The House met at 9 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. DENT).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC.
I hereby appoint the Honorable CHARLES W. DENT to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 31, 2006, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 25 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes, but in no event shall debate extend beyond 9:30 a.m.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 10 a.m. today.
Accordingly (at 9 o’clock and 2 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until 10 a.m.

☐ 1000

AFTE R RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BASS) at 10 a.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer: ‘The Book of Proverbs tells us, Lord: “The fruit of virtue is a tree of life, but violence takes lives away.” Lord, our God, let virtue triumph over violence. If virtue were to find strength even in the war-torn parts of the world, violence would be rejected as the way to peace. Neither trees nor life survive on a battlefield. So quickly, violent words can be tossed around a household, casting a cloud over a family, and expressions of violence can even find their way into the language of lawmakers and the courts of a land. Drown all forms of violent behavior with virtue, Lord. The hand may reach for a weapon, a mind can plot vengeance, but violence springs from the heart. That is why the hearts of Americans, Lord, need so much virtue that there is no room for violence, on our streets, in our speech or our daily reactions to today, tomorrow, forever. Amen.’

LAW OFFICERS—VICTIMS OF ILLEGAL ENTRY

(Mr. POE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, more news from the second front. The battle for the border is continuing. When our government does not monitor illegal entry into our homeland, all types of bandits come through. One was Ramon Ramos. He and his accomplice, Francisco Salcedo, were stopped by Texas State Trooper Steven Stone for speeding in Tyler, Texas, 400 miles from the border. They were wearing body armor and armed with knives, handguns and assault rifles, and they were looking for trouble.

Ramos showed Trooper Stone a forged driver’s license, and then, at point blank range, started shooting. Trooper Stone was shot six times and left for dead. Ramos and Salcedo then led other law enforcement officers on a high speed chase.

Ramos was recently convicted and sentenced to 14 life sentences. Why 14? Well, he tried to kill 13 other people, including peace officers in his blazing gun battle with the law.

Salcedo will get his day in court later this week.

Trooper Steven Stone miraculously survived.

Mr. Speaker, these crimes against peace officers could have been avoided had the Federal Government done its sworn duty to protect the borders from illegal entry.

And that’s just the way it is.

VIOLENCE IN THE MIDDLE EAST

(Mr. KUCINICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, at this historic moment, the United States is falling in its moral obligation to bring a cessation to the violence in the Middle East. This policy of inaction will have great consequences for the region, the world, and for the safety of our Nation and our allies.

The United States stands alone in our ability to bring an end to the violence and relieve the humanitarian catastrophe which has engulfed the people of Lebanon, Palestine and Israel.

In the short-term, we must call for an end to the violence. Then, without pre-conditions, we must bring all parties in the region to a long term settlement which will be enforced by peacekeepers.

This is the purpose of House Concurrent Resolution 450. We should demonstrate concern about the plight of the Israelis, but we must not be indifferent to the plight of the Arabs, Muslims and Christians and all others who are suffering the destruction of their homes, their families, their hopes and their dreams.

As the violence continues with no end in sight and with civilian casualties on the rise, this is the moment to call for the end of fear and the beginning of hope. House Concurrent Resolution 450 does just that.

SUPPORT FOR ISRAEL

(Mr. McHENRY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. McHENRY. Mr. Speaker, Hezbollah, Iran and Syria’s armed militia of Islamic extremists attacked Israel, giving Israel every right to unleash fury on these terrorists.

Israel is not only fighting to protect themselves, but every other reasonable, freedom-loving person sharing this planet.

A Hezbollah spokesman said they are fully trained and armed volunteers to every corner of the earth to jeopardize Israeli and American interests.

The attacks of September 11, the bombings of London and Madrid, the terrorist roundup in Toronto and the present day insurgency in Iraq all foretell an unsettling but winnable trend, Mr. Speaker.

We are in a war against Islamic extremists, and the battle lines do not start and stop in the Middle East. They extend to the far reaches of the globe, and will do so until democracy replaces theocracy, freedom replaces tyranny, and equality replaces injustice.

Mr. Speaker, our Nation stands beside Israel as they protect their homeland and fight our common enemy, Islamic extremists.

TERRORISM

(Mr. MEEHAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to tell the Nation this fact:

Right now, the world is less safe than it was a year ago, or even before the terrible events of September 11.

We should be confronting violent extremism and people who want to destroy our life and our Nation. We should be chasing them around the world and giving them no rest or refuge.

Yet, after nearly 5 years of the war on terror, where are we?

The Taliban is growing stronger in Afghanistan and is firmly entrenched in Iraq, where it never had been before. Hamas and Hezbollah are acting with impunity.

This country needs a new strategy in the struggle with extremists, not one that is hamstrung by the mess in Iraq, sidetracked by political finger-pointing, or beholden to special oil interests.

This country needs new leadership that will safeguard our children’s future rather than send them to war without equipment that they need.

This country needs a new direction, a direction that will make tomorrow safer than today. The American people deserve nothing less.

HONORING FLOYD LANDIS

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, the U.S. domination of the Tour-de-France continues. For 7 consecutive years, Lance Armstrong dominated the event, but his departure last year left the cycling world wondering who would step up to claim his crown.

On Sunday we found out. His name is Floyd Landis. Floyd hails from Farmersville, Pennsylvania, just outside of Ephrata, in the heart of Lancaster County.

His parents were attending a service at Martindale Mennonite Church during their son’s triumphant ride through the streets of Paris. His dad said, “I was praying for him.”

Mr. Speaker, Floyd’s performance was an inspiration. Though in need of a hip replacement, his determination and willpower was unwavering.

One writer who has been covering the event for 18 years called it, “the best performance in the modern history of the tour.”

On behalf of the entire 16th Congressional District of Pennsylvania, just outside of Ephrata, I extend my heartfelt congratulations to Floyd and his family.

He has represented his hometown and his country well, and I applaud his tremendous performance in cycling’s most prestigious event.

HOME REPUBLICANS PREPARE TO LEAVE TOWN WITHOUT ADDRESSING RECORD GAS PRICES

(Mr. STUPAK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, gas prices are at a record high, at over $3 per gallon. Yet House Republicans plan to leave Washington at the end of this week for a 5-week recess without providing any relief at the gas pump.

The legislation, the PUMP Act, which would lower the cost of a barrel of oil by $20, has been stalled in committee.

Our constituents have been gouged at the pump for 4 months in a row now, and the only response we have heard from the other side of the aisle is the same old tired policies that will do nothing to reduce our dependence on foreign oil and will do nothing to provide real relief to the American consumer.

There is no excuse for Republican inaction. It is time that they break their cozy ties with oil companies so we can finally help the American consumer.

House Democrats want to repeal more than $20 billion in tax breaks and subsidies that Congressional Republicans and the Bush White House continue to protect. With Big Oil’s record profits of $16 billion during the first quarter of this year, oil companies don’t need more tax breaks from Washington. Democrats would invest this money, more than $20 billion, into renewable energy resources of tomorrow so that we can begin to wean ourselves off foreign oil.

It is time to go in a new direction, America.

PLEASANT VALLEY SOUTH BAPTIST CHURCH

(Mr. GINGREY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Pleasant Valley South Baptist Church in Silver Creek, Georgia, which is celebrating its 150th anniversary this year.

For a century and a half, Pleasant Valley South has been fulfilling the spiritual and communal needs of its congregants, and I know it will continue this service for many years to come.

Pleasant Valley South Baptist Church was founded in 1856. At the time, it was housed in a log cabin that also served as the community school. In 1863, James McBride was named as the church’s first pastor, and he preached to a congregation of 22 people.

Well, Pastor McBride would hardly recognize Pleasant Valley South today. In 2002, a 900-seat worship center was built to serve the church’s 1,700 members. Pastor Philip May presides over services that regularly attract more than 700 congregants on Sunday mornings.

Mr. Speaker, churches are one of the strongest foundations in our communities, and for 150 years, Pleasant Valley South Baptist has brought inspiration to Silver Creek and her residents.

I ask that you join me in congratulating the church on its historic 150th anniversary.
Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, the Bush Administration and Washington Republicans continue to tout the success of their economic policies. But their economic record actually falls far short of their rhetoric.

This week, the Democratic staffs of the House Budget Committee and the Joint Economic Committee released a report showing that employment growth is at its lowest levels since the Eisenhower administration, while inflation-adjusted wages have decreased by 1.3 percent since August of 2003, when the economy stopped losing jobs.

Today, the average American worker is spending more hours on the job for less pay. According to the report, median annual household income has decreased by $1,700 after accounting for inflation since President Bush took office back in 2001.

While the wealthiest have been rewarded with tax breaks, middle-class workers are really feeling the pinch. Stagnant wages are making it difficult for them to pay for rising housing, health care and gas bills.

SECURITY FIRST

(Mrs. BLACKBURN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. Speaker, this past weekend I spent time traveling through my district and talking with people across the political spectrum. And I consistently heard quotes like this: “Let’s secure the border. Let’s have security first. Let’s stop illegal entry into this country.”

Mr. Speaker, I want all of these folks to know that we hear them. We hear them loud and clear. And this House majority is fighting those who would grant amnesty to individuals who have broken our laws.

Our majority leader, Mr. BOEHNER, has written an op-ed today in the Philadelphia Enquirer. I want to thank him for that.

He is absolutely right when he says, and I quote, “Congress has compromised on this issue too long.”

We are standing firm for a security first bill, Mr. Speaker.

I look forward to the field hearings that are going to have to cross this country in August. The hearings will show those opposed to a security first bill that the American people are on our side in this issue.

HEZBOLLAH’S ATTACK ON ISRAEL

(Ms. FOXX asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. FOXX. Mr. Speaker, those who equate Israel’s recent actions with the same barbarism as those of Hezbollah are sorely misinformed. Hezbollah is a self-proclaimed terrorist organization whose motives are to destroy the very principles of freedom and democracy that Israel, not to mention the United States, defends in the Middle East. Israel is the only democracy in the region, and the survival of Israel needs to be guaranteed.

It is regrettable that the fighting has escalated to the level it has, but Israel has the right to defend itself. Israel has been bombarded continually by hundreds of katyusha rockets on a daily basis for too long.

There is going to have to be European and international involvement and support to ensure that Hezbollah cannot reentrench itself in southern Lebanon next to the border of Israel, and it is time for Syria and Iran to act as responsible states and not as perpetrators and subsidizers of terrorism.

Of course, we all want peace in the Middle East, but let us not forget who started this and their motives.

I wish Secretary Rice the best in helping to bring a lasting peace to a highly intractable situation.

BUSH ADMINISTRATION STATUS QUO IS NO LONGER SUSTAINABLE IN IRAQ

(Ms. WATSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, when President Bush meets with Iraqi Prime Minister Maliki at the White House today, he needs to tell the Iraqi leader that the time has come for his government to shoulder more responsibility.

Congressional Democrats have said this year that we need to have a significant year of transition from U.S. to Iraqi forces. That is not happening. In fact, the violence there is getting worse. Over the last month alone, the number of Iraqis who have been killed has doubled from 1,500 in May to more than 3,000 in June. Imagine that. One hundred Iraqis are now being killed every day. The sectarian violence between the Sunnis and the Shiites is clearly getting worse, and the Iraqi Government simply cannot stop it.

For 3 years now, House Democrats have been demanding a serious debate on Iraq. Instead, last month House Republicans favored a partisan debate in the hopes that they would score political points.

Today Iraq is close to fighting a civil war, and we must see that this does not happen.

IT IS TIME FOR A NEW DIRECTION

(Mr. DeFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DeFAZIO. The Republican do-nothing-of-substance Congress is unwilling to tackle issues of importance to the American people because they might upset their wealthy special interest campaign contributors in an election year. There is so much they could do and so little being done.

We could take care of the 7 million seniors who are about to fall in the doughnut hole of the so-called Medicare prescription drug benefit, getting no coverage, having to pay 2,600 bucks out of pocket. But that would upset the pharmaceutical industry.

We could increase the Federal minimum wage for the first time in 7 years. But tax cuts for millionaires take precedence.

And this week as every oil company announces record-breaking profits excluding last year’s record-breaking profits, what action is being taken to rein in the price gouging? None, because that would offend Big Oil.

Mr. Speaker, there is a lot the United States Congress can do. The problem is the Republican-run Congress is tied down by special interests.

It is time we take America in a new direction.

COMMENDING REACH OUT AND READ

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, this August during an annual district bus tour, I will have the opportunity to read aloud to children participating in the Reach Out and Read program.

Reach Out and Read is a nonprofit organization that partners with medical institutions to promote a partnership between early childhood literacy and pediatric care. The organization trains doctors and nurses in the importance of early literacy. During check-ups, each child age 6 months to 5 years is given a new book, and parents are encouraged to read aloud to them. As of June 2006, there were nearly 3,000 Reach Out and Read programs nationwide, benefiting 2.5 million children annually.

As a member of the Education and Workforce Committee, ably led by Chairman Buck McKeon, I am all too aware of the school readiness issues facing our Nation. Organizations such as Reach Out and Read are important for their efforts to prepare better our Nation’s children for success at school and in life.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September 11.
Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, the Republican leadership of this body is preparing to adjourn the House for a 5-week vacation at the end of this week without meeting the needs of America’s working families. Republicans continue to block an increase in the minimum wage that would benefit 6.6 million people in this country, three-quarters of whom are adults over the age of 20 trying to support their families.

This Republican Congress has refused to raise the minimum wage since 1997, causing it now to reach its lowest real value level in 50 years. The current pay of $5.15 per hour is simply not a fair or value level in 50 years. The current pay causing it now to reach its lowest real age of 20 trying to support their families.

Republican leadership of this body is refusing to give 6 million Americans a pay raise.

Mr. Speaker, House Republicans have had numerous opportunities to vote for an increase in the minimum wage; yet they continue to stall this critical measure while millions of Americans suffer the consequences.

We should not leave this week without giving 6 million Americans a pay raise.

DEMOCRATS HAVE BEEN RIGHT ABOUT IRAQ ALL ALONG, WILLING TO ASK THE TOUGH QUESTIONS

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow the Prime Minister of Iraq will address a joint session of Congress, and I hope that he levels with us about the current situation in his nation.

Over the past week, the violence in Iraq has been replaced on the front pages and the television screens by the violence in Lebanon and Israel. However, that does not mean that things are getting any better. In fact, last month more than 3,100 Iraqis were killed in sectarian violence. That is more than 100 killed every day.

While the situation in Iraq continues to spiral out of control, the Bush administration is just simply incapable of coming up with a strategy that provides a new direction. And for 3 years now, the House Republicans have refused to demand any answers from this administration about its failures in Iraq. They have allowed the incompentence to continue without holding anyone responsible.

Congress can no longer sit on the sidelines. It is time to recognize that our brave young men and women must come home. They must be brought home as quickly as possible. We must end this occupation of Iraq. We need to provide a new direction for this administration and for our country. The American people are insisting on that.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG IMPORTATION

Mr. Emanuel. Mr. Speaker, when this House passed the Medicare prescription drug benefit, many of us said it was a boon for the drug companies. The results are in. Drug companies are making billions in extra profits, $130 billion in additional profits, all subsidized by the taxpayer. This morning’s New York Times reads: “Eventually, ‘billion’ could lose its meaning” and fuel a political reaction if the drug prices continue to rise, but analysts expect that the industry’s influence in Washington will delay any changes for years.”

Therein lies the problem. This Congress is too busy doing the bidding of the drug companies and the drug companies’ business to do the people’s business.

On numerous occasions the House and Senate have voted strongly in favor of importation of prescription drugs. Importation is a safe and effective way to help consumers and taxpayers save money. Just 2 weeks ago, the Senate voted to block Customs from seizing shipments of prescription drugs; yet the seizures continue. The administration has turned the Customs Service over to the drug companies, confiscating prescription drugs at a time when they should be securing our borders, screening cargo, and stemming the flow of dangerous narcotics. The intent of the House and the Senate is clear.

It is time for a new direction. It is time for a new policy that makes sense to the American people.

STRAIGHT TALK ON THE ECONOMY

Mr. Keller. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give the American people some straight talk about our economy.

In 1992 Bill Clinton ran for President with the slogan: “It’s the economy, stupid.” Yesterday his wife, Hillary, reminded us of that slogan in her speech to the Democratic Leadership Council.

Well, our economy is very strong and growing. We have created 5.4 million new jobs in the last 3 years. Our unemployment rate is better than the average unemployment rate of the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s. We have had 18 straight quarters of economic growth. Homeownership is now at 69 percent, the largest in history. And our revenues are coming in so high that we will be able to meet our goal of cutting the deficit in half by 2008, a full year ahead of schedule.

This time let’s take the Clintons at their word. If it is the “economy, stupid,” then let’s be smart and reelect those Congressmen who gave us this strong economy in the first place by lowering the taxes.

Some House Republicans finally willing to admit mistakes on Iraq. What took them so long?

Ms. Solis. Mr. Speaker, after more than 3 years of fighting the war in Iraq, it now appears that some HOUSE Republicans are finally beginning to question the administration’s competence in running the war and are finally beginning to question the rosy scenarios that continue to come from Vice President CHENEY and Defense Secretary Rumsfeld.

An article in last week’s Washington Post, entitled “GOP Lawmakers Edge Away from Optimism on Iraq,” says that Republicans are having to reconsider their strategy on the war. With an average of over 100 Iraqis dying every day last month, one of my Republican colleagues admitted that they have to change their message so they don’t look like they can’t face reality.

And so now, after berating Democrats for the past 3 years and questioning the administration’s failed policies in Iraq, some House Republicans are willing to admit that things are not going well in Iraq.

Now the question is, Is this a convenient message that they plan to use for the next couple of months between now and mid-term elections, or will my Republican colleagues actually take their oversight responsibilities seriously? Only time will tell.

STEM CELL RESEARCH: HOUSE GOP REFUSES TO OVERRIDE VETO

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, last week House Republicans refused to override the President’s veto of lifesaving stem cell research. Their action will hurt our Nation’s effort to find cures to diseases like Parkinson’s, Alzheimer’s, diabetes, and cancer.

The stem cell research bill could have directly benefited an estimated 100 million of our fellow Americans, those personally fighting these diseases and their family members who share their suffering. This legislation would have expanded Federal funding for extremely promising embryonic stem cell research while at the same time imposing strict ethical standards.

House Republicans refused to listen to our Nation’s leading scientists, biomedical researchers, and health organizations who said this legislation can save lives. Importantly, they refused to listen to the pleas of their own constituents. Instead, they once again supported a President who has no interest in giving our researchers the tools they need to find cures to diseases like cancer, diabetes, and Alzheimer’s. They were pandering to a very narrow part of their base. Shame on them.

RAISE THE MINIMUM WAGE

(Mr. AL GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, today I speak for the least among us. And in speaking for them, I remind us that it is time for us to raise the minimum wage. There are a-i-s-e, not r-a-z-e, because there are people in this country who would raze, who would decimate, not elevate, who would decimate the minimum wage.

Mr. Speaker, these people are not among those 37 million who are living in poverty. They are not among the millions who make $5.15 an hour. They are not among those who suffer and languish in poverty with no way out.

Mr. Speaker, those who make $5.15 an hour work through Christmas. They work through Easter. They work through Thanksgiving. And they make, at the end of the year, $10,712.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to raise the minimum wage. I speak for the least, the last, and the lost.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will postpone further proceedings today to the time and place of a recorded vote on which a recorded vote or the year and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Record votes on postponed questions will be taken later today.

CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2006

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 3525) to amend subtitle part 2 of title IV of the Social Security Act to improve outcomes for children in families affected by methamphetamine abuse and addiction, to reauthorize the promoting safe and stable families program, and for other purposes, as amended.

S. 3525

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Child and Family Services Improvement Act of 2006”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds as follows:

(1) For Federal fiscal year 2004, child protective services (CPS) staff nationwide reported investigating or assessing an estimated 3,000,000 allegations of child maltreatment, about 2,000,000 children had been abused or neglected by their parents or other caregivers.

(2) Combined, the Child Welfare Services (CWS) and Foster Care Safety and Stable Families (PSSF) programs provide States about $700,000,000 per year for services intended to ensure the safety, permanency, and well-being of children. These programs are considered the largest source of targeted Federal funding in the child protection system for prevention—that is, for services to ensure that children are not abused or neglected and, whenever possible, help children remain safely with their families.

(3) States have broad flexibility in directing CWS dollars to protect children from abuse and neglect. Under the PSSF program, States must invest significant portions of program funds in family preservation services, including time-limited reunification services, and post-adoption support services.

(4) However, a 2003 report by the Government Accountability Office (GAO) reported that little research is available on the effectiveness of activities supported by CWS funds—evaluations of services supported by PSSF funds have generally shown little or no effect.

(5) Further, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) recently completed initial Child and Family Service Reviews (CFSRs) in each State. No State was in full compliance with all measures of the CFSRs. The CFSRs also revealed that States reported need to prevent repeat abuse and neglect of children, improve services provided to families to reduce the risk of future harm (including by better monitoring the participation of families in services), and strengthen upfront services provided to families to prevent unnecessary family break-up and protect children in home.

(6) Federal policy should ensure that States are appropriately targeting CWS and PSSF funds to assist at-risk families and protect abused and neglected children. The Title IV section of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 629) is amended by striking “—” as in r-a-z-e, because there are people in this country who would raze, who would decimate, not elevate, who would decimate the minimum wage.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the subject of the bill under consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of S. 3525, as amended. As amended, this legislation reflects provisions as reported by the Committee on Ways and Means on June 29 and included in H.R. 5640, the Child and Family Services Improvement Act of 2006.

I am pleased that this legislation targets the increased resources so more foster children are visited on a monthly basis.

The Department of Health and Human Services Office of Inspector General recently reported that these visits were not occurring in only 20 States could tell whether the caseworkers actually visited children in foster care on a monthly basis. In seven of these 20 States, the reports found that fewer than half of the children in foster care were visited on a monthly basis. Research shows that children who are visited on a more frequent basis are more quickly placed in permanent homes and experience other positive outcomes, compared to children not visited.

Newspapers are frequently reporting the horrors of children neglected by the very system charged to protect them. The increased monitoring promoting by this bill makes sense and is a long way towards better protecting these vulnerable children.

Mr. Speaker, we still have more work to do to improve our Nation's foster care system. Time and time again, we hear of children lingering in foster care, bounced from home to home. In some cases, foster children have lived in more than 50 homes. This is unacceptable, and we will continue to work to improve this program so that all children can live with a family that loves them.

This legislation brings us one step closer to that important goal. It has widespread bipartisan support, and I urge all my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have before us today the Senate companion bill to the House version of the Promoting Safe and Stable Families and Child Welfare Services Improvement Act. We have put the Senate version on the House calendar to facilitate action. The Senate version is slightly different than our bill, but we want to move ahead as quickly as possible, so we are going to strike the Senate language and insert the Herger-McDermott language in its entirety. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

It is a pleasure to work with Mr. HERGER on this issue. In doing so, we work to protect our most vulnerable kids. Countless children across America need us to protect them from harm. In effect, the House today is fulfilling its obligation as first responders. For too many children, we are the first and the last line of defense.

Mr. HERGER and I have produced bipartisan legislation that takes a modest step forward in safeguarding vulnerable children. This bill is an attempt to find common ground so that together we can pursue the common goal for the future. Certainly more needs to be done, but every journey starts with the first step.

This legislation renews the program called Promoting Safe and Stable Families. This is a small but vital program that supports the States in their efforts to prevent child abuse from occurring or from reoccurring. We maintain the flexibility of the current program by allowing the States to use Federal money to provide a wide variety of family support, preservation, reunification services and foster care services, and we provide greater support to Native American tribes for these purposes.

We also recognize and support the courageous caregivers serving on the front lines. For the first time in 7 years, the bill provides new Federal funding to the States, $40 million, to help them meet the challenges for the future. The first is having the resources to enable monthly caseworker visits for children in foster care. The second is investing more in the child welfare workforce.

We know that more frequent interactions between case workers and foster kids leads to better outcomes. We also know that difficulties in recruiting and retaining qualified caseworkers negatively affects the safety and permanency for at-risk kids. In fact, the Government Accounting Office warned us in its report about the need for qualified by children when the average tenure of child care worker is less than 2 years. A lot of caring, dedicated caseworkers leave their job, not because they want to, but because they are forced to leave due to financial circumstances. We begin to address this issue in a bill with a $40 million downpayment. This shows, I think, that we mean business.

The legislation also makes changes in other child care support programs that have proven to be effective, and we want to keep them working to benefit kids and other families. Despite naysayers, government can be an instrument for good. Today in this bill we can prove it.
Again, I thank my colleague Mr. HERGER for his work. Working together, I think we have produced a good piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us today will provide nearly $4 billion for up-front child abuse prevention activities over the next 5 years; it will hold States accountable for visiting children in foster care on at least a monthly basis; it will continue funding for programs that help State courts address child welfare issues; and it will continue funding for programs that provide homes for children with a parent in prison.

Again, I would like to thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT) and all my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for their work in crafting this legislation. I believe it will take an important step towards improving our Nation’s child protection system.

Ms. HART. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5640, the Child and Family Services Improvement Act of 2006. This bipartisan legislation improves Child and Family Services by reauthorizing and improving the Promoting Safe and Stable Families, PSSF, program.

This legislation creates a new 10 percent limit on CWS spending for administrative expenses. This legislation reauthorizes the Court Improvement Act. The legislation reauthorizes through FY 2011 the current $10 million set-aside for general Court Improvement Program activities provided from PSSF funds. (Note: DRA also provided an additional $20 million for each of FYs 2006 through 2010 to improve data collection and increase training of court personnel.)

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the House amendments to the Child and Family Services Improvement Act, which include reauthorization of the Promoting Safe and Stable Families Program. I would like to thank the gentleman from California, Mr. HERGER, the chairman of our Human Resources subcommittee, and the gentleman from Washington, Mr. MCDERMOTT, for their work on this important legislation.

This program does just what it says: it promotes safe and stable families. The amendments before you today guarantee $40 million in funding to ensure that States are able to recruit, retain, and train highly qualified and skilled child welfare caseworkers. This funding is critically important. These amendments are exactly the same as H.R. 5640, which the Ways and Means Committee reported last month. The funding included in these amendments is crucial to making sure that foster children are provided with high level services and safe and stable placements.

A 2003 GAO report highlighted the importance of child welfare agencies being staffed with the very best caseworkers. The GAO found that when caseworkers are well trained and have manageable caseloads they are able to conduct frequent home visits to assess a child’s situation and ensure that child’s safety. Skilled caseworkers are also able to make well-supported decisions that lead to permanent placements of foster children in nurturing homes. However, when caseworker turnover is high, agencies are not able to meet federal safety and permanency goals. There is a very strong correlation between caseworker recruitment and retention and safety and permanency outcomes for children.

For example, the GAO report found:

In Texas, due to caseworker turnover, an investigation into alleged abuse was delayed by 3 months. By the time the caseworker was able to make a home visit, the abuse could not be substantiated and the child remained in that placement. Similar occurrences took place in other states at which the GAO looked.

Caseloads should not exceed 18 per case-worker, however the American Public Human Services Association, APHSA, data showed that workers were handling an average of 24 to 31 children each.
The use of methamphetamine in the United States is increasing at an alarming rate. Methamphetamine abuse has attacked communities across America and has also affected our community on Guam. It is important that we continue our work to aggressively combat methamphetamine abuse and its terrible effects on American families and our children.

I strongly support S. 3525 because it aids our fight against methamphetamine abuse and because it also serves to protect our nation's greatest resource and one of most vulnerable communities, our children. I urge my colleagues' support for S. 3525.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California (Mr. HERGER) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 3525, as amended.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. HERGER) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 3525, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to amend part B of title IV of the Social Security Act to temporarily increase funding for the program of temporary assistance for United States citizens returned from foreign countries, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETURNED AMERICANS PROTECTION ACT OF 2006

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5865) to amend section 1113 of the Social Security Act to temporarily increase funding for the program of temporary assistance for United States citizens returned from foreign countries, and for other purposes.

RETURNED AMERICANS PROTECTION ACT OF 2006

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Returned Americans Protection Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. TEMPORARY INCREASE IN FUNDING FOR THE PROGRAM OF TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE FOR UNITED STATES CITIZENS RETURNED FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

Section 1113 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1313(d)) is amended by striking "2003" and inserting "2006".

SEC. 3. REPORT BY THE INSPECTOR GENERAL.

Not later than March 1, 2007, the Inspector General of the Department of Health and Human Services, shall submit to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate a written report describing how funds made available to carry out section 1113 of the Social Security Act have been used to provide assistance to United States citizens returned to the United States on or after July 20, 2006, and before the most recent date covered by the report, after evacuation from Lebanon, including a breakdown of programs and expenses incurred with regard to repatriating individuals from Lebanon, including for (1) direct assistance to individuals (such as costs of domestic travel and short-term lodging), and (2) administrative costs (such as for caseworkers, security, and related expenses).

Section 1113 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1313) is amended by adding at the end of such section the following:

"(b) The authorities provided by this section shall expire on September 30, 2007.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. HERGER) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Returned Americans Protection Act, H.R. 5865. This legislation will help our Nation to continue to assist U.S. citizens fleeing the violence in Lebanon as they return home to the United States. In recent days, thousands of Americans have fled the violence in Lebanon. Thousands already have landed in the United States, and thousands more will be arriving in the coming days. In all, as many as 15,000 U.S. citizens may be returning.

State workers are prepared to assist them, helping join them with family or friends, and even make arrangements for their connecting travel. If the arriving citizen has no other resources, provisions will be made for a loan or, in exceptional circumstances, a grant to cover their continued travel expenses or temporary lodging costs, all of which costs money, including to reimburse States for caseworkers to offer this assistance.

In a program that is limited by a current $1 million cap on annual spending, experiencing this large influx of needy, especially at this time in the fiscal year, is a challenge. As the Secretary of Health and Human Services wrote in a letter to Speaker HASTERT dated just yesterday, "We need your assistance in lifting this cap as soon as possible."

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us, H.R. 5865, provides that assistance. It temporarily lifts the program's current $1 million funding cap, allowing for continued assistance for Americans returning from Lebanon. It also improves oversight over this little known program by making two additional steps.

First, it requires the HHS Inspector General to review program spending on those repatriated from Lebanon. The report will break down administrative costs versus costs for travel and lodging. That way, Congress will have more information about what this program actually does.

The second thing this legislation does to improve oversight is to sunset the current repatriation program at the end of fiscal year 2007, less than 13 months from now. This will provide Congress sufficient time to review the program and decide where improvements are needed.

This change also is estimated by the Congressional Budget Office as saving $1 million, fully offsetting the cost of the additional assistance to those evacuating Lebanon. So we will cover short-term needs and get better data that we will use to improve this program for the long run. That is a win-win for everyone.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill which pays for additional services by improved oversight. We should approve it. I call on the U.S. Senate to do the same as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, one of the good things the Federal Government does is provide a lifeline to American citizens who suddenly find themselves in grave danger. That is exactly what has happened to 25,000 American citizens in Beirut who had signed in at the embassy when the Middle East crisis erupted.

There were plenty of pictures on the evening news of Americans desperately trying to flee the conflict. Many were able to escape on chartered flights. When they arrive back in the United States, a government employee will meet them at the airport and ask whether they need any assistance, including help in securing and paying for connecting flights, temporary lodging, food, or medical assistance.

Many don't need much help, but some do. And an important, but little known, program of the Social Security Act enables us to help Americans who escape the conflict with their lives and little else.

This is government at its best: helping our citizens in a time of crisis, responding to and effectively to meet the needs of our people. We are doing more than watching a crisis unfold on television. We are actually helping American citizens. And the Republicans, for some strange reason, want to kill this program. So much for the common good.

Now, this program has worked effectively for a mere $1 million a year in funding. But the crisis in Lebanon has drained the fund, and the administration has requested a temporary increase to $6 million.

That is all it will take to make sure that Americans have a lifeline to reach our own citizens. But the Republicans intend to cut the lifeline. They will support an increase of $5 million to help Americans trying to flee a war, but only if the House kills the program. Americans remain trapped in the middle of war zones, and the Republicans cannot bring themselves to help without extracting a pound of flesh from ordinary Americans. They want to kill a $1 million program. This is with trillions of dollars in debt out there. And they claim they are cutting the deficit. They want to cut a lifeline to ordinary American citizens, because rich people won’t need the help and the rest of the American people don’t matter. We saw that same response in Hurricane Katrina, and we are seeing it here today. The philosophy of the Republicans that we should not prepare for a disaster is what made those awful pictures on television about Katrina; and they create the same thing here today, deliberately. They are using the program, they are saying, it is like the house is on fire, yes, we should give some gas to the fire truck, but after the fire is over, sell the truck, we don’t need it any more, we’ll never need it again.

Anybody who knows about what is going on in the world can imagine that we may need this program again. Americans are fleeing a war-torn nation, and it is perfectly all right for the Republicans with the notion that they are on their own. They intend to terminate the program at the end of it.

They terminated their concerns for Americans a long time ago. They are telling us the only way to save the program this year is to kill it next year. Exactly what American value are they addressing by cutting a lifeline to Americans trying to flee a war? Democrats are outraged by this Republican hostility to our own people.

With my colleagues SANDY LEVIN and BEN CARDIN, I introduced legislation yesterday that would simply provide a temporary increase in the repatriation program cap so that we can continue to help Americans leave Lebanon.

Now, there is no reason I can think of why that shouldn’t be done. But it is just too easy for our friends on the other side of the aisle. They want to pretend they are fighting government spending. This is a million dollars, folks. That is not a rounding error. That is precisely nothing compared to what they have done in tax cuts for the rich.

Of course that zeal applies to the $5 million, but it doesn’t apply to the $18.4 billion they gave to Halliburton, $5 billion of which nobody has any idea where it went. No oversight in this House on an issue like that. But on this, this $1 million, we can’t have that program.

And I know we are going to need it. Now, the next time the problem happens, the program won’t be there. We will have to come into the House in emergency session and create this program to help Americans get out of someplace that has become a war zone. This sums up the values of the Republican leadership. Big bucks for the big donors and not even pennies for everyone else. We can do better than that in this House. I think the Senate will send us a better bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5865, the Returned Americans Protection Act, provides emergency funding for the HHS repatriation program so it can assist U.S. citizens evacuating Lebanon after they return to the U.S.

That is exactly what HHS asked Congress to do in letters sent just yesterday to the Speaker and Senate majority leader. Instead of increasing the deficit, this legislation is fully paid for.

It pays for this emergency assistance through increased program oversight, in part by sunsetting the program after 2007.

It is totally appropriate for Congress to set a sunset date to ensure future program oversight. The 1996 welfare reform law did the same thing. It replaced the former AFDC program with the new TANF block grant program and only authorized the new program through fiscal year 2002.

The Child and Family Services Program Act of 2006, which the House agreed to just this morning, in bipartisan fashion, also does the same thing. It limits the authorization of the child welfare services program through only 2011, or for the next 5 years, instead of permanently, as under current law.

This was done and agreed to in bipartisan fashion by this House to ensure Congress reviews this program as it reviews the related Promoting Safe and Stable Families program, which also would authorize it through 2011.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to join me in passing this legislation today. H.R. 5865 will ensure that those arriving in America from the strife and turmoil in Lebanon will continue to have service available to help them as they make their way home.

It also ensures Congress time and opportunity to review the repatriation program and consider ways to improve it to even better meet the needs of displaced Americans in the future.

I would like to thank the dedicated staff at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, State workers supported by this program, and especially the many volunteers who have pitched in to help Americans returning home from Lebanon in recent days.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is sort of amusing to me that one minute Mr. HERGER and I can be working together, and the next minute we have little differences.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services, Mr. Leavitt, sent a letter up yesterday asking for this increase in financing. Nowhere in his letter does he say we ought to terminate it. They have a funding mechanism by which they think they have the money.

I am still a little independent, but sometimes I am when he is right. In this case I think we ought to keep the program. I really think that it is unusual that the theory gets out on the floor here that in order to have oversight over a program you have to kill it.

You don’t have to have the body. I mean, it isn’t like an autopsy. Sometimes you can do oversight on a living program, a program that is actually going on. Now maybe we need to kill the Halliburton program and just kill the whole $18 billion, then we can do oversight. But I think it would be much more reasonable to do oversight on a program that is going on.

I am just too easy for our friends on the other side of the aisle. They want to pretend they are fighting government spending. This is a $1 million dollars, in this sort of situation, given the kind of abuse that we have simply paid no attention to in the Halliburton situation.

I say while I think that we can agree that we need some more money in this program, I don’t think we want to just put ourselves in the situation of coming back one year from now and putting this program back in.

It may not be the same thing. We will change the name. But the effectiveness of putting it in the law was that people anticipated that there would be situations like this before.

We have had situations in Rwanda, we have had situations in the Middle East, we have had situations in the Mediterranean, we have had all kinds of places where Americans get caught in a cross-fire and we have to extricate them, and we make available some money, but take care of the other.

That is why this is a good idea and shouldn’t be ended simply as a way of saying we are controlling a national budget deficit of $5 trillion, or whatever it is. This is $1 million, guys. Come on.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, as sponsor of this bill, I support continuing to help the thousands of Americans fleeing the hostilities in Lebanon and returning to the safe confines of the United States.

On Sunday, July 23, 20 flights had rescued 3,890 U.S. citizens from Beirut and the surrounding area. Of those rescued Americans, hundreds received aid from the Health and Human Services, HHS, repatriation program after they arrived in the U.S., including 25 unaccompanied minors and 21 special needs cases—of which 12 were medical cases.

However, under current law, there is a $1 million spending cap on this program, which is close to being reached. Without legislative action, the repatriation program will no longer be able to provide aid to Americans in need.

There may be 10,000 more U.S. citizens repatriating from Lebanon in the coming days who might require assistance through this program.
The gentleman from California (Mr. McDermott). Mr. Speaker, I am hopeful that the Senate will consider this bill in short order so we can send it to the President for his signature.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is good policy that ensures the continuation of aid for Americans in need, while providing the opportunity to improve upon this program. It is timely and because of the ongoing situation in the Middle East, it is important that we act quickly.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting today’s bill and am hopeful that the Senate will consider this bill in short order so we can send it to the President for his signature.

"Sec. 314. Office of Interoperability and Compatibility.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I rise in support of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006.

I would especially like to commend Representative REICHERT for his authorship of this legislation. In addition, I want to recognize the efforts of both Chairman BARTON and Chairman KING in presenting this legislation for consideration on the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, without a doubt, this Nation has endured significant domestic tragedies in the past 5 years, and of course, 9/11 and Hurricane Katrina stand out as most catastrophic.

While both were catastrophic, the causes were very different. The former a profoundly evil terrorist act, and the latter a terrible act of nature. But there at least is one common lesson that we learned from both tragedies: We learned how critically important interoperable communications are for our Nation’s first responders during crisis regardless of the cause. It really is a matter of life and death.

At its heart, H.R. 5852 is designed to improve interoperable communications among our Nation’s first responders. Of course, this Congress has already paved the way for providing for an orderly digital television transition to be completed by February 17, 2009, at which point 24 megahertz of spectrum in the upper 700 megahertz band will be returned by the broadcasters and provided to first responders to facilitate interoperable radio communications. That spectrum is ideally suited for this purpose. Congress also earmarked $1 billion from upcoming spectrum auctions proceeds to assist State and local governments in procuring interoperable communications equipment.

But the legislation before us today mandates a National Emergency Communications Program to recommend goals and time frames for the achievement of redundant, sustainable, and interoperable emergency communications systems. It requires a baseline assessment of current emergency communications capabilities and periodic assessments on progress in filling existing gaps, and it accelerates the development of national voluntary consensus standards for emergency communications equipment. It requires State and local governments to establish effective statewide interoperable communication plans before being able to use DHS grant funds for emergency communications. It facilitates coordination on emergency communications by establishing regional working groups comprised of State, and local officials, first responders, and other relevant stakeholders. And it elevates the importance of emergency communications within the Department of Homeland Security, enhancing accountability and resources to ensure first responders on the ground that it can communicate with one another.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5852 is truly an excellent bill which builds on the work that this Congress has already done to ensure that our Nation’s first responders have the interoperable communications that they need to do their job of protecting our constituents in times of crisis. Again, I want to commend Representative REICHERT, Chairman BARTON, and Chairman KING for their excellent work. I would urge all of my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

While I do not oppose the substance of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006, I strongly oppose the process by which this bill has been brought to the floor today.

H.R. 5852 was introduced July 20, 5 days ago, and was referred to the Energy and Commerce Committee. The committee held no hearing, nor did the subcommittee or full committee ever mark up this bill. The last hearing the committee held on this issue was September 2005, and the focus was public safety communications after Hurricane Katrina. Now, a month before the anniversary of Hurricane Katrina, the majority party is bringing up a bill that is not nearly enough to help our first responders on the ground.

This is no way to bring public safety legislation to the floor, and this process does a disservice to all our public safety officers throughout America.

Since the bill was not subject to any hearings in the Energy and Commerce Committee, I will not spend a lot of time talking about the bill's substance. I will say that the Department of Homeland Security should have taken these steps months and years ago. This bill gives the Department of Homeland Security the ability to deny grants to States and localities that don't have interoperability plans completed and don't meet minimum standards.

Let me be clear. I support accountability for the money spent from the Department of Homeland Security grant programs. However, we have not heard from the States and localities, because they did not have a hearing on this bill. I suspect that some States and localities may consider these provisions to be unfunded mandates.

The bill calls for periodic baseline surveys on the level of interoperability across the country. I support efforts to measure our progress towards interoperable public safety communications; however, I have little faith that the Department of Homeland Security is going to complete these surveys. We heard in committee that while the first survey was supposed to be finished by 2005, the Department had only recently agreed on methodology and had no start time in mind.

A bill that holds DHS's feet to the fire is a good thing. The administration could certainly use some prodding.

DHS testified in September that it is the administration's goal to achieve interoperability within the next 20 years, by 2023. We don't have 20 years to become interoperable as a Nation. Our first responders are on the front lines in the war against terror today. They need the help now. Without adequate funding, the benchmarks and planning goals for this bill will not be implemented in our communities. Last year, the Republican Congress cut the DHS grant programs that fund interoperable communications by almost $600 million and slashed the Department of Justice interoperability program by $82 million, effectively eliminating it.

My colleagues may not know that this bill is based very closely on a bill introduced by my colleague, Ms. Lowey, which has the support of Democrats. There is one glaring difference. Ms. Lowey's bill would have established an interoperability grant program at the Department of Homeland Security to help our communities. In the closed doors of the Republican majority removed the grant program. No money, no program.

This has become a pattern of the majority: Take a good Democratic bill, copy it in theme only, rush it to the floor, and then quietly never fund the program. We have seen this time and time again.

Mr. Speaker, we ask more of our first responders than ever before. They are on the front lines in the war against terror. They must be prepared to respond to chemical disasters, rail disasters, natural disasters. We saw during 9/11 and Hurricane Katrina that public safety communications are critical in any scenario. Without adequate funding, the bill's worthy goals may never be achieved.

Are new interoperable radios more important than replacing out-of-date fire trucks or creating a meth crime task force that doesn't do much? Real choices that communities across this Nation must make every day, and they receive no help from Washington. Their choices are becoming harder and harder as the Bush administration and Republican budgets ask them to make more with less and less.

The real reason why I think the Republicans have brought the bill before us today is because they don't want to face any funding amendments that may come up. In committee last fall, I offered an amendment to create a $5.8 billion trust fund for first responder communications. My amendment failed on a tie vote. Homeland Security Committee Democrats have forced similar amendments into the bill on suspension today. Because the majority wants to avoid votes on amendments that would invest in public safety communication grants for our communities.

My colleagues should vote for this bill because it will bring some accountability to the Department of Homeland Security and focus more attention on the urgent need of interoperable communications. But my colleagues should not be under any false illusion that this bill will make it easier for first responders to communicate.

This bill will not provide the necessary interoperable equipment this country needs.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, at this point I would yield as much time as he may consume to Sheriff Reichert, the sponsor of this legislation and the chairman of the Emergency Preparedness Subcommittee.

Mr. REICHERT. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to rise in support as a sponsor of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006. Although
The Committee on Homeland Security did not just develop a bipartisan legislation overnight. Rather, it is the product of a series of hearings on the state of public safety emergency communications. I presided over these hearings as chairman of the Subcommittee on Emergency Preparedness, Science, and Technology, as well as held countless meetings on the topic with first responders, government officials, and other interested stakeholders. Last fall, Chairman King appointed me to serve on the Subcommittee on Emergency Preparedness Subcommittee. I know the importance of finding solutions to this problem. That is precisely why I made interoperability the subcommittee’s number one priority.

Until the events of September 11, 2001, many people in this Nation believed and assumed that first responders from different disciplines and jurisdictions could actually talk to each other. It wasn’t happening. It is still not happening today. Unfortunately, that is the case now, and, as demonstrated by the inadequate responses to Hurricane Katrina, that is not the case today. In fact, inability of first responders to communicate with one another effectively led to the loss of many lives in New Orleans and in other Gulf Coast communities. This is simply unacceptable. It is intolerable that our Nation’s law enforcement, fire service, and emergency medical services personnel still confront many of the same emergency communication problems that I did as a rookie cop when I started in 1972.

To many, the word “interoperability” means little. It is a little confusing term that police officers, firefighters, and first responders use. But I want to just share a personal story.

Back in the early 1970s when I was a deputy in a police car, I responded to a call where a young man 17 years old was high on drugs and alcohol, and he was able to gain access to his father’s .308 Winchester rifle and he came from his house and he began to shoot at the neighborhood. I was the first car to arrive. A shot was fired over my police car. He ran out the back door of his house. We lost him for a while. We were able to surround the area. I was one of the officers on the perimeter. My radio didn’t work, and a neighbor who saw the young man with the rifle pointed at three Seattle police officers who were coming to help the sheriffs office in the south end of the county called the neighbor across the street because she was afraid to leave her house. The neighbor across the street ran across the street to my police car and told me what was going on, because the person saw this young man ready to fire on three police officers. I grabbed my police radio and I tried to get through the communications center in Seattle. No one was answering me. A rifle pointed at three police officers, and I could not communicate back in 1974, 1975.

Three police officers’ lives are now in danger. The only choice I had was to holster my weapon because there were people in the house peeking out of the window, watching the young man with the rifle pointed at the police officers, and run across the yard. That is what I did. If that rifle would not work, ran across the yard, jumped on the back of the 17-year-old with the .308 Winchester rifle and now was in a fight for my life.

Interoperability is a life and death matter when it comes to matters to the police, firefighters and first responders working in our country today. As I said earlier, the legislation before us today is based on the record made during four separate hearings, and during those hearings, the subcommittee heard testimony from a wide variety of parties including first responders, public works, utilities, hospitals, State and local officials, standards-setting organizations, the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Commerce, the Federal Communications Commission, and other Federal Departments.

During these hearings, the witnesses identified the same problems over and over again. We heard about the lack of an accountable senior-level official in the Department of Homeland Security to oversee interoperability. When I first came here, I was told at one of my first hearings that the Federal Government has had the problem of interoperability for 10 years; and as I have just shared with you, we have been dealing with it as police officers for over 30 years. Something needs to be done, and it needs to be done now. The absence of national voluntary consensus standards to help State and local governments to make wise decisions when purchasing communications equipment is something we heard over and over again.

We also heard about the failure of the Department to condition the use of grant funds by State and local governments on approved statewide communications plans and the absence of effective coordination between Federal Departments with shared responsibility for emergency communications. H.R. 5852 will solve these and other problems that hinder the rapid deployment of interoperable emergency communications systems in our Nation. H.R. 5852 enjoys broad support from members of the Committee on Homeland Security. It is almost identical to the provisions of H.R. 5351, the National Emergency Management Reform and Enhancement Act of 2006, a comprehensive Katrina lessons-learned legislation that the Committee on Homeland Security passed 28-0.

Mr. Speaker, it is time for us to send a message to our Nation’s first responders that we support them in their efforts. Passage of H.R. 5852 would send such a message. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 5852.

Mr. Speaker, before I conclude, I will include in the RECORD at this point letters exchanged between the Committee on Homeland Security and the Committee on Science regarding jurisdiction over this bill, and I thank the Science Committee and the Energy and Commerce Committee for their input on this important legislation.

Hon. Peter T. King, Chairman, Committee on Homeland Security, Ford House Office Building, Washington, DC.

MR. KING. Dear Mr. Chairman: I am writing to you concerning the jurisdictional interest of the Science Committee in matters being considered in H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006. The Science Committee acknowledges the importance of H.R. 5852 and the need for the legislation to move expeditiously. Therefore, while we have a valid claim to jurisdiction over the bill, I agree not to request a sequential referral. This is based on our mutual understanding that nothing in this legislation or my decision to forgo a sequential referral waives, reduces or otherwise affects the jurisdiction of the Science Committee, and that a copy of this letter and your response will be included in the Congressional Record when the bill is considered on the House Floor.

The Science Committee also asks that you support our request to be conferred on any provisions over which we have jurisdiction during House-Senate conference on this legislation.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Sherwood Boehlert, Chairman.

DEAR Mr. SPEAKER: I yield myself 30 seconds to respond to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to respond to the gentleman from Washington.

I repeat, I know you have been in Congress for a limited amount of time, but there have been no hearings in the Energy and Commerce Committee on this committee with primary jurisdiction.

You talked about your law enforcement career. Well, back when you were... deputy in the early 1970s, I was a city police officer, went on to Michigan State Police, where I served until I was injured in the line of duty. I am the founder of the Law Enforcement Caucus, and I hope you will join our caucus someday.

Law enforcement and first responders, what we are doing here today is giving them false hope and promises. The gentleman from Washington claims interoperability is a life and death issue. Then let us fund interoperability and not put law enforcement with a death penalty because they did not get the equipment they need.

I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCARELL), the ranking member of the Energy Preparedness Subcommittee.

Mr. PASCARELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act.

As an original sponsor with my good friend Congressman REICHERT, this is long-overdue legislation. It is bipartisan legislation and really sends a message that the entire Congress of the United States that we can work together if we place the needs of our families and neighborhoods ahead of partisan politics.

When the 9/11 Commission released its final report, it found that the inability of our first responders to talk with each other and their commanders resulted in a loss of life. This is very, very important to America.

The Commission identified a problem that has been in existence, Mr. Speaker, for decades. It identified a problem that many policymakers have known for some time.

In fact, in 1996, 10 years ago, Congress asked a blue ribbon committee, the Public Safety Wireless Advisory Committee, to examine the issue of interoperable communications. It concluded 10 years ago that public safety agencies did not have the sufficient interoperable communications ability to do their jobs.

Five years later, on September 11, 2001, public safety officers were still ill-equipped in this regard. Now, this is unconscionable. Five years after the 9/11 catastrophe, the 30 major cities in the United States of America still cannot communicate.

In 2002, the National Task Force on Interoperability convened several meetings with national associations representing public safety officials to discuss the challenges of interoperable communications. They explicitly identified the key challenges that must be addressed if we are to move forward on the issue: incompatible aging equipment, fragmented planning in general, and a lack of coordination and cooperation from all the different stakeholders.

So we have known about the problems that exist, Mr. Speaker. Many have talked about the possible remedies. Yet many in Congress sit, after 9/11, after Katrina, wondering why no real progress has been made.

And although I may take difference with my good friend and brother from Michigan, his point must be well taken, that these cannot be empty commitments. We must fund the very process that we have identified and voted on.

The bottom line is that H.R. 5852 will improve the capability of first responders to communicate during times of emergencies. I am proud to work with a bipartisan allotment of Members. We have had heard before to say that one of the major problems in this Congress is jurisdiction and we have not addressed that, and I hope that we can do this and not air our linen. I hope that we can come to agreement, but the fact is that homeland security is at the center of the stage in trying to make a terrible situation much better.

In an era when information can be sent instantaneously anywhere, it is utterly nonsensical that our Nation’s police, the fire, and the EMS personnel cannot consistently communicate with each other.

First, this bill elevates the importance of improved emergency communications. For the first time, we are going to finally have a central office within the Department of Homeland Security that does just that. We will create an Office of Emergency Communications within the Department where the Assistant Secretary for Emergency Communications is directed to force the development of interoperable emergency communications capabilities by States and territorial, local and tribal and public safety agencies. This is absolutely critical.

Elevating the status and standing, that standing of interoperability, within the Department is a key first step to ensuring the Department focuses at the proper time, has the staff, has the resources.

This office will be charged with a variety of long-overdue critical endeavors, including preparing a baseline report.

H.R. 5852 ensures that the appropriate staffing and resources are available to carry out the obligations charged.

Mr. Speaker, our legislation compels the Department of Homeland Security to create a national emergency communications plan. Common sense must prevail here. This bill, I know, does not address the grant funding; but it is interesting to note, and I would ask my brothers and sisters on both sides of the aisle just to listen to this one statement that I have if you listen to nothing else: a one-time expenditure, equivalent to 3 days of what we spend in the Iraq war, will do one thing. It will pay for making emergency radio systems interoperable 5 years after 9/11.

This bill is important, Mr. Speaker. This bill affects every American.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. McCaul).

Mr. McCaul of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Chairman REICHERT for his outstanding leadership on this important piece of legislation, which, in my view, will ultimately save lives.

Following Hurricanes Katrina and Rita last year, the Nation witnessed emergency response problems at all levels of government, especially with interoperability between first responders. After Katrina and Rita, like on September 11, first responders and military personnel on the scene could not communicate effectively with each other.

This crucial piece of legislation will work to improve interoperability for our first responders by bolstering the national standards for emergency communications equipment. The bill also gives incentives to the States to improve their emergency communications plans and creates regional working groups to help Federal first responders better coordinate with their State and local counterparts.

Prior to coming to Congress, I served as chief of terrorism and national security in the U.S. Attorney’s office in Texas. I also led the joint terrorism task force charged with detecting, detecting, and preventing activity. I have worked with first responders for most of my professional career and have learned through experience that the ability to communicate between the Federal, State and local levels means saving lives, whether it is a terrorist attack or destruction at the hands of Mother Nature.

The time to fix and improve communications for our first responders is now, and I urge my colleagues to vote for this important bill.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, can you tell us how much time we have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) has 8½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON) has 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. THOMPSON), a former first responder and a volunteer firefighter for 26 years.

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in support of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006.

As the ranking member of the House Committee on Homeland Security, I am proud to be an original cosponsor of this legislation. This bill amends the Homeland Security Act of 2002 to enhance and improve the capability of first responders to communicate during times of emergency. It does so by improving the coordination of Federal, State, territorial, local and tribal governments as it relates to voice, data and other emerging technologies.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Homeland Security has heard from more than 25 witnesses in the more than six hearings held on the interoperability challenges of emergency communications. We heard from Governors, mayors, first responders, emergency support responders, the heads of Federal agencies with responsibilities for promulgating emergency communications capabilities, as well as experts in the technology sectors of interoperable emergency communications.

All in all, Mr. Speaker, the message from the witnesses was twofold: the need for leadership and funding for the deployment of interoperable emergency communications systems.

Today, Congress has finally decided to show one of these two things by placing this legislation on the calendar. The timing, days before Members go home before the August recess and only a couple of months before fall elections, does not escape me.

Despite the convenience of timing, I am grateful that we are moving forward and finally are doing something to help the men and women on the front lines of our homeland security efforts. This has been a long time coming.

When Air Florida Flight 90 crashed in the Potomac Basin in Washington, D.C. on January 13, 1982, Congress learned that there were no provisions for communication interoperability in place.

On April 19, 1995, when the white supremacist and homegrown terrorist Timothy McVeigh rammed his flammable truck into the Murrah Federal Building in downtown Oklahoma City, the post-investigation revealed that the 117 local, State, and Federal agencies, with more than 1,500 personnel on the scene, were forced to rely on runners to disseminate critical, time-sensitive information.

Congress must respond. Now, in less than a month, this Nation will mark the fifth anniversary of September 11, 2001. On that fateful day, Americans learned that the Nation was vulnerable and unprepared for an attack that killed almost 3,000 people. Among the dead were 343 New York City Fire Department firefighters and 23 New York City Police Department officers.

As a volunteer firefighter of 26 years, Mr. Speaker, my heart dropped when I heard of the radio communication failures of that day. Lack of interoperable communication impeded a lot of help that could have gone to those individuals.

Four years later, Mr. Speaker, as Hurricane Katrina and Rita struck the gulf coast, the same story emerged. Firefighters, police, and rescue personnel along the gulf coast didn’t have the means to communicate.

This legislation will move us closer to fixing the interoperability crisis facing our Nation. As I noted earlier, leadership is only half the solution for the interoperability challenge. All over this country, here today will be for naught if we do not provide funding for the development and deployment of a nationwide emergency communication system. My colleague, Representative Nita Lowey of New York, has repeatedly raised this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the passage of this legislation.

In less than two months, this Nation will mark the fifth anniversary of the Al Qaida’s attack on the United States. On Tuesday, September 11, 2001, millions of Americans watched in shock and horror as American Airlines Flight 11 and United Airlines Flight 77 torpedoed into the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in New York City at 8:46 AM and 9:20 AM respectively. Within 17 minutes, the public learned that American Airlines Flight 77 smashed into the Pentagon. Twenty-six minutes later, United Airlines Flight 93 plummeted into a field in Shanksville, PA after passengers attempted to deter the terrorists’ attempt to fly the plane to Washington, D.C.

Today, Congress has finally decided to show one of these two things by placing this legislation on the calendar. The timing, days before Members go home before the August recess and only a couple of months before fall elections, does not escape me.
provide technical assistance to state and local governments; and, develop a plan to ensure the operability of the Federal governments communications systems.

The legislation would require the Secretary to report to Congress on the resources and staff needed to operate the national and regional emergency communications networks. The Secretary would also be required to report to Congress on the recommendations of the Office of Emergency Communications not later than 60 days after the enactment of the bill. Within 30 days of the Secretary's report to Congress, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) is to review, assess, and report on the findings submitted by the Secretary.

The bill would also call a National Emergency Communications Strategy to expedite an effective nationwide emergency communications system and conduct a national inventory of the channels, frequencies, and the types of communication systems and equipment. The plan would also identify and make recommendations regarding both short-term and long-term obstacles and solutions to achieving emergency communication capabilities at all levels of government; set goals and timeframes for achieving nationwide emergency communication capabilities; and, accelerate the development of national standards for emergency communications equipment.

To improve the accountability and good governance, State and local governments would be required to achieve effective statewide interoperable communications plans before being able to use Department of Homeland Security grant funds for emergency communications. The Department's grant guidelines would also have to be coordinated and consistent with the goals of the national strategy for emergency communications.

Finally, this legislation would establish an Emergency Communications Preparedness Center to act as a clearinghouse for the Federal Government's efforts to achieve nationwide interoperability; ensure cooperation among the relevant departments and agencies to implement the goals of the emergency communications strategy; and, prepare and submit to Congress, on an annual basis, a strategic assessment regarding efforts of Federal departments and agencies to implement the emergency communications strategy.

The 21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006 will take substantial steps to provide the leadership that is needed on emergency communication. I hope this Congress moves quickly to pass this bill.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY), who really wrote this legislation. I want to include a number of let- ters as part of the RECORD: Two from Chairman BAREFOOT, one from Mr. BOEHNER and one from Mr. YOUNG.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, who has the ability to close? The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) has the right to close.

Mr. STUPAK. How much time do we have remaining? The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) has 1/2 minutes remaining.

Mr. STUPAK. I yield 30 seconds to Mr. PASCHELL.

Mr. PASCHELL. Mr. Speaker, I think that those who have come before us today have highlighted how critical this legislation is to the American people. In the Subcommittee on Science, Technology and Emergency Preparedness for our police, our fire and EME, I believe that unless the Homeland Security Department puts more emphasis and boots on the ground than those people who are there every day and every night, that we are never going to get this right in protecting America.

This bill seeks to do that, and, hopefully, within a very short period of time, we will look and find the funding, and I have suggested one place today, so that we will take care of those needs of homeland security and protecting our families.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, Democrats on this side, we will support the bill. It does create some accountability at the Department of Homeland Security. It will provide the cities and counties with guidance and standards 5 years after 9/11. But the real critical need is, we need funding.

Public safety interoperability should be an urgent priority for this country. As a former police officer, I understand clearly the importance of adequate funding for homeland security programs. The bill solves half the problem. We create the standards, but there is no funding. Let's provide funding and not continue to give false hope to our first responders that interoperability will finally arrive. It will never arrive until we provide adequate funding.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time, and at this point I want to include a number of letters as part of the RECORD: Two from Chairman BAREFOOT, one from Mr. BOEHNER and one from Mr. YOUNG.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time, and at this point I want to include a number of letters as part of the RECORD: Two from Chairman BAREFOOT, one from Mr. BOEHNER and one from Mr. YOUNG.
I will include your letter and this response in the Congressional Record during consideration on the House floor.

Sincerely,

JOE BARTON,
Chairman.

H. R. 5852 creates an Office of Emergency Communications within the Department of Homeland Security to do outreach, provide technical assistance and coordinate a national response capability that can provide backup services for lost local and regional services.

But I believe that with any legislation, if proper procedure were followed, this could be a better bill.

I see the most glaring omission is that there is no new money to aid our states and localities. In the digital television transition provisions of the Budget Resolution, we included $1 billion for Interoperability equipment grants to states and localities. We knew at the time that $1 billion is a drop in the bucket. The estimates are more in the $15 to $20 billion range.

And before someone stands up and claims that I am just a Democrat looking to spend more money without having a way to pay for it, let me be clear—the Bush tax cuts are why the federal government doesn’t have the resources it needs to fully fund programs such as this. Reverse the Bush tax cuts and it will be a lot healthier among us so that we can secure our country.

So I rise in support of the bill, but believe that it could be better and urge my Chairman to convey these hearings on this vital matter.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5852, the 21st Century Emergency Communications Act.

This legislation would create a new emergency communications office within the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to develop a standardized radio system for first-responders during disasters.

Two years ago, the 9/11 Commission recommended placing all first-responders on the same radio frequencies to facilitate communications.

Similar provisions to this legislation are included in legislation CAROLYN MALONEY and I have introduced, H.R. 1794, the 9/11 Can You Hear Me Now Act. This legislation would instruct DHS to provide the New York Fire Department (FDNY) with a communication system that must be capable of operating in all locations and under the circumstances we know firefighters face and will continue to face when responding to an emergency in New York City.

Under the bill, a communication system including three components—radios, dispatch system and a supplemental communication device—would be required to work in all buildings and in all parts of the city, something that the radios unbelievably do not do now. This bill could and should serve as an example for what needs to be done on a Federal level.

Two years ago, the 9/11 Commission report on the 9/11 Implementation of the 9/11 Commission Report Act, H.R. 5017 brings renewed focus to the core recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and holds the Administration and relevant executive agencies accountable to carry out and document the successful implementation of the 9/11 Commission Report’s policy goals.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5852, the “21st Century Emergency Communications Act of 2006.” I support H.R. 5852 because it will improve the capability of first responders to communicate during times of emergency by improving the coordination of among Federal, State, territorial, local and tribal governments as it relates to voice, data, and other emerging technologies. I support H.R. 5852 for several reasons:

1. Elevates the importance of improved emergency communications by creating, for the first time, a central office within the Department for the administration and policy consideration for emergency communications.

H.R. 5852 creates an Office of Emergency Communications within the Department Homeland Security headed by an Assistant Secretary for Emergency Communications responsible for developing interoperable emergency communications capabilities by State, territorial, local, tribal, and public safety agencies. Among other things, the Office of Emergency Communications will:

Prepare a baseline report that provides a “snapshot” of the current state of emergency communications capabilities;

Follow-up with periodic assessment reports regarding Federal efforts to address existing gaps and identify best-practices models;

Coordinate the capability to deploy backup communications services in the event of system failures during an emergency;

Create regional working groups made up of public and private sector emergency communication experts that would assess and report on the state of emergency communication networks nationwide;

Provide technical assistance to State and local governments; and,

Develop a plan to ensure the operability of the Federal Government’s communications systems.

2. Ensures appropriate staffing and resources commitment to improve emergency communication capabilities.

H.R. 5852 requires the Secretary to report to Congress on the resources and staff necessary to carry out the responsibilities of the Office of Emergency Communications not later than 60 days after the enactment of the bill. Within 30 days of the Secretary’s report to Congress, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) is to review, assess, and report on the findings submitted by the Secretary of Homeland Security.

3. Compels DHS to create a national emergency communications plan and inventory of the Nation’s emergency communications systems and capabilities.

H.R. 5852 mandates a national inventory of the channels, frequencies, and the types of communication systems and equipment. The plan must:

Identify and make recommendations regarding short-term and long-term obstacles and solutions to achieving emergency communication capabilities at all levels of government;

Set goals and timeframes for achieving nationwide emergency communication capabilities; and Accelerate the development of national standards for emergency communications equipment.

4. Seeks accountability regarding the use of DHS funds and governance.

H.R. 5852 requires State and local governments to establish effective statewide interoperable communications plans before being able to use DHS grant funds for emergency communications. In addition, H.R. 5852 requires that the Department’s grant guidelines are coordinated and consistent with the goals of the national plan for emergency communications.

H.R. 5852 establishes an Emergency Communications Preparedness Center to act as a clearinghouse for the Federal Government’s efforts to achieve nationwide interoperability; ensure cooperation among the relevant departments and agencies to implement the goals of the emergency communications strategy, and prepare and submit to Congress, on an annual basis, a strategic assessment regading efforts of Federal departments and agencies to implement the emergency communications strategy.

For these reasons, I support H.R. 5852 and urge my colleagues to support it also.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. UPTON) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5852.

The question was taken.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

ADAM WALSH CHILD PROTECTION AND SAFETY ACT OF 2006

Mr. SENSENBRINNER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill (H.R. 4472) to protect children, to secure the safety of judges, prosecutors, law enforcement officers, and their family members, to reduce and prevent gang violence, and for other purposes.

(2) Megan Nicole Kanka, who was 7 years old, was abducted, sexually assaulted, and murdered in 1994, in New Jersey. (3) Pam Lynchner, who was 31 years old, was attacked by a career offender in Houston, Texas. (4) Jetseta Gage, who was 10 years old, was kidnapped, sexually assaulted, and murdered in 2005, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. TITLE V—CHILD PORNOGRAPHY PREVENTION

SEC. 501. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(I) The effect of the interstate production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography on the interstate market in child pornography.

(A) The illegal production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography, as defined in section 2256(8) of title 18, United States Code, as well as the transfer of custody of children for the production of child pornography, is harmful to the physical, emotional, and mental health of the children depicted in child pornography and has a substantial and detrimental effect on society as a whole.

(B) A substantial interstate market in child pornography exists, including not only a multimillion dollar industry, but also a nationwide network of individuals openly advertising their desire to exploit children and to traffic in child pornography. Many of these individuals distribute child pornography with the expectation of receiving additional child pornography in return.

(C) The interstate market in child pornography is carried on to a substantial extent through the mails and other instruments of interstate and foreign commerce, such as the Internet. The advent of the Internet has greatly increased the ease of transporting, distributing, receiving, and advertising child pornography in interstate commerce with the aid of digital cameras and digital video cameras, as well as videotape cameras, has greatly increased the ease of producing child pornography. The advent of inexpensive equipment with the capacity to store large numbers of digital images of child pornography has greatly increased the ease of possessing child pornography. Taken together, these circumstances have had the unfortunate result of greatly increasing the interstate market in child pornography.

(D) Insubrate incidents of production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography, as well as the transfer of custody of children for the production of child pornography, have a substantial and direct effect upon interstate commerce because—

(i) Some persons engaged in the production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography conduct such activities entirely within the boundaries of one state, are likely to be content with the amount of child pornography they produce, transport, distribute, receive, advertise, or possess. These persons are therefore unlikely to enter the interstate market in child pornography in search of additional child pornography, thereby stimulating demand in the interstate market in child pornography.

(ii) When persons described in subparagraph (D)(i) enter the interstate market in search of additional child pornography, they are likely to distribute the child pornography they already produce, transport, distribute, receive, advertise, or possess to persons who will distribute additional child pornography to them, thereby stimulating supply in the interstate market in child pornography.

(iii) Much of the child pornography that supplies the interstate market in child pornography is produced entirely within the boundaries of one state, is not traceable, and enters the interstate market surreptitiously. This child pornography supports demand in the interstate market in child pornography and is essential to its existence.

(E) Prohibiting the interstate production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography, as well as the interstate transfer of custody of children for the production of child pornography, will cause some persons engaged in such interstate activities to cease all such activities, thereby reducing both supply and demand in the interstate market for child pornography.

(F) Pedophiles described in incidents of the production, transportation, distribution, receipt, advertising, and possession of child pornography, as well as the interstate transfer of children for the production of child pornography, is essential to the effective control of the interstate market in child pornography.

(G) The importance of protecting children from repeat exploitation.

(A) The vast majority of child pornography prosecutions today involve images contained on computer hard drives, computer disks, and related media.

(B) Child pornography is not entitled to protection under the First Amendment and thus may be prohibited.

(C) The government has a compelling State interest in protecting children from those who sexually exploit them, and this interest extends to stamping out the vice of child pornography at all levels in the distribution chain.

(D) Every instance of viewing images of child pornography represents a renewed violation of the privacy of the victims and a repetition of their abuse.

(E) Child pornography constitutes prima facie contraband, and may be distinguished from other contraband by the victims.

(F) It is imperative to prohibit the reproduction of child pornography in criminal cases so as to avoid repeated violation and abuse of victims, so long as the government makes reasonable accommodations for the inspection, viewing, and examination of (or any combination thereof) for the purposes of mounting a criminal defense.

SEC. 628. GRANTS FOR RAPE, ABUSE & INCEST NATIONAL NETWORK.

(a) FINDING.—The Congress finds as follows:

(1) More than 200,000 Americans each year are victims of sexual assault, according to the Department of Justice.

(2) In 2004, 1 American was sexually assaulted every 2.5 minutes.

(3) One of every 6 women, and 1 of every 133 men, are raped in their lifetime, and victims who become involved in criminal investigations or other legal matters are more likely to report their rape to law enforcement officials.

(4) The Federal Bureau of Investigation ranks sexual assault as the 4th most serious violent crime in the United States, trailing only murder, aggravated assault and robbery.

(5) The Federal Government, through the Victims of Crime Act, Violence Against Women Act, and other laws, has long played a role in providing services to sexual assault victims and in seeking policies to increase the number of rapists brought to justice.

(6) Research suggests that sexual assault victims who receive counseling support are more likely to report their attack to the police and to participate in the prosecution of the offender.

(7) Due in part to the combined efforts of law enforcement officials at the local, State, and Federal level, as well as the efforts of the Rape, Abuse & Incest National Network (RAINN) and other organizations, the number of reported sexual assaults has fallen by more than half since 1994.

(8) RAINN, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit corporation headquartered in the District of Columbia, has since played a significant role in decreasing the number of sexual assaults and educating the public about sexual assault prevention, prosecution, and recovery.

(9) RAINN established and continues to operate the National Sexual Assault Hotline, a free, confidential telephone hotline that provides help, 24 hours a day, to victims nationally.

(10) More than 1,100 local rape crisis centers in the 50 States and the District of Columbia partner with RAINN and are members of the National Sexual Assault Hotline network (which has helped more than 970,000 people since its inception in 1994).

(11) To better serve victims of sexual assault, 80 percent of whom are under age 18, RAINN will soon begin the National Sexual Assault Online Hotline, the web’s first secure hotline service offering live help 24 hours a day.

(12) The Department of Justice have given RAINN funding to conduct its crucial work.

(13) RAINN is a national model of public-private partnerships; matching private sector funds to match congressional appropriations and receiving extensive private in-kind support, including advanced technology provided by the communications industries to launch the National Sexual Assault Hotline and the National Sexual Assault Online Hotline.

(14) Worth magazine selected RAINN as one of “America’s 100 Best Charities,” in recognition of the organization’s “efficiency and effectiveness.”

(15) In fiscal year 2005, RAINN spent more than 91 cents of every dollar received directly on program services.

(16) The demand for RAINN’s services is proving dramatic, as evidenced by the fact that in 2005, the National Sexual Assault Hotline helped 137,039 people, an all-time record.

(17) The programs sponsored by RAINN and its local affiliates demonstrated a 22 percent increase in the percentage of victims who report their rape to law enforcement.

(18) According to the poll, 92 percent of American women said that fighting sexual and domestic violence should be a top public policy priority (a higher percentage than chose health care, child care, or the environment).

(19) Authorizing Federal funds for RAINN’s national programs would promote continued progress with this interstate problem and would make a significant difference in the prosecution of rapists and the overall incidence of sexual violence.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin.

GENERAL LEAF

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on H.R. 4472, currently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I had a lengthy statement that I wanted to put in the RECORD, but we have a lot of demands for speakers, so I will be brief and include the full statement in the RECORD under general leave.

I rise in strong support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006. The continued vulnerability of America’s children to sexual predators is a national tragedy that demands strong congressional action. During the 109th Congress, the House has twice passed broad child safety legislation. The Walshes channeled the grief of losing their son Adam to sexual predators to the goal of preventing other children from being victimized.

The bill also increases criminal penalties for sex offenders who fail to comply with these enhanced registration and data sharing requirements to ensure that law enforcement agencies in America’s communities know where sex offenders live and work, and to provide stiff criminal penalties for sex offenders who fail to comply with these enhanced registration requirements. This legislation would make it crystal clear to sex offenders: You better register, you better keep that registration current, or you are going to jail.

The bill also increases criminal penalties to punish and deter those who prey on children, and it authorizes important grant programs that will help ensure the safety of our Nation’s children.

Mr. Speaker, 25 years ago, John and Reve Walsh suffered the devastating loss of their 6-year-old son, Adam, who was abducted and murdered by a child predator. With courage and determination, the Walshes channeled the grief of their son’s loss into a national campaign to spare other families from ever facing the pain they will always endure.

And I would just like to point out that in the well, there is a picture of this darling child who was brutally murdered.

The quarter century of sacrifice has made America’s children safer, and it is in the memory of their son Adam that this legislation is named.

Mr. Speaker, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 represents the most comprehensive Federal child safety legislation ever considered by this House. It reflects this body’s holiest commitment yet to protecting America’s children against sexual predators.

I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on the motion to suspend the rules and send this vital and historic legislation to the President’s desk for his signature.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006.

Adam Walsh, Jacob Wetterling, Megan Nicole Kanka, Pam Lychner, Jetseta Gage, Dru Still, Jessica Lunsford, Sarah Lunde, Amy Zyla, Christy Fornoff, Alexandra Nicole Zapp, Polly Klaas, Jimmy Ryce, Bracia Brucia, Amanda Brown, Molly Bish, Elizabeth Smart, Samantha Runnion. The names of these innocent victims are seared into the national consciousness but only represent a fraction of children victimized by violent sexual offenders. Their names comprise a roll call of insufferable loss and a call to national action—the injustice of each assault compounded by the cruel recognition that it might have been prevented.

There are over a half million sex offenders in the United States and up to 100,000 offenders are unregistered and their locations unknown to the public and law enforcement. H.R. 4472 contains strict national offender registration and data sharing requirements to ensure that law enforcement agencies in America’s communities know where sex offenders live and work, and to provide stiff criminal penalties for sex offenders who fail to comply with these enhanced registration requirements.

By requiring national registration obligations, regular updates, frequent in-person verification, and providing tough and targeted criminal penalties, we intend to make one thing clear to sex offenders across this country—you better register, and you better keep the information current, or you are going to jail.

The Walshes channeled the grief of their son’s loss into a national campaign to spare other families from ever facing the pain they will always endure.
In addition to vital improvements to the sex offender registry, the bill increases criminal penalties to punish and deter those who prey on children. These tough new provisions include: the death penalty for the murder of a child; a mandatory minimum of 25 years in jail for kidnapping or maiming a child; and a 30-year mandatory minimum for having sex with a child under 12 or sexually assaulting a child between 13 and 17 years old. The bill would also make an alien’s failure to register a deportable offense and bar convicted alien sex offenders from having family-based petitions approved.

In order to better protect America’s children against the growing threat of online sexual predators, the Adam Walsh Act establishes a 20-year mandatory jail sentence for members of a child exploitation enterprise, provides a 10-year consecutive mandatory penalty for any sex offender who commits an offense against a child, authorizes additional resources to prosecute child pornographers, and expands civil remedies for sexual offenses against children. The bill also provides new grant programs to combat sexual abuse of children, authorizes new crime prevention campaigns, child fingerprinting campaigns, and establishes a national registry of substantiated child abuse cases.

Mr. Speaker, 25 years ago, John and Reve Walsh lost their 6-year-old son Adam, who was abducted and murdered by a child predator. With courage and determination, the Walshes channeled the grief of their son’s loss into a national campaign to spare other families from ever facing the pain they always endure. During the 109th Congress, the House has twice passed broad child safety legislation in September, 2005, and in March of this year. I commend the other body for recognizing the importance of following the House’s lead to address this issue.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation benefited greatly from the efforts of many Members of this body. I wish to thank my colleague from Wisconsin, Mr. GREEN, for his efforts to further strengthen this legislation by requiring States to include juvenile sex offenders in these registries. The Chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime, Mr. COBLE, as well as Representatives FOLEY, CHABOT, PENCE, HARRIS, GILLMOR, POE, BROWN-WAITE, CRAMER, GRAVES, and PROMEROY also deserve recognition for their important contributions to this bipartisan legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 represents the most comprehensive Federal child safety legislation ever considered by this House. It reflects this body’s boldest commitment yet to protecting America’s most vulnerable and precious members—our children—against sexual offenders. I urge my colleagues to send this vital and historic legislation to the President’s desk for his signature.

Finally, I would like to pay respect to just some of the victims who really helped with this bill: Mark and Amy Zyla from my State of Wisconsin, who have been tireless advocates in support of this bill; Linda Walker, the mother of Dru Sjodin; Mark Lunsford; Erin Runnion; Marc Klass; Polly Franks, Patty Wetterling; and last but not least—really, really, we can never thank them enough—John and Rev Walsh.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the crimes committed against the children named in the bill, those not named, and the suffering of their families is a tragedy for all of us, yet this does not release us from the responsibility to legislate on a sound and reasoned basis. I believe the situation is serious and grave enough to warrant a bill that is based on approaches that have been proven to reduce this scourge in our society, not on sound bites that will merely pander to our emotions.

This bill focuses on establishing a national sex offender registry and an Internet posting system for the public to allegedly track the whereabouts of convicted and released sex offenders, and it also includes a number of gratu- itious provisions, such as eight additional and duplicative Federal death penalties and 11 new Federal mandatory minimum sentences.

Virtually all of the death penalty cases, as with most criminal cases, are State cases. The cases referenced by children named in this bill, because of the grave tragedies they have suffered, are all State offenses, and I don’t believe a single one of them would have been covered by Federal law. But I think all the Federal cases, you would think that all of them would be Federal cases from the provisions in the bill.

Mr. Speaker, we recently increased Federal sex offenses penalties in the PROTECT Act with mandatory minimums of at least 5 years and some up to mandatory life, even in cases involving consensual sex between teenagers. And these increases came right after the Sentencing Commission had already increased penalties for sex offenses at the direction of Congress. And all of these increases were Federal cases based on the crime, and the political appeal of striking out harshly against offenders.

But because of the few cases that are actually under Federal jurisdiction, they will primarily affect Native Americans on reservations, because all of their cases come under Federal jurisdiction. There is no evidence that Native American offenders warrant any harsher treatment than any other offenders.

Now, with no more basis than we had before, just the name of the crime and the continuing political appeal of appearing tough on sex offenders, we are again greatly increasing penalties with more death penalties and increased mandatory minimums, including more mandatory minimums for teenagers having consensual sex.

Now, we can all agree that 35, 45-year-old or even older persons, enticing or transporting a minor across State lines, for engage in sexual activity is despicable and should be severely punished. However, the mandatory minimum sentences in this bill include the
Mr. SENSENBERGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Members, I rise in favor of the Adam Walsh Child Protection Safety Act. In my opinion, the jury is out as to whether pornography is a sex crime, but the studies that have been conducted indicate that the registries do not have any effect in reducing sex crimes. And I have seen no study that suggests that the policy of posting the name of juvenile delinquents, as this bill does, on the Internet, serves any constructive purpose.

A few years ago, in Georgia, involving an interracial couple, a teenager got 10 years for having consensual sex with his teenage girlfriend. The problem with mandatory minimums is that they defy common sense. If you deserve the mandatory minimum, you can get it. If it violates common sense, you have to get it anyway.

Many studies have shown that mandatory minimums wasted taxpayers’ money, are unfairly applied to minorities, and violate common sense. The jury is out as to whether publicly accessible sex offender registers will have any beneficial effect on reducing sex crimes, but the studies that have been conducted indicate that the registries do not have any effect in reducing sex crimes. And I have seen no study that suggests that the policy of posting the name of juvenile delinquents, as this bill does, on the Internet, serves any constructive purpose.

Of course, programs and grants to assist children and to provide the type of sex offender treatment that studies have been shown that can cut recidivism in half are not in this bill.

And so, Mr. Speaker, unlike most of my colleagues we will hear from today, I believe that we can do better than this bill to effectively address the scourge of child sexual assault. Most of the criminals affected by the mandatory minimums in this bill deserve the punishment in the bill, but they would have gotten it anyway under present law. A 10-year mandatory minimum for consensual prom night activities does not make sense.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBERGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Members, I rise in favor of the Adam Walsh Child Protection Safety Act. In my opinion, the jury is out as to whether pornography is a sex crime, but the studies that have been conducted indicate that the registries do not have any effect in reducing sex crimes. And I have seen no study that suggests that the policy of posting the name of juvenile delinquents, as this bill does, on the Internet, serves any constructive purpose.

Mr. SENSENBERGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. PENCE).

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding and I thank him from my heart, as a dad of three small children, for Chairman Jim SENSENBERGREN, once again, tenaciously achieving measurable gains in the law to protect our families and protect our children in the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act.

Mr. Speaker, before us today is the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (H.R. 4472). I am a strong supporter of this legislation, and urge and command Chairman SENSENBERGREN for tenaciously acting measurably for families and children again.

Title V of this legislation is derived from a bill that I introduced in Congress, the first session, the Child Pornography Prevention Act. As the title states, the intent of my legislation is to prevent American children from becoming victims of pornography because, as we know, child pornography is the fuel that fires the wicked hearts of child predators, in addition to abusing the children involved.

A main tenet of my bill is the additional language that will fix a technicality that so-called home pornographers have used to evade Federal prosecutions, and it is in this legislation.

Another element of my bill is the addition of a new section to the criminal code, section 2257(a) which adds a record-keeping requirement that will force producers of sexually explicit material to keep records of the names and ages of their subjects when they are engaged in simulated sexual activity, another measurable gain in the fight for children.

Providing law enforcement with the tools to combat child pornography contained in this legislation is a much-needed and overdue step that must be taken to protect our kids from those in society who have no decency, no conscience and no shame.

I urge passage of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 today. Thanks to the leadership of the Judiciary Committee Chairman Jim SENSENBERGREN, we take a giant step toward doing just that.

Mr. Speaker, before us today is the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (H.R. 4472). I am a strong supporter of this legislation, and urge and command Chairman SENSENBERGREN for tenaciously acting measurably for families and children again.
A main tenet of my legislation is the addition of language that will fix a technicality that so-called home pornographers have used to evade federal prosecution on child pornography charges. Home pornographers use digital cameras, Polaroid cameras and video cameras to make pornographic pictures and videos of children and then download child pornography from the Internet onto their home computers. My legislation makes clear that federal prosecutions of home pornographers can proceed in federal courts because their activities impact interstate commerce. This is a fix that must be made now in order to protect children at home.

Another element of my bill is the addition of a section to the criminal code, Section 2257A, which adds a record-keeping requirement that will force producers of sexually explicit material to keep records of the names and ages of their subjects when they are engaged in simulated sexual activity.

Congress previously enacted the PROTECT Act of 2003 against the background of Department of Justice regulations applying section 2257 to both primary and secondary producers. That fact, along with the Act’s specific reference to the regulatory definition that existed at the time, reflected Congress’ agreement with the Department of Justice’s view that it already had the authority to regulate secondary procedures under the applicable law.

A federal court in Colorado, however, recently enjoined the Department from enforcing the statute against secondary producers, relying on an earlier Tenth Circuit precedent holding that Congress had not authorized the Department to regulate secondary producers. These decisions conflicted with an earlier D.C. Circuit decision upholding Congress’ authority to regulate secondary producers. Section 502 of the bill is meant to eliminate any doubt that section 2257 applies both to primary and secondary producers, and to reflect Congress’ agreement with the regulatory approach adopted by the Department of Justice in enforcing the statute.

My bill goes a step further by requiring that records be kept permanent and secondary producers. That fact, along with the Act’s specific reference to the regulatory definition that existed at the time, reflected Congress’ agreement with the Department of Justice’s view that it already had the authority to regulate secondary procedures under the applicable law.

I commend the chairman, Chairman SENSENBRENNER, with whom it has been my great pleasure to work on the organizing of the Democrats strongly supporting this legislation. I believe that there is nothing more fitting for us to do in honor of these victims than pass the legislation which will keep other families safe.

I urge support of this legislation.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer my strong support for the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act. I remember that tragic day in Hollywood, Florida, when Adam Walsh hit the headlines, having been abducted from a mall in our State. Over 2 years ago, his father, John Walsh, and Ernie Allen approached me to discuss what they saw as a growing and dangerous threat to our children, sex offenders. We talked about the fact there were over 500,000 sex offenders listed on various State registries, but because of poor Federal and State laws, we were missing over 150,000 of them. Soon after that meeting, I began to work on the Sex Offender Registration Notification Act, which is contained in this bill today.

The Adam Walsh Act is the most comprehensive piece of child protection legislation this Congress has ever considered. The bill creates, among other things, new State and Federal regulations, community notification requirements, as well as new Federal criminal penalties for sex offenders. It also gives law enforcement new resources, including authorizing U.S. Marshals to go after missing sex offenders, 20 new task forces, 200 new Federal prosecutors, 45 new forensic scientists dedicated to investigating crimes against children.

It is good to be that we tracked library books better than we do sex offenders, but this bill will even that score.

I am grateful to Chairman SENSENBRENNER for his leadership and willingness to work with so many Members across the political aisle on this important issue. I want to thank the Speaker for keeping his word to get this bill to the President by July 27, the 25th anniversary of Adam’s death.

Mr. Speaker, there are many people who made this day a reality, but the two people who should take the most credit are the parents of Adam Walsh, and that is John and his wife, Reve. It still amazes me to this day the way they were able to turn Adam’s death into a lifelong crusade to protect our Nation’s children. Their bravery and commitment have led to the creation of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and to the rescue of countless children.

John and Reve, our Nation thanks you for everything you have done.

I want to especially thank Bradley Schreiber, my legislative director; Michael Volkov; Phil Kiko; and Sean...
McLaughlin of the House Judiciary Committee for their outstanding efforts.

Mr. Speaker, as Co-chairman of the Congressional Missing and Exploited Children's Caucus and author of the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act and the Internet Safety Act contained in this bill, I rise to offer my strong support for the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act and urge my colleagues to vote for it.

Over two years ago, John Walsh and Ernie Allen approached me at a missing children's conference I was hosting in Florida to discuss what they saw as a growing and dangerous threat to our children—sex offenders. We talked about the fact that there were over 500,000 sex offenders listed on the various state registries but, that because of the patchwork of federal laws on the books, we were missing over 150,000 of them. I also discovered—which was more surprising to me—that there is a 200,000-person difference between all of our state registries and the federal National Sex Offender Registry. Soon after that meeting, I began work on the Sex Offender Registration and Notification Act which is contained in the measure we have before us today.

The Adam Walsh Act is arguably the most comprehensive piece of child protection legislation that Congress has ever considered. The bill creates, among other things, new state and federal registration and community notification requirements, as well as new federal criminal penalties, for sex offenders. It also gives law enforcement new resources including: authorizing the U.S. Marshals to go after absconded sex offenders; 20 new Internet Crimes Against Children Task Forces; 200 new federal prosecutors for prosecuting child sex offenses; and, 45 new computer forensic scientists dedicated to investigating crimes involving the sexual exploitation of children and related offenses.

One of the basic tenets of the Due Process Clause is to give criminal suspects notice, for those pedophiles and predators across this country that have harmed a child or are considering harming a child let me tell you now that you are on notice. We will find you, prosecute you and monitor you—in some cases, for the rest of your life. Your days in the shadows are over and our children will no longer be prey.

We used to track library books better than we do sex offenders, but this bill will even that score.

I am very grateful to Chairman SENSENBRENNER for not only his leadership and his willingness to work with me on this issue but for the fact that he did not bend to the Senate willingness to work with me on this issue but thank who made this day a reality. But the two people who should take the most credit are John and Reve Walsh. It still amazes me to this day the way they were able to turn Adam’s death into a lifelong crusade to protect our nation’s children. Their passion and commitment have led to the creation of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. The center in Florida and the work of countless children. John and Reve: our nation thanks you for everything you have done.

I also want to thank Mark Lunsford and the other victim’s families. It was their tireless efforts that brought the logjam in the Senate and got us here today.

I would also like to thank Ernie Allen, Robbie Calloway and Michelle Laxalt for all they did during the past few years helping me try to Shepard this bill through Congress and working to keep this issue at the forefront of everyone’s minds.

Last, but not least, I want to thank the staff who committed long hours and a great deal of their personal time to this bill. Phil Kiko, Sean McLaughlin, and Michael Volkov with Chair HASTERT’s staff; Ken Valentine with Senator HATCH’s staff; Dave Turk with Senator BIDEN’s staff; Matt Miner, Todd Brunstein and Brett Tolman with Chairman SPEIGHTER’s staff; Allen Hicks and Brandi White with Senator GREGG’s staff; with Senator KYL’s staff; Christine Leonard with Senator KENNEDY’s staff; Julie Katzman and Noah Bookbinder with Senator LEAHY’s staff; Nicole Gustafson with Senator GRASSLEY’s staff; and Sharon Beth Kristal of Senator DeWine’s staff. Mr. Speaker, everyone’s efforts in making this day a reality.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia, Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. CRAMER).

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I too stand in strong support of this bill. I want to compliment the chairman of the Judiciary Committee for giving us this opportunity. My colleague, Mark Foley, who just spoke, he and I co-chaired the Caucus for Missing and Exploited Children. Prior to my time here in Congress, I was a district attorney, and I saw too many children victimized by predators that had slipped between the cracks, predators that lived in neighborhoods. Neighbors didn’t know it. Schools didn’t know it. We can tighten this net of safety around children and families, but only through this bill can we do that.

I joined with John Walsh in the early 1980s in an effort to form a stronger network of child abuse intervention programs that we built around the country called the National Children’s Advocacy Center programs. They exist in 700 or 800 communities around this country, and they are one-stop service centers where child abuse victims and their families can come to get help and support.

But in establishing centers like this, in bringing network teams together in communities, we found out that that safety net to protect those children and families simply did not exist, and that was because the registration and notification system was practically nonexistent. And even though we, from the 1990s forward, have done everything we can to improve that, we still kept the notice factors in that too private, too available to only a certain select few that neighbors and communities and schools did not know what they needed to do.

I want to congratulate John Walsh and his wife, Reve, as well for making sure that they are establishing the next chapter in honor of Adam Walsh. John and Reve have given so much to this rest of the country, making sure that children are protected.

We need to pass this bill today in Adam Walsh’s memory.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mrs. KELLY).

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER for his hard work on this piece of legislation, which goes a long way toward protecting our children from predators and abusers.

Our Nation loses four children a day to abuse and neglect. Our government owes it to these children to provide our law enforcement and child protective service communities with a deep, robust and effective arsenal that they can utilize to protect the most vulnerable element of our society.

The conference report contains a provision I authored in the House to create a Federal registry of child abuse where each State and local jurisdiction was cross-referenced by the Department of Health and Human Services. This registry will close a glaring loophole in our current law which allows child abusers to find sanctuary by merely crossing States’ borders.

This legislation puts a “go-to” Federal resource in place to help local jurisdictions identify and track those with a history of child abuse anywhere in this country. Now our State and local child protection services will be able to access this valuable tool to weed out predators and help them fight child abuse and neglect across State lines. It is a commonsense child protection measure. It was passed by the House twice, and I am very happy to see it included in this conference report before us today.

With the establishment of the Federal Child Abuse and Neglect Registry, local and State child advocacy services will have a full picture of the individual who would placed children in their care, abuse them, and then try to escape; and our Nation’s most vulnerable children will now be protected.

I would like to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER again for his leadership on this issue, and I also want to thank my constituent John Walsh for his hard work over many years to bring this bill to fruition.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FITZPATRICK).

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I would also like to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER for his leadership in protecting America’s families. and for his determination in bringing this bill, H.R. 4472, to the House floor today.

Mr. Speaker, as the father of six children, I am deeply committed to finding better ways to safeguard the welfare of America’s families. That is why I introduced the bipartisan Justice for Victims of Crime Act, and, with Congressman FOLEY, the Internet SAFETY Act of 2006. Both of these bills have been included into H.R. 4472, and they will strengthen what is already a sweeping set of laws to the way law enforcement solve murders and protect kids from online sexual predators.

The Internet SAFETY Act will increase penalties for registered sex offenders who commit felony offenses involving a minor and set fines and imprisonment for Internet providers who facilitate child pornography. The legislation will also establish an Office of Sexual Crimes and Violence Against Children within the United States Department of Justice.

There are many critical and important provisions included in this bill, provisions that allow us to support the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act so we can protect our most precious commodity, innocent, children like Masha, and give back hope to those who need it most.

Mr. Speaker, a compassionate society looks after the most vulnerable among us, our children. Fortunately, this perpetrator is now behind bars. However, over the years of his abuse of Masha, he photographed her, posted her pictures, and traded her pornographic images over the Internet. The sad reality is that, although these monsters can be put behind bars, the victims of Internet child pornography will continue to be exploited, and this is why I introduced Masha’s Law.

Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues to know that Masha’s Law is named after a brave 13-year-old girl from my district, Masha Allen. Masha was born in Russia and placed in a state orphanage because her mother was an alcoholic and a drug addict. When she was 5 years old and a man from the United States was allowed to adopt her through an international adoption agency. This man started sexually abusing her the very first night she arrived in America.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. GINGREY.

Mr. GINGREY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act.

Mr. Speaker, this bipartisan legislation is a victory in the fight to keep our children safe. There are many critical and important provisions included in this bill. In particular, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the House and Senate conferees for including in this legislation a provision that fixes that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the House and Senate conferees for including in this legislation a provision that I introduced in the House earlier this year, a provision entitled “Masha’s Law.”

Last year I learned of a shocking inequity that exists in our current law. Currently, a person who illegally downloads music faces penalties in civil court that are three times as harsh as a person who downloads child pornography. This horrible inequity was the inspiration behind the introduction of Masha’s Law.

Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues to know that Masha’s Law is named after a brave 13-year-old girl from my district, Masha Allen. Masha was born in Russia and placed in a state orphanage because her mother was an alcoholic and a drug addict. When she was 5 years old and a man from the United States was allowed to adopt her through an international adoption agency. The sad reality is that although these monsters can be put behind bars, the victims of internet child pornography will continue to be exploited.

This is why I introduced Masha’s law. It allows these individuals a pathway to recover damages they have suffered from these crimes and allows them to pursue this avenue even after they are no longer minors. Therefore, as their pictures are downloaded and traded, year by year, these victims can continue to seek justice from these horrendous crimes.

Mr. Speaker, a compassionate society looks after the most vulnerable among us, our children. I urge my colleagues to support the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act, so we can protect our most precious commodity, innocent, children like Masha, and give back hope to those who need it most.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. GINGREY.

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006.

Finally, we have a bill passed by both this body and the Senate for the President to sign. Finally, Mark Lunsford has a legacy for his daughter Jessica of a guardian angel keeping children safe by closing dangerous loopholes in our law. Finally, the family and friends of Adam Walsh, Carlie Brudzca, Sarah Lunde, and so many others can sleep a little better at night knowing we are helping to protect America’s precious children.

My heart is still broken for the loss of Jessica Lunsford and all the joys in life that she will miss. At least she will be in a better place where no one can ever harm her again.

Mr. Speaker, certainly Chairman SENSENBRENNER, who worked tirelessly on this bill, deserves a great deal of credit.

Back when I first heard about Jessica’s disappearance, I knew that we could not sit back and do nothing. For instance, the probation officer for Jessica’s alleged killer, John Couey, never knew that he was a convicted sex offender. I introduced a bill, and Chairman SENSENBRENNER was kind enough to include it in this comprehensive bill, that fixes that.

The alleged perpetrator also did not have a current address on file with law enforcement, as he should have. This bill demands more frequent updates and checks. It also provides some grant monies to the localities can pay for this additional registration. The bill empowers States to do just as Florida has done and use GPS monitoring devices to track offenders.

I know in my heart that these changes will genuinely help our law enforcement to better protect the most innocent in our society, our children.

Mr. Speaker, as the member of the Appropriations Committee, I know that we cannot afford to fund this, but I am looking forward to working with my colleagues to make this happen.

Mr. FOLEY has said numerous times that FOLEY has said numerous times that...
Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 4472, Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006.

Finally, we have a bill passed by both this body and the Senate for the President to sign. Finally, Mark Lunsford has a legacy for his daughter Jessica—a guardian angel, keeping children safe by closing dangerous loopholes in the law.

My heart is still broken for the loss of little Jessica Lunsford and for all the joys in life that she will miss.

At least who is in a better place, where no one can ever harm her again.

Mr. Speaker, I am awed and humbled to have worked on this legislation with Chairman SENSENBRENNER, who has worked tirelessly to pass this bill.

When I heard about the manner of Jessica’s disappearance, I knew I could not sit back while there were many changes I could make to fix the law.

For instance, the probation officer for Jessica’s alleged killer, John Couey, never knew he was a convicted sex offender. This bill fixes that.

Couey did not keep a current address on file with law enforcement as he should have. This bill demands more frequent updates and checks.

And we didn’t have any method of tracking sex offenders after release from prison, though they have such high rates of recidivism. This bill empowers states to do as Florida has done and use GPS monitoring devices to track offenders.

I know in my heart that these changes will genuinely help equip law enforcement to protect the most innocent in our society—our children.

My good friend, Congressman MARK FOLEY, has said numerous times that we track library books better than we track sex offenders. Well, no more.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill and send it to the President for his signature.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. GILLMOR).

(Mr. GILLMOR asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in wholehearted support of this legislation. I think it stands as a testament to Congress’s heeding the call of the American public for increased protections from these dangerous sexual predators.

I would like to commend Chairman SENSENBRENNER for his leadership and for his unwavering commitment to ensure that American families receive the necessary tools to protect their loved ones. As a father of three young children, I feel a special appreciation for the benefits that this legislation will provide, not the least of which is a national database of sexually violent offenders accessible to all Americans via the Internet, enhanced community notification measures, and a study to assess the merits of a standardized national risk-based classification system.

I particularly want to thank the chairman for working with me in including those provisions which were set forth in two bills I had previously introduced.

I urge passage of the bill.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that this vote will draw to a close congressional consideration of legislation that has brought together Republicans and Democrats, concerned parents, and those who are related to victims from around the country. And this has become somewhat of a crusade in order to make necessary changes to prevent more sexual predators from falling through the cracks and molesting and harming and even murdering innocent victims.

The Children’s Safety Act of 2003 was a necessary start. This bill improves on the Children’s Safety Act of 2003, plugs more loopholes, and America will be a safer place as a result of all the people who have worked on behalf of this legislation. I would like to publicly thank all of them. There are too many to list by name, but in my full statement that I put into the record, I listed the names of a lot of very well-publicized victims. Let’s hope that this bill makes sure that there are no more names added to that list.

Vote in favor of the bill, send it to the President.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD an exchange of letters between Mr. THOMAS, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and myself.

Hon. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr., Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman SENSENBRENNER: I am writing concerning H.R. 4472, the “Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006,” which is scheduled for floor action on Tuesday, July 25, 2006.

As you know, the Committee on Ways and Means has jurisdiction over matters concerning certain child welfare programs, particularly as they pertain to foster care and adoption. Section 152 of the bill would require States to conduct safety checks of children placed with foster or adoptive parents with serious criminal histories. Section 152 also would require States to check child abuse registries for potential adoptive parents. Thus these provisions fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means. However, in order to expedite this bill for floor consideration, the Committee will forgo action. This is being done with the understanding that it does not in any way prejudice the Committee’s review of the appointment of conference or its jurisdictional prerogatives on this bill or similar legislation.

I would appreciate your response to this letter, confirming this understanding with respect to H.R. 4472, and would ask that a copy of our exchange of letters on this matter be included in the Congressional Record during floor consideration.

Best regards,

BILL THOMAS,
Chairman.

Hon. BILL THOMAS,
Chairman, Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, DC.

Dear Chairman Thomas: Thank you for your letter regarding H.R. 4472, the “Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006.” I appreciate your willingness to work with the Committee on the Judiciary to expedite this bill during floor consideration.
Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, which embodies a bipartisan and bicameral agreement that includes important provisions to protect children.

The bill will create a National Sex Offender Registry with uniform standards for the registration of sex offenders, including a lifetime registration requirement for the most serious offenders. This is a vital step to improve the current patchwork quilt of 50 different state systems for identifying and tracking sex offenders. The bill also authorizes much-needed grants to help local law enforcement agencies establish and integrate sex offender registry systems.

Under the bill, states will be required to maintain sex offender registries accessible to the public on the Internet and to make failure to register a felony. Sex offenders will be required to provide DNA samples and will be subjected to more frequent in-person verification of information about their residences and workplaces.

The bill targets child-exploitation enterprises and registered sex offenders who commit offenses against minors, including obscene visual representations of sexual abuse of children and sex trafficking of children. It includes several provisions designed to better combat child pornography, including authorizing civil and criminal asset forfeiture in child pornography cases. And it authorizes new grant programs that will help local law enforcement agencies combat sexual abuse of children by enabling them to better protect people, add computer hardware and software, and take other steps to apprehend sex offenders who violate registry requirements. It also authorizes a new grant program for the National Crime Prevention Council, a private, nonprofit organization that has expertise in promoting crime prevention programs through public outreach and media campaigns.

The bill also authorizes 88 new prosecutors within the U.S. Attorneys’ Offices to prosecute child sex offenses, including child exploitation, child sexual abuse, and child obscenity and pornography. It authorizes the National Justice Department task forces to address Internet crimes against children. It authorizes the Justice Department to provide grants to states, local governments, and nonprofit organizations to establish and maintain programs to educate children and parents on the best way to be safe using the Internet. It authorizes the Justice Department, in consultation with the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, to develop and carry out a public awareness campaign to demonstrate how to protect children when using the Internet. And, it authorizes the Justice Department to provide fingerprint-based background checks to child welfare agencies as well as to private and public educational agencies so they can carry out background checks on prospective adoption or foster parents, private and public teachers, and school employees.

As a cosponsor of H.R. 4005, the National Police Athletic League (PAL) Youth Enrichment Reauthorization Act of 2005, I am also glad to note that the version of the bill now before the House includes provisions similar to those of that bill.

The PAL program brings youth under the supervision and positive influence of a law enforcement agency and exposes public awareness about the role of a police officer in the local community and reinforces responsible values and attitudes instilled in young people by their parents. It utilizes educational, athletic and recreational activities to create trust and understanding between police officers and youth. It is based on the conviction that young people—if they are reached early enough—can develop strong positive attitudes toward police officers and gain the skills needed to achieve success throughout their lives.

The bill will reauthorize the National Police Athletic League Youth Enrichment Act of 2000 (P.L. 106–367). It will also authorize $16 million per year in assistance to National PAL and the 850 local PAL chapters around the country; help establish 250 (50 per year) new PAL chapters; and provide support for the annual National Police Athletic League Youth Enrichment Reauthorization Act of 2005, H.R. 4005, of which I am a prime sponsor.

PAL is a youth crime prevention program that utilizes educational, athletic and recreational activities to create trust and understanding between police officers and youth. It is based on the understanding that young people—if they are reached early enough—can develop strong positive attitudes toward police officers and gain the skills needed to achieve success throughout their lives.

The bill will reauthorize the National Police Athletic League Youth Enrichment Act of 2000 (P.L. 106–367). It will also authorize $16 million per year in assistance to National PAL and the 850 local PAL chapters around the country; help establish 250 (50 per year) new PAL chapters; and provide support for the annual National Youth Leadership Conference.

The PAL program brings youth under the supervision and positive influence of a law enforcement agency and expands public awareness about the role of a police officer in the local community and reinforces responsible values and attitudes instilled in young people by their parents.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, so that we can continue to fund this program, which provides such good guidance and direction to so many of our youth.

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, before us today is the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (H.R. 4472). I am a strong supporter of this legislation, and urge its passage.

Title V of this legislation is derived from a bill that I introduced in the First Session of this Congress, the Child Pornography Prevention Act. As the title states, the intent of my legislation is to prevent American children from becoming victims of pornography because as we know, Mr. Speaker, the fuel that fires the wicked hearts of child predators is child pornography.

Every day in America, children are exploited in pornography—sometimes by those closest to them in their homes. In those homes, children are forced to pose for pornographic pictures or act in pornographic videos by family members, family friends, caretakers and other trusted individuals who violate that trust. These pictures and videos are posted on the Internet or surreptitiously spread to sexual predators. A main tenet of my legislation is the addition of language that will fix a technicality that so-called home pornographers have used to evade federal prosecution on child pornography charges. Home pornographers use digital cameras, Polaroid cameras and video cameras to make pornographic pictures and videos of children, and they download child pornography from the Internet onto their home computers. My legislation makes clear that federal prosecutions of home pornographers can proceed in federal courts because their activities impact interstate commerce. This is a fix that must be made now in order to protect children at home.

Another element of my bill is the addition of a new section to the criminal code, Section 2257A, which adds a record-keeping requirement to all producers of sexually explicit material to keep records of the names and ages of their subjects when they are engaged in simulated sexual activity.

Congress previously enacted the PROTECT Act of 2003 against the background of Department of Justice regulations applying section 2257 to both primary and secondary producers. That fact, along with the Act's specific reference to the regulatory definition that existed at the time, reflected Congress' agreement with the Department of Justice's view that it already had the authority to regulate secondary producers under the applicable law.

