right to renew a concessions contract entered into under such Act, to facilitate the renewal of a contract, to authorize and extend under such Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. RAMSTAD (for himself, Mr. STARK, Mr. KENNEDY of Minnesota, Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island, Mrs. MYRICK, Mr. CAPUANO, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. WALSH, Mr. GORDON, Mr. BONO, Mr. HINCHRY, Mr. RYUN of Kansas, Mr. LANDSEY, Mr. GRELACH, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. SQUIRES, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MERRIT, Ms. SHAKOSS, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Mr. PRICE of North Carolina, Mr. MOORE of Kansas, Mr. EMANUEL, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, and Mr. SHAYS):

H.R. 5804. To amend the Federal Health Service Act to establish a State family support grant program to end the practice of parents giving legal custody of their seriously emotionally disturbed children to State agencies for the purpose of obtaining mental health services for those children; to the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

By Mr. REHBERG:

H.R. 5804. A bill to extend the Federal relationship to the Little Shell Tribe of Chippewa Indians of Montana as a distinct federally recognized Indian tribe, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. ROYCE (for himself, Mr. SHEAR, Mr. KENNEDY of California, Mr. McCUTTER, Mr. CARDOZA, Mr. WATSON, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Ms. McCOLLUM of Minnesota, Mr. ISSA, Mrs. NAPOLITANO, Mr. BORDEAUX, Mr. DELAUBO, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Ms. SLAUGHTER, Mrs. LOWRY, Ms. JACKSON-LIE of Texas, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. KILPATRICK of Michigan, Mr. CORBIN of Florida, Ms. NORTON, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, Ms. LIE of New Jersey, Mr. GRIJALVA, Ms. BORDALLO, Mr. WATSON, and Ms. SAKOWSKY):

DISCHARGE PETITIONS

The following Members added their names to the following discharge petitions:

Petition 11 by Mr. BARROW on House Resolution 614: Christopher Shays
The Senate met at 9 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Richard G. Lugar, a Senator from the State of Indiana.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Our guest Chaplain, Rev. Laurel Arthur Burton, Gobin Memorial United Methodist Church, Greencastle, IN, will lead the Senate in prayer.

The guest chaplain offered the following prayer:

Let us pray:

O Thou great Creator, God of all the nations:

We bow before You knowing that these gathered here today have the power to choose right over wrong, good over evil. Bless each one of them that they might choose according to Your will.

Open their ears so that they may truly listen to one another.

Open their eyes so that they may truly see the path of righteousness.

Open their mouths that they may speak truly with the deepest integrity.

And open their hearts and minds that they may discern the way that leads to the common good.

O Spirit of power, grant that the only ambition in this Chamber may be the desire to achieve peace and prosperity for all Americans. Grant that the only competition may be the struggle for justice. O Thou great Creator, God of all the nations, lead this great Nation as a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, until the day comes when all nations shall dwell together in peace and concord. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable Richard G. Lugar led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

appointed the Honorable Richard G. Lugar, a Senator from the State of Indiana, to per- form the duties of the Chair.

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule 1, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Richard G. Lugar, a Senator from the State of Indiana, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Ted Stevens, President pro tempore.

Mr. LUGAR thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate from the State of Indiana is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, speaking for the leader, I announce to the Senate that this morning, the first 30 minutes will be a period for the trans- action of morning business, which has been divided between the two sides. After morning business, we will return to the Homeland Security appropriations bill. The two managers have a tentative lineup of amendments this morning and into the afternoon. It is the leader’s understanding they are working toward a vote this morning in relation to one of those amendments, and we will alert everyone when that amendment is locked in. Senators should be on notice that a vote could occur between 10 and 10:30 this morning. We have said we will finish this bill today, and that could translate into a late night, if needed, in order to pass this important Homeland Security appropriations bill. The leader hopes we can finish this earlier, and if Senators will communicate with managers earlier today regarding amendments, then it is his feeling we should be able to finish this bill at a reasonable time today.

In any event, it is the leader’s intention to stay in today, tonight, or to-morrow—whatever it takes—to con- clude this important bill this week.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tem- pore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business for up to 30 minutes, with the first half of the time under the control of the Democratic leader or his des- ignee and the second half of the time under the control of the majority leader or his designee.

The Senator from North Dakota.

ENERGY

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I was in a town called Zeeland, ND, because we have a serious drought occurring in ranching country. We had ranchers and farmers—this is a town of about 120 people and 170 ranchers and farmers showed up very concerned about how they are going to feed their cattle.
We talked a lot about the drought and the devastation for ranchers and farmers when it doesn’t rain and how they take care of their cattle herd and what might happen to them.

One of the issues raised in that meeting repeatedly was—in addition to the lack of rain—if you are running a farm or ranch, you are a heavy user of energy. What has happened to the price of energy, particularly the price of fuel, has been devastating to those farmers and ranchers.

Our State university pointed out that the average farm and ranch in North Dakota is confronted with about $18,000 a year in higher costs because of what has happened to the price of fuel.

This morning I woke up and listened to the news, just as I did yesterday, and found that the price of oil is over $75 a barrel and continuing to go up. If we take a look at the major integrated oil companies in this country, we will discover substantial increases in profits—this is 2005 over 2004, last year’s numbers: 43-percent increase, 37-percent increase, 31-percent increase in profits.

The Congressional Research Service just did an evaluation for one of our colleagues which says that cash reserves for the major integrated oil companies have grown from over $9 billion in 1999 to nearly $58 billion now. Let me say that again. Cash reserves of the major integrated oil companies now stand at over $58 billion.

It made me think about a story that was in BusinessWeek 2 years ago, “Why Isn’t Big Oil Drilling More?”

Rather than developing new fields, oil giants have preferred to buy rivals, “drilling for oil on Wall Street.” While that makes financial sense, it is no substitute for new oil.

Oil has been over $20 a barrel continuously since 1999. Far from raising money to pursue opportunities, oil companies are paying down debt, buying back shares and hoarding cash.

That was 2 years ago. It is worse now.

Last fall, we offered a windfall profits rebate that would have collected from those companies that were not using their revenues to expand their search for additional oil. For those that were buying back stock or drilling for oil on Wall Street, they would pay a fee, the total proceeds of which would be rebated to consumers. Those who were building additional refineries or investing back into the ground to search for oil would not pay the fee; they would be exempt.

The oil companies were very upset by that proposal, but the fact is, they would decide whether they would pay it. None of it would come to the government. It would all be rebated to consumers who decide whether they pay it based on their decisions.

Are they going to buy back stock with their profits? Are they going to hoard cash, drill for oil on Wall Street, or are they going to use those profits to expand the search for energy?

I believe given what is happening, as we know, there is no free market in oil. I know there is a lot of discussion on the floor of the Senate about free market. We have oil ministers from the OPEC countries sitting around a table behind a closed door talking about how much they are going to produce and what price they aspire to have. We have big oil companies married up through blockbuster mergers, and they have two names—ExxonMobile, PhillipsConoco; they have more raw muscle in the marketplace—and, third, the futures market has become an orgy of speculation, no question about that.

With these three elements, there is no free market in oil. The price of oil is now at $75 a barrel. Almost all consumers in this country—yes, those who drive up to the gas pumps and pay $50, $60 and more to fill their tanks, and especially farmers and ranchers—are struggling to find out: How do I buy fuel for spring planting? How do I buy fuel for the harvest? How do I put hay for the cattle? How do I do all of that? Those are the ones who bear all the pain, and explain the major integrated oil companies are waltzing to the bank with a treasury that is full of money coming from consumers.

This does not work. In the longer term, aside from the question of how dependent we are on offshore oil, it seems to me Congress has to decide that it is going to intervene if we are going to $58 billion in cash reserves created by the major integrated companies are really not working. Those cash reserves are not expanding the supply of energy, they are not expanding the supply of oil, and therefore reducing prices. They are being used—as I said, in BusinessWeek there was one example of drilling for oil on Wall Street or buying back stock. That is not a way to bring prices down and provide some relief to consumers.

Last fall, Senator DODD and I offered a proposal that would have provided a rebate to consumers from those companies as a result of those companies not using those profits to reinvest in expanding the search for energy. We came up very short in the vote. It is our intention to offer that proposal once again. At $75 a barrel for oil, with increases particularly for farmers and ranchers in an agricultural State, it is reasonable to ask: What is Congress doing? Is it just content to observe, just watching? What is Congress doing?

So if nothing intervenes in the coming days, Senator DODD and I intend to offer, once again, that proposal. Let me underscore that the point of that proposal is this: That proposal will be the most significant incentive to expand production and expand the search for additional production that we could have. This is not punitive. It is to say: Either you are using it to expand the production of energy supplies and bring down prices or you are going to have to rebate some of it back to the consumers.

In 2004, the oil industry had its highest profits in its history. The average price for a barrel of oil was $40. Now it is $75. Those major integrated companies haven’t done anything to increase expenses or any other issues; they are just collecting that additional revenue. I want the oil industry to find additional oil and to produce in areas that are available to them. The best way, the most significant incentive I can think of is to say to them: If you are thinking about what to do with that cash reserve of $58 billion and deciding between buying back your stock or trying to do additional mergers and acquiring oil through mergers rather than drilling, then you would be a lot smarter to find a way to expand production by investing because that means you will not be impacted at all by the proposal we would offer.

This proposal is about expanding investment in exploration and thereby expanding the supply of energy and bringing down the price of energy. So that is what Senator DODD and I will, once again, attempt to do.

I hope that in the coming days we will begin to see some lessening of the burden of these energy prices on the American consumer, farmers and ranchers and others. In the meantime, I don’t think we ought to take a look at a $58 billion cash reserve by the major integrated companies, most of them—three of them—nearly 90 percent of them are three companies—and say, that is OK, it doesn’t matter to us, while everybody else is feeling the pain and bearing the burden of these dramatically increasing energy prices.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I believe we are in morning business.

Mr. DURBIN. The Senate is in morning business, with a quorum call.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The minority still has 6 minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I believe my colleague, Senator DODD, is on his way to the Chamber, but let me ask unanimous consent that Senator BROWNBACK proceed, with the understanding that we would reclaim our time on this side when Senator DODD arrives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Democratic time is reserved, and the Senator is recognized under the previous order.

Mr. BROWNBACK. I thank my colleague from North Dakota for that as well.

NORTH KOREA

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise to talk about the situation in July 13, 2006

S7453

North Korea and about the dire situation of the people of North Korea and the human rights abuses that are taking place. I think most of my colleagues know about the missile testing that has been occurring in North Korea, about the difficulty in getting negotiators to come to North Korea or Kim Jong Il, the leader of North Korea, has been a weapon of mass destruction against his own people, killing 1.5 million of his own people in prison camps—nearly 10 percent of their entire population—over the past 15 years. In particular, I draw to the attention of my colleagues an article that is in today’s Asia Times Online because I think this actually summarizes the overall situation pretty well.

North Korea and South Korea have been talking quite a bit, and the South Koreans have actually sided with the Chinese and the Russians on a weaker U.N. Security Council resolution. The North Koreans just walked out of ministerial talks with the South Koreans, saying that they want to pursue a missile weapons system—the North Koreans do—for the protection of the entire Korean peninsula, including South Korea, which is absurd. This will be used against the South Koreans. At the same time they want to pursue missiles, nuclear technology, the North Koreans are demanding from South Korea half a million tons of rice and several hundred thousand tons of fertilizer to help feed the starving North Korean people at a time when the Government is investing heavily—millions and billions of dollars, perhaps—in missiles and nuclear weapons which they can then sell to other countries, such as to the Iranians, where the missile technology is based on the North Korean missile technology system. And then they have the gall at the same time to demand food out of South Korea to feed their starving people in North Korea and fertilizer to be able to grow their crops.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have this article printed in the RECORD at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, this is just amazing gall, that they would do something like that, and it also highlights the situation and what is taking place.

I hope North Korea knows by now that their behavior has consequences. The Security Council is considering a resolution. I hope we are able to get the tougher one that the Japanese are pursuing. The one from China and Russia clearly does not go far enough. We should work with our allies to attempt to defend against the North Korean threat.

Our missile defense programs now are more important than ever. Thankfully—thankfully—we have put a missile defense program in place that is not fully operational but should help us against these rogue regimes such as North Korea and Iran which are far less predictable, and predictable probably use that term—what the former Soviet Union was, even though the Soviet Union had a bigger threat capacity.

What the President of Iran will do and what Kim Jong Il will do is hard to predict. These are very erratic leaders and ones who don’t respond well, if at all, to a mutual destruction type of threat that we used against the Soviet Union. We need the missile defense system.

The basic problem is the North Korean regime itself. The regime has turned North Korea into a failed state. I had hoped to bring over to the Senate floor this morning a picture that is just simply amazing gall, that they would do something like that, and it highlights the nature of the failed state. What we have the Korean peninsula divided into two countries—South Korea, the 12th largest economy in the world, democratic and free, growing, robust; and North Korea, having killed 1.5 percent of its people in prison camps. The lights in North Korea, it shows darkness in North Korea, which highlights the nature of the failed state. This is just amazing gall, that we have the Korean peninsula divided into two countries—South Korea, the 12th largest economy in the world, democratic and free, growing, robust; and North Korea, the 12th largest economy in the world, democratic and free, growing, robust; and North Korea, having killed 1.5 percent of its people in prison camps. The lights in North Korea, it shows darkness in North Korea, which highlights the nature of the failed state. This is just amazing gall, that we have the Korean peninsula divided into two countries—South Korea, the 12th largest economy in the world, democratic and free, growing, robust; and North Korea, having killed 1.5 percent of its people in prison camps. The lights in North Korea, it shows darkness in North Korea, which highlights the nature of the failed state.

North Korea is a failed state. The North Korean regime engages in illegal activities, including counterfeiting American money as well as producing missile systems and expanding its WMD programs. It has a humanitarian crisis. I noted earlier that an estimated 1.5 million prisoners have been killed in North Korea’s prison camps. The gulag remains. Approximately 200,000 are currently in prison—political prisoners in North Korea.

The assistance China and South Korea provide to North Korea makes them complicit in North Korea’s missile development program. The assistance keeps their economy on life support, and thanks to North Korea’s lack of transparency, even humanitarian aid is often diverted from the North Korean people for military use. North Korea’s chronic human rights abuses are often lost amidst our discussion of its nuclear and missile programs. We should set a longer term goal to bring to light the humanitarian abuses that are taking place. We need a Helsinki-type of discussion on human rights. We need not just discuss missile technology or nuclear technology; we need to discuss the humanitarian crisis that is in North Korea.

I also believe we need to discuss the elephant that is in the room that no one talks about. North Korea is a failed state. Hundreds of thousands have walked out of North Korea into China. Some are now finding a way into the United States as refugees. They tell horrific stories of what is taking place.

The natural state of the Korean peninsula is one country, whole and free. That is the long-term goal for the natural state of the Korean peninsula—one country, whole and free. We should set that as a long-term objective—the spread of democracy throughout the Korean peninsula.

I urge the Bush administration to fully fund the program authorized by the North Korean Human Rights Act of 2004, and I urge my colleagues to fund those programs as well in the appropriations process. We should be prepared to accept those North Koreans who voted with their feet and escaped the regime into this country and others as well.

We had our first group, a small group of six North Korean refugees, and four were women. The women said that the refugees that make it out of North Korea into China, 100 percent are trafficked into some form of sexual bondage or sexual slavery. They get out of North Korea into China—that is relatively simple—and then they are captured, almost hunted like animals in China. When they are captured, the people who catch them say: Look, you are going to do what I say or I am turning you in to the Chinese authorities; they will repatriate you to North Korea, and you will end up in the gulag. So they do what they say, and they are sold. They are caught like wild animals and sold to people in some form of sexual bondage and sexual slavery in that portion of China.

We should push China aggressively to stop repatriating North Korean refugees. They are going back into the gulag. They are going back into the death camps. The Chinese should be forced not to do that. It is called refoulement. It is against the U.N. agreements on human rights that they entered into. They should be forced not to do that, not to send them back. We should begin discussions with China and South Korea on what the Korean peninsula should look like in the future—one country, full and free.

The bottom line is that our problem isn’t just the missile or nuclear capacity of North Korea, it is the North Korean regime itself. We must address the root problem if we are ever to find a solution.

I might remind my colleagues as well that it is not just the missile tests, it is not just the nuclear technology in North Korea, because then they look to sell it, as they have, and spread it to Iran, which multiplies our sets of problems. We must look also at what happens to the North Korean people, and much of our focus must be placed on China. China is the one that is primarily keeping North Korea on life support systems now. They are funding the program. The Chinese are allowing refugees, by allowing North Koreans to come out and pass freely through there to third countries, would really help a great deal in this crisis, and China bears much of the responsibility.

Mr. President, I thank my colleagues for the chance to address the body. We are looking at putting forward a resolution calling on any future dialog with North Korea to include a human rights component. Along with the discussion of missile technology and nuclear technology, it desperately needs a human rights component, as we did in negotiations with the former Soviet Union on missiles and nuclear weapons. We also include a Helsinki-style human rights component. This discussion needs a human rights component as well.

Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Connecticut for allowing me to step in front of him to speak, and I yield the floor.

NORTH KOREANS LET THEIR FEET DO THE TALKING

(By Donald Kirk)

SEOUL.—The rocket over the North Korean missile shots has exploded into a war of words that's endangering South Korea's efforts to shrug off the crisis as a minor obstacle on the path to North-South reconciliation.

South Korea appears to have awakened to the depth of the difficulties with the North in a showdown of ministerial-level talks this week in the port city of Pusan. Far from finding the basis for one of those face-saving statements that often emerge from North-South talks, the two sides agreed to go off the dialogue on Thursday a day earlier than expected after finding no ground for agreement.

The sides were absurdly far apart, according to reports from the closed-door sessions, with North Korea insisting the missiles were needed for the defense of all Korea, North and South, not just North Korea.

Finally, the North Koreans walked out on Thursday after South Korea's Unification Minister Lee Jeong-seok flatly rejected their claim that the South's Songun or military-first policy covered both Koreas equally. The talks were originally to have gone on until Friday.

Lee, in one-time leftist activist who has sought mightily to paper over North-South differences, got nowhere in efforts at persuading North Korea to return to six-party talks on its nuclear weapons.

At the same time, he rejected North Korean demands for half a million tons of rice and several hundred thousand tons of fertilizer to help feed starving North Koreans at a time when the government is investing heavily in missiles and nuclear weapons.

The talks is continuous since they were "ministerial level". The North Korean delegation was led by Kwong Ho-ung, chief cabinet councilor. The North Koreans, before leaving, indicated that Washington had no diplomatic partners in the South "due to the South Korean side's unreasonable" position. The statement said they had not come to Pusan to discuss military matters or six-party talks.

South Korean leaders, caught between conflicting demands from the United States, North Korea, China and Japan as well as their vituperative critics and foes on their own home front, remain determined to head off U.S. and Japanese attempts to bring about a North Korean Security Council on sanctions against North Korea.

South Korean officials firmly favor a resolution that the visit by Choe and Kim would "strongly deplore" the missile tests and calls on all nations to "exercise vigilance in preventing supply of items, goods and technologies" for North Korean missiles. The resolution also asks them "not to procure missiles or missile-related items" from North Korea.

The fear in the South is that a debate on a much tougher Japanese resolution, banning North Korea from deploying or testing missiles, importing or exporting missiles or weapons of mass destruction, would greatly exacerbate tensions.

South Korean strategists believe such a strong resolution would arm Japan with the pretext for following through on threats to attack North Korean missile sites. In fact, South Korea appears to have far greater alarm to Japan's floating this idea than to the actual missile tests, while the rift between Japan and South Korea has turned into what appears to be an intractable chasm.

A spokesman for South Korea's President Roh Moo-hyun blasted Japan for what he called a "rash and thoughtless" threat. It was, he said, "the usual Japanese cabinet ministers to talk about the possibility of a preemptive strike and the validity of the use of force against the peninsula."

A U.S. official, Christopher Hill, privately warned Japan against a preemptive strike, reminding the Japanese that open discussion of that possibility only invited an adverse response from South Korea as well as China.

Such talk, they note, also plays into North Korea's propaganda machine, which often emits noises about U.S. plans for a "preemptive strike," citing that danger as a rationale for the need for nuclear weapons.

The U.S., however, sides with Japan in the United Nations, and no U.S. official adopts a harder line than the U.S. ambassador to the U.N., John Bolton, a tough-talker from his days in the Pentagon and National Security Council on arms control during President George W. Bush's first term.

Bolton and Japan's U.N. Ambassador Kenzo Oshima have engaged in the diplomatic nicety of calling the Chinese and Russian draft "a step in the right direction." South Korean officials believe, however, they may hold off on supporting it, calling instead for a debate that gives both of them a forum for lambasting North Korea.

Oshima found "very serious gaps" in the Chinese and Russian resolution submitted to a vote despite the consensus of Chinese and Russian veto-wielders. Bolton and Japan are prepared to go to the Security Council on arms control during President George W. Bush's first term.

The standoff over how to deal with North Korea comes at a critical time in relations between the U.S. and South Korea. A U.S. team has just arrived in Seoul for talks about creating an "unified, integrated wartime command" for South Korean forces rather than a unified command led by a U.S. general.

The creation of such a command marks a major—and controversial—departure from the system dating from the Korean War placing all forces under a single American general in the field.

The U.S. is also consolidating its bases in South Korea, moving them south of Seoul in the face of widespread opposition by activists and farmers resentful of the loss of their land while the U.S. scales down its forces, now totaling 29,500 troops, down from 37,000 three years ago.

Activists and farmers also oppose efforts by the U.S. and South Korea to come up with a free trade agreement (FTA). More than 20,000 people assembled in central Seoul on Wednesday, charging the agreement would deprive farmers and factory workers of their livelihoods.

While the North Koreans walked out of the talks in Pusan, U.S. negotiators boycotted a session of the FTA talks in Seoul on pharmaceuticals. The U.S. claims a plan for South Korea to reimburse the purchase of drugs made in South Korea makes drug imports here virtually impossible.

It was a bad day all around for U.S. negotiators. Hill, in Beijing, said he was finally taking off for Washington after getting nowhere in efforts at persuading China to bring North Korea back to the table. He tried, however, to see the impasse from China's viewpoint.

"China has done so much for that country," he said, "and that country seems in total neglect of all Chinese decency and then giving nothing back."

The Chinese, he said, "are as baffled as we are."

The U.S. and China, however, appeared to be in complete disagreement on U.S. Treasury Department restrictions on firms doing business with North Korea. Hill had nothing to say in response to the official Chinese hope, expressed by a spokesman, that the U.S. would "make a concession regarding the sanctions issue and take steps that will help restore the six-party talks." The U.S. denies its imposing "sanctions" and says the restrictions are to counter North Korean counterfeiting. Hill has repeatedly dismissed the topic as a matter for the "nuclear conundrum," not the Treasury Department, while North Korea has made the issue the reason for not returning to talks on its nukes.

ENERGY PRICES

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, let me, first of all, say to my colleague from North Dakota, Senator DORGAN, the growing problem we are all hearing about from our constituents all across this country, and that is the ever-rising cost of gasoline and petroleum-related products. There has been a staggering increase in the price of oil and gasoline which is having a huge impact on working families in this country. Their weekly earnings have risen less than one-half of 1 percent over the last 5 years, yet the cost of gasoline has more than doubled over that same period of time.

These charts and graphs give an indication of what has happened to the price. Beginning in 2000, it was $1.47. Just last week, in my hometown in Connecticut, the price ranged from $3.15 per gallon to $3.35 per gallon, depending upon the quality of fuel you were buying, and the national average is creeping closer to $3.00 per gallon. We have seen the price of oil soar from just over $30 per barrel in 2001 to an ex- cessive $75 per barrel this week.
Most of us are aware, with the existing product from previously dug wells around the world, large profits can be made at $30 and $40 per barrel. So when you start talking about $75 per barrel, you get some indication of the level of profit made by some of these companies.

I mentioned what it is like for people out there who are struggling to make ends meet and hold their families together. Weekly earnings have risen only .4 percent since 2001, adjusted for inflation. When you start talking about people on fixed incomes or people earning the minimum wage, the problem becomes more pronounced. We have going 9 years now with no increase whatsoever in the federal minimum wage. We tried here only a few weeks ago, prior to the Fourth of July recess, for a $2.10 per hour increase in the minimum wage over the next several years starting from $5.15 per hour to $7.25 per hour. That is a very modest increase in that minimum wage, but it would make a huge difference for people out there who are trying to make ends meet.

Again, we have a limited time to talk about this, but Senator DORGAN and I are once again going to ask our colleagues to consider the idea of a rebate going back to people who are trying to make ends meet. We ask, when you have profits in excess of $40 per barrel, to either invest those profits back into the development of new product or new technologies or rebate part of those profits back to consumers.

I know the PresidentCarees deeply about this issue and has lectured us on numerous occasions about the importance of supply. I don’t fault the industry for trying to make a profit. What I would like to know is, are the companies investing in production, alternative sources of energy, and new technology? I would like to know they are going to do something, in addition to making a profit, that will actually increase our domestic supply. We know we need to find the region of the world on which we depend tremendously for our supplies is literally aflame, a tinderbox that is exploding while we are gathered here. Yet we sit around here almost pretending that nothing is wrong as we continue to watch oil and gasoline prices skyrocket. Yet we sit around here almost pretending that nothing is wrong as we continue to increase our domestic supply.

So they recognize themselves that their profits are occurring because of these skyrocketing prices. Why not put some of those resources into developing alternatives, or doing a better job to see that we become less dependent on the Venezuelas and the Middle East for our supplies? And if not, why not rebate some of the profits back to people who are struggling to make ends meet?

Senator DORGAN and I are asking the leaders to provide us a limited amount of time to debate oil and gasoline prices and other energy issues. Nothing has captured the attention of our public as has this issue. I don’t know why can’t find some time to talk about ideas to provide relief to people we represent. We spent more time in the last couple of weeks talking about gay marriage and flag burning. How about gasoline prices?

How about saying to the American public: Listen to the ideas we have to reduce the pressure you are feeling economically. That would be a welcome surprise to most Americans, to hear us talk about something they deeply care about. At the appropriate time, the Senator from North Dakota and I will be offering some language, once again asking our colleagues to join us in a bipartisan way to see if we can’t encourage the industry to do something more than just brag about its profits.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is 4 minutes 12 seconds on Republican side. Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. We yield back the remainder of time in morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Chair.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2007

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will examine consideration of H.R. 5441, which the clerk will read as follows:

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5441) making appropriations for the Department of Homeland Security for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2007, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Feinstein amendment No. 4556, to amend section 27 of title 18, United States Code, to prohibit the unauthorized construction, financing, or, with reckless disregard, permitting the construction or use on one’s land, of a tunnel or submarine passageway between the United States and another country and to direct the United States Sentencing Commission to modify the sentencing guidelines to account for such prohibition.

Thune/Talent amendment No. 4610, to establish a program to provide grants collected from violations of the corporate average fuel economy program to expand infrastructure necessary to increase the availability of alternative fuel.

Vitter amendment No. 4615, to prohibit the confiscation of a firearm during an emergency or major disaster if the possession of such firearm is not prohibited under Federal or State law.

Menendez modified amendment No. 4634, to provide that appropriations under this Act may not be used for the purpose of furnishing certain grants, unless all such grants meet certain conditions for allocation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is as follows:

Mr. GREGG. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MURkowski). Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, we are now back on the Homeland Security appropriations bill. My hope is, although this is not formalized as a presidential consensus yet—but the understanding I have with the Senator from Washington was that the Senator from Pennsylvania would speak for about 15 minutes and then the opposition, if they wish to speak, would speak for 15 minutes. Then the Senator from Arizona, Senator KYL, would speak for about 10 minutes on his amendment. Then there will be 10 minutes in opposition. Then we will go to a vote on those two amendments. Either—if they are merged, one vote; if they are not merged, two votes. Then we will back go to the Menendez amendment, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

I understand Senator COLLINS wishes to speak on that, and Senator LEAHY wishes to speak. I assure what the time understanding is before we can get to a vote on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, but my hope would be we could go to a vote fairly promptly on that amendment after completing the votes on the amendments of Senator KYL and Senator SANTORUM.

I see the Senator from Washington is here. Is that her understanding?

Mrs. MURRAY. Madam President, I would let my colleagues know we have several Members who want to come to the floor to speak. We are checking with several of the relevant committee. I am hoping over the course of the next hour or so we can figure out the timing on the votes the chairmen request.

Mr. GREGG. At this time, I think the Senator from Pennsylvania is ready to go and we will get started.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 4575

Mr. SANTORUM. Madam President, I call up amendment No. 4575 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is as follows:

Mr. SANTORUM. I ask unanimous consent agreement on the amendment?

Either to a vote on those two amendments. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SANTORUM) for himself and Mr. KYL, proposes amendment numbered 4575.

Mr. SANTORUM. The amendment is as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase the number of border patrol agents, to 2,500 agents, and offset by increasing the availability of reverse mortgage for seniors)

On page 70, line 3, strike “$3,285,874,000; of which” and insert “$459,135,000; of which $459,863,000 shall be for 1,500 additional Border Patrol Agents and the necessary operational and maintenance, included personnel, equipment, facilities, training equipment, relocation costs, and training for those agents; of which”.

DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2007
On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

"Sect. 540 (a) Section 255 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z-20) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by striking the first sentence; and

(b) by striking ‘‘established under section 203(b)(2)’’ and inserting ‘‘established by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development under section 305(a)(2) of the Home Loan Mortgage Corporation Act for a 1-family residence’’; and

(b) in subsection (i)(1)(C), by striking ‘‘limitations’’ and inserting ‘‘limitation’’.

The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall not approve any additional requirements that may be necessary to immediately carry out the provisions of this section. The notice shall take effect upon issuance.

Mr. SANTORUM. Madam President, let me say, on behalf of myself and Senator KYL, we are working on two amendments that deal with the issue of border security. The first I am offering is an amendment to add 500 additional border guards to the underlying bill. The President, in his budget request, suggested we increase the number of border guards to be trained this year to 2,500. One thousand of those were provided in the bill, but this would add an additional 500. The other 1,000 was provided in the emergency supplemental, which was passed earlier this year, which would bring us a total of 1,000, plus 1,000 in this bill, plus 500, to 2,500.

The reason the subcommittee and the committee did not provide the additional 500 the President requested was because the President funded those additional 500 with a fee on airline flights. That was something the committee did not include in their mark and, as a result, didn’t have the resources the President’s budget request had to be able to fund these additional 500 guards.

We have been working with Chairman GREGG and the ranking member to try to come up with an offset, understand this is incredibly tight. There are a lot of priorities in the Department of Homeland Security. Trying to find offsets and taking money away from other vital areas of homeland security was a very difficult thing to do. As a result, I worked with the committee and came up with an offset that was used in the House of Representatives on another appropriations bill over there. It is an offset with which I am very familiar because it is a piece of legislation I actually introduced earlier this year having to do with reverse mortgages.

Reverse mortgages are a very important tool that is used by some seniors in our society who have a lot of equity in their home but do not have a lot of income. They don’t have a substantial stream of income to be able to support themselves in their retirement, so they have all this equity locked up and no ability to access that equity.

The reverse mortgage program, sponsored and discussed by the Department of Housing and Urban Development—overseen by them—is a way to unlock that equity to be able to get income into the hands of our senior population. It is a pilot program now and has a cap of 250,000 mortgages. What this amendment does is removes the cap, adjusts the amount of money that will be allowed—the size of these reverse mortgages—based on the geographic area, to reflect the discrepancy in pricing of houses in those different geographic areas of our country.

As a result, it will, because of these transactions, allow us to come to the Federal Government, more revenue to the Federal Government. It is about $190 million. This would pay for the amendment I am offering to increase the number of border guards.

In addition, there would be some additional money left over, which Senator KYL, in a subsequent amendment, will address, to deal with the detention facilities and use up the remaining part of that money and some additional money in an offset that he has.

It is a way to try to help the subcommittee come up with additional resources which I am sure the chairman would love to do. The chairman has been excellent in the past several years, since the events of 9/11, in fully funding the requests from the Department of Homeland Security. The number of border guards trained and the number of border guards, period, in this country since the events of 9/11.

We have seen a substantial increase. I commend the chairman for the priority he has put to that. But I understood the difficulties he had in trying to come up with the money to add the additional 500 the Department said they could train this year and that they need. This is a way to provide the additional resources, to do so without emergency designation, to do so without busting the budget, to do so with a legitimate offset that actually raises the money that could counter the expense in providing for the additional border guards.

Obviously, this is an important issue. There is no issue I heard about more, over the past several months in particular as I traveled around the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, as the need for Border Patrol agents. We can get a comprehensive immigration bill passed in the Senate which was an attempt to increase the number of border guards, increase detention facilities, build new fences, improve our points of entry at our southern border. That is wonderful, if we can get a comprehensive immigration bill passed. If we get a piece of that immigration bill passed that deals with the border, I think that is a positive step in the right direction.

That doesn’t mean we can do things right now in the normal process to improve the situation at the border. We have done that in prior appropriations bills as a result of the work of the chairman and ranking member, and we should continue to do so, whether we get an immigration reform bill ultimately passed this session of Congress.

This is the opportunity for Congress to actually do something concrete and produce this year, to enhance our border security—to increase the number of border guards up to the President’s request and up to what the Department of Homeland Security says they can use this year and train this year. I am hopeful we will secure support for this amendment, if it is fully offset. It is something we have cleared through the Ways and Means Committee because this does raise revenue. When Chairman THOMAS was on the Senate floor, I asked about the potential blue slip problem. We have gotten word we will clear that hurdle, if necessary.

I obviously checked with Chairman BOND and the housing subcommittee. They have been very helpful in that regard. We have run all the traps. There is a solid offset, and provides for a definite need in a very critical area of our national security; that is, our border presence.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absent of quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4622

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the Santorum amendment be laid aside for the purposes of me laying down an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, my amendment, similar to that laid down by Senator SANTORUM in that the offset comes from the same housing loan program. It is an effort to reach the President’s full goal rather than what the appropriations bill was able to accommodate, but in this situation to reach that goal for detention spaces rather than additional Border Patrol.

If you combine the two amendments, what we will have accomplished is to achieve the funding of the full number of beds. The President wanted and the Senate wanted added and the number of detention spaces the President wanted to add. That is the simple explanation. There simply was not quite sufficient money available to the Appropriations Committees to achieve 100 percent of both of those goals. Those goals were stated in the President’s budget with respect to detention spaces.

I will describe the detention space problem in a moment, but the President’s fiscal year 2007 budget request requires an additional 6,700 beds. The legislation before the Senate funds an additional 1,000. The supplemental appropriations bill we passed earlier funded an additional 4,000. Adding those two together, you have 5,000 new beds. Subtract that from the 6,700 the President said he needed when he submitted the budget and we have an additional 1,700 beds we need to acquire. This legislation appropriates the funds for the additional 1,700 beds and uses the offset Senator SANTORUM will trigger in his bill, as well.

Why is it important to add these detention spaces? The primary reason is to end, once and for all, this program of catch and release. When we apprehend an illegal immigrant from a country other than Mexico, you cannot return that person to Mexico. The person is not a citizen of Mexico. We have to return that person to their country of origin. This is a very difficult thing to do.

First of all, some of the countries will not take their people back. Others will only do so after a great deal of time and effort are expended in paperwork to take them back. There are something like 40,000 Chinese nationals who need to go back to China but who are not being sent back to China.

What do those people in the meantime? The program in the past has been, as I said, catch and then release them because there is no place to detain them pending their removal to their country of origin.

The Secretary of Homeland Security would like to have enough detention space available that the people who need to be detained can be detained. They can be put on the airplane and sent back to the country of origin later. The Secretary would like to expedite this removal so that in all cases it is done within a couple of weeks, if possible. Today, the average is about 3 weeks.

The problem is, many people are apprehended and simply told to return in 3 weeks, 90 days, or whatever the period might be. Of course, most of them do not come back to be removed to their country of origin. There are 160,000 who release part of it. As a result, we have a large population of illegal immigrants in this country from countries other than Mexico who have been apprehended, have been asked to come back, so they can be sent back to their country of origin but who never come back to be sent back. Without the detention spaces, that is not going to stop. Once those detention spaces are available, the Secretary believes these illegal immigrants will continue coming because the expense of their getting here is not going to be worth it since they will have the certain knowledge they will be apprehended, detained, and then sent back rather than detained and then sent back to their country of origin, never to be heard from again.

The President's 2007 budget did describe this practice of catch and release and described it as an unacceptable practice that must end. If we are going to end it, we need to have sufficient detention spaces, as the President pointed out, the additional 6,700 beds to accommodate these people.

A number of Members have continually talked to the administration and the Department of Homeland Security about this problem. For one reason or another, it has always been a matter of, we need more detention spaces and we need more detention space for this many people. It is a major breakthrough; the administration has finally calculated how many more spaces it needs and has begun the process of acquiring those spaces. We need to support the administration's efforts not simply to get 60 or 70 percent of it accomplished. We are not going to solve this problem of catch and release until we have sufficient detention space.

It is also a security problem for the United States because in many cases we do not know the identities of these people. These are not simply Mexican nationals coming across. They could be people from China, Russia, Vietnam, or countries of special interest to the United States or the Middle East, for example, countries from which terrorists have come. As a result, it is important not to simply release these people into the interior of our country never to be heard from again. They carry false documents, they know their true identities. It is important when we apprehend them to detain them.

Let me quote from a June 22 letter from me to the Department of Homeland Security Secretary Chertoff:

"... because DHS lacks the detention space to hold OTMs [other than Mexican nationals] it necessarily releases 70 percent of them into the interior of the United States with a Notice to Appear for an immigration hearing. Approximately 70 percent of those released failed to appear for their hearings; of those who do appear, 85 percent fail to comply with final orders of removal and remain illegally in the United States. In effect, therefore, our national policy amounts to a benefit for these people who have a piece of paper with that, in effect, frees them from additional apprehension during this period of time prior to their notice to appear. When the time period is up and they are supposed to actually appear, they are gone. In the meantime, they typically had a free pass to travel wherever they want in the United States, unmolested by the Border Patrol or law enforcement."

In a November 15, 2005, letter to Secretary Chertoff, I joined Senators McCain, Hutchison, and Cornyn in advising the Secretary that:

"... the Department should immediately resolve the "catch and release" practice, under which these non-Mexican illegal aliens are released into the interior due to lack of detention space."

The result of that was an effort by the Department of Homeland Security to identify what was necessary in order to achieve the goal. As I said, their determination was 6,700 beds, the number called for in the administration's budget.

I applaud the chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, Senator GREGG, for finding the funding to add an additional 1,000 beds to the 4,000 that were put in the supplemental appropriations bill, also due to his efforts. The Committee on Appropriations has gone a long way toward getting this funding, but we are still not quite there.

This legislation says this must be one of our priorities. As a result, having found a way to pay for it from other legislation, let's add these 1,700 so we can accommodate the full budget request of the President and say we have done everything we can to resolve this problem of catch and release.

There are some additional things we could talk about here, but it is probably the relatively simple way for us to complete this job. If there is no opposition to this amendment, I don't think it is necessary for me to talk about some of the additional things we could discuss to make the case; that it is also an important of stop this program of catch and release. I think almost everyone agrees with that proposition. My amendment is what is necessary to complete that unfinished business.

I hope our colleagues would see the benefits of adding this and ensure we can complete the task of resolving this problem of catch and release.

If there is further debate, I am happy to respond and cite additional information that I think will help make the case we need to do this, but I don't think it is a case that needs a great deal of elaboration. I ask my colleagues when we have the opportunity to vote on this, to support this amendment, as well as Senator SANTORUM's amendment, which I also wholeheartedly join in supporting. I am an original cosponsor of it.

These are the two pieces of unfinished business we need to take care of in this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SANTORUM. Madam President, I congratulate the Senator from Arizona. I am a cosponsor of his amendment, as he is a cosponsor of mine. I am very sanguine about the opportunity to get both the detention facilities, the beds added, as well as the additional border guards the President requests. I think everyone in this Chamber has been very clear about the need for additional border security on both sides of the aisle. In fact, we voted on numerous amendments in the past offered by Members on both sides of the aisle to increase border security as well as to stop the catch-and-release policy.

Here is an opportunity to have the President's budget request complied with, and to offset that is sort of a bonus. It is good public policy. We have good public policy providing streams of income for our seniors at a difficult time in their life through the process of reverse mortgages, which was a pilot program that has worked very well and has broad support on both sides of the aisle.

What we have in this amendment, as well as the amendment of the Senator from Arizona, is the opportunity to have a win-win situation. My understanding is, that—at least there is a rumor afoot—some on the other side of the aisle have a problem with the offset, that they have a problem—my understanding is they do not have a problem with the offset itself but that under the rules of the Senate there is a germaneness issue with respect to this particular offset on this particular piece of legislation.

I hope we look to the merits of actually both pieces of legislation: One, the funding for detention facilities and for border guards, the need to do that, the need to do it in a fiscally responsible way, not adding to the deficit. On top of that, the good public policy that can be accomplished through the Reverse Mortgage Program—which, again, has broad support from both sides of the aisle and has terrific support within the senior community, the AARP, as well as so many other senior organizations, lending organizations, and the like who see the terrific advantage. This is a program overseen by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It is a good public-private partnership that has the public component to ensure that seniors are not taken advantage of in these transactions. So it is a good win for our seniors. It is a good win for our border security, as well as getting rid of a very bad policy which is catch and release.

So again, the point of germaneness has not been made, and maybe on second thought we will see that the actual public policy benefits of getting something done here in the U.S. Senate, of increasing border security, as well as improving the living conditions of our seniors, will be a good one-two punch to accomplish here today in the U.S. Senate. I hope we can do that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, when I described my amendment, I neglected to say that at the request of Senator Grassley, so I would stand the amendment to the desk at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Arizona (Mr. KYL), for himself and Mr. SANTORUM, proposes an amendment numbered 4620.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase the number of Department of Homeland Security detention bed spaces by 6,700 total beds in FY 2007.)

On page 75, line 8 strike `$3,740,357,000; of which, and insert `$3,740,357,000; of which $40 million shall be authorized for 1,700 additional detention beds spaces and the necessary operational and mission support positions, information technology, relocation, and travel; and of which `$3,740,357,000.

Sec. 255 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z–20) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

(1) Authorization To Insure Home Purchase Mortgage.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision in this section, the Secretary may insure, upon application by a mortgagor, a home equity conversion mortgage upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, when the primary purpose of the home equity conversion mortgage is to enable an elderly mortgagor to purchase a 1-to-4 family dwelling in which the mortgagor will occupy or occupies one of the units.

(b) Limitation on Principal Obligation.—A home equity conversion mortgage insured pursuant to paragraph (1) shall involve a principal obligation that does not exceed the lesser of the appraised value of the dwelling or the market value of the property, as determined by the Secretary, and a maximum of `$30,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. VITTER. Madam President, I call for the regular order with respect to amendment No. 4615 and ask that it be considered and voted on in the context of the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana, and a vote on the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the right to do both actions.

The amendment (No. 4615), as modified, is as follows:

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 549. PROHIBITION ON CONFISCATION OF FIREARMS.

None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be used to seize the seizure of a firearm based on the existence of a declaration or state of emergency.

Mr. VITTER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to add as cosponsors the following Senators: Chambliss, Roberts, Bunning, Allen, Baucus, Thomas, and Smith.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VITTER. Madam President, this slightly modified amendment is the same amendment fundamentally that I described and talked about yesterday, only now it is fully germane—a pure limitation amendment which clearly can be and should be and will be considered and voted on in the context of this underlying bill.

It would prohibit law enforcement officers from confiscating firearms from those who are in lawful possession of them just because it is a disaster situation. It would not prevent funding for law enforcement officers who confiscate firearms in violation of Federal, State, or local law. It simply says, law enforcement cannot, under their powers because it is an emergency situation, start confiscating firearms which are completely legal, which have been obtained completely lawfully, by law-abiding citizens.

As I explained yesterday—and I want to repeat it very briefly now—we talk about second amendment rights. We talk about the right and the need in some cases to defend your life and property. That is why the second amendment offers such fundamental and important constitutional rights.

Yet at no time in our ordinary experience is there more important, more truly important, to the preservation and defense of one’s life and property than in the sort of situation we saw right after Hurricane Katrina.

In the aftermath of that disaster, there was no communication. The police were cut off from enforcing their duties in many neighborhoods. And there was no ability for law enforcement to come to a citizen’s call in light of an emergency. So a law-abiding citizen truly did, in many instances, depend on his firearm, his lawfully obtained legal firearm, protected by the second amendment and the good policy of his property and literally, in some cases, his life and his family’s life.

Therefore, we should never allow the confiscation of those legal firearms in that desperate situation when they truly are essential for the preservation of life and property.

Again, my amendment is very simple and straightforward in that regard. As it has now been modified, it is fully germane within this bill.

I look forward to my colleagues supporting it with a strong bipartisan vote because it is such a clear, commonsense, right thing to do.

With that, Madam President, I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I appreciate the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana, and I certainly intend to support it—strongly support it. I think it is an excellent amendment. I believe it is going to require a vote, however.

We are now going to turn to the Senator from Connecticut who is going to offer an amendment with 30 minutes on that amendment, the Senator from Connecticut having control of 20 minutes and myself having control of 10 minutes.

At the completion of the presentation of the Senator from Connecticut, I would be able to work out an agreement where we can go to a vote on the amendment by the Senator from Louisiana and a vote on the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut. That has not yet been agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. Dodd. Madam President, I would like to call up amendment No. 4641. If I may, I would ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator will yield for a second?
Mr. DODD. I am happy to yield.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the time on this amendment be 30 minutes, with 20 minutes allocated to the Senator from Connecticut and 10 minutes to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I call up amendment No. 4641 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] proposes an amendment numbered 4641.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To fund urgent priorities for our Nation’s firefighters, law enforcement personnel, emergency medical personnel, and all Americans by reducing the tax breaks for individuals with annual incomes in excess of $2,027,000,000 and insert $2,896,000,000.)

On page 91, line 6, strike “$2,027,000,000” and insert “$2,896,000,000.”

On page 91, line 9, strike “$350,000,000” and insert “$2,027,000,000.”

On page 91, line 22, strike “$1,172,000,000” and insert “$745,000,000.”

On page 92, line 1, strike “$745,000,000” and insert “$4,315,000,000.”

On page 92, line 3, strike “$210,000,000” and insert “$4,315,000,000.”

On page 92, line 8, strike “$56,500,000” and insert “$30,000,000.”

On page 92, line 11, strike “$121,000,000” and insert “$30,000,000.”

On page 92, line 17, strike “$50,000,000” and insert “$290,000,000.”

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague from Michigan, Senator STABENOW, be added as an original cosponsor of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, if the Chair would inform me when the Senator from Connecticut has consumed 15 minutes, I would appreciate it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do so.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I rise this morning to offer this amendment that seeks to meet some of the domestic security needs of our Nation as demonstrated by a distinguished group of experts in public policy, national security, and public health. This is not an amendment that I have crafted on my own. Rather, this amendment reflects the tremendous work done by our fellow colleague, the Senator from New Hampshire, Warren Rudman, who authored this report under the auspices of the Council on Foreign Relations back in 2003, along with a very distinguished group of Americans who brought a wealth of talent to that report. The amendment recommendations as to how we might strengthen the ability of first responders in this country to deal with the national security threats posed by terrorist organizations.

Obviously, all of us here are more than aware of these threats not only because of the events of 9/11, but because we have witnessed the tragic events in Madrid and London, and most recently, the train bombings near Mumbai, India, where terrorist attacks have taken the lives of innocents. Once again, we realize that we are very, very vulnerable.

Wendy Roeney has warned us of this vulnerability. A distinguished group of Americans, who I will identify in a moment, have warned us. I will be offering an amendment now for the fourth time since 2003 urging my colleagues to come together to do some very meaningful resources to bear when it comes to the needs of our first responders all across this country. As I mentioned, this is the fourth year I have offered my amendment, along with my colleague from Michigan, Senator STABENOW. And I thank her immensely for her tireless efforts in this regard as well.

The purpose of this amendment is very simple. It is to fund the urgent priorities of our Nation’s firefighters, law enforcement personnel, emergency medical personnel, transportation systems, and critical infrastructure, such as our ports and chemical plants around the country.

The amendment would pay for these vital priorities by lowering the tax breaks for individuals with annual incomes in excess of $1 million.

Politics is about choices. Choices are never easy. To pay for this, I have to come up with an offset. I realize that. But it seems to me if we cannot make the simple choice of asking those who are the most affluent in our society to reduce, for a period of time—not totally—but just reduce, by a small amount, the amount of the tax break, they would be getting over the next few years in order to fund the needs we have in our communities across this country—it is not a difficult choice to make.

I suspect if we surveyed the Americans who are making this kind of an income, as to whether or not they would be willing to forego the size of the tax break in order to properly fund these efforts, I suspect those Americans, as patriots, would be more than willing to make that kind of a sacrifice, if you wish to call it such, in order to properly fund the efforts that have been identified by Americans who know what they are talking about when it comes to our national security needs.

Four years ago, the Council on Foreign Relations—which I mentioned already—convened an independent task force to identify the challenges faced by our Nation in preventing and responding to acts of terrorism. This task force was chaired, as mentioned, by our colleague, Senator Warren Rudman of New Hampshire.

Senator Rudman was joined on this task force by a very distinguished group of Americans. Let me name some of them: not all of them: George Shultz, former Secretary of State under Ronald Reagan, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of Labor, and Director of the Office of Management and Budget; William Webster, former Director of the Intelligence Community; Charles Boyd, the executive and president of Business Executives for National Security; Margaret Hamburg, the vice president for biological weapons at the Nuclear Threat Initiative and former Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation at the Department of Health and Human Services; Donald Marron, former chairman of UBS America; James Metz, former staff member of the National Security Council, the Department of State, and former Staff Director of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Norman Ornstein, resident scholar at the American Enterprise Institute; Anne-Marie Slaughter, dean of the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University; and Harold Varmus, president and chief executive officer of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center—and on and on, just to give you some idea of who the authors of this task force are.

All I have done is taken their recommendations and put them into legislative form. These are not Dodd proposals. These are proposals that our colleague, along with the individuals I have just mentioned, have asked us to do. They told us 3 years ago the things we must do to be better prepared to deal with our threats. These are their ideas, not mine. I am just taking their ideas and putting them in legislative form—asking our colleagues to get behind this and to pay for this by reducing, ever so marginally, the amount of the tax break that individuals making more than $1 million a year would otherwise be receiving.

I have great respect for my colleague from New Hampshire, Senator Judd Gregg—we are good friends—and Senator BYRD. They have a very difficult task, along with the other members who serve on the Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee. It is not an easy job at all, and I recognize that. However, concerning the needs of our emergency responders and our critical infrastructure. I think we are faced with a problem that is far more significant than the budget cap requirements placed on these appropriations bills.

I think we will come back and revisit this report and the kind of tragedies I think all of us know are out there, when we look back and ask why we didn’t do what needed to be done when Warren Rudman and others warned us about what would happen if we didn’t provide the kind of support we and they would be there at some later date: Well, you see, there was a budget cap here where we mandated we could not do any better than what the budget cap required of us. I think we will come back to rue those words. I think we will regret it deeply that we did not provide the kind of support being recommended by this distinguished panel of Americans.

If the tragic events in Madrid and London, the alleged plot to destroy the Holland tunnel, and most recently the train bombings in India say anything to us at all, it is that we must renew and redouble our efforts to prevent and respond to terrorism here at home.

The Rudman report only underscores, in many ways, what we ought to have about protecting our country from the risk of terrorism. However, the needs of our communities far exceed the limited resources we have been given in this bill. Again, I have read the letter of Senator Grassley and Senator BYRD. They have a very difficult job. I will be the first to admit that.