A few years ago, Colorado, however, recently enjoined the Department from enforcing the statute against secondary producers, relying on an earlier Tenth Circuit precedent holding that Congress had not authorized the Department to regulate secondary producers. This decision will be reviewed by an en banc Tenth Circuit decision upholding Congress' authority to regulate secondary producers. Section 502 of the bill is meant to eliminate any doubt that section 2257 applies both to primary and secondary producers, and to reflect Congress' agreement with the regulatory approach adopted by the Department of Justice in enforcing the statute.

My bill goes a step further by requiring that records be kept for lascivious exhibitions nude photographs and displays. No child should be used in either nude pictures or sexually explicit materials because these items only serve to inflame the desires of child predators. Requirements that records be kept will serve as a deterrent. Additionally, my bill requires that the records be made available to investigators for inspection. Failure to keep the records or allow inspections is a criminal offense. By strengthening the law in this manner, we will provide both a strong deterrent to the use of children in sexually explicit materials and the necessary tools to law enforcement to investigate and prosecute those who are not deterred.

Finally, the legislation expands the ability of investigators and prosecutors to pursue the people who distribute child pornography. These distributors also will be required to follow the record-keeping provision, and this will provide law enforcement with a powerful tool to use against them. These are devious people who work in cohorts with pornographers to sell child pornography, but who currently can work out of sham corporations to avoid prosecution. My legislation will empower prosecutors with the ability to charge and convict these people.

Providing law enforcement with the tools to combat child pornography contained in my legislation is a much-needed and overdue step that must be taken to protect our children from those in our society who have no decency and know no shame.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006. It is time to protect our children, and today we take a significant step toward that goal.

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006. This is good legislation that will go a long way towards keeping our children safe from harm.

I am especially pleased with the record-keeping provision, and this will help improve our Nation's child protection system. As part of the Adoption and Safe Families Act of 1997, Federal law was amended to require that States complete background checks prior to approving a prospective foster or adoptive home. If these background checks reveal that would-be foster or adoptive parents have been convicted of certain felonies including murder and crimes against children, such adults are permanently disqualified from receiving Federal funds as foster or adoptive parents.

Felony convictions for physical assault, battery, or drug-related offenses disqualify an adult from receiving Federal payments for the child for 5 years. To be clear, States could still place foster children in those homes, they just couldn’t use Federal dollars to pay such adults for the care of the children.

These provisions are designed to ensure that children are placed in homes supervised by adults who are responsible for their well-being. I am especially pleased H.R. 4472 will ensure that Federal funds are used properly. Currently, 43 States including the District of Columbia comply with these requirements. However, because Federal law currently gives States a choice, eight States opt out of this requirement, which allows them to apply weaker standards concerning which adults are to be entrusted with foster or adoptive children and when Federal funds can be used in such homes.

In practice, it is our understanding that most of the States actually follow Federal guidelines, leaving only a handful of States that actually apply weaker standards than Federal law expects.

H.R. 4472 will allow States that opt out of the current Federal standards to continue to do so for the next 2 years. But then all States must comply with the current requirements, which most already follow. States will continue to have the flexibility to define requirements that are stronger than Federal law. It is my hope that during the next 2 years the States that apply weaker standards for who can be a foster or adoptive parent and receive Federal funds will examine their policies and take steps to bring them in line with Federal policy, as the overwhelming majority of States already do.

It is important that all States satisfy minimum requirements to ensure the safety of children. Children in foster care are literally our responsibility. It is not too much to expect certain minimum standards involving who can be entrusted with their care, especially when Federal tax dollars are paid to such adults. Amazingly enough, some suggest this provision may not increase child safety. I disagree. It is difficult to understand how some can insist that Federal taxpayers must pay adults to be foster or adoptive parents when a background check has uncovered their involvement in past crimes such as murder and crimes against children. Again, States may choose to do whatever they wish with their own dollars, but we have a responsibility to see that children are protected and Federal tax dollars are used wisely. I’m pleased H.R. 4472 will ensure all States follow the same minimum standards for foster care because we want to help these vulnerable children and receive Federal funds for their care. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4472, the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 that will revamp this country's sex offenders registration system. This bill is named in honor of Adam Walsh, the son of John and Reve Walsh, who was abducted 25 years ago. Through the strength and perseverance of John and Reve, they turned the gut wrenching tragedy of the abduction and killing of their son Adam into a lifelong crusade to protect the children of others. The bill before us today is another weapon in this country's arsenal to protect our children from what seems to be an epidemic of abduction and exploitation.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) estimates that today there are more than 563,000 sex offenders that are “supposed” to be registered in this country. Unfortunately, approximately 100,000 of these offenders are currently unaccounted for, and therefore, are under the watchful eye of no one.

H.R. 4472 will create a National registry that will provide enhanced information on a uniform basis thereby replacing a patchwork of individual systems administered and maintained by each State. Through this bill, sex offenders will have the same requirements to register throughout the country. Sex offenders will be required to register before they are released from prison to insure that they don’t slip through the cracks. Moreover, this bill will impose stiff penalties for failing to register by imposing a felony.

While we can never do enough to protect our children, this bill does tighten the weave of the safety net through which many predators have slipped. A uniform national registry of sexual predators will assist law enforcement, parents, and concerned citizens in their vigilance and awareness of who is lurking on our neighborhood waiting to rob our children of their innocence and, all too often, of their lives.

We owe a special debt of gratitude to the bipartisan group of legislators who steered this bill successfully through Conference, the Walshes, and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children for making this national registry a reality.

Mr. SENSENIBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENIBRENNER) that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendments to the bill, H.R. 4472.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof)

H5730 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE July 25, 2006
the rules were suspended and the Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FHA MANUFACTURED HOUSING LOAN MODERNIZATION ACT OF 2006

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4804) to modernize the manufactured housing loan insurance program under title I of the National Housing Act, as amended.

H.R. 4804

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This title may be cited as the “FHA Manufactured Housing Loan Modernization Act of 2006”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.
(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—
(1) manufactured housing plays a vital role in providing housing for low- and moderate-income families in the United States;
(2) the FHA title I insurance program for manufactured home loans traditionally has been a major provider of mortgage insurance for home-only transactions;
(3) the manufactured housing market is in the midst of a prolonged downturn which has resulted in a severe contraction of traditional sources of private lending for manufactured home purchases;
(4) during past downturns the FHA title I insurance program for manufactured homes has filled the lending void by providing stability to the manufacturing industry and the housing market in general; and
(5) in 1992, during the manufactured housing industry’s last major recession, over 20,000 manufactured home loans were insured under title I; in 2004, fewer than 2,000 manufactured housing loans were insured under title I;
(6) the loan limits for title I manufactured housing loans have not been adjusted for inflation since 1992; and
(7) these problems with the title I program have resulted in an atrophied market for manufactured housing loans, leaving American families with limited housing choice and creating a financial institution market unable to meet the housing needs of families in the United States;
(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—
(1) to provide adequate funding for FHA-insured manufactured home loans for low- and moderate-income homeowners during all economic cycles in the manufactured housing industry;
(2) to modernize the FHA title I insurance program for manufactured housing loans to enhance participation by Ginnie Mae and the private lending markets; and
(3) to adjust the low loan limits for title I manufactured home loans insurance to reflect the increased financial risk associated with manufactured homes.

SEC. 3. EXCEPTION TO LIMITATION ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTION PORTFOLIO.
The second sentence of section 2(a) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1703(a)) is amended—
(1) by striking “In no case” and inserting “Other than in connection with a manufactured home or a lot on which to place such a home (or both), in no case” and
(2) by striking ““Provided, That with” and inserting “With”.

(5) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall only apply to loans that are registered or endorsed for insurance after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5. MAXIMUM LIMITS.
(a) DOLLAR AMOUNTS.—Paragraph (1) of section 2(b) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1703(b)(1)) is amended—

(3) in subparagraph (D) by striking “$64,800” and inserting “$90,720”;
(4) in subparagraph (E) by striking “$6,100” and inserting “$7,700”;
(5) by realigning subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) 2 ems to the left so that the left margins of such subparagraphs are aligned with the margins of subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting “$6,100”;
(b) ANNUAL INDEXING.—Subsection (b) of section 2 of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1703(b)), as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(9) ANNUAL INDEXING OF MANUFACTURED HOUSING LOANS.—The Secretary shall develop a method of indexing in order to annually adjust the loan limits established in subparagraphs (A)(ii), (C), (D), and (E) of this subsection. Such method of indexing shall be based on the manufactured housing price data collected by the United States Census Bureau. The Secretary shall establish such index no later than one year after the date of the enactment of the FHA Manufactured Housing Loan Modernization Act of 2006.”

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING CHANGES.—
(1) Paragraph (1) of section 2(b) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1703(b)(1)) is amended—
(1) by striking “No” and inserting “Except as provided in the last sentence of this paragraph, no” and
(2) by adding after and below subparagraph (G) the following:

(B) In addition to the premium under subparagraph (A), annual premium payments dur-amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the follow-ling new paragraph:

"(10) FINANCIAL STABILIZATION OF MANUFACT-URED HOUSING PROGRAM.—The Secretary shall establish such underwriting criteria for loans and advances of credit in connection with a manufactured home or a lot on which to place a manufactured home, as may be necessary or appropriate, including such loans and advances represented by obligations purchased by financial institutions, as may be necessary to ensure that the program under this title for insurance for financial institutions against losses from such loans, advances of credit, and purchases is financially sound." \(^\text{(b)}\) to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. GILLMOR) and the gentle-

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. GILLMOR) and the gentleman from California (Ms. WATERS) will each control 20 minutes.

H.R. 4804 would modernize the Federal Housing Administration’s title I manufactured housing loans and increase the availability of FHA inssured manufactured housing loans to low and moderate income consumers who wish to purchase a manufactured home.

Congressman TIBERI’s legislation would amend title I of the Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance program by encouraging more private sector participation in the title I program, increasing the availability of title I loans for manufactured housing and improving the availability of title I loans to the secondary mortgage market.

To accomplish these goals, the FHA Manufactured Housing Modernization Act of 2006 includes several important reforms to make the title I manufactured housing program more relevant and more meaningful. The bill requires FHA to insure title I manufactured hiring for smaller homes with less mainteance.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4804, the FHA Manufactured Housing Loan Modernization Act of 2006, which was introduced by my financial servces colleague, Congressman PAT

H.R. 4804 would modernize the Fed-

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4804, the FHA Manufactured Housing Loan Modernization Act of 2006. Right off the bat, I want to congratulate Representative PAT TIBERI from Ohio on his effort to modernize the Federal Housing Administration, known as FHA, title I program for manufactured homes and increase the availability of FHA-insured manufactured housing loans to low and moderate income consumers who wish to purchase a manufactured home.

Increasing loan limits for manufact-tured housing will assist many people, particularly first-time home buyers who are looking for less expensive options for achieving the dream of homeownership.

Reforms to the title I manufactured housing program in this legislation would remove the current cap limiting FHA’s ability to insure manufactured home loans to 10 percent of the FHA portfolio; require FHA to insure title I manufactured housing loans on a loan-by-loan basis; raise the maximum loan limits for manufactured homes and lots, with annual indexing using U.S.
Census data. It also would allow risk-based premium pricing and tighten underwriting standards for the title I loans.

I want to thank our ranking member,
MAXINE WATERS from California, obviously also our chairman, MIKE OxLEY from Ohio, and our full committee member for the full committee. Their perseverance on these issues is going to help a lot of people in this country.

The problem of housing affordability poses less risk to the secondary market as we know it.

The reforms in this bill will improve
FHA manufactured housing programs.

The modernization of the program is absolutely essential to its continued existence. As such, I am not only going to ask my colleagues to support this legislation, but I would implore the Members of Congress to look at manufactured housing as alternatives to high-priced housing in some of their own areas where people cannot afford housing, particularly low-income people who cannot afford to purchase housing on the market as we know it.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) and that he may be able to yield.

a lot of people in this country.
I want to thank again the gentlelady from California, Mr. FRANK and also Mr. OXLEY, and, above all, Mr. TIBERI, for pursuing this piece of legislation, which is going to help so many people.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I seek unanimous consent to control the balance of the time on our side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from Massachusetts will control the balance of the time.

There was no objection.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the ranking member of our Housing Subcommittee, the gentlewoman from California, for filling in for me as I came over.

Mr. Speaker, we have a national goal of increasing homeownership. Homeownership is very important. I always want to make it clear to people that while homeownership is very important, it should not be considered all of our goal in the housing area. A large number of people, for economic reason and other reasons, will be renters. It is a good thing if we can help people become homeowners, but we should not neglect the legitimate interests of renters.

In this case, however, we are talking not about renters, we will deal with them in some later parts of our program today, we are dealing here with extending the ability to own homes to people who would economically not otherwise be able to make it.

We have gotten to a pretty high percentage of homeownership. But if you look at the economics of land, of zoning, of building, if you look at what people earn, if we do not make manufactured housing more easily available to people, we will not be able to break out of the current percentage levels of homeownership. That is, significantly extending homeownership so we get to maybe an 80 percent range or so requires us to make full use of manufactured housing.

One of the things I am pleased about, when I first came here there was a kind of a war going on, or at least a battle between people of conventional homes, stick homes as they are called, and manufactured housing. I think it is now clear that the demand for housing is such and the economic range is such that these are not competitive entities. There is room for more of the stick-built housing, of the site-built housing; there is room for more of the manufactured housing. We need to give a full range of choices for people.

It is also clear that manufactured housing hits a price range that we have to make available if we are going to extend homeownership.

Now, what we found was, as many of us began to push for this a few years ago, we were pushing. I pushed Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to do more in manufacturing housing. The gentleman from Ohio is nodding, because he and I have worked together on this. We intend to continue.

Part of our effort with regard to the GSE legislation is to push Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to do more in manufactured housing. We have worked harder to make sure that manufactured housing is safer. And this goes back to the former chairman of the committee, then called the Banking Committee, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GONZALEZ) who helped to make sure that we had legislation that made manufactured housing safer, particularly in those areas where there are hurricanes. We have done that.

And then we found that one of our own entities, the Federal Housing Administration, was not as responsive to the manufactured housing issues as they should be. So this bill does that. Obviously, manufactured housing is somewhat different than other forms of housing. The problem is, of course, our laws, our loan procedures, our property laws, our insurance laws. We will have to work with the model of a site-built home on a piece of land owned by that homeowner.

You need more flexibility when you are dealing with manufactured housing. This is why I am very pleased to join in this bipartisanship effort with my colleagues on the committee to put forward a bill that will be a substantial step forward in making housing available.

I thank the gentleman from Ohio, the chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Ohio who is the main author of this bill for giving us all a chance to work together on this.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr.NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts makes a good point. We have struggled for quite a few years to get manufactured housing into the sites through HUD for its utilization for people across this country. So I think this bill and all of the steps we have taken to understand both the urban and the rural settings, I think this bill comes a long way to push it to the forefront.

I want to thank Mr. TIBERI and also to yield to the gentleman such time as he may consume.

Mr. TIBERI. Mr. Speaker, I am excited that we are here today considering this piece of legislation that was passed out of committee unanimously. It has been a bipartisan process from the very beginning. I believe we have a better bill that Members can support because of that process, a bill that will make it easier for Americans to be homeowners. Mr. Speaker, as a former realtor, I want to associate myself with his remarks with respect to the flexibility of this bill, the importance of this bill. We have come a long way in getting here today passing this bill.

I do want to acknowledge his valuable input as a cosponsor of the legislation, a key cosponsor, as well as his work on the Financial Services Committee, and also his aid Scott Olson. This legislation today is better because of the work that you all put into it. I really appreciate and am grateful for that work.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to acknowledge the leadership of Mr. NEY, chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, and Chairman OXLEY for their work on this legislation, and the key work of committee staff Clinton Jones. Clinton, you have been great on this legislation from the very beginning; Cindy Chetti, Tallman Johnson, Rashmi Puri, along with Lindsay Vogtsberger from my staff as well. This has been a great collaboration. I appreciate the full support from the Members and the committee.

This legislation builds on the past successes of FHA's title I program by increasing the availability of title I loans for manufactured housing; encouraging more private sector participation and increasing access to the ever-important secondary mortgage market.

Manufactured housing has played a critical role in creating homeownership for families both in urban and rural settings across this country, across our State in Ohio. Unfortunately, manufactured housing is in the midst of a downturn, a downturn in housing production levels due in part to tightening of underwriting standards.

Historically, FHA title I programs have provided loans for financing mortgages of manufactured homes, which are homes leased on land. In 1992, FHA title I insured over 30,000 loans nationwide. In 2004, the number fell to 2,000. In Ohio, the chairman's home State and my home State, loans fell from a high in 1992 of 281, to only 15 written in 2004.

This bill incorporates recommendations from HUD's Commission of Independent Agency Report to Improve the title I Program." The legislation raises the maximum loan limits for manufactured homes on lots with annual indexing using the U.S. Census data. It also makes a number of changes. Mr. Speaker, to ensure the financial soundness of the program by allowing the Secretary of HUD to revise underwriting criteria.

Furthermore, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that implementing this piece of legislation will result in savings of half a million dollars a year.

Mr. Speaker, I am truly proud of the fact that I am the sponsor of this bill with Mr. FRANK and look forward to its passage on the Financial Services Committee and hopefully passage soon in the Senate so that more Americans may achieve the American dream of homeownership.
Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers. I just want to again thank the gentlewoman from California, MAUREENE ROYAL. Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts; MIKE OXLEY, the Chair; and PAT TIBBERI, of course, the author of the bill.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NEY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY), is, as has been announced, retiring. I do want to say that I am very proud of the extent to which our committee has worked together cooperatively.

There are obviously points of difference. There are legitimate differences between Democrats and Republicans and conservatives.

But without subsuming those or without anybody sort of abandoning his or her principles, we have been able to find that area where there is common ground like this. I do think that the chairman of the full committee deserves an enormous amount of credit for creating the atmosphere in which we were able to both pursue our differences in a civil way and then come together where we did not have differences, but had common ground.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, this is a good day for all people throughout the United States that want to achieve homeownership.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I am in strong support of H.R. 4804, the FHA Manufactured Housing Loan Modernization Act of 2006.

Manufactured homes play an important role in serving housing needs for many Americans, especially in the district I represent in East Tennessee.

I am very proud to have a leader in the manufactured housing industry, Clayton Homes, headquartered in my district. They are a company of integrity and are now operating in over 40 states across the country.

More and more people each year are moving into my district, which is one of the fastest growing areas in the country. It is not only important to many want to move there. It is a great place to live, raise a family or start a business.

All of this growth is contributing to a crisis in affordable housing. Manured home prices have increased over 50 percent since 1992. In 1999 FHA Title I insured over 30,000 Title I loans. In 2004, that number was below 2,000.

Options for financing manufactured homes are very limited. Today, there are only two private lenders that participate in the FHA program. This bill will encourage more private sector participation, creating more competition with lower interest rates and costs.

The bill increases the amount that can be insured on a loan. It removes a cent portfolio cap that only allows 10 percent of the dollar value of the lender's portfolio to be insured.

Under the proposed system in H.R. 4804, a practical program will encourage self-funding, increase availability and accessibility to manufactured home loans. Making these loans more accessible will help many get out of a renting situation.

This bill will allow many a chance to own a home, a very important part of the American dream. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4804.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. GILLMOR) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4804, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this legislation and insert extraneous material thereon.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5121) to modernize and update the National Housing Act and enable the Federal Housing Administration to use risk-based pricing to more effectively reach underserved borrowers, and for other purposes, as amended.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) one of the primary missions of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) single family mortgage insurance program is to reach borrowers who are underserved, or not served, by the existing conventional mortgage marketplace;

(2) the FHA program has a long history of innovation, which includes pioneering the 30-year self-amortizing mortgage and a safe-to-seniors reverse mortgage product, both of which were once thought too risky to private lenders;

(3) the FHA single family mortgage insurance program traditionally has been a major provider of mortgage insurance for home purchases;

(4) the FHA mortgage insurance premium structure, as well as FHA’s product offerings, should be revised to reflect FHA’s enhanced ability to determine risk at the loan level and allow FHA to better respond to changes in the mortgage market;

(5) during past recessions, including the oil-patch downturns in the mid-1980s, FHA remained a viable credit enhancer and was therefore instrumental in preventing a more catastrophic collapse in housing markets and a greater loss of homeowner equity; and

(6) as housing price appreciation slows and interest rates rise, many homeowners and prospective homebuyers will need the less-expensive, safer financing alternative that FHA mortgage insurance provides.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to provide flexibility to FHA to allow for the insurance of housing loans for low- and moderate-income homebuyers during all economic cycles in the mortgage market;

(2) to modernize the FHA single family mortgage insurance program by making it more reflective of enhancements to loan-level risk assessments and changes to the mortgage market; and

(3) to adjust the loan limits for the single family mortgage insurance program to reflect rising house prices and the increased costs associated with new construction.

SEC. 3. MAXIMUM PRINCIPAL LOAN OBLIGATION.

SEC. 17. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING TECHNOLOGY FOR FINANCIAL SYSTEMS.
(a) Congressional Findings.—The Congress finds the following:
(1) The Government Accountability Office has cited the FHA single family housing mortgage insurance program as a “high-risk” program, with a primary reason being non-integrated and out-dated financial management systems.
(2) The “Audit of the Federal Housing Administration’s Financial Statements for Fiscal Years 2004 and 2003”, conducted by the Inspector General of the Department of Housing and Urban Development reported as a material weakness that “HUD/FHA’s automated data processing (ADP) system environment must be enhanced to more effectively support FHA’s business and budget processes.”
(3) Existing technology systems for the FHA have not been updated to meet the latest standards of the Mortgage Industry Standards Maintenance Organization and have numerous deficiencies that lenders have endured.
(4) Improvements to technology used in the FHA program will—
(A) allow the FHA program to improve the management of the FHA portfolio, garner greater efficiencies in its operations, and lower costs across the program;
(B) result in efficiencies and lower costs for lenders participating in the program, allowing them to better use the FHA products in extending homeownership opportunities to higher credit risk or lower-income families.
(5) The Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund operates without cost to the taxpayers and will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Ney. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5121, the Expanding American Homeownership Act of 2006. This is a very important piece of legislation. It is the sense of the Congress that—
(1) the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development should act to follow the agency’s historical experience with similar borrowers.
(2) the goal of this investment should be to ensure FHA loan products are available to the FHA’s traditional borrowers, thereby increasing their access to homeownership.
(3) existing technology systems for the FHA have not been updated to meet the latest standards of the Mortgage Industry Standards Maintenance Organization and have numerous deficiencies that lenders have endured.
(4) improvements to technology used in the FHA program will—
(A) allow the FHA program to improve the management of the FHA portfolio, garner greater efficiencies in its operations, and lower costs across the program;
(B) result in efficiencies and lower costs for lenders participating in the program, allowing them to better use the FHA products in extending homeownership opportunities to higher credit risk or lower-income families.
(5) the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund operates without cost to the taxpayers and generates revenues for the Federal Government.

(b) Sense of Congress.—It is the sense of the Congress that—
(1) the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development should use a portion of the funds received from premiums paid for FHA single family housing mortgage insurance that are in excess of the amounts paid out in claims to supplement the housing and to the efficient production of thousands of units of affordable rental housing each year.

However, in more recent times, FHA has been a mortgage insurer of the last resort. Potential homeowners who can participate in the private mortgage insurance market do so only because FHA has become costly and the paperwork unmanageable. Thus, only the riskiest borrowers now use FHA for mortgage insurance.

Moreover, while the prime market remained relatively constant, the near prime market between 2003 and 2005 grew from $118 billion to $650 billion in mortgages, while FHA went from insuring 9.2 percent to 4.1 percent of the Nation’s mortgages. It is important to distinguish the difference between subprime lending, which is necessary and critical for nontraditional borrowers, and predatory/abusive lending, which is designed to take advantage of vulnerable Americans pursuing their American dream of homeownership.

While not predatory, the subprime market is not workable for many families. These are the families FHA is really designed to reach. Among other things, H.R. 5121 would allow FHA to provide alternative access as well as standardization of a market niche designed to follow the agency’s example.

Moreover, the Federal Government will always have a need for an agency to provide the type of services symbolized by the FHA. While the agency only has a market share of approximately 3 to 4 percent, elimination of FHA will be disastrous if a capital mortgage financial crisis emerges, such as we saw in the United States in the 1980s.

Further, it would be impossible to recreate this agency to respond rapidly to a housing homeownership crisis that may not be as visible, as we hope not, but do emerge in the future. H.R. 5121 will allow FHA to fulfill its original mission when similar circumstances exist. In 1934, interest-only and balloon payments were prevalent. Thus, FHA was established to give the private sector incentives to provide long-term fixed-rate financing.

Today, FHA continues to serve its original purpose by giving low- to moderate-income home buyers a safer, more affordable financing option for their homeownership. Mr. Speaker, we have a chance with this legislation to bring FHA back into business and to restore the FHA product to its traditional market position.

American families need safe options when purchasing a home at a fair price. Families need a way to take part in the American Dream without putting themselves at risk. Families, frankly, Mr. Speaker, need FHA.

I just want to conclude my comments for this time by saying this is, in my opinion, one of the most critical pieces of legislation, and as enacted as we have, I wonder where the future of FHA would be, therefore helping so many Americans across this country.
Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), who stepped up to the plate to address what I consider one of the most important pieces of legislation in quite a few years, of keeping the FHA alive by revitalizing it, by changing it, by streamlining it, and making it more efficient.

I appreciate also Ranking Member FRANK, Chairman MIKE OXLEY, of course, and all of the members of the committee and the staff who have worked on a bipartisan basis to do. I think this was critically needed and wonderful. If we did not step up to the plate with this piece of legislation, I wonder what options would be out there for many, many citizens wanting homeownership.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As I said, the leaders, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. FRANK, both did a great job on this and got the committee and the subcommittees to work together, to deal with all of those obstacles, and today we are on the floor because of his leadership.

But it certainly could not have happened without my ranking member, Mr. FRANK, who has the ability to see things in legislation that no one else sees and to bring it to our attention, and to fix what is wrong, and to give support to what is good and helpful when we are trying to pass a significant piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank him, and certainly Chairman OXLEY. As Mr. FRANK said, he is retiring. He will be leaving us. But he has been a chairman who has been fair, he has provided opportunities for all of the members of our committee. He has worked with the subcommittee chairs and ranking members, and we are certainly going to miss him.

I rise in strong support as an original sponsor of H.R. 5121, the Expanding America’s Homeownership Act of 2006, which represents a major achievement by the Committee on Financial Services and the Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity.

As I said, the leaders, Mr. OXLEY, Mr. FRANK, and all of the other members of the subcommittee who cooperated, deserve a lot of credit for this bill. But I have to mention the staff. The staff on both sides of the aisle worked so hard into long hours of the night helping to straighten out very complicated provisions with the FHA, and it is because of their dedication and their concentrated work that we are able to be on the floor today. They were also very helpful in working with a rather broad-based coalition that supported this bill, who stand in support of this bill including housing, consumer, and advocacy groups, the National Association of Realtors, the Mortgage Bankers Association, the Chamber of Commerce, and the National Association of Home Builders.

I think miss him. As Mr. FRANK, who has the ability to see the things in legislation that no one else sees and to bring it to our attention, and to fix what is wrong, and to give support to what is good and helpful when we are trying to pass a significant piece of legislation. This unique piece of legislation is unusual not only because of the combination of support; it reflects a real consensus in Congress and indeed be relevant in today’s market.

When Congress enacted legislation in 1934 creating FHA, it intended that the government would make the dream of owning a home a reality for as many Americans as possible. FHA was established under the National Housing Act more than 70 years ago to improve housing standards and conditions. The goal of FHA was to provide an adequate home financing system with attractive down payments, and financial stability for the average American. FHA pioneered many programs, including the 30-year mortgage. Not only has FHA been a pioneer in housing, it has been a major tool for first-time home buyers and moderate-income families. Just as FHA did in 1934 as America was coming out of the worst depression in its history and the impact that FHA had on homeownership, FHA was a brilliant idea then, as it will be again through passage of this bill.

H.R. 5121 is appropriately named the Expanding American Homeownership Act of 2006 because it will, indeed, expand homeownership opportunities for all Americans. There is unequivocal evidence that, without FHA, many first-time home buyers and low- to moderate-income persons would not be able to afford a home. Americans have grown accustomed to FHA for mortgage insurance, guaranteeing their entry into the coveted arena of homeownership.

FHA had come to rely on first-time home buyers and low- to moderate-income persons to justify its existence. In the last few years, however, FHA watched as its share of the mortgage insurance market dwindle, and the groups it traditionally served disappeared. Between 2003 and 2005, nonprime loans grew from $332 billion to $550 billion, more than a 100 percent increase. According to this phenomenon, FHA market share fell dramatically. FHA was forced to become the mortgage insurer of last resort rather than the preferred insurer. Without FHA, FHA alternatives, many home buyers, first-time buyers, minority buyers, and home buyers with less than perfect credit fled FHA for the subprime market, leaving many with few affordable options.

Some have been forced to turn to high cost financing and nontraditional loan products. While these are not acceptable for certain borrowers, they can have devastating consequences for others. In fact, when we began consideration of this bill, the foreclosure rate for non-prime loans was approximately twice that of prime loans.

By providing consumers with choice, H.R. 5121 will provide FHA the flexibility to set mortgage insurance premium consistent with the risk of the loans. FHA will use the borrower’s total credit score profile when setting the insurance premium. Borrowers who are low credit risk will pay a lower insurance premium, while borrowers who pose a higher credit risk will be charged a slightly higher premium. As such, FHA will reach deeper into the pool of perspective borrowers while guaranteeing the soundness of the FHA fund.

In the 56th Congressional District in California that I serve, 2,064 loans were insured by FHA in 2001, but only 74 loans were made in 2005. Similarly, FHA programs have been seriously curtailed in just about every region of the country, resulting in fewer and fewer homes being purchased with FHA program loans. H.R. 5121 will increase FHA home limits. In many areas of the country, the existing FHA loan limits are lower than the cost of new construction or the median home price. In other areas, FHA has fallen out of the market. As indicated in the committee report that we filed with this legislation, in 1999, FHA insured 127,000 loans in California, while a mere 5,000 loans were insured by FHA in 2005, representing less than 1 percent of the 1999 level. Because FHA business diminished dramatically during this period, in my view, American homeownership did not expand as much as possible. The FHA loan limit of $362,790 in Los Angeles, California indicated that FHA was essentially no longer relevant in that housing market.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I do not have any other speakers.

I did want to take this time to say that I want to also thank Commissioner Brian Montgomery of the FHA. He is really one of those people when he started this, he came into the offices and talked to everybody, he really should probably take off his tie and have a t-shirt that says, “I’m from the government, I’m here to help you.” He has a lot of enthusiasm and a lot of belief in this program, and cooperated so much for this important bill. I just want to say that. I want to thank the gentlewoman from California, Mr. FRANK, Mr. OXLEY, both sides of the aisle, and the staff. A wonderful staff.

We presented a bill today, it looks kind of easy. A lot of hours were put into it. And also some wonderful, thoughtful suggestions came from Ms. WATERS, from Mr. FRANK, to take a good bill and I think help improve and make it better, and we appreciated those changes. I’m working with all of you on this issue.

I can’t stress, Mr. Speaker, how important a bill this is. If we didn’t step up to the plate now. I really wonder where the FHA would be.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague. And I must say, I was very pleased that, having worked together, that the relationship of ranking member of the full committee and ranking member of the subcommittee or chairman of a full committee and the chairman of a subcommittee, nobody planned that to work as smoothly. You have to work at it, and with kind of overlapping responsibilities. I am very proud of the very constructive work we have done together, along with our counterparts on the other side.

I agree with what has been said about this bill. It takes the FHA and makes it a more important entity.

On one issue, the high cost loan limits, for much of the district that I represent in Massachusetts, the FHA might not be the mortgage that makes the median house price in my district are beyond what the FHA could do. And I was glad to work with my colleague, the gentleman from California, who has joined us, Mr. MILLER, to make it realistic. People have said well, you are creating homes for the wealthiest. No. What we have is a situation where, if you don’t do it by median house price, middle income borrowers are priced out of the market because of the price of the house.

And, of course, people said, well, you are going to be squeezing out lower income people. No. When the FHA makes those loans to people at the median income in the high-cost areas, that makes money for the Treasury. And I want to stress that. This is a money maker bill. This is a bill that expands housing, but it will make money for the Treasury. The FHA, in our accounting term it is called a negative subsidy. A negative subsidy means you put money in. And, the FHA is a net contributor. I think at some point we might look at expanding some of what we do at the FHA without further increasing the cost to the Treasury. But this is a bill that expands housing opportunities and makes money for the Treasury.

There is one particular part I want to address, and the gentlewoman from California generously mentioned it and the gentleman from Ohio was helpful on this. We do, in this bill, extend FHA’s authority to lend to people who have lower credit scores, people who are bigger risks. And when that happens, you have to worry about higher defaults.

I don’t think we, the Federal Government, should be in the position of saying that, as we lend to people who are bigger risks, we should take that risk pool and make those people who are higher risks who meet their obligations pay for the people who are higher risks who don’t. In other words, yes, we understand that. As you reach down into a lower credit sector, and there is a correlation with income there, obviously, you are going to have more defaults and we are going to have to pay for the defaults. But it is not fair, and we the Federal Government should not set the principle that one low-income person or 10 low-income people who meet their responsibilities are the ones who have to make up the low-income person who isn’t able to.

Now, this bill doesn’t entirely meet my desires in this respect, but it does set this important principle. Yes, it says if you are of a low credit score, you will have to pay some more. But after 5 years under this bill, if you have been meeting your obligations, you then no longer have to pay more on the annual basis. Thus, it seems to be both an incentive for people to keep their payments current and fair. And the reason I don’t see why, if I am someone with a low credit score and I am making my payments in a responsible way, I should have to shoulder the burden of those people who aren’t able to make their payments any more than anybody else.

Now, as I said, this doesn’t go as far as I would like, but it sets that important principle. And the other thing I would note is this: We give FHA the authority to set rules that will affect the borrowers with lower credit, but they are not mandated. And I would urge my friends in the FHA, and they have worked with us and I appreciate it and some of them are here today observing, as is fitting given the cooperative effort we had here.

As we go forward, given that the FHA makes money, let’s refrain from penalizing the responsible low credit people. And they are the great majority, by the way, you know that you are going to have a majority of them default. Let’s say to those lower credit borrowers who meet their obligations that we are not going to try to make them be held responsible for others who can’t make it. That is something, if it has to be done, could be more fairly done across the board.

So I am very appreciative of the things in the bill, the increase in the loan limits, the reaching out to other entities to accommodation, and reaching out to give people an alternative to predatory lending, and it is important that we set the principle. As we give people an alternative to what might be predatory loans in the purely private sector, we do it in a way that will give people of lower credit recognition that if they are responsible and meet their payments, they will no longer be put under the gun. I think we have further to go there, and as experience works out, I will be pushing for that.

But it is very important that we set that principle, and I am grateful to the gentleman from Ohio, to my good friend from California who has done such great work in the housing area, and to the people in the administration who worked out an agreement with us to get this principle set forward.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I would like to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY G. MILLER), the vice chairman of the Housing Opportunity Subcommittee who has done unbelievable work in so many areas to help with the housing bill.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Chairman NEY and MIKE OXLEY for their help in this area. That is an issue that BARNEY FRANK and I have worked on for quite a few years. We started out with a GSE, government sponsored enterprise, which is Fannie and Freddie, trying to reform that concept in high-cost areas.

We found out that many people in high-cost areas, suburbs in the 3rd district and my district in California and MAXINE WATERS’s district, because of the rising costs of houses, people could not qualify for conforming loan limits. We had to raise the conforming loan limits in the high-cost areas, and the same problem once we completed that was realized in FHA.

BARNEY and I took this on a few years ago, trying to take a system that has been running for 70 years and conform that system to today’s marketplace. It has basically become so antiquated that many people in high-cost areas could not qualify for an FHA loan. In fact, I would talk to brokers and lenders in my district that have not been able to process an FHA loan in years because the system is so structured and the costs have gone up so high in housing marketplaces, that you have taken a situation where first-time, low-income people do not qualify; or if they had to go to a conventional loan because of the high loan-to-value ratios, they couldn’t get those loans. And because of the pay-to-income ratio wouldn’t qualify for conventional. That is why FHA is an extremely viable option for these people.

When I say “these people,” I am talking about the people who work in our districts, teachers, nurses, firemen, policemen. They live in areas that they often travel in California an hour and a half to 2 hours just to get to work because they cannot afford to buy a home within the city within which they work. Their reasons might be lack of downpayment or other reasons that in the past have been figured to qualify for a conventional loan.

That is why if we bring FHA up to today’s standards, we can provide loans for these individuals who need to buy housing where they work, who can make the payment, and they can qualify for an FHA loan if we raise it in high-cost areas.

A situation many of my conservative friends, and I am extremely conservative on the Republican side, we had Chairman NEY and myself, the issues of a loan might be $170 a month. That areas.
trouble with the conventional marketplace because it puts them into a jumbo loan when you get up into these place because it puts them into a trouble with the conventional market-rule is not breaking even, which it is today, then let’s look at it; but there is no reason to raise premiums on a loan that we are basically trying to expand for more people the opportunity to qualify for.
Limiting the FHA’s complicated downpayment calculation and traditional cash investment requirement is provided in this loan. It was a very cumbersome process. It was comlicated. It did not need to be that way, and providing FHA the flexibility to set insurance premiums commensurate with the risk of the loan is in this bill, and that is most appropriate. They are basically saying that we are going to base the premium on how risky the loan is we are making to the individual, rather than coming up with some matrix that just says we are going to raise premiums overall for no proven reason.
This says, let’s look at the risk based on the individual, and let’s base the premium on that. It is a reasonable approach. It takes FHA and brings it up to the level it should be today. It takes a system that worked 70 years ago, worked 20 years ago, but today it does not because of the inflation in housing, the costs have gone so high, that FHA loans are so low, you could basically not provide that opportunity to people who really needed it.
I want to thank MAXINE WATERS who has been very helpful in this. We have had a lot of fun working together.
There are some issues we don’t agree on. They are absolutely a lock-step on. In fact, it is amazing, between MAXINE and BARNEY FRANK and Chairman NEY and myself, the issues
we have come together on in housing, trying to provide and meet the needs of our communities, and just by changing the rules offering expanded opportunity, we have come a long way to helping people get into a new home, both first-time home buyers and police and firemen who might be in their sec-don’t buy a new home, but they just have trouble with the conventional marketplace because it puts them into a jumbo loan when you get up into these areas.
Savings to an individual for this type of a loan might be $170 a month. That is tremendous. It provides an opportunity that does not exist today, and it is a very good bill, and I ask for an “aye” vote.
Ms. WATERS, Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), who serves on the committee.
Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Expanded Homeownership Act. It modernizes and moves the FHA into the realities of the housing market of the 21st century.
I want to build on the comments of my colleague MAXINE WATERS who has worked selflessly and devotedly on moving this legislation to the floor in a bipartisan effort.
There are three points that are particularly important to New York and the district that I represent. The bill raises the cap to 100 percent of area median income, thereby making more Americans eligible to receive loans under FHA.
Secondly, it expands coverage, not only to higher risk individuals, but also to cover condos and co-ops. I represent many people who live in high-rises. They live vertically as opposed to horizontally. This is an important change. Many more will be eligible for FHA support.
Thirdly, and very importantly to the elderly in New York City and around the country, it lifts the cap on the number of reverse mortgages HUD can insure, allowing many more elderly in our country to be able to stay in their homes.
I congratulate the leadership on both sides of the aisle. This is an example of the bipartisan effort in the Financial Services Committee that has moved forward meaningful legislation, and I particularly thank my ranking member of the committee, MAXINE WATERS.
Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).
(Mr. INSLEE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his
Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to acknowledge a very important cost element of this bill that increases Americans’ access to reverse mortgages.
Reverse mortgages are a tremendous vehicle by which Americans can get access to the equity in their home to make it available for health care, for assistance, for travel, for education; and now this bill will take three big steps forward to make reverse mortgages more available.
First, it will do so by having a uniform nationwide cap so that it will remove this cap in a lot of areas in the country that have prevented Americans from having reverse mortgages.
Secondly, it will make it available for, especially, homeownership, which might be in the best interests of senior citizens.
Third, it will remove the cap on the number of reverse mortgages that es-tentially can go through the FHA home equity conversion program, which now covers 90 percent of the reverse mortgages in the country.
So this is a fantastic opportunity, particularly for our seniors to be able to have access to the equity in their homes. It is a big stride forward. I know a lot of seniors are going to take advantage of it so make sure they can stay in their homes, to use their equity to finance having health care and assistance in their homes to give them the liberty.
I want to thank the bipartisan effort to put this together. I also want to thank noted author Tom Kelly who has been a great advocate for getting these reverse mortgages used by more Americans.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).
(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)
Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr.
Speaker, let me thank the chairman,
Mr. NEY, and his ranking member, Ms.
WATERS, for their constant enhancement of opportunities for homeowners, and allow me to congratulate the Congressman who I hope will vote to add to the American Dream.
I come from a community where under 50 percent own homes. So we are still striving in Houston, Texas, to provide those opportunities. There are elements that I think are very crucial in this legislation that would help expand that opportunity
One, the risk-based pricing is a great step up. I have always argued that there needs to be some flexibility.
Conferring has denied many of our hardworking taxpayers getting homes.
This at least allows a risk assessment to be made on the homeowner’s credit standing, and then if they emerge and do better, they can get out from under this assessment, and the ability for downpayment can range from high risk to low risk. That is good.
In addition, including the 100 percent financing for FHA is outstanding because in all of our jurisdictions, the cost of housing is going up. One hundred percent is far better than 87 percent. Even Houston is a high-dollar market as more competition comes in for housing.
I would also say that reverse mortgages is something that is an innovation. I hope in the legislation there is information to seniors so that they understand, and others who would partake of a reverse mortgage, what the pros and cons are so that they have a better sense of that. I think it will not be a negative. You keep your house; you do not lose it. You are, in fact, given expanding opportunities.
So I congratulate my colleagues for answering the question. Is the American Dream of homeownership for ev-everyone? Yes, it is. It is for Houstonians who have less of a 50 percent ownership. Yes, it is, and the Expanding American Homeownership Act of the Financial Services Committee is a good start.
I congratulate and ask my colleagues to support this particular legislation.
Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, in closing, I would simply again like to thank

SEC. 20. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on October 1, 2006.
other nations will continue to vigorously use their government-sponsored export credit agencies to promote their exports. The unfortunate reality is that American companies often win export sales on quality and price only to later lose because their competitors were able to obtain faster, lower-cost export credit funded by other countries. Supporting this bill will ensure that an attractive foreign financing package will not be the deciding factor in losing an export opportunity. Defeating the bill will amount to unilateral disarmament in global trade.

While Ex-Im Bank supports large business deals, this bill should actually make small business truly the focus of further improvements to the bill to attract private lenders for small businesses. The legislation also enhances the bank’s delegated loan authority with respect to medium-term transactions by private lenders for small businesses.

This is one key tool to help Ex-Im reach and exceed its 20 percent statutory mandate for small businesses.

The manager’s amendment contains further improvements to the bill to make small business truly the focus of the bank. This reform designates adequate staff at each of the bank’s operating divisions to specialize in the needs of small businesses. This staff will be jointly supervised by the Small Business Division. Furthermore, these small business specialists will have the authority under appropriate guidelines to approve loan guarantees and insurance applications of up to $10 million. This provision will help small business exporters overcome the obstacles of the slow internal approval process within Ex-Im Bank.

Finally, the manager’s amendment automatically directs these small business specialists to serve as members of the Small Business Committee at the bank. These small business specialists will be on the front line of assisting small business and will have firsthand knowledge of Ex-Im products at work and what needs to be changed.

I was pleased to work with many of the industry groups which support Ex-Im, particularly the Small Business exporters Association, in the development of these small business provisions in H.R. 5068.

Mr. Speaker, passage of this bill will send a powerful positive signal to small business exporters around the Nation that there will be internal advocates for them within the bank from the time they enter the door until the time they exit with a decision. With these new legislative enhancements to Ex-Im’s charter, small business exporters will have strong shoulders to stand on to win grade deals overseas.

I urge the adoption of H.R. 5068.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as the ranking member of the Financial Services Subcommittee with jurisdiction over the Export-Import Bank, I am delighted to stand and speak in support of H.R. 5068, the Export-Import Bank Reauthorization Act of 2006, introduced by our Subcommittee Chairman.

This bipartisan legislation was overwhelmingly supported in the Financial Services Committee and is also supported by the Small Business Committee. The original cosponsors include not only Rep. Maloney, Fhyce, and myself, but the majority and minority leadership of both committees. We have all worked together in this bill to fairly address the concerns of many viewpoints, and I want to thank those Members and their staffs for their hard work and effort to listen to many points of view and to produce a bill on which we can all agree.

I want to thank a moment to thank Chairman Oxley for his leadership on this bill and on so many others throughout his tenure. The Financial Services Committee and this Congress will feel his absence. This bill is a good example of the bipartisan work of the committee, typified by Chairman Oxley, and helped to make possible. We don’t always agree, but we can often work together to find points of agreement, as we have done on this bill.

This bill responds to concerns that the committee and I have had for some time and that we heard repeatedly from our constituents, both businesses and interest groups, as we began work on this very important piece of legislation.

First, the bill reaffirms Congress’ strong intent that the bank support small businesses to a greater extent than at present, consistent with sound lending practices. To this end, the bill creates a Small Business Division within the bank that the chairman of the bank operating directly to the chairman. The staff of this new division is dedicated exclusively to small business transactions, reflecting the fact that these deals and these clients need unique skills. Within this division, the bill creates an office charged with expanding outreach to women and minority-owned businesses. On these sections, the leadership of the Small Business Committee was especially valuable, and I want to thank my colleague Representative Pryce and myself, but the bank’s staffs for their hard work and effort on this bill.

Secondly, based on numerous comments, we also concluded that the bank could increase its activity in Sub-Saharan Africa consistent with sound lending principles by being more flexible in its financing and underwriting terms. And the bill contains a mandate to that effect.

Third, as a proud member of the Congressional Caucus on Armenian Issues and the representative of a large and vibrant Armenian-American community, I support the provisions which would prohibit the Export-Import Bank from funding railroad projects in South Caucasus region that deliberately exclude Armenia.

Fourth, in listening to my constituents and others and discussing with the bank, it became clear to me that businesses, large and small, are frustrated by transparency and unfriendliness in the bank process. Several of them said that their applications simply disappeared.

At my initiative, the bill contains several transparency reforms that respond to this concern. I expect these relatively low-cost changes will provide significant benefits to Ex-Im clients. They include notification requirements, so that applicants know what is happening to their application.

Ex-Im has recently put up an improved Web site, and the bill requires that applicants be able to access their application on that site and see where it is in the process. Most colleges manage student applications in a similar manner, and it is time for Ex-Im to improve in this respect, as well. The bank should tell applicants whether it can support them or not in a reasonable time frame.

Finally, and very important, the bill contains new provisions to make the bank more competitive with other countries’ export credit agencies, or ECAs, so that the bank and U.S. companies are not fighting with one hand tied behind their backs. In particular, the bill gives the bank authority to use the Tied Aid Fund, a fund established several years ago by Congress to combat unfair export practices by other countries’ ECAs. To date, Treasury has blocked the use of this fund as Congress intended, and this underlying bill will correct that.

This reform and reauthorization legislation is urgently needed. Today, more than ever, the future of the Export-Import Bank is of great interest and concern because it has significant potential to affect the national economy, job growth and our trade imbalance.

We are faced with the need to pass reauthorization legislation for our Nation’s export credit agency at a time when the demands of the global marketplace seem increasingly pressing and difficult and the agenda of the Export-Import Bank is more critical to our economy than ever before.

The Export-Import Bank has long played a key role in the economy of many of the districts we each represent. As the independent U.S. Government agency that assists in financing the export of U.S. goods and services to markets around the world, through export credit guarantee and direct loans. But the bank’s mission of creating and maintaining U.S. jobs through financing exports takes on a new urgency and importance in the new global economy.

Tom Friedman’s book, The World is Flat, brought home to many of us the fact that an economic tsunami is occurring under our feet. The convergence that has brought India, China and many other countries into the global supply chain for services and manufacturing has created an explosion of wealth in the middle classes of the world’s two biggest nations, giving them a huge new stake in global prosperity.

As former Chairman Greenspan was fond of telling us when we asked him about the loss of jobs in this country, we need to recognize, he said, that all of a sudden a huge number of highly educated people from formally non-competitive countries have entered the global workforce. We cannot afford to be uncompetitive in the rapidly changing global market or complacent about our status in the global market.

As members on both sides of the House recognize, we must empower and support Ex-Im now more than ever. I think we have crafted a bill that Members from both sides can support and that is much needed. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 5068.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this bipartisan bill will strengthen the Ex-Im Bank’s ability to help our exporters increase their businesses abroad. During a February roundtable meeting held in my district, many businesses said that they only learned about the bank’s tremendous resources by accident. I am pleased that this and other suggestions made by these businesses were incorporated into the bill, including language that directs the bank to increase its outreach to small businesses.

I encourage Members of this body to spread the word about the bank’s export financing opportunities, and I encourage Members to contact the bank to determine what businesses, large and small, directly and indirectly, are being supported by the bank’s services.

For example, I learned that Ex-Im financing for one aircraft can translate into work for over 100 small businesses in my district alone. And I received a report issued by the bank last Friday that highlighted businesses in my district, ranging from a knee guard company to one that makes printing presses, have benefited from about $4.6 million in Ex-Im products over the past decade.

On another note, I would like to take this opportunity to commend the bank’s new chairman, Jim Lambright and his team for aggressively moving on several important fronts; helping our U.S. businesses to keep a competitive edge in the global marketplace, listening to businesses and implementing bank reforms.

For example, to help them beat foreign competitors, businesses in my district suggested that the bank enhance application transparency and provide electronic on-line processing. The bank has done just that. A business can now register with the Ex-Im Bank online and easily track its application as it moves through the review process.

Mr. Speaker, in our increasingly competitive global environment, we must ensure that we provide every advantage, and remove every disadvantage, for U.S. businesses to “win the sale” over foreign competitors. Make no mistake about it: Ex-Im is one of the best tools we have to ensure that our businesses are allowed to beat the competition abroad. More importantly, it is jumper cables to the economy, helping U.S. businesses increase exports and create more and better U.S. jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the honorable gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELAZQUEZ), the ranking member of the Small Business Committee. I thank her once again for her leadership on this legislation.

(Ms. VELAZQUEZ asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the gentlelady from New York for yielding, and also for the great leadership that she exhibited in working in a bipartisan manner on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5068, the Export-Import Bank Reauthorization Act of 2006. The legislation before us today will increase lending opportunities for all of our Nation’s exporters and will improve the country’s trade performance.

The Nation’s rapidly and exponentially rising trade deficit indicates that our businesses are losing their competitive edge in the global economy. One sector of American industry, small businesses, has bucked this trend, demonstrating success exporting to markets across the world. Today, these businesses are the Nation’s leading exporters, dominating many sectors, operating with a trade surplus, and are growing two times faster than their corporate counterparts. However, due to limited finances and production capacity, these firms face obstacles trading internationally.

The Export-Import Bank was established to increase the capacity for all United States businesses to competitively engage in international trade by providing access to affordable financing and insurance. Yet the bank has failed to fulfill its congressional mandate established in the previous reauthorization to ensure that small businesses are a priority in lending decisions.

To establish a culture that prioritizes these businesses, the bank’s institutional structure on policies must be enhanced to focus on small exporter issues. I believe the new changes adopted in the legislation will significantly expand lending opportunities as it creates a new Small Business Division, an Office for Minority Exporters and a minority financing goal at the bank. These changes will ensure that the bank fulfills its mandate to support a cultural component of the Nation’s trade strategy.

The country will significantly benefit from challenging the bank to expand financing opportunities for all of our entrepreneurs. By approving this legislation, and have the opportunity to keep small and minority businesses on the path to success. By supporting a diverse and successful set of exporters, we will also ensure that the Nation improves its trade performance.

I urge Members to support the bill to ensure that all of our promising businesses can succeed in the global economy.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL).

(Mr. PAUL asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, Congress should reject H.R. 5068, the Export-Import Reauthorization Act, for economic, constitutional, and moral reasons. The Export-Import Bank takes money from American taxpayers to subsidize exports by American companies. Of course it is not just any company that receives Ex-Im support.

The vast majority of Ex-Im Bank funds benefit Enron-like outfits that must rely on political connections and government subsidies to survive and/or multinational corporations who can afford to support their own efforts without relying on the American taxpayers.

In fact, according to journalist Robert Novak, Enron itself received over $610 million in taxpayer-funded assistance from Ex-Im. The taxpayer-provided largess no doubt helped postpone Enron’s inevitable day of reckoning. It is not only bad economics to force working American small businesses and entrepreneurs to subsidize the exports of large corporations; it is also immoral.

Redistribution from the poor and middle class to the wealthy is the most indefensible aspect of the welfare state, yet it is the most accepted form of welfare.

Mr. Speaker, it never ceases to amaze me how Members who criticize welfare from the poor on moral and constitutional grounds see no problem with the even more objectionable programs that provide welfare for the rich.

The moral case against Ex-Im is strengthened when one considers that the governments which benefit most from Ex-Im funds is Communist China. In fact, Ex-Im actually underwrites joint ventures with firms owned by the Chinese Government. Whatever one’s position is on trading with China, I would hope all of us would agree that it is wrong to force taxpayers to subsidize in any way this regime.

Unfortunately, China is not an isolated case. Colombia and Sudan benefit from taxpayer subsidized trade as well, courtesy of the Ex-Im Bank. At a time when the Federal Government is running huge deficits and Congress is once again preparing to raid Social Security and Medicare trust funds, does it really make sense to use taxpayers’ funds to benefit politically powerful companies, foreign 500 companies, and Communist China?

One project funded by Ex-Im in China is an $18 million loan guarantee to expand steel manufacturing. This is not an isolated example of how Ex-Im helps foreign steel producers. According to the most recent figures available, the five countries with the greatest Ex-Im exposure are all among the top 10 exporters of steel and of steel-to-products to the United States. Indeed, Ex-Im provides almost $20 billion of U.S. taxpayer support to these countries. Mr. Speaker, I find it hard to see how taxing American steel producers to benefit their foreign competitors strengthens the American economy.

Proponents of continued American support for the Ex-Im Bank claim that the bank creates jobs and promotes economic growth. However, this is a fallacy worth looking into.

However, the loan rests on a version of what the great economist Henry Hazlitt called the “broken window” fallacy. When a hoodlum throws a rock through a store window, it can be said he has contributed to the economy, as the storeowner will have to spend money hav- ing the window fixed. The benefits to those who repaired the window are visible for all to see, therefore it is easy to see the broken win- dow as economically beneficial. However, the “benefits” of the broken window are revealed as an illusion when one takes into account what the resources, the businesses and workers who would have benefited had the store owner not spent money repairing a window, but rather had been free to spend his money as he chose.

Similarly, the beneficiaries of Eximbank are visible to all. What is not seen is the products that would have been built, the businesses that would have been started, and the jobs that would have been created had the funds used for the Eximbank been left in the hands of consumers. Leaving the resources in the private sector allows the resources to be put to the use mostly highly valued by individual consumers. In contrast, when the government diverts resources into the public sector via programs such as the Eximbank, their use is determined by bureaucrats and politically power- ful special interests, resulting in a distortion of the market and a misallocation of resources. By distorting the market and preventing resources from achieving their highest valued use, Eximbank actually costs Americans jobs and reduces America’s standard of living.

Some opponents of this bill state that supporting Eximbank with supporting “free trade,” and claim that opponents are “protectionists” and “isolationists.” Mr. Speaker, this is nonsensical. Eximbank has nothing to do with free trade. True free trade involves the peaceful, voluntary exchange of goods across borders, not forcing taxpayers to subsidize the exports of politically powerful companies. Eximbank is not free trade, but rather managed trade, where winners and losers are determined by how well they please government bureaucrats instead of how well the products please consumers.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind my colleagues that there is simply no constitu- tional justification for the expenditure of funds on programs such as Eximbank. In fact, the drafters of the Constitution would be horrified to think that the government is taking hard earned money from the American people in order to benefit the politically powerful.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, Eximbank distorts the market by allowing government bu- reaucrats to make economic decisions in place of individual consumers. Eximbank also violates basic principles of morality, by forcing working Americans to subsidize the trade of wealthy companies that could easily afford to subsidize their own trade, as well as sub- sidizing brutal governments like Red China and the Serbs. Eximbank also violates the constitutional limitations on congressional power to take the property of individual citizens and use it to benefit powerful special interests. It is for these reasons that I urge my colleagues to re- ject H.R. 5068, the Export-Import Bank Reau- thorization bill.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to the remaining time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentle- woman from New York has 3 minutes remaining.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), the ranking member of the housing subcommittee of the Financial Services Committee.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5068, the Export-Import Bank reauthorization bill.

I would like to thank the Committee on Financial Services chairman, Mr. OXLEY, and Ranking Member FRANK for moving this important measure through our committee.

Ms. PRYCE, the chairwoman on the Subcommittee on Domestic and International Monetary Policy, Trade and Technology, and, of course, our ranking member, Mrs. MALONEY, who has provided leadership on this issue as well as many other issues, has done a fabulous job on making sure that the members of our committee understood very well the importance of the Ex-Im Bank to not only the national economy but to American jobs, to small businesses and workers who would be able to make jobs and grow our economy.

The reauthorization of the Export-Import Bank, H.R. 5068, is particularly important in light of our current trade deficit which stands at more than $600 billion. Indeed, we must continue to be proactive in terms of programs that will encourage the expansion of our ex- ports. The export sector of our econ- omy is critical to job creation at the local level.

This bill makes the Ex-Im Bank more relevant in today’s global economy, be- cause it better supports U.S. exports.

Last year the bank was engaged in more than 3,000 transactions, with an export value of $17.9 billion and returned over $1.7 billion to the Treasury.

This bill should increase the overall level of exports. Of course, I am en- couraged by this and hope that this bill will benefit small businesses as well. The man- agement of the office of our senior offi- cial sends a strong signal to the small business community that small busi- nesses are an important part of the Export-Import equation. Equally impor- tant, the office should be required to interface with the U.S. Small Business Administration, which has built an excel- lent reputation as a repository of in- formation for small exporters.

This reverses a trend that I believe developed as a result of the weakening of policies at the bank that have been in place to encourage the participation of small businesses in our export mar- ket, particularly minority-and women- owned businesses.

During markup of this bill, an amendment that I sponsored had been made part of the bill reported to the full House. It requires the bank to de- velop performance measures related to minority- and women-owned business programs. This will ensure that the management of Ex-Im Bank is directly involved in developing programs de- signed to increase participation of minority- and women-owned businesses in Ex-Im Bank programs.

The performance measures will be de- veloped in concert with GAO and will enable Congress to determine how the small business programs for minorities and women that are put in place are performing. In addition, I am pleased that the bill contains a provision to promote increased trade with Africa.

I consider Mr. PAUL as a serious person, I take him seriously. I will look into some of that which he has said.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of today’s H.R. 5068, to reauthorize the Export-Import Bank. I want to thank Chairwoman PRYCE, Chairman OXLEY, and Chairman MANZULLO. We have created a strong bill that will empower small businesses in America to export.

This legislation gives small busi- nesses dedicated loan officers and cre- ates a structure for dealing with small business concerns that ensures that they are dealt with at the highest level of the bank. America’s competitiveness and economic growth depends on small business exporters.

American-made products are still the best in the world, and they deserve to have the same support from our govern- ment in making sales that our foreign rivals do. Today’s bill recognizes that fact and challenges Ex-Im to meet its commitment that 20 percent of all the lending goes to small business.

I am pleased that the amendment of H.R. 5068 today will not end the strong oversight of Ex-Im that Chairmen MANZULLO and PRYCE have provided in the last few years. Our success will not be measured by passing this bill, but it will be measured by the number of small business jobs that we create and increased exports supporting America’s small businesses. I urge passage of H.R. 5068.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentlewoman from New York for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge the leadership of the Small Business Committee and your leadership, the leadership of the Financial Services Committee. I would like to say that this bill spells relief, r-e-a-l-i-t-y, I believe. The reason is because we have heard over and over again that Export-Import Bank gives gifts to large corporations, tax giveaways, if you will, using the American people’s money simply to provide to those who already have. I have repeatedly said that the backbone of America are small and medium-sized businesses. These are the businesses that are in our neighborhoods, in our cities, large and small, our counties, our rural hamlets.

The opportunity for small business to engage in Export-Import with the financial assistance and the collaboration with the Small Business Administration is long in coming. And this fix is long in coming.

I would argue that many of the regions that we are attempting to engage and support, these barriers or break the concrete wall of a trade deficit has to do with small and medium-sized businesses, because the continent of Africa is filled with small and medium-sized businesses.

Their cultural traditions, their tribal traditions focus on the tribal hierarchy of women entrepreneurs in the marketplace. We find in south Asia, in India, Pakistan, Bangladesh there are opportunities for small and medium-sized businesses in our small medium-sized businesses, or for our small and medium-sized businesses to be able to engage internationally, if you will.

China, to break that very huge trade deficit, this now gives the financial anchor for small and medium-sized businesses to get the job done. I have always supported the Ex-Im Bank. I do think that any leg up or leverage that we can get, as we are on the international arena or development, is an opportunity, but now we have the opportunity to build on small and medium-sized businesses, and I hope as this legislation is passed, the word will go quickly out and that the lines will form to the left and the right for small businesses to become engaged.

With that, again, let me thank the proponents of the legislation. I ask my colleagues to support it.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, at this point we do not have any further speakers. I urge a strong vote on this bill. It is supported by the Financial Services Committee and the ranking members, the Chair and the ranking member of the Small Business Committee.

It has a very special focus on enabling small businesses to compete in the global market, and it will help America’s competitiveness and economic growth.

I urge a “yes” vote on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say that looking at my district, and seeing the value of exports, $1.6 million that our companies have found for export value, and that works down to $295 million for small businesses.

I think that the Ex-Im Bank is one that is, the mission is so important that we increase U.S. exports and more importantly U.S. jobs. I think that is exactly what this bill is set up to improve and to make sure that that happens.

We are in a global economy. We are in competition with countries from all over the world. If we are to maintain our high standards, we have got to compete in the export market. I think this bill will help to do that. I would urge all Members to support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss not to thank Chairman OXLEY for all the work that he has done on this bill, and Ranking Member MALONEY for all of the work that they have put into this.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge an “aye” vote.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Export-Import Bank Reauthorization under suspension vote today.

This is a sound, bipartisan bill.

So often, people see the acrimonious side of this House rife with partisanship and member distrust.

We do not have that on the Export-Import Bank, and we do not have that on the Small Business Committee.

I urge a strong vote in favor of this bill.

As we all know, the Ex-Im Bank is one of the most economically sound routes is through the Ceyhan pipeline. This pipeline does not pass through Armenia, even though the fastest and most economically sound route is through the country.

Now Turkey, Azerbaijan, and Georgia plan on constructing a railway that will completely bypass Armenia once again; once again excluding Armenia from regional development.

Exclusion of one country in regional projects only fosters instability. Having Export-Import Bank support a railway project which excludes Armenia is not the way to include all countries in regional development. I am pleased that the Bank is now prohibited from doing so in this bill.

Besides possibly creating a regional crisis, this project, if funded by the Export-Import Bank could cost taxpayers millions. I do not believe that U.S. taxpayers should be funding a project that goes against U.S. interests.

For over 10 years, Armenia has fought an illegal blockade, imposed on them by the countries of Turkey and Azerbaijan. These two countries continually exclude Armenia from regional development.

Just recently, Turkey, Azerbaijan, and Georgia completed construction on the Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan pipeline. This pipeline does not pass through Armenia, even though the fastest and most economically sound route is through the country.

Now Turkey, Azerbaijan, and Georgia plan on constructing a railway that will completely bypass Armenia once again; once again excluding Armenia from regional development.

Exclusion of one country in regional projects only fosters instability. Having Export-Import Bank support a railway project which excludes Armenia is not the way to include all countries in regional development. I am pleased that the Bank is now prohibited from doing so in this bill.

Besides possibly creating a regional crisis, this project, if funded by the Export-Import Bank could cost taxpayers millions. I do not believe that U.S. taxpayers should be funding a project that goes against U.S. interests.

I am pleased this good language was added to an already good bill—a jobs bill for America.

Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support the Export-Import Bank.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, today the House is considering H.R. 5068, legislation that will reauthorize the Export-Import Bank for the next 5 years. I support this legislation.

Since it was created over 60 years ago, the Export-Import Bank has provided crucial support for American exporting businesses—especially small businesses. Because small businesses provide the majority of jobs here in the U.S., the work of the Bank translates into real jobs for American families.

I particularly pleased this bill includes a provision that prohibits assistance from the Export-Import Bank for a proposed new railroad that would connect Turkey, Georgia, and Azerbaijan, but would intentionally circumvent Armenia. This provision is extremely similar to H.R. 3361, the South Caucasus Integration and Open Railroads Act, legislation I introduced to ensure U.S. taxpayer funds are not used to promote a proposal or program that directly undermines the United States goal of fostering international cooperation among the countries in the South Caucasus.

Open and integrated transportation routes among Armenia, Azerbaijan, Georgia, and Turkey are necessary to promote cooperation, support economic growth, and help resolve regional conflicts. Unfortunately, this policy is being undermined in an effort to push Armenia further into isolation.

The design for the new rail line defies logistical and geographical logic, and intends to prevent future economic development from reaching Armenia. The proposed rail link would cost between $400 million and $800 million and would take years to construct, even though a perfectly workable rail link that goes through the city of Gyumri, Armenia already exists and would be fully operational with a few minor repairs.

Mr. Speaker, I commend my colleagues on the House Financial Services Committee that included this provision into this bill and I urge support for passage of H.R. 5068.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this legislation and to insert extraneous material thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROMOTING TRANSPARENCY IN FINANCIAL REPORTING ACT OF 2006

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5024) to require annual oral testimony before the Financial Services Committee of the Chairperson or a designee of the Chairperson of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Financial Accounting Standards Board, and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, relating to their efforts to promote transparency in financial reporting, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5024
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be referred to as the “Promoting Transparency in Financial Reporting Act of 2006”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS. Congress finds the following:

(1) Transparent and clear financial reporting is integral to the continued growth and strength of our capital markets and the confidence of investors.

(2) The increasing detail and volume of accounting, auditing, and reporting guidance pose a major challenge to the quality and transparency of financial reporting.

(3) The complexity of accounting and auditing standards in the United States has added to the costs and effort involved in financial reporting.

SEC. 3. ANNUAL TESTIMONY ON REDUCING COMPLEXITY IN FINANCIAL REPORTING. The Securities and Exchange Commission, the Financial Accounting Standards Board, and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board shall annually provide oral testimony by their respective Chairpersons or a designee of the Chairperson, beginning in 2007, and for 5 years thereafter, to the Committee on Financial Services of the House of Representatives on their efforts to reduce the complexity of financial reporting to provide more accurate and clear financial information to investors, including—

(1) reassessing complex and outdated accounting standards;

(2) improving the understandability, consistency, and overall usability of the existing accounting and auditing literature;

(3) developing principles-based accounting standards;

(4) encouraging the use and acceptance of interactive data; and

(5) promoting disclosures in “plain English”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HAYES). Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. DAVIS) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. ISRAEL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. DAVIS of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to recognize this bill as a result of a true bipartisan effort. I want to thank Chairman OXLEY and Ranking Member HAYES for their support, and particularly our original cosponsors Congressman ISRAEL from New York and Congressman SCOTT from Georgia.

This has been an effort that has come together across the aisle to provide a bill which would improve financial reporting, simplify our regulatory system over time to ultimately help our country compete in a global economy.

In the post-Enron financial era, transparent reporting has become an increasingly important component promoting a healthy corporate environment. Financially stable, accountable corporations are essential for expanding the U.S. business sector, promoting investor confidence, and for strengthening the economy. However, it is important to examine ways in which such accountability and reporting standards can become more efficient and more transparent. A cumbersome, costly system will only reduce our competitiveness in a connected world economy and ultimately will cost us jobs.

I regularly hear complaints from business owners and executives in Kentucky about the cost and the complexity of financial reporting requirements mandated by the Federal Government. As a former business consultant, I know firsthand the difficulties faced during the time-consuming and costly process of accounting and financial disclosure. We must update our methods of accountability to reflect 21st century technology in a global marketplace.

Unfortunately, financial reporting remains an arduous task with too many opportunities for error and for manipulation. Reassessing outdated accounting standards and improving the ability of the average investor to understand and utilize financial literature is essential to the livelihood of American business and the protection of American investors.

Requiring annual congressional testimony by the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Financial Accounting Standards Board, and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board stresses that simplification, cost reduction, and transparency in accounting standards and financial reporting are public priorities. We must assure continuity in our markets and continuity in the process.

This bill will provide the Federal Government the opportunity to apply a philosophy of continuous improvement, looking for ways to lock in regulatory structure and to reduce costs.

As stated in the bill, we would like to direct attention to several areas of particular concern. First, I would like to point out that H.R. 5024 will give Congress a way to measure progress on the efforts of these organizations over the next 5 years, and ensure that they are working to streamline and modernize the process of financial reporting.

First, we need to reassess complex and outdated accounting standards. We need to improve understandability, consistency, and the overall usability of the existing accounting and auditing literature. We need to develop principle-based accounting standards. We need to encourage the use and acceptance of interactive data, or extensible business reporting language, XBRL, and, finally, in the end to promote disclosure of the highest standards.

Simplifying the process of accountability will do two things: First, it reduces the risk of error and misuse by making the process simpler and more transparent. And, second, it will help work reduce the risk of unscrupulous professionals who have visibility to the information they can understand without needing to ask a CPA or a tax attorney.

I appreciate the efforts of these organizations thus far to reduce complexity, and I recognize the public statements of support for such efforts by SEC Chairman Chris Cox and FASB Chairman Robert Herz. As SEC Chairman Cox said at the SEC Historical Society meeting in June, this process is going to take time, but it is our job to make sure that the capital markets remain strong and remain vibrant. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ISRAEL. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the Promoting Transparency in Financial Reporting Act, and I want to thank my good friend from Kentucky (Mr. DAVIS) for introducing this important measure. I was pleased to cosponsor it and I am very pleased to work with him on the bill.

I also want to thank the chairman and ranking member of the Financial Services Committee, Mr. OXLEY and Mr. FRANK, for bringing this bipartisan legislation to the floor today.

H.R. 5024 requires that the chairpersons of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Financial Accounting Standards Board, and the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board provide oral testimony to the Committee on Financial Services on their efforts to reduce the complexity in financial reporting to provide more accurate and clear financial information to investors. These appearances before the committee would begin in 2007 and continue annually for 5 years.

Madam Speaker, the ability of America’s investors to make informed decisions is severely compromised when financial reporting is inaccurate, when it is incomplete, when it is unclear. We saw the consequences of bad financial reporting years ago during the corporate accountability scandals at Enron and WorldCom, and others. These bankruptcies not only revealed weaknesses in many aspects of our financial reporting system, but showed the devastating financial impact when their financial statements are not held to the highest standards.

In many cases, the complexity of financial reporting requirements has made it very difficult to detect purposeful violations of those standards. Congress, regulators, and the industry assessed these financial reporting failures and reacted with efforts aimed at strengthening the financial reporting system. Sarbanes-Oxley made very important initial strides to this end; however, much more needs to be done.

This measure is an important next step. By calling on the SEC, PCAOB, and FASB to testify each year on the steps they are taking to improve financial disclosures, Congress is ensuring that we maintain a vigilant oversight function. We can gather the necessary information to ensure that, should we need to act legislatively, we are doing it in a sober, thoughtful manner based on data rather than in haste as we respond to the latest news cycle.

Madam Speaker, this legislation will help us as we work with the FEC, FASB and the PCAOB to improve our financial reporting system. It is important that we maintain a vigilant focus on this issue. And, to that end, I urge all of my colleagues to support this measure. Again, I was pleased to work closely with the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Davis of Kentucky. Madam Speaker, again, I want to reiterate my thanks to the gentleman from New York. It has been a great process to see this come to pass. Let’s pass this bill as a first step in a process for continuous improvement that will simplify and improve our financial reporting regulatory framework.

Madam Speaker, I have no other requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ISRAEL. Madam Speaker, everything that can be said has been said. We have no speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. Biggers). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Davis) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5024, as amended.

The question was taken: and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISASTER RECOVERY PERSONAL PROTECTION ACT OF 2006

Mr. KUHL of New York. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5013) to amend the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to prohibit the confiscation of firearms during certain national emergencies, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5013

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) The Second Amendment to the Constitution states that a "well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed," and Congress has repeatedly recognized this language as protecting an individual right.

(2) In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, State and local law enforcement and public safety service organizations were overwhelmed and could not fulfill the safety needs of the citizens of the State of Louisiana.

(3) In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, the safety of these citizens, and of their homes and property, was threatened by instances of criminal activity.

(4) Many of these citizens lawfully kept firearms for the safety of themselves, their loved ones, their businesses, and their property, as guaranteed by the Second Amendment, and used their firearms, individually or in concert with their neighbors, for protection against crime.

(5) In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, certain agencies confiscated the firearms of these citizens in contravention of the Second Amendment, depriving these citizens of the right to keep and bear arms, and rendering them helpless against criminal activity.

(6) These confiscations were carried out at gunpoint by nonconsensual entries into private homes, by traffic checkpoints, by stoppage of boats, and otherwise by force.

(7) The citizens from whom firearms were confiscated were either in their own homes or attempting to flee the flooding and devastation by means of motor vehicle or boat, and were accosted, stopped, and arbitrarily deprived of their private property and means of protection.

(8) The means by which the confiscations were carried out, which included intrusion into the home, temporary detention of persons, and seizures of property, constituted unreasonable searches and seizures and deprived these citizens of liberty and property without due process of law in violation of fundamental rights under the Constitution.

(9) Many citizens who took temporary refuge in emergency housing were prohibited from storing firearms on the premises, and were treated as second-class citizens who had forfeited their constitutional right to keep and bear arms.

(10) At least one highly-qualified search and rescue team was accused of joining in relief efforts because the team included individuals with firearms, although these individuals had been deputized as Federal law enforcement officers.

(11) These confiscations and prohibitions, and the means by which they were carried out, deprived the citizens of Louisiana not only of their right to keep and bear arms, but also of their rights to personal security, personal liberty, and private property, all in violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SEC. 3. PROHIBITION ON CONFISCATION OF FIREARMS DURING CERTAIN NATIONAL EMERGENCIES.

Title VII of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5201) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 706. FIREARMS POLICIES.

"(a) Prohibition on confiscation of firearms.—No officer or employee of the United States (including any member of the uniformed services, or any agent thereof), or any person acting under color of Federal law, or receiving Federal funds, or under control of any Federal official, or providing services to such an officer, employee, or other person, while acting in support of relief from a major disaster or emergency, may—

(1) temporarily seize, permanently seize, or authorize seizure of, any firearm the possession of which is prohibited under Federal, State, or local law, other than for forfeiture to a Federal law or as evidence in a criminal investigation;

(2) require registration of any firearm for which registration is not required by Federal, State, or local law;

(3) prohibit possession of any firearm, or promulgate any rule, regulation, or order prohibiting possession of any firearm, in any place where such possession is not otherwise prohibited by Federal, State, or local law; or

(4) prohibit the carrying of firearms by any person otherwise authorized to carry firearms under Federal, State, or local law, solely because such person is operating under the direction, control, or supervision of a Federal agency in support of relief from the major disaster or emergency.

(b) LIMITATION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit any person from possessing or transporting a firearm as a condition for entry into any mode of transportation used for rescue or evacuation during a major disaster or emergency.

(c) PRIVILEGS OF ACTION. —

(1) IN GENERAL.—Any individual aggrieved by a violation of this Act may bring an action for return of such firearm in violation of this section, in an action at law, suit in equity, or other appropriate proceeding for redress against any person who subjects such individual, or causes such individual to be subjected, to the deprivation of any of the rights, privileges, or immunities secured by this section.

(2) REMEDIES.—In addition to any existing remedies against any person who subjects any individual aggrieved by the seizure or confiscation of a firearm in violation of this section may bring an action for return of such firearm in the United States district court in the district in which that individual resides or in which such firearm may be found.

(3) ATTORNEY FEES.—In any action or proceeding to enforce this section, the court shall award the prevailing party, other than the United States, a reasonable attorney’s fee as part of the costs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the gentleman from New York (Mr. KUHL) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials in H.R. 5013, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, State and local enforcement and public safety service organizations were overwhelmed, and many citizens felt threatened. Any one of these citizens lawfully kept firearms for the safety of themselves, their loved ones, their businesses, and their property as guaranteed to them by the second amendment, and used their firearms for protection against crime.

Following the hurricane, certain agencies confiscated the firearms of these law-abiding citizens, rendering them helpless against criminal activity. H.R. 5013, the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006, was introduced by Representative JINDAL on March 28, 2006. I am a proud cosponsor of this bill which amends the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act to prohibit the confiscation of lawfully possessed firearms by an individual operating under the color of Federal law while acting in support of a major disaster or emergency declaration, unless the confiscation is otherwise permitted by law.

This bill ensures that law-abiding citizens can continue to protect themselves, their loved ones, their businesses, and their property as guaranteed by the second amendment during disasters, when law enforcement is most likely to be overwhelmed and unable to fulfill the safety needs of the citizens they serve. It prevents agencies from arbitrarily depriving law-abiding citizens of their private property and means of protecting themselves during a disaster.

Additionally, this bill clarifies that an individual may require the temporary surrender of a firearm as a condition for entry into any mode of transportation used for rescue or evacuation during a major disaster or emergency.

For example, rescuers such as the Coast Guard can require the surrender of guns before an individual enters their vessel.

In short, this bill provides some common sense limitation on the wholesale confiscation of guns during disasters without limiting the enforcement of local, state, or Federal laws.

Madam Speaker, I support this measure and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Madam Speaker, I yield to Mr. NADLER from New York such time as he may consume.

Mr. NADLER. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 5013, the so-called Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006. There is really only one word to describe this bill: Insane. The proper title of this bill should be ‘The Right to Sue Cops and National Guardsmen Act of 2006.’

The premise of the bill is that following Hurricane Katrina, and possession during a disaster or emergency, any person illegally seized guns from people who had legal permits to own a gun.

In some cases, they may have been seized because law enforcement did not want guns inside a public shelter. In other cases, people evacuated and left guns behind, and the police collected these guns so they would not fall into the hands of looters.

The NRA claimed this was illegal and sued the New Orleans Police Department. The New Orleans Police Department stated it had to determine who were the rightful owners of the guns before they could return them. I believe the lawsuit has since been settled, and the guns are being returned to their rightful owners.

Yet today, we are considering a bill that would ostensibly solve this so-called problem of guns being illegally seized following a disaster. Since the lawsuit arises from this issue that has been resolved, I do not see why the legislation is necessary.

But how does this bill solve the supposed problem? It actually creates a private right of action for gun owners to sue personally cops, National Guardsmen, FBI officers, and other law enforcement personnel who are simply carrying out their jobs following a disaster or emergency situation.

The bill says that no Federal employer, including the military, National Guardsmen, or any person connected to the Federal Government, such as members of police departments, local police departments, that receive Federal funding, or anyone acting in support of relief to a major disaster or emergency, may seize any firearm which is allowed under Federal or local law. If they do seize such a gun, it would allow a gun owner to sue a cop or National Guardsman personally, not the government, sue the cop personally, even if the officer was carrying out his official duties. And the gun owner can even recover attorneys fees.

Aside from the fact that the entire premise of the bill is ridiculous, there are a number of serious problems with the legislation.

First, the presumption is all in favor of the gun owner and not the cop. There is no requirement that the gun owner prove the gun is legal at the time it is seized. So, if a cop sees some one with a gun, he has no evidence of his right to have a gun, maybe the cop suspects he was a looter, if the cop takes the gun, he is personally liable if it turns out he had a legal right to it later. Also, if a cop finds a gun on the floor or in a store or in a home and takes it to prevent it from getting into the hands of looters, that cop can now be sued. So let us leave the guns lying around for the looters to pick up and shoot people with.

Second, if this bill passes, Federal response officials and aid workers, such as the Red Cross, would have no say where guns are carried. They could not prohibit guns in public shelters where kids are present, nor could they prevent armed gangs and vigilantes from showing up and wandering the streets with guns. People with guns can show up in any disaster situation, and law enforcement would have no say.
Third, the bill applies to a “major disaster or emergency,” which includes a terrorist attack. So if the New York Police Department responds at the World Trade Center, or the military responds to an attack at the Pentagon, and there is a group of guys with guns, law enforcement cannot dispossess them without risking being sued. Why would we want to tie the hands of the military responding to a terrorist attack? This bill has a chilling effect on law enforcement responding to a major disaster or to a terrorist attack. If law enforcement illegally seizes firearms, or seizes firearms that turn out to be legally owned, even though they have no reason to believe they are at the time, aggrieved parties already have the right to sue, as was the case when the NRA sued the NOPD. I should restate that. If law enforcement illegally seizes firearms, aggrieved parties today can sue, as was the case when the NRA sued the New Orleans Police Department. The only reason for this bill, to give an additional right, seems to be vindictive, to force some poor police officer or National Guardsman doing his job into bankruptcy.

If there really is a problem, this legislation is the wrong way to fix it. It is too broad, it is poorly drafted, and it gives an additional right, seems to be vindictive, to force some poor police officer or National Guardsman doing his job into bankruptcy.

That is why the International Brotherhood of Police Officers and the National Police Policy Center have expressed opposition to this bill. I also have a letter in opposition from the Major Cities Chiefs Association, which represent 57 major law enforcement organizations. I urge my colleagues to oppose the bill.

MAJOR CITIES CHIEFS OF POLICE OFFICERS TO THE PRESIDENT.

Re: H.R. 5013 and S. 2599, the “Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006.”

UNITED STATES CONGRESS,

Washington, D.C.

DEAR LEGISLATOR: The Major Cities Chiefs (MCC) Association represents fifty-seven (57) major law enforcement organizations in the United States and Canada who are located in a metropolitan area of more than 1.5 million population and employ more than 1,000 law enforcement officers. All our officers are actively engaged in providing law enforcement, public safety and homeland security to the citizens of our communities every day. We are writing in opposition to H.R. 5013 and S. 2599, the “Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006.”

As law enforcement professionals, we understand and acknowledge the Constitutional limitations on police power to confiscate personal property. These limitations, however, must be balanced with the need to maintain public safety and security during emergency situations. We are concerned that the bill would void local laws that guide police actions regarding firearms in emergency situations. We also feel that police should be allowed to take into safekeeping any dangerous weapons and/or explosives they find abandoned or home.

Additionally, as law enforcement executives, we feel if the President, a governor and/or mayor declares a state of emergency for a disaster that is after a disaster, the police should also be allowed to temporarily include provisions for a weapon-free zone during the area’s recovery. For example, law enforcement may need to ensure that evacuation sites are free of weapons. Sister law enforcement agencies responding to a disaster must also be free to carry their firearms into another jurisdiction and help maintain law and order until the devastated area recovers.

If there really is a problem, this bill creates a new right to file lawsuits against police who take abandoned guns for safekeeping in an emergency or create emergency secure areas free from weapons. The bill should not create a new right to file lawsuits against law enforcement seeking to safeguard the public in emergency situations. Should you need additional information, please feel free to contact MCC’s General Counsel Brent Tolbert for further clarification of our position.

Sincerely,

HAROLD L. HUETT,
MCC President.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES, SEIU, INTERNATIONAL BROTHERHOOD OF POLICE OFFICERS.

Alexandria, Va.

The IBPO stands by our brothers and sisters in law enforcement and disapproves of the bill. We do not believe that any legislation that intrudes into any police officer’s discretion to react as he or she sees fit under extreme emergency circumstances. Furthermore, the IBPO believes that responsible gun owners who continue to act in accordance with federal, state and local law are unlikely to have their guns confiscated unless they use or possess the guns in a manner or place that would be prohibited or threatening. The IBPO does not endorse the Vitter amendment #615.

Signed,

STEVE LENKART,
Special Asst. to the President,
Director of Legislative Affairs.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Madam Speaker, I yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the floor.

I would like to suggest one thing. I deeply respect the individual from New York that just spoke against the legislation and pass it. Get on with it here long enough to know never say it will not happen again.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mrs. McCARTHY).

Mrs. McCARTHY. Madam Speaker, once again, number one, I want to say thank you to the prime sponsor of my colleague from New York (Mr. NADLER), but once again, this Congress is waging a war on common sense.

House leadership accuses the New Orleans Police Department of going door to door confiscating guns in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, but the superintendent of the department states that this was not the case at all. Does anybody really think that after a disaster of that magnitude a police department’s first priority is to go door to door to take away my cherished ones from me? Of course not.

Police merely arrested people who were breaking the law on the streets of New Orleans and to door and harass gun owners? Of course not. Of what branch or other had decided they would take law into their own hands and go into a law-abiding home and confiscate a gun from a citizen who had done no wrong, was only trying to protect their home. That is the premise of this great legislation. That is the right to protect your castle. Regardless of whether it is the hoodlum, the burglar, the murderer, the rapist, or the government, no one has the right to take away my ability to defend myself, my property, my family, my cherished ones from me. I will not have to endure someone coming to my door and say, ‘I need to take away my ability to defend myself, my property, my family, my cherished ones from me. I will not have this.’
New Orleans. They were doing what they could to stop the looting and the sniper fire that slowed down the rescue workers. They never entered homes with the intent of collecting law-abiding citizens’ guns, and by the way, we do not do that. We do not believe in going into someone’s home without due cause on getting someone’s gun.

This latest scheme to appease the gun lobby will tie the hands of our police during times of crisis. The streets of an American city immediately after a disaster are no place to abandon common sense, and this bill does not do it, not even for the future. This bill allows guns in emergency shelters, provided the guns are legal. What if the gun owner does not have his license with him? Is the Red Cross official supposed to conduct background checks on gun owners to make sure they are legal? Can you imagine the outcome of looting guns allowed in the Superdome during Katrina? Again, it defies common sense.

Everyone agrees that the government failed when responding to Hurricane Katrina. The real shortcomings revealed by Katrina, the House chooses to make our first responders’ jobs more difficult in the critical hours following a natural disaster or even a terrorist attack.

This Congress has already cut funding to police officers and firefighters. Congress refused to make sure that the most at-risk communities received their fair share of homeland security funding. This bill allows Congress to give looters and criminals the upper hand in the aftermath of disaster.

It is time for common sense. Vote “no” on this irresponsible bill.

Madam Speaker, I now want to address some questions to the manager of H.R. 5013. To my colleague from New York (Mr. KUHL) may I ask, Would this bill permit a person to bring a gun into a rescue shelter? I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Thank you for yielding the time, but I would yield to the sponsor of the bill, Mr. JINDAL from Jefferson Parish. He can tell you exactly what the bill deals with and the detail. I am simply the manager.

Mr. JINDAL. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

This bill does not create nor does it delete your rights under State, local or Federal laws. So for example if there are existing State laws prohibiting guns in State shelters, this bill would do nothing to remove that prohibition. For example, many States already have existing laws prohibiting guns or firearms in schools, in sports arenas, or in other areas commonly used as shelters. Nothing in this bill would override that prohibition.

Mrs. McCARTHY. Taking back my time, understanding that, but I know there are 17 States that already do not have any laws on the books. So the Federal law would not supercede what you are trying to do.

May I ask another question. If a State law gives a Governor or may broad powers under a state of emergency, may that official order temporary confiscation in the name of public safety? Or must the State law be specifically yielded again to the gentleman from New Orleans.

Mr. JINDAL. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman again for yielding.

Again, if there is existing law allowing the Governor in a state of emergency or other circumstances to take extraordinary measures, nothing in this legislation would prohibit that Governor from doing so, or in Louisiana’s case, it may by the primary law enforcement officer of the parish, we call them parishes, not counties, nothing in this bill would override, supereceding existing State laws that allow the Governor or chief executive officer of Louisiana’s do.

Mrs. McCARTHY. I thank the gentleman for that answer, and one more question. Who is liable in any lawsuit authorized by this bill? Is it the officer who confiscates a gun or the city or the State? Can you imagine the outcome of this? Can I know you worked to change the language, is still a little bit confusing. I will state my question again: Who is liable in any lawsuit authorized by this bill? Is it the officer who confiscates a gun or the city or the State? Can the Federal Government be sued if the confiscation is made by a Federal officer? Can a person seek monetary damages in addition to the return of the gun? I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. JINDAL. Madam Speaker, again, let us be clear. I know there has been a lot of confusion and a lot of rhetoric about the private right of action contained in this bill.

In Louisiana’s case, going back to what happened specifically after Katrina, our State has already passed a State law prohibiting anybody in State or local law agencies from confiscating legally owned guns. The intent of this law is to allow agencies receiving Federal funds. The intent of the right of action was to counteract what happened last year when, even despite a court judgment, a ruling from a judge, there was still not compliance with that court ruling to return the firearms.

So the intent is to be able to allow the individuals to recover, for example, attorneys fees, court costs to put some teeth in this sure that if a judge does indeed rule in favor of a plaintiff that action will be taken. That did not always happen last year in Louisiana after Katrina.

Mrs. McCARTHY. Remaining my time, and I may weigh up with what you had just said. Because the language in the bill, as it stands right now, there is not really a clarification on that, and I hope that we can work on that.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JINDAL), the sponsor of the bill.
farmers, whether it be in their home, in their cars, in their businesses. There were instances where people were deprived of this right. Now, let me repeat this. At the same time that we had looters, at the same time that we had other problems, our State and in our city, we allowed the looting taking away the legal constitutional rights to possess a legally owned firearm.

Now, contrast that with the situation in our neighboring State of Mississippi where the Governor famously said, "If you loot, we will shoot." There were literally signs put up saying, "If you loot, we will shoot." This bill is intended to make sure that, God forbid, if there is another hurricane, another natural disaster, another calamity in my home State, that my constituents aren't left defenseless, they aren't left without the ability to call 911, they are not left without the ability to defend their homes, defend their property, serve their families.

Now, indeed, Ronald Reagan once famously said, and I will paraphrase, at the very least, we want any potential looters to have to think twice before they go through that front door. We want or defend their think twice that maybe those potential victims are armed and maybe that can serve as a useful deterrence.

There are many things this bill does not do. It does not create any new rights or limitations under Federal, State, or local law. Now, I was pleased to answer the questions of my colleague from New York. This bill, further, does not prevent, does not prevent confiscating guns from felons. It has no effect on law enforcement operations outside of the disaster relief situation.

It does not have any impact on law enforcement's ability, for example, to go after criminals and looters, to stop suspects who has no impact on law enforcement's ability to secure weapons, for example, that may be lying outside of somebody's possession. States are able, under this bill, to regulate their own shelters. States are able to adopt their own laws. For example, in Minnesota, a firearm cannot be brought on private property when the owner has posted a notice of that prohibition. My bill does not change this. This bill specifically allows the Coast Guard and others who are evacuating individuals to have their own regulations, to have their own requirements for getting on those boats, or getting on those helicopters.

For example, it allows the temporary surrender of a firearm as a condition of entry, or a State, and many do. If a State does give express authority to ban possession of a firearm to the government, to others, my bill does nothing to supersede that.

In conclusion, I am proud that my bill has the support of over 150 Members of this House, Democrats and Republicans, and it has the support of the national Fraternal Order of Police. A similar bill has been adopted in my home State of Louisiana. It does one simple thing: it merely protects residents' legal right to own firearms.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. If the gentleman will yield for a question, under this bill, if a law enforcement officer had completed evacuating people from someplace and saw a few guns lying around in a house, and didn't know who they belonged to but wanted to take them up so that looters who might come by later couldn't take them and present a menace to the public, would this prevent him from doing that? Would this subject him to a lawsuit later personally if it turned out that the owner of the house came back and said, why did he take my legally owned guns?

Mr. JINDAL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NADLER. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. JINDAL. What happened actually in New Orleans, it's actually go back to what happened.

Mr. NADLER. Answer the question, please.

Mr. JINDAL. I will, but let me actually tell you what happened in New Orleans. I would like to offer a few facts for the record as well.

There was looting, for example, of stores, where guns were potentially going to fall into the wrong hands. Nothing in this bill would prohibit law enforcement, after arresting those looters, from securing those firearms.

Mr. NADLER. Reclaiming my time, I am not talking about after arresting looters. Law enforcement people see guns lying around in a house. They don't know who they belong to.

Mr. JINDAL. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I am talking about the instance of firearms lying around this store that has been looted. In the situation he describes, where there is no reason for law enforcement officers to be in somebody's home that has been abandoned.

Mr. NADLER. Let me say this. There are lots of reasons why law enforcement may be going by: to check on the safety of people, to look into a house to see if anybody is there lying wounded or whatever. They see guns lying around. No one is there, thank God. They are all out, but they see guns lying around. They pick up those guns, lest looters come and find them later and it later turns out that those guns legally belonged to the homeowner, when that homeowner returned, he could sue the individual privately. And, therefore, no cop in his right mind would pick up those guns. He would have to leave it for the looters.

This bill, as I said before, is insane. Mr. KUHL of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the Emergency Management Subcommittee, Mr. SHUSTER.

Mr. SHUSTER. I thank the gentleman, and, Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 5013, to help ensure the American people retain their rights to defend their families and property during the chaos which may follow during a disaster.

I wish I could say that this bill wasn't needed, but after Katrina I know that it is. Following Katrina's devastation, thousands of law-abiding citizens found themselves in a desperate situation where chaos reigned and the police were overwhelmed. Under these circumstances, bedrock American principles, such as neighbor helping neighbor, self-reliance, self-defense, and even the right to bear arms were often the key to survival.

This bill is needed, because under those horrible conditions, too many Americans were denied their basic rights and had their legal firearms seized. That has to change before the next disaster strikes.

I also want to make clear, as I believe Mr. JINDAL has made clear, that this bill does not suspend any existing law enforcement, local, State, or Federal; nor does it somehow make it legal to use firearms in a way that is otherwise illegal. I want to repeat that, because some today are trying to confuse that. This bill does not spend any existing law enforcement power. It does not suspend any existing law enforcement power. It does not somehow make it legal to use firearms in a way that is otherwise illegal.

If people use their guns illegally, then law enforcement has the legal authority to apprehend suspects and seize their guns. Nothing in this bill changes that.

In closing, let me again thank Mr. JINDAL and Mr. KUHL for their leadership on this issue, and I look forward to working with them and other Members to move this bill forward.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair how much time remains on both sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GILLMOR). The gentleman from Minnesota has 8 1/2 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from New York has 9 1/2 minutes remaining.

Mr. OBERSTAR. I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. STRICKLAND).

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and, Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5013, the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006. This good bipartisan effort will protect individuals’ rights to maintain their personal firearms during an emergency. Unfortunately, we know what happened just a few months ago in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina. Many in the gulf coast region had their personal firearms confiscated by authorities. Many families lost valuable heirlooms this way. H.R. 5013 would allow individuals in future disasters to maintain possession of their personal property, including their firearms. I urge all of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this common-sense and much-needed legislation.

Mr. KUHL of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SCHWARZ).

Mr. SCHWARZ of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join my colleagues in support of the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act, H.R. 5013, of which I am a cosponsor.

While looting and other criminal activity were taking place in New Orleans, many civilians chose to protect themselves and their property. Many of these items were firearms for the safety of themselves, their businesses, their families, and their property. They used firearms individually or in concert with their neighbors for protection against looters.

However, these lawful weapons were confiscated at gunpoint by insurrection without due process of law, in violation of fundamental rights under the Constitution.

Many of the confiscated firearms were family heirlooms, gifts given as a child, or were collectors’ items. All firearms were turned over with a hand-written receipt on a stray piece of paper or no receipt at all. Individuals with proof of purchase and serial number are still not able to get their firearms back. Of the few firearms that have been returned, some are ruined beyond repair due to water damage. Many of the firearms lost or stolen will never be returned.

H.R. 5013 clearly states the rights of people who own firearms during a major disaster or emergency. H.R. 5013 protects civilians’ rights to bear arms, and H.R. 5013 allows people the right to protect themselves and their property as our forefathers intended.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the principal problem with this bill is that it didn’t have any hearings. The bill was introduced and moved through the committee without deliberation. Many of the issues that have been discussed this afternoon on the floor were issues that could and should have been raised in the course of hearings, and that would have been resolved, as they have been in the bill now under consideration, but not in the bill introduced nor in the bill reported from committee.

Now, the appropriate order of business in our committee is we, unless there is overwhelming consensus, we have a hearing on a bill. And even on bills in which there is overwhelming consensus on both sides, we have hearings on the legislation, because there is always something that may come up that we hadn’t thought about. And there were things that came up in this bill that the drafters hadn’t thought about, and those were issues of law enforcement, public safety officials, specifically the Coast Guard.

The Coast Guard is mobilized to deal with a disaster when it has to evacuate persons stricken by disaster, hurricanes, floods, at sea under tempestuous circumstances, as we see on the Weather Channel and not only rescuing people under extraordinary adverse circumstances. The bill, as introduced, would have prohibited a Coast Guard officer from requiring a person boarding a rescue helicopter, boarding a rescue vessel, a search and rescue ship, would have prohibited those persons from surrendering their firearm. Not to seize the firearm, not to take it away permanently, but to say we will keep this for you until you are safely that gives the Coast Guard the authority to do that.

Now, we should have had the bill under consideration in the committee, and we should have provided that authority to the Coast Guard, and that authority would be perfectly acceptable to advocates of firearm ownership. I have been, for 32 years, an advocate for firearm ownership. I have supported the right to keep and bear arms for all my service in the Congress and long before that, as a young lad growing up in northern Minnesota going out hunting before school and after school and on the weekends. But this is a different situation, and we needed that authority for the Coast Guard.

So now we have it in this language that is on page 5, line 19 of the bill before us. Subsection (b) Limitation: nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit any person from requiring the surrender of a firearm as a condition for entry into any mode of transportation used to rescue or evacuate during a major disaster or emergency.

That is sensible. That is reasonable. It is not confiscation. The Coast Guard in this case, the agency that we have in mind, will hold the firearm and, after the rescue is completed, the person gets the firearm back. Now, we should have had that in the bill before it even came to the House floor.

The other problem was that, on the face of it, it would prohibit operators of shelters from requiring the surrender of a weapon as a condition for entry into the shelter. Now, this same similar language, operates to protect those who operate shelters, such as the Salvation Army or the Salvation Army Center.

Now, the principal author of the bill, the gentleman from Louisiana, spoke with accuracy about the circumstances in New Orleans and with some detail, I know of circumstances myself. My brother-in-law, who still lives in New Orleans, in fact, both my brother-in-laws live in New Orleans were affected by the flood.

I have a very close friend whose home was flooded. They would, in the second floor. They heard people looting the place. His gun was on the first floor. He had no access to the gun. He couldn’t protect the house, so to save themselves, they fled into the attic while the looters were stripping the place. They were able to do something if they had had the gun on the second floor and had more access to it.

There are many circumstances of this kind, where the person, as the gentleman from Louisiana pointed out, would be able to protect himself or herself in their own home. But you don’t need a gun to go into the Superdome. You don’t need a gun when you are in the Convention Center. If you have one and you are there, this legislation permits, under and in accordance with State and local law, the surrender of that firearm for the time of keeping or refuge in the center. That is what it does. So we have a good balance between the second amendment rights of fellow citizens, the responsibilities of the Coast Guard, protection of the Coast Guard against frivolous actions, and protection of fellow citizens who operate in all good faith, shelters for victims of disaster. In that spirit, this legislation ought to be enacted, and we ought to support the bill and it ought to pass handily in this House.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. JINDAL of New York. Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, let me simply thank the subcommittee chairman of Emergency Management, Mr. SHUSTER, for bringing this bill through the subcommittee, and certainly Chairman YOUNG for moving the bill through the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, and most importantly, I think we owe a great deal of thanks to Mr. JINDAL for recognizing a situation which was very, very, I am sure, difficult for some of the residents of his district and the people of New Orleans.

It is one thing to face a tragedy, but then also to be thrown into a situation where, in fact, you are not only stripped of your guns, your means of protection, but you are stripped of your constitutional rights. And that was what was done to the people of New Orleans whose guns and protection for their family was actually occurring in front of their very eyes. So, you know, I am not all about adopting laws that are meant to face situations that we haven’t faced before, and certainly Katrina was one of those instances we did not face before, a storm of this magnitude.

So, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this bill. I think it is a terrific bill to insure the second amendments rights to the people of not only New Orleans and future disasters, but certainly the people of this country. And I would urge all my colleagues to support it.

Mrs. CUBIN. Mr. Speaker, I hail from a state where we cherish the fundamental Second Amendment right of law-abiding citizens to own firearms. The Second Amendment is one of the most meaningful ways in which the founders of our great Nation worked to guarantee our freedom and liberty. Nowhere does the principle of liberty exist more fully than in the right to protect yourself, your loved ones and your property. With the breakdown of law and order in New Orleans following Hurricane Katrina, thousands were confronted with grave threats to their health and safety. Calls to 911 went unanswered. Police failed to stop the violence and looting. Many of the law-abiding people of New Orleans were forced to protect themselves. I was outraged that authorities illegally confiscated firearms from many of these citizens at the time they needed them most. The government rendered individuals and families defenseless and helpless in the face of imminent danger. In one case, a search and rescue team was banned from assisting in relief efforts because some of them had firearms. There are also reports of officials arbitrarily searching homes, cars, and boats in search of firearms. This is not only unacceptable, it is a violation of our Nation’s Constitution.

I cosponsored the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act of 2006 to ensure that the confiscation of firearms in New Orleans will not become a precedent for crimes in the future. H.R. 5013 will prohibit federal officials, or state and local officials under federal control, from seizing firearms or restricting firearms possession outside of applicable federal, state or local law. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, which makes it clear that citizens can count on their constitutional right to bear arms at times when they need it the most.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to oppose this bill, the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act.

As you may know, I am from Florida. So, I do not hide the fact that I am all about protecting it. Occasionally, we get hurricanes in Florida and it is dangerous for us to stay in our homes. When I go to a shelter, I do not want to have to worry that the person next to me has a gun. The shelter is a safe haven, and if that man or woman has a gun, I am not safe. The police are there for a reason. If a person has a gun, that is a threat to the public safety.

Looting is bad. I do not deny that. However, possessions can be replaced. Things are just that: things. Your life cannot be replaced. Vote no on this bill today.

Let us debate this bill in Committee and hold hearings, because the issue before we decide whether we are putting our first responders into greater danger.

Mrs. DRAKE. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to come to the floor today to voice my support for H.R. 5013, the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act. In the wake of Hurricane Katrina, we heard reports regarding the seizure of firearms from law-abiding citizens by representatives of the federal government. I was disheartened by these reports.

As we know, the Second Amendment to the Constitution firmly establishes our right to keep and bear arms. This fundamental right is all the more necessary in the aftermath of a major disaster when government is unable to provide reliable protection from crime. The denial of this right by federal officials in the aftermath of Katrina is unconscionable.

The Second Congressional District of Virginia, which I represent, encompasses the entire Atlantic coastline of the Commonwealth. While we have not experienced a natural disaster on the scale of Hurricane Katrina, the Second District is itself very susceptible to the threat of Hurricanes and other natural disasters.

With enactment of this legislation, we will codify the right of law-abiding citizens in areas affected by disasters to be able to protect themselves, their families, and their property. I am a cosponsor of the Disaster Recovery Personal Protection Act because I believe this Congress should be committed to protecting our Constitutional right to keep and bear arms. I am proud to support this legislation and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. KUHL of New York. I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) each will control 20 minutes. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 5187.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There is no objection.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota has informed me that he will not make an opening statement today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Further unanimous consent has been granted that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 5187. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members be granted 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 5187.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Further unanimous consent has been granted that all Members be granted 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 5187.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to be here this morning and to be able to discuss an important issue that is of concern to all of us, the issue of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, and the current legislation that is before this Congress.

The Kennedy Center is the anchor of the arts in our nation's capital. It is a symbol of the nation's commitment to the arts and culture, and it is a source of pride for all Americans. It is a place where we come together to celebrate the human spirit, and it is a place where we can find connection and community.

In recent years, the Kennedy Center has faced significant challenges, including financial difficulties and a need for modernization and renovation. The Kennedy Center Act of 2006 authorized additional appropriations for the Kennedy Center for fiscal year 2007, but those funds were not appropriated. As a result, the Kennedy Center was forced to operate on a reduced budget and to delay critical maintenance projects.

In response to these challenges, the Kennedy Center has implemented a number of initiatives to improve its financial health and to prepare for the future. These efforts include fundraising, cost-cutting measures, and strategic planning. However, the Center continues to face significant financial challenges, and it is clear that additional federal support is necessary.

The bill in question, H.R. 5187, is a crucial piece of legislation that would authorize additional appropriations for the Kennedy Center. This legislation includes funding for the performing arts, as well as provisions to ensure the Center's long-term financial stability.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation, as it is critical to the continued success of the Kennedy Center and to the health of the performing arts in our nation. The Kennedy Center is a national treasure, and we must work together to ensure that it has the resources it needs to thrive and to continue to serve as a source of inspiration and joy for generations to come.

I am grateful for the opportunity to speak on this important issue, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to support the Kennedy Center and to ensure that it continues to be a vital part of our nation's cultural landscape.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania has indeed explained the principal provisions... of the bill. We did here increase the capital program authorization to $20 million for fiscal 2007 from the current $18 million. And we increase the maintenance, repair and security authorization to $19.1 million, from the previous level of 18 million. That will allow the Center to proceed with renovation of the Eisenhower theater, and life safety projects associated with the roof terrace.

A major assessment of the Center indicated needs to enhance safety, and these costs in addition to what the Center is capable of providing, so the authorization level will be consistent with those recommendations.

And the bill is also consistent with the administration's budget request to provide funding, and for the appropriations amounts included in the Interior, Environment and Related Agencies Appropriation bill.

The Kennedy Center is the Nation's outstanding center for the performing arts. It is a world renowned center for the performing arts, and is a national treasure. It is, in fact, a national historic site. It is under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. We treat it as a national treasure.

These are investments in the future well-being of that structure. And the investments that we have made through this committee over many years at the time that the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Srrzuz, and the previous chairman of the full committee, Mr. Shuster, has seen to the needs, the investment that keep this Center for the Performing Arts a world premiere facility.

As President John F. Kennedy said, "A Nation without the arts has nothing to look backward to with pride, nor forward to with hope."

The investment that we make in the facility of the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts allows us to look forward with hope to the grandeur and the joy of the spirit, the human spirit that is provided by the performing arts.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Shuster. Mr. Speaker, we have no further speakers. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Srrzuz), that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill. H.R. 5187.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXPRESSIONS OF CONGRESS IN SUPPORT OF A NATIONAL BIKE MONTH

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 145) expressing the sense of Congress in support of a national bike month and in appreciation of cyclists and others for promoting bicycle safety and the benefits of cycling.

The Clerk read as follows:

WHEREAS there are over 57 million adult cyclists in the United States;
WHEREAS it is estimated that 100 million United States citizens of all ages cycle each year;
WHEREAS 5 million United States citizens commute by bicycle to work;
WHEREAS the bicycle industry generates more than $5 billion dollars a year and is an important part of the economy of the United States;
WHEREAS recreational cycling is a safe, low-impact, aerobic activity for all ages;
WHEREAS when an individual cycles as a form of regular exercise, the health of the individual may be increased;
WHEREAS a national bike month would provide an opportunity to educate United States citizens about the importance of bicycle safety and the health benefits of cycling;
WHEREAS most communities in the United States officially recognize May 20th as Bike to Work Day; and
WHEREAS the month of May has officially been celebrated as National Bike Month by the League of American Bicyclists and the majority of the international cycling community since 1956. Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that:

(1) United States citizens should observe a national bike month to educate citizens of the United States about the importance of bicycle safety and the health benefits of recycling, transportation, recreational, and environmental benefits derived from cycling;
(2) health and transportation professionals and organizations should promote bicycle safety and the benefits of cycling; and
(3) United States citizens should salute the more than 57 million cyclists in the United States and the national and community organizations, individuals, volunteers, and professionals associated with cycling for promoting bicycle safety and the benefits of cycling.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Petri), and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Blumenauer) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 145.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such a request.

Since 1956, the international cycling community and the League of American Bicyclists have celebrated May as National Bike Month. This resolution expresses the sense of Congress that U.S. citizens should observe a National Bike Month.

Over 100 million American citizens of all ages cycle each year. In addition, 5 million people commute by bike to work.

But these people are the exception, not the rule. Over 57 million people in the United States are overweight. 78 percent of Americans do not meet the recommended United basic activity.

During this time when childhood obesity and type II diabetes are rising at alarming rates, it is important that we encourage people to a more active lifestyle.

Cycling is a safe, low impact, aerobic activity for all ages. As more people participate in activities such as cycling, the recent trends in obesity and type II diabetes can be reversed.

Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Bike Caucus and cosponsor of this bill, I support efforts to publicize the benefits of cycling and of bicycle safety. My home State of Wisconsin is a leader among the States in the number of trails our have observed can enjoy and more than half a million people in Wisconsin ride a bike at least once a month.

On the business side, we are the proud home of manufacturers of bikes and bike products. Even the President says establishing a National Bike Month we are providing the opportunity to educate people about the importance of bicycle safety and the health benefits of cycling.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is the 50th year we have observed Bike Month, and it has been somewhat delayed coming to the floor this year, but I think it is all the more significant.

We just witnessed this last week, American Floyd Landis in his heroic victory in the Tour-de-France, last in time for him to proceed with surgery to replace his hip.

We have watched this summer as gasoline prices have exceeded $3 a gallon across the country, and record high oil prices. To say nothing of the continued congestion, pollution and parking nightmares suffered by so many Americans. It is appropriate for us to reflect on the contributions of the bicycle today and its potential for the future.

The bicycle is the most efficient form of urban transportation yet designed by man. It is fun, healthy, inexpensive. It is often identified with kids; and that is appropriate. We are working hard to make it safe and attractive for children. The recent reauthorization of the Surface Transportation Act authorized almost $1 billion for national historic Safe Routes to School program. We are watching safety education for young cyclists around the country.
But it is important to note, as my colleague from Wisconsin pointed out, that this is not just for children. We do have over 57 million Americans who take part in cycling as part of their regular routine. It is the seventh most popular recreational activity in America.

It is also serious transportation. Those 5 million American bicycle commuters that my colleague referenced in his comments a moment ago burn 90,000 calories a year for a 5-mile commute on average instead of seven barrels of oil, a savings of 35 million barrels of oil at a time when we are concerned about our energy dependence on oil from imported sources.

It is serious in terms of our economy. That commuter who was cycling was saving money. I did a little back-of-the-envelope calculation. Since I came to Congress 10 years ago and made a decision that I was going to bring a bicycle to our Nation’s capital instead of an automobile, I have been able to save, conservatively, $40,000.

The economic impact goes beyond individuals who use bikes. It is a significant part of our Nation’s economy, somewhere between $5.5 billion and $6 billion a year in economic activity. It is significant in terms of the direct bicycle industry. Worldwide there are three times as many bicycles manufactured as cars, and even in the United States we sell more bikes than automobiles. There are some 5,000 independent specialized bicycle shops around the country, 2,000 companies that are involved with the marketing of bicycles, and manufacture of accessories.

In my community, we have recently completed an economic impact statement for cycling in Portland, Oregon. We have been able to identify well over 800 jobs and over $63 million in direct economic impact in our little community. It has dramatic ripple effects across the country.

We are also seeing an explosion in the number of bicycle events, in my community, every day across the country, hundreds of them. Bicycle tourism has assumed a very significant role, starting with the historic RAGBRAI, the ride across Iowa. State after State are now involved with similar activities. Oregon has the Cycle Oregon, a week-long adventure that often is sold out the day that the route is announced. It is a five-day adventure that often is sold out the day that the route is announced. But there are others in terms of the week-long adventure that often is sold out the day that the route is announced.

We have been able, through a collective effort, to invest in the most recent reauthorization, not just the two-thirds of $1 billion I mentioned for Safe Routes to School but some $1.5 billion of bicycle path trail amenities, several thousand projects that are priority projects of Members. It seems that every Member that I talked to has a bicycle story, something that makes a difference to them individually or to their community.

So, we are celebrating Bicycle Month and its importance to the country not just a moment too soon. Cycling is important for the health of our citizens. It is playing a larger role for the health of our economy and our environment and literally the health of our communities and our planet. We are recognizing not just a Bicycle Month but the role in cycling in making a livable community, making all our families safer, healthier, and more economically secure.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H. Con. Res. 145 to recognize May as National Bike Month and to acknowledge efforts of bicycling advocates to promote the health benefits of cycling, including reduced congestion, healthier lifestyles, and an environmentally friendly and efficient mode of transportation.

May has officially been celebrated as National Bike Month by the cycling community since 1956 to educate Americans about bike safety and the benefits of cycling. H. Con. Res. 145 provides an opportunity to salute the more than 100 million people of all ages who cycle each year, and the national and community-based volunteers and professionals associated with cycling for promoting bicycle safety and the benefits of cycling.

Cycling is the most efficient form of urban transportation in history. This transportation choice helps ease congestion on our roads and reduce environmental pollution while allowing cyclists to incorporate exercise into their everyday lives.

National Bike Month has inspired countless bike rides, safety inspections, commuter challenges, ribbon cuttings, share the road promotions, and other various celebrations of bicycling in communities throughout the Nation. Bicycling became popular in the 1880s, when cyclists formed the League of American Wheelmen—still in existence and now called the League of American Bicyclists. The league began the first organized lobby for better roads, literally paving the road for the automobile.

This body has had a major hand in encouraging greater use of human-powered travel modes, increasingly recognizing the importance of bicycling as an alternative to travel by motorized vehicles by providing unprecedented funding opportunities in the Nation’s surface transportation bill.

Funding provided in the Safe, Accountable, Flexible, Efficient Transportation Equity Act—A Legacy for Users, SAFETEA–LU, will further help communities change travel habits by building bike lanes and paths, adding side-walks, installing crosswalks and organizing safer, more efficient ways for children to get to school.

I want to thank my colleague from Oregon for introducing this important resolution, and I want to thank this body for continuing to recognize the important role that cycling plays in our Nation’s transportation system.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H. Con. Res. 145.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 235.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING CANDIDATES FOR DRIVER'S LICENSES

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 235) expressing the sense of the Congress that States should require candidates for driver’s licenses to demonstrate an ability to exercise greatly increased caution when driving in the proximity of a potentially visually impaired individual.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 235

Whereas many people in the United States who are blind or otherwise visually impaired have the ability to travel throughout their communities without assistance; whereas visually impaired individuals encounter hazards that a pedestrian with average vision could easily avoid, many of which involve crossing streets and roadways; whereas the white cane and guide dog should be generally recognized as aids to mobility for visually impaired individuals; whereas many States do not require candidates for driver’s licenses to associate the use of the white cane or guide dog with potentially visually impaired individuals; and whereas visually impaired individuals have had their white canes and guide dogs run over by motor vehicles, have been struck by the side-view mirrors of motor vehicles, and have suffered serious personal injury and death as the result of being hit by motor vehicles; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Speaker pro tempore) that it is the sense of the Congress that each State should require any candidate for a driver’s license in such State to demonstrate, as a condition of obtaining a driver’s license, an ability to associate the use of the white cane and guide dog with visually impaired individuals and to exercise greatly increased caution when driving in proximity to a potentially visually impaired individual.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EVANS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have their names inserted in the Record in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on House Concurrent Resolution 235.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

House Concurrent Resolution 235 expresses the sense of Congress that States should require candidates for driver's licenses to demonstrate an ability to exercise greatly increased caution when driving in the proximity of a potentially visually impaired individual.

Every year too many visually impaired individuals have their white canes and guide dogs run over by motor vehicles or are struck by the side-view mirrors of motor vehicles. Others suffer serious personal injury and death as a result of being hit by cars.

Unfortunately, many States do not require candidates for driver's licenses to demonstrate the ability to associate the use of the white cane or guide dog with potentially visually impaired individuals. With a little education by States and some extra attention paid by drivers, we can greatly improve safety along our streets for those individuals who are visually impaired. H. Con. Res. 235 will make friends too for little and for visually impaired individuals using mobility aids.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EVANS) for introducing this legislation. Mr. EVANS has been a friend and mentor to me during my 10 years of serving on the Veterans' Affairs Committee. I urge my colleagues to give this resolution their full support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to our distinguished colleague from Arkansas (Mr. BOOZMAN).

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin, Chairman PETRI, for yielding me this time. I would like to thank Congressman LANE EVANS for his leadership on this matter. Congressman EVANS and I serve together on the Veterans' Affairs Committee, and he is a tireless advocate for all veterans. I also want to thank Chairman PETRI for his leadership and support of the legislation.

H. Con. Res. 235 proposes that all States require that candidates for driver's licenses must have the knowledge to use increased caution when driving in the vicinity of what may be a visually impaired individual.

As a member of the Veterans' Affairs Committee, I appreciate all the hard work the Blind Veterans Association has done to support this legislation. The Blinded Veterans Association has received hundreds of letters and e-mails concerning individuals who have had their white canes hit or have been hit themselves in crosswalks by drivers who are unaware what a white cane or guide dog indicated.

As an optometrist, I know firsthand that many people with visual impairments live normal, independent lives. They too should be able to travel without fear. Unfortunately, many States do not require people who are applying for driver's licenses to indicate awareness in regards to recognition of visually impaired pedestrians. Simple legislation can greatly increase the much-needed protection for visually impaired fellow citizens.

Again, I would like to thank Congressman EVANS for his leadership on this matter, and I urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 235.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As you heard, this resolution has been fully supported by major associations for the blind, principally, the American Council for the Blind, the American Foundation for the Blind, and the Blinded Veterans Association.

It also has the support of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators.

I want to thank the chairman and ranking member of the House Transportation Committee for this resolution introduced by my good friend, Congressman LANE EVANS. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support House Concurrent Resolution 235, expressing the Sense of Congress that States adopt procedures for driver's license education or certification that improve driver awareness of the white cane or guide dog used by visually impaired pedestrians.

There are 1.5 million visually impaired Americans, who seek to gain and maintain their mobility independence. Through the agile use of the white cane, or a guide dog, our visually impaired citizens move about independently in their sight-limited world.

Unfortunately, America's drivers do not always recognize the white cane or guide dog as a warning that the user is visually impaired. Many States do not require driver license candidates to associate the use of the white cane or guide dog with visually impaired individuals.

The visually impaired report they have had their white canes and guide dogs run over by motor vehicles, have been struck by sideview mirrors, and have suffered serious personal injury as a result of being hit by cars.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHSTA) reports that 4,827 pedestrians were killed in 2003, and approximately 74,000 were injured. Pedestrians and visually impaired face an increased risk of serious personal injury and death while maneuvering America's streets and intersections.

A heightened awareness by our Nation's drivers of what a white cane or guide dog indicates will remove a potential obstacle from the safe mobility of the visually impaired.

H. Con. Res. 235 is supported by the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA), the American Council for the Blind (ACB), and the Blinded Veterans Association (BVA).

H. Con. Res. 235 will help the blind find their way to the greater freedoms associated with safer mobility.
I thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EVANS) and Ranking Member of the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs for introducing this Concurrent Resolution.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H. Con. Res. 235.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the legislation introduced by my good friend from Illinois, LANE EVANS.

I have worked for years with the distinguished Ranking Member on the Veterans Committee, and I am sorry to see him leave this fine institution. I have been blessed to have known him and this Congress will be diminished without him.

However, I am here to speak on legislation to improve driver awareness when driving around visually impaired persons.

There are 1.5 million visually impaired Americans.

The bill requests that every State in the country include information in the driver education material and driver license application manuals. Such information would instruct drivers on how to approach persons with white canes or guide dogs with recognition that such individuals are blind and that extra caution should be exercised.

It is common sense legislation that will help save a life.

This legislation was passed by the House of Representatives in the 108th Congress, but could not come to an agreement with the Senate before the end of the session. I hope we can agree to this legislation and pass it before the end of this Congress.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Con. Res. 235, a resolution that would require candidates for driver’s licenses to demonstrate an ability to exercise heightened caution when driving in the proximity of a potentially visually impaired person. It would also require these candidates to be able to relate the use of the white cane and guide dog with visually impaired individuals.

Each year, dozens of visually impaired persons are involved in car collisions. For example, a visually impaired person may be crossing a street intersection and be hit by a reckless driver. There is simply no reason for a driver to strike a visually impaired pedestrian. H. Con. Res 235 will help to reduce the likelihood of this happening in the future by educating drivers about visually impaired persons. This resolution will therefore help to safeguard visually impaired individuals and make our streets safer.

I strongly support H. Con. Res 235, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting it.

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 235.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the motion agreed to and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5074) to amend the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 to provide for continued payment of railroad retirement annuities by the Department of the Treasury, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5074
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That—

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Railroad Retirement Technical Improvement Act of 2006.”

SEC. 2. DISBURSEMENT AGENT.
Section 7(b)(4) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 (45 U.S.C. 231f(b)(4)) is amended so that subparagraph (A) reads as follows:—

“(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall serve as the disbursing agent for benefits payable under this Act, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe.”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio.

There was no objection.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support this bipartisan legislation. In 2001, after several years of intense labor management negotiations, the most comprehensive reform of the railroad retirement system in nearly 2 decades was enacted. The ERISA-type investment trust in which Tier II pension assets are invested has been performing extremely well. Payroll tax rates have gone down for both the railroads and Tier II beneficiaries.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5074, the Railroad Retirement Technical Improvement Act of 2006. This legislation, requested by the Railroad Retirement Board (Board), amends the Railroad Retirement Act to provide for continued payment and management annuities by the U.S. Department of the Treasury. Although the Railroad Retirement Board could use a private, nongovernmental disbursing agent for payment of railroad retirement benefits, as outlined in the Railroad Retirement Survivors’ Improvement Act of 2001, the Board has determined that utilizing a private disbursing agent would cost considerably more than continuing to have the Treasury Department make the payments. The annual cost of paying railroad retirement benefits through the Department of Treasury is about $800,000. In contrast, initial procurement inquiries have indicated that the first-year costs of paying railroad retirement benefits under contract with a private disbursing agent would be more than $3 million and, approximately $2.3 million in each subsequent year.

These substantial costs would be borne by the railroad retirement trust funds, which were established to support the disability, retirement, and survivor benefit programs provided for railroad workers and their families under the Railroad Retirement Act. The Board believes that using a nongovernmental disbursing agent would diminish service to its railroad worker beneficiaries. Finally, the Railroad Retirement Board and the Board’s Inspector General believe that using a nongovernmental disbursing agent would make it more difficult to collect incorrect payments and other Federal debts because the agent would not have the considerable debt collection tools of the Treasury Department.

For all of these reasons, the Railroad Retirement Board has sought and received referrals of the private disbursing agent requirement via annual appropriations acts in prior years. This legislation amends the underlying statute to authorize the continued use of the Department of the Treasury for such disbursements.

At the time of consideration of the Railroad Retirement and Survivors’ Improvement Act in 2001, I had reservations about the claims that a private disbursing agent would save money. The Board’s estimates that the private sector would cost millions of dollars more per year have confirmed my suspicions. In this case, as in many others, despite claims of “the private sector can do it better and cheaper,” the facts show that the government is able to do the job most efficiently, effectively, and cheaply. I am pleased that we are able to revisit this issue today.

I strongly support the bill and urge my colleagues to support it.

COMMEMORATING 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF HISTORIC 1946 SEASON OF BASEBALL HALL OF FAME MEMBER BOB FELLER

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the engrossed bill and engrossed amendment to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 449) commemorating the 60th anniversary of the historic 1946 season of Major League Baseball Hall of Fame member Bob Feller and his return from military service to the United States. The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 449

Whereas Robert William Andrew Feller was born on November 3, 1918, near Van Meter, Iowa, and resides in Gates Mills, Ohio;

Whereas Bob Feller enlisted in the Navy 2 days after the attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941;

Whereas, at the time of his enlistment, Bob Feller was at the peak of his baseball career, as he had hit the Cleveland Indians at the age of 16, had struck out 15 batters in his first Major League Baseball start in August 1936, and established a Major League record by striking out 18 Detroit Tigers in a single, 9-inning game;

Whereas Bob Feller is the first pitcher in modern Major League Baseball history to win 20 or more games before the age of 21;

Whereas Bob Feller pitched the only opening day no-hitter in Major League Baseball history;

Whereas, on April 16, 1940, at Comiskey Park in Chicago, Bob Feller threw his first no-hitter and began the season for which he was awarded Major League Baseball Player of the Year;

Whereas Bob Feller served with valor in the Navy for nearly 4 years, missing almost 4 full baseball seasons;

Whereas Bob Feller was stationed mostly aboard the U.S.S. Alabama as a gunnery specialist, where he kept his pitching arm in shape by tossing a ball on the deck of that ship;

Whereas Bob Feller earned 8 battle stars and was discharged in late 1945, and was able to pitch 9 of the 10 games of the season, compiling a record of 5 wins and 3 losses;

Whereas 60 years ago, amid great speculation that, after nearly 4 seasons away from baseball, his best pitching days were behind him, Bob Feller had 1 of the most amazing seasons in baseball history;

Whereas, in the 1946 season, Bob Feller pitched 36 complete games in 42 starts;

Whereas, on April 30, 1946, in a game against the New York Yankees, Bob Feller pitched his second career no-hitter;

Whereas, in 1946, Bob Feller pitched in relief 6 times, saving 4 games;

Whereas, in 1946, Bob Feller pitched 371 2/3 innings and had 348 strikeouts;

Whereas, in 1946, Bob Feller had an earned run average of 2.18;

Whereas, in 1946, a fastball thrown by Bob Feller was clocked at 109 mph;

Whereas Bob Feller was the winning pitcher in the 1946 All Star Game, throwing 3 scoreless innings in a 12-0 victory by the American League;

Whereas, in 1946, Bob Feller led the American League in wins, shutouts, strikeouts, games pitched, and innings;

Whereas the baseball career of Bob Feller ended in 1956, but not before pitching his third no-hitter against the Detroit Tigers on July 1, 1951, pitching 12 1-hit games, amassing 36 victories and 3,640 strikeouts, and leading the league in strikeouts 7 times;

Whereas Bob Feller was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1962; and

Whereas Bob Feller, a beloved baseball figure known as “Bullet Bob” and “Rapid Rob,” placed service to his country ahead of playing the game he loved and is a decorated war veteran: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress commemorates the 60th anniversary of the 1946 season of Bob Feller and his return from military service to the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each wish control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include Dextraneous material on H.Con.Res 449.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. LATOURETTE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I want to, first of all, thank the chairman of the full committee, Mr. DAVIS of Virginia, for moving this legislation forward. This measure recognizes my constituent, Baseball Hall of Famer Bob Feller, for his military service to our country and also commemorates the 60th anniversary of his greatest baseball season.

It is my honor to have introduced this measure, together with a number of our colleagues that you will hear from this afternoon, and it will be our honor to host Bob Feller tomorrow when he visits Capitol Hill on the eve of his trip to Cooperstown for the annual Hall of Fame weekend.

Mr. Speaker, in 1941, Bob Feller was at the peak of his baseball career. The right-hander from Van Meter, Iowa, had signed with my beloved Cleveland Indians at the age of 16 and became an instant sensation. Feller made quick work of rewriting the record books and thrilling fans. In his first major league start, he struck out 15 St. Louis Browns.

In 1938, Feller established a new major league strikeout record by striking out 18 Detroit Tigers in a single nine-inning game. He was the first pitcher in modern major league history to win 20 or more games before the age of 21.

He pitched his first no-hitter on opening day at Comiskey Park against the Chicago White Sox on April 16, Feller had a fastball clocked at 109 miles an hour. His arm, if you can imagine that, led him to the nickname "Bullet Bob," as he was called, pitching a second no-hitter in 1946, his first full year back as a major league player. He also led the American League in wins, shutouts, strikeouts, games pitched and innings pitched that season. Feller went on to pitch for another two more years in the major league in strikeouts in seven of those years.

The 60th anniversary of Feller's triumphant 1946 season and his return from military service to the United States is certainly cause for commemoration. This day, however, is that none of these records or accolades are as important to Bob Feller as was his service to our country. Bob has said, "It was more important for me to be in the military trying to protect the sovereignty of this country than playing professional baseball or any other sport." He also said that the only win he ever wanted was World War II.

Bob Feller today says that he is no war hero, but rather a survivor, because he is one of the lucky ones to have made it home.

Mr. Speaker, I would argue that "Rapid Robert" Feller is a hero in every sense of the word, both on and off the field. Now 87 years old and part of the Greatest Generation, he remains completely devoted to his sport, to the Indians, and to our armed forces and women in uniform. He is a wonderful and selfless American.

"I urge my colleagues to support the resolution."

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, I must confess that I grew up as a Brooklyn Dodger fan, but I also confess that Bob Feller was one of the brightest stars in major league baseball.

Though only 5 years into his career in 1941 with the Cleveland Indians, he had already set the major league record for the most strikeouts in a game and for the most wins by a pitcher under the age of 21. He already had accomplished baseball's elusive and exhilarating marker he had done so in an opening day game, no less. When the same season came to a close, Feller was named major league baseball's Player of the Year.

On the heels of that season, at a point of great promise and mounting reward, Feller took off the rich colors of his Cleveland Indians and put on the uniform of his country. Two days after the attack on Pearl Harbor, Bob Feller left baseball to enlist in the Navy. Feller fought as an anti-aircraft gunner aboard the USS Alabama. He served with valor for 4 years and earned eight battle stars for heroism. His service and sacrifice offer the kind of inspiration that warms people's hearts, energizes and awakens their faith in what man and woman can do for their country and for their fellow men.

Feller missed nearly four full seasons to defend our great Nation and returned at the end of the 1945 season just in time to pitch a handful of games. He tried to keep his fastball in shape during the war, often tossing the ball on the deck of the Alabama. Still, there were a number of whispers that perhaps his best days were behind him.

Sixty years ago, in 1946, Feller silenced the critics. He had his best season ever, one for the record books and the stuff of Hollywood movies. The season reminds us why baseball is so revered.

In 1946, Feller pitched a remarkable 36 complete games in 42 starts. To gauge this feat, consider this: The five teams in the American League Central Division had just 35 complete games between them all of last year.

Feller led the American League in wins, shutouts, strikeouts, games pitched and innings pitched. He struck out 348 batters, then a major league record.

In April of 1946, he pitched his second no-hitter, this time against the Yankees in New York. He went 26–15 with 10 shutouts, including the no-hitter, and had a career low 2.18 earned run average. He pitched in six relief games, saving four of them.

He pitched a total of 371–1/3 innings and often threw 125 to 140 pitches a game. He says today that he never iced his arm, if you can imagine that. He had a fastball clocked at 109 miles an hour that year, again, after a 4-year hiatus.

The Baseball Hall of Fame has said Feller's "blazing fastball set the standard against which all of his successors have been judged for generations."

He was the winning pitcher in the 1946 All-Star Game and threw three scoreless innings in a 12–0 victory by the American League. He achieved all of this while my beloved Indians that year, 1946, only won 68 games.

Mr. Speaker, Bob Feller has been a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame since 1962. Purists can recite his stats: His three no-hitters, his 12 one-hitters, his 266 with no walks and his 18 years with the Indians.

What many sports fans don't know, however, is that none of these records or accolades are as important to Bob Feller as was his service to our country. Bob has said, "It was more important for me to be in the military trying to protect the sovereignty of this country than playing professional baseball or any other sport." He also said that the only win he ever wanted was World War II.

Bob Feller today says that he is no war hero, but rather a survivor, because he is one of the lucky ones to have made it home.

Mr. Speaker, I would argue that "Rapid Robert" Feller is a hero in every sense of the word, both on and off the field. Now 87 years old and part of the Greatest Generation, he remains completely devoted to his sport, to the Indians, and to our armed forces and women in uniform. He is a wonderful and selfless American.

"I urge my colleagues to support the resolution."

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Mr. Speaker, I must confess that I grew up as a Brooklyn Dodger fan, but I also confess that Bob Feller was one of the brightest stars in major league baseball.

Though only 5 years into his career in 1941 with the Cleveland Indians, he had already set the major league record for the most strikeouts in a game and for the most wins by a pitcher under the age of 21. He already had accomplished baseball's elusive and exhilarating marker he had done so in an opening day game, no less. He served with valor for 4 years and earned eight battle stars for heroism. His service and sacrifice offer the kind of inspiration that warms people's hearts, energizes and awakens their faith in what man and woman can do for their country and for their fellow men.

Subsequently, Bob Feller would continue to etch his name in baseball's record books by being the only pitcher in history to throw an opening day no-hitter and the first to reach 20 wins in a single season, all by the age of 21.

But what is most impressive to me and most important to our country is the sacrifice Bob Feller made to defend America. The sacrifice Bob Feller made to defend America, a true patriot, a native Iowan who deserves special recognition and great thanks from our Nation.

As a teenager in Van Meter, Iowa, Bob Feller's unique baseball talent was making headlines. At age 16, he was drafted by the Cleveland Indians. He immediately had an astounding impact on America's greatest pastime.

With a dominating fastball and commanding slider, Bob Feller was the first pitcher to strike out his age in a single major league baseball game, 17 strikeouts at 17 years of age.

Subsequently, Bob Feller would continue to etch his name in baseball's record books by being the only pitcher in history to throw an opening day no-hitter and the first to reach 20 wins in a single season, all by the age of 21.

But what is most impressive to me and most important to our country is the sacrifice Bob Feller made to defend America.

On December 8, 1941, just one day after the attack on Pearl Harbor, Bob Feller left the pitcher's mound to enlist in the Navy. On December 8, 1941, just one day after the attack on Pearl Harbor, Bob Feller left the pitcher's mound to enlist in the Navy. Chosen by America over baseball, this Major League Baseball Player of the Year forfeited an opportunity to be recorded as the greatest pitcher to ever live so he could join his fellow Americans in defense of America's freedom.

As an anti-aircraft gunner aboard the USS Alabama, Bob Feller battled Nazi Germany and its fascist allies. In the process he earned five campaign ribbons and eight battle stars in a successful effort to save the world from tyranny.

Upon his return, Bob Feller would continue to make his mark on major league baseball, setting a Cleveland Indians franchise record of 266 wins and was a seven-time selection for the Baseball Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility in 1962.

Bob Feller, Iowa is proud of its native son, and this Nation is thankful for you. Bob Feller's dedication and leadership deserve to be honored. Again, I urge my colleagues to support H. Con. Res. 449.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may concur to another boy wonder of Cleveland, the gentlelman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Although he was not so much known as a young athlete, he was indeed the mayor of Cleveland before he was 30. As a major leaguer, he took the Cleveland Indians on eight All-Star teams as well. As a young boy, he batted against him one exhibition game against Bob Feller. As a young boy, he batted against him one exhibition game against Bob Feller. As a young boy, he batted against him one exhibition game against Bob Feller.

We have such pride in our community and in baseball's link to the tradition of Cleveland, and Bob Feller has been an important part of that. He was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame in January of 1956 and July of the same year. As we know, he spent his entire career with the Cleveland Indians, from 1936 to 1956.

He pitched three no-hiters. And the first, as has been recounted, pitched on an opening day. Pitched his second no-hitter in 1946, and his third in 1951. He also pitched 12 one-hitters. Think about it: 12 one-hit games. And he won more than 20 or more games in a season six times.

Cleveland's Bob Feller, also known as Rapid Robert, amassed 226 wins and 2,581 strikeouts; led the league in strikeouts seven times during his career; voted the Cleveland Indians' Man of the Year twice.

Well, he is always going to be our baseball man of the year because he is someone who carried with him the spirit of the day. It also shows him in that perfect pitch form of his youth, immortalized as the great pitcher. It also shows him as someone who carried with him the hopes and dreams of a community during times that were often very difficult. We love you, Bob Feller, and we love the fact that our Congress is recognizing not only what you have done for Cleveland, Ohio, but what you did for the morale of our country.

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues for yielding me time. I also want to thank Mr. LA TOURETTE for the work that he has done to bring this resolution to the floor of the House.

As someone who grew up in the city of Cleveland and had the opportunity as a young boy to watch the Cleveland Indians, or to listen to them on the radio, and to have had the opportunity to go to baseball games with my father, I saw Bob Feller pitch, to dream that from that point to this moment that so many years later we would have the opportunity to personally recognize his achievements through this congressional resolution, for any of us who were Cleveland Indians fans back then to be here now in this Chamber, it is an honor for us.

Bob Feller epitomized everything that any of us ever hoped our professional athletes would be. In the fifties, there was a different type of iconography of professional athletes. They were people who we who aspired to emulate, people who carried with them not only exceptional prowess on the field, but also stories of personal achievement that were so extraordinary.

The story then wasn't about how much money an athlete made. The story was about their quality of heart, and in Bob Feller's case, the quality of community to our Nation.

Is there any question that with the tremendous number of records he held in major league baseball that he could have set marks that would never, ever be reached had he pitched those 4 years in which he decided instead to serve his country at a much higher level.

But he enlisted in the Navy at the peak of his career, missing those four seasons, serving in World War II, served as an anti-aircraft gunner on the USS

He earned five campaign ribbons and eight battle stars. Oh, yes, he played on eight All-Star teams as well. As a major leaguer, he took the Cleveland Indians to two World Series, in 1948 and 1954. I remember in the Kucinich household the World Series pennants from 1948, and I remember how proud we were of the fact that Bob Feller and then what was known as the Big Four of our pitchers helped to guide the Indians during those years.

Upon his return, Bob Feller would go on to set marks that would never, ever be matched. Mr. Speaker, let me just say that I know that Dr. GINGREY had a great time in terms of all of those memories.

My colleague for yielding me time. I may remain the mayor of Cleveland before he was 30. As a major leaguer, he took the Cleveland Indians on eight All-Star teams as well. As a young boy, he batted against him one exhibition game against Bob Feller. As a young boy, he batted against him one exhibition game against Bob Feller. Thanks, Rapid Robert.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, when we introduced this resolution with all of the folks that are speaking here today, we got a call from Representative GINGREY's office. I said to myself, well, he is not from Iowa, he is not from Cleveland, why would a guy from Georgia want to talk about Bob Feller? He is about to tell us.

It is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. GINGREY).

Mr. GINGREY. Mr. Speaker, I thank Representative LA TOURETTE and my colleagues from Ohio and Iowa, but certainly that is a great memory for me and my family.

Mr. Speaker, let me just say that I know that Dr. GINGREY had a great time in terms of all of those memories. and being as close to all of that action as he was. And so I would simply say that Bob Feller was indeed one of the greatest athletes that we have ever known; and this resolution is indeed a tribute to not only his athletic abilities, but his great spirit as an American.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, when we called up Bob Feller and said we were going to be doing this and invited Senator Bunning tomorrow morning, he said there are two people I need to see. When we called up Bob Feller and said see my great friend, Sherry Boehlert, Baseball Hall of Fame, and I have to who he knows, of course, from the Baseball Hall of Fame, and I have to see my great friend, Sherry Boehlert, who represents Cooperstown, New York.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Boehlert).

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I have to start with a confession. And here is the confession: Bob Feller is one of my heroes.

I say that unabashedly. It is not because to me as the ultimate baseball junkie I appreciate the great game and the great players; it is not just because baseball’s mecca, the Baseball Hall of Fame, is the epicenter of my district. No, I appreciate and applaud Bob Feller for all the things he has done on the diamond, but he is one of my heroes because of the person that he is, the guy inside.

I have been privileged to get to know Bob Feller quite well over the last several years. As a matter of fact, Memorial Day 2002, when the Baseball Hall of Fame announced the policy that forevermore all veterans would be admitted free into that shrine, the mecca of baseball, they had a special ceremony to recognize the greats of the game who served in the military when the Nation needed them most. And it was my high honor to present Bob Feller’s submission.

There is there in the Hall of Fame this plaque, a great big plaque with some of the greats of the game, Ralph Kiner, Warren Spahn, Phil Rizzuto, all people who served in time of the Nation’s need. But the one that got the most attention was Bob Feller. And I will tell you this, think about the dynamics. In 1941, 23-year-old ace of the Cleveland Indian staff, he won 23 games that year, record was 23-15. What would that command in today’s market? He would have 14 agents and he would have a billion dollars’ worth of offers from every club in the major leagues because pitching is such a premium. So this ace, this admittedly adored, adored, beloved of the best in the business anywhere, 2 days after Pearl Harbor, became the first member of Major League Baseball to pack his belongings and sign up for his Nation. And he served with great distinction all during the war, World War II, in the U.S. Navy. And when he came back, he resumed his career. You know the rest of the story, so many of my colleagues have said it so well. He was just absolutely a breathtaking talent on the mound.

Mr. Gingrey reported on his father-in-law mesmerized by what he saw. He was just wonderful. But that typifies the inner man. He is wonderful every single day of his life, in his personal life, and I am privileged to salute Bob Feller and his very fine partner, his wife Ann. They are truly great Americans.

Mr. Davis of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, when we introduced this resolution, I was riding over for a vote yesterday and saw Mr. Leach of Iowa, and his eyes lit up when I said we were going to do this. And today he has some recollections that he wants to share about Bob Feller. It is now my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Leach).

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for bringling, and I thank the gentleman particularly for bringing a resolution about this son of Iowa.

I might just mention, Bob Feller comes from a small county west of Des Moines called Story County. My family was originally from this county. This county produced a series of very fine athletes in a given era. One was our State’s great hero, a Heisman trophy winner by the name of Nile Kinnick who lost his life in World War II. Another was a first cousin of Bob Feller’s named Hal Manders. Hal also pitched major league baseball.

A number of years ago, Bob and Hal visited me here in Washington, and Hal gave me a small gift that I will treasure for the rest of my life. It was a picture of Bob Feller and Hal as ball-players at about the age of 12, and they were oversized kids on a small team, and across the uniform was marked, I believe, the Braves. And I asked Bob Feller, what was the background of this little league team? And Bob said, you know, we lived kind of in the countryside, we didn’t have a team, so our two fathers who were brothers-in-law started this team. And I said to Bob, well, what would have happened if your father and your uncle didn’t start this team? And he said, well, I never would have pitched ball again.

And it is kind of a beautiful story for all of us, because what he was saying was that Bob Feller would not be Bob Feller if he didn’t have a father who dedicated some time to starting a little league baseball team. And that is really the American system, the American dream, the American family. I think we give honor to Bob because we give honor to a great athlete, but to the idea of sport and to the idea and the ideals of American competition, which he has always reflected the best of. I thank you, Steve, for this moment.

Mr. Davis of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, simply to close, I would just simply reiterate that America has never known a greater athlete nor a greater spirit in terms of one who would interrupt his college career to join the military, and go and fight for a cause greater than the World Series. Bob Feller was a hero to thousands and thousands and thousands will continue to be.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, in closing, I just want to thank everyone who spoke, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. Latham, Mr. Kucinich, Mr. Davis, again, and thank Mr. Davis of Virginia and Mr. Leach for talking about Bob Feller. I again would tell folks that at 87 years old, he will be here tomorrow, and if schedules permit, I hope you take time to say hello to him. I urge passage of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latourette) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 449.

The question was taken.

The Speaker pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, on that, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The Speaker pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 384.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 384 offered by my colleague, the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHHEY). House Concurrent Resolution 384 honors the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity on the occasion of its 100th anniversary.

The Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity was founded in 1904 at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York by seven young men who recognized the need to fill the void of social and cultural interaction on an Ivy League campus left behind by segregation. These founders, who came to be known as the Seven Jewels, were no ordinary achievers, for they had founded the very first intercollegiate Greek-letter fraternity established for African Americans, no small feat given the racial attitudes of the time.

For 100 years, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity has initiated more than 175,000 men. The goals of the fraternity are rooted in the character and love for all mankind. I might add parenthetically that several of my student athletes over a number of years joined this fraternity. The successes of the fraternity have continued through the establishment of 700 collegiate and alumni chapters in 44 States, the District of Columbia, Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, and Europe.

Moreover, from being the first African American Greek-letter organization for college men, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity was the first to integrate its membership in 1945. By doing so, they proved to the world that people of different ethnic backgrounds could effectively work together in peace.

In addition, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity has implemented a number of national programs which have benefited the African-American community and all communities as a whole. The programs include, “A Voteless People is a Hopeless People,” which concentrates on voter registration and awareness, and the “Go to High School, Go to College” program, which focuses on college enrichment of African American youth. The fraternity also jointly leads programming initiatives with March of Dimes, Head Start, Boy Scouts of America, and Big Brothers and Big Sisters of America.

Lastly, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity has played a fundamental role in the positive development in the character and education of these young men that has served as a foundation for success and achievements in all fields of endeavor, including education, business, public service, and professional athletics.

Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to recognize and honor the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity for the celebration of its 100th anniversary, and commends all Alpha Phi Alpha brothers, past and present, for their bond of friendship, common ideals and beliefs, and service to community.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the sponsor of this resolution who represents the area where Alpha Phi Alpha was indeed founded, Representative Maurice Hinchey from New York.

Mr. HINCHHEY. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation to my friend and colleague, Mr. DAVIS, for providing me with this time. I also want to express my appreciation to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Nebraska, for this opportunity to come here to the floor this afternoon.

Cornell University is one of the most important and one of the most significant colleges and universities in America. It is an outstanding source of education, as well as a place of great scientific and other intellectual research. A great many events have taken place at Cornell, and over the years that it has been in existence.

Among those significant events was the founding of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, founded on December 4 of 1906. This first intercollegiate Greek-letter fraternity, which was established at Cornell University, New York, which is located in the congressional district that I am honored to represent, and it has been done so by seven college men at that time, Henry Arthur Carver, Henry Chapman, Eugene Kinckle Jones, George Biddle Kelley, Nathaniel Allison Murray, Robert Harold Ogle, and Vertner Woodson Tandy.

It is important that this resolution is passed today because previously, this year marks the 100th anniversary of the founding of this fraternity. In fact, it happens not coincidentally this week the Alphas are holding a centennial convention right here in the Nation’s capital of Washington, D.C.

Since its inception, the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity has played a very crucial role in the educational and character development of more than 175,000 men. Now this fraternity has 350 college campus chapters and 350 alumni chapters that are located in 44 of our States as well as the District of Columbia. It also has additional chapters in Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, and Europe. It has become in fact one of the most significant fraternities in the world.

Alpha Phi Alpha alumni include noteworthy leaders who serve in the areas of science, politics, the military, education, and social justice, and there are a large number of members of this fraternity who have served this country and then passed on. I will mention just a few of those outstanding Americans. They include Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., W.E.B. DuBois, Justice Thurgood Marshall, and John H. Johnson. Alpha Phi Alpha alumni also include eight other distinguished colleagues in our House. They are CHARLIE RANGEL, BOBBY SCOTT, CHAKA FATTAH, GREGORY MEEKS, DANNY DAVIS, DAVID SCOTT, AL GREEN and EMMANUEL CLEAVES. It gives me a great pleasure for me, Mr. Speaker, to offer this resolution to the Members of our House, and I certainly hope it passes unanimously.
I was extremely honored to be declared a Golden Soror at the fall Alpha Kappa Alpha’s Boule last week.

The Brothers of the Black and Gold have watched their mission grow and evolve in the 100 years since the fraternity’s founding. They have taken their original support for higher education and expanded it to serve as a role model in high school and college mentoring programs, a practice that I as a former educator and school psychologist highly endorse as one of the best routes to success.

Their 70-year-old mission to increase civic participation by instilling the adage, “A Voteless People is a Hopeless People,” is still relevant today, as we just passed the Voting Rights Act amid some claims that it is no longer needed. Unfortunately, intimidation, threats, innuendo and deception are still used to discourage voter turnout; and so the Alphas, as they are known on college campuses, continue to lead the charge for a free vote and fair representation.

My last commendation to my brothers is to applaud them on their efforts to enshrine Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.’s legacy by building a memorial to him in the National Mall. I am pleased to carry the legislation in the year 2003 authorizing such a monument to our Nation’s foremost pacifist and civil rights leader where it belongs, in a highly visible, national area.

I know that the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity is working in a determined way to raise the funds for the Martin Luther King, Jr. memorial; and I am pleased as usual to go into partnership with them in reaching their goal.

I want to congratulate them, all of you, my brothers of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, for founding this long-lasting organization and for your tenacity in engaging us on crucial issues that transcend time.

Concluding because…

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), a member of the Education and the Workforce Committee, Judiciary Committee, and Budget Committee and known to those of us in the Alpha fraternity as Brother Constitutional Scholar.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I know that the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity was founded on December 4, 1906, at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, by seven young men known as the Seven Jewels. As the first intercollegiate Greek letter fraternity established for African Americans, Alpha Phi Alpha initially was a brotherhood and study and support group for minority students at Cornell, but it also recognized the need to help correct the educational, economic, political and social injustices faced by African Americans.

From that, the foundation of Alpha Phi Alpha principles of scholarship, fellowship, good character and the uplifting of humanity were laid. Alpha Phi Alpha now has a presence in hundreds of college campuses, as well as hundreds of alumni chapters in 44 States, the District of Columbia, Africa, Asia, Europe and the Caribbean islands.

Over the years, Alpha Phi Alpha has played a fundamental role in the positive development of the character and education of more than 175,000 men, and it has been paramount in the fight to advance civil rights and enhance the socioeconomic status of all in American society.

Notable Alphas include Thurgood Marshall, W.E.B. DuBois, Adam Clayton Powell, Martin Luther King, Jr., Edward Brooke, Andrew Young, William Gray, Paul Robeson, and there are countless others who have served or continue to sojourn in the worlds of business, entertainment, science and education.

Today, in Congress, the eight Members have already been identified, but I would like to mention at this time that the diversity of this group has been designed by Alpha Phi Alpha to benefit the future of African Americans and humanity as a whole. Every Alpha chapter is committed to the implementation of these programs.

The Project Alpha, Go-to-College program was established in 1922 and focuses on the importance of African American youth completing secondary and collegiate education as a road to advancement. Statistics prove that school completion is the single best predictor for future success, and Alpha Phi Alpha is committed to promoting education among African American youth and the importance of completing one’s education.

“A Voteless People is a Hopeless People” began as an Alpha Phi Alpha program during the 1930s when many African Americans had the right to vote, but were prevented from doing so due to poll taxes, threats of reprisal, and lack of education about the voting process. The program, which focus on voter education and voter registration, also facilitates town meetings and candidate forums to improve political awareness and empowerment.

Through theプロジェクトアフィニティ, we had a chapter in Chicago in the late 1970s and is now a national Alpha program implemented in collaboration with the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. It is designed to provide education, motivation, and skill-building issues of responsibility, relationships, teen pregnancy, and sexually transmitted diseases for young males 12 to 15 years of age. Project Alpha reaches hundreds of communities and thousands of teen males to teach them the importance of responsibility in their personal lives.

Mr. Speaker, on this centennial anniversary, it is my privilege to recognize the 100th anniversary of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity; to commend all Alpha brothers, past and present, for their bond of friendship, common ideals and service to the community; and to wish Alpha Phi Alpha success in the next 100 years. It continues to enshrine its motto of Truth and Service and carry the legislation in the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation. When Franklin Delano Roosevelt looked America in the eye and said we do not have any more, and every Alpha men were there to take that challenge.

Through World War II, Alpha men fought on the beaches of Normandy. All the way from the halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli, Alpha men were there fighting for this country. And when the challenge came to desegregate the schools, the leader of that, Thurgood Marshall, was an Alpha man who stood tall. And when the call came out, who would go for us and who shall we send to lead the charge in the civil rights movement. Martin Luther King stood strong, a 26-year-old man, and said here I am, Lord, send me. Alpha.

So it is with great feeling and great expression that I join every Member of this House of Representatives to give the proper respect to an organization on whose shoulders we in this House rest. We are eight Members of Alpha in this House, and we are so proud because as we look back through our history, we know that we stand here on the shoulders of Adam Clayton Powell. When there were only a few, maybe one, maybe two, African Americans that sat in this Chamber, it gave hope that we, too, could one day come.

I am so proud and I thank this House of Representatives for recognizing Alpha Phi Alpha.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 1/2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from the great State of Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) who of course, is not an Alpha, but of course, she could indeed marry an Alpha man if she chose to do so, but a tremendous leader from the State of Texas.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Mr. Speaker, although this esteemed body is filled with aura and history, I might imagine there is more history, more aura, more feeling, more acknowledgment of the struggles and the success of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. How many can claim 100 years?

And so today I rise to add my appreciation to the Members of Congress who are Alphas, in particular the men that are on this floor today, Mr. SCOTT of Georgia, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, and Mr. SCOTT of Virginia, representing a wide array of men who are in the United States Congress who are Alpha brothers.

Might I just for a moment claim to be a sister of their fraternity as a member of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, but that is not why we rise today.

It is worth noting Alpha brothers who are founding members of the Houston chapter and others who are part of that great chapter such as Gerald Women, Willie Carterwright, Larry Green, James Ward and, yes, the former national President, Mr. Harry Johnson. Additionally, other such leaders are Horace William, Walter Criner, Lew Don Buney, Sr. and L.W. Garrett, and many, many other good brothers.

I salute the Alphas who has been here for 100 years of life and liberty and freedom and salute them for understanding the first line of defense is an education in their Go-to-High-School, Go-to-College program, and of course, A Voiceless People is a Hopeless People.

Doing that for 100 years, 175,000 African American men have been educated in the fundamental role of developing character and education; but I think if we speak to the heart and soul of Alphas, I want to speak to their commitment to civil rights.

I want to speak to their commitment, to the stairsteps of opportunity. I want to thank them for embracing a man like Thurgood Marshall, who had the good reason to, one, be an Alpha man but still stand in the courthouse door as he argued Brown versus Topeka Board of Education.

And, yes, who would have ever thought that this great augest Capitol, that had not yet honored in completeness the life and legacy of Martin King, an Alpha, would have embraced the mission of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity that decided that they would bring about this monument of honoring Dr. King and this with a monument. For all the years to come, after 100 years, 120 years, 130, 200, 300 years, we will have the privilege of coming to the Capitol of the United States and because of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity we will be able to look to the vision, the hope, the inspiration of Martin King.

So I believe that this resolution, authored by Mr. HINCHHEY, who I express great appreciation for, is, in fact, needed as we honor Henry Arthur Callis, Charles Henry Chapman, Eugene Kinckle Jones, George Biddle Kelley, Nathaniel Allison Murray, Robert Harold Ogle, and Vertner Woodson Tandy, the founders of the fraternity. May they live in legacy forever. Congratulations. One hundred years doesn’t come very often. Congratulations to this great and wonderful fraternity.

Mr. OSBORNE, Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time, and, first of all, I want to thank Representative HINCHHEY from New York for introducing this resolution. I also want to thank my colleague from Nebraska for his management of the bill, Representative OSBORNE, a tremendous educator and legislator. And let me thank all those who have spoken.

Mr. Speaker, when I think of Alpha Phi Alpha I think of its motto: First of all, men will transcend all. Alpha is a great service organization, and I want to congratulate our national president Daryl Matthews and brother Harry Johnson, who is leading the effort to build the Martin Luther King monument on the mall.

One of the things that I always liked about Alpha was that it helped one learn to communicate. And, of course, in my chapter, in order to get in, you had to say these poems and you had to go through all these processes. So I will end with this one:

Out of the night that covers me, black as the pit for pole to pole, I thank whatever gods may be for my unconquerable soul. In the fell clutch of circumstance I have not winced nor cried allowed. Under the bludgeonings of chance, my head is bloody but unbowed. It matters not how straight the gate nor how charged with punishments the scroll, I am the master of my fate, I am the captain of my soul.

That is the teaching of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity. We commend Alpha for its 100 years of existence.

Mr. Speaker, I yield my next 30 seconds to end to Mr. CHAKA FATTAH, from the great City of Brotherly Love, Philadelphia.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, could I ask the gentleman from Nebraska if he could yield another 30 seconds of his time?

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to cosponsor.

Mr. Osborn. Mr. Speaker, we are justly proud.

Mr. Speaker, when I think of Alpha Phi Alpha I think of its motto: First of all, men will transcend all. Alpha is a great service organization, and I want to congratulate our national president Daryl Matthews and brother Harry Johnson, who is leading the effort to build the Martin Luther King monument on the mall.

Alpha is a great role model for young men and women.

I yield the extra time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY). The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge the 100 year anniversary of the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, which is a great institution in our country and will be having its centennial celebration starting tomorrow here in Washington.

As a member of the Alphas, I know of its reputation for academic involvement. One of the first programs of our fraternity was an effort to get young men to stay in school and to go to college, and our work here in the Congress continues that effort.

I want to welcome all the Alpha brothers from across the country and the world who are coming here to Washington, DC. I am proud of this great organization, and I thank the Congress for honoring this organization and its great contributions to our country.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my thanks to Dante Polk, my intern, who is also an Alpha brother and is in the audience today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. OSBORNE, Mr. Speaker, I would like to once again congratulate Alpha Phi Alpha on their 100 years of service. I thank Mr. HINCHHEY for introducing the legislation, Mr. DAVIS for his management, and also his recitation, which was quite inspiring, and the other members of Alpha Phi Alpha.

Mr. CARDIN, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my colleagues today in support of H. Con. Res. 384, recognizing and honoring the 100th anniversary of the founding of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, Incorporated. I also want to thank Mr. HINCHHEY for introducing this resolution, which I am proud to cosponsor.

Mr. Speaker, what a legacy. Founded at Cornell University in 1906, Alpha Phi Alpha is the first black fraternity in the United States.
Alpha Phi Alpha has an illustrious history of service and leadership that is evident through its list of members over the past century. This list includes those who are no longer with us, such as Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Justice Thurgood Marshall, and those with whom we are fortunate to serve today, such as our distinguished House guests, Messrs. CHARLIE RANGEL, DANNY DAVIS, BOBBY SCOTT, DAVID SCOTT, CHAKA FATTAH, GREGORY MEeks, and EMANUEL CLEAver.

The work of Alpha Phi Alpha is as strong as ever. The progress toward creating a national memorial here in Washington to Dr. King would not have been made without the initiative and dedication of Alpha Phi Alpha, and our Nation owes them a debt of gratitude. The fraternity has established the Alpha Disaster Relief Fund to aid the families affected by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, and they were in the forefront of efforts to secure passage of the Voting Rights Act Reauthorization.

Mr. SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

(84) The Senate bill requires eligible agencies to report on student achievement on technical skill assessments. The House bill requires student attainment of vocational and technical skill proficiency. The Senate bill requires the use of assessments described under ESEA.

House and Senate recede with amendment to read as follows:

(i) Student attainment of challenging academic standards and student academic achievement standards, as adopted by a State in accordance with section 1111(b)(1) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 and measured by the State determined proficient level on the academic assessments described in section 1111(b)(3) of such Act.

Report Language: The conferees intend that the amendments to the core indicators requirements will ensure that the States use measures that are valid and reliable and apply to all categories of students served by CTE programs. The conferees further intend that a State use the same measures to report the academic achievement and the rate of high school graduation of its secondary CTE students, as the State uses under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (ESEA), rather than indirect measures or approximations of these measures. Thus, for example, a State must report the number or percentage of CTE students scoring at the proficient level or above on technical skill assessments used under the ESEA to ensure that its CTE students are held to the same academic achievement standards as are all students.

(v) Student placement in postsecondary education or advanced training, in military service, or in employment.

(vi) Student participation in and completion of career and technical education programs that lead to non-traditional fields.

Report Language: The Conferees recognize that special populations, including single parents and displaced homemakers, may need direct assistance to be able to participate successfully in career and technical education. These supportive services include supplies, such as transportation, child care, dependent care, tuition, books, and supplies and other services necessary to enable an individual to participate in career and technical education activities. Consistent with administrative guidance and prior interpretations of the Perkins Act, the Conferees believe that eligible agencies and eligible recipients should retain the flexibility to provide direct assistance to special populations under certain, limited conditions.

In providing direct assistance, recipients of the assistance must be individuals who are members of special populations who are participating in career and technical education activities that are consistent with the goals and purposes of the Perkins Act. Funds must be used to supplement, not supplant, assistance that is otherwise available from non-Federal sources. Assistance may only be provided to an individual to the extent that it is needed to address barriers to the individual's successful participation in career and technical education.

Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct, to try to protect the retirement nest egg that they are going to terminate the pension plan. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 7 of rule XXII, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) and the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER). Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume, and I rise yet again with another motion to instruct the conferees of H.R. 2830, the pension bill currently in conference. These repeated motions have become necessary in light of the failure of the Republican conference to include all conferees and to hear all voices.

The House Democrats have been locked out of this conference since last March, so we have come to the floor again and again with motions to instruct that would press the conferees to protect America’s workers and retirees from some of the worst proposals in these bills now being considered in that conference committee.

Again and again, the House has voted overwhelmingly to support these instructions, but the Republican conference don’t seem to be getting the message, or they don’t seem to care. So I am calling on my colleagues to speak again, and this time a little louder.

This is a new motion that would provide greater protections for workers’ pensions in five critical areas.

First, Protecting older workers’ benefits in the cash balance conversion when pension plans convert from the defined benefit plan.

Two. Ensuring that airline pilots do not see unfair cuts to their PBGC, the Pension Benefits Guarantee Corporation, because the FAA required them to retire at age 60.

Three. Providing stretch-out payments for an airline industry that has been shaken by 9/11 and rising fuel costs.

Four. Allowing for the alternative funding agreements when a plan is in trouble so that we can avoid the dumping of pension plans like what happened with the United Airlines debacle.

Five. Providing for more equal treatment of executive and worker pensions. If we are going to restrict workers’ pensions when a plan is underfunded, we should also restrict the executives there, in many instances, who are responsible for that underfunding of the pension plans. After all, it is the executives who decide whether or not to fund the pension plan.

From all the reports we have received to date, it sounds like the conferees are not moving to include these items in the conference report, despite the fact that the House has repeatedly instructed the conferees to include these worker protections.

Let us go through these one by one and let us understand that this is about the protection of workers, it is about the protection of retirees, and it is about the protection of their families, because it is about the pension plans that these workers now have as a matter of their bargaining, their agreements, and their contracts with their employers.

What we have now seen, and what too many workers have seen and what the American public has witnessed, is that employer after employer is announcing to workers that they are going to forego the support for a defined benefit plan, they are going to forego the support for health care benefits, and workers now see they are trapped. In many instances, those changes, those decisions by the employer snatch workers who have no ability to restore that retirement nest egg that they are going to lose when the employer decides that they are going to terminate the pension plan.

That is why we are offering this motion to instruct, to try to protect the retirement nest egg of hard-working Americans and their families from being devastated by the decisions of the employers on the termination or the dumping of the pension plans into the PBGC.

So let us walk through what we are trying to do here. First, The protection for older workers in a cash balance conversion.

This motion to instruct would have the conferences in the Senate make sure they prohibit against the discrimination of older workers by the practice of offsetting the earned benefit plans they have now with the new cash balance plans, and to make sure that we understand what the GAO has told us; that unless there is some transition protection, almost all workers could lose up to 50 percent of their expected pension benefits.

Listen to that again. Almost all workers could lose up to almost 50 percent of their expected pension benefits. Again, those older workers, 50, 55, 60 years old, will lose the most. Those are the same workers who have the least ability to save more money for their retirement, to earn more money for their retirement. They will take the biggest hit.

We are asking that at a minimum, you protect employees that are 5 years away from retirement because they do not have the ability to secure additional funds for their retirement. It means a dramatic diminishment of their retirement plans, of their financial resources for their retirement, for their health care, for the sustaining of their families. That is why it is so important to understand that.

This is what responsible employers have done, whether it is Verizon, or Honeywell, or Wells Fargo Bank or CSX Railroad. But other employers have chosen not to do this, and now they want the Members of Congress to vote on the plan that they take away these benefits of the older workers.

It is also what the Congress chose to do. We chose to provide a transition for Members of Congress as we changed the retirement plan of Congress to the TSP plan as opposed to a defined benefit plan. If it is good enough for Congress, why isn’t it good enough for these workers and for their families?

Obviously, when the Members of Congress have been asked to vote on this, they have voted overwhelmingly. In 2002, an amendment to take care of these older workers passed 328-121; in 2003, it passed 258-160; in 2004, it passed 237-193. In May to instruct this past April, the House voted 248-178 to tell the conferences to protect these older workers.

Unfortunately, either the conferences are hard of hearing or they simply don’t want to protect these older workers, because it appears that when the conference report comes back in the next day or two on the pension bill, these older workers will not be protected.

Second, the case of the airlines. The motion to instruct would have the conferences agree to the Senate provision ensuring that pilots get their full pension guaranteed from the Pension Guarantee Corporation. They get their full pension, for those who were required to retire at an early age.

So you have pilots who were required, under Federal law, to retire at age 60. The pension plan was terminated, through no fault of the pilots, in many cases because of 9/11 or higher fuel costs, and now they are being punished because the Pension Guarantee Corporation will only give you a full benefit if you retire at age 65. They had no ability to retire at age 65 because Federal law kept them from doing so. We think that, in fact, we ought to protect those employees.

And the motion would limit the treatment of those pension plans to those that were terminated after September 11, 2001.

The fix is needed now. United airline pilots are seeing their pensions cut by over 20 percent each year under you the pension guarantee rules. The retirement nest eggs have been devastated, but they have been twice, once by the unfair dumping of the pension plans and the PBGC by United, and now by the Congress that they cannot have those full benefits because they retired before 65.

In a motion this past March, the House voted 265-158 to instruct the conferences to give these pilots their full guaranteed retirement plans. Why? Because either can’t here the House of Representatives, they don’t care about the House of Representatives, or they don’t care about these workers, because they are not choosing to protect these pilots to the extent to which they should be.

Third, we deal with the question of the airlines. We all know that airlines have been hurt by skyrocketing fuel prices since 9/11. They have been hurt by a lack of travel immediately after 9/11, and now they are in danger of being terminated. We have seen United Airlines terminate its pension plans and dump $10 billion of liability onto the PBGC, its workers, its retirees and the taxpayers. We have seen the U.S. Airways dump its pension plan, and we have read how Delta is now seeking to dump its pension plan.

It would be devastating to hundreds of thousands of workers across this Nation if more airlines were permitted to dump their plans into the PBGC. These provisions are asking the conferences to impose give the airlines the ability to keep their plans going by stretching out their payments over 20 years instead of 7 years. And these provisions should be made available to all the airlines, not just select few airlines. They should be available to those airlines that have frozen their plans, as well as those that meet the requirements of the Senate bill to keep their plans running.

In March, the motion to instruct, the House voted 265-158 to provide the airlines with these critical reforms, with this lifeline for their economic health and the well-being of their workers. But the conferences so far haven’t heard us and we need to speak louder.

Fourth, the alternative funding agreements. The motion to instruct would have the conferences agree to the Senate provision passed 97-2, designed to prevent the pension plan dumping. These provisions allow the PBGC, the Treasury Secretary to enter into an alternative funding agreement with an employer if its pension plan is in danger of being terminated if work

So, you have workers who are required, under Federal law, to retire at age 60. The pension plan was terminated, through no fault of the pilots, in many cases because of 9/11 or higher fuel costs, and now they are being punished because the Pension Guarantee Corporation will only give you a full benefit if you retire at age 65. They had no ability to retire at age 65 because Federal law kept them from doing so. We think that, in fact, we ought to protect those employees.

And the motion would limit the treatment of those pension plans to those that were terminated after September 11, 2001.

The fix is needed now. United airline pilots are seeing their pensions cut by over 20 percent each year under you the pension guarantee rules. The retirement nest eggs have been devastated, but they have been twice, once by the unfair dumping of the pension plans and the PBGC by United, and now by the Congress that they cannot have those full benefits because they retired before 65.

In a motion this past March, the House voted 265-158 to instruct the conferences to give these pilots their full guaranteed retirement plans. Why? Because either can’t here the House of Representatives, they don’t care about the House of Representatives, or they don’t care about these workers, because they are not choosing to protect these pilots to the extent to which they should be.

Third, we deal with the question of the airlines. We all know that airlines have been hurt by skyrocketing fuel prices since 9/11. They have been hurt by a lack of travel immediately after 9/11, and now they are in danger of being terminated. We have seen United Airlines terminate its pension plans and dump $10 billion of liability onto the PBGC, its workers, its retirees and the taxpayers. Fourth, the alternative funding agreements. The motion to instruct would have the conferences agree to the Senate provision passed 97-2, designed to prevent the pension plan dumping. These provisions allow the PBGC, the Treasury Secretary to enter into an alternative funding agreement with an employer if its pension plan is in danger of being terminated if work in the treatment of executives and workers during the troubled times for pension plans.

So this motion to instruct is to take those five areas and to instruct the conferees at this 11th hour to deal with the five fairness at the equity in the Pension Reform Bill. This is a way that we make sure that hard-working Americans don't have to crash to the floor, lose their homes, lose their retirement, lose their health care as we restructure pensions, and to make sure that we do treat the million dollars, $10 million or the $20 million, $50 million a year executive, that we treat them the same as we treat the workers.

Very few workers in this country have any say in whether or not these pension plans are undertak. We saw that in the case of Enron. They were running downstairs telling the employ- ees to buy the Enron stock, and they were running upstairs and selling their stock into the market because they knew the company was going to col-lapse.

We think people ought to be treated fairly. They ought to be treated equally and clearly, clearly, we ought not to discriminate against older workers. That is why this motion to instruct does. Hopefully, when we send it, this motion to instruct, later this evening, the conference committee will hear us. They will hear the American people. They will quit ignoring the American people. That is why this motion to instruct, and they ought to be treated equally, clearly, we ought not to discriminate against older workers.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this politically moti-vated motion to instruct. I believe we are nearing the end of the pension re-form conference, and this motion is nothing more than a last minute, des-perate attempt to slow the most sub-stantial retirement security reforms in a generation.

Like the famous Yogi Berra saying, this is deja vu all over again. Through-out this pension conference, opponents of pension reform have attempted to distract the process through these obstructionist tactics, and here we are again ready to deal with yet another.

The latest motion to instruct, or mo-tion to obstruct as is truly the case, is little more than a random jumble of unrelated issues being discussed in the ongoing pension conference. From purely a policy perspective, it is irrespons-ible to mix and confuse these complicated issues in this fashion. Members with opinions on one or more of these issues should not be forced into contradicting positions on other issues. But let's be very clear up front. This has nothing do with policy. It is all about politics.

This pension legislation we are crafting is complicated, and those who support passing legislation to fix our pension system are working hard to bring a final bill before the full House and Senate for consideration. What the opponents of reform are doing today is a self-serving, self-interest and self-fulfilling spin on-the-a-shop exercise. They have cherry-picked a handful of Senate positions that have evolved over time. It is reck-less and, in the end, it will do nothing to advance the process. Here are just a handful.

Number 1, this motion to instruct would tie the hands of those who vol-unarily offer hybrid plans, which are the sole bright spot in the defined ben-efit system. To place restrictions on a system that actually provides more generous benefits for the majority of workers than do traditional plans sets a very bad precedent.

Number 2, this motion to instruct also would increase the deficit of the PBGC which is exactly the opposite of what we are trying to do. If this provi-sion were applied, taxpayers could count on an additional cost of $2.5 bil-lion to the PBGC over the next 10 years.

Number 3, this motion to instruct would assign the PBGC which, in some respects, is like an insurance company, with developing industrial policy for the troubled plans via a “workout pro-gram.” This would pit companies against one another. And this process would be steered by a quasi-govern-mental agency, often dependent upon the whims of the administration in power.

And finally, this motion to instruct attempts to score partisan points on the issue of executive compensation. But this is an issue the House bill al-ready responsibly addresses, and any final conference will do the same. The House-passed pension reform restricts golden parachute agreements when the rank and file is considered at-risk.

Mr. Speaker, this last ditch attempt to distract from our reform efforts is as transparent as it is desperate. Fortu-nately, the end of this conference is in sight, and the reforms needed to ensure the defined benefits system remains viable for generations to come are nearly in place.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no” on the motion to instruct, and reject this attempt to obscure our progress.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Andrews).

(Mr. ANDREWS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding. I rise in support of his motion.

I want to try to explain, Mr. Speaker, to our colleagues what one of the issues in Mr. Miller's motion has to do with.

Let's assume that we have a pension plan that is only 75 percent funded: that is to say, it has $75 for every $100 that it needs to meet its pension ob-li-gations. Under the bill that passed the House, the people that run that plan could say the following: The CEO of the company could continue to get 50 per-cent of the benefits that he was enti-tled to under the plan, the wealthiest person in the company. But the person who cleans his office at night could have her pension cut.

Let me say this again. If the plan had $75 for every $100 that it needs, under the provision the House passed, the CEO of the company gets every nickel that he is entitled to. No cut at all. But the custodian who cleans his office at night, or the clerk who types his let-ters, or the person who delivers his documents, could have their pension cut considerably.

Now, this is not right. This is not right. If some employees are going to take a cut, then it seems fair that everyone should share equally in that punishment.

One of the great principles of the American economy is that a rising tide lifts all boats. When a company pros-per, so does everyone in the rank and file, so does every shareholder, so does every investor, one would hope. And lots of decisions are predicated upon that principle.

We want the executives to flourish and prosper, because if they do, they will make better decisions for the people who clean the offices and type the letters and deliver the documents.

But the corollary to that principle is, if the boat is sinking, then some people can't jump off the boat into a life boat while everybody else stands there as the ship goes down. That seems rather fair.

One might call this the Titanic prin-ciple, you know, where the people who own the luxuries got to the life boats first, but the people locked in steerage sank to the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean.

The Senate has a very different pro-vision. Ninety-seven senators voted in favor of this provision; and it said, very simply, the same rule that applies to the lady who cleans the office at night should apply to the CEO who sits in the office all day long. Ninety-Seven sen-ators voted in favor of that provision. Two voted against it.

Mr. Miller's motion wisely says that this House should go on record as say-ing that is the provision we ought to adopt. Vote “yes.”

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. This is really about fairness. It is about values.

I rise in strong support of Congress-man Miller's motion to instruct. I commend my colleague, Mr. Miller, for his leadership working to ensure that pension reform puts workers first.

This motion to instruct highlights a number of important provisions that make clear the priority of our efforts. It must be workers. Pensions are not just investments to workers. To a worker, his or her pension is the centerpiece of economic security.

I urge my colleagues to support the Miller motion to instruct. I urge my colleagues to remember that there are millions of Americans out there who are not prepared to decide whether we are going to stand up for working men and women or are going to turn them aside in order to slaver over the economic advantage that is granted to their executives.

Mr. Mckeon. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I believe we are nearing the end of the pension reform conference. It has been quite a bit, indicating the delicate balance that we have established to get to the point where we are today.

I know many of my colleagues are anxious to see work completed on this conference. And improvements to our pension system can actually be put in place. As vice chair of this conference committee, I share that view. The fact is that in recent days a tremendous amount of progress has been made towards completing this conference, and I am optimistic that we will produce a finished product that the vast majority of our colleagues can and will support. That is what we should be spending our time on—completing the work and protecting and improving workers’ retirement security—not engaging in the partisan charade that this motion at its core represents.

Our goal is and always has been to ensure our defined benefit system remains viable for generations to come. This will serve the interests of workers, retirees, and taxpayers alike. This motion to instruct does not.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no.”

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague on the other side keeps saying that this is somehow a partisan charade to score points. There are just a little over 200 Members of the Democratic Party in this Congress, and these votes have carried 258, 308, 299, 237. Clearly, there is bipartisan agreement that as we work to deal with pension reform, we ought to make an effort to try to deal with the plight of these workers in the fairest possible way we can.

Let us look again quickly at what we are trying to do here. We are trying, one, to protect older workers who have a very limited ability to gather additional economic resources as they end their work years, to make up for a dramatic cut in their pension plans. All we are trying is that those workers ought to be protected, those who are 5 years away from the pension plan. Not a radical proposal. Not a partisan proposal. It passed the Senate 97-2. By an overwhelming bipartisan vote, we have asked the conference to invoke that measure.

We have also tried to say that those airline pilots that were forced to retire at age 60 due to Federal law, a Federal law that we are now considering changing to 65, but because of the bankruptcy of the company and the dumping of the plan by United and others into the PBGC, those pilots ought not to be harmed because they had no ability to reach 65 in their employment. The Federal law made them quit, and they ought not to be harmed in that situation. They may have never been harmed but for 911, for the run up in fuel prices. They didn’t do anything wrong, but they find themselves taking a double hit through the bankruptcy and through the PBGC rules.

Then we said let us try to save the airline industry. Let us stretch this for those plans that they have frozen their pension plans. They comply with the requirements of the Senate bill, and we have said let us give them time to recover their economic health and hopefully save these pension plans. We do not know yet, but again on a bipartisan basis overwhelmingly, the House voted to do that.

Then we said let us make sure that we exhaust all of the remedies before we dump these pension plans onto the taxpayers. Let the fact for sure that we have exercised all of the effort, that we have bargained in good faith, that we have searched every way to avoid this from becoming a taxpayer liability. Again, passing 97-2, the Senate went in that direction and we didn’t. They refused those amendments to the legislation.

And, finally, the issue of basic fairness, one that so struck the people of this Nation when they saw how Enron manipulated the pension systems, how they manipulated the stock sales to those pension systems by the executives, and, finally, how they manipulated the company into the downward spiral of bankruptcy and people lost their entire livelihoods.

This bill says that, as Mr. Kucinich pointed out, if this plan is not at least 80 percent funded, you can provide no new benefits to the employees no matter what. The reason for that underfunding is; but unless it is 60 percent underfunded, you can keep providing benefits to the executives. There is just a fundamental element of fairness. And we think by doing a bipartisan basis, the House sent these instructions to the conferences. This is part of the legislative process.

I am here because this is a privileged motion. We recognize the need to communicate from the full House to the conferees on measures that we continue to favor as the conference committee goes forward, and we have done that. But the fact of the matter is that as it appears, certainly from newspaper reports, which I know because we have been shut out of this conference committee. The Republicans do not conference with the Democrats in the House. They do not honor that democratic principle. They do not honor that majority. So we only know what we have been told through the grapevine. We know in talking to the Democratic and Republican Senators, and we know a little bit by what we read in the press, and it appears that on every one of these points where the House has spoken with an overwhelming voice to protect the pensions of workers, of retirees, and of their families, that each and every one of these is going to be disregarded by the conference.

This is a last attempt to try to bring some openness to this conference, to try to have a more open dialogue between the parties to this conference committee, and to bring the will of the House, which I think in these cases when we are hearing about pensions, when you go home and you talk to your constituents and you have your town hall meetings, you see how serious people are about their health care benefits, about their retirement benefits, about their retirement security.

Yet somehow those conferences cannot get that message. Maybe they have been in Congress too long. Maybe they are insulated from it. Somehow they just cannot get it. Well, life outside the Beltway is very precarious for a lot of employees and a lot of industries. And the question that comes to us is whether or not we are going to make an effort to have a pension bill that recognizes the fairness and the equity.

Again, this is not some partisan bill. This is not some bill thought up in the last few moments. The fact of the matter is, these provisions are contained, for the most part, in the Senate bill. We do not ask to go beyond that. In the Senate bill that passed the Senate 97-2.

And, in fact, if we do that, there will be some economic justice for these retirees and their families. There will be some economic fairness for these retirees and their families. And there will be, most importantly, some sense of retirement security for millions of Americans that every day they pick up the paper and they see that yet another group of employees, another company that is making a decision about reducing, getting rid of, terminating, freezing the pension plans and the health care benefits of those individuals.

We need legislation to deal with them in a fair fashion, in an equitable fashion, legislation that can increase the retirement security of these families.

I ask for an “aye” vote on the motion to instruct.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of Mr. MILLER’s motion to call our colleagues’ attention to provisions in the Senate bill S. 1783, provisions that aim to assure pension protection by prohibiting discrimination against older workers by eliminating the “wearaway” of older worker benefits. They also provide fair rules to protect workers’ pensions in conversions of traditional pension plans to cash balance pension plans.

In a recent study, the GAO found that, with these transition protections, almost all workers could lose up to 50 percent of their expected pension benefits in a cash balance conversion.

The Senate provisions also entail language that will ensure that airline pilots are protected from unfair cuts to their pension benefits because they are covered by the FAA’s mandatory retirement rules. Currently, FAA regulations require pilots to retire at 60. The PBGC treats age 60 as an early retirement, and cuts pilots guaranteed benefits as a result. The Senate provisions would require the PBGC to treat age 60 as the normal retirement age for pilots and adjust their guaranteed benefits accordingly.

Under the current House bill, workers see benefit restrictions when a pension plan fails below 80 percent funding. Executives, on the other hand, only see limited benefit restrictions much later—at less than 60 percent funding. The Senate bill achieves greater parity than the House bill in how workers and executives are treated.

Over the last several years, we have seen repeated cases where executives have protected or even enhanced their own golden parachutes, while cutting or eliminating workers’ pensions. It is time for these unfair practices to end.

The provisions in the Senate bill will help see that this happens and ensure that America’s older workers are treated fairly and with respect. There are few things worse than seeing one’s well-being in retirement being compromised by inadequacies and inefficiencies in pension policy. We have some retirement-aged folks amongst us, and I encourage my colleagues to imagine it was our pension up for debate right now. Perhaps it should be if we do act to protect others’. I therefore urge all of my colleagues to join Mr. MILLER and take the Senate provisions seriously and support them accordingly.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOUSTANY) (during the vote). Members are advised there are 2 minutes remaining in this vote.

The result of the vote was announced above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CHILDREN’S SAFETY AND VIOLENT CRIME REDUCTION ACT

(Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to praise the House for having passed H.R. 4472.

This is a very bittersweet moment for me. Passage of the bill should bring a sense of accomplishment, but as I think of little Jessica Lunsford, only tears come to my eyes.

Today, she would be doing her summer reading, going to the movies with friends, and enjoying the last few weeks of summer before school begins. Instead, a perverted criminal assaulted, murdered and then buried her in his backyard and robbed her of those moments.

He did that because law enforcement and parents did not have the tools that they needed at the time to protect children. With the passage of the Children’s Safety and Violent Crime Act, they will.

I cannot imagine the suffering and total terror she must have felt at the hands of so vile a monster, and Congress cannot afford to wait one day longer for this bill to become law.

I certainly look forward to the signing ceremony at the White House so parents will know that their children are much better protected because the laws are stronger against sexual offenders and predators.

HONORING MAJOR LEAGUE HALL OF FAME BOB FELLER

(Mr. BROWN of Ohio asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BRICKHOUSE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 449 honoring Major League Baseball Hall of Famer Bob Feller.

Feller’s baseball career may have been even more stellar had he not been such a patriot. He was one of the first Major League players to enlist after Pearl Harbor, losing four seasons to war-time service as a combat sailor in the U.S. Navy. He never regretted that choice for a last year. The only win I wanted was to win World War II.

I join my colleagues in supporting House Concurrent Resolution 49, celebrating Bob Feller, a monumental figure in Ohio, a baseball icon and an American patriot.

THANKING SPEAKER HASTERT FOR VISITING THE TEXAS BORDER

(Mr. CARTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to thank Speaker DENNY HASTERT for coming to Texas this weekend to look at the situation on our Texas border and bringing a bipartisan delegation with him. The information that he received I think is invaluable for this House.

I am proud of the fact that our Speaker goes out and goes to the areas where the crises are so that he can have a good view of what is going on. He was a great leader there. He was able to get information from these folks that showed that the borders have got to be defended and defended now.

I am grateful for his attendance in Texas, and I am sure Arizona is, also.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

GAS PRICES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFAZIO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, well, today, gas prices since the price gouging post-Katrina climbed back over $3 a gallon average across the country, almost as high as on September 5 of last year during the frenzy of price gouging by the oil industry, using Katrina as an excuse. Now the excuse is unrest in the Middle East, despite very large inventories and no shortages on the horizon.

But it is yielding one tremendous benefit, and the Republicans would have us believe that we all benefit: record profits for the oil industry. And since we are all now shareholders, according to the Republicans’ theory of the world, we are all benefiting from the huge run-up in the prices of oil stocks and the dividends that are being paid by the oil companies. Unfortunately, most of the people I represent and I myself and many others I know do not own oil stocks, nor do we receive extraordinarily generous campaign contributions which the Republicans and the President do from the oil industry.

So our reaction is not a collective yawn, and there is nothing that can be done about it, and it is just market forces. Ours is to say let us stop the price gouging of American consumers.

Experts say that about 30 percent of this is pure speculation, that is, self-trading, oil being traded off the books purely to enrich the companies and traders.

Another very significant portion comes from the fact that the oil companies, not the environmentalists, they have just been closing refineries left and right. Well, no. Actually, there has not been a single refinery closed in America, although many have been closed in the last 10 years, by environmental restrictions. They have been closed for economic purposes.

There was a memo 10 years ago from the American Petroleum Institute that said, hey, guys, wake up, you are not making enough money on refining; if you shut down refinery capacity, you would have an excuse to drive up margins and the prices of refining. They have exceeded their expectations. In fact, refinery profits from the last year, 12 months, are up 60 percent, 60 percent.

If we return to the historic average margins for refinery, which were profitable but not wildly, unbelievably profitable, gas would go down by another 40 cents a gallon.

So you take out the speculation, you take out what they have done with the manipulation of refinery capacity and you are back down to $2.30 cents or so a gallon. Now that is not a long-term energy policy, but that is relief for American consumers. That is relief for American business. That gives us the opportunity to begin to invest in a more oil-independent future.

The so-called energy bill that passed the House based on subsidies for the oil, coal and gas industry, you know, they are hurting, they need subsidies from the taxpayers. We need to borrow money to give to them or give them price breaks for their production on Federal lands and not realize those revenues! The Federal Treasury. That is relief for American business. That gives us the opportunity to begin to invest in a more oil-independent future.

That is an energy policy? Look at the Middle East. Do we want to be dependent upon the Middle East? Do we want to be filling the coffers of Iran and Saudi Arabia and other OPEC countries? I do not think so.

We need a plan for energy independence in America. We need a plan that is going to develop new technologies here at home that we will market to the rest of the world, that will make Americans energy independent. Somehow Brazil was able to do it, but they tell us it is just not possible here in the United States of America, we cannot figure out a way to get to energy independence like Brazil.

Now, I do not believe that. The President knows the American people are little different from the rest of the Union he talked about how we need to do more about alternative fuels and alternative technologies. Unfortunately, the money did not follow the mouth. If John Fitzgerald Kennedy had applied the energy policy that took us to the Moon, we still would not be in the outer atmosphere of the Earth, let alone the Moon.

There is no real commitment here because real commitment would mean that you are starting to threaten the wildly profitable oil industry.

BP announced today, and they are supposed to be the weakest of the announcements this week, that their profits were up a mere 40 percent over the quarter for last year. They gave their CEO a $400 million retirement package. They are not investing in new capacity. They are not investing in alternative fuels. Do they care about energy independence for the United States of America? They like the addiction that they have got us on, now.

We need an energy policy and we need it soon, and the Republican Party is in thrall with the oil companies.

BORDER CORRUPTION

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, I request permission to take Mr. Jones’s time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Jones) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Jones. Mr. Speaker, there is more news from the second front. This is the border, and the news is not good. It is disturbing.

There is word tonight that some men and women charged with protecting our borders could be making their yearly salary in just a matter of days by taking bribes. That is right, bribes.

Border Patrol agents, our first line of defense in the fight to secure America’s borders, may have dirty money on their mind instead of illegals, all the while they are compromising national security for a fist full of dollars.

This month, two Border Patrol supervisors pleaded guilty after accepting $200,000 in bribes and working with the illegals to come into the United States. These supervisors were working on a test program set up between the Border Patrol and the Mexican Government to look for drug traffickers, but as we call them, were arrested in the United States and were supposed to be deported back to Mexico for prosecution. This is the same program that these officials have been raving about. They were wired, they were identified before Congress that 82 suspected smugglers were returned back to Mexico last year.

But what is worse is these supervisors used a government vehicle to bring two smugglers across the border. One bought his way out of jail for a $10,000 bribe while another shelled out $6,000 in bribes so he wouldn’t be shipped back to Mexico. Then these two agents, new best friends of these two individuals, dropped them off at a Wal-Mart parking lot.

Their case isn’t the only one that is under investigation. In fact, it is far from it. Other Border Patrol agents charged with upholding our laws and foreign border agents, Federal charges and investigations. Border Patrol agent Oscar Ortiz was in fact not even a United States citizen, an illegal himself, and he used a false birth certificate to get this, Mr. Speaker, become a U.S. border agent and work on our border. His lies were only discovered as he conspired to smuggle in over 100 different people into the United States.

Another example: two Border Patrol agents, brothers, have vanished into the darkness of Mexico because they were being investigated for smuggling drugs and illegal immigrants into the United States. Once they figured out that the Federal Bureau of Investigation was out to capture them, they took off and disappeared, as I said, into Mexico.

Two other agents were indicted for taking bribes and allowing illegals to cross our border for a few dollars.

Experts say targeting border agents is an easy task. You see, here is what happens. On the other side of the river, they watch our border agents with binoculars. They say coyotes look for border agents, brothers, have vanished into our sovereign borders are facing Federal charges and investigations. aren't okay with people buying and flirting their way into the United States. They demand safe and secure borders and honest and upstanding Border Patrol agents.

Make no doubt about it, most of our Border Patrol agents are honest hard-working men and women. But we must make an example of anyone who breaks the immigration laws, no matter which side of the border they live on. From time to time, we point out even on this House floor corruption of some Mexican immigration officials that work along the southern border when they are helping drug smugglers and coyotes all in the name of filthy lucre, so we cannot tolerate a few border agents who, in the name of money, sell out America and insult the good name of most of our border agents.

So all of those who make money off of illegal entrants should be accountable, and it makes no difference, Mr. Speaker, who they are. The rule of law should be enforced. It is illegal to enter the United States without permission. That is the rule, and it should be enforced by honest border agents. And people that enter illegally should be held accountable.

It is the preference who those people are, whether they are illegals that cross, whether they are narcoterrorists that bring money or drugs into the United States to sell, whether they are coyotes, or whether they are illicit business people. The United States has exploited illegals that are working here, or whether they are corrupt border agents. All of these must be held accountable for the actions they commit, because the border is a national security issue.

And that's just the way it is.

STAGNATING MIDDLE-CLASS INCOMES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. EMANUEL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, while the Republican Members of Congress have been blocking the first minimum-wage increase in 9 years, there is new evidence that income stagnation is not just hurting lower-middle-class families but middle-class families across the board.

Just the other day, the Los Angeles Times reported that income stagnation is now hitting people with a 4-year college education. In fact, the White House's own economists report that earnings and income for employees with 4-year college degrees fell by 5.2 percent between 2000 and 2004 during the President's first term. That is when adjusted for inflation. So, basically, if you have a college degree education, you had a decline in income.

Now, for 3 years, 40 years we have told people that you earn what you learn. A college degree today is no longer as valuable a ticket to success as it was before. You have to literally go back 30 years, to the 1970s stagflation, when people with a college education saw their income decline.

Now, what is happening in addition to income decline in America? This isn't just for working stiffs. This is for people with a 4-year college education and also for people with a master's education.

Energy prices? Well, they are up, more than doubled. In fact, when the President took office, gas was $1.33 a gallon. Today, it has gone up to close to $3 a gallon.

Health care costs. Health care costs for a family of four has risen 78 percent, to $11,000 a year for a family of four.

College costs for their kids, up 38 percent for a 4-year college education.

Savings, for the first time since World War II, are in negative territory, which is why people say bankruptcy and debt is one of their biggest economic concerns besides filling up their car with gas.

So take that whole picture: incomes declining, energy prices up, close to doubling; health care costs $11,000 a year for a family of four, and continuing at 25 percent increases; college costs up 38 percent in negative territory. We have a Swiss cheese economy, and it is hurting and killing the middle class, who have done everything right. They got told to get a college education and you earn what you learn. Today that college education ain't enough. They went out and earned a master's degree in education. That ain't enough.

And on top of that, besides incomes going down, all the costs to maintain a middle-class life, health care, energy costs, education, and retirement security, are all under attack. And what do my colleagues do when it comes to retirement security, when corporation after corporation is eliminating pensions? They want Social Security to lead the way.

The plan for retirement security isn't, when companies are eliminating pensions, to have Social Security eliminated or privatized. It is to give them that security that people know, that people like, and that is the security that comes with Social Security.

On energy. What is their answer to rising costs? As my colleague from Oregon said before, they handed over $14.5 billion in taxpayer subsidies to big oil companies so they could make additional profit. My view is if gas is 75 bucks a barrel, or 74 bucks a barrel, let the free market work. Use your profits to drill. Don't take taxpayers to subsidize it. People out there are paying twice, once at the pump at 3 bucks a gallon and once on April 15 when we hand over $15 billion a year.

And for health care costs? They handed off to the pharmaceutical companies an additional $130 billion in profits. Middle-class families are struggling with ever-increasing taxes, ever-increasing costs and stagnant incomes. It is time to have an economic strategy that, again, lifts all boats.

Now, I don't want to take a stroll down memory lane; but in the 1990s, when we were running balanced budgets, and we were running a surplus, incomes for all people were the top end, but for all workers were up. College costs were contained, health care inflation was running alongside regular inflation, and energy prices were actually $1.33 a gallon, not 3 bucks a gallon. That was a time in which we actually made an improvement. We invested by giving all kids health care whose parents didn't have health care. We created 22 million jobs. We ended welfare as we know it. We put people to work rather than dependency. We had record homeownership, low inflation, a balanced budget, record surpluses, and began to pay down the debt.

Put your fiscal house in order. Invest in education, health care, and energy independence in America. It is time for a change. It is time for new priorities.

VENEZUELA AND TERRORISM

(Mr. ROYCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, last week, the Subcommittee on International Terrorism that I chair held a hearing on Venezuela's link to terrorism. On May 15, the State Department designated Venezuela as not cooperating fully with U.S. anti-terrorism efforts. Mr. Speaker, from what we heard from the Department officials, it is not that Venezuela is not cooperating fully; it is that Venezuela is not cooperating at all.

Disconcerting was the testimony we heard from the State Department that Venezuelan passports can be forged with child-like ease, and that the U.S. is detaining at our borders an increasing number of third-country aliens carrying false Venezuelan documents. According to a 2003 U.S. News report, thousands of Venezuelan identity documents are being distributed to foreigners from Middle Eastern nations, including Syria, Pakistan, Egypt and Lebanon.

We know that travel documents are as important as weapons for terrorists. Mr. Speaker, post-9/11, it is reckless not to view our immigration policy as national security policy.

AMBASSADOR NOMINEE ROBERT HOAGLAND

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, from what we heard from the Subcommittee on International Relations in America, it is time for an economic strategy that, again, lifts all boats.
members continue to have serious misgivings about the nomination.

Two weeks ago, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee considered Mr. Hoagland’s nomination. During the hearing, Mr. Hoagland failed to adequately respond to the questions asked by the Senators, including not clarifying the U.S.’s policy in the denial of the Armenian genocide. In many instances, he did not respond to specific Senate inquiries. He diverted his answers by responding with what seemed like key points instead of going to great lengths to avoid using the term genocide.

Additionally, in response to a written inquiry from Senator John Kerry concerning Turkey’s criminal prosecution of journalists for writing about the Armenian genocide, Mr. Hoagland referred to these writings as allegations. Mr. Speaker, the U.S. has historically taken a leadership role in preventing genocide and human rights violations abroad. The Bush administration continues to play word games by not calling evil by its proper name. Instead, they refer to the mass killings of 1.5 million Armenians as tragic events. This term cannot be substituted for genocide. These two words are simply not synonymous.

Mr. Speaker, there are historical documents that cannot be refuted, yet somehow the administration continues to ignore the truth in fear of offending another government.

The Bush administration has not offered a meaningful explanation of its reasons for firing the current U.S. Ambassador to Armenia, John Evans. In fact, the State Department’s assertion that it did not receive any communications from the Turkish Government concerning Ambassador Evans’ February 2005 affirmation of the Armenian genocide is simply not credible.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that Turkey’s campaign of genocide denial. The administration recognizes the Armenian genocide.

Mr. Speaker, this lack of honesty has been an all too common practice of the Bush administration. The American people deserve a full and truthful account of the role of the Turkish Government in denying the Armenian genocide. Our Nation’s response to genocide should not be denigrated to a level acceptable to the Turkish Government. It is about time the administration starts factoring a policy for Americans and not for a foreign government.

Mr. Speaker, I fear that sending an ambassador to Yerevan who denies the Armenian genocide would represent a tragic escalation in the Bush administration’s ignorance and support in Turkey’s campaign of genocide denial. The State Department has reported to Senate offices that they expect Ambassador Designate Hoagland to be confirmed during a business meeting early next week. I urge the Senate to block his nomination until this administration recognizes the Armenian genocide.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOUSTANY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. SHAYS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

DROUGHT RELIEF

Mr. OSBORNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to claim the time of the gentleman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. SHAYS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

Reservoirs in this area are down by 50 to 75 percent. And so the irrigation water in these reservoirs is pretty much nonexistent.

One other thing that many times people will mention, they say, well, you have got crop insurance, so why won’t the farmers take advantage of that? Well, the problem is this, that each year that you have a drought and you have less production means that the next year you can purchase less crop insurance because of the loss that you had the year before. So after 7 or 8 successive years, the amount of crop insurance that you can purchase has been reduced by 50, 60 percent, so you don’t even really get the amount of money back that your inputs, your seed and your fertilizer cost you in the first place. So, as a result, obviously we have a very difficult situation.

In 2002, we had a very similar, very disastrous drought, and we did get some drought relief. And the thing that happened at that point was that people showed loss, who absolutely needed the help, got some. And then in 2003, we found people, lawmakers from other States said, well, so and so is getting some help, so we need to get some help too. And pretty soon we were expanding drought relief to areas that had no drought, who had no crop loss. And as a result, the series of articles we have seen in The Washington Post are accurate. And it was certainly our fault, those of us in Congress, for letting this get out of hand.

And of course, this is going to make it even more difficult at this point to do anything about the current drought. But we are hoping that people will understand that it is possible to administer a drought relief program responsibly, to get the money to people who really are hurting, because we are probably going to lose some farmers and ranchers this year in great numbers. And we hope that we do get some help.

And sometimes people say, well, you have got to have an offset. And so we are starting to look for offsets. We are trying to look for someplace where we can get this drought relief money from. But the way the Federal budget is at the present time, it is very, very difficult to find an offset.

So we have seen disaster relief go to many areas of the country. We just want to make people aware of what is going on. And we hope that, as people come back from the August break, they will bear this in mind and possibly have some disaster relief.

MEDICARE PART D DOUGHNUT HOLE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mrs. McCARTHY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MCCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, nearly 3 years ago I voted against Medicare part D, and after the leadership held the vote open for 3 hours, it did pass.
Since that day, part D has never failed to disappoint its supporters and its detractors.

First, we learned that part D would cost almost twice as much as Congress was originally told. Next came the confusing enrollment process. So many seniors were left to sort it out for themselves.

In New York, seniors had 46 plans to choose from. Seniors recruited their children and grandchildren and their Congress people to help them navigate the confusing drug application process, but they had no idea what would become of all these plans.

While holding town hall meetings on part D last year, I encountered many seniors who were thinking about not even enrolling in a plan because the process was just too confusing.

Today, many seniors are locked into plans that offer too little or too much coverage. Part D’s faults are compounded by the fact that seniors were locked into their plans for a year. But providers were allowed to exclude certain drugs from their plans without consequences.

Finally, after months of confusion, seniors are finally getting some relief on prescription drugs. But not as much as they could be. Medicare still isn’t allowed to negotiate prices with companies like the VA can. And seniors can’t reimport drugs from Canada to reduce costs either.

But part D’s biggest problem is about to emerge. Many seniors are about to discover the doughnut hole.

Mr. Speaker, the doughnut hole most people didn’t understand, but it is the gap in the coverage that part D enrollees face when they purchase $2,250 worth of prescription drugs. Only after paying that money will their coverage continue. The saddest part of the doughnut hole is that a great many of the seniors aren’t even aware that it exists.

We thought, in my district anyhow, that it would be late August before people would start reaching the doughnut hole. Unfortunately, in my area, we are getting the phone calls now. And since Medicare isn’t allowed to negotiate with drug companies, seniors will pay the usual inflated prices for their drugs while they struggle to come out of the doughnut hole.

So soon many seniors will be back in the same predicament they were before part D. Some will have to decide whether to pay their bills or purchase prescription drugs. Others will put their health at risk by reducing their dosage in order to afford their medication. And many will have to spend their way out of the doughnut hole every year for the rest of their life.

The doughnut hole isn’t just the result of bad legislation, it is a threat to our public health. Seniors will take less drugs than they are prescribed to avoid falling into the doughnut hole.

Part D penalizes seniors who take a lot of medication. Seniors essentially get fined over $3,000 for buying prescription drugs they need. It is absolutely absurd.

It is time to fix part D. It is time for a prescription drug plan that puts the interests of our seniors and the disabled before the interests of big drug companies.

Mr. Speaker, let’s start listening to the seniors who attend part D town hall meetings on Long Island and across the country, instead of drug lobbyists.

In the next few weeks, thousands of seniors will be getting an unexpected bill for more than $3,000 for Medicare. Let’s fix part D.

It is time for a simple, affordable and guaranteed prescription drug plan for our seniors. Part D has caused nothing but headaches for seniors since Day 1. And now it threatens to penalize them for taking their medication.

Mr. Speaker, it is a shame that we couldn’t have worked bipartisanship, because I actually do think that we could have solved this problem by working together. Unfortunately, politics got in the way of policy.

I was hoping, as I held my seminars in my district, I did not come out and say anything negative. I said, I am here to help you get through it. It is the law of the land, and I will continue to do that. But to put our seniors through this is wrong.

We should come up with a better idea. We should fix Medicare. We should make it easier for our seniors.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 250, CARL D. PERKINS CAREER AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2006

Mr. BISHOP of Utah, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 109-598) on the resolution (H. Res. 946) waiving points of order against the conference report to accompany the bill (S. 250) to amend the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 to improve the Act, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 5682, UNITED STATES AND INDIA NUCLEAR COOPERATION PROMOTION ACT OF 2006

Mr. BISHOP of Utah, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 109-599) on the resolution (H. Res. 947) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 5682) to exempt from certain requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 a proposed nuclear agreement for cooperation with India, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.
these programs actually end and become mortal.

These programs have survived because, well, in part, because there is a special interest, a cottage industry has grown up, and they live off the taxpayers.

But Mr. Speaker, Members of Congress are not here to represent special interests. We are here to work for the hard working mother and father who send their tax dollars here when, instead, they would like to keep that for their own homes and their own children.

My friends from Texas and Kansas have taken this initiative to craft those legislations to set up procedures to review the bureaucracy and it is one of the top priorities of myself and the members of the Congressional Constitution Caucus to see that this legislation is put into place.

I have had the opportunity to work with Mr. TIAHRT and Mr. BRADY on this legislation to make recommendations to them. I have worked with them as well, and as members, the gentleman from Utah as well sits here on the floor as well, to make recommendations to make these programs have teeth, because we are already out of the organizations that are simply reviewing what the Federal Government does, looks at the efficiency. There is already those outside organizations that can tell Congress what do in a more efficient manner. We have got to make sure that these new procedures will actually have teeth and make sure that they are implemented and actually reduce the size and scope of the Federal Government.

One of the suggestions that has been incorporated into Mr. TIAHRT’s bill, which I think will do well to move along and add the teeth to it, is simply to add a criteria to the legislation, one to review the duplicity and the efficiency of the Federal programs, and to see whether or not current Federal programs are constitutional; that is to say, do they meet specifics limited enumerated powers that any child in this country could find in Article I, section 8. Thus we ensure that all Federal programs have a constitutionally acceptable and not outside the intended limited size and scope of the Federal Government.

So I greatly appreciate the gentlemen from Texas and from Kansas for their work in this matter.

I also would like to take this time to thank the gentleman from Utah sitting to my right for all of his work in making sure that the American public and Congress continues their focus on the Federal Government and the Constitution and his efforts as far as bringing this attention to the public each Tuesday.

And I close, as we leave the Chambers this week to go back to our districts, as part of our district work period for Congress to encourage the American public to do what other Members have done on this floor as well, to read the Constitution, to look to the limitations that the Founding Fathers have instilled into it.

And I close with this quote from Thomas Jefferson, which he stated February 15, 1791: “To take a single step beyond the boundaries specifically drawn around the powers of Congress in the Constitution “is to take possession of a boundless field of power, no longer susceptible to any definition.”

Mr. Speaker, the Founders intended that the Constitution would set those parameters, and I encourage this House to abide by them.

THE SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOUSTANY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.

THE COST OF PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take the place of the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER) in the order.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, 3 years ago today, the House of Representatives issued a declaration of independence from the powerful drug lobby. A tripartisan majority, lots of Members of both the Republican and Democratic Parties and the Independent from Vermont (Mr. SANDENES), a tripartisan, the House passed legislation giving Americans access to safe, effective, and affordable medicine imported from Canada and other allied nations. Several of us in this body have over the years, and I began doing this 7 or 8 years ago, taken seniors from our districts, and I live in northern Ohio, up through Detroit into Windsor, Ontario, to buy prescription drugs at half or a third the price that Americans pay because Canada has found a way to negotiate directly with the drug industry and bring the prices down, saving, as I said, one half, two-thirds, three-fourths of the cost for prescription drugs.

Our Congress, particularly the Republican majority, because it is so in thrall to the drug companies and so addicted to campaign contributions from the drug industry, have failed to do any of that until 3 years ago when that tripartisan majority in the House passed that legislation, giving Americans access to less expensive drugs, drugs imported from Canada and other nations that have a safe, predictable process that they are able to retail their drugs.

But Senate Majority Leader BILL FRIST has never scheduled a floor vote in the Senate. Not 3 years ago, when we passed this bill; not 2 years ago; not last year, not this year. And the American people continue to pay two and three and four times the cost of prescription drugs that we should have to pay, that the Canadians pay, that the French pay, that the Germans pay, that the Japanese or the Israelis or the Brits pay.

Every day we delay, the skyrocketing cost of prescription drugs makes it harder for American businesses to provide health insurance for their workers. Every day we delay puts American manufacturers at a competitive disadvantage here and abroad. Every day we delay puts the health of American consumers at risk as they are forced to split their pills, skip their doses, and make the heart-breaking choice between medicine or between medicine and heat in the winter or between medicine and air conditioning on hot summer days like we have seen.

And every day we delay increases the burden on American taxpayers as drug prices drive up the cost of Medicare, drive up the cost of Medicaid, drive up the cost of other public sector health programs.

We should have sent President Bush an importation bill 3 years ago. It is not too late. We can still deliver for the American people if the Republican leadership in this House and if the Republican leadership in the Senate will come to floor votes on importation legislation before the end of this year.

Three years is too long to wait. It is time for leadership, for a change, to stand up to the drug lobby and to take a stand for American families, for American businesses, for America as a country.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WASTE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. BISHOP) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BISHOP of Utah. Mr. Speaker, as many here in the Chamber know, I am an old high school history teacher. And not content simply to teach history in the classroom, I organized different programs for my students. Having worked in the State legislature, I came up with an internship program. So I took kids to the Utah legislature, where they worked for a week as we organized the program, their jobs, their housing, their supervision at night. I organized an oral history program for our school. I organized a Renaissance festival.

Tired of only kids in athletic programs getting scholarships, we raised money for scholarships for kids who excelled in history. But it also required that not only did we put on a weekend festival but months of activity. Changing a small gym so it didn’t look like a small gym, doing the costumes, writing the script, preparing and providing for all of that meant that there would always be leftovers.

As department chairman, I approved of all these projects, and I probably drove my fellow teachers into the ground trying to maintain all these activities. And the question you have to ask is, why did we do it? And it is a very simple answer.

Nothing ever stays static or constant. If you are not moving forward, you are moving backwards. And it is instinctive within the human being that they want to expand, do different things. Even since coming to Congress, I am doing the same thing: I have associated among the programs what I think was a very academic program of study in the Washington, D.C. area; so once again in the fall I will bring 20 to 30 kids from my district here where I will get to be the teacher again, taking them through Washington and the experience of Washington in conjunction with the closeup program.

Now, I mention that simply because what we do in our daily lives in trying to expand and grow and what I did as a teacher is the same thing government does. Bureaucrat bureaucrat for trying to expand their programs. That is the instinct and nature of mankind.

In the 1930s and again in the 1960s, the Federal Government expanded all sorts of programs to solve problems. Legitimate. It was good. The question that has to be asked is, what happens once those problems of 40 or 50 or 70 years ago are solved? Do we then eliminate the program or do the programs do the same thing I did as a history teacher, trying to find new things to do, more things to do as you are trying to expand the scope and responsibility of your task at hand?

And that is exactly what does happen. We never eliminate programs. We simply add to them, which is why today we have 342 economic development programs, 130 programs serving people with disabilities, 130 programs for at-risk youth, 90 programs for early childhood development, 75 programs for education. The programs dedicated to assuring safe water. 50 programs for homeless assistance. 45 Federal agencies conducting Federal criminal investigations. 40 separate employment and training programs. 28 rural development programs, 27 teen pregnancy programs, 28 K–12 grant programs, 23 agencies providing aid to former Soviet republics, 19 programs fighting substance abuse, 17 rural water and wastewater programs, 17 trade agencies monitoring 40 international agreements, 12 food safety programs, 11 principal statistics agencies, and four overlapping land management agencies.

Why do we do that? Simply because that is the nature of the beast. How do we solve that? Well, we review those. A Federal review, according to one report from the Heritage Foundation, found that 38 percent of all the programs that are run by the Federal Government fail to meet their core mission: if we had known the atrocities and constitutional desecrations that would be committed in the name of war, from Abu Ghraib to domestic spying to Guantanamo Bay.

Along with many of my colleagues, I raised these issues long ago. We were vocal critics of the war before we even knew what a debacle it would become. But our objections were ignored and our voices drowned out by a steady drumbeat of misinformation coming from the administration and its allies. They raised the specter of a mushroom cloud in the chilling and disingenuous words of Condoleezza Rice. They insisted that the Iraqi people would greet us as liberators. They claimed that the war would be a cakewalk, with minimal cost of lives and taxpayer dollars. They assured us that the Iraqi invasion would spread freedom and democracy throughout the Middle East, an assertion that has been proven tragically wrong by the recent hostilities between Israel and Lebanon. Anyone who disagreed with this view of the Iraq occupation had his or her loyalty of America called into question.

Today the American people know the truth, that those of us who seemed like lonely dissenters were right all along. The American people agree that it is time to find a way out of Iraq, to end this occupation, because they know you cannot win an occupation.

Our troops have been put in an impossible position without the proper training or equipment. They are being asked to carry out an open-ended occupation of a country wracked with centuries-old religious conflict and few democratic conditions on which to fall back. Moreover, this occupation has no legitimacy whatsoever. It has never been authorized or ratified by the United States Congress.

So today I introduced the Iraq War Powers Repeal Act of 2006. It would reverse the fateful decision of nearly 4 years ago and allow Congress to reassert its constitutional authority on matters of war and peace. It would strip from the President the powers he has shamelessly abused. From there we can and we must end this occupation, while using diplomacy, humanitarian and peacekeeping tools to help Iraq achieve long-term security and stability. But we must return Iraq to the Iraqis and return our brave soldiers to their families here at home, who anxiously await their return.
Mr. BISHOP of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise with grave concerns about the situation in Iraq.

As I debated during a Special Order organized last week by the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. LARSON, I believe the war in Iraq is the centerpiece of the administration’s failed foreign policies. The war in Iraq has proven to be a failure, what should have been our primary foreign policy focus, winning the global war on terror. Our preoccupation with Iraq is decimating our Armed Forces, who now find themselves entrenched in a civil war where they do not belong.

The administration’s failure to measure progress in Iraq is matched by its broader foreign policy failures. North Korea and Iran present greater risks to our safety and security than they did when the President identified them as the “axis of evil” in his 2002 State of the Union address.

Today, the situation in Iraq is a tragedy, for America, for our brave troops in uniform, for the future of our Nation, and for the prospect of Middle East peace which fades every day we stay in Iraq and as the violence between Israel and Hezbollah continues.

Although 2006 was supposed to be a “year of significant transition” pursuant to last year’s defense authorization law, we are no closer to finishing the year with any measure of positive transition than we were when the year started.

I call my colleagues’ attention to a new book by Thomas Ricks, the Washington Post reporter who appeared on Meet the Press on Sunday, to discuss “Fiasco: The American Military Adventure in Iraq.” As Mr. Ricks explains, the administration’s forethought and planning was as poor as its conduct of the post-war period. It is why, 3½ years later, we are still paying the price for such negligence, and why 2006 is not on track to be the year of significant transition that not only had we hoped for, but that we simply must have.