In fact, what I am asking for in this amendment is to spend $20 billion a year for 5 years, to hire, equip, and train first responders and to better protect our critical infrastructure from attack. This bill spends only roughly $4 billion a year, only about a fifth of what we are told by the Rudman report is urgently needed.

Again, we are faced here with a point of order that I know will be raised against this amendment because it violates the cap. And I will be asking to waive that budget point of order when either my colleague from New Hampshire raises it or someone he designates does. But I am asking my colleagues, do not let yourself cast a vote here that I think we will come to regret down the road.

How many more warnings do we need to have as a nation? We are not isolated in the world. We are not that well protected. What happened in India, what happened in Madrid, what happened in London, what happened here only 5 years ago will happen again. We need to provide the kind of protection that our constituents demand of us.

The Rudman report must not become yet another report collecting dust on a forgotten shelf—and that is my fear—until once again we are struck and wonder why we did not take these steps called for in that report.

Let me read, if I may, briefly, the conclusions of the report. Listen to their words. If my words do not move you, listen to the words authored 3 years ago by the people on this distinguished panel of Americans, authored by the Council on Foreign Relations. Listen to what they said 3 years ago.

And I quote them. They, and Senator Rudman, said:

The terrible events of September 11 have shown the American people how vulnerable they are because attacks on that scale had never been carried out on U.S. soil. The United States and the American people were caught under-protected and unaware of the magnitude of the threat facing them.

He goes on to say:

In the wake of September 11, ignorance of the nature of the threat or of what the United States must do to prepare for future attacks can no longer explain America’s continuing failure to allocate sufficient resources in preparing local emergency responders. It would be a terrible tragedy indeed if it took another catastrophic attack to drive the point home.

Madam President, I do not think any words can capture the problem before us more clearly than those of Senator Rudman. It would be a terrible tragedy if it took another catastrophic attack to drive this point home.

I would also like to quote from the foreword to this report written by Les Gelb, who is the former president of the Council on Foreign Relations. Listen to what he had to say at the conclusion of that report:

As I sit to write this foreword, it is likely that a terrorist group somewhere in the world is developing plans to attack the United States and/or American interests abroad using chemical, biological, radiological, nuclear or catastrophic conventional means. At the same time, diplomats, legislators, military and intelligence officers, police, fire, and emergency medical personnel, and others in the United States and across the globe are working feverishly to prevent and prepare for such attacks. These two groups of people are ultimately in a race with one another. This is a race we cannot afford to lose.

Again, I can stand here for the next hour and a half or 2 hours. I don’t think any words I can utter are going to be as serious as the ones authored by Warren Rudman or Les Gelb. These groups, those that are somewhere in the world as I am standing here on the floor of the Senate, are preparing to attack us again. I know that. Every one of my colleagues knows that is going on. And simultaneously, there are people in New Hampshire and in New York and perhaps in New Hampshire that are doing everything they possibly can to protect us. Two groups, one wants to attack us; the other is trying to prepare against that attack. It is a race, and we are being talked by a report that is going on to provide adequate funding so that the group that defends us will have the means to protect us.

I am asking for the fourth time in 3 years to break this cap and do what ought to be done to give our Nation the kind of military and support we need.

In October 2002, several months prior to the issuance of the Rudman report, the Council on Foreign Relations convened yet another task force, the Independent Task Force on Homeland Security, which issued the report “America: Still Unprepared, Still in Danger.” This task force was cochairs by Senator Rudman and another of our former colleagues, Senator Gary Hart of Colorado. They came to the general conclusion:

America remains dangerously unprepared to prevent and respond to a catastrophic terrorist attack on U.S. soil.

The report further warned:

America’s own ill-prepared response could hurt its people to a much greater extent than any single attack by a terrorist (and the risk of self-inflicted harm to America’s liberties and way of life is greatest during, immediately, and following a national trauma).

Here we have two seminal reports issued within a month of each other. Again, I am sending an alarm to policymakers. We are the policymakers. We are the ones who have to make the decision as to whether or not resources are going to be there. We hear the alarm further strengthened each year by our States, localities, and first responders who request more resources to adequately protect those to whom they are entrusted. Yet for all practical purposes, the vast bulk of these reports and requests continue to fall on deaf ears here in the U.S. Congress.

The funding level I am proposing in this amendment is over $16 billion. It is a huge amount of money. I recognize that. It supplements the approximately $40 billion that the underlying measure devotes to emergency responders and infrastructure security.

Together this bill and the amendment provide $20 billion in emergency responder funding over the next year. Again, this is not my recommendation. This is the recommendation of these individuals who have spent a lot of time looking at the issue and believe this is what is necessary. In fact, they argue for a larger number than that recommendation was made almost 4 years ago. So there is no factor built in for inflation or other costs that may have increased. I assume that number, if they were writing it today, may be larger. But I will still use the number from 4 years ago.

I understand that the need for a budget resolution to set caps on appropriations bills. Effective budget resolutions are those that achieve balance. The kind that is reckless and provides sound investment in our domestic and foreign priorities. Unfortunately, I don’t find the current budget resolution and the caps it has imposed as balanced at all. And while constraining our ability to invest adequately in our emergency responders and domestic security, the resolution is projected to increase the national deficit by $236 billion in the coming year, principally because it seeks to make permanent tax cuts that are way too generous and primarily the most affluent in society.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 14 minutes.
Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair. I will take another 5 minutes, if I may.

The report before us presents an uncomfortable reality that we have to face as a country. I certainly applaud the hard work that has been done, as I mentioned earlier. Yet as the tragedy in India vividly showed us on Tuesday, no nation, including ours, is invulnerable. We still possess weaknesses in our domestic security and our domestic infrastructure that must be strengthened. I believe it is the proper amount to respond to this. This cost will pale in comparison if we are hit and unprepared to respond to it. This cost will be minor.

We all agree that $16 billion is a considerable sum. In fact, it represents roughly half the cost of the underlying bill. However, our country continues to spend an additional $10 billion every month in Iraq and Afghanistan, roughly a billion dollars a week. So we are talking about 16 weeks of investment, if you want to look at it in those terms, in Iraq as to whether or not we ought to be there, or to similar investments here at the local level.

This is funding that would not be wasted. The Rudman report clearly states the need for more resources. The demands we hear from our States and local communities respond to the exactly the need is there. Our ports have identified $5 billion to make Federal security requirements. That is their assessment. Our transit agencies have identified $6 billion to make trains and buses and other forms of transit safer for passengers. Our firefighters and first responders demonstrate over $4 billion in needs annually so that they may perform their critical duties more safely. That is the conclusion coming from the communities and States haven’t been spent yet and they are certainly not going to draw down the $16 billion.

My view on the first responder issue has been that we put so much money in the pipeline that it is sort of like putting a fire hose in the system when they haven’t been able to handle the money yet. As they work through the system and can handle that money, then we will put in more money.

I am willing to raise first responder dollars, although we have done a pretty good job in this account already with $2.4 billion. But I don’t want to use resources that can get me an instant bang for the dollar, such as putting a new Border Patrol agent on the border, which is what we have done, rather than put in a dollar that is going to sit in the Treasury for 2 or 3 years while communities get their act together.

I don’t think from a policy standpoint this type of expenditure is necessarily the priority I would choose. From a pure budget standpoint, let’s face it, this is the biggest increase I have seen proposed on this bill. There have been others. Senator Biden proposed to add a billion dollars of new money for rail transit, but this is $16.5 billion. That is a huge amount of money.

The title of the amendment says it is going to be paid for by tax increases. It doesn’t say what tax increases. The Senator from Connecticut says we are going to be taxing the rich. The amendment doesn’t say it is going to be taxing anyone. Its title says it is going to tax. There is no operative language for taxes.

It is actually not even paid for. It is not paid for under the terms of the amendment. In my opinion, this type of tax-and-spend amendment is not justified, and it is very hard, in the context of the budget process and in what we have already done in these accounts, to justify. I oppose it.

At the proper time, I will make a point of order against the amendment as exceeding our budget cap. I don’t think the policy demands it, and I certainly think the number is far out of anything that is logical in the context of what we are trying to deal with relating to homeland security and making it sure it is effectively pursued in this country.

At the termination of this debate, I hope we can get to a vote on Senator Vitter and Senator Dodd. We are waiting to hear from the other side of the aisle whether they are going to allow us to vote on Vitter. I think in the next 5 minutes we may have a couple of votes. We are still awaiting word, for the information of our colleagues.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DODD. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute 14 seconds.

Mr. GREGG. I will quickly attempt to rebut my friend from New Hampshire on these issues. I didn’t make up these numbers. These are from our States and localities. They are telling us these are their needs; it is not just in the Rudman report. Their request of $6 billion is what they are saying they need; firefighters, first responders. Their request of $8 billion is what they are saying they need. It is not my request.

We are going to have $10.5 billion, which has not been spent after this bill is passed. This amendment is a $16 billion plus-up. That will cost $32 billion. It is a massive expansion. It will basically be going into an account at Homeland Security and won’t be spent because they cannot spend the money they already have. It is a proposal that is simply not going to have the policy impact the Senator hopes for.

I know the Senator has alluded a couple of times to how much we are spending in Iraq, which is an immense amount of money. But we have soldiers on the ground in Iraq. We have equipment that has to be replaced there. We are fighting a war in Iraq. So I am sure the Senator isn’t suggesting that we take the money from Iraq and move it over to the Homeland Security Department. I am just using that as an example. But the war in Iraq is being fought within the context of the budget. In this instance, this would be way outside of the budget.

With that, I yield back the remainder of my time and make a point of order under section 302(c) of the Congressional Budget Act that the amendment provides spending in excess of the subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable section of that act for purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I believe I have about 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I wish to reiterate the fact that we already have $8 billion in the pipeline. We are going to have $10.5 billion, which has not been spent after this bill is passed. This amendment is a $16 billion plus-up. That will cost $32 billion. It is a massive expansion. It will basically be going into an account at Homeland Security and won’t be spent because they cannot spend the money they already have. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Ensign). On this vote, the yeas are 38, the nays are 62. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, at this time what we are going to do—and I will make a unanimous consent request to this effect—is we are going to recognize the Senator from Maryland to speak two minutes on one relative to Senator Santorum’s amendment and one relative to Senator Kyl’s amendment. At the conclusion, we are going to recognize the Senator from Texas for up to 10 minutes. Then we would go on to recognize the Senator from Maine for up to 20 minutes. I ask unanimous consent that what I have stated be the order.

At the same time, I further ask unanimous consent that while this action is pending, I not lose the right of priority relative to making a second-degree amendment on the Vitter amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SANTORUM. Madam President, reserving the right to object, the Senator from New Hampshire did not provide me any opportunity to respond to the Senator from Maryland. I would like 2 minutes to respond.

Mr. GREGG. Madam President, I would amend the request to have the Senator from Pennsylvania speak in response to the motion from the Senator from Maryland for up to 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, I thought the request on this side was going to be—

Mr. GREGG. And the Senator from Maryland, in making his motion, will have 3 minutes to debate them, or respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I do not object to that, but I ask that following the Senator from Maine, the Senator from New Jersey, Mr. MENENDEZ, have 20 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request as modified?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. Madam President, what is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the Kyl amendment.
Mr. SARBANES. I would ask the chairman of the committee, does he want to do the Kyl amendment first?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I think that is probably a good idea, to do the Kyl amendment first.

AMENDMENT NO. 4643

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I make a point of order that Kyl amendment No. 4643 is a rule XVI violation. It is legislation on an appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. SARBANES. And the amendment falls, I take it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And the amendment does fall.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, what is now the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Santorum amendment is now pending.

AMENDMENT NO. 4575

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I make a point of order that the Santorum amendment No. 4575 is a violation of rule XVI. It is legislation on an appropriations bill.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, as Senator Kyl and I discussed earlier, it is an attempt to try to find an offset to basically increase the cap for this appropriations bill by finding an offset of a little over $200 million so we could fully fund the border security request from the President, from the Department of Homeland Security, for 2,500 border guards and increase the detention facilities to the amount that the President requested in his budget. This amount comes from a provision that lifts the cap on the number of reverse mortgages that will be available to our seniors to help them provide for themselves where they have a high amount of equity in their homes and not a sufficient stream of income. So what this legislation would do is provide that initial income by allowing more reverse mortgages to be authorized from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Unfortunately, I did understand this is subject to a point of germaneness, but this is good public policy, and it has bipartisan support. It happens to come up with basically the amount of money that we needed to provide for both fully funding border guards and fully funding detention facilities. So my hope was that—as is the case in many appropriations bills—we set aside the issue of germaneness, and we deal with the substantive issue, which is this policy and how it accomplishes another good public policy, which is to provide for the border guards.

I am disappointed that the point of germaneness was raised. There certainly is a point to be held here. I was hoping that it would not be raised and we could vote on the merits of the bill. I think it is an unfortunate occurrence, but the Senator has the right to make that point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I have no problem with the purpose in terms of the program that the Senator from Pennsylvania wishes to implement, but I think this is a classic example of why we should not legislate on appropriations bills. This cap was increased last year from 150,000 to 250,000 reverse mortgages for senior citizens. Yet we have some reports of some concerns that there is a certain amount of fee gouging taking place with respect to senior citizens. This amendment would remove the cap altogether. It seems to me that there ought to be an effort to look into and address some of these concerns rather than just further increasing the program.

This is an important program for senior citizens, and we are hopeful it is working. We have been testing it out. We had an original cap of 150,000. Subsequently, this was raised to 250,000. The amendment also, of course, increases the loan limits. So there are some very substantive changes being made legally with respect to this program. It seems to me it calls for the invoking of rule XVI and an opportunity to examine the substance of the program in a more careful way. That is the basis of raising the rule XVI point of order. I think this fits classically in the grounds for that ruling being part of the rules of the Senate.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, how much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute. Mr. SANTORUM.

Mr. President, again I respect the Senator’s right to do this. Certainly a point of germaneness lies here. I suggest this legislation is supported by every senior group of which I am aware—AARP, mortgage bankers, a whole host of other organizations that see this as a tremendous opportunity to help low-income seniors who have equity bound up in their homes and have no other access that in an affordable fashion.

This is a regulated area. I know we had a hearing of the committee not too long ago to look at this. HUD is concerned about fees, as the Senator from Maryland said. But they feel very comfortable that this is a program which can and should be expanded. While it doesn’t look as if we are going to get this accomplished today, hopefully we can get it accomplished in the future. The House did adopt it in the TTHUD bill in the House to help provide additional resources in the TTHUD bill in the House. Whether we get this accomplished here today or in the House bill, I am hopeful this legislation can move forward.

Mr. SARBANES. Is there time remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mr. SARBANES. I say briefly, I hope in any effort to expand we can address the concern that has been expressed about fees, including by HUD itself, because, although this is a very good program and it is very important to seniors, in the course of this program being utilized we don’t want to start drifting down the path of predatory lending—I guess I would call it reverse predatory lending. That is why I believe we need to include that kind of analysis in any expansion of the program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. The point of order is sustained and the amendment falls.

The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, yesterday I offered a commonsense amendment that would help secure our broken immigration system, at least in part. This is an amendment which would have helped the Department of Homeland Security and the Border Patrol execute what is known as catch and return—or expedited return—rather than the current catch and release program that the Department has been engaged in when it comes to people who come from countries other than Mexico. The facts are: America, Central America, and Mexico itself have become a land bridge for people from around the world seeking to come through our southern border into the United States.

The only way we are going to be able to begin to deal with this is to create a real deterrence that convinces people that if they attempt to immigrate illegally across our southern border, they will not only be detained but they will be returned to their country of origin without any delay.

Because of a lack of personnel and because of inadequate policies, we have had what has literally come to be known as a catch and release policy. In other words, people from Mexico can be returned literally the same day. But if you come from countries other than Mexico, it takes on average about 2 months to return those individuals to their country of origin because of the need to process the paperwork, get permission of that country to return the foreign national to that country, and the like.

The Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, Michael Chertoff, has specifically said that this is a key to the success of our expedited removal program, which will finally allow us to create some deterrence when it comes to fixing our broken immigration system and border security controls.

I ask unanimous consent that Secretary Chertoff’s letter of March 27, 2006, endorsing this amendment’s approach be printed in the RECORD at the end of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CORNYN. Specifically what this amendment would do is deal with El Salvadoran immigrants who are the
The American people want us to act decisively to fix this problem. They recognize this is a Federal issue, that only the Federal Government can deal with our international borders and provide the kind of security that will allow us to go about the business of our country and why individuals are getting here. We know many of them want to come here to work, to seek a greater opportunity. We all understand that on a very human level. But the same porous borders that allow workers to come across allow gang members, allow common criminals, narcotraffickers, and, yes, even terrorists to enter our country without our knowing it only to do their mischief at a later time.

I believed it was incumbent upon me to come to the Chamber to explain my deep disappointment in this procedural move that was engaged in by the Democratic leader yesterday, which has denied us an opportunity to have a vote on this important amendment, one endorsed by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security and one which is absolutely essential to our restoring credibility to our border security efforts by enabling our Border Patrol to use this well-recognized mechanism of expedited removal and deterrence.

I yield the floor. need to maintain a healthy State minimum, to assure that flawed distribution methods do not lead to gaps in our security system.

The minimum in the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey, $245 million is simply too low. It slashes by two-thirds the Homeland Security grants that every State is now guaranteed. Under his amendment, each State would be assured of only a little more than $2 million, for both the State Homeland Security Grant Program and the law enforcement program for this year. Compare that with a minimum allocation of slightly more than $7 million for fiscal year 2006 and $9 million the year before.

Again, let me emphasize this. Under the Menendez amendment, each State would be assured of only a little more than $2 million for homeland security, prevention, and response needs. That is a 72-percent cut in guaranteed funding to each State. I encourage my colleagues to talk to the emergency managers in your State, to talk to your first responders, your police officers, firefighters, emergency medical personnel, to find out what gaps in homeland security would be left unfilled if they faced such a sharp and massive reduction.

If we are going to become better prepared as a nation, each State must receive a predictable and reasonable base allocation of homeland security funding. We need a predictable base level of funding each year in order to support multiyear projects such as creating interoperable communications networks or first responder training regimes on a natural basis.

Risk-based funding, if distributed properly, certainly is important, and I support it and have proposed it. But it doesn’t take away the need for this steady funding stream so that every State can bring its security up to a base level.

Let me give you perhaps the best example of the need for multiyear, steady, predictable funding, and that is the interoperability of first responder communications.

I am sure you recall, Mr. President, that the 9/11 Commission pointed to the lack of compatibility in communications equipment as contributing to the loss of life on 9/11.

The investigation that the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee conducted into the failed response to Hurricane Katrina demonstrated beyond any doubt that there is still a major problem. We saw different parishes in Louisiana using incompatible communications equipment that slowed and hampered the response to victims.

The National Governors Association reported last year that 73 percent of States have not developed Statewide communications interoperability networks. That is a complicated, expensive, and multiyear process.

That is exactly the kind of goal—the interoperable communications network—that the steady, predictable funding from the Homeland Security Grant Program is designed for.

The National Governors Association during last year’s debate wrote to me saying:

To effectively protect our States from potential terrorist events, all sectors of government must be able to prevent, deter, respond, and recover from a terrorist act. For that plan to work, it is essential that it be funded through predictable, sustainable mechanisms, both during its development and its implementation.

It is important to know that current law requires States to develop a 3-year homeland security plan. Multiyear planning is critical to developing a successful prevention and response strategy. Yet, if we are going to ask States to plan 3 years out, we have to be prepared to guarantee them a predictable base level of funding.

When we talk about the significance of preventing the next terrorist attack, it is important to note that terrorists often stage their operations training and hideaway from their most obvious targets.

This hits home to those of us in Maine. The terrorists that flew the plane into the World Trade Center on 9/11 started their journey of death and destruction from Portland, ME, a city of approximately 65,000 people. That is where they started.

Just think if they could have been apprehended in Portland and maybe the number of lives that could have been saved.

As the publication of the International Association of Chiefs of Police notes, several of the terrorists involved in the attack had routine encounters with State and local law enforcement officials in the weeks and months prior to the attack.

If the State, tribal and local law enforcement officials were adequately equipped and trained, they could be invaluable assets in efforts to identify and apprehend suspected terrorists before they strike. We must provide State and local law enforcement with the tools they need to keep our country secure.

I note that it isn’t only the two terrorists who started from Portland, ME that are good examples of terrorists hiding or training or transiting through rural areas. The 9/11 Commission told us that two of the terrorists, for example, were in Norman, OK, and others were in Norcross, GA.

All of these examples illustrate the vulnerability of towns and cities across America while highlighting the need for effective cooperation among all levels of government.

The Menendez amendment takes rational evaluations of need or effectiveness out of the distribution methodology. I hope my colleagues will take a close look at the exact language of the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey. I think they will be very concerned by that language if they do so.

This language factors out of the funding equation consideration of whether an area actually needs funding or whether it has a plan to spend the funding effectively.

That is an invitation to waste, fraud, and abuse if ever I have heard one. The amendment would inevitably lead to more wasteful spending. It assures that we will hear about more cases of first responders’ dollars being wasted.

For example, New Jersey spent a small fortune worth of dollars that were supposed to go for homeland security purposes on air-conditioned garbage trucks. That is the kind of waste that we want to avoid. But when you take out any consideration of need, of effectiveness, of planning from the formula, that is exactly the kind of wasteful spending you are going to see.

The RAND Corporation recently cautioned us that homeland security experts and first responders have cautioned against an overemphasis on improving the preparedness of large cities to the exclusion of smaller communities and rural areas.

The report recognized that much of the Nation’s critical infrastructure—water plants, for example, or chemical plants and other potential high-value targets—is located in rural areas.

We all know of the threat of a terrorist attack on our food supply. That is another example.

There are so many rural hospitals which have shown that they are unprepared. I could give you example after example.

But, surely, it makes no sense to give the Department of Homeland Security, which has already proven that it does not have the systems in place to handle an allocation that is based on the Department’s interpretation of risk—surely, it doesn’t make sense to give discretion to the Department. But that is exactly what the Menendez amendment would do. It would give more discretion. It strikes any consideration of whether an area needs the funding, whether it has a good plan for the funding, and whether the funding will be used effectively.

The Menendez amendment will hurt our national efforts to protect our country from terrorist threats. It will leave most States worse off. It leaves the District of Columbia worse off than under current law.

After his amendment, each State would be assured of only a little more than $2 million for both State Homeland Security Grant Programs and the law enforcement programs this year.

Again, I compare that to a minimum allocation of approximately $7 million last year and $8 million the year before.

Thirty-six States and the District of Columbia would be clear losers.

The Department would be given more discretion—discretion it has already shown it cannot handle. And this amendment, because it does not consider need and effectiveness and does not set out criteria for the Department to use, would result in additional wasteful spending.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Vermont wishes to speak. I presume the Senator from New Jersey has 20 minutes reserved under the previous order. I believe the debate should go forward, but I wish it would go forward with the unanimous consent that I continue to reserve the right to protect my second-degree position.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is part of the standing order.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Hawaii is recognized.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 2 minutes on an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I join my colleagues from Maine and Connecticut in opposing the Menendez amendment, which seeks to change the formula for the State Homeland Security Grant Program. The chairman and ranking member of the Homeland Security Committee have fought tirelessly to ensure that every State is prepared for a major disaster.

I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of their bill, S. 21, the Homeland Security Grant Enhancement Act, which strikes a fair compromise on the Menendez amendment, seeks to change the formula for the State Homeland Security Grant Program. The chairman and ranking member of the Homeland Security Committee have fought tirelessly to ensure that every State is prepared for a major disaster.

I strongly advocate the .75 percent minimum which is guaranteed under current law. Hawaii and every State needs to develop a preparedness baseline, so residents are cared for in the event of a disaster. I fear that reducing the State minimum to .25 percent will severely impact the homeland security preparedness and response capabilities for much of the United States.

The sponsors of this amendment argue that the distribution of the majority of homeland security funding should reflect the discretion of the Department of Homeland Security. However, we all remember what happened in May when DHS rolled out its new risk-based funding model. New York and Washington, DC took a huge fund hit. After enduring a 30 percent cut, my home State of Hawaii received little more than what the current state minimum guarantees. I oppose putting the people of Hawaii at risk by reducing the legally required minimum any further. Hawaii is an island state, 2,500 miles from the U.S. mainland, which requires us to be self-sufficient in the event of a disaster.

As I said before, the Senate has already opposed the .25 percent minimum being debated today. I urge my colleagues to uphold that vote. I urge opposition to the Menendez amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. GRAHAM. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I would have hoped we could come together on this amendment. I do not consider it an effort to pit States against States.

I heard the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Homeland Security refer many times to the 9/11 Commission. The 9/11 Commission’s unanimous bipartisan recommendation said all Homeland Security funding should be driven by risk, allocation should be driven by risk and strictly by risk.

Our amendment, however, does not take their conclusion, in recognition that States have responsibility and needs, and that conclusion of all money should be focused strictly by risk. It recognized that all States have some degree of responsibility within the context of a Federal mandate. It says, as the administration has said, that it should be .25 percent of all of those funds. We are in line with what the 9/11 Commission said.

If we are going to quote the 9/11 Commission, then we should quote it in its entirety. Also, we are in line with where the administration’s own recognition is.

In my mind, this is not small States versus big States, small cities versus large cities, rural versus urban. It is about risk. Very small States can have very big risk. Ultimately, they would be—if their risks are established as they believe them to be—beneficiaries at the end of the day with our amendment.

While the District of Columbia is obviously not a State, it is small in size and in population compared to many of the States of the Union, but it has great risk because it is at the seat of our Government, with national monuments and national landmarks. In fact, when it is driven based on risk, it should do much better.

To suggest I would offer an amendment that would hurt my own State, as I saw on that chart, is simply not the reality.

I understand a number of small States, for example, face great risks from nuclear plants, to ports, to dealing with security risks at their borders. Those risks, if we use risk assessment, will drive where the money should go.

Of course, risk can change in the future, depending on the nature of the threats we face.

Just as Members of this Senate are asked to support issues in the national interest, such as supporting our agriculture, protection from hurricanes, help after flooding, whether those issues impact our particular State, we and all Senators act in this respect in the national interest to support getting our Homeland Security dollars to the places at greatest risk. In fact, the Senator from Hawaii mentioned the cuts to communities such as New York City. When it is not based on risk assessment, that is the case.

I agree with those who have said that the Department of Homeland Security can do a far better job. We are in unanimous agreement with that. I looked at the list of national landmarks. I look at some popcorn factories, some petting zoos. Those are in the infrastructure of which there is great risk. That obviously is not the case.

Ultimately, we need a process that drives our limited resources to where the greatest risks are and where the greatest threat is. Certainly, I believe that allocation as the 9/11 Commission called for in a bipartisan unanimous report, looking at all of the equation of Homeland Security and intelligence resources that way we should drive these moneys.

We are silent on effectiveness. We do not alter effectiveness as part of the equation. We stated so yesterday to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Homeland Security. Why are we silent on effectiveness when we are giving allocations of moneys for which there is virtually no risk in many parts of the country or a much lesser risk?

I hope those who come from small States but have big risks would actually be supportive of our amendment.

In my mind, I find it interesting there are those who continuously vote against the amendments that have been offered to try and raise the Homeland Security funding overall but suggest we should not distribute the existing funding based on risk. In my mind, our amendment is actually about creating a standard in which all—large and small, rural and urban, regardless of what part of the country—receive a baseline guarantee but also receive those moneys needed to deal with risk. Any formula is always subject to, when there is an element that is to be determined on the basis of risk, how well the executive branch operates, but there is no matter how we are to keep the executive branch’s feet to the fire and make sure that risk is truly risk, not as we see on some of the lists given in terms of infrastructure in the country that clearly has no risk.

At the end of the day, to suggest we should have a general distribution formula of Homeland Security moneys when the September 11 Commission unanimously said that is not in the best interests of the country, that is not the best way to protect the country, ultimately is those entities who complain they do not have the resources necessary to meet their homeland security challenge could get greater resources if their risks are, in fact, established, is to undercut the very essence of their argument. I ask unanimous consent to have Senator CORNYN added as a cosponsor of our amendment.

The PRESIDENT proclaims the amendment of Senator CORNYN to drastically cut the base allocation of Homeland Security grants for all States.

I heard the statement of the distinguished Senator from Maine, Senator COLLINS. I associate myself with her words. She has stated it far more eloquently than I as to why this amendment should be defeated.

The Senator from New Jersey has the right concerns about the administration’s underfunding of first responder assistance programs. His concerns are absolute. We happen to agree with him on those. But he has chosen the wrong target to try to fix that problem.

Senator MENENDEZ and his cosponsors are understandably outraged over how the Homeland Security grants were recently distributed. If it were not so serious a situation, the recent explanation by Homeland Security officials and how they distributed these funds would be laughable. We are not debating the competence of Homeland Security. We are hearing all the statements of Homeland Security that if there is a sudden terrorist attack, they are ready; had there been a sudden terrorist attack with no notice at all on New Orleans last year, they are ready to do everything possible to help the people. Of course, when they had a week’s notice before Hurricane Katrina, they still have not responded. It is not their competence we are debating.

Yesterday, the Senate once again attempted to correct the Bush-Cheney administration’s woefully inadequate request for Homeland Security. Unfortunately, the amendment of the Senator from New York, Senator CLINTON, to restore $750 million for first responders’ assistance, was defeated. I had voted for that. I am sure the Senator from New Jersey did.

Now we come to this amendment that purports to correct the blunders of the Homeland Security threat assessment by slashing the base amounts to every single State in the country. Unfortunately, as the Senator from Maine has rightly pointed out, this amendment does pit State over State in how to divide inadequate overall funding for Homeland Security.

That is not the way to correct the incompetence of the Department of Homeland Security’s determination of how to allocate grants based on risk. It is the right issue; it is the wrong solution.

The Senate last year considered a similar amendment proposing this misplaced change in support for first responders, the Senate soundly rejected it with 65 of our colleagues voting against it. The terrorist attacks of September 11 added to the responsibilities and risk of first responders nationwide.

I wrote the all-State minimum formula as part of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001 to guarantee each State receives less than 1 percent—actually 0.75 percent of the national allotment to help meet the national domestic security needs. Every State, rural or urban, small or large, has basic domestic security needs and deserves to receive Federal funds to meet these needs and the new Homeland Security responsibilities the President has imposed on all States. Large urban areas and high-risk areas have even greater needs, and they should be addressed. Both should be addressed.

I don’t mean to be parochial, but my little State of Vermont, the second smallest State in the Union, is a State that borders another country. We are a State with a nuclear reactor. We have been called upon by the Federal Government to help out on border security, to help out because we are in a direct line from Canada down to two very large urban areas—Boston and New York. We are constantly getting requests to help. Our little State of 600,000 people is not going to see the money to fight terrorism is being sent to areas that do not need it, that it is being ‘wasted’ in small towns. They have figured the formula out politically and insisted on the redirection of funds to urban areas that they believe face heightened threat or terrorist attacks.

The taxpayers in my State never questioned the fact that we would help in the disasters of Katrina or the disasters of 9/11. All States were in this together. But representatives of urban areas have been arguing that Federal money to fight terrorism is being sent to areas that do not need it, that it is being ‘wasted’ in small towns. They have figured the formula out politically and insisted on the redirection of funds to urban areas that they believe face heightened threat or terrorist attacks.

We have one mechanic driving down the interstate with his family on their way to their vacation. He was a mechanic for the Air National Guard. He heard on the radio about the attack, and at the first place he could do a U-turn on the interstate, he did. He headed back home: Drop me off here; they are going to need me. I will call you when I get my first break.

And 3 days later, when he had an hour’s break, he called and said: Send me some clean clothes. Don’t take me home. Go back to your vacation. Send me some clean clothes. Keep on working.

Now, every State would have done the same. We respond. But if you pit States against each other, that ignores the real problem. The real problem is the administration has failed to make first responders a high enough priority. Congress, instead, should be looking to improve the overall allotment to the Nation’s first responders. We have plenty of money to spend on Iraq’s first responders. Let’s spend some of that money on the first responders of the United States. How can the smaller States possibly, would never be able to fulfill those essential duties on top of their daily responsibilities without Federal support. My colleagues should be warned that if the minimum drops any further—and you compound that by the substantial drops in overall first responder funding—then small- and medium-sized States will not be able to meet those Federal mandates for terrorism prevention, preparedness, and response. Agree. We can’t ask all State first responders, let’s find the money for American first responders.

After the terrorist attacks of September 11, we worked together in the Senate—Republicans and Democrats—on a bipartisan basis to fund the American people, our police, our fire, and rescue teams in each State in the United States. We are trying to preserve the new homeland security responsibilities the Federal Government demands.

The taxpayers in my State never questioned the fact that we would help in the disasters of Katrina or the disasters of 9/11. All States were in this together. But representatives of urban areas have been arguing that Federal money to fight terrorism is being sent to areas that do not need it, that it is being ‘wasted’ in small towns. They have figured the formula out politically and insisted on the redirection of funds to urban areas that they believe face heightened threat or terrorist attacks.

What critics of the all-State minimum seem to forget, though, is that since 9/11, the American people have asked all State—all State—and local first responders to defend us as never before on the frontlines in the war against terrorism—a war that will not end in my lifetime or the lifetimes of the other Members of this body. Vermont’s emergency responders have the same responsibilities as those in any other State to provide enhanced protection, preparedness, and response against terrorists. We have to ensure that adequate support and resources are provided for our police, our fire, and our EMS services in every State, if we expect them to continue protecting us from terrorists or responding to terrorist attacks, as well as carrying out their routine responsibilities.

I understand the concerns of my friend from New Jersey. He is an extraordinarily able Senator, as he was an extraordinarily able Member of the other body. I have enjoyed our friendship, and I have enjoyed the fact that we have worked together many times. But I would say to him and others, do not foster divisions between States because that is going to ignore the problem. The real problem is that the President has failed to make first responders a high enough priority. We should be looking to increase the funds to our Nation’s first responders, not pit State against State.

We have to look at State and local first responder formula grants in the Homeland Security Department by 59 percent—from $2.3 billion in 2003 to $941 million in 2006. That is $941 million for all first responders in America for the whole year. That is about what we have spent this week alone in Iraq. This week already we have spent about $941 million. That is what we are going to say we are going to spend for the whole year in the United States to protect us and our first responders the money they need. Now, those cuts—those huge cuts—are going to affect every State, whether it is a small State or a large State.

We are looking at another year of subpar funding for our State and local first responders. For 2007, the President proposes a 52-percent overall cut, or $1.3 billion, in funding for State and local law enforcement agencies alone. That, incidentally, is about what we spend in a week in Iraq.

The Senate Homeland Security spending bill we now consider cuts both the Law Enforcement Terrorism Prevention Program and the State Homeland Security Grant Program by $50 million each over the current year. Grants for high-threat, high-density urban areas—as such as the ones the Senator from New Jersey is rightly concerned about; these are what the larger cities and metropolitan areas have been grappling with in recent years. They face a $200 million cut over last year and a $140 million cut from 2 years ago.

These programs play a critical role for all States and communities for the purposes of training, procuring equipment, planning, and conducting exercises. Clearly, the domestic preparedness funds available are insufficient to protect our people and prepare for and respond to future domestic terrorist attacks anywhere on American soil.

I am not saying we should not help the Iraqi people. I am saying, let’s give at least the same kind of priority to the American people. It would be comforting if we could at least tell Americans their Government was doing everything possible and practical to keep them safe. We cannot truthfully tell them that. There is much left undone in securing our Nation. That is why we are not abandoning the small- and medium-sized States that suffer under this amendment. This came up last year. The Senate roundly rejected it last year. I hope it will again this year.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I rise, reluctantly, today in opposition to the amendment offered by my friend from New Jersey. I agree with my colleague—certainly, with the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from Maine, and others who have spoken against the amendment—that it is not the right path for us to follow.

I will say I agree with my colleagues who do support this amendment when they say that places such as New York and Washington, DC, are the most vulnerable to terrorist attack. Unfortunately, that is true. Those places have been attacked 5 years ago on 9/11, and they are surely the targets foremost in the minds of those who want to do us further harm. Those places deserve more first responder aid than other communities, including communities in my own State.

What my colleagues who support this amendment ignore, however, is that communities across the Nation face serious and grave terrorist attacks as well. This amendment would cut first responder aid for all but the largest communities by two-thirds or more. And with all due respect, I do not believe that is responsible. I could stand here today and list all the places in my own State of Delaware that I think are especially vulnerable. I will mention a few.

Delaware is home to some of the largest chemical companies and plants in the country. Cross the river, we have three nuclear power plants. They are closer to my home than they are to any of the Senators or the Governor of New Jersey, for that matter. We have I-95 that cuts right through my State, carrying all kinds of cargo, including hazardous cargoes. The Northeast Corridor of Amtrak runs right through my State. We have two major rail lines, all of which carry hazardous and dangerous cargo from time to time. We have all kinds of shipping going up the Delaware River, which divides Delaware and New Jersey. The cargo it carries is dangerous as well. Frankly, a lot of it is an attractive target for terrorists, those who would do us harm.

And everybody else, probably, in the Chamber today, or those who will be showing up to vote in a few minutes, could say the same. They could go across the barnyards of concerns as to targets in their own States that would make them vulnerable, too. But that is not the point of this debate.

This debate is about whether we want States such as Delaware or States such as South Carolina or States such as Washington or States such as Arkansas or New Hampshire or others—that are represented on the floor at this moment—whether we want our States to have the resources we need to achieve even minimum preparedness, goals that are set by the Department of Homeland Security for our country.

We will not be able to achieve those goals in Delaware and in a number of other States with the cuts that, unfortunately, this amendment proposed by my friend from New Jersey would require.

From their inception, the State grant programs funded through this bill have directed some 60 percent or more of their resources to the largest most vulnerable areas. And we should do that. In addition, the Urban Areas Security Initiative directs even more money to the largest most densely populated cities. All of it is distributed based on vulnerability. There are not any cities in Delaware or in very many other small States that are competing for those funds.

What the amendment before us, regrettably, would do is tie the Department of Homeland Security’s hands, forcing those who manage these grant programs to direct virtually every dollar we appropriate in first responder aid in this bill to a handful of larger cities. The Department officials would have no ability to consider whether a State or city actually needs the money they are getting or whether a grant recipient is even capable of spending those dollars effectively.

As I mentioned before, I am all for giving the most vulnerable communities more money. We should. This amendment, however, takes that worthy goal, in my view, several steps too far. Taking a significant amount away from 36 States and, apparently, would even cut the allocation for Washington, DC. I do not think we want to do that either.

Every State has seen a decrease in first responder aid in recent years, as money has been diverted to other priorities. I do not necessarily agree with those decisions, but I certainly do not agree the solution to this problem that this amendment before us suggests—that is, to jeopardize the security of citizens in States such as mine and dozens of other States similar to it across the country—is the course we should follow.

I will reluctantly vote no on this amendment and encourage many of my colleagues to do the same.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, if there is further debate on this amendment—maybe the Senator from New Jersey wishes to respond, but upon completion of his response, I would suggest that all debate on this amendment be deemed to have been completed and that at 12:45 we turn to an amendment from Senator SCHUMER and Senator CLINTON; that we have 30 minutes on that amendment, with 20 minutes for Senators SCHUMER and CLINTON and 10 minutes in opposition, controlled by myself; and that at the conclusion of that, amendments be recognized to offer two amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?
Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to ask a question. Does that allow the remainder of the time I had reserved to be used by myself for the purposes of responding?

Mr. GREGG. Yes. And if I believe Senator COLLINS has a little bit of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, if I could clarify which of the Sessions amendments will be offered at 1:15?

Mr. GREGG. I cannot represent which ones. But he has five filled.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who yields time?

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I believe my friends from New Jersey, New York, others who support this amendment, and I share the same goals: we want to ensure that those areas of our country that are predictably at higher risk of terrorism receive enough support to prevent and, if necessary, respond to attacks; we want to make our Nation as a whole a safer place. Where I must respectfully disagree, however, is in how best to accomplish those goals. This amendment would not do so.

In May, when the Department of Homeland Security announced its 2006 homeland security grant awards, for States and also for urban areas, 48 States and the District of Columbia found they had lost money from the year before. Many of these States, Connecticut and New York included, lost substantial sums. This was not primarily because of a change in the formula; however, it was because funding for these critical programs had been reduced by 29 percent. Since 2004, these programs have been cut in half, so there is increasingly less funding for all.

I was therefore disappointed yesterday to see the Senate reject Senator CLINTON’s amendment—which both Senator MENENDEZ and I cosponsored—that would have restored some of this funding. The fundamental problem here is the shrinking pie, not how we divide it.

When Urban Area Security Initiative, UASI, awards were announced, I, like many others, was disturbed to learn that, for example, Washington, DC—the two cities that were the targets of the terrorists on September 11th, and two that by any common-sense measure remain among those at risk by terrorists—had suffered sharp, and seemingly inexplicable, cuts in their UASI grants. But this wasn’t because UASI money is awarded to cities not deemed at risk. There is not now nor has there ever been a guaranteed minimum or formula for UASI grants. Within the UASI pot, one of the reasons that New York City’s share went down was because the Department didn’t want its grants to be used for what New York deemed to be an essential need: paying for law enforcement personnel to staff its anti-terrorism efforts. This amendment does not solve that problem.

Finally, as we should have learned—by now—the hard way, even in the best of circumstances, this threat is at least as much art as science. And I think most of us can agree that DHS’s shifting methodology for calculating risk does not represent the best of circumstances. Thus we have learned that DHS had made a mistake by counting national icons and government buildings and figuring out which infrastructure really is critical.

I have also learned, in what will surely come as a surprise to my constituents in Greenwich and Stamford, that according to DHS, southwestern Connecticut is not even considered part of the New York metropolitan area. This despite the fact that 100,000 people each day commute from Connecticut into New York, that major rail and commuter routes connect my state with New York, and that when the terror alert level is raised in New York City, additional Connecticut State Police must be activated. And, of course, that on that tragic day nearly 5 years ago, 67 Connecticut residents were killed in the World Trade Center towers. DHS’s risk assessment method, however, remains unable to account for the additional risk and demands of being part of the Connecticut-New York-New Jersey tri-state area. This amendment also does not solve that problem.

The fact is, the Senate has already approved legislation painstakingly negotiated within the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee that represents a better approach. In S. 21 and in a nearly identical amendment to last year’s Homeland Security appropriations bill which passed the Senate by a vote of 71 to 26—Senator COLINS and I tried to balance support for cities and States at known risk of a terrorist attack without sacrificing the security of locations that have not suffered in the past, but very well could in the future, and which are still critical to our preparedness and response.

While we provide more funding based on assessments of risk—we need to recognize that our intelligence is not perfect, that we do not know where or when terrorists will strike next, and that we can’t always prevent them from striking anywhere. The fact is, terrorists alter their methods of destruction. One day they may strike fortified targets such as military facilities, and the next day they may strike soft targets, as they did when they blew up a discotheque in Indonesia and took hostage an entire school in a small town in Russia. And how dare we forget what terrorists—though of the homegrown variety—did in Oklahoma City in 1995 striking a target in the middle of our Nation’s heartland.

Common sense, therefore, requires us to continue to build basic capacity to prevent and respond to attacks wherever they may occur. And to build capacity over time, State and local officials need some predictability. They need to know when and how much assistance they are likely to receive from year to year if they are to plan and execute homeland security.

Were we to adopt the pending amendment, it would mean that each State would only be guaranteed to receive slightly over $2 million this year a nearly trivial amount and short sighted in light of the significant national investments that we made from Katrina that first responders will need to come from all over the country to respond to a catastrophic event, whether natural or manmade—and we need those responders to be properly trained and equipped. We know, too, that the next 9/11 attack on New York or Washington may be prevented by action taken in a town far away, where terrorist plotters are discovered by local law enforcement. Those local law enforcement officers possess local intelligence, training, and resources to be most effective. In the end, we cannot simply build a wall around a few known high-risk cities—it not only leaves the rest of the country vulnerable, but it will leave the highest risk cities more vulnerable.

The problems with homeland security funding are urgent and real, but this amendment will not solve them. I urge my colleagues to vote “no.”

Mr. GREGG. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further action?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator MENENDEZ?

Senator MENENDEZ. I rise today in strong opposition to the amendment proposed by Senator MENENDEZ.

While the Senator from New Jersey no doubt has the best of intentions in working to increase grant funding for high population areas, I do not believe that reducing funding for the majority of States in our great Nation is a viable way to protect against terrorism.

If we, as a country, are going to be adequately prepared for a terrorist attack, we must not forget that we are vulnerable on all fronts. The 36 States that would be negatively impacted by this proposal contain some of our Nation’s most valuable assets.

In reducing funding to States such as Kansas, this amendment tosses aside the risks to agriculture that supports our Nation’s food supply, the oil and petroleum facilities that provide invaluable energy in this time of need, and all the many Federal buildings and places of national significance that are scattered throughout our great Nation.

We cannot let ourselves believe that if we only protect large cities and high population states, we will be safe from the devious and calculating minds of those who wish us harm. One need only to look to Oklahoma City in this regard. Rather, preparing for what we expect in densely populated areas is a surefire way to be shocked and horrified should the inexplicable and unthinkable happen again.

This legislation has been considered in this Senate before, and it was defeated soundly. To add it now as an amendment disregards the hard work many have done to negotiate a funding formula that most benefits our entire country. We cannot afford to compromise the security of an entire Nation for the benefit of a few areas.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments made by several of my colleagues, the distinguished Senators from Vermont and Delaware. I agree with them that one of the core issues is homeland security funding. There is no question about that. The No. 1 responsibility, certainly, of the Federal Government and of government in general is to protect its citizens. We are woefully underfunding the ability of the 50 citizens, whether that is in the cargoes of our ports or the cargoes underneath our airplanes, whether that is in the context of first responders, interoperable communications, whether that is in that way.

Unfortunately, in the wake of London, in the wake of Madrid, and in the wake of Mumbai, the Senate voted against amendments that ultimately would have increased the funding so that those wake-up calls would never be realized in the United States. That was the will of the Senate.

Several of my colleagues have actually made the case that their States have very significant risks, whether that risk is a nuclear powerplant by a border with another country, whether that risk is chemical facilities right across the river, whatever those risks are. I find it interesting that our colleagues have the floor to mention the case that they, too, have risks. We acknowledge that. We do not eliminate all funding for all States. On the contrary. We guarantee a baseline of funding for all States. But we say that the bulk of that funding, as it has been time and time again, even very recently, supported by Tom Kean and Lee Hamilton, the former chair and vice chair of the 9/11 Commission in a letter to House Members who offered legislation by funding these critical funds, would make sure that all homeland security funding would be based on risk, as their unanimous bipartisan vote took place in the 9/11 Commission outside of the constraints of the politics of the situation—they made that conclusion. They still support that conclusion. That is the very essence of the Menendez-Lautenberg amendment. We understand. And we believe that those who have made the case for risk should do better because they have real risks. That is, in essence, what our amendment says. If you have the risk, you should have the resources.

I agree with all of my colleagues who said that they have more funding to protect America and to protect Americans. That is certainly what I believe is the very essence of what we tried to do in the first instance by taking that money which we do have and focusing it on the risk.

I ask unanimous consent that Senator OBAMA be added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MENENDEZ. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 4653; 4659; 4664; 4666; 4671; 4674, AS MODIFIED; 4679, AS MODIFIED; and 4566, IN BLOC

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would like to clear a series of amendments. All these amendments have been on file. Some have been modified. The amendments are at the desk. They are No. 4633, Senator ALLARD; 4640, Senator MURRAY; 4648, Senator LANDRIEU; 4639, Senator MURRAY; 4617, Senator LEVIN; 4594, Senator VOINOVICH, as modified; 4570, as modified, Senator LAUTENBERG; 4556, Senator FEINSTEIN.

I ask unanimous consent that these amendments be considered and agreed to en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to considering and agreeing to the amendments en bloc?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Reserving the right to object, I am not sure if I had the full context of the Senator's request regarding the time remaining here.

I withdraw my reservation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments were agreed to, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4653

(Purpose: To require the Assistant Secretary for Immigration and Customs Enforcement of the Department of Homeland Security to submit a report on the costs and need for establishing a sub-office in Greeley, Colorado.)

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 540. Not later than February 8, 2007, the Assistant Secretary for Immigration and Customs Enforcement of the Department of Homeland Security shall submit a report to Congress on the costs and need for establishing a sub-office in Greeley, Colorado.

AMENDMENT NO. 4659

(Purpose: To provide that funds appropriated for United States Coast Guard Acquisition, Construction, and Improvement may be used to acquire law enforcement patrol boats.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 4. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, funding made available under title VII, under the heading UNITED STATES COAST GUARD ACQUISITION, CONSTRUCTION, AND IMPROVEMENTS may be used to acquire law enforcement patrol boats.

AMENDMENT NO. 4648

(Purpose: To require a report on the location of Coast Guard facilities and assets in the Federal City Project in New Orleans, Louisiana.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 4. Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the feasibility of locating existing Louisiana facilities and assets of the Coast Guard in the Federal City Project of New Orleans, Louisiana, as described in the report of the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission submitted to the President in 2005 during the round of defense base realignment under the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Act of 1990 (part A of title XXIX of Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note).

AMENDMENT NO. 4649

On page 104, line 9, strike "$106,414,000" and insert "$104,414,000".

On page 105, line 1, strike "$712,011,000" and insert "$714,011,000".

On page 106, line 7, strike "costs," and insert the following: "costs: Provided further. That $2,000,000 under this heading shall be available for the construction of radiological laboratories at Pacific Northwest National Laboratory: Provided further. That funding will not be available until a memorandum of understanding between the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Energy has been entered into.

AMENDMENT NO. 4617

(Purpose: To ensure that methodologies and technologies used by the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection to screen for and detect the presence of chemical, nuclear, biological, and radiological weapons in municipal solid waste are as effective as the methodologies and technologies used by the Bureau to screen for those materials in other items of commerce entering the United States through commercial motor vehicle transport.)

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 5. SCREENING OF MUNICIPAL SOLID WASTE.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) BUREAU.—The term "Bureau" means the Bureau of Customs and Border Protection.

(2) COMMERCIAL MOTOR VEHICLE.—The term "commercial motor vehicle" has the meaning given in the section in title 49, United States Code.

(3) COMMISSIONER.—The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of the Bureau.

(4) MUNICIPAL SOLID WASTE.—The term "municipal solid waste" includes garbage (as defined in section 1004 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6903)).

(b) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commissioner shall submit to Congress a report that—

(1) indicates whether the methodologies and technologies used by the Bureau to screen for and detect the presence of chemical, nuclear, biological, and radiological weapons in municipal solid waste are as effective as those used to screen other items of commerce entering the United States through commercial motor vehicle transport and meets the need for additional screening technologies.

(c) IMPACT ON COMMERCIAL MOTOR VEHICLE.—The Commissioner shall be required to fully implement an action identified under subsection (b)(2) before the earlier of the date that is 180 days after the date on which the report under subsection (b) is required to be submitted or the date that is 180 days after the date on which the report is submitted, the Secretary shall deny entry into the United States of any commercial motor vehicle carrying municipal solid waste until the Secretary certifies to Congress that the methodologies used by the Bureau to screen for and detect the presence of chemical, nuclear, biological, and radiological weapons in municipal solid waste are as effective as the methodologies and technologies used by the Bureau to screen for those materials in other items of commerce entering into the United States through commercial motor vehicle transport.

AMENDMENT NO. 494, AS MODIFIED
(Purpose: To increase appropriations for emergency management performance grants)

On page 96, line 5, strike “$200,000,000” and insert “$220,000,000”.

On page 120, increase the amount on line 9 by $15,000,000.

AMENDMENT NO. 470, AS MODIFIED
(Purpose: To require the Secretary of Homeland Security Inspector General to investigate the conduct of insurers in settling certain claims resulting from Hurricane Katrina)

On page 99, line 4, strike “Act.” and insert the following: Act: Provided further, That the Department of Homeland Security Inspector General shall investigate whether, and to what extent, in adjusting and settling claims resulting from Hurricane Katrina, insurers making flood insurance coverage available under the Write-Your-Own program pursuant to section 1364 of the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 4081) and subpart 2 of title 44, Code of Federal Regulations, improperly attributed damages from such hurricane to flooding covered under the insurance coverage provided under the national flood insurance program rather than to windstorms covered under coverage provided by such insurers or by windstorm insurance pools in which such insurers participated: Provided further, That the Department of Homeland Security Inspector General may request the assistance of the Attorney General and the Department of Justice in conducting such investigation and may reimburse the costs of the Attorney General and the Department of Justice in providing such assistance from subpart 2 of title 44, Code of Federal Regulations, improperly attributed damages from such hurricane to flooding covered under the insurance coverage provided under the national flood insurance program rather than to windstorms covered under coverage provided by such insurers or by windstorm insurance pools in which such insurers participated: Provided further, That the Department of Homeland Security Inspector General shall submit a report to Congress not later than April 1, 2007, setting forth the conclusions of such investigation.

On page 120, increase the amount on line 9 by $3,000,000.

AMENDMENT NO. 494
Mr. VOINOvICH. Mr. President, I rise to speak on amendment No. 4594 to the Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act of 2007. I thank Senator GREGG and Senator BYRD for accepting this amendment by unanimous consent. Before I describe this amendment, I would like to acknowledge the hard work and leadership of Senator GREGG and Senator BYRD, and thank them for their diligence in coming to a consensus on this crucial piece of legislation. The balance between enhancing homeland security and the well-being of the taxpayers’ hard-earned dollar is a fine one. I applaud your attention to both, and I support this legislation.

The Emergency Management Performance Grant, EMPG, program is designed to provide State and local emergency management agencies with the necessary funds to expand the development, maintenance, and improvement of their plans. It is the only source of Federal assistance that provides vital emergency management, coordination, and planning support to State and local governments and first responders. It funds personnel, training, and exercises that ensure that States match 50 percent of the Federal contribution. According to the Department of Homeland Security, EMPG funds are spent rapidly compared to other programs; in other words, if Congress appropriates additional EMPG funding, it will be used expeditiously, efficiently, and effectively.

Last year the EMPG program was funded at $185 million. In an effort to increase the sound management of Homeland Security funds, earlier this year I asked the Appropriations Subcommittee on Homeland Security to increase funding for the EMPG program. I am pleased that 41 Senators joined me on this request. The Department of Homeland Security Appropriations Act of 2007 funds the program at $205 million.

While I am heartened by and thankful for the $20 million increase in funding over last year’s level, I feel strongly that the program should be further increased. Accordingly, this amendment would increase the funding of the EMPG program by an additional $15 million. I am joined on this amendment by Senators BAUCUS, BIDEN, BURNS, CANTWELL, COLLINS, FRIENgOLD, HARKIN, KENNEDY, KERRY, LIEBERMAN, MURRAY, PYRO, ROBERTS, SNowE, STABENOW, and WARNER. I thank them all for their support. It is my strong belief that an additional $15 million for the EMPG program would enhance the effectiveness of every disaster relief fund dollar directed toward response and recovery.

Since 9/11, the responsibilities of our first responders have increased. They must now be prepared to respond to natural disasters, man-made disasters, and malicious acts of terrorism. We must support them. With the enhanced responsibilities, and the tight budget constraints currently faced by State and local governments, the flexibility provided by the EMPG program is vital.

I would like to describe some of the ways that EMPG funds help State and local governments. In Ohio and across the Nation, the emergency preparedness requirements have increased significantly since 9/11. For example, according to a 2003 study conducted by the Emergency Management Association of Ohio, approximately 10 percent of all emergency management personnel time was spent on antiterrorism and homeland security activities prior to September 11, 2001. By 2003, that figure had shot up to 50 percent.

In addition, State and local emergency management agencies now are responsible for the coordination and implementation of national initiatives, such as integration of the National Response Plan into existing emergency operations plans and plans under the National Incident Management System. The EMPG funds the extra manpower and management support to help State and local governments meet these increased responsibilities.

According to the National Emergency Management Association, EMPG funds are used for a wide variety of purposes that include:

- Conducting incident management exercises for planning and coordination.
- Responding to the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, many States have identified the requirement to be to carry out mass evacuations in the event of catastrophic disasters.
- In Alaska, additional EMPG resources would be used to increase levels of emergency management personnel, which for some communities are currently only part-time positions. In New Hampshire, increased EMPG funds would be used to address the increasing risks due to large hazards such as wild land fires, annual flooding, and earthquakes.

Increasing the funding for EMPG would help some States do even more.

In Alaska, additional EMPG funding would be used to increase levels of emergency management personnel, which for some communities are currently only part-time positions. In New Hampshire, increased EMPG funds would be used to address the increasing risks due to large hazards such as wild land fires, annual flooding, and earthquakes.

In response to Hurricane Katrina, the EMPG program more than proved its worth. In a statement submitted to the Appropriations Subcommittee on Homeland Security, Bruce Baumman, the president of the National Emergency Management Agency, gave the following description of the mutual assistance provided by the Emergency Management Assistance Compact (EMAC), which is funded by the EMPG:

EMAC enabled 48 states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico to provide assistance in the form of more than 2,100 missions of human, military and equipment assets and over 65,000 civilian and military personnel and equipment assets to support the impacted states. The nature of the nation’s mutual aid system shows the need for all states to have appropriate capabilities for all disasters and EMPG allows states and local governments to build upon this capability for their own use and to share in through EMAC.

The Appropriations Committee conference report for 2006 concurred with this assessment, noting that “EMPgs are vital to state and local emergency management agencies.”

This year, the Senate Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee report concluded that “EMP is an essential tool for state and local emergency management,” and that “state and local governments currently have productive relationships with the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s regional emergency managers that are critical to maintain an appropriate level of capability,” and that the committee “expects these relationships to continue.” The subcommittee further noted that:

Additional federal funding is necessary to properly support state and local responsibilities and coordinate with federal emergency management during national disasters.

In closing, Mr. President, State and local governments must be prepared. The EMP program is a proven method of accomplishing this goal. This amendment is financially responsible and strategically sound.

I thank Senator Gregg for working with me to identify an appropriate offset for this increased funding. Once again, I applaud the efforts of the Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee, especially in light of the tight fiscal environment.

Mr. Gregg. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields the floor?

The Senator from New Jersey.

AMENDMENT NO. 4604

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to speak on behalf of the amendment offered by my colleague from New Jersey, Senator Menendez. I want to make sure there is a clear understanding about what we are discussing. It has been said before—it is worthy of repetition—that 700 of the almost 3,000 people who lost their lives on 9/11 came from the State of New Jersey. The largest group came from the harbor, the State of New York. The region is connected by all kinds of interests and conditions. When we look at the region and see what happened with our State and the State of New York, in terms of resources from grants by Homeland Security, it is hard to understand.

We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security. I heard my colleague say that earlier. We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security. We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security. We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security. We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security. We don’t have sufficient resources for homeland security.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be dispensed with on page 98, line 24, strike "$1,941,390,000, of which $301,390,000 is designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234, pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4600

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside and I call up amendment No. 4600.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York [Mr. Schumer] proposes an amendment numbered 4600.

Mr. SCHUMER. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase appropriations for disaster relief, and for other purposes)

On page 98, line 24, strike "$1,640,000,000" and insert "$1,941,390,000, of which $301,390,000 is designated as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 402 of S. Con. Res. 83 (109th Congress), the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2007, as made applicable in the Senate by section 7035 of Public Law 109-234.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be given 20 minutes, which I will divide between myself and my colleague from New York, Senator Clinton. I believe that the Senator from New Hampshire will have 15 minutes, and, at some point, we will vote on this legislation, probably around 2:30.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, today, I would like to offer this amendment to restore more than $300 million in funding to the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s disaster relief account. This is the amount that the President had requested in his budget. So this is hardly an outlandish fee or a fee that came up out of our heads.
July 13, 2006

As we all know too well, our country has been visited by disaster far too many times in the last year. Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, devastating wildfires in Texas, Arizona, and California, and now the recent flooding in the Northeast, devastating New York as well as Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Vermont, Maryland, and Virginia. Some people, and I know how many others, have had flooding in their homes in the Washington area because of that.

Unfortunately, FEMA has come up short every time. The Agency always seems to be on its heels when it needs to be on its toes.

With all of the trouble that FEMA has, we should not be cutting the funding that goes directly to the people who are victims of these terrible disasters.

We have seen the disaster. We have seen the terrible flooding. We know it is all too real. A week ago Friday, Senator CLINTON and I toured the affected areas. We know it is going to take to get it clean.

I will share this with you. We met a businessperson who started out a new business and lived in the Catskill Mountains. He had been flooded twice in 24 hours. The disaster relief official on the ground said the first two floods were 100-year floods, meaning that level of flood only occurred once every hundred years. This was a 500-year flood. This businessperson—dedicated like all small business people, but they are sweating through all of this—was already loaned up and needed more money quickly.

We met another business leader in St. Johnsville in the Mohawk Valley in Montgomery County, who started a new business and was the hope of the county, with 100 new jobs. They had announced they were going to have another 65 new jobs, but they were flooded out.

The Beechnut plant, the largest employer, suffered huge damage, and the plant that makes baby food is not able to open. We visited the Canajoharie town hall, where all of the equipment was flooded and gone, including computers, phones, police department and fire department records—gone.

We were in Binghamton and Conklin, which was totally flooded, as was Hancock and other places. We were told in one area in the Delaware Valley that the rain cloud stayed and never moved for 16 hours at the top of the mountain and the rain kept coming down.

We met an older gentlemen whose 15-year-old daughter was in their house by the creek bank. The creek turned its course and pushed the house into the water, and she died. We saw that damage firsthand.

The damages are going to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars. Just alone, the sewage plant in Binghamton was destroyed, a brand new $20 million plant, gone.

The physical damage to farms is enormous. As we flew over the Catskill Mountains, in the Delaware Valley and the Mohawk Valley, we could see farms flooded—the whole farm. The corn was gone. We saw dead cows, which is the life blood of these farms, including the dairy. Crop losses are estimated to be $20 million.

So the damage was enormous. The damage was everywhere. It is unlike anything we have ever seen in New York.

Our amendment is very simple. It restores more than $300 million in funding for FEMA’s disaster relief account, bringing it back up to the President’s request of $1.9 billion. Under this program, FEMA gives three types of assistance desperately needed: individual assistance goes to individuals and households. This helps disaster victims find temporary housing, pay for rent, and even home replacement costs.

In these three areas, the Susquehanna Valley, Delaware Valley and its tributaries, and the Mohawk Valley, there are small businesses and homes as we speak. The people who lived in those homes for decades or for generations will never be able to go back. This assistance is so important to them.

Second is public assistance which is aid to public entities for reimbursement for emergency services and the repair or replacement of disaster-damaged public facilities such as roads, bridges, and water facilities. One town supervisor told us that their whole budget for roads—the whole yearly budget—was gone in 3 days. They don’t know how they are going to repair the roads that are still broken and damaged.

It didn’t just occur to smaller roads. I-88, one of the most important lanes of commerce in our State, running from Albany to Binghamton, had a huge chasm in it. That was on the front page of most newspapers. Some truck drivers died as they fell into that chasm.

We need that to help our towns, villages, and counties, get back.

Third, there is hazard mitigation assistance which helps local governments protect against future disasters and reduce future losses to public and private property. This is the era of changing climate, when we have had disasters affinecting us year after year, hazard mitigation assistance is very important.

In our State, as in our neighboring States, people are struggling. There is nothing like seeing that damage firsthand and looking into the eyes of people who have lost loved ones or homes or businesses. You see that the only hope they have is that the Federal Government will come forward.

We know that FEMA did not do the job in New Orleans. We know it is going to be difficult for FEMA to get the money quickly and in large amounts to the areas in our State where they are needed. But the one thing we also know is that FEMA should not be able to say they don’t have the dollars. Right now, with the cuts that are proposed in this budget, we cannot be sure of that.

Many people are struggling in New York and across the country and we should be mobilizing the full resources and wherewithal of the Federal Government, not cutting back. This is one area where there is virtually universal agreement that it is the Federal Government’s responsibility—disaster relief.

Today, it is raining again in upstate New York. People are worried about the flood waters rising once again. We have to do everything in our power to help them and give them the assistance they need to rebuild stronger than ever.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays, and I yield the remaining time to my colleague from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York, Mrs. CLINTON, is recognized.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, my colleague has eloquently described the damage and devastation that he and I visited together last week.

Floods are biblical. They go back as far as human history is recorded. But I never cease to be amazed at the damage they cause. There is something about a flood that is so devastating. It leaves behind places that are destroyed because of mold. It ruins businesses and homes. It leaves a residue of mud and muck and debris. It is a demoralizing, debilitating disaster.

As Senator SCHUMER and I traveled from Binghamton north, we saw firsthand people coping and trying to figure out what was next. I lost everything and don’t know how they will ever get back into business, homes that were washed into rivers and creeks, city halls and fire departments and police departments with records that were obliterated in an afternoon.

Now, if this were a once-in-a-hundred-years phenomenon, maybe I would not be so worried, but time and again we have heard that there have been 3 floods in the last 24 months, 2 of which were classified as 100-year floods, 1 of which was classified as a 300-year flood. We are beginning to see the effects that were predicted by the National Hurricane Center earlier this year. We had even seen our National Archives, which holds our most precious founding documents, like the Constitution and Bill of Rights, fighting back the floodwaters, trying to preserve America’s history.

Just last night in the county where I live in New York, tornadoes were spotted. That is very unusual. I lived for a number of years in Arkansas. We saw tornadoes all the time. I have been chased by a tornado. I have seen them on the horizon. I have lived with tornado damage. I visited many devastated communities. But tornadoes were not thought to affect States like New York. New York was hurricane territory, not tornado territory. Last night, we had a tornado.

The strange weather that we are experiencing is out of the usual, and I hope that we can get the help we need and that the amendment that Senator Schumer and I have proposed will be passed so that we can replenish the disaster fund with the amount of money that we know will be needed to take care of the people we represent in New York.

There was similar damage in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and apparently there is more to come. We have had predictions that the 2006 Atlantic hurricane season outlook is expected to be 80 percent above the normal in the number and intensity of hurricanes.

We all know of the damage that occurred along our Gulf coast. But there are predictions of significant storms along the Atlantic coast up to and including New York for the rest of this summer and into the fall.

We need to get ready. That is why this amendment makes such good sense. All that it asks is that we store the money the President asked for in his budget. That money was cut. We want to add and replenish the disaster relief fund to the tune of $300 million so that there is $1.94 billion in that fund to help us meet the needs of New Yorkers and others who are being affected by this unusually severe weather.

Fully funding that disaster relief fund is one way to ensure that people know there is going to be help on the horizon so that there is $1.94 billion in that disaster relief fund to the tune of $300 million to this bill, which is essentially outside of the budget. So I really don’t think it is necessary at this time, and I know it is not necessary at this time, and I know it is not going to impact the immediate New York situation. It just is not. It raises the bigger issue of what should be the number

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I was assured there would not be an objection. This is for the purpose of bringing up an amendment, not calling for a vote on it at this time.

Mr. GREGG. I have no objection.

AMENDMENT NO. 4582

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4582.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the following:

SEC. 540. The Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security (Transportation Security Administration) shall not modify the list of prohibited items from being carried aboard a passenger aircraft operated by an air carrier or foreign air carrier in air transportation or intrastate air transportation set forth in section 1540 of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations, so as to permit any item contained on the list as of December 1, 2005, to be carried aboard a passenger aircraft.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, this is an amendment which addresses the concerns raised by the Transportation Security Administration lifting the prohibition of passengers carrying onto our passenger aircraft sharp objects, including knives.

There is a considerable debate, led by the airline attendants and pilots, as to the wisdom of this rule being lifted. I ask the Senate to consider whether this is a good idea. We have been so successful in nearly 5 years in avoiding incidents on our airlines, in keeping our people safe on our airlines. If it ain’t broke, why fix it?

This rule has worked. People are used to the rule. My goodness, we have had security people take steak knives out of people’s handbags and suitcases. We have had them take out huge pen knives and pocketknives. Why do we want to go back to that?

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GREGG. I am sorry, I did not hear the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is to set aside the amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I call upon another amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4589

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I ask that we return to the pending business of the Schumer-Clinton amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is pending.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, speaking to the Schumer-Clinton amendment, I wish to simply make the point that obviously all of us in the Northeast have experienced these very severe weather conditions which have led to floods. In New Hampshire, we are a little bit ahead of New York, regrettably. We had a huge storm earlier that led to major flooding throughout the State.

I have to congratulate FEMA for their response. They have been very prompt. They have been on top of it. People who have made requests for reimbursement pursuant to the disaster declarations have received those funds, and we are getting a very effective and efficient response throughout New England, which all of New England was impacted, especially Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

I know New York has gone through this experience, and, of course, the city of Washington has. I understand the Senators from New England planning to make a point relative to the importance of having the resources to make sure when this type of disaster occurs there is money available to address the concerns of the communities that have been hit and the individuals who have been hit.

This amendment, as it is presently structured, is not going to have any impact on the New York problem that exists today. That will be addressed by money that is already in the pipeline, that is in the disaster relief fund. The disaster relief fund has a very robust amount of money in it. It has $9.3 billion in it right now. This bill addresses 2007 disaster activity. This bill has a number of $1.6 billion which will be added to whatever is left at the end of the 2006 year of the $9.3 billion as the resource available to FEMA.

So as a practical matter, the amendment which the Senators from New York have offered will have no impact on the very compelling anecdotal stories that have been put forward relative to the damage to the New York communities. Those communities and the individuals affected by this event will be looking to FEMA, which has resources which are now in the pipeline which will be available for them to assist the people who have been impacted. The money will be there. The New York citizens will get the money they need out of the $9.3 billion which is in the disaster relief fund.

What this amendment does is declare an emergency and add another $300 million to this bill, which is essentially outside of the budget. So I really don’t think it is necessary at this time—in fact, I know it is not necessary at this time, and I know it is not going to impact the immediate New York situation. It just is not. It raises the bigger issue of what should be the number that we put into the disaster relief fund in one of these bills.

It almost is a Oujia board exercise on this committee to figure out what number we put into this account because some years disasters will be significant, and some years they won’t be. The last year and a half, we have dealt with the Katrina event, which was more than significant—it was horrific last year, and that was an aberration, we all sincerely hope—certainly the Presiding Officer hopes that—but that has come to cost us to have to spend over $100 billion on disaster relief.

Whatever we put in this account is really just a guess, and until we see the actual events that are brought upon the Nation relative to natural disasters, how much money this account is going to need will not really be known.

What we have shown as a Congress—and I think we have shown it rather aggressively time and again—is that when a disaster does occur which does qualify under FEMA funds and the disaster relief fund needs dollars, we act in a very prompt and aggressive manner. In fact, one can argue that in the Katrina situation, we put so much money in the pipeline so fast that a lot of it is probably unneeded. That is been our history. I think that is actually the way to approach it.

I have often thought about whether we should just put a lot of money in there and let it sit and wait for the disaster, if we have floods, hurricanes, or tornadoes that create a declaration of disaster, that we make sure we have enough money in the disaster relief fund to meet the immediate needs, and if it needs more, we can come back and do it under emergency declaration.

There is no question there is enough money in the fund to take care of all the disasters we know about, with the potentiality of the exception of Katrina, which is being handled outside the relief fund for the reconstruction of the gulf coast. There is no need to put any more money in this account. Certainly, if we put more money in it at this time, it will have no impact on an event that occurred a month ago or an event that occurs tomorrow or occurs up until the end of September because this money will not be available until October.

So this amendment is a statement, I understand that, of concern by the Senators from New York, and as representatives of the State of New York, I can understand their desire to get on record with such a statement. But at the appropriate time, I will make a point of order against it because it is an expense which we should not incur at this time for the reasons which I have outlined.

For the edification of our Members, my hope is—and I have talked with the Senator from Washington about this—my hope is that after Senator Sessions offers his amendments—and my understanding is that he will be here shortly to do that—we will be able to vote on four amendments. That would be an amendment by Senator MENENDEZ, an amendment by Senators Schumer and Boxer, an amendment by the Appropriations Committees. I hope those votes will get started soon after Senator Sessions has completed his presentation and when anybody who wishes to respond to him has done so.

I suggest the adoption of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask that the pending amendment be set aside. I wish to comment briefly on amendment No. 4582, which I understand would reverse the Transportation Security Administration decision to remove small scissors and tools from the prohibited items list.

I understand we want to take every precaution when it comes to security on our airplanes, in our ports, and on our trains, but this is a case where I think the Administrator of the TSA has been trying to do the right thing. In my opinion, one of the problems will be TSA is where we have given them tons of money, I have demanded and expected all kinds of security instantly, and it has created certain problems. We should focus our money more wisely. I think the Transportation Security Administration should focus on higher priorities. They have been willing to do that.

I have talked to the Administrator, Kip Hawley, several times about what they are trying to do. This is an issue which does have jurisdiction in the Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee on which I serve. Frankly, I commended him, privately and publicly, for being willing to take some of these things off the list. How many of you have been through these outrageous processes that you have to go through or have had to go through to get on airplanes? How many times have I been ripped off of scissors or small pocket knives that are no damage at all? I just went ahead and bought them by the dozen. I mean, this is not going to an airplane take.

So common sense is what I have asked the TSA to use: Use your head. My goodness, is this a weapon? It looks pretty dangerous. It is a ballpoint pen. So it is time we have some common sense at the Department of Homeland Security, at the Transportation Security Administration. How many times am I going to have to take off my shoes because one guy tried to light the heel of his shoe? How long is it going to take us to get technology that makes these frisking processes we go through make sense?

Look, the American people don’t mind being a little inconvenienced or being delayed a little bit if it makes sense. But I am telling you, I have warned TSA: This is one of the examples where you have a problem because the actions here in this instance are like everybody else; when we get on a commercial airplane, we have to endure the same inconveniences and embarrassments and ridiculousness as everybody else.

So I really do oppose this amendment. I think TSA is trying to do the right thing. I go back to what I was talking about a while ago. Senators and Congressmen, you are in a line with your constituents: what are they saying to you? They are ripping us because some of the ridiculousness they have to go through they don’t really think makes an airplane or train or whatever more secure.

So I just hope we will not pass this amendment. I believe the TSA has done the right thing, and I hope they will continue to make it less inconvenient, while making it more secure. Focusing on things that really are a danger will allow them to do a better job where it matters.

I just wanted to raise this point of view with regard to the decision by TSA and to object to the amendment that is pending. I hope to focus on this issue and talk about it responsibly among ourselves and with the Transportation Security Administration—that is good, but I think it would be a much better place to talk about these items which have been taken off the list.

Mr. President, I understand there are other speakers who may be in the area, so I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 4567, 4573, AS MODIFIED, 4626, AS MODIFIED, 4608, AND 4633, EN Bloc

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I have a series of amendments that have been cleared on both sides that I will call up en bloc. I ask unanimous consent that amendment No. 4567, Senator STABINOW; amendment No. 4573, Senator ORBA, as modified; amendment No. 4626, Senator DODD, as modified; amendment No. 4633, Senator CANTWELL; and amendment No. 4653, Senator LAUTENBERG, be called up, deemed read, and agreed to by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments were agreed to, en bloc, as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 4567

(Purpose: To provide collections and expenditures for the Customs User Fee Account)

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

Sec. 18. CUSTOMS USER FEES.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Homeland Security... shall provide personnel and equipment to improve national security by inspecting international shipments of municipal solid waste, and shall levy a fee limited to the approximate cost of such inspections.

AMENDMENT NO. 473, AS MODIFIED
(Purpose: To assist individuals displaced by a major disaster in locating family members)

On page 98, line 6, before the period insert the following: "Provided further, That the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Attorney General of the United States, shall conduct an assessment of the models used by the Louisiana family assistance call center and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in assisting individuals displaced by Hurricane Katrina of 2005 in locating members of their family to determine how these models may be modified to assist individuals displaced in a major disaster (as that term is defined in section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122) in locating members of their family: Provided further, That the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit to the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, and the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on Homeland Security, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives results of the assessment conducted under the previous proviso as well as a plan to implement the findings of such assessment, to the maximum extent practicable\".

AMENDMENT NO. 4856, AS MODIFIED
(Purpose: To increase appropriations for fire fighters' assistance grants, and for other purposes)

On page 65, line 22, strike "$90,122,000" and insert "$82,622,000".

On page 120, increase the amount on line 9 by $17,500,000.

On page 94, line 17, strike "$655,000,000" and insert "$680,000,000".

On page 94, line 17, strike "$540,000,000" and insert "$552,500,000".

On page 94, line 19, strike "$115,000,000" and insert "$127,500,000".

AMENDMENT NO. 4857
(Purpose: To provide for interoperable communication systems planning in connection with the 2010 Olympics)

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 540. REPORT ON CROSS BORDER COMMUNICATIONS CHALLENGES FOR THE 2010 OLYMPICS.

(a) In General.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security, in consultation with the Secretary of State, the Federal Communications Commission, and relevant agencies in the States of Alaska, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, and Washington, shall—

(1) evaluate the technical and operational challenges with respect to interoperable communications systems, including local, State, and Federal authorities in preparing for the 2010 Olympics; and

(2) develop an integrated plan for addressing such technical and operational challenges.

(b) Report to Congress.—The Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit and present the plan to the following: subcommittees of the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate and the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives.

AMENDMENT NO. 4853
(Purpose: To require the Secretary of Homeland Security to submit a classified report to Congress on security vulnerabilities of the bridges and tunnels connecting New Jersey to New York City)

On page 96, line 23, insert ":\: Provided further, That not more than 5 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit a classified report describing the security vulnerabilities of the vehicular and high-speed bridges and tunnels connecting Northern New Jersey and New York City to the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, before the period at the end.

AMENDMENT NO. 4607
Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, today I offer an amendment cosponsored by Senator LEVIN and Senator BAUCUS that will require U.S. Customs and Border Patrol to charge inspection fees to Canadian shippers who export municipal solid waste into Michigan in order to pay for truck inspections. My amendment would impose an approximately $420 fee on every trash truck that crosses into Michigan.

In 2003, the city of Toronto started shipping 100 percent of its trash to Michigan. The result? Every day, 350 trucks carry from Toronto to enter Michigan on their way to Michigan landfills. But they don't just carry trash. In recent years we have found illegal medical waste, including radioactive materials, and illegal drugs and currency. There is no limit to what could be smuggled in these trucks.

In February, the Department of Homeland Security inspector general released a report that I requested with Senator LEVIN and Congressman DINNEAL. The inspector general found that trash trucks are extremely difficult to inspect and carry dangerous waste. The report also points out that trash trucks are difficult to screen with traditional x-ray equipment and must be physically inspected to verify their contents. Finally, the report states that it is virtually impossible to find dangerous items because of limited resources for conducting time-intensive physical inspections.

The report points out that the inspectors know exactly what kinds of dangerous materials are in these trash trucks. Over the past few years, we have seen numerous examples. Customs officials seized nearly 1 ton of illegal drugs hidden inside a Canadian trash truck that traveled into the U.S. from Toronto over the Blue Water Bridge. A Canadian trash truck arrived in Michigan dripping blood because it contained broken bags of untreated blood and hospital waste in direct violation of Michigan and Ontario law requiring that such material be placed in secure containers separate from other waste. A trash truck that was on fire attempted to cross the Blue Water Bridge, requiring 8,000 gallons of water and valuable local, State, and Federal resources before it was finally doused.

Most recently, a Canadian trash truck spilled sewage sludge across a main thoroughfare of Huron Township closing the road for hours and diverting valuable local resources for the cleanup.

These outrageous incidents and the inspector general's report led me to offer an amendment to the fiscal year 2007 budget resolution that was unanimously accepted by the Senate. My amendment assumes $45 million a year in Federal funds that would be collected by charging Canadian trash shippers an inspection fee as they enter Michigan. The collected fees will pay for the increased personnel costs associated with increasing the number of physical inspections of trash trucks, ensuring that taxpayers are not on the hook to pay the costs for inspecting these dangerous trash shipments.

Based on information provided by the inspector general, we know that it will take four Customs agents about 4 hours for each trash truck inspection. Based on personnel and administrative costs, I estimate that the fee for each trash truck will be approximately $420.

The next step is to ensure that Customs can actually collect these fees. The amendment I am offering today does exactly that.

On March 30, the Committee on Homeland Security's Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations released a report called "An Assessment of U.S. Customs and Border Protection's Efforts to Secure the Global Supply Chain." This report includes a section on Canadian trash shipments.

The subcommittee report states that it is "inherently difficult and dangerous to physically inspect trash containers." Furthermore, the subcommittee recommends that Congress "enact into law the provisions recently adopted by the U.S. Senate to impose a fee on international shipments of trash to pay for a more rigorous inspection regime to protect United States citizens from the security risks currently associated with trash containers."

This is what the amendment that I am offering today does exactly that: establishes the inspection fees that the Senate already approved in the budget resolution.

We need to give Customs the resources to more effectively screen and inspect them.

Mr. President, I also wanted to make some remarks and discuss the two reports I previously mentioned in order to provide some legislative history and intent of my amendment No. 4657, that the Senate just adopted.

The Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations' March report, among other things, analyzed the unique security risks posed by the importation of hazardous materials and the origin of the imported products, making it easier to take steps to monitor and ensure the security of the supply chain. There are few, if any, security measures in place to screen trash or ensure that trash does not conceal illegal or harmful materials, such as weapons or nuclear materials.

Growing imports of trash present an increasingly serious security problem. For example, according to the Senate report, Canada shipped roughly 100,000 containers of trash across U.S. borders into Michigan in 2004 alone, an 8-percent increase over 2003. Another 10,000 containers of trash come through nine other ports of entry on both the northern and southern borders of the United States each year.

The Inspector general’s report found that from 2003 to 2004, tons of illegal drugs and millions of dollars in illegal currency have been transported into the United States in trash containers, among other methods. The Senate report concluded that the Department of Homeland Security should ban imports of trash into the United States entirely until the Secretary of Homeland Security should ban imports of trash into the United States in trash containers, among other methods.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to speak on a bipartisan amendment which I introduced with my colleagues, Senators DeWINE and MIKULSKI, that helps our Nation’s firefighters perform their critical duties more safely. This amendment was passed earlier by unanimous consent.

Mr. President, I hope this will provide the executive and judicial branches with fuller explanation of the intent and meaning of this amendment.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise to speak on a bipartisan amendment which I introduced with my colleagues, Senators DeWINE and MIKULSKI, that helps our Nation’s firefighters perform their critical duties more safely. This amendment was passed earlier by unanimous consent.

Mr. President, I hope this will provide the executive and judicial branches with fuller explanation of the intent and meaning of this amendment.
ability of municipalities fully to provide them with the resources they require. Therefore, it is imperative that the Senate continue supporting our firefighters and working to address their concerns.

The amendment that I have offered increases funding for firefighters by $25 million—$1.5 million for the FIRE Act grant initiative and $12.5 million for the SAFER Act grant initiative. These increases bring the total amount of funding for the FIRE Grant to $552,500,000 and the SAFER Grant to $275,500,000. While Senator Gregg, Byrd, and their colleagues on the Homeland Security Appropriations Subcommittee for finding the resources necessary to support these important grant initiatives at levels slightly above last year’s funding, I believe that more resources need to be dedicated to the FIRE and SAFER grants.

The FIRE Act grant initiative has been one of the most successful homeland security grant initiatives in recent years. It is clear that the need for these competitive, merit-based grants continues to grow in all regions of our Nation. For fiscal year 2006 alone, there were over 18,000 applications submitted, totaling over $2.3 billion in grant requests. Unfortunately, less than $545 million in Federal funding was ultimately made available.

Equally important as the FIRE Grant is the SAFER Grant—an initiative which provides critical resources for fire departments to hire and recruit personnel. Just as the FIRE Act provides the equipment and training resources for firefighters to do their job, the SAFER Act provides the human resources necessary to get those jobs done safely and effectively. Over the past three decades, the number of firefighters as a percentage of the Nation’s workforce has steadily declined. Today, two-thirds of fire departments in the United States lack adequate personnel. We have fewer firefighters per capita, one firefighter for every 280 people, than nurses and police officers.

In fiscal year 2006 alone, 1,727 applications were submitted, totaling over $1.8 billion in grant requests. Unfortunately, less than $110 million in Federal funding was ultimately made available. Clearly, we must do more in order to ensure that fire departments are adequately staffed and trained to meet the needs of their communities.

The amendment that I have offered is fully offset by reducing administrative funding for the Office of the Homeland Security Secretary and Executive Manager. Funding for unused funding from last year for science and technology initiatives. These offsets will allow the Office of the Secretary to meet its obligations fully in the coming year and the Department of Homeland Security to develop new technologies that keep Americans safe.

I would like to conclude by reminding my colleagues that the fiscal year 2007 authorization levels for the FIRE and SAFER Grants are $1 billion each. The appropriations in this bill for these initiatives are less than one-third the sums authorized. I am committed to working with my colleagues in the future to ensure that firefighters receive more critical resources they require.

America’s firefighters are always the first ones in and the last ones out. They risk their own lives to save the lives of others. The danger in going into the face every single day because they know they have a duty to fulfill. We must recognize their contribution to our domestic safety and see to it that they have the necessary equipment and personnel in order to perform their critical duties safely and effectively.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Dodd-DeWine amendment increasing funding for firefighter grants. These grants are for local fire departments to ready themselves. The cost of equipment can’t be covered on fish fries and bingos alone. The firefighter grant program is a wise and prudent use of Federal funds. I know these Appropriations have worked well in my home State of Maryland.

This program has no winners or losers. Everyone wins in rural and urban America. I acknowledge that these are tight times and there is a tight allocation. But we must do better for our first responders. When I was the ranking member on the Appropriations Subcommittee on Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, Senator BOND and I funded firefighter grants. While this amendment does not get us to that funding level, it does provide an increase for the program.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4659

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. SESSIONS], for himself, and Mr. ENSSLN, proposes an amendment numbered 4659.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4659

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4659.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is pending. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, less than 2 months ago, on May 17, my colleagues, by a vote of 83 to 16, approved my amendment to the Department of Homeland Security immigration bill to construct at least 370 miles of fencing and 500 miles of vehicle barriers along the southwest border of the United States. This was based on the statement of the Secretary of Homeland Security, Tom Ridge, that this was what he believed was necessary to create a border enforcement system.

Of course, a fence is not a cure-all, but it is a very real and integral component of enforcement at the border. Many have the greatest difficulty with are urban areas. You can't put a policeman at every single street corner where people can walk across. So a barrier is necessary.

We have a number of barriercs in San Diego and other places, and they have worked very well. Crime on both sides of the border has decreased, property values have increased in those areas, and economic development has occurred.

So there is no doubt—and it is not something that is mysterious—that a good fencing procedure will help us in many ways. It is something we discussed and debated, and then when we voted, we voted 83 to 16 to approve it—a bipartisan vote.

But what I wish to make clear is this was simply an authorization. It represented a promise, a commitment by the Senate that we would build fencing. We would build fencing, and that, in large part of our country, with the American people in which we told them we are getting serious about enforcement. We are not just talking anymore. We really mean this time to get serious about enforcement, and we are going to do the things that are necessary. We are not going to build a fence along the entire border, but we need a certain amount of fencing—370 miles—and that is what would be put in, and that is what this Congress, this Senate, and the House have funded. I think they have 600 miles in their bill. So this was where we were.

I have made this point for some time in the debate: We do a lot of talking, we do a lot of legislating. The things we do often sound very good. The things we say often sound very good. But we don't ever quite get there. The things which will really make a difference, which can be demonstrable in improving lawfulness at the border, somehow, some way, seem not to become.

This fencing requires a sum of money. We are going to show an increase—an increase—in spending for Medicare and Medicaid and Social Security next year or this year, this period, of over $70 billion. We are talking here about a cost of less than $2 billion, a one-time enforcement enhancement of having a barrier at the border.

The figure we have in here of $1.8 billion contemplates that it will all be done by contractors. There are contractors at the higher prices for the better fence. I suspect as we move forward in conference the conference may find that the National Guard, which were not part of the process at the beginning, were not being called out when we first voted on this amendment, could actually build this fencing for what we understand would be one-third the cost per mile. This might be a perfect thing for them to do. It may be that there may be other ways to keep this cost down.

We made a commitment as a body that we were going to take some real steps that would work to enhance enforcement at the border. So as we go through conferees, in many ways the vote we are about to take on funding this amendment is a test. The American people should look at us and evaluate us according to this test we are about to take. Were we serious on May 17 when we said we wanted to build this fence? It is not in this bill today. This is the legislation that is the appropriate vehicle to put in the spending for it. It is not in the President's request. It is not in the item that came from the Senate.

I know the committee had many challenges, but this matter is important. It represents a commitment made to the American people. We need to follow through on that. If we do not, then it has been simply an authorization. It represented a promise, a commitment by the Senate to create a lawful system of immigration in our country, to end the lawlessness at the border and create a lawful system.

That is what we need to do. We don't need to end immigration. We are going to maintain immigration. We are going to treat people fairly. We are going to allow people to come in and go from the United States. In fact, we can enhance that and make it much easier, but we need to have a lawful system.

We need to end this unlawful system, and that is what I would say is so critical about this process.

The Senate has written appropriately $288 million for necessary expenses to plan, construct, renovate, equip, and maintain buildings and facilities necessary for the administration and enforcement of the laws relating to customs and immigration. None of this $288 million is designated for any construction of new areas of border fencing on the Southwest border, as we voted to do by 83 to 13. The construction funding only includes money to continue land acquisitions for the San Diego fence—$30 million—which is already under construction.

As for vehicle barriers that we have been told are important, especially out in the rural areas, barriers to stop the easy crossing of vehicles, 39 miles of new permanent vehicle barrier in western Arizona only are funded. That is for 39 miles, not the 500 miles that we authorized. It continues construction of vehicle barriers in El Paso for a few miles and part of vehicle barriers in the Swanton Sector.

Those amounts are the only amounts out of the $288 million that are designated specifically for fencing and vehicle barriers. That is not enough to fund what the Senate voted to authorize, 370 miles of fencing and 500 miles of vehicle barriers.

I know there are ways to contain costs. Frankly, I think if we work at it we will be able to demonstrate this amount of fencing could be done for less than we have here. But I would say to my colleagues, the estimates we have had are these. This will meet the challenge. Unless we have clear evidence that the memoir estimates will be met, funding for these miles of fencing is not included in the bill.

The advantages of fencing are numerous. It magnifies, it multiplies the effectiveness of our Border Patrol officers, it gives them a way to do a difficult job to do. They have to maintain a border that is 1,700 miles long. They need help. There is no way we could have enough Border Patrol agents to patrol that entire border. We need a fence. It is much cheaper and easier to do, for those who would come in to our country illegally.

Fencing has worked in San Diego, it has worked in Arizona, and it is going to work wherever we put it, to enhance the ability of our law enforcement officers to detain and stop and interrogate those who would enter the country illegally, which is what we need to do if we are going to move from this lawless system of immigration to a lawful system of immigration.

These are the kinds of things the American people have been asking for. They are asking for us to demonstrate that business as usual is no longer in effect, that talk is no longer in effect. The American people are looking at us and they are going to be looking at us carefully to see if we are actually going to follow through on what might really work to reduce illegal immigration and to create a system that is lawful and decent and fair; so people who wait in line and not those who break the law and come across the border illegally are the ones who get rewarded.

We need to stop that. That is wrong. It undermines law and sends a wrong message to those people who come into our country.

I say to my colleagues that we need to do a better job. We have a serious problem with the American people. They are suspicious of us. They are cynical about what we have done. We have been talking about a lawful system of immigration for 30 or 40 years, and we have never produced it. We passed a bill 20 years ago, in 1986, that was to be the amnesty to end all amnesties. We said we are going to do this one time and after this is done we are going to create a lawful system for immigration.

What happened? Amnesty became law just like that. The people got their amnesty. And there was a promise. As we made a promise on May 17 to build fences, they promised to do the things necessary to secure the border after 1986, and it never happened. It didn’t happen in the 1970s, 1980s, 1990s, and 2000. We had a series of Presidents who did not follow through. We have had a series of Congresses that have sat over those years and they have not made this system work. Yet when we go back home to our borders we say we want no amnesty and we want a lawful system. It is time for us to make a decision.

This is a lot of money, you say. It is $2 billion. I say we spend $1,400 billion a year in this country. If you took a poll of American people and they say we ought to spend a couple of billion dollars to start making a real dent in the illegality at the border, that they would expect us to find the money somewhere? I think there is no other country in the world that is worthy of being reduced to some degree so we could fund this.

My amendment would simply take an overall reduction in funding in this bill because that is what I am limited to, really, as an effective amendment at this point: to cut across all funding levels in the bill a sufficient sum to fund what we committed to do, which is build a fence.

I want to say to my colleagues, this matter is not going away. We are not going to be able to go back to the American people and tell them we have taken seriously their directive to us to fix this system if we don’t put up the money necessary to do so.

As so many years—and recently we have talked about it a lot—you have to get to that tipping point in enforcement. You have to reach that point in which it is quite clear to those who would want to come to this country that the best way to do so is to come lawfully, to wait in line and take your turn.

I talked with President Bush about it on Air Force One. He agreed. He used the phrase “tipping point.” That is exactly an effective amendment at this point: a barrier, sufficient agents, sufficient detention spaces are key to that. It is not going to break the bank.

I am optimistic about our ability to achieve this. But you simply have to close the holes. You have a bucket with three holes in it. If you close two of the holes, you are still going to have the water run out. When we do what is necessary to close the holes in our legal system we can create a system that will create a tipping point where people wait in line and come legally according to the standards this country establishes for them.

I am very concerned that by not funding what we just so recently voted for, by not funding that we will be indicating, just like in 1986, we were really serious about moving forward with an amnesty but we are not serious about creating a lawful system of immigration in this country. Won’t that break faith with the people who sent us here? Wouldn’t that undermine their respect once again? It is already at the lowest possible ebb.

They know we have not been serious about the border. Everybody knows that. Who can deny that? It has been an issue for quite a long time. It has been discussed and discussed. They say we can have a virtual fence. A virtual fence will help a little bit. But I am not able to cash a virtual check at the bank.

I would like to see some real fencing. So we had a discussion about that and which is what we voted to build a fence. It was a lot more than half of what the House voted in size, but it was a significant step that will, in fact, multiply the effectiveness of our Border Patrol agents who are working their hearts out today and absolutely will do that. It will absolutely work.

That is why some people oppose it so steadfastly. Whatever you present in the matter of immigration, in my experience, that actually tends to work, gets objected to. Somehow it becomes very difficult to pass.

There was objection to this amendment, frankly, until the very end. I think the American people were heard and all of a sudden we ended up with 83 votes. Some people thought it would be a close vote. It wasn’t so close when we voted because we were listening to our constituents, which is what we are supposed to do.

There are 2,000 miles on the border. Many of those are quite remote, not appropriate to build a fence on. Some say they want to build a wall along the border. What would be the strategic fencing. We need to use high technology. We need increased agents. We need enough bed spaces when someone is apprehended so that they can be detained pending deportation, particularly if they are other than Mexicans, because the Mexicans can be taken across the border right quickly, normally. But for those who are from other areas of the world, sometimes it is very difficult to effect a deportation.

As a result of our immigration system are forced to confront a problem. They don’t have the bed space for them. They don’t have a plane flying back to the Philippines or Brazil or Chile or wherever the people may be from that day, so they are releasing people on bail, and subsequently they are released and they don’t show up to be deported.

Mr. President, how much time remains on this?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no time limit in effect at this time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, that is where we are. What you need to do is reduce the number of people who are coming here illegally. You need to reach a tipping point. People who are coming here illegally, other than Mexicans, have been told correctly until recent months that if they are apprehended, they are not going to be put up on a plane back to Brazil or the Philippines or wherever they may have come from. They are going to be released on bail. One study showed that 95 percent of the people released on bail under these circumstances didn’t show up to be deported. Surprise, surprise.

You need bed spaces. We have some more bed spaces in our bill. You need more agents—not a huge number of bed spaces and not huge increases in agents, but you need more agents and more bed spaces. You need to multiply the impact and effectiveness of Border Patrol agents by barriers.

How much more simple can it be than that, that we have these barriers and multiply the effectiveness of our Border Patrol people?

The strategy among those who support this bill that passed the Senate—the Kennedy-McCain bill, or whatever we want to call it, which moved through the Senate without one Republican vote? It is already at the lowest possible ebb. The strategy is that we will sort of have a conference with the House of Representatives in secret and we will come up with some deal that gives amnesty to everybody who is here. Check what happened in the 1980s, and we will talk about how to make enforcement work.

A lot of people said: Listen, we went through that in 1986. That is what we talked about in 1986. Remember? Don’t forget that. That is what they said in 1986. They said in 1986: Give us amnesty today and we will take care of the enforcement tomorrow.

Senator ISAKSON offered an amendment to deal with that very specific issue that was watched. He said: I am very concerned that by not having come law.

promises—but we are not going to deliver.

That is why I am saying to my colleagues that this border fence is more than just a little matter of $1 billion plus, as much as that is. It is a matter for the American people to evaluate whether they are acting with integrity when it comes to creating a lawful system of immigration in America.

The Secretary of Homeland Security said it is necessary. We voted 83 to 16 to approve it. We were told that cuts to virtually every other discretionary program that is funded within this Homeland Security bill. That amendment amounts to a 5.7 percent decrease to critical programs such as the Coast Guard operations that are absolutely essential in both homeland security and with the number of domestic issues.

His amendment would also cut FEMA and disaster relief funds at the height of the hurricane and western forest fire season, and it cuts funding from the Secret Service for the protection of the President.

This amendment also cuts a lot of our critical border security programs. On a bipartisan basis earlier this week, the Senate increased funding for border security programs by $350 million. The bill that is before the Senate right now has $11 billion for Customs and border protection and immigration and Customs enforcement.

The irony of the Senator’s amendment is that it would cut funding for the hiring of 1,000 new Border Patrol agents to pay for the fence. His amendment cuts funding for 1,000 additional detention beds to pay for this fence. And his amendment would fund unmanned aerial investigation and surveillance helicopters and Border Patrol helicopters to pay for this fence.

The bill before the Senate is carefully constructed and balanced to provide funding for homeland security priorities within very limited resources. I know the chairman and the ranking member of this committee have worked long and hard to balance a lot of requests for homeland security. The amendment before us would unbalance that dramatically.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment. I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I greatly respect the Senator from Alabama and his tireless efforts in addressing the issue of illegal immigration and his Senate been one of those parts of the urban areas of the border where a wall would be effective. It is an appropriate amendment, and I strongly support it. It was in the authorization. Had the administration supported our efforts relative to capital improvements in the supplemental, we might have been able to make a fairly significant commitment toward that wall. But the wall would be built over 2 years.

This amendment accelerates that construction into a 1-year time period. Within the bill, we have approximately $400 million in supplemental capital improvements that could be used for wall construction. I don’t think all of it would be used. Some of it would be obviously.

We should build these walls. There is no question about it. The real issue is that the offset being used creates a Hobson’s choice for almost everyone here. I suspect, because the practical effect of a 7 percent cut would be that we would have to reduce Border Patrol agents by about 750. We would have to reduce detention beds by about 1,100.

We have attempted very hard to increase Border Patrol agents in this bill and increase detention beds. Yet we haven’t funded the wall specifically as a result of our efforts to do these increases.

The effect on the Coast Guard, the Senator from Washington alluded to, would probably be that the number of fast boats which we intended to buy would be reduced significantly, and our capacity to arm helicopters would be reduced from what we hoped to arm—60 helicopters. We thought the most, armed probably 50, maybe 55.

There is a real implication to this amendment. It has an implication in the things we are doing relative to border security which will be impacted by it.

I am totally sympathetic to the need to make this investment in this fencing activity. And I believe within the Department’s funds relative to capital improvements there is also some money which could be put there but nowhere near the dollars he believes are necessary with which the Department needs to continue construction.

We are going to have to come up with a better way to do this. We are not going to be able to do it. And my humble opinion, the way this amendment is constructed—in an across-the-board cut.

I have to oppose this amendment in its present form for that reason.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, we are going to proceed with construction over 2 years. Since we don’t know what will happen next year, the Congress voted to build a fence, and we ought to fund the fence, in my opinion, when we promised to build it. But we could build it over 2 years and split the money each year, I suppose. It would ultimately slow down completion. It would probably take some time to get it constructed. I don’t know whether my colleagues would agree to cut that price in half and do it over 2 years, and whether it would gain their support. If so, I would be prepared to accept that reduction in the amendment.

Let me just say that we know what happened. Senator GREGG did his very best in the supplemental. Judd Gregg, chairman of our committee, is a fine Budget Committee chairman. He also chairs this Homeland Security Subcommittee. He was able to force into supplemental additional money for border security which was not in the President’s request. I salute him for that. But that is not getting us there. We are still talking about nickels and dimes. We are still talking about business as usual. Somehow we need to find this money. We spend over $800 billion a year in discretionary spending. We spend nearly $1.4 trillion a year in entitlement spending, entitlement increases—an increase of over $100 billion next year. So we can’t find a couple of billion dollars to take the commitment we made to the American people?

We know how the system works around here. There is no one way that it works. There are many ways to skin a cat, as they say.

We need a vote for this amendment. And that would send a signal to the Appropriations Committee and send a signal to the White House that this Senate is serious about fulfilling its commitments. Some way between now and then, some way they will find this money through whatever sources are appropriate to fund it. That is where we need to be. That is what we need to achieve.

If we allow it to go through without any money for this fencing, we will rightly be accused of not being serious about the commitments we have made to the American people with regard to actually enforcing the laws of immigration in America, which many Americans already believe we are not serious about. They do not respect what we have done in the past, and they should not; we have failed. It is time for Congress to try to fix it and do better. In fact, we must do better. The Secretary of Homeland Security has told us this kind of barrier fencing is necessary for his success.

Now, we build a bridge in immigration that goes about 8 feet across the 19-foot border. We have never quite closed the loop. As a result, we never reach the tipping point where it becomes much more logical for someone who wants to come to America to come legally than illegally, so they continue to come illegally. They are rewarded for that. They get to the head of the line, and they get amnesty when they get here after a period of time. That is a bad signal. We need to stop that signal.

By building more barrier fencing, by following up on the President’s commitment to call out the National Guard, those activities send a signal to the world that our border is no longer open. Isn’t that the message we want to send? The White House and the Senate must demand that. We have a generous immigration system, far more generous than any nation I am aware of in the world. More generous than Canada, more generous than England, more generous than Mexico. We have a generous system. Don’t let anyone put us down that we are somehow an anti-immigrant Nation. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are very generous, but we do need to have a system that is lawful.

About a million people cross into our country a year. About 750,000 of 800,000 come into the country illegally. Almost as many come legally. That is not right. It cannot continue. This is not an extreme position to take.

Let’s build the fences that the Secretary of Homeland Security discussed. I don’t know where the Senator would get the money for it and exactly how it would be worked, but I believe if we voted a strong vote to fund this fencing, somehow, some way, the leadership of the House and the Senate would get together and figure out a way to fund it appropriately.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask to enter into a unanimous consent agreement relative to a series of votes: At 2:30, the Senate proceed to consecutive votes in relation to the following amendments: Senator MENENDEZ, No. 4674; Senator SCHUMER, No. 4680; Senator SESSIONS, No. 4699; Senator Sessions S 4660. I further ask consent that the time until then continue under the agreement which we had earlier relative to the Sessions amendment; further, that no amendment in order to any of the amendments prior to the vote; further that prior to the first vote, Senator LEAHY be recognized for 1 minute, Senator MENENDEZ for 1 minute, and myself for 1 minute; further that between the remaining votes there be 2 minutes equally divided in the usual form and that after the first vote, all votes be 10 minutes.