Halfway through the year, these statistics show that we are moving backwards, away from our goal of handing Iraq over to a safe, secure and stable democracy. There were 3,149 civilian deaths in the month of June. That is up from 1,978 civilian deaths in January. For the year, more than 14,000 Iraqi civilians have been killed. That is an average of 2,400 a month. Another way of looking at that is every 5 weeks, Iraqi civilians die in the number that we lost on September 11.

The overwhelming majority of deaths have occurred in and around Baghdad. If the Iraqi police and army can’t provide security, is it any wonder that the Iraqi people have turned to the militias? That is not a measure of progress in any year, but particularly in a year of transition, that would be a turn for the worse.

Every day focusing on combating sectarian violence is another day and another dollar we divert from what should be our priorities, increasing oil production, rebuilding infrastructure, promoting more dialogue between Sunnis and Shia and developing a long-term political solution for a stable, lasting democracy.

The Iraqi government is not showing much progress either, particularly following remarks by Prime Minister al-Malaki and Speaker al-Mashadani, who both openly condemned Israel in recent weeks.

Combined with the fact that nearly 50 percent of Iraqis support attacking our troops, Iraq is no closer to what the neo-conservatives envisioned as a partner for Israel who would catalyze change and bring about stability in the Middle East.

When the prime minister addresses a joint session of Congress tomorrow morning, I would hope he says the following: First and foremost, that Iraq is indebted to America for the sacrifice of 2,500 of its sons and daughters. Second, that he regrets the comments about Israel. Third, that he is committed to routing terrorists, sectarian violence and corruption and disarm the sectarian militias. Fourth, that his government will honor the rights of ethnic and minority constituencies by revisiting divisive sections of Iraq’s constitution.

Still, Mr. Speaker, it will take much more to accomplish the long-term political goals necessary to restore stability and democracy, not only in Iraq, but to a region suffering under the strain of so much violence and uncertainty. But we have a long way to go. Reaching our objectives will be further down that path as a result of the administration’s failure in the pre-invasion planning and the conduct of the post-war period.

The tragedy of Iraq is perhaps the most solemn and vivid reminder of why a change in leadership is long overdue, and why America deserves a new direction in its foreign policy.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FRANKS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. FRANKS of Arizona addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

VETO ON STEM CELL RESEARCH PUTS A ROADBLOCK IN THE WAY OF SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, the European Union agreed today to continue its funding for embryonic stem cell research specifically involving the use of embryos that would otherwise be discarded from fertility clinics. Today’s agreement among the European nations paves the way for a 55 billion Euro science program designed to improve and move this important research forward. Unfortunately, Europe’s progress is in stark contrast to the embarrassing path charted by the White House.

Mr. Speaker, America has long had a history of leading the world in scientific discovery. President John Fitzgerald Kennedy made it a national priority to be the first Nation in the world to send a man to the moon. His leadership showed the rest of the world that the United States was the undisputed international leader in scientific progress. By raising his very first presidential veto to continue a misguided ban on stem cell research, President Bush has diminished American scientific standing in the world.

Mr. Speaker, 5 years ago, President Bush said that embryonic stem cell research had profound ethical questions. Today, I say that there are no more profound ethical questions than the fate of 100 million American lives, lives that can be saved, lives that will be lost if we do not advance this vital research forward.

Last week, we sent to the White House a bipartisan bill that ethically advances stem cell research, a practice supported by 70 percent of Americans. Instead of embracing stem cell research, President Bush chose this moment in time to strike a blow against science and against hope and against saving lives.

The promise of stem cell research is great. One researcher at Harvard Medical School wrote in the New England Journal of Medicine, “The science of human embryonic stem cells is in its infancy,” but he cautioned restricting stem cell research would “threaten to stifle the research field at a critical stage.”

Last October, the prestigious, peer-reviewed Journal of Immunology featured a study by four researchers from the University of Minnesota who developed human embryonic stem cells that can destroy cancer.

Mr. Speaker, when we tout the potential for stem cell research to develop future treatment for diseases like cancer, like Parkinson’s, of the research will say we are just dreamers, that the proof just isn’t there. Well, Mr. Speaker, four cancer survivors live on my street in Lowell, Massachusetts. Shame on anyone who would take a dream away from them.

Nearly 35,000 cases of leukemia were diagnosed last year. In fact, about 30 percent of cancers in children from birth to 14 years of age are leukemia. Today, scientists are using embryonic stem cells to treat leukemia and lymphoma.

We are dreamers, Mr. Speaker, but those dreams are supported by hard science and research. Stem cells have the potential to develop into any kind of body tissue, including blood, brain, or nerve tissue. Scientists believe that this unique ability can lead to even more breakthroughs in the number of illnesses that now are untreatable.
Whenever there are missiles flying, Syria.

The President’s rejection of domestic stem cell research does not mean an end to the research elsewhere in the world. This research will go forward. But the President has chosen to leave America behind and hamper our scientific progress.

The President’s veto also has put Massachusetts, the world’s most powerful engine of innovation and progress, on the sidelines. To put it in perspective, consider that Massachusetts alone has over 250 biotechnology firms, and that is more than all of Western Europe combined.

I believe the choice is clear: We should support stem cell research in Massachusetts and throughout the country. It is our tradition of innovation and, most importantly, it will offer hope to millions of Americans suffering from diseases that one day may be cured.

The President has shamefully put a roadblock in the way of scientific progress. The American people deserve better.

ISAAC: AMERICA’S MAIN ALLY IN THE WAR AGAINST TERRORISM

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I request unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from New York is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as editorial pages are abuse with discussion about the tragic and sad events in the Middle East, and some people at coffee shops and at street corners around our country are asking some very basic questions about the conflict in that region and why it has reached the place that it has.

I have heard some on this floor raise what I believe are really foundational questions to make it possible to understand the conflict and the challenge facing Israel in their battle against Hamas on one front, Hezbollah on the other front, and their two nation sponsors, Iran and Syria.

One question that frequently gets asked is how come we can’t just let diplomacy take hold? And it is true. Whenever there are missiles flying, whenever there are guns ablaze, it is, by very definition, a failure of diplomacy. And it has never been the first choice of either the United States or Israel in that part of the world to choose violence.

If you look through the entire scope of the Israeli lifespan, their entire existence has been marked with them extending their hand and saying yes to proposed diplomatic solutions to the conflict there, and their Arab nations saying no.

In 1978, even before the nation was born, there was the famous partition plan that would have made Israel a fraction of what it is today, surrounded by enemy Arab countries. It was the Arabs that said no, not the Israelis.

Since then, we have had the Oslo Accord, where the Israelis acknowledged the PLO as a partner for peace and were obviously burned; the Wye River Accord; the Camp David Accord with Egypt, which thankfully, still stands today; and the Oslo II Accord, which was a concession of virtually everything that the Palestinians asked for in exchange for peace, and that was met with violence.

We also should note that when they left Gaza on their southern border, left their position in the occupied territories, that is, the very spot that is now being used to launch missiles, Katusha rockets by the dozens, against their citizens.

When they left Lebanon after occupying it because so many missiles were flying from Lebanon to northern border, they left to come into compliance with the U.N. resolution and to set up universally and internationally accepted border that now Hezbollah has breached in Lebanon.

So it is true diplomacy is the better option. But in every single circumstance where diplomacy was pursued by the Israelis, with the help of the United States, it has been her terrorist neighbors, her Arab neighbors, that has said no; that is, not what we want; we want Israel not to exist.

And that, by the way, still today is what Hamas has made their creed, Hezbollah has made their mission, supported by Syria and Iran.

We have also heard a couple of times something that I wholeheartedly agree with, that there are many in Lebanon who are completely innocent in this. There are.

Frankly, my good friend, Mr. LaHood, mentioned this during the debate on the floor on the resolution supporting Israel. It is true there is no group more innocent and more persecuted in that part of the world than the Lebanese Christians, who have been persecuted by their fellow Lebanese. There are many people in Lebanon who just want to live and be free, but they have been overrun by Syria and then by Hezbollah.

But you are not an innocent victim if you go to bed at night with a Hezbollah rocket tucked under your bed. You are not an innocent victim when you make Hezbollah part of the ministry in Lebanon. You cannot lay down with dogs and expect not to get up with fleas.

The government of Lebanon has chosen to side with Hezbollah, so when Hezbollah crossed an international border and takes prisoners, when they lob missiles into Haifa, the Lebanese government, unfortunately, has to decide which side they are on, and up to this point they have said they are on the side of Hezbollah.

The final thing I have heard is, from time to time, some, and it is even supporters of Israel, say, you know what, this is a difficult time since September 11. Maybe our true concern should not be about what goes on in Israel. Maybe it should be just worrying about the United States and our interests.

Well, ladies and gentlemen, when the United States goes out and fights terrorism andUSB or terrorism and al-Qaeda, arguably they have one ally. It is not our faceless friends in Europe. It is not the French. It is not even the British. Our only ally, who every single day is fighting terrorism, is Israel. When they fight against Hezbollah, they are fighting the number one terrorist organization.

As one of the world’s foremost medical science centers, my home State of Massachusetts has played a critical role in the stem cell debate. Not only are our hospitals, research facilities and institutions of higher learning on the cutting edge of conquering disease, they are also major economic drivers keeping us competitive in the global economy. The life sciences industry employs roughly 30,000 people in Massachusetts alone.

I believe the choice is clear: We should support stem cell research in Massachusetts and throughout the country. It is our tradition of innovation and, most importantly, it will offer hope to millions of Americans suffering from diseases that one day may be cured.

But the President has chosen to leave America behind and hamper our scientific progress.

in London, where he talked about the fact that things were going just fine. But the article goes on to say that senior Iraqi officials are saying that the break-up of the country is inevitable. This is a quote from one: "Iraq as a political project is finished, talk of parties to divide Iraq between them and decide the future of Baghdad where there is a mixed population. The Iraqi Prime Minister, Nouri al-Maliki, meets Tony Blair in London today as violence in Iraq reaches a new crescendo and senior Iraqi officials say the break up of the country is inevitable. A car bomb in a market in the Shia stronghold of Sadr City in Baghdad yesterday left a further eight people injured after the recent assassinations in the sunni areas of West Baghdad and it will be tied into Jordan. The Iraqi Prime Minister, Nouri al-Maliki, is said to be increasingly isolated and some 55,000 near the capital into Baghdad to halt sectarian violence.

Meanwhile, Saddam Hussein has begun to receive funds voluntarily after being taken to hospital following a hunger strike to protest against biased court procedures and the murder of three defence lawyers. Among fellow Sunni his defiant court performances have rehabilitated his reputation, though he is still detested by Kurds and Shia.

The Speake pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Ross) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority party.

We are a group of 37 Democrats that are fiscally conservative, that want to restore some common sense and fiscal discipline to our Nation’s government.

Mr. Speaker, it should not be about whether it is a Democratic idea or a Republican idea. It ought to be about restoring some common sense and fiscal discipline to our Nation’s government.

Mr. Speaker, I contend that this Republican leadership, this Republican administration, is not taking us down the correct path. Our country is not on the right track when it comes to our Nation’s finances, when it comes to being good stewards of the American people’s tax money.

As you can see here on the Blue Dog Coalition poster, today the United States’ national debt is $8,419,336,525,769.

For every man, woman and child, including the children born today, every United States citizen’s share of the national debt is a staggering $28,129. And the sad reality is that during this hour, during this Blue Dog Special Order, during the next 60 minutes, this number, the U.S. national debt, will go up by approximately $1,666 for the national debt, D-e-b-t, that is one tax that cannot be cut. That is one tax that will not go away until we get our Nation’s fiscal house in order. Mr. Speaker, now, a lot of public opinion surveys say debts and deficits do not matter. The Republican leadership of this Congress says that debts and deficits don't matter.

Well, they do matter because we will not be able to meet America's priorities until we first get our fiscal house in order. What does it mean? It means that our Nation is spending, our Nation is spending a half a billion dollars a day, every 24 hours, simply paying interest. Interest. Not principal. Just interest on the national debt.

Folks in my district back home in Arkansas, they want to build I-69, and I do too. We need $1.5 billion to complete that interstate that will connect Winnipeg, Canada, with the Port of New Orleans. It is a very large amount of money. If you look at it another way, if we had our Nation's fiscal house in order, we could build that interstate through Arkansas with just 3 days' interest on the national debt.

Folks in my district want to build I-69, and so do I. We need $1.6 billion to finish the interstate that will stretch through Arkansas and through much of the Midwest, from Canada all the way down through Texas. $1.6 billion sounds like a lot of money and it is a lot of money; but put another way, we could build that Interstate 69 with a little over 3 days' interest on the national debt.

Hot Springs Expressway, four-laning U.S. Highway 167, four-laning U.S. Highway 67, improving I-30. So many needs, so many infrastructure needs that are going unmet, not just in Arkansas but across America.

Those infrastructure improvements will create economic opportunities and jobs to build those interstates and other infrastructure projects, and they will also create economic opportunities and jobs once they are built.

But those top priorities, educating our young people, ensuring they get a good education, helping the 46 million people that are trying to do the right thing and stay off welfare, but are working the jobs with no benefits, the health care access they so desperately need and deserve, these are the types of priorities that are going unmet in America because of the lack of fiscal discipline in our Nation's government.

It is hard now to believe that we had a balanced budget from 1998 to 2001. Because year after year we have record deficits. Now, why should deficits matter? I have given you a few reasons. Others, the deficits reduce economic growth. We have seen that. People lose their jobs, and often times they are finding jobs with few or no benefits.

These deficits burden our children and grandchildren, because it is they who will be forced to pay back this out-of-control spending that we are seeing occur today at our Nation's capital in Washington.

And, yes, they increase our reliance on foreign lenders who now own 40 percent, 40 percent of our debt. The U.S. is becoming increasingly dependent on foreign lenders.

Foreign lenders currently hold a total of about $2.089 trillion of our public debt. Compare this to only $236.3 billion in foreign holdings back in 1993. This is a list of the top 10 current foreign central banks and foreign investors that the Republican leadership of this Congress has borrowed money from, that this administration has borrowed money from in order to fund tax cuts for those earning over $400,000 a year.

Japan. Our Nation has borrowed $637.9 billion from Japan. The United States of America has borrowed $326.1 billion from Communist China. The United States of America has borrowed $174.7 billion from the United Kingdom.

You will really love this one, Mr. Speaker. The United States of America has now borrowed $102.8 billion from OPEC.

And we wonder why gasoline is now $2.99 a gallon in south Arkansas today. The United States has borrowed $68.9 billion from Korea, from Taiwan. $61 billion from the Caribbean banking centers, $51.2 billion from Hong Kong. $47 billion from Germany, and finally, last but not least, rounding out the top 10 current foreign lenders, foreign central banks and foreign investors that are loaning money to run our government is Mexico with $43.4 billion they have loaned the United States of America to finance this out-of-control spending.

There are a lot of things we are going to talk about tonight. We are going to talk about accountability. As members of the Blue Dog Coalition, we are not about partisan politics, we are not about just criticizing the Republican leadership for this out-of-control spending. We are about holding them accountable just as we would hold our own party accountable if we saw and witnessed this out-of-control spending. The last time I checked, when a Democrat was in control we actually saw the first balanced budget in the entire country, and the first surplus from 1998 to 2001 that this country had experienced in over 40 years.

We are also not just about accountability, but as members of the Blue Dog Coalition, we are also about fiscally conservative Democrats, we are also about offering up commonsense solutions. And we are going to talk this evening about the Blue Dogs’ 12-step plan for restoring fiscal responsibility to our government, and we are going to talk about legislation to make this government, to make the Federal agencies accountable for the tax money that they spend.

We will be talking about all of these issues over the next hour. Mr. Speaker, but at this time, I would like to recognize a fellow Blue Dog member from the State of Georgia, a real leader in the Blue Dog Coalition on these issues, and that is my friend, Mr. DAVID SCOTT.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Ross, again, as always, it is a pleasure to join you on the floor. And I can tell you that our folks down in Georgia are really, really concerned about the debt, and as you all across the floor are.

I think it is important for us to really draw some dramatic pictures of just how devastating this debt is. And you talked a few minutes ago about one feature that I want to spend just a few minutes on at the outset before we go into some of the other areas. But I think the American people need to understand this issue of foreign debt, of our indebtedness in the hands of foreign governments.

I want to say right up front that we have no problem with doing business with other countries, we have no problem with having indebted relationships with other countries. But when you look at this sterling fact, you will say enough is enough. And the one glaring fact is that in the last 5 years, Mr. Ross, and Mr. Speaker, this President in collaboration with this Congress, because the President couldn’t do it by himself, we all must take part, we all must take more money from foreign governments and foreign financial institutions in the last 5 years than in the entire preceding 211 years of existence of the United States of America. Think about it. Since 1789 up to 2001, we borrowed $1.4 trillion from foreign governments.

In the last 5 years, we have borrowed over $1.6 trillion just in the last 5 years. That alone is enough to scare the pants off of anybody.

It is paramount, if we are going to say with any kind of a way in which we can look the American people in the eye and say we want to be good stewards of your money, we want to have financial security in this country, financial stability, then the wrong thing for us to do is have this kind of indebtedness in the world.

Now, let’s look at where that indebtedness is. Up against a screen of what the world looks like as particularly as we look at where this war on terror is of paramount concern. Where are we borrowing this money from? You went through the litany just now of the top ten places. They are concentrated in the Middle East, OPEC countries, and they are concentrated in the Far East, very, very volatile insecure places, and with countries particularly like China that is not exactly playing the way they need and should play as we tackle this war on terror.

Then, if we add the oil dependency in and the energy dependence on the Middle East and where we are borrowing money from, coupled with what is happening over there right as we speak, who is it that apparently, as of this time, is running the Middle East?

An interesting thing happened to me when I was in the Middle East not too long ago. I went up and traveled up on the Golden Heights. And if you go up on the Golden Heights and you go far to the outposts of the Israeli army, then you'll come to the boundary of Israel where Syria and where Lebanon are on one side, then you have Syria, and I looked over through the high-powered binoculars that the Israeli people had that we could see the border. And I asked, do you know what I saw, Mr. Ross? Do you know what I saw, Mr. Speaker? It wasn't the flag of Lebanon that was flying, it was the flag of Hezbollah. That tells you something.

The point that I am saying is not only is it against our financial security to have so much indebtedness in that unstable part of the world with some of those regimes, but it is not in the best interest of our national security as well.

Now, on the other side of borrowing the money is an issue that we certainly need to touch upon, Mr. Ross, and that is the amount of money that we are spending and giving these countries just to borrow the money, the interest. It is the fastest growing element in our budget, over $185 billion just this past year we paid in interest just to borrow the money, which is more than what we spend for veterans, for education, to protect our environment, all together, all together.

So the point I am simply saying is that as we examine this issue, and like I say, I don't look at this as a partisan issue, I look at this as an American issue, an issue that we have all got to jump in here and deal with. This is the future of our country. And if we don't have financial security, we certainly are not going to have national security for long.

Mr. ROSS. The gentleman from Georgia makes a good point. One of the points that gets to our point about accountability within our government. If you ask a hundred different people what they think about this post-war Iraq policy, you get a hundred different answers.

One of the things that I must proud of is that this time, and I think it is one of the painful lessons we learn as a Nation and as a people from Vietnam. But this time, this time we are seeing the American people unite behind our men and women in uniform, and that makes me proud to be an American.

I have a brother-in-law who spent Christmas refueling Air Force planes over Afghanistan. My first cousin, his wife gave birth to their first child while he was away serving our country in Iraq. And I am not one of those that believe that we can simply pull out and come home tonight, but I will tell you this, I do believe in accountability.

This President, this Republican Congress, is spending $8 billion a month in Iraq; $8 billion a week, $11 billion an hour in Iraq. But if you ask this President to be accountable for it, if you ask him what his plan is to win the peace and eventually bring our men and women in uniform home, he will tell you that you are unpatriotic. And that is where I disagree with this President. Accountability. Accountable for the money, the tax money that is being spent in Iraq, and having a plan that will bring our troops home.

I have got to tell you that in August of 2004, it is a day I will never forget, August 11, 2004, I went to Iraq. We had some 3,000 Arkansas National Guard soldiers in Iraq at the time. And I talked to some Arkansans that I had taught in Sunday school. And in talking with these soldiers, they told me there were two things we ought to be doing in Iraq if we wanted to eventually be able to leave:

Number one, we need to be hiring more Iraqis to rebuild their infrastructure, instead of sending corporations of the money we are sending to Iraq to buy things for non-Iraqi citizens who were being kidnapped and oftentimes had the threat of being beheaded. They told me that Iraqi citizens were taking money from the insurgents to lob cheap bombs at our soldiers that I had taught in Sunday school.

The other thing they told me was that were not doing nearly enough in terms of training Iraqi citizens to be able to take control of their police and military. August 11, 2004, I am a member of the NATO parliamentary assembly. In February of this year, February 2006, I was at Victoria Nuland, the U.S. Ambassador to NATO's residents in Brussels, Belgium, and I talked to the military leaders in the EU and the NATO was there. Many members of his family died under Saddam's evil dictatorship. I asked him the same question, and, Mr. Speaker, I am here to tell you I got the same answer in February of 2006 about what we needed to be doing differently that I got from U.S. soldiers when I was on the ground in Iraq in August 11, 2004. We clearly do not have a plan. We do not have the right plan to win the peace.

Tomorrow in this very Chamber, we will hear a speech from the Prime Minister of Iraq. I am anxious to hear that speech. I also want him to know that we stand with his country; we want to see a democracy work in Iraq; we want to see an end to terrorism in Iraq. But if we are going to spend $8 billion a month to that country, our government must be accountable for it, and his government must begin to work harder toward trying to win the peace and restore stability in that war-torn, that terrorist-torn region.

So what could we do with the $8 billion a month that we are spending in Iraq? One month and 3 days of what we are spending in Iraq would fund the missile defense system budget for the United States of America. 12 hours of the money we are spending in Iraq would fund for one year the commodities supplemental food program for the entire country.

We could secure all commercial planes with missile defense systems. And if you believe we are safer now than we were pre-September 11, 2001, you are kidding yourself. They are screening our suitcases, but they are not screening the freight that goes in the belly of those planes; and, as I understand it, half of the belly of the plane is filled with freight. We could secure all commercial planes with missile defense systems with 5 weeks of the money we are sending to Iraq.

With 5 weeks worth of money that we are now sending to Iraq, we could provide health insurance for all 9 million children currently without it. With 3 weeks of the money we are sending to Iraq, we could double the number of Navy ships we are buying in fiscal year 2007 from 6 to 12. In 4½ months of the money we are sending to Iraq we could restore care to Medicare and Medicaid in the President's fiscal year 2007 budget.

In 5 weeks, the amount of money we are sending to Iraq would pay to secure all public transportation systems in this post-9/11 era. In 9 days, 9 days of the money we are sending to Iraq could eliminate the VA health care premium increases in this year's budget for America's veterans. And, 5 days worth of money that we are sending to Iraq could provide all, all United States ports with radiation detectors.

Now, I am not saying don't send the money to Iraq. As long as we have got troops there, I am going to support them, and I want to make sure they are properly taken care of and got the equipment needed to do the job. I am talking about this administration being accountable because the other priorities that I just listed will continue to go unmet until we get our fiscal house in order, until we have a plan to win the peace and bring our troops home from Iraq. These are the type of priorities that are going unmet, and that is why we are here tonight to talk about accountability.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Absolutely correct, and as we cannot talk about accountability, we cannot talk about the budget financial responsibility, national security without examining what we are spending in Iraq.

And we cannot do it for the obvious reason that the American people are expecting us now to ask the questions and to finally stand up as a Congress and do what the Constitution and the Founding Fathers laid out the Congress to do. They laid out the Congress to do two essential things. One was to determine how our tax dollars are appropriated, all of that starts here, and the other, and we have not done a good job of oversight.

That is one of the reasons why the American people, in many ways, are very frustrated. We have not asked the tough questions. Some of us have asked the tough questions but not enough of us, and I am so thankful for the Dubai incident because that opened up everybody’s eyes to really see. When that Dubai incident happened and all of the sudden we were going to turn over port security to the United Arab Emirates, a country in which we knew from our intelligence that terrorist financing was emanating from, a country that owned Dubai, that owned the company which we know was sending nuclear fusion material into Iran, and that did have direct financial relationships through their connecting financial centers in terrorist financing with al Qaeda, all of this came to our attention.

When the administration said we are going to turn our port security over to a company owned by this country, it woke us all up; and finally, in a bipartisan way, we stood up and we rejected. That, to me, was a turning moment when Congress stood up and said let us be the Congress.

So I think that Congress has a responsibility, definitely under the Constitution, to conduct oversight of the executive branch. We failed to conduct meaningful investigations of allegations of serious waste, fraud and abuse, much of what you talked about with Halliburton, and the people are expecting us to do this.

Now, in the situation in Iraq, and let me just say, I am talking to Republicans and I mean, you are talking about 24 cents of every dollar we make we are paying. Ought not we ask these serious questions?

I mean, you are talking about 24 cents out of every dollar we make we are spending. Ought not we ask these serious questions? Ought not we do the jobs of Congress?

Mr. ROSS. I should have provided the gentleman a copy. There is good news. You mentioned the 19 of 24 Federal agencies could not produce a clean audit. That number has actually changed. There is good news. The General Accountability Office now reports that 18, not 19, 18 of 24 Federal agencies have such bad financial systems that they do not even know the true cost of running some of their programs. Yet, in the last 6 years, the Republican majority in Congress did not force these agencies to fully account for how the money was being spent before doing out billions more in taxpayer dollars to the same programs.

In the Blue Dog Coalition, we have a bill to deal with that. We have a bill to deal with accountability. We have a bill that says if, Mr. Secretary, if your Federal agency cannot produce a clean audit, they cannot get their money. And the Senate for reconfirmation hearings. We are trying to get to the root of this problem by passing legislation that requires accountability, accountability within our government.

I want to thank the gentleman. Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I want to mention just one other point, too, that I think we need to bring out, and that is government contracting under the Bush administration. We cannot be fearful to do our jobs. We get out here and we run every other year and we tell people we are going to go up there and do the job of a Congressman.

As I mentioned, there are two things we have got to do: make sure we are good stewards of the taxpayer dollars and then do the oversight. Well, here is what our oversight has pulled out.

Between 2000 and 2005, the value of Federal contracts increased by 86 percent from $242 billion to $437.5 billion in 2006. This growth in contracting was over five times faster than the overall inflation rate and almost twice as fast as the growth in other discretionary Federal spending over this period; and as a result of the rapid growth in procurement spending, nearly 40 cents of every discretionary Federal dollar now goes to private contractors, a record level, and Federal procurement spending is highly concentrated on a few, just a few, large contractors with the five largest Federal contractors receiving over 20 percent of the contracting dollars awarded in 2005.

The fastest growing contractor under the current administration has been Halliburton. Federal spending in Halliburton contracts increased over 600 percent between 2000 and 2005.

All I am saying, Mr. Speaker, is we have got to look and examine how the taxpayers’ dollars are being spent. I mean, you are talking about 24 cents out of every dollar we make we are spending. Ought not we ask these serious questions? Ought not we do the people’s business of making sure how the money is being spent? Mr. ROSS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT), an active member of the fiscally conservative Democratic Blue Dog Coalition for joining us this evening.

I might point out here that on July 11, President Bush, with a lot of fanfare, announced that the deficit for 2006 was not going to be $300 billion. With a lot of fanfare, he announced that it was only going to be a projected $296 billion which is still the fourth largest deficit ever in our Nation’s history.

Our largest deficit ever occurred in 2004. It was $413 billion. The second
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Press. It lists hundreds and hundreds of ways that the Republican leadership has failed the American people.

So I want to encourage everyone to take a look at this. Do not take our word for it. Read it in the bookstore. Get it out of the presses. It is really happening in Congress because the TV stations, our newspapers are simply not reporting all this. They are spending way too much time trying to entitle us or affirm what we already think, but this book tells us the truth about Congress and how we need to change.

So I thank my friends from Arkansas and Georgia for yielding, and I will chime in at a later point in the debate.

Mr. ROSS. I welcome you both to continue with me in this dialogue in this Special Order on restoring fiscal discipline and common sense and accountability in our Nation’s government.

Since President Bush took office, the amount of foreign held treasury debt, we talked about it earlier, Mr. Scott, but I think it is important to note, is the amount of foreign held treasury debt has more than doubled, increasing from $1 trillion to $2.1 trillion. Put another way, this administration has borrowed more money from foreign central banks and foreign investors than the previous 42 presidents combined.

Unlike deficits in earlier years, I think it is important to note that current deficits have been primarily financed by foreign investors, with the rise in foreign-held debt equaling three-fourths the increase in publicly held debt since the start of the current administration. The rise in foreign held debt is troubling because it makes our economy beholden to foreign creditors and foreign investors and foreign central banks and, yes, foreign countries, and represents another financial burden passed on to our kids and grandkids, our children and grandchildren.

Foreign held debt is fundamentally different from domestically held debt since the interest payments on foreign held debt flows outside the United States and reduces America’s standard of living.

As you can see here, the amount of money that was being borrowed from foreign countries in 2001, during this Republican leadership in the House and Senate, was $988 billion. It has gradually gone up to a whopping, for fiscal year 2006, a whopping $2.66 trillion.

I yield to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Scott) and then Mr. Cooper.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. I just want to mention quite quickly, because I want the American people to understand that while we as Democrats are here and we are critiquing, we are providing the needed accountability.

And when you look at the front page of the USA Today on yesterday, they reported an interesting fact. They said that the Federal Government is now spending 20.8 cents of every dollar we make, of every dollar produced in this country, the Federal Government is spending 20.8 cents. That has increased in the last 5 years. That percentage was only 18.5 percent in 2001.

This is the wrong approach. And I am here to tell you that when you get out in the District, when you get out to my folks down in Georgia, they are concerned about their money. They are worried about where is going to bring down this debt and bring some accountability to the finances of this country. We can’t have this runaway train. We can’t have this debt being held in the hands of foreign governments the way it is. We can’t continue to be borrowing all of this money and laying it on the backs of our children and grandchildren. This is not our money. It is the people’s money. We have to start treating it much better.

Now, what are we going to do about it? And I think the American people are probably saying, okay, we are listening to those Blue Dogs down there and they are talking about President Bush and the Republicans, but what are the Democrats going to do? Let us hear from you and see what you are going to do about this.

Well, I want to offer and let the folks know that we Democrats are offering to do a couple of things. I want to draw attention, so that the American people will know, that we in the Blue Dog Coalition have a proposal that will restore accountability. It is contained in House Resolution 841 by our good friend from Tennessee (Mr. TANNER), and it will require congressional hearings. Because remember what I mentioned at the first. We have two basic functions here, one is oversight and the other is tax allocation.

So within 60 days of an IG report that identifies waste, fraud, that identifies fraud, that identifies abuse, that raises a red flag of mismanagement of more than $1 million, we immediately trigger congressional hearings. Let us get it before C-SPAN. Let the people know. Let us put the spotlight on it. Let us immediately say, whoa, whoa, this is wrong here. Let us have hearings on this and let us have oversight and insight into this issue.

When the GAO names an agency high risk for mismanagement, that is cause for a hearing so that we can open that up and find out what is going on. You can’t stick your head in the sand. That is bad management. That is not oversight. That is not taking care of your money. If your credit card runs up, mom and pop down home, they have to watch that. Red flag comes up, mom and pop are going to sit down at the kitchen table and say, wait a minute, we have to rein in some stuff here. Where is this money going? why is this money going here when we should not be putting the kitchen table back in Georgia can do this, surely this Congress must do it and be responsible for the money.
At least twice a year to havehearings to review the Office of Management and Budget’s performance based review, called program assessments rating, part two.

Then we have another bill, H.R. 5315, by our friends from California, Representative CARDOZA and another distinguished member of this Blue Dog Coalition called Accountability in Government Act of 2006. It will require that each Federal agency produce an audit within 2 years that complies with the standards in the Federal Financial Management Improvement Act of 1996.

Why pass the Act in 1996 as a tool if we are not going to use it? Congressman CARDOZA is saying let us pull it out and let us use it. Let us have a measuring device.

Secondly, that the Senate should hold reconfirmation hearings on any cabinet level official whose agency cannot fully account for its spending within 2 years.

We have had agency after agency come before us. I am on the Financial Services Committee. We have the Treasury Department come, we have HUD, we have all these agencies coming before us and we are accountable for, and time and time again, I ask them the question, where did this money go? Do you have a measuring system in there? Do you have accountability? Well, no, Congressman, we just don’t have it.

We have to hold everybody’s feet to the fire and bring financial security back into America’s government.

Mr. ROSS. People ask us all the time, if the Democrats are put in control of this body, what are they going to do differently? These are two commonsense Blue Dog Coalition-backed proposals about how we will restore accountability to the Federal Government.

At this time, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. COOPER) to spend time on this or any other subject we are talking about this evening.

Mr. COOPER. I thank my friends Arkansas and Georgia.

Another Blue Dog proposal for reform that is extremely important, because it would do a lot to fix our entire fiscal situation, to get our budget balanced again, and that proposal goes by the name of pay as you go. It is a very simple concept. Every household back in our districts has to follow it. Be-cause if you don’t have the money, you can’t spend it. You might be able to borrow a little for a little while, but sooner or later, you have to pay the bill. That is the same principle America should be run on.

It is not just us saying it. The former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Alan Greenspan, said that that would be the single most important reform America could undertake. The single most important reform, and we Blue Dogs are championing it. We, as Democrats, are championing it, and yet the Republican majority in this House has prevented that reform from even coming up for a vote.

Now, this isn’t theoretical or experimental thinking that Chairman Greenspan is proposing, this pay as you go proposal, this idea that if you want to spend more money on a program, fine, but you have to show us which program you had to get it from. If or if you want to cut taxes, fine, get money from somewhere else to pay for the tax cut. This proposal was the law of the land in America from 1990 to 2002. For 12 years, from 1990 to 2002, this proposal worked and worked well in America.

Most historians agree it was the single most important factor during that era that helped America live within its means so that we could have a stronger Nation for our kids and grand kids. And former Federal Reserve Chairman Greenspan even remembers the day that the Republicans allowed the pay as you go proposal to expire, and that day was September 30, 2002.

September 30 was a dark day in America, because the 12 years of fiscal restraint that we had had, the 12 years of living within our means, the 12 years of kitchen table budgeting were then suddenly, all hell broke loose when that happened. Because suddenly there was no restraint. You could spend anything. Earmarks and other things exploded.

That is going to be a terrible fiscal headache that we are having to deal with the kids and grandkids. So that is probably the most important of all the Blue Dog proposals. We have had many, and the gentleman from Georgia has mentioned several. We have had the 12-step plan so that America could get off its addiction to deficit spending, much as the 12-step Alcoholics Anonymous program helps many people across America get off their addiction to alcohol.

So these are just a few of the reforms that the Blue Dogs have been participating in to make us have an even stronger Nation. We are proud of America. We want a strong America in all respects, but America can be even better than it is today.

I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. ROSS. I thank our co-chair for policy of the Blue Dog Coalition Jim COOPER from Tennessee for his insight on these many issues.

And what I am so proud of is that we are not a partisan, we are not here to beat up the Republicans. We are here to hold them accountable for these out-of-control debts and deficits, but we are also here to offer common sense solutions.

Mr. Scott of Georgia talked about the Blue Dog backed accountability plan that will hold Federal agencies accountable when they cannot account for the taxpayer money that we provide them to assist taxpayers and to run our government on. He talked about the common cabinet level secretaries go back to the Senate for reconfirmation when they fail to produce a clean audit.

Mr. COOPER talked about our plan for a balanced budget. Forty-nine States require a balanced budget. I can assure you my wife requires a balanced budget at the Ross household in Prescott, Arkansas. My banker requires we have a balanced budget at our family-owned business back home in Prescott, Arkansas. And it is not asking too much for the United States of America to have a balanced budget, which is one of the 12 points that we have provided, that we have offered up, a 12-point plan to curb our Nation’s addiction to deficit spending.

Mr. Speaker, if you have any comments, questions or concerns about this special order this evening on accountability and common sense and fiscal discipline, I would encourage you to e-mail us, Mr. Speaker, at bluedog@mail.house.gov. Again, you can e-mail us at bluedog@mail.house.gov.

Let me just mention a few of the other points to Mr. Ross’ plan for budget reform. Don’t let Congress buy on credit. Back when we had a balanced budget for the first time in 40 years, from 1998 to 2001, we had what was called PAYGO, pay-as-you-go. For instance, yes, we would borrow to balance the budget, to put a lid on spending is another idea that we have. Stop these massive increases in the amount of money being provided to Federal agencies. Require agencies to put their fiscal house in order, which goes back to our accountability bill.

When the Congress tell taxpayers how much they are spending. Believe it or not, billions of dollars are spent in this Chamber without a roll call vote. Simply by voice vote. We want to put an end to that. Think about this one, you want to talk about commonsense ideas? Set aside a rainy day fund. We know there is going to be a natural disaster somewhere in these United States every year, and we ought to be prepared for those type of natural disasters and emergencies.

Don’t hide votes to raise the debt limit. Instead of increasing the Federal Government’s credit card limits, instead of increasing the debt limit hidden in some other bill, let us have a stand-alone bill so that the American people know much the debt is being increased and for what purpose.

Justify spending for pet projects. Ensure that Congress reads the bills it is voting on. Now, that is a good one, let us have e-mail us, Mr. Speaker, at bluedog@mail.house.gov. Again, you can e-mail us at bluedog@mail.house.gov.
The Medicare prescription drug bill, there has been a lot of talk about it. It is now estimated to cost well over $700 billion over the next 10 years. It went to a vote at 3 a.m., barely a day after the final version of the 500-plus-page bill was made available for Members of Congress to read. Now, I can promise you we cannot pass laws to make Members of Congress read the bills they vote on, but I can promise you that when you have got a 500-page bill and you give them less than a day to read it and study it, it is impossible to read it and thoroughly examine it.

We are saying give Members of Congress a minimum of 3 days to have the final text of legislation made available to them before there are votes. And you know what, Mr. Speaker? If we have made it just fine since 1776 without whatever piece of legislation we are dealing with at the time, we will probably be able to do another 3 days. Give Members of Congress time to read the bills they are voting on.

Require honest cost estimates for every bill that Congress votes on. Make sure we have the budget, and make Congress do a better job of keeping tabs on government programs, which again goes back to our accountability legislation that is Blue Dog-backed, written by Mr. Tanner and Blue Dog members. That is what we have talked about a great deal this evening.

We are not here just to criticize. In fact, we are not here to criticize at all. We are not here to be partisan. We are here to hold the Republican leadership and the Republican administration accountable for this reckless out-of-control deficit spending, the largest deficits ever in our nation’s history, and they are borrowing to the tune of about $1 billion a day. The debt is going up about $1 billion every 24 hours, half of which is being borrowed from foreign central banks and foreign investors. We are here to hold them accountable and to offer up what I call commonsense solutions.

I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. And finally, Mr. Ross, we must begin to search and try to find commonsense solutions. So it is my privilege to be here this evening as we talk about these issues that are so important not only to our future but our children and grandchildren’s future.

I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Cooper).

Mr. Cooper. The point that the gentleman from Georgia was just making about how much money we borrow from foreign countries, the American people need to know it is not just China we borrowed $300 billion from. It is also countries like Iran, another part of what President Bush called the Axis of Evil. They own a big part of the American debt now. Venezuela, under Hugo Chavez, not exactly a friendly nation. Other nations like the Soviet Union with whom we do not have good relations these days. It is incredible how small our dependence is.

And for President Bush to have borrowed more money from foreign nations than all previous Presidents put together going all the way back to George Washington, that is incredible. The average American back home just does not understand how much President Bush has borrowed from foreign nations. And that makes us terribly dependent on those nations. We do not want China or other countries trying to foreclose on any part of America, but that is the situation we are getting more into every day. We are borrowing 2 to $3 billion every day from foreign nations.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank both of these fine gentlemen, very active leaders in the Blue Dog Coalition, for joining me this evening.

We raise these issues, the largest debt ever in our nation’s history, largest deficit ever in our nation’s history, borrowing $1.5 billion a day, paying interest on the national debt, we raise these issues because as long as we are spending $1.5 billion in interest payments each day that America’s priorities are not going to be met, you can see here the red is the amount of money going to interest in our Nation. The light blue is the amount going to ensure that our children receive a world-class education. In green, a lot of talk about homeland security. Here in America or any part of America, but that is the situation we are getting more into every day. We are borrowing 2 to $3 billion every day from foreign nations.

Mr. ROSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank both of these fine gentlemen, very active leaders in the Blue Dog Coalition, for joining me this evening.

And, finally, a lot of talk about supporting our troops, and I hope we all do. I certainly do. But isn’t the way to honor our troops, isn’t one of the ways to honor them to support our veterans? Because we are creating a new generation of veterans in Iraq and Afghanistan and across the globe as we stand here this evening, and yet you can see compared to the red, the amount of money going to the national debt, you can see what is going to cover the amount of money to fund our veterans.

It is time our government keeps its promises to our veterans.

THE OFFICIAL TRUTH SQUAD

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Price) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, what a pleasure it is to come back to the House floor this evening. On behalf of the Official Truth Squad, I want to thank the leadership and the conference for allowing me to host this hour.

The Official Truth Squad kind of grew out of frustration on the part of the freshmen class a little over a year ago. We felt that there were a lot of things that were said on this floor that, taken at face value, might be seen as being accurate, but, in fact, if you look at it a little closer, they were not the truth. And we felt that there was not a whole lot of time allotted to refuting the inaccuracies. Now, some of those inaccuracies, Mr. Speaker, you have just heard.

So we are going to spend a little time over the next hour to talk about accuracy. We are going to talk about truth because truth is so doggone important in trying to determine what public policy ought to be. If you are not dealing with real facts, if you are not dealing with truth, then you cannot get to the right answer, cannot get to the right solution. So it is my privilege to be able to join our colleagues this evening and to, Mr. Speaker, talk about the kinds of issues that are of importance to the American people.
And tonight we are going to talk a lot about the economy. But I want to start by sharing with you, Mr. Speaker, and with my colleagues and kind of a saying that we have adopted, a quote that we have adopted, and it comes from Daniel Patrick Moynihan. He was a former United States Senator from the State of New York, and he had a wonderful quote that I very fond of and quoting it is: “Everyone is entitled to their own opinion but not their own facts.” And there are a lot of opinions around here, Mr. Speaker, but as I mentioned, oftentimes the facts is far from the opinions that have been given. So it is my privilege to be joined tonight by some folks who will talk about some truth and some facts.

You have just heard some comments from some folks on the other side of the aisle, some good friends of mine on the Democrat side, who have decided to use some very specific instances and items that they would support, that they would be doing if we were going to get our fiscal house in order.

We are going to talk about our fiscal house and how a lot of it is moving along pretty doggone well. But I want to mention a couple things because when you talk about the economy, and with my colleagues kind of a saying that they need this thing or they need that? That article started out by saying everybody is entitled to their own opinion but not their own facts.” And that is a fact, Mr. Speaker. That is a fact, and that is why the Official Truth Squad believes that it is important to talk about facts, to talk about the truth.

Tonight we are going to talk a fair amount about the economy and about economic principles and about where this Nation stands as it relates to the economy, and I am pleased to be joined by one of my good colleagues and fellow members of the freshmen class, Representative THELMA DRAKE from Virginia, who, as a small business person, understands the extreme importance of fiscal responsibility and really has been a stalwart in calling forward the kinds of policies that we need in this House and across this Nation in order to make certain that we gain the kind of fiscal benefit that all Americans, not just Democrats, but all Americans believe are so important.

And I yield to my good friend from Virginia.

Mrs. DRAKE. Mr. Speaker. I thank the chairman for inviting me this evening and for inviting me to participate. I found what you just went over with your numbers very interesting, because in coming here tonight to talk about the economy and the very good news of what America is facing with the growth in our economy because of the tax cuts of 2001 and 2003, I wanted to share with you that there was an excellent article in The Wall Street Journal today, and it went right along the same path of what you just said.

That article started out by saying that John F. Kennedy believed that an economy hampered by restrictive tax rates will never produce enough revenue to balance our budget, just as it will never produce enough jobs or enough profits.

In those days, when the Kennedy tax cuts were passed, 80 percent of Democratic Senators and Representatives voted for those Kennedy tax cuts. But the article goes on to point out that in 2003, when these most recent tax cuts were passed, only 7 of 265 Democratic Representatives voted for those tax cuts. And, more than that, the editorials across the Nation went on to call the tax cuts economically unsound and claimed they would increase the deficits by hundreds of billions of dollars and said they were unlikely to stimulate the wallowing economy.

What we have seen is absolutely the opposite of that.

We have also heard just recently that House majority leader NANCY PELOSI has promised that if there is an election of a Democratic House in November, that would result in the rollback... of tax cuts. It makes you wonder why, the article goes on to point out, when tax rates go down, that economic activity goes up.

I would like to share with my friend, and I know he will talk about it as well tonight, some of the facts of what has happened with those tax cuts, particularly since 2003.

In the past 33 months, the size of America’s entire economy has increased by 20 percent. Incredible. Twenty percent. That is in the words of Larry Kudlow. In less than 3 years, the U.S. economic pie has expanded by $2.2 trillion, an output add-on that is roughly the same size as the total Chinese economy. Incredible numbers.

In the 25 years before the 2003 tax cuts, economic growth averaged 1.1 percent annually. In the past 3 years, it has averaged 4 percent per year, and the first quarter of this year, we are on track for 5.6 percent for this year. Incredible numbers.

In the past 3 months since the tax cuts became law, 5.3 million new jobs have been created. When we talk about Federal tax receipts, they are up 15 percent or $271 billion last year, and when the capital gains tax was reduced from 20 to 15 percent, this year tax receipts grew 79 percent from 2000 to 2004.

Before I came to Congress I was a re-alor, and I understood the capital gains tax on real estate. I can tell you there were many people I worked with, including myself as well, that would not have sold a piece of property at a 25 percent capital gains tax rate. We just would not do it. There is such a thing as taxpayer behavior and there is a breaking point.

What has happened with these tax cuts and the reduction to 15 percent is people are making different choices. They are now saying I can sell that rental property and I can go on and I can invest in something else.

Among them doing that, they are creating new jobs, they are creating new opportunities, and our economy has grown incredibly.

Cutting the dividend tax rate from 39.6 percent to 15 percent has increased those revenues by 35 percent from 2002 to 2004 and tax receipts have tripled since 2003, reaching $250 billion for the last 9 months.

I think that it is important to talk about that tax cuts truly do work. We have not said that, if you allow people to keep more of their own money, they will create jobs, they will create investments, they will spend the money. They will use it in our economy, all for the benefit of our Nation.

But what we have today is 3 years of solid record to show that that model works.

I appreciate you giving me the opportunity to be here to talk to you. I appreciate the article this morning in The Wall Street Journal. I would encourage everyone to go back and read it and to really see what has happened in our economy, because often we hear the rhetoric that we hear over and over again, don’t realize the positive impact of these tax cuts.

You and I both understand that if these tax cuts are rolled back, that is a tax increase on the American people, and you and I disagree with the other side of the aisle that says, revenues are good, let’s just raise the rates and they will be that much better, because that fails to calculate what happens with taxpayer behavior and the negative impact on our economy.

Thank you very much for what you are doing. Thank you for giving me the opportunity to be here.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. I thank the gentlelady from Virginia. What wonderful pointed and shrewd light on the Official Truth Squad and facts that you brought before us, the issue about the tax cuts, the capital gains and dividend tax cuts now at 15 percent, which we have attempted to extend and was an important point about taxpayer behavior. If one would believe everything that they hear from the other side, you would believe that every single person on the other side of this aisle supported that continued decrease. Not the case, as you well know.

There is really wonderful and good news as it relates to the economy, the remarkable economic growth that you have cited, and we will go through some of that in just a little bit.

Taxpayer behavior, I appreciate your mentioning that, because people across this Nation know what goes on here in Washington as it relates to tax policy, and they tailor what they do in their personal lives based upon that. There is no doubt about it.

I would be happy to yield for a moment, if you would like.

Mrs. DRAKE. I just want to thank the gentleman from Georgia again. I think that is an important point about taxpayer behavior. I think it is important that we allow Americans to keep as much money in their pocket to spend the way they see fit, and we now can show you that is the best model for increasing revenues for our government.

I think it is also important to talk about what those tax cuts went into effect, that they weren’t anticipated, and it was $2.2 trillion over the last decade that we had not anticipated because no one thought the tax cuts were going to do what the tax cuts actually did.

So, that, in itself, those $2.2 trillion we had not calculated, is actually as if those revenues didn’t pay their income tax for 10 years. That is that amount of money. It is a huge amount of money.

I believe, and I know you do too, that our tax policy has got to support our economic growth, and what you are seeing in the tax cuts, particularly from 2003, are doing exactly that.

Thank you for telling America.

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Thank you so much. I appreciate your participation tonight with the Federation of the Official Truth Squad, trying to bring some truth and fact and positive news to you, Mr. Speaker, and our colleagues.

I like charts, because I think that they oftentimes say so much more than I am able to put into words. We are going to go through some charts here.

This is one of my favorite charts, because it points out the time at which the tax relief occurred, the decrease in the capital gains and dividends and the consequence of that, the incredible economic growth, 12 quarters of 4 percent average growth since that point. We are going to talk about that. I am going to leave that up for a bit because it is such wonderfully positive news that we need to be telling all of our colleagues about the importance of the changes in policy that indeed drive this kind of economic performance for our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege of serving on the Financial Services Committee, and we have an opportunity in that committee, as some other committees in Congress do, to hear from the Federal Reserve, Mr. Bernanke, at least twice a year, sometimes more often, but at least twice a year.

Last week, the new Federal Reserve Chairman, Mr. Bernanke, came and spoke to our committee, and we had an opportunity to ask questions. In response, he always gets the question, what is the state of the economy. How are we doing?

In response to one of those questions, I think he used the word "robust." The word he used was robust. And I know that doesn’t jive with what some folks will have you say, but I think it is important to appreciate that the numbers, in fact, demonstrate that that is indeed the case.

I would like to share, Mr. Speaker, a couple of the comments that the Federal Reserve Chair made to our committee just last week. He said that since our February report, the report of the Federal Reserve, the U.S. economy has continued to expand; that real Gross Domestic Product is estimated to have risen at an annual rate of about 5.6 percent in the first quarter of 2006, that with respect to the labor market, more than 850,000 jobs were added in the first 6 months of this year; and that the last unemployment rate stood at 4.6 percent, which is a remarkable rate, Mr. Speaker. We will go over that along with some other statistics that I think are important to point out and relates to the economic performance.

When he comes to Congress, he brings with him and presents to all Members of Congress what is called the Monetary Policy Report of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the group of individuals who set monetary policy for the United States. In so doing, they look at all sorts of different parameters that relate to our economic performance and whether or not they need to do something as it relates to the interest rate, to try to stem the potential tide of inflation.

I would like to share, Mr. Speaker, with Members of the House and you some of the comments and statements made in this official Monetary Policy Report of the Federal Reserve, just some short portions.

Regarding monetary policy and the economic outlook, the report says, "The expansionary economic activity during the next year and a half." Mr. Speaker, that is good news.

Economic and financial developments in 2006, I found this fascinating, because if you look at the kinds of natural challenges that we have had as a Nation, one would think that the economy would have been not terribly vibrant. But there is a portion of a paragraph under the economic and financial developments in 2006. "Although last year's hurricanes caused the pace of economic activity around the turn of the year to be uneven, real GDP, gross domestic product, increased at an average annual rate of 3.6 percent for the final quarter of 2005 and first quarter of 2006, about the same pace that prevailed during the previous year-and-a-half. Over this period, pay- roll employment posted additional solid gains and the unemployment rate declined even further."

Mr. Speaker, that is the kind of positive information, the kind of good news that we in this Congress ought to be sharing with each other about the tax policy that has been enacted and about the consequences of that tax policy and how that is benefiting the job performance and the job creation throughout our economy.

What about the household sector? This monetary report breaks down our economy in many different areas. The household sector, consumer spending, you have to have money in order to spend it, as you know. Mr. Speaker. Over the first half of 2006, rising employment and the lagged effect of increases in wealth continued to provide support for spending by households, the continued increase in household spending.

How about the business sector? Fixed investment, real business fixed investment increased at a solid rate on average during the final quarter of 2005 and the first quarter of 2006. Over that period, business spending for new equipment and software rose at an annual rate of 9.75 percent, a pace similar to that over the first three-quarters of 2005.

It is why you see this chart that demonstrates the kind of economic growth. You can't have economic growth without investment in our economy, and the business sector continues to believe strongly in our economy and the positive effects that their investment will continue to have.

How about the government sector? That is something that folks kind of track to make certain that resources are available to our Federal Government and State and local governments to be able to cover the needs of our society. In terms of the Federal Government, the quote here in this Monetary Policy Report is that "The deficit in the Federal unified budget narrowed further during the last 12 months ending in June the unified budget recorded a deficit of $276 billion, about $60 billion less than during the comparable period last year."

Mr. Speaker, as you know, the kind of tax policies that have been put in place have resulted in a decreasing level of deficit, a decreasing level of deficit. I know it is kind of like you, Mr. Speaker, when you meet with civic groups and neighborhood groups and constituents, and they are concerned about spending at the Federal level, and rightly so.

As President Reagan used to say, we do not have a revenue problem in Washington; we have got a spending problem. And we do. And we are working to decrease that level of spending. But we are also appreciating and realizing the tax cuts. And that good tax policy results in economic growth and increased revenue to the Federal Government in order to cover the kinds of appropriate expenses.

We will talk about spending in just a little bit, Mr. Speaker. How about State and local governments? "The fiscal positions of States and localities continue to improve through early 2006. In particular, revenues appear on track to post a relatively strong gain for a third consecutive year."

Mr. Speaker, that kind of quote in the Board of Governors Federal Reserve System Monetary Policy Report to Congress, one would think if you read that, understood that, and believed that to be true, which I believe it to be true, that you would not hold the kind of "Chicken Little" attitude that many folks around here hold, about saying that the sky is falling.

In fact, the economy is ticking along pretty doggone well. We are going to go through a lot of numbers tonight to demonstrate that in fact we have good news to tell the American people. Good news to tell the American people.

How about international trade? This is an area of great concern to me and many of my constituents. What about what is going on in the area of international trade? "Real exports of goods and services increased." Exports increased, Mr. Speaker. You do not hear that often. You certainly do not see it on the nightly news to tell the American people.

Real exports of goods and services increased 14% percent at an annual rate in the first quarter of 2006, well faster than the 6% percent rate recorded in 2005.

In the labor market. How about the labor market, unemployment and employment? Conditions in the labor market continued to improve in the first half of 2006.

Payroll employment increased 176,000 new jobs per month, on average, during the first quarter, a rate roughly in line with the relatively brisk pace that prevailed during 2004 and 2005.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted to share those with you and with Members of the House so that you would understand and appreciate that when you talk about the truth and when you talk about facts and you have individuals whose job it is to shoot straight with the Congress and straight with the American people, the kind of information that you can derive here leads one to believe that the economy is doing pretty darn good, pretty darn well.

Now, some folks say, well, it may be doing well, but it probably is not doing as well as it is elsewhere. You have heard that. Mr. Speaker, I know there are some folks who believe that. But thank goodness there are groups of folks who are looking at our economic performance as it relates to the rest of the world, especially the major industrialized nations of the world. This is a report from the Joint Economic Committee that compares the economy in the United States with the economies in the major Western countries, Canada, European countries, European nations and the Japanese economy.

And this was comparing the performance since the year 2001. That is the last 5 years. I want to share with you, Mr. Speaker, a few quotes: "Although some people have expressed dissatisfaction about the performance of the U.S. economy, the economic data show that since 2001 the United States economy has outperformed every other large developed economy. Mr. Speaker, did you catch that? The United States economy, since 2001, has outperformed every other large developed economy. That is good news. That is good news. But it is news that isn't often shared here on the floor of the House, certainly is not news that you see in your newspaper, or that you see on the nightly news. That is remarkable news, as a matter of fact.

There is a reason for it. I believe it to be the policies that have been put into place by this Republican Congress, especially the tax policy that was proposed by the President and enacted. But that quote, again, Mr. Speaker: "The United States economy since 2001 has outperformed every other large developed economy."

Real GDP growth. We rank first in economic growth in the world in terms of industrialized nations. First place in job creation. First in job creation. Largest cumulative increase in industrial production, the largest cumulative increase in industrial production, 4.6 percent. First in labor productivity growth.
Mr. Speaker, that is all wonderful, wonderful news, remarkable news as a matter of fact. Again, it astounds me that we do not have this kind of discussion going on on the floor of the House more often. Because these are all good news items that we have in her. What is happening over that same period of time. Prior to that, the kind of business investment in the economy, and, you know, Mr. Speaker, that business investment is so remarkably important to be able to increase the number of jobs, to have our economy flourish. Before that point, there was not positive business investment in our economy. There was uncertainty. We had a recession. And business wanted to have some predictability to our economic policies. And what happened with the tax reduction is that they gained that predictability, that reliability of a positive economic policy from this Congress and from the President. That was considered full employment, certainly over that period of time, 40-year average. In the 1990s the average was 5.8 percent. But what is it now at this point? 4.6 percent. Mr. Speaker, that truly is full employment. Remarkably positive news to share with the American people. But you just do not hear that as often as one ought. When you see those kind of statistics, 4.6 percent is below our average unemployment rate for the 1960s, for the 1970s, for the 1980s, and for the 1990s, phenomenal. And again the reason for that is appropriate tax policy, appropriate economic policy, put in place by this Republican Congress, by this President, Mr. Speaker, real or inflation-adjusted, not counting for inflation, GDP growth has averaged 4 percent per year, which exceeds the World War II, post-World War II average of 3.4 percent per year. So since the end of World War II, the average GDP growth annually in this Nation has been 3.4 percent. And since the beginning of 2003, because of the economic policies enacted by this Congress and by this President, we have seen an average growth of 4 percent, greater than the average over the last 60 years. That is positive news, Mr. Speaker. That is positive news. This chart demonstrates much of that. Along this axis here we have the quarters. The green dotted line, vertical line here, is when the tax, appropriate tax relief, tax reductions went into place, and what you see after that is 12 straight quarters of 4 percent average economic growth.

Good news. Good news, Mr. Speaker. This demonstrates business investment over that same period of time. Prior to the tax cuts, again the Tax Savings Act was put into place at this point where the green vertical line is. Prior to that, the kind of business investment in the economy, and, you know, Mr. Speaker, that business investment folks who say, we need more money, we need more of your money, America. We need more of your money in order to pay for the kinds of programs that the Federal Government has to run.

But President Kennedy knew it, President Eisenhower knew it. President George W. Bush knows it, this Republican Congress knows it, and that is that when you decrease taxes, kind of countercyclical, but when you decrease taxes, what happens is that the economy flourishes, we have talked about this over and over again. The economy flourishes, the number of jobs increase, the amount of money that is being paid to individuals increases, the number of folks who are employed increases, and because of all of that, the tax receipts actually increase.

And it is important to appreciate that, because unless one understands that, Mr. Speaker, unless you appreciate that the lower taxes are, the higher tax revenue you get, then you are going to be making a wrong conclusion about how we ought to proceed as a Nation.

The CBO forecast, the Congressional Budget Office forecast down there on the far right was for 16.6 percent of a share of GDP for tax receipts. The forecast for the budget in fiscal year 2005 was the same. What happened? What happened because of the tax policies is that we have a remarkable increase in tax receipts to the Federal Government.

That is good news, Mr. Speaker. That means that the tax policy is working. You allow Americans to keep more of their hard earned money, then what happens is that the Federal Government sees more tax revenue, and hopefully we will be able to continue to decrease taxes on Americans, all across the spectrum, all across the spectrum.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is always important to talk, when we talk about taxes, and when we talk about the economy, you oftentimes hear our friends on the other side of the aisle trying to divide people between the haves and the have-nots, the rich and the poor, upper class and middle class, lower class. They will oftentimes say things like, people need to pay their fair share of taxes. You hear it all of the time, Mr. Speaker, I know you do.

Well, I think it is incredibly important to demonstrate who, in fact, is paying what. And how much, and how much of that we select Social Security to begin moving in a direction of greater cooperation in order to bring that down.

That is a progressive tax rate. That is the kind of tax policy that we have in place. I think we ought to decrease a lot of those taxes. But it is important for people to appreciate that folks in the bottom 50 percent of the wage earners are striving to get into this area up here, that as hard as we can to have policies in place that will allow them to do that, but the bottom 50 percent of wage earners in this Nation pay about 3½ percent of the taxes in this Nation.

I do not want to criticize anybody. I say that to bring truth and fact to the discussion and to the debate. So when you hear people say, people need to pay their fair share of taxes, well, I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that folks are paying their fair share and then some, and then some of taxes that we have in this Nation.

Now, we hear a lot of talk, Mr. Speaker, about the deficit, about the deficit, and how the deficit is too high. We talk about not being responsible in our spending. I would agree with folks that the deficit is too high. Because I believe, as I have mentioned earlier, that we ought to have a balanced budget, that we ought not spend any more money than we take in.

But you hear people all the time saying this is the worst deficit in the history of the Nation. In fact, Mr. Speaker, in fact, remember it is the Official Truth Squad, in fact what we have seen over the past 12 months is a Federal deficit as a percent of GDP, Gross Domestic Product, of 2.1 percent.

Now the average in the 1990s, the average in the 1990s, 2.2 percent. That is higher Federal deficit as it relates to percentage. You can talk about absolute numbers. But absolute numbers do not compare apples to apples, because of inflation and expansion in the economy, and the level of Federal revenue. See, it is important to talk about percent of gross domestic product when you talk about Federal talk deficit is. Again, this is not where I would like it to be. I would like it to be zero. And you remember the policies that we put on the floor of the House to vote on, the PAYGO policies and the balanced budget policies that we put on the floor of the House to vote on? Our friends on the other side of the aisle overwhelmingly rejected them, overwhelmingly. That is the kind of cooperation, we need greater cooperation in order to bring that down.

But in spite of that, in spite of their reluctance to assist us in appropriate ways, what we see is a 2.1 percent Federal deficit as it relates to gross domestic product. Ten years ago was it? 2.3 percent. And, remember, the average for the 1990s was 2.2 percent.

So I think it is extremely important, Mr. Speaker, for us to be honest when we talk about the economy, to be honest when we talk about the budget, and to be honest when we talk about where the problem is as it relates to the budget. Where is the big money being spent? Where is it going? And I have got a few charts that I would like to share with you on that, Mr. Speaker.

These are pie charts that demonstrate where Federal monies go when you remember the required spending of the large pot of money that it does every single year, where does it go? Where does it go? And this breaks it into three different areas in the pie chart and over a 20-year period of time, 1995, 2005. And in the different areas, the green is the discretionary portion of the budget, the red is the interest, and the yellow is the mandatory portion.

The mandatory portion is primarily Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid, those programs that are often times called entitlement programs. I don’t like to call them entitlement programs because I think that means that you absolutely can’t reform them, that there isn’t any way to be able to change positively those programs for the beneficiaries and for all members of our society. But Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security.

In 1995, those mandatory programs, automatic programs oftentimes I like to call them, spent 48.7 percent of the Federal budget. 48.7 percent of the Federal budget. Now, these are programs that are on kind of an automatic spending course. If we as a Congress don’t act, then they continue to increase at a rate greater than inflation. In 2005, those three programs, Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, basically those three programs spent 53.4 percent of the Federal budget. Mr. Speaker, that line continues to increase. In 2016, if no changes are made or put in place, those three programs will incorporate 60 percent of the Federal budget. And in 30 years, Mr. Speaker, if I had a pie chart that had us 30 years down the road, the entire pie would be yellow. The entire pie would be yellow, because those three programs, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security, would consume the entire Federal budget.

Now, I point that out because I think it is important for people to appreciate that one of the responsibilities that we have in Congress is to make certain that that kind of economic policy doesn’t occur. We are living in a changing demographic in our society, and one that will not sustain that kind of mandatory spending. And so the President 1½ years ago or so and many of us in Congress felt that it was appropriate to begin moving in a direction of greater fiscal responsibility when it comes to spending in the area of Social Security and Medicare and Medicaid, and we selected Social Security to begin that debate.

As you will recall, Mr. Speaker, as so often happens regretfully and regrettable is that the folks who oppose any responsible spending here from Washington demagogue that issue to a
I have got just a few moments left, but I am pleased to be joined by my good friend and colleague from Georgia, Representative LYNN WESTMORELAND, who is a wonderfully fiscally responsible member of the freshman class, and I yield to my friend from Georgia.

Mr. WESTMORELAND. Thank you, Mr. PRICE, and I appreciate you doing this tonight.

I have listened to the other side and your debate, and basically, Mr. PRICE, wouldn’t you just assume that this basically comes down to a difference in philosophy? I heard about the deficit. I heard about the spending. But I believe that this Republican majority and this leadership in this House has given the other side every opportunity in the world to reduce that deficit. I believe we had the Deficit Reduction Act that the Republican majority had to pass their own program. And their philosophy is, to reduce the debt, they would raise taxes. None of us like the deficit. We need to cut our spending. But every opportunity that the majority has had to cut spending, we have been opposed by the other side.

So I think what the people, Mr. Speaker, and Mr. PRICE, need to realize is that this is a difference in philosophy about how this government should be run and about where the priorities are. And I know you had the chart up there about Social Security and Medicaid and Medicare. And we all want people to get their benefits, but there is going to come a time of reckoning, and the majority party in this House has taken the leadership to try to address some of those things.

Not by cutting them but just by slowing the growth, and yet at every turn, at every turn you know that we have had opposition from the other side. So there has got to be a point where we stop, where the administration realizes that they need to help us. They need to become part of the solution, rather than just being a party of ‘no.’

Mr. PRICE of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I appreciate those comments so much, and I appreciate you reminding me about the Deficit Reduction Act. It was in my notes, and I wanted to make certain we pointed that out. We had that bill passed earlier this year in the Senate, which would save the American people $40 billion.

Mr. WESTMORELAND. If you do not mind me interrupting, but that was at no cuts. This was just a decrease in the spending, a decrease in the growth of our government; and they spoke about sitting around the kitchen table and talking about your budget. We all do that. We all have to do that. The American family has to do that, but at the same time, if we know we are going to get a 5 percent pay raise or whatever, we all know that.

Sometimes we have to rein in our spending, and this is what the Republican majority has tried to do here.

So I want to thank you for bringing the Truth Squad to the floor and for explaining to all of us exactly the good things that this majority party has done to put this country in the right direction, and I might also add that our deficit has come down over the last few minutes ago, that the American people know how to spend their money better than the United States Congress, and I agree with that.

If you look at where this Congress has given the money, $16 billion in subsidies to the oil companies, hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax returns, tax breaks for millionaires, Madam Speaker, and I believe that the American people would not do that, and that is why it is time to take the country in a new direction.

30-SOMETHING WORKING GROUP

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. FOXX). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. RYAN) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to kick off the 30-something Working Group, and my good friend Mr. MEEK from Florida, who was delayed for a minute, will be here any second to talk about taking America sab in a new direction.

We have heard a lot tonight, and I want to agree with my colleagues on one thing that they said earlier, just a few minutes ago, that the American people know how to spend their money better than the United States Congress, and I agree with that.
I want to, before we get too revved up here, thank our good friend from Massachusetts for carrying the ball last night when the younger and the weaker, the fatigued other Members of the 30-something did not have the stamina to come here at 11:40 last night, and you showed up, and I yield to my friend.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Madam Speaker, well, I am glad to see that you have recovered and that Mr. MEEK has made it. I knew that both of you were tired. You showed hard yesterday, but I hope that in the future you can just reach down, grab a little extra, and you know, be here when it counts. I have been very impressed with your perseverance, your performance over the course of the past year and a half; but remember, it has to be consistent. It has to be consistent. It cannot be just about talk. It has to be actions.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Madam Speaker, I thank Mr. DELAHUNT, and I know you are excited about your birthday that took place last week, and it is well noted not only amongst the Members but also in the Congressional Record. We notice that you are eligible for Medicare. We are excited about that. Knowing you as Medicare recipient now, folks on Medicare will have a stronger voice in Congress because you can actually understand what they are going through.

It has been 3 years and 2 months we have seen the 30-something. We are just so glad that we can have you as the something of the 30-something which I will be joining you in September.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I look forward to seeing you graduate to a different level, and I am sure that you will be able to be here for the last hour once you hit that magic mark in September. Like I was saying, we hear a lot of rhetoric on the floor here, and we just heard a lot of good talk, and you know, I welcome the fact that it would appear, if you listen carefully, that the Republican majority is going to get serious about fiscal responsibility.

I would only note that they are coming very late to the issue, because, I know neither of you were here in 1994, but in 1994, this branch, Madam Speaker, was taken over. The Republicans assumed majority. So let us see, from 1994 to 2006, that is 12 years, that is 12 years we have faced with run-away deficits, external debt.

We just recently received a report from the Comptroller General of the United States that informed the American people that despite the fact that they have already spent 30 billion of their dollars in Iraq, that the bill is coming for another $50 billion to reconstruct Iraq.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. What is that $50 billion? How did we spend the 30-something...Mr. DELAHUNT. Well, I think a lot of it is going to line the pockets of corrupt officials because that is what Mr. Walker, who is the Comptroller General of the United States, found. He expressed concern about the black market in the sale of oil.

We all remember the words of Paul Wolfowitz who was the Under Secretary of Defense that the revenues from the oil spilling would pay for its reconstruction. False.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Again, this is the 30-something Hour, Madam Speaker. This is the 30-something Hour, so we are talking about issues that are going to be getting down to coming, but I want to agree again with the statement that the previous speakers made, which we do not like to refer to, but they said that the American people know how to spend their own money better than the United States Congress, and I am all in on that statement.

Mr. DELAHUNT. But, Madam Speaker, the Republican majority in this House is spending the American people’s money not in America, but in Iraq.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. And not spending it in a manner which the United States citizens, from Florida and Ohio or Massachusetts or wherever they are from, would completely and totally and wholly disagree with where the Republicans are spending the money. They are building hospitals in Iraq. They are building schools in Iraq. They are building clinics in Iraq. They are building roads in Iraq, in a fruitless attempt to try to win over the Iraqi people.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And where are they getting the money? Mr. RYAN of Ohio. We are borrowing the money from China, Japan, and OPEC countries in order to fund the war and to fund tax cuts that are going predominantly to people who make more than $1 million a year.

The average American person, Madam Speaker, does not agree with that policy. They wholly reject that policy, and that is why we see. People in Youngstown, Ohio, work very hard, and they meet their obligations for the Federal Government. They pay their taxes, and to watch the United States Congress, Republican-controlled, take their hard-earned money and build roads and bridges in an elective war, with no plan, no exit strategy, no idea of how to execute it, and take their money and build roads and bridges and hospitals over there. I yield to my friend.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. I just want to make sure that just because they say it, Madam Speaker, the Republican majority does not necessarily mean that it is true. You have heard me say this before. The good thing about the 30-something Working Group is that we come to the floor and not with rhetoric, not with a Democratic message that is not factual. We do not do that. People are looking for straightforward government, making sure that we level with the American people, not level with Democrats, not level with Republicans and Independents, but level with the American people.

The American people want us to work in a bipartisan way, but only the majority can allow that to happen. We have legislation that is moving through the process that Democratic Members are not even noticed of the conference committees that are going on, some of the decisions that are being made, and we have Republican majority Members that come here and say, well, the Democrats, how can they say it when they have been in control.

Let me just say this real quick. I tell you they did not share in the hour before this hour, they did not share how the Republican majority has made history in all the wrong ways. On $1.05 trillion borrowed in 4 years, 2001 to 2005, from not only President Bush but the Republican majority that de-throned 42 Presidents, 224 years of history, $1.01 trillion.

Mr. RYAN mentioned who we are borrowing from. Japan, $682.8 billion. The American people had nothing to do with that. Republican majority, rubber-stamp Congress, had everything to do with that. China, $249.8 billion; Taiwan, $232.2 billion; OPEC, $233 billion; Taiwan and on and on and on.

What they also did not say is how the Republican majority has given themselves a pay increase along with all Members of Congress. Meanwhile, Madam Speaker, not addressing the minimum-wage workers in America since 1997. So I would not come to the floor with a straight face talking about the American people can handle their dollars that we give them or they can handle the dollars because they can handle it best.

Well, guess what. I think that is a true statement because the bottom line is the Republican majority has shown that they cannot. Just real quick, I want to make sure that we spell this out.

In 1998, Members of Congress, $3,100 raise; minimum-wage, zero; 2000, Members of Congress, $4,600 raise; minimum wage, zero; 2001, $3,800 increase, cost of living Members of Congress; minimum wage, zero; 2002, zero minimum wage; $4,900 real money in cost for Members of Congress, thanks to the Republican majority; 2003, $4,700; minimum-wage workers, zero; $3,400, 2004; minimum-wage workers, zero; 2005, $4,000; minimum-wage, zero; 2006, $3,100; minimum-wage workers, zero. And the Republican leadership has said it is just not going to happen. They did not want to share that with the American people. That is why the 30-something Working Group, why we do that. The good thing about this report is that we are saying on this side of the aisle we will not vote for an increase in Members’ pay if we do not vote for an increase in the minimum wage. That will mean an increase in individuals that are making minimum wage because the American workers should be making more than the CEOs that are retiring with big-time retirement packages.
Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Yes, I do have my chart. So that we don’t have CEOs of major oil companies with $388 million retirement packages. A retirement package. And a $2 million tax break, thanks to the Republican majority.

So, Mr. RYAN, when folks come to the floor and start talking about, and Mr. DELAHUNT, what the American people can do, tell you what, why don’t we play fair? We have control of the minimum wage, Mr. DELAHUNT, we can raise the minimum wage.

On this side of the aisle we said, number one, we will be raising the minimum wage. Okay, not raising the salaries for Members of Congress.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Within the first 100 hours.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Within the first 100 hours we are willing to move forward, and we have said it, in our new America. We have said we are going to cut student loan costs in half, Madam Speaker, more than the Republican majority that is in control now.

We have said that we are going to move toward a real plan of true energy innovation, investing in the Midwest versus the Middle East, here in America with E-85 ethanol. Republican majority has the House now. They are not doing it.

We have said that we are going to pay as we go and have real fiscal responsibility, because we are the only party in this Chamber, Mr. DELAHUNT, that can say we have actually balanced the budget. We have balanced the budget, with surpluses as far as the eye can see. The Republican majority takes over and we are borrowing from countries that we have issues with, like China, Japan, and the U.K. Well, not the U.K., but other countries that are questionable. OPEC nations. And I don’t even want to go through that list.

So when we start talking about these things, gentlemen, and when they come to the floor, and this is a free country and what a democracy, but meanwhile, Mr. DELAHUNT, we have veterans that have fought, some are at Arlington Cemetery for paying the ultimate price for us to salute one flag. We look at the services and the things that we have promised veterans, and this is not a Democratic or Republican, Republican, independent or nonvoter issue, this is an American issue. To see veterans having to wait 2 and 3 months to see a specialist at a VA hospital, whether it be a foot doctor, an eye doctor, or just getting a simple exam, is unacceptable, especially when the Republican majority is giving tax breaks in a record breaking way to individuals that are not even asking for them, and when billionaires have $398 million retirement packages. I think it is important for us to come to the floor and share this with the American people.

It is not only important, it is our obligation. So that the reason why, Mr.

DELAHUNT, as I land, that it is important, no matter how late, if it is 11:40 at night or it is a few minutes before 10 p.m.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Or if it is at 11:30.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Or 11:30.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And you are by yourself.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. We have worked all day, and some Members of Congress, Madam Speaker, are home enjoying themselves, relaxing; what have you, some are working in their offices right now answering their e-mails or regular mail, that we come to the floor, take away from what some may say is our personal time after we finish our regular business, that we come to the floor to show how we have the will and the desire to put America in a new direction and not only fight for working class folks, but making sure that those that pay their price to this country, which are a number of Americans but especially our veterans, will be treated with dignity and respect.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. If the gentleman will yield.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Yes, sir, I would yield, Mr. RYAN.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Within the first 100 days, Madam Speaker, but within the first 100 hours out of this House we will pass a minimum wage increase that will get us in a few years to $7.50 an hour; that we will, in the first 100 hours, cut student loan interest rates in half for parents and for students, which will save families $5,000 over the course of the loan.

We are not rocket scientists. We are not saying we have some extravagant plan that is very elaborate and very complex. These are basic fundamental things. We are going to strip the oil companies of the $16 billion that they get in subsidies, and we are going to put that towards education and innovation and alternative energy sources. And all these things we need to do, Mr. DELAHUNT, in order for us to be competitive as a country.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. One second. Mr. RYAN, I just want to make sure we have a minimum wage of $7.25, not $7.50, sir, that we want to move the minimum wage. I want to make sure that we are accurate. I know you mistakenly said $7.50. I would like to do $7.50, but our plan is $7.25, just for the record. Because we believe in making sure that even when we make a mistake to level with the American people.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Reclaiming my time, I yield to my friend from Massachusetts.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I appreciate the gentleman yielding his time, and I want to compliment my friend from Florida, Mr. MEEK, because he just did something that is rare in Washington. He acknowledged that there was an error; that there was a mistake. Because you will never hear that on the floor of this House.

But the American people, I would submit, want their elected officials to account when they failed and come up with another idea and be forthright about it. I mean, when I hear about all of the problems that haven’t been solved because of a minority party, I begin to wonder, is there an alternative reality there?

As I said earlier, Madam Speaker, the Republican majority has owned this Chamber for 12 years. Where have you been? Now you are talking about fiscal responsibility. And the reason you are talking about it is because there is 100 days to an election. That is why you are talking about it. And you talk about the direction of the country. You know, we talk about a new direction and a change in direction. Madam Speaker, because there is no alternative.

If we continue to go and continue to chart the same course that the administration and the Republican House and the Republican Senate had for the United States, we will be in serious trouble. And let me just give you four statistics:

Since the Republicans have controlled both branches of Congress in the last 5 years, and President Bush was inaugurated in 2001, college tuition has increased by 40 percent, health care costs to the American people have increased by 55 percent, and gas prices have increased by 76 percent.

But Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, you know what has gone down in this country? Madam Speaker, you know what has declined in this country? Median household income. A family of four in this country, since the Republicans have governed here in this institution for 5 years, the average American family has experienced a decline of 4 percent in their income. On top of all the escalating costs that are eating away at their security, up in America, no one knows that retirement security no longer exists. They know that their health care plan can be canceled at any time. They know that they won’t be able to afford to send their children to college because they can’t afford the loans. I mean, the list goes on and on. We have got to change the direction of this country.

With that, I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Thank you so much to my good friend, Mr. DELAHUNT, and I am glad to be here with my three good friends from the 30‐

something Working Group.

Now, I move to the question that is on everybody’s mind, which is why do they keep moving us in this direction? Well, if you actually shine a light or a magnifying glass on what is really going on here, then it would be clear that their priorities are all wrong. So instead, what they do is they engage in the politics of distraction, like they did all during last week.

If you recall last week, let us take a walk down memory lane here, did we focus on the priorities of the American people, like gas prices and health care and the true direction that we should be going in the war in Iraq? Were those in the top of the Republican agenda last week?

Mr. DELAHUNT. We talked about stem cell research.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. We talked about trying to override, unsuccessfully, the veto on stem cell research.

We did that and the Pledge of Allegiance bill, and we did gay marriage. We engaged in the politics of distraction, because the only way that the Republican leadership here can take the focus off of all the horrendously bad things that they are doing on the priorities of the American people is by focusing on that.

I had a social studies text book with me last week, I am not sure if we still have it, but last week I really wanted to bring up the studies textbook to the floor because essentially there is no point in using it any more in our public high schools. At the end of the day, the Republican leadership here has thrown out the concept of how a bill becomes a law.

That Pledge of Allegiance bill we brought here last week? I sit on the House Judiciary Committee. That bill was defeated in committee, and yet we still saw it on this floor. When we teach high school civics, we teach that a bill has to go through the committee process, it has to garner a majority of the committee members to move on then to either the next committee or to the next point of reference in the legislative process.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. And the bill stripped the courts of hearing a case that the courts actually ruled in favor of what they wanted.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Exactly. Let us focus on what the bill itself actually did, which also throws out the whole system of checks and balances and who is responsible for what according to the way the Founding Fathers set it up.

That bill actually said, like you said, Mr. RYAN, that specifically because the Republican leadership here does not agree with a specific court decision, they decided to pass a bill stripping the courts of the ability to decide that question, whether or not we agree that “under God” as part of the Pledge of Allegiance is or is not constitutional, that is not relevant. We certainly shouldn’t be passing legislation here that was defeated in committee; that couldn’t even garner enough support on the Republican side to pass out of committee, and they stack the committees in their favor, to strip the courts of the ability to decide a question that the Republicans don’t agree with.

But, you know, the rubber stamps, the rubber stamps in this body just went ahead and approved it anyway. Break it out, Mr. MEeks.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, you are exactly right. It wasn’t that they didn’t like the answer, because it went to the appeals court and the court ended up ruling in their favor, that “under God” should stay in the Pledge. But they didn’t like the question, which is so typical down here, Mr. DELAHUNT.

They don’t like the questions that people are asking, whether it is at President Bush’s press conferences or having a hearing and asking questions about the petitions that went on in Iraq or Katrina or with gas prices or what the oil companies are doing. When you have an elected body in a democracy that stops liking the questions, we are losing the basic fundamental aspect.

Mr. DELAHUNT. If the gentleman would yield.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Be happy to yield. Mr. DELAHUNT. Just stop for one moment. The war in Afghanistan and Iraq has been going on for years. Every day we pick up the newspaper and learn about the loss of American lives.

Ever yday we hear about the rampant corruption that spews on in Iraq. Every day we hear about the escalating costs of the military deployment in Iraq. And now we know from the Comptroller General, not from the administration, that the $30 billion that we have already spent in Iraq is not enough to rebuild the country. It is going to cost us $50 billion more. And you know what, Madam Speaker? We ought to be having a hearing on a weekly basis, every committee, every single committee who has some jurisdiction, and yet nothing happens.

Why are we losing ground in Afghanistan? Why? But we do not dare ask the question.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Will the gentleman from Ohio yield?

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Thank you very much. Because the Prime Minister of Iraq is here in Washington, today met with the President, and the whole notion of stubbornness and refusal to acknowledge that they are wrong and refusal to change course is so evident in the decision-making that goes on with this administration as far as the direction that we are going in Iraq.

June 13, when the President went on that surprise visit to Iraq and praised up and down the Prime Minister’s plan for ending the bloody violence in Baghdad, came back and said, the Prime Minister of Iraq has a plan and I am supportive of it.

Well, today they finally acknowledged that it is not working and it is not effective and not that, yes, we are going to change course. It is “changing the plan is under consideration.”

Well, because of a shift in focus, in terms of the media’s attention, to the crisis in the Middle East as it relates to Hezbollah, its attacks on Israel, it has deflected attention away from the fact that the actual number of deaths and bombings have increased in Iraq in the last month.

Mr. DELAHUNT. If the gentleman from Ohio would continue to yield for the gentleman, we also acknowledge that there is much public discourse about whether the violence in Iraq is of such a magnitude that it should be called a civil war. There are no figures that are ever released by the administration, but the United Nations has reported in the last several days that indicated in the months of May and June, 6,000 Iraqis were killed because of political violence. Will somebody please explain to me, is that enough to make it a civil war? Of course it is a civil war going on out there, Madam Speaker. Please stop using semantics with something that is so serious that the American people deserve to be continually informed.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, in this talk today, this talk that you did, you did not report, because it went to the appeals court, the Iraqis have army and police force in one region that is in southern Iraq, where nobody lives. They have got control of it, and the Prime Minister is here with the President today. See, we are making progress.

You are not making progress. Electricity, water, utilities are all at pre-war levels. Below pre-war levels.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. And instead, Mr. RYAN, we are focusing on the Pledge of Allegiance and gay marriage. And what it really comes down to, do you think that the mom whose baby is born in Iraq, whose country is worry ing about whether one of her children is going to be able to say “under God” in the pledge at school, or is she more worried that her baby over in Iraq is going to come back to her? What do you think is a higher priority for her?

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Or that the baby, in the country that this baby was born into, is going to owe $11 trillion to China and Japan and OPEC countries.

This is bogus. This is nonsensical. We are disrespecting the American people in the past couple of weeks. Totally has disrespected and insulted the intelligence of the American people.

I yield to my friend.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Thank you. How about this? I mean, let us go beyond just the mom or dad of a young man or woman fighting over in Iraq. How about the father of four who leaves for work every day, and do you think he is worrying about whether someone who is gay is going to be able to get married, or not, or is my friend from Wisconsin worrying whether he is going to be able to get to work in the morning?

Where on the list of priorities, Mr. DELAHUNT, do you think that is for the Joe and Jane average constituents that we represent?
Mr. DELAHUNT. Could I add to that? Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Of course.
Mr. DELAHUNT. What do you think an American mother feels as she sees this administration embroil us, embroil us, in wars, sectarian strife all over the world? Does she become concerned that at some point in time her child will be compelled to serve in the military?
I found it fascinating reading some articles in the Weekly Standard, which is, if you will, the gospel of the neoconservative movement, suggesting now is the time to bomb or strike Iran. Just another war. Just another war. And, of course, the original frontier in terms of the war on terrorism, Madam Speaker, was Afghanistan. And you know what is happening in Afghanistan? The Taliban is back, the group that gave safe haven to Osama bin Laden and Al Qaeda, because of the abstraction that was foisted on the American people by this administration with the complicity of this Congress and putting us into the quagmire of Iraq.
Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. DELAHUNT, you know how many troops we have in Afghanistan versus how many we have in Iraq?
Mr. DELAHUNT. Yes, I do.
Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Twenty-five thousand in Afghanistan versus 130,000 in Iraq.
Mr. DELAHUNT. If the gentleman from Ohio will continue to yield, do you know who really said it the best? The NATO commander who was taking over the NATO force in Afghanistan. He happens to be a British general by the name of David Richards. And he said this: You know, we were disoriented that at some point in time her child will be compelled to serve in the military. That is why we have the problems that we have now. We became too focused, and we forgot about Afghanistan, and some would have us actually hit into Iran.
Mr. DELAHUNT, what do you think of the majority side of the aisle. We have friends on the majority side of the aisle. We have friends, two, three, and I am four Members of Congress. We have friends here in the Capitol. We know one another’s families. We travel together to foreign countries. We visit military bases here in the United States and abroad. Madam Speaker, this is not personal. This is business. And the bottom line is that this Congress is making history in all the wrong ways. We have a rubber-stamp Congress, as Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ pointed out earlier, that has rubber-stamped everything that the administration has put forth. Congress, and now, Mr. Speaker, we find ourselves in a situation where the American people do not see the same vision that the Republican majority has.
Now, Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, before we leave here tonight, you must talk about immigration.
Mr. DELAHUNT. What you must talk about immigration in a way that shows that the Republican majority and the Bush White House is not leveling with the American people. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, you pointed out, Mr. Ryan was mentioning 750 earlier. I am looking here at our plan, it says 725. He was in the middle of a speech, and I wanted to make sure that we were accurate for the record. I wanted to make sure we were leveling with the American people. I want to make sure that Members watching in their offices or watching at home are saying, even on the majority side, the reason why I can’t be upset with those four Members on the floor right now is because they speak the truth; not fiction, not what we think will sound good. We are sharing the facts with the American people, and with the Members of Congress, Madam Speaker.
So that is the reason why Members of the majority side, which is the Republican majority that is in control, we have to make sure we are saying the truth. The Federal Government on education, lack of funding. We have local communities trying to figure out how they are going to stand up to unfunded mandates handed down from this Congress. When we talk about wage workers that have not received a raise since 1997. Meanwhile, Members of Congress have received $3,100, $4,900, $3,200, in some cases $2,900, $4,100, and a proposed $3,100 this year. Meanwhile, minimum wage workers are sitting waiting on some leadership and representation in Congress.
As we raise their minimum wage, what we have pledged to do in new direction for America, Members, people that are making $8 and $9 an hour, employers are going up to pay. We have to give them also a raise, because the minimum wage has risen. So the American everyday worker not making minimum wage will do better under our plan.
Saying that, Mr. DELAHUNT, that is the reason why we should feel very motivated and empowered to be here any time we get an opportunity to come to the floor.
So I am excited about the fact that we are engaged with the facts. I am glad, Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, the facts she she had got from third party validators, not what we came up with, to share with Members and the American people, because we don’t want members of the rubber-stamp Republican majority to go home and say “we didn’t quite understand that,” or “it was the Democrats.” We have to make it abundantly clear that the Republicans are in control.
Mr. Ryan, as I choose, I just want to break the minuets like this: On the Democratic side, we don’t have the opportunity to bring a bill to the floor. We are not chairmen or chairwomen of committees. We can’t order up a congressional hearing and subpoena Halliburton and other companies that obviously have done things that have reached the level of, some may say, the criminal level. We can’t do that.
We can’t have a public hearing before the Federal agencies. Our good friend from Tennessee has legislation that is talking about agencies coming to the Congress and asking them, what happened to $28 million that we gave you last year? They say I don’t know. They just wrote it off. It is the taxpayers’ money.
Mr. DELAHUNT. What happened to the $89 billion in Iraq.
Mr. MEEK of Florida. What happened to the $89 billion in Iraq. This will never surface, Madam Speaker, unless we get rid of the rubber-stamp Congress and we move towards a Congress that is willing to follow the Constitutions of the United States to make sure that the American taxpayer dollars have the proper oversight and that we spend it in a way that is responsible, not just giving away tax breaks to millionaires and special interests when the Republican majority feels like doing it. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ referenced, there is no just self accountability. There are just words. There is no action to back up the words.
You know, if you listen to the Republicans on immigration, as Mr. MEEK referenced, you would think that they were the hardest line, the hardest core, that border security was the highest priority to them. But if you closely examine the facts, you have to even examine the facts, just scratch the surface a little bit. Take a look at what the real record of this hard line Republican congressional leadership is when it comes to border security. Let’s show the American people who is for immigration reform and who is just kidding.
These are third-party validators here. Here is border security by the numbers. We took a look and found that almost relates to the average number of new Border Patrol agents that are added each year, because the Republicans talk a good game about how many Border Patrol agents they want to add, well, under the Clinton administration, from 1993 to 2000, the average number per year added was 642. You take a look how many were added, Border Patrol agents per year, under the Bush administration from 2001 to 2005, it was 411.
That is not just a couple, that is not a handful, that is a big difference. 642 minus 411, I am not a mathematician, whatever it is, someone subtract it for me.
Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. A 231 difference. That is a big difference. Maybe that is an anomaly. Maybe that is just isolated.
No, keep going. Let’s look at another indicator of who is for border security and who is just kidding. The INS fines for immigration enforcement, making sure that we actually crack down on illegal immigrants: 1999, 417. The actual statistic is in 1999 the United States initiated fines against 417 companies. In 2004, it initiated fines against three companies. Who was President in 1999? President Clinton. A Democrat was President. Who was President in 2004? President Bush.

We are talking about going after the firms, the businesses, that aggressively hire illegal immigrants. But maybe that was an isolated incident. Maybe it was just those two indicators that were off the charts, different than the policy that the Republicans talk about.

Keep going. Let’s look at the Bush administration’s record on pursuing immigration fraud cases. In 1995, under President Clinton’s administration, 6,455 immigration fraud cases were prosecuted. In 2003, under President Bush, 1,380 cases were prosecuted.

At the end of the day, I think the American people will want to examine the facts, and not just listen to the words.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio, Madam Speaker, I think that is the perfect example. Those are facts. We did not make it up. Those are facts on how the Clinton administration versus the Bush administration handled illegal immigration. But are just the average Joe and you are sitting in the cheap seats watching politics in America, that is not all you see, is the failure to address the illegal immigration problem.

You have watched over the past 5 years, Katrina, in which our FEMA, the Republican appointed members of the emergency management system here in the United States of America, had five or six days, knowing that a hurricane was coming to the Gulf States, and we got the kind of response that we got go.

You look at Iraq. You look at not when the statues fell, but look afterwards, and you see it has been an utter and complete failure. Utilities and all the electricity, all at below pre-war levels. Our army right now, two-thirds of our army is not combat ready. Two-thirds. That is atrocious.

And when you look at lack of investment in alternative energies, and the median wage is down 4 percent, all of the increases in college tuition, all these things, if you are just watching this from afar and you see millionaires getting tax breaks and average Americans going to get ahead and falling behind every single paycheck, you have to at some point say, aren’t you taking the country in the wrong direction? Aren’t you taking us down the wrong road?

Real quick, Mr. DELAHUNT, whether it is domestic policy or foreign policy, you look at what is happening, and there is a severe disconnect between where the American people want to be and where the administration and President Bush are taking us.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I really found it interesting. I ran across this article today in the Washington Post, and much of what we have said is repeated here. The Iraq war didn’t work and we didn’t prepare for peace. The response to Hurricane Katrina was a monumental failure of government. You don’t go to Congress to become the party that you have been fighting for 40 years, the spending, the finger pointing, not getting bills passed. Just shut up and get something done.

Now, that was the quotes of a candidate, but it was a Republican candidate. It was a Republican candidate.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I think that is the perfect example. Who was President in 2003? President George W. Bush, a Republican. A Democrat was President in 2004? President Clinton. A Democrat was President in 1999? President Clinton. A Democrat was President in 1998? President Bill Clinton.

Mr. DELAHUNT. At the end of the day, I think you, Madam Speaker, are currently occupying, summed it up like this: “We just ought to start firing everyone.”

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I think it was important, and Mr. DELAHUNT brought up some comments that the past Speaker made, the person that united the Republican “revolution,” the Contract on America, I mean for America, and what has happened to all of that, the broken promise to America from the Republican majority.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ pointed out the fact that the Republican majority talked about that they are tough on immigration, but at the same time they have been in control doubly digit years, and now all of a sudden they no longer believe that we have an immigration border protection problem.

And folks are burning Federal jet fuel flying down to the border for photo shots; this, that and the other that we have experienced, it would be excruciating.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. William F. Buckley. It is an article that Bush is signed by Iraq with Iran. What have we done? We have got over 2,500 Americans killed. Tens of thousands seriously wounded. And is this what we expect? No. It is not what we expect. It is certainly not what we deserve. And now Iran has become the hegemon in the Middle East.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Thank you for sharing that, because that is so very, very important. It is going to be the issue of tomorrow and today. I mean, when we get into after the 12 o’clock hour.

This is what Buckley said about the President of the United States. He is allowed to do that because this rubber-stamp Republican Congress allows him to do it.

I would like to yield to Ms. Wasserman Schultz, and before Ms. Wasserman Schultz will yield to Mr. Delahunt and then yield to you, to talk about, Madam Speaker, what Newt Gingrich, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, former Speaker, is saying about this Congress. Ms. Wasserman Schultz, if you will indulge me, please.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. I would be glad to.

In fact, what is really interesting about these comments from Speaker Gingrich was that he was sitting on a panel of the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative think tank, with former Speaker Foley, the Democratic Speaker who Gingrich succeeded, and they were literally trading head nobs back and forth about what one another was saying. And one of the things that Speaker Gingrich commented on was as follows:

“Congress has to think about how fundamentally wrong the current system is that I believe. And I believe, for example, that the system has failed you, the American public, in the area of care costs, when you are worried about your pension, when you have the auto industry collapsing before its very eyes, you have a minimum wage that hasn’t been raised since 1997, you are unable to govern, as Mr. Gingrich said.”

Mr. MEEEK of Florida. Mr. RYAN, Mr. DELAHUNT, Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, this is what Republicans are saying. I mean, making history in all the wrong ways.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ and I will be back at 11:32 for the last hour here tonight. We hope that you gentlemen will be able to join us.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. We want to congratulate our 30-something. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ here was rated “One of the Most Beautiful People on Capitol Hill.” And that is quite an honor. It is an honor for us to be here among them, I and you. And Mr. DELAHUNT didn’t even make the list. I don’t even think we were nominated. But we have all have roles to play, and unfortunately, Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ covers them all. WWW.HouseDemocrats.gov/30-Some-things. All the charts you saw here tonight, and we could maybe get a copy of the Hill newspaper.

Mr. DELAHUNT. That should be put on the Web site. Congresswoman Wasserman Schultz. Mr. RYAN of Ohio. And I thank the leader and our leadership, Steny Hoyer and Jim Clyburn and John Larson for the opportunity to be here.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. FOXX). The Chair must remind members that remarks in debate should not include words that might be construed as vulgar or profane.

Mr. MEEEK of Florida. Madam Speaker, can you clarify what is vulgar or profane? Just an inquiry of the Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will be pleased to consult off the record on that question.

ASSURING THE FUTURE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 4, 2005, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection. Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Madam Speaker, in the last year and a half I have sat here also the well of the House a number of times to talk about subjects ranging from embryonic stem cells and the challenge of deriving these cells ethically so that we might hopefully enjoy the great potential medical benefits, I have come here to talk about electromagnetic pulse, a very interesting consequence of the detonation of a nuclear weapon above the atmosphere that produces a surge which is very much like a lightning strike everywhere for an enormously enhanced solar storm. And I have come here I think many as 18 times in the last year and a half to talk about a problem which we as a country and we as a world face, and that is the peaking of oil. We are showing signs that we haven’t already, going to reach the maximum production rate of oil in the world, and then the world will need to deal with how we substitute renewables.

And tonight I come to the floor to talk about something that could very easily become a victim, a casualty of the tyranny of the urgent. All of us are familiar with this phenomenon in our personal lives, in our professional lives; it is true for our country that very frequently the urgent pushes the important off the table. Things you have got to deal with today frequently push things off until tomorrow that you might wait until tomorrow to address.

I want to spend a few moments tonight talking about something that concerns me. We have 10 children in our family. I have 15 grandchildren and two great grandchildren, and I am concerned that I leave them a country as good and great as I found when I was born into this country in 1920.

The story that I want to spend a few moments on tonight begins with a quote from Benjamin Franklin. There are several versions of this. I have one here from the Dictionary of Quotations, requested from the Congressional Research Service. It says, “On leaving Independence Hall at the end of the constitutional convention in 1787, Franklin was asked, ‘Well, Doctor, what have we got, a republic or a monarchy?’” Of course, they were very confused, all people that is what they lived under as a colony of England.

According to Dr. James McHenry, a Maryland delegate, he replied, “A republic, if you can keep it.”
you given us?" And his reply, "A republic, Madam, if you can keep it." And that is what I want to talk about tonight, a republic, and if you can keep it.
So often when I hear people talk about this great country that we live in, they refer to it as a democracy. A speaker can do this after the opening exercises which very frequently may include a Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. And you come to that part of the Pledge which says "and the republic for which it stands." And having lived recited that, perhaps without thinking about what it means, the person will get up and talk about this great democracy that we live in and will talk about our commitment in keeping the world safe for democracy.

What is the difference between a democracy and a republic? And why, in our pledge of allegiance to the flag, does it say a republic? And why did Benjamin Franklin emphasize, "A republic, oh yes, if you can keep it!"

An example of a democracy, and I was interested to find that this was a quote from Benjamin Franklin, too. A good example of a democracy is two wolves and a lamb voting on what they are going to have for dinner. You see, in a pure democracy, the will of the majority controls; and that there are two wolves and one lamb and they cast votes on what they are going to have for dinner, it very well might be lamb. I kind of hesitate to use the next example of a democracy because I really don't want to be misunderstood, Madam Speaker. But if you will just think about it, I think you will realize that a lynching mob is an example of a democracy, because clearly in a lynching mob the will of the majority is being expressed.

Are you not glad you live in a republic? What is the difference? A democracy is majority rule. What happens is what the majority wishes. In a pure democracy, there are no elected leaders. The people simply vote, and that is what happens. The laws represent the current opinion of the majority of the people.

In a republic, we have the rule of law. One example in our history that helps me understand this is an experience with Harry Truman. Take charge, Harry. You remember the characterization. The steel mills were striking and the economy was already in trouble. In those days, it mattered that the steel mills were striking. Today, much of our steel is made overseas, and it might not matter so much. Then it mattered.

Harry Truman wanted to prevent a worsening of the economy as a result of the strike of the steel mills. So he issued an executive order, and what he did was to nationalize the steel mills. What he did was that the people who now worked for the steel mills were government employees because he had nationalized them, and as such, they could not strike. I remember that was a very popular action.

But the Supreme Court met in emergency session, and in effect what they said, by the way, I think this is just one of two times that the Courts have overridden the President, and what the Supreme Court said was in effect was, Mr. President, no matter how popular that is, you cannot do it because it violates the Constitution. You see, in a republic, we have the rule of law; and the law in this Republic in which we are privileged to live is fundamentally the Constitution. I have here a small copy of the Constitution. It is not a very big document; but, oh, what an important document it is.

I hear us talking about wanting a democracy in Iraq, and I keep asking myself the question. Is that really what we want in Iraq, a democracy? You see, we have three groups there, the Shilia, the Sunni and the Kurds, and the larg-erest group, the Shiia and the Sunnis.

They were oppressed for many years under Saddam Hussein by the Sunnis, and if we had a pure democracy there, surely the will of the majority would be to oppress the Sunni and maybe the Kurds. I am pleased for leaving these number of years under Saddam Hussein.

I think what we really want in Iraq is a republic. We want the rule of law, which says that you cannot discriminate against any people, an ethnic group, that you cannot oppress any ethnic group.

I thought that what we wanted to do in Iraq represented a pretty steep hill to climb. There is no nation around Iraq that has anything like the government that we would like them to have. They are bordered by countries which are dictatorships. We call them royal families, but they are dictatorships. They have got lots of money, and so they can buy the dictatorships, but nevertheless, they are really dictatorships. Then they have countries that have kings, Jordan and Syria.

The only country that comes even close to the kind of government we would like them to have is Turkey, but they have a very interesting situation in Turkey. The most respected institution in Turkey is the military, and three times in the last several years the military has thrown out the government and told them to try again, that they are not doing very well.

I have a quote here from Benjamin Franklin that I thought was very interesting and relevant to Iraq. It says only a virtuous people are capable of freedom. As nations become more corrupt and vicious, and you see the attacks in Iraq, as a nation becomes more corrupt and vicious, they have more need of masters.

I went to the Web to see what it had to say about democracy versus republics, and I found the little discussion: in constitutional theory and in histori-ical analyses, especially when considering the Founding Fathers of the United States, the word "democracy" refers solely to direct democracy. By that, they mean where the people directly determine what the laws will be, whilst a representative democracy where representatives of the people govern in accordance with a Constitution referred to.

Using the term "democracy" to refer solely to direct democracy retains some popularity in United States conservative and libertarian circles. The original framers of the United States Constitution were notably cognizant of what they perceive as danger of majority rule and oppressing freedom of the individual.

For example, James Madison in Federalist Paper No. 10 advocates a constitutional republic over a democracy precisely to protect the individual from the majority. However, at the same time, the framers carefully created democratic institutions and major open-society reforms within the United States Constitution and the United States Bill of Rights. They kept what they believed were the best elements of democracy but mitigated by a Constitution, with protections for individual liberty, balance of power and a federal structure forming what we now call a constitutional republic.

A couple of interesting observations about some of the limitations of a democracy. I have one here from Benjamin Franklin; and whether he knew it or not, he was paraphrasing Socrates because I think the earliest quote came from Socrates. Benjamin Franklin said when people find they can vote themselves money, that will herald the end of the republic. I think he really meant democracy, because if it is truly a republic, then you cannot vote yourself money. Then you could not do it. Socrates wisely observed that a democracy is doomed when its citizens can vote themselves moneys from the public Treasury.

This concerns me. When more than half of the American people benefit from big government, I think that will be a tipping point; and if you think our deficits are big now, just watch what they could be when we pass that tipping point.

The second part of his statement, if you can keep it, what were his concerns? We cannot get inside Benjamin Franklin's head to know what he was referring to, but we can only kind of surmise by putting this quote in context.

In his day, 11 years after the Declaration of Independence, and by the way it took us 11 years to write our Constitution, so let us have a little patience in Iraq, please. Eleven years after writing the Declaration of Independence, the United States of America, this new fledgling country was far away from any other major power. It had just achieved the most important power of that day, the superpower, the colonial superpower of that day, England; and so I doubt that Benjamin Franklin was concerned about the loss of this Republic from without. We were isolated by these oceans. We had just defeated a major world power, and so I doubt that Benjamin Franklin was concerned about a threat from within.

Today, I have little concern for a threat from within. This one person out of 22 in the world has about exactly half of all the military in all the world. We spend about as much money on the military as all the rest of the world put together, and I do not regret this because I tell you, if we do not get that right, if we do not have a military adequate to protect ourselves, nothing else that we do will matter much, will it?

I think that Benjamin Franklin was more concerned about a threat to this republic from within. Just 50-odd years after this, at the beginning of our country, a young Frenchman by the name of Alex de Toqueville spent several years visiting our country. Already this new country was the envy of the world, and Alex de Toqueville wrote a thesis on his observations. His own book, entitled Democracy in America, is still hailed as the most penetrating analysis of the relationship of character to democracy ever written. And this is how he summed up his experience.

"In the United States, the influence of religion is not confined to the mansions, but shapes the intelligence of the people. Christianity there renews without obstacle by universal consequence. The consequence is, as I have before observed, that every principle in a moral world is fixed and in force." And then this great quote from Alex de Toqueville. "I sought for the key to the greatness and genius of America in her vast world commerce; in her universal school system and institutions of learning. I sought for it in her Democratic Congress and in her matchless constitution. But not until I went into the churches of America and heard her pulpit's flame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genius and power. America," he said, "is great because America is good. And if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great."

Have you ever asked yourself the question, Madam Speaker, of why we are so fortunate? This one person out of 22 in the world has about exactly half of all the good things in the world. How did we get here? We are no longer the hardest working people in the world. That was a characteristic that helped make us great. We no longer have the most respect for technical education in the world. The Chinese this year will graduate more English speaking engineers than we will. And if that is the case, our graduating engineers will be Chinese students. We no longer have the best work ethic in the world. We no longer have the most respect for the nuclear family. Why are we so fortunate?

I think, Mr. Speaker, for two reasons, and I want to spend just a couple of moments talking about these, because I think it is not quite as casual, we could be at risk of losing what our forefathers bequeathed us and Benjamin Franklin's concern "if you can keep it" may be realized.