Mr. DAYTON. Reserving the right to object, I have an amendment, possibly a second one that is not agreed to, stipulating that at least 20 percent of the agents will be directed to the northern border.

Mr. GREGG. I say to the Senator, we will be happy to entertain that amendment, voting on these and put that in the queue for consideration after we complete the votes.

Mr. DAYTON. There will be an opportunity to offer and have it considered by the Senate after this sequence.

Mr. GREGG. We will be here for a little while.

Mr. DAYTON. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALFORD). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. I make one thing very clear: Fencing should not be a political gimmick. It should not be a suggestion that it would cure all of our problems, but fencing works.

Let me share some thoughts about it. It is proven with the establishment of the San Diego border fence, crime rates in San Diego have fallen off dramatically. According to the FBI crime index, crime in San Diego county dropped 56.3 percent between 1989 and 2000. Vehicle drive-throughs—these are people who bolt across the border in a vehicle—vehicle crime dropped 48.7 percent. Additionally, the immigration prohibited areas have fallen from between six and ten per day before the construction of border infrastructure to four drive-throughs in all of 2004. And those four only occurred where the secondary fence was incomplete.

Fencing has reduced illegal entries in San Diego. According to numbers provided by the San Diego Border Sector Patrol in February of 2004, apprehensions decreased from 531,000 in 1993 to 111,000 in 2003. Let me repeat that. We are heading to? How do we get off this track of not doing what we committed to do? Vote for this amendment. It will send a message to the appropriators, it will send a message to the administration, it will send a message to those who are working on our appropriations accounts that we as a Senate expect and desire it.

I am quite aware there is a shortage of money, and we have to make choices. I repeat, in our discretionary budget, we spend about $870, maybe $900 billion in our entitlement program expenditure. It will increase 9 percent next year. It will increase $100 billion. We spend $1.4 trillion-plus on entitlements. That is $1.4 trillion on entitlements. We cannot find $2 billion to deal with the fencing that we voted a few weeks ago to approve? I think we can if we try. It is a matter of priorities and make the tough priority choices and find the money necessary to do this. Maybe we can fund it over 2 years. If so, they will work that out. This is not the final draft of the bill that will ultimately be before the Senate. They will work that out. I am willing to work with them on that.

Also, if the National Guard were to build it, we have been told they would do it for one-third of the cost that private contractors would charge. That could be just a sawhorse, and we could get this fencing done without so much money in any one budget year.

We voted to build 370 miles of fencing, 500 miles of barriers for vehicles, and I am hoping we will not disappoint the American people, once again. I am hoping somehow, some way, we will rise to the occasion and say: We made a commitment. It is the right thing to do.

The administration was never out here championing building fencing. That is never something they said would be a cure-all. Frankly, it is a bigger positive step than many people admit. They did come forward and tell us, through the Secretary of Homeland Security, that these were the figures they needed to create a lawful system at our border. We have areas in developed cities and towns where people can walk across the border without even a checkpoint or even a fence there. This is what we need to do.

If we are serious about it, and I think there is a growing seriousness with the President and the leadership of the Senate, let’s step up and do what it takes. Don’t go 8 feet across the 10-foot ravine and fall into the pit. Let’s complete the task before the Senate. Somehow, some way, we can find the money in this budget. I know we will if we pass this amendment. If we do not pass this amendment, we will be sending a signal, it is business as usual, and we do not intend to honor our commitments.

That is the wrong thing to do it. It could not be more damaging to have failed to honor our commitments on any bill before the Senate. This is a bill for which the American people are, and I think there is a growing seriousness with the President and the leadership of the Senate, let’s step up and do what it takes. Don’t go 8 feet across the 10-foot ravine and fall into the pit. Let’s complete the task before the Senate. Somehow, some way, we can find the money in this budget. I know we will if we pass this amendment. If we do not pass this amendment, we will be sending a signal, it is business as usual, and we do not intend to honor our commitments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, this amendment deals with sufficient funding of ICE, Immigration and Custom Enforcement interior agents. ICE is authorized to hire in FY 2007, a total of 800 new agents. This means that we have to find the money for ICE to hire 659 more agents than the bill currently funds. That is 800, minus 141.

The Department of Homeland Security tells me that it costs as much as $130,000 to fund a fully wrapped new ICE agent for the first year, with training and equipment and all those things. Therefore, the cost for these additional 659 new agents will be $85 million. To pay for these agents, the amendment continues the interior agent funding reduction.

This is about making some decisions about what we intend to do with regard to enforcement of immigration laws. It sets some priorities. So that will help us focus on what we need to do.

To me, based on my experience, having worked with Customs agents, having worked with Border Patrol agents, having worked with INS agents back when I was a Federal prosecutor, interior enforcement agents, who are responsible for enforcing immigration laws in the workplace and inside our borders, are a top priority.

Let me tell you, it is not going to be that difficult. We are not going to need tens of thousands of Federal agents to change the workplace illegality that is going on. Most businesses today want to do the right thing. We have not given a biometric card, which is not easily counterfeitable, to those people who come here legally so the business can make a legitimate decision about whether they are legal or not. We have created a lawless system in many different ways.

But businesses must be held accountable. We can create, under this bill, a system that gives businesses a greater ability to know what the law is and to comply with the law. Once they know the law, we expect them to comply with the law. We do not want our immigration agents to be used as a way to get into the workplace and then to ask for money, which is what our opponents are trying to do.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4610. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the votes that are uncorrected on the amendment to the amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is now pending.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, this particular amendment, which enjoys wide support here in the Senate, would dramatically increase the availability of alternative energy refueling systems, such as biodiesel, ethanol, and compressed natural gas, by reimbursing eligible entities up to $30,000 for the costs associated with installing these alternative gas pumps.

Like many of my colleagues in the Senate, I believe our Nation’s homeland security is directly related to our Nation’s energy security. The underlying goal of this amendment is to provide American consumers more opportunities to use American-made alternative fuels as we work to lessen our Nation’s dependence upon foreign sources of energy.

As I noted yesterday when I offered this amendment, I am unaware of any opposition to what this amendment attempts and seeks to do. In fact, since I offered the amendment, a number of our colleagues here in the Senate have cosponsored this particular provision.

Additionally, American automakers, such as General Motors and Ford, support this effort, as do various agricultural groups—from the Farm Bureau to the National Corn Growers Association—as well as environmental groups. The reason is very simple. It makes a lot of sense for so many reasons, not the least of which is getting us away from this overdependence of foreign oil and its effects on the environment. It is good for the American consumer. It is good for the American agricultural producer.
Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I had reserved the final 4 minutes of my time in opposition to the Menendez amendment. I am going to claim that time now.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey. Let me briefly summarize three issues that make the amendment so problematic.

First, it slashes the minimum allocation for homeland security grant money. It would impose a two-thirds cut in the guaranteed allocation which would undermine the efforts of States that have entered into multiyear projects such as improving the interoperability of their communications equipment which is an expensive multiyear proposition.

Second, the amendment makes absolutely no sense. If my colleagues are not subject to an amendment of Homeland Security’s allocation of funding for the Homeland Security Grant Program, why would they want to give unfettered discretion to the Department on how to allocate the funds?

The amendment has absolutely no criteria included in it to define risk. By contrast, the proposal that was approved by the Homeland Security Committee sets out criteria—such as whether there had been a terrorist attack previously, the population density, whether it is a border State, whether it is on the coastline—and gives guidance to the Department since it has clearly shown that it does not have a well-developed system for allocating based on risk. We have seen the results of that.

Third, the Senator from New Jersey strikes the requirement in current law to have the Department look at the need for the funding. All of us are concerned about reports that homeland security grant money in some localities has been wasted, whether it is on leather jackets or air-conditioned garbage trucks, actual cases, one in the District and one in Delaware, or for other questionable purposes. We need to make sure that the Department is allocating the funds not only based on risk, threat, and vulnerability but also on need and effectiveness. There are no requirements for this funding to be developed and allocated based on the need for it nor the effectiveness of the State’s plan.

For those three reasons and many more, I urge my colleagues to oppose the Menendez amendment. Thirty-six States and the District of Columbia would lose funding under his proposal. The funding instead would be reallocated to 14 States which already receive more than 70 percent of all the funding for homeland security.

This is a misguided amendment. It will lead to wasteful spending. It will undermine the efforts to bring all States up to a base level of preparedness. I urge my colleagues to oppose it.

I see the Senator from Delaware is on the floor. He has been very active in considering the chairman of the subcommittee and conclude, as he has, an amendment to the appropriations bill probably is not the appropriate vehicle to have this amendment considered, and discussed. I am greatly encouraged by many of the discussion and statements of support for this initiative that I have received since offering it, as well as some new ideas I have received that I hope to explore to make this particular provision even stronger.

So with that, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for a later time.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, thank you. First of all, I appreciate the explanation of the chairman of the subcommittee and his amendment was, I should say, his first amendment pass, he would reduce that number, logically—because there would be a 5-percent reduction—by 300. It would be almost a 6-percent reduction, I think. So, again I have to oppose the amendment. Although the policy may make sense, the way it is paid for does not. It would actually do significant harm to our capacity, in my opinion, to have a robust Department of Homeland Security.

So I will oppose the second amendment offered also by the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, thank you. Before I address the issues, I have discussed, I am greatly concerned that I hope to explore to make this particular provision even stronger. So with that, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for a later time.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I appreciate the remarks of the Senator from South Dakota. The issue he has raised here is an important one. I also appreciate the fact that it is more appropriately raised on another matter.

Mr. President, speaking to the second amendment that Senator Sessions has offered, this again is an issue of priorities. The amendment just replaces the need to build a wall with the need to add agent security agents and detention beds and make the Coast Guard a more robust player and more capable, and the VISIT program and the immigration program work well.

It is remarkably, actually, that this amendment, which increases investigators by 800, would, if the first amendment were to pass, end up reducing investigators by 300. I guess the net result would be if both amendments passed, you would end up with 500 investigators. But that shows the problem here that is being presented to the Senate by the way these amendments are structured with their across-the-board cuts. Because the across-the-board cuts impact the entire Department, this is not a Department that does a lot of things we do not need to do.

Certainly, we need our Border Patrol agents. We need our Coast Guard. We need our Secret Service. We need our detention beds to make sure we can put these people away when we have them. So when you do an across-the-board cut, you impact all these other services.

And, yes, ICE could use more investigators. That is why in this bill we added 75, so that we have 6,600 investigators in the ICE program. He would add 800 more to that. But, as I said, should his first amendment pass, he would reduce that number, logically—because there would be a 5-percent reduction—by 300. It would be almost a 6-percent reduction, I think. So, again I have to oppose the amendment. Although the policy may make sense, the way it is paid for does not. It would actually do significant harm to our capacity, in my opinion, to have a robust Department of Homeland Security.

So I will oppose the second amendment offered also by the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, thank you. First of all, I appreciate the explanation of the chairman of the subcommittee and his amendment was, unfortunately, that good policy notwithstanding, taking money away from other good policy decisions we have made or intend to make in support of funding for more Border Patrol agents, more detention spaces, and so on, requires that we oppose the amendment that would take money from those programs to build more fencing.

Much of this fencing is in my State of Arizona. We need that fencing. I am convinced the ICE has done the fencing done, if not by the National Guard, then by construction that will, in fact, cost money, for which there is some in the budget. There is probably more needed, and we are going to have to find a way to add that. But this, unfortunately, has been constructed as a zero-sum game with this amendment. In order to put more money on fencing, we take more money away from Border Patrol. So that is going to make it a very difficult proposition.

Mr. President, the matter I would like to ask unanimous consent to speak on. I say to the chairman, actually is a matter not related to this bill. I ask unanimous consent to speak for 90 seconds as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. KYL are printed in today’s RECORD under “Morning Business.”)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine is recognized.
Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 4659 AND 4660

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to conclude my remarks on the question of funding of the authorized border fencing in amendment No. 4659, and amendment No. 4660, which would authorize the funding for the hiring of a number of interior enforcement agents that we authorized and voted to hire just a few weeks ago. I would like to talk about that.

I am well aware that there is a great deal of discussion about the fence. I am for the fence. Everybody is for the fence. We just voted to put the money in to do just what they voted to do.

Remember the fence can’t be built and the agents we authorized to be hired can’t be hired unless we appropriate the money. Please, we have to appropriate the money. I know this budget is tight. I will just say to my colleagues I thank Senator Gregg for his support for the fence, his work in the supplemental to get more money for enforcement. If it had not been for his leadership, we would not have as much as we have. But it is not enough. I encourage my colleagues to vote for this amendment. It is a statement by the Senate that somehow we expect this matter to be funded. There is plenty of money in this Government, if we look for it, to fund this important matter.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor. Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 4659 AND 4660

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I have a modification at the desk for the two amendments I have proposed. I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to modify those two amendments, as we have proposed them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments (Nos. 4659 and 4660), as modified, are as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4659, AS MODIFIED

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 2. (a) The amount appropriated by title II under the heading “CUSTOMS AND BORDER ENFORCEMENT” and under the subheading described in subsection (a) shall be reduced by $85,670,000.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, of the amount made available under the subheading described in subsection (a) of $104,000,000 of which shall be available to hire an additional 800 full time active duty investigators employed by the Department of Homeland Security to investigate violations of immigration laws (as defined in section 101(a)(17) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(17)) pursuant to section 5203 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 (Public Law 108-458; 118 Stat. 3734) which requires the hiring of not less than 800 investigators than the number for which funds were made available during fiscal year ending September 30, 2006.

The discretionary amounts made available under this Act, other than the amount appropriated under the subheading described in subsection (a), shall be reduced by $85,670,000.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I will take 30 seconds to say that this amendment would authorize the appropriation committee to pay for the fencing—give them more discretion to pay for it out of the account they deem is appropriate. It would be across the board but within their discretion, so that no one particular account must be cut or reduced by passage of this amendment. The Coast Guard and other things would not have to be reduced in order to pay for this amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, the points I previously made relative to the impact of this amendment remain accurate. I continue my opposition to both amendments because of the across-the-board cut nature and the impact it would have on all elements of the Homeland Security Department. Even though the policy may be something we would agree with if we had the resources, we don’t have the resources.

I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be votes on four amendments: Menendez, No. 4654; Schumer, No. 4660; Sessions, No. 4659, as modified; and Sessions, No. 4660, as modified.

Prior to the first vote, Senator LEAHY is recognized for 1 minute, Senator MENENDEZ for 1 minute, Senator GREGG for 1 minute, and between the remaining votes the time for debate will be divided in the usual form, and after the first vote each will be a 10-minute vote.

Senator LEAHY is recognized for 1 minute.

AMENDMENT NO. 4654

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the underlying issue today on this amendment is that the administration has slashed Homeland Security funding. It has mismanaged the grants it has awarded. We would not be in the situation of pitting State against State if the President adequately funded Homeland Security. Grants are being cut from $2.3 billion in 2003 to under $1 billion this year—$1 billion for the whole... year, this Homeland Security grant. We spend over a billion dollars a week in Iraq. If we can spend money for homeland security in Iraq, we ought to spend money for homeland security in Iraq. If we can spend money for homeland security, this Homeland Security grant.

We spend over a billion dollars a week or $9.3 billion a year, this Homeland Security grant.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, let me say at this point I agree totally with my colleague from Vermont. We are dramatically underfunded for what we need for homeland security. That truly is the core of the issue. I appreciate the spirit of the debate he has had with us on this issue and his comments. I simply believe that as we seek to fund it fully, the question becomes, What do we do now? The bipartisan, unanimous 9/11 Commission recommended that homeland security funding be based on risk. That is what this amendment does.

Many of my colleagues have actually made the case, by virtue of what they have said, that risk-based funding should be the very essence of our foundation. They made a good case for their respective States for risk-based funding when they argued that their States have high-risk targets. This amendment does nothing to eliminate the effectiveness component. It does not eliminate the minimum guarantees for States. But threat after threat has been revealed, and that makes it very clear where the greatest threats are in our country. That ultimately should be our thrust, driving our resources, those which we have, as we try to build more to where the risk is.

We are all in this together. We are called upon to vote for agriculture, hurricanes, and other things. I ask Senators to vote in favor of this amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I believe in a risk-based approach. I support the amendment. I yield back my time.

I ask for the yea and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment (No. 4634), as modified, was rejected.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

CHANGE OF VOTE

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I respectfully request that on vote No. 198 my vote be recorded as yea. It will not make a difference in the final tally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, on roll call vote 198, I voted nay. It was my intention to vote yea. I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to change my vote since the outcome will not be affected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The foregoing tally has been changed to reflect the above order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be 2 minutes for debate on the Schumer amendment. Who yields the floor?

The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, this amendment is one which I believe would be supported by George Bush because it restores the amount of funding for FEMA by $300 million. That is what the President requested.

We have had unprecedented disasters in the Northeast and in so many other places in other parts of the country as well. We have had disaster after disaster in this country. FEMA should not be underfunded. We should not have the people who have been wiped out by floods and drought and hurricanes sitting on tenterhooks in the hopes that maybe we will pass a supplemental 6 or 8 months from now.

This simply restores the President's request for FEMA. It would hardly be a profligate request. So I ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, particularly those from the Northeast, to support this amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, the disaster relief fund has $9.3 billion in it. That is more than enough money to get us through the balance of this year and will give us a surplus going into next year. We have $1.6 billion in this bill to add to the $9.3 billion for next year. If a disaster occurs and it is of significant proportions, we will obviously come back and do an emergency appropriations.

No money that would occur as a result of the amendment of the Senator from New York could be used this year for any disasters that have occurred this year in the Northeast because, of course, this money won't be available until next year. There is adequate money, however, to take care of the Northeast issues. So at this time I ask Members to oppose this amendment.

Mr. President, pursuant to the deem ing language in Public Law 109–234, I raise a point of order against the emergency designation of the pending amendment.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, pursuant to section 402 of H. Con. Res. 95, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2006, I move to waive section 402 of that concurrent resolution for the purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained. The emergency designation is removed.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I will raise a point of order against the amendment which was not an emergency. The pending amendment would cause the bill to violate section 302 of the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is well taken. The amendment fails.

AMENDMENT NO. 4659, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GREGG. Now I understand we are on to the first amendment of the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 2 minutes equally divided on the Sessions amendment, No. 4659, as modified.

Mr. SESSIONS. This amendment would follow through on our 83-to-16 vote on May 17 to build 370 miles of fencing at the border and 500 miles of vehicle barriers, as requested by the Secretary of Homeland Security, Mike Chertoff. Unfortunately, this bill does not fund it. Just a few weeks ago, we authorized it. Now we are not funding it. That is not acceptable and will undermine our credibility with the American people.

Please note that the amendment has been modified. The amendment has been amended, and it does not require any account to be reduced, such as the Coast Guard, others, but it does require discretionary spending in the bill to be reduced to pay for it, so it is paid for.

We need to honor our commitment and our vote of just a few weeks ago in order to maintain credibility with the American people on the question of immigration, an area in which they have great reason to distrust our actions. I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

I know Senator GREGG and his team will figure out a way to fund it if we require it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. I yield 30 seconds to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, as I stated earlier on the floor, all of our colleagues need to understand that we have worked very hard to put together a balanced bill under the direction of the chairman and the ranking member on this side, Senator BYRD. This amendment will essentially cut Border Patrol agents, transportation security, Coast Guard operations, Secret Service, Office of Domestic Preparedness, FEMA disaster relief, and FEMA operations.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this amendment in order to keep a balanced bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Although I am very sympathetic to the purpose of the policy behind this amendment, the simple fact is that this sort of across-the-board cut would wreak havoc on this department and potentially mean significant reductions in a number of critical areas. This department does not have a lot of leeway that is not critical to our homeland security, and a 5.5 percent cut across the board would have a devastating impact. So I have to oppose this amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I must oppose the Sessions amendment because it would eliminate critical border security funds from this bill.

The subcommittee has carefully balanced the needs of our law enforcement personnel on the border, and an across-the-board cut, like that proposed in the Sessions amendment, would leave our borders dangerously exposed.

I remain committed to strengthening the fencing along the border. But it is unwise to finance that fencing with cuts in our border security elsewhere.

I yield the chairman in opposing this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The clerk will call the roll.

YEAS—29

NAYs—71

The amendment (No. 4659), as modified, was rejected.

Mr. GREGG. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The amendment to lay the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAFEE). Two minutes are divided on the Sessions amendment number 4660.

Who yields time?

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, this amendment will fund the investigative agents we authorized in the immigration bill that passed this Congress. It would do so by increasing the funding for $85 million and would fully fund the 800 positions we authorized. We authorized 800 positions, but, unfortunately, we have only funded 141.

Once again, it raises serious questions, as in 1986, about whether or not we are going to talk but not be willing to put up the money to fund the bill. Also, this will be offset by reductions in any discretionary account without mandating across-the-board cuts. The amendment has been amended from that previously filed so that no specific account is required to be cut, such as the Coast Guard.

I believe we need to follow through on our commitment to the American people to increase our investigative agents. This will fund what we authorized.

Mr. GREGG. I yield 30 seconds to the Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. As noble as it is to hire 800 full-time active duty investigators, this amendment cuts law enforcement grants, firefighter grants, emergency management grants, State Homeland Security grants, urban security initiative, FEMA, and, ironically, will cut money for the fence that is within the bill before the Senate. I urge a no vote.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, again, the policy is very laudable, but the problem is, the dollars are being taken out of other accounts. We are attempting to ramp up the personnel in a lot of Border Patrol activities, to ramp up the number of beds, and to ramp up our efforts in the Coast Guard.

This $85 million is not going to come out of thin air and will have to come from one of these accounts or a series of accounts.

We have a balanced bill. As much as I appreciate the Senator's proposal, this 3 percent across-the-board cut will have a fairly significant impact on Homeland Security.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4660), as modified, was rejected.

Mr. GREGG. I move to reconsider.

Mrs. MURRAY. I move to lay the pending amendment on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to an amendment by Senator REED, followed by an amendment by Senator DAYTON. After those two amendments are disposed of, we will have an hour of debate relative to the Vitter amendment, with Senator DURBIN contending 45 minutes and Senator VITTER contending 15 minutes. And then we will proceed to a vote on the Vitter amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. GREGG. I amend my request by saying that at the end of the hour of debate on this amendment, we will go to a vote in relation to the Vitter amendment without any second degrees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Rhode Island.

AMENDMENT NO. 4613

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment and call up amendment No. 4613. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. REED] proposes an amendment numbered 4613.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To limit the reduction in operations within the Civil Engineering Program of the Coast Guard nationwide, including the civil engineering units, facilities, and design and construction centers, the Coast Guard Academy, and the Research and Development Center until the Committees on Appropriations and Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate receive and approve a plan on changes to the Civil Engineering Program of the Coast Guard. The plan shall include a description of the current functions of the Civil Engineering Program and a description of any proposed modifications of such functions and of any proposed modification of personnel and offices, including the rationale for such modifications, an assessment of the costs and benefits of such modification, any proposed alternatives to such modification, and the processes utilized by the Coast Guard and the Office of Management and Budget to analyze and assess such modification.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, my amendment would require the Coast Guard to report to the Committees on Appropriations and Commerce, Science, and Transportation on proposed changes to the civil engineering program before the Coast Guard takes any action to alter or reduce operations within this particular program. The mission of the civil engineering program is to provide high-quality planning and real property and facilities maintenance to support Coast Guard units across the country. In my judgment, reducing the civil engineering program is not appropriate, given the current load and the increased number of homeland security responsibilities taken on by the Coast Guard. If significant reductions in personnel and offices take place, I have serious concern that the Coast Guard would not be able to adequately support its shore facilities in New England and across the nation.

The work performed by employees of the Coast Guard civil engineering program is of paramount importance. It is important that Congress review any plan to reorganize or consolidate this program.

It is my understanding, hope, and expectation that the amendment will be accepted by voice vote. I thank my colleagues on the Appropriations Committee and the Commerce Committee for their kindness.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask for a voice vote on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 4613.

The amendment (No. 4613) was agreed to.

Mrs. MURRAY. I move to reconsider. Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

CHANGE OF VOTE

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, on roll call vote No. 12, I voted "yes." It was my intention to vote "nay." Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to change my vote since it will not affect the outcome.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4663

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 4663 and ask for its immediate consideration, and I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAYTON] proposes an amendment numbered 4663.

Mr. DAYTON. I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To increase the amount appropriated for United States Customs and Border Protection salaries and expenses by $41,000,000 to place an additional 236 border patrol agents along the Northern Border and to fully offset the corresponding reductions in the appropriations for administrative travel and printing.)

On page 70, line 21, strike "$5,285,874,000;" and insert '$5,328,874,000; of which $41,000,000 shall be used to hire an additional 236 border patrol agents;'.

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 1. (a) All amounts made available under this Act for travel and transportation shall be reduced by $41,000,000.

(b) All amounts made available under this Act for printing and reproduction shall be reduced by $1,000,000.

Mr. DAYTON. I thank Senator GREGG and Senator MURRAY for their gracious help in fashioning this amendment. It does not add any additional funding to this bill. It does, however, redirect $41 million from travel and transportation, printing and reproduction to hire 236 additional Border Patrol agents to protect our country's northern border which covers 13 States, including my State of Minnesota. When Congress passed the 9/11 act in 2004, there were reportedly 994 Border Patrol agents working on our northern border. Since then that number has declined to 930 border guards, and only 250 of them are working at any one time.

I recognize the very serious needs on our southern border and fully support the need for additional Federal border guards there. The fact that President Bush is calling yet again upon our National Guard to reinforce those southern border patrols evidences the shortsightedness of the administration and a majority in Congress opposed to Democratic caucus efforts in the Senate 10 times during the past 8 years to increase funding for Border Patrol and other homeland security efforts. Once again, the administration says one thing but does another. Now it has evidently actually reduced the number of northern Border Patrol agents since 2004, despite the 9/11 Commission in its report stating:

Despite examples of terrorists entering from Canada, awareness of terrorist activity in Canada and its more lenient immigration laws, and an inspector general's report recommending that the Border Patrol develop a northern border strategy, the only positive step was that the number of Border Patrol agents was not cut any further, despite the fact that the only terrorist caught entering the United States, millennium bomber Ahmed Ressam, tried to come in from Canada. We also know that criminal gangs are trafficking Asian sex workers in Canada into the United States. The result is that Minnesotans in border counties such as Kittson and Lake of the Woods are struggling by themselves to protect their communities from drug traffickers and other illegal invaders. They can't rely on federal Border Patrol agents because there aren't any there. These five or six-person local police and county sheriff operations in northern Minnesota are nearly entirely on their own.

My amendment will increase the number of northern Border Patrol agents across this country by 24 percent while taking nothing from our southern Border Patrol reinforcement. I urge its adoption.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4663) was agreed to.

Mr. DAYTON. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mrs. MURRAY. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time be equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4653, AS MODIFIED

Mr. VITTER. I was waiting in deference to the sponsor of the amendment. I think it is appropriate for him to open the debate. Now I am told that my time is running because he is not here. I have no option or alternative but to speak to the amendment. I cannot believe this amendment is being offered to this bill. This is a bill on homeland security. This amendment relates to a declaration of a disaster, a disaster like Hurricane Katrina. Do you know how many times you ask for a disaster? You have probably seen it. Basic law enforcement breaks down. The police you expect to be there to manage things are overwhelmed. There are too many things going on at once. The fire department, the police department are trying to maintain order in the midst of chaos. Don't take my word for it. Remember what you saw on CNN around the clock. It was absolute chaos as people were being flooded out of their homes, desperately swimming through the water trying to reach the Superdome, trying to find a safe place.

What happened was, the police decided under those circumstances they wanted to maintain order. So the first thing they said is: This is a gun-free area. When people go into the Superdome, they don't bring guns into the Superdome because there are families there. There are mothers, fathers, and children. We are going to keep this as a gun-free zone.

They obviously were sensitive to the fact that anyone can be vulnerable in a situation such as that. Imagine if your son or daughter is in a National Guard unit waiting for the order to maintain order and snipers start shooting at them. It can happen. You may recall the reports of gunfire going on in New Orleans. I have no idea how valid those reports were. But it is understandable that law enforcement agencies in those situations will say: Wait a minute. We have to establish order. We have to at least have a safe zone around our National Guard troops so they don't get shot while they are down there trying to save these poor people.

Do you recall all those people who were filing across the bridge? Mothers were carrying babies. Imagine if someone was standing at the top of that bridge with a gun saying: Give me your money. Give me your jewelry. Give me your police. I have no police. I have law enforcement agencies in an obvious thing. It is commonsense. Along comes the Vitter amendment. Do you know what Mr. Vitter, my colleague from Louisiana, suggests? None of the funds appropriated by this act shall be used for the seizure of a firearm based on the existence of a declaration of a state of emergency. You can't take the guns away. If they declare a disaster, you can't say to people, this is a gun-free zone and we are taking your gun away. Is that what the second amendment is all about? Is that what the right to bear arms is all about, in a state of an emergency, in an effort to restore order in a chaotic situation, that you want to take away the power of a law enforcement agency to say: You can't bring a gun into the Superdome because there are children in there. Trying to keep them together in the midst of a disaster? Is that a violation of the second amendment to say if they are taking pots and pans at the National Guardsmen who are down there risking their lives for those poor people in that situation, that we are going to stop the guns from being close to where they are staying, where they are living? Is that a violation of the second amendment to say if somebody is using a gun which they might legally have but using it in a illegal fashion, you can't take the gun away?

That is what this amendment does. This is an incredible amendment. I can't believe that we would want to tie the hands of law enforcement in the midst of an emergency situation, when it is difficult to maintain law and order.

Years and years ago I went to law school in Washington. In 1968, I was sitting in my law school library, where I should have spent a lot more time. This city turned into pure chaos with the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. There were riots in the streets. Soldiers were being turned. People were being arrested for looting and arson by the hundreds and thousands. The whole system disintegrated.

They went to the law schools and said you are going right. If you see today. You are going to represent people. The system was out of control. We were trying to establish order. We were trying to give to the police what they needed to get things settled down to keep people safe, to protect innocent victims.

I lived through it. I saw it. You have seen it, maybe not in your personal life, but following it on television. Yet, what we have here in the Vitter amendment is, it is the authority of law enforcement to take a gun from a person even if it is a threat to a helpless victim in a disaster or if it is a threat to a National Guard trooper or if it is a threat to another law enforcement agency.

Let me tell you what else. In his original version of the amendment, which he has changed, the Senator says we will make an exception— I want to make sure I get this right. If you see someone who has a gun, which could be seized under Federal or State law in a criminal investigation—think about that, this is a gun that may have been used to murder someone—you can take that gun. You can't even seize that gun if someone has declared a disaster.

What are we thinking? Why would we do this to the men and women in law enforcement, to the National Guardsmen, or to innocent victims, which could be you or me or people we love, in a disaster they cannot even anticipate? Why would we do that?

I will tell you why. We are doing it for the National Rifle Association. We agree with it for the gun lobby. Mr. Vitter changed, the Senator says this is an obvious thing. It is commonsense. But it is an obvious thing. It is commonsense. In Illinois and most States, for those poor people in that situation, that we are going to stop the guns from being close to where they are staying, where they are living? Is that a violation of the second amendment to say if somebody is using a gun which they might legally have but using it in a illegal fashion, you can't take the gun away? I yield the reminder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.
Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I again stand to strongly support this amendment and urge my colleagues to vote for its passage.

I have only been able to listen to some of the comments of the distinguished Senator from Illinois. I really think he has been watching a very different disaster and scenario than I experienced and lived through on the ground in Louisiana. I can tell you that the confiscations we are talking about were not from the criminals he is referring to. Today, confiscations from criminals who are engaged in criminal activity can still occur under my amendment. The police have the power and the authority to enforce the law, which includes apprehending criminals and taking weapons away from criminals committing criminal acts.

The confiscations I have been talking about that happened in the disaster area were from law-abiding citizens. They were law-abiding citizens who didn’t have a phone line to communicate with the police or anyone else. They were law-abiding citizens who were isolated in their homes, frightened, and only had their own resources and weapons. In some cases, the police found firearms, to protect themselves and their families and to protect their possessions. Those are the confiscations that happened. Those are the confiscations we are trying to prevent.

And my amendment would in no way prevent confiscations from criminals, those involved in criminal activity. Of course, the police have the full power and authority to enforce the law in that situation, as they do at all other times.

That is why the Fraternal Order of Police strongly supports this amendment. That is why they have written a letter expressing that strong support. I would like to read a portion of it:

Your amendment would prohibit the use of any funds appropriated under this legislation from paying for the seizure of firearms during a major disaster or emergency. Under circumstances currently applicable under Federal and State law. As we witnessed in the communities along the Gulf Coast in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, large-scale critical incidents demand the full attention of law enforcement officers and other first responders. During this time, the preservation of life-search and rescue missions is the chief priority of every first responder. In the wake of unprecedented natural disasters and other infrastructure failures will lengthen a law enforcement agency’s response times, increasing the degree to which citizens may have to protect themselves against criminals. A law-abiding citizen who possesses a firearm lawfully represents no danger to law enforcement officers or any other first responder.

That is why the Fraternal Order of Police are supporting this amendment, as well as, yes, the NRA, who supports this amendment. I say that proudly. I don’t say it with any fear that it brings disrespect to the cause.

With that, I yield 5 minutes of my time to the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, this is not a curious amendment. It has nothing to do with the Superdome in New Orleans at the time of Katrina, because if the President really wanted to make sure that the door was locked at the door and they said you could not enter with a legal or illegal firearm, you could not enter. But the Senator from Illinois would like to suggest to you that this is to stop chaos within the Superdome.

That is flatly false. It is important that you understand that. That would not prohibit—if we want to fast forward, God forbid, to a national disaster in Chicago of an unprecedented kind, and for the police to say for those seeking sanctuary at the McCormack Center, you cannot bring guns in here—this amendment would not prohibit that. This amendment agrees with a Federal judge who got an injunction to stop the chief of police of New Orleans from acting illegally. That is what it did.

I am not going to judge the chief of police. He has resigned and is long gone. He left town. He was in a crisis situation. But in this instance the Senator from Illinois is right. When law enforcement breaks down in a national or local disaster, should not the private citizen who legally owns a firearm have the right to protect themselves and their property? The answer for 200 years has been and is absolutely yes. I will give you a couple of situations.

A little old lady is sitting on her porch in New Orleans with a shotgun across her lap. Why? Because there were marauders in her neighborhood who were stealing and robbing. She was protecting her home, property, and life. The police came and ripped the gun out of her hand and said, Get out of our way. That happened. I saw it on videotape. It happened. She had not shot anybody. She was just protecting those from entering her home and stealing her life savings.

Another example: A couple is moving down one of the canals of New Orleans in their boat. They lost their home and they were in, their boat, and it was post-Katrina. They were stopped by the local water patrol in the area, who said, Do you have a firearm on board, and they said, Yes, we do. Is it legal? Yes, it is; here are the papers. Give us your firearm. They didn’t give them back because they kept no records. That is really what happened in New Orleans. A Federal judge finally stepped in and said, Stop that, you cannot do it, and, by the way, the thousands of firearms that you have confiscated, give them back, they are private property. Guess what happened? They didn’t give them back because they kept no records. They were on a massive sweep. Even some of the local police who were interviewed were embarrassed because they were taking guns away from people and they knew it was their only defense in protecting their own property.

Is the Senator from Illinois denying the basic right of property, defense, self-defense, and family defense in a national disaster when law enforcement breaks down? You bet he is. But the Senator from Louisiana is saying quite the opposite. The Senator from Louisiana is also saying that current law and current law, is in fact, the way to go here. That is fundamentally important. Circumstances can get very, very difficult.

I would not want to prejudge the former chief of police of New Orleans in an impossible situation. When criminal elements were misusing firearms, as they always do, but where private citizens were protecting property, as they can and should have the right to do with the use of their firearms, in his words: ‘‘citizens in the day we protect, he took everything. That should not happen. When I saw it happening and when I heard about it, I said, Not in America; that is not the way this country works.’’

But for a moment in time, that is the way it worked in New Orleans, until a Federal judge stepped up and said, You are out of bounds and off of the law, so stop it. That is what happened. This should be done. This bill has been done in the Superdome, and there were none. This amendment would not prohibit that. It would not deny current law and the right of the police to designate. But it would prohibit the kind of order that would create the sweep of law-abiding citizens who were using a firearm for the protection of their property, their life, and their family’s life.

The day we give up the right of self-protection in this country by law-abiding citizens is a day we become the victims of government. That is something that should never be allowed.

I thank the Senator from Louisiana for offering the amendment. It is appropriate, timely, and I hope our colleagues will support it.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has 6 minutes. The Senator from Illinois has 1 minute.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I see the Senator from Massachusetts here. I will speak briefly.

What the Senator from Louisiana understands, and I think will concede, is that this is the third version of this amendment. It has been written and rewritten and rewritten again. What you have heard described may reflect an earlier version, but it doesn’t reflect what is before us. I say to the Senator from Idaho, I respect him and I know he has a good understanding of the Constitution and the laws.

Let me read the words in the amendment before us:

None of the funds appropriated by this act shall be used for the seizure of a firearm based on the existence of a declaration of a state of emergency.

Did you hear a reference to existing State and local law exemption, which both the Senator from Louisiana and Idaho referred to? No.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield?
Mr. DURBIN. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Let me ask, if we had a 9/11-type situation and you had Wal-mart that was closed down, with broken windows, and they have a series of guns in the back, and K-Mart and pawn shops, and people does the purpose of this for first responders say they have to leave those guns on the shelves so that looters can arm themselves and terrorize a community? Would that be the result, in your reading of this?

Mr. DURBIN. It is so broad that that is exactly what would happen. All of the commonsense explanations you have heard notwithstanding, that is not what the amendment says.

Mr. KENNEDY. Let me ask further, did not the Senator from Idaho—I know the Senator from New Jersey and myself have indicated that if they wanted to go ahead and have some way that individuals could demonstrate they had a legitimate ownership of that firearm, that that should be immune from this amendment. That was rejected, as I understand it.

Mr. DURBIN. I say to the Senator that if the Senator from Idaho and the Senator from Louisiana want to put together a bill that allows them to protect their homes, you could have the wrong person take them away, according to the Vitter amendment.

Earlier versions of the amendment were much more explicit and they went through explanations, and the Senator, because he is on an appropriations bill and has procedural challenges, took out the language that clarifies what he is trying to do, and what he left behind is language that goes too far.

I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am grateful for the leadership of the Senator from Illinois. That is why the International Brotherhood of Police and the Chiefs of Police—Major Cities strongly oppose this amendment, because it interferes with a police officer's discretion to react as he or she sees fit under extreme emergency circumstances. The International Brotherhood of Police also notes that the seizure of a firearm based on the existence of a declaration of a state of emergency. That covers it all.

If they are firing on National Guardsmen and they say we are going to have a gun-free area around where the Guardsmen are living, you could not take them away, according to the Vitter amendment.

This is payoff time, payback time to the National Rifle Association, and it will be payoff time if this goes through.

The next time, the Lord only knows, when we have a natural disaster or terrorist attack, when people are at a height of anxiety and places that have these weapons are deserted—not only handguns, but rifles and sometimes even machine guns—we are going to find that the school is out: First responders, leave them alone. Sure we are having anxiety and violence in the streets, but the Vitter amendment is going to protect the second amendment and leave that alone.

That is hogwash, Mr. President. That isn't security. This makes a sham of the Homeland Security bill—a sham of it. And that is what this amendment is. As the Senator from Illinois has pointed out, it is very simple:

None of the funds appropriated by this Act—

That means nothing, no first responders—

shall be used for the seizure of a firearm based on the existence of a declaration or state of emergency.

If there is a law enforcement there whatsoever, no first responder can see it. If a gun is lying out there and there is a terrorist who wants to grab it and cause mayhem, the Vitter amendment says the first responder cannot seize it. Go ahead, help yourself, help yourself; go on in that shop and take every rifle and piece of ammunition you want. Why? Because we are acting in self-defense. And then come on out and cause havoc.

That is what this says, not what some have stated it says. Read the language. The language is clear. That is what it says, and that is why this makes absolutely no sense.

We talk about trying to deal with the problems of violence in our communities. We see the proliferation of violence that is taking place, and we are trying to make it easier in times of crisis to go out and get more guns when, on the front page of the newspapers, they say this is a contributor to the growth in violence that is taking place in all of our communities in this country.

If you want to be in the tank for the NRA, be our guest because that is what this is all about.

This amendment makes absolutely no sense in terms of the safety and security of our communities in times of crisis, in times of natural disasters, and in times of potential terrorists in this country. That is the time we need restraint. That is the time we need responsibility. That is the time we ought to follow the first responders who are trained for these kinds of crises, but what we know is those individuals think this amendment makes no sense whatsoever.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, how much time is remaining on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 29 minutes remaining.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this issue because, frankly, it is so hard to comprehend that it needs clarification.

What are we talking about? We are saying if people have guns, and they are caught up in the chaos of a natural disaster, with people being chased out of their homes, people being rescued from rooftops, people begging for assistance, hanging out of windows, and so forth, if you have the wrong person who is hollering for help, and you are a first responder and you go into that house, you could get shot.

What is the sense of this? We are not saying you are being deprived of a privilege at that point. What is the privilege? To maybe kill a neighbor? Mr. President, if there are 30,000 people in a place that cannot accommodate that number, and in the middle of that confusion, in the middle of the frustration, in the middle of the anger and the rage that has to follow because you have been taken out of your home, or maybe don't know where your children are or where your spouse is, and the mental attitude that could exist in the middle of that excitement, that's why we're taking sure you have your pet pistol handy?

It is outrageous, and it should not be allowed. We have to vote against the Vitter amendment because what it attempts to do is to make sure there is no protection. The protection, however, is for the NRA. National Rifle Association really means ‘No Records Available’ and that is ridiculous that we
Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I will be pleased to yield.

Mr. KENNEDY. If a situation arose where a home is abandoned, and there are guns—say there were two guns and ammunition available and first responders came in, the house has been abandoned and looters are out there looking for different buildings, the way I read this amendment is if the first responders get there first and they see these two rifles or additional handguns, the first responders will be prohibited from removing those weapons, preventing them from the possibility of falling into the hands of the looters; am I correct?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. The Senator is absolutely correct. Imagine this in response to what the Senator is saying: There were felons tunneled loose on the streets, there were looters occupying homes or anything to get themselves out of the flood or out of the way and steal anything, and here we give them a present. Not only did they find a roof over their head, they found guns.

So someone innocently trying to be of help comes in, such as an ambulance group, a physician, a coastguardsman—look how gallant the Coast Guard people were—and imagine they try to break their way into a window to rescue someone they know is in there, and some crazy is there with a gun. Everybody knows, despite the fact that the person coming into the house wants to be of help—visualize what is taking place in some of the major cities across our country, where fire trucks responding to a fire are shot at. Here we are going to say: Wait a second, don’t take away their guns. Maybe we ought to take away the fire engine, but don’t take away their guns.

It is the NRA button. It has been pushed by the organization, and they are saying: Hey, don’t let them encroach on our weapon ownership, even if the crisis is one that is going to take lives, as we saw in Katrina. Imagine being in that facility, that hall with all those people who were desperate to find some way out of that mess and someone starts an argument. Pistols, guns around? Outrageous.

What it means is that our law enforcement community will not be able to, even temporarily, hold weapons to protect other victims of the community at large during this crisis. At the next evacuation center, such as the Louisiana Superdome, we should allow people to roam around that facility with guns and assault weapons? What happens if someone wants to steal something they see one of their neighbors has and an argument ensues? The lawfulness is gone. They will be totally out of control giving somebody a gun like that.

I was fortunate enough to have the opportunity to write a law that took guns away from domestic abusers of children and spouses. We had a huge fight over it, but we got it through. It was 1998. Since then, we have had over 100,000 gun permits denied to people who get so enraged that they beat up their kids, their spouse, their wives, their husbands, and the NRA was in there fighting every inch along the way: Oh, no, don’t deprive the people of their freedom to beat up their wife, beat up their kids, and maybe if they are drunk enough, they may want to take a couple of shots at members of their household. No, we stopped that.

We plead with the Senator from Louisiana: Don’t force us to vote on this amendment. Don’t do it. Think about the people in Louisiana and think about how it might have been like in New Orleans at that time, with water running over the rooftops in many cases. Now we are asking for the right to prohibit law enforcement from confiscating guns if they knew where they are? Perhaps one of these people who had a gun, had been arrested and convicted for domestic abuse still has the gun—let them sit there with a gun and try to enter into a household that is disturbed? It is not right, not fair.

The Senate is going to tell law enforcement officials who are trying to control these facilities that they are powerless: Keep your hands off those guns, policemen, FBI agents, FEMA people; keep your hands off those guns. Our police and Federal law enforcement are on the line of defense in terrorist attacks and natural disasters, and they have to have some degree of discretion.

The International Brotherhood of Police Officers thinks this about the Vitter amendment: The IBPO stands by our brothers and sisters in law enforcement and disapproves of any legislation that may interfere with a police officer’s discretion to react as he or she sees fit under extreme emergency circumstances.

Furthermore, the IBPO believes that responsible gun owners who act in accordance with Federal, State and local law are unlikely to have their guns confiscated unless they use or possess the guns in a manner or place that would be prohibited or threatening.

They are confirming that this is a bad idea.

The Vitter amendment would make it almost impossible for officials to set up safe areas during an emergency. It would turn evacuation centers into the Wild West. Take the guns and set them up in a safe area so they are returned to the owners. However, be careful to make sure that the original owner, the person who turned the gun in, isn’t really a felon on the loose. Police know that large crowds, confined quarters, and limited amounts of food and water will lead to high tempers and leave people at the mercy of the PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 2 minutes more.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the chair.

Understandably, police don’t want guns in those shelters. The police must have the right to make that shelter a gun-free area. So what do they do? They say: Hey, Joe, turn in that gun; turn it in, and as soon as you are settled, we will keep it in safekeeping for you, and we will give you back your gun. But meanwhile, don’t permit that gun owner, in a moment of rage, to do damage that is irreparable.

The fact is, our law enforcement community has to have the ability to make decisions that will ensure the health and safety of the community at large. There is no valid reason law enforcement agencies should be prevented from doing their job in times of emergency. Let’s not make it tougher for them. What do we want to do in times of crisis such as a flood, an earthquake, a hurricane, a tornado? At times like that, do we want to make it tougher for our emergency response people to carry out the duties they volunteer for, typically, and do so efficiently, under dangerous circumstances to themselves?

Let the NRA say: Come on, come on, let’s let them have their guns. What is the difference? So they may take a shot or two. That is how it sounds to me, and I hope it sounds the same way to others.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we do not vote on the New Title IV, 199 A. I do not wish to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I wish the Senator from Louisiana had offered this just and said: That is the way we want it in Louisiana. That would be OK. But why he wants to do this so it will affect my State of Massachusetts or other States is something I find unacceptable.

I quote here from Superintendent Warren Riley. He was the superintendent of police in New Orleans. He said: Most of the weapons were not taken from the hands of gun owners. Instead, they were seized from empty homes where evacuees left them behind to prevent looters from getting their hands on them.

Well, if we accept the Vitter amendment, they won’t have that opportunity to do it again. If that was the purpose, for gun owners to be able to have it, then the Vitter amendment should be redrafted. That isn’t what his amendment says. Under the Vitter amendment, the police chief and the police chief in Boston or Springfield or Worcester or New Bedford or Fall River or any of our communities would not be able to provide protection for the citizens of those communities.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, how much time remains on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifteen and a half minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I understand that Senator Vitter has 6 minutes remaining; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. DURBIN. In the interest of bringing this debate to a close—we have had much more time than you have—I will make a few closing remarks and then give the floor to the Senator from Louisiana if he is going to request a rollcall vote on this amendment.

Mr. VITTER. I am.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator for responding, and I will be as brief as I can. My colleagues from Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Under the situation we are talking about. This is not ordinary life in America. It is a time of a national emergency. It is a time of disaster. God forbid we will face terrorism again; or Hurricane Katrina. It is an extraordinary circumstance where ordinary life is challenged, and we are just this close to seeing our society disintegrate, and the law enforcement officials are trying to keep things together. People are injured. People are pushed out of their homes. Fires are taking place. Chaos is reigning, and they are trying to keep the society together. So they make it clear that in some places, you can’t use guns. Where you might have been able to use them under ordinary circumstances, because of a disaster, you cannot use them.

The example I use is you send the National Guardsmen in, they are sent in by the hundreds and thousands to maintain order, and then snipers start shooting at them. The police make it known that this will be a gun-free zone. We are going to confiscate every gun. We don’t want any National Guardsmen killed because of this emergency. Is that a reasonable request? Not if it is your son or daughter who is a member of the National Guard.

But according to the Vitter amendment, the Vitter amendment would prohibit the seizure of a firearm on the existence or a declaration of an emergency. You couldn’t seize the fire-arm to protect the National Guardsmen or those, as the Senator from New Jersey said, driving down the street trying to put out the fire. People are shooters and they say: That is it, we are clearing the guns away from these major highways. We don’t want people to be shooting at policemen and firemen and rescue workers. We don’t want snipers killing people who are piling sandbags to save levees. Is any of that unreasonable? It sounds like exactly what we want our law enforcement agencies to do. But the Vitter amendment would stop them.

One Senator came up to me on the floor and said: This doesn’t sound like the Vitter amendment that was described to me earlier. It is not. This is the rewrite of the original amendment. Each time Senator Vitter has rewritten it, in fairness to him, he has had to comply with Senate rules and he has had to change the wording, and now the wording is terrible. It no longer allows for the confiscation of guns that you know were used in the commission of a crime. These were in an earlier version of the amendment, but they are no longer there. It just says you can’t use any of the funds in this act to seize a firearm based on the existence or the declaration of a state of emergency. It is the wrong way to go.

I suggest to the Senator from Louisiana that I hope he will withdraw this amendment. If he wants to do what the Senator from Idaho suggests, which is to put in an amendment to allow police to seize firearms from the gun owners or those, as the Senator from New Jersey said, from Louisiana if he is going to request a rollcall vote on this amendment?

Mr. VITTER. I am.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent that this amendment will tie their hands. The police cannot control the flow of firearms in a disaster or an emergency, to say nothing of a disaster or an emergency, except for the extraordinary circumstance where orin the event of another natural disaster in Louisiana: House unanomously approved (102-0), Senate approved 36-0; House concurred 96-0; signed by Governor Kathleen Blanco (D) on July 1. Missouri—HB 1141, enables hunters to continue hunting on certain-sized land tracts annexed by a city or county, even if that locality has imposed a ban on hunting with its limits; prohibits the seizure and confiscation of firearms by local officials in the unfortunate event of a future natural disaster in Missouri; and permits employees to transport and store firearms in their locked, private vehicles while parked on their employer’s property if the employer does not provide a separate and separate area for their use: signed by Governor Haley Barbour (R) on March 23. New Hampshire—SB 348, sponsored by Senator Peter Bragdon (R-11); signed by Governor John Lynch (D) on May 15. Oklahoma—HB 2696, sponsored by Representative Troyer Worthen (R-97), passed the House overwhelmingly with a vote of 94-1, and unanimously in the Senate with a vote of 46-0; signed by Governor Brad Henry (D) on April 20. South Carolina—S 1261, sponsored by Senator Danny Verdin (R-9), prohibits the Governor, or any government agency, from suspending the Right to Keep and Bear Arms during a state of emergency and prohibits South Carolina Law Enforcement Division (SLED) from releasing the personal information of the Right-to-Carry (RTC) permit holders unless the request for the information is part of an investigation by law enforcement. Signed by Governor Mark Sanford (R) on June 9. Virginia—HB 1265, sponsored by Delegate William R. Janis (R-56), unanimously passed House 94-0 and Senate 40-0 (15); signed by Governor Tim Kaine (D) on April 4. Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I wish to make a third point, which is that, quite frankly, I find it somewhat ironic that the Senator from Illinois would welcome more detailed language, as I did in the earlier draft, because the reason we don’t have slightly more detailed language on the floor is because of a rule XVI objection by the leadership, the Democratic leadership, those working against the amendment in concern to the Senator from Illinois. So they objected to more detailed language in one breath, and then after we redrafted the amendment to comply with Senate rules regarding germaneness, they object to less detailed language in the next. You can’t have it both ways.