I think one of the reasons that we are such a fortunate people is because our Founding Fathers believed that God sat with them at the table when they deliberated and wrote the Constitution. I think that they believed that God guided them in what they did.

You wouldn't believe from our history books today, which have been bled dry of any reference to our Christian heritage, that our early Congress purchased 20,000 copies of the bible to distribute to its new citizens. You wouldn't believe that for 100 years this Congress was concerned about diffusion of religious values in the United States of America. And the Bible Society, as was his son, John Quincy Adams, who noted in his later years that of those two presidencies, the Presidency of the United States and the Presidency of the American Bible Society, that he valued more the Presidency of the American Bible Society.

I don't know if you noted, Mr. Speaker, but in the Declaration of Independence, God is mentioned four or five times, depending upon how you relate these statements. That is of considerable interest to me, because we are now considering whether or not the Supreme Court would look at if it is okay to say the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. Let me read these references in our Declaration of Independence.

It says, "the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitled them." And then in the last paragraph, it says, "we hold these truths," and all of us, Mr. Speaker, know these words. We repeat them so often. "We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal." Now, if you are created, there is a God somewhere, isn't there? That "all men are created equal and they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights." Mr. Speaker, never state or assume that the rights that you have come from your government. These rights come from God, and it is the responsibility of your government to make sure that they are not taken away from you.

And then I look further through the Declaration of Independence, and there is one phrase here that when you read this, you just have to smile. You wonder what was in the minds of our Founding Fathers. I have no idea what King George had done that required them to write this complaint, but, you know, it is prophetic. I think there is no better way to describe our regulatory agencies. And they used such poetic language then. What they said was, he has erected a multitude of new offices and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance." I smiled when I read that, and I thought what better definition could we have of our regulatory agencies.

And then near the end of the Declaration of Independence, in the last paragraph, "we therefore, the representatives of the United States of America in general Congress assembled, appealing to the supreme judge of the world." That has to be God, doesn't it? And then in the last sentence of this last paragraph, it says, "and for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine providence, we mutually pledge to one another." So five times in the Declaration of Independence our Founding Fathers referenced God. He was important in their life. They wanted him to be important in their country.

And I don't know if you knew it, Mr. Speaker, or not, because we seldom sing that far, but I have here the Star-Spangled Banner, written by Francis Scott Key. I pass his grave several times a week. It is in Frederick, Maryland. Let me read the third stanza of this. We seldom sing that, and I doubt that one American in fifty could recite it for you.

"And where is that band who so vauntingly swore that the havoc of war and the battle’s confusion, a home and a country should leave us no more? Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps’ pollution. No refuge could save the hireling and slave from the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave; And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph doth sing o’er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

And then this last verse: "O thus be it ever when free-men shall stand between their loved home and the war’s desolation; blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation! Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just, and this be our motto: In God is our trust! And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph doth sing o’er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if our courts might somehow declare the Star-Spangled Banner and the Declaration of Independence unconstitutional because they mention God?
several key issues of State and Federal rights when Franklin rose and reminded them of the Continental Congress in 1776 that shaped the Declaration of Independence.

By the way, one of the issues that divided them and that might possibly lead to division from henceforward, Constitution was the concern that they somehow draft a Constitution that would assure that the large States could not trample on the rights of the smaller States. And this is what he said: "In the days of our contest with Great Britain when we were sensible of danger, we had daily prayer in this room for divine protection. Our prayers, sir, were heard and they were graciously answered. All of us who were engaged in the struggle, 'must have observed frequent instances of superintending providence in our favor. To that kind providence we owe this Constitution that would assure that our people. The ink was hardly dry on the Constitution before our Founding Fathers were concerned that it might not be clear that their intent was to have a very limited central government; that essentially most of the rights, most of the power should stay with the people. And so they wrote the first 10 amendments, which we know as the Bill of Rights. Out of that process of two-thirds vote of the House and two-thirds vote of the Senate and ratification by three-fourths of the State legislatures; and 10 of those 12 made it through, and we know them as the Bill of Rights.

And, Mr. Speaker, as you go down through those Bill of Rights, you will see that time after time it talks about the rights of the people. And, by the way, that first amendment, so simple the establishment clause of the first amendment that it really is quite a marvelous way how it is misinterpreted. You see, our Founding Fathers came here to escape two tyrannies. One was the tyranny of the British Crown. In England there was a state church. It was the Episcopal Church. And in most of the countries of the continent of Europe, there was a state church. It was the Roman Church. And those churches were empowered by the state, and they could, and did, oppress other religions. I have such great respect for our Founding Fathers because when they came here, they did a perfectly human thing. They had Catholic neighbors who could not vote. But when it came time to write these first amendments to the Constitution, they finally had figured it out that that was not what they came here for. They came here to establish a country that provided freedom to worship as you chose. So they wrote a very simple establishment clause, and it meant just what it says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion." Please, do not establish a religion. And, furthermore, do not prohibit the free exercise thereof, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. That is all it means.

Mr. Speaker, our Founding Fathers would be astounded if they could be resurrected and see that we have interpreted this very clear language as requiring freedom from religion. You see, they meant it to assure freedom of religion, and there is a big difference. I mentioned that they came here to escape the other tyranny was the tyranny of the Crown. And I know my liberal friends do not like to reflect on it and they really abbreviate the second amendment, which, they say, reads the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed. That is in the second amendment, but that is not the second amendment.

The second amendment, you see, deals with their concerns that never ever would a small oligarchy in the seat of government be able to take over and oppress the people. So this is what they said: "A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed."

I asked them, Mr. Speaker, do you think that means? You know, they do not want to think what that means, so they change the subject. But in most of these first 10 amendments there was a very explicit statement. Our Constitution shows for the civil liberties of the people: the right of the people peaceably to assemble; the right of the people to keep and bear arms. And over and over it is talking about the right of the people.

Mr. Speaker, that is what does not say "citizen." I am not always pleased with the decisions of our courts, but I really believe that this Republic we live in is so essential to who we are and our favored status in the world that words do matter. And when the Court says that illegal aliens are people, they are protected by the Constitution, Mr. Speaker, maybe we need to amend the Constitution to say when you read "people" in the Constitution, please read that as "citizen." But that is not what it said. And I am very concerned that we do not rationalize away the clear wording of the Constitution. I think the enormous respect that we have for the rights of the individual, for the civil liberties of individuals, has established a milieu, a climate, in which creativity and entrepreneurship can flourish.

I think that is one of the reasons that we are such a privileged people. And I think, Mr. Speaker, that if we permit any erosion of these rights given to us by God and guaranteed to us by our Constitution, that we put at risk the favored status that we have in the world.

I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, that it may already be happening. I think that Benjamin Franklin may have had a concern when he said if you can keep it, then we might be able to sustain the Constitution. And I think with all of the best intentions that we are walking that path. We are doing that today.

I want to talk about three things that we spend a lot of time on here and we spend a lot of money on in our country. I am not saying, Mr. Speaker, that we shouldn't be doing these things. What I am saying is that if we want to do them, we need to amend the Constitution, because I don't think there is any basis in the Constitution for our involvement in these three things.

First, let me note how we rationalize that it is okay to do these three things. First let me mention what they are, and that will relate to the rationalization.

The first of these is philanthropy. I have a very interesting quote from Davey Crockett on philanthropy. A second of them is health care. A third one is education.

How do we rationalize that it is okay for us to be involved in this? Well, they go to the preamble to the Constitution. They read "We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, ensure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare.

There it is. They say “welfare,” so we now have evolved in philanthropy because it is there in the preamble to the Constitution.

I would note, Mr. Speaker, if they read on and came to Article I, Section 8, which defines the responsibilities of the Federal Government, they would note that it says there “provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.”

They are talking about the corporate welfare, not welfare as we use it today instead of philanthropy.

The second justification they use is the commerce clause, “to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian Tribes.” So they rationalize that if it crosses a State line, we can have control.

Now, I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that if that was the intent of the Founding Fathers, they never, ever, would have written the Ninth and Tenth Amendments. The Tenth Amendment, as the system in our country. We have a real health care system, we would be spending less money on our sick care system until you are sick. Maybe, Mr. Speaker, if we had a better health care system, we would be spending less money on our sick care system.

Also education. In a moment I am going to read this in the Constitution. It is very short. I want you to stop me, Mr. Speaker, when I come to that part in Article I, Section 8, that says it is okay for us to be involved in education, that it is okay for us to be involved in education, that it is okay for us to be involved in philanthropy.

By the way, I have never met anybody who had a good, warm feeling on April 15 because so much of their tax money goes to philanthropy. I think that is a great tragedy. The Bible says it is more blessed to give than to receive, and yet I find no one who has a good, warm feeling on April 15 because so much of the tax money that is taken from them is used in philanthropy.

What a shame, that the government has usurped the role of philanthropist and our people are denied that experience.

I had a very interesting experience here in this very spot probably 12, 13 years ago when I first came to the Congress. I was given 31 minutes of debate that position? This is a very interesting story.

I was one day in the lobby of the House of Representatives when a bill was taken up appropriating money for the benefit of a widow of a distinguished naval officer. It seemed to be that everybody favored it. The Speaker was just about to put the question when Crockett arose.

Everybody expected, of course, that he was going to make a speech in support of the bill. And this is what he said: Mr. Speaker, I have as much respect for the memory of the deceased and as much sympathy for the suffering to the living, if suffering there be, as any man in this House. But we must not permit our respect for the dead or our sympathy for a part of the living to lead us into an act of injustice to the balance of the living. I will not go into argument to prove that Congress has no power under the Constitution to appropriate this money as an act of charity. Every Member upon this floor knows it.

We have the right as individuals to give away as much of our own money as we please in charity, but as Members of Congress, we have no right to appropriate a dollar of the public money.

Now, how did Davy Crockett get to that position? This is a very interesting story. You will find it fascinating reading. We do not have time this evening to go into it. But Davy Crockett is before the campaign. Before that campaign ride on his horse there was a fire that they could see from the steps of the Capitol in Georgetown. And they went there and several wooden buildings in those days were burning.

Davy Crockett and other Members of Congress worked very hard to put out the fire. And when the fire was finally out, there were a number of people who were homeless. And among them were women and children. And, of course, their heart went out to these women and children.

So the next morning in the Congress here, the primary item of business was doing something about those poor people who were victims of the fire. And so they voted $20,000 for these victims of the fire. And that done, they went onto other business and Davy Crockett forgot about it.

The about a year later, he was out campaigning. And it was mostly rural then. And he was on his horse. There was a farmer with his team who was plowing. So Davy Crockett times his horse so that he gets to the farmer just as he comes to the end of the row. He is the farmer. And the farmer is very cold. And finally he tells him, he says, "Yeah, I know who you are, you are Davy Crockett. I voted for you last time you ran, but I cannot vote for you again."

And then he made a very interesting statement. He said, "I suppose you are out electioneering now. But you had better not waste your time or mine, I shall not vote for you again."

Davy Crockett said, "this was a sockdolager," I don't know what a sockdolager is, but that is what he said. And this is what the man said: "You gave a vote last winter which shows that either you have no capacity to understand the Constitution or you are wishing to pervert it."

And then he ended that Gettysburg Address, and Abraham Lincoln recognized this as an experiment which might not succeed. I don't know if you have thought about that in this Gettysburg Address.

Two score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new Nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Not so in England and Europe, was the divine right of kings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the Chair is instructed to announce the policy of January 4, 2005, and under a previous order... of the House, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MEEK) for the time remaining before midnight.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to come before the House again tonight, and I can tell you that we in the 30th District of Florida have a lot of things that come to the floor to share not only with Members of Congress, Mr. Speaker, but also the American people about the plans that we have for the country.

As you know, we have been sharing with the Members our concern of this side the aisle the Republican majority and rubber stamping the Republican President and all of his ideas and original thoughts that have put this country in an unprecedented financial situation that we have never been in before, especially as relates to the borrowing that has been going on from foreign countries within the last four years and continue to happen even now.

Mr. Speaker, as you know on this side of the aisle we talk about taking America in a new direction, a new direction in making sure that American workers make a liveable wage and definitely a minimum wage, raising the minimum wage to $7.25 an hour from what the Republican majority has not done so since 1997.

We also talk about energy innovation, making sure that we invest in the Midwest versus the Middle East as relates to oil and alternative fuels, and other technologies that can assist us in working with Detroit and other motor companies here in the United States and making more fuel efficient cars. That will happen. That is our plan on HouseDemocrats.gov.

Also, we talk about making sure that folks can retire with dignity, protecting Social Security, and making sure that we don't privatize Social Security. If left up to the White House, that will happen. Thanks to many of the Members on this floor who sit on the Democratic side of the aisle that we have fought time after time again in some 600 to 500-plus town hall meetings around the country, helped turn the tide on that issue because the Republican majority was all set cocked, and ready to privatize Social Security.

Another initiative there is to make sure that veterans are honored in the way they should be honored. We have made a full commitment that those that have served this country will no longer need to reap the benefits of a broken promise to them, to make sure that we fulfill that. I think, also, for us to talk about the issue of access to college. We have said that we are going to cut student loans price cost in half and also roll back the interest rate, and make sure that we have tax breaks for those that wish to go to college and pay for their college. And, also, make sure, Mr. Speaker, that we implement the recommendations of Homeland Security, homeland security.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. I think it is important what you said. These aren't unreachable goals for us. These are goals that are achievable, and they are very achievable in the early days. Many of these advances we could make if we do as Mr. MEEK, within the first 100 hours. Within the first 3 or 4 days that we are here, the American people are going to know by the legislation that we pass out of this House next January that there is a new America, and we are going to go in a new and a different direction.

And all we have to do, Mr. Speaker, is just think about when in those first 100 hours. We pass an increase in the minimum wage to $7.25. How many lives will that affect around this country? Six or 7 million directly, and then millions of others as the bottom half of the population. These are people that we will get bumped as well.

Cutting student loans. If you have a student loan right now and your rate is 6 or 7 percent, parents and students, lower interest rates will be cut in half within the first 100 days here. That is $12 billion. So many people may be saying, well, are you going to get the money? We are going to not give the oil industry $12 billion in corporate welfare. The American people have a choice to make. Okay? They can reaffirm that position that the Republican Congress implemented over the last year or two and that President Bush affirms by signing the $35 billion and Vice President Cheney kicked off with his secret meeting that he had years ago where we were complaining and saying, well, the oil industry was in there writing the legislation. And everyone said, well, the Democrats, you know, they were in there writing the legislation and now we have $3 gas prices. Okay?

So these small steps, and as you said so articulately at the wee hours or almost the wee hours of the morning about balancing the budget. We implemented what was called pay-go years ago, which means the government can't spend any money that it doesn't have. It can't go out and borrow it. You have to cut it from the budget. In order to get it, like we will do with our education. We are going to reimplement those rules so that we have a system in place that will restrain the runaway spending.

Now, you have many conservatives like William F. Buckley saying that this President is not a conservative because of the spending, the borrowing that has been going on from this Congress, on and on and on and on. We can take care of these problems very simply.

Now, I am not saying that the structural problems are not going to be more difficult. Getting to a balanced budget after the Republicans have bumped the debt ceiling five times and we are going to allow the United States Government to borrow more money from foreign governments than any President prior to President Bush put together, that is going to be a difficult thing to overcome, and that is going to take time. Reforming the government when Republicans have put in all their cronies that operate like they operated FEMA, it is not that they are bad people, but it is that power corrupts, Mr.
Speaker, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. The institution is corrupted because there has been no change, and we when you see Newt Gingrich, the man who gave birth to the Republican revolution, before the most critical of what is going on here, it is not the Democrats saying it only. It is William F. Buckley, it is Pat Toomey, it is Newt Gingrich, it is Dick Armey. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. It is Charles Barkley. Mr. RYAN of Ohio. It is Charles Barkley. For God’s sake, if you do not believe it, Mr. Speaker, that Newt Gingrich criticism does not hold water, Charles Barkley’s should. Mr. MEEK of Florida. Let me just say this very quickly before I yield to Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ here.

A Washington Post editorial on Tuesday, July 25, which is today, A14, this is an editorial, Mr. Speaker, and I am just going to read the first paragraph, maybe some of the second.

Do large corporations need another tax break? The House of Representatives seems to think so. It plans this week to take up a measure defining when foreign companies doing business in their State and make it easier for companies to avoid paying State taxes. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the Business Activity Tax Simplification Act would drain $1 billion from State government treasuries during the first year in effect and $3 billion a year by 2011 as corporations continue to take advantage of this situation.

Now, just it goes on. The National Governors Association is just totally outraged by this, and they are saying a Federal corporate tax cut using State dollars, that is what they are calling this, this is the editorial today in the Washington Post. I think it is important that we point out that the Republican majority is fighting on behalf of. We have State governments now that are in deficits have to figure out how they can make up. Mr. RYAN used to be a State senator. Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ used to be a State Senator and State representative in the Florida legislature. I used to be a State senator and State representative in the Florida legislature. I think it is important for us to look at the States and look at what they are doing to people. We are both Fleming fellows, and when we were taking that fellowship program at the Center for Policy Alternatives in Washington, D.C., for State legislatures, it talked about the devotion of taxation, putting tax cuts here, putting it on the backs of the States. We can take out a credit card and we can borrow from foreign Nations; that is this Republican rubber stamp Congress has been doing, but in the States, Mr. Speaker, they have to balance their budgets. And so what we are trying to balance the budget, what do they do? Raise tuition costs. They cut dollars going to local governments, and local governments then have to put a penny here and a penny there, and a million here and a million there on property taxes to be able to make it up.

Meanwhile, we have got Members here in Congress, because special interest groups. As Republicans said, hey, can you help us get more money, more subsidies that you have already given us, while we are at it, let us do all we can, do not worry about it, the folks back home will pay for it, that is why it is important, 11:30 at night we are back and making sure we share with the Members and the American people.

I just wanted to read this because we are all creatures of State government and State service, and we know how those legislatures feel. This is the National Governors Association. So these are not Democratic governors only, not Republican governors only, not Independent governors only.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. I am so glad that you highlighted that because the fiscal irresponsibility is startling, and so often it is difficult for us to quantify or physically represent what the impact is of the fiscally irresponsible decisions that are going on here, and we are not just making this stuff up ourselves.

Mr. MEEK is absolutely right. The three of us were State legislators. We worked every day to balance our State budgets. States cannot operate in the red like the Federal government can. The Federal Government can deficit spend. That is not possible at the State level. So, when we pass down a tax cut, it means that there is less revenue available at the State level in the programs that they are counting on those Federal dollars to fund, and so they have the devolution of the tax cuts.

Look, it is so often the Republicans talk about how they make these references to tax-and-spend liberals. Well, not only are they talking about how they are going to cut, but they also have refused to acknowledge that tax cuts are another form of spending. I mean, they are adopting irresponsible tax cuts for the wealthiest few. It would be one thing if they were passing tax cuts on to middle class working families. They are passing tax cuts that add to the deficit for the wealthiest few.

Let us just go over some opinions and some reality that is being offered out there as far as what third party validators have to say about their irresponsible spending.

Here is a USA Today editorial from February 21, 2006, of this year. The title of it is, "Who's spending big now? The party of small government," and USA Today said, "Tax cuts, they say, force hard decisions and restrain reckless spending. The last time we looked, though, Republicans controlled both Congress and the White House. They took control in 2001, in fact, since they took control in 2001, they have increased spending by an average of nearly 7.5 percent a year, more than double the rate in the last 5 years of Clinton-era budgets.''

Now, what kind of an impact are we talking about on real people? The tax cut reconciliation package that we passed out of this Chamber a couple of weeks ago, let us see who that helps because one would think that the purpose of a tax cut is to just give tax dollars back to the average person.

Does the tax cut bill do that? Well, let us take a look at the evidence because the average amount that an American would get back, based on income from the 2006 tax cut bill passed by the Republicans, looks like this. If you make between $10,000 and $20,000 a year, you get enough that tax cut bill to buy a Slurpee. If you make between $40,000 and let us say $50,000 a year, you get enough that tax cut bill to buy a Hummer.

There is a slight discrepancy here. It is really pretty startling. Now, when we are talking about the billions, with a B, that the tax cut bill cost, again, it is hard to illustrate for folks what the kind of numbers and immensity, enormity of what we deal with here every day really means. So how much is a billion just so people can wrap their minds around it?

Well, a billion hours ago, humans were making their first tools in the Stone Age. To quantify it further, a billion seconds ago, it was 1975 and the last American troops had pulled out of Vietnam. A billion minutes ago, it was 104 A.D., and the Chinese had first invented paper. But under the Republicans, $1 billion ago was only 3 hours and 32 minutes at the rate that the government spends money under this Republican leadership. So let us just help people understand what is really going on here, who is for fiscal responsibility and who is just a lot of talk.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. And who has a record of it.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. And who has a record of it.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. We do not really have to look that far to the 1993 opera- tions and maintenance that we had here and the Democrats who obviously were not perfect, but we knew how to balance budgets. We knew how to implement the PAYGO rules so that we were not borrowing money.

We actually were going to pay down the debt and begin generating surpluses in the United States of America. Can you imagine now, since the Republicans have raised the debt limit five times, back a day to when we actually had surplus money and we were on track to actually pay off the national debt in the United States of America? Actually pay it off?
Right here. How much more do you yesterday. They do not enforce their intel-

And when you run these huge budget deficits and you raise the debt, and this is the interest we are paying in the 2007 budget, for example, is $230 billion, just on the interest on the debt. We get no value from that. That is not lowering tuition costs, where people would benefit, get educated, contribute to the economy and generate wealth. That is not taking care of our families. That is not investing in health care or research or alternative energy sources. There is no value from that. And that is the dis-

In fact, as Mr. MEEK pointed out in the last hour, that money is going to Japan and China to pay down the money that we are borrowing, and paying interest on the money we are borrowing from them. So here we are, and this is just silly, we are borrowing money from China to give tax cuts to the wealthiest 1 percent, who don't need it, and to give $16 billion in subsidies to the oil companies, to give huge subsidies to the health care industry, and then the money that we bor-

That is not a level playing field, to begin with, because China manipulates their currency, as we talked about yes-

And we just keep feeding the beast: Right here. How much more do you want? How much more interest do you want? Be happy to yield.

You have the homeland security folks running around here talking about how we have to protect the homeland on the majority side, as though, Mr. Speaker, that just became a problem. Folks burning all kind of Federal jet fuel running down to the border talking about the border, we are going to get tough. Sending National Guard troops from throughout the States when we already have an overextended military and saying we would like to do more in homeland security. But as it relates to the Republicans, the investment dollars are not there.

Look at veterans, the blue over here, Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, which is quite interesting. Goodness, what we are paying down on the debt because of the Republican out-of-control spending on the majority side, the rubber stamp Congress, doing everything the President says to do for the billionaires and millionaires and all of the people that Mr. RYAN pointed out, who are not outside railing the Capitol, saying we need more money, doing what I just pointed out here in The Washington Post editorial just today, just stacking on top, piling on, putting more cream, and whip cream, and whipping it on up and throwing eight or more cherries on top of the eight-inch cake they are giving to the special interests. Looking at what the veterans are getting. Nothing. Little or no investment. Well under $50 billion. I am looking at this chart, and it is well under $30 billion. So when you look at it as it relates to the invest-

With that, I yield to Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ.

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Well, just to throw this out, I want to end by telling you what Speaker Gingrich said at the end of that panel. He said, 'If you want to clean up Congress, he had some pithy advice for lawmakers, who in the cur-

PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Jim DeMint, a Senator from the State of South Carolina, to perform the duties of the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. Frist. Mr. President, this morning we will return to executive session for the consideration of the nomination of Jerome Holmes to be U.S. circuit judge for the Tenth Circuit. There are 2 hours remaining for debate on this judicial nomination, and therefore, if all that time is necessary, we will vote just before 12 noon today. We will be recessing from 12:30 to 2:15 today to allow for our weekly policy meetings. When we resume business at 2:15, we will begin consideration of the child custody protection bill under an agreement that we reached last Friday. There are up to four amendments that can be considered before we proceed to passage of that bill. We will stay in session this afternoon and evening in order to finish the child custody protection bill, and I hope some of that debate time will be yielded so we can finish that bill at an earlier hour.

I remind everyone again that there will be a cloture vote on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act tomorrow morning. That vote will occur sometime around 10 a.m. so that we can conclude that vote before we go to the scheduled joint meeting. We will proceed to the House of Representatives in order to hear the 11 a.m. address by Prime Minister Nuri al-Maliki of Iraq.

The vote will be sometime around 10 a.m. tomorrow, and a little after that we will convene here in preparation for going to the House of Representatives.

We have had a very productive few weeks since the Fourth of July, addressing the issues surrounding the alternative stem cell technology bill, the fetal farming prohibition bill, the child protection bill, Homeland Security appropriations, the Voting Rights Act reauthorization, the Water Resources Development Act, and confirmed four judges.

We have made great progress over the last few weeks, but we have a lot to do—most immediately the Child Custody Protection Act—today, and then we will move to the deep sea energy exploration issue. Pensions is currently on the way to conference, and I am very hopeful that the conference will be completed at some point in the near future. And we need to address the DOD appropriations bill. So these are very busy times.

The House of Representatives will be going out this week, and we will be here through next week before the recess.

I yield the floor.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF JEROME A. HOLMES TO BE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE TENTH CIRCUIT

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to resume consideration of Calendar No. 764, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Jerome A. Holmes, of Oklahoma, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Tenth Circuit.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will be 2 hours of debate equally divided between the Senator from Pennsylvania, Mr. SPECTER, and... the Senator from Vermont, Mr. LEAHY, or their designees.

The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, before the Senate this moment is the nomination of Mr. Holmes to be a judge in the Federal District Court. I see the Senator from Oklahoma is here. I am sure he will speak to this nomination. I am not going to address the nomination but put a statement in the RECORD relative to my vote, which will be in opposition to Mr. Holmes. I have reviewed his record, as many members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have, and there are many positive things to be said, as the Senator from Oklahoma has mentioned in our committee deliberations. I am concerned, though, about some of the statements that have been made by Mr. Holmes in relation to his nomination on the issue of affirmative action. I am concerned about whether he will truly come to this important lifelong appointment with a fresh and open mind and an open heart.

I am also concerned that the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights yesterday noted the type of objections that they have to Mr. Holmes. It is an important factor, in my judgment, in my decision, and I am sorry that I will not be able to support this nomination as a result of that.

I also want to make it clear that the job of a Federal judge is a very important one. It relates to issues that affect us every single day. Just last week we had an extensive debate on the floor of the Senate about stem cell research—those issues relative to life and death in medical research that come before the courts. Judges have to make decisions. I have no idea what Mr. Holmes’s position is on this issue. I don’t know what statements he has made relative to it. I am about to say does not reflect on him at all.

But I do want to say I am very concerned about what I read in this morning’s newspaper about stem cell research. We know what happened last week. President Bush used his first Presidential veto to stop medical research—the first time in the history of the United States that a President has made a decision that we will stop Federal funding of medical research. He made that decision 5 years ago and said that no Federal funds would go to the use of these embryonic stem cells.

We know how these stem cells are created. They are created in a perfectly legal medical process where a man and a woman having difficulty in conceiving a child expend great sums of money, effort, and anguish to try to create this new baby in a petri dish, a glass dish, in vitro in glass. It is the fertilization process in the laboratory that usually takes place between a man and a woman in their married life. It is a miracle that it works, that this process leads to human life and people who have been praying for a baby finally have that moment when they are told, yes, it worked, in vitro fertilization worked, and you are going to have that baby you dreamed of and love the rest of your life.

But in the process, there are created other embryos which are not used. One is used to impregnate the woman. The others are left open, extra, surplus. What happens to them? They can be preserved at extreme cold temperatures for long periods of time. But, ultimately, if they are never used by the couple, they are thrown away. They are discarded.

The question we had before us was, Is it better to take those embryonic stem cells that would be cast away and discarded and use them for medical research to find cures for diabetes, Parkinson’s, Alzheimer’s and Lou Gehrig’s Disease? Is it better to use them for that purpose?

That was the vote. And it was a bipartisan vote, 44 Democrats and 19 Republicans voted in favor of stem cell research, reflecting America’s feelings. Seventy percent of American people say we should go forward with this research; that these embryonic stem cells that will be thrown away will be used by others to find cures to relieve human suffering.

That is what most Americans believe. That is what a bipartisan majority of the Senate believed. The magic number in the Senate is not 63 when it comes to this issue. The important number is 67. Why? That is the number of Senators it would take to override a Presidential veto, a veto of the stem cell research bill. We fell four votes short.

It became an operative issue when the President of the United States decided to use his first Presidential veto to stop this medical research. On Saturday, I went back to Chicago. I met with a group of people. I wish the President had been there. I wish he could have been standing with me out there in Federal Plaza by the Federal Building. I wish he could have walked over to the wheelchair of Danny Pedroza, who is suffering from a terrible neurological anomaly which has created a burden I can hardly describe on his parents to keep him alive. I wish the President could have heard his mother say: Every morning when I walk into his bedroom, before I approach him, I look to see if he is breathing. That is the struggle which she will face every single day. All she wants the President to consider is the fact that this research may give her little boy or other little boys and girls who face that a chance.

I wish the President could have been there to see the victims of Parkinson’s, slightly embarrassed by the tremors which come, and stand before the microphones and talk about their lives today.

I wish he could have been there to meet the mother of this beautiful little girl who suffers from juvenile diabetes. Her mother—I know her well by now, and I will not use her name on the Senate floor; I have used it before—gets up every night twice in the middle of the night to go over and take a blood sample from her daughter to make sure there is no imbalance. Every night, he thinks about that for a moment.

I wish the President could have been there to see the Lou Gehrig’s disease victim that I saw at a round-table discussion in Chicago a few months ago. He looked like a picture of health and strength. Here was a man who was sitting in a wheelchair, immobile. He couldn’t move any of his limbs. He couldn’t speak. His wife spoke for him and talked about how stem cell research was their last prayer; that maybe, just maybe, it could help him but certainly help others. As she spoke, he sat in the wheelchair with tears coming down his cheeks.

You think to yourself: Mr. President, these are real life stories. These are people who get up every single day and night in their battle. These are mothers and fathers whose lives have changed dramatically. They are not just talking about some legal position; they are talking about the same because of their love for their child or that husband or that wife. These are people who counted on you to sign this bill, to give them a chance.

What do we learn this morning? We learn that there was a little apology from the White House about the language that was used about the stem cell veto. I would like to read some of this into the RECORD because I think it reflects on the Leader’s position.

“This article in this morning’s Washington Post says: ‘President Bush does not consider stem cell research using human embryos to be murder, the White House said yesterday. Reversing its description of its position just days after he vetoed legislation to lift Federal funding restrictions on the hotly disputed area of study, White House Press Secretary Tony Snow said yesterday that he “overstated the President’s position.”’

It went on to say the President rejected the stem cell research bill because he does have objections with spending Federal money on something that is morally objectionable to many Americans.”

So the standard now is not that the President vetoed the bill because using these embryonic stem cells is somehow taking human life or murder. No. The standard is, according to Mr. Snow speaking for the President, that this is an issue that is “morally objectionable to many Americans.”

We know that 70 percent of Americans support stem cell research. We know that on any given issue, whether it is the war in Iraq, or virtually any expenditure of Federal funds on a controversial issue, there will be many Americans who object to it and oppose it. The President is now saying he is going to the heart of the issue as to whether this position is immoral; rather, he is saying it was politically unpopular and objectionable to many Americans.
It wasn’t objectionable to the families of the victims I met with on Saturday. What was objectionable was the President’s veto. What was objectionable is the fact that he would turn his back on this opportunity for medical research.

When the President vetoed this bill, he had with him what are known as snowflake babies. I met some of them, the most beautiful kids you can imagine. These so-called snowflake babies are healthy children who were outside in the lobby. These were children who were once these frozen embryos we talked about, and now are babies, smiling, gurgling, jumping up and down. The President had many of them with him at his veto of the stem cell research bill.

I think the total number of these babies in America is about 200. It is an amazing act of love and courage for these families who want a baby so badly they will go to the expense of this. What we have done is give these children the chance to be loved the rest of their lives. They are lucky kids. We are lucky to have them on this Earth. There are 400,000 frozen embryos. It is not likely there will be so many families coming forward to decide to create the life through a frozen embryo.

The answer to the President is this: There is room for both. We can use embryos to create life for the couple who come to the laboratory, for those who want to give their embryos. There is ample opportunity for that. But there is also an opportunity to use these embryonic stem cells to save lives and to spare people from suffering. That is the point the President missed. That is what this election is all about.

Last week, the House and the Senate voted on embryonic stem cell research. The next vote on the issue will be on November 7. That is when the American people will vote on stem cell research. When they will have a chance to decide whether they want different leadership in this Congress. That is when they will have a chance to decide whether they want to give the Senate the four more votes we need to override President Bush’s veto. That is when they have to decide whether we can bring this issue up after the 1st of next year, pass it in the House and Senate and, if the President persists in his veto position, override that veto in the House and Senate?

That is what elections are all about. That is what this Government is about. That is why it is important, for those who follow the stem cell research debate, to understand it is not over. It has just begun. We will continue the battle to fight for stem cell research. We will do it on a bipartisan basis. We will try to find the Senators on both sides of the aisle who support it. We beg those across America who think it is important to move forward on stem cell research today and now it is in their hands. On November 7, across America, in congressional elections for the House and the Senate, voters have a chance to ask the candidates: Where do you stand on this? How will you vote? Will you vote to override another veto by President Bush if it is forthcoming? That is what the process is all about.

Today we debate a Federal judge. As I said, my remarks are not meant to reflect on him personally at all because I don’t know his position on this issue nor would I even presume it at this moment in time. But it is to put into context the Senate, not just on judges but on issues that affect real lives in America. Sadly, this Senate has been derailed and diverted from the important issues people care about. Do you know what issue we are going to next? After this judicial nominee, we are going to be embroiled, at least for hours—and I hope that is all we take of the time of the Senate on an issue that is so peripheral it has never ever been raised to me by anyone in the State of Illinois—on a question about people who would transport their children or young people across a State line for an abortion situation, a tragic decision to be made, for sure, but we are going to take up the ammunition to deal with that when, in fact, there is no controversy or issue that has been brought to my attention by anyone in my State about this matter.

What else could we be doing in the Senate? How about something the gas price for Americans who are now facing $3 a gallon, gasoline that might go to $4 a gallon if we are not careful? How about a national energy policy? Wouldn’t that be a good debate in the Senate? Wouldn’t it be worth our time to spend a few moments changing the Tax Code to help ordinary families pay for college education expenses for their kids? Think about students making it into good schools and graduating with $20,000 in debt. Wouldn’t it be interesting if the Senate found time to debate ways to help those families with tax deductions? Wouldn’t that be time well spent? Or perhaps a little time talking about health insurance? Forty-six million Americans have no health insurance and this Senate does not want to take up an issue to offer American businesses the same kind of health insurance that is available for Members of Congress. Why aren’t we considering that? Shouldn’t we be considering pay for college expenses for Americans, you get no pay raise. That has been our position. Shouldn’t we change it? Shouldn’t we take the position the Democrats have taken, if we can’t raise the minimum wage, we are going to put a tax on the professional people who work for a lifetime with the promise that they will be taken care of, yet when they finally reach their golden years they find out that through some corporate sleight of hand or a merger or bankruptcy, they are left holding the bag? Why don’t we then help those families or change the Tax Code that rewards companies that send jobs overseas? Why would we reward an American company with a tax break for exporting jobs? Why don’t we consider any of those issues I have just listed as a priority?

No, what we are doing is dwelling on this debate relative to those extreme narrow issues that appeal to the base of the Republican Party. We went through Constitutional Amendment Month—that was June—where we said we are going to address a major problem across America, that is flag burning, but it turns out there have only been a handful of instances in America this past year even reported to have burned a flag in this country? And we decided we are going to change the Bill of Rights because of our concern over this major, dominant issue?

Then, of course, the issue of gay marriage, a divisive issue. To think we want to amend the Constitution—thank goodness they could not even rally a majority of 100 Senators to vote for that constitutional amendment which was clearly a political experiment, a political project by the Republican side.

We cannot seem to find the time to get to the real issues of an energy policy, a health care policy, doing something about paying for college expenses for families. We cannot find the time for that. No, we have to go after these divisive issues relative to abortion and other matters such as that. That is the agenda and those are the priorities of the Republican leadership in the Senate.

It is the reason why an overwhelming majority of Americans have said, it is time for a change in Washington. They have taken a look at this Republican Congress and they say it is time for a significant change, to move us back toward an agenda that truly will make a difference and move this country in a new direction.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The Acting President pro tem. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The Acting President pro tem. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I don’t know quite where to begin. If you are sitting out in America today and you have not heard what you heard, what you heard was, I am going to point out how bad you are. Here is what is wrong, here is the choice. What you heard was a partisan rant about the situation we find ourselves in today rather than a constructive hand that says, let’s work together to get things done.

We heard a debate about stem cells so it could be used politically. We heard words that were exchanged, stem cells versus embryonic stem cells. We heard words that President Bush does not care about people with illnesses, Republicans do not care about people with illnesses. We heard words that 70 percent of Americans support stem cell research. The fact is when you as Americans are asked, do you think your taxpayer dollars ought to be used to destroy embryos for embryonic research, that number changes to 30 percent.

Half truths are just that. The time we are supposed to be using is on the nomination of a great American by the name of Jerome Holmes. What we saw is, Members are going to vote against him because they have a litmus test. That is going to do nothing. It will bring this country farther apart rather than bring this country together to get things done.

The problem is, that works both ways. It is not going to change its approach to judicial nominees, and you have to match either a liberal or conservative dogma, what will happen to our courts? What will happen to our country.

The fact is Jerome Holmes is a man of absolute character, impeccable credentials, and has integrity that nobody questions. Except by a sleight of hand and backhanded inference that he doesn’t care about minorities, even though he is African American, he does not care about minorities because he happens to have published a difference of opinion on the legal basis for affirmative action, that is the litmus test. That is why he is not going to be voted on.

Here is a man who grew up in less than ideal circumstances, graduated cum laude, went to Georgetown University, has advanced degrees from Harvard, has been a prosecutor, has been an advocate for those who are less fortunate, and will be the first African American ever to be on the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Yet as we heard, he measures up in everything except one thing: He doesn’t say into do what some want him to buy into one issue. Who better to question his own opinion—not his legal opinion but his own personal opinion? Is it the fact that you can’t have a personal opinion about anything and become a judge in this country? How would we know anything about them?

It takes great courage for an African American, a lawyer, to say, I think there are some things that are wrong with the affirmative action plan.

He did not say: I don’t think we should have equality. He did not say: I don’t think we should make up for past deeds that have not been rectified.

What he said was: Here is what the Supreme Court did. I think they should have gone a little further. And on that basis alone he does not meet the absolute litmus test that is going to be required.

Well, think what happens if every judge who is conservative has to be pro-life. Do they have to be pro-life? No. We have to get away from this idea that you have to fit a certain mold politically before you become a judge in this country. And, if we do not, we are going to destroy this country.

What we want is people of integrity who understand the limited role of a judge; and that is not to put your personal opinions in but to, in fact, take the Constitution, take the statutes, and take the treaties, follow Supreme Court precedent, and make sure everybody who comes into your courtroom gets a fair chance, given what those rules require. To me, in fact, take the Constitution, take the statutes, and take the treaties, follow Supreme Court precedent, and make sure everybody who comes into your courtroom gets a fair chance, given what those rules require. They are not to put their opinions in. They are not to change based on what they feel rather than what the law says.

The only way we can have blind justice is to make sure those litmus tests are not a part of the selection. And what we heard today was the opposition—wouldn’t go into details—come and aggressively tell us why you do not want Jerome Holmes to be an appellate judge on the Tenth Circuit. We are not going to hear that. We are not going to hear that at all. Instead, we are going to hear a political debate about the politics of division in our country rather than the politics of reconciliation that should be about the leadership in this body and Congress. How do we reconcile our differences to move the country forward instead of divide? How do we gain advantage in the next election by making somebody look bad?

That is what we just heard. How do we make somebody look bad? It is easy to make somebody look bad. It is a lot harder to build them up and say, in spite of our differences, let’s walk down the road together to build a better America for everybody. We did not hear that this morning. What we heard was the politics of division. First of all, I think it is improper to do that when we are considering the nomination of such a great American as Jerome Holmes.

I want to comment a minute on the stem cell debate. I am a physician. I think it is highly unfortunate that we take time when we should be talking about the most important thing that we want in our judges. I do not care if a judge is liberal or conservative. I do not care if a judge is a Republican or a Democrat. What I do care about is do they buy the fact that they have a limited role? Do they understand what that role is, that they are there to follow stare decisis, precedent set by the Supreme Court, and the only books they get to look at is what the law, the Constitution, and the treaties say? That is what they get to decide on, and that is what governs.

It should not matter what their political affiliation is. It should not matter what their philosophy is of life.
What should matter is, how do they see their role? Jerome Holmes is a man who understands the role of a judge. He will make a fine judge. There is not anybody who knows this man who has come forward, in any of the testimony or any of the history, who has raised an issue about his integrity, his competence, or his character. But we have one issue. He has written his real opinion.

If we say judges cannot have an opinion outside of their job, then we are going to have terrible judges—terrible judges. And if we use only political marks—you have to line up on all the politically correct stuff from my viewpoint or somebody else's viewpoint to be a judge—we are going to have terrible judges. But, more importantly, we are going to have a divided country.

What we need in our country today is leadership that brings us together, not leadership that divides us. We need leadership that looks at a vision of America, as to what we need 30 years from now, and what do we do today to get there, rather than to concentrate on our differences today so we can have a political advantage in the next election. The American people understand that. They can be manipulated. We saw that today.

But America is great when America embraces its heritage. And that heritage is self-sacrifice and service for the next generations. It is not about, how do I create an advantage for me politically today. It is about putting me second and our country first. It is about creating a future for the very lives we are saying we want to cure with stem cells so they have something to look forward to.

Those who vote against Jerome Holmes do not have that vision for America. They have a vision of alienation, of division, of failure for our country.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Holmes nomination is pending.

Mr. LEAHY. Is there a time agreement?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes, there is.

Mr. LEAHY. How much time is available to the Senator from Vermont?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Forty minutes thirty seconds.

Mr. President, thank the Chair. Mr. President, today, the Senate considers the nomination of Jerome A. Holmes for a lifetime appointment to the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Just last week we confirmed another nominee to the Tenth Circuit, the fifth to the appellate bench under President Bush. This progress comes in stark contrast to the seven years in which a Republican-led Senate failed to confirm a single new judge for that court. Indeed, when I moved forward with the nominations of Harris Hart of New Mexico, Terrence O'Brien of Wyoming, and Michael McConnell of Utah, it broke a long-standing partisan barricade that had blocked these judges, and significant others, from being confirmed.

Among the victims of the Republican obstruction were outstanding lawyers President Clinton nominated such as James Lyons and Christine Arguello, who were never even granted hearings by the Republican majority. Judge Lyons was among the many Clinton nominees voted unanimously "Well Qualified" by the American Bar Association who were never granted hearings, and Ms. Arguello is a talented Hispanic attorney whose nomination had significant, widespread and bipartisan support from her community and State. They were among the more than 60 qualified, moderate judicial nominees of President Clinton that Republicans "pocket filibustered" and defeated without hearings or votes of any kind.

Just last Thursday, Democratic Senators joined in the confirmation of Judge Gorsuch, an extremely conservative nominee, and three others. Working together we confirmed two circuit court nominees and two Federal trial court nominees in a matter of minutes. We brought the total number of judicial nominees confirmed during this President's term to 225, which exceeds the total for his term of the last President Clinton administration. We brought the total number of judges confirmed over the last 18 months to 50. Of course, during the 17 months I chaired the Judiciary Committee the Senate confirmed 100 lifetime judges, twice as many in less time. Last week's success demonstrates again how we can make progress in filling vacancies by working together. Senator Salazar's support for Judge Gorsuch was a critical factor in that success. And Senator Lincoln's and Senator Pryor's support for confirming Judge Shepherd to the Eighth Circuit likewise made a real difference.

Regrettably, this nomination we consider today is not without controversy and concern. Mr. Holmes initially was nominated to fill a district court seat in Oklahoma. The White House withdrew that nomination and nominated him to the circuit court after Judge James had a letter written to him indicating he would withdraw his nomination. That withdrawal came after public reports that Judge Payne had ruled on a number of cases in which he had a conflict of interest. While the committee never had a chance to hear directly from Judge Payne about the reported conflicts, these types of conflicts are a violation of Federal law as well as canons of judicial ethics and have no place on the Federal bench. Certainly, they should not be rewarded with a promotion.

Before Mr. Holmes' hearing, the Chair raised concerns about the many controversial letters and columns he has written on such topics as juror racial bias, affirmative action, discrimination, and school vouchers. In these writings, Mr. Holmes derided opposing points of view and those who held them. I asked Mr. Holmes to address my concerns about how he might rule on civil rights issues and disputes that he would be asked to decide as a judge. Regrettably, Mr. Holmes' stock answers to my questions that he would follow Supreme Court precedent have not reassured me that he would be the kind of judge who understands the critical role of the courts in protection of individual rights and civil rights.

In one column, Mr. Holmes described certain allegations of racial prejudice at criminal trials as "harmful" because it "bolster[s] the cynical view that jurors vote along racial lines," which "undermines public confidence in the fairness of the criminal justice system." In fact, Mr. Holmes suggested that it is the focus on the problem of racial bias in jury selection—as opposed to the racial bias itself that "undermines the criminal justice system." He wrote that focusing on racial bias "may actually give the green light to jurors to exercise arbitrary power in the jury box when their racial number allow it."

Since the Supreme Court has long recognized that racial bias in jury selection undermines constitutional guarantees to a fair trial, establishing in the landmark 1986 decision Batson v. Kentucky that striking jurors on the basis of race is unlawful and that it is "harmful" to "the perceptions of fairness of the criminal justice system," Mr. Holmes' statement that accusations of racial bias are merely "cynical," was based on evidence showing patterns of race discrimination in jury selection. It has been reaffirmed repeatedly during the last 20 years in sharp contrast to the views of Mr. Holmes. I gave Mr. Holmes every opportunity to admit error and indicate not only that he had learned of the Supreme Court's precedent but that he had adopted that view of the law. And he accepted the prohibitions against racial discrimination as just, but received no such reassurance. Instead, the nominee begrudgingly acknowledged that he would have to follow Supreme Court precedent when expressly bound by it.

In another column Mr. Holmes wrote after the Supreme Court's landmark affirmative action decision, Grutter v. Bollinger, he criticized the High Court's rulings that required "affirmative action...to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action" and said that the "court did not go far enough: Affirmative action is still alive." In addition, he described affirmative action scholarship programs as involving classifications that "are...inherently dubious and morally offensive."

This was a landmark case and in it Justice Sandra Day O'Connor spoke for the Supreme Court and the Nation. Justice O'Connor, a conservative appointed by President Reagan, considered the facts and the law carefully. She took into account the brief from 65 leading U.S. corporations that noted... the importance of a diverse workforce and the brief of a highly respected group of former military officers that the military needed a racially diverse and highly qualified corps of officers. She built upon the Supreme Court’s Backdown decision by appealing to the University of Michigan Law School’s use of race as a factor in law school admissions and affirmed the important interest in diversity. She proclaimed: “Effective participation by members of all racial and ethnic groups in the life of our country, essential if the dream of one nation, indivisible, is to be realized.” She went on to note that she hoped and expected that consideration of race might no longer be necessary in another 25 years. Even after the decision, Mr. Holmes chose to criticize Justice O’Connor’s pragmatic, principled and practical resolution of what had become an ideological dispute. Sadly, Mr. Holmes seems to con- "...princpled and practical resolution of the problem of integration, characterizing a doctor’s complaint that his colleagues had “negative reactions to his dreadlocks” as “naive.” In another article, he described a defense attorney’s concerns about racial bias in jury selection as “philosophically offensive.” Mr. Holmes’ comments belittling those concerns were a calculated weapon to chill proper consideration of candidates nominated for significant judicial positions. Similar, baseless accusations of other forms of discrimination serve only to inflame and distract from the fair and delib- erate consideration of judicial nominations.

The Senate has confirmed 255 of this President’s nominees including 100 who were approved during the 17 months that Democrats made of the Senate majority. The fact that when I became chairman was of an African-American circuit court nominee on whom Republicans had refused to vote. For that matter, it was Republican Senators who defeated the nominations of Justice Ronnie White, Judge Beatty, Judge Wynn, Kathleen McCree Lewis and so many outstanding African-Americans judges and lawyers who they pocket filibustered.

I was surprised when we debated Mr. Holmes, despite the Judiciary Committee that those defending Mr. Holmes’ nomination criticized any expression of concern about his troubling writings in the area of civil rights. I appreciated when the Senator from Oklahoma apologized to me after that debate. The Senators from Oklahoma are within their rights in supporting this nomination. In fact, I consider their support as a weighty factor in considering this nomination.

Mr. Holmes’ nomination is not a simple one. This is a controversial nomination. A number of leading organizations concerned with civil rights, including the NAACP, MALDEF, and many others, raised “grave concern” about Mr. Holmes’ demeanor. The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the country’s oldest, largest civil rights coalition has opposed the confirmation of this nomination. Having reviewed the record, I share those concerns.

In the last several months, as we have worked to reauthorize and re-... made, and what distance we still have to go. The new law is named for Coretta Scott King among others. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. knew that our judges and our courts were important to securing civil rights. It was not the Congress but the Supreme Court that moved toward its goal in the Brown v. Board of Education decision in 1954. It is worth recalling Dr. King’s call for the political branches to join the courts in protecting the fundamental rights of all. In his 1957 address, “Give Us the Ballot,” Dr. King said, “so far, only the judicial branch of the government has evinced this quality of leadership. If the executive and legislative branches of the government were as concerned about the protection of our citizenship rights as the Federal courts have been, then the transition from a segregated to an integrated society would be infinitely smoother.” Dr. King knew how important fairminded judges were to the realization of equality. Dr. King’s view and that expressed by Mr. Holmes appear to be in sharp contrast.

I take no pleasure today in doing my duty. I have considered this nomination on its merits and, in good conscience, I cannot support it. Based on Mr. Holmes’ own writings and his responses to our questions, I will vote no. I hope that Mr. Holmes will prove my concerns unfounded and be the kind of judge that Dr. King would have admired, a judge in the mold of Thurgood Marshall, Clarence Thomas, William Hastie or A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter raising grave concerns from the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights regarding Mr. Holmes’ nomination be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE ON CIVIL RIGHTS, Washington, DC, June 14, 2006.
Hon. ARLEN SPECTER, Chairman.
Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY, Ranking Member, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN SPECTER AND RANKING MEMBER LEAHY: On behalf of the undersigned organizations, we write to express our grave concern regarding the nomination of Jerome Holmes to serve on the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Mr. Holmes has been a longstanding and outspoken critic of affirmative action programs. His record of affiliation raises serious questions about whether litigants could expect him to rule impartially and fairly on claims that turn on legal principles of affirmative action. He has long written that the use of affirmative action is necessary to help break down barriers to opportunity and ensure that all Americans have a fair chance to demonstrate their talents and abilities. Therefore, we have no choice but to express our deepest concerns regarding Mr. Holmes’ nomination.

If you have any questions or need further information, please contact Nancy Zirkin, LCCR Deputy Director or Richard Woodruff at the Alliance for Justice.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I reserve the remaining 5 minutes.

THE ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore, The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, could the Chair advise the time remaining on both sides?

THE ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority has 46 minutes remaining; the minority has 22½ minutes.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the Chair.

I ask unanimous consent that letters from judges, Democrats, Republicans, businesses, the Governor of Oklahoma, be printed in the RECORD in support of Mr. Holmes.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. COURT OF APPEALS, TENTH CIRCUIT, Oklahoma City, OK, June 14, 2006.
Re recommendation of Jerome Holmes nomination for the United States Circuit Judge for the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman of Judiciary Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: I am pleased to recommend highly my former clerk, Jerome Holmes, as a splendid candidate for service as a United States Circuit Judge of the Tenth Circuit.

Jerome gave extraordinary service to me as my law clerk from August 1990 to August 1991. He is dedicated to the highest standards of intellectual and ethical excellence and to an equal opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action. The court did not go far enough in the Bollinger case in 1998, but theCli-

THE ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, could the Chair advise the time remaining on both sides?

THE ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority has 46 minutes remaining; the minority has 22½ minutes.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the Chair.

I ask unanimous consent that letters from judges, Democrats, Republicans, businesses, the Governor of Oklahoma, be printed in the RECORD in support of Mr. Holmes.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. COURT OF APPEALS, TENTH CIRCUIT, Oklahoma City, OK, June 14, 2006.
Re recommendation of Jerome Holmes nomination for the United States Circuit Judge for the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman of Judiciary Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: I am pleased to recommend highly my former clerk, Jerome Holmes, as a splendid candidate for service as a United States Circuit Judge of the Tenth Circuit.

Jerome gave extraordinary service to me as my law clerk from August 1990 to August 1991. He is dedicated to the highest standards of intellectual and ethical excellence and to an equal opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action. The court did not go far enough in the Bollinger case in 1998, but the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals in its 1998 Regents of the University of California v. Bakke decision found that the use of affirmative action is necessary to help break down barriers to opportunity and ensure that all Americans have a fair chance to demonstrate their talents and abilities. Therefore, we have no choice but to express our deepest concerns regarding Mr. Holmes’ nomination.

If you have any questions or need further information, please contact Nancy Zirkin, LCCR Deputy Director or Richard Woodruff at the Alliance for Justice.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. HOLLOWAY, JR.

Re Jerome A. Holmes.
Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SPECTER: I write in support of the recommendation of Jerome A. Holmes to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. After a distinguished career in the Office of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Oklahoma, in August 2005, Jerome joined our firm as a director. He has already assumed firm leadership positions as a member of both its Diversity and Business Development Committees.

Jerome is thoughtful and principled in all that he does. The other directors of this firm quickly learned to respect and rely upon him. Jerome has been able to represent the clients of the firm and become an integral part of our firm through his outstanding analytical abilities and his excellent temperament.

In fact, Jerome Holmes is a paradigm for us as attorneys and counselors at law. He has the most articulate and well spoken attorney I have had the opportunity to work with, and is easily able to ponder multiple sides of complex issues and arrive at a thoughtful analysis.

Jerome has long been active in both the Oklahoma Bar Association and the Oklahoma County Bar Association and is now serving our profession as the vice president of the Oklahoma Bar Association. He has earned the respect of the legal community, both bench and bar, in this city and state.

Jerome Holmes will fill the role as a member of the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals with distinction and the highest level of professional integrity. I take, great pleasure in... sending my highest recommendation of Jerome Holmes for this important judicial position.

Yours truly,

Re recommendation of Jerome A. Holmes, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: Please accept this letter as an enthusiastic endorsement of Jerome A. Holmes for a position on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Although I often find myself in disagreement with Senators Inhofe and Coburn on a variety of policy issues, I have a great deal of respect for Jerome and must commend the Senators for endorsing his nomination for this important judicial position. I respectfully request that you move Jerome’s name forward for confirmation.

Jerome is an experienced trial lawyer, working on civil and criminal matters. He recently entered private practice at one of the largest law firms in Oklahoma, after a distinguished 11-year career as a federal prosecutor in the U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Western District of Oklahoma. During his time in the U.S. Attorney’s Office, Jerome primarily prosecuted cases involving white collar and public corruption offenses. He also worked for almost one year on the prosecution team that brought charges against the perpetrators of the Oklahoma City Bombing.

Jerome received his Juris Doctor from Georgetown University Law Center, where he served as Editor-in-Chief of the Georgetown Immigration Law Journal. He received a B.A. degree from Wake Forest University, graduating cum laude. In addition, Jerome earned a Master in Public Administration degree from Harvard University’s John F. Kennedy School of Government, where he was a B. Pickard Fellow in Criminal Justice Policy and Management.

Jerome is licensed to practice law in three states. He is a leader in his profession, currently serving on the Oklahoma Bar Association’s Board of Governors (BOG) as Vice President. He is the first African American by history of the Oklahoma Bar Association to occupy an officer’s position on the BOG.

Jerome’s long-standing concern for the economically disadvantaged is evident in his professional and civic activities. Jerome serves on the ABA’s Commission of Homelessness & Poverty and is Chair of the Board of one of the largest providers of shelter to Oklahoma’s homeless, City Rescue Mission. Jerome also is committed to ensuring that the doors of the legal profession are open to underrepresented racial and ethnic minorities. He is Chair of his law firm’s Diversity Committee and has devoted numerous hours to working with minority high school students in mentoring and internship programs.

Jerome enjoys widespread support among Oklahoma Democrats and Republicans alike. In Oklahoma legal circles, Jerome has a very strong reputation. He is a dedicated professional who would be committed as a judge to fairness and justice, rather than ideology. I heartily endorse Jerome’s nomination for the Tenth Circuit position without reservation. Please help all Oklahomans by moving Jerome’s name forward for confirmation as soon as possible.

Sincerely,

Michael C. Turpen

Re: nomination of Jerome Holmes, 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, U.S. Senate, Judiciary Committee, Washington, DC.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY,
Ranking Member, U.S. Senate, Judiciary Committee, Washington, DC.

DEAR DISTINGUISHED SENATORS: It is truly an honor to offer this Letter of Recommendation for your consideration on behalf of Jerome Holmes, a nominee for the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

I have known Jerome Holmes for several years, both professionally and personally, as I am also a member of the Oklahoma Bar Association. I know him to be a person of Integrity and Character and I have always appreciated Mr. Holmes’ fairness in our dealings. What’s more, I have witnessed Mr. Holmes’ efforts in our local community to improve the lives of all and to achieve mutual respect for all people. In particular, he is respectful of views that differ from his own and he enjoys tremendous bipartisan support and respect.

If I can provide any further information or perspective, please do not hesitate to contact me at your convenience. Respectfully yours,

Jim Roth
County Commissioner.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Ranking Member, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS SPEETR AND LEAHY: I am writing in reference to the nomination of the Honorable Mr. Jerome A. Holmes, Esq.’s Judicial appointment. I appreciate the concern that has been expressed about his nomination based upon his writings and positions on affirmative action. In all honesty, I stand in a position that is contrary to the interpreted position of the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals. When Arlene was Chief of the Criminal Division of the U.S. Attorney’s Office in the Western District of Oklahoma, Jerome was Chief of the Criminal Division of the Tenth Circuit.

I have known Mr. Holmes for many years and believe that he does have a high regard for the views of those who may differ from his own. That in and of itself is enough for me to believe the report by his former supervisor, Judge Arlene Johnson, that he is a fair and impartial judge.

I have known Mr. Holmes for many years and believe that he does have a high regard for the views of those who may differ from his own. That in and of itself is enough for me to believe the report by his former supervisor, Judge Arlene Johnson, that he is a fair and impartial judge.

I do realize the responsibility that is upon me as a Pastor, Community Leader and a concerned citizen. This is no light matter for me, indeed it is with much prayer and struggle that I searched out the right words to convey the right tone to reinforce my message. As a member of the NAACP, Urban League and many other organizations that fight for the rights of minorities, I am moved to ask your continued approval of this nomination.

Sincerely,

GEORGE E. YOUNG, Sr.
Pastor.

Re recommendation of Jerome A. Holmes, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SPEETR: As Governor of the State of Oklahoma, and as a former Chair of the State Senate Judiciary Committee, I have had a lot of experience in the selection of Judges. In our modified Missouri system of appointment of judges, the Governor plays a key role when judicial vacancies occur. Not only does the Governor appoint members to the Judicial Nominating Commission, but he conducts the final three names of judicial applicants for gubernatorial selection. I take this responsibility very seriously. I have personally interviewed every single candidate forwarded to me.

I have come to know and respect Mr. Jerome Holmes, a nominee for the Tenth Circuit vacancy created by the retirement of my friend, Judge Stephanie Seymour. Jerome is a highly qualified candidate, a superb lawyer with a reputation for fairness, ethics and integrity. Indeed, I recently appointed his former supervisor, Judge Arlene Johnson, to our court of last resort on criminal matters, the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals. When Arlene was Chief of the Criminal Division of the U.S. Attorney’s Office in the Western District of Oklahoma, Jerome was her chief deputy. Their division was considered a model division of the U.S. Attorney’s Office. Jerome handled this difficult task with competence and honor, and he was part of the prosecution team that brought charges against the perpetrators of the Oklahoma City federal building bombing.

I have come to know Jerome on a personal basis through the Oklahoma Symphony, a sort of “think tank” gathering of top Oklahomans that meets formally once a year, and informally in small groups from time to time. It is an honor to be invited to join the Symposium, and Jerome was among the first to be invited for membership.

I do not think you could have a candidate more highly qualified and regarded than Jerome Holmes.

I hope you will see fit to appoint this remarkably talented young man to this important position. I know of the Tenth Circuit, as well, because my cousin, Judge Robert Holloway, will become the Chief of the Tenth Circuit in 2008. I know he shares my high regard for Jerome, as he has told me of Jerome’s excellent professional appearances before the Court.

I continue, Senator, to appreciate the very important work that you do. Please do not Re: nomination of Jerome A. Holmes to the Tenth Circuit.

Hon. ARLEN SPECTER,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Specter and Senator Leahy:

I am writing in support of the nomination of Jerome A. Holmes for the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. I have known Jerome Holmes for over ten years through our work together in the United States Attorney’s Office and now in private practice. I believe his intellect, experience and character make him an excellent choice for a position on the appellate court. I saw these qualities firsthand as Jerome carried out his many responsibilities as a prosecutor. One of the most important duties he performed was that of the office’s legal ethics and professional responsibility counsel. Jerome acted ably in this capacity during a time of heightened scrutiny for federal prosecutors following the passage of the Hyde Act and the McDade Amendment. Since both of you are former prosecutors, I can offer three observations.

First, Jerome Holmes has served his legal profession and public considerably in a variety of roles. Jerome has performed the roles of an assistant U.S. Attorney, a federal prosecutor, and a law clerk on the high court. In 1988, where he was editor in chief of the Tenth Circuit Law Journal, and the Advocate, the Journal of the Oklahoma Bar Association. Jerome has also served as a judge, and as a member of the Board of Governors of the Oklahoma Bar Association.

Second, Jerome Holmes has been a strong supporter of the legal profession. He has been active in many organizations, including the Oklahoma Bar Association, the Board of Governors and the State Bar Foundation. He is a member of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation and a member of the Board of Governors of the Oklahoma Bar Association. He is also a member of the State Bar of Oklahoma and the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Third, Jerome Holmes has been a strong supporter of the legal profession in Oklahoma. He has served on the board of the Oklahoma Bar Association and the Oklahoma State Bar Foundation. He is a member of the Oklahoma Bar Association and the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

My belief is there is no way Jerome Holmes could have given an answer in response to questions that were asked by Senator Leahy that would have met with Senator Leahy’s approval. We had a hearing on Mr. Holmes. The great concerns we have heard on the floor. Nobody came to ask those questions. No one showed up other than myself and two other Members to hear Jerome Holmes’ response, both in terms of his comments and beliefs about affirmative action, but also about the beliefs he holds. This is a man who has experienced racial discrimination. This is a Black man who rose to heights without the assistance of any one else other than his sheer will and great effort on his part and the character instilled in him by his parents.

There are multiple allegations that have been raised. I will hold back on answering those specifically with Mr. Holmes’ responses.

I yield to the senior Senator from Utah 20 minutes. If he needs additional time, I will be more than happy to yield that to him. Would the Chair please notify us when we have 10 minutes remaining?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I thank my colleague and I appreciate his leadership on the floor. This is an exceptional nominee for the court. I rise to voice my strong support for the nomination of Jerome A. Holmes of Oklahoma to be a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. With this nomination, we see an all-too-familiar pattern. Mr. Holmes is a highly qualified nominee, a man of integrity and character who knows the proper role of a judge, someone who is praised by those who know him and attacked by some who do not.

Let me review each element of this familiar pattern in the Tenth Circuit.

First, Mr. Holmes is a highly qualified nominee. After receiving his law degree from Georgetown University in 1988, where he was editor in chief of the Georgetown Immigration Law Journal, Mr. Holmes returned to Oklahoma and began an impressive legal career. He clerked first for U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley of the Western District of Oklahoma, and then for U.S. Circuit Judge William Holloway of the Tenth Circuit. Both judges have taken senior status, and I can only imagine how proud they must be to see their former clerk now nominated to the Federal bench himself. And in the case of Judge Holloway, I truly hope that Mr. Holmes will soon have the privilege of citing his former law clerk as a colleague.

After 3 years of private practice with the highly regarded law firm of Steptoe & Johnson, Mr. Holmes entered public service. While an Assistant United States Attorney for the Western District of Oklahoma, Mr. Holmes prosecuted a wide range of cases and was that office’s anti-terrorism coordinator. No doubt among his most vivid memories from that time was his experience on the prosecution team regarding the Oklahoma City bombing. Somehow, Mr. Holmes also completed a master’s degree in public administration from Harvard University’s Kennedy School of Government. Currently, after more than a decade as a private practitioner, Mr. Holmes is back in private practice as a director of Crowe & Dunlevy, a prominent law firm in Oklahoma City, where he chairs the firm’s diversity committee. He has also served as Vice President of the Oklahoma Bar Association. This is an exceptional man.

Second, Mr. Holmes is a man of integrity and character. We hear now and then about the need for judges who are well-rounded individuals, who are good people as well as good lawyers. Well, during his years in private practice and public service, Mr. Holmes has also served his community. In addition to chairing the Oklahoma City Rescue Mission, Mr. Holmes has been a director of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation and a trustee of the Oklahoma City National Memorial Foundation.

Third, Mr. Holmes understands the proper role of a judge in our system of Government. Mr. Holmes testified under oath that he knows judges must separate their personal views from what the law requires. He has repeatedly affirmed his commitment to follow applicable Supreme Court precedent in cases before him. This means, as he put it in answers to questions following his hearing, an even-handed application of legal principles in all areas.

Fourth, Mr. Holmes is praised and supported by those who know him. This includes Democrats in Oklahoma. Daniel Webber, appointed by President Bill Clinton to be U.S. Attorney in Oklahoma, has written the Judiciary Committee in support of Mr. Holmes’ nomination. Governor Brad Henry has testified more than a decade ago that Mr. Holmes’ intellect, experience, and character. Reaffirming that the nominee before us today knows the proper role of a judge, Mr. Webber wrote us that Mr. Holmes is “responsible of the rule of the courts. . . . When Jerome states under oath that he will hold his personal views aside and follow the law, I believe he will do just that.”

Governor Henry said that Mr. Holmes is “a highly qualified candidate, a superb lawyer, with a reputation for fairness, ethics and integrity. In short, I do not think you could have a better candidate than Mr. Holmes.” A superb lawyer with a reputation for fairness, ethics, and integrity. It seems to me that is exactly the formula we should consistently be looking for in nominees to the Federal bench.

So far, so good. The fifth element of this familiar pattern, however, is that Mr. Holmes is being attacked and opposed by some who do not know him. Mind you, they have not suggested that Mr. Holmes is not qualified to sit on the Federal appellate bench. They have not disputed his character or integrity. No, they have simply cast doubt on what seems to be universal acclaim from those who know Mr. Holmes and have worked with him. In yet another familiar element of this pattern, Mr. Holmes’ critics find fault not with his experience, his qualifications, his integrity, or his character, but his politics.

In particular, the critics take issue with Mr. Holmes’ opposition to Government-imposed racial preference policies. Let me emphasize what I mentioned a few minutes ago, that Mr. Holmes helped create and chairs his law firm’s diversity committee. In the private arena, he works to recruit and retain qualified lawyers of various racial and ethnic backgrounds. He also believes that condition admission to public universities on race, not to address past discrimination, is nonetheless discriminatory. Mr. Holmes would be the first African-American judge on the Tenth Circuit. At the same time, like two-thirds of Americans, Mr. Holmes believes that condition admission to public universities on race, not to address past discrimination, but to create future diversity.

My liberal friends can, of course, disagree with Mr. Holmes on this issue. But by suggesting that his opinion on this issue somehow disqualifies him from serving on the Federal bench, they are treading on very dangerous ground. Mr. Holmes is hardly the first judicial nominee to have taken a clearly defined stand on a controversial issue. I could chronicle some of the more prominent examples, judges overwhelmingly confirmed by this body. Are my liberal friends saying that we should look with abhorrence on judicial nominees individuals who have no opinions on issues of the day, who have done nothing, said nothing, and thought nothing? Or are they suggesting that if nominees have thought about and have opinions on controversial issues, only liberal opinions are acceptable?

The issue is not whether a nominee is liberal or conservative, Democrat or Republican, but whether he is committed to basing his judicial decisions on the law. The evidence from him and those who know him is that Mr. Holmes will do just that, and there is not a shred of evidence to the contrary.

Not only that, but Mr. Holmes’ supporters—again, those who know him best—also stress his willingness to listen and to respect those with differing views. Oklahoma County Commissioner Jim Roth, another Democrat, wrote the Judiciary Committee calling Mr. Holmes a principled leader who does not write from the bench for all people. In particular, he is respectful of views that differ from his own and he enjoys tremendous bipartisan support and respect.” That is from a Democrat. How can you ask for a better statement from anybody?

Specifically on the issue that has so captivated Mr. Holmes’ critics, Pastor George Young, Sr., who supports affirmative action, a Democrat, has written that Mr. Holmes has displayed a level of integrity in all his dealings that I have been aware and has shown in out personal conversation willingness to listen and respect differing views. Perhaps my liberal friends are taking out their litmus paper to judge Mr. Holmes’ personal views because they believe that is precisely what should drive judicial decisions. Mr. President, I reject that notion out and I invite those who take such an ideological, politicized view of what judges do to try and sell that to the American people.

Mr. President, personal views or political positions are the wrong standard for evaluating judicial nominees. It distorts the fundamental difference between advocates and judges, between opinion and law. And it misleads the American people about what judges do and the important role we have in our system of Government. I am convinced that Mr. Holmes understands far better than his critics that judges must be neutral arbiters, that they must follow the law, that they must set aside personal views or opinions. I am convinced that Mr. Holmes will do just that on the Tenth Circuit.

Mr. President, we have been here before. Nominees of obvious qualification have faced personal attacks on their integrity and character, and solid bipartisan support, are nonetheless attacked and maligned because of their personal views or political opinions. It has happened before and, sadly, I expect it will happen again. The proper standard, however, looks at qualifications, integrity, and commitment to the proper role of judges in our system of Government. Judged by this proper standard, Mr. Holmes will be a fine member of this Court and he once served as a clerk.

Let me close with the words of one of the judges Mr. Holmes served as a law clerk. Judge William Holloway was appointed to the Tenth Circuit in 1968 by President Lyndon Johnson. He wrote the Judiciary Committee that Mr. Holmes “performed his work for our court as my clerk with complete impartiality and compassion for the people whose cases were before the court. I am convinced he will give excellent, fair and impartial service.”

Excellence, fairness, integrity, impartiality, compassion, and a willingness to listen. That is what the evidence shows, Mr. President. Jerome Holmes is a fine lawyer and a good man. He will make a great judge.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUNCUN). The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I believe under the agreement I have 15 minutes; am I correct?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no time agreement. The Senator is recognized and may proceed.

Mr. COBURN addressed the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think I have the floor.

Mr. COBURN. Will the Chair yield to the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. President, I think my understanding is that we are under a unanimous consent agreement. There is a time agreement, and it is limited on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is correct. There is 2 hours equally divided. We are operating under a time agreement, but there is no specific consent to limit the Senator from Massachusetts to 15 minutes.

Mr. COBURN. Will the Chair advise the amount of time left on either side?

I thank the Senator for yielding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 32 minutes remaining and the minority has 22 minutes remaining.

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the Senate’s exercise of its advice and consent power when it considers nominees to the Federal bench is one of our most important constitutional responsibilities. We are conferring on men and women the power to construe and apply our laws for the rest of their lives. It is the last opportunity any of us have to sit in judgment of them.

Our task is not to evaluate a nominee based on politics but, rather, to consider other important criteria. We start with the essential elements of professional excellence and personal integrity, but we must also evaluate the likelihood that nominees will be fair and openminded judges who bring compassion and understanding of the history and fundamental values of America to the bench.

In considering a nomination to our Federal courts of appeals, we must exercise special care. The Supreme Court accepts few cases out of the thousands of cases it is asked to hear every year. The Federal appellate courts are almost always litigants’ last hope for justice from our legal system. For those who seek relief from race and sex discrimination at work or at school, for criminal defendants who have been wrongfully deprived of their liberty or sentenced to death, or for those who seek to protect our liberties, the circuit courts of appeals are almost always their last hope for justice.

The record of Jerome Holmes demonstrates that he is not a nominee we can afford to entrust with the judicial power of the United States. His professional qualifications are not in dispute, but he has taken extreme public stances on issues that regularly come before our courts. These statements suggest that he will not approach these issues with an open mind or fairly apply the law in these areas.

Perhaps most troubling are Mr. Holmes’ strong and repeated statements denouncing affirmative action. Just last week, this body reauthorized the Voting Rights Act, one of America’s greatest achievements in the effort to overcome decades of racial oppression. During that debate, numerous Senators had the occasion to revisit the legacy of racially motivated violence, discrimination, and disenfranchisement that oppressed so many in this country. We had the occasion to reflect on the need to provide complete remedies for those centuries of discrimination that would eliminate it root and branch.

Affirmative action is an effective and necessary remedy that must be available if we are to provide opportunity for all, by breaking down persisting barriers and making it possible for all Americans to demonstrate their abilities and fulfill their potential. Yet Mr. Holmes has repeatedly denounced affirmative action as both immoral and unlawful.

Shortly after the Supreme Court struck down the University of Michigan’s affirmative action program for undergraduates that upheld the law school’s policy, Mr. Holmes wrote: ‘‘The court did not go far enough: Affirmative action is still alive. He lamented that the Court ‘‘missed an opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action.’’ He called affirmative action a ‘‘quota system’’ and accused it of perpetuating a society in which ‘‘race unfortunately still matters.’’ He referred to scholarships for minority students as ‘‘constitutionally dubious and morally offensive.’’

We know that race does still matter in our society, which is the very reason lawful affirmative action programs are needed. They guarantee opportunity for minority students who, because of discrimination, might otherwise never be able to excel. We all hope for the day that individuals will not be denied opportunity because of race, but until we reach that day, affirmative action programs are part of the solution, not the problem.

Mr. Holmes’ extreme statements make it impossible to believe that he will approach affirmative action cases with an open mind. He says he will fairly apply our Nation’s affirmative action policies, which have helped—and continue to help—women and racial minorities overcome centuries of discrimination, but his bland assurances are not enough. We have a duty to do everything in our power to reduce the possibility of mistakes. Many death penalty advocates have supported expanded use of DNA testing and other tools to avoid mistakes in capital punishment cases.

Taking an extreme position yet again, Mr. Holmes has no respect for these concerns. He is more interested in the symbolism of the death penalty than the fact that an individual life will end. Because the Supreme Court hears so few death penalty cases, appellate courts often have to decide on the life and death of criminal defendants. We should support the confirmation of a Federal judge who has so little respect for this grave responsibility.

The Senate has supported the overwhelming majority of President Bush’s judicial nominees. I have voted for the confirmation of dozens of judges with whom I have ideological differences. However, the nomination of Jerome Holmes is different. I do not believe that he will serve on the Federal bench with a fair and open mind. I, therefore, cannot support the confirmation of Jerome Holmes to the Tenth Circuit, and I urge the Senate to oppose his nomination.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, it is amazing the way things get twisted. I want to read what Jerome Holmes said in his comments about racial bias. The Senator from Massachusetts just stated that he would ignore Jerome Holmes, the first African American to be appointed to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. For the very reasons that Senator Kennedy raised, Jerome Holmes disproves every one of those arguments.

It gives me great pleasure to yield to the senior Senator from Oklahoma at this time and to thank him in the proc-ess and to also recognize and thank the President for the nomination of Jerome Holmes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, first, let me thank my colleague Senator from Oklahoma for the time he spent on the floor and the time he spent defending this man, not that he should ever need any type of defense against some of the accusations. I didn’t realize that there is an article referred to where he stated: There are other ways to get minority students on college campuses besides handing out benefits based solely on skin color.

I am proud of it. I am also proud of the fact that I have known Jerome Holmes for some 5 years. Frankly, prior to this nomination, I made recommendations to the President that he consider this man because he is so incredibly qualified. We all agree he is a man of great character and undeniably fit for his role. He has connections both in Oklahoma City and throughout Oklahoma, as well as the District of Columbia, a family history that goes back.

He was one of the prominent figures in the Oklahoma City bombing that took place 11 years ago. He was on the Oklahoma City bomb prosecution team, and I believe it was his distinguished service as assistant U.S. attorney that really began to set him apart in the legal community.

When asked about Mr. Holmes, most lawyers in Oklahoma begin their compliments with his work as U.S. assistant attorney in some public corruption cases in our State. He is someone who is willing to get in there and criticize and open up things other people aren’t, a great characteristic and I think very important. But if I were to single out another one, I would say his chairmanship of City Rescue Mission in Oklahoma is this: "Serving the homeless both with help, hope, and healing in the spirit of excellence, under the call of Christ."

I have certainly made my position known for quite some time concerning him and how he limits his opinions to the facts, the litigants, and law before him in any case. At a time when our Nation is faced with the onslaught of judicial activism, he is a breath of fresh air and I believe he is a man of character and principle; that he will rule justly within the parameters of the law.

We have a resolution from the Oklahoma Bar Association. I have the former president of the American Bar Association, the president-elect of the local Federal bar association. I have the deans of all three of the Oklahoma law schools praising him in the highest of terms.

Judge Holloway, currently sitting on the Tenth Circuit, noted Mr. Holmes’s commitment for people whose cases were before the court. John Richter, the U.S. attorney for the Western District of Oklahoma, who worked with Mr. Holmes, can speak from the prosecutor’s perspective and has said that Mr. Holmes is a man of integrity and character and possesses a rock-solid work ethic.

Mike Turpen is someone with whom Senator Coburn is very familiar. I don’t believe in the years I have known Mike—and we have one of these very honest relationships. He is a very partisan Democrat. I don’t think he has ever said anything nice about a Republican in his life except Jerome Holmes. Dan Webber—we have all these Democrats who are lined up without anyone dissenting from the idea that this guy is the perfect nominee to be confirmed to the Tenth Circuit.

Judge Ralph Thompson—I was elected to the State legislature with Judge Thompson. I considered him not just one of my closest personal friends, but he is certainly a judge of distinction in Oklahoma and has been for over 30 years. I ought to know a thing or two about judges. He said:

Mr. Holmes is dedicated completely to the rule of law, the proper role of the judiciary and applying and interpreting the law without regard to personal views on given issues.

I don’t think there is any judge, any Federal judge in the history of Oklahoma, who is more highly regarded than Judge Thompson. He also went on to affirm Mr. Holmes’s honesty and compassion.

I have a letter from Pastor George Young, a member of the NAACP and the Urban League, who showed great character in voicing his support for Mr. Holmes. He said: I trust Mr. Holmes, and so in light of our differences I support his nomination. Now, he is one who doesn’t agree with everything, every statement that Jerome Holmes has made, and yet he supports his nomination. He is for him. He is supporting him, head of the NAACP and the Urban League.

I talked with various attorneys in this State, and the good things to say about him. What I want to do, Mr. President, is submit for the RECORD a list of letters, if this has not been done by my colleague from Oklahoma.

It has been done, so it is already in the RECORD.

I thank my colleague for the time he spent in the Chamber. It happens I am on the Armed Services Committee, and we have a critical meeting that is going to go right through this, and I wasn’t able to be here, but my absence from the floor is no indication that I don’t hold this person in the highest regard.

I worked hard in getting his name to this Senate, and the good things to say about him. What I want to do, Mr. President, I consider him for the Tenth Circuit. I thank the Chair.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I am very pleased to support the nomination. of Jerome Holmes to be a judge on the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. Due to a scheduling conflict, I am unable to be here to vote for Mr. Holmes, though I would have cast my vote to confirm him. In any event, with his stellar qualifications, I doubt my vote will be needed. President Bush made his choice in nominating Mr. Holmes, and I look forward to great things from him during his tenure on the Tenth Circuit.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will vote “no” on the nomination of Jerome M. Holmes to be a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, and I would like to take a minute to explain why I reached this decision.

This is an important nomination and should receive close scrutiny. Judges on the court of appeals have enormous influence on the law. Whereas decisions of district courts—a position Mr. Holmes never held—are subject to appellate review, the decisions of the courts at this level are in almost all cases final, as the Supreme Court agrees to hear only a very small percentage of the cases on which its views are sought.

I believe in certain longstanding touchstones of the qualifications needed for judicial nominees: legal competence, fairness, and the ability to approach issues with an open mind. We sometimes short-hand these qualities sometimes short-hand these qualities into a single phrase—a judicial temperament—which is a non-technical way of saying that a judge’s judicial temperament, our goal is to have an evenhanded judiciary that hears the case before it and applies the law fairly and uniformly, rather than letting strong personal convictions override the facts or the law. We do this for a simple but fundamental reason, namely, that we want a highly qualified and independent judiciary that can command the respect and admiration of the American people.

In the nomination of Mr. Holmes, we have a nominee to one of our highest courts who has never served as a judge before. President Bush originally nominated Mr. Holmes to be a Federal district judge in Oklahoma earlier this year. Prior to this nomination, Mr. Holmes had been an assistant U.S. attorney in Oklahoma and in private practice. The Judiciary Committee was ready to consider that initial nomination—to determine the merits of Mr. Holmes serving in his first judicial position. But for some reason Mr. Holmes’ nomination was upgraded to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. Placing a nominee with no judicial experience on an appellate court is like having a major league baseball manager make his out to evaluate the nominee’s judicial temperament—his capacity to be fair and impartial.

With no judicial record to illuminate his views, we are left only with Mr. Holmes’ words as a window into his judicial temperament. Those words are troubling and could lead a reasonable person to question his objectivity and temperament. After the Supreme Court’s nuanced affirmative action ruling, Grutter v. Bollinger, Mr. Holmes derided the Court for missing the “opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action,” and complained that “[i]f the Court did not go far enough [in striking down affirmative action], it is still alive.” He has referred to scholarship programs targeted at minority children as “morally offensive.” He has called African-Americans leaders, on various occasions, “ideologically bankrupt” and suggested that their opposition to school vouchers is insincere. In a letter to a publication, Mr. Holmes flippantly dismissed a doctor’s complaint that his colleagues had “negative reactions to his dreadlocks” as “naive.” He has even gone so far as to claim that efforts to address racial bias in jury selection actually harm the criminal justice system.

Mr. Holmes has even dismissed problems with the administration of the death penalty. In a 2004 speech, he said: “The statement society is sending—that certain conduct and the perpetrators of it deserve to die is not materially diminished by the fact that in the implementation of the death penalty mistakes are made or by the rush to judgment to my written questions regarding whether executing an innocent person was an acceptable mistake, Mr. Holmes responded by saying that “the criminal justice system should be administered in a manner that eliminates mistakes—to the extent it is humanly possible—and yields accurate outcomes.” I do not think this is an acceptable answer to a fairly simple question. His statements suggest a rather cavalier approach to a very significant issue in contemporary criminal law.

Mr. Holmes’ dismissive comments about affirmative action, school vouchers, and the death penalty were not off-hand remarks, or impassioned advocacy. They were made in a way that eliminates mistakes—to the extent it is humanly possible—and yields accurate outcomes. he was vocal in his opposition to the Supreme Court’s decision in Grutter v. Bollinger, criticizing the Court for missing an “important opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action”.

Because Holmes’ statements do not reflect the objectivity necessary to serve in a lifetime appointment on the Federal bench, I cannot vote to confirm his nomination.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, Jerome Holmes has made some troubling statements about affirmative action and the use of race in our society. He has said: [Affirmative action] policies necessarily divide us along racial lines, and establish a spurious system based upon skin color. . . . [The Supreme court upheld the affirmative action policy of the university’s law school in the 2003 Michigan case. And in so doing, it missed an important opportunity to drive the final nail in the coffin of affirmative action. . . .

Mr. Holmes didn’t make just an occasional comment against affirmative action. He has written over a dozen columns and op-ed pieces expressing his views on race and affirmative action.

I understand and accept that people in good faith can disagree about issues of race and the merits of affirmative action. It is a hard issue for many people and it stirs passions on both sides. But Mr. Holmes’ statements are those of an ideological soldier. When it comes to affirmative action, Mr. Holmes seems to have open hostility, not an open mind.

In its letter of opposition to the Holmes nomination, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights wrote: “Mr. Holmes has been a longstanding and outspoken critic of affirmative action, and his views raise serious questions about whether he would rule impartially and fairly in cases involving affirmative action.”

I asked Mr. Holmes a simple question: Would you be willing to recuse yourself in all cases involving affirmative action?

Section 455 of title 28 of the United States Code states: “Any justice, judge, or magistrate judge of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.”

This seems like a simple standard, and I share the belief of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights that Mr. Holmes presents a clear case of someone whose impartiality would be questioned when it comes to affirmative action.

But Mr. Holmes doesn’t see it that way. He said he would not recuse himself in affirmative action cases. He said he would be able to put his personal views aside and rule fairly on this issue. I doubt it. He harbors such hostility to affirmative action and such disdain for the plaintiffs that I believe he will not have an open mind on this issue.

We have seen judicial nominee after judicial nominee come before this Committee and pledge to put their personal views aside when it comes to affirmative action. Chief Justice John Roberts and Justice Samuel Alito said they would put their personal views aside before they were confirmed, but they have not done so.

Just in the last 2 months, Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Alito have voted to limit the scope of the Voting Rights Act. They have voted to strip whistleblower protections for prosecutors. They have voted to restrict the right to privacy so that police officers can enter a home without knocking. They have voted to expand the death penalty and to reduce the rights of the criminally accused. They have voted to roll back 30 years of environmental protection under the Clean Water Act. And in the case Hamdan v. Rumsfeld, Justice Alito embraced the view taken by John Roberts in the appellate court that the President should have unchecked power when it comes to using military commissions for enemy combatants.

There are very real and serious consequences when it comes to confirming judicial nominees.

I also think Mr. Holmes lacks good judgment because he didn’t answer several questions that I asked him during the nomination process.

For example, I asked him if he believed the Supreme Court cases of Roe v. Wade, Brown v. Board of Education, and Miranda v. Arizona are consistent with the concept of “strict construction.” Mr. Holmes refused to answer. He said: “it would be inappropriate for me to offer my personal views as to whether these decisions are consistent with a particular school of judicial decision-making.”

Well, tell that to Deborah Cook. She was a nominee to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit a few years ago, and I asked her the same question. She answered it. I appreciated her candor, and I voted to confirm her.

I also asked Mr. Holmes to explain a statement he made about his judicial philosophy. In his Senate questionnaire, he wrote: “The judiciary should not . . . issue[s] rulings that go beyond the resolution of the dispute before the court to impose wide-ranging obligations on societal groups.” I asked Mr. Holmes to provide some specific examples of what he meant by this. He refused to do so.

I do believe Jerome Holmes deserves a lifetime position on the second highest court in the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote on the confirmation of Jerome Holmes be at 11:45 a.m. today with the remaining time under the majority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the Chair. I will not take all the time. I want to go back to what we said earlier this morning. If we are going to do a litmus test on judges, if we are going to say a judge cannot have an opinion outside of his role as a judge, we will destroy this country, whether it is a conservative litmus test or a liberal litmus test.

The fact is, as to Jerome Holmes, there have been very few appointments or nominees for this position at the appellate level that compare to the qualifications of Mr. Holmes. He also has the life experiences that will make him even more valuable on the court in terms of the compassion he has experienced discrimination as an African male. He has risen to heights on his own, struggled—advanced degrees from Harvard, law degree from Georgetown, cum laude from his alma mater. There are very few people who will measure up to him.

Now, does he fit every litmus test? No, he doesn’t fit every litmus test that I might have for a judge, but that is not the basis under which we should be considering judges.

He does, in fact, have the one key characteristic that is necessary, and it has been attested to by the people who know him. It has been attested to if you just heard him in the hearings. But of all those who have come to the floor to oppose him, members of the Judiciary Committee wouldn’t even come and confront him with concern. They didn’t come to the hearing. They didn’t hear what he had to say. They had their minds made up.

The fact is, this is an excellent nomination. It is someone of whom we in our country should be proud, who recognizes the diversity of our country, and despite what the Senator from Massachusetts said, he can be entrusted with the future of this country, our Constitution, and the limited role of a judge in applying the law.

With that, Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I rise to discuss the Child Custody Protection Act which will protect the rights of our Nation's parents and their children's future. I am the father of three young children, including a daughter, I understand how difficult the challenge of raising children can be. In most schools across the country, our children cannot go on a field trip, take part in school activities, or participate in sex education without a signed permission slip. An underage child cannot even receive mild medication such as aspirin unless the school nurse has a signed release form. Some States even require parental permission to use indoor tanning beds. Nothing, however, prevents this same child from being taken across State lines in direct disobedience of State laws for the purpose of undergoing a surgical, life-altering abortion.

The bill before us, the Child Custody Protection Act, makes it a Federal offense to knowingly transport a minor across a State line for the purpose of an abortion in order to circumvent a State's parental consent or notification. It specifies that neither the minor transported nor her parent may be prosecuted for a violation of this act.

It is important to note that this legislation does not prevent, override, or in any way alter existing State parental involvement laws. It does not impose any Federal parental notice or consent requirement on any State that does not already have a parental involvement law in place. This bill merely addresses the interstate transportation of minors, sometimes by a predatory older male or his parents, in order to circumvent valid existing State laws that require parental notification or consent. This bill goes a long way in strengthening the effectiveness of State laws designed to protect parents and their young daughters from the health and safety risks associated with secret abortions.

An overwhelming number of States have recognized that a young girl's parents are the best source of guidance and knowledge when making decisions regarding serious surgical procedures such as abortion. Forty-five States have adopted some form of parental notification or consent law, and more than 75 percent of these laws were passed based on the widespread support for protecting the rights of parents across America. The people who care the most for a child should be involved in these kinds of health care decisions. If there is aftercare needed, the parents should be fully informed in order to care for their young daughter.

An overwhelming majority of Americans support parental consent laws. In fact, most polls show that consent is favored by almost 90 percent of the American people. These numbers do not lie. By the way, these are people who call themselves pro-choice and pro-life. Well over a majority of even pro-choice people support parental notification or parental consent laws. The American people agree that parents deserve the right to be involved in their minor children's decisions. In many cases, only a girl's parents know her medical and psychological history, including allergies to medications and anesthesia.

The harsh reality is our current law allows for parents to be left uninformed about their daughter's abortion which can be devastating to the physical and mental health of their child. Take the case of Marcia Carroll from Pennsylvania. On Christmas Eve 2004, her daughter informed her she was pregnant. After listening to her daughter's story, Ms. Carroll assured her that they would handle this as a family and would support any decisions she decided to make. They scheduled appointments with both doctors and counselor and the daughter decided to have the baby and to raise it, a decision which the family fully supported.

Following her decision, despite their knowledge of her family's love and support, her boyfriend's family began to harass her and threatened that they could not see her boyfriend unless she had an abortion. Ms. Carroll was so concerned about their behavior, she called the police and even went so far as to contact a nearby abortion clinic to ensure that parental consent would be required before an abortion would be allowed. Pennsylvania's law requires that anyone under the age of 18 have consent of a parent before an abortion can be performed. Unfortunately, other States nearby do not have the same protections.

Shortly after, Ms. Carroll sent her daughter off to school, thinking she would be safe. Imagine her shock and horror at the same position. Instead, her boyfriend and his family met her at the bus stop, bought them a train ticket, and sent the children to New Jersey, where other family members picked them up and took them to an abortion clinic. Despite her tears and desires to keep the baby, her boyfriend's family coerced her by telling her they would leave her in New Jersey with no way to get home. They planned, paid for, and threatened her into an abortion. After the abortion, they dropped her off blocks from her house with no regard to her mental or physical well-being. Ms. Carroll called the local police department only to be told there was nothing they could do. This poor young girl, whose family was committed to loving her and respecting her decision, had her life forever altered by adults who never considered her wishes or the consequences such a decision would have on her life.

Parental notification serves another vital purpose: ensuring increased protection against sexual exploitation of minors by adult men. All too often, our young girls are the victims of predatory practices of men who are older, more experienced, and in a unique position to influence the minor’s decisions. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, almost two-thirds of adolescent minor and non-partnered males older than 20 years of age. Rather than face a statutory rape charge, these men or their families use the vulnerability of the young girl against her, exerting pressure on the girl to agree to an abortion without talking to her parents. We all know how easy it is to influence teenagers, boys or girls. In fact, in a survey of 1,500 unmarried minors having abortions without their parent’s knowledge, 89 percent reported that a boy friend was involved in the decision, and the number goes even higher the younger the age of the minor. Allowing secret abortions does nothing to expose these men and their heinous conduct.

Such is the case with Crystal, the 12-year-old victim of a Pennsylvania woman, who was intoxicated and raped by a local teenager 6 years her senior. Crystal’s mother did not even know she was pregnant until Crystal went missing from school and it was discovered that Crystal had been raped. The legal system, the loving and responsible parent, was not even given the option to care for her daughter. Rather, the decision was made for her by an unknown adult.

There is overwhelming agreement that parents and parental notification laws and consent laws are important tools that enable parents to help protect their daughters from this kind of abuse. In 1998, Dr. Bruce Lucero, an abortionist who performed some 45,000 abortions, testified in support of the Child Custody Protection Act to the New York Times. In the article, Dr. Lucero pointed out that “dangerous complications are more likely to result when parents are not involved in these out-of-state abortions.” He goes on to say that parental involvement is the best guarantee that a minor will make the best and most safe decision. This is an abortionist doctor talking.

In the unfortunate instance of abuse or where there is rape or incest involved within a family, minors may be afraid to go to one of the parents—and rightfully so. In response, judicial by-pass laws have been written across the country to protect the minor.

This legislation is a commonsense solution to defeat the legal loophole that currently results from parents being denied the right to know about the health decisions of their minor daughters.

The Child Custody Protection Act in no way imposes a parental involvement law on a State that does not already have a functioning law in place. It does not invalidate any State law, nor does this act contradict Supreme Court precedent dealing with minors and abortion.

In fact, the Supreme Court made it clear in Planned Parenthood v. Casey that it is the State’s right to declare that abortion should not be performed on a minor unless a parent is consulted.

Mr. President, is it time for the adjournment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, it is.

Mrs. BOXER. Since my colleague has spoken for 15 or 15 minutes——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eleven and a half minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. I would like to have 5 minutes to respond. I thought we were going to start the debate after the luncheons. Upon his conclusion, perhaps in the next minute or so, may I have a few minutes to open?

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 more seconds and 5 minutes for my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. In fact, the Supreme Court made it clear in Planned Parenthood v. Casey that it is the State’s right to declare that an abortion should not be performed on a minor unless a parent is consulted.

This is not an argument on the merits of abortion. Rather, this is a debate about preserving the fundamental rights of parents to have knowledge about health decisions of their minor daughters.

Let me conclude with this. This is one of the biggest moral issues of the day, the right to have an abortion or not. It splits America. The emotions are high. There are good people on both sides of the debate. We need to look for the common good, where we can come together and at least have some reasonable restrictions on abortion. I believe this bill is one of those reasonable restrictions on abortion that I think all of us should come together on.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Nevada. I rise to speak as a mother and a grandmother—a mother of a daughter and a son, a grandmother of a grandson, and a Senator who has been here now for three terms, and I served over in the House for many years—to say that my friend from Nevada is right that this is not a parental consent bill at all.

Some States have parental consent laws, some don’t. In my particular State, it has been voted down because my family feel that if you ask them do they want their kids to come to their parents, absolutely. But if you ask them should you force them to do so, even in circumstances where there could be trouble that comes from that, they say no.

I respect those States that have parental consent laws, and perhaps we will have a law that is drafted in California that the voters will approve. So far, we have not seen that.

It is true it is not a partisan issue. When we voted down those laws, we did it regardless of political party. But the danger is that if we create the way certain bills are drafted, I want to speak to that because I believe this bill is well-intentioned.

This bill emanates from a desire that our children come to us when we have family matters, when our children are in trouble, that they not be fearful, that they not be afraid that they disapprove of us, that they be open with us and loving toward us, and we toward them. This is what we want to have happen.

The question is: Can Big Brother Federal Government force this on our families? That is where we will differ.

I have to tell you, as I look at this bill coming before us now, I have to ask the question as my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who run this place, who run the House, who run the White House, putting so much effort into this bill, having killed stem cell research, which all of our families are desperate to have—talk about 80 percent of America, it is 90 percent who want to find cures to Alzheimer’s and all the rest. Oh, no, instead of getting another chance to pass that bill and convince the President, who is now backing off a little bit in rhetoric, to support a research bill, or to prevent teen pregnancies, which is so important, we don’t have that. We have this bill that impacts very few people. Instead of improving the health of women and girls, we are spending precious time on a bill that, in essence, protects incest predators. This bill, as it is written, protects fathers who commit incest. Can you imagine? It allows them to drive their daughter across State lines. Unbelievable. We are going to drive this problem with an amendment. I hope my colleagues will support that, and it will improve this bill.

Right now, imagine, a father retains parental rights if he has committed rape on his daughter. This is supposed to be a warm and fuzzy bill? I don’t think so. It also throws grandmothers in jail.

Mr. ENSIGN. Will the Senator yield?

Mrs. BOXER. When I am finished. This bill, as it is, will throw a grandmother in jail. Say the father committed incest on the daughter and she is hysterical. The first place she goes is not some judge but to her grandma, who she adores and who gives her unconditional love, or to her priest or rabbi, and says please help me out of this. That incestuous father, as the bill is written, can sue that caring adult who takes her over the line.

My friend is going to offer an amendment that goes part of the way in the interest of the child. But I want to say the father cannot sue. I am so happy because I will join him in that. I hope we have a 100-to-0 vote. But I am shocked that we cannot reach agreement on that. Talk about finding common ground. Even with the Ensign amendment that says a father cannot sue, he can still take the daughter across State lines. And the Federal Government can still sue the grandmother or the clergy.

The amendment I am offering gets to the heart of the issue this bill purportedly means to address; that is, reducing the number of abortions. The best way to reduce the number of abortions is to prevent teen pregnancies in the first place. It is that simple. The amendment I am offering, along with Senators MENENDEZ, CLINTON, SCHUMER, KENNEDY, KERRY, and FEINSTEIN, is aimed at dramatically reducing teen pregnancy rates in the United States. This amendment will assist efforts by nonprofit organizations, schools, and public health agencies to reduce teen pregnancy through awareness, education, and abstinence programs.

The root problem we are talking about today is not abortion, it is teen pregnancy. If we do nothing about teen pregnancy, yet pass this punitive bill, then it proves that this exercise is only a political charade and not a serious effort to combat teen pregnancy.

The U.S. teen pregnancy rate is the highest by far among developed countries, and here is some of the evidence we use to prove this. In Germany, the teen pregnancy rate is 16 per 1,000. The U.S. rate is 84 per 1,000. I ask my colleagues to look at this chart which shows several countries teen pregnancy rates compared with the U.S. This is teen pregnancy rate for ages 15 to 19, among developed countries per 1,000 persons. In Sweden, it is 25 young women per 1,000: in France, it is 20 young women per 1,000; in Canada, 46; in Great Britain, 47; and here we are. Are we the winners in this contest? I hardly think so. We have 84 unintended teenage pregnancies per 1,000 persons.

I mentioned before that Germany has a teen pregnancy rate of 16 per 1,000, and again, I mention the rate in the United States is 84 per 1,000. So it tells us that there is something terribly wrong with the approaches here. I look further at Belgium, which has a teen pregnancy rate of 14 per 1,000; the Netherlands, 12 per 1,000; and ours is 84 per 1,000. We cannot continue to ignore facts such as these. We can pass the abortion restrictions we can think of, but unless there are fewer teen pregnancies, the results will be tragic for thousands of young women.

In many cases, teen pregnancies result in abortion, but that is not the extent of the problem. We know that children of teenage mothers typically have lower birth weight deliveries, are more likely to perform poorly in school, and are at greater risk of abuse and neglect than other children. The sons of teen mothers are 13 percent more likely to be arrested, 21 percent more likely to end up in prison, while teen daughters are 22 percent more likely to become teen mothers themselves.

Each year in the United States, approximately 860,000 young women become pregnant before they reach the age of 20. Eighty percent of these pregnancies—80 percent of 860,000—that is over 600,000 young women are unintended, and 81 percent of these young women are under the age of 19. So what are we doing differently in the United States that is separating us from the rest of the developed world? The answer is simple: the other countries promote full, comprehensive sex education programs, and in the United States—would you believe it—we don’t allow funding for comprehensive sex education. I repeat that because some people may think they misheard me. The Federal Government will not fund comprehensive sex education programs. The positions of parents polled say that in addition to abstinence, sex education should cover contraception and other forms of birth control. But the Federal Government currently will not fund any programs that even mention contraception and restricts all of its funding to abstinence-only programs.

I want to be clear, I am not against abstinence-only programs. Our amendment will also fund abstinence programs. I think they can be effective at times. But the Federal Government’s current policy of restricting funding to abstinence-only programs is producing the wrong result. Just look at how poorly our teen pregnancy rates compare with other nations.

We need to dedicate our scarce Federal resources toward medically accurate, age-appropriate education that includes information about contraception as well as abstinence. In many cases, particular types of contraception can help avoid sexually transmitted diseases. Isn’t that a good objective as well? We have to realistic about the hope that each and every teenager is going to abstain from sexual sex. Saying “Don’t do it” may work at times but not all the time.

Look at another problem—youth smoking, for instance. Kids are bombarded with warnings not to smoke. The messages have been reducing teen smoking rates dramatically, but 1,500 kids a day still start smoking. So it needs intensity of education, comprehensive education.

We remember First Lady Nancy Reagan’s “Just Say No to Drugs” campaign. It worked for some kids but obviously not for others. For those teenagers who already are sexually active or who do become sexually active, we fail them if we don’t teach them about contraception. If we are serious about reducing the number of unintended pregnancies, almost half of which tragically end in abortion—we have to implement programs that work so that our teenagers have the knowledge they need to bring about a positive future for themselves with the opportunity to pursue their dreams. We create a huge number of abortions as a result of the ignorance of what the facts are, about sex and young people.

This year, the Federal Government will direct $176 million of taxpayers’ money to abstinence-only programs. Some of these programs can be effective but often don’t get the job done because many teenagers need to understand something about sex and other aspects of a comprehensive sex education program. Research has shown that the most effective programs are the ones that encourage teenagers to delay sexual activity but also provide information on how they can protect themselves. What is more, research shows that teenagers who receive sex education which includes discussion of contraception are more likely to delay sexual activity than those who receive abstinence-only messages. There was an interesting article in this Saturday’s Wall Street Journal about a sex education program in Bamberg County, SC. The article said:
More than a quarter of the families—

In this county—
live below the poverty line. Nearly half have only one parent living at home . . .

If ever there was a place to expect a wave of teen mothers, it would be . . . along the flat farmlands of South Carolina’s Allendale and Bamberg Counties. Yet while teen pregnancies are numerous on the Allendale side—

That is the other side of the county line—adolescent girls on the Bamberg side have one of the lowest pregnancy rates in the State. The county’s rate has fallen faster than the rate in most of the U.S.

It is a startling revelation because, again, this is a county where so many people are below the poverty line, where typically teenage pregnancies occur, and in the neighboring county, which is better off, they have a far greater number than does Bamberg County.

Why does that happen? This is an area which has had historically high teen pregnancy rates, but they decided to take bold action to improve their teen pregnancy prevention efforts. Bamberg County initiated a comprehensive sex education program in 1992. For this reason, the county’s teen pregnancy rate has fallen by nearly two-thirds. If our objective here is to reduce abortions, then this is one exceptionally effective way to do it.

Adjacent to Bamberg County, as I said, is Allendale County which has similar demographics, but Allendale County has not taken a comprehensive approach. Allendale restricts its programs to abstinence only. What is the result? Allendale County’s teen pregnancy rate is more than twice as high as Bamberg’s. In 2004, there were 24 pregnancies per 1,000 girls between the ages of 10 and 19 in Bamberg County. In Allendale County, there were 54 pregnancies per 1,000—more than twice the rate.

Abortion is a divisive issue, a tough issue, but we should all be able to agree that the best way or an effective way to reduce the number of abortions is to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies, especially among unwed teenage girls. And the proven way to reduce the number of teen pregnancies is to provide youth with comprehensive sex education.

When it comes to our children, we should do everything within our power to protect them. We can and we must help America’s young people to do better, to make better choices and have brighter futures.

So what we come down today is that this argument is not exclusively about abortion. I think that finding the case, then we would be giving comprehensive sex education wherever we have a young audience across the country and not saying as a Government: OK, we will give you the money, but you can’t talk about an effective way to stop a pregnancy. It is telling you about contraception, about birth control, about thinking about how you plan your family.

We are looking at raw politics here, Mr. President. What we are looking at is a way to compel young people to go through with unwanted pregnancies, and I think the way to stop that is to prevent these pregnancies in the first place.

The way to prevent them is through knowledge.

I urge my colleagues to think this thing through thoroughly so we can effectually control the number of abortions that are done every year in this society and among the youth. One of the punishments we render by jailing people who assist in helping young women get abortions, about penalizing families, about forcing young women who might have been victims of incest to carry on and find subversive, secret ways to end their pregnancies. That is not the way to do it. The way to do it is to prevent young people with knowledge about how they do not get themselves in a position where they want to consider an abortion.

I hope my colleagues will think this problem through thoroughly as we debate this issue and recognize that the alternative is strictly a punitive one and should not be dictated. I hope they will support abstinence education.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, the Democratic leader and the Republican leader had an unanimous consent agreement on this bill, and during that time—the way the Senate operates—amendments were exchanged and language was handed to each side. We were prepared to debate amendments based on text we were given, and in a highly unusual move, the Senator from New Jersey has brought forward language that is different than what was provided to us in the unanimous consent agreement. At this time, having gone to the amendment to see what the consequences of those differences are, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, that time will be taken off my colleague’s time.

Mr. ENSIGN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I have a parliamentary inquiry. I ask that the quorum be suspended so I can make a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is in a quorum of the Senate.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent and I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ENSIGN. I object.

The PRESIDENT OFFICER. The quorum is heard.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada for getting through the process. It is not unusual for Senators to be permitted to make their amendments. However, at this point I yield up to 15 minutes to my colleague from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished senior Senator from New Jersey for yielding time and for his leadership on this issue.

I rise in opposition to the Child Custody Protection Act in support of a real solution to the problem of teen pregnancy. I don’t support the legislation because it is nothing more than a misguided election-year ploy based on a false premise.

Instead of punishment, we should be focused on prevention. Instead of putting people in jail, we should be preventing teens from getting pregnant in the first place. That is why I am joining with my fellow Senator from New Jersey in offering a comprehensive approach to prevent teen pregnancy. Our amendment will help prepare young people with the knowledge and skills to make responsible decisions and offer them an opportunity to succeed.

In a Senate filled with many different views on the right path for our country, it is refreshing to recognize we can all agree that we need to reduce the number of teenage abortions. But there is still disagreement about how to achieve that goal.

Many in this Senate believe the answer is to criminalize caring adults and threaten innocent youth. I cannot disagree more. The solution to this problem does not lie in the courtroom but rather in our classrooms and after-school programs.

Don’t take my word for it. Look at this past weekend’s Wall Street Journal—not a bastion of liberalism. In an article “Winning the Battle on Teen Pregnancy” the Wall Street Journal examines a comprehensive sex education program in rural South Carolina and compares two similar neighboring counties. One has a very intensive, comprehensive sex education program, the other does not.

The findings show that between 1982 when the Teen Life Center Program began and 2004, the county’s estimated pregnancy rate among girls age 15 to 19 fell by nearly two-thirds, making its teen pregnancy rate among the lowest in the State. By contrast, the neighboring counties, which have never had such a program, had one of the highest teen pregnancy rates in the State, about 2½ times their neighbor’s rate.

The article cites Douglas Kirby, a sex education expert:

The Teen Life Center has played a major role over the years in reducing teen pregnancy in the community it serves.
Also, I do think it’s one of the most promising approaches.

He notes the program devotes an unusual amount of time in the regular school curriculum to comprehensive sex education. As this case study shows, we clearly need to be putting more resources into preventing teen pregnancy, not punishing pregnant teens.

Rather than invest in proven programs such as the Teen Life Centres, the Bush administration continues to insist on a narrow-minded, misguided approach of abstinence-only education. As this chart demonstrates, abstinence only simply does not cut it. The Bush administration invested almost $500 million for abstinence-only education between 2001 and 2005. Not only did we not see a reduction in the number of teens having sex, we actually saw a slight increase. What a rate of return.

With a rate of return like that, any reasonable investor would have already fired their investment adviser long ago. The American taxpayers deserve a better rate of return on their investment, particularly one that is so critical on this subject.

The amendment Senator Lautenberg and I are offering takes a comprehensive approach to preventing teen pregnancy by providing medically and scientifically accurate sex education programs and funding important after-school programs such as 21st Century Community Learning Centers, Trio, and GEAR UP, and the Carol White Physical Education Program—that build life skills, put teens on a path to college, and ultimately help open the door of opportunity for young people. And our amendment also includes a demonstration program to encourage new approaches to reducing teen pregnancy.

It is time to do something more than criminalizing young mothers, trusted confidants, and clergy. It is time we do something to actually reduce the number of teen abortions. But, once again, the administration and this Congress have demonstrated their misplaced priorities by bringing this bill to the floor instead of meaningful legislation to prevent teen pregnancy.

Instead of debating comprehensive sex education, which is supported overwhelmingly by 94 percent of parents in our country, the Bush administration has continued to pursue its unproven abstinence-only programs, which have the support of only about 15 percent of parents. And instead of working in a bipartisan manner to prevent teen pregnancy, the Senate leadership is continuing to pursue their misguided proposal to limit the options for young women.

When the New Jersey Supreme Court struck down a law that would have required parental notification, they considered that not all such laws have had on other States. Their conclusion was the same as mine, and I quote:

[A] law mandating parental notification prior to an abortion can neither mend nor create lines of communication between parent and child.

For example, in Texas, a pregnant 16-year-old explained why she could not tell her mother she was pregnant. She said:

My oldest sister got pregnant when she was 17. My mother pushed her against the wall, slapped her across the face and then grabbed her by the hair and dragged her through the living room, out the front door and threw her off the porch. We don’t know where she is now.

Furthermore, the underlying bill does nothing to protect a young woman whose father rapes her. Despite such a despicable violation, he would still be allowed to make parental decisions on her behalf. Instead of punishing him, we would punish grandmothers or clergy who actually have to try to protect her from such an abusive relationship.

Now, these are horrible situations, but they are real life situations, and by forcing a minor to ask an abusive, violent parent for permission, we are only adding to the abuse.

Now, as a father of a beautiful and bright daughter and fabulous son, I would hope that my children would feel comfortable talking to me about their serious life decisions. And because I am blessed to have a great, open relationship with my children, I believe they would be comfortable bringing these issues to me. Unfortunately, our Government cannot legislate positive family relationships in every home, and not all families function like yours or mine. Sadly, not every parent can be their daughter’s best advocate.

Further, the New York Times analyzed six States that recently passed parental consent laws and discovered that these laws have done little to reduce the number of teen pregnancies or the number of abortions.

As a matter of fact, look at this chart. You can see that the United States has the highest rate of teen pregnancy among all westernized developed countries. Despite what you hear from the Bush administration and some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, abstinence-only programs and restrictions on a woman’s right to choose are not the way to solve this problem. Clearly, we need a different direction.

Our amendment offers a real, proven solution to not just a hallowed, base-building effort. We need to make sure we are standing up first and foremost for the health and safety of our children. The time has come to reduce the number of teen pregnancies, and thus teen abortions, in this country, and our commonsense amendment will do just that.

We need to invest in our school, community, and faith-based organizations so they can teach scientifically and medically accurate family life education. Unfortunately, this administration keeps young people in the dark about medically and scientifically accurate sex information.

Instead of funding important after-school programs that will build life skills and put teens on the road to college, this administration is shutting the door of opportunity on young people.

Instead of breaking the cycle of daughters of teen moms becoming teen moms themselves, this administration has made it harder for young mothers to go back to school and raise their children.

Instead of ending the trend of sons of teen moms ending up in prison, this administration has increased the number of unsupervised hours and decreased the number of positive activities and role models in a teen’s day.

Let’s join together to recommit ourselves to continuing to decrease the incidence of teen pregnancy and recommit ourselves to offering family life education and positive after-school programs that will foster responsible young adults and responsible decisions.

The time is now to invest in our teens. As all parents know, we place overwhelming pressure on ourselves to make sure we raise our children well. The decisions we make—and they make—will affect them for the rest of their lives. We cannot afford to let the doors close on them. Instead, we must continue to open that door of opportunity.

Let’s join my colleagues in supporting this important amendment. We have an obligation to stand up and do the right thing. It is time to stop talking about putting people in jail, should be doing all it can to provide services to infants. But the President’s budget proposes only $693 million for a program that was funded at $730 million just 3 years ago.

If the administration wanted to reduce abortions, it would promise women that their infants will not go hungry. But President Bush has proposed cuts to the WIC Program that would reduce services across the program and cut out of the program entirely as many as 550,000 mothers and children.

Abortions would be rarer if young mothers could depend upon childcare. This Congress has underfunded childcare by $10.9 billion. The result is that 600,000 fewer children will have their childcare subsidized.

In short, there are many constructive steps that Congress could take today to reduce teenage pregnancy and promote a true culture of life. Instead, the Republican leadership has decided to play political games with young women. The bill we are debating today does nothing to stand by young women in their time of need. It does nothing to prevent unwanted pregnancies. It does nothing to reduce abortions by letting the parents of the infant will be fed, have good health care, and be cared for. It does not even prevent minors from crossing State lines to obtain an abortion. Instead, it threatens prison time to anyone who helps them to do so. The person providing assistance is a compassionate grandparent or aunt or uncle or even a member of the clergy.

Congress ought to have higher priorities than turning grandparents into criminals. I believe parental involvement is extremely important to teenagers’ lives, and never more than when a minor must make an extraordinarily difficult decision. But the Federal Criminal Code is not the right tool to improve communication and trust between parents and their daughters.

Constructive steps that would actually work to make abortion rare are contained in the Menendez-Lautenberg amendment on teenage pregnancy prevention. It calls for comprehensive sex education, not mislabeling abstinence-only programs. It increases the authorization for afterschool programs that encourage academic achievement, such as Trio, GEAR UP, and 21st Century Community Learning Centers that help keep teens out of trouble. It increases funding for the Carol White Program, which encourages young women to become involved in sports, since we know that young women who participate in sports are far less likely to become pregnant.

Why aren’t we spending our time helping young women succeed instead of denying them help in their time of need? The answer is that real solutions would unite us at a time when Republicans want to divide us.

I urge all of those who want to make abortion rare to rethink our shopworn slogans and pat answers. The way to foster a culture of life is not through a culture of war.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). Who yields time?

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. CUBIN. Mr. President, I rise today to warn you that we will all agree that teenage pregnancy is a problem in the United States. And there are various views on the best way to deal with teenage pregnancy and how to prevent it and lower the rate of teenage pregnancies.

The Lautenberg-Menendez amendment is an attempt to do that. I think it is a misguided attempt. Let me point out some of the problems that I think are present in this amendment. Let’s take a little bit about what the amendment does.

First, sex education decisions have long been left to parents and local communities. When communities offer sex education programs in public schools, parents are typically heavily involved in deciding the scope of that education. Parental and local control of this issue is appropriate because the issues involved are uniquely related to parents’ cultural, moral values, and attitudes, as well as those of the community. The Menendez-Lautenberg amendment would send $100 million into localities in an effort to override the parents’ and local community’s decisions about how to raise their children. It is a prescriptive amendment about how these programs should be set up.

These grants would require recipients to conduct sex education programs and would prohibit the recipients from providing abstinence-only education. All recipients of grant moneys would be required to teach children about all contraceptives, including condoms, the pill, and plan B emergency contraceptives. The amendment also reauthorizes and increases appropriations for a variety of other programs. I will talk about that in a moment.

Under this amendment, none of the authorized moneys were available for programs focusing on abstinence only or for programs that refuse to discuss controversial contraceptives such as plan B, which many Americans view as an abortion pill.

There is a program out there called Best Friends. Under this program, teenagers are 6½ times less likely to have sex than their counterparts, about two times less likely to drink alcohol than their peers, eight times less likely to use drugs than two times less likely to smoke. Under this amendment, Best Friends would not qualify for grant monies available through this amendment.

While the authors of this amendment have suffered it in good faith it is misguided.

Dr. COBURN and I got to know each other very well, when we served in the House together. He has been out there on the front lines, actually deliveringbatim, he talks to a lot of young girls and boys about their involvement or lack of involvement in sexual activities when they are young.
I yield Senator Coburn 10 minutes to speak on the bill and this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, this is a philosophical debate. There are two questions we need to ask ourselves. How many people think it is in the best interests of our young people to be sexually active outside of marriage? Is there anything positive that ever comes from that? Is there positive self-esteem? Is there disease? Are there consequences to the fact that when our young people make a decision to become sexually active, almost always there is a negative downside?

Everybody in this body desires the best for our children. We desire the best for another's children. We desire the best for every child. I have delivered over 4,000 babies. Most of those were Medicaid or teenage moms. I have been doing that for 23 years. I know the attitudes. I know what is going on. I can assure you that.

I have also seen every complication that can come about when we take the parents out of the loop, when we rationalize, well, if the parents aren't going to do it, the government is going to do it for them. What do we do with the kids? We make division between children and parents. We do something out in the dark.

I will never forget, I was in Stigler, OK, at a soccer game. A girl comes in there crying, with a bag in his hand. This was when I was a Congresswoman. He said: Congressman, how did this happen? My 13-year-old last night came home from the health department. She went with a friend. She came home from the health department with contraceptives and condoms, oral contraceptives and condoms. He said: How is it that I can pay my taxes and I am undermined by the local health department in what my children are taught? Does that mean somebody who seeks out the right guidance should be denied it? No. This isn't a debate about not doing what we are already doing. We are already doing it. The question is, should we do it? Should we disallow the best medical advice that is out there, which is to abstain? The consequences of that would be disastrous.

The moral rationalization is if you make a mistake, there are no consequences. I ask, what are the consequences. Condoms on teenagers work about 50 percent of the time, if you add up all the studies. The STD rate for teenagers, even when used perfectly, for human papilloma virus is still 38 percent, the No. 1 cause of cervical cancer. We can rationalize our moral principle away or we can say: Here is where we should go. We are not talking about changing anything.

The President was widely attacked that if we don't have money for all this, we don't have money to increase anything in this country. We are fighting a war. We have had Katrina. We are running a $350 billion deficit. We don't have money. If we are going to do this, what program are we going to cut? Are we going to offer another $600 million by the way, the title X program hasn't been authorized in 16 years and we are still appropriating moneys.

There is a difference in philosophy. It doesn't mean I am right or wrong. It doesn't mean those who oppose me are wrong or right. But what I have seen from experience is when we honor virtue, when we mentor integrity, when we encourage the right choices, what we get is right choices, honor, and integrity. When we rationalize the consequences of violating principles that are for a healthy productive life, we get a consumption of errors.

I have so many stories I would love for this body and the American people to know about the people I have cared for, the consequences of when we rationalize a moral principle of being pure until you are in a married relationship. Is that prudish? Does it happen? It happens a lot more than we give credit for.

The question we ought to ask ourselves is, would it happen more if we didn't do the other position, if we didn't rationalize the position?

I am opposed to the amendment on three grounds. One, we are already spending a ton of money on comprehensive sex education. I am not opposed to that. I teach condoms. I teach barrier methods. I also teach the consequences and the failure rates. I teach the consequences of oral contraceptives. We have had about 10 kids a year die in this country because they are given birth control pills that the parent didn't even know about and they have a thromboembolic event because there is a family history that was never related. So it is OK to sacrifice those 10 young girls because we didn't want their parents, who could have made a decision, to know. We could have done that, but we are not going to do that. We are going to rationalize the behavior of something that is not as good for our children, that is not the best medical advice, and we are going to sacrifice those lives. I am going to oppose it because it is already doing it.

No. 2, we already have a markedly distorted ratio against the best medical advice on which we all agree, the best thing our kids could do is not be sexually active outside of a monogamous, long-term relationship. We all agree to that. There is not anybody who disagrees with that.

And finally, why is it here? Why is it on this bill? It is because we don't want this bill. Some of us don't want this bill. I will relate to you a story about a gal. I will call her Julie because I can't mention her name. Julie is dead. Julie was 16 years of age. Her parents didn't know she had a termination to her pregnancy. When I went to see her in the ER at 2 o'clock in the morning, she had a fever and a little bit of bleeding. She had a botched abortion with an infection developed, what is called disseminated intravascular coagulation. And basically 3 days later, despite all the heroic events, she died. Why did she die? She died because we separated the choices that she made from her parents without their involvement. Would she have died if somebody had cared to know what her immediate post-op followup condition was? No. Had she had intervention earlier, would she have died? No. Her parents will never get over the fact that they weren't there. They blame themselves. I oppose this amendment and hope other Members will do so as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I yield 8 minutes to my colleague from New York State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.
Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I have great deal of respect for the experience of my colleague from Oklahoma. I believe he has served his patients in a conscientious, caring manner for all those 20-plus years he has been practicing medicine. I would like to ask a question.

I have always been interested in how you deal with one of the most difficult decisions that any person has to make. I don’t believe that these young women should make those decisions alone. Certainly, we are complicating the lives of everyone instead of doing our duty as parents, as family members, and as leaders, which is to inculcate values and to recognize that reality is messy. I have championed kinship care, and I know how many grandparents are raising children, and I know from my own personal experience how many older relatives have put aside all of their personal life choices to protect their young nieces and nephews in any situation.

I have deep concern about the situation that occurred when a young man, who I believe is now 17 years old, who was raised by his grandmother, impregnated both of his daughters. The older daughter has had her baby. And my heart just broke. Who was that child supposed to talk to? Where was that child supposed to go? The sister was trying to help her younger sister. If she had a driver’s license, she might have driven her to where she could have gotten medical care.

A couple years later, I was practicing law in Little Rock, and Arkansas had a parental consent law. No parental consent was obtained. People were called by judges whenever this occurred and were asked to come and represent the young girl who was appearing before the court. I got called one day, as I was on the list as a practicing lawyer. I went and met with the 14-year-old girl. She had been raped by her mother’s boyfriend and was pregnant. Her mother could have cared less. Maybe her mother should have cared. Lord knows, I wish she had cared. But she didn’t want to disrupt the relationship with the boyfriend. So the girl needed to come to court and get a judge to give her permission because there was no parent. There may have been a biological parent, but there wasn’t a parent in any sense of the word other than biology.

By that time, I had my own daughter and I thought, what a tragedy. You know, life isn’t always the way we wish it would be. Sometimes tragedies happen and people are not just negligent but abusive. Sometimes young girls are taken advantage of by members of their family, people in whom they should be able to trust. So I just have to say that when we talk about costs and we talk about what young girls bring experience to the floor of the Senate. We can talk about the many instances where things worked out, parents did do the right thing; they gave their children the right values, gave them the appropriate education to know how to take care of themselves, to respect themselves. But I have lived long enough to know that is not everybody. I wish it were. But in the meantime, we are going to sacrifice a lot of girls’ lives. I think that is unfortunate, to say the least.

We now know, because we have research to prove it, what works. We know that in South Carolina—for example, in a Wall Street Journal article recently was a story about small, impoverished towns that had a high rate of teenage pregnancy, and they decided they wanted to do something and they got help. They had one-on-one coaching sessions for parents who would come and participate. They taught abstinence, but they also taught about contraception and they made it clear what they wanted their children to do, how they expected them to behave to try to prevent irresponsible sexual activity and pregnancy. They tried to make those young women understand the young men accept responsibility for their actions. I know, too, in my State, we have a lot of grandparents and aunts who are raising children. The Child Custody Protection Act would put any family member—a sister, aunt, or grandmother—in jail for helping a teenager deal with one of the most difficult decisions that any person has to make. I don’t believe that these young women should make those decisions alone.

Certainly, we are complicating the lives of everyone instead of doing our duty as parents, as family members, and as leaders, which is to inculcate values and to recognize that reality is messy. I have championed kinship care, and I know how many grandparents are raising children, and I know from my own personal experience how many older relatives have put aside all of their personal life choices to protect their young nieces and nephews in any situation. I have deep concern about the situation that occurred when a young man, who I believe is now 17 years old, who was raised by his grandmother, impregnated both of his daughters. The older daughter has had her baby. And my heart just broke. Who was that child supposed to talk to? Where was that child supposed to go? The sister was trying to help her
As policymakers, we need to recognize what works and what doesn’t work, and to be fair, the jury is still out on the effectiveness of abstinence-only programs. I don’t think this debate should be about ideology. It should be about facts and evidence. We have to deal with the choices young people make, not just the choices we wish they would make. We should use all the resources at our disposal to ensure that teens are getting the information they need to make the right decision and that we remain a part of the solution by supporting programs and policies that deal with all the layers of this issue, not just one size fits all approach.

Sadly, instead of putting resources into this important fight to prevent teen pregnancy, we are adding more penalties for those who try to help teens during their time of crisis. The Child Custody Protection Act would put any family member—a sister, aunt, grandmother—in jail for helping a young woman already involve one or both parents when faced with an unintended pregnancy, without being required to do so by law. But, tragically, not every family is perfect. There are some instances in which a young woman simply cannot involve her parents, including rape, violence or incest; and for some in this body to pretend that those instances should not be considered in this debate is unconscionable. The Child Custody Protection Act glosses over these complicated situations, making criminals out of grandparents, clergy and other adults who try to act in good faith.

Instead of criminalizing other caring adults in a teenager’s life, we should do more to educate parents about the critical role they can play in encouraging their children to abstain from sexual activity. Teenagers who have strong emotional attachments to their parents are much less likely to become sexually active at an early age. I am disappointed that this bill does not provide any exemptions for adult relatives or clergy who seek to provide guidance and support to young women seeking abortion.

In the Senate, I have championed the Kinship Care Act which supports the many families who are raising children who would otherwise be in the foster care system.

The reality is, not every child is fortunate enough to be raised by their biological parents. Nationwide, more than six million children—1 in 12 children—are living in households headed by grandparents. In New York City alone, there are over 245,000 adolescents already living in grandparent households. It’s important to note that for many families, but these families in particular, the legal guardian who has physical custody and who provides a young woman with support and guidance are not one in the same.

This bill fails to acknowledge the importance of these and other members such as grandmothers and aunts, who often raise their relatives or play a significant role in their lives.

In doing so, this bill creates a strong incentive for young women to seek risky alternatives she wouldn’t have considered if permitted to seek counsel from her family and community. Major medical and public-health organizations, including the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Public Health Association oppose government parental-involvement laws because of the risk to women’s health.

While we all hope that young women will involve their parents in these decisions, mandating parental consent has the serious potential to do more harm than good. In fact, during congressional testimony, Dr. Warren Seigel, an expert in adolescent medicine, stated that legislation mandating parental involvement “represents bad medicine and places politics before the health of our youth.”

The Child Custody Protection Act is a reflection of the misdirected priorities. It comes close to truly doing something about unintended pregnancy. Rather than criminalizing family members and clergy who are trying to provide guidance to these young women in crisis, we should be working to reduce the rate of teen pregnancy in this country. There are far better ways to prevent pregnancy than putting people in jail. We could start by supporting family planning services and making sure we’re providing medically accurate information in sex education classes that includes contraception.

That is why my good friend Harry Reid and I have long championed the Prevention First Act here in the Senate. This legislation and other important measures, ensures that Government-funded sex education programs provide medically accurate information about contraception.

And that is also why I rise today to encourage all of my colleagues to support the Lautenberg-Menendez amendment because we need policies that support and educate our young women about the importance of prevention now more than ever.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, just a quick response to our colleague and friend from Oklahoma. The fact is, there are certainly more than this well-trained physician offered on the floor of the Senate. Parents all across the country—some 90 percent of the parents of high school students—insist that they would prefer to have comprehensive sex education available for their children.

The fact that this country of ours doesn’t permit anything except abstinence only until marriage to be taught is outrageous. Where is the fairness? What is the equity?

In New Jersey, we have a different view about people’s choice than they do in Oklahoma. That doesn’t mean that Oklahoma is totally wrong or that New Jersey is totally right. But the fact is, it is not sinful conduct and we ought to encourage people to give the young women a full understanding about sex education so they know there are alternatives to exposing themselves to an unwanted pregnancy.

It is outrageous that we want to cut off the minds and opportunities for people to make a choice about what they do with their health and with their families.
With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I would like to make a few very brief remarks in relation to this particular amendment. The type of amendment that is of particular concern. The proponents say that they want a “teen-driven” approach to sex education. This is one of the things they want to encourage. I don’t know about what kind of teenagers the rest of my colleagues were when they were teenagers, but when I was a teenager and if such a program was driven by me, that type of sex education program would look a lot different than one that would be driven by me as an adult and as a parent. I think focusing such a program in a manner that is “teen-driven” is just asking for problems, as far as what kind of mindset we want our sex education programs to contain. It is a minor example of a problem that is in this amendment and in the amendment that is of particular concern.

Mr. President, because we don’t know how much debate we are going to have on the underlying bill, I will talk for a couple minutes about the bill itself. First, I want to respond to something Senator Clinton said when she spoke of the two sisters who were both raped by their father. That is a horrible, unimaginable situation. I applaud Senator CLINTON for her efforts in that family situation. The Senator talked about the older sister who wanted to help the younger sister because the older sister, had herself, been impregnated. Senator Clinton had said the older sister would have gotten in trouble if she would have gone across State lines to help her younger sister obtain an abortion.

What Senator Clinton pointed out is the exact purpose of this bill. The older sister had to get the judiciary involved to remove her sister from the abusive situation. If the sister would have taken her sister across State lines for an abortion, the legal authorities never would have been involved to take the child out of the abusive situation, and the younger sister would have been returned to an unsafe home where she would have been subjected to continued sexual abuse.

That is the whole point of this legislation, Mr. President. The judicial by-pass for parental consent or notification that is required in most States is the only instance in which this bill actually applies. So the bill, I believe, would be consistent with what I understand that Senator Clinton wanted for this girl: to get her out of an abusive situation.

Mr. President, will the Chair remind me when I have 5 minutes remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, incest is a terrible act, a terrible crime. We should not be protecting the people who perpetrate these crimes. But at the same time, if there is incest involved we, as a society, must take steps to protect the young victims. Imagine a young girl who has had this terrible act committed against her and now somebody else with good intentions wants to take her across State lines to get an abortion. There are several problems raised by this scenario. If the judiciary can be involved, at least some of these problems can be addressed. But if the crime remains secret from the parents and there is no judiciary involved, this girl will be forced to just go back home, with the abortion hidden, to face continued victimization.

The second concern relates to the potential medical consequences that a young girl might face following an abortion. She might encounter a post-surgical infection, or complications if the abortion is performed with inaccurate or an incomplete medical history of the young girl, like administering some kind of medication or anesthesia to which the girl has an allergy. The young girls parents may not know to watch for postsurgical complications. Each of these medical concerns becomes even clearer when friends or a member of the clergy are involved rather than the young girl’s parents or the authorities.

That is why I think some of the amendment is going up is so concerning and why this bill is so important to enact. I hope that as this debate goes forward we can bring out more of these points. I know the leaders are trying to work out differences right now.

I yield whatever time is remaining on this amendment to the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. DE MINT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. DE MINT. Mr. President, I come to the floor today proud that Republicans are working to build a future of hope, by securing our homeland, securing our prosperity, and securing our values.

I believe today’s debate over the Child Custody Protection Act cuts to the heart of who we are as a people. The ideas this bill is built on—preserving life, protecting our children, and upholding the rule of law—have defined the American character and shaped our society for over 200 years. Our commitment to protecting the most vulnerable among us is the surest test of our shared values and the key to our hope for a better future for our children and grandchildren.

There are very few who would disagree that the teenage years are a vulnerable and formative time of life. Peer pressure and the anxiety it can bring are sometimes overwhelming. From decisions about where to attend college, or to understand the negative impacts of things like drug and alcohol abuse, parental communication and support are vitally important as these young people make these decisions that will determine the course of the rest of their lives to be involved. So it puzzles me that those who oppose this bill would essentially give a green light to those who would circumvent State laws and rob parents of the chance to give their young daughters the physical care and the psychological support they so desperately need.

Those who oppose this legislation claim that it would essentially give a green light to those who would circumvent State laws and rob parents of the chance to give their young daughters the physical care and the psychological support they so desperately need. Those who oppose this legislation claim that it would essentially give a green light to those who would circumvent State laws and rob parents of the chance to give their young daughters the physical care and the psychological support they so desperately need.

Those who oppose this legislation claim that it would essentially give a green light to those who would circumvent State laws and rob parents of the chance to give their young daughters the physical care and the psychological support they so desperately need.
Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of the time.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote in relation to the Lautenberg amendment No. 4689 be at 4:05 p.m., with the remaining time between now and then equally divided between the proponents and opponents of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not been ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Nevada.

There is a lot of interest in this bill. People want something for our young people. People want to avoid these horrible situations. My friend cited the case of a young woman who was raped by her father, yet in this bill, the father retains all rights to take her over a State line. Can you imagine, to sign a parental consent form, a father who raped his daughter? So we want to correct these problems.

I yield 5 minutes to Senator PATTY MURRAY and then 2½ minutes to Senator LAUTENBERG at the close of the debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator only has 5 minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I was told we have until 5 after, equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank the Chair. It is the first time all day I have been correct.

I yield to Senator MURRAY 5 minutes and then, at the end of the debate, Senator LAUTENBERG for 2½ minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the so-called Child Custody Protection Act. This is yet another one of those divisive bills with a deceptive title and a dangerous impact on women.

Today, many Americans are upset about the direction in which our country is moving. One would think that the Republican majority would finally start addressing the real issues that affect working families every day—issues such as access to healthcare, high energy prices, fixing the prescription drug program, and protecting our ports.

But instead, we are seeing yet another debate on election year gimmick. Last month, Republicans rolled out a constitutional amendment on gay marriage, just as they could energize their base. Then they brought up a constitutional amendment on flag burning. Now we have a divisive bill that threatens the health of women and undermines our rights.

It is no wonder that Americans are so frustrated with the Republican majority.

Today families are facing real challenges, and once again, what we see here is the Republican leadership is playing election-year games. To me, this is just the latest example of how Republicans have the wrong priorities.

With a war overseas, painful cuts to education at home, veterans being denied healthcare, soaring energy costs, our moral landscape mired by Republican majorities saying this is the most important issue we could be debating today. They should stop wasting time on divisive election year politics and start focusing on the real challenges facing the American people.

We should be talking about pressing needs, not a dangerous and misguided bill that threatens the health of our Nation's young women.

Today's debate comes in the context of a series of attacks on women's rights.

Since 1994, we have seen a consistent and aggressive effort in Congress to limit a woman's right to choose.

There have been more than 170 antichoive votes taken in Congress since 1994. This bill follows that troubling pattern.

The legislation is not about protecting young women, or improving communication within families, or stopping sexual predators.

Instead, it is just another attempt by Republicans to chip away at a woman's right to safe and legal reproductive health care.

Let me turn to the substance of the bill.

This legislation could criminalize a grandparent, aunt, or adult sibling, for responding to a request for help from a young woman in a crisis pregnancy situation.

If any of these caring adults accompany a young woman across State lines to obtain reproductive health services, and the woman's State has a pre- or parental-involvement law, then those caring adults could be criminally prosecuted.

Today, an amendment will be offered to exempt grandparents and clergy from this unnecessary bill. It is the least we can do to minimize the harm of this legislation.

But this law doesn't stop at turning caring adults into criminals. It would also criminalize anyone who transports a pregnant minor across any State line.

Imagine a young woman living in a rural area with no reproductive health service providers and the nearest facility is in a large city just over the State line. If that young woman boards a bus or takes a taxi to the city to get an abortion, the person who drives her could be criminally liable under this law suggested by the Republican majority.

I think we all agree that a young woman facing a crisis pregnancy should be encouraged to talk to her parents. According to a study by Stanley Henshaw and Kathryn Kost, in the vast majority of these situations, the young woman does involve her parents. But tragically, in situations where women don't tell their parents, one-third of the young women are victims of abuse.

In an ideal world, every young woman would take to her parents, but we don't live in an ideal world.

The reality is that a young woman cannot always turn to a parent. We are not talking about a young woman who is afraid her parents will be ashamed or shamed. We are talking about situations where the young woman may be a victim of incest or abuse.

A young woman who has an abusive home situation often accurately predicts the danger of telling a parent about her pregnancy. This bill would punish those young women if they seek the support and help of other family members or clergy.

We live in a time when we have a lot of families who don't fit the traditional two-parent model. More and more grandparents are raising their grandchildren. Divorced parents are getting remarried, and young women can develop close relationships with their stepparents.

In these families, the caring adult who is responsible for the day-to-day care of a young woman would be criminally liable and could even be sued by an absentee parent.

We also know that some young women have no other alternative but to go to another State to obtain reproductive health services. Access to these services all across our country is severely limited—87 percent of counties have no providers.

There are States, such as Mississippi, that have only one provider. Our laws should reflect the reality that for some women, these services cannot be found locally.

Unfortunately, the only thing this bill does do is drive home that young women who are intent on seeking reproductive health services ‘‘go it alone.''

If a young woman thinks that bringing a caring adult or supportive friend will get that person in trouble, she will make the trip on her own.

You wouldn't want your children to drive home from the hospital after having surgery, but this legislation will result in young women driving themselves after having a medical procedure.

How can my colleagues say that this bill is about the safety of young women when it actually endangers them more?
Proponents claim that the “judicial bypass procedure” is an adequate protection for young women who feel they can’t involve their parents. That is not the case.

A young woman would have to go to a courthouse, get a hearing, tell the judge and anyone else in the courtroom her situation, and wait for a judge to rule.

Now imagine that this happens in a small town, and the judge is friends with her parents. Whether it is a big city or a small town, a young woman who has never been to court could find the whole process intimidating and overwhelming.

This bill doesn’t even have an exception to protect the health of young women. That raises huge constitutional questions.

Since Roe v. Wade, every constitutional Federal law restricting a woman’s right to an abortion has contained a health exception, and many laws have been struck down because they lack one.

Should we really be saying that a young woman’s health does not count when it comes to her reproductive rights? Is this Senate ready to tell young women that their health and safety do not matter?

This bill doesn’t care about a young woman’s health—commercially. It barely even cares about her life. That is because the bill’s exception for a life-threatening situation is very narrow and very limited.

In addition, according to experts who have studied it, this bill could effectively nullify the laws of States that allow physicians to provide confidential medical services to minors, such as my home State of Washington.

The people of my State have twice affirmed the right of a young woman to make reproductive health care decisions. That is the settled position of our State. This bill could reach into my home State and effectively eliminate those protections.

No matter how one feels about this bill, I think everyone should be concerned that Federal intervention could undermine the ability of States to set their own laws on this difficult subject.

The House version goes even further, potentially making criminals out of Washington State physicians who follow the laws of Washington State.

Proponents of this bill claim that it is needed to prevent sexual predators from taking pregnant young women across State lines to obtain reproductive health services against their will. But that is not how the bill is written.

If it were truly meant to prevent sexual predators from harming young women, why would it criminally prosecute a young woman’s family members, including grandparents, aunts, or adult siblings? Why is the scope of this bill so broad that it includes clergy members and even unknowing taxi drivers?

Every one of us wants to reduce the numbers of abortions that occur.

Instead of forcing the Government deeper into sensitive and personal family relationships, we should focus on preventing teen pregnancies.

Mr. President, to summarize, across the country today, Americans are very worried about what is going on, whether it is access to health care, high energy prices, prescription drug programs or protecting our Nation’s security. But instead what we are seeing this afternoon is an election year gimmick.

Last year, we saw a constitutional amendment to energize their base on flag burning, and now we are having a debate, instead of on the issues which are on the front burner for every American family, about the health of women and how we are going to undermine their rights. I find that very sad.

Let me talk a few minutes about the substance of this bill. As my colleague from California said, this is a bill which is going to criminalize a grandparent and an adult sibling for simply responding to a request for help from a young woman who is in a crisis pregnancy situation. We will see later an amendment to exempt grandparents and clergy from this onerous bill. I hope we do that. It is the least we can do.

But I think what we should all agree on is that a woman who is facing a crisis pregnancy should be encouraged to talk to her parents. In fact, we have seen studies and cases, such as that of Kathryn Kost that in the vast majority of situations, a young woman does involve her parents. But tragically, in situations where women don’t tell their parents, one-third of those young women are victims of abuse. Those are the women we are going to be affecting by legislation such as this.

In an ideal world, the young woman would talk to her parents, but too often, too many young women do not live in States where they can turn to a parent. We need to make sure they have the availability of health care for their needs, and this bill takes that away.

Unfortunately what this bill really does is ensure that young women who are intent on seeking reproductive health services go it alone. If a young woman thinks that bringing a caring adult or supportive friend will get that person in trouble, she will make that trip on her own. You wouldn’t want your children to drive home from the hospital after having surgery, but this legislation is going to result in young women forced to drive themselves home after a medical procedure.

I don’t see how my colleagues can say this bill is about the safety of young women when it actually endangers them more. This bill doesn’t even have an exception to protect the health of young women, and that, frankly, raises huge constitutional questions about which we have heard.

This bill doesn’t care about a young woman’s health, it barely cares about her life, and that is because the bill’s exception for a life-threatening situation is very narrow and very limited and, according to experts who studied it, this bill will effectively nullify the laws of States such as mine that allow physicians to provide confidential medical services to minors.

For that reason, I will oppose this bill, but I do commend the Senator from New Jersey, Mr. LAUTENBERG, who is offering an amendment that we will be voting on that is a comprehensive approach to reproductive health care for our teenagers. It will help reduce teen pregnancy, and that is its goal. That amendment would be a good step forward, but even that addition is not going to save this flawed bill.

We should be working on ways to reduce the number of crisis pregnancies among teens and women alike. That is why, on issues such as emergency contraceptives, I fought so hard to make sure the FDA makes its decision based on science on whether that drug is safe and effective.

Unfortunately, the bill we have in front of us today is just another ploy for the majority to get their base excited in an election year and, frankly, I am deeply concerned that women’s lives are being used as pawns in a political debate. I believe women’s rights should never be traded away in a ploy for votes.

I hope we send a message that we know our country is facing serious challenges and we are going to spend our very limited time addressing those challenges and fighting for all of our families.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this dangerous, divisive, and misguided bill.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, the Senator from California said twice today that this bill protects a father who commits incest with his daughter. In other words, he can commit a crime and still take her across State lines to get an abortion.

That argument is illogical. Obviously, a father is a parent. In a State with a parental consent law, he is a parent with rights under State law. If he wants his daughter to have an abortion, to cover up his own crime, he can freely give his consent to allow his daughter to have the abortion in their State of residence. That father doesn’t have to take his daughter across State lines. As a result, this bill does not affect such an outcome one way or the other. His abuse of his daughter in that situation is not only morally wrong, it is illegal. This bill doesn’t affect that situation one way or another. So to say we are protecting a father’s rights to go across State lines—it is an argument, frankly, that just doesn’t hold water. It just doesn’t. This bill doesn’t have anything to do with what the Senator was saying.

Let’s just talk about what the bill does. This bill says that if a State has enacted a parental consent or a parental notification law and if a teenage girl in that State gets pregnant and somebody besides her parents wants to take that child across State lines to avoid those parental consent or parental notification laws in direct violation of what the people of that State want, in direct violation of what the parents would want, that act, transporting a child across state lines, is a Federal offense. And that crime is punishable with time in prison.

Looking at the consequences of not having this bill. I would point out, in order to put this in its proper context for my colleagues, that over two-thirds of the girls who have been taken across State lines for an abortion have boyfriends who are over 20 years of age. So typically, you would have a teenage girl with a boyfriend who is significantly older than her. And in the context of that relationship, the young girl becomes pregnant. Sometimes that pregnancy is the result of a forcible rape, where the girls does not consent; in most cases, it is at least statutory rape. This legislation will help law enforcement stop adult men from preying upon underage girls and violating the law with the crime rape—statutory or otherwise. Which is the right thing to do. This bill makes it a further crime if that male takes this young girl across State lines to get an abortion to cover up his tracks, basically to try to eliminate the evidence of his crime. Without this bill, the woman who has already taken advantage of a young girl can further endanger her, by forcing her to have an abortion, with potential emotional scarring beyond what she has already gone through and potential physical scarring. In an abortion, some women actually become sterile because of the procedure, because of complications from the procedure.

The parents of most children in the United States are responsible. To take away their ability to be involved in something that is so important, so potentially life-altering with this teenager I believe is just wrong, and I think that is why 80 percent of the American people support this legislation.

In polls I have seen, 60-plus percent of people who call themselves pro-choice support this legislation.

We are in a society that is so deeply divided on issues, and none more divided than this issue—the issue of whether you call yourself pro-life, or pro-choice, or anti-choice, or pro-abortion, or whatever names that are tossed around. I believe reasonable people can at least come together on some restrictions on abortion. This is one of those reasonable restrictions. That is why over 80 percent of the American people support this legislation.

It is only constitutional when—and this law only applies when—the States have looked at the consequences of the issues. For those people who are concerned about whether in the case of incest the girl is going to be subjected to some kind of further abuse, it is reasonable that the judicial bypass is there and the reason the courts have recognized that for the parental consent cases. We are not forcing States to do anything as far as their laws are concerned. We are upholding the rights of the people of each State to bring their own laws to bear against this. The laws of our State by taking a minor outside of our State. The people of that State have spoken. I think we should act in this time in time to respect the laws that people have enacted. Most importantly, we protect the parents’ rights and the health and the lives of children across the United States.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, before we yield the 2 minutes, this issue of incest is extraordinary. The bill as now is—It protects the predators on our children who have committed incest.

All you have to do is read it. These parents, these fathers, retain their parental rights in the bill. And even under the Ensign amendment it says they cannot be a reason for helping their daughter. The government under this bill can still go after a grandma, or a clergyman who says to a young child, Let me help you, your father raped you. Those vicious criminals retain all their rights. It is an absolute outrage.

The point is, why I am in favor of the Lautenberg amendment is the Lautenberg amendment says let us take a step back, let us prevent these pregnancies. And if people want to vote against teen pregnancy prevention, I guess they have a right to do that. How they explain it is beyond me. We are talking 800,000 teenagers who get pregnant, and in about 18 percent it was not intended.

I thank Senator LAUTENBERG and yield to the remaining time before the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized. The Senator has 1 minute.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, how incomprehensible it is that we have a position on the one hand that refuses to acknowledge in this body there are other ways to control teenage pregnancies than abstinence. We are not against abstinence. There are funds provided in the President’s budget for 2007 for abstinence—$204 million. This amendment to the Lautenberg Act, to supply comprehensive education. We heard from the Senator from South Carolina saying that he describes our values as shared values. In about 18 percent it was not intended. We are upholding the laws the people of that State have spoken. I think we should respect the laws that people have spoken.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?
The amendment (No. 4689) was rejected.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. THUNE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be rescinded.

The motion to rescind the quorum call was agreed to.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that for the next 20 minutes, the first 10 minutes be taken by the Senator from Illinois, Mr. DURBIN, and then the 10 minutes following that would be allotted to Senator SANTORUM from Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, this is a difficult issue for most Americans, the issue of abortion. There are long-held feelings on both sides and the American people are conflicted. When you probe and ask them what they think about abortion, first, they would rather not talk about it. I think that is a natural human reaction because we know it is a delicate and difficult issue. Secondly, they basically say: Well, I know it is a delicate and difficult issue. But for that life and that person and that crime, it could be the most important and tragic event that ever happened in their lives. That is why we have to talk about it very seriously. We have to write these amendments very carefully.

The thing that troubles me about this debate is evidenced in the vote we just took. Senators LAUTENBERG and MENENDEZ came to the floor and said: If we are truly going to reduce the number of abortions, then we have to deal with the reality of family planning and sex education, other issues that politicians don’t jump forward to talk about. They encouraged the cresting programs that have been proven to be effective, that will help educate young people so they will avoid unwanted pregnancies and avoid the diseases and problems that may result therefrom.

What happened on this vote? What happened on a vote where we were talking about sex education as part of our approach? It was defeated. The approach which is dominant now is not to talk about the reality of young people and their knowledge of what they face if they make the wrong decision but, rather, punishment, to suggest to them that what they have done is not only morally wrong but could be criminal.

My wife and I have raised three children, two daughters. I know that to be a parent is to be countercultural. So many times we would say: We don’t want you to go to that movie or look at that book; you can’t watch this television show. Parents do that all the time. But what if you instill in your kids values they can live by and that they will make the right decisions. I never felt at any point that ignorance was a virtue. I felt with our kids, as many parents do, you have to be honest with them about the realities of life and what they will face.

The question of obscenity comes up on the floor. It is brought up by many. That is the first time we told our kids: Stay away from sexual activity. This is something you shouldn’t do. That is the best advice from a parent to a child. But beyond that, what more should you tell them? Senator LAUTENBERG and MENENDEZ estava them more in certain circumstances, and it was rejected 48 to 51.

You might ask why we are debating this issue today. I think it is important for us to reflect on why this happens to come to the Senate floor today. This issue is before the Senate today for two or three reasons. One reason is many Republican Senators who traditionally vote against abortion voted for stem cell research last week. This close-up good vote of some of them can remind their antiabortion constituencies they are still in their corner. I understand that.

Secondly, it is a way to kill time in the Senate rather to address the real issues the American people care about. This debate over this issue is taking time away from any debate on gasoline prices, on health insurance, on jobs.

Third, of course, it fires up a political base on the Republican side for the upcoming election.

A Gallup poll asked 1,000 Americans this open-ended question: What do you think is the most important problem facing this country in the next few years. The poll asked 1,000 Americans a few months ago. The top vote getters: The war in Iraq, gasoline prices, immigration, health care, and the economy. Where did the issue of abortion show up on this list? It tied for No. 33. Less than one half of 1 percent of people said abortion was the most important problem facing America today. But it is the most important issue in the mind of the Republican leadership that we should be debating on the floor of the Senate today.

I hope we are able to work out an amendment to deal with the reality of the issue of incest, which is part of the debate, sadly. Perhaps the most egregious part of this bill is the fact that there is no exception for the case of incest. It empowers the parent who may be guilty of the crime to file a lawsuit and recover money because someone else took the victim across a State line. That is hard to say. I want to educate young victims, they are understandably frightened and don’t want to tell their parents anything for obvious reasons.

Listen to the words of Sharon from New Hampshire, raped by her father at the age of 17:

Imagine being 17, pregnant after being raped by your father, alone, isolated, afraid to tell anyone for fear your parents would find out and that, if they did, you would be further humiliated, harassed and abused. . . . I felt and feared these things.

her father and impregnated. A private organization learned about the girl, made arrangements to take her to the nearest abortion clinic 6 hours away to have an abortion. The night before Spring was to leave, her father discovered that Spring was pregnant. That night, her father went into her room and shot her to death with a rifle.

These aren’t isolated incidents. One study showed that 30 percent of the minors who had an abortion without telling their parents had previously experienced threats of violence in their family. That is the real world. We should deal with the real world when we write these laws.

I think Senator ENSIGN understands changes have to be made to this bill. I hope we will make them. Let us all agree on this: We need to find ways to reduce the incidence of abortion. We need to find ways that are sensible and sensitive. Merely telling people you can’t do it, you shouldn’t do it, may not be the answer. Education may be part of it as well. It is unfortunate the Senate has rejected the Lautenberg amendment which would have moved us closer to the point where that would have been available in some areas where planning family information would have been available. It was rejected by the Senate.

Now we come before the Senate with this bill that is subject to amendment. We are hoping we can find a reasonable compromise on a very difficult and divisive issue.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DURBIN. I am happy to yield.

Mrs. BOXER. I want to go back to the Lautenberg-Menendez amendment. It is extraordinary to me; when we try to talk about common ground on the issue of pregnancy prevention, doesn’t my colleague believe one area we ought to all come together on, regardless of whether or not you are pro-choice or anti-choice, would be preventing pregnancies among teens?

Mr. DURBIN. That ought to be the starting point. Shouldn’t we all agree on that? If we are going to reduce the incidence of abortion, one of the things we should do is make sure young people are aware of consequences. We should stress abstinence. The Lautenberg amendment put that as the highest priority. But then have family planning information available so young people know that there are ways to protect themselves. I think that was a reasonable starting point. We had a few from the other side of the aisle join us with that amendment but clearly not enough.

Mrs. BOXER. If my friend will further yield, my friend aware there are 800,000 pregnancies among young women and that we could prevent these unwanted pregnancies and all of the attendant upset among families and that we had an opportunity to do that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired. Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent for 30 additional seconds and for Senator SANTORUM to have an additional 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Our amendment put that as the highest priority. We had a chance to do something to prevent these unintended pregnancies. This bill focuses on a small number of cases. It seems to me by two votes we lost that vote. It is an issue, wouldn’t my friend say?

Mr. DURBIN. I would say we have to find very common ground on a divisive issue. That was a good starting point. Unfortunately, it did not prevail today. We will go on with this debate, but I hope those of us who look at this issue and worry over how to reduce the number of abortions can work to find some common bipartisan ground to help strengthen families and educate their children about the consequences of their actions, to promote abstinence but not to promote ignorance.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Child Custody Protection Act. I congratulate the majority leader for scheduling time for this important piece of legislation, as well as Senator ENSIGN for the terrific work he is doing in managing the legislation as the author of the bill.

This is very important legislation. It has been described many times so I won’t go into detail. What we are trying to do is protect children from being taken across State lines without parental involvement laws. As a father of six children, two daughters, I believe parents should be involved in the health care decisions of minor children. I am not alone in that regard. The vast majority of Americans believe in parental consent laws when it comes to having abortion procedures done on minors, that parents should be involved in that decision.

The Senator from Illinois described situations that would be the exception rather than the rule. When those exceptions arise, in all of the States there is a judicial bypass. The Senator from Illinois described some pretty horrific circumstances of incest or rape. Here you have a situation where if we don’t have this law, the rapist or the person who committed the incest against this minor child could take that child across State lines, never report it to the police, have the abortion done, and the parents never know about it. Nobody knows about it, and the child is back in the home and potentially in the same threatening environment the child was in in the first place. At least under our parental consent law, even if this statute, if we are successful, the court can get involved. We can remove that child from the dangerous situation.

I don’t know why allowing someone surreptitiously to avoid state parental consent statutes or to have an abortion is the right thing to do. If anything, it is the opposite. That is not a rational reason for objecting to this statute.

Again, I suggest the American public overwhelmingly feels the same way. Parents deserve and should have the ability to be consulted and notified or give consent, depending on the State, to a medical procedure as severe and serious as an abortion.

If you look at the poll question, do you agree or disagree that a person should be able to take a minor girl across State lines to obtain an abortion without parental involvement? If this isn’t consent, it is just knowledge—15 percent agree, 15 percent agree with that statement that she should be able to be transported across State lines; 62 percent disagree. They said people should not be able to take a child across State lines without the knowledge of their parents. Seventy-five percent strongly disagree with the current state of the law which is you can transport children across State lines in order to circumvent state parental involvement laws.

In Pennsylvania, all of the surrounding states but the State of Ohio have weaker laws on parental involvement than the State of Pennsylvania. So a child in the northwestern part of our State can go up to New York or, in the eastern part of the State, New Jersey or Delaware or, in the southern part of our State, Maryland, West Virginia, all of which have laws that are not as favorable to parents and children as Pennsylvania with respect to consent.

This is, unfortunately, not a hypothetical for those of us in Pennsylvania. There are tragic cases of children being taken by a boy or his family members across State lines and the horrible consequences that result.

We also have abortion clinics from other States that advertise in Pennsylvania. There are a couple of ads I will put up on the board. This is north-eastern Pennsylvania. Scranton is there, up near the New York border. Here is the advertisement from the All Women’s Health and Medical Services in White Plains, NY, a toll free number: “We are here if you need us.” This is, again, advertising in White Plains, NY, which is not that close to Scranton. It is at least 50 miles away. And it talks about no consent, no waiting period. There is a parental consent provision in the Pennsylvania statute that was upheld as constitutional back in 1992. There is a 24-hour period. Again, advertising no consent, no waiting period, directly aimed at minors in Pennsylvania urging them to come and have abortions at their clinic across the State line.

I have one more. This one is a little closer to Scranton. This is the Yellow Pages in Lancaster. Atlantic Women’s Medical Services, Inc., no parental consent, 16 years and older. The Pennsylvania statute provides six exceptions for children. If you are 16, 17, they require no consent; again, directly targeted at a State, encouraging women and others to bring young women across the State line for abortions. They advertise abortions to 24 weeks, the abortion pill, low fees, all trying to make sure these young girls know that abortions are available without consent.

This is not hypothetical. This is direct marketing to minors, direct marketing in the Yellow Pages to minors who are desperate and, in many cases, afraid and feel alone. They are marketing to these vulnerable children to get them to talk to their parents but to come and get an abortion in State, against their State laws. This is, again, not just a hypothetical but a real-life situation. And which I will share a case.

We had a case in Lancaster, PA, which began on Christmas Eve, 2004. A 14-year-old told her mother she was pregnant. The parents were prepared to be supportive, to help that child in whatever decision she made and in scheduling appointments with doctors, counselors, and other programs that could help this child get through this very difficult situation. The daughter chose to have the baby and raise it with the love and support of her family.

But the boyfriend’s family didn’t like the young girl’s decision and began to harass and coerce the girl and her family in order to intimidate her into getting an abortion. The mother called the local police for advice and even called the District Attorney to see if they needed to have an abortion in Pennsylvania because she was afraid that her daughter might be pressured toward an abortion. She was told the daughter needed to be 16 though that was actually incorrect because she needed to be 18 to have an abortion without consent. Therefore, her mother thought she was protected.

That wasn’t the case. In mid-February, she sent her daughter off to school, but the daughter never made it there. Her boyfriend’s family met her and her boyfriend down the road, put them in a cab and then on a train, and then a subway to New Jersey, where his family met them and took them to an abortion clinic where one of them had made an appointment. The young girl had second thoughts, but she was told they would leave her in New Jersey if she didn’t undergo an abortion.

After the abortion, the family of the boyfriend decided to make the attempt to find out where her boyfriend’s family had taken her, that is, to try to fix that problem, which was what was happening. The time the abortion had been given was the weekend before Christmas. It was a horrible situation where they are pregnant and under, obviously, a horrible situation in their lives. They need their parents. Where the parents are the problem or a threat to them, there is a judicial bypass. We have in place safeguards where parents are the problem, which, again, is a minority of situations. We have done this in many cases.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SANTORUM. Yes.

Mr. DURBIN. The bill creates a civil cause of action the parents can bring. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania believe that in one of those rare, tragic cases of incest and the father is the reason for the incest, he should be allowed to bring a civil cause of action against the person who has transported the victim?

Mr. SANTORUM. The Senator from Nevada has an amendment which is going to take care of that situation. I will defer to him, if he would like to answer that question on how the amendment would work to conclude that problem.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, to answer the Senator from Illinois, we are going to fix that. We realized we needed to fix that problem, and we have an amendment. The Senator from Kansas addressed this, and that will be one of the amendments that is coming up.

I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada, and I thank the leadership for bringing up this topic. It is commonsense and pro-family legislation. I hope we pass it in the Senate. We need to protect children and the rights of parents. The only one that can stop others from getting around those protections and avoiding State laws is the Federal Government. That is why the Safe Harbor law, which strengthens enforcement of the Safe Harbor law, has the broadest protections possible that could help children get through this real-world situation. This is a real-world situation, a problem we are confronted with in this country. All we are trying to do is let the State laws, the collective wisdom of the States, the unique situation in Pennsylvania, harken the legal protection that is there. That is what we are doing. That is all we are trying to do.

The bill has been described in many different iterations. I believe people understand the concept of what is being put forward about involving the family. I believe this is a significant pro-parent, pro-child, pro-life piece of legislation. It is a bill that everybody virtually understands the concept of, because of the role by making it illegal for somebody to take a child across State lines for an abortion, thereby circumventing parental rights laws in the State where the child resides. That is all well known.

The issue I wish to deal with briefly, if I could, is the commonsense feature of this legislation.

Everybody has talked about the examples of how you cannot get an aspirin in school without the parents’ permission. You virtually cannot do any medical procedure without the parents’ permission, except an abortion. Everybody looks at that, and they are quizzical and wonder why there is this exception.

I wish to talk about the commonsense feature of this. Why is it that we don’t give aspirin to children at school? Why is it that we require that parents are involved in the medical decisions of their children? The reason, I think, is that most people look at it as a common sense—that there are consequences to this. If this happens, if the child has a response to the aspirin or if the child has some reaction to a minor surgery, the parent needs to be involved. Something might happen, so the parent needs to know. We need to take care of the child. The parents have the role of being entrusted with that child’s life and working with that child and therefore needs to be actively engaged in knowing what is going on with this child.

We have held hearings in the Senate and in the House of Representatives, and many States have held hearings on... the impact of abortion on women. There are groups that are formed about the impact of abortion on women, both physically and psychologically. We have had expert witnesses present and testimony about how abortion impacts and harms women physically and psychologically. There have been books written on this topic. Some people say: We don’t think it has as big an impact as you say it has. Others say: I think it has a bigger impact. That debate can be taken, I suppose, to any medical procedure on.

The point of the issue is that we have the parents there to help them help the child, and they decide. That is who is making the decision. That is who is making the decision on whether the child gets minor medical care at the school. You want the parents involved. They are the guardians, the ones who are responsible.

Here is a situation where, clearly, you have a physical impact on the child. I believe clearly that you have a psychological impact on that child. I think that has been documented. Others question whether that has been fully documented. Clearly, on a number of women who have abortions, there is a physical impact. Isn’t it simply a common sense that parents would be involved in such a monumental decision that is going to impact this child for the rest of their life and that parent would be involved in helping the child to process in the right way to do the appropriate thing. That is what options are and the sorts of things they can do? Particularly at a time when the child is going to have to process this in a difficult emotional situation, the parent needs to be involved and should be involved to give that wise counsel, prudent counsel, to the child involved in this particular circumstance.

Parents can and do help present all of the health issues to their children and help them make a prudent decision. That is just basic common sense. It is the right thing that we ought to do. Parents can help to spot abusive situations which might not otherwise be evident to the child. Without parental involvement, abortion can be forced upon a young woman by, in some cases, an abusive male figure in order to cover up a crime.

The role of parents in protecting children. This could be delegated to any other person. Yet in this law, we even provide for the judicial bypass procedure. Especially when a daughter is facing an unintended pregnancy, parents need to be involved. We talk a lot on the Senate floor and have worked over the years to try to build more and stronger family units. One of the key ways to do that is to have the parents more involved in the decision-making of the child, particularly when health consequences are there. We are on one on which that should take place.

When a child is undergoing this procedure, it does clearly terminate a young life growing in the mother’s womb. That has an impact on the child psychologically, if in no other fashion. Parents need to be involved in helping to process how that is going to be handled for the child.

I believe this legislation is a step in the right direction. It would go some distance toward helping protect parents’ rights and children’s health. It would help integrate and build that relationship between the parent and child. I urge my colleagues to pass this legislation. I hope, as a message to the country, we can pass it in a large bipartisan fashion and send a signal to people that this makes good sense. It is appropriate for us to do.

It is not simply that you are pro-life or you are pro-choice; therefore, we are going to split on those lines. Rather, we should look at this as parents, as we virtually all are on this floor, and saying as a parent, whether I am pro-life or pro-choice, I want that sort of information for my child, and I would want to be able to have that information to process as a parent, and that I would say to my legislators I am one way or the other on the abortion debate, but as a parent I believe it is my duty to know this. This is my duty to be involved in this type of decision-making for my child.

I think that is why, while we have a lot of debate about the issue of abortion, there is that sort of support by people because so many people look at this outside the abortion debate, and they look at it much more as a parental debate, as to how they observe and they deal and they want to deal with this particular issue. I urge my colleagues to look at it that way as well. Take it out of the grid of the abortion debate and put it into the decision-making grid of a parent. I think that if we do that, we will pass this in a strong bipartisan fashion.

Mr. President, this is a good bill. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Brownback). The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I yield myself time off the bill. How many minutes is remaining on our side on the general debate on the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 25 minutes remaining.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I have not yet had a chance to do that and, of course, those objections have been just elevated given the fact that by just two slim votes, we failed to adopt teen pregnancy prevention legislation, which is, of course, one of the most important issues we face in our society today. We have 800,000 young women whose pregnancies could have been prevented if they had such education.

Here we are dealing with a bill that seems to be more the Senate every election for reasons that the other side can explain. Instead of tackling the issues of health care for our young people, insurance for our young people, pregnancy prevention for our young people, we are dealing with an issue that impacts just a few people. But so be it.

The good news is, we have had a debate on teen pregnancy prevention. The whole country got to see it, and they got to see where the votes lined up. It is pretty clear.

The other good news is that we have had a debate on stem cell research. And we saw a very similar situation where we picked up a few votes on the other side but not enough votes. The President vetoed stem cell research. You want to talk about a health issue, you want to talk about helping the health of our young people who have juvenile diabetes or those who are paralyzed because of an accident; if you want to talk about helping people with Alzheimer’s or Parkinson’s. But oh no, the President vetoed that. Another four or five votes. This Chamber could have made the difference between having stem cell research and not. But now we are not going to have it.

Frankly, in my State, we took matters into our own hands, and Republicans and Democrats together voted for stem cell research, and we have a $3 billion program. This isn’t a partisan issue in my State. But oh boy, it is a partisan issue here. It just shows how far to the right we have come in the national debate.

So instead of doing something to improve a lot of our people, we are looking at this small issue. We are looking at this issue as that, as it is a partisan issue here. It just shows how far we have come in the national debate.

As drafted, this bill throws grandmothers in jail and violates our Constitution. I would say this bill has a problem.

Again, we tried to make it better, but even our amendments did not go through. We did not have an exception for rape. If a young girl gets raped and she runs to the most trusted adult she knows, perhaps her grandma, and her grandma takes her into her loving arms because she is too scared to go to her parents for whatever reason, we have situations and I will share those with you where girls were so fearful, so frightened, and with good reason, that they couldn’t go to their parents. So they go to a loving grandmother. And guess what? Under this bill, parents can sue the grandmother. Unbelievable. That is Big Brother all right. Talk about family values interfering straight in. It is unbelievable.

We tried to fix the thrust of this bill to pass a Teen Pregnancy Prevention Act. We couldn’t do it.

So this bill, at the end of the day, focuses on a small number of young women crossing State lines with an adult to get an abortion and ignores 800,000 pregnancies which could have been prevented.

We had our chance. We had our chance, but, oh no, it is going to be
This is a wonderful country. We have loving families, for the most part, loving open families who say to their kids, as I certainly did to mine, and my husband did: Anything you have on your mind, you just come to us. You feel free to tell us. That is how it should be.

When I was a child, my mother said I could tell her anything, and I did. I told her anything. She loved me unconditionally and helped me through whatever problem I might have had.

With my own children, I tried to emulate my mother. I hope and I think I did that. They are now grown. They take care of me.

But what about young people who don’t have that warm feeling in their families? What about the millions of victims of violence and abuse? This bill, as it is drafted, hurts just those victims. It doesn’t mean to. That is not the purpose of it. But we have found out in our lives that some bills have unintended consequences, and this one sure does.

As this bill is drafted, a father who commits incest and takes his daughter across a State line, we are trying to fix it, and we hope we can fix it—that father has rights under this bill. It is an outrage.

Nearly half of pregnant teens who have been abused or assaulted are found to be abused and assaulted by a family member. That is the sad truth.

Thirty percent of minors who don’t tell their parents have experienced violence in the home. In other words, they are too fearful to go to the home where they have experienced violence. They fear violence or they worry that, in a rage, their parents will kick them out if they tell them they have become pregnant.

Don’t we want them to be safe and secure? Don’t we want them to have help from a caring adult? I would hope so. But under this bill, a clergy member who really cares about the family could be sued by parents who abuse their children. A loving grandma or a loving aunt could be sued. Oh, there are no exceptions allowed.

Senator Feinstein, unfortunately, is suffering from the flu and cannot be here today. She had an amendment—she cannot offer it—about this topic, but some very sick people do rape. Fathers do rape, uncles do rape and even impregnate their daughters.

Look at these newspaper stories from around the country.

‘An American Tragedy’. This is from The Oregonian:

A 13-year-old girl in Idaho whose father had impregnated her. . . . the morning she was supposed to have an abortion, her father, who had admitted to impregnating her, was found in his room with a rifle . . . shot her in the head and then he shot himself.

How does this bill prevent that? This bill will frighten a girl, make her more alone because she can’t go to a caring adult because a caring adult could be sued by a parent. So she is scared. She gets in a car. She drives over the State line by herself. She is all alone. The father finds out, grabs her. She has no protection. He shoots her, shoots himself.

What are we doing here? Why don’t you look at what you are doing. Why don’t you look at the practical impact of what you are doing?

. . . man was arrested and charged with first degree rape of his teenage daughter. The man tried to force his daughter to take an unknown pill to cause a miscarriage because he believed she was pregnant.

This happens too often.

‘Father Sentenced for Raping Daughters’. Newark Advocate:

Man convicted of raping his two daughters. . . . the girls were 13 and 17 at the time of the crimes.

‘Man Charged with Incest is Arrested in North Carolina’:

Police said a father raped and impregnated his 16-year-old daughter and raped his step-daughter who is mentally and physically disabled.

The way this bill has come to us from the committee protects the father. Senator Ensign and I are working hard—and I hope we can reach agreement—to solve the problems of this bill. But the way the bill passed the other body, they didn’t pay any attention to this. Wonderful, we pass a bill that protects fathers who rape their daughter. It is basically a bill that, all of that incest aside, really will wind up in a young woman getting into a car on her own, frightened to death to tell her parents, and driving alone.

‘Ordeal Ender/Dad’s Arrest Ends Years of Rape for Teen.’ Newsday.

For years, a convicted child sex offender used his Bronx home as a pornographic movie studio for sex videos of himself and his young daughter. The girl had tried at least twice to alert someone—her mother . . . her mother took no action.

‘Her mother took no action.’ As Senator Ensign and I try to reach an agreement on an incest amendment, let me be clear: We are not going to reach that agreement. I, if I was this, am giving up a lot of my amendment. This is still an imperfect bill, and I will show you in a checklist my amendment versus the Ensign amendment and what we try to do in our amendment.

The Ensign amendment was originally proposed—we support it—stops a father who has raped his daughter from suing the trusted adult who helped his daughter end the resulting pregnancy. We want that amendment, and that amendment will hopefully be adopted.

But we don’t stop with that because the Ensign amendment doesn’t go far enough. We want to stop a father who has raped his daughter from exercising any parental consent rights. We want to stop all criminal prosecution or jail time for a trusted adult who helps a victim of incest.

Imagine under this bill a child goes running to a nextdoor neighbor whom she loves, a kind of an aunt to her, and she says: Please help me, please help me. I am pregnant. My father raped me. I can’t go in that house. I can’t tell my mother. My mother won’t believe me. The nextdoor neighbor helps her. Under this bill the mother—one father can sue. We have to fix that. We are not going to fix it today. We can’t reach all of what I am trying to do because I can’t get agreement on the other side. It is still going to be an awful problem.

We also stop a father who has raped his daughter, or any other family member who has committed incest against a minor, from transporting her across State lines to obtain an abortion.

We don’t want these perpetrators of incest to take their victims across the State line. We are working hard under the parameters of this bill to address the issue of incest.

At the end of the day, if our negotiations go well, we will have taken care of two of the five Boxer provisions. Will I be happy that these three provisions are not taken care of? No. I am not happy. It is outrageous that we can’t get it all done. So be it. Let the people decide, but we will do as much as we can to improve this bill.

This bill as written protects the rights of brutal fathers. There are not many out there, but there are some.

There is only one thing that we can do for young people, and that is the matter of parental consent: that is giving these sexual predators more power over their children to keep on perpetrating these acts.
and then saying they know how to handle it. They can handle it. Just take a child in the car and go.

The bill as written actually forces some young incest victims to get permission from their rapist fathers to get an abortion. Can you imagine? We have to fix that. And it gives the rapist fathers the power to take their daughters across state lines.

We are trying hard to reach an agreement to take care of this problem. I am grateful that we may get two-fifths of the way there on an amendment.

I will work hard if this bill becomes law to fix this bill. I will introduce legislation to fix this bill. I will also prepare legislation that goes further than this and says if someone is a victim of rape and they are fearful of telling their parents, that parent, adult, or grandma can’t be sued.

We really have a long way to go. This bill has many problems. It sends a message. Go it alone. If you get in trouble at your moment of need, this bill says go it alone. She can go across the State line on her own. This bill doesn’t do anything about it—only if the has a parent with her to help her.

I believe this bill is unconstitutional. The Supreme Court has been clear that abortion restrictions must not impose an undue burden on women, and they must be necessary. There is no health exception in this bill. If a doctor takes a girl across State lines because he worries about her health, and if she doesn’t get an abortion right away and faces paralysis or faces infertility, there is no exception in this bill.

The doctor can be sued.

What kind of message are we sending to young women? Go it alone. What kind of message are we sending to fathers who commit incest or mothers who have a kind eye to it? Oh, don’t worry. You are protected. Maybe Boxer will get two of her provisions, but we are not going to give you the five. I thought it was one nation under God, not the State with which they disagree. I don’t know of any other law in history, with the exception of the Fugitive Slave Act, that has required citizens to carry the laws of their own State on their back for the days of slavery. If you ran away to another State, you were still stolen property until the court said no.

If you look at the constitutionality issue, if you look at the fact that victims are not responsible, as are victims of incest, if you look at the fact that good, kind, loving people like grandmas and grandfathers could go to jail for helping their granddaughter—no matter how you look at this bill, I believe you should come to a conclusion that this bill has major problems.

Parental consent—you know something. Senator Ensign is right. People support the idea that a parent should be contacted by their child and talked to when a child has an unintended pregnancy. We want that so much. I want that so much.

I also want kids to know they could talk to their grandma, they could talk to their grandpa, they could talk to their clergy, they could get help when they need it.

I don’t believe the American people support throwing grandma in jail because she embraced her granddaughter and said: My God, I am worried that you are pregnant. Can you tell me if you tell the truth. She throws her arms around the granddaughter and protects her and helps her through a crisis.

I believe stopping an abortion is worth preventing a teen from having a lifetime of paralysis, infertility, or worse, and yet there is no health exception in this bill. I think people want us to stop using this issue as a political football.

I know who brought this up. It is brought up by the other side of the aisle every time we have an election. I hope we can join hands to stop teen pregnancies. We had a chance to do it. But no, we had a vote and we lost that vote. It is unreal. We got a couple of Republicans, but not enough.

I hope the American people are watching this debate. If our goal is to help our young people—and that is the stated goal—there are a lot of ways we could help them to get help. There is no death and making them go it alone in a desperate situation, making criminals of their grandmas and their grandpas and their clergy.

I am sad that the Teen Pregnancy Prevention Act didn’t pass as part of this bill. It would have made this bill better. I am glad that we are going to have some coming together on the incest amendment, although as I said, it is only going to take care of two of the five problems we have relating to the bill. But at least we are making a bit of progress.

The bill, to me, is blatantly unconstitutional. It violates our core principles of federalism. It puts caring adults in jail and endangers the health and lives of our most vulnerable teens. On that basis it ought to be defeated.

I believe this bill will pass. I also believe our incest amendment will pass. I think it is important that we have two votes this time. I think it is important to have those recorded votes so that the message goes to the House that their bill blatantly helps the predators. I call it the “Incest Predators Protection Act.” Thank you very much. I know my time is up. I yield the remainder of my time at this time.

Mr. Ensign. Mr. President, I yield 15 minutes to the Senator from South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. Thune. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada. Mr. Ensign, for his leadership on this issue and for yielding time and for bringing this important matter before us.

My colleague from California mentioned that this is an election year ploy. But I think the last time this was voted on in the Senate was in 1998. That was a cloture vote. I don’t know if there has ever been an up-or-down vote in the Senate. It has been voted on in the House.

I think most people see this particular provision as something that is a commonsense approach to this issue. Obviously, there are a lot of labels that are thrown around in this very contentious debate in our country. But when it comes to this particular issue, the courts have laid out some parameters under which States can operate when it comes to statutes that they adopted that impose conditions and restrictions on abortion. The undue burden requirement that came out of the Planned Parenthood v. Casey decision many years ago created this scenario where if there is not an undue burden, that statute enacted by States can impose restrictions. And many States have done that.

One that many States have adopted is the issue of parental consent or parental notification. In fact, there are about 37 States to date that have adopted in some fashion that particular legislation. Thirty-seven States have enacted statutes imposing legal obligations on pregnant minors to notify or gain the consent of their parent or guardian. That is what we are debating today, does not supercede or otherwise alter any of those laws, nor does it impose any parental notice or consent requirement on any State. These are States that adopted these laws. The bill would only give effect to a State’s parental involvement law if that law is constitutional. Therefore, any State parental consent law given effect under this bill must contain a judicial bypass provision which allows the minor girl to petition a judge to waive the parental notification requirement.

Just to give you an example of States that have enacted these types of laws, my State of South Dakota, for example, requires that a minor under the age of 18 have the consent of one parent or judicial bypass to obtain an abortion. States in my region and neighboring States such as North Dakota, require the same thing, only it requires a judicial consent or judicial bypass. Nebraska requires essentially the consent of one parent or judicial bypass. Iowa requires that a minor must have the consent of one parent or grandparent or judicial bypass. Wyoming requires a minor under the age of an eighteen must have the consent of one parent or judicial bypass. In Minnesota you must have the consent of two parents or judicial bypass. Montana, again, one parent or judicial bypass.

My point very simply is that the States and State legislatures have found, within their purview, ways that are constitutional to address what is a very gripping issue for the country, one that is very consequential in a direct, obviously, of debate for the past 30 some years, and I suspect will continue to be debated not only here in legislative bodies but in front of the courts.

The framework, a set of parameters, States have acted accordingly. All this simply does is reinforce those State laws and allow parents to be involved in probably what, without argument, has to be one of the most consequential decisions a teenager will ever make. As a parent of two teenage daughters, we talk about everything. We talk about where our children want to go to college. I have a teenager who is starting college this year. We talk about who they hang out with on a regular basis. We talk about what they wear, obviously, their apparel. We talk about who they date. We talk about who they associate with, all the decisions that they make in their lives on a daily basis. We try to stay very involved and engaged in their lives, for obvious reasons, because that is important as a parent.

I have a 16-year-old who will be a junior in high school. Ironically, in 27 States in this country, my 16-year-old can’t get a tattoo without the permission of a parent. In 27 States, my 16-year-old cannot get her body pierced without permission of a parent. Yet we would allow what, arguably, would be the most consequential decision that child could ever make to go without consultation with a parent. It seems to me that common sense dictates, and I think most people around this country would agree, whatever side of this issue they find themselves on, this is a very common sense way to proceed. Allowing someone to essentially bypass a parent and take a minor, a teenager, across the State line to have an abortion is something that crosses not only State lines but crosses the lines of what most Americans would concede makes sense. When it comes to the way we raise our children and the kind of culture we want to have in our country.

I have to say I sure as heck as a parent would not want some other person taking one of my daughters somewhere to have this procedure when the emotional, the health, the medical ramifications that this decision could be so consequential in terms of my daughter, or my daughter, any teenager or any minor’s future. I cannot imagine that this does not meet the common sense threshold, the test that most Americans would apply—again, irrespective of what side they find themselves on this very issue.

If you look at this bill, and ultimately what it is designed to do, there are several things that would happen. I believe, if this act passed, it would substantially cut down on the number of minors who obtain abortions. It has been shown that parental involvement laws can decrease abortions among minors by 8 to 9 percent. Furthermore, Senate bill 403 will likely magnify that effect since minors often cross State lines in order to evade laws. The bill does not infringe on States’ rights. It merely gives teeth to existing State laws. In fact, the Federal Government will prosecute individuals in violation of this act. Senate bill 403 does not mandate individual States to enforce laws which they have not passed.

Additionally, this legislation does not criminalize doctors or the young women who obtain abortions. It proscribes in State lines, minors across State lines in an effort to evade parental involvement laws. In States that do not have parental notification laws, nearly 40 percent of minors keep their pregnancies secret. Since abortion is a major surgical operation, I believe parents need to know if their daughters undergo an abortion so they will be able to help them with any potential complications, including both the physical, emotional, and mental complications that can arise from the procedure. In cases where this would be inappropriate because of an abusive relationship, the judicial bypass is still an option.

Senate bill 403 will help parents keep their daughter’s out of inappropriate and/or predatory relationships. The American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on Adolescents estimates that almost two-thirds of adolescent mothers have partners over the age of 20. Additionally, in 50 percent of cases, a daughter does not notify her parents of her pregnancy, her boyfriend is the one who accompanies her for the abortion.

Combining those two statistics suggests a substantial number of abortions are obtained in an attempt to avoid statutory rape laws. Underage children cannot obtain an aspirin at school without parental consent, but nothing prevents a minor from being transported from her current State where she has parental permission to another State where she can legally obtain an abortion without any parental consent. That is what this legislation intends to do.

Abortion clinics in States where there are no parental consent laws actually advertise in States requiring parental consent to use by “no parental consent required” ads.

This legislation is not unreasonable. As I said earlier, this requires a minor, persons under the age of 18 today, to obtain parental consent to get a tattoo. Essentially, 27 States also require minors, persons under the age of 18, to get parental consent to get piercings, including ear piercings.

Additionally, in 50 percent of cases, a minor is the parent of two teenage daughters, as well as someone who is observing the debate we have in this country over this particular issue, this is a reasonable, commonsense approach, a measure that has been discussed and debated, the constitutionality of it addressed.

My colleague from California, Senator BOXER, said this is unconstitutional. As I said before, the courts have said as long as it does not impose an undue burden, these types of restrictions fit within the parameters of what is constitutional. Furthermore, under the Commerce Clause, the way this particular bill is worty fits within that constitutional framework. I don’t think that is a valid argument.

One of the arguments that was made, as well, by my colleague from California had to do with the issue of incest. A judge found Arizona Planned Parenthood negligent for failing to report to Child Protective Services an abortion performed on a 13-year-old girl in foster care. This girl’s case dates back to 1998 when she went in for an abortion at a Planned Parenthood abortion facility accompanied by her 25-year-old foster brother with whom she was having a sexual relationship. Planned Parenthood did not notify authorities until the girl returned 6 months later for a second abortion, according to court records.

There are lots of examples that can be used, obviously, to support what this legislation attempts to accomplish. As I said before, this issue has not been debated in the Senate for some time, although, I will say it has been acted on by the Congress—not in the Senate but by the House of Representatives. The House earlier this year passed this bill by 270 to 157 or something like that, and had voted in 1998, 1999, and 2002. I was a Member of the House during those years and in every case this legislation passed the House and passed it by very sizable margins.

It would make sense that the House, having acted on it this year, having gotten approximately 270 votes in support, that we have a debate in the Senate and have an up-or-down vote on this legislation which, as I said earlier, I believe is a reasonable, commonsense approach to dealing with what is a very controversial, contentious issue in the country today.

Most Americans would agree that parental notification, parental consent, allowing parents to have involvement, input, consultation, with a teenager who was pregnant and is considering having an abortion, rather than having that teenager taken across State lines in a way that contradicts the will of the parents, makes a lot of sense. Again, it is an affirmation of parental involvement in the decision-making process and an affirmation of States rights, for that matter, too, if you look at all the States that have enacted laws. Thirty-seven States have enacted, in some form, this kind of requirement. Whether it is a notification of one parent and judicial bypass or two parents and judicial bypass, but, clearly, there is precedent with all the States that have taken steps. This does not circumvent in any way those State laws. It simply affirms those laws in many respects because the States that have acted in a way that would require this kind of a notification, this kind of consent, this kind of involvement on a parental level.

Right now, people who are going around, or a grand requirement and going across State lines to have an abortion procedures are getting around State laws. This is simply a way of drawing parents into the debate and making sure that, regarding teen abortions in this country, that requirement and going ingly and have adopted statues that require some kind of consent, notification, consultation, that those laws are respected, and, again, that parents’ rights are asserted in this process.

This is about the health of our young girls. It is about the rights of parents. It is about States that have acted in accordance with what the courts have given them authority to do and making sure we are standing behind those States and making sure their laws are enforced. I hope when we vote on this—and, again, the Senator from Nevada for his leadership on this issue—we will get a big vote in the Senate. It is the right vote. It has been a lot of years—8 years. 1998 was the last time we had this debate in the Senate. At that time, we got to a cloture vote, but we did not have an up-or-down vote on the underlying bill.

The substance of this bill needs to be voted on. I hope it will be voted on today, that it will be a big vote coming out of this Senate, and we can put this on the President’s desk and have it signed into law, which I believe is what a vast majority, I know a vast majority of South Dakotans would believe, and I believe also a vast majority of Americans.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

(After the request of Mr. Reid, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the Record.)

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to oppose the Child Custody Protection Act, which imposes criminal penalties on those who help transport a minor across State lines to obtain an abortion if she does not first meet the parental involvement requirements of her home State.

My primary concern with this legislation is that it unnecessarily puts minors’ health and well-being in danger. In addition, the language is so broadly written that it has the effect of harshly punishing those adult family members and loved ones who try to help a young woman in a time of need.

In addition to criminalizing the actions intended by young women with a difficult decision, this bill would create a new civil action where parents can file a lawsuit against the individual assisting the minor this means relatives, teachers, other trusted adults as well as potentially the doctor, nurse or public staff all could face civil court action.

As a mother and a grandmother, I would argue that, in a perfect world, young women and their parents should communicate openly about all major decisions, including whether to terminate a pregnancy. And, in fact, many young women do involve a parent in these decisions. However, the reality is that not all young women live in a household where they can turn to their parents. Some young women face physical, sexual or emotional abuse from their parents; some families do not open, supporting relationships. For these young women, they may be more comfortable confiding in an older sibling, aunt, or a grandparent. Yet this situation would argue that, in a perfect world, those State laws in many respects because the States that have acted in a way that would require this kind of a notification, this kind of consent, this kind of involvement on a parental level.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to oppose the Child Custody Protection Act, which imposes criminal penalties on those who help transport a minor across State lines to obtain an abortion if she does not first meet the parental involvement requirements of her home State.

My primary concern with this legislation is that it unnecessarily puts minors’ health and well-being in danger. In addition, the language is so broadly written that it has the effect of harshly punishing those adult family members and loved ones who try to help a young woman in a time of need.

In addition to criminalizing the actions intended by young women with a difficult decision, this bill would create a new civil action where parents can file a lawsuit against the individual assisting the minor this means relatives, teachers, other trusted adults as well as potentially the doctor, nurse or public staff all could face civil court action.

As a mother and a grandmother, I would argue that, in a perfect world, young women and their parents should communicate openly about all major decisions, including whether to terminate a pregnancy. And, in fact, many young women do involve a parent in these decisions. However, the reality is that not all young women live in a household where they can turn to their parents. Some young women face physical, sexual or emotional abuse from their parents; some families do not open, supporting relationships. For these young women, they may be more comfortable confiding in an older sibling, aunt, or a grandparent. Yet this situation the early stages of her pregnancy. She may opt to travel out of State, alone, undergoing a medical procedure with no family or friends there to support her.

She may seek a dangerous and illegal abortion. The law means we do not safely tell a parent about her situation faces enough obstacles. We do not need to criminalize well-intentioned assistance provided to her.

I am also concerned that it is not only the young women making a deliberate choice not to tell a parent of an abortion who would suffer under this bill. Access to abortion is declining in this country, for women of all ages. Eighty-seven percent of counties no longer have a doctor who will perform an abortion. For many women, the most convenient provider is across State lines.

An older sister or aunt accompanying a minor to the nearest provider may unwittingly become a criminal. Even if neither is required to report the sexual abuse or the consent, this act of family support would be criminalized. A grandmother or sister could have no idea that she is violating a Federal law when she helps a family member access legal medical care.

But proponents of this legislation would like you to believe that this debate is not about young women who can no longer find a doctor who will provide full services in their home State. To them, this is not about the young women who, for whatever reason, need to look beyond a parent for adult support.

While supporters of this bill are correctly horrified by stories of girls kid-napped by older boyfriends and forced into having abortions they did not want, this legislation does not create a limited solution to fix that problem. In fact, in many cases the actions in these circumstances are already illegal. Laws prohibit kidnapping. Laws prohibit statutory rape. Medical ethics require that physicians obtain informed consent from the patient before performing any medical procedure. People who violate these laws can already be prosecuted. I welcome a debate on policies that will crack down further on sexual predators who abuse young women.

If there is a problem that current laws are not being enforced, then let’s address that; if there is a problem that these laws are not strong enough, then let’s address that, but let’s not criminalize behavior of a loving family member, friend, or confidant who is trying to help a young girl in a traumatic time in her life.

This bill is not about protecting vulnerable young women from crime. It is about limiting their access to a constitutionally protected medical procedure. This legislation does reflect a great deal of concern for potential harm and the violation of rights—of parents.

Under this proposal, a parent has legal recourse if his or her supposed “right” to stop their daughter’s abortion is violated. Parents can sue to collect damages.

This bill, in fact, could create a situation in which a mother sues a grandmother for helping her granddaughter escape her abusive family. Yet it leaves a young woman with no recourse for the violation of their right to seek and receive safe medical care of her choice.

This legislation also runs counter to basic notions of federalism, linking a young woman to the law of her home State no matter where she may be living. No other State laws follow her to college or summer camp. In this country, State laws do not extend beyond State borders. When residents from my home State of California travel to Nevada for vacations, they are allowed to play the slot machines, even though gambling is illegal at home. There is no reason why laws should reach across State lines to restrict another to a safe and legal medical procedure.

I wish this were a perfect world. I wish we could legislate that every child has a loving and stable parent to guide him or her through the trials of adolescence. Instead, we have children who are already troubled. A young woman facing an unplanned pregnancy in an unstable situation must be able to turn to another trusted adult—without the fear of subjecting the adult to Federal criminal liability.

The very fact that we are having this debate is a clear demonstration of the leadership’s misplaced priorities. They claim this is a women’s health issue, a family values issue. We have had a few legislative days remaining this year. There are so many other problems we should be addressing.

We should be debating ways to prevent these difficult situations from arising in the first place. We should be discussing policies that promote honest information about reproductive health and ready access to contraceptives. No teen should face an unplanned pregnancy. Those that do must not face it alone.

I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this bill that endangers young women’s health and turns their relatives into criminals.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today the Senate considered legislation that proponents claim will reduce the number of abortions. But in reality everyone knows this legislation will do little to lower the number of abortions, and it will do even less to protect the role of parents in our society. In a move that is all too typical of the coarsening partisanship of this city and of this Congress, instead of bringing before the Senate legislation that could actually reduce the number of abortions, the Senate Republican leader decided to just check another on the Republican “To Do” list before election day this November.

It is sad that the Senate has missed this opportunity to enact legislation to prevent unwanted pregnancies. The senator from Arizona agrees that we should do more to reduce incidences of teen pregnancy. And yet the bill debated in the Senate today is little more than a political stunt that will do little to reduce the number of abortions.

This is not the first time we have faced legislation like this which reflects a political calculus, not a policy consideration. In 1998, just prior to that year’s election, the Republican leadership brought forward a similar bill. I opposed that legislation as well, as it failed to take meaningful steps towards reducing abortions and because it threatened to endanger victims of rape, incest, or abusive family situations.

If the Senate Republican leadership were really serious about reducing the number of abortions among young women, they’d get serious about efforts to prevent unwanted pregnancies in the first place. Research shows that reducing unwanted pregnancies significantly reduces the rate of abortion. And the good news is that we know what works to prevent unwanted pregnancies in the first place. In fact, the amendment offered by Senators Lautenberg and Menendez earlier today, which I cosponsored, would take meaningful steps to reduce teen pregnancy.

Communities need to provide education for our children so they understand the serious consequences of their decisions; we need to support effective, existing after-school programs that provide academic enrichment for at-risk kids; and we need to invest in new efforts to help reduce teen pregnancy.

If the Senate leadership were really serious about reducing the number of abortions, they would get serious about providing support for foster care and adoption. Instead, last year this Congress limited the number of children eligible for foster care and reduced funding for state foster care systems. What kind of family values does that represent?

If the Senate leadership were really serious about reducing the number of abortions, we would address the problems that working families face in raising their children. We would increase the minimum wage and extend the earned income tax credit so that the decision whether to have an abortion is not based on whether there is enough money to support the child.

This is where we should be focusing our energy—on providing families with the tools they need to raise a family; on providing mothers with the care they need to carry out their pregnancies, and on educating our teens about the consequences of their actions.

But then again, the Child Custody Protection Act isn’t intended to reduce... teen pregnancies. In fact, it accomplishes very little except to risk taking a very young victim of rape or incest—a victim of an abusive family situation—one who is just plain scared—and putting someone they turn to at risk of criminal prosecution, jail time and fines if they decide to help a minor with one of the most painful decisions a person could be asked to make. It targets the most vulnerable minors—those needing the most help because of poor family relations, even serious abuse—and makes it more difficult for them to receive critical advice and support.

Is it right to punish a victim of incest to get consent from the very person who impregnated her? What rational person wouldn’t agree that she has been victimized enough already? Is it really smart, or fair, or right to punish and remove the caring adult who has given her a child? Is punishment relying on to get her through such an ordeal? Is it right to consider sending a grandparent, a clergy member, a doctor, or a counselor to prison if a terrified young woman has nowhere else to turn?

This discussion isn’t about most families. If one of my daughters were in a terrible situation, I believe they could and would turn to me or to their late mother. I know they could. I think every one of us in the Senate know our children would turn to us in a time of desperation. That is how we raise our kids. Ideally all young women facing an unplanned pregnancy will turn to their parents for guidance when faced with this kind of decision. And in most cases they do. In fact, one study found that the overwhelming majority of parents in states without mandatory parental involvement laws knew of their child’s pregnancy. But 30 percent of young women who did not tell their parents about their decision did so out of fear of violence in the family or fear of being forced to leave home. What does that tell you about these situations? Does this bill do more to address the real-life tragic situations in which awful decisions are being made.

This bill is not the way we should be addressing the problem of unwanted pregnancies. We should not be criminalizing grandparents or clergy or doctors who try to help young women in horrible situations. We should not be criminalizing that small percentage of people willing to accompany a minor in need to obtain an otherwise legal abortion.

Here’s the bottom line: If this bill had simply made exceptions for young women in abusive situations—like rape, or incest—and ensured that children turned to their parents would have a responsible, caring adult to turn to, I would have voted for it. And I guarantee so would all of my colleagues. Mr. President, 100 to 0, that’s the kind of statement we could have made—but that kind of unity was sacrificed on the altar of Republican wedge-issue politics.

Of course, parents should be fully involved in all decisions regarding their children, but refusing to take into account possible family dysfunction, including abuse or incest, would be both unconstitutional and unacceptable. It would be dangerous. It would be anything but pro-life. It would be dangerous to a parent who is gung-ho to make sure their child is not a victim of abuse. There must be a way to bring a supportive and nurturing adult into that difficult decision. This bill forecloses that possibility.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, just last week the Senate unanimously approved landmark legislation that will help protect American children from violent sexual predators and other such criminals who would do them harm.

I proudly cosponsored and worked to strengthen the Walsh Act, Director Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 because the States needed, and asked for, the Federal Government’s help to detect and deter violent sexual predators. The nationwide sex offender database and requirements are critical components that help prevent violent sexual predators from slipping underground and out of sight. Indeed, the Senate’s passage of the Adam Walsh Act was a banner day for the safety of our children.

And today, Mr. President, the Senate will consider another important measure to protect the health and safety of American children—in particular, female minors. I am referring, of course, to S. 403, the Child Custody Protection Act. I am proud to join Senator ENSIGN and a bipartisan group of over 40 Senators who have cosponsored this legislation.

This long- overdue proposal amends the Federal Criminal Code to prohibit the transportation of a minor across State lines—without parental consent or notification—in order to obtain an abortion. To date, at least 37 States have laws on the books that require a minor child who wishes to have an abortion to notify or obtain the consent of her parents. But let’s be clear: this bill neither establishes a Federal parental consent law, nor supersedes existing State laws. It merely reinforces the prerogatives of those States that have enacted parental notification and consent laws.

So the question before the Senate today is a straightforward one: Should Congress safeguard the legislative choice made by those States that have chosen to preserve the role of parents and guardians in the health and medical decisions of their children—particularly, their minor daughters? I believe that we must safeguard State prerogatives by protecting parental rights.

If the State has on its books a constitutionally sound parental notification or consent law, parents in that State should not have to fear that their minor daughters can legally be driven into a neighboring State to receive an abortion.

This is not a hypothetical concern. The New York Times reported that Planned Parenthood in Philadelphia [Pennsylvania has a parental consent law] has a list of clinics, from New York to Baltimore, to which they will refer teenagers, according to the organization’s executive director . . . .

There is more disturbing evidence that abortion clinics in States bordering Pennsylvania—States that don’t have parental involvement laws—will advertise the lack of such requirements and use it as a selling point in their advertisements directed at minors in Pennsylvania.

I also worry that interstate transportation of minors to have abortions may be used to conceal criminal activity—like statutory rape. I, for one, believe that we ought to make it a Federal crime for an adult male who impregnates a young girl to transport her out of her home State—without the knowledge and consent of her parents—in order to have an abortion. That is just common sense.

Mr. President, this legislation is not about abortion rights. It is about protecting the health and safety of children and preserving the role of parents in decisions concerning their child’s medical care. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of the Child Custody Protection Act, I am pleased to see that this legislation is finally being considered and hopeful that it will be passed quickly. S. 403 makes subject to fines or imprisonment up to 1 year anyone who ‘knowingly transports a minor across a State line, with the intent that such minor obtain an abortion, and thereby circumvents the right of a parent under a law requiring parental involvement in a minor’s abortion decision, in force in the State where the minor resides.’

The provision I cite is an admirably clear piece of legislative language. It not only makes a salutary change in existing law; it provides an convincing explanation as to why it is needed.

Notwithstanding the abortion debate’s notoriously divisive character, parental involvement not only constitutes an area of near-consensus around which pro-life and pro-choice Americans can come together.

Forty-five States—including my own—have enacted statutes aimed at ensuring that parents of minor girls are not deprived of the opportunity involved in this most sensitive decision, one with profound implications for their daughters’ physical and mental health.

Public opinion polls demonstrate overwhelming support for the proposition that in all but the most extraordinary circumstances—in which instances, the State statutes in question provide for a judicial bypass—parents must be involved in decisions affecting the health of their minor children.

Unfortunately, the public record now provides ample evidence suggesting that these laws are frequently circumvented—often by individuals who by facilitating an abortion may be covering up evidence of a crime: statutory rape.

When abortionists buy advertisements in the yellow pages directories serving communities in neighboring States with parental involvement stat-tutes, and when they adorn the ads with helpful reminders that their services can be obtained without parental consent, both the authority of State lawmakers and the sanctity of the parent-child bond are mocked.

As a father and grandfather, I believe it is vital that the Senate today draw a line against this egregious manifestation of the abortion culture. Colleagues who support a liberal abortion regime but do not want them to want the practice to be rare should welcome this opportunity to support a unifying commonsense measure that helps give effect to public policies embraced by legislators of both parties in the States.

Mr. SHELBY of Florida, Mr. President, I will vote in favor of the Child Custody Protection Act.

I support the Florida law which was enacted after voters approved an amendment to the Florida Constitution. The law provides that Florida par-tents must be notified prior to their minor child obtaining an abortion, and it provides that a judge can grant an exception.

This act will help ensure that minors in Florida consult with their parents before obtaining an abortion in another State, while also preserving the ability of minors to seek a judicial waiver when that notice is not in the best interest of the minor.

The law would also be of help in nearly every case, young women do themselves, their babies, and their families well to seek guidance from their parents or legal guardians before making such a serious decision. Most parents honestly do have their daughter’s’ best interests at heart. Consequently, how can parents not be informed when their children are confronted with making one of the most critical decisions of their lives, one which carries with it such extraordinary, expensive, and irretrievable consequences?

I have a long history of support for parental notification in such difficult circumstances. In 1991, I supported legislation that would have required entities receiving grants under Title X of the Public Health Service Act to provide parental notification in the case of minor patients seeking abortions.

While I support parental notification, I would acknowledge the importance of parental guidance and consent when a child is faced with a difficult decision by stating “the law’s concept of family rests on a presumption that parents possess what a child lacks in maturity, experience, and capacity for judgment required for making life’s difficult decisions.”

At a time when a school nurse cannot even administer aspirin to a child with a headache without parental consent, how can we allow a child to have an abortion, a major medical procedure with potentially deadly consequences, without parental consent? I can think of no other time when parental guidance and consent is more important than when an unmartied mother is pregnant and contemplating abortion. A minor girl, who is undoubtedly under incredible stress, does not have the maturity to make the decision to have an abortion on her own. And, it makes matters worse when the child is pressured to have an abortion from the father, the father’s family, or others.

As a father, it appalls me to learn that oftentimes, adult males pressure young women, who are often undoubtedly under incredible stress, to have an abortion without telling anyone and transport these young girls into States without parental consent laws to hide instances of statutory rape. Studies show that the majority of today’s teenage mothers are being impregnated by adult men. One study of 45,000 school-age mothers in California found that two-thirds of the girls were impregnated by adult males, with the median age of the father being 22 years old. The fact that many of these adult men could be charged with statutory rape creates an incentive for them to transport young girls across state lines to have an abortion to avoid criminal prosecution.

Mr. President, the pro-abortion lobby has come out in full force against the Child Custody Protection Act saying that it infringes upon a girl’s right to have an abortion. I have two major objections to that argument. First, I do not believe that a minor child has the life that parent’s minor daughter’s’ consent. At a time when children cannot even be given aspirin without parental consent, they should not be able to undergo a major medical procedure with potentially deadly consequences without parental consent. Second, the Child Custody Protection Act is not about the right to have an abortion; it is about protecting the rights of parents and the well-being of children. It is commonsense legislation that says if one State has established a legal principle for its residents, neighbor States should not discourage those residents from following that principle. This is hardly a radical or
This is a balanced bill. And my hope is that my colleagues will support it. Forty-four States have enacted laws that require some level of parental involvement in a minor’s decision to obtain an abortion. Parental involvement laws are reasonable regulations. At many middle schools and high schools, you cannot get an aspirin from the school nurse without permission from your parents. Would it really make sense to allow a young girl, perhaps only 14 years old, to obtain an abortion without her parents’ involvement? The liberal pro-abortion interest groups routinely tell us that women must have completely unfettered access to abortion throughout their pregnancies. And they typically give two reasons. First, this is a private, medical decision between a woman and her doctor. And second, this is a moral choice that the woman should be able to make without any interference at all. These principles are taken to extremes by these groups. They lead to opposition of almost any regulation of abortion, including informed-consent laws, and even partial-birth abortion. Parental involvement regulations are supported by 90 percent of the American people. But the reasoning of these interest groups leads them to a position of abortion absolutism—there can be no interference at any time with the decision to undergo this medical procedure. I disagree with these arguments. Even so, taking these groups on their own terms leads me to believe that they should actually support parental involvement laws. After all, if abortion is a medical procedure, do we really want minors electing invasive medical procedures without a parent or guardian? The liberal pro-abortion interest groups routinely tell us that women’s reproductive rights are compromised. Yet with minor children, we are being asked to take a minor across State lines, to a State with a more liberal abortion policy, to obtain an abortion without their parents’ involvement. Taking a minor across State lines without her parents’ knowledge? Most people would call this kidnapping. And in many cases, the actions come close.

I want to thank my colleague from Alabama, Senator Sessions, for chairing a hearing on the Judiciary Committee on this subject in the 108th Congress. The hearing was very informative. This is what we learned from the testimony presented there:

The American Academy of Pediatrics Committee on Adolescence has found that “[a]lmost two thirds of adolescent mothers have partners older than 20 years of age.”

The National Center for Health Statistics concluded that “nearly girls 14 or younger when they first had sex, a majority of these first . . . experiences were nonvoluntary. Evidence also indicates that among unmarried teenage mothers, two-thirds of the fathers are age 20 or older, suggesting that differences in power and status exist between many sexual partners.”

In a study of over 46,000 pregnancies by school-age girls in California, researchers found that 71%, or over 33,000, were fathered by adult post-high-school men whose mean age was 22.6 years, an average of five years older than the mothers. Even among junior high school mothers aged 15 or older, most births are fathered by adult men 6 to 7 years their senior. Men aged 25 or older father more births among California school-age girls than do boys under age 18.

I could go on, but I want to thank Professor Teresa Collett of the University of St. Thomas School of Law for putting these statistics together in her testimony. They are important. They remain uncontested by those opposed to this bill. And they tell an important story.

Many thousands of teenage pregnancies are caused by predatory males, many years the girl’s senior, who should be prosecuted for statutory rape. Many thousands of teenage pregnancies are caused by felonious activity—scared and pregnant young girls; wounded and abused by these sexual predators.

And parental involvement laws go a long way toward making sure that people become aware of this abuse. Yet currently, it is too easy for these predators to circumvent these laws.

We have heard of older men, or their mothers, or their friends, who take these vulnerable young girls across State lines to get an abortion, and get rid of the evidence of the crime. And then when these girls are dumped back at home, those who care for them and love them are oblivious to what they have been through. This is not only physically dangerous. It is a threat to the spirit of a wounded and confused young woman.

This is a very hypothetical situation. In the Senate Judiciary Committee, we heard from Joyce Farley of Dushore, Pa. In 1995 her daughter, Crystal, was raped and impregnated by a 19-year-old man whose mother then took Crystal for an abortion into the State of New York.

This was not a decision for this man, or his mother to make. These people were not interested in making the right decision for Crystal. They were making a decision that was in the best interests of the man who raped this child.

The Child Custody Protection Act would protect these young women. It would protect the rights of parents.

The right to obtain an abortion is an important one. It is a medical decision, but it is also so much more. It is a decision that will impact a woman for the rest of her life. And it is a decision that a minor should, in most cases, make with the involvement of a parent or a legal guardian.

This important bill that my colleague from Nevada, Senator ENSIGN, has introduced will go a long way toward discouraging the abuse that often leads to teenage pregnancy, toward protecting minors from predatory males, and toward protecting the constitutionally recognized right of States to involve parents in these important decisions.

I look forward to this debate. There should be some bipartisan consensus on this issue, and my hope is that we will reach one. This is a bill that is worthy of our support. It protects the rights of parents that have been recognized by the States that we represent.

We should do our best to support those rights. I encourage my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am disappointed that the Senate is bypassing normal procedure to debate a controversial bill on which the Senate refused to proceed 8 years ago. That was the last action taken on this kind of bill. Since then we have passed. Our Constitution has not changed. I am thankful for that. The complex issues and federalism concerns that so many Senators voiced 8 years ago still remain. So if anything has changed, it is difficult to know. Instead of regular order. Instead of a act of Congress, we are entering into a controversy to gather the facts, to consider the legislation, to amend it or reject it, we find ourselves proceeding almost heller-skelter on what is a very serious matter with important personal, political, and legislative implications.

It is a striking contrast that we turn to this bill after last week’s bipartisan unifying effort in which we took four months to hold nine hearings and work with our counterparts in the House to reauthorize key provisions of the historic Voting Rights Act of 1965. If that process exemplified the Senate at its best, this proceeding stands in sharp contrast. The press is reporting that the Senate is being required to turn to this bill instead of the Republican-designed run up to the elections. Having spent time on a constitutional amendment that would have cut back on the Bill or Rights, having wasted precious time seeking to write discrimination into the Constitution, this is next on their campaign checklist of items needed to rev up their voting base. In fact, having just seen the President reject our efforts to authorize Federal funds for vital stem cell research, the Republicans are now rushing to reopen the abortion debate. I am a little surprised they are not seeking another vote on some further intervention into the circumstances of Terri Schiavo and her family.

In fact, the bill before us, like the legislation rushed to the floor to intervene in Florida’s legal system in the case of Terri Schiavo, is another case of congressional overreach and of trying to federalize decisions that previously have been left to the States. I unequivocally support the goal of fostering closer familial relationships and the value of encouraging parental involvement in a child’s decision about how to respond to an unplanned pregnancy. We all do. That is not the issue. I thank Senators BOXER, MENENDEZ, LAUTENBERG, and FEINSTEIN for bringing amendments seeking to make this legislation more considered while also being beneficial to those in need of government help, rather than an imposition of the heavy hand of government intervention. I support their amendments.

The underlying bill, however, raises challenging issues of federalism that caused many of us to reject it before and will lead me to oppose it, again. I find it ironic that many of the same people who insist that fully considered State laws on civil union and civil partnership and marriage not be respected, are those who in the context of this legislation insist that State laws be held to bind people even when they travel outside their States, and that Federal criminal law become the enforcement mechanism to ensure that they are binding.

The underlying bill does little to strengthen communication and trust in families. While I know as a father that most parents hope their children would turn to them when they need help, the law will make that happen. No law will force a young pregnant woman to talk to her parents when she is too frightened to do so. This bill does not increase the participation of the adults who love young women. Rather, it is likely to drive young women who are afraid to seek help from their families away from their families and greatly increase the dangers they face from an unwanted pregnancy.

The nature of our Federal system revolves around States maintaining their historically dominant role in developing and implementing policies that affect family matters, such as marriage, divorce, end-of-life choices, child custody and policies on parental involvement in minors’ abortion decisions. I respect that. I respect each State to define those family relationships and have resisted Federal intrusion into those matters. Congress should not dictate the nature of family relationships. I had hoped we learned our lesson on this when the American people reacted with outrage to the President and Congress intervening in the Terri Schiavo matter.

Twenty-six States have adopted parental consent or notification laws that are currently enforced and meet the bill’s definition of a “law requiring parental involvement in a minor’s abortion decision.” That means that the remaining States—the 24 States that include Vermont—either have opted for no such law, or have decided on a State law that allows for the involvement of adults other than a parent or guardian in the minor’s reproductive decision. While I respect the 26 States that respect the 24 States and the privacy rights guaranteed by the Constitution. The direct consequence of this bill would be to federalize the reach of the most constricted notification laws and to override the policies in the remaining States.

It is telling that the bill does not expressly establish a Federal parental consent requirement. It does not directly override the various State laws in this area of traditional State interest. Instead, it seeks to do indirectly what it will not and likely could not do directly. Doing so makes it no less an abuse of Federal power. The underlying bill would use the power and resources of the Federal Government to force favored States’ laws into effect in the other States that have made other legislative choices. It would impose a law that a State has chosen not to adopt on that State, regardless of the choice its people have made through the legislative process. Most troubling of all, it would create a Federal crime as a mechanism for such Federal interference. It is an affront to federalism and a exercize in heavy-handed overcriminalization.

Make no mistake: Despite the proponents’ contention that this bill does not attempt to regulate any purely intrastatal activity, the effect of this bill would be to impose the policies of certain States on the remaining ones. Just because some in Congress may prefer the policies of certain States over those in the others does not mean we should give Federal policies enforcement authority across the Nation. Doing so is not only wrong, it sets a dangerous precedent.

An example apart from family law: Should residents of States that prohibit gambling not be able to travel to Las Vegas or Atlantic City or the many other places that now allow it? It is the nature of our Federal system that when residents of a State travel to neighboring States or across the Nation, they must conform their behavior to the States they visit. When residents of each State are forced to carry with them only the laws of their own State, we will have turned our Federal system on its ear.

Congress has wisely repealed laws in the past that require residents of each State to carry with them only the laws of their own State. We saw this when the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution was passed. That outlawed slavery and repealed article IV, section 2, paragraph 3 of the Constitution, which authorized return of runaway slaves to their owners. That constitutional authority and such laws as the Fugitive Slave Act of 1793 enabled slave owners from slave States to reclaim slaves who managed to escape to free States or territories. None of us—and certainly not the sponsors of this legislation—would ever condone slavery. Those discredited laws and the infamous Dred Scott case are about the only precedent we have for a bill like this that seeks to federalize the exercise of Federal law to enforce a particular State’s laws against people wherever those people may travel.

I was proud in November, 2004, when the Senate unanimously passed a resolution sponsored by Senators McCain, Hatch, Kennedy, and Reid to express the sense of the Senate that John Arthur “Jack” Johnson should be pardoned for his crime of transporting a white woman across State lines for “an immoral purpose.” The injustice done to Jack Johnson was something we all joined to try to correct many years later. Let us not allow the misuse of Federal power to start over in a new area of law.