The fourth and final point is that the language we do have on the Senate floor goes to the heart of the issue and protects fundamental second amendment rights.

There is one point I strongly agree with the Senator from Illinois about, and that is that we are not talking about ordinary life in America, an ordinary day; we are talking about a time of emergency where everything is different, where the world is turned upside down.

It is exactly that very reason that this second amendment right to bear arms and use legally possessed firearms in defense of your person and your property is so crucial, because you know what, your phone line in this very unique situation doesn’t work, your cell phone and Blackberry don’t work, there is no communication, and you can’t reach out to the law enforcement authorities and have there them in a reasonable amount of time when your home is being broken into. All of that is gone. All of that is gone. The only thing that you do have, in many instances, is your legally possessed firearm. That is the only thing for the defense of yourself, your life, your family’s life and health, and your possessions. That is exactly why protecting this fundamental constitutional right is so very important, precisely for this sort of time of emergency.

The distinguished Senator from New Jersey made some remarks and read a letter talking about leaving it up to the judgment and discretion of law enforcement personnel. Well, I have great respect in general for law enforcement personnel, but I don’t think their judgment or their discretion trumps the Constitution, and that is what happened in that the attitude many of them took, unfortunately, after Hurricane Katrina in Louisiana. They thought their judgment and their discretion trumped the Constitution. They confiscated legally held firearms from law-abiding citizens, in some cases literally older, defenseless women, older citizens trapped in their homes with a legally possessed firearm as their only means of defense. That should never happen again. The Constitution, the second amendment, should never be abused again, particularly in such a state of emergency.

Mr. President, in closing, I urge all of my colleagues to support this commonsense, straightforward amendment. It is supported by the Fraternal Order of Police, it is supported by the National Rifle Association, which intends to grade this vote, and I urge all Members to offer their support for this straightforward, commonsense amendment.

With that, I yield back my time, and I ask for a vote.

The PRESIDENT. The PRESIDENT. The PRESIDENT. The PRESIDENT. Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask that prior to this vote, we do a little housekeeping. The following amendments have been cleared. I ask unanimous consent that they be deemed to be called up and read and approved on the record. The amendment would be No. 4618, Senator Dayton, No. 4616, Senator Durbin, No. 4578, Senator Warner; No. 4592, Senator Feingold; No. 4638, Senator Boxer, as modified, No. 4642, Senator Pryor, as modified, No. 4619, Senator Durbin, as modified, No. 4655, Senator Sarbanes, Senator Specter, as modified, No. 4624, Senator Obama, as modified, and No. 4661, Senator Lautenberg, as modified.

I ask unanimous consent that those amendments be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments were agreed to en bloc, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 459

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, today I rise to support and cosponsor Senator Specter’s amendment to make sure funding to nonprofit institutions that are at high risk of terrorist attack receive the funds we have given to them. I have worked with my colleague from Pennsylvania on legislation to help nonprofits that serve communities that they serve safer and stronger.

However, as I have said, there are still gaps in our response. This amendment is very simple: It would provide $2.393 billion to our Nation’s local communities and give local communities the funds they need. This amendment would ensure that our Nation’s local communities are standing on the front lines of this fight. Providing the needed security improvements to protect these “soft targets” of terrorism. These nonprofits are our nation’s frontline when it comes to detecting terrorist attacks and by making sure that if terror strikes one of these facilities, security and safety measures are in place to protect the lives of those inside and around these buildings.

Nothing the Senate does is more important than providing America’s security and Americans safety. I am pleased that this amendment has been accepted because it does exactly that. In the battle to protect our nation from terrorist attacks, we must be sure to provide assistance to these high-risk nonprofit organizations that provide vital health, social, cultural, and educational services to the American people.

AMENDMENT NO. 416

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to improve the Nation’s preparedness and response to natural disasters and terrorist attacks.

This amendment is based on legislation that I introduced last year, the Mass Evacuation Exercise Assistance Act of 2005, S. 2043, which would implement a recommendation in the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee’s report “Hurricane Katrina: A Nation Still Unprepared” that Federal agencies work with State and local officials to develop evacuation plans.

That bill would address a gaping hole in our Nation’s disaster preparedness by providing grants to conduct evacuation exercises and the implementation of emergency response plans. It would establish a grant program to ensure that cities across America have the resources they need to develop comprehensive evacuation plans; stage drills and exercises to practice and perfect evacuation procedures; and stockpile the materials needed to supply evacuees in the event of an evacuation. An isolation would help cities prepare for future emergencies and evacuations to ensure that their citizens will be evacuated quickly and safely should a natural disaster or terrorist attack occur. Otherwise, like the victims of Hurricane Katrina, citizens can easily become trapped without food or water in a devastated area or along an escape route.

Based on that bill, S. 2043, my amendment today specifically includes evacuation exercises among the list of activities funded by homeland security grants. Evacuation planning and exercises are already permitted, but adding the words “evacuation preparation and exercises” would encourage state and local governments to request homeland security funds for that particular purpose. States and localities need to practice their evacuation plans in order to test and improve their systems before they must be executed in real emergencies.

The Department of Homeland Security recently reported to Congress that many states, territories, and urban areas lack confidence in the adequacy and feasibility of their plans to deal with aviation accidents. The department’s report also highlighted the importance of exercises in preparing first responders for disasters and revealing shortcomings in disaster plans. The Washington Post recently called for increased attention to evacuation exercises and disaster preparation in preventing a reoccurrence of the disaster that followed Hurricane Katrina. According to the Post, the insufficient Federal and local response to Hurricane Katrina was a failure of execution, not prediction.

Therefore, I encourage my colleagues to support this important amendment to strengthen our Nation’s emergency and disaster preparedness and response.

AMENDMENT NO. 862

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to the fiscal year 2007 Homeland Security appropriations bill. This measure would direct the Secretary of Homeland Security to revise existing procedures and establish new methods for expeditiously clearing the names of individuals who have been mistakenly placed on a terrorist database list, including the Transportation Security Administration’s, TSA, No Fly and Selectee watch list, or who have names identical to or substantially similar to names on these database lists. The Secretary of Homeland Security would report the revised procedures to Congress no later than 6 months after enactment of this bill.

Since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, the TSA and other Government agencies have maintained terrorist database lists containing the names of individuals suspected of posing a risk of terrorism or other threat to airline or passenger safety. The TSA watch list contains the names of individuals who have been placed into two categories. One is the group of individuals in the “No Fly” category. Any individual whose name appears in this category will not be permitted to board a commercial flight, as the Department of Homeland Security and other Federal agencies have deemed that person a known terrorist or someone who has been an indicator of terrorist activity. The second category is known as “Selectees,” and they may be on this list for a variety of reasons, such as attempting to pass a weapon through a security checkpoint or otherwise exhibiting behavior that presents suspicion that the person may engage in future terrorist acts, even though information about the individual is not sufficient to place them in the “No Fly” category.

Unfortunately, thousands of innocent passengers have been placed on the TSA watch list mistakenly or, as is often the case, because they have the same name as others on the list. This prevents those passengers from using the internet or electronic kiosks located at the airport to check in when they fly. This causes these passengers to wait in long lines to be cleared by airline personnel at the check-in counter, sometimes even resulting in missed flights.

The TSA procedure for differentiating the innocent travelers from those who pose a threat is long and still results in the cleared passengers having to check in at the counter and present a clearance letter from the TSA. In other words, after going through the clearance and verification process, innocent passengers still cannot use the internet and kiosks that airlines rely on for passengers to obtain their boarding passes.

I truly hope that as a result of this amendment, the TSA will establish a better system to not only clear innocent passengers from any terrorist database lists, but also to work with the airlines to devise a safe and secure check-in procedure that differentiates between the criminals and the innocent.

I thank Senator CARPER for joining as an original cosponsor of my amendment, and I urge all of my colleagues to support it.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 4669, 4670, 4671, 4672, AND 4673

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I send five amendments to the desk, one on behalf of Senator BAUCUS, one on behalf of Senator Kyl, one on behalf of Senator SCHUMER, one on behalf of Senator GRASSLEY, and one on behalf of Senator LEVIN, and I ask unanimous consent that these amendments be considered read and approved en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments were agreed to en bloc, as follows:

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate that Customs and Border Protection should continue to focus on reporting and analysis of trade flows to prevent the spread of methamphetamine)

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted, insert the following:

S. 540. (a) The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Domestic methamphetamine production in both small- and large-scale laboratories is decreasing as a result of law enforcement pressure and public awareness campaigns.

(2) It is now estimated that 80 percent of methamphetamine consumed in the United States originates in Mexico and is smuggled into the United States.

(3) The movement of methamphetamine into the United States poses new law enforcement challenges at the border, in the financial system, and in communities affected by methamphetamine.

(4) Customs and Border Protection is working to stop the spread of methamphetamine by examining the movement not only of the drug and its precursors at the borders and points of entry.

(5) Customs and Border Protection is a vital source of information for the Drug Enforcement Administration and other law enforcement agencies.

(b) It is the sense of the Senate that Customs and Border Protection should continue to focus on methamphetamine in its reporting and analysis of trade flows to prevent the spread of methamphetamine throughout the United States.

AMENDMENT NO. 4670

(Purpose: To increase the total number of Department of Homeland Security additional detention bed spaces by 1,700 beds in fiscal year 2007)

On page 76, line 15, before the period insert:

"Provided further, That an additional $88,000,000 shall be available under this heading and authorized for 1,700 additional detention beds spaces and the necessary operational and mission support positions, information technology, relocation costs, and training for those beds and the amount made available under the heading "DISASTER RELIEF" in this Act is reduced by $58,000,000"

AMENDMENT NO. 4671

(Purpose: To require the Secretary to submit a report to Congress addressing its compliance with the recommendations from the July 6, 2006 Inspector General Report "Progress in Developing the National Asset Database")

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 540. REPORT ON COMPLIANCE WITH IN-PECTOR GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall submit to the Committee on Appropriations a report addressing compliance by the Department of Homeland Security with the recommendations set forth in the July 6, 2006, Inspector General of Homeland Security report entitled “Progress in Developing the National Asset Database”. The report shall include the status of the prioritization of assets by the Department of Homeland Security into high-value, medium-value, and low-value asset tiers, and how such tiers will be used by the Secretary of Homeland Security in the issuance of grant funds.
(Purpose: To require the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security to review each Secure Border Initiative contract valued at more than $20,000,000 and to report the findings of such reviews to the Secretary of Homeland Security and to Congress)

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

S. 540. (a) Not later than 60 days after the initiation of any contract relating to the Secure Border Initiative that is valued at more than $20,000,000, and upon the conclusion of the performance of such contract, the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security shall review each action relating to such contract to determine whether such action fully complies with applicable cost requirements, performance objectives, program milestones, inclusion of small, minority-owned, and women-owned businesses, and time lines.

(b) If a contract review under subsection (a) uncovers information regarding improper conduct or wrongdoing, the Inspector General shall, as expeditiously as practicable, submit such information to the Secretary of Homeland Security, or to another appropriate official of the Department of Homeland Security, who shall determine if the contractor should be suspended from further participation in the Secure Border Initiative.

(c) Upon the completion of each review under subsection (a), the Inspector General shall submit a report to the Secretary that contains the findings of the review, including findings regarding—

(1) cost overruns;
(2) significant delays in contract execution;
(3) lack of rigorous departmental contract management programs;
(4) insufficient departmental financial oversight;
(5) contract bundling that limits the ability of small businesses to compete; or
(6) other high risk business practices.

(4)(1) Not later than 30 days after the receipt of each report submitted under subsection (c), the Secretary shall submit a report to the congressional committees listed in paragraph (3) that describes—

(A) the findings of the report received from the Inspector General; and
(B) the steps the Secretary has taken, or plans to take, to address the problems identified in the report.

(2) Not later than 60 days after the initiation of each contract action with a company whose headquarters is outside of the United States, the Secretary shall submit a report regarding the Secure Border Initiative to the congressional committees listed in paragraph (3).

(3) The congressional committees listed in this paragraph are—

(A) the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate;
(B) the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives;
(C) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate;
(D) the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives;
(E) the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the Senate; and
(F) the Committee on Homeland Security of the House of Representatives.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I turn to the Senator from California who has an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 4674

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I will take less than a minute to thank both sides.

Can the Senator help me? This is my able assistant.

Mr. LEAHY. If the Senator will yield, I must say what a thrill it is to work on the staff of Senator BOXER and to be able to help her.

I wonder, Senator, if it is OK to go to work for Senator JEFFORDS?

Mrs. BOXER. I have never had such a fantastic, underpaid, assistant in my life.

I will take a minute to explain why I am very delighted that Senators GREGG and MURRAY have signed off on this amendment we are about to adopt.

Senator SCHUMER has worked very hard on this issue. Here is what we say.

We seek a Department General that is an investigation and found out that on the out-of-place assets list—these are assets that the Department of Homeland Security will protect—were places such as the Nestle Purina Pet Food plant, the Sweetwater Flea Market, petting zoo, the beach at the end of a street, the Pepper and Herb Company, Auto Shop, groundhog zoo, high stakes bingo, mule day parade.

We wish we could protect every activity in America, but I think when you are looking at a budget that is limited, we should go after the targets that are entitled, the bridges, the highways, the infrastructure, the chemical plants, the nuclear plants. We do not have to spend taxpayer money protecting the bourbon festival, as an example.

The point is, we are going to ask the Department to either accept the recommendations of the inspector general or tell us why not. That is the essence of this amendment.

I thank my colleagues. I don’t know if I need to ask for the yeas and nays. Mr. GREGG. I hope the Senator wouldn’t.

I ask unanimous consent the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 4674.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To prohibit the use of certain funds for travel by officers or employees of the Department of Homeland Security until the inspector general has implemented the recommendations in the report by the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security titled “Progress in Developing the National Asset Database”, dated June 2006)

On page 21, line 9, delete the following: “Provided further, That none of the funds made available in this title under the heading ‘Management and Administration’ may be used for travel by an officer or employee of the Department of Homeland Security until the Under Secretary for Preparedness and Security has implemented the recommendations in the report by the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security titled “Progress in Developing the National Asset Database”, dated June 2006; or until the Under Secretary for Preparedness submits a report to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs of the House of Representatives explaining why such recommendations have not been fully implemented.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4674) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4674, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GREGG. I further ask unanimous consent the amendment numbered 4574 by Senator COLEMAN should have been modified. I further ask unanimous consent it be deemed modified as sent to the desk and that it be agreed to. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent the only remaining amendments to be considered prior to final passage will be the amendments of Senator CLINTON, Senator CHAMBLISS, and Senator DOMENICI.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4598, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask that Senate amendment numbered 4598, as modified, be be considered. The amendment, as modified, was agreed to, as follows:

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 2. EXPANSION OF THE NATIONAL INFRASTRUCTURE SIMULATION AND ANALYSIS CENTER.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE.—The term ‘critical infrastructure’ means the term given in the section 1016(e) of the USA PATRIOT Act (42 U.S.C. 5195(e)).

(2) EMERGENCY AND MAJOR DISASTER.—The terms 'emergency' and 'major disaster' have the meanings given in section 102 of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5122).

(3) NATIONAL INFRASTRUCTURE SIMULATION AND ANALYSIS CENTER.—The term ‘National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center’ means the National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center established under section 1016(d) of the USA PATRIOT Act (42 U.S.C. 5195c(d))

(4) PROTECT.—The term ‘protect’ means to reduce the vulnerability of critical infrastructure in order to deter, mitigate, or neutralize an emergency, natural disaster, terrorist attack, or other catastrophic event.

(b) AUTHORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center shall serve as a source of national competence to address critical infrastructure protection and continuity through support for activities related to:

(A) counterterrorism, threat assessment, and risk mitigation; and

(B) an emergency, natural disaster, terrorist attack, or other catastrophic event.

(2) INFRASTRUCTURE MODELING.—

(A) PARTIAL SUPPORT.—The support provided under paragraph (1) shall include modeling, simulation, and analysis of the systems comprising critical infrastructure, in order to enhance critical infrastructure preparedness, protection, response, and recovery activities.

(B) RELATIONSHIP WITH OTHER AGENCIES.—Each Federal agency and department with critical infrastructure responsibilities under Homeland Security Presidential Directive 7, or any successor to such directive, shall establish a formal relationship, including an agreement regarding information sharing, between the elements of such agency or department and the National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center.

(C) PURPOSE.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The purpose of the relationship under subparagraph (B) shall be to permit each Federal agency and department described in subparagraph (B) to take full advantage of the capabilities of the National Infrastructure Simulation and Analysis Center consistent with its workload capacity and priorities (particularly vulnerability and consequence analysis) for real-time response to reported and projected emergencies, natural disasters, terrorist attacks, or other catastrophic events.

(ii) RECIPIENT OF CERTAIN SUPPORT.—Modeling, simulation, and analysis provided under this subsection shall be provided to Federal agencies and departments, including Federal agencies and departments with critical infrastructure responsibilities under Homeland Security Presidential Directive 7, or any successor to such directive.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4649, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I address the Chambliss amendment numbered 4649, as modified, be considered. The amendment, as modified, was agreed to, as follows:

On page 127, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

SEC. 540. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Homeland Security shall consult with National Council...
On the minority side Chuck Kieffer and his team do a superb job, and we greatly admire their efforts. And, of course, we very much appreciate the assistance of the staff of the full committee, and especially the assistance of Senator COCHRAN and Keith Kennedy, Budget for Byrd, and Rich-ard Larson. These folks who come in and help us out a great deal. So we thank them immensely. We could not have gotten to this point without them.

They work immense hours. We can never really adequately express our appreciation to them, but we do greatly appreciate all they have done.

AMENDMENT NO. 4582, AS MODIFIED

Mr. President, at this time I ask unanimous consent that we call up and proceed to the consideration of amendment No. 4582 on behalf of Senator CLINTON, that it be modified with the modification I send to the desk, and that it be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, a lot of work has been accomplished in the last 3 days. I particularly thank Sen-ator GREGG, chairman of the committee, who has done a good job of bal-ancing a very difficult budget in a very difficult period and has been great to work with. The numerous amendments came from both sides of the aisle, and I thank all of his staff for their work.

I thank the ranking member on our committee, Senator BYRD, for his work on this committee and all of the effort he has put into making sure we have a balanced bill that has come before the Senate to appropriate funds for Home-land Security.

I especially thank the staff that has been out here on our side working for the last numerous days, night and day, to get us to the point where we will shortly vote on this bill: Chuck Kieffer, Chip Walgren, Scott Nance, Drenan Dudley, Adam Morrison, and all of our staff who have been out here.

I end by thanking Senator GREGG for his tremendous work on this bill in a very difficult year.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sen-ator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I join the Senator from Washington.

I especially thank the Senator from Washington who has been drawn in here to help out. She has done a fabu-lous job. We would not have gotten to this point as promptly as we have with-out her assistance and leadership. It has been a joy to work with her. Her professionalism is extraordinary.

I also, of course, thank Senator BYRD, the ranking member. He is a tre-mendous force. He has been for decades. His influence on this bill is very signifi-cant. And he has been a very con-structive individual to work with as my ranking member, although he is well my senior in both experience, knowledge, and ability.

I especially thank my staff: Rebecca Davies, Carol Cribbs, Shannon O’Keefe, Mark VandeWater, Nancy Perkins, and Christa Crawford. They have done a great job. They have been working long hours, as have other members of our staff, including interns who have been brought in and Budget staff who have been brought in to help. Budget the Appropriations staff is a small, rather ef-fective cadre, and we admire what they do.
chemical security standards, inspecting cargo on commercial aircraft, inspecting air passengers for explosives, securing our ports, and making sure that State and local governments have effective mass evacuation plans, are all languishing at the Department. The list of demands that are pending at the Department goes on and on.

To the Department of Homeland Security I have two words: Wake up.

In the opening section, I simply say, if you are not going to lead on making our homeland safer, then follow the lead of Chairman GREGG and the United States Senate.

Chairman GREGG has done a masterful job on this bill. I urge adoption of the bill.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, yesterday, the Senate passed Senator BYRD’s amendment, which would require the Department of Homeland Security to set interim security regulations that establish homeland security requirements for chemical facilities.

Today, I rise to support this amendment in conference.

The amendment takes a necessary first step in ensuring that all chemical facilities presenting the greatest security risk are secure against potential threats. This first step will require these facilities to submit facility security plans to the Department of Homeland Security.

In the U.S., 14,000 chemical plants, manufacturers and water utilities and other facilities store and use extremely hazardous substances that if suddenly released can injure or kill employees or residents in nearby communities. Of these facilities, nearly 450 individually pose a risk of harm to more than 100,000 people.

When I chaired the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee during the 107th Congress, the committee unanimously passed chemical security legislation that was offered by Senator Corzine. Industry concerns have stalled efforts to adopt strong bipartisan legislation ever since. In the 108th Congress, this committee passed weaker chemical security legislation that lacked adequate accountability to ensure compliance with essential protective requirements. We filed minority views articulating our concerns.

In 2003 and in 2005, I introduced legislation to improve the security and safety of our Nation’s wastewater treatment plants. Again, this legislation takes into account our growing awareness of security needs that has developed in the nearly 5 years that have passed since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. My wastewater security legislation requires all wastewater facilities to complete vulnerability assessments, emergency response plans, and site security plans and to submit them to the EPA.

Senator BYRD’s amendment is consistent with my legislation, in that wastewater facilities to complete vulnerability assessments, emergency response plans, and site security plans and to submit them to the Federal Government.

On May 23, 2006, the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee considered wastewater security legislation. I offered an amendment at that markup which would require wastewater facilities to complete and submit to the EPA the full range of security plans required by the amendment to the protection of wastewater facilities. The amendment would also require facilities to switch to safer treatment chemicals and technologies if grant funding is available. My amendment was not reported out of committee did not require wastewater facilities to complete vulnerability assessments and submit them to the EPA.

Senator BYRD’s amendment takes the first step in hardening our Nation’s entire chemical infrastructure against security threats.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment in conference.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to address yet another problem with the Department of Homeland Security. It has been 3 years since its creation, and the Department continues to have difficulties integrating a financial management system. The Department has spent a tremendous amount of money on an integrated financial management system. The Department’s most recent effort to create a new, consolidated financial management system, known as Emerge2, has been canceled after the Department spent $23 million without making progress.

History has shown that integrating Federal computer systems and migrating data can be a complicated and costly undertaking. As the Department of Homeland Security moves forward in its efforts on financial management integration, it should do so carefully and deliberately. It is my hope that the Department considers a range of possible solutions. This includes soliciting ideas from commercial providers with prior experience and contemplating a pilot program with one of these providers to work through the complicated technical and operational problems.

Mr. President, I also wish to address one of the most important issues the Congress faces today—protecting our homeland from terrorist threats. One threat we have only just begun to address is a possible attack on our food production, supply and distribution systems. The spread of biological agents could threaten both our crops and livestock, which would have profound impacts on the health of our society and our ability to export such products.

The Senate must support funding for biodefense research, to prevent and prepare for such an attack. I am proud that the fiscal year 2007 Homeland Security appropriations bill provides additional funding to complete planning and design of the National Bio and Agro-Defense Facility, an initiative that I strongly supported. I also strongly supported the Department of Homeland Security from the Department of Agriculture when DHS was created in 2002.

Earlier this year, the Department of Homeland Security solicited expressions of interests from around the country from consortia qualified to operate this facility. DHS received twenty-nine proposals and will choose a set of finalists later this year. The President’s food supply, so vital to our survival, must be made safe through a competitive process and National Environmental Policy Act review to identify a final team and site. NBAF will be on the front-line of research and development of new ways to protect our nation’s food supply, so it is the final choice of a team to operate NBAF must be made on the basis of scientific and technical merit.

The Mid-Atlantic Bio-Ag Defense Consortium is among the 29 applicants to run NBAF. It consists of a group of researchers from leading universities and selected federal and state agencies in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Delaware. I believe that this five-state consortium, led by the University of Maryland School of Medicine, offers unparalleled scientific expertise and critical understanding in large institutional management, and will present a strong proposal for the Department’s consideration.

This consortium is one of the 29 applicants for the Mid-Atlantic Consortium has a proven track record in research and development of countermeasures to many agents and toxins designated as threats by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This team has considerable “hands on” experience in handling the most sensitive kinds of material while adhering to the protocols essential for high quality and safely-managed scientific research. I believe this team is uniquely qualified to define problems so as to develop, test and implement solutions to ensure that we can protect our crops and livestock from biological threats.

In addition to its strong research capability, the consortium has identified the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, BARC, to serve as the NBAF site. BARC offers the Department an integrated, secure and results-oriented approach to tackling plant and animal diseases of high consequence that could enter the U.S. through ordinary commerce or an act of terrorism. Its existing infrastructure and location would contribute to successfully protecting a highly sensitive facility like NBAF.

I believe that the Mid-Atlantic Bio-Ag Defense Consortium offers a superior group of scientific talent, with world class leadership expert in running large, complex organizations. It also offers a solutions-based approach to tackle the scientific and public health challenges to be undertaken at the NBAF. For these reasons, I am confident that the Department will give strong consideration to this Consortium and the NBAF in the coming months.

In the end, the Department’s selection of a team and a site must be based upon carefully reviewed and documented merit-based analysis, with the support of the community in which it will be located. As we move forward on this initiative, it is my hope that Secretary Chertoff will base the selection on merit, to ensure the integrity of NRAMs, the important work that will be conducted there in the years ahead.

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, when I was elected to the Senate, I promised the people of Colorado that protecting the homeland and supporting law enforcement would be among my highest priorities. In the year and a half since taking the oath of office, I have worked hard to fulfill that pledge by working with my colleagues to help pass the BiPartisan compromise on the PATRIOT Act, working to pass a comprehensive immigration reform bill that increases border security, and most important, paying close attention to the concerns of Colorado as serving an anti-terrorism function and promoting homeland security communities.

But great challenges remain, challenges that should not be deferred for the next Congress to deal with, challenges that should not be turned into partisan weapons. Challenges that will require reaching across the aisle to solve.

I would like to take a few moments to discuss just a few of these challenges. First, however, I want to briefly discuss the Department of Homeland Security appropriations bill, which we passed today.

Thank Senators GREGG and BYRD, who did an excellent job shepherding this bill through the committee process and on the floor. While there are some provisions in the bill with which I disagree—for example, I would like to see more funding for first responders, port, and rail security—the bill is a product of serious and careful deliberation.

I would also like to draw attention to an issue of great importance: the training of our law enforcement and homeland security officials. I was pleased to see the DHS appropriations bill increase funding for the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. I am also pleased that the bill classifies Federal Law Enforcement Training Center staff as serving an “inherently governmental” function, which guarantees that law enforcement training cannot be outsourced. This is an issue that training has been an issue of concern to me dating back to my time as attorney general, when we guaranteed an adequate stream of funding for the training of law enforcement officers through the Colorado State Law Enforcement and Training Board. I look forward to working with our colleagues and the appropriations bill.

The first requires DHS to provide a detailed report on how it will improve the inspection of incoming agricultural products in order to protect U.S. agriculture from foreign pests and disease. Agriculture is the largest industry and employer in the United States, generating more than $1 trillion in economic activity each year. However, the agricultural sector is both a great strength and a potential vulnerability: if the entry of foreign pests and disease could wreak havoc on the economy, the environment, and public health. In order to safeguard American agriculture, we need—first and foremost—a large increase in points of entry. There have been some serious questions about the effectiveness of the inspection program at DHS, and my amendment will make sure that DHS has a sensible strategy in place to improve this program.

My second amendment requires DHS to produce a detailed blueprint regarding how it will help Federal, State, and local officials achieve communications interoperability. More than 5 years after September 11, first responders are still struggling to achieve communications interoperability. Fixing this problem will require money, leadership, and sound planning by Federal, State, and local officials.

In my own State of Colorado, first responders and emergency managers are working hard to solve this problem—and they are making progress. But they deserve Senators who will fight for the best equipment, the best training, and the best support available—and they deserve Senators who will fight for them.

Next, I wish to address identity theft. That means that in 10 years, millions have crossed the border without the Government knowing who they are or why they are here. Indeed, the GAO released a report in March that detailed how two Federal investigators were able to smuggle enough nuclear material to make two dirty bombs across our northern and southern borders. The report stated that GAO investigators “transported radioactive sources across both borders with ease.”

This is why the comprehensive immigration reform backed by a bipartisan majority of Senators includes thousands of new positions aimed at fixing the border. For example, the bill would add 12,000 new Border Patrol agents, 10,000 new ICE worksite inspectors, 2,500 new port-of-entry inspectors, 1,000 new document fraud inspectors, and hundreds of other related positions.

We are now embroiled in a historic debate about immigration and border security. The reality is that our borders are broken and lawless—and that millions have crossed the border without the Government knowing who they are or why they are here. This is why the comprehensive immigration reform backed by a bipartisan majori... upside down—it is also fueling and financing a good part of the meth epidemic that is ravaging so many communities. Indeed, meth addicts have become the driving force behind identity theft in Colorado—as they seek new ways to fund the production and consumption of the drug. So tackling identity theft is also a way of tackling the meth epidemic.

I believe that a comprehensive approach to attacking identity theft will require working with the financial industry, law enforcement, retailers, and consumer groups. I applaud the Judiciary and Commerce Committees, both of which have bipartisan bills addressing this issue. There are elements of both bills that would go a good ways toward addressing identity theft, and I hope that the Senate takes action on this issue soon.

I also wish to briefly discuss prisoner reentry—another vital law enforcement issue that cries out for a bipartisan approach.

Approximately 650,000 State and Federal prisoners reenter society each year, and a staggering two-thirds of them are returned to prison for a new crime or parole violation within 3 years of release. Prisoners returning to society face difficulties with housing, employment, mental health, and substance abuse—all of which impose a great toll on families, communities, State and local governments, and overcrowded prison systems. The problem is truly multidimensional and calls out for a bipartisan approach.

For that reason, I am happy to co-sponsor the Second Chance Act, a bipartisan bill which provides badly needed resources for prisoner reentry programs. I hope the Senate takes action on this bill soon.

Finally, I would like to briefly discuss port and chemical security. I am proud to be a co-sponsor of the bipartisan Maritime Cargo Act and the Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism Act. I cannot stress how important these bipartisan pieces of legislation are to protecting our homeland security.

Indeed, each year roughly 9 million shipping containers enter the United States via our seaports. Those containers carry approximately 2.4 billion tons of goods worth more than $1 trillion—and those numbers are expected to double in the next 20 years. Furthermore, the average container originating overseas will pass through over a dozen intermediate points before arriving in the United States—providing multiple points of vulnerability for both our security and our economy. The GreenLane Maritime Cargo Act would take some important steps to secure our ports—including requiring 100 percent screening of incoming containers within a year—and is a fine example of bipartisan problem-solving.

Regrettably, chemical security, we face a situation today where there are no Federal laws establishing minimum security standards at chemical facilities—this despite the fact that the roughly 15,000 chemical plants and refineries in this country pose a great vulnerability and despite the fact that dangerous chemicals routinely travel along our highways, inland waterways, and on railcars that pass through the heart of major cities. An attack would be staggering in terms of both loss of life and economic impact. Even DHS agrees that chemical security legislation is necessary. So I am very pleased to be a co-sponsor of the bipartisan Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism Act.

Neither port security nor chemical security is a partisan issue. Just look at these two bills: they both have strong bipartisan support. So I say to the Senate: let us take up these important bills soon.

Mr. President, each of the issues I have discussed this morning has bipartisan support. Each is important to the security and safety of the American people.

Our most important obligation as Senators is to protect the security and safety of our constituents—and each of the issues I have discussed this morning would take an important step in that direction. I hope that the Senate can debate and act on these issues soon.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I support the fiscal year 2007 Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill before us today. Our Nation faces a serious and growing threat from international terrorism, and we must adequately fund our security agencies.

I am concerned, however, that the bill falls short in some areas of what is needed to effectively protect the homeland.

For instance, the bill makes significant cuts to State grant programs from FY 2006 levels and does not ensure that funds are distributed using risk as the guiding principle. Although DHS Secretary Chertoff has assured us that the plan would follow the recommendation of the 9/11 Commission and distribute funds based purely on risk, when funding for the Urban Area Security Initiative was released in May the cities most at risk—New York, Washington, and Boston among them—received the deepest cuts. I supported amendments during consideration of this bill that sought to rectify this problem and I hope that the bill can be improved in conference to ensure that funding is distributed where it is needed.

I am also concerned that the bill calls for shutting down a large portion of the LORAN navigation system infrastructure, limiting it to Alaska and the northwest and northeast coasts. Although I realize that this is the result of a compromise, I strongly support maintaining the LORAN system nationwide and intend to work with Senator STEVENS, Senator MURRAY and others in conference to prevent the premature shutdown of this important asset.

Mr. President, we must take steps to secure the border, though I opposed Senator SESSIONS’ amendment to appropriate additional funds to construct fencing along the southwest border because it would have raided discretionary funds used to hire more border patrol agents, buy more detention beds, train first responders, and fund other important programs to support some limited fence construction. I do not believe we should be undermining critical homeland security programs to finance them. I remain committed to passing balanced immigration legislation that respects the border and allows immigrants to earn citizenship, and I hope that the Congress can reach an agreement to accomplish that in the upcoming weeks.

Finally, I am pleased my amendment to repeal the Transportation Security Administration’s exemption from Federal contracting laws was accepted. TSA has a record of mismanaging contracts and wasting billions in taxpayer dollars and it should not continue to be exempt from the same accountability that we require of every other Federal agency. I thank the managers for working with me to pass this amendment, and I hope that it is included in the final conference report.

I hope that some of these important issues can be worked out in conference and that we can send the best bill possible to the President.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I want to thank the managers of the fiscal year 2007 Department of Homeland Security Appropriations bill for including in the final conference report.

That provision would allow the Administration to reallocate resources to better fund our security agencies. I also wish to briefly discuss prisoner reentry legislation that protects the border and allows immigrants to earn citizenship, and I hope that the Congress can reach an agreement to accomplish that in the upcoming weeks.

My amendment requires DHS, in consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Attorney General of the United States, to review the methods used by the Louisiana Department of Public Safety and Corrections and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children to assist in the location of friends and family displaced by Hurricane Katrina. DHS must then report on these models and provide Congress with a detailed plan for the swift implementation of a family locator program for future disasters that reflects the lessons learned from these two models. The Department’s plan should lead to the creation of an efficient means of helping those displaced by future disasters locate their friends and family.

My second amendment is a commonsense attempt to stop the abuse of no-bid contracting in the aftermath of a disaster. After Hurricane Katrina, the Federal Emergency Management Agency relied upon the “unusual and compelling urgency” exception to allow no-bid contracts for everything from collecting debris to hauling and installing housing. Unfortunately, many of these no-bid contracts were not merely emergency stop-gap measures—they were open-ended agreements and resulted in significant waste and abuse. My amendment, cosponsored by my colleague from Oklahoma, Senator Coburn, prohibits the use of no-bid contracts under the “compelling urgency” exception, unless these contracts are limited in time, scope and value, and notification is provided to the congressional oversight committees. This amendment will end the abuse of noncompetitive contracts by setting real and reasonable limits to the emergency exception. This amendment does nothing to inhibit a rapid response; in fact, it closes a loophole that threatens the integrity of our Federal response, and it will save taxpayer money. I thank the Senators for accepting this amendment into the bill.

I am pleased that these amendments have been accepted into the bill, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that the failures of the Government’s response to Hurricane Katrina are not repeated.

Mr. President, I will support final passage of the Homeland Security Appropriations bill today because its funding is vital to our first responders and all of those responsible for protecting us. Further, it includes important provisions that I worked to have included.

I am very pleased that the Senate passed both my amendment and Senator Stabenow’s amendment on Canadian trash imports. My amendment would have prevented the Department of Homeland Security to deny entry to the United States of any commercial trash truck until the Secretary certifies that the methodologies and technologies used to screen the trash for the presence of chemical, nuclear, biological and radiological weapons are as effective as those used to screen for such materials in other items of commerce entering the U.S. The Department would first be given 90 days to assess the feasibility of implementing the system, then another 180 days to implement changes to address the security concerns. If, however, such changes are not identified, which I expect will be the case, municipal solid waste will not be allowed to come into the State of Michigan or elsewhere in our country.

With thousands of trash trucks coming into Michigan from Canada each week, this provision is critical for addressing the risks this garbage poses to our country’s security, public health, and environment. Senator Stabenow’s trash amendment also addresses the security risks from trash by requiring the Secretary of Homeland Security to levy a fee on the trash shipments, in an amount that would cover the cost of such inspections. It would therefore make it more expensive for Ontario to send their trash to Michigan, protecting U.S. landfills from being filled with Canadian trash.

With the help of my friends from West Virginia and New Hampshire, Senators Byrd and Gregg, the Senate accepted my amendment related to the establishment of the fifth and final Northern Border Air Wing in Michigan. The Northern Border Air Wing, NBAW, initiative was launched by the Department of Homeland Security in 2004 to provide air and marine interdiction and enforcement capabilities along the Northern Border. Original plans called for DHS to open five NBAW sites in New York, Washington, North Dakota, Montana, and Michigan. The New York and Washington NBAW sites have been operational since 2004. Unfortunately, not all of the sites have been funded, leaving large portions of our northern border unpatrolled from the air, and, in the case of my home State, the water. In the conference report accompanying the fiscal year 2006 DHS Appropriations bill, the conference notes that these remaining gaps in our air patrol coverage of the northern border should be closed as quickly as possible.

Given that the threat from terrorists, drug traffickers, and others seeking to undermine our security has not diminished, I believe approximately $12 million of the funds included in Senator Byrd’s amendment for Air and Marine Interdiction, Operations, Maintenance, and Procurement which was adopted should be used by Customs and border protection to complete the remaining activities necessary to prepare, equip, and establish the Michigan NBAW site as Secretary Chertoff previously indicated he intends to do.

In an April 11, 2006 letter to me, Secretary Chertoff indicated that it was his department’s plan to open the Michigan site during the 2007 fiscal year and the Byrd amendment will enable the department to stick to its schedule. Mr. President, Secretary Chertoff’s letter and enclosures, my letter to the Secretary, and a colloquy are printed in the RECORD at page S7405.

Senator Baucus was also successful in his mission to press forward efforts to ensure that the northern Border is provided with proportionate resources as the southern border. His unmanned aerial vehicle pilot project will enable the Customs and Border Patrol to perform a pilot project on the northern border between Canada and the United States. As the Senate knows, the northern border is nearly four times the length of the Southern border and it deserves an appropriate attention from the Department of Homeland Security.

I am also pleased that this bill includes a provision offered by Senator Byrd that would give the Department of Homeland Security the authority to issue interim regulations for chemical facilities that pose the greatest security risk. There are over 15,000 chemical facilities in this country, and there still are no Federal laws or regulations explicitly addressing the threat of terrorism activities at chemical plants. The Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism bill, S. 2145, which I cosponsored, and which was reported by the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee in June 2006, takes a much more comprehensive approach to this issue. However, because the Senate’s Republican leadership is not allowing S. 2145 to come to the floor, I am pleased that this provision, which I supported, to address the very real risks posed by chemical facilities.

While I am pleased that funding was increased for port security and border protection, I am disappointed that the Senate rejected amendments to provide additional funding for first responders. We cannot expect our first responders to be well-trained, properly equipped and fully staffed to protect us, if we cut their funding sources. I am hopeful that the funding levels will be restored in conference.

I am also disappointed that the Senate failed to move away from the current small State funding formula that is used to allocate funding for our first responder grant programs. I supported an amendment that would have allocated funding for the largest first responder funding programs based on an assessment of threat, vulnerability and consequences, and which I supported, to address the very real risks posed by chemical facilities.

Mr. President, at this time we are here to give the PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

Mr. Gregg. Mr. President, I ask for final passage and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. The result was announced—yeas 100, nays 0, as follows:

July 13, 2006

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S7503
The bill (H. R. 5441), as amended, was passed.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORNYN). The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, for the next few minutes, we will be getting unanimous consents on two issues that will outline what we will be doing during the early to mid part of next week.

Before doing that, I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, recording the early to mid part of next week. I will single out the members of the committee. I chair the Environment and Public Works Committee; Senators THUNE, DEMINT, VITTER, WARNER, ISAKSON, CHAFFEE, MURkowski. And Senator VOINOVICH of Ohio has been particularly helpful in this. He has a lot of interest in this bill. Of course, more than anybody else on the Republican side, Senator BOND, who is chairman of the subcommittee, has been very helpful.

The big four in this case, of course, would be Senators BOND, BAUCUS, JEFFORDS, and myself. We have worked closely together to overcome some of the obstacles. Early on, there were several holds on this bill because it is complicated. It is one that almost is the result of negotiations for the transportation reauthorization bill. And we had several people who had concerns and we worked with them, including Senator SNOWE, who was nice enough to help us with some of the facets she had objections to; Senator Sessions; Senator McCaIN; and, of course, the Democratic members of the committee who worked so well, including Senator CARPER and Senator LIEBERMAN, and Senators CLINTON, LAUGENBERG, and OBAMA.

Everybody was there working together. It was quite an undertaking to get us to the point where we are today.

I will single out several others. Senator GREGG had some concerns also. Probably one of the persons I was really gratified to work with is Senator FEINGOLD, the Senator from Wisconsin. I thank him for his cooperation. He had a number of amendments that I thought would be more than we could possibly handle. We had to get the number down to workable so that we could have a time agreement to get this bill passed. I thank Senator FEINGOLD for his cooperation and for agreeing to offer limited amendments under short time agreements. If he wanted to be hard to get along with, he could have had long agreements and this would have gone into many nights. He didn’t do that. He agreed to short time agreements, which will make this possible to pass. His willingness to work with us is very much appreciated by all.

Over the past few months, he consistently has been helpful and responsive in working on the WRDA bill. I thank the Senator from Wisconsin for his cooperation.

This is going to be the first time that we have a lot that we need to authorize the Corps of Engineers to do in navigation flight control and environmental restoration. This bill will allow us to do that. I thank everybody for his or her cooperation. Let’s go forward.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at a time to be determined by the majority leader in consultation with the Democratic leader, on Tuesday, July 18, the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 93, S. 728.

I further ask that the committee-reported amendments be withdrawn and the manager substitute amendment at the desk be agreed to, with the original text for the purposes of further amendment and that the only other amendments in order be the following, the text of which are at the desk, with specified time agreements equally divided among the usual group.

Mr. Boxer, Folsom Dam, 1 hour; FEINGOLD-MCCAin, mitigation standards, 1 hour; FEINGOLD-MCCAin, peer review, 4 hours; INHOFE-BOND, independent reviews, 1 hour; INHOFE, fiscal transparency, 1 hour; INHOFE, House appropriation report, 2 hours; MCCAin-FEINGOLD, chief of engineers, 1 hour; NELSON of Florida, water projects, 1 hour; SPECTER, Federal hopper dredges, 1 hour.

I ask unanimous consent that there be 2 hours of general debate on the bill, and that following the disposition of amendments and the use or yielding back of time, the bill, as amended, be read the third time, and the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 166, H.R. 2864, the House companion, and that all after the enacting clause be stricken and the text of S. 728, as amended, be inserted thereof that the bill as amended, be read the third time and the Senate proceed to a vote on passage, and S. 728 be returned to the Senate calendar.

I further ask that no points of order be waived by virtue of this agreement.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, first, I want the RECORD spread with the fact that the Senate can work together. This is an example of that. Senator BOXER and Senator INHOFE are polar opposites politically. I don’t know if I could find two stranger people. We asked for cooperation and we got cooperation from the two of these Senators. But this is a bill that takes cooperation and building consensus. That is what they have done.

This is not a Republican bill, it is not a Democratic bill, it is a bill for the Senate. I also want the RECORD to reflect that Senator FEINGOLD, who has three amendments on here, is a person who is dedicated to looking at the substance of legislation. I express publicly my appreciation for his cooperation and for allowing us to get to this point. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLEN). Without objection, it is so ordered.
Mr. Frist. Mr. President, we are currently talking to some other Senators about the water resources bill, so I will have more to say about that later. In the meantime, I will go on to other business.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IRAQ

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, today marks a significant milestone for Iraq—and for coalition forces. According to Ambassador Khalilzad, Muthanna will become the first province in which an Iraqi government takes full charge of Iraqi security forces in that province. For the first time, the day-to-day security of the Iraqi people living in Muthanna will be in the hands of a civilian Iraqi government.

For the half million people living in Muthanna, this means a tangible change in the security and governance of the province. Since 2003, American and coalition forces—the Australians, the British, and the Japanese—have worked together to ensure the security of Muthanna. But beginning today, the Governor of Muthanna will assume supervision of all provincial police. National police and Iraqi army troops within the province will remain under the national control of Prime Minister Jawad al-Maliki.

The provincial Iraqi police service will assume the lead for domestic security in Muthanna. Multinational forces will move out of all urban areas in Muthanna and assume a supporting role. They will provide transition assistance teams and remain posture to assist but only at the approval of Prime Minister al-Maliki.

But more importantly, the handover of Muthanna is a critical step in the chain of events leading to Iraq standing entirely on its own. It marks a new phase in the history of Iraq. It means the increasingly capable Iraqi security forces and Government are ready to operate independently—and to replace coalition forces. And it means the President's strategy for Iraq is working.

Before March 2003, Iraq was a sworn enemy of the United States. The people of Iraq suffered under the oppression of a tyrant. Today, that tyrant is behind bars, and the world is safer and more secure for it.

Iraq's Government has transitioned from a brutal dictatorship to a democracy in which all Iraqis have a voice. Last year, millions of Iraqis defied the threats of the terrorist Abu Musab al-Zarqawi to vote in three national elections. Iraq's Sunni population participated in greater numbers each time. And just over a month ago, we eliminated the shadow cast by al-Zarqawi.

The Iraqi security forces are growing, as are their capabilities and responsibilities. In July of 2004, there were no operational Iraqi Army division or brigade headquarters. In just 2 years, 2 divisions, 14 brigades, and 57 battalions control their own area of responsibility: 28 authorized national police units are in the fight with 10 battalions in the lead. Over 264,000 trained and equipped Iraqi security forces are taking the battle to the enemy.

Iraq now has a free and independent media. Thousands of reconstruction projects are in the works, slowly but surely strengthening Iraq's infrastructure and economy. And a fully constitutional national unity government representing all Iraqi people is finally in place.

Many challenges remain ahead. But today is an important step toward a free, democratic, and prosperous Iraq governed by law. With the United States and our coalition allies—must continue to train and equip Iraqi security and police forces to ensure Iraq's 17 other provinces are fully prepared to follow in Muthanna's footsteps. As Iraqi forces step aside and we will be one step closer to bringing our troops home.

In a region plagued by radicalism and instability, today's transfer is a critical milestone. We are one step closer to peace and stability, and it means Iraq is one step closer to assuming its rightful place in the global community of democratic nations.

CONDEMN THE ACTS OF WAR PERPETRATED AGAINST ISRAEL BY HEZBOLLAH FORCES

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise because of the recent attacks on Israel. The news is frightening: rocket attacks on the city of Haifa in Israel, which clearly represents an escalation of the attack from Lebanon. Therefore, I rise to condemn the acts of war perpetrated against the nation of Israel by Hezbollah forces operating in southern Lebanon.

Dozens of Katyusha rockets were fired at northern Israel on Wednesday and Thursday, and additional salvos have continued to rain down. Israeli soldiers are responding, and they have attempted to respond to this unprovoked assault across an internationally recognized border. As a result of this aggression, eight Israeli soldiers are dead, two more are prisoners of Hezbollah, and the citizens of northern Israel are living in fear.

I call on the international community to support Israel in its attempts to end terrorist operations in southern Lebanon, free the captive soldiers, and restore its territorial security.

In the battle to the end, Israeli forces withdrew from all Lebanese territory in the year 2000. The United Nations recognized this withdrawal as fully compliant with all relative Security Council resolutions. Unfortunately, the government in Beirut has not done its part to ensure that this disengagement enhanced the security of both nations.

It is not surprising since 14 members of Lebanon’s parliament and two cabinet ministers are members of Hezbollah. The Lebanese Government, which refuses to crack down on these terrorists, must be held accountable. In actuality, Syria and Lebanese governments sponsor Hezbollah’s activities, must be condemned and, if they do not cease this support, sanctioned harshly.

I regret to say we will probably witness more violence in the days ahead. Many innocent people on both sides of the border will likely suffer. It is incumbent on the United States and the international community to stand by Israel as she fights this battle for freedom and also grimly unsurprising.

Supported by both Syria and Iran, Hezbollah has, for almost a quarter of a century, targeted freedom. Whether that be U.S. marines in 1983 in Beirut, U.S. airmen in the Khobar Towers tragedy, or repeated deadly attacks against innocent Israelis and ongoing weapons stockpiling. Besides regularly supplied weapons from Hezbollah, Iran and Syria are also responsible for donating an estimated $100 million per year to Hezbollah. The Lebanese government, of which Hezbollah is an active part, bears a full measure of responsibility for this act of war against Israel, and Israel has a right, under international law, to take actions necessary to rescue her sons. Israel fully withdrew from southern Lebanon in May 2000. This move by Israel was certified by the U.N. Security Council. As Israel has met the requirements of U.N. Security Council Resolution 425, which called for an Israeli withdrawal and for Lebanon to assert control over the area vacated by Israel.

The appropriate, reasonable and legal response to the brutality and dishonor of terrorism is proactive self-defense. We would do no different were these young men our own. Israel continues to be a force for freedom and as a friend and ally to the United States, deserves our full backing during this difficult time. Furthermore, as this body has reaffirmed time and again, we fully reject and denounce the terrorist activities of Hezbollah, both inside Lebanon and outside its borders, will quickly see the futility of this course of action, and make a move for peace and stability rather than chaos and war.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I rise today to talk briefly about the current events in Israel and the Middle East. I strongly condemn the ongoing murderous attacks by Hezbollah on Israel and its soldiers. Several days ago, eight Israeli soldiers were killed and two were kidnapped following an unprovoked attack by Hezbollah. In response, the Israeli government is determined to disarm Hezbollah and its同情者 armed militia group with immediate and unconditional release of all Israeli soldiers. Hezbollah has refused United Nations demands to disarm and has been responsible for terrible acts of violence for many years. No country should provide support for Hezbollah, which is a U.S.-designated terrorist group. Hezbollah’s actions are contrary to the interests of the Lebanese people and hurt the region.

The Hezbollah attack follows a June 25 attack by Hamas on a southern Israeli military post that resulted in the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier and the killing of several others. Hamas must also immediately and unconditionally release all Palestinian soldiers that Israel holds. The United States will stand by our commitment to increase pressure on the Government of Lebanon to do the right thing and disarm Hezbollah. The Lebanese people surely deserve better than to have their fate determined by this terrorist organization. But for now, it is critical that we continue providing support to Israel and to have their fate determined by Iran, which is still a strategic partner with Hezbollah and Hamas.

I will shortly be introducing legislation to terminate U.S. recognition of the Government of Lebanon to do the right thing and disarm Hezbollah. The Lebanese people deserve to have their fate determined by this terrorist organization. But for now, we must continue to increase pressure on the Government of Lebanon to do the right thing and disarm Hezbollah and Hamas.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, PIEDMONT, WEST VIRGINIA

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, this year marks the 150th birthday of the town of Piedmont, WV. This little town, located in the north fork of the Potomac River in the northeastern corner of West Virginia. Piedmont was chartered in 1856, and is located on the north branch of the Potomac River. In the late 19th century, the town of Piedmont bustled with economic activity. A period of prosperous growth began when the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad established a locomotive shop complex and switching yard in the area, and the town became an important freight-generating point on the B&O line.

When local entrepreneurs persuaded the state to install railroads to turn from wood to coal for firing their locomotives, the coal industry in the region boomed.

In the 1880s, William Luke established the West Virginia Paper Company’s mill—Westvaco—in Piedmont, which produced a source of jobs for Piedmont residents. This included native Appalachians, migrant African Americans, and immigrants from Europe, especially Irish and Jewish. Therefore, soon after the opening of the paper mill, Piedmont became a town saturated with ethnic neighborhoods. A resident of Piedmont has written that, “Piedmont’s character has always been completely bound up with the Westvaco paper mill.”

This little town of Piedmont features some unique characteristics. For example, “Ripley’s Believe It or Not” once pointed out that Kenney House Hill in Piedmont is the only street in the world from which a person can enter all three stories of the same building! Piedmont is also known for a number of famous residents it has produced. This includes Don Redman, a famous jazz musician and composer, who wrote a number of hit arrangements for such groups like Jimmy Dorsey, Harry James, and Count Basie.

Henry Gassaway Davis was a giant in the coal mining and banking industries in the late 19th Century, and a two-term U.S. Senator from West Virginia. In 1907, Davis was the Democratic nominee for Vice President—he was 80 years of age at the time, making him the oldest person ever nominated for President or Vice President on a major party ticket.

Thousands of people throughout the United States know of the town of Piedmont because of the writings of another of the town’s famous residents, the nationally renowned writer and eminent scholar, Henry Louis Gates.

In his memoir, Colored People, Dr. Gates discusses life in Piedmont during the 1950s. The book, which reflects on his childhood in this small rural community, before and during the civil rights movement, is a vivid portrayal of the people of Piedmont, whom he describes as “virulently Piedmont nationalists.” “(N)estled against a wall of mountains, smack-dab on the banks of the mighty Potomac,” writes Dr. Gates, “we knew God gave America no more beautiful location.” According to Gates, the town’s credo is: “all New York’s got that Piedmont’s got is more of what we got. Same but bigger.” “Otherwise,” he writes, “the advantage was all to Piedmont.”

Mr. President, I congratulate the townspeople of Piedmont, the little town “on the side of a hill in the Allegheny mountains,” as Dr. Gates calls it, on its 150th birthday which the town will celebrate with its “Homefest.” I wish the town the best of success on this milestone event.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

U.S. ARMY LIEUTENANT SHAW VAUGHAN

Mr. SALAZAR. Mr. President, I wish to take a moment of the Senate’s time to remember a Coloradan who was lost to us last month in defense of this Nation.

Shaw Vaughan was a loving and supportive son and older brother, an avid hunter and fly fisherman. One of his most prized possessions was his 1969 Jeepster Commando, an off-roading vehicle he had personally rebuilt, affectionately named Hercules. Hercules sits quiet today, its red finish gleaming unblemished under the mountain sun.

U.S. Army L.T. Col. Shaw Vaughan, of Edwards, in Eagle County in my State of Colorado, was killed on June 7 in Mosul, Iraq. Lieutenant Vaughan
Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, today I rise to remember the 3-year anniversary of the death of two, brave fallen firefighters.

July 22, 2003, will be a day that is always remembered in the hearts of the family and friends of Jeff Allen of Salmon, ID, and Shane Heath of Melba, ID. These brave men lost their lives while trying to save our public lands from a catastrophic wildfire in the Salmon-Challis National Forest. Both men were experienced firefighters of the Indianola Helitack Crew.

This weekend a memorial will be dedicated to Jeff and Shane. Family and friends will gather to remember their strong spirits and the sacrifice they made. This memorial symbolizes the courage of Jeff and Shane, the healing of the community, and helps us all to remember that wildfire spares no one.

Jeff Allen was 23 years old and had been a firefighter since 1999. He started working on the Salmon-Challis National Forest on a thinning crew on the Salmon-Cobalt District in 1998. He served successfully in fighting devastating wildfires in the Salmon-Challis National Forest during the 2000 fire season. Jeff was a marketing major at Boise State University.

Shane Heath was 22 years old and was in his fourth season with the Forest Service. He served on the Helitack crew as a certified sawyer and was also a student at Boise State University.

The tragic loss of these two men continues to be felt throughout their communities and their selfless acts of true bravery. I commend the men and women who risk their lives every day by undertaking this terribly dangerous job with courage and professionalism.

Thousands of young men and women are on the front lines of the wildfires that are now sweeping across the West. As we enter the middle of fire season, with the devastating heat that we are having in the Great Basin, and the West, I hope that we do not lose another firefighter to wildfire.

GREAT LAKES FISH AND WILDLIFE RESTORATION ACT

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I am very pleased that the Senate has passed the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act, S. 2430. My colleague from Michigan, Senator Levin, and I believe that this legislation will provide the resources and authority for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the States, and the tribes to restore fish and wildlife in the Great Lakes.

The program has support from the States, tribes, and nongovernmental groups because it is a good management tool. Over 140 fish species and over 500 species of migratory birds can be found in the basin. The Great Lakes population has been growing, and like many coastal areas, there is a large concentration of people and industry on the coasts. Further, the Great Lakes are threatened by the continuing introduction of invasive species which impact the native food chain and habitat.

The fish and wildlife in the Great Lakes are under pressure, and the Great Lakes Fish & Wildlife Restoration Act of 2006 provides needed resources and authority. For instance, the bill would reauthorize the grant program, increasing the amount available for grants to $12 million and adding funding for the Great Lakes region to a list of projects that may receive grants. The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service would award grants based on the recommendations from the existing grant proposal review committees, though wildlife experts would be added to this committee.

The bill also authorizes up to $6 million each year for the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service to undertake projects that have a regional benefit to fish and wildlife. Under this new authority, the Service would undertake projects based on the recommendations of States and tribes.

This bill reflects the collaboration of nongovernmental groups, as well as tribal, State, and Federal agencies with jurisdiction over the management of fish and wildlife resources of the Great Lakes. All of those groups have the goal of protecting and restoring the Great Lakes fish and wildlife, and this bill will continue in the right direction. I thank all of these groups for their work in shaping this bill.

I also thank the staff at the Environment and Public Works Committee, particularly Nathan Richmond and Jo-Ellen Darcy. I understand that Nathan’s work in preparing this bill for markup was interrupted by the early arrival of his first child, so I appreciate the staff work involved in moving this bill.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

WATER TREATMENT PLANT OPENING

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, today I honor and congratulate Fairfax Water, which serves nearly 1.5 million customers in the Commonwealth of Virginia on the opening of the Frederick P. Griffith, Jr. water treatment plant in Lorton, VA. They are dedicating the plant this Saturday, and while I am not able to attend the ceremony and festivities, I want to thank the leadership of Fairfax Water particularly Board Chairman Harry F. Day, and the other Fairfax Water board members Constance M. Houston, Philip W. Allin, Richard G. Terwilliger, Bill G. Evans, Burton J. Rubin, Paul J. Andino, Linda A. Singer, A. Dewey Bond, and Frank R. Begovich as well as Charles M. Murray, the general manager, for their efforts in undertaking this endeavor.

The Griffith plant is a state-of-the-art facility which combines sensitivity to the environment, technologically savvy security measures, and an appreciation for the history of its surrounding area. The plant sits on the site of a prison most famous for holding a group of suffragettes in 1917 who were arrested for demonstrating in front of the White House to secure their right to vote. The facility pays tribute to these brave ladies by incorporating design elements of the workhouse, in the plant’s architectural design. The opening of this facility shows the dedication Fairfax Water has for its customer’s health and safety. Fairfax Water will continue to be a vital and necessary partner in its community, and a leader in the Commonwealth and the country. Mr. President, I know my colleagues will join me in sending best wishes to the board members and employees at Fairfax Water.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF BOWBELLS, NORTH DAKOTA

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 100th anniversary. On July 28-30, the residents of Bowbells will gather to celebrate their community’s history and founding.

Bowbells is a vibrant community in northwestern North Dakota, just a short drive from the Canadian border. The town was founded in 1896 with the help of the Soo Line Railroad that passed through the town. The name “Bowbells” is derived from the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow located in London, England, that were in the shape of bows. By 1913, the town was served by two different railroad lines.

Today, it is the county seat of Burke County, ND. Many citizens of Bowbells support their families through agriculture, producing a wide array of products, including canola, flax, barley, sunflowers, hard red spring wheat, and durum. Located near Bowbells is the Des Lacs National Wildlife Refuge, which supports a large waterfowl population. Outdoor enthusiasts can also enjoy both fishing and hunting opportunities in and around Bowbells.

Citizens of Bowbells have organized numerous activities to celebrate their centennial. Some of these activities include a golf tournament, class reunions, street dances, a 5K/10K walk/run, softball and baseball games, and all-faith services.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating Bowbells, ND, and its residents on the first 100 years of this outstanding community. By honoring Bowbells and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Bowbells that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Bowbells has a proud past and a bright future.

IN HONOR OF ISRAEL HOROVITZ

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to celebrate the life and work of a special individual. At the end of this year, Mr. Israel Horovitz will retire as artistic director of the Gloucester Stage Company, and as he prepares to do so I am proud to join with his colleagues, family, and fans in celebrating more than 25 years of sustained artistic contributions to Massachusetts and the country.

Modern American theater has much to celebrate as a result of Israel’s leadership at Gloucester Stage. Born in Wakefield, MA, he returned to his home State to found the Gloucester Stage Company after holding such prestigious posts as the Royal Shakespeare Company’s Playwright-in-Residence. In 1979, the theatre has premiered the works of esteemed playwrights such as Terrence McNally, Wendy Wasserstein, and in the years since has brought real meaning to the Horovitz name. The theatre that serves as a “safe harbor for new writing;” in the course of bringing the works of new, undiscovered playwrights to life, Gloucester Stage has hosted 35 world premieres of plays, many of which went on to successful runs on Broadway and beyond.

In addition to celebrating Israel as the artistic director, we must also celebrate his writings. Horovitz is the author of more than 50 plays and he stands as one of the most internationally acclaimed American playwrights of our time. He was presented with the prestigious Elliot Norton Prize celebrating his work with the theatre. And his plays have earned him many of the industry’s most prestigious awards, such as the OBIE, which he earned twice, the Prix du Jury of the Cannes Film Festival, the Prix du Plaisir du Theatre, an Award in Literature of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and the Lifetime Achievement Award from B’Nai Brith, among many others.

On March 29, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts honored Horovitz with a Governor’s Leadership Award and under his leadership Gloucester Stage has received numerous Best of Boston awards as well as the New England Theatre Conference Award.

I am proud to represent a State where Israel’s artistry has blossomed, inspired young and old minds alike, entertained generations, and lifted lives. He is one of our true cultural treasures, and he has honored the best traditions of American literature. He is one of our great artists, and he has honored the best traditions of our country.

Tribute to Morgan Harris

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I often rise to speak about the issues being debated on the floor of the Senate, whether it be to share my questions and using them to illuminate and celebrate the human condition. I wish Israel and Gillian the very best as they begin this new chapter in life.

TRIBUTE TO MORGAN HARRIS

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I often rise to speak about the issues being debated on the floor of the Senate, whether it be to share my questions and using them to illuminate and celebrate the human condition. I wish Israel and Gillian the very best as they begin this new chapter in life.

FLAG SPEECH

(By Morgan Harris)

I am the flag. I was originated on June 14, 1777. I was given 13 stripes alternating red and white with 13 red and 13 white of blue. I am the flag. My content was dictated, but my arrangement was not. Many made me appear different, but they usually agreed the same, but my stars were often rearranged. For many years history has taught that Betsy Ross was my original maker. Though she made many, there is no proof that she made me first. In 1818 my design was set. The only change was to add a star for each new State. I was carried by soldiers into battle. I flew from the masts of great ships. For 47 years I had 48 stars. In 1959 and 1960 I was given two stars for the new States of Alaska and Hawaii. Today, I still have those same 50 stars and 13 stripes. I am the flag.

To show respect and dignity for what I represent, rules have been written for my use and care. When I am displayed during the playing of the national anthem, men and women in uniform stand at attention and salute me. All others stand at attention with their right hand over their heart and men remove their hats. During the Pledge of Allegiance, everyone is to stand at attention with their right hand on their heart. I am usually flown in the outdoors from sunrise to sunset. However, I may be flown for 24 hours a day if lighted during darkness. I should not be flown at half-staff upon the death of great people to show respect to their memory. I am draped over the caskets of those who have served our country. No other flag is to fly about me. I am the American flag.

I should never be allowed to touch the ground and should be stored and protected. I should never be displayed upside down, except as a sign of distress. I should always be carried aloft and free. I represent a living symbol of freedom. No other flag is to fly.

The writer Henry Ward Beecher once said, “The American flag has been a symbol of Liberty and men rejoiced in it.” Mr. Beecher was stating how the flag represents our freedom in America and this is what I love most about the flag.

When I see the flag flying high on a flagpole and hear “The Star-Spangled Banner” played, I think of the freedom we have as Americans. I think of the men and women who died so that we may have freedom. It makes me proud to be an American. The flag is our symbol of freedom.”

FLAG SPEECH

(By Morgan Harris)
Mr. President, I am sure it will come as no surprise to you that Morgan’s speech won first place out of 148 entries at his school. He has much to be proud of.

IN HONOR OF DR. ROBERTO LANGERS

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize and celebrate the work of a great man whose work has an impact on lives throughout this country and all over the globe. This month hundreds of scientists will gather at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to celebrate one of their own, Doctor Robert Langer, and I am proud to join them in doing so.

Most Americans will never meet Dr. Langer, but chances are his research has already affected their life. One of America’s most brilliant scientists, Dr. Langer has been on the front lines of the fight to cure cancer and continue to push the envelope of biomedical engineering. Dr. Langer studied chemical engineering in college after being inspired by the gift of a chemistry set as a child. He went on to receive his doctorate of MIT in 1974. Doctor Langer accepted an endowed fellowship at Children’s Hospital in Boston with Judah Folkman, a leading cancer researcher.

Dr. Langer’s return to MIT as a professor of chemical engineering resulted in the creation of the Langer Lab, one of the most cutting-edge biotechnology laboratories in the world. Researchers at the Langer Lab study ways to utilize polymers to deliver life-saving drugs to patients with diseases such as diabetes and cancer, and the success of Doctor Langer’s work earned him a place as one of CNN’s “100 Most Important People in America.” In 2004, Parade magazine selected him as one of six “Heroes whose research may save your life.”

Dr. Langer’s genius has been recognized repeatedly by his scientific peers as well. He is the recipient of over 140 major awards, including in 2002 the premier award in science, the Charles Stark Draper prize. In 1998, he was awarded the Lemelson-MIT prize for invention, and in 2006 he was inducted into the Inventor’s Hall of Fame. He holds nearly 550 patents, 180 of which are licensed to medical, chemical, or pharmaceutical companies. Dr. Langer is one of a few elected to all three of America’s National Academies—the National Academy of Sciences, the National Academy of Engineering, and the Institute of Medicine at the National Academy of Sciences—and at age of 43, was the youngest man to be so honored.

Massachusetts has a long and rich history of technological innovation, global leadership in health care, and advancing insight into the human condition. Dr. Langer’s genius and creativity have kept the faith with that history through 30 years of providing cutting-edge solutions to the medical problems of today and tomorrow. Along with his colleagues, family, and friends, I thank him for his contributions and look forward to many more years of his work on behalf of people all over the globe.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(Mr. Williams informed the Senate that the nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 11:13 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hanrahan. His reading clerks, announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 250) to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 to improve the Act, and asks for a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints the following members as the managers of the conference on the part of the House: Mr. McKeon, Mr. Castle, Mr. Souder, Mr. Osborne, Mrs. Musgrave, Mr. George Miller of California, Mrs. Woolsey, and Mr. Kind.

The message also announced that the House passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2990. An act to improve ratings quality by fostering competition, transparency, and accountability in the credit rating agency industry; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

H.R. 5646. An act to study and promote the use of energy efficient computer servers in the United States.

H.R. 5846. An act to study and promote the use of energy efficient computer servers in the United States.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

At 11:58 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bill:

S.J. Res. 46. A resolution authorizing the printing and binding of a supplement to, and revised edition of, Senate Procedure.

The enrolled bill was subsequently signed by the President pro tempore (Mr. Stevens).

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bill was read the first and the second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

H.R. 2990. An act to improve ratings quality by fostering competition, transparency, and accountability in the credit rating agency industry; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following bills were read the second time, and placed on the calendar:

H.R. 4411. An act to prevent the use of certain payment instruments, credit cards, and fund transfers for unlawful Internet gambling, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, and were referred as indicated:

EC-7493. A communication from the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative Affairs, Department of Justice, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled “Reauthorization of the Congress of the United States and the Feasibility of Federal Drug Courts”; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-7494. A communication from the Deputy Director, Regulations and Rulings Division, Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Realignment of the ‘Central Coast Viticultural Areas’” ((RIN1513-AA72)(T.D. TTB-49)) received on June 28, 2006; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-7495. A communication from the Deputy Director, Regulations and Rulings Division, Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Expansion of the San Francisco Bay and Central Coast Viticultural Areas” ((RIN1513-AA55)(T.D. TTB-48)) received on June 28, 2006; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-7496. A communication from the Deputy Director, Regulations and Rulings Division, Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Expansion of the Livermore Valley Viticultural Area” ((RIN1513-54)(T.D. AMENDMENT NO. 4610

At the request of Ms. MIKULSKI (for herself and Mr. SARBANES): S. 3632. A bill to amend the definition of ‘‘law enforcement officer’’ in subchapter III of chapter 83 and chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, respectively, to ensure the inclusion of certain positions; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, today I am reintroducing the Law Enforcement Officers Retirement Equity Act. I am proud to be joined on this bill by my colleague and friend, Senator SARBANES.

This legislation will ensure that all Federal law enforcement officers have the same retirement options and that their pay and benefits conform to the federal law enforcement retirement system.

Under current law, most Federal law enforcement officers and firefighters are eligible to retire at age 50 with 20 years of Federal service. But some Federal law enforcement personnel, such as customs and immigration inspectors at the Department of Homeland Security or police officers at Veterans Affairs, are not eligible for these same
We must honor our Federal law enforcement personnel. The names of Federal law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty are engraved on the Law Enforcement Memorial. We include the names of the officers from Homeland Security and Veterans Affairs. We honor them when they die, but we don’t recognize them when they are living.

We need to make sure that all Federal law enforcement officers earn the pay and benefits that they deserve. These brave men and women are the country’s first line of defense against terrorism and the smuggling of illegal drugs at our borders. They have the same law enforcement training as all other law enforcement personnel, and face the same risks and challenges.

Postal Customers inspectors are responsible for the most arrests performed by Customs Service employees. Yet they do not qualify for law enforcement officer status. Along with U.S. Customs agents, uniformed U.S. Customs inspectors are helping to prevent smuggling at our Nation’s airports and help enforce U.S. Customs laws. They were among the first to respond to the tragedy at the World Trade Center. After September 11, Customs inspectors are playing a critical role in securing our ports and borders. Some don’t get their hands on weapons of mass destruction and smuggle them into the country.

Like customs inspectors, immigration inspectors at the Department of Homeland Security are also on the front lines of defense against terrorism. Immigration inspectors enforce the Nation’s immigration laws at more than 300 ports of entry. In the normal course of their duties, they enforce criminal laws, prevent illegal entries, and seize evidence. Inspectors’ responsibilities have become increasing complex as political, economic and social unrest has increased globally. The threat of terrorism only increases these responsibilities.

This legislation is cost effective. Any cost that is created by this act is more than offset by savings in training costs and increased revenue collection. A 20-year retirement bill for these critical employees will reduce turnover, increase productivity, decrease employee recruitment and development costs, and enhance the retention of a well-trained and experienced work force. These vital Federal employees bear the same risks in work under similar circumstances to other law enforcement officials and deserve to receive the same level of benefits.

This bill will improve the effectiveness of our Federal workforce to ensure the integrity of our borders and the proper collection of the taxes and duties owed to the Federal Government. This bill is strongly supported by the National Treasury Employees Union. I urge my colleagues to join me again in this Congress in expressing support for this bill and finally getting it enacted.

By Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself and Mr. CARPER):
S. 3654. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code to allow a credit against income tax, or, in the alternative, a special depreciation allowance, for reuse and recycling property, to provide for tax-exempt financing of recycling equipment, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Recycling Investment Saves Energy—RISE—Act of 2006 with my colleague Senator CARPER. The RISE tax incentives will create jobs, increase productivity, conserve energy and expand America’s recycling infrastructure.

I offer this bill to capture the significant energy savings available through greater recycling. For example, recycling aluminum cans saves 95 percent of the energy required to make the same amount of aluminum from its virgin source. The amount of lost energy from throwing away aluminum and steel cans, plastic PET and glass containers, newsprint and corrugated packaging was equivalent to the annual output of 15 medium sized coal powerplants. Increasing the recycling rate of these materials would save enough energy annually to heat 74,350 million American homes, provide the required electricity for 2.5 million Americans, and save about $771 million in avoid costs for barrels of crude oil. As a result, recycling should be an integral component of our nation’s energy efficiency strategy.

The RISE Act would also help create quality jobs. Due to the diminishing quantity and quality of available recyclable materials, many companies currently have to purchase feedstock to meet demand. This new economic challenge makes it even harder for recycled products to compete in the marketplace. In some cases, recyclers have been forced to shut down their operations in the United States and relocate to other countries due in part to insufficient or poor quality recycled feedstocks. This is particularly unfortunate as, on a per-ton basis, sorting and processing recyclables are estimated to sustain 10 times more jobs than landfilling or incineration.

A national investment in our recycling infrastructure is necessary to reverse the stagnant or declining recycling rate or many counties by commoditiies, including aluminum, glass and plastic. For example, 55 billion aluminum cans were wasted by not being recycled in 2004, which represents approximately $1 billion of aluminum lost to industry. The recycling rate of paper is 35 percent, glass 51 percent, glass containers 35 percent, and PET plastic bottles less than 20 percent.

The RISE Act will save energy and improve the quantity and quality of recycled materials by allowing companies to claim either a 15-percent tax credit or a 50 percent accelerated depreciation deduction for the purchase of recycling equipment used exclusively to collect, distribute or recycle material. Recyclable material is defined broadly to capture a wide variety of commodities, including plastic, scrap textiles, scrap rubber, scrap packaging, recovered fiber, scrap ferrous and nonferrous metals, or electronic waste generated by an individual or business. It does not include buildings, real estate or rolling stock used to transport reuse and recyclable materials.

The RISE Act aims to reverse the trend in recycling rates and resulting energy loss by incentivizing greater collection, distribution and recycling of quality recyclable materials. The RISE Act is cost effective. Any provision that may reduce the barriers hindering investment in optical sorting and other state-of-the-art equipment needed at material recovery and manufacturing facilities. It will make innovative technology more affordable, such as reverse vending machines that collect and process empty containers. An earlier version of RISE was incorporated as section 154b of the Senate Energy Policy Act of 2005, but did not survive the conference committee.

The RISE Act will amend section 142 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 by redefining “solid waste facilities” to ensure that recycling facilities are eligible for tax-exempt bond financing under this section. This latter provision was created to resolve an ongoing glitch in the law that prevents these facilities from being eligible for tax-exempt financing.

L. Mr. President, most of these organizations have submitted a joint letter in support of the RISE Act, and I will ask to have the letter printed in the Record following the statement.

Reducing the barriers to recycling also supports a number of environmental goals, including lessening the need for new landfills, preventing emissions of many air and water pollutants, reducing greenhouse gas emissions, and stimulating the development of green technology. But most importantly, recycling helps preserve resources of our children’s future.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the letter I referred to be printed in the Record. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Senate finds the following:

(1) Recycling means business in the United States, with more than 56,000 reuse and recycling establishments that employ over 1.1 million people, generating an annual payroll of nearly $37 billion, and producing over $296 billion in annual sales. On a per-ton basis, sorting and processing recyclables alone sustain 10 times more jobs than landfill or incineration.

(2) By reducing the need to extract and process virgin raw materials into manufacturing feedstock, reuse and recycling helps achieve significant energy savings. For example:

(A) Taken together, the amount of energy wasted from not recycling aluminum and steel equals the output of 15 medium sized power plants.

(B) The reuse of 500 steel drums per week yields 6 trillion Btu's per year, which is enough energy savings to power a city the size of Colorado Springs, Colorado, for 1 year.

(3) Unfortunately, the United States recycling rate of many consumer commodities, including aluminum, glass, and plastic, are stagnant or declining, and businesses that rely on recycled feedstock are finding it difficult to obtain the quantity and quality of recycled materials needed. Increasingly, United States manufacturing facilities that rely on recycled feedstock are closing or forced to re-tool to use virgin materials.

(4) The environmental impacts from reuse and recycling are significant. Increased reuse and recycling would produce significant environmental benefits, such as cleaner air, safer water, and reduced production costs. For example:

(A) Between 2 and 5 percent of the waste stream is reusable. Reuse prevents waste creation and adverse impacts from disposal.

(B) On a per-ton basis, recycling of: office paper yields 682 pounds of air polluants from being released, saves 7,000 gallons of water, and 3.3 cubic yards of landfill space; aluminum saves 10 cubic yards of landfill space; plastic saves 30 cubic yards of landfill space; glass prevents 7.5 pounds of air pollutants from being released and saves 2 cubic yards of landfill space; and steel saves 4 cubic yards of landfill space.

(5) A national investment in the reuse and recycling industries is needed to preserve and expand America’s reuse and recycling infrastructure.

SEC. 3. CREDIT FOR REUSE AND RECYCLING PROPERTY.

(a) In general—For purposes of section 38, the qualified reuse and recycling property credit determined under this section for the taxable year is an amount equal to 15 percent of the amount paid or incurred during the taxable year for the cost of qualified reuse and recycling property placed in service or leased by the taxpayer.

(b) Definitions—For purposes of this section:

(1) Qualified reuse and recycling property—

(A) In general.—The term ‘qualified reuse and recycling property’ means any machinery and equipment (not including buildings or real property) that is

(i) any cathode ray tube, flat panel screen, or similar video display device with a screen size greater than 4 inches measured diagonally, or

(ii) any central processing unit,

(B) REUSE OR RECYCLING.—The term ‘reusing or recycling’ means that process (including sorting) by which worn or surplus commodities are manufactured or processed into specification grade commodities that are suitable for use as a replacement or substitute for virgin materials in manufacturing tangible consumer and commercial products, including packaging.

(c) AMOUNT PAID OR INCURRED.—For purposes of this section:

(1) In general.—The term ‘amount paid or incurred’ includes installation costs.

(2) LEASE PAYMENTS.—In the case of the leasing of qualified reuse and recycling property by the taxpayer, ‘amount paid or incurred’ means the amount of the lease payments due to be paid during the term of the lease or during the taxable year other than such portion of such lease payments attributable to insurance, interest, and taxes.

(d) EXCISE TAX; ETC. EXCLUDED.—The term ‘amount paid or incurred’ shall not include any amount to the extent such amount is funded by any grant, contract, or otherwise by another person (or any governmental entity).

(e) ELECTION TO HAVE SECTION NOT APPLY.—A taxpayer may elect for any tax year to not take any credit or allow any deduction with respect to any qualified recycling property specified by the taxpayer.

(f) BASIS ADJUSTMENTS.—For purposes of this section, if a credit is allowed under this section for any amount paid or incurred with respect to any property, the increase in the basis of such property which would (but for this subsection) result from such expenditure shall be reduced by the amount of the credit allowed.

(g) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) CREDIT MADE PART OF GENERAL BUSINESS CREDIT.—Section 38 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking ‘‘and’’ at the end of paragraph (29), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (30) and inserting ‘‘, plus’’, and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

(31) the qualified reuse and recycling property credit determined under section 45N(a).’’.

(2) Subsection (a) of section 1016 of such Code is amended by striking ‘‘and’’ at the end of paragraph (36), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (37) and inserting ‘‘ and’’, and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

(38) the extent provided in section 45N(f), in the case of amounts with respect to which a credit has been allowed under section 45N.’’.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2005.

SEC. 4. SPECIAL DEPRECIATION ALLOWANCE FOR CERTAIN REUSE RECYCLING PROPERTY.

(a) In general—Section 168 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to business-recovery property) is amended—

(i) by inserting after the item designated as subsection (f) of such section:

(j) REUSE AND RECYCLING—The term ‘reuse and recycling property’ means any machinery and equipment (not including buildings or real property) that is

(ii) any cathode ray tube, flat panel screen, or similar video display device with a screen size greater than 4 inches measured diagonally, or

(iii) any central processing unit,

(b) by inserting after the item designated as subsection (h) of such section:

(k) REUSE AND RECYCLING.—The term ‘reuse and recycling property’ means any machinery and equipment (not including buildings or real property) that is

(i) any cathode ray tube, flat panel screen, or similar video display device with a screen size greater than 4 inches measured diagonally, or

(ii) any central processing unit,

(c) by inserting after the item designated as subsection (t) of such section:

(l) REUSE AND RECYCLING.—The term ‘reuse and recycling property’ means any machinery and equipment (not including buildings or real property) that is

(i) any cathode ray tube, flat panel screen, or similar video display device with a screen size greater than 4 inches measured diagonally, or

(ii) any central processing unit,

(d) by inserting after the item designated as subsection (u) of such section:

(m) REUSE AND RECYCLING.—The term ‘reuse and recycling property’ means any machinery and equipment (not including buildings or real property) that is

(i) any cathode ray tube, flat panel screen, or similar video display device with a screen size greater than 4 inches measured diagonally, or

(ii) any central processing unit,
after December 31, 2005, but only if no written binding contract for the acquisition was in effect before December 31, 2005, or
(ii) acquired by the eligible taxpayer pursuant to a written binding contract which was entered into after December 31, 2005.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—
(i) ALTERNATIVE DEPRECIATION PROPERTY.—For purposes of subparagraph (b)(7) of subsection (g) (relating to election to have system apply).
(ii) ELECTION OUT.—If a taxpayer makes an election under this clause with respect to any class of property for any taxable year, this subsection shall not apply to all property in such class placed in service during such taxable year.

"(C) SPECIAL RULES.—
(i) SELF-CONSTRUCTED PROPERTY.—In the case of an eligible taxpayer manufacturing, constructing, or producing property for the eligible taxpayer’s own use, the requirements of clause (iv) of subparagraph (a) shall be treated as met if the eligible taxpayer begins manufacturing, constructing, or producing the property on or before December 31, 2005.
(ii) SALES-LEASEBACKS.—For purposes of subparagraph (a)(iii), if property—
(A) is originally placed in service after December 31, 2005, by a person, and
(B) sold and leased back by such person within 3 months after the date such property was originally placed in service, such property shall be treated as originally placed in service not earlier than the date on which such property is used under the leaseback referred to in clause (ii).

"(D) DEDUCTION ALLOWED IN COMPUTING MINIMUM TAX.—For purposes of determining alternative minimum taxable income under section 55, the deduction under subsection (a) for qualified recycling and reclamation property shall be determined under this section without regard to any adjustment under section 56.

"(E) ELIGIBLE TAXPAYER.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘eligible taxpayer’ means, with respect to any qualified recycling and reclamation property, any taxpayer which elects to have section 45N apply with respect to such property.

"(F) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall be applied to property placed in service after December 31, 2005.

SEC. 5. TAX-EXEMPT BOND FINANCING OF RECYCLING FACILITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 142 of the Internal Revenue Code (defining exempt facility bond) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i) SOLID WASTE DISPOSAL FACILITIES.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a)(6) only, the term ‘solid waste disposal facilities’ means any facility used to perform a solid waste disposal function.
(D) EFFECTIVE DATE.—For purposes of this subsection only—
(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘solid waste’ means garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials, including waste water resulting from industrial, commercial, agricultural, or community activities.
(B) GARBAGE, REFUSE OR DISCARDED SOLID MATERIALS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term ‘garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials’ means materials that are useless, unwanted, or discarded.
(C) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘solid waste’ does not include materials in domestic sewage, pollutants in industrial or other water resources, or other liquid or gaseous waste materials.
(D) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to bonds issued after December 31, 2005.

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘solid waste’ means garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials, including waste water resulting from industrial, commercial, agricultural, or community activities.

"(B) GARBAGE, REFUSE OR DISCARDED SOLID MATERIALS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term ‘garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials’ means materials that are useless, unused, unwanted, or discarded.

"(F) SOLID WASTE.—For purposes of this subsection only—
(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ‘solid waste’ means garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials, including waste water resulting from industrial, commercial, agricultural, or community activities.

"(B) GARBAGE, REFUSE OR DISCARDED SOLID MATERIALS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the term ‘garbage, refuse, or discarded solid materials’ means materials that are useless, unused, unwanted, or discarded.

S. 3655. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals eligible for veterans health benefits to contribute to health savings accounts; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I seek recognition today to introduce legislation to allow veterans who use the VA health care system to establish health savings accounts, HSAs. This legislation will increase health insurance options for veterans and their families, provide future options in the choice of health care providers for veterans, and could ultimately allow veterans who are forced to rely on the VA health care system today to choose to receive care from the private health care system in the future.

As my colleagues are aware, current law allows individuals who purchase a high deductible health insurance plan to contribute funds to themselves and their family, to a health savings account. Funds are contributed to the HSA on a pretax basis and then can be withdrawn for qualified health care expenses without any tax consequence.

In order for a person’s HSA to be in ‘good standing’ with the IRS, the individual cannot carry health insurance that provides coverage for any health services prior to reaching the deductible amount of the high deductible plan. Of course, like many government programs, there are exceptions to the rules for certain circumstance. Most notably, a person does not jeopardize an HSA by purchasing long-term care or accident insurance. Moreover, the receipt of workman’s compensation coverage disqualified from contributing to an account. Yet the IRS has advised the health insurance industry that VA health care would count as a health insurance plan that provides coverage for health care services reaching the high deductible limit. Therefore, veterans who use VA are not eligible to establish health savings accounts.

Rising costs trying to secure a steady stream of virginal materials. By providing tax incentives materials as a feedstock realizes significant energy savings as compared to production using virgin materials. The provision for providing tax incentives to increase the quality and quantity of usable recycled materials available, the RISe provision will enable these industry segments to significantly reduce energy consumption.

Recycling associations and industries support this bill.

U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Jeffords:

Hon. Jim Jeffords,

Mr. President, I seek recognition today to introduce legislation to allow veterans who use the VA health care system to establish health savings accounts, HSAs. This legislation will increase health insurance options for veterans and their families, provide future options in the choice of health care providers for veterans, and could ultimately allow veterans who are forced to rely on the VA health care system today to choose to receive care from the private health care system in the future.

Most notably, a person does not jeopardize an HSA by purchasing long-term care or accident insurance. Moreover, the receipt of workman’s compensation coverage disqualified from contributing to an account. Yet the IRS has advised the health insurance industry that VA health care would count as a health insurance plan that provides coverage for health care services reaching the high deductible limit. By Mr. CRAIG (for himself and Mr. COBURN):
S. 3655. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow individuals eligible for veterans health benefits to contribute to health savings accounts; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I seek recognition today to introduce legislation to allow veterans who use the VA health care system to establish health savings accounts, HSAs. This legislation will increase health insurance options for veterans and their families, provide future options in the choice of health care providers for veterans, and could ultimately allow veterans who are forced to rely on the VA health care system today to choose to receive care from the private health care system in the future.

By Mr. CRAIG (for himself and
At the time this issue was brought to my attention, the argument was limited to the narrow issue of service-connected veterans being denied an opportunity to avail themselves of the tax advantages of an HSA simply because they suffered an injury related to their service in the military and the government was providing care for that injury. Of course, that seemed outrageous to me. Like any employer, the Government has an obligation to provide treatment for injuries sustained while military personnel are serving the country. And if workman’s comp is a current exemption, why not VA care?

So, I set out to draft a bill to allow service-connected veterans who use VA for service-connected treatment to establish HSAs. But, the more I considered the arguments for allowing those who use VA for service-connected conditions to have HSAs, the more I realized that the arguments applied just as strongly to all VA patients. I would like to take a moment to explain my arguments.

First, the current law unfairly affects families of veterans when the veteran is the sole provider of income for the family. As everyone knows, VA is not a self-pay care provider, except in the extreme case of a permanently disabled service-connected veteran. Therefore if a veteran—even a service-connected veteran—uses the VA health care system, current law does not allow a veteran to contribute money on behalf of his family to an HSA. What good does that do? Why would we prohibit a veteran from providing health coverage to his or her family? In my opinion, that does neither the veteran nor his or her family any good. It is simply a well-intentioned policy when applied to HSAs, with a harmful, unintended consequence as applied to veterans.

Second, under current law VA is permitted to bill insurance carriers for the treatment of nonservice connected conditions. Further, many veterans are required to pay copayments to VA in order to receive that same care. So, veterans have out-of-pocket medical expenses and VA can bill their insurance provider. Yet we have a policy that disallows the establishment of a tax free account to pay for those medical expenses and—even worse—provides a disincentive for the veterans to buy a policy that will allow them to contribute money on behalf of their family to an HSA. What good does that do?

I urge my colleagues to be cosponsors of this legislation. You’ll allow me to expound upon this as we work to establish HSAs. But, I also hope that I have demonstrated here today that it is sound public policy to extend the HSA option to all veterans who use VA’s health care system.

I am confident that many of you will agree with the premise that it is a basic issue of fairness to support allowing every American to establish HSAs. But, I certainly do not want to stop a veteran from choosing to buy insurance, start saving in an HSA, and one day leaving the system. I think one of the things government can do for its citizens is provide the tools and assistance that will allow Americans to provide for themselves. That is what this legislation is about.

I am proud to join my colleagues in passing the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria Act of 2003, a historic piece of legislation that expressed our resolve to see the United States take a leadership role in the fight against the global HIV/AIDS pandemic.

The bill recognized that prevention—along with care and treatment—is an essential component of that fight and demands a multipronged approach. It endorsed the “ABC” model for prevention of the sexual transmission of HIV: Abstain, Be Faithful, use Condoms.

The bill also contained a provision that mandated that at least one-third of global HIV/AIDS prevention funds be set aside for “abstinence-until-marriage programs.”

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself and Ms. SNOWE)

S. 3666. A bill to provide additional assistance to combat HIV/AIDS among young people, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today with Senator Snowe to introduce legislation to strengthen our international HIV prevention efforts for youth and empower the people on the ground who are fighting this disease to design the most effective and appropriate HIV prevention program.

Our legislation does three things. First, it expresses the sense of the Senate that sexually active youth who live in a country where HIV infection is spreading through the general population should be considered at high risk of contracting HIV and provided with information on the complete range of tools to prevent the spread of HIV.

To date, the Office of the Global AIDS Coordinator has focused prevention programs for youth on abstinence only and ignored other prevention techniques such as the use of condoms. Second, it defines “abstinence-until-marriage” programs as those programs that place the highest, rather than exclusive, priority on encouraging individuals who have become sexually active to marry and abstain from sexual activity.

And finally, it reserves at least one-third of funds for prevention of the sexual transmission of HIV—rather than one-third of all prevention programs—for abstinence-until-marriage programs. This recognizes that HIV prevention includes many types of activities and those that target the sexual transmission of HIV/AIDS, such as abstinence-until-marriage programs, are only a subset.

In 2003, I was proud to join my colleagues in passing the United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria Act of 2003, a historic piece of legislation that expressed our resolve to see the United States take a leadership role in the fight against the global HIV/AIDS pandemic.

The bill recognized that prevention—along with care and treatment—is an essential component of that fight and demands a multipronged approach. It endorsed the “ABC” model for prevention of the sexual transmission of HIV: Abstain, Be Faithful, use Condoms.

That bill also contained a provision that mandated that at least one-third of global HIV/AIDS prevention funds be set aside for “abstinence-until-marriage programs.”

Three years later, we still face an uphill battle against the HIV/AIDS pandemic. The UNAIDS report cards have been bleak. As of June 2006, approximately 13,400 people are newly infected with HIV. Each day, approximately 5,000 people are newly infected with HIV. In 2005, there were 5 million new HIV infections around the world. 3.2 million in Sub-Saharan Africa. Sub-Saharan Africa is home to almost two-thirds of the estimated 30 million people currently living with HIV.

Across sub-Saharan Africa, the prevalence rate for the general population is 8 percent; 2.4 million adults and children died of AIDS in 2005.

Despite these devastating numbers, according to UNAIDS, less than one in five people at risk for infection of HIV have access to basic prevention services. Studies have shown that two-thirds of new HIV infections could be averted with effective prevention programs.

Clearly, we still have a long way to go to rein in this disease.

During the debate on the global HIV/AIDS bill, I expressed concern that we were placing politics over science by requiring that at least one-third of prevention funds go to “abstinence only” programs.

But, such that an artificial ear-mark—which, by the way, was not based on any scientific study or conclusive evidence—would tie the hands of HIV/AIDS workers and doctors on the ground and severely inhibit the ability of the administration to fund the most effective HIV prevention programs.

It would mean less money for funds to prevent mother-to-child transmission; less money to promote a comprehensive prevention message to high risk groups such as sexually active youth; and fewer funds to protect the blood supply.

Unfortunately, the evidence clearly shows that the one-third earmark has had a negative impact on our prevention efforts and inhibited the ability of local communities to design a multipronged HIV prevention program that works best for them.

Last month, the Government Accountability Office issued a report that found “significant challenges” associated with meeting the abstinence-until-marriage programs. The report concluded that: The 33 percent abstinence spending requirement is squeezing out available funding for other key HIV prevention programs such as mother-to-child transmission and maintaining a healthy blood supply. Country teams that are not exempted from the one-third earmark have to spend more than 33 percent of prevention funds on abstinence-until-marriage activities, sometimes at the expense of other programs. The spending requirement limited or reduced funding for programs directed to high-risk groups, such as sexual minorities; and, the majority of country teams on the ground reported that meeting the spending requirement “challenges their ability to develop interventions that are responsive to local epidemiology and social norms.”

Clearly, we are placing constraints on our ability to protect high-risk populations around the world from HIV transmission and fund the wide range of prevention programs, such as mother-to-child transmission.

Our bill seeks to address the problems highlighted in the GAO report and provide local communities the necessary flexibility to achieve the goal we all share: stopping the spread of HIV, especially among young people.

Let me be clear: our bill does not strike the 33 percent earmark for “abstinence-until-marriage” programs.

In fact, our legislation is pro-abstinence. It maintains abstinence as a critical prevention effort and places no limits on programs that lead to this result. It even allows the administration to spend more than one third of funds for the prevention of HIV on “abstinence-until-marriage” programs if the administration decides that is the best use of those funds.

Simply put, our bill balances congressional priorities with public health needs. Under our legislation, country teams can take into account country needs with respect to cultural differences, epidemiology, population age groups and the stage of the epidemic in designing the most effective prevention program.

One size does not fit all. A prevention program in one country may look a lot different than a prevention program in another country.

A May 2003 report from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and Henry J. Kaiser Foundation highlights that proven prevention programs include: behavior change programs, including delay in the initiation of sexual activity, faithfulness and correct and consistent condom use; testing and treatment for sexually transmitted diseases; promoting voluntary counseling and testing; harm reduction programs for IV drug users; preventing the transmission of HIV from mother to child; increasing blood safety; empowering women and girls; controlling infection in health care settings; and, devising programs geared towards people living with HIV.

For example, studies have shown that combining drugs with counseling and instruction on use of such drugs reduces mother-to-child transmission by 50 percent. Such cost effective programs are not related to abstinence and should not be constrained by the 33 percent earmark on funds for prevention.

I understand the importance of teaching abstinence. It is and will remain a key part of our strategy in preventing the spread of HIV. But let us listen to the words of someone with first hand experience about the challenges sub-Saharan African countries face in combating HIV/AIDS. Peter Piot, Director of UNAIDS, wrote: Abstinence is one critical prevention strategy, but it cannot be the only one. Focusing on abstinence assumes young people can choose whether to have sex. For adolescent girls in Nigeria and in many other countries, this is an inaccurate assumption. Many girls fall prey to sexual violence and coercion. When dealing with the realities and use a multipronged approach to improving education and health systems, one that can reach all of our people.

He concludes: National governments must have the freedom to employ the very best strategies at our disposal to help our people.

I could not agree more. If we want to help the girls of Nigeria and the youth of sub-Saharan Africa, we cannot limit the information they receive about keeping them safe from acquiring HIV.

Mr. President, I have been heartened to witness Republicans and Democrats coming together to support a robust U.S. assistance package to fight the HIV/AIDS pandemic. We all share the same goal of the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief to prevent 7 million new HIV infections by 2010. This bill is about helping us achieve that goal. When we put our faith in the people on the front lines of this fight and allow them to use all the tools and strategies at their disposal, we are one step closer to making that goal a reality.

We do not have time to lose. I urge my colleagues to support our legislation and support a robust abstinence-until-marriage, multi-pronged approach to preventing the spread of HIV.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3656
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “HIV Prevention for Youth Act.”

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (in this Act referred to as “PEPFAR”) is an unprecedented effort to combat the global AIDS epidemic, with over 7,000,000 targeted for initiatives in 15 focus countries.

(2) The PEPFAR prevention goal is to avert 7,000,000 HIV infections in the 15 focus countries—most in sub-Saharan Africa where heterosexual intercourse is by far the predominant mode of HIV transmission.

(3) The PEPFAR strategy for prevention of sexual transmission of HIV is shaped by 3 elements: the ABC model, defined as “Abstain, Be faithful, use Condoms”, the promotion of “abstinence-until-marriage”, and deference to local prevention needs.

(4) The United States Leadership Against HIV/AIDS, Tuberculosis, and Malaria Act of 2003 requires that at least one-third of all prevention funds be directed to abstinence-until-marriage programs. In implementing this requirement, the U.S. Global AIDS Coordinator has required that 50 percent of prevention funding be dedicated to sexual transmission prevention activities. This requirement severely limits countries from employing strategies for the prevention of sexual transmission other than abstinence, because the other sexual transmission prevention programs under PEPFAR (such as the purchase of condoms and management of sexually transmitted infections) cannot exceed one-sixth of the total prevention funds.

(5) The Government Accountability Office (GAO) issued a report in April, 2006, “Spendign Requirement Presents Challenges For Allocating Funding under the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief”, that found “significant challenges” associated with meeting the earmark for abstinence-until-marriage programs.

(6) GAO found that a majority of country teams report that fulfilling the requirement presents challenges to their ability to respond to local epidemiology and cultural and social norms.

(7) GAO found that, although some country teams may be exempted from the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, country teams that are not exempted have to spend more than twice the prevention funds on abstinence-until-marriage activities—sometimes at the expense of other programs.

(8) Indeed, according to GAO, the proportion of HIV prevention funds dedicated to “other prevention” activities (i.e. the purchase and promotion of condoms, management of sexually transmitted infections other than HIV, and messages or programs to reduce injection drug use) declined from 23 percent in fiscal year 2005 to 18 percent in fiscal year 2006 for country teams that did not receive exemptions.

(9) GAO found that, as a result of the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, country teams have not been able to plan and implement planned funding for Prevention of Mother-to-Child Transmission programs, thereby limiting services for pregnant women and their children.

(10) GAO found that the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement limited or reduced funding for programs directed to high-risk groups, such as married discordant couples, sexually active youth, and commercial sex workers.
(11) GAO found that the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement made it difficult for countries to fund medical and blood safety activities.
(12) GAO found that because of the abstinence-until-marriage spending requirement, some countries would likely have to reduce funding for condom procurement and condom social marketing.
(13) In addition, GAO found that two-thirds of focus country teams reported that the policy for implementing the ABC model is unclear and subject to varying interpretations, causing confusion about which groups may be targeted and whether youth may receive the AIDS information they need.
(14) GAO found that the ABC guidance does not clearly delineate permissible C activities under the ABC model. Program staff reported that “constrained” by restrictions on promoting or marketing condoms to youth. Other country teams reported confusion about whether PEPFAR funds may be used for broad condom social marketing, even to adults in a generalized epidemic.
(15) Each day, an estimated 13,400 young people worldwide become infected with HIV.
(16) Sub-Saharan Africa is home to almost two-thirds of the estimated 40,000,000 people currently living with HIV.
(17) In African countries, the epidemic has spread among the general population. The HIV prevalence rate for the general population is 8 percent across sub-Saharan Africa. The United States and countries in sub-Saharan Africa, the HIV prevalence rate ranges from 4 percent in Uganda to 37 percent in Botswana.
(18) According to the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, young people between the ages of 15 and 24 are “the most threatened and are at high risk of acquiring HIV vulnerability.” Globally, this age group accounts for half of all new HIV cases each year. More than 7,000 young people contract the virus every day.
(19) Most young people in sub-Saharan Africa have sex before marriage during their adolescent years. In many countries, at least half of all women have sex before age 20 and before marriage. Among young men, more than 70 percent have premarital sex before age 20.
(20) Many adolescents, who are sexually active and not yet married, have inadequate information on how to protect themselves against HIV. About half of young people in sub-Saharan Africa mention abstinence, monogamy, or condom use as a way of avoiding HIV.
(21) Young people who have sex are at greater risk of acquiring HIV than adults, partly because of their lack of knowledge. They are apt to change partners frequently, have more than 1 partner in the same time period, or engage in unprotected sex.
(22) Coercion and sexual violence undercut the ability of young people—women in particular—to protect themselves against HIV and other sexually transmitted infections. The programs include information on the health benefits of delayed sexual debut in reducing the transmission of HIV and may be used as a starting point for a range of approaches that promote building skills for practicing abstinence.
(23) Marriage does not protect young women from HIV, even when they are faithful to their husbands. In settings where it appears marriage actually increases a woman’s HIV risk. In some African countries, married women aged 15-19 have higher HIV infection levels than nonmarried sexually active women of the same age.
(24) A recent USAID-funded review found that sex and HIV education programs that encourage abstinence but also discuss the use of condoms do not increase sexual activity as criteria of sex education have long-
By Mr. SANTORUM:

Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation has reported that in Swaziland, nearly half of the women visiting their health clinics are HIV-infected. Abstinence education is not germane to these women—nor is faithfulness. They wish to avoid infecting their children. So the lesson of distrust must extend even to a local community, must take precedence. A one-size-fits-all approach certainly does not work.

That is why I have joined Senator FEINSTEIN today in introducing legislation to address the problems which the GAO described. It does this quite simply. First, it acknowledges that abstinence can play a role in preventing HIV infection. As such, the bill maintains a requirement for abstinence—so that at least one-third of funds used for preventing sexual transmission will be dedicated to such programs. Yet with two-thirds available for other means, we know countries can respond with all appropriate prevention strategies.

By setting the abstinence funding requirement so it applies only to sexual transmission, we will avoid impacting those programs which prevent non-sexual transmission of HIV. We cannot forget that these other strategies—such as reducing mother-to-child transmission—are major needs in some localities.

Our legislation does a second critical thing. The current statute requires exclusivity in funded abstinence programs. If, for example, your program desired to dispense condoms, you could not do so, even if this was a very minor part of your program’s prevention efforts. Now consider again the “discordant” couple—where only one spouse is infected. Would anyone propose that in that marriage, one should not help the uninfected partner remain so? Our legislation provides a bit of flexibility and allows funded abstinence programs to utilize other strategies such as condoms as a minor part of their prevention that is simply commonsense. It follows what we have seen to work—the “ABC” approach.