This bill would sweep into its criminal and civil liability reach extended family members, including grand-parents or aunts or uncles, who respond to a cry for help from a young relative by helping her travel across State lines to terminate a pregnancy. In addition to close family members, any other person to whom a young pregnant woman may turn for help, including health care providers and religious counselors, could be draged into court and face prison time on criminal charges. Rev. Doctor Katherine Hancock Ragsdale once helped a 15-year-old who was forced for her safety if her father learned of her pregnancy, and she had no relative to turn to for help. She was alone and desperate. Should offering comfort subject Reverend Ragsdale to Federal prosecution?

The purported goal of this bill, to foster closer familial relationships, will not be served by threatening to throw into jail any grandmother or aunt or sibling who helps a young relative. The result of this bill will discourage young women from turning to a trusted adult for advice and assistance. Instead, these young women may be forced then into the hands of strangers or into isolation. Keep in mind what this bill does not do. It does not prohibit pregnant minors from traveling across State lines to have an abortion, even if their purpose is to avoid their parents. The perverse effect this bill will have is: if it is followed, would be to encourage more young women to travel alone to obtain abortions. I will not support an effort that may lead back to the days of "back alley" abortions. How can anyone view these outcomes as desirable or fostering closer familial ties? Young pregnant women who seek the counsel and involvement of close family members when they cannot confide in their parents—for example, where a parent has committed incest or there is a history of child abuse—would subject those same close relatives to the risk of criminal prosecution and civil suit, if the young woman subsequently travels across State lines to terminate her pregnancy without that relative's permission. What do we want? We should not compound these most difficult circumstances by taking actions that if successful will succeed in isolating young pregnant women, forcing them to run away from home or pushing them to seek protection from strangers at a time of crisis.

No law will force a young pregnant woman to involve her parents in her abortion decision if she is determined to keep that fact secret from her parents. No law can force a familial connection that does not exist. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, the percentages of minors who inform their parents about their intent to have abortions are essentially the same in States with and without notification laws. The President remarked just last week that “governments can’t change hearts.” States have found that there are families in which parental notification laws are not effective.

While doing nothing to foster familial relationships, this bill would do serious damage to important federalism and constitutional principles. The underlying bill rests on a view that the proposed statute violates those principles of federalism. It is our considered view that the proposed statute violates those principles. Principles that are fundamental to our constitutional order. That statute violates the rights of states to enact and enforce their own laws governing conduct within their territorial boundaries, and the rights of the residents of each of the United States... to travel to and from any State of the Union for lawful purposes, a right strongly reaffirmed by the Supreme Court.” These leading constitutional scholars contend that the bill as drafted is unconstitutional. I will ask that a copy of their analysis be printed in the RECORD, at the conclusion of my statement.

All these reasons—legal, constitutional, practical and institutional—I will vote against the underlying bill. I urge all Senators to respect federalism, the Constitution and families by rejecting this attempt to political fundamental decisions and family relationships.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the aforementioned analysis be printed in the RECORD.

Re H.R. 476 and Constitutional Principles of Federalism

Introduction

We have been asked to submit our assessment of whether H.R. 476, now pending before the House, is consistent with constitutional principles of federalism. It is our considered view that the proposed statute violates those principles, principles that are fundamental to our constitutional order. That statute violates the rights of states to enact and enforce their own laws governing conduct within their territorial boundaries, and the rights of the residents of each of the United States and of the District of Columbia to travel to and from any State of the Union for lawful purposes, a right strongly reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in its recent landmark decision in Saenz v. Roe, 536 U.S. 489 (1999). We have therefore concluded that the proposed law would, if enacted, violate the Constitution of the United States.

H.R. 476 would provide criminal and civil penalties, including imprisonment for up to one year, for any person who knowingly transports an individual who has not attained the age of 18 years across a State line, without the parental consent or notification, or the judicial authorization, that would have been required by that law in the State where the individual resides.

One need reflect only briefly on what rejecting that proposition would mean in order to understand its counterintuitive nature. Suppose that your home state or Congress could lock you into the legal regime of your home state as you travel across the country. This would mean that the speed limits, marriage regulations, restrictions on adoption, rules about assisted suicide, firearms regulations, and all other laws of your home state would follow you as you crossed from one state into another, either temporarily or permanently, would in fact follow you into all 49 of the other states as you traveled the nation in search of more hospitable “rules of the road.” If your search was for a more favorable legal environment in which to make your home, you might as well just lock up the laws of distant states on the internet rather than roaming about in a futile effort at sampling them, since you will not actually experience them unless you go there. And if your search was for a less hostile legal environment in which to attend college or spend a summer vacation or obtain a medical procedure, you might as well skip even the internet, since the theoretically less hostile laws of other jurisdictions will mean nothing unless your state of residence remains unchanged.

The federalism principle we have described operates routinely in our national life. Indeed, it is so commonplace it is taken for granted. Thus, for example, neither Virginia nor Congress could prohibit residents of Virginia, where casino gambling is illegal, from traveling interstate to gamble in a casino in Missouri, where casino gambling is legal. Nor does it uniformly apply home-state penalties. Nor does it uniformly apply home-state laws to the travels of its citizens with that state—by traveling to states where hunting is legal in order to avail themselves of those pro-hunting laws just because such hunting may be unlawful in their own states, but which New York has chosen not to forbid. To call interstate travel for such purposes an “evasion” or “circumvention” of certain laws relating to abortion—as H.R. 476 purports to do, see H.R. 476, §2(a) (heading of the proposed 18 U.S.C. §241) (“Transportation of minors in circumvention of certain laws relating to abortion”)—is to misunderstand the basic premise of federalism: one is entitled to avoid those laws by traveling interstate. Doing so amounts to neither evasion nor circumvention.

Put simply, you may not be compelled to abandon your citizenship with that state as a condition of voting with your feet for the legal and political regime of whatever other state you wish to visit. The fact that you have the right to travel interstate, whether by air, rail, or road, may extend to you the right to engage in activities unlawful in your home state as well as in the state to which you intend to return. No state may force you to violate another state’s laws simply by taking advantage of the privilege of traveling interstate. Nor may a state enforce its laws by requiring you to travel to another state, as a condition of voting with your feet for the legal and political regime of that state, or by taking advantage of the privilege of traveling interstate, as a condition of voting with your feet for the legal and political regime of that state. Similarly, no state may force you to violate its own law by taking advantage of the privilege of traveling interstate. Nor may a state, by somehow linking its own law to some federal law or to some international law, require you to violate the laws of some other state by traveling interstate.

The essence of federalism is that the several states have not only different physical territories and different topographies but also different laws, different legal and political cultures. Crossing the border into another state, which every citizen has a right to do, may perhaps not permit the traveler to escape all tax or regulation. It may not permit all federal laws to be rendered virtually meaningless if the traveler could not shake the conduct-constraining laws of her home state—the proposition that a state may not project its laws into other states by following its citizens there has been repeatedly rejected. One need reflect only briefly on what rejecting that proposition would mean in order to understand its counterintuitive nature. Suppose that your home state or Congress could lock you into the legal regime of your home state as you travel across the country. This would mean that the speed limits, marriage regulations, restrictions on adoption, rules about assisted suicide, firearms regulations, and all other laws of your home state would follow you as you crossed from one state into another, either temporarily or permanently, would in fact follow you into all 49 of the other states as you traveled the nation in search of more hospitable “rules of the road.” If your search was for a more favorable legal environment in which to make your home, you might as well just lock up the laws of distant states on the internet rather than roaming about in a futile effort at sampling them, since you will not actually experience them unless you go there. And if your search was for a less hostile legal environment in which to attend college or spend a summer vacation or obtain a medical procedure, you might as well skip even the internet, since the theoretically less hostile laws of other jurisdictions will mean nothing unless your state of residence remains unchanged.

The federalism principle we have described operates routinely in our national life. Indeed, it is so commonplace it is taken for granted. Thus, for example, neither Virginia nor Congress could prohibit residents of Virginia, where casino gambling is illegal, from traveling interstate to gamble in a casino in Missouri, where casino gambling is legal. Nor does it uniformly apply home-state penalties. Nor does it uniformly apply home-state laws to the travels of its citizens with that state—by traveling to states where hunting is legal in order to avail themselves of those pro-hunting laws just because such hunting may be unlawful in their own states, but which New York has chosen not to forbid. To call interstate travel for such purposes an “evasion” or “circumvention” of certain laws relating to abortion—as H.R. 476 purports to do, see H.R. 476, §2(a) (heading of the proposed 18 U.S.C. §241) (“Transportation of minors in circumvention of certain laws relating to abortion”)—is to misunderstand the basic premise of federalism: one is entitled to avoid those laws by traveling interstate. Doing so amounts to neither evasion nor circumvention.
state that chooses not to outlaw obscenity. But that is a far cry from projecting one state’s restrictive gambling, firearms, alcohol, or obscenity laws into another state whenever citizens of the first state venture there.

Thus states cannot prohibit the lawful out-of-state conduct of the citizens of another state, whenever they impose criminal-law-backed burdens— as H.R. 476 would do— upon those lawfully engaged in business or other activity within their borders. In such a case, any attempt to “directly” to assert extraterritorial jurisdiction over persons or property would offend Sister States and exceed the inherent limit of the State’s power.

The Supreme Court recently reaffirmed this fundamental principle in its landmark right-to-travel decision in Saenz v. Roe, 526 U.S. 489 (1999). There the Court held that, even with congressional approval, the State of California was powerless to carouse an exception to its otherwise-applicable legal regime by providing recently-arrived residents with only the welfare benefits that they would have been entitled to receive under the laws of their former states of residence.

This attempt to saddle these interstate travelers with the laws of their former home states—even if only the welfare laws, laws that would operate far less directly and less powerfully than would a special criminal-law restriction on primary conduct—was held to impose an unconstitutional penalty upon their right to interstate travel, which the Court held, is guaranteed them by the Privileges and Immunities Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. See Saenz, 526 U.S. at 493–94.

Although Saenz concerned new residents of a state, the decision also reaffirmed that the constitutional right to travel under the Privileges and Immunities Clause—Const. Art. IV, §2—prohibits a state from imposing any burden on interstate travel that is not constitutionally permissible. As Justice Powell wrote over two decades ago:

“Congress can do to move protection from being the constitutional right to travel interstate and to take advantage of the laws of other states exists even for those citizens who are not yet eighteen. ‘Constitutional rights do not mature and come into being magically only when one attains the state-defined age of majority. Minors, however, are protected by the Constitution and possess constitutional rights.’” Planned Parenthood of Central Missouri v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52, 74 (1976).

The case at hand, Saenz, concerned the enactment of a state’s own laws to control that state’s resident’s out-of-state conduct on pain of criminal punishment, whether of that resident or of whoever might assist her to travel interstate, would violate the federal Constitution. See also Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618, 629–630 (1969) (invalidating an Act of Congress mandating a duration of waiting periods for District of Columbia residents seeking to obtain birth assistance). In 1999, this Committee heard testimony from Professor Lino Graglia of the University of Texas School of Law. An opponent of constitutional abortion rights, he candidly acknowledged that “make it . . . more dangerous for young women to exercise their constitutional right to obtain a safe and legal abortion. Testimony of Lino A. Graglia on H.R. 1218 before the Constitution Subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. House of Representatives, May 27, 1999 at 1. He also concluded, that “in practice, the principle of federalism to the extent that it reinforces or makes effective the very small amount of policymaking authority on the abortion issue that the Supreme Court, an arm of the national government, has permitted to remain with the States.” Id. at 2. He testified that he supported the bill because he would support “anything Congress can do to move control of the issue back into the hands of the States.” Id. at 1.

Of course, the description of H.R. 476 we have given above demonstrates, that proposed statute would do nothing to move “back” into the hands of the states any of the control over the abortion profession conceded by Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973), and its progeny. The several states already have their own distinctive regimes for regulating the provision of services to pregnant minors, regimes that are permitted under the Supreme Court’s abortion rulings. That, indeed, is the very premise of this proposed law. Reversing federalism by permitting each state’s law to operate within its own sphere, the proposed federal statute would contravene that essential principle. As Justice Powell wrote in Baird v. Nelson, 421 U.S. 618, 629–630 (1975), that “in some circumstances, such as those assisting the interstate travel of minors seeking abortions may make the federalism injury by imposing its regime regardless of the wishes of her home state, whose legislation might recede from the constitutional nor-
Second, the fact that the penalties on travel out of state by minors who do not first seek parental consent or judicial bypass are triggered only by intent to obtain a lawful abortion shows that the minor’s interest in obtaining the abortion has more stringent “minor protection” provisions in the form of parental involvement rules than the state of destination, renders any exceptions to the basic rule of federalism unavailable.

To begin with, the proposed law, unlike one of the defects to existing federalism’s determination of what will best protect the emotional health and physical safety of its pregnant minors who seek to terminate their pregnancies, would subvert states’ strong, strict parental control laws and subordinate the interests of states that have decided that legally-mandated consent or notification is not a constitutionally required protection for pregnant minors. The law does not purport to impose a uniform nationwide requirement that all pregnant young women should be subject to the abortion laws of their home states and only those abortion laws wherever they may travel. Thus, under H.R. 476, a pregnant minor whose parents believe that it would be both constitutionally acceptable and profoundly disrespectful to their mature, sexually active daughter to require her by law to obtain their consent before abortion, and who seeks to travel to a state whose laws reflect that view, would, despite the judgment expressed in the laws of her home state, still be required to obtain parental consent and she seek an abortion in a neighboring state with a stricter parental involvement law—something she might do, for example, because that is where the nearest abortion provider is located. This substantively slanted way in which H.R. 476 would operate fatally undermines any argument that might otherwise be available that principles governing the Full Faith and Credit Clause, which was constitutionalized only when the medical procedure being obtained in another state is the termination of a pregnancy. It is as though Congress proposed to assist parents in controlling their children when, and only when, those children wish to terminate constitutionally protected pregnancy.

In addition, the proposed law, again unlike one protecting parental involvement generally, selectively targets one form of control: control with respect to the constitutionally protected procedure of terminating a pregnancy before viability. The proposed law does not do a thing for parental control if the minor is being assisted into another state (or, where the relevant regulation is local, into another city or county) for the purpose of obtaining a tattoo, or endoscopic surgery to correct a problem in another surgery for an eye defect. The law is activated only when the medical procedure being obtained in another state is the termination of a pregnancy. It is as though Congress proposed to assist parents in controlling their children when, and only when, those children wish to terminate constitutionally protected pregnancy.

The basic constitutional principle that such laws overlook is that the greater power does not necessarily include the lesser. Thus, for example, even though so-called “fighting words” may be banned altogether despite the First Amendment, it is unconstitutional, the Supreme Court held in 1992, for government selectively to ban the use of fighting words that are racist or anti-Semitic in character. See R.A.V. v. City of St. Paul, 505 U.S. 377, 391-392 (1992). To take another example, Congress could not constitutionally require a minor to assist in the state where she has had an abortion in the past to cross a state line in order to obtain a lawful form of cosmetic surgery elsewhere if that minor has already obtained such surgery in another state. The proposed law does so as well. Thus, even if a law were properly drawn to protect minors could constitutionally displace one of the basic rules of federalism, the proposed statute cannot.

Lastly, in oral testimony given in 1999 before a subcommittee on the Constitution of Professor John Harrison of the University of Virginia, while conceding that ordinarily a law such as this, which purported to impose parental consent and notification laws in order to prevent her from engaging in lawful conduct in one of the other states, would be constitutionally “doubtful,” argued that the Constitution would be satisfied by the fact that it relates to “domestic relations,” a sphere in which, according to Professor Harrison, “the state with the primary jurisdiction over the rights and responsibilities of parties to the domestic relations is the state of residence...and not the state where the conduct at issue occurs. See transcript of the Hearing of the Constitution Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee on the Child Custody Protection Act, May 27, 1999. This “domestic relations exception” to principles of federalism described by Professor Harrison, however, does not exist, at least, so far as the Constitution’s con- stitutionality of H.R. 476. To be sure, acting pursuant to Article IV, §1, Congress has pre- scripted special state obligations to accord full faith and credit to judgments in the do- mestic relations context—for example, to child custody determinations and child sup- port orders. 28 U.S.C. §§1738A, 1738B. These principles governing modification of domestic relations orders. In addition, in a controversial decision that might otherwise be available that principles governing the Constitution’s decision that it received eight years ago. States should retain their right to enact and implement appro- priate policies within their territorial boundaries. The Child Custody Protec- tion Act would preempt these rights by allowing the laws of certain States to essentially trump the laws in other States. In an ideal world, all young women who face this difficult decision would be able to turn to their parents. But we do not live in an ideal world, and the reality is that there are young women who feel they cannot turn to a parent out of fear of physical or mental abuse, kicked out, or worse. This bill would deny these young women the ability to turn to another trusted adult for help. Major national medical and public-health organiza- tions, including the American Med- ical Association, the American Acad- emy of Pediatrics, and the American Psychological Association have expressed grave concern about manda- tory parental consent laws for these reasons.

Major focus in the Senate should be on ensuring that unintended pregnancies do not happen in the first place. For these reasons, I intend to continue my work in the Senate to ensure that all women have access to the best infor- mation and reproductive health serv- ices available. If we do that, abortions will become even more rare, as well as staying safe and legal.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on the Child Custody Protection Act. I support the In- tention of the act, which seeks to protect the health and safety of pregnant mi- nors, as well as the rights of parents to be involved in the medical decisions of their minor daughters. However, I believe this act might have gone further in protecting young women in situations of family abuse or incest.

As a parent of two, I understand the importance and centrality of family, and an essential element of that is the parent-child relationship. The Supreme Court noted in Planned Parenthood v. Casey that parental involvement laws related to abortions “are based on the quite reasonable assumption that parents will benefit from consultation with their parents and that children will often not realize that their parents have their best interests at heart.” It is important that, to the extent possible, a young woman be able to consult with her family before making the decision to have an abortion.

Unfortunately, some young women, particularly victims of incest or family violence, cannot safely involve parents in their decision to have an abortion.

In such a circumstance, as my colleagues have rightfully pointed out, the minor girl could seek a judicial bypass, which would allow the girl to petition a judge to waive the parental involvement law. The bypass is intended for situations of incest or family abuse, and would allow for the involvement of appropriate state authorities, making it more likely that the minor girl will be removed from the abusive situation and that the abuser will be brought to justice. The bypass option is fundamental to the rights of the minor, and exists to protect her safety.

Constitutional law requires a parental consent law to contain a judicial bypass provision. However, the circuit courts are divided as to whether parental notification laws also must contain a judicial bypass. I am concerned for those girls who are in an abusive family situation and are unable to have the assurance that could enact a parental notification law without a bypass option. I believe something must be done to strengthen the bypass requirements in this bill to ensure the protection of minors in abusive families.

Given the unanimous consent agreement, I do not have the opportunity to amend the Child Custody and Protection Act on the floor in order to strengthen the bypass option in cases of parental notification. I will look to my colleagues in conference to consider adding a provision that would ensure, with respect to parental notification, that minor girls in incestuous or family situations be able to seek a bypass, whether it be the judicial bypass or, as in Utah, the medical bypass, which permits a physician to waive the parental notification requirement in cases of incest or family abuse. The physician must also notify State authorities.

It is right to protect pregnant girls and their families from those who do not have the minor girl’s best interest at heart. Mr. President, I only ask that everyone vote to protect the health and safety of those minor girls seeking an abortion who feel they cannot safely turn towards their family.

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I am the parent of two young daughters. And as a parent, it is my sincere hope that my daughters will always feel they can come to me or my wife with any problem. So, even though I strongly believe in a woman’s right to choose, I also believe that they should not become pregnant, should talk to their parents before considering an abortion.

But I also know that the reality is different for many young women. Some don’t live in a traditional family household. Others don’t have a parent in whom they are comfortable confiding. For these young women, the most trusted adult in their life may be a grandparent, an aunt, or a clergy member.

I certainly hope these trusted adults would want to help a young person through a difficult time like a pregnancy. Unfortunately, this bill all but eliminates this option for young women. Instead of encouraging pregnant teens to seek the help of adults, this bill criminalizes adults who attempt to help a young woman in need and essentially abandons them to confront a difficult issue on their own.

In fact, this bill would criminalize adults even if they are attempting to help a young woman in need. Under this bill, if a grandparent gave a young woman a ride across a state line—say from South Dakota into neighboring Iowa—and that young woman ended up seeking an abortion, that grandparent could spend up to a year in prison.

Now, there are a lot of other problems with the bill: there is no health exception, no judicial bypass, and the notion that one State’s laws can take precedence over another State’s laws is unconstitutional and unacceptable. But the fundamental flaw with the bill is its criminalization of compassion. At a time when teenagers most need help, this bill would create a confusing and trusted adults—whether it’s an older sister, an aunt or grandparent, or health professionals, social workers, or a minister—to stand to the side and watch the young woman go it alone.

I wish this bill was an honest effort to confront the real issue here: unwanted teen pregnancies. No one in this body—whether pro-choice or pro-life—wants young women to seek abortions. But this bill does not address this serious issue. I hope we can work together to pass legislation that will provide young people today with the information they need to prevent unwanted teen pregnancies. I regret that I am unable to support this bill today.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition to the Child Custody Protection Act. I oppose this bill for three reasons. The first is that it does nothing to promote the health and safety of our children. The second is that I do not believe this bill pass constitutional muster. The third reason I oppose this bill because it is just another example of the continual assault on women’s reproductive freedom.

I strongly believe that minors should involve their parents in all important decisions. This includes the decision to have an abortion. Research shows that most women voluntarily involve their parents when making this decision. However, I recognize that there are some young women who cannot talk to their parents about this issue. Some young women may not live with either of their parents, and instead live with a grandparent, aunt, or another adult relative. Some young women may be living with someone who they experience physical and sexual abuse and may be threatened with further abuse should their parents be aware of a pregnancy. Yet young women facing pregnancy crisis need help and support.

There are no exceptions in this bill which address the realities of women’s lives. The reality is that some young women come from abusive homes. The unfortunate reality is that sometimes young women are raped by their fathers, and this results in a pregnancy. As a reality, a young woman may need a trusted adult whether it be a grandparent, older sibling, priest or rabbi, to accompany them if they choose to get an abortion.

This bill does not help these young women. In fact, this bill says to women who cannot involve their parents that they have to go it alone. That is why I voted for the Feinstein amendment which would have allowed other trusted adults like grandparents or clergy members to be allowed to step in when a young woman could not go to her parents for help. This amendment was a step in the right direction. It acknowledged that unfortunately some young women cannot talk to their parents about this very important decision.

That is why I also voted for the Lautenberg-Menendez amendment. This amendment addresses the causes of teen pregnancy. The amendment takes positive steps to prevent teenage girls from getting pregnant in the first place. It funds teen pregnancy prevention programs in schools and community settings. The amendment provides funding to keep teens out of trouble and on the road to success. It restores budget cuts to after school programs and physical education classes.

I also oppose this bill because it does not pass constitutional muster. Not only does it totally ignore cases where a young woman’s health is threatened. That clearly undermines the major holding in Stenberg v. Carhart which requires any law regulating abortion must contain an exception for a woman’s health. Let’s be clear: because this bill does not contain an exception to protect the health of young women it will be ruled unconstitutional.

Finally, I oppose this bill because it is yet another assault on women’s reproductive freedom. I strongly support a woman’s right to choose and have fought to improve women’s health during the more than two decades I have served in Congress. Whether it is establishing offices of women’s health, fighting for coverage for contraceptives, or requiring Federal quality standards for mammography, I will continue the fight to improve women’s health.

Today, I will oppose S. 403 because it forces young women who are dealing with a crisis pregnancy to go it alone and deprives them of the advice and assistance of a trusted adult. It assumes that every family is safe, stable, and supportive. The bill ignores that some minors no mom and dad for help. It does not make our children any safer. I urge my colleagues to vote against S. 403.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 403, the Child Custody Protection Act. This bill prohibits transporting minors across State lines to obtain an abortion without parental notice or consent. I have and will continue to fight for the protection of children in the womb as well as the safety of minors.

I believe that life begins at the moment of conception and that children in the womb deserve the same rights and protection as all other human beings.

The Child Custody Protection Act will not only help protect these children in the womb, it will also protect their young mothers and families by involving parents who have their best interests at heart.

I believe that every woman all agree that our young girls must be protected, and the laws put in place for that purpose must be upheld. Currently, 45 States have laws that require notification, consent, or some type of consultation with a minor’s parent or guardian before she can legally have an abortion. However, there are no laws to prevent a minor from crossing State borders and having an abortion performed in a State without such laws.

This practice disregards abortion policies of individual States, implicates interstate commerce, and endangers young girls by allowing them to have dangerous abortion procedures performed without the guidance of their parent or guardian. The Child Custody Protection Act prohibits transporting a minor across a State line for the purpose of obtaining an abortion if doing so circumvents a parental notification or consent statute in the minor’s home State.

The Child Custody Protection Act will not change the parental notification or consent laws of any individual State, but will help to enforce these laws by helping to prevent minors from being taken out of a State for an abortion without a parent’s knowledge or consent. This bill will actually reinforce State policies that are already in place.

Sadly, many young girls have been taken out of State by an individual other than her parent or guardian to obtain an abortion and have been subjected to unsafe and unlawful abortion procedures that endanger them physically and mentally. Abortion can cause physical and emotional complications for a young girl, and these dangers are greatly increased by taking her away from the influence of her parents or guardian, placing her in the hands of an individual who does not have her best interests in mind.

Crystal Farley Lane was one such victim. When she was 12 years old, she became pregnant after tragically being raped by a 19-year-old man. Rosa Hartford, the man’s mother, then took Crystal from her home in Pennsylvania, without her mother’s knowledge or consent, to New York, where there were no parental consent laws, to have an abortion. After the procedure, Ms. Hartford abandoned young Crystal, who had serious medical complications, 30 miles from her home. When Crystal’s mother, Joyce Farley, found out what happened and tried to help by asking the abortionist for Crystal’s medical records, she was denied. Fortunately, the State of New York was able to help her obtain the medical care she needed in time, despite this obstacle by the abortionist.

Crystal’s near-death experience could have been prevented had the Child Custody Protection Act been in place. Instead, there are currently no laws to prevent people like Ms. Hartford from taking Crystal out of Pennsylvania to obtain an abortion without parental consent.

Ms. Farley poignantly testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee that, “situations such as this are what the ‘Child Custody Act’ was designed to help prevent. I am a loving, responsible parent whose parenting was interfered with by an adult unknown to me.”

In another instance, Marcia Carroll’s 14-year-old daughter was forced into having an abortion by her boyfriend’s family. The family took her from Pennsylvania to New York without Ms. Carroll even left her alone to have an abortion that she did not want to have, and then left her a block from her home in Pennsylvania. This 14-year-old girl had to go through a frightening and painful abortion procedure on her own and was then left to deal with the physical and emotional pain from an abortion that she did not want to have.

I find it terribly unjust that there are no laws to prevent situations such as these from happening and that families have no recourse against those who are responsible.

Very often, adult men, who are on average 6 to 7 years older than their victims, are the culprits of this violating crime against these young girls. Two-thirds of these adult men are 20 years of age or older. Additionally, more than half of the time it is a girl’s boyfriend who takes her to another State to have an abortion without her parents’ consent. An abortion performed in a jurisdiction that prohibits release of the medical records destroys any evidence that might have been used against a perpetrator to prosecute him for statutory rape and leaves him free to continue preying on these young girls without consequence.

The incongruity of this status is striking. There are so many restrictions to protect our minors from making uninformed decisions by requiring parental consent for their actions. They must have parental consent to take medication at school, even an aspirin. They cannot go on a school field trip without a permission slip signed by a parent. Why, then, can an adult who cannot take an aspirin without the consent of her parents, cross a State border and have an abortion without notifying them? And why can an adult be prosecuted for giving a child aspirin but not for taking her to another State to have an abortion?

By reinforcing State abortion laws requiring parental notification or consent, the Child Custody Protection Act will protect our young daughters from being coerced into poor, irreversible life-changing decisions. I believe we can all agree that action must be taken to prevent the evasion of laws created to protect minors and their families and help preserve the precious lives of children in the womb. I ask this Chamber quickly pass this lifesaving legislation.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today in opposition of the Child Custody Protection Act, S. 403. This bill is about reducing the number of abortions in America. S. 403 is about politics played at the expense of young women in the United States. S. 403 would make it a Federal crime for adults other than guardians to transport a minor across State lines to obtain an abortion. This is not nearly as simple as it may sound. S. 403 is another direct attack on the reproductive rights of women. It turns its back on young women who do not inform their parents about their decision to obtain an abortion even if it results in personal harm. S. 403 would criminalize grandmothers, religious leaders, aunts and uncles, and doctors fighting for the health and well-being of young women. This bill would take us back to the time before Roe v. Wade where women did not have the right to control their own bodies and too often were forced to seek an abortion at any cost.

The supporters of S. 403 want us to believe that there is a significant problem with young women transporting involuntarily over State lines to receive unwanted abortions without their parents’ consent. But this is not what this bill is about. The majority of young women involve their parents in a vital decision such as this. In fact, over 90 percent of young women involve their parents in their decision to have an abortion. For adolescents 14 years and younger, the number is 90 percent.

So what is happening in cases when young women choose not to involve their parents? Studies show that in one-third of the cases where young women do not involve a parent, they fear family violence or being forced to leave the home. Research tells us that almost 50 percent of pregnant young women with a history of physical abuse report that they were hit during their pregnancy. Unfortunately, the person they were most often hit by was a family member.

The truth is adolescents that are at most risk for teen pregnancy are also the most likely to come from violent homes. Here, they often may not receive the emotional and physical guidance they need to make healthy decisions. Therefore, many experts tell us that teens at greatest risk for teen pregnancy also suffer the most from mandatory parental consent laws. These are young women that often do not have access to good parental support and guidance. They are likely to turn to other adult role models in their lives—grandmothers, aunts and religious figures—to prison for assisting young women in need. Mr. President, is this the way the Nation should be focusing on as a solution to teen pregnancy? Why don’t we work together to reduce the numbers of unattended pregnancies and give people the social supports they need to make healthy choices? Why aren’t the administration and the congressional majority talking about finding new pregnancy prevention programs that do not include jail?

Instead, this administration and the majority in Congress are initiating programs that are reversing the declines in abortion rates that we saw in the late 1990s. The Bush administration is more concerned with parental notification laws that we know hurt teens and would only affect a minority of cases than with actually preventing abortions. On their watch, abortion rates have stopped declining. In fact, according to recent statistics, 40 percent of the States that attract the most out-of-State abortions actually have moderate to strict parental involvement laws. S. 403 will do nothing to keep young women from having to make a difficult choice—it will only make it harder for them.

The American Psychological Association has listed studies that show that parental notification laws increase adolescent stress and anxiety. They increase the number of teenagers who never seek pregnancy. Parental notification laws also make it more likely that teens will turn to extralegal and unsafe methods of abortion that could result in serious injury.

I wished we lived in a world where parents would always be involved in their children’s health decisions. I would want any young woman in America contemplating abortion to trust her parents enough and feel safe enough to involve them in her decision. Unfortunately, that is not the reality that many of our young women face. They cannot go to their parents for fear of abuse and violence. This bill does nothing to protect these young women by including a strong judicial bypass, and does not take into consideration the difficult situations these young women face.

I cannot even list the numbers of growth that have been put out in strong opposition of S. 403, but they include the American Civil Liberties Union, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Medical Women’s Association, the National Organization for Women-Utah National Partnership for Women & Families, and the Republican Majority for Choice. I am joining those groups in opposition to S. 403.

S. 403 is another attempt at curtailling a woman’s right to choose—in this case, young women, who are often the most vulnerable to violence and abuse from those that are supposed to be protecting them. I ask my colleagues to defeat S. 403.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President. I rise today in support of legislation protecting the most important relationship of all: that of parents and their children. The family is the fundamental, crucial and indispensable building block of our civilization, and parents are at its center. Yet, when it comes to some of the most important decisions in life, children are being kept from the guidance of their parents. I am talking, of course, about the decision whether or not to have an abortion.

The American people believe that parents should be involved in deciding whether their daughter should undergo an abortion. Statistics consistently show this, and the Supreme Court has upheld this, as the Court noted in the decision of H.L. v. Matheson: “the medical, emotional, and psychological consequences of an abortion are serious and can be lasting; this is particularly so when the patient is immature.” In the case of Purham V. J.R. the Court said: “the law, like the concept of the family rests on a presumption that parents possess what a child lacks in maturity, experience, and capacity for judgment required for making life’s difficult decisions.”

Convinced of the soundness of this reasoning, at least 48 States have enacted laws requiring consent of or notification to at least one parent, or authorization by a judge, before a minor can obtain an abortion. Unfortunately, this was not the case when I was young.

Thousands of children every year are taken across State lines by people other than their parents to secure secret abortions. As we speak, abortion providers across the Nation, operating in States with no parental consent or notification laws, are taking out advertisements in phonebooks outside of the State where they operate in order to attract underage patients in neighboring States with different laws. They are doing this in my home State of Idaho, in Pennsylvania, in New York, and other States in the same situation. These laws are all enjoined due to lawsuits brought by organizations intent on imposing their flawed understanding of the United States Constitutional protections on the American people, and judges willing to support it. It is my hope that this litigation will be resolved and that the right of elected officials to make and enforce laws under their jurisdiction will be upheld.

I am proudly supporting the Child Custody Protection Act. Children must receive parental consent for even minor surgical procedures. Children must receive parental consent to take an aspirin from their school nurse. I urge Federal offense to transport a minor across State lines with intent to avoid the application of a State law requiring parental involvement in a minor’s abortion, or judicial waiver of such a requirement. The profound, lasting physical and psychological effects of abortion demand that we help states guarantee parental involvement in the abortion decision. That means, at a minimum, seeing to it that outside parties cannot walk around State parental notification and consent laws on a whim or as a means to hide illegal activity. We can no more afford to allow State laws to be ignored than we can afford to allow family ties to be further undermined. For the sake of our families, I urge my colleagues to defend both by supporting the Child Custody Protection Act.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today in support of parents’ most basic right and responsibility: to be actively involved in their children’s lives, particularly in times of crisis. For that reason I wholeheartedly support S. 403, the Child Custody Protection Act.

I was an original co-sponsor of this bill when my good friend from Nevada, Senator ENSIGN, introduced it in 2005. S. 403 will make it a Federal offense to transport a minor across State lines for an abortion and cut the parents out of their child’s life.

I assume that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will agree with me that every abortion is a tragic occurrence. The weight of such a decision falls heavily on any woman, particularly a minor. That is exactly the time that a child should be able to rely on a parent’s counsel. And that is exactly the time a parent has a responsibility to be a parent, and get involved in their child’s life.

Let me stress that S. 403 will not impose any new law or requirement on any State. Nor does it alter or supersede any existing State laws. All that this bill will do is reinforce state laws that are already in effect, and prevent them from being evaded by miscreants who would transport a minor across State lines for an abortion and cut the parents out of their child’s life at such a crucial time.

This bill will promote the health of pregnant minors by ensuring that their parents—the people best equipped to make major medical decisions, answer questions about medical history, and help their child through the physical and emotional recuperative process—are present. And the bill also contains an exception if an abortion is necessary to save the life of the minor.

There is already a national consensus in America that a parent should be involved when a minor girl faces such an important decision. Forty-five States have enacted laws recognizing the need for responsible adults to give guidance to minors in decisions about abortion. And 37 States have parental notification or parental consent laws, including 20 currently require parental consent—just notification, but consent—before a child under age 18 can get a tattoo. And 27 States require parental consent before a child under age 18 can get a body piercing. So if the opponents of this bill had their way, a 14-year-old girl could evade State law to get an abortion—but not a tattoo.

Perhaps thousands of underage girls get taken across State lines for abortions every year. The answer is that the majority of these girls have male partners older than 20. Many of these men are committing statutory rape. These girls are in trouble and need the advice of a mom or a dad to help them through their desperate situations. This Senate ought to take the side of the parents over the side of the criminals.

Throughout my career, I have consistently stood for protecting the unborn and the lives of parents. I don’t like that people are spiriting young girls away from their parents to get them to have abortions, and evading State law to boot. If this law means fewer abortions in America, I will celebrate that.

But I want to stress to my colleagues who may take an opposing view that the central issue of the Child Custody Protection Act is parental rights. Parents ought to have the right to be heard and involved in their children’s lives, and States ought to have the expectation that their duly passed laws ensuring just that are enforced.

What opponents of this bill forget is that no parent wants anyone to take their children across State lines—or even across the street—without their permission. This is a fundamental right, and the Congress is right to uphold it in law.

Not one girl should have to make a decision of this force, be forced into a decision that she will regret for the rest of her life because her mom and dad weren’t there to lean on. It is this Senate’s responsibility to see that doesn’t happen. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, to update our colleagues on what has been going on, we have had three amendments held over, two by Senator BOXER and I, and our staffs, with the leadership on both sides, have been working together. We think we have come up with a compromise amendment. It will be the Boxer-Ensign amendment. We will be making a unanimous consent request in a few moments.

I thank Senator BOXER and her staff for working with them on this to bring us, coming to an agreement. This is a good example of how people who fundamentally disagree—passionately—on an issue can actually find some common ground and work together, at least on a amendment. That is what we have done today. I am very pleased with what the staffs have done and the compromise we have reached. It is very satisfying.

Let me spend a few minutes talking on the bill as the final details are being worked out. This is an important piece of legislation, not because of the huge numbers it will affect—I have had that question from reporters: How many girls actually get taken across State lines to get an abortion? Sadly, no one knows the answer to that because it is not reported.

As a matter of fact, right now when it happens, the parents have no rights to the information, so they cannot find out even after the fact. They find out by the girls telling them. The girls run away, telling them later where they had it done. We had cases where they tried to get the information, but, frankly, the clinic would not release the information. We have no idea how many victims there are. They do not keep track of how often this happens.

I have tried to put myself in a situation that I would want my Senator representing me. I try to say, okay, I am an average person, how would I want my Senator representing me? I happen to be the father of a little girl. We have three kids. Our middle child is a little girl. She happens to be with me this weekend in Washington. In the coming years, as she matures as a young woman, I think about if some 20-year-old preyed on her when she was in her teenage years and got her pregnant and then somehow, because we had a parental consent law, which I hope we do someday in Nevada, and the 20-year-old said: I won’t date you anymore unless you get a secret abortion. He thinks: I will convince her somehow, manipulate a very vulnerable young woman. I will convince her that I won’t see her anymore if she doesn’t get the abortion—whatever means needed to persuade her to get an abortion. If there is a parental consent law in my State, I will decide to go someplace else where they don’t require it. In other words, he gets around the will of the people of the State of Nevada or any State that requires parental involvement.

In a case such as that, I would be totally devastated as a parent because I would not be able to help my daughter through this time because I would not even know about it. I would not know if she had a complication from the surgical procedure of abortion. I would not know—if she had a complication in the middle of the night and she started bleeding—that I should be watching for something that could be going wrong. If she had a fever, I would probably say: Honey, we will get you some Advil or Tylenol. And maybe I would hold her for a while. And she would be afraid to tell me what was going on and, without me knowing, that could develop into very serious complications overnight. Complications that could even be life threatening.

I do not put myself in those kinds of situations as a Senator and say: How would I want to be represented? And this is how I would want it. I would want somebody to stand up and say: The rights of parents should be respected. That is what we are doing in this bill. But more than that, for the well-being of these teenage girls, the vast majority of them would be better off if the parents were involved.

Now, we realize there are cases where that is not the case, where there is an abusive parent. There are exceptions. That is part of the amendment compromise we are working to reach. I think it is a good compromise. In a situation—that has been brought up here on the floor many times where there has been an abortion where a teen—after her teenage years, we do not want to make unreasonable exceptions that make these laws ineffective.

There was an amendment that would have said: We will make an exception to allow a girl to take a girl across State lines. They wanted an amendment that said the grandparents should have an exception. Well, let me address those two exceptions because they sound, on their face, reasonable. We have case after case after case of documentation where the clergy was actually the person who was impregnating the teenager. We have all read about the scandals with some of our clergy. Clergy are human beings and, just like any of you, they can be flawed human beings. We know that. Just because they have a white collar on does not mean they are perfect human beings.

Some of those imperfections can be seen in cases of sexual abuse by members of the clergy with teenagers. For instance, there have been members of the clergy who have taken minor children across State lines to avoid parental consent laws. And because they are clergy—they are supposed to be this authority figure—the girl does not want anyone to know. They can be flown across State lines and has a secret abortion.

The exception that was going to be offered in one of the amendments would have allowed that member of the clergy, which was not defined, to become exempt from prosecution under this bill. I cannot support such an exemption.

Not only that, any one can become a member of the clergy. In fact, last night I asked my staff, because I had heard you could become a minister on the Internet fairly easily, and within 3 minutes she became an ordained minister. So, anybody could go on the Internet and officially be recognized as an ordained minister, officially by our courts. Leaving it open that a 20-something-year-old who has impregnated a teenager could become a minister and could still fall under the clergy exception.

Let me address the grandparent case. In the case of the grandparents, you have a situation where maybe there was incest in the family, and the grandparent feels they care about the child and he has helped them. Most grandparents are loving, and they will want to help the child in that case. The Senator from California and others have made the case that they should not be prosecuted under this law because they took the child across State lines to get an abortion because they only thought they were trying to help.

Well, I would make the argument that if those grandparents cared about that child who was in a situation where they were in an abusive home, they would report that to the authorities. Two grandparents should contact the authorities, get the authorities involved to stop the cycle of abuse. You would use the judicial bypass for such case. Judicial bypass would mean that you would not have to have a waiver. If that was what the outcome would be, to have an abortion. You would have the judiciary, the authorities involved.

If the authorities were involved, you take that girl out of that abusive situation and allow her to take a girl across State lines. If you allow for the grandparent exception and allow secret abortions, that is not going to happen. In too many cases, it is easier to get the abortion, and hide the problem, saving the family from embarrassment. If you go to the authorities, it may become public. That is why I think we need to not have the grandparent exception and the clergy exception.

So, Mr. President, we are still waiting for the amendment to come down in its final form. As soon as it does, we will be entering into a unanimous consent agreement. But let me wrap up because it has been a very good debate, with strong emotions on each side.

I think this is a bill Americans can come together on and find common ground. I have mentioned before there are good people on both sides of the abortion debate with deeply held beliefs. I believe life begins at conception and that a child has a soul from the time they are conceived. That is why I believe that same child deserves protection throughout their life. I also know that people look at it differently on the other side, and they too have deeply held beliefs.

So, Americans have been saying: Can't we at least find some middle ground? Can't we find some ground to at least make some reasonable restrictions on abortion and support parents rights? I believe the Senator has brought forth a bill today that finds that common ground. Eighty percent of the American people support this legislation, and they do that because it is reasonable. From a protection of parents' rights perspective; from a protection of the girl's perspective; from going after some of these, literally, sexual predators, these 20-something-year-olds, who are taking these teenagers across State lines; from a law enforcement perspective; from a lot of different ways this is a reasonable piece of legislation. That is why I introduced it, why I support it so strongly, and why I am happy we are finally having this debate on the Senate floor.

I want to thank my colleagues, especially Senator Boxer, on the other side of the aisle for allowing the debate to happen, for bringing this thing to a final vote, where we can get passage on this bill and then go to a conference with the House and, hopefully, work out the differences between the House and the Senate. My hope and prayer is we can get this bill actually signed into law by the President this year.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Chambliss). The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, again, for the benefit of our colleagues, we are waiting patiently to have the amendment we agreed on come before us. Then we are hoping at the right time, Senator Ensign will make a unanimous consent request from the floor for the amendment we have agreed on, and then vote on final passage. So hopefully we will have that done very soon. As soon as it is done, I will yield the floor and allow the Senator, the good Senator from Nevada, to make his unanimous consent request.

The Senator from Nevada wants to protect our daughters. He is a dad of a daughter. I am a mom of a daughter. I want to protect our daughters. So let's not get confused on this point. We all want to protect our daughters. We all adore them. We want them to be safe, and we want them to get the help they need. We want them healthy. We want them well. We do not want them afraid. We do not want them to be afraid that if they say it is drafted—and, yes, we are going to make a little bit of a correction on the incest part, but not as much as we should, but some—we are going to make some progress, and I am grateful for that. Basically, the way this bill is drafted, it is going to frighten our daughters because here is the way it works, folks: If you are a young woman in a parental notification State, you can go and tell your parents what you said, matters into your own hands because you are too frightened to go to your parents.

Now, we all hope all parents will be open and loving and caring and helpful and will be able to be approached when a young woman becomes pregnant and it is an unintended pregnancy. We would hope and pray that family, that loving family, will sit around and talk about what ought to happen here, what is the best thing for everybody. I am pro-choice, I am for whatever the family decides. If they decide that the best thing is to raise that child in the family, that is their choice. If they decide it is best if the young woman exercises her right to choose, which is her right in this country—and has been since 1973—she has that right.

That is what we hope happens, that there will be these conversations. Of course, my friends on the other side of the aisle do not want a choice. They want to force her to have the child. They are against Roe v. Wade, but that is another debate. That is a debate we take to the people, and that is a debate that pro-choice people win. They do not want Senator BOXER or Senator ENSIGN involved in that family discussion, saying: But, no, you must have this child. You must not have any rights to choose. They do not want that. People do not feel comfortable with it. They want to deal with this their own way, with their own God, with their own family, with their loving family members. But that is not before us.

What is before us is a very narrow bill that deals with a very narrow circumstance where there is a young woman who does not go to her parents, mostly because she is scared to death to go to them. For whatever reasons, in her mind, she is fearful. Will they—she that if she went home—be too late? Will they hurt her? Will they verbally abuse her? Will they be disappointed? And that weighs on her.

So what we are saying with this bill to that girl in a parental notification State line, the right to sue a loving and caring adult who helped her. I wish to show this chart which I have shown previously. Under this amendment we are hoping to come to us momentarily, we will stop a father who has raped his daughter from suing the trusted adult who helped his daughter end the resulting pregnancy. So if the child goes to grandma, the incestuous father cannot sue grandma.

Then, at the end, Senator ENSIGN was not willing to take these three provisions which he will debate. He did take my last provision.

We now stop a father who has raped his daughter or any other family member who has committed incest against a minor from transporting her across State lines to sign an abortion. That would be a crime.

The three things that are not done, which is why I think this amendment fails short; we haven’t stopped a father who has raped from exercising parental consent rights; we haven’t stopped all criminal prosecution or jail time for a trusted adult who helped a victim of incest; and we haven’t stopped all civil suits against a trusted adult who helped a victim of incest. But we have taken care of two issues. For that I am grateful because this bill will become law. It will be sent to the President, who will sign it. Unlike his veto on the stem cell bill, which he should have signed, because that bill would help our families, help our children with juvenile diabetes, help grandmas and grandpas with Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, help our young-sters who were paralyzed—he vetoed that. He will sign this one.

This is a political bill. It did come to us in 1998 just before the election. Let’s face facts. We know when it came. My friend from Nevada is right when he says, “Keep parental notification. They do want to believe we could all go to our parents with these problems. But let me tell you what they don’t want. They don’t want to give incest predators any rights whatsoever. They would want to make an exception in this bill for rape victims so that if you are a victim of rape and you were too scared to tell your parents because of the circumstances—maybe it was date rape, maybe you just can’t explain it. Maybe you are frightened to death. You go to your grandma. She could be sued by the predator, she could be put in jail by the Federal Government. Send your grandma to jail. That is what we are doing here today. Why? Because she loved her granddaughter, because she was there for her granddaughter, and by stepping in, she may have really saved a tragedy from occurring. I don’t believe the American people want us to be this radical. I think they

The bill (S. 403), as amended, was passed, as follows:

S. 403

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Child Custody Protection Act".

SEC. 2. TRANSPORTATION OF MINORS IN CIRCUMVENTION OF CERTAIN LAWS RELATING TO ABDORPTION.

(a) In GENERAL.—Title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 217 the following:

"CHAPTER 117A—TRANSPORTATION OF MINORS IN CIRCUMVENTION OF CERTAIN LAWS RELATING TO ABDORPTION"

"Sec. 2431. Transportation of minors in circumvention of certain laws relating to abortion to the minor resides, without the parental consent or notification, or the judicial authorization, that would have been required by that law had the abortion been performed in the State where the minor resides."

"(2) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this subsection, an abduction of the right of a parent occurs if an abortion is performed on the minor, in a State other than the State where the minor resides, without the parental consent or notification, or the judicial authorization, that would have been required by that law had the abortion been performed in the State where the minor resides.

"(b)Exceptions.—(1) The prohibition of subsection (a) does not apply if the abortion was necessary to save the life of the minor because her life was endangered by a physical disorder, physical injury, or physical illness, including a life endangering physical condition caused by involving the pregnancy itself.

"(2) A minor transported in violation of this section, and any parent of that minor, may not be prosecuted or sued for a violation of this section, a court’s incapacity to violate this section, an offense under section 2 or 3 based on a violation of this section.
(c) AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE.—It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution for an offense, or to a civil action, based on a violation of this section that the defendant reasonably believed, based on information the defendant obtained directly from a parent of the minor or other compelling facts, that before the minor obtained the abortion, the parent or guardian authorized, or judicial authorization took place that would have been required by the law requiring parental involvement in a minor's abortion decision, had the abortion been performed in the State where the minor resides.

(d) CIVIL ACTION.—Any parent who suffers harm from a violation of subsection (a) may obtain appropriate relief in a civil action, unless the parent has committed an act of incest with a minor subject to subsection (a).

(e) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this section—

"(1) a "law requiring parental involvement in a minor's abortion decision" means a law—

(A) requiring, before an abortion is performed on a minor, either—

(i) the notification to, or consent of, a parent of that minor; or

(ii) proceeding in a State court; and

(B) that does not provide as an alternative to the requirements described in subparagraph (A) notification to or consent of any person or entity who is not described in that subparagraph;

"(2) the term "parent" means—

(A) a parent or guardian;

(B) a legal custodian; or

"(3) the term "minor" means an individual who is not older than the maximum age requiring parental notification or consent, or proceedings in a State court, under the law requiring parental involvement in a minor's abortion decision; and

"(4) the term "State" includes the District of Columbia and any commonwealth, possession, or other territory of the United States.

§ 2432. Transportation of minors in circumvention of certain laws relating to abortion

Notwithstanding section 2431(b)(2), whoever has committed an act of incest with a minor and knowingly transports the minor across a State line with the intent that such minor obtain an abortion, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both."

(b) CLINICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 117 the following new item:

"117A. Transportation of minors in circumvention of certain laws relating to abortion ....... 2432".

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DURBIN. I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I congratulate Chairman Ensign for managing this important bill that we have passed and that the House has passed, and now it is time for us to go to conference. I thank leadership and the managers on both sides because we were able to address a very important issue and had appropriate amendments under an agreement that was reached, and conclusion was passage as we just heard by 65 to 34 on this bill.

With regard to that, I am unanimous consent that we immediately proceed to the consideration of H.R. 748, the House companion measure; provided that all after the enacting clause be stricken and the text of S. 493, as amended, if amended, be inserted directly when be read a third time and passed, and the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees with a ratio of 7 to 5.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, on behalf of myself and other Senators, I will object to the appointment of conferees at this time.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the objection is heard. And I will say that I am very disappointed. This bill passed the House of Representatives on April 17, 2005, and just passed this body 65 to 34 expressing the will of the Senate. Routinely, we would go to conference with the House and the Senate bill and move forward. I understand that objection is made. I am very disappointed that is the case. I hope we can get to conference just as soon as possible. I do hope that the objection we heard tonight does not represent obstruction in taking this bill to conference, because that would be the normal course. But we will address this in the future.

Again, I am disappointed that we are being stopped from going to conference tonight.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senator Kennedy.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate immediately proceed to the consideration of S. 748, the House companion measure, and the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees with a ratio of 7 to 5.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIME MINISTER MALIKI'S VISIT

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, Iraqi Prime Minister Maliki's visit to the United States comes at an important time. All Americans want Iraq's new government to succeed. The principal measure of success will be whether the threat of a full-scale civil war is avoided. But for that to happen, the new government must deal quickly, decisively, and effectively with the principal threat to stability—the deadly influence of the militias—especially in Baghdad.

It is time for the new government to move beyond vagaries and develop a viable strategy to deal with the militias and prevent Iraq from descending into a violent and disintegrating chaos. We need to begin implementing a credible plan to disarm, demobilize, and reintegrate the militias into the security forces. He must obtain a real commitment from the political parties to assist in disbanding and disarming the militias.

As the new violence in Lebanon demonstrates, political parties cannot govern with one hand and terrorize civilians with militias with the other hand. It did not work with Hezbollah in Lebanon. It cannot work with Hamas, and it will not work in Iraq.

Militias are the engines of civil war, and there is no role for them in a legitimately functioning government of Iraq. Iraq's future and the lives of our troops are very close to a new disaster. It is time to put in full-scale civil war is ticking, and our most urgent priority is to defuse it.

America, too, must be honest about the situation in Iraq. President Bush, the Vice President, Secretary Rumsfeld, and former President Clinton continue to deny that Iraq is in a civil war. But the increasing sectarian violence, the ruthless death squads, and the increasingly powerful role of the privately armed militias tell a very different story.

We cannot ignore this major danger. President Bush needs to consider the cold, hard facts and prepare a strategy to protect our troops who are at risk of getting caught in the middle of an unwinnable sectarian civil war. Such planning is not an admission of defeat; it is responsible and necessary to protect the lives of our men and women in Iraq who are serving with great courage under enormously difficult circumstances.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2005

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. Each Congress, Senator Kennedy and I introduce hate crimes legislation that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

Likewise, each Congress I have come to the floor and never went through the Senate asking for a conference committee is premature.

I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the objection is heard. And I will say that I am discharged. them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

PRESIDENTIAL SIGNING STATEMENTS

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, yesterday we were reminded, again, of the lawlessness of the Bush-Cheney administration as it continues its abuse of “signing statements” as part of a systematic pursuit of power without the checks and balances inherent in our constitutional democracy. A most distinguished task force of the American Bar Association has now released a unanimous report highly critical of this President’s practice as “contrary to the rule of law and our constitutional system of separation of powers.” I thank the distinguished panel of conservatives and moderates, or Republicans and Democrats for their thoughtful report.

Let me be clear, this is not some academic debate without consequences. I have been seeking to draw attention to this surreptitious power-grab for at least 4 years, since this President’s unusual signing statement following enactment of the Sarbanes-Oxley bill in 2002 asserted his right to override the abuses that cost so many Americans their livelihoods and their retirement savings through Enron and other scandals. The President signed the bill but had secret “reservations.” That is when I first realized the President’s unorthodox, unwise and unsound practice of signing a bill while crossing his fingers behind his back. We have seen it over and over again as this President insists on the equivalent of an unwritten line-item veto that would undermine the checks and balances of our constitutional separation of powers and that the Supreme Court correctly determined was unconstitutional.

Later this week, the President will be signing the reauthorization and revitalization of the Voting Rights Act, passed by the House with 390 votes and unanimously last week by the Senate. In the past I could have gone to the White House to witness the bill signing knowing that our three branches of government operate in their proper authority. That is the way we have operated for more than 200 years. But this year, with this President, that is not the way any longer. After the bill signing, after the celebration, after the bipartisan plaudits and after the President takes credit for the civil rights advances that our bill is intended to represent—after all this—we will have to wait to see whether there is a belated presidential document, a so-called signing statement. Only then will we see if the President will seek to create a gloss that Congress did not intend, or modify a provision of law more to his liking, or declare some provision of law something he and his administration will not enforce. That is wrong. That is the opposite of the rule of law. And no one—not even the President—is above the law.

The Constitution places the law-making power, “All legislative Powers” in the Congress. That is an article I power. A check on the congressional power is the requirement that “before [a bill] becomes a Law” it must be presented to the President. Article I of the Constitution provides: “If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to that House in which it shall have originated.” Of course the Constitution then contemplates constitutional power to override a presidential objection or veto. That is our system, that is our law. The President has the option to veto—in fact after 5 years in office, he finally exercised that power last week when he vetoed the stem cell research legislation. I disagreed with his decision to veto that bill, but it was within his constitutional power to do it. He does not have the power to issue a decree that he will pick and choose which provisions of laws to follow in statements he issues, after Congress passes a law. What this President is doing is wrong.

Last month, the Senate Judiciary Committee held a hearing on the use of these signing statements by the Bush-Cheney administration. What we are at a pivotal moment in our Nation’s history, where Americans are faced with a President who makes sweeping claims for almost unchecked Executive power. This President’s use of signing statements is unprecedented, although presaged by the work of Samuel Alito at the Meese Justice Department during the Reagan Presidency—now Justice Alito on the Supreme Court. This administration is now routinely using signing statements to proclaim which laws the President will follow, which parts he will ignore, and which he will reinterpret. This is what I have called “cherry-picking” and it is wrong.

This President’s broad use of signing statements to try to rewrite the laws passed by the Congress poses a grave threat to our constitutional system of checks and balances. During his 5 years in office, President Bush has abused his bill signing statements to assign his own interpretations to laws passed by Congress.

According to a review of these statements conducted by The Boston Globe, President Bush has employed signing statements to ignore or disobey more than 750 provisions enacted by the Congress since 2001, more than all previous Presidents in the history of our Nation combined. According to scholarly research that number now tops 800 provisions of law.

I have alluded to the President’s signing statement in 2002 in connection with the Sarbanes-Oxley law designed to combat corporate fraud. The President used his signing statement to attempt to narrow a provision protecting corporate whistleblowers in a way that would have afforded them very little protection. Senator GRASSLEY and I wrote a letter to the President stating that his narrow interpretation has at odds with the plain language of the statute, and the administration reluctantly relented on this view but only after much protest.

We also witnessed the President’s fondness for signing statements earlier this year, when after months of debate and negotiations in Congress, the President issued a signing statement for the USA PATRIOT ACT reauthorization language in which he stated his intentions not to follow the reporting and oversight provisions contained in that bill. I noted this abuse at the time. When I voted against that reauthorization, I explained it was because I did not have confidence that the oversight provisions we succeeded in incorporating into the bill would be respected. What little doubt was left was by the self-serving signing statement was erased last week when the Attorney General of the United States refused to commit to following the law.

This President has used signing statements to challenge laws banning torture, on affirmative action and prohibiting the censorship of scientific data. In fact, time and again, this President has stood before the American people, signed laws enacted by their representatives in Congress, while all along crossing his fingers behind his back. And, while this President used to boast—until his veto of stem cell research legislation—that he was the first modern President to have never vetoed a bill, he has cleverly used his signing statements as a de facto line-item veto to cherry-pick which laws he will enforce in a manner not consistent with our Constitution. I disagree with the constitutional system of government, when Congress passes a bill and the President signs it into law, that should be the end of the story. At that moment the President’s constitutional duty is to “take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed.” That is the article II power, the executive power, to “execute” the laws, it is not a legislative power. So when the President, including this President, takes the oath of office and swears on the Bible, he does so in the Constitution, “Before he enter on the Execution of his Office,” and swears that he will “faithfully execute” the office of President and “preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States.” I remind this President and this administration that the Constitution has more than one article and that “All legislative Power” is vested in Congress, not some “unitary executive.”

When the President uses signing statements to unilaterally rewrite the laws enacted by the people’s representatives in Congress, he undermines the rule of law and our constitutional
VOTING RIGHTS ACT

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the Voting Rights Act, VRA. Unfortunately, a longstanding medical appointment kept me from casting my vote in favor of this legislation last week and I want there to be no question as to my support for the VRA. For over 50 years, the VRA has protected the cornerstone of American democracy: the right to vote. Congress enacted the VRA in response to evidence that some States and counties had denied many citizens access to the ballot because of their race, ethnicity, and language-minority status. The creators of this law were convinced, as am I, that a strong America is one that reflects the feelings and opinions of all Americans. That means that everyone has the right to vote.

Provisions of the VRA prohibit election laws that would deny or abridge voting rights based on race, color, or membership in a language minority. The act allows citizens to challenge discriminatory voting practices and procedures and prohibits the use of any test or device as a condition of voter registration. Such provisions seem like common sense today, but they were not always so widely supported. We must recognize today not only to reflect upon the mistakes of yesterday. I am pleased that the Senate approved the reauthorization of this critical act. It correctly ensures that every citizen has a stake and a voice in our country's future.

INSTABILITY IN SOMALIA

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am deeply troubled by reports in the press that the Islamic courts in Somalia are advancing on the internationally recognized Transitional Federal Government, TFG, and are apparently ignoring recently signed cease-fire agreements. It is imperative that the Islamic courts recognize the TFG as the official governing body of Somalia and that it abide by the cease fire agreed to on June 22, 2006, in Khartoum. The Islamic courts must work in good faith to strengthen the TFG and actively promote the development of a more inclusive and representative government of Somalia.

For this to happen, the international community, including the United States, needs to be fully engaged. The United States, in particular, must develop a comprehensive strategy for Somalia that utilizes all facets of its power and capabilities and must ramp up its diplomatic efforts throughout the region and the international community to bring this crisis to an end. Unfortunately, it can't do that if it doesn't have the resources or the people in place to deal effectively with the complexity of this problem. The U.S. Government needs to appoint a senior envoy for Somalia to pull together a strategy and to engage full time with international and regional partners in addressing the problems. We also need a more staff and more resources to work with to help execute this strategy and to contribute to international efforts to bring about lasting peace throughout the region. The administration should work closely with Congress to identify what additional resources are needed for Somalia, given the recent escalation of tension there.

That said, it is important to realize that efforts to both establish long-term peace and to eradicate terrorist networks and safe havens in Somalia are complimentary. The U.S. Government must recognize that long-term stability in Somalia is our best weapon against terrorist networks, extremist organizations, and the conditions that allow them to seek safe haven there. We must look at poverty reduction programs, economic development efforts, support for democratic institutions, anticorruption efforts, and education as the core elements of a new Somalia strategy.

As we learned in Afghanistan, we cannot ignore the conditions that breed extremism and terrorist organizations. It is essential to recognize that any attempt to address instability in Somalia must address a range of root causes or facilitating conditions: a weak and dysfunctional central government, extreme poverty, corruption, conflict, disease, and drought.

It is imperative that the U.S. Government begin a leadership role in helping stabilize Somalia and the region and that it do so immediately. We need a comprehensive approach to engaging with regional actors, the international community, and the U.N. to find a permanent solution to this problem which will contribute to stability throughout the Horn of Africa and to our national security.

national Korean War Veterans Armistice Day

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, on Thursday, July 20, 2006, I introduced S. 3700, which would honor the valiant efforts of our Korean war veterans, who risked their lives fighting against communism on the Korean peninsula. As we honor the 53rd anniversary of the Korean War Armistice, I am pleased to reintroduce this legislation recognizing Korean War Armistice Day. The Korean War Veterans Recognition Act of 2006 would include National Korean War Veterans Armistice Day among the days when the American flag should especially be displayed. Earlier this year, Representative SUE KELLY reintroduced similar legislation into the House.

National Korean War Veterans Armistice Day is July 27, which recognizes that negotiators signed an armistice agreement at Panmunjom on July 27, 1953. This led to North Korea's withdrawal across the 38th parallel and allowed the Republic of South Korea to be free from attack by communism upon its people. This year, as we commemorate the 53rd anniversary of the signing of the Korean War Armistice, it is important that we take a moment to reflect upon the sacrifices our men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces have made in brave service to our Nation since its inception. I am pleased to introduce this legislation to respectfully honor and pay tribute to the tremendous courage and sacrifice demonstrated by the men and women who served in the Korean war. As U.S. soldiers continue to fight for freedom around the world, we must remember the sacrifice and valor of their brethren who helped protect and promote American values on the Korean peninsula over a half century ago.

My Mom ‘Thuy’

(By Jasminh Duc Schelkopf)

International School of Indiana 2006

National Contest Grand Prize Winner

My mother’s name is Thuy. She was born in Saigon, South Vietnam. Her father was a 3-star Lieutenant General for the South Vietnam military and her family had almost everything that you could possibly think of before the civil war of Vietnam. However, when they lost their country, they lost everything. After the war, all they had left was their hope and beliefs.

In 1975, North Vietnam won the war. When my father was only 17 (8th Grade), she and her brother and sister were forced to go to Canada. The rest of her family was then scattered around the world in places like France, Australia, Canada and the U.S.A. They all had a very tough time there because they had no support and no money as newlyweds.

For 7 years after the war, my mother went to school and worked during the evening to help out my grandfather. My mother attended school 2 years because she needed a full time job to support her family. She also went to beauty school, graduated, and worked for the family. Then, having lived in the United States for 10 years, my mother realized there was a better future for her in the U.S.A.—“The Land of Opportunity.” She decided to move to Pennsylvania in 1965.

My mother worked at a beauty shop near Philadelphia and she worked hard everyday. Her dreams were to “ONE DAY” create her own salon and reach her many dreams. Due to her talents, she developed many clients and made a lot of friends. She saved as much money as she could and even avoided eating out or going to the movies or doing anything fun that might cost money.

Then her dream of “ONE DAY” had come true when she met my dad, John Bruce Schelkopf. My dad was a very bright young man who was full of energy. With my dad’s knowledge and skills and my mom’s talent, they opened a small beauty salon in Pennsylvania. My mom also finished her college degree and got her Bachelor’s Degree in Business. My mother also sponsored my grandparents from Canada to the U.S.A. My parents then got married in 1995 to begin a family.

My mother’s dreams came true because she always viewed life as “half of a full glass” and believed in the U.S.A. to truly be the “land of opportunity.” My mother often says to me, “You can do it if you believe in yourself and always try your best.” My mother only had the few million extra Vietnamese immigrants who settled in the United States. But that one particular Vietnamese immigrant is one special immigrant to me as she struggled to overcome many challenges, hard times, and obstacles in her way. She is a special immigrant who I am happy to call “My Mom Thuy.”

WHY I AM GLAD AMERICA IS A NATION OF IMMIGRANTS
(By Arjun Kandaswamy)

Imagine America without pizza and Top Ramen. Imagine America without a booming economy. Imagine a world where everyone wore the same boring style of clothes. That would be reality if America did not have immigrants.

Pizza, tambouri, lasagna, dumplings or tortillas would not be a part of our vocabulary or among our favorite foods if it were not for immigrants. Although we don’t realize it, many foods we have grown to enjoy were greatly influenced by other cultures. For example, Top Ramen is a popular and addicting food. Although it’s an American brand, it was greatly influenced by Manchurian noodles brought over by Chinese immigrants. Despite the fact that Top Ramen has flavors like Cajun chicken it all started with Manchurian noodles. Immigrants not only make our plates colorful and interesting, but also aid our economy in a huge way.

Our economy is flourishing because of one thing, Immigrants. Immigrants do countless things for the American economy. For example, immigrants fill jobs. Immigrants are willing to take up jobs that others may not want to. They take minimum wage, which is a lot compared to what they earn in their own land. Immigrants often work harder in the jobs that they take up because they really want to stay in this country. Because of this keeping a job is important. Wealthier immigrants usually start their own businesses which is sometimes a restaurant serving their cultural dishes. In addition in areas such as high-tech a lot of immigrants have started their own companies and created a lot of new jobs. Most importantly, immigrants fill the bar of America by being hard-working and tough competitors.

Since immigrants live in America they pay taxes, property, sales, and income. Property taxes for the land they live on, sales tax for the items they buy and income tax for the amount of money they make. With over 90 percent of America’s population as immigrants, that’s a lot of money the government receives.

Immigrants create or bring new art forms and music that enrich our lives. Be it Jazz, Rap, classical music, or varieties of instrumental music from their native lands. Children of African immigrants founded Jazz and Rap. Some of the sports that we could not live without were founded by immigrants, like basketball which is part of the American lifestyle.

I’ve never seen everyone walking around in Levi’s and a t-shirt? Thanks to immigrants we won’t be seeing that. Immigrants add a variety to our closet. Other styles have been Americanized into a popular fashion, like bandanas. Bandanas originated in the Caribbean and are found everywhere in America, from a dog’s neck to a person’s head.

Immigrants have done so many great things for us. They give us a “taste” of the world; they strengthen our economy. America should march on forward and continue the tradition of it’s forefathers of as a land of immigrants envisioned by them.

ARROYO VISTA ELEMENTARY SCHOOL—2006 NATIONAL CONTEST RUNNER-UP

On the airplane I sat, As my heart thundered in my chest. The silent tears falling into my lap. Why did this have to happen? And of all the people in the world, Why me? Would I be the only one in my school? To have another language? I ponder these questions for a while, And then breathe a deep sigh. I had left everything in Japan, And had to start all over again. A new life, a new me. I would have to learn how to stay strong. I think more, Then my ears begin to pop. The airplane groans, As it reaches its final destination, California, And my new life has begun. As my parents and I enter our house, My hopes rise a bit. It is pretty but my house in Japan was better. But my hopes sink farther than ever, As my father leads us to the back. I see that we have rented, The very small two-bedroom house. With only a kitchen and a bathroom, Behind that luxurious castle. I feel jealous. Then angry. I had left my room bigger than a classroom. For this! As my first day of school approaches, My stomach is filled with fear and dread. I absolutely love it. I love it so much. My backpack slung over my shoulders, My head raised up high.

I try to be optimistic, But I know optimism will not help in reality. I slowly enter my classroom, And make my way toward the teacher. She looks up and says, “Oh, hello there! Why, you must be the new student! What’s your name?” I was utterly surprised by her odd accent. Do all Americans speak this way? “Toshiko,” I whisper. Veil Toshiko welcome to our class! Come say hello to Toshiko!” “Hi,” the class responded. “Now Toshiko come sit here next Chieko.” Toshiko was suddenly alert of my surroundings. Chieko, Why was that a Japanese name? Could it be? I could not find out for sure until recess. Recess came and I ran over to Chieko, Asking if she was Japanese, When she replied yes, My spirits soared. I was so happy not to be the only one! I asked her if she was the only foreigner, As she chuckled at my question, I began to feel confused. When she replied, “What do you mean? Everyone here is a foreigner!” I looked around me, And sure enough, Nobody was the same. I suddenly started to laugh, I thought I looked like a fool, Braying away like a donkey. As I finally stopped, Chieko asked me, Why I was laughing. I told her my story, And we have been best friends ever since. As I reflect upon the past, I realize that if California was not a state of immigrants, My life probably would have been, As horrible as I imagined it. Because it is, It is, My family and I have been thriving And we shall honor our freedom. Forever.

IMMIGRATION, PAST, PRESENT, FUTURE
(By Marissa Lynch)

BROWN MIDDLE SCHOOL— 2006 NATIONAL CONTEST RUNNER-UP

Last summer, my Grandpa and I visited Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty. As I looked up at her torch against the baby blue sky, my grandma read aloud the words at the base of the statue: Give me your tired, your poor, Your huddled masses yearning to Breathe free, The wretched refuse of your teeming shore, Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me. I lift my lamp beside the golden door. A man told me that those great words were written by an intelligent lady name Emma Lazarus. We talked about what the words mean. From 1892 to 1954, 12,000,000 people passed through the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island to start a new, better life in America. He told me his family came from three different places so he is called “mixed ancestry.” We talked about why people moved here and what they did when they got here. Many moved here for freedom and peace. We decided that each came with their own dreams, hopes and dreams. Once they ar-rived, they could become anything—doctors, athletes, artists, astronomers, teachers and more! My other Grandpa told me that his parents came to America at age 19. They moved be-cause of a war in their country, Greece, and they were driven out by the Turks. They worked at a restaurant in Newark, New Jersey. At Ellis Island, there was a big board with names of people that passed through there. I noticed their names on the wall!

I’m glad our country is full of immigrants because if no one was brave enough to leave family, friends, and their belongings behind, this country would not be as fascinating as it is. Many people call our country a big mixing pot because people all over the world come to live here. The people mix and blend together like food in a mixing pot. Yet, everyone has their own way of life and their own culture. Everyone is a little different. It is good to be different. Everyone stands out in a crowd!

Do you think that immigration is just in history books and doesn’t happen any more? If you do, you are wrong. Today, many people still come to America, like me. I was adopted from South America, just like lots of kids. We came to America with our new families! My mom and dad tell me about the exciting day I became an American citizen.

A flag was flown over the United States Capitol for me! I have this flag and a certificate which says:

“This is to certify that the accompanying flag was flown over the United States Capitol on August 26, 1998, at the request of the Honorable John Edward Porter, Member of Congress from Illinois. This flag was flown for Marisa Rose Lynch in celebration of her receiving U.S. citizenship.”

When I look at my flag, it makes me proud to be a part of a new generation of immigrants.

WHY I AM GLAD AMERICA IS A COUNTRY OF IMMIGRANTS
(By Esteban Ochoa)

ST. CLEMENT’S PARISH SCHOOL—2006 NATIONAL CONTEST RUNNER-UP

I am glad that the United States of America is a country of immigrants because you never feel lonely; you just have to look into a crowd to find someone with your same background. When you think you are alone and you won’t ever find a friend, you just have to look around and you will find a friend.

When I first transferred from Mexico to my current school in Texas, I did not know how to speak English. I felt alone and confused, but before long, I found that many people in my class spoke Spanish, and I soon made many friends, who eventually helped me learn English and do very well in school.

My case is not different from the story of most of the people who have come to this country from other parts of the world. Having millions of people from hundreds of countries, races, religions and economic backgrounds has created a society unlike any other in this planet.

With diversity comes cultural, economic, and spiritual richness. It is evident everywhere you look, in its food, in its music, in its clothing, and in its churches, just to mention a few examples. This Country has served as refuge for many people who came to the U.S.A. looking for opportunities and in many cases after having suffered extreme hardships.

Those are some of the reasons why I like that America is a country of immigrants. Just when you think that you do not fit in, and that you are alone in this cold world, you can still find variety, alternatives and, consequently, hope in the most unexpected situations.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

COLORADO’s BIG THOMPSON FLOOD OF 1976

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, today I honor those who lost their lives as well as those who survived Colorado’s Big Thompson Flood of 1976.

Thirty years ago, more than 1 foot of rain fell in a matter of hours, causing a flash flood in Big Thompson Canyon. One hundred and forty-four people were killed and property damage occurred. We remember those who died in this natural disaster and also the survivors who had to rebuild their lives, working as a community to start over again. Next week, outside of my hometown of Loveland, CO, survivors of this tragedy will gather to commemorate the Big Thompson Flood. Though I cannot be with them in this ceremony, my thoughts and prayers are with them, and I speak on the Senate floor today as a tribute to this special event.

I ask that the following letter, which I wrote for the commemoration ceremony of the Big Thompson Canyon Flood of 1976, be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows:

WHEN JULY 31, 2006

DEAR FAMILIES AND FRIENDS OF THE VICTIMS OF THE 1976 BIG THOMPSON CANYON FLOOD:

I very much wanted to join you today as you gather to remember the 30th Anniversary of one of Colorado’s worst natural disasters.

As we look back thirty years, we recall the shock and devastation that took place in this canyon. Joan, myself, and our two daughters, who were very young children at the time, will never forget the Big Thompson Flood and the days that followed. We arrived at home just after the flood tore through the canyon and towards Loveland. We were overwhelmed by the destruction we saw as we later viewed the damage.

A number of our friends and clients who lived in the canyon were ravaged by the flash flood and brought their animals to my hospital for care. Ieland’s health officer at that time, I also remember well the many health issues we faced together as a community. The memories will remain forever with each one of us who experienced this flood or witnessed its devastating effect on so many lives.

Today, we can see the positive results of the community working together to rebuild their lives and their properties. Joan’s and my thoughts are with you today as we remember the people who lost their lives and the ones who survived and rebuilt.

Today I am entering this letter in the Congressional Record as a tribute to the living and non-living victims of this natural disaster.

Sincerely,

WAYNE ALLARD, U.S. Senator

A TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM OKONIEWSKI

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, this spring, William Okoniewski, one of Wilmington’s best, passed away after a long career as a photographer. He was known throughout the community as the guy who shot all the pictures at weddings, high school graduations, communions, and confirmations.

If you had the Okoniewski Studio logo in the corner of a photo, you knew it was quality work. This was before the era of digital cameras, when our standards were different.

A couple of generations of Delawareans came to admire Bill, and his family. He and his wife of 64 years, Cecilia, had six children, and you could find him coaching winning track teams throughout the 1960s and 1970s. At his funeral, when his son Stephen read a letter, it reminded me of just why we call Bill’s generation the “greatest generation.”

The letter was from Art Slote, who on January 9, 1945, was one of five people rescued by Bill in the middle of the Battle of Herrlisheim, in France, near the German border.

In the letter, Mr. Slote said how he had searched for Bill for years, contacting the Army, the Red Cross, and every phone book, trying to locate the guy who saved his life. He finally found him in the late 1990s. He wrote:

I frequently ponder over what impels a man to act as your father did. He could have easily succumbed to the mortal fear of his own skin, and nobody would have criticized him. But he didn’t. I wonder if you or I would risk our lives in another’s behalf. It must be built into your father’s character and sense of morality.

Although slow to admit it, your father’s personal bravery, his ability to set aside his fears in behalf of his wounded fellow soldiers, his natural compassion for others in trouble, his modesty in never talking to you about it make this a valor and heroic event.

There is a lesson in those words for all of us in this Chamber and for all Americans. Bill Okoniewski embodied everything that is uniquely American. He understood what it meant to be loyal to our country and to respect your fellow Americans.

From his youth, and his generation, set the example. Today, he is the model for the brave men and women in uniform who are performing equally dangerous acts every day in Iraq and Afghanistan.

One day, and hopefully soon, they too will return home not only having served their country in time of war but going on to lead the kind of professional and family life that Bill lived for decades and decades.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF DOUGLAS, NORTH DAKOTA

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, today I wish to recognize a community in North Dakota that will be celebrating its 100th anniversary. On August 4, the residents of Douglas will gather to celebrate their community’s history and founding.

Douglas was founded in 1906 and was proudly named after the nearby Douglas Creek. The creek’s name honored Major Douglas, who was killed at Fort Stevenson in the 1870s. In 1906, Douglas’s post office was established under the stewardship of Arthur C.
Bates. Douglas was incorporated as a village in 1908 with A.G. Burges as its first mayor.

Today, Douglas remains a small, proud community. Each year, the community gathers together and has picnics in the park. During the past weekend of August 4th. There will be an all-school reunion to allow former classmates to reunite with each other, followed by a charity auction. A fireman’s rodeo, lawn mower pull, and an event to honor veterans will keep the crowds entertained all weekend. The highlight of the celebration will be the parade, which will feature floats, musical performances, and a fireworks display.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to join me in congratulating Douglas, ND, and its citizens on their first 100 years and in wishing them well through the next century. By honoring Douglas and all the other historic small towns of North Dakota, we keep the great pioneering frontier spirit alive for future generations. It is places such as Douglas that have helped to shape this country into what it is today, which is why this fine community is deserving of our recognition.

Douglas has a proud past and a bright future.

TRIBUTE TO JAMES HEALY

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I take to pay tribute to a fine New Jerseyan and a great friend of my State, James Healy. News of Jim’s untimely passing this past Friday at the age of 48 saddened all of us in the New Jersey delegation. His great personality and tremendous work ethic truly made him a pleasure to work with and an asset to his organization, the New Jersey Department of Transportation, NJDOT.

For nearly 20 years, Jim held several important posts within the department. Most recently, he served as the NJDOT’s Federal liaison. Jim was an expert on Federal legislative, regulatory, and finance issues. He provided my office with valuable expertise and advice concerning subjects of great importance to New Jersey.

New Jersey is the most densely populated State in the Union, and the movement of people and goods through its travel corridors is of utmost importance, not just to New Jerseyans, but for the entire regional economy.

Jim guided the New Jersey delegation through Federal highway bill authorizations, which took years to accomplish. The most recent one, SAFETEA-LU, took 2 years to complete. Jim also worked closely with New Jersey members on aviation reauthorization, including the VISION-100 legislation passed in 2003.

He advocated for the State’s priorities, including legislation to help preserve open spaces in New Jersey. My staff and I had the pleasure of working with him many times on these bills and he was always a consummate professional: well-informed, thorough in his work, and always extraordinarily helpful.

When a former NJDOT commissioner served as president of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, AASHTO, Jim served as liaison to AASHTO staff, where he helped coordinate and set national transportation policy goals.

Jim was an assistant professor at Fairleigh Dickinson University and was a 1979 graduate of William Paterson University, where he earned a Bachelor’s Degree in Business Administration. He received his law degree in 1983 from Rutgers University in Newark, NJ.

Jim is survived by his parents, Philip and Hannah Healy of Wayne, NJ, and his brothers and sisters, Joseph Healy, Mary Jo Ridge, Kathleen Blanco, Josephine Hoey, and Joan Wileen. My heart goes out to Jim’s family during this difficult time.

I salute the life and memory of this great son of New Jersey, Jim Healy. May he rest in peace.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. LIEBERMAN, and Mr. SALAZAR):

S. 3721. A bill to amend the Homeland Security Act of 2002 to establish the United States Emergency Management Authority, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise to introduce S. 3721, the Post-Katrina Emergency Management Reform Act of 2006. It contains a vital set of reforms and innovations for our emergency-management systems that are designed to save lives and ease suffering when disaster strikes. The crafting of this bill has benefited from the insights of my principal cosponsor, Senator LIEBERMAN, and from the support of our other cosponsor, Senator SALAZAR.

The Senate has already acted on one critical measure to apply the bitter lessons of Hurricane Katrina. The 87 to 11 vote on July 11, adding creation of the U.S. Emergency Management Authority to the Homeland Security appropriations bill, adopted a major element of today’s bill. That was a great step forward.

The Senate Homeland Security Committee conducted an 8-month investigation with 23 hearings, more than 325 formal interviews, and a review of more than 338,000 pages of documents to ascertain why the response to Hurricane Katrina was so inadequate at all levels of government. The investigation revealed serious failures of leadership. It also revealed an urgent need for broad reforms ranging from coordination to accountability to legislation to consolidate the structure and missions of entire Federal agencies.

Some of the 88 recommendations that flowed from our investigation can be adopted by action. The Post-Katrina Emergency Management Reform Act comprises important steps that only Congress can take. I will outline the five key components of our bill.

First, we strengthen FEMA and rename it as the United State Emergency Management Authority, or US-EMA, to signify a fresh start. We elevate US-EMA within DHS, restore its preparedness authority, and protect it from departmental reorganizations that could erode its mission. These measures give the agency mission and asset protections like those of its DHS siblings, the Coast Guard and the Secret Service.

These statutory protections are important. Securing the integrity of FEMA preserves the cooperative benefits of its operating within easy reach of other DHS agencies. It also avoids the duplication, cost, and confusion for State and local officials that would come from carving FEMA out as a weak, stand-alone agency for natural disasters. Keeping FEMA where it was placed by the Homeland Security Act of 2002 avoids the need for DHS to recreate a similar terror-response capability.

Improving contact and coordination among Federal, State, and local agencies is essential. For that reason, our bill provides for regionally based, multi-agency Federal strike teams that will be ready to act and deploy in a region they will already know and understand before a disaster occurs.

The bill also provides continued funding for the Interstate Emergency Management Assistance Compact that proved so valuable inmarshaling aid for the gulf coast last year. It commits the US-EMA to work with States and localities to develop a standardized credentialing system that will help responders and selected private-sector personnel more easily deploy in disaster areas anywhere in the country, and it requires the US-EMA to offer technical assistance to State and local governments.

To help remedy the communications gaps revealed by Hurricane Katrina, we also improve the agency’s organizational and technical communications systems. Our bill designates the Administrator of the US-EMA as the principal advisor to the President on emergency-management issues. Meanwhile, advisory councils will ensure that the US-EMA has open channels of communication with State and local officials, emergency responders, key private-sector and nongovernmental entities, and with representatives of people with disabilities.

On the equally important technical side, our bill consolidates several communication programs within a new Office of Emergency Communications within US-EMA. This office will devise a national emergency-communications strategy, administer grants for interoperable communications, and regularly assess the operability and interoperability of the systems that are essential for disaster response and that failed so widely during the Katrina catastrophe.

This US-EMA portion of the bill has received a great deal of attention. But it is only one part of this package of essential reforms.

The second part of our bill permits an enhanced Federal role in emergency management when major disasters require it. The Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, better known as the Stafford Act, authorizes a variety of Federal assistance measures to State and local governments when the President has declared a disaster.

Congress has amended the Stafford Act over time to make it more effective. Our bill continues that process of improvement by applying lessons learned from Katrina.

At the highest level, it directs the Federal Government to develop and maintain a national disaster-recovery strategy in coordination with the State and local governments which will lead each recovery. This fills a remarkable planning void in our current system, which focuses on response. When disaster overwhelms state and local governments and devastates large areas, recovery can be a long process requiring extended Federal assistance.

We increase the potential for more effective Federal aid in several ways. For example, the legislation enhances Federal agencies’ ability to respond when the President uses his authority to direct their assistance in major disaster response and recovery.

The bill requires a national-disaster housing strategy and authorizes making semipermanent housing units a part of Stafford Act assistance. In many cases, the modular “Katrina cottages,” for example, would be less costly, more livable, more easily sited, and more durable than the notorious trailers FEMA purchased.

A new title VII for the Stafford Act gives the President discretion to offer increased Federal assistance when disaster overwhelms state and local governments. This discretionary—but limited—authority for catastrophes includes raising the cap on individual assistance, assisting victims with rent or mortgage costs, extending disaster-unemployment benefits, increasing community asset protection reimbursements to communities for the cost of food, clothes, and other essential goods they distribute to victims.
Among other Stafford Act revisions, our bill clarifies that Federal mitigation efforts can extend to man-made hazards like the Mississippi River Gulf Outlet that funneled deadly storm-surge waters toward New Orleans. It establishes a missing-child location system to help locate children and find families, a major problem in the aftermath of Katrina. And it requires that planning and training exercises, as well as evacuation and sheltering plans, give consideration to people with disabilities as well as those who are not fluent in English, or who have pets.

These improvements to the Stafford Act would be a major accomplishment by themselves. But the demonstrated need for reforms goes deeper still.

The third key element of our bill will provide more and better-trained emergency professionals. The US-EMA will establish a contingency cadre to meet surge workforce needs; implement a human-capital strategy to improve recruitment, development, and retention; and make quarterly reports to Congress on staffing levels. These actions should reduce the chronic workforce shortages—at times as great as 25 percent—that have hobbled FEMA in the past.

Looking to staffing quality across the full spectrum, our bill creates a National Homeland Security Academy. The academy will offer both classroom and distance-learning instruction and training to DHS, state, and local homeland-security professionals.

The fourth element in our reform bill will correct the confusion and lack of training on incident management and unified-command operations that frustrated a fully effective response to Katrina. Our bill mandates a comprehensive review of the National Response Plan, and requires that the DHS Secretary employ the NRP and the National Incident Management System to guide actions in a natural or manmade disaster.

The Secretary is also directed to work with the US-EMA Administrator and with the National Advisory Committee to implement a national training-and-exercise program to ensure that vital knowledge and skills are in place and are kept sharp.

The fifth key aspect of our bill targets the waste, fraud, and abuse that outraged both our compassion for disaster victims and our sense of stewardship for taxpayer dollars. Based on the investigations by our committee, the GAO, and the DHS inspector general, I believe far more than a billion dollars has been lost to waste, fraud, and abuse in the aftermath of Katrina. The purchase of unneeded ice, and abuse of debit cards indicate that DHS has lacked even rudimentary controls to safeguard tax dollars.

Our bill directs the Department to identify emergency-response requirements that can be contracted in advance with pre-screened vendors, so that vital commodities and services can be secured and delivered promptly. This simple change could curtail the waste of time and money as officials scramble to make ad-hoc purchase and distribution arrangements, often paying excessive prices. We also provide for a reliable and accountable contracting officers who can work in the field for an extended period following a disaster, so that response and recovery spending is better directed and controlled than with Katrina.

Our bill is one unfortunate reality that thieves and con artists will try to abuse even programs for disaster victims. Our bill imposes civil and criminal penalties for misrepresentation, requires fraud-awareness training for contracting officers and for the relief workforce, mandates systems to verify identities and addresses, and requires issuing explicit directions on legitimate uses of purchase cards.

Our bill is no single-issue, silver-bullet sufficiency that our mechanisms for disaster mitigation, preparation, response, and recovery urgently need many improvements. If we leave untouched the gaps, the confusions, and the inadequacies that we found in Katrina, we will see more unnecessary loss of life and prolonged misery. We do not know when the next great disaster will strike, or what form it will take. But we know it will come. We know what needs to be done. The Post-Katrina Emergency Management Reform Act gives us the tools to do it.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my support for and cosponsorship of this comprehensive and other legislation that Chairman Collins and I are proposing based on our investigation into the failed preparations and response to Hurricane Katrina.

About 1 month ago, we introduced a bill to transform FEMA into the U.S. Emergency Management Authority to guarantee that our national emergency response system can handle a catastrophe—whether it is a hurricane the size and scope of Katrina or a terrorist attack. U.S. EMA would have special, independent authority and the Coast Guard has within the Department of Homeland Security. The Senate overwhelmingly adopted that legislation by a vote of 87 to 11 as part of the Department of Homeland Security fiscal year 2007 Appropriations Act.

Today, we reintroduce that legislation backed up by additional reforms to improve emergency communication, planning, training, and to make necessary changes to the Stafford Act, which governs relief and emergency assistance to victims of disasters.

The Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee, at the request of the Senate leadership, spent 7 months culling through hundreds of thousands of documents, interviewing hundreds of witnesses, and holding scores of hearings into the botched Government response to that catastrophic hurricane.

We found that at all levels, our Government was ill-equipped to deal with the massive human suffering all along the gulf coast that followed the storm’s strike. Its preparations and response angered the American people who expect more from their government when fellow Americans are in need. These failings were the result of many things—negligence, lack of resources, lack of capability, but most of all they were the result of a failure of leadership—by the White House, DHS, FEMA, the Louisiana Governor’s office, and the New Orleans mayor’s office.

To this day, the Department of Homeland Security does not make sufficient distinction between everyday problems that States must deal with on a seasonal basis and the larger catastrophes which, as Katrina demonstrated, quickly overwhelm local and State authorities.

The legislation we are introducing today is an effort to get the Department of Homeland Security to understand that distinction better and to respond and respond to cope better with normal disasters as well as with those rarer but truly catastrophic events. It addresses—to the extent possible—many of the Federal shortcomings exposed by our investigation and it reflects many of the recommendations the committee reached in its final report on the Katrina investigation.

Let me briefly summarize the bill. First and foremost, we are concerned about our first responders who rush into the middle of catastrophes to save lives. First responders must have the tools they need to protect and save our communities. Think back to September 11 and hundreds of firefighters lost their lives that day for many reasons. Among them was that their radio equipment was not compatible with the police force radios, making it more difficult to learn of the warnings others had that the Twin Towers were going to fall.

During Hurricane Katrina, first responders not only lacked compatible radio equipment, but they lost communication completely when power lines and sub stations were knocked out of operation.

Whether responding to a terrorist attack, natural disaster, fire, a missing child, or a fleeing suspect, police, firefighters, emergency medical technicians, and other responders too frequently cannot share crucial, lifesaving information at the scene of a disaster.

Senator Collins and I introduced a bill, reported out of committee last year, to improve emergency communications, the Assure Emergency and Interoperable Communications for First Responders Act of 2005, S.1725. We have borrowed liberally from it. For example, today’s legislation, like S.1725, would require the development of a national strategy for emergency communications; the establishment of an emergency communications research and development program; and dedicated funding for State and local communications and interoperability grants, authorized at $3.3 billion over 5 years.

We would also establish a new Office of Emergency Communications within U.S. EMA by combining existing offices at the Department of Homeland Security that deal with various aspects of emergency communications. Among the offices to be combined are SAFECOM within the Science and Technology Directorate and the Interoperability and Communications System, which was under the Infrastructure Protection Office during Katrina. This office will make sure that DHS actually has someone in charge of leading the Department’s splintered efforts to fix these persistent communications problems.

This legislation also makes changes to the Stafford Act and improves upon other recovery and assistance benefits for the victims of disaster. Among other things, we would require U.S. EMA to develop housing and recovery strategies; we would increase the assistance provided under the Hazard Mitigation Grant Program from 7.5 percent to 15 percent, depending on the size of the disaster; and we would expand FEMA’s authority so that in addition to providing temporary housing it could provide permanent or semipermanent housing, giving it greater flexibility to meet the needs of those affected by a disaster. Unlike FEMA, U.S. EMA would not have to rely on travel trailers to house victims when other types of housing are a better option.

Victims would be aided further under this legislation by elimination of the subcaps that limited the amount of specific assistance for repairs and home replacement during Katrina and by increased transportation benefits. We would clarify the statute by reinforcing Congress’s intent to allow for the use of rental assistance to pay for utility costs and to provide treatment of mental health problems resulting from or aggravated by a disaster. And we would require U.S. EMA to provide temporary residences to all parts of a household that necessarily must split following a disaster—because of multiple relocations or cases of domestic violence, for example.

If the President finds “catastrophic damages” to a locale hit by disaster, he would be able to provide even more assistance under our legislation. The President would be allowed the cap for individual assistance from $26,000 to $52,000, provide unemployment benefits for 52 weeks instead of 26 weeks, provide help with mortgage and rental assistance, and waive maximum limits for individual and family assistance that can be provided under the Community Disaster Loan Program.

Other provisions in our bill call for increased planning for people with special needs, better ways to get disaster information to those who need it, and measures to assist with family reunification. We would also require government contractors to hire more local firms and local workers.

This legislation also has an extensive section dedicated to saving money for the taxpayers while preventing waste, fraud, and abuse. For example, we would require the U.S. EMA Director to establish an identity verification process to ensure that victims who apply for benefits under the Individuals and Households program and the SBA say they are and are in true need. We would create a registry of contractors able to perform common postdisaster work and use advance, competitively awarded contracts for predictably recurring efforts. And we would create a contingent of volunteer contracting officers from throughout the Federal Government to assist with additional contracting needs during emergencies.

Our bill would also require U.S. EMA to plan for a disaster far more extensively than it has previously. It requires the development of a national training and exercise program, involving both Federal and State officials, to prepare for natural and manmade disasters. And the U.S. EMA Administrator would have to review the National Response Plan and clarify overlapping or confusing law enforcement, search and rescue, and medical responsibilities.

Mr. President, we are approaching the 1-year anniversary of Katrina—August 29. Much has changed since that time. Certainly, the gulf coast is better prepared to meet a disaster this hurricane season. Yet many victimized by Hurricane Katrina, as well as those vulnerable to natural disasters or terrorist attacks elsewhere, still face uncertain futures.

We cannot forget those still struggling to rebuild their lives from the devastation wrought by Katrina almost a year ago. This legislation was designed to address specific problems exposed by Katrina, so as it moves through the legislative process, we must do all that we can to ensure that the U.S. EMA, with the authority the needs to provide assistance to past victims, as well as to victims of future disasters. We must also make certain that, unlike FEMA, U.S. EMA has all of the resources it needs to lead a national preparedness effort and to respond to whatever occurs in a manner that the American people have a right to expect.

The committee’s investigation found that FEMA had never been prepared for a catastrophic event but also that it had budget shortages that hindered its preparedness and impeded its performance. Scott Wells, FEMA’s Deputy Federal Coordinating Officer in Louisiana, summed it up. He said: “This was a catastrophic disaster. We don’t have the structure; we don’t have the people for catastrophic disaster. It’s that simple... If you want a big capability, you’ve got to make a big investment. And there is no investment in response operations for a catastrophic disaster. It’s not there.”

Clearly, if the Federal Government is to improve its performance in the next disaster, we must give it sufficient resources. This legislation takes an important step in that direction by providing a $49 million increase for FEMA’s two key operating accounts in fiscal year 2008 and an additional $35 million in fiscal year 2009. However, I believe even more is necessary, and will work to secure additional resources as U.S. EMA becomes a reality.

The Department of Homeland Security was established not to address average disasters—the hurricanes that reliably strike certain parts of the country each year or flooding from heavy rains. DHS was established to prevent, prepare for, and if necessary respond to horrific catastrophes that demand all the resources our Federal Government has to offer in times of need or when local and State governments are overwhelmed by what has befallen them.

This legislation is a reminder of that original purpose, an effort to get the Department of Homeland Security back to where Congress originally envisioned it should be able to help the Department be as prepared for and able to respond to catastrophes as the American public expects it to be.

By Mr. DODD (for himself and Mr. LIEBERMAN):

S. 3723. A bill to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to designate certain segments of the Eightmile River in the State of Connecticut as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, today I join with my colleague Senator Lieberman to introduce the Eightmile Wild and Scenic River Act to designate certain segments of the Eightmile River in the State of Connecticut as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The National Wild and Scenic Rivers System was created by Congress in 1968 to create a “Hall of Fame” for exceptional rivers. Eligible rivers or river segments must meet two criteria; first, there the river corridor must be free flowing and, second, it must contain at least one outstanding remarkable resource deserving special recognition, such as a prominent natural, cultural, scenic, or recreational resource.

Over the course of the past few years, the National Park Service has responded to interest and inquiries from local advocates and town officials regarding a potential Wild and Scenic River designation for the Eightmile River located in south central Connecticut. While a local management plan has been developed, studies have shown that fifteen miles of the Eightmile River and its East Branch through the towns of Salem, East Haddam, Lyme, and East Haddam, CT, were already included on the National Park Service’s Nationwide Rivers Inventory of potential Wild and Scenic River segments. Both segments have great recreational value and are included on the inventory for outstanding scenic, geologic, and fish and wildlife values.

More than 80 percent of the Connecticut River watershed is still forested, with large tracts of unfragmented hardwood forests that are home to a diverse assemblage of plants and animals including bobcats, great horned owls, red foxes and roughly 180 other species of birds, fish, and reptiles.

The impetus for gaining wild and scenic designation of segments of the Eightmile River originated locally in 1995 when local officials and citizens began working on protection efforts. A variety of conservation and economic growth. As one of the most diverse and rich ecosystems in the lower Connecticut River Valley, it is essential that we work to preserve this river while all parties, local, State and Federal, and able to support this ecosystem. The Eightmile River, like many other rivers in America, can still be stewarded for future generations of Americans as both a recreational treasure and an unblemished ecological haven.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3723

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, that—

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Eightmile Wild and Scenic River Act.”

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) the Eightmile River Wild and Scenic River Study Act of 2001 (Public Law 107–65; 115 Stat. 484) required the Secretary to complete a study of the Eightmile River in the State of Connecticut for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, downstream to its confluence with the Connecticut River for potential inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System;

(2) the segments of the Eightmile River that were assessed in the study continue to be in a free-flowing condition;

(3) the segments of the Eightmile River contain outstanding resource values relating to—

(A) cultural landscapes;

(B) water quality;

(C) watershed hydrology;

(D) unique species;

(E) natural communities;

(F) geology;

(G) watershed ecosystems;

(B) those resource values that are manifested throughout the entire watershed; and

(C) the continued protection of the entire watershed is intrinsically important to the designation of the Eightmile River under this Act;

(5) the Eightmile River Wild and Scenic Study Committee took a watershed approach in studying and recommending management options for the river segments and the Eightmile River watershed as a whole;

(6) during the study, the Eightmile River Wild and Scenic Study Committee prepared the Eightmile River Management Plan to establish objectives, standards, and action programs to ensure long-term protection of the outstanding resource values of the Eightmile River, and compatible management of the land and water resources of the Eightmile River and its watershed, without Federal management of affected lands in the United States;

(7) the Eightmile River Wild and Scenic Study Committee—

(A) voted in favor of including the Eightmile River in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System; and

(B) included that recommendation as an integral part of the Eightmile River Watershed Management Plan;

(8) the residents of the towns located adjacent to the Eightmile River and comprising most of its watershed, including Salem, East Haddam, Lyme, and East Haddam, CT, as well as the boards of selectmen and land use commissions of those towns, voted—

Mr. ROCKEFELLER (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. COCHRAN, and Mr. JOHNSON): S. 3727. A bill to enhance scientific research and competitiveness through the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pension.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, today, I introduce the EPSCoR Research and Competitive Act of 2006, and I am proud to have the bipartisan support of my colleagues, Senators SNOWE, INOUYE, COCHRAN and JOHNSON.

The Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research, EPSCoR, at the National Science Foundation, NSF, is designed to help states that historically do not receive much NSF funding to compete more effectively for grants. NSF maintains its high standards, but it also provides help to States to meet such standards. Such an investment is fundamental to help promote our country’s competitiveness nationwide. Twenty-six States are eligible for the EPSCoR program, and these States represent 20 percent of our population, 73 percent of our research and development funding from industry, 58 percent of our universities, and 18 percent of our academic scientists and engineers. The EPSCoR states also represent unique environments for scientific research with Hawaii and Alaska having unique features. Montana is a major area for paleontology. Six of the top ten energy producing States are EPSCoR States. It is common sense to invest in building research capacity in our EPSCoR States.

We also know that EPSCoR works. More than one-half of the researchers supported by NSF’s EPSCoR program during the first 10 years later were successful in competing for non-EPSCoR funding. New technology companies started by university research are based in the States where the original research was done. To strengthen our research and enhance competitiveness EPSCoR is a smart investment.

Within the American Innovation and Competitiveness Act of 2006, it is a provision authorizing the EPSCoR program at $125 million, and stating that EPSCoR should increase in proportion with the overall NSF budget. This package was marked up by the Senate Commerce Committee on May 18, 2006 with bipartisan support.

Clearly, there is agreement that EPSCoR needs to be part of our national strategy for competitiveness. This legislation adds some specifics to that goal. The bill proposes that the Research Infrastructure Improvements Grant increase to $75 million. It seeks 20 percent of EPSCoR’s new technology companies started by university research are based in the States where the original research was done. To strengthen our research and enhance competitiveness EPSCoR is a smart investment.

SEC. 4. SENSITIVITY TO INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION.

Congress urges all governments to comply promptly with United Nations Security Council Resolution 1695 and to impose measures on persons involved in such proliferation that are similar to those imposed by the United States Government pursuant to the Iran, North Korea, and Syria Nonproliferation Act (Public Law 106–178; 50 U.S.C. 1701 note), as amended by this Act.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, the bill that we just passed, S. 3728, to promote nuclear nonproliferation in North Korea was introduced by myself, Senator BIDEN, and others.

As we all know, earlier this month, the North Korean regime defied the international community and launched seven long and medium-range missiles into the Sea of Japan. One of the missiles, the Taepodong-2, has a potential range of approximately 9,000 miles, placing the United States well within reach of attack by North Korea.

Kim Jong Il’s regime took this dangerous and provocative action despite repeated warnings not to do so from the United States, its close neighbors and participants in the six-party talks, and many others in the international community.

The unanimous consent which was just approved focuses on this issue of nuclear nonproliferation in North Korea.

The North Korean missile launches reminded us yet again of the threat posed by Kim Jong Il’s regime.

North Korea’s pursuit of nuclear weapons and its possession of long-range missiles that could potentially strike or be launched from North Korea makes the security of the American people and to peace and stability in East Asia.

This combination of nuclear weapons and long range missiles is a threat that the United States should not tolerate.

On November 2005, North Korea has boycotted the six-party talks aimed at ending the regime’s illicit nuclear weapons program.

In an effort to revive this diplomatic track, the People’s Republic of China 2 weeks ago sent a high-level delegation to Pyongyang to convince North Korea to return to the six-party talks.

North Korea remained intransigent and gave no indication of any willingness to allow diplomatic efforts to succeed.

The U.N. Security Council then decided to act.

On July 15, the United Nations Security Council sent a strong, unambiguous, and unified message to the North Koreans that their latest provocations are unacceptable.

The Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1695. This resolution condemned unequivocally the North Korean missile launches.

In addition, the Security Council demanded that North Korea reestablish its moratorium on missile launches. It also requires all U.N. member states to do everything they can to prevent the procurement and transfer of missiles, missile-related items, materials, goods, technology, or financial resources to or from North Korea’s missile and WMD programs.

As Ambassador Bolton stated:

The United States expects that the DPRK and all other UN Member States will immediately act in accordance with the requirements of this resolution.

However, soon afterwards, North Korea announced that it had no intention of abiding by the resolution’s requirements—yet another act of defiance and brinkmanship.

North Korea’s continued defiance of the international community leaves our Nation with no alternative but to act.

For all these reasons, I rise today to call up the North Korea Nonproliferation Act of 2006, which I originally introduced last week. This legislation will add North Korea to the list of countries currently covered by the Iran and Syria Nonproliferation Acts.

Under this bill, the President would be required to submit a report to Congress every 6 months listing all foreign persons believed to have transferred to or acquired from North Korea materials that could contribute to the production of missiles, nuclear weapons, other weapons of mass destruction, and certain conventional weapons.

This legislation also authorizes the President to impose sanctions on all foreign persons identified on this list.

These sanctions include prohibitions on the U.S. Government purchase from such persons and the issuance of U.S. Government export licenses for exports to such persons.

Ultimately, the bill will lead to U.S. sanctions on any foreign persons or foreign companies that transfer missile and WMD-related items, as well as certain advanced conventional weapons, to North Korea, or that buy such items from North Korea.

The U.S. is already doing this with respect to transfers of these items to and from Iran and Syria under the Iran and Syria Nonproliferation Acts. The time has come for us to treat transfers of these items to North Korea no less seriously than we already treat transfers of these same items to Iran and Syria.

Of course, no transfers of missile and WMD-related items to or from North Korea should be taking place now that the Security Council has forbidden all such commerce with that country.

Experience teaches us, however, that determined proliferators are likely to ignore these new U.N. sanctions, which is why this legislation is so critically important. It will provide a partial remedy in such cases, and should deter violations of the new U.N. sanctions on North Korea.

The North Korea Nonproliferation Act of 2006 will reinforce Security Council Resolution 1695 and demonstrate that the United States is, indeed, doing all that it can to stop the transfer of these dangerous materials to and from North Korea.

The U.N. Security Council has spoken. The United States must now step up its efforts to fulfill its responsibility to protect the American homeland from the North Korean threat.

Section 4 of this bill calls on all countries to consider measures similar to the ones that we will adopt pursuant to this law to reinforce Security Council Resolution 1695.
I would hope that, in particular, countries such as Japan that are especially threatened by North Korea’s provocative actions will consider taking steps like those provided for under this legislation to deter the transfer by others to or from North Korea of sensitive items with weapons applications.