Finally, this legislation does a third thing, and that is to simply recognize that sexually active youth who live in a country where HIV infection is spreading through the general population should be considered at high risk of contracting HIV and provided with information on the complete range of tools to prevent the spread of HIV. We simply must not lose a generation to AIDS prevention can be so effective.

I thank the President for his leadership in bringing the PEPFAR effort forward to help millions realize the promise of a future in which HIV will no longer threaten their future. Today, I ask my colleagues to join with Senator FEINSTEIN and me in seeing this legislation is enacted to ensure that we address the funding problems identified by the GAO and effectively employ HIV/AIDS prevention to stem this global epidemic.

S. 3657. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow bonds guaranteed by the Federal Home Loan Banks to be treated as tax-exempt bonds; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I have devoted much of my time at looking for innovative ways to develop local communities in which our families can prosper. It is in that spirit that I am introducing legislation today that will help local governments around this country meet the long-term needs of a mankind—development needs. If our nation can play a role in preventing the spread of HIV, we can contribute to the development of our nation.

We have a unique opportunity to work with NGOs to help fund community health clinics. By allowing Federal Home Loan Banks to provide credit support to tax-exempt municipal development bonds, including letters of credit, LOCs, we can work with NGOs to help raise funds to provide vital health services. By allowing community banks to partner with the Federal Home Loan Banks to offer letters of credit, we can provide capital to support the long-term needs of developing nations. To ensure that bond investors will be paid in full, Federal Home Loan Banks provide a LOC. Unfortunately, the Internal Revenue Service, IRS, has classified Federal Home Loan Banks as Federal agencies. As such, until recently, there was no guarantee, a decision that triggers the loss of a bond’s tax-exempt status. By allowing community banks to partner with the Federal Home Loan Banks to offer credit support on municipal tax-exempt bonds, communities will be able to reduce the cost to local taxpayers for bonds issued for such projects as wastewater treatment facilities, fire stations, medical clinics, schools, buses, long-term care facilities, and infrastructure improvements.

Through their community bank owners, Federal Home Loan Banks have offered letters of credit for over 10 years. They can provide letters of credit for taxable municipal bonds and tax-exempt municipal bonds for the same price. This bill will help do just that, and I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

S. 3659. A bill to reauthorize and improve the women’s small business ownership programs of the Small Business Administration, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, as the ranking member of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I rise today to join my colleague and chair, Senator SNOWE, in introducing the Women’s Small Business Ownership Programs Act of 2006. This legislation reauthorizes and strengthens vital small business programs for women entrepreneurs nationwide.

Small businesses are the driving force behind innovation and national economic security in the United States. Employing over 19 million workers, while pumping some $2 trillion into the economy, America’s 10.6 million women-owned businesses play an integral role in this endeavor. However, despite their critical contributions to our Nation, women entrepreneurs still face many obstacles in the business world. Without the support and guidance of Women’s Business Centers and other women small business ownership programs, which provide necessary tools to ensure the long-term success of women-owned firms, many female entrepreneurs would not be able to open their doors and start a business. Given women-owned businesses’ contributions to our society, it is imperative that we continue to advocate on their behalf, and this legislation does just that.

In recent years, the Small Business Administration, SBA, has seen its annual budget repeatedly slashed by the Bush administration—the most out of any other Federal agency. The fiscal year 2007 proposal was no different. Among the various programmatic cuts within the President’s fiscal year 2007 budget, technical assistance funding was set at just $104 million—down from his proposed $188 million budget in fiscal year 2006 and $111 million in fiscal year 2005. This funding plays a crucial role in the development and sustainability of Women’s Business Centers in states across the country. The SBA provides grants and funding to Business Centers in an effort to ensure a smooth transition from sustainability to the newly established program. The Women’s Small Business Ownership Programs Act of 2006 also contains privacy protections for the Women’s Business Council, Women’s Business Centers, and their small business clients.

The bill’s provisions make several minor, yet significant, changes to the Women’s Business Centers. As well as the National Women’s Business Council—enabling both entities to serve as a better resource for not only the administration and Congress, but the larger small business community as well. In order to increase and strengthen women business owners’ representation in the Federal Government, the bill re-establishes the Interagency Committee on Women’s Business Center, and any association of women’s business centers; and (2) by adding at the end the following:

“(3) PROGRAMS AND SERVICES FOR WOMEN-OWNED SMALL BUSINESSES.—The Assistant Administrator, in consultation with the National Women’s Business Council, the Interagency Committee on Women’s Business Enterprise, and 1 or more associations of women’s business centers, shall develop programs and services for women-owned businesses (as defined in section 408 of the Women’s Business Enterprise Act of 1988) in business areas, which may include—

(A) manufacturing;

(B) technology;

(C) professional services;

(D) retail and product sales;

(E) travel and tourism;

(F) international trade;

(G) Federal Government contract business development.

(4) TRAINING.—The Administrator shall provide annual programmatic and financial oversight training for the SBA’s office of Women’s Business Ownership representatives and district office technical representatives of the Administration to enable representatives to carry out their responsibilities under this section.

(5) GRANT PROGRAM IMPROVEMENT.—The Administrator shall improve the women’s business center grant proposal process and the programmatic and financial oversight process by—

(A) providing notice to the public of each women’s business center grant announcement for an initial award, or renewal grant, not later than 6 months before awarding such grant;

(B) providing notice to grant applicants and recipients of program evaluation criteria, not later than 12 months before any such evaluation;
“(C) reducing paperwork and reporting requirements for grant applicants and recipients;”

“(D) standardizing the oversight and review processes of the Administration; and”

“(E) providing to each women’s business center, not later than 30 days after the completion of a site visit at that center, a copy of the site visit and evaluation report prepared by district office technical representatives or Administration officials.”

SEC. 3. WOMEN’S BUSINESS CENTER PROGRAM.

(a) In General.—The Center (7) (a) Center for Small Business Grants Program.—Section 29 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 656) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4), as paragraphs (3), (4), and (5), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:

(2) to undergo an annual programmatic and financial examination; and

(3) to the maximum extent practicable, to remedy any problems identified pursuant to the site visit or examination under subclauses (I) and (II);
the women's business center site for which a renewal grant is sought, including the ability to comply with the matching requirement under paragraph (4); and

(3) providing training and counseling for the owner or potential owner of a women's business center; and

(4) any additional information that the Administrator may reasonably require.

(c) Review and Approval of Applications for a Renewal Grant—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall—

(i) review each application submitted under paragraph (b), based on the information described in such paragraph and the criteria set forth under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph; and

(ii) as part of the final selection process, conduct a site visit at each women's business center to which a renewal grant is sought.

(B) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Administrator shall select applicants in accordance with predetermined selection criteria that shall be stated in terms of relative importance. Such criteria and their relative importance shall be made publicly available prior to the submission of any application to which the criteria apply.

(C) CONDITIONS FOR CONTINUED FUNDING.—In determining whether to renew a grant or cooperative agreement with a women's business center, the Administrator—

(i) shall consider the results of the most recent evaluation of the center, and, to a lesser extent, previous evaluations; and

(ii) may withhold such renewal, if the Administrator determines that the center has failed to provide the information required to be provided under subsection (b), or, if such information provided by the center is inadequate.

(D) CONTINUING GRANT AND COOPERATIVE AGREEMENT AUTHORITY.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The authority of the Administrator to enter into grants or cooperative agreements under this subsection shall be in effect for each fiscal year only to the extent and in the amounts as are provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

(ii) In general.—After the Administrator has entered into a grant or cooperative agreement with any women's business center under this subsection, the Administrator shall not suspend, terminate, or fail to renew or extend any such grant or cooperative agreement, unless the Administrator provides the center with written notification setting forth the reasons therefore and affords the center an opportunity for a hearing, appeal, or other administrative proceeding under chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

(3) RECORD RETENTION.—The Administrator shall maintain a copy of each application submitted under this paragraph for not less than 7 years.

(4) DATA COLLECTION.—Consistent with the annual report to Congress under subsection (g), each women's business center site that has been selected to receive a renewal grant under this subsection shall collect information relating to—

(A) the number of individuals counseled or trained;

(B) the number of hours of counseling provided;

(C) the number of workshops conducted;

(D) the number of startup small business concerns formed; and

(E) the number of jobs created or maintained at small business concerns.

(f) Privacy Requirements.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A women's business center may not disclose the name, address, or telephone number of any individual small business concern receiving assistance under this subsection without the consent of such individual or small business concern, unless—

(i) the Administrator is ordered to make such a disclosure by a court in any civil or criminal proceeding initiated by a Federal or State agency; or

(ii) the Administrator considers such a disclosure to be necessary for the purpose of conducting a financial audit of a women's business center, but a disclosure under this clause shall be limited to the information necessary for such audit.

(B) ADMINISTRATION OF USE OF INFORMATION.—This subsection shall not—

(i) restrict access to administrative program data activity or excluding the Administrator from using client information (other than the information described in subparagraph (A)) to conduct client surveys;

(ii) regulation.—The Administrator shall issue regulations to establish standards for requiring disclosures during a financial audit under subparagraph (A)(ii).

(11) Transition Rules.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a grant or cooperative agreement that was awarded as an eligible sustainability grant, from amounts appropriated for fiscal year 2006, to operate a women's business center, shall remain in full force and effect under the terms, and for the duration, of such agreement, subject to the grant limitation in paragraph (1).

(B) Extension.—If the sustainability grant under subparagraph (A) is scheduled to expire not later than June 30, 2007, a 1-year extension shall be granted without any interruption of funding, subject to the grant limitation in paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(C) EFFECT ON CERTAIN EXISTING PROJECTS.—A project being conducted by a women's business center, except that no such center may receive more than a total of $125,000 in fiscal year 2006 and ending on June 30, 2007;

(B) $17,000,000 for fiscal year 2008; and

(C) $17,500,000 for fiscal year 2009.

(10) PRIVACY REQUIREMENTS.—Notwithstanding any provision of law, a grant or cooperative agreement that was awarded as an eligible sustainability grant, from amounts appropriated for fiscal year 2006, to operate a women's business center, shall remain in full force and effect under the terms, and for the duration, of such agreement.

(12) Coordination of Services.—Small business development centers and women's business centers shall, to the extent possible, coordinate their efforts to avoid duplication of programmatic efforts.

(13) Associations of Women's Business Centers.—

(A) RECOGNITION.—The Administrator shall recognize the existence and activities of any association of women's business centers established to address matters of common concern.

(B) Consultation.—The Administrator shall consult with each association of women's business centers to develop—

(A) a training program for the staff of the women's business centers and the Administrator; and

(B) recommendations to improve the policies and procedures for governing the general operations and administration of the Women's Business Center Program, including grant program improvements under subsection (e)(5).
(d) CLEARINGHOUSE FOR HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS.—Section 409 of the Women’s Business Ownership Act of 1988 (15 U.S.C. 7109) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(e) dbs Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship. The Subcommittee shall hold hearings, make appropriate investigations, and report to the Committee on the Small Business and Entrepreneurship projects and programs under this Act.”

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 410(a)(1) of the Women's Business Ownership Act of 1988 (15 U.S.C. 7109(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(A) the Subcommittee on Manufacturing, Product and Retail Sales, and Interagency Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, and (B) the Subcommittee on Technology, and Training and Professional Development.”

“(4) PARTISAN BALANCE.—When filling vacancies under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall, to the extent practicable, ensure that there are an equal number of members from each of the 2 major political parties.

“(5) ACCOUNTABILITY.—If a vacancy is not filled within the 30-day period required under paragraph (1), or if there exists an imbalance of parties under paragraph (4), for a period exceeding 30 days, the Administrator shall submit a report, not later than 10 days after the expiration of either such 30-day deadline, to the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship of the Senate and the Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives, that explains why the respective deadline was not met and provides an estimated date on which any vacancies will be filled, as applicable.”.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 528—DESIGNATING THE WEEK BEGINNING ON SEPTEMBER 10, 2006, AS “NATIONAL HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES WEEK.”

Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. KERRY, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DEMINT, Mr. TALENT, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. OBAMA, Mr. VOINOVICH, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. DODD, Mr. LOTT, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. BAYH, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BURR, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. BIDEN, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. FRIST, Mr. WARNER, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. VITTER, Mr. BAXTER, Mr. BAYH, Mr. SALAZAR, and Mr. SCHUMER) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 528

Whereas there are 103 historically Black colleges and universities in the United States; and

Whereas historically Black colleges and universities provide the quality education essential to full participation in a complex, high-technology society; and

Whereas historically Black colleges and universities have a rich heritage and have played a prominent role in the history of the United States; and

Whereas historically Black colleges and universities have allowed many underprivileged students to attain their full potential through higher education; and

Whereas the achievements and goals of historically Black colleges and universities are deserving of national recognition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) Designates the week beginning September 10, 2006, as “National Historically Black Colleges and Universities Week.”

(2) calls on the people of the United States and interested groups to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs to demonstrate support for historically Black colleges and universities in the United States.

SENATE RESOLUTION 528—DESIGNATING JULY 13, 2006, AS “NATIONAL SUMMER LEARNING DAY.”

Mr. OBAMA (for himself, Mr. DEMINT, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. ISAKSON, and Mr. KENNEDY) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 529

Whereas all students experience measurable loss of mathematical and reading skills when they do not engage in educational activities during the summer months;

Whereas summer learning loss is greatest for low-income children, who often lack the academic enrichment opportunities available to their more affluent peers;

Whereas summer learning loss contributes significantly to the gaps in achievement between low-income children, including minority children and children with limited English proficiency, and their more affluent peers;

Whereas structured enrichment and education programs are proven to accelerate learning for students who participate in such programs for several weeks during the summer;

Whereas in the BELL summer programs, students gain several months worth of reading and mathematics skills through summer enrichment, and in the Teach Baltimore Summer Academy, students enrolled for 2 summers gain 70 to 80 percent of a full grade level in reading, and thousands of students in similar programs experience measurable gains in academic achievement;

Whereas Summer Learning Day is designed to highlight the need for people to be engaged in summer learning activities and to support local summer programs that... benefit children, families, and communities; and
Whereas a wide array of schools, public agencies, non-profit organizations, institutions, non-profit education, museums, libraries, and summer camps in many States across the United States will celebrate the annual Summer Learning Day on July 13, 2006; Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Senate—
(1) designates July 13, 2006, as "National Summer Learning Day" to raise public awareness about the positive impact of summer learning opportunities on the development and educational success of our Nation's children;
(2) urges the people of the United States—(A) to promote summer learning activities to send young people back to school ready to learn; (B) to support working parents and their children; and (C) to keep our Nation's children safe and healthy during the summer months; and
(3) urges communities to celebrate, with appropriate ceremonies and activities, the importance of high-quality summer learning opportunities in the lives of young students and their families.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 109—COMMENDING THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA FOR ITS RENEWED COMMITMENT TO AFGHANISTAN

Mr. COLEMAN (for himself and Mr. LUGAR) submitted the following concurrent resolution, which was considered and agreed to:

Whereas twenty-four Canadian citizens were killed as a result of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the United States;
Whereas the people of Gander, Newfoundland, provided food, clothing, and shelter to thousands of stranded passengers and temporary aircraft parking to thirty-nine planes diverted from United States airspace as a result of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the United States;
Whereas Mr. Chretien, Mr. Martin, and Mr. Harper, former and current Prime Ministers of Canada, have provided humanitarian, economic, and security personnel on the invitation of the Government of Afghanistan since 2001;
Whereas Canada has pledged $650,000,000 in development aid to Afghanistan;
Whereas Afghanistan is Canada's largest recipient of bilateral development aid;
Whereas Canada has stationed approximately 2,300 defense personnel who comprise the Task Force Afghanistan, in order to improve security in southern Afghanistan, particularly in the province of Kandahar;
Whereas Canada has over 70 diplomatic officers worldwide who are dedicated to growing democracy and equality in Afghanistan;
Whereas at least seventeen Canadians have made the ultimate sacrifice in operations in Afghanistan since September 11, 2001;
Whereas Canada's commitment to the Government of Afghanistan, under the leadership of Prime Minister Hamid Karzai, was due to expire in February 2007;
Whereas on May 17, 2006, the Government of Canada led by Prime Minister Stephen Harper, in the Canadian House of Commons extend Canada's commitment to peace and security operations in Afghanistan;
Whereas on May 17, 2006, the Canadian Parliament voted to extend peace and security operations in Afghanistan until 2009, to increase its development assistance by $310 million, and to build a permanent and secure embassy in Afghanistan to replace its current facility; and
Whereas this was an important sign of the renewed commitment of numerous United States allies to Afghanistan: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—
(1) commends the Government of Canada for its renewed and long-term commitment to Afghanistan;
(2) commends the leadership of former Canadian Prime Ministers Jean Jacques Chretien and Paul Martin and current Prime Minister Stephen Harper for their steadfast support for commitment to democracy, human rights, and freedom throughout the world;
(3) commends the Government of Canada for working to secure a democratic Afghanistan;
(4) commends the Government of Canada's commitment to reducing poverty, aiding the counternarcotics efforts through counterterrorism and counterinsurgency campaigns, and ensuring a peaceful and terror-free Afghanistan;
(5) commends the Government of Canada for its three-pronged commitment to Afghanistan: diplomacy, development, and defense; and
(6) expresses the gratitude and appreciation of the United States for Canada's enduring friendship and leadership in Afghanistan.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S. 3504, S. 2754, AND H.R. 810

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this is one of the two issues that I mentioned a little bit ago on stem cells. I ask unanimous consent that at 12:30 p.m. on Monday, July 17, the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 3504, S. 2754, and H.R. 810, as under the previous order. I further ask that the time be divided as follows:

Monday: 12:30 to 1:00, majority; 1:00 to 1:30, minority; 1:30 to 2:00, majority; and 2:00 to 2:30, minority, continuing to rotate every half-hour until 8:30. Tuesday: 10:00 to 10:30, majority; 10:30 to 11:00, minority; 11:00 to 11:15, majority; 11:15 to 12:00, minority; 12:00 to 12:15, majority; 12:15 to 12:30, minority; 2:15 to 2:45, majority; 2:45 to 3:15 minority; 3:15 to 3:30, minority leader; and 3:30 to 3:45, majority leader.

Further, I ask that at 3:45 the Senate proceed to three consecutive votes as the order provides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, all that to say that we will be on stem cells on Monday and Tuesday with the 3:45 time period beginning three consecutive votes. The times that we just locked in are such to have some order to the debate back and forth so people will know approximately when their debate time is.

MEASURE PLACED ON THE CALENDAR—H.R. 4411

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I understand there is a bill at the desk that is due for a second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title for the second time.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 4411) to prevent the use of certain payment instruments, credit cards, and fund transfers for unlawful Internet gambling, and for other purposes.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, in order to place the bill on the calendar under the provisions of rule XIV, I object to further proceedings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. Without objection, the bill will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives: S. 250

Resolved, That the bill from the House (S. 250) entitled “An Act to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 to improve the Act”, do pass with the following Amendments:

If the State has a 2-year legislative session, each year of the session is deemed to be a separate regular session of the State legislature.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, we have one matter of business that we are working on now. That is Water Resources Development. There has been objection to the unanimous consent that I proposed earlier by the Democratic leader. We are working very hard to work out that objection. With that, I will take a few more minutes, and hopefully we will be able to address this issue. I will go back to work and do just that.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT ACT AND NOMINATIONS.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Republican leader came to my office a few minutes ago and indicated he had some family situation that he needed to attend to. It was no emergency or anything, but it is late. It is a quarter to 8.

On WRDA, we have cleared that on our side. And we have some nominations we have also cleared on our side. I am confident that WRDA—which we were planning to go to that Tuesday night after we finished the stem cell legislation—I am very confident we can work that out.

As I indicated, we are set mechanically to go forward on WRDA. It has been cleared on both sides, even the time on the amendments. We thought we had the nominations worked out dealing with a very important agency of our Government.

I am confident, I repeat, that we will be able to do that as soon as people are back in their offices.

So I do not in any way retract my statements about how it is possible to work on things together around here. This was shown with the difficult time that Senators had working on the request that was brought before the Senate just a handful hour ago or so.

It is a very important bill. I have been chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee on two separate occasions. It is very difficult to get things out of that committee because of different feelings people have on issues. But Senator INHOFE and Senator BOXER worked very well and got it to the floor.

So I am hopeful that even maybe tomorrow we can do the unanimous consent request that has been laid before the Senate and have that approved. If not, we will do it Monday. I am hopeful and confident we can do that.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR FRIDAY, JULY 14, 2006

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:45 a.m. tomorrow, Friday, July 14. I further ask consent that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators being permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, this evening we completed the Homeland Security Appropriations bill. I congratulate Senator GREGG and Senator BYRD for their diligence in working through this important funding bill. Early next week we will consider the stem cell research bills. There are actual votes on each of those. We will be debating all day and into the evening on Monday, with the closing remarks and votes on Tuesday.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:45 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that it stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:51 p.m., adjourned until Friday, July 14, 2006, at 9:45 a.m.

AMENDING PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT WITH RESPECT TO NATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR THE CENTERS FOR DISEASE CONTROL AND PREVENTION

SPEECH OF
HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 11, 2006

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, Benjamin Disraeli once exclaimed, “The health of the people is really the foundation upon which all their happiness and all their powers as a state depend.”

Rooted in this reality, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention lead vital public health initiatives to prevent and control infectious and chronic disease, injuries, workplace hazards, disabilities, and environmental health threats. However, the effectiveness of its work depends on its strong partnerships with other organizations, notably, the National Foundation for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The National Foundation was founded by Congress in 1995 to bridge outside resources and partners with CDC scientists, and it has greatly enhanced the CDC’s impact in such areas as global health, anti-microbial resistance, the obesity epidemic, healthy aging, and emergency preparedness and response. Most recently, the foundation created the Emergency Preparedness & Response Fund. This fund will provide the CDC with resources it needs for rapid response to large-scale public health emergencies, such as terrorist attacks or an avian flu pandemic. Given this organization’s immeasurable contribution to national public health initiatives, I urge members to support S. 655. This bill proposes increased funding for grants to the foundation, allows for more voluntary service to the CDC by foundation individuals, and permits the CDC Director to provide facilities, utilities, and support services to the foundation if doing so is advantageous to CDC programs and the American people. Provisions of this bill will indeed strengthen the CDC and National Foundation’s partnership and result in better public health outcomes for our Nation.

Thomas Carlyle once said, “He who has health, has hope, and he who has hope has everything.” Let us ensure that we do everything in our power to improve the health status of our people. In doing so, we will most certainly ensure the productivity and fruitfulness of their lives.

CONGRATULATING THE MENTAL HEALTH CENTER OF CHAMPAIGN COUNTY ON ITS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. TIMOTHY V. JOHNSON
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the Mental Health Center of Champaign County on the celebration of its 50th anniversary.

The Champaign County Mental Health Clinic opened its doors 50 years ago as a program of the Champaign County Mental Health Society. On July 22, 1968, the Mental Health Center became incorporated and changed its name to the Mental Health Center of Champaign County. Throughout its years of service to the community, the Mental Health Center has continually expanded mental health services to meet the needs of the public.

The Mental Health Center of Champaign County is committed to providing critical mental health services to the community. Since its inception, the Mental Health Center has provided residential, outpatient, school-based, and 24-hour crisis services to promote the recovery, awareness, and understanding of mental health and related illnesses.

The citizens of the 15th district and I are very proud of the Mental Health Center of Champaign County for their continued efforts to provide quality services to those in need of them. We look forward to a prosperous future in which the Mental Health Center will continue its dedication to mental health services.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me today in recognizing the Mental Health Center of Champaign County on its 50th anniversary of service to our community.

PENCE CALLS ON CONGRESS TO STAND FOR THE SANCTITY OF LIFE

HON. MIKE PENCE
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, in the coming days, Congress will consider legislation to make taxpayer dollars available for what is known as embryonic stem cell research.

Stating the case for an imminent presidential veto, in 2001 President Bush made the moral dimensions of scientific testing on human embryos clear.

These are the principles: It is morally wrong to create human life to destroy it for research. Also, it is morally wrong to take the tax dollars of millions of pro-life Americans and use them to finance research that they find morally objectionable. The choice of our time was described millennia ago: “See, I set before you blessings and curses, life and death. Now choose life that you and your children may live.” I urge my colleagues to stand for the sanctity of life at every level. Stand with President George W. Bush. Reject taxpayer funding of human embryo research.

HON. SHELLEY MOORE CAPITO
OF WEST VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, today we recognize the American Legion Post No. 91 and Auxiliary Unit No. 91 in Romney, WV, and Post No. 137 in Capon Bridge, WV. Both are located in my district, Hampshire County.

Post No. 91 has a long tradition of monthly meetings since 1920, sponsoring strong child and youth programs, and flying flags on holidays such as Memorial Day, Flag Day, the Fourth of July, and Hampshire Heritage days. Post Commander Madeline Shallcross has boosted membership to 450 members. Auxiliary Unit No. 91 is led by 7-year President Diana Haines. Founded in 1926 with only 22 members, it has now grown to be part of the third largest unit in the State. The 435 members volunteer and maintain the expense of the Hampshire County Library. In 1926, the auxiliary assisted the Legion in designing an honor roll plaque for the World War I service men of Hampshire County.

Post No. 137 has an active membership of 400 in Capon Bridge, WV. Post Commander Bob Brasher is assisted by President Sally Reid and Larry LaFollette, head of the Sons of the Legion group.

Each of these organizations provides a venue for fellowship, volunteerism, and patriotism. The service each member has given to their Nation and community shall be forever cherished and represented.

ANNIVERSARY OF ADVANCEMENT VIA INDIVIDUAL DETERMINATION

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise in celebration of the trailblazing work done by Advancement Via Individual Determination. Twenty-five years ago, Mary Catherine Swanson founded an organization rooted in the belief that, if the desire to go to college is met with a willingness to work hard, then those students who are capable of completing a rigorous curriculum but are falling short of their potential can realize their desire if schools provide them with the necessary tools.

AVID expands opportunities to those students who have traditionally been neglected.

This “bullet” symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

by the system. AVID is changing the belief system of entire communities by showing that low-income and minority students can achieve at the highest levels and succeed in college. In 2004–2005, 49.4 percent of AVID students were Hispanic and 17 percent were black. The success of these students is critical to closing the achievement gap.

In Chicago is a legendary educator named Marva Collins. She argues, “When we cease destroying [students’] self-esteem by making them doubt their abilities and leading them to believe that their value is unimportant and useless, we shall see the poor student become a good student, and the good student become a superior student. Creating doubt in the mind erases self-esteem and self-value.” We have put hurdle after hurdle in front of our students, but we have forgotten to teach them how to jump. We expect them to demonstrate what they have learned in school, but we have not taught them to read. We expect them to go to college and get a job, but we have not taught them the learning skills they need to graduate from high school, much less college. In the absence of a college-going tradition in their families and communities, how can we be surprised that students are not meeting our unrealistic expectations? Teaching organizational and study skills, working on critical thinking, providing tutoring, and creating enrichment and motivational activities, AVID has challenged all of us to examine the lessons we are teaching our children.

AVID has reminded all of us to stop blaming the victims of an education system in crisis, and it has realized tremendous success rates. In 2004–2005, 75.1 percent of AVID graduates were accepted to 4-year colleges. 99.1 percent of AVID students graduated from high school, compared to 70 percent nationally. While 36 percent of students completed the 4-year college entrance requirement nationally, a staggering 86.7 percent of AVID students did so.

Ms. Collins reminds us: “Our children and parents surrender themselves to those who are identified as perpetrators, but who actually destroy them. Children come to school to get what they lack, and they are told, instead, all the things they cannot do. We, the educators, —and indeed I believe the politicians— should be the hope of our children. We should be their insurance against the dark side of failure and mediocrity, and, far too many times, we cancel that insurance by labeling them ‘At Risk students.’ They come to be complete and far too many schools split them in halves.”

I commend and thank all of the men and women that have contributed to AVID’s success over the past 25 years—empowering students to make responsible decisions and contribute positively to society.

Before coming to Lake Land, Dr. Luther served on Governor Jim Edgar’s Integration of Workforce Education task force and Governor George Ryan’s Illinois Workforce Investment Board. Upon arriving at the college, Dr. Luther faced many challenges in reforming and improving the college’s educational system and atmosphere, including facing a substantial budget deficit and shrinking student enrollment, as well as beautifying a deteriorating campus.

Today, the college operates on a stable budget and is considered one of the most beautiful campuses in the United States. Dr. Luther has been an exceptional fund-raiser, increasing Lake Land’s annual scholarship fund six-fold, from $50,000 to $300,000. Citizens of the 15th District of Illinois honor Dr. Luther for his innovation and leadership at Lake Land College. He has done a great service to our community and greater central Illinois.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me today in celebrating the career of Lake Land College President Robert K. Luther.

TRIBUTE TO 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LONDON POST OFFICE OF LONDON, WV

HON. SHELLEY MOORE CAPITO
OF WEST VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the London Post Office in London, WV. Despite 15 postmasters and three different buildings it remains a center of activity for the community.

The first location for the post office was in a building near the railroad tracks, and it was later housed in a general store that burned down in 1899. The current building now sits on the same piece of land as the two previous ones. This landmark has become an anchor of the community for social gatherings and town news.

Chip Frame is the current postmaster and has worked there for 9 years. Even with an hour commute, the family atmosphere and friendly community make it worth the drive for him.

IN RECOGNITION OF EMILY LAWRIMORE

HON. JOE WILSON OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, with the continuity of a Congressional session, there is a normal shuffling of staff positions. Today, it is with mixed emotions that I announce the departure of Emily Lawrimore.

As long as Hamas embraces terrorism and refuses to acknowledge the right of Israel to exist, terrorists will persist in the Palestinian lands.

Earlier this week, Hizballah kidnapped two Israeli soldiers in Northern Israel. Israel has responded in an effort to rescue these soldiers and diminish the ability of Hizballah to launch missiles into Israeli population centers.

I rise to express support for our ally, Israel, as it deals with yet more terrorist acts . . . the kidnapping of its soldiers during late June and the continuing barrage of rockets launched at Israeli civilians from Gaza and Lebanon.

The kidnapping of the Israeli soldiers can certainly be considered a provocation of war. Unfortunately, Israel’s withdrawal from the Gaza strip has not led to a positive transformation of Palestinian politics or more security for the Israeli people.

Likewise, Israel’s withdrawal from southern Lebanon in 2000—which was certified by the United Nations—has failed to provide peace for Israelis living in northern Israel. Since Israel’s 2000 withdrawal, Hizballah has fired hundreds of rockets targeting Israeli civilians. Over the past year, Hizballah has carried out four major attacks into Israel in an effort to harm Israeli citizens.

Israel exhausted all non-military means to get its soldier released by Hamas before it called for these military actions. The Hamas-led Palestinian Authority is failing the Palestinian people by giving comfort to terrorists.

It is imperative that we provide Israel with continued and broad-based support since an even greater destabilizing force is developing in the region—a nuclear-armed Iran with terrorist allies in Hizballah and Hamas.
A BALANCED RESOLUTION ON IRAQ

HON. BARNEY FRANK OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, as someone who voted against the original legislation authorizing the U.S. military action in Iraq, I remain convinced that our military involvement there is a mistake, regardless of our military personnel serving there an appropriately supportive position. I ask that a copy of the resolution adopted by the New England Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church be printed here.

RS—299 REGARDING AMERICAN PARTICIPATION IN THE WAR IN IRAQ
(Submitted by Betty and Dan Allen, Mark Goad, Gary Richards, Don Rudalevige, Phil Susac)
(Adopted Friday Evening, June 10, 2006)

Scripture and the call of Justice demand of Christians a bias towards peace and reconciliation. Our calling as United Methodist Christians demands that we not remain silent regarding the on-going war in Iraq. We proclaim a God who cares for all people. Clear evidence of absolute need is required before engaging in armed conflict. Such evidence does not exist to support American occupation of Iraq. The conflict has created and maintained toward our troops from Iraq, points out the deficiencies in our Iraq policy, while maintaining toward our military and civilian personnel serving there an equality does not exist to support American occupation of Iraq. The conflict has created and maintained toward our troops from Iraq, points out the deficiencies in our Iraq policy, while maintaining toward our military and civilian personnel serving there an appropriate supportive position. I ask that a copy of the resolution adopted by the New England Annual Conference be printed here.

There are over 2,300 miles of trout streams in Virginia and the Paint Bank and Wytheville Fish Hatcheries are vital to ensuring that these streams are well stocked with large and healthy fish populations. For this reason, I am glad to support H.R. 5061, which will allow the Commonwealth of Virginia to continue to maintain the trout population for recreational fishing for people and visitors to visit Virginia. I appreciate the work of Mr. BOUCHER in crafting this legislation and I urge its passage today.

IN HONOR OF STELLAR MAMOTTO
HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay special tribute to a woman of extraordinary achievement, her life an inspiring lesson of the power of great determination. Stellar Mamotto was born to humble beginnings in the Dodoma region of Tanzania, East Africa, one of four children. She strived for her educational development, not only for her own personal growth, but to be of service to her community. In 1995, Ms. Mamotto won a scholarship to study for a Certificate in Rural Development Planning and achieved the highest grade. She trained to become a teacher from 1996 to 1998. Just two years after qualifying, she was made Deputy Head Mistress of the Chilowana Secondary School, a rural school in Tanzania’s poorest region. Her involvement extended far beyond her educational responsibilities. She became dedicated to the long-term economic progress of the Tanzanian people through her work in community development and environmental sustainability in Chilowana.

Further, the New England Conference directs the Secretary to send this resolution to the U.S. Representatives and Senators from the New England region, President Bush, Secretaries Rumsfeld and Rice.

Mr. Speaker, Ms. Mamotto knew that her own aspirations and the aspirations of the people she served in the rural areas of Tanzania depended upon her pursuing higher educational opportunities. So in September of 2003, as a result of her untiring efforts, her scholarship and her personal charisma, the resources and Inland Fisheries has successfully earned and she found herself traveling to Canterbury, England where she enrolled in the University of Kent to study Environmental Social Science. Her remarkable journey took her from the bush to university classroom. Finally, through great perseverance and sacrifice, she completed her studies and today, July 13, 2006, will receive her BA from the University of Kent at ceremonies in Canterbury Cathedral.

Mr. Speaker, each graduate’s story is important. Some graduates, however, embody the hopes and dreams of millions of fellow countrymen and women. Stellar Mamotto’s graduation represents not just the triumph of a single individual, but the triumph of the human spirit over all obstacles. And it represents a new beginning for Ms. Mamotto as she endeavors to take yet another step to even greater academic achievement.

Mr. Speaker, Members of the United States House of Representatives, please join me in honoring Ms. Stellar Mamotto for her achievement and as she continues to strive to be of service to the people of Tanzania.

PAINT BANK AND WYTHEVILLE NATIONAL FISH HATCHERIES CONVEYANCE ACT

SPEECH OF HON. VIRGIL H. GOODE, JR.
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 10, 2006

Mr. GOODE. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5061, the Paint Bank and Wytheville National Fish Hatcheries Conveyance Act. I want to thank the Gentleman from Virginia, Mr. BOUCHER, for introducing this legislation, which grants the title to these two hatcheries to the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Since 1983, the Virginia Department of Game and Inland Fisheries has successfully operated these two hatcheries on behalf of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Thanks to the hard work and substantial investment by the Commonwealth of Virginia and the 13 full-time employees working at the fish hatcheries, these hatcheries consistently produce large stocks of brook, brown and rainbow trout for recreational fishing every year. In fact, the Paint Bank and Wytheville Hatcheries can produce up to 861,632 trout each year, which accounts for over 40 percent of the trout stocked for public fishing in the Commonwealth of Virginia. The Commonwealth has also pledged to invest an additional $4.5 million to continue renovation of these hatcheries in an effort to further enhance the hatcheries capabilities and efficiency.

The paint bank and wytheville hatcheries are vital to ensuring that these streams are well stocked with large and healthy fish populations. For this reason, I am glad to support H.R. 5061, which will allow the Commonwealth of Virginia to continue to maintain the trout population for recreational fishing for people and visitors to visit Virginia. I appreciate the work of Mr. BOUCHER in crafting this legislation and I urge its passage today.

IN HONOR OF STELLAR MAMOTTO
HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate Pastor Emery King’s 28th anniversary as pastor of the Faith Baptist Church in Webster, Florida. I would like to extend my warmest congratulations to him for a job well done.

When Pastor King first came to the church, his commitment to God and to his parishioners shone through immediately. It was clear even over the past 28 years, I know that Pastor King has been blessed with over the past 28 years, I know that Pastor King’s dedication to the Lord and to the scripture has served as an inspiration to thousands throughout the Sumter County community. His ministry has touched the hearts of many, and the Faith Baptist Church is a stronger institution because of his commitment.

Mr. Speaker, Pastor Emery King’s length of service to the Faith Baptist Church of Webster is only matched by his commitment to the...
Lord and to the men and women who rely on his counsel and wisdom. Pastor King is a shining example of the good that serving Jesus Christ can bring to our friends and families.

I wish Pastor King the best of luck and joy as he embarks on what will hopefully be the next 28 years of service to God and to his church.

TIME FOR A SECULAR DEMOCRACY IN IRAN

HON. WM. LACY CLAY OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, on July 1, 2006, thousands of Iranians from around the world, including the members of the Iranian American Cultural Association of Missouri, gathered in Paris to express their interest in a free Iran and their support for the National Council of Resistance of Iran.

At this gathering, Mrs. Maryam Rajavi gave a speech about the need to bring freedom and democracy to the people of Iran. I would like to take this opportunity to share with my colleagues an excerpt from her inspiring address.

In the name of God, in the name of freedom, fellow Iranians, dear friends: With warmest greetings to all of you who represent the freedom, dignity and the resistance of our homeland, Iran. The sound of shouting of our courageous compatriots during the uprising in Tehran will be heard in your resolve and faith, in the uprisings of our Azeri compatriots, and in the voice of the chant of the February 2005 events. I also send my greetings to the distinguished personalities from France and other countries who have honored us by their presence. I thank Madam Edith Cresson, the former Prime Minister of France and the honorable mayors in different cities in the province of Val d’Oise as well as the dignified deputies of various parliaments from around the world.

Dear Friends: We are standing at a very extraneous point in Iran’s history. The turning point for a major birth and a magnificent destiny toward which we are being steered. Today, all the paths to ensure the survival and the freedom of the country’s people are open. This is our response to the ruthless killings and brutality with which the mullahs have ruled. The West will be no room for cruel and degrading punishments under whatever pretext, including under the cloak of terrorism.

7. We are committed to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women. In the Iran of tomorrow, men and women will enjoy equal rights in all political, social and economic sectors. Women will have equal participation in the political leadership of the country.

8. In the Iran of tomorrow all forms of sexual exploitation of women will be prohibited. Polygamy will be banned. Physical, sexual and psychological violence against women will be considered a crime.

9. In the Iran of tomorrow oppression, discrimination and lawlessness concerning children and child labor will be banned.

10. The state of Iran will be founded upon a uniform system of justice. It will be a two-tiered system based on the presumption of innocence, the right to seek justice, the right to be tried in open courts with the presence of the jury. In this system, their will be no discrimination on issuing judgment. The complete independence of the judges and the Bar Association will be guaranteed.

11. In the Iran of tomorrow the free market will be respected. Economic opportunity will be provided to all and all restrictions on self employment will be lifted.

12. We are determined to ensure that in the Iran of tomorrow every member of society will enjoy access to social services, including education, hygiene and athletic opportunities. Universities will be governed by independent councils elected by the faculty and students.

13. In the Iran of tomorrow the just right to autonomy and self-determination for the Azeris will be recognized. We seek the eradication of dual discrimination against all ethnic minorities in Iran in the framework of the country’s political and social unity.

14. In the Iran of tomorrow, interference in the internal affairs of other countries will be banned and others will be banned from interfering in our internal affairs. We demand peace, mutual respect in international relations, good neighborliness and the establishment of diplomatic relations with all the other countries of the world. The Iran of tomorrow will be a non-nuclear country and devoid of weapons of mass destruction.

Dear respectable friends, what I enumerated was the synopsis of the Iranian Resistance’s views and program for our nation. It is a program to liberate and free the people of Iran from the yoke of the mullahs. To realize this program, free elections will be held for a national constituent assembly within six months of the lifting of the sanctions. At the end of the six-month period, the provisional government will step down and the people’s elected constituent assembly will begin work to adopt the new government and draft the new constitution. Three years ago, when the French police launched an unprecedented raid against the office of the National Council of Resistance of Iran, freedom was again at stake. From the onset, it was obvious that the raid was the outcome of a deal with the theocratic ruling Iran. In truth, the Resistance of a victimized nation was being suppressed. Fortunately, in the past three years, this Resistance’s perseverance overcame the June 17 conspiracy. Two weeks ago, on the anniversary of the June 17, 2003 raid, the Paris Court of Appeals revoked the oppressive and unwarranted restrictions against the members of the Resistance. This ruling clearly testifies to the innocence of this resistance and the hollow nature of the June 17 dossier and the accusations of cult and terrorism that went with it.

Dear Friends, Today, there is only one way to thwart this threat. The West must reverse its position to respect the will of the Iranian people to establish democracy and peace in their country. The West must respect the right of the Iranian people to have a political system that is effective only when it is accompanied by opposition to war. Opposition to war means supporting the Iranian people for freedom. On behalf of the Iranian people and the Iranian Resistance, I want to remind the Western world that those who believe in anti-Islamismo and anti-democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world, the solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world. The solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world. The solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world. The solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world. The solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world. The solution not only for establishing democracy in Iran but also for peace and security in the entire world.
This important legislation is designed to put the District of Columbia on par with every other local jurisdiction in the country by allowing DC residents to elect an independent District Attorney to prosecute local criminal and civil matters now handled by the U.S. Attorney, a federal official. Instead the new District Attorney would be an elected, independent, and locally accountable public official. As presently constituted, the U.S. Attorney’s office in the District is the largest in the country only because it serves mainly as the local city prosecutor. That office needs to be freed up to do security and other federal work particularly in the post 9–11 nation’s capital.

There is no issue of greater importance to our citizens and no issue on which residents have less say here than the prosecution of local crimes. A U.S. Attorney has no business in the local criminal affairs of local jurisdictions. No other citizens in the United States are treated so unfairly on an issue of such major importance. This bill would simply make the D.A. accountable to the people who elect him or her as elsewhere in the country.

In addition to democracy and self-government, such as congressional voting rights and legislative and budget autonomy that District residents are entitled to as American citizens, residents are determined to achieve each and every other element of home rule. Amending the Home Rule Act with a Local D.A. provision would be an important development toward our goal of achieving true self-government. I urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

TRIBUTE TO GRANDPARENTS AND OTHER RELATIVE-HEADED HOUSEHOLDS

HON. ROSA L. DELAURO OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the two and a half million grandparen tal households that parent their grandchildren. In fact, across the country there are more than 6 million children living with a grandparent, or others living in relative-headed households. I commend those who courageously step forward on a daily basis to care for these children, keeping them out of foster care while providing safe, stable homes.

Subsidized guardianship programs allow children to leave foster care for the permanent care of nurturing relatives. Through subsidized guardianship we are able to place a child with a grandparent or other relative who becomes the legal guardian, while at the same time, providing the guardian the financial resources to provide for the child’s basic needs.

In its report, “Fostering the Future,” the national, nonpartisan Pew Commission on Children in Foster Care recommended that Federal guardianship assistance be provided “to all children who leave foster care to live with a permanent legal guardian.” That is why I am proud to be a cosponsor of H.R. 3380, the Guardianship Assistance Promotion and Kinship Support Act, which would allow the use of Federal funds to support subsidized guardianship programs.

In my own State of Connecticut, 6 percent of the children live with non-parent relatives. Although, grandparents and other relative caregivers often represent the best opportunity for providing a loving and stable childhood for the children in their care, their hard work and dedication too often go unnoticed.

Today I offer my deepest appreciation for the dedicated service of these caregivers to children. They are the true and valued asset, our children. And I commend Generations United for all their outstanding work in helping improve the lives of and create opportunity for our children.
Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the formation of Rural Planning Organizations of America, RPO America, a new national organization dedicated to improving the planning and development of America’s rural transportation network. Under the sponsorship of the National Association of Development Organizations, NADO, RPO America is serving as the first and only national forum and professional peer network for the emerging field of rural transportation planning.

This new group is important not only for the coordination, management and planning of our Nation’s rural transportation infrastructure and systems, but also for linking our rural communities’ economic development initiatives with their many contributions to the State of Kansas and this community did a wonderful job of showcasing our welcoming spirit and beautiful landscape.

The names of Watson, Player, Irwin, Crenshaw and Kite are easily recognizable to golf enthusiasts. After his repeat victory, Allen Doyle should also now join this list of distinguished champions as a household name.

But there were more than just famous golfers who made this a successful event. I’m certain that Kansans will join with me in specifically thanking Mr. Allen Fee, Tournament General Chairman, and Mr. Greg Conrad, Championship Director, for their collective contributions in making this an outstanding week of golf. I also want to thank the legions of volunteers who gave of their time and talents. As testament to the event’s success, volunteers from 27 states joined nearly 115,000 spectators in establishing the mark for the largest sporting event in Kansas history.

The real star of this championship, however, was the golf course itself. Many golfers and spectators commented that Prairie Dunes was stunning, from tee to green, from fairway to greens to provide a stern test for the disciples.

Mr. Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in recognizing the Hutchinson community for hosting the 27th U.S. Senior Open, and for their many contributions to the State of Kansas and game of golf.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the United States Congress, I would like to offer my sincere congratulations to a man who could serve as a role model to us all. A deep sense of personal devotion to a congregation for 36 years is something truly to be admired, and I am thankful for his dedication to the Peace Assembly of God.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, a patriotic veteran and role-model citizen recently passed away in Greensboro, North Carolina. On behalf of the citizens of the Sixth District of North Carolina, I rise to honor John Seymour Starr, a World War II veteran, who dutifully fought for his country from an early age. Only nine days after his 18th birthday, Starr enlisted in the army and joined General George Patton’s 3rd Army as a machine gunner on the back of a jeep in the 2nd Cavalry. 42nd Recon. As one of Patton’s “Ghosts,” Corporal Starr put his life on the line day after day scouting ahead of the division to locate and engage the enemy in order to determine their strength and position for an armored assault.

Just months after entering the fight, on August 8, 1943, Corporal Starr’s jeep drove over a land mine on France’s Breton peninsula killing the driver and passenger. Starr was put in the hospital with shrapnel embedded in his body that he would carry for the rest of his life. Undergoing 83 treatments, Starr ignored his reassignment to a non-combat unit and left the hospital. He hitched rides through France until he was reunited with the 2nd Cavalry. During
On July 15, the Russian Federation will chair the Group of Eight, G8, for the first time since its full integration in 2002 by hosting the annual G8 Summit in the city of St. Petersburg. While Russia’s presidency of the G8 was originally intended to showcase its economic and social progress and demonstrate its full integration with the global community, a growing number of observers strongly feel that Russia is not meeting the democratic and free market principles that are the basis of the G8.

I share with my colleagues a recent letter that was circulated prior to the G8 Summit, from nearly 100 diplomatic, legal, political and technical experts, and civil society leaders from Russia, Europe and the United States. The letter, which includes notable figures from each of the G7 nations and Russia, was designed to bring attention to Russia’s faltering democracy and human rights record. It was released at “The Other Russia” summit, organized by Garry Kasparov, former world chess champion and Russian political activist, to examine these problems and to highlight what they will mean for the future of Russia.

Mr. Speaker, Russia is an important ally to the United States in many areas, although we face a number of disagreements with them on pressing global issues. What should not be an issue is the need for an open society in Russia that advances democracy, human rights and free enterprise. This goal is critical for the development of U.S.-Russia relations and the future of Russia itself.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE G7 LEADERS “THE OTHER RUSSIA”

We wish to express our gratitude to the courageous men and women attending “The Other Russia” Summit today and tomorrow in Moscow. This alternative to the G8 Summit has been organized by Garry Kasparov, Lyudmila Alekseyeva and other Russian human rights and political leaders. The laudable purpose of the “Other Russia” Summit is to focus the world’s attention on the increasingly autocratic and repressive policies of the Russian Government.

“The Other Russia” will bring together distinguished diplomats, politicians, academicians and civil society leaders from Russia, Europe and the United States to examine the deplorable state of human rights and the rule of law in Russia. The letter, which was circulated prior to the G8 Summit, documents Russia’s alarming number of political prisoners, the Kremlin’s control over the media, the dangerous increase in government corruption, the continued violence in Chechnya and the return of a one-party state.

“The Other Russia” Summit will examine these economic and political trends, hoping to provide a sharper and clearer picture of what the further loss of human and political rights will mean to them. The gathering is also meant to impress upon the G7 leaders, who will be meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin this coming weekend in St. Petersburg, that there is another Russia—a Russia at odds with the corrupt, authoritarian regime which President Putin and those around him appear resolved to impose.

We urge our leaders—Prime Minister Tony Blair, President George W. Bush, President Jacques Chirac, Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi, Chancellor Angela Merkel and Prime Minister Romano Prodi—not to equivocate when they meet the Russian President this weekend. He must be put on notice that Russia’s

CONGRATULATING AUGUSTO PIAZZA AS HE RETIRES FROM THE WYOMING VALLEY WEST SCHOOL DISTRICT

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask you and my esteemed colleagues in the House of Representatives to pay tribute to my good friend Mr. August Piazza, of Jenkins Township, Luzerne County, Pennsylvania, upon the occasion of his retirement as superintendent of the Wyoming Valley West School District.

Mr. Piazza received his Bachelor of Science degree from Mansfield University and his Master of Science degree from Wilkes University. His post-graduate work includes principal certification and a superintendent’s letter of eligibility from Temple University.

Mr. Piazza began his career with Wyoming Valley West School District in 1971. Over the past 35 years, Mr. Piazza has taught elementary grades ranging from kindergarten through sixth grade in a品德 and a superintendent’s letter of eligibility from Temple University.

Mr. Piazza was appointed superintendent of schools in the Wyoming Valley West School District. He also holds the position of adjunct professor at Wilkes University Graduate School.
Mr. Piazza currently serves on the Luzerne County Community College Foundation Board of Directors and the Luzerne County Convention Center and Arena Board of Directors. His service organization affiliations include the Knights of Columbus where he is a Third Degree Knight, and the Wilkes-Barre Chapter of UNICO, an organization where he once served as president. He is also a charter member of the Kingston Kiwanis Club. Augie and his wife, Corine, have two children, Jeffrey and Maria.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Mr. Piazza on his distinguished career in the field of education. His exceptional record of service and dedication to duty is an inspiration to both his peers and to the students for whom he worked tirelessly to prepare for adult life. Mr. Piazza’s contribution to the greater Wyoming Valley community has left a lasting mark and has had a positive effect on improving the quality of life.

resolution condemning the disclosure of classified information, and more specifically, the information about our government’s monitoring of international financial transactions, I voted in opposition to the measure, and I would like to take this opportunity to explain my position.

I join my colleague from Massachusetts, Mr. Frank, and others in supporting an alternative resolution, H. Res. 900, which also condemns the unauthorized disclosure of classified information, but does so in a way that is less partisan and more ingenious. H. Res. 895 contains a number of statements that are passed off as fact but whose veracity is dubious and not substantiated through congressional inquiry.

I regret that the majority saw fit to bring a resolution to the floor which deprived Democrats from providing any input into the framing of the measure. I do think that it was possible to produce a bin behind which both parties could unite, if the majority were interested in reaching a consensus. Obviously, it was not interested in forging a consensus statement, so we debated a political document instead of substantive initiatives.

H. Res. 895, as written, states facts, which frankly, are either in substantial dispute or subject to question. For example, did the news media inappropriately and illegally disclose information regarding the SWIFT financial monitoring program, or was this information in the public domain? There are credible people “in the know” who claim the information was publicly available if anyone cared to conduct a little research.

According to one former State Department expert, an U.N. monitor, the information on the SWIFT financial transaction monitoring program was incorporated in a report to the U.N. Security Council in 2002 and is available on the U.N. website. The SWIFT program has been in the public domain for quite some time.

Additionally, the resolution contains a clause that the appropriate committees in Congress were notified of the program. As we heard during the debate on the bill, that is another fact in dispute by Democrats who serve on the Select Committee on Intelligence.

I, therefore, voted against H. Res. 895 and announce for the alternative introduced by Mr. Frank, which the majority has seen fit to deny us the opportunity to consider.

TRIBUTE TO NOAH’S ARK ANIMAL WELFARE ASSOCIATION

HON. RODNEY P. FRELINGHUYSEN
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Noah’s Ark Animal Welfare Association. This summer, Noah’s Ark Animal Welfare Association celebrates its 40th Anniversary by caring for animals in a sheltered environment.

Eight very kind-hearted women from Morris County started Noah’s Ark in 1966 with hopes of curtailing the pet overpopulation problem and promoting animal welfare. Noah’s Ark provides homeless animals with a clean and comfortable environment, food, veterinary care, and lots of warm attention. Under no circumstances are any of the animals taken to Noah’s Ark subject to euthanization.

Since 1966, life expectancy for animals has increased significantly thanks to more specialized food and improved health care. Comprehensive spay and neuter operations have expanded dramatically. With these improvements in the quality of life for animals comes an increase in cost of caring for a pet! Noah’s Ark continues to be an instrumental resource for those families that can no longer afford to keep their pets.

Thanks to the hospitable residents of Northern Jersey, thousands of animals have been saved in the past 40 years. By selflessly opening their homes to wonderful cats and dogs and generously offering monetary donations, a very supportive network of donors and volunteers have helped Noah’s Ark to grow.

Mr. Speaker, I urge you and my colleagues to join me in applauding the impressive efforts of the Noah’s Ark Animal Welfare Association over the past 40 years and for their fine example of service to our community.

RECOGNIZING THE HEROIC FEATS OF SPECIALIST TOM HOY, OREGON ARMY NATIONAL GUARD

HON. GREG WALDEN
OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, the late Arthur Ashe once said, “True heroism is remarkably sober, very undramatic. It is not the urge to surpass all obstacles, but to serve others at whatever cost.”

With that in mind, I rise today to recognize a heroic event that took place in the heart of Oregon’s 2nd Congressional District on Sunday, July 10, 2006. On that day, a member of our Nation’s military gave selfless service to three children in danger—and in the process saved a life.

Specialist Tom Hoy is a member of the Oregon Army National Guard, 1st Squadron, 82nd Cavalry, 41st Infantry Brigade Combat Team. On July 10th, 2006, he was with three fellow soldiers participating in recruiting activities near the Deschutes River in Bend, Oregon.

While near the river, Specialist Hoy observed three children on inner-tubes, with no life jackets, who were floating downstream, dangerously near a spillway.

A spillway creates a perilous setting. A woman was reported as having drowned near this spillway the day before, and another woman had to be pulled from it unconscious several days before that.

What Specialist Hoy saw was at least one of the children appearing to be in distress. The soldiers directed the three children to come to shore, and the two older boys were able to. But the third child, a young girl no older than six or seven years old, was far too out and appeared to be crying and frightened. Specialist Hoy told the girl to grab onto some weeds that were growing out of the water and instructed another soldier to stay on the near side of the river in case she let go and made it near that side. Hoy then ran upstream, crossed a bridge, and ran back down the opposite bank, jumping several small hills until he reached the girl’s location. Without any concern for his personal safety, Specialist Hoy entered the waist deep, swift-moving water and was able to have the girl climb onto his back where he carried her to safety. Hoy, the other soldiers, and one civilian then returned the girl to her overjoyed parents.

Specialist Hoy is a resident of Prineville, Oregon, where he resides with his wife, Jennifer, and three children. He now serves a dedicated public service as a member of the Oregon National Guard protecting our Nation, he is a reserve police officer with the Prineville Police Department.

I myself am proud to represent Specialist Hoy in the House of Representatives. I urge my colleagues to applaud his selfless act of service as he continues to serve others to follow the example set by this real life hero.

RECOGNIZING CAPTAIN VICTOR J. VAN HEEST FOR 27 YEARS OF SERVICE IN THE U.S. NAVY

HON. VERNON J. EHLERS OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor Captain Victor J. Van Heest for his service as a member of the United States Navy on the occasion of his retirement after 27 years of service.

Captain Van Heest is a native of my hometown of Grand Rapids, Michigan, and currently serves as Senior Military Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs. After attending Michigan State University, where he graduated with a degree in mechanical engineering, Captain Van Heest was commissioned in the U.S. Navy in August 1979. He was designated a Naval Aviator in 1980 after completing flight school.

He has served in many different posts around the country and world and has been deployed to the Mediterranean Sea and the Persian Gulf during his career. Furthermore, he continued his education, earning a Master of Science in Administration degree from Central Michigan University in 1999, and graduating from the Air War College in 1996. His personal awards include the Legion of Merit, the Meritorious Service Medal (three awards), the Navy Commendation Medal, and the Navy Achievement Medal (three awards).

Upon graduation from the Air War College, he transferred to VR-48, NAF Washington, DC, as the Executive Officer and in April 1997 assumed command of the squadron. During this time, the “Capital Skyliners,” who fly the C-20G aircraft, won the Battle ‘E’ for C-9 and C-20 squadrons.

Following his command tour, he reported to the Director of Air Warfare staff at the Pentagon as the Transport Aircraft Coordinator. One year later, he transferred to the Director of Naval Reserve staff as the Head, Reserve Air Logistics Programs and then fleeted up to Director, Air Programs Management Division.

I had the pleasure of meeting the Van Heests in person for the first time when he was stationed at Bolling, the 22nd Airlift Wing at Fort Worth, Texas, in 2001. Since that time, I have met with the Van Heests many times and appreciated the ability to rely on them as a valuable resource.

In addition to his continued role as a public servant, in addition to his continued role as a public servant, Captain Van Heest has also served in the Reserve as a private citizen in the Michigan State Air National Guard.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to represent Captain Van Heest and his wife, Anne, with eight of their sons, Peter and Andrew, in Annapolis, Maryland. Their oldest son, Kyle, is a Midshipman at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis. Upon his retirement, the Van Heests plan to move to Holland, Michigan, where, I am told, he will work for Haworth Inc.

I ask my colleagues to join me in offering Captain Victor J. Van Heest our deepest gratitude for his 27 years of service to our Nation and congratulations on his retirement.

HONORING MRS. ALICE FISKE

HON. TIMOTHY H. BISHOP

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. BISHOP of New York. Mr. Speaker, today I rise on behalf of New York's first congressional district to mourn and honor a beloved constituent and treasure of the Long Island community, Mrs. Alice Hench Fiske, who recently passed away at the age of 88.

Born in Youngstown, Ohio, Alice grew up in an energetic and ambitious child. She graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1939, at a time when very few women went to college. Alice was an exemplary student, blessed with intelligence and intellectual curiosity. In 1952, Alice married Mr. Andrew Fiske, the 13th-generation descendant of Nathaniel Sylvester, who had settled Shelter Island 3 centuries earlier.

Together, the 13th Lord of Sylvester and the Lady of the Manor, as Alice came to be known, raised two daughters. As an avid gardener and founder of the Andrew Fiske Memorial Center for Archeological Research at the University of Massachusetts, Alice quite literally dug deep into her role by restoring Sylvester Manor's vast and beautiful gardens to their former glory and by making one of the most significant archeological discoveries in the eastern United States—half a million artifacts dating back to the eighteenth century.

Alice was universally beloved on Shelter Island, and indeed all across Long Island. Her kindness and generosity were infectious, and she could make one smile even on the worst day. According to her lifelong friend and historian, Mac Griswold, "She'd take your hands in hers and then we'd raise them above our heads and take deep breaths together. . . . If she saw you were upset, she'd say, 'Is it time for three deep breaths?'"

Alice's tremendous goodwill and devotion to Shelter Island is why she is mourned now and her memory fondly cherished. She was always willing to lend a hand or contribute to a wide range of educational and environmental charities, such as Shelter Island's library, historical society, and of course, its garden club.

On behalf of a grateful community, Mr. Speaker, I thank Alice Fiske for her many years of dedicated service to Long Island's East End, where she will always be celebrated and affectionately remembered as the Lady of the Manor.

SUPPORTING INTELLIGENCE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT PROGRAMS TO TRACK TERRORISTS AND TERRORIST FINANCES

SPEECH OF

HON. TERRY EVERETT

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 29, 2006

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker. I was unable to vote on Rollcall Vote No. 357 H. Res. 895, a resolution that expresses, support for intelligence programs and condemns the unauthorized leaking of classified information. However, had I been present, I would have voted aye.

Mr. Speaker, leaking classified information is a serious matter. It can expose both our intelligence-gathering capabilities and operations. Moreover, divulging sensitive information, regardless of intent, can have grave implications for not only our national security but also our men and women in uniform currently serving in harms way. It is not up to the New York Times or any other media outlet to decide when a highly classified program tied to our national security should be made public.

Mr. Speaker, we are at war. Unauthorized public disclosure of classified programs being used to win this global war on terror jeopardizes our national security. It is my hope that in the future, those in government with knowledge of classified programs and news media organizations treat sensitive information appropriately.

RUSSIA AND THE G-8

HON. DARRELL E. ISSA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. ISSA. Mr. Speaker, as the G-8 meets in St. Petersburg this weekend to discuss important international issues, we should be mindful that the host nation Russia hardly deserves to be included in this accomplished group. The seven other participating countries are mature democracies with proven market economies and that use the rule of law as the basis for civil society and display mutual respect across borders.

Unfortunately, Russia has yet to subscribe to these same principles. Russian President Vladimir Putin has placed energy security at the top of the G-8 agenda. However, with Russia being the dominant supplier of gas to Europe, leaders throughout that continent feel anything but secure. And for good reason. Just this week, Russia's asset, Rosneft, is seeking validation through a public offering to raise $11 billion from mostly Western investors.

What makes this offering controversial is how Rosneft acquired its assets and that it is a state-owned entity. Rosneft's asset once belonged to the YUKOS Oil Company, a private company that prospered until the Kremlin directed attacks against its chairman, Mikhail Khodorkovsky. Using the pretext of past tax claims the Russian government put Mr. Khodorkovsky and other company officers in prison and then arranged for the state takeover of the company. The case and subsequent actions were highly controversial and widely reported in the Western media at the time.

My Energy and Resources Subcommittee recently conducted hearings on energy security and received credible testimony about the extra-legal, if not outright illegality, of the Russian government's actions regarding the YUKOS Company. We should remain concerned about the Kremlin, which clearly controls almost all oil and gas exports to European and CIS countries, might use energy for political and foreign policy purposes.

My colleague, Mr. Lantos, shares my concerns and this week sent a letter to several U.S. financial institutions that may be contemplating participation in the Rosneft IPO, questioning whether investing in a state entity which has acquired its main assets under other than legitimate circumstances may be in violation of U.S. laws and the Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

For the benefit of my colleagues, I would like to ask that Mr. Lantos' letter be placed in the Record at this time.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — Extensions of Remarks

E1409
Independently, George Soros, an experienced investor in Russia, has also found serious ethical issues pertaining to the Rosneft IPO. As Soros wrote in The Financial Times on April 26, 2006, Rosneft acquired its Yukos assets through non-transparent sale by a front-company that “won” a rigged auction of Yukos assets engineered by Russian authorities under circumstances that made it impossible to determine who profited on the transaction. As Soros wrote, the assets were “not acquired directly. The auction was won by unknown Russian company that sold itself within days to Rosneft.” According to Mr. Soros, “[t]he unknown owners made an unknown amount of money on the transaction. The question is: ’Should an IPO be allowed to go forward without disclosing the pertinent information?’”

In amending the Bank Secrecy Act in 2001 with the USA-PATRIOT Act, the Congress emphasized the policy of ensuring that every financial institution determine the beneficial ownership of the assets involved in a transaction in order to ensure that they are not illicit proceeds. We established a risk-based system for due diligence in which we asked federal regulators to ensure that financial institutions exercise greater due diligence in high risk cases, such as when assets are controlled by political figures, or when chosen persons are sometimes known as “politically exposed persons.” In order to guard against the risk that the financial institution could be used to handle the proceeds of corruption.

I recognize that Bank Secrecy Act and Sarbanes-Oxley compliance have become a continuing focus of all publicly traded U.S. financial institutions and that your institution has policies and procedures in place designed to protect the institution from the risk of handling illicit funds. In recent years, however, federal regulators have repeatedly found cases in which major U.S.-regulated financial institutions failed to undertake risk-based assessments across every area of their business, with the result that some significant risks had not been recognized in a timely fashion.

There is no information publicly available to enable Congress to assess the kind of due diligence that participating U.S. financial institutions have done regarding the underlying assets involved in the Rosneft IPO. We cannot ask one such institution to determine that neither corruption nor theft have been involved in Rosneft’s acquisition of this property. I recognize the Rosneft IPO is only one of many situations in which federal regulators have repeatedly failed to take into account the concerns outlined above, particularly as they relate to the Bank Secrecy Act and Sarbanes-Oxley concerning any transactions you contemplate in this regard.

Sincerely,

Tom Lantos,
Member of Congress.

TRIBUTE TO MR. DICK CHAMPION OF INDEPENDENCE, MO, PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CLEAN WATER AGENCIES

HON. EMANUEL CLEAVER OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. CLEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate and pay tribute to Mr. Dick Champion, director of the Independence, MO, Water Pollution Control Department.

True to his name, Mr. Champion is exactly that—“champion” for clean water. He is an exceptional leader and public steward dedicated to the improvement of Missouri’s and the Nation’s environment and public health. It is my pleasure to congratulate Mr. Champion on becoming the new president of the National Association of Clean Water Agencies, NACWA, formerly the Association of Metropolitan Sewerage Agencies, AMSA. Mr. Champion is ideally suited for this national leadership position.

Mr. Champion began his career in water pollution control in 1968. He has been with the city of Independence, MO, Water Pollution Control Department for the past 27 years and has been director of the department since 1983. The Department is responsible for the Sanitary Sewer Utility, the Storm Water Management Program, the Hazardous Waste Management Program, and related environmental compliance.

In 2001, he was appointed by the Jackson County executive and legislature to the newly created Jackson County Stormwater Commission to coordinate regional stormwater policy and planning. Mr. Champion has been serving as vice-chair of the commission throughout his tenure.

Dick has been an active member of NACWA since 1992, was elected to the Board of Directors in 1999, and now serves as NACWA’s vice president and chair of the Strategic Planning Committee. Mr. Champion will become NACWA’s president later this month—an impressive accomplishment and one that will no doubt help further NACWA’s role as the leading advocate for sound water quality policies.

Mr. Champion earned a bachelor of science degree in political science with an emphasis in local government and public administration from Central Missouri State University in 1973. As a student and throughout his career Mr. Champion has demonstrated an unwavering commitment to public service and the improvement of water quality in Missouri. The fish and fishermen of Missouri owe a great deal to his tireless work to guarantee clean water.

With Mr. Champion as President, NACWA will no doubt build on its reputation as the leading advocate for responsible national policies that advance clean water and a healthy environment. Simply stated, when I hear the term “environmentalist,” I think of public servants like Dick Champion.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues of the 109th Congress to please join me today in congratulating Mr. Dick Champion on becoming president of NACWA and for his tireless commitment to Independence, the Fifth District, and our country. I am certain the association will continue to flourish under his able leadership.

TRIBUTE TO MR. DICK CHAMPION OF INDEPENDENCE, MO, PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CLEAN WATER AGENCIES

HON. JULIA CARSON OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Ms. CARSON. Mr. Speaker, I was unable to record my rollcall votes 370–374.

Had I been present I would have voted “no” on votes: roll No. 370, roll No. 371, roll No. 372, roll No. 373.

Had I been present I would have voted “yes” on roll No. 374.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JOHN BOOZMAN OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the late Gerald “Jerry” Braun who passed away on July 7, 2006, at his home in Maryland.

Over the last 3 years Dr. Braun has served with distinction as the Deputy Director for Vocational Rehabilitation and Employment at the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. He was a consummate professional with unquestioned integrity, who consistently met or exceeded the goals of the vocational rehabilitation and employment program.

I first had the privilege of meeting Dr. Braun when he testified before the Subcommittee on Economic Opportunity at the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs, which I Chair. I always found him to be an honest, sincere witness who possessed a great knowledge of veterans programs and always exhibited the utmost concern for the veterans enrolled in vocational rehabilitation and employment. He was the VA’s institutional memory on the Vocational Rehabilitation Program and his contributions will truly be missed.

Dr. Braun began serving our Nation’s veterans in 1972 as a vocational rehabilitation specialist for the blind and visually impaired in St. Paul, MN. He later worked for VA facilities in Chicago and Reno as a counseling psychologist and in Indianapolis as the vocational rehabilitation and employment officer, before finally coming to Washington to serve in the Department’s Central Office in addition to his service as a VA counselor. Dr. Braun was a member of the American Legion and the National Rehabilitation Association. He earned Certificates of Appreciation from Vice President Gore, from the Greater Sierra Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society for Lifetime Contribution, and from the State of Nevada Governor for his contributions to the Governor’s Committee of Employment of People with Disabilities.

Dr. Braun was born in Red Wing, MN and graduated from St. Cloud Minnesota State University in 1968 with a degree in Sociology. Upon graduation, he joined the Army and served his country from October 1968 to May 1970. His service included a thirteen month tour of duty in Vietnam. Upon returning, Dr. Braun earned both a master’s degree in rehabilitation counseling and a doctorate of education in counseling and guidance.

Dr. Braun is survived by his wife, Debra and his four children, Eric, Kirsten, Rebecca, and Joanna. His family and friends will remember him for his intelligence, wisdom, sense of humor, and generous heart. To his wife and children, we are thankful for his 35 years of service to the Nation, especially to its veterans and to each of them for the support they gave him during what was a rewarding life.

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, July 10, 2006, was away from the House on business representing the constituents of the 11th Congressional District. During my absence, the House called rollcall votes Nos. 358, 359 and 360. Had I been present for the rollcall votes, I would have voted "yes" on rollcall vote No. 360; "yes" on rollcall vote No. 359; "yes" on rollcall vote No. 358.

HONORING THE AMERICAN RED CROSS OF GREATER CHICAGO'S "READY WHEN THE TIME COMES" PROGRAM

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor and recognition of the American Red Cross of Greater Chicago's "Ready When the Time Comes" program. This program partners the Red Cross with corporate and community organizations to respond to disasters such as fires, storms, floods, and tornadoes. I would like to acknowledge Grainger, an Illinois-based company which has been the lead corporate sponsor of the Ready When the Time Comes program.

The Ready When the Time Comes program allows Chicago area organizations and businesses to help their community before, during and after a disaster by supplying the Red Cross with volunteers. At the time of a disaster, the Red Cross will notify the company or organization and inform them of the role volunteers will have in the relief effort.

Through Ready When the Time Comes, corporations allow their employees to receive free Red Cross training in disaster relief functions. In return, corporate partners commit to making their trained employees available for disaster service at least one day each year. During a large scale disaster, with a single phone call the Red Cross can deploy as many volunteers as needed. Throughout Chicago, Ready When the Time Comes volunteers have put their training to work responding to flooding, massive fires, heat emergencies, and even the terrorist attacks of September 11.

Since February 2001, Grainger has provided the Chicago Red Cross with almost 200 volunteers for the Ready When the Time Comes program. Following Hurricane Katrina, corporate employees were called upon to staff phone centers in Chicago to answer questions from those seeking support and information. These "Red Cross-trained employees" were recruited by the Chicago Office of Emergency Management and Communications disaster preparedness drill in August 2005.

Mr. Speaker and Colleagues, please join me to honor and recognize the American Red Cross of Greater Chicago's "Ready When the Time Comes" program. This program is a model on how easily partnerships can be developed to help safeguard our communities. I support the Red Cross's efforts to afford other organizations the opportunity to partner with them to actively contribute to recovery efforts.

HONORING THE BRONX DOMINICAN PARADE

TRIBUTE TO THE BRONX DOMINICAN PARADE

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise and pay tribute to the seventeenth annual Bronx Dominican Parade and Festival which will take place Sunday, July 16, 2006. This famed event is eagerly anticipated by both Dominicans and the greater Bronx community every year. It is a wonderful celebration of the spirit and richness of Dominican culture.

Under the leadership of Felipe Febles and Rosa Ayala, the Bronx Dominican Parade, Inc., (La Gran Parada Dominicana de El Bronx) has grown into an important institution that increases the self-awareness and pride of the Dominican people in order to promote economic development, education and cultural recognition.

As the second largest Latino community in New York City, Dominicans have made valuable contributions to the city, as well as to the entire nation. Although the highest concentration of Dominican people live in Washington Heights, a significant number have enriched the Bronx with their unique culture and spirit. Dominican culture is characterized by, among other things, diverse multi-culturalism, strong family values, distinctive art, rhythmic and soulful music and unique cuisine. I am grateful to see how the Dominicans that I have met have been part of the Bronx's rich cultural fabric.

Mr. Speaker, the roots of Dominican New Yorkers lie in a country with a rich history and arresting landscapes bound by water. The Dominican Republic is home to a number of people from various heritages. As a result, the culture is charged with strong African, Taino and European influences. One visit to the Dominican Republic will put to rest any questions that so many Dominicans have made the Bronx their home.

Mr. Speaker, the Greater New York area has long been the home of Dominicans and the Bronx is no exception. I am grateful for the contributions that Dominicans have made to the greater New York area and beyond. I am especially pleased to see the growth of the Puerto Rican community in the Bronx in recent years.

The Bronx Dominican Parade is a powerful reminder of the importance of cultural diversity in our communities. I encourage all of us to take part in this wonderful celebration and to celebrate the diversity that makes our communities stronger.

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to enter into the RECORD a press release and letter to Members of Congress from Troops Home Fast, a new initiative of the peace organization CODEPINK whose members are holding a hunger strike to highlight their call to bring U.S. troops home from Iraq. I pay tribute to the members of CODEPINK who are participating in the Troops Home Fast and praise their creative efforts to assist our troops in Iraq and those wounded at Walter Reed Hospital by many campaigns protesting the continuing occupation of Iraq. One of their peace actions is a Friday night vigil at Walter Reed Hospital to protest the war and thus prevent further casualties. Today I especially want to bring attention to their latest call to action, a hunger strike in Washington, D.C., at Lafayette Park across from the White House to protest the war and bring our troops home.

While many Americans were celebrating Independence Day with barbecues and fireworks, CODEPINK was launching this new campaign—a fast-calling for independence from war. Among the Washington Fasters are Cindy Sheehan, legendary comedian/civil rights activists Dick Gregory, activist/environmentalist Diane Wilson, former Army Colonel Ann Wright, Iraq war veterans and whistleblower Daniel Ellsberg. They are joined by almost 3,500 others from other countries. Celebrities and other well-known public figures have confirmed their participation with many of the celebrities being public advocates for the peace movement. The Faster in DC which included co-founders of CODEPINK Medea Benjamin, Jodie Evans, Gael Murphy and Cindy Sheehan were present as were other fasters including comedian and social activist Dick Gregory who has fasted for many causes.

On July 10, 2006, I received a letter sent by members of Congress from Troops Home Fast calling themselves a "group of concerned citizens who are conducting an open-ended fast outside of the White House in a March to Lafayette Park in front of the White House. The fasters in DC which included co-founders of CODEPINK Medea Benjamin, Jodie Evans, Gael Murphy and Cindy Sheehan were present as were other fasters including comedian and social activist Dick Gregory who has fasted for many causes. The letter asked me to join in the demonstration, to participate in the Troops Home Fast and praise the members of CODEPINK who are conducting this fast.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in praying for peace and justice for our American troops in Iraq who are conducting an open-ended fast calling themselves the Troops Home Fast and for the American people and their leaders who are reviewing the future of U.S. military forces in Iraq. May these efforts bring peace and justice for our American troops who are conducting an open-ended fast calling themselves the Troops Home Fast and call for the American people who have spoken and whose democratic government has spoken for them who continue to refuse to hear anything but their own slog:
“Stay the Course” or “We will never give up until we have achieved victory” or the least excusable “we will stay and achieve victory so that our men and women who have died in Iraq will not have died in vain.”

I honor those who are fasting as Gandhi did to bring about the change they believe is essential to preserve the character of this nation and to save the lives of Americans and Iraqis. I wish them great strength and pray with them for peace in Iraq.

JULY 11, 2006

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE, We are a group of concerned citizens who are conducting an open-ended fast in front of the White House calling for our troops to come home from Iraq, and we are writing for your support via the attached form.

The fast, called Troops Home Fast, was initiated by CODEPINK and Gold Star Families for Peace, and endorsed by dozens of organizations. It began on July 4, 2006, and more than 3,500 people in the U.S. and around the world are participating, with hundreds more joining every day. (Additional information about the fast is available at the website www.troopshomefast.org.)

You have the power to enact legislation to achieve the goal of this fast: set a timeline for the withdrawal of U.S. military forces from Iraq and bring the troops home. We deeply appreciate the efforts of members of the House and Senate who have already been working to end this war.

But Congress is moving far too slowly. Every day, more American soldiers die, more Iraqis and other civilians are squandered which could be used to alleviate a whole host of problems here in the United States.

We all know that a solid majority of the American people now want to bring our military involvement in Iraq to a quick conclusion and bring our troops home. Iraqis are even more adamant about ending the war quickly. A remarkable 87 percent of Iraqis have committed to join the fast, including Susan Sarandon, Sean Penn and Danny Glover, musicians Graham Nash and Willie Nelson, and a roster of other quite well-known public figures. Among them are DIC Gold Star mother Cindy Sheehan, who began an open-ended fast today. “We are the true American patriots today. Our founding fathers cautioned future generations against engaging in wars of aggression for empire and economic gain, lest we lose our national soul. And the war in Iraq is exactly the kind of war our Nation’s leaders once cautioned against.”

The hunger strike will continue throughout the summer. “This fast has obviously been successful,” said CODEPINK co-founder Medea Benjamin. “We thought there might be 3 or 4 of us fasting, and it is more like 3,000. Every day hundreds more join in. They are now taking the fast seriously. Some communities are doing rolling fasts, each person taking a day. This is sparking a new level of commitment to get out of Iraq! For more please see www.troopshomefast.org or meet the fasters in front of the White House at 10-11 a.m. or 5-7 p.m."

THE NEED FOR AN INCREASED NATIONAL FOCUS ON RAIL AND TRANSIT SECURITY

HON. ELIJAH E. CUMMINGS OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, the terrible events of 9/11 brought intense scrutiny to security on our nation’s aviation system and led Congress to enact significant measures to strengthen security both on airplanes and throughout airports. However, this same level of scrutiny and concern has not been extended to the other transportation modes in our nation, particularly railroads and public transit systems.
Even though transit and rail systems throughout the world have been the targets of deadly terror attacks, including the London subway system a year ago this month and the rail system in Bombay, India, just yesterday, the Bush Administration seems guilty of the same lack of anticipatory thinking that plagued our approach to aviation security prior to 9/11.

In fact, as has happened so often in our nation’s history, public voices calling attention to the inadequate security provided for railroads and public transit appear to be warning of a problem that is essentially being ignored by officials whose basic plan is apparently to hope that nothing happens.

In July of last year, the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security articulated the Bush Administration’s general indifference to security on transit systems when he announced that our nation’s public transit systems should expect to bear most of the costs for security improvements themselves. That was the moment when the Secretary dismissed the idea that a terrorist attack on our transit systems before another unthinkable act leads to the deaths of more innocent Americans. It is simply inconceivable to me that a terrorist attack on our transit systems could produce “catastrophic consequences” by saying “a bomb in a subway car may kill 30 people.”

Under pressure, Secretary Chertoff backed away from his statement. However, the Bush Administration still seems to have continued its policy of essentially leaving public transit systems to defend themselves and to have continued to have continued this policy of essentially leaving public transit systems and to railroads much of the financial burden associated with providing any security enhancements on these systems.

Thus, in fiscal year 2006, the federal government appropriated just $150 million in security grants to be divided among transit intercity passenger rail, and freight rail systems. This is the same amount provided in fiscal year 2005.

In fact, federal grants for transit and railroad security since 9/11 have totaled just over $550 million. By comparison, the Congressional Research Service reports that the federal government has spent nearly $20 billion on aviation security since September 11, 2001. As evidence, our approach to aviation security prior to 9/11.

For security grants to be divided among transit intercity passenger rail, and freight rail systems. This is the same amount provided in fiscal year 2005.

Perhaps not surprisingly given the lack of focus, the allocation of federal funding has been accompanied by repeated failures on the part of the Department of Homeland Security to develop comprehensive risk assessments and mode-specific security plans as documented by several GAO studies and now by a study written by the Democratic Members of the Committee on Homeland Security.

I strongly support the Rail and Public Transportation Security Act of 2006, H.R. 5714, as well as other measures that would strengthen rail and transit security in our Nation. It is simply incomprehensible to me that Congress has not yet considered and passed these measures that would close gaping holes in our transit security system and significantly increase funding for security grant programs.

Mr. Speaker, it will not be possible to protect our transit and rail systems from every possible terror threat, but we are not yet doing all that we can to make these systems as safe as possible. Our failure to anticipate the unthinkable before 9/11 led to the tragic death of 3,000 innocent Americans. It is past time that we act to secure our public transit and rail systems before another unthinkable act leads to the deaths of more innocent Americans.

PERMITTING USE OF CAPITOL ROTUNDA FOR CEREMONY TO COMMORATE THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

SPEECH OF
HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 10, 2006

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Madam Speaker, this week H. Con. Res. 427 passed the House of Representatives by voice vote. This bill would permit the use of the rotunda of the Capitol for a ceremony to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the establishment of the Department of Veterans Affairs. I would like to lend my voice to this memorable event.

Madam Speaker, in 1930 President Hoover signed Executive Order 5398 which established the Veterans Administration a ultimately led to the formation of the Department of Veterans Affairs. The VA (as it has affectionately become known) has strived to both honor and serve the men and women who protect one of our Nation’s most treasured ideals—liberty. For 75 years, the VA has helped ensure that those who choose to enter the armed services are not forgotten after they honorably serve their country.

For this reason, we should celebrate the concept and accomplishments of the VA. Indeed, the VA is a vital cabinet level department, which oversees an honorable and necessary function of the U.S. Government.

The VA’s three branches—Veterans Health Administration, the Veterans Benefits Administration, and the National Cemetery Administration—should be boldly applauded for their service to America’s former servicemen and servicewomen.

Beginning in 1946, the VA’s health unit, now known as the Veterans Health Administration, has sought to provide adequate health care to injured veterans returning from war, starting with World War II. And for the latter half of the 20th century, the VHA expanded into a leading health care provider and now has over 150 medical centers across the country. According to the VA, provided care to more than 5.3 million individuals in 2005.

In addition to providing health care services, the VA, through its Veterans Benefits Administration branch, has provided educational services to veterans, beginning with the passage of the GI Bill in 1944. According to the VA, 7.8 million World War II veterans, alone, benefited from education and the education benefits the bill offered. I also applaud the VA for assisting the families of our fallen heroes, the men and women of our armed services who died in combat fighting for liberty. The VA’s National Cemetery Administration should be praised for providing memorials to those veterans who died for our liberty.

Madam Speaker, it is an honor for me to have the opportunity to recognize the VA for what is has and will continue to do for our veterans. As a member of the House of Representatives, I always look to support legislation that honors our veterans. On June 27, 2006, the House of Representatives agreed to H.R. 4843, the Veterans’ Compensation Cost-of-Living Adjustment Act of 2006. H.R. 4843 increases compensation rates to veterans with service-oriented disabilities, and the House of Representatives should be proud of this great legislation.

But, Madam Speaker, on July 19, 2006, when we commemorate the VA’s 75th Anniversary, let us not forget that much more needs to be done to pay homage to our veterans, particularly those who are coming home from Afghanistan and Iraq.

Madam Speaker, the VA reported in August 2005 that almost 23 percent of homeless men and women are veterans. Madam Speaker, this percentage is far too high and far too shameful.

On a bi-partisan basis, Congress must work with the Veterans Affairs to right this seemingly forgotten atrocity. The men and women who honorably serve our great Nation deserve not only to be treated as heroes in war; they deserve to be treated as hero when they return home.

The men and women of the U.S. armed services make it possible for us to debate. Madam Speaker, let us not debate the honor veterans deserve.

GLOBAL WARMING: PARTICULARLY HARMFUL TO PEOPLE OF COLOR

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce into the Record a letter that I received from the United Church of Christ which I believe is worth our contemplation because of its sincere efforts to generate greater awareness and understanding in the international and domestic communities disproportionately affected by current environmental problems.

The earth’s climate has changed over the last century. This change has had deleterious effects on the world community, but more so on poor communities who have high concentrations of people of color. Communities of color are burdened with poor air quality and are twice as likely to be uninsured than whites. Yet these communities will become even more vulnerable to climate-change related respiratory ailments, heat-related illness and death, and illness from insect-carried diseases. A study conducted by the Congressional Black Caucus substantiated his claim by pointing out that in every single one of the 44 major metropolitan areas in the U.S., Blacks are more likely than Whites to be exposed to higher air toxic concentrations.

People of color are less responsible for climate change, ironically they will be made to suffer the most from it. We should not avoid the issue of race, class and gender when it comes to serious discussions about the environment. The inclusion of race, class and gender doesn’t take us away from the issue, but helps make the issue more comprehensive and complete.

The impact of climate change has not been addressed or assessed specifically for people of color. As we continue to seek solutions to the growing climate problem, we must seek to ensure that the rights of all people are met regardless of race, class or gender. I enter into the Record this letter written...
The international dimensions of environmental problems are becoming the center of attention. They gain center-stage in debates concerning the future of our planet. The range of issues being discussed is extensive, but global warming seems to be a common subject in most conversations. The co-existence of environmentalism and economic development and the need for cooperation, fairness and equity among countries seems to be one of the major questions.

In the midst of our global environmental conversations we must keep in mind that the activities of human society, on a broad scale, are harmful to all, but to some more than others. In the case of global warming, we suffer along with the planet but for island nations or major forest areas, or for indigenous communities, it is not an ‘environmental problem,’ it is the literal destruction of their environment, history, legacy and lives.

In the United States, communities of color are also drastically affected. A recent report notes the disproportionate correlation between African Americans in the U.S. and climate change. The report argues that African Americans are less responsible for climate change, but suffer more from the health impacts.

In 1987 the existence of a nationwide pattern of disproportionate environmental risk based on race was demonstrated for the U.S. This evidence challenged the U.S. environmental movement to recognize its tendency to ignore issues of race, class and gender when setting agendas for social action. Today the mainstream environmental community is involved in serious discussions about how to frame the eco-justice issues along with those dealing with environment justice or environmental racism, but, to look at the issue of global warming as one that is in opposition to those confronted by the environmental justice movement will be a mistake.

The global environmental justice movement compels us to rethink our understanding of global environmental problems and existing proposals to solve them. Justice is an essential demand, in the aftermath of historic, systematic discrimination and disproportionate environmental degradation of those on the margins.

If we look at global warming as an issue of human rights, environmental justice, we will be able to see the connection between the local and the global. Rising temperatures are already affecting the lives of millions of humans, particularly in people of color, low-income, and indigenous communities. The health of many has been already compromised, their financial reality has become a burden, and their social and cultural lives have been disrupted. As we dialogues, research and seek solutions to our climate and energy problems we must seek to ensure the right of all people to live, work, play, and pray in safe, healthy, and clean environments. We envision a transition to a future that protects the most vulnerable from the impacts of climate.

CONDEMNING THE ATTACKS ON ISRAEL BY HEBRONAH AND BLACKFURS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to condemn the terrorist groups Hezbollah and Hamas and their continuing brutal attacks against the people of Israel. Hezbollah is a client of the Israel Defense Forces soldiers and captured two others on the Israel-Lebanon border earlier this week. This is the same terrorist group which took the lives of 257 Americans in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy and Marine barracks in Beirut 26 years ago.

The contrast between Lebanon and Israel is stark. Lebanese not only tolerate terrorists, it harbors and supports them. Lebanon has blatantly and purposefully disregarded U.N. resolutions and diplomatic requests to disarm the Hezbollah and Hamas terrorist leaders. On the other hand, Israel has complied with the U.N. charter, and has had its forces withdrawn from Lebanon since May 2000. This latest attack was completely unprovoked; in fact, Hezbollah leaders claimed that it had been planned for months. Clearly, the purpose of this latest attack is to perpetuate the violence in the region.

An estimated 100 million dollars per year in weaponry and other support is sent from Tehran through Damascus to supply Hezbollah. The government of Lebanon takes a hands-off approach to this continued violence. The Syrian and Iranian governments should be condemned for their support of the Hezbollah and Hamas terrorist organizations.

It is time for the world community to take action against Hezbollah and the nations that support it. The United States must also not allow the Iranian government to use this latest bloodshed as a diverting tactic against U.S. attention from their unrestricted nuclear program.

With the killing of Israeli soldiers and the kidnapping of Cpl. Gilad Shahal by Hamas, the timing of Hezbollah’s incursion and kidnapping raises grave suspicions and increases the existing tension in the region.

Israel is in a difficult position, for it must deal with state-sponsored terrorism involving the Palestinian, Lebanese, Iranian and Syrian governments. In response to these brutal attacks, Israel clearly has the right to defend itself. Like every sovereign nation, Israel is clearly justified in taking the actions necessary to safeguard its territory and its people.

My thoughts and prayers are with the families and loved ones of the kidnapped Israeli soldiers at this difficult time.

CELEBRATING A LONG AND WONDERFUL LIFE

HON. LINCOLN DAVIS OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my sincerest regards to Ms. Ruth Johns McCluskey in Knoxville, Tennessee. Ms. McCluskey was born in Smyrna, Tennessee, attended grade school at the Greenwood School in Old Jefferson Community. After graduating from Smyrna High School she attended Tennessee State University—now Middle Tennessee State University. After receiving her degree she embarked upon the field of education and taught grades 1–8 in Crossville, Tennessee. It was during this time that she met her future husband, Rev. Joe McCluskey, a fellow teacher. During their marriage they had two children: Ruth and Joe.

Today, Ms. McCluskey stays active and engaged by reading the daily paper, magazines, and as many books as she can get her hands on. Ever the extrovert she enjoys playing bridge and cards with her friends and family. I wish Ms. McCluskey the best, and may God continue to bless her.

ABA LAW STUDENT TAX CHALLENGE—NORTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF LAW STUDENTS PLACE SECOND

HON. DONALD A. MANZULLO
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize two Northern Illinois University, NIU, law students, Mr. Riley and Ms. Streeter, who placed second in the nation at the 2005 Law Student Tax Challenge. This event was sponsored by the Young Lawyers Forum of the American Bar Association’s Section of Taxation. Coached by Northern Illinois Law Professor Dan Schneider, the third-year law students researched a real-life, tax-planning problem and submitted their analysis and solution for judging. After being selected as semi-finalists from a pool of 36 entries, Ms. Riley and Ms. Streeter traveled to San Diego to present both oral and written arguments in front of a panel of distinguished tax lawyers, which included the Chief Counsel of the Internal Revenue Service.

Established in 1895 by an act of the Illinois General Assembly, Northern Illinois State Normal School opened its doors to students in September 1899. In July 1957, after 58 years of physical growth and expansion in academic programs, Northern Illinois State College became Northern Illinois University by action of the 70th General Assembly. In August of 1979 the university was authorized to acquire the College of Law, which had originally been founded in 1975 by Lewis University.

Today Northern Illinois University offers prohams to more than 23,000 students in the basic disciplines, the arts, and the professions through courses conducted on the main campus in DeKalb and at regional sites throughout Northern Illinois. The university’s academic work is organized under the College of Business, Education, Engineering and Engineering Technology, Health and Human Sciences, Law, Liberal Arts and Sciences, and Visual and Performing Arts, in addition to the Graduate School.

As the only public law school in the greater Chicago area, NIU Law has previously ranked first in the Nation for government placement,
INTRODUCTION OF THE FOLSOM SOUTH CANAL COST DEFERRAL BILL

HON. DANIEL E. LUNGREN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. LUNGREN of California. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Folsom South Canal Cost Deferral bill, to prevent California water customers from having to shoulder the costs of unused capacity in the Folsom South Canal, a Bureau of Reclamation, Bureau of water conveyance.

The Folsom South Canal was authorized by Congress in 1965 to include five water conveyance segments or “reaches.” The canal was intended to deliver water from the Auburn Dam and related facilities to municipal and industrial water and irrigation users in the Sacramento area and on south to irrigated agriculture in the planned East Side Division.

The first two reaches—a total of 26 miles of the canal were built to the Sacramento-San Joaquin County line. They were designed and constructed to accommodate enough water to meet anticipated demand in Sacramento and Joaquin County. However, the East Side Division was never authorized and, thus, has not been developed. As a result, the remaining three reaches have been reclassified by the Bureau as “Construction in Abeyance.”

Because the canal project, as originally designed, was not fully developed, Central Valley Project, CVP, water customers that today take delivery of water from the completed reaches are now shouldering the entire capital cost of the canal, plus interest. This does not seem fair, since they had no control over the design or construction of the project and bear no responsibility for the fact that the East Side Division did not materialize.

My bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to defer that portion of the capital costs and interest that corresponds to the unused capacity of the canal. This will prevent current and future municipal and irrigation water customers from having to pay costs associated with an oversized canal. In the next few years, the question of the Auburn Dam may be revisited and other water users may seek allocations of CVP water. My bill does not permanently settle the issue of the excess capital costs, but merely defers those costs until other decisions about the future of the CVP are made. The bill also authorizes the Secretary, during the deferral period, to periodically review and adjust, as appropriate, the amount of the unused capacity of the canal and the amount of reimbursable capital and interest of the canal.

TRIBUTE TO DR. WALTER MEYERHOFF

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, July 13, 2006

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the life of Dr. Walter Meyerhoff, an extraordinary physicist who fled the horrors of Nazi occupied Europe and made his mark in the world as an American citizen. Dr. Meyerhoff died in Los Altos, California on Saturday, May 27, 2006 at the age of 84.

Walter Meyerhoff was born on April 22, 1922, in Kiel, Germany, into a family of German-Jewish intellectuals. Walter’s father Otto received a Nobel Prize in Medicine in 1922. The elder Meyerhoff sought to protect his family from rising anti-Semitism in Germany which accompanied the growing political power of the Nazi party. In 1936, the family fled Germany and went to England for three years, and then in 1939 they moved to France, which was attacked by Nazi German military forces not long after their arrival.

In 1941 when France was under Nazi occupation, the Meyerhoff family came into contact with Varian Fry, a United States consular official in France during this turbulent period who played a critical role in saving Jewish intellectuals, scholars, and others from Nazi death camps. Fry was a Harvard-educated academic who was not Jewish, but who recognized his obligation to save Jews who were under the threat of death by viciously anti-Semitic Nazi thugs. Fry successfully helped save the lives of more than 2000 Jews, including some of the 20th Centuries leading intellectuals and artists. Fry saved the lives of artists Marc Chagall and Max Ernst, writer Hannah Arendt, sculptor Jacques Lipchitz, the Otto Meyerhoff family, and many others.

Mr. Speaker, Walter Meyerhoff never forgot the efforts of his rescuer and dedicated himself to honor Varian fry by establishing and directing a foundation in memory of this man who saved his life. Through the efforts of Meyerhoff and the foundation he created, Varian Fry was given the Croix du Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor as well as the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum Eisenhower Liberation Medal. Also, thanks in part to Meyerhoff’s efforts, Fry became the first American to be honored as one of the “Righteous among the Nations” by the state of Israel at the Yad Vashem Holocaust memorial. Perhaps the Varian Fry foundation’s greatest achievement was the production of the film about Fry entitled Assignment: Rescue. The film, which has been distributed to over 35,000 schools, is educating hundreds of thousands of students about the horror of the Holocaust and the extraordinary courage exhibited by Varian Fry and others who fought the Nazis.

After arriving in the United States, Walter Meyerhoff became a leading professor and educator. After receiving his doctorate from the University of Pennsylvania, he taught briefly at the University of Illinois and then accepted an appointment at Stanford University. He had a distinguished career at Stanford, served as head of Stanford’s physics department, and wrote two textbooks which are still in use today. In 1977, Walter Meyerhoff was given the Dinkelspiel Award, an honor given each year to the top Stanford professor in the teaching of undergraduate students.

Mr. Speaker, I invite my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to the remarkable legacy of Walter Meyerhoff, whose scholarship made an important contribution to contemporary physics, whose excellence in teaching helped mold the minds of some of our Nation’s brightest students, and whose unwavering commitment to Varian Fry, the man who saved his life during the Holocaust, established a legacy of remembrance that is a beacon to all of us who respect human dignity and human rights.

We join Miriam, his wife of 59 years, his two sons, Michael and David, and his grandson, Matthew in mourning the passing of Walter Meyerhoff.

Rejected:

By 36 yeas to 64 nays (Vote No. 198), Menendez Modified Amendment No. 4634, to provide that appropriations under this Act may not be used for the purpose of providing certain grants, unless all such grants meet certain conditions for allocation. Pages S7455, S7464–70, S7472, S7484–85, S7485–86, S7487

By 29 yeas to 71 nays (Vote No. 200), Sessions/Ensign Modified Amendment No. 4659, to appropriate an additional $1,829,400,000 to construct double-layered fencing and vehicle barriers along the southwest border and to offset such increase by reducing all other discretionary amounts on a pro-rata basis. Pages S7478, S7478–83, S7485

By 34 yeas to 66 nays (Vote No. 201), Sessions/Ensign Modified Amendment No. 4660, to appropriate an additional $85,670,000 to enable the Secretary of Homeland Security to hire 800 additional full time active duty investigators to investigate immigration laws violations and to offset such increase on a pro-rata basis. Pages S7478, S7483, S7484, S7485, S7487–88

Withdrawn:

Thune/Talent Amendment No. 4610, to establish a program to use amounts collected from violations of the corporate average fuel economy program to expand infrastructure necessary to increase the availability of alternative fuels. Pages S7455, S7483–84

During consideration of this measure today, the Senate also took the following action:

By 38 yeas to 62 nays (Vote No. 197), three-fifths of those Senators duly chosen and sworn, not having voted in the affirmative, Senate rejected the motion to waive section 302(f) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as made effective by Section 7035(a) of P.L. 109–234, with respect to Dodd/Stabenow Amendment No. 4641, to fund urgent priorities for our Nation’s firefighters, law enforcement personnel, emergency medical personnel, and all Americans by reducing the tax breaks for individuals with annual incomes in excess of $1,000,000. Subsequently, the point of order that the amendment would provide spending in excess of the subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation was sustained, and the amendment thus fell. Pages S7458–62

Chair sustained a point of order against Kyl Amendment No. 4643, to increase the number of Department of Homeland Security detention bed spaces by 6,700 beds in FY 2007, as being in violation of rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate which prohibits legislation on appropriations matters, and the amendment thus fell. Pages S7456–58, S7463

Chair sustained a point of order against Santorum/Kyl Amendment No. 4575, to increase the number of border patrol agents to 2,500 agents, and offset by increasing the availability of reverse mortgages for seniors, as being in violation of rule XVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate which prohibits legislation on appropriations matters, and the amendment thus fell.

Pages S7455–56

By 46 yeas to 54 nays (Vote No. 199), three-fifths of those Senators duly chosen and sworn, not having voted in the affirmative, Senate rejected the motion to waive section 402 of H. Con. Res. 95, Congressional Budget Resolution for Fiscal Year 2006, with respect to the emergency designation provision in Schumers Amendment No. 4600, to increase appropriations for disaster relief. Subsequently, a point of order that the emergency designation provision would violate section 402 of H. Con. Res. 95 was sustained and the provision was stricken. Also, the Chair sustained a point of order that the amendment would exceed the subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation, as made effective by section 7035(a) of P.L. 109–254, and the amendment thus fell.

Pages S7472–74, S7474–75, S7486–87

Senate insisted on its amendment, requested a conference with the House thereon, and the Chair was authorized to appoint the following conferees on the part of the Senate: Senators Gregg, Cochran, Stevens, Specter, Domenici, Shelby, Craig, Bennett, Allard, Byrd, Inouye, Leahy, Mikulski, Kohl, Murray, Reid, and Feinstein.

Rejected:

Norwood amendment (No. 1 printed in H. Rept. 109–554) which sought to update the formula in section 4 of the Voting Rights Act (VRA) that determines which states and jurisdictions will be covered under Section 5 of the VRA. This updated formula would be a rolling test based off of the last three presidential elections. Any state would be subject to Section 5 if it currently has a discriminatory test in place or voter turnout of less than 50% in any of the three most recent presidential elections (by a recorded vote of 96 ayes to 318 noes, Roll No. 370);

Pages H5178–86, H5204–05

Gohmert amendment (No. 2 printed in H. Rept. 109–554) which sought to make the reauthorization period 10 years, rather than the 25 years proposed in H.R. 9 (by a recorded vote of 134 ayes to 288 noes, Roll No. 371);

Pages H5186–91, H5205

King of Iowa amendment (No. 3 printed in H. Rept. 109–554) which sought to strike sections 7 and 8 of the bill. These sections relate to multilingual ballots and use of American Community Survey census data, and they would automatically expire in 2007 (by a recorded vote of 185 ayes to 238 noes, Roll No. 372); and Westmoreland amendment (No. 4 printed in H. Rept. 109–554) which sought to provide for an expedited, proactive procedure to bail out from coverage under the preclearance portions of the Voting Rights Act, by requiring the Department of Justice to assemble a list of all jurisdictions eligible for bailout and to notify the jurisdictions. The Department of Justice is then required to consent to the entry of a declaratory judgment allowing bailout if a jurisdiction appears on the list. Adds a three-year initial time period (and annually thereafter) for assembly of the bailout list by the Department of Justice (by a recorded vote of 118 ayes to 302 noes, Roll No. 373).

Pages H5191–98, H5205–06

Pages H5198–H5204, H5206–07

H. Res. 910, the rule providing for consideration of the bill was agreed to by voice vote, after agreeing to order the previous question without objection.

Pages H5133–43

The Congressional Record (USPS 087-390). The Periodicals postage is paid at Washington, D.C. The public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, are printed pursuant to directions of the Joint Committee on Printing as authorized by appropriate provisions of Title 44, United States Code, and published for each day that one or both Houses are in session, excepting very infrequent instances when two or more unusually small consecutive issues are printed one time. Public access to the Congressional Record is available online through GPO Access, a service of the Government Printing Office, free of charge to the user. The online database is updated each day the Congressional Record is published. The database includes both text and graphics from the beginning of the 103d Congress, 2d session (January 1994) forward. It is available through GPO Access at www.gpo.gov/gpoaccess. Customers can also access this information with WAIS client software, via telnet at swais.access.gpo.gov, or dial-in using communications software and a modem at 202–512–1661. Questions or comments regarding this database or GPO Access can be directed to the GPO Access User Support Team at: E-Mail: gpoaccess@gpo.gov; Phone 1–888–293–6498 (toll-free), 202–512–1530 (D.C. area); Fax: 202–512–2250. Following each session of Congress, the daily Congressional Record is revised, printed, permanently bound and sold by the Superintendent of Documents in individual parts or by sets. With the exception of copyrighted articles, there are no restrictions on the republication of material from the Congressional Record. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to the Superintendent of Documents, Congressional Record, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, along with the entire mailing label from the last issue received.