These items in the hands of Kim Jong Il pose a direct threat to the American people, the people of the region, and peace and security in East Asia.

If we are in earnest about protecting the American homeland, then it’s imperative that we prevent the North Korean regime from acquiring these dangerous materials. I thank the cosponsors of this bill: Chairman Lugar, as well as Senators Inouye, Brownback, Biden, Bunning, Akaka, and Dole, as well as the rest of my Senate colleagues for their support.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. FRIST. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved, and the Senate resume consideration of the motion to proceed to S. 3711, the Gulf of Mexico energy security bill, with the time until 10 a.m. to be equally divided between the two leaders or their designees; further, at 10, the Senate proceed to a vote on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to S. 3711; further, that following the vote, the Senate will reassemble until 12 noon for the joint meeting with Prime Minister of Iraq.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, tomorrow morning at 10 o’clock, we will be voting on the motion to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to the Gulf of Mexico energy security bill. As has been pointed out over the course of the day, this bill is a very important issue. We will open up for supplemental exploration over a billion barrels of oil and over 5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, enough energy to supply 6 million homes for 15 years—a very important bill. It is bipartisan. We will be voting tomorrow morning on this motion to proceed. I do hope that cloture will be invoked and that we are then able to reach an agreement on when to start debate on the substance of that bill.

I remind Senators that after that 10 a.m. cloture vote, we will proceed to the Hall of the House of Representatives to hear the remarks of Prime Minister Maliki of Iraq.

Before we close, I again thank Senator ENZIGN for his tremendous leadership and work on this child custody protection bill. I think it is a great day for our colleagues for working together in a bipartisan way to reach an agreement which allowed us to finish this bill in short order, in an organized way.

As my colleagues just heard, we feel strongly that we need to pass this bill short order, in an organized way.

As you will remember, the Senate was going to obstruct this bill at this time, but the Senate has spoken overwhelmingly in support of this bill. The House, as I mentioned earlier, passed their child custody protection bill on April 27, 2005, and as is customary and is routine, we would go to conference. The Democrats have objected to going to conference. We will continue to try to get to conference over the next several days. I am deeply disappointed by that. I hope, as I said earlier, that this is not a sign that they are going to obstruct this bill at this point, at the level of conference, after this Senate has spoken overwhelmingly in support of this bill.
ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:27 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, July 26, 2006, at 9 a.m.

ALTERNATIVE PLURIPOTENT STEM CELL THERAPIES ENHANCEMENT ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. DAVID WU
OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 18, 2006

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill, the Alternative Pluripotent Stem Cell Therapies Enhancement Act. In this bill, Congress is overreaching its authority. The Federal Government already permits this research, through a merit based peer review process led by the scientific community. Congress should not be directing research in which we do not have expertise; we are not scientists.

ON THE FIRST ANNUAL UW SUMMER WASHINGTON PROGRAM

HON. TAMMY BALDWIN
OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the University of Wisconsin, the Political Science Department, and the student participants on the creation and completion of the first annual UW Summer Washington Program. This invaluable opportunity was made possible by the generous support of many UW alumni.

The 15 undergraduate students were selected through a competitive application process and are interning in various offices on Capitol Hill. They are gaining experience in legislative offices, lobbying firms, the Department of Justice, and several foreign policy offices, while also participating in a Political Science course. Guest speakers and hosts, all of whom are UW alumni, have been in attendance at each class session offering priceless and practical advice to the students.

This program would not have been possible without the support of the Wisconsin alumni who have helped in funding, organizing social events, and speaking to the class. The UW Foundation, in collaboration with the Department of Political Science, has worked with alumni to get this program off the ground in hopes that it will be available to future undergraduates. The goal of this program is to establish a permanent presence for the University of Wisconsin in Washington, DC.

I am proud to rise today to pay tribute to the establishment of this exceptional opportunity. It is truly an honor for me to represent the students, the alumni, and the University of Wisconsin on this occasion, and wish them the best of luck in the successful continuation of this important program.

TRIBUTE TO THE GRAND CANYON CHAPTER OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS

HON. J.D. HAYWORTH OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor and recognition of the Grand Canyon Chapter of the American Red Cross as they celebrate 90 years of service in Arizona.

Since 1916, the American Red Cross Grand Canyon Chapter, headquartered in Phoenix, is where the people of Arizona come together to help one another. The passionate volunteers and staff who make up the Grand Canyon Chapter provide care, comfort and lifesaving skills to millions of people in Arizona. Volunteers serve their neighbors throughout the 10 counties in the northern two-thirds of Arizona, a population of 4.5 million.

Arizonans benefit from programs that provide meaningful assistance and lift the spirit of individuals and families throughout our communities. The chapter is a leader in water safety instruction. I am particularly proud of their “Water Whiz Kids” program, which teaches backyard pool safety to children and also provides infant and child CPR training to their parents.

Within my district, the Grand Canyon Chapter is there when a disaster strikes thousands, and when it strikes only one. In May of this year, in the wake of the Tradewinds Apartment fire in Mesa, Red Cross volunteers assisted 34 families, served 400 meals, and distributed 125 comfort kits. Another local emergency response was the Cave Creek Complex Fire last year where 36 Red Cross volunteers opened a shelter and provided 23 residents with meals and comfort kits.

The American Red Cross Grand Canyon Chapter has also played an instrumental role in assisting after national disasters outside Arizona, including Hurricane Katrina. Last year, over 100 Red Cross volunteers from Arizona deployed to the gulf coast to help with the disaster response. The Grand Canyon Chapter also operated a national call center for disaster victims throughout the country. Impressively, with only 30 hours advance notice, the Chapter organized “Operation Good Neighbor Shelter” at Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum, helping more than 1,000 Hurricane Katrina evacuees in our State last year. These evacuees were relocated from the gulf coast, suddenly finding themselves hundreds of miles from their homes, yet upon their arrival, they were the recipients of the warm “compassion in action” that exemplifies the Red Cross volunteer and the spirit of Arizonans: good neighbors helping new neighbors during drastic times.

Mr. Speaker and colleagues, please join me to honor and recognize the American Red Cross Grand Canyon Chapter on its 90th birthday. With congratulations and gratitude for the excellent work they do to enrich our lives, I am pleased to recognize their service to our communities throughout the great State of Arizona.

HON. MICHAEL H. MICHAUD OF MAINE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, since the founding of our Nation, rural Americans have always answered the call to service in times of war. One in three of the patients seen at the Department of Veterans Affairs lives in a rural community. Veterans who live in rural settings are often older and have more physical and mental health challenges as compared to veterans who live in suburban or urban settings. According to the 2005 Institute of Medicine report, The Future of Rural Health, the smaller, poorer, and more isolated a rural community is, the more difficult it is to ensure the availability of high-quality health services. With some 44 percent of current military recruits coming from rural areas, we must help VA focus on meeting the pressing health care needs of rural veterans.

I have introduced H.R. 5524, the Rural Veterans Health Care Act of 2006, to take a comprehensive and practical approach towards improving rural veterans' health care by increasing community based facilities and outreach, encouraging the training and recruitment of health care professionals, focusing on research to develop innovative solutions to the challenges of delivering rural health care, and developing the information technology infrastructure we need to enhance health care services in rural areas.

Rural America has always answered the call to service. We should do everything we can to ensure that rural veterans have the same reasonable access to the high quality care available through the VA as veterans in suburban and urban areas. I urge my colleagues to support rural veterans and pass H.R. 5524.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to include in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a letter of support for H.R. 5524, the Rural Veterans Health Care Act of 2006, from the National Rural Health Association.

NATIONAL RURAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION
Kansas City, MO, July 17, 2006

Hon. Michael Michaud,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC

Dear Representative Michaud: On behalf of the National Rural Health Association, I am writing to express our strong support for H.R. 5524, the “Rural Veterans Health Care Act of 2006.”

1. The NRHA is a national nonprofit, non partisan, membership organization with approximately 10,000 members that provides leadership on rural health issues. The Association’s mission is to improve the health of rural Americans and to provide leadership on rural health issues through advocacy, communication, education and research. The NRHA membership consists of a diverse collection of individuals and organizations, all of whom share the common bond of an interest in rural health.

2. The NRHA members are keenly aware of the disproportionate rates at which rural people serve in the military and the issues our rural veterans face in obtaining health care and mental health care in rural communities. We are pleased to see so many provisions in this legislation to address these concerns. In particular, the provisions which call for expansion of and improved quality of services provided by Vet Centers, Outreach Health Centers, and CBOCs in rural areas. These services represent approaches that greatly increase access to quality care for these vets. Vet Centers, as is their role, will also educate returning rural veterans to their benefits and the services they have earned.

3. The bill also addresses the long term care needs of rural vets, the use of an electronic medical record system to enhance patient safety and improve quality of care, takes advantage of the groundbreaking IOM report on the future of rural health care recommendations, and provides a provision for the training of health care professionals in rural facilities serving veterans. All of these provisions are supportive and I applaud the Administration for its support. The NRHA is especially supportive of the call for a national Advisory Committee on Rural Veterans, and offer up any assistance we might make in recommending members for this committee should the legislation be successful. In addition, we are pleased that the legislation increases the number of rural rotations for medical residents training at the VA and takes steps to enhance the education, training, retention, and recruitment of health professionals in rural areas. Research has shown that rural rotations are effective in increasing the number of medical personnel that choose to practice in rural areas.

4. The NRHA is supportive and involved in the dissemination of research and resources developed by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Rural Research Centers, therefore, we support the provisions in the bill which would designate at least four centers as the location for research targeted at defining rural veteran health and mental health care needs, and chronic disease management. NRHA is keenly aware of the limited research on rural veterans and their families, and we begin to address the dearth of research in this area.

5. The NRHA maintains a Minority and Multicultural committee within our organization and develops many policy statements regarding the unique needs of rural minority groups and women. We are pleased to see the specific inclusion of Native American, Native Hawaiian and Native Alaskan veterans in this legislation. This legislation would expand VA’s health care presence in those rural and remote communities. The NRHA also hopes that special consideration will also be given to the unprecedented number of African American women and all women serving at the highest rates ever seen in our country and the special needs that they will bring into the VA system in just a few short years.

6. The NRHA developed the first national policy paper as a non-Veteran Service Organization on rural veterans in 2003-2004, and we are pleased to see some of the recommendations called for in our policy paper addressed in this legislation. For these many reasons, the NRHA strongly supports your efforts to urge Congress to enact the “Rural Veterans Health Care Act of 2006.” Thank you for your leadership on this issue.

Sincerely,
William Sexton, President.

STEM CELL RESEARCH ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2005—VETO MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 109-127)

SPEECH OF
HON. DAVID WU
OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, July 19, 2006

Mr. WU. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support for H.R. 810, the Stem Cell Research Enhancement Act, and the override of the President’s veto of this monumental commitment to historic scientific research.

Yet again, the administration turned its back on science and chose politics.

Embryonic stem cell research will go on, with or without the United States. Diabetes, Alzheimer’s, Lou Gehrig’s Disease will be cured, with or without the United States.

The stem cells in an embryo are special tissue. We should not create them with the intent to terminate them later. But here, embryos were created with the intent to bring more children in to the world, and once a baby is born many fertilized eggs are not implanted. The only alternate fate for them is disposal.

Let us not waste potential human life, let us not waste these fertilized eggs by destroying them. Let us use them to save human lives through stem cell research.
TRIBUTE TO THE ROSEMARY GARFOOT PUBLIC LIBRARY

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend congratulations to the Rosemary Garfoot Public Library in Cross Plains, Wisconsin, on the grand opening of its brand new facility. For nearly 40 years the library has been an impressive tribute to the people of Cross Plains.

The public library serves as the cornerstone of democracy, fostering intellectual freedom and making available to all citizens an extensive information network. In a local setting, citizens have access to global resources of information. The public library is critically important in improving the community by providing access to higher learning. It is certainly a requirement for a cultivated democratic society.

The public library allows citizens to perform the civic duties placed upon them in our democratic nation. It not only provides free access to worldwide information, but is a place where residents can obtain information about their community. It also serves as a place where Internet access, tax forms, and voter registration forms are provided. The role of the public library is essential in supporting a democratic state. The Rosemary Garfoot Public Library has gone beyond its civic duty in providing these services for the public.

To provide the public with a new library facility, the people of Cross Plains were committed to this important project since 2002. I am proud to recognize the efforts of a community that created a dream and followed through to success. I join the residents of Cross Plains in celebrating the grand opening of the newly expanded and renovated Rosemary Garfoot Public Library and wish them the best for many years to come.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in tribute and recognition of the Virginia Marti College of Art and Design as they celebrate 40 years of devotion to artistic exploration and advanced academic programs. Located in the cultural hub of Lakewood, Ohio, the Virginia Marti College was founded in 1966 by visionary Virginia Marti Veith to stimulate innovation in the field of art and design. For 40 years students from around the world have met the rigorous academic challenges of Virginia Marti College with determined passion and graduated on to successful careers, creating vibrant ripples throughout the fashion world.

In the early 1990’s, inspired by a trip she made with her husband Herb to Africa, Virginia Veith founded Mission to the Fatherless, a nonprofit operating in Kenya to provide orphaned children with food, healthcare, education, and a loving home. The organization is supported by proceeds from Virginia Marti Designer Fabrics store, located on the college campus. All of the proceeds from Virginia Marti College’s 40th anniversary black-tie celebration will go directly to Mission to the Fatherless, with the hopes of building a third orphanage in Kenya.

PROVIDING GRANTS TO EXPAND INFRASTRUCTURE NECESSARY TO INCREASE AVAILABILITY OF ALTERNATIVE FUELS

SPEECH OF

HON. ROBIN HAYES
OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. HAYES. Madam Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 5534, the E85 Kick-Start Bill. I am a proud co-sponsor of this bill and I applaud my good friend and colleague, Congressman MIKE ROGERS, for bringing this bill to the floor and helping the U.S. in the fight for energy independence.

High energy prices are a significant threat to our long-term economic well-being and we need to aggressively pursue a goal of energy independence for our Nation. This independence can only be achieved through greater domestic production of energy conservation and the use of alternative energy sources. Unfortunately, there are no quick fixes to the energy crisis that is before our country. It will take years to build new refineries and mass transit systems. But right now, 6 million vehicles on the road that can use E85, an alternative blend of fuel using 85 percent ethanol and 15 percent gasoline. What we are missing is a distribution network to make this gasoline alternative feasible and this legislation seeks to double that network, which is critical to expanding the use of alternative fuels.

Earlier in the year, I introduced the E85 Investment Act, which would increase the tax credit from 30 percent to 75 percent, up to $30,000, for E85 tanks and pumps.

This legislation embraces the goal of increasing alternative fuel infrastructure. Specifically, this bill creates a federal “Fuel Economy Fund” by diverting the corporate average fuel efficiency (CAFE) penalties currently paid by automakers from the Department of the Treasury to the “Fuel Economy Fund.” The legislation also calls for up to a $30,000 grant to station owners who invest in alternative fuel pumps and fuel stations, including E85 infrastructure.

I want to thank MIKE ROGERS for being a leader in this effort to help bring energy independence to our Nation. This legislation will help our Nation truly invest in alternative fuels and give consumers a choice when they go to the pump. I look forward to continuing to work with you to identify other ways we can help strengthen our Nation’s economy.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the underlying bill.

HONORING TIM FRIEDMAN

SPEECH OF
HON. JANE HARMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Speaker, somehow, I thought Tim and I would grow old together. For 30 years, he has always been there for us: friendly, informed, endlessly patient with our endless questions, and always ready with his wry smile.

There will be a void now in the cloakroom, a physical gap that we all will feel. But more: there will be a void in our caucus, where Tim has provided such competent guidance, continuity and wisdom.

Godspeed, Tim. You have made a big difference here.

HONORING TIM FRIEDMAN

HON. BRIAN Higgins
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend sincere congratulations to my friend Tim Friedman upon his retirement from the Democratic Cloakroom. Tim, a Lackawanna, NY native, has dedicated 30 years of his life to service in the House of Representatives.

Tim began his career in Washington in 1976 in the House of Representatives under Congressman Dan Rostenkowski. Shortly after, he worked under Doorkeeper James T. Molloy as a doorkeeper and in 1982 transferred to the House Sergeant at Arms. In 1985, Tim was appointed to the House Democratic Cloakroom as Assistant Manager. For over 20 years, Tim has been a constant presence in the Cloakroom, an asset tirelessly worked on behalf of House Democrats.

The Democratic Cloakroom has been a home away from home for me over these past 19 months. It’s been an honor and pleasure to have Buffalo guys in the Cloakroom—people like Tim Friedman and Bob Fischer, who have been terrific public servants in the House, and who have shown me the ropes and ways of the House.

It is with great pride and gratitude that I stand here today to recognize Tim Friedman for his many years of service and for his commitment to Democrats, and the House of Representatives. I wish Tim and his wife Colleen many years of continued health and happiness.

Ken Wrinkle, a man who I have known and worked with for many years, passed away just last week. Beloved by those whose lives he touched, Ken’s memory will live on with the veterans of Hernando County, FL.

A Vietnam combat veteran, Ken was awarded the Purple Heart and the Combat Action Ribbon for wounds received in battle. Evacuated to the United States, Ken recovered from his injuries and received a medical discharge from the U.S. Marine Corps.

Continuing his studies at Michigan State University, Ken graduated from college in 1974. While in pursuit of his degree, Ken met and married his wife Linda. Following graduation, Ken volunteered to re-enter the U.S. Marine Corps through the Officer Candidate Program and was commissioned an Infantry Lieutenant. Ken went on to successfully complete 20 years of service, retiring as a Major on January 1, 1993.

Eventually settling with his family in Spring Hill, FL, in May 1993, Ken, a disabled veteran, was named the Hernando County Veterans Services Officer and Director. Following 12 years of distinguished service to the veteran community, illness forced him to retire in July 2005.

As Director of Veterans’ Services, Ken was able to accomplish several of his goals for the region, including starting a network to provide transportation for veterans to the Tampa VA hospital. He also supported the VA Community Based Outpatient Clinic in Brooksville, a facility that today serves over 23,000 veterans annually.

Ken is survived by his wife of 33 years, Linda, a teacher at Powell Middle School, and his son, John, a U.S. Air Force veteran currently attending college.

Mr. Speaker, the volunteer spirit of men like Ken Wrinkle shines through in the legacy he has left behind in Hernando County. Unfortunately, one less star will be shining in our local veteran community. From now on, all our veterans must look up to the heavens to see Ken’s light shining down on them from above.

I speak for many when I say that Ken Wrinkle will be sorely missed.

TRIBUTE TO STATE REPRESENTATIVE ALLEN LAYSON

HON. ROBERT B.ADERHOLT
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. ADERHOLT. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor State Representative Allen Layson on the occasion of his retirement from the Alabama House of Representatives. Allen is a man who embodies the American principles of hard work, dedication to one’s family and service to one’s country. I am honored to stand before this body of Congress and this Nation to recognize his many accomplishments.

Allen was born on December 16, 1931 in Eatonton, Georgia. He graduated from Eatonton High School in 1947. He entered the United States Army Reserves in 1948 and volunteered for active duty service in 1951 and was discharged in 1953. Immediately after leaving the Army, Allen attended the University of Georgia and earned a Bachelor of Science Degree in Forestry in just three years, graduating in 1956.

Allen and his family moved to Pickens County in 1969, and he soon demonstrated his outstanding leadership to the Reform community. He served as president of the Reform Rotary Club, is the founder of the Reform Area Public Library, is a member of the American Legion, a member of the Pickens County Mental Health Association, a Master Mason, and a member of the Boy Scout Troop Committee.
First elected to the Alabama House of Representatives in 1986, Allen has served the Sixty-First district with distinction for the past twenty years. During his tenure he was a strong proponent of our Second Amendment rights and worked hard to protect the family and our religious liberties. A social and fiscal conservative, he voted consistently to ensure that Alabama provided an economic atmosphere in which business and industry could grow and prosper.

Allen is a true friend of the volunteer fire fighter. Through his efforts, a three mil revenue tax was enacted in 1999, and amended in 2004, to provide badly needed funding to the volunteer fire departments in Pickens County. This funding allows the volunteer fire departments to purchase equipment, provide training and cover operating costs. This has greatly enhanced their firefighting capabilities, thus reducing insurance rates and thereby saving money for Alabama families.

He served as a Commissioner on the Alabama Forestry Commission from 1979 to 1983, served as president of the Alabama Division or the Society of American Foresters, is a Trustee of the Alabama Forest Products Workman’s Compensation Fund, served as president and is a lifetime member of the Alabama Wildlife Federation, is a member of the Alabama Cattlemen’s Association, a member of the Sierra Club and a member of sixteen volunteer fire departments. Also, Allen has served on the board of directors for the Tennessee Tombigbee Waterway Development Authority since his appointment by Governor Guy Hunt in 1991.

He has been distinguished as the recipient of the Governor’s Conservationist of the Year Award in Forestry in 1982, the Kelly Mosley Environmental Award in 1985 and the APA Southwestern United States Technical Writing Award in 1981.

Of all of Allen’s accomplishments, perhaps his greatest achievement was convincing the former JoAnn Kimberly to marry him. They were married on September 15, 1949 and are the proud parents of five children; Butch, Allen, Jr., Kim, James and Michael. Allen and JoAnn are faithful members of Reform First United Methodist Church where Allen has served as a Lay Leader and Lay Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, it is a great privilege to honor State Representative Allen Layson for his many achievements and his enduring impact on his country, state, community, friends and family. He is a man of great dignity and character who takes pride in the accomplishments of those he has helped over the years. Allen is an inspiring role model for all of us and I join his family, friends and colleagues in wishing him God’s richest blessings in his retirement.

HONORING THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF STATE VETERANS HOMES

SPEECH OF
HON. SCOTT GARRETT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Madam Speaker, as a cosponsor of H. Con. Res. 347, I am pleased to support this resolution honoring the work of the National Association of State Veterans Homes and the 119 homes across the country that honor our nation’s heroes.

I am proud to work on closely with the State Veterans Home in Paramus, New Jersey. This excellent facility is run by caring individuals who have made it clear that our veterans are given the care that they earned sacrificing for our nation. Veterans Affairs Secretary Nicholson recently had the opportunity to tour the facility with me and see the tremendous effort that Doris Neibert, director of the emergency nurses and staff have put into caring for veterans in the final stages of life’s journey.

Throughout the 20th Century and now into the 21st, the American soldier, sailor, airman, and Marine has been a force for good in this world. Working together, they have kept our nation safe from the threats of fascism, communism, and now terrorism. We owe them all a great debt of gratitude and the best care we can provide.

Our nation has a rich history of promoting freedom and spreading democracy, a history that was made possible by countless individuals who served in our armed forces. We remember all who contributed as well as those that stand ready to serve the cause of freedom today. I am proud to represent so many selfless and brave heroes and to honor those who work for their welfare.

GROWING SUPPORT FOR THE SAFE COMMISSION

HON. FRANK R. WOLF
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I recently introduced legislation in the House of Representatives aimed at addressing the looming financial crisis facing the Nation, H.R. 5552—the Securing America’s Future Economy (SAFE) Commission Act. The bill would establish a national bipartisan commission that will put everything—entitlement spending as well as all other Federal programs and our Nation’s tax policies—on the table and require Congress to vote up or down on its recommendations in its entirety, similar to the process set in 1988 to close military bases. Mandating congressional action on the panel’s recommendations is what differentiates this commission from previous ones.

Support for the bill is coming from both sides of the aisle. I submit for the Record a recent analysis by the Heritage Foundation: a letter of support from the Concord Coalition; a letter from Douglas Holt-Eakin, former director of the Congressional Budget Office, and letters from several former Members. I also am pleased to submit today the names of 20 of my colleagues who are cosponsoring the SAFE Commission measure and urge the remainder of my colleagues to join as well. This legislation will be good for the future of America.

HON. FRANK WOLF, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Wolf: On behalf of The Concord Coalition, I am writing to express our deep appreciation for your leadership in sponsoring the Securing America’s Future Economy (SAFE) Act, which would establish a bipartisan commission to recommend legislation addressing our nation’s unsustainable long-term fiscal outlook.

We strongly agree with you that the need for fiscal action is both an economic imperative but a moral one as well. We also share your view that partisan divisions in Washington have become so wide that a commission may now be the best option on this issue. By establishing a fiscal policy commission with a broad mandate, meaningful public engagement, and the ability to make recommendations that require open minds and bipartisan cooperation. Your legislation would establish a process to do just that.

Recently, The Concord Coalition organized a forum with experts from across the political spectrum to discuss the possibility of establishing a bipartisan commission to deal with our long-term fiscal outlook. Three conclusions from the forum stand out:

The commission should have a broad mandate with no limitations on what policy options are considered as long as previous conditions on what must be included—or not included—in a proposal. Everything must be on the table, including revenues as well as entitlements and other sources of revenue.

The commission should engage the public in a dialogue about the long-term fiscal challenges and the tradeoffs that will be necessary for securing a more secure and sustainable economic future.

The Concord Coalition commends your proposal because it recognizes the need for a nonpartisan, long-term fiscal policy commission that will establish a bipartisan commission of experts and legislators appointed by the President and Congressional leaders of both parties. The Commission would be directed to hold hearings across the country and incorporate the input from the public in its report. This is a very welcome provision. The public should be treated as if it were, in effect, a member of the commission. Doing so will enhance the commission’s credibility and help build acceptance for its recommendations. Our experience hosting meetings around the nation on this issue has demonstrated that when the American people hear the facts and given the opportunity for honest dialogue, they are willing to set priorities and make the hard choices that often are not made in Washington.

Most importantly, the Commission would be allowed to consider all policy options to address the imbalance between long-term spending commitments and tax revenues, including reforms of entitlement programs and tax laws. In our view, this is an essential prerequisite for attracting well-reasoned proposals to serve on the commission and for finding solutions that are both substantive and politically viable.

Mr. Speaker, I am introducing this legislation on the basis of the data and analysis presented in the Study on the Future Economic Outlook, prepared by the Concord Coalition. The Coalition strongly supports your effort to enhance our nation’s long-term fiscal stability. As a bipartisan commission that will consider all options to get the nation on a sustainable path, the SAFE Act is a comprehensive and constructive approach to dealing with our nation’s fiscal challenges.

There are no easy answers for achieving a long-term fiscal solution. But this legislation provides the opportunity to come together as Americans to find a solution. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation, which is a very important step toward securing America’s future.
We particularly commend you for your willingness to consider constructive suggestions for changes to achieve broader bipartisan support and increase the prospect that the commission will produce a balanced proposal that can be enacted into law. In that regard, we would suggest a few changes that we believe would strengthen the bill and help ensure that it receives in the most objective way possible and describe the major options that our nation restructure its approach to old-age income, health insurance, and long-term care, and it is better to do it sooner than later.

I have taken the liberty of attaching a speech that I gave a while back. The final two sections make these points in greater detail.

Best of luck in your efforts. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can help.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS HOLTZ-EAKIN.

THE URBAN INSTITUTE,
Representative Frank Wolf,
Cannon House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE WOLF: In response to your letter of June 18, I strongly support your bill to establish a national bipartisan commission on entitlement spending and tax policy. Although many are cynical about the political climate, I think that you are right that the current political climate is not conducive to passing constructive legislation without some prod- using the outside.

I also believe that the American public is not ready to accept the sacrifices necessary to avoid a crisis, because the dire nature of the situation has not been well communicated by policy makers. Therefore, I particularly commend your idea of holding town meetings across the country and I would hope that the commission has a large budget for this purpose, because I believe that we need lots of meetings. Ideally, the commission would first produce a white paper that could be distributed at the meetings. It would outline the problem in the most objective way possible and describe the major options for solving it.

It is interesting to note that Canada had such meetings prior to a significant reform of their social security system and Canadian officials will tell you that they were extremely helpful in finalizing the legislation. Simi- larly, Britain is in the midst of reforming their public pension system and they used large focus groups to test their options. I would prefer a town meeting format, but however one proceeds, the involvement of the public is absolutely crucial.

We would also encourage you to consider a more expansive legislative process, which would allow for greater debate of policy tradeoffs by allowing the consideration of budget neutral amendments. Those who oppose the priorities and tradeoffs recom- mended by the commission should be challenged to say what they would do instead and given the opportunity to put forward alternative policies to address the problems.

We believe the commission would have greater credibility if the appointees were more directly drawn from the two parties, par- ticularly with some commission members ap- pointed jointly or as a result of bipartisan consultation. Further, we would suggest that the commission have bipartisan co-chairs. We would also encourage you to consider the situation far worse by enacting the huge tax cuts. Absent any additional reforms, the permanent they would shave only about one percentage point from the future growth in Medicare prescription drug benefit. And

The recent Mid-Session Review by the Of- fice of Management and Budget underscores the need for tax reform, which will rise rapidly during future decades towards European levels, with an ever-growing government taking a larger and larger proportion of the nation’s income and threatening America’s future economic growth.

But faced with this threat, Washington is paralyzed. Rather than seriously tackling the trend of entitlement spending that will hit the budget after the baby boomers begin to retire, Congress actually made the situation far worse by enacting the huge Medicare prescription drug benefit. And while the Bush tax cuts have significantly helped in the short term, even if made permanent they would shave only about one percentage point from the future growth in the economy that and faster growth swells revenue to the government as a byproduct of new jobs and extra income for Americans. The nation’s budget is already consuming 20 percent of GDP by 2045. The historical average, and today’s level, is just over 18 percent of GDP.

With Congress polarized and paralyzed, some will say, “It’s just not possible to do anything.” But Bush, are exploring the idea of a bipartisan commission as a way to break away from the path of rapidly rising spending and taxes. President Bush pressed for an entitle- ments commission in his State of the Union address. Senator Judd Gregg (R-NH) has sponsored legislation that would create a commission to review the long-term solvency of Social Security and Medicare. Meanwhile, Representative Frank Wolf (R-VA) has introduced a commission bill (The SAFE Commission Act, “H.R. 5552) specifically intended to win bipartisan support for bold action to secure the country’s fiscal future.

Commissions can help break a political logjam. They can also become vehicles for action that achieves a short-term political fix and yet does little in the long term or even makes things worse due to the political dysfunc- tions and mandate of a commission are critical. Fortunately, the Wolf commission bill recognizes these facts of political life and offers real hope for sensible action. A reason for this is that in its instructions to the commission, the bill wisely combines reform with fiscal changes in a manner that could achieve a breakthrough.

The core of the fiscal problem is the sharp projected rise in future entitlement spend- ing, especially programs for middle-class retirees. Contrary to many people’s perception, taxes are not falling—as noted, taxes are projected to rise steadily to record levels in real terms and as a percentage of GDP. Still, in today’s political deadlock many lawmakers maintain that tax revenue must be part of the equation if they are to have the political “cover” to accept curbs on popular entitle- ments.

But for good reasons, conservatives strong- ly resist the tax hikes. For one thing, taxes are not the problem—spending is. Moreover, raising tax rates or instituting new taxes would threaten economic growth, compounding the economic harm associated with government spending. Further, raising taxes likely would reduce the pressure on Congress to curb spending or, worse still, en- courage lawmakers increase their spending promises.

The Wolf bill seeks a solution to this polit- ical equation. It creates a bipartisan commis- sion to address the “unsustainable imbalance” between federal commitments and revenues while increasing national savings and making the budget process more an integral part of long-term fiscal issues. While the commission could consider a range of approaches, the bill places emphasis on two: reforms that would limit the growth of entitlements while strengthening the safety net and tax reforms that would make the tax system more eco- nomically efficient and improve economic growth. The commission would hold public hearings around the country to discuss the long-term fiscal problem, and its rec- ommendations would receive fast-track consideration by Congress.

By combining a slowdown in entitlement spending with reforms to strengthen assist- ance to the needy, a commission proposal could win support of liberals and others who worry that surging middle-class retiree spending in the future will crowd out safety net spending. And by placing an emphasis on pro-growth tax reform, a commission pro- posal could also lead to some additional rev- enues not by raising taxes but thanks in- crease in productivity. Moreover, tax reforms will hit the budget after the baby boomers begin to retire, Congress actually made the situation far worse by enacting the huge tax cuts.
I wish you success in getting your idea enacted and would be willing to help in any way that I can.

Sincerely,

RUDOLPH G. PENNER.

Hon. FRANK R. WOLF,

Dear Frank: Thank you for sending along your excellent proposal to establish a national bipartisan commission on America’s looming fiscal crisis. I agree that we must hastily address the very grave financial challenges before our nation. You have laid out a thoughtful and effective way forward. In particular, it is important to put everything on the table—entitlement spending, federal programs, and tax policy. Mandating congressional action would also ensure that a prospective commission does not issue a report that gathers dust on a shelf.

On another note, the Iraq Study Group continues to make excellent progress, and I once again thank you for your leadership and support of our efforts.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

LEE H. HAMILTON.

Hon. FRANK R. WOLF,

House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman Wolf: Thank you for your letter and for sending me a copy of your legislation, H.R. 5532. I can’t speak highly enough in commending you for leading this much needed effort and for the comprehensiveness of your proposal.

As a former House Budget Committee Chairman who subsequently headed the American Stock Exchange among other business activities since leaving the Congress, I have been appalled and discouraged by the unconscious able deficits and mounting federal debt financed primarily by foreigners are an economic time bomb waiting to explode. If I were managing a private company this irresponsible, the management and the shareholders should demand my resignation.

We hear much talk about our national security and energy security. But to put our economic security so much in the hands of foreign interests is gambling at its worst.

In addition to the economic dangers, this is also a moral issue in that our generation is saddling our children and grand-children with the responsibility for paying off our profligacy. That can only reduce the standing of our children and grand-children.

I strongly support the state of Israel, and am in full support of its actions to defend itself against the attacks by Hamas and Hezbollah. Both of these terrorist organizations are comprised of terrorist thugs and must be rooted out in order for peace to be achieved in the region, and their use of civilians as shields is deplorable.

I am grateful that Israel has taken so many steps to wage a careful, targeted effort, focused on eliminating terrorist elements while also minimizing other damage.

I applaud the President for moving forward on the right track in demanding that Hezbollah be eliminated from Lebanon, and also hope this will be the opportunity for the Arab world to unite against terrorism. Iran and Syria should take notice—supporting terrorist organizations is not a proper activity of governments.

Mr. Speaker, I once again reiterate my strong support of H. Res. 921, and would have voted in favor if my voting card had registered successfully.

Sincerely,

JAMES R. JONES.

TRIBUTE TO REVEREND LEWIS RANDOLPH

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Reverend Lewis Randolph who will celebrate 30 years as pastor of the Antioch Missionary Baptist Church on October 14th in my hometown of Flint, Michigan. Reverend Randolph was installed as pastor of Antioch Baptist Church in 1976 as the church’s fifteenth pastor. He quickly made an imprint upon the congregation by a twofold plan of renovating the physical structure of the church grounds and by evangelizing in the community.

Starting in 1979 and continuing over the next 30 years, Pastor Randolph renovated the sanctuary, improved the parking lots, added a new kitchen, dining facility, and improved the upper level of the church.

As a part of the church’s covenant “to strive for the advancement of this church in knowledge, holiness, and comfort; to promote its prosperity and spirituality”, Reverend Randolph has organized and supported numerous auxiliary and ministries. These include the Voices of Antioch Choir, the Usher Board and a Concerned Committee to help persons return to the church. He added a new Easter Sunday worship service, supports a ministry in Haiti, teaches a weekly Bible class, and distributes Bibles and baskets of food in the community.

Recognizing the need to encourage young people, he has made sure that Antioch Missionary Baptist Church has been well represented in the Young Peoples Department of the National Baptist Convention, USA, Incorporated over the past several years. Under his tutelage several pastors began their ministries with his guidance and direction.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Reverend Lewis Randolph. The Flint community is a better place because of his leadership.

IN RECOGNITION OF DR. PETE G. MEHAS

HON. JIM COSTA
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. COSTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Dr. Pete G. Mehas, Fresno County Superintendent of Schools. Dr. Mehas is retiring at the end of his current term and his unwavering commitment to students and education will not be forgotten.

Like many others, I consider myself fortunate to count Pete Mehas as a friend and advisor. His life’s work embodies the very basic values—hard work, respect for people and family—that make it possible for a person to have a profound influence on others.

Pete Mehas was born, raised and educated in Fresno, California. Growing up he worked during the 40s and 50s for his father at the Fresno Malt Shop and the Athenian Restaurant. At age 19 Pete hitchhiked around the world on a personal odyssey of discovery and cultural exploration. Over the years, the call of family and his pride of heritage have drawn him back to his ancestral homeland, the magnificent Greek Islands. But Pete Mehas has always come back to the Central Valley where he spent his professional career advancing education on many fronts, in classrooms, boardrooms and the legislative halls of Sacramento and our nation’s capital.

During his career, Pete has been a teacher, a coach, a school principal, an associate district superintendent and a legislative advocate. His efforts on behalf of education have been driven by his often-stated belief that, “Children are the living message we send to a future our country will hopefully pass those standards on to the next generation.

Pete has never let his success go to his head. In fact, to this day he continues to visit classrooms to read to young students and encourage them to succeed. His utter lack of pretension has been a hallmark of his career and made it possible for him to inspire others and bring people together.

Elected four times to the position of Fresno County Superintendent of Schools, Pete Mehas’ well-documented career dedication to education has been recognized many times by others. He has participated in Presidential Education Summits on education, served as an education policy advisor to three California governors and held leadership positions in numerous education organizations and associations. Pete’s many honors include being the first recipient in 1990 of the Fresno Public Education Fund’s Gold Star Alumni Award.

And his leadership has been praised by organizations as varied as the California Farm Bureau Federation and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Beyond the honors that have come his way as his professional success multiplied over the years, Pete Mehas has always been devoted to his family. His mother Sylvia, his wife Demi, sisters Tula and Georgia and his daughters Alethea and Andreanna have enriched his life as only family can.

And though Pete Mehas has talked with world leaders, Presidents, Governors and business leaders, I know nothing compares to the loving sound he hears from his twin granddaughters, Andreanna and Isabella, when they whisper “pappou”, Greek for “grandpa”, in his ear.

Though he will soon retire as Fresno County Superintendent of Schools, there can be no uncertainty that Pete Mehas will continue to make a valuable contribution to our community, state and nation. Pete’s future efforts will, I am sure, be reflective of his personal philosophy which is summed up so well in the words of his favorite songwriter, Jimmy Buffet, when he sings, “Yesterday’s are over my shoulder, so I can’t look back for too long. There’s just too much to see waiting in front of me, and I know that I just can’t go wrong.”

CONGRATULATING ISRAEL’S MAGEN DAVID ADOM SOCIETY

SPEECH OF
HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 18, 2006

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in congratulating Magen David Adom, Israel’s national emergency medical service, as a fully admitted and recognized member of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement. This 60-year effort to win membership for Israel’s humanitarian society solely on the basis the MDA uses the Star of David as its symbol.

Since its founding in 1930, MDA has been a leading participant in international humanitarian relief efforts and in training and instruction in emergency services techniques. Regrettably, the organization has been denied full membership in the International Committee for the Red Cross, ICRC, because of anti-Israel bias among countries that refuse to recognize the State of Israel or the symbol of the Star of David. This political discrimination is in direct violation of the ICRC principle of maintaining neutrality and impartiality in conflicts.

MDA has been a committed humanitarian society embodying all the goals and ideals of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement. MDA has been an impartial force in the international community helping victims all over the world after the Southeast Asian tsunami, Hurricane Katrina, disastrous flooding of the River Danube in Romania, even helping those considered enemies of Israel. But for 60 years, Israel was denied membership. There was no good reason for MDA to be forced to wait this long to be a member of ICRC when their efforts are solely humanitarian and separate from the decades-old political conflict existing in the Middle East.

The process of International recognition has been a long and arduous process tainted by discrimination allowing politics to outweigh the humanitarian objectives. This historic moment was a diplomatic conference in Geneva in December 2005 was a significant step in the process of enabling MDA to finally become a full member in the International Committee of the Red Cross. On December 8, 2005 the signatory countries to the Geneva Convention approved a Third Additional Protocol establishing a new neutral Red Crystal emblem by a vote of 98 in favor, 27 against, with 10 abstentions. After all these years, the Syrian delegation still tried to stall the vote, but in the end was unable to prevent the adoption of the Third Protocol.

I am pleased that this longstanding injustice has been rectified and MDA is permitted to conduct international humanitarian operations under a third neutral symbol. We should not allow decades old disputes and larger, unrelated political problems in the Middle East to impede the work of Israel’s humanitarian aid society.

I also take this time to applaud the efforts of U.S. diplomats and American organizations for bringing the issue of MDA’s exclusion from the ICRC to the focus of the international community. Without U.S. leadership on this important issue and the pressure that both our leaders and the American Red Cross put on the ICRC, this wrong that has existed since Israel’s founding would not have been redressed. Our country understood that we should not allow politics to prevail over humanitarian efforts in any country no matter what the political climate or religious beliefs are. I also thank the American Red Cross for its continued support to help open the channels for MDA’s acceptance in the ICRC. I fully support the decision of the American Red Cross, since 2000, to protest the exclusion of MDA by withholding $42 million in annual dues from ICRC. Finally, I would like to thank Hadassah, the Women’s Zionist Organization of America, for its efforts lobbying Congress and working with the U.N. and the American Red Cross in support of MDA.

MDA should never have been linked to the fate of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and with the adoption of a third neutral symbol will be able to fulfill its humanitarian mission. The adoption of a neutral symbol is a celebration that humanitarian principles have triumphed above politics and bigotry.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mrs. MCCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, today I want to honor Tim Friedman, who will be retiring after 30 years of service in the Democratic Cloakroom. My staff and I rely on the Cloakroom on a daily basis. The Cloakroom staff is reliable and knowledgeable and serves as the voice of reason during often chaotic times on the floor. Tim Friedman was a big part of the Cloakroom operations and I know my colleagues and I will miss seeing him everyday.
Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor my good friend Rabbi Michael Robinson who died July 20, 2006, surrounded by friends and family at his home in Sebastopol, California.

Mr. Speaker, this is the second time I have risen to honor this unique man who has dedicated his life to the cause of social justice at home and around the world. On the last occasion, several years ago Rabbi Robinson received a civil liberties award from the ACLU of Sonoma County recognizing a lifetime of achievements and his passionate advocacy for civil rights. From the American civil rights movement to the Nicaraguan Contra war to the Israel-Palestinian conflict Michael Robinson has been on the front lines promoting peace and the improvement of humanity.

Born in North Carolina, Michael received his B.A. from the University of Cincinnati and attended North Carolina State College before enlisting in the Navy during World War II. He served in the Pacific and became a pacifist immediately after this experience.

In 1952, after completing a course of study at Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Michael became the first North Carolina native to be ordained as a rabbi. He later earned his doctoral degree from the New York Theological Seminary and served in temples in Seattle and Pomona as well as 29 years as an activist leader at Temple Israel in Westchester, New York. During the civil rights movement, the synagogue raised money to help rebuild the black churches that had been burned in the South and finance the van used by the Freedom Riders to tour the South. Michael marched with Martin Luther King Jr. in Selma, and expressed his convictions with these words: "When I was ten years old I began sitting on the back seat of the bus with ‘colored people.’ I never returned to the front seat.”

After moving to Sonoma County with his wife Ruth, Michael served Shomrei Torah, and in 2005 was awarded the Homelessness, Children and Family Award of the Sonoma County Task Force on Homelessness. Michael served Shomrei Torah, and in 2005 was awarded the Homelessness, Children and Family Award of the Sonoma County Task Force on Homelessness. In addition to promoting affirmative action, same sex marriage, affordable housing, and other equality issues, Michael has worked against nuclear war, apartheid, and all forms of injustice.

Mr. Speaker, I share Rabbi Michael Robinson's hope that we as a nation can become better people and create a just society. And I join with his family and friends in the belief that we can best honor his life by making the work of peace and social justice a priority in our own lives.

After moving to Sonoma County with his wife Ruth, Michael served Shomrei Torah, and is credited with growing the congregation from 30 families to now the largest Jewish congregation (175) in Santa Rosa, CA. Retired since 1996, Rabbi Robinson holds the title of Rabbi Emeritus at both Temple Israel and Shomrei Torah.

In addition to promoting affirmative action, same sex marriage, affordable housing, and other equality issues, Michael has worked against nuclear war, apartheid, and all forms of injustice.

Mr. Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize LTC Richard E. Nichols, Jr. The Lieutenant Colonel is retiring from the United States Army after 24 years of distinguished service. Lieutenant Colonel Nichols spent his early years growing up in the heartland of Kansas and Missouri. While attending Missouri Western State College in St. Joseph, Missouri, he made the decision to serve his country in the United States Army and was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Field Artillery in 1982. Upon graduating from Missouri Western State College in 1983 with a bachelor of science degree in business administration, Lieutenant Colonel Nichols served in the Kansas Army National Guard as the Reconnaissance and Survey Platoon Leader for the 2nd/130th Field Artillery Battalion in Hiawatha, Kansas.

Lieutenant Colonel Nichols went on to serve in various posts over the next 24 years. During his service he was assigned to C Battery, 1/76th Field Artillery, 3rd Infantry Division, in Bamberg, Germany, and as the commander of B Battery, 6th Field Artillery, which deployed in support of Operation Desert Storm from 1989 to 1991. In these roles and under various posts in Kansas, Alabama, and Virginia, Lieutenant Colonel Nichols has earned numerous awards and decorations. Among these awards are the Meritorious Service Medal, 2 Oak Leaf Clusters, the Joint Service Commendation Medal, Army Achievement Medal, Army Superior Unit Award, the National Defense Service Medal with service star, Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, Armed Forces Reserve Medal, the Saudi Arabia Liberation of Kuwait Service Medal, the United States Army Commendation Medal, the Iraqi Freedom Medal, the Egypt Air War Medal, and the Overseas Service Ribbon.

Mr. Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in recognizing LTC Richard E. Nichols, Jr., an outstanding leader in the United States Army. His years of service and dedication in protecting the freedom of the United States have been an inspiration to many. I commend him for his many years of service and I am honored to represent him and his family in the United States Congress.
I urge my colleagues to join me in commending the praiseworthy efforts of my fellow Californians at the Industrial Emergency Council who help protect us from the dangers we face every day.

RECOGNIZING SHERIFF RONNIE TOUNGETTE’S 26-YEAR SERVICE TO HUMPHREYS COUNTY

HON. JOHN S. TANNER

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a local hero who has dedicated his life to making sure our community stays safe. After 26 years as Humphreys County Sheriff, Ronnie Toungette is retiring.

Toungette was born in Mt. Pleasant, Tennessee, grew up in West Nashville and later moved to Waverly, where he eventually became a sheriff’s deputy. In 1980, he was appointed county sheriff, and the people of Humphreys County re-elected him to that position again and again.

Sheriff Toungette has been instrumental in cleaning up the numerous methamphetamine labs that have sprouted up as Humphreys County and other communities across the country have fought to control the spread of the dangerous drug. Humphreys County has been a leader in combating meth, and Ronnie’s efforts on that front should not go unnoticed.

Toungette and his wife, Darlene, have five grown children, Ronnie, Jr., Stephanie, Shelly, Marcella and Amanda; and eight grandchildren, Matthew, Zachary, Scott, Trey, Tyler, Kirston, Kayla and Kyle.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Sheriff Ronnie Toungette on his retirement and thank him for his 26 years of service as the sheriff of Humphreys County. His tireless work has helped make our community a safe and secure place to live.

HONORING THE MEMORY OF RHETT PAYNE, JR.

HON. JO BONNER

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Speaker, recently, south Alabama lost a dear friend, a man who was the epitome of a true southern gentleman, and I rise today to pay tribute to his memory.

Rhett Payne was a kind and gentle man. He was generous to a fault and good to the core. His laughs were not loud guffaws but soft chuckles. They were real and authentic, not put on.

Rhett was of the “Greatest Generation,” a group of World War II veterans who served their country and the world honorably in a time of great crisis and then came home to work and help mold and develop communities. They and their replacements are not of the same caliber.

By the time I really got to know Rhett, he was retired as a district manager for Liberty National Life Insurance. He had worked for the company for 3 decades.

By then, Jean and I were working together. I’d see him at the office and at office parties, and I visited him frequently in their home where I was always a welcomed guest.

Rhett was 88 when he died last week but I never thought of him as being old. While he and Jean were old enough to be my parents, I always thought of them more as peers and contemporaries than as “old folks.” Rhett died Saturday eulogizing his dad. He stepped the congregation through the seasons and through amusing in-"This is a terrible incident and shameful for whoever carried it out," Dr. Aulakh said. "Terrorism is never acceptable." He endorsed the request to donate blood for the victims of the blast, which was "common sense and the care of the people who were victimized by this brutal attack," he said. The Council of Khalistan was a peaceful, democratic, nonviolent movement to liberate Khalistan, the Sikh homeland that declared its independence from India on October 7, 1980. Dr. Aulakh was interviewed on WAGT-Channel 4 news in Washington yesterday about the bombings. Dr. Aulakh noted that the first-class cabins were bombed. "This is where the rich paid." No one has taken responsibility for the attack, although the Indian government has blamed the Kashmiri organization "Black Cats." "This is the kind of thing the Indian government is quite capable of carrying out itself," Dr. Aulakh said. He noted that the book Soft Target shows how the Indian regime bombed its own airliner in 1985, killing 329 innocent people, to justify further repression against the Sikhs. The flight was bound for Bombay. The book quotes an investigator from the Canadian Security Investigation Service as saying, "If you really want to clear the incidents quickly, take vans down to the airports and impose an compos and ex-patriates in Toronto and Vancouver, load up everybody and take them down for questioning or whatever it is that they are involved."

The book shows that within hours after the flight was blown up, the Indian Consul General in Toronto, Surendra Malik (no relation to Rupinder Singh Malik), called in a detailed description of the bombing and the names of those he said were involved, information that the Canadian government didn’t discover until weeks later. Mr. Malik said to look on the passenger manifest for the name “L. Singh.” This would turn out to be Lal Singh, who told the police that he was offered two million dollars and settlement in a nice country by the Indian regime to give false testimony in the case.

India fomented and pre-planned the massacre of Muslims in Gujarat, according to a police officer who was quoted in the newspaper. The book quotes an investigator from the Canadian Security Investigation Service as saying, "If you really want to clear the incidents quickly, take vans down to the airports and impose an compos and ex-patriates in Toronto and Vancouver, load up everybody and take them down for questioning or whatever it is that they are involved."

Mr. Malik said to look on the passenger manifest for the name “L. "If a Sikh is not a Khalsa, he is not a Sikh. The only way we can escape the terrorism and repression is to free Khalistan. Khalistan Zindabad."

IN RECOGNITION OF CAPTAIN RONALD CHASTAIN

HON. MIKE ROGERS
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. ROGERS of Alabama, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask the attention of the House today to pay special recognition to Air Force Captain Ronald Chastain, a native of Jackson-ville, Alabama and the son-in-law of a long-time colleague of mine who was recently honored for saving a man’s life.

On May 29th, Captain Chastain, an Air Trafic Control specialist stationed in Okinawa, Japan, was on his way to welcome home a fellow airman returning from Iraq when he noticed a vehicle that had crashed and caught fire. He, and two other men, acted quickly and risked their own lives to pull the victim from his burning car. Their heroism helped save the victim’s life, and on June 15th, the Okinawa Prefectural Police Department held a ceremony in Chastain’s honor for his actions.

Two graduates of Jacksonville High School, Chastain is fulfilling his dream of seeing the world and serving his country. He is guided by God’s grace and love for his family. He said his wife, Susan, and sons, Hayden and Caleb, were in his thoughts as he worked to rescue the man from his burning car that dark and rainy night.

I salute Captain Ronald Chastain for working to save this man’s life, for his continued efforts to serve and protect our country, and for helping serve as a role model for us all.

IN RECOGNITION OF MARION PAUL SANCHEZ, SR.

HON. JON C. PORTER OF NEVADA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. PORTER, Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the contributions of a great American, Marion Paul Sanchez, Sr. June 2, 1922–May 27, 2006. I honor him today for his service in the United States Navy during World War II and his dedication to his family.

Mr. Sanchez served on the USS Kula Gulf CVE 108 during World War II. The USS Kula Gulf was commissioned on May 12, 1945 and on August 5 was assigned to the 7th Fleet in the Western Pacific. The Kula Gulf patrolled the East China Seas, shuttled planes between Saipan and Guam, and transported veterans of the Pacific Theater around the region and back to the United States.

After returning from the war, Mr. Sanchez married MaryAnn Del Razo in 1948 and began what would become a 59-year marriage. Mr. Sanchez decided to follow in his father’s footsteps and began a career in agriculture, where he spent 50 years growing produce in California’s Central Valley. Over the course of his career, he employed hundreds of workers and grew cotton, tomatoes, lettuce, garlic, asparagus, cantaloupes, bell peppers, alfalfa, prunes, grapes, sugar beets, and corn.

Farming allowed Mr. Sanchez to pursue his true passion in life, which was raising his family. He had four boys; Theodore, Richard, Ronald, and Marion. Through the years, the Sanchez family has grown, and Mr. Sanchez became the proud grandparent to 11 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren. Mr. Sanchez took great pride in his family and loved spending time with his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mr. Sanchez was an avid golfer and played 18 holes, 2 days a week, until his passing in May of 2006. Mr. Sanchez’s approach to the game of golf illustrates his approach to life. He was dedicated to the game, always willing to try new things, and never let a bad round affect his next.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride and heartfelt gratitude that I salute Marion Paul Sanchez, Sr. for his service to our Nation and dedication to his family.

IN RECOGNITION OF SERGEANT RON LOMPART

HON. ELTON GALLEGY
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. GALLEGY, Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition, and with thanks, for the 31 years of exemplary service Police Sergeant Ron Lompart has given to the City of Simi Valley, California.
Ron’s last day as a Simi Valley police officer is tomorrow. He began his career as a Simi Valley police officer fresh out of the academy just 4 years after the city incorporated. They matured together.

They matured well.

Mr. Speaker, Simi Valley is my home. I served as mayor there for 7 years before being elected to Congress. I am proud of the fact that Simi Valley is routinely recognized as one of the safest cities in the United States. That recognition is in large part due to the caliber of the men and women of the Simi Valley Police Department.

That being true, Ron Lompart is largely responsible for the high caliber of the men and women who serve the Simi Valley Police Department. Ron is responsible for overseeing the training of new officers as one of the department’s two Field Training Program Sergeants. He also is a patrol supervisor, overseeing the daily actions of both rookies and veterans alike.

Ron’s career parallels his dual dedication to both the City of Simi Valley and the men and women with whom he serves. After 8 years as a patrol officer, Ron was promoted to sergeant in 1981. He served with distinction on the department’s SWAT team for 10 years and worked as a Rangemaster and Participative Management Team member. In addition, Ron represented the department’s rank-and-file as a board member of both the Simi Valley Police Officers’ Association and the Peace Officers Research Association of California.

After 31 years in a police uniform—after 3 years in a U.S. Army uniform—Ron looks forward to spending time as a civilian with his wife, Cindy, and their three children, doing a bit of hunting and perhaps some cruising.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues will join me in thanking my friend Ron Lompart for his decades of service to the City of Simi Valley and his country, and in wishing him Godspeed in his retirement.

HONORING TIM FRIEDMAN

HON. HENRY A. WAXMAN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, we don’t recognize often enough the talented and dedicated individuals who are critical to the operations of the House of Representatives. They safeguard our traditions and keep our great institution functioning. Tim Friedman is one of these essential individuals. I can’t remember the House of Representatives without him and will miss him when he retires.

Tim arrived in 1976 during my first term in Congress. He has been an invaluable part of the House during his exceptional service. Tim started in the Doorkeeper’s Office and then worked as an Assistant to the Sergeant of Arms. But I’m sure most of my colleagues, like me, remember his work in the Democratic Cloakroom best.

Tim has put the institution of the House first and has done all he can to help Members and staff do their jobs the best way possible. Now it’s time for him and his family to take a well-deserved break and play golf the best way possible. And, although their new home will be North Carolina, they’ll keep an eye to the north and spend a good amount of their time off the links cheering the New York Yankees and Buffalo Bills on to greatness.

We will miss Tim greatly and will remain indebted to him for making the House of Representatives a better institution.

SPEECH OF
HON. PATRICK J. KENNEDY OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, July 19, 2006

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my extreme disappointment with the President’s decision to use his veto power to reject the Congress’s bill to save H.R. 810, the Stem Cell Research Enhancement Act, become public law, and I stand in support of millions of Americans who will benefit from the promises of embryonic stem cell research. Each year, I meet several hundred, perhaps thousands, of constituents who share with me the vision that embryonic stem cell research could vastly change their lives. There are a few constituents in particular who stand out on this issue. Late last year, Maddie and Tommy Poulin, just 4 and 5 years old, traveled from Rhode Island to Washington. Maddie, a young girl, talked with me about what their life is like with Type I Diabetes. In a journal they left with me, Maddie included an entry that said, “I really hope you can help us find a cure, we’re not asking for a lot, we just want to live without needles.”

Stem cell research also holds promise for those suffering from Parkinson’s disease, like my good friend, and the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island, Claiborne Pell. Senator Pell’s contributions to our country are too numerous to list, but I know his legacy is honored everyday when individuals are able to attend college with the assistance of a Pell Grant. He stood up for those without a voice for over 35 years, and now it is time for us to stand up for him.

Sue Sgambato, a cancer survivor living in Rhode Island, visits my office regularly to advocate on behalf of patients in our State. Rhode Island has one of the highest rates of cancer in the Nation, and stem cell research may provide clues on how to beat this devastating disease. I cannot and will not stand by and let one of the nation’s best and brightest be diagnosed with cancer, Alzheimer’s, Lou Gehrig’s disease, or multiple sclerosis without holding the President responsible for his action today.

It is absolutely tragic that President Bush has used his very first and only veto on an issue of such importance to American families. Every family in America has a loved one who is suffering from a disease that could benefit from the advances of stem cell research. This veto is only the latest action that President Bush has taken against medical research. He has also left unfunded the National Institutes of Health and has cut funding for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), limiting our Nation’s ability to find better treatments and cures for diseases.

President Bush had a choice today, and he chose politics over people. I want to assure my friends in Congress, as well as the people of the First District of Rhode Island, that today’s veto is not the end to this debate, it is only the beginning. Congress has voted overwhelmingly in support of stem cell research, and this fight will remain a top priority for a majority of elected officials. I promise that I will continue to do everything within my power to get this legislation back to the President’s desk, and to get this language into our public law. We will be back, and we will succeed.

TRIBUTE TO SARAH JORDAN-HOLMES

HON. JIM DAVIS OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Sarah Jordan-Holmes, an incredibly gifted leader and fundraiser who put her talents, her heart and her faith into improving our community.

As President and CEO of Prevent Blindness Florida for 15 years, Sarah raised millions of dollars, won over countless supporters for its mission and brought national attention to the organization. Through her work, Prevent Blindness Florida earned Tampa Bay Business Journal’s “Non-Profit of the Year Award” in the area of Health Services, and Sarah earned the Association of Fundraising Professionals Lifetime Achievement Award.

Prevent Blindness Florida was not the only worthy cause that was blessed to count Sarah as an advocate. She led fundraising campaigns for the Florida Museum of Science and Industry, the YMCA and the University of South Florida. In addition, Sarah was active in a host of other local community, charitable and professional organizations.

Sarah’s tireless work on behalf of the organizations she championed was deeply rooted in her faith and dedication. She served as a senior warden and vestry member of the St. James House of Prayer Episcopal Church, president of the board of trustees for the Southwest Florida Episcopal Church Foundation, member of the Diocesan Standing Committee and participant in the Celullio Movement.

It is no surprise that Sarah was so successful in her lifetime. She was a natural leader, a role model for everyone she met and a genuine go-getter. Sarah’s faith and inner strength helped guide her through her long struggle with cancer—a challenge she faced with great dignity. During her lifetime, cut short by cancer, Sarah lived life to its fullest and gave to her family, friends and thousands of others to a point few people achieve in their lifetimes. Her powerful example will inspire many in our community and state for generations.

Among her accomplishments, Sarah was most proud of her role as wife and mother. I would like to extend my deepest sympathies to her family for their loss. May they find comfort in Sarah’s legacy—her contributions to our community will not be forgotten.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — Extensions of Remarks
July 25, 2006

HON. EARL BLUMENAUER
OF OREGON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, in recognition of the National Psoriasis Foundation and of August as Psoriasis Awareness Month, I would like to bring attention to this often overlooked and serious disease that affects as many as 7.5 million Americans. Psoriasis is a chronic, inflammatory, painful, disfiguring and disabling disease for which there are limited treatments and no cure. Ten to 30 percent of people with psoriasis also develop psoriatic arthritis, which causes pain, stiffness and swelling in and around the joints. Psoriasis is widely misunderstood and undertreated. In addition to the pain, itching and bleeding caused by psoriasis, many affected individuals also experience social discrimination and stigma. Many people mistakenly believe psoriasis to be contagious. Psoriasis typically strikes between the ages of 15 and 25 and lasts a lifetime. As such, psoriasis and psoriatic arthritis impose significant burden on individuals and society; together they cost the nation 56 million hours of lost work and between $2 billion and $3 billion in treatments each year.

I am pleased that the 89,000 affected Oregonians have access to the knowledgeable support offered by the Oregon affiliate of the National Psoriasis Foundation. Support group interaction and discussion provides individuals affected by this debilitating disease with much-needed comfort, assistance and resources. The work of the support groups in Oregon is invaluable, and I commend the efforts of those involved.

I thank the National Psoriasis Foundation for all of its efforts and leadership over the last 38 years. This year, the National Psoriasis Foundation had nearly one hundred participants join in its Capitol Hill Day to elevate awareness and understanding of psoriasis and psoriatic arthritis and have policymakers take action to address access to care and boost the nation’s research efforts.

OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Major Garrett was born on December 26, 1950, in Prentiss, Mississippi. His education and specialized training is extensive, including attending the 194th session of the FBI Academy and receiving a bachelor of science degree from Troy State University in Criminal Justice Administration. He has served on the Mobile Police Department for 33 years, starting his career as a patrol officer. Since 1999, Garrett has served as the head of the department’s Community Services Division.

Major Garrett has received many commendations and recognitions, including the Chief’s Commendation from Chief Sam Cochran, the Life Saving Award from the Mobile Police Department, and the Medal of Valor from the Mobile Police Department. He has also been recognized for his outstanding performances on Competitive Promotional Exams, and since 2004, he was recognized as the top scorer on the Competitive Promotional Exam for Major.

Garrett is considered an innovator amongst his colleagues and has worked to improve relationships between officers and the community. He served on the Envision Coastal America Steering Committee, the Underage Drinking Taskforce, and the Clean Start Pre-natal Substance Abuse Committee. He is also a member of the board of directors for Camp Rap-A-Hope, a children’s oncology summer camp. Major Garrett is married to Tammy Smitherman and has three children: Phillip M. Garrett, Jr., Sergeant Matthew Ryan Garrett of the Mobile Police Department, and Kendall W. Smitherman.

Mr. Speaker, it is my great honor to recognize Major Phillip Garrett and commend him for his hard work and dedication to his appointment as Chief of Police of Mobile, Alabama. REPRESSION IN INDIA EXPOSED
HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, the London Institute of South Asia recently published an edition of its Journal. It included many excellent articles on the plight of minorities in India. There were articles about the Sikhs, Dalits, Muslims, and others. A writer named Tim Phares wrote a very comprehensive article on the subject that I would like to share with my colleagues.

He took note of the plight of the Sikhs, the Dalits, the Muslims, the Christians, and other minorities in India. He noted that Christians have become “the targets of choice.” He noted that the Indian constitution bans the caste system but it remains in place, a vehicle of oppression of minorities. He reported that India’s constitution denies people their fundamental right of self-determination. That is the essence of democracy, Mr. Speaker. I don’t know how a country can call itself democratic when it denies people such a fundamental democratic right.

The article takes note of the Rashtriya Swayamsewak Sangh (RSS), formed in support of the fascist movement, publishing a booklet on how to frame Christians and other minorities as enemies of Hinduism. The RSS is considered the parent organization of the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) which holds power in the government and is considered the “interpreter of the Hindu Constitution.”

The article notes the Indian government’s policies targeting the Christian community. The article states that the Christian community is second-class citizens who are seen as a potential threat to the “Hindu race.” It reports that the Indian government is using “anti-conversion laws” to prevent people from converting to Christianity. The article concludes that India’s government is using these laws to prevent its citizens from exercising their right to religious freedom.

HUMAN RIGHTS watch organizations report that thousands of Christians in India have been killed by the Indian government. In addition, tens of thousands of Christians have been killed throughout the country. As of 2002, the Associated Press reported an attack on a Catholic church in the outskirt of east India. The church was burned and the attackers... of Bangalore in which several people were in- jured. The assailants threw stones at the church, then broke in, breaking furniture and smashing windows before attacking wor- shipers. On February 29, 2005, in another attack, the Washington Times reported another church attack in which 20 people were wounded. Earlier that month, two church workers and a teenage boy died in a land mine explosion when the children of the inhabitants area in the state of Manipur. The Hall in Tamenglong District which is a Naga inhabited area was forced the doors open.

The missionaries are having a good deal of trouble in the Punjab. On December 29, 2005, a landmine was planted in the vicinity of Bangalore in which several people were injured. The attack appears to be premeditated. The attackers burst in and knew precisely where to go. They ar- rived on motorbikes, broke windows, and forced the doors open.

On September 3, 2005, a landmine was plant- ed in the Lengjien (Ngarichan) Committee Hall in Tamenglong District which is a Naga inhabited area of Manipur. The land mine exploded when the children of the village went and played at the hall. A 12-year-old boy died in the hospital. Another boy’s limb was ripped off and several others were seriously injured.

On November 4, 2005, a Hindu mob attacked Pastor Feroz Masih of the Believers Church of India. He was threatened with death and arrested. After being Pastor Masih, the Hindu militants told him that unless he and his 60-year-old boy died in the hospital. Another land mine exploded when the children of the inhabited area in the state of Manipur. The Hall in Tamenglong District which is a Naga inhabited area was forced the doors open.

In June 2005, at the observance of the Indian government’s 1984 military attack on the Golden Temple, a group of Sikhs marched, then made speeches in support of the persecution in and around the home- land that declared its independence on Octo- ber 7, 1987, and hoisted the Sikh flag. For this they were arrested. This follows the ar-rests in January 2005 of two Sikhs who made speeches and raised the Khalistani flag at a Republic Day event. Some of the leaders were held for 50 days without trial.

Recently in the state of Uttarakhand, Sikhs farmers were forced out of their farms, which were bulldozed, and they were deprived of their wages with no compensation and have nowhere to go to find roof over their heads or livelihood for their families. The truth is that discrimina- tion against Sikhs and other minorities is so widespread that it draws little attention within or outside India. Although outsiders are allowed to buy land in the Punjab, Sikhs cannot buy land in the surrounding Rajasthan and Himachal Pradesh. This discriminatory policy prevents Sikhs farmers from purchasing land in Punjab, and they have been forced to migrate to the state of Uttaranchal. About 50,000 Sikhs were ruthlessly killed by the Punjab Police and their bodies were unceremoniously thrown into the sea. Young Sikhs were tortured, tortured and killed in Police custody. Their bodies were then declared “unidentified” and cremated incin- erating at midnight on the orders of the Indian government. The secret cremation policy was exposed by human rights activist Jaspal Singh Khalra, who was arrested for publishing his report and was murdered while in police custody.

In June 2005, at the observance of the Indian government’s 1984 military attack on the Golden Temple, a group of Sikhs marched, then made speeches in support of the persecution in and around the home- land that declared its independence on Octo- ber 7, 1987, and hoisted the Sikh flag. For this they were arrested. This follows the ar-rests in January 2005 of two Sikhs who made speeches and raised the Khalistani flag at a Republic Day event. Some of the leaders were held for 50 days without trial.

The Hindu militant Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS), of which all the leaders of the BJP and its various allies and factions are members (founded in support of the Fascists in Italy), published a booklet on how to file false criminal cases against Christians and other religious minorities.

The attacks on Christians continue and the oppression of Christians that has been going on since Christmas 1998 is unabated. In fact, the atrocities have been increasing in the past year. According to Rev. Dave Stravers, President of Mission India, there is no question that extremists are trying to instill fear in Christians. They want to make Christians afraid to assemble or share their faith. These prominent Christians of forcibly converting people, then they forcibly convert them to Hinduism.

Several Indian states have passed laws for- bidding anyone to convert to any religion other than Hinduism. These laws range from requiring a government fee for converting to Hinduism and criminalizing conversion by force or by bait. These laws are intended to instill fear in Christians. On January 28, 2006, a group of Christians in Madhya Pradesh were engaged in prayer. A mob of Hindu militants stormed the hall, a private facility, and severely beat eight Christians. Five of them are still in the hos- pital as of this writing. The attack appears to be premeditated. The attackers burst in and knew precisely where to go. They ar- rived on motorbikes, broke windows, and forced the doors open.

On December 29, 2005 a landmine was plant- ed in the Lengjien (Ngarichan) Committee Hall in Tamenglong District which is a Naga inhabited area of Manipur. The land mine exploded when the children of the village went and played at the hall. A 12-year-old boy died in the hospital. Another boy’s limb was ripped off and several others were seriously injured.

On November 4, 2005, a Hindu mob attacked Pastor Feroz Masih of the Believers Church of India. He was threatened with death and arrested. After being Pastor Masih, the Hindu militants told him that unless he and his 60-year-old boy died in the hospital. Another land mine exploded when the children of the inhabited area in the state of Manipur. The Hall in Tamenglong District which is a Naga inhabited area was forced the doors open.

On August 31, 2005, upper-caste villagers in the village of Gohana burned more than 60 Dalit residences, driving over 2,000 Dalit families out of Gohana. In 1998, a judge in Al- lahabad cleaned the courtroom with blessed water from the Ganges River because it was previously occupied by a judicial officer be- longing to the lower castes.

When Dalits are walking in the presence of a Brahmin, they can be beaten or killed with impunity. Any violation of the caste sys- tem, Dalits are obligated to perform certain manual duties for upper-caste fami- lies without compensation. These duties in- clude cleaning latrines, skinning dead ani- mals, and crafting leather shoes, and other menial tasks.

The Sikhs are also highly victimized by the Indian government. Over 250,000 Sikhs have been killed since the military attack on the Golden Temple in June 1984, according to the report The Politics of Genocide by Inderjit Singh Jaijee. The figures were compiled by the Punjab State Magistracy, which rep- resents the judiciary of Punjab. A report released during the 2005 Census of India also reported that 52,288 political prisoners. Amnesty International reports that tens of thousands of them are detained under the Delhi massacre. How can a democracy hold political prisoners? According to Amnesty reports, some of these political prisoners have been in custody for almost two decades. Amnesty International reported last year that tens of thousands of men are being held as political pris- oners. These prisoners continue to be held under a law called the ‘Terrorist and Disrup- tive Activities Act’ (TADA), which expired in 1997. The government has held people virtually indefinitely for any offence or for no offence at all.

The missionaries are having a good deal of trouble in the Punjab. On December 29, 2005, a landmine was planted in the vicinity of Bangalore in which several people were injured. The attack appears to be premeditated. The attackers burst in and knew precisely where to go. They ar- rived on motorbikes, broke windows, and forced the doors open.

The Indian government has murdered over 300,000 Muslims in Kashmir. They have sent over 700,000 troops to suppress the people of Kashmir.

On February 27, 2002, a fire on a train in Godhra killed fifty-eight pas- sengers, among them fifteen children. This gave rise to massacres in which 2,000 to 5,000 Muslims were murdered. According to a po- liceman in Gujarat who was quoted in an In- dustrial Human Rights Organization came to the conclusion that they are secular, that they are demo- cratic. But they have nothing to do with a democracy, nothing to do with secularism. They just kill Sikhs to please the majority.”

The Human Rights Watch reported that not a single person has been convicted in these massacres. More than 250,000 Muslims have been charged under India’s much-criti- cized Prevention of Terrorism Act (POTA) for their alleged involvement in the train massacre. More than 250,000 Muslims have been charged under POTA in connection with the violence against Muslims.
In Lunawade village in Panchmahal district of Kashmir, during the last week of December 2005, a mass grave was discovered. It contained the bodies of at least 26 victims of the Indian government’s pogrom against the Muslims. Their crime? The Kashmiri people were promised a referendum on their status in 1948, but that vote has never been held. In 1989, when Nehru and Patel promised to give Kashmiris the right to self-determination, vast numbers of Indians had been killed. Today, the government of India, which continues to make rapid economic rise as it is the natural ally of the United States, do not understand India at all. They have not been able to assimilate or touchables who are a majority in many states of India. They have not been able to assimilate or touchables who are a majority in many states of India. Their crime? The Kashmiri people have nothing, but their pride is intact.

India clearly has a problem with its un-touchables who are a majority in many states of India. It has failed to assimilate or integrate them. Since they do not belong to a single race, caste or religion, they are increasingly looking towards Christian egalitarianism to throw off the yoke of slavery imposed by the caste system. I believe that those who ignore the oppression of the lower castes and classes in India are leading India a ‘natural ally’ and the friendship of the ‘biggest democracy’ a state objective of the U.S., do not understand India at all. They help perpetuate systematic oppression and humiliation of a vast segment of humanity—700 million people—who have nothing, not even hope for anything. Even if India continues to make economic rise, it is doing, this segment of humanity would be completely bypassed.

CHAHABA RIVER NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE EXPANSION ACT

SPEECH OF HON. SPENCER BACHUS
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the leadership, Chairman Pombo, Subcommittee Chairman Gilchrest and Ranking Member Pallone for allowing the House to consider this legislation. The bill before us today, H.R. 4907, represents a 2nd major step by this Congress in protecting and preserving one of the most biologically diverse areas of the United States.

In 2000, I introduced the legislation that created the Cahaba River National Wildlife Refuge. The bill passed this Congress and was signed into law. Since that time, each year the Appropriations Committee has dedicated funding for land acquisition. The initial 3,500 acres authorized in that bill have been completely purchased by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The strong support of local elected officials and property owners, coupled with that of many environmental organizations such as The Nature Conservancy, The Cahaba River Society, and The Nature Conservancy, has plans to expand the existing boundaries of The Cahaba River National Wildlife Refuge.

Alabama is the 5th most biologically diverse State in the country, but it also has the unfortunate distinction of being the most extinction-prone State in the continental United States, with at least 98 species extinct. The Cahaba River basin alone supports 69 rare and imperiled species. The river is recognized nationally for its unique biological diversity; the Cahaba Shiner, a federally endangered species is just one of more than 131 species of fish that call the Cahaba home. That is more species of fresh water fish than inhabit the entire State of California. The Cahaba’s wealth of fish species is greater than any other river of its size in North America.

The Cahaba River also harbors the world’s largest population of the imperiled shoals lily, known locally as the “Cahaba Lily.” Recently a population of Cahaba pebble-snails was discovered in the refuge. Once thought to be extinct, this marked the first time this species had been seen since the 1960s, an accomplishment that can be attributed to the protection offered by the Cahaba’s designation as a Wildlife Refuge.

The proposed expansion of the Cahaba River National Wildlife Refuge would:

Increase direct protection of the banks of the mainstem Cahaba River from the current 3.5 miles to approximately 8 miles, thereby giving additional protection to additional large populations of the globally imperiled shoals lily (aka Cahaba lily), and many other rare species.

Provide large enough areas of forest to support viable breeding populations of declining Neotropical migratory birds, both in the longleaf pine forests (e.g. Northern Bobwhite Quail, Brown-headed Nuthatch) and in hardwood forests (e.g. Swainson’s Warbler, Louisiiana Waterthrush, Acadian Flycatcher).

Provide significant increase in public access to the Cahaba River for canoeing, fishing and other riverine recreational activities.

Provide a significant increase in acreage available to the public for hunting, hiking, birding and other outdoor wildlife-based activities (Alabama has only about 3 percent public land, less than most other States in the Nation).

Provide a significant boost in revenue to Bibb County, one of the poorest counties in the Nation. Due to low prevailing property tax rates, the revenue to the County coffers from the Federal Refuge Revenue Sharing Program (payments in lieu of taxes) have averaged about $6 per acre per year (versus a yield of about $1 per acre per year as privately owned timberland).

H.R. 4907 authorizes the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to purchase up to an additional 3,600 acres of land and waters. This would double the number of protected acres of the Cahaba, all of which will be purchased from willing sellers. Protecting the land upstream from the original refuge will add to the buffer zone needed to shield this critical habitat and watershed.

The bill before us will help protect one of the greatest natural treasures in my State of Alabama and I urge a “yes” vote.

JUMPSTART’S READ FOR THE RECORD

HON. JOE WILSON OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, literacy development begins at the early stages of a child’s life. In the circle block to future success. As a nation which wants to enhance our competitive edge in the global marketplace, we must ensure that our children have the basic reading skills to become successful in the classroom and later in the workplace.

On August 24, 2006, I invite the entire country to participate in Jumpstart’s “Read for the Record.” This unique event will attempt to set the word record for the number of children reading a single book, or being read to, and at the same time allow people of all ages to work together in overcoming the school readiness issues facing our country.

This reading experience will use one of the best known child motivational stories ever produced—The Little Engine That Could. In honor of this day, a special edition of the story was created to include proven reading techniques to help our children grasp core reading foundations. This custom edition was funded solely by a private company dedicated to reading excellence.

Mrs. Laura Bush is the Honorary Chair of Jumpstart’s “Read for the Record” project. As a former teacher, Mrs. Bush understands the need for strong reading development.

Demonstrating this project’s importance, NBC’s Today Show will host a special segment to cover proven reading techniques. Matt Lauer will then read this classic book to children.

I would like to thank Principal Mary Ellen Parker of Shell Point Elementary School in Beau-fort, South Carolina, for inviting me on August 24th to read to a group of kindergarten students. As an award-winning school dedicated in closing the achievement gap in learning, I am extremely encouraged that the faculty and staff at Shell Point are totally committed to early childhood development through enhanced reading skills.

Jumpstart’s “Read for the Record” will raise the necessary awareness and emphasize the importance of early learning in every family. Participation in this event will support the goal that every child can read at grade level by the end of 3rd grade. For more information on how you too can foster stronger reading skills in our children, please visit www.readfortherecord.org.
HONORING TIM FRIEDMAN

SPEECH OF
HON. BOB ETHERIDGE
OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to join my colleagues in paying tribute to Tim Friedman on the occasion of his retirement from the House after 30 years of faithful service. Tim is a native of Lackawanna, NY, a suburb of Buffalo. He arrived in Washington in 1976 and started his career in the House of Representatives on July 19, 1976 under the patronage of the Hon. Dan Rostenkowski. He worked as a Doorkeeper under the Hon. James T. Molloy from 1976 to 1982. In 1982 he transferred to the office of the House Sergeant at Arms. Tim was appointed as Assistant Manager of the House Democratic Cloakroom in 1985 by the Hon. Daniel Rostenkowski. He served as a Doorkeeper under the Hon. John James Smith from 1965 to 1969. Tim married Colleen Early in 2003. They are avid golfers and are building a home in Wallace, NC. I hope they have a splendid retirement in Down East, NC.

HONORING TIM FRIEDMAN

SPEECH OF
HON. STENY H. HOYER
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor Tim Friedman, a great friend and a great public servant. Next month, Tim will officially retire from the House of Representatives following 30 years of outstanding public service. Tim grew up in Lackawanna, New York, and came to Washington, DC in 1976. That year, he began his distinguished career with the U.S. House of Representatives under the former Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Dan Rostenkowski. Tim served as a Doorkeeper in the Democratic Cloakroom for the Honorable James T. Molloy from 1976 until 1982, when he began working for the Honorable Jack Russ. In 1985, Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill appointed Tim as the Assistant Manager of the House Democratic Cloakroom.

In 2003, Tim married his wife, Colleen Early. Tim and Colleen are dedicated golfers and are building a home in Wallace, North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, it is little-known fact outside of Washington that the Democratic and Republican Cloakrooms are vital to Congress' functioning. Dealing with Members of Congress on a daily basis is not an easy task, but Tim has kept our members running on schedule, kept us fed, and kept us smiling for years now, and he will be sorely missed.

I am grateful to Tim for his tremendous service to the House of Representatives, and I wish Tim and Colleen the best of luck in his well-deserved retirement.

TRIBUTE TO GAYLA GRAHAM HEGGEMAN

HON. JO BONNER
OF ALABAMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. BONNER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to the life of a wonderful lady, Gayla Graham Heggeman, who passed away June 27, 2006, in a tragic car accident.

An accomplished businesswoman, Gayla was a tremendous asset to Alabama and was adored by many friends and family members. Among other things, Gayla co-owned C&G Boat Works and Graham Gulf Incorporated with her brother Janson Graham. The two, along with their mother, owned Silver King, a 142-acre golf club. Their businesses spanned across much of lower Alabama achieving not only financial success for the family but providing several contributions to the entire area.

To all who loved her, Gayla was a trusted friend and confidant. Moreover, few things were more important to her than her family and friends. Not surprisingly, Gayla garnered a tremendous amount of respect throughout the southern Alabama community.

Gayla is survived by her mother, Sybil Graham-Radford, her stepfather, Harry Radford, and her brother, Janson. In addition, countless friends, business acquaintances, and fellow community members mourn her passing. Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join with me in recognizing the many achievements of Gayla’s life.
who explained how the dominance of the Brahmin has been challenged by Bahujan. He said that by his thesis that the best way to fight discrimination is to strengthen the caste system and consolidate their vote banks to help their own kin to win elections. The result is that the Bahujan parties have won power in several states. The election of the President of the governing Bahujan Janata Dal (United) in November 2004 was a clear indication of this. The Brahmin is the enemy of the Bahujan. He is looking for new ways to restore his grip over power. The new method is to embrace communism. They have organized Communist parties and groups all over India. They have captured power in West Bengal through elections but in most other areas they operate as terrorist groups under the title of Naxalites or Maoists. The landlords in much of rural India that caste one level below the Brahmin—and the farm labour is from Untouchable castes. The humiliation of the caste system piled upon exploitation by force or unpaid labour makes rural India a hell hole. In this charged environment, the Brahmin cadres have started their Naxalite Movement. Given a gun the irate labourers shoot aid workers, the land lord and end up in prison or on the gallows; the Brahmin secures confirmation as “revolutionary leader”. The Brahmin schemes are so complex and divided that it is hard to fathom the truth. But the low castes in India are waking up, says Mr. Rajeshwar. They can now act wisely and devise a new polity that recognizes the multiplicity of India’s faiths, castes and states to give them their due and obtain internal harmony and peace with all the neighbours.

Three papers were read at the Seminar. Brigadier Usman Khalid, Director of Lisa, said that the system of Separate Electorate was imposed on India to give minority faiths more voice to minority faiths (like in Pakistan)—Muslims, Christians, Buddhists, Parsis and Jains. But the decision is for the majority to make. They may prefer to extend the protection of Separate Electorate to the top 5% high castes instead. As for the Sikhs in the Punjab, the Muslims in Jammu and Kashmir, and the tribal peoples of Assam, they are separate nations who have struggled for freedom for many decades; they should be allowed to exercise their right of self-determinism.
Federal support of stem cell research will allow American scientists to harness this groundbreaking technology to potentially save many lives and improve the quality of others. In addition, the oversight which will come with broad federal support will result in better and more ethically controlled research in the field than if funding was from private sources alone.

“GOING TO HAVE TO SELL MY HOUSE ... OR DIE”: DISASTROUS CONSEQUENCES OF MEDICARE PART D

Hon. Bob Filner
Of California
In the House of Representatives
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, Medicare Part D continues to bring problems for our Nation’s seniors. As more and more reach the “doughnut hole,” seniors are confronted with dramatic, no-win choices. I offer my colleagues a recent article in the San Diego Union-Tribune—“Going to Have to Sell My House ... or Die.” It’s past time to start over with the prescription drug benefit.

(From the San Diego Union-Tribune, July 16, 2006)

GOING TO HAVE TO SELL MY HOUSE ... OR DIE
(By Keith Darce)

Frank Harrison says he’s facing a choice between his health and his house. When the Spring Valley retiree hit a coverage gap in his federal prescription drug plan in early June, his monthly medicine bill skyrocketed from about $1,800, largely because of two expensive immune suppression drugs that he has taken since a kidney transplant six years ago.

The 62-year-old former computer company operations manager, whose main income comes from Social Security disability benefits, stopped taking one of the drugs, which cost about $750 a month, that he could keep paying his $750 mortgage payment.

“What it boils down to pretty soon is that I’m going to have to sell my house. It’s either that or die,” he said.

Harrison is among the 3.4 million seniors and disabled Americans who have begun to fall into a gap in Medicare prescription drug coverage. They must pay the full price for drugs after they’ve spent $2,250 in co-payments and until their out-of-pocket costs reach $5,100 for the year.

Those in the so-called “doughnut hole” are likely to cut back on medicines to save money even if doing so jeopardizes their health, according to some research.

“Some are being caught totally unawares,” said Jennifer Duncan, who manages the San Diego Health Insurance Counseling and Advocacy Program. HICAP, which assists Medicare beneficiaries, has fielded calls in recent weeks from about 20 Part D enrollees who’ve either hit the coverage gap or are nearing it. Medicare is the government’s health insurance program for those 65 and older and the disabled.

“The gap is the latest headache to confront those who thought that signing up for a Part D plan would lower their costs for expensive medications. Early enrollees some from getting prescriptions because their names didn’t appear in the computer systems of the private companies selected to operate those plans. Others tried to buy drugs only to learn at the pharmacy counter that the medicines weren’t covered by their plans.
Still, several surveys have indicated that most participants are satisfied with the Part D program and have saved money during its first six months.

Congress created the Part D gap when lawmakers created the drug insurance program in 2003. The measure was added to reduce the program’s cost. Lawmakers reasoned that by a tiny portion of Part D participants would reach the gap and most would be without coverage only for a short period.

Many people in the program will avoid the coverage gap, according to a recent report by accounting and consulting firm PriceWaterhouseCoopers. They have very little drug insurances. Medicare beneficiaries enrolled in a higher-priced Part D plan that doesn’t cap benefits, have incomes low enough to qualify for exemptions or simply won’t purchase enough drugs to reach the cap before calculations start over on Jan. 1.

Those falling into the gap are largely middle-class seniors who aren’t poor enough to qualify for Medi-Cal—the federal health insurance for the poor known as Medicaid outside California—or they are wealthy enough to afford higher-priced Part D plans that have no coverage caps.

People who fall into the doughnut hole don’t pay the full retail price for drugs, said Peter Newman, executive vice president for the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services in Washington, D.C. They pay the discounted price paid by plan operators—about 20 percent below retail prices, he said. “I think people tend to forget that piece of it.”

But halfway through the first year of the prescription drug program, the San Diego HICAP is fielding calls from frightened seniors whose benefits are about to run out, Duncan said.

“ ‘Doughnut hole’ is a lousy term. It’s more like an abyss,” she said. “It’s a soft, funny way for saying you may not be able to pay your rent or eat this month because you’re going to have to pay for all of your medicines.”

One recent call was from a paraplegic who takes high doses of the pain-killer morphine that cost $1,500 a month. Another caller takes $10,000 worth of medicine each month to prevent his body from rejecting a transplanted lung.

Even beneficiaries facing less dire circumstances could have trouble dealing with the gap.

An overwhelming majority of Medicare recipients suffer from chronic diseases, such as hypertension and diabetes, said Kenneth Thorpe, chairman of the Health Policy and Management Department at Emory University in Atlanta.

More often than not, they also are being treated and medicated for multiple conditions, he said. “These are very expensive patients.”

When their drug coverage runs out, even temporarily, they are likely to stop taking some or all of their medications, Thorpe said.

That’s what Kaiser Permanente researcher John Hsu found when he studied about 200,000 Medicare beneficiaries in 2003 who participated in a more limited government prescription drug program that predated Part D. The results, published in the June 1 edition of The New England Journal of Medicine, found that people whose drug benefits were capped at $1,000 a year had higher rates of emergency room visits, hospitalization and death than those with unlimited coverage.

Hsu attributed the increase to people ending drug treatments once the insurance cap was reached. The cost for additional medical care offset the lower drug cost savings created by the program.

When Harrison’s coverage ended in early June, the maker of one of his immune suppression drugs put him on a program that delivered the medication for free. But he wasn’t offered the same deal from the maker of the other medication, and his $1,500 monthly income is too high for him to qualify for the doughnut hole exemption available through Medi-Cal. He’s hoping his doctor will provide an answer—perhaps an alternative drug available at a discount or for free from a manufacturer—when he goes in for a check-up in a few weeks.

Wendel Ott, 74, of San Diego, doesn’t expect to hit the cap until September, but already he’s considering cutting back on his eight medications.

“It’s going to cost me a tremendous amount of money for the last part of the year,” said Ott, who takes medicines for high blood pressure, an enlarged prostate and chronic bronchitis. “Let’s face it, I’m not wealthy.”

While many people were aware they might face a gap in coverage when they signed up for a Part D plan, it’s clear some haven’t prepared for it, says Michael Negrete, vice president of clinical programs for the California Pharmacists Association.

“Most people haven’t saved money to deal with the doughnut hole, or the $2,500 gap,” Negrete said.

Once in the gap, people create a new problem for themselves if they try to save money by purchasing cheaper drugs outside their Part D program, Negrete said.

“When they get drugs outside of Part D, that doesn’t go to the credit they need to get out of the (gap),” he said. “If they are getting the same medications from Canada or from a pharmacy that offers a discount drug service, they will never get out of the doughnut hole.”

INTRODUCING THE MINORITY ENTERPRISE AND INNOVATION PILOT PROGRAM OF 2006

HON. ELIJAH E. CUMMINGS
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support the Minority Entrepreneurship & Innovation Pilot Program of 2006, a bill that I am introducing as a companion to S. 2586, sponsored by Senator John Kerry. This bill is designed to address our nation’s growing economic disparities through the promotion of business development and entrepreneurship in minority communities.

Economic indicators show that today, the average income for African Americans is just 62 percent that of whites. More than 40 years after the enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the economic value of blacks is still nearly three-fifths that of whites—a statistic that clearly indicates that the vestiges of slavery are enduring.

This race-based “wealth gap” is simply unacceptable. And African Americans are not the only minority group suffering from this disparity. The average incomes of Native Americans and Latinos are similarly unbalanced, with those communities earning 65 and 74 percent of the income of whites respectively.

But the news is not all bad. The National Urban League, in its 2006 “State of Black America Report,” indicated that there may be a silver lining to this cloud. The prevalence of black-owned businesses has been on the upswing, revealing a difference of 2.5 to 1 (White Businesses to African-American Businesses), as compared with 3 to 1 a few years ago.

As many of my colleagues know, minority-owned businesses provide real opportunity for individuals, families and communities. By supporting their growth, we can begin to reverse the increasing “wealth gap” for good, leading to greater economic independence for minorities. This result will multiply itself and in the process lay the foundation for closing other socio-economic gaps—gaps that have created an environment for persistent economic failure in many of these communities.

That is why I am introducing the Minority Entrepreneurship and Innovation Pilot Program of 2006. This legislation would establish a $24 million, two-year pilot program to promote small business development in colleges and universities that serve African American, Native American and Latino communities.

Through $1 million grants, the institutions would provide students in highly-skilled fields such as engineering, manufacturing and science with the tools they need to start their own businesses. The bill would also allow institutions to establish Small Business Development Centers to provide counseling, capacity building and niche market development services.

A great legacy of the American Dream has been the opportunity for ordinary citizens to improve their livelihoods by starting their own business. The Minority Entrepreneurship and Innovation Pilot Program of 2006 would give minority communities a chance to share in this attainable success.

I want to thank the original cosponsors who have joined with me in introducing this important bill, Representatives BENNIE THOMPSON, GRACE NAPOLITANO, SANFORD BISHOP, ALBERT WYNN, DEBBIE WASSERMANN SCHULTZ, BOBBY SCOTT, MAJOR OWENS, BENJAMIN CARDIN, AL GREEN, GREGORY RUSH, JANET MILLER-MCDONALD, RAUL GRIJALVA, JOHN CONYERS, G.K. BUTTERFIELD, ALLEN BOYD, MIKE RYAN, DONALD DAVIS, STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES, LINDA SANCHEZ, ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON, CAROLYN KILPATRICK, JOE BACA, DAVID SCOTT, ALBERT WYNN, CHRIS VAN HOLLEN, HILDA SOLIS, DONALD PAYNE, BARBARA LEE, C.A. DUTCH RUPPERSBERGER, SAM FARR and JAMES CLYBURN.

I ask the rest of my colleagues to please join us in helping to reverse the “wealth gap” by supporting this legislation.

IN SUPPORT OF A MUTUALLY ACCEPTABLE SOLUTION TO THE FUTURE POLITICAL STATUS OF KOSOVO

HON. DAN BURTON OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, for the first time in many years, two high-ranking delegations—one representing Serbia, the other the Serbian province of Kosovo—met in Vienna, Austria to discuss the future political status of Kosovo, which has been administered by the United Nations since 1999. The Vienna meeting was the first time that the Serbian President and Prime Minister met with their political counterparts from Kosovo.

Both sides presented and explained their position on Kosovo’s future political status. The Serbian delegation presented a practical plan for the highest possible autonomy for Kosovo inside Serbia’s borders, while Kosovo’s leaders presented their plan for independence.

Although the parties reached no agreement, the Vienna meeting was very positive, and I believe it should be commended. It allowed both sides to present their platforms in a constructive and diplomatic manner, and provided the international community with strong assurances that events in the Balkans can be solved in a peaceful and civilized way.

Serbia proved once again that it is ready to seek a final solution for Kosovo based on the tenets of territorial integrity, international law and regional stability. Serbia’s position high-lighted the necessity to broker a final agreement that will keep democracy and reform in Serbia intact.

An imposed solution for Kosovo would be a dangerous precedent and may serve as the fatal blow for the economic and political processes in Serbia. There is a slim but very real chance that elements in Serbian politics would seize power in Belgrade if Kosovo is granted independence from the UN, without ironclad-guarantees for Kosovo’s Serb population and the firm commitment to protect Serbian historical, cultural and religious sites in Kosovo.

Serbia is a new country with new leadership. It is a country led by reformers, like President Boris Tadic, who helped topple Slobodan Milosevic from power and had the fortitude to transfer him to the Hague Tribunal to answer for his crimes against humanity.

This new Serbia is a thriving, free market democracy, based on transparency, the rule of law and the protection of human rights. Serbia is a member of international organizations, and it is on the path toward membership in the European Union and North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Serbia of today is working with the United States to spread democracy and freedom and now the United States has the unique opportunity to stand with its democratic allies in Serbia, and to work to advance a mutually acceptable solution to the future political status of Kosovo; one which won’t leave Serbia and its fragile democracy in tatters.

The mishandling of Kosovo’s final political status might reverse these advances in Serbia and endanger a region just recovering from dictatorship, ethnic strife, isolation and war.

RECOGNIZING THE 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF WELFARE REFORM

HON. RAHM EMANUEL OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the 10th anniversary of President Clinton’s historic welfare reform initiative. The Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996 fundamentally transformed our nation’s welfare system and provided a clear direction for the future of this important program.

I am proud to have played an active role in the passage of this legislation during my time in the White House. If it were not for President Clinton’s vision, welfare reform would never have gained the bipartisan support that was required. President Clinton’s vision was to end welfare as we know it and he succeeded in forming a system that both rewarded and required work.

In Illinois alone, 217,000 families worked their way off of TANF and into the workforce. President Clinton realized that the best job training was an actual job.

We also realized that jobs came along with new challenges for welfare recipients. Therefore, we assisted recipients in finding child care and instituting transitional medical assistance for families leaving the welfare rolls.

The greatest accomplishment of welfare reform was connecting a generation of children with a culture of work. Many children who would have grown up in a household with non-working parents, have internalized the value of work and learned how to build a better future for themselves and their families.

Thanks to welfare reform, more than 3 million children rose above the poverty line between 1996 and 2000. Earnings of the poorest people in our country rose significantly.

However, some of the progress we made has been reversed. Between 2001 and 2005, 5 million Americans fell below the poverty line, including 1.5 million children.
Mr. Speaker, I commend those in Congress that worked to pass this legislation in 1996, and I look forward to working with them to ensure that what we accomplished in 1996 is not undone. I urge my colleagues to build on the success of the past with a commitment to ensuring the future success of welfare reform.

HIRE A VETERAN WEEK

SPEECH OF

HON. SILVESTRE REYES

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 24, 2006

Mr. REYES. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Con. Res. 125, expressing Congressional support for “Hire-A-Veteran Week,” and encouraging the President to issue a proclamation calling upon employers to increase employment of men and women who have served honorably in the U.S. Armed Forces.

As a U.S. Army veteran and a member of the House Armed Services and Veterans’ Affairs Committees, I know of the challenges awaiting our servicemembers when transitioning from military service to the civilian workforce. While this resolution will not solve the problems of unemployment within the veterans community, it is a strong message that we as Members of Congress should send to anyone in a position to hire qualified veterans.

Having military veterans in both my El Paso, TX and Washington, DC offices, I know of the exceptional training the Armed Forces provide our servicemembers, and wholeheartedly encourage any employer to consider hiring those veterans who have served our country.

Madam Speaker, I ask all my colleagues to join me in supporting our nation’s veterans by voting in favor of H. Con. Res. 125.

INTRODUCING THE AMERICARE HEALTH INSURANCE ACT OF 2006

SPEECH OF

HON. FORNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 25, 2006.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to introduce the AmeriCare Health Insurance Act of 2006. I am joined by the AFL-CIO, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Nurses Association, the Center for Medicare Advocacy, Consumers’ Union, Fami- lies USA, the National Health Care Action Network, and the National Association of Community Health Centers in supporting this common sense solution to achieve universal health insurance coverage.

In my tenure in the House, I have been involved in many discussions about how to re-form our health system. These debates tend to occur every 10 to 15 years when health costs rise to a level that attracts our attention. Unfortunately, the minor tweaks and threats of reform we have made in the past have not resulted in lasting change. As a result, we are spending more putting less—than any industrialized nation.

If history is any guide, we are nearing yet another health reform discussion in this country. This time, we need to get it right. To that end I offer AmeriCare—a practical proposal to ensure that everyone has affordable health insurance.

AmeriCare is based on the principles that the U.S. health system should cover everyone, be affordable, and be paid for by employers. Eighty percent of the people who file for bankruptcy because of medical bills have health insurance, but their benefits do not meet their needs. Policies that are unaffordable, that discourage people from seeking care, that do not cover necessary benefits are empty solutions.

AmeriCare builds on what works—both employer coverage and Medicare—in an effort to dramatically expand coverage with minimal disruption to the current system. It addresses the broader issues in our health system over-all, and provides an important marker for a renewed discussion on health reform.

For the past four decades since it was enacted, the stability and affordability of Medi- care have helped millions of seniors and people with disabilities live longer, healthier lives. Because of Medicare, families have been able to save to provide their children’s education rather than having to pay for their parents’ health care.

Since the program began, Medicare’s per capita costs have grown at a slower rate than private health insurance or the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program.

Providers, too, have benefited from Medi- care. Without Medicare as a consistent payer, providers would not be able to offer the top quality care they deliver today. Indeed, un- compensated care to people who are uninsured or underinsured is pushing some providers toward the breaking point. Meaningful coverage for all makes good business sense for providers.

AmeriCare also recognizes the important role that job-based benefits play in our current health system. Under AmeriCare, people would continue to obtain health coverage through their employer—as most of us currently do—or they would be covered under the new AmeriCare system. Expanding insurance coverage to all without shifting that burden from the high number of uninsured we have today. This could reduce premiums for job-based insurance by as much as $1,000 for family coverage, according to the Institute of Medicine.

Expanding coverage to all will also strengthen the economy and improve our competitive- ness. General Motors recently admitted that it spends more on health care than on steel; Starbucks spends more on health insurance than on coffee. The need to address health re-form is urgent, and we must take steps that result from the high number of uninsured we have today.

AmeriCare is a sensible solution for our Na- tion’s employers—many of whom are already meeting the challenge of providing coverage for their employees. I plan to reach out to the business community to begin a dialogue about how we might move forward with AmeriCare.

AmeriCare creates a new Title XXII in the Social Security Act. It uses Medicare’s existing administrative infrastructure, but improves upon Medicare’s benefits to address some of the current gaps in coverage, such as mental health parity, coverage for children, and family and pregnancy related services for women. State Medicaid programs would remain responsible for long-term care, but AmeriCare would now cover low-income chil-
As we edge closer to our next discussion on health reform, we need to ask, is medical care a civic and social right like police and fire services, education, and environmental protection? Or is health care “you’re on your own?”

This conclusion must be made. I hope I can count on my colleagues and our endorsing organizations to advance a shared vision for health reform by adopting AmeriCare.

Attached is a short summary of AmeriCare. More can be found on my website at www.house.gov/americare

AmeriCare Health Care Act of 2006—Bill Summary

Overview: The AmeriCare Health Care Act (“AmeriCare”) is a practical proposal to ensure everyone has health coverage in our country. It builds on what works in today’s health care system to provide simple, affordable, reliable health insurance. People would continue to obtain health insurance through their employer or they would be covered under the new AmeriCare system, modeled on Medicare.

Using the administrative efficiencies within Medicare and building on the existing coverage people receive through their jobs today, we can create an affordable, efficient, and stable universal health care system in America—and guarantee access to medical innovation and the world’s most advanced providers and facilities.

Benefits: All residents of the U.S. and its territories are eligible to receive benefits through AmeriCare. The practical AmeriCare benefits package is tailored to meet the needs of working people and their families, including: preventive services; physician services; hospital services; maternity coverage; prescription medications; mental health services; ambulatory care; and a realistic limit on out-of-pocket costs.

AmeriCare provides additional benefits for children under age 24 and people with modest income. Supplemental benefits could be offered by employers or purchased through private insurance companies. It also improves Medicare’s existing benefits structure to conform with AmeriCare, providing streamlined cost-sharing and lower drug prices—without a donut hole.

Financing: AmeriCare is financed through contributions from employers, individuals, and states, all of whom pay into our current health care system. Unlike today’s system, however, AmeriCare will save billions of dollars by utilizing Medicare’s highly efficient administrative infrastructure that operates on a 2% margin. Requiring the Secretary to negotiate with the pharmaceutical industry for reasonable prices and expanding the use of health information technology in the clinical setting will achieve additional savings. The efficiencies gained from these steps will keep AmeriCare’s premiums affordable.

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, on July 19, 2006, I mistakenly voted “no” on rollcall No. 384. I intended to vote in support of Mr. WATT’s amendment to preserve the authority of the United States Supreme Court to hear or decide all cases relating to the interpretation of, or the validity under the Constitution of, the Pledge of Allegiance, as defined in 4 U.S.C. section 4, or its recitation.

A TRIBUTE TO DEBORAH MARICA CLEMONTS

HON. G. K. BUTTERFIELD
OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, July 25, 2006

Mr. BUTTERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Deborah Marica Clemonts one of my most deserving constituents who is being honored as Small Business Owner of the Year by the Roanoke Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Deborah Clemonts is a small business owner in Halifax County who owns a beauty shop, barber shop, restaurant and has held the food service contract for Halifax Community College and the local community Adult Day Care for the past 3 years. Many of the special events that I have held in my Weldon Congressional Office have been catered by Deborah so I know first hand of her impressive, conscientious, professional work.

With all of the activity associated with managing these businesses, Deborah still finds the time to dedicate to the youth of First Baptist Church in Weldon, North Carolina, where the dynamic Reverend Reverend Burrell is the pastor. Deborah is responsible for all of the youth-related activities of the church which include the Youth Choir, Junior Usher Board and the First Baptist Church Praise Dancers. I have learned that any evening of the week you can see Deborah driving around in the First Baptist Church van picking up and dropping off children or taking them to the Pizza Hut treating them to a pizza before turning them back over to their parents. Deborah is compassionate about the community youth and is trying to do her part in assisting in their growth as grounded, productive citizens. Mr. Speaker, I have learned that the youth have a special affection for Deborah such that they often willingly confide in her and look to her for advice and counsel with many of the problems that they are forced to confront daily. Whenever there is an opportunity, Deborah hires some of the youth to assist her with restaurant-related activities and takes every opportunity to mentor them about work ethic, professionalism and the importance of putting their best foot forward.

Mr. Speaker, I know the Clemonts family well and I know that Deborah’s father, Reverend James Clemonts would be so proud of this honor bestowed upon her by the Roanoke Valley Chamber of Commerce. I know that none of what Deborah has accomplished was easy. But in spite of the many obstacles, Deborah pressed on and I wish her continued success. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to one of the pillars in the First Congressional District, Ms. Deborrah Marica Clemonts.

HONORING FORMER MEMBER OF CONGRESS THOMAS J. MANTON

SPEECH OF
HON. NITA M. LOWEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, July 24, 2006

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the legacy and accomplishments of our recently-passed colleague Thomas Manton.

Tom Manton’s life epitomized the American dream. Born to Irish immigrants in 1932, he worked to put himself through college and law school and eventually rose to become one of the most influential politicians in New York City.

After attending Catholic school in Queens and St. John's, Tom entered the Marine Corps serving from 1951 to 1953. He went on to graduate from St. Johns University in 1958 and earned his law degree there in 1962. In addition to his service defending our country in the armed forces, Tom put his life on the line protecting the citizens of New York in the police force from 1955 to 1980.

After serving on the New York City Council from 1970 to 1984, Tom was elected to Congress. He served proudly and responsibly for seven terms in the House of Representatives, during which he also became Chair of the Queens Democratic Party.

In his work with the Queens Democrats, he brought together people of all different cultural and ethnic backgrounds into the political fold. Although he followed the tradition of Irish Catholic influence in New York City politics, he recruited candidates of all ethnic backgrounds to truly represent the diversity that exists throughout Queens on all levels of government.

It is a testament to the respect Tom Manton earned and to the counsel he provided that during the 1992 Presidential campaign, then Governor Bill Clinton visited the Queens Democratic Party Headquarters in Forest Hills to speak with Tom. Additionally, Tom advised Mayor Michael Bloomberg during his initial city-wide campaign in 2001.

On a personal note, I will miss the plain-spoken style of Tom Manton. When I first came to Congress in 1989, Tom provided me with a bevy of candid advice. During our time in Congress together, I considered him a close advisor, was honored to call him my colleague, and more importantly, valued our friendship.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to join me in paying respect to the family of Thomas Manton and offering condolences to all those who have benefited from his service to our country.
