PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

H.R. 5337, the “National Security Foreign Improvement Reform and Strengthening Transparency Act of 2006” (“National Security FIRST”) strengthens national security by improving the process by which foreign direct investment in the United States is scrutinized to determine if it threatens to impair national security in any way. The bill, introduced May 10, 2006, makes a number of reforms to Section 721 of the Defense Production Act of 1950 (DPA)—the so-called Exon-Florio amendment to the DPA—improving an existing review process that has existed in some form since 1975. It reforms the Exon-Florio process, which became law in 1988, by correcting perceived problems with the process of examining such investment while not creating new hurdles for investment into the United States that in turn could trigger retaliatory investment barriers to U.S. investment overseas. The legislation improves accountability for the process within the Administration and codifies the existence of the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS), adding the Secretary of Homeland Security as vice chairman of the cross-agency review panel. It establishes clear and transparent processes for examining proposed investment, designing and monitoring arrangements to mitigate any threat to national security short of refusing the transaction, and reporting to Congress regularly and clearly on CFIUS actions so that Congress can perform its necessary oversight. The bill addresses apparent voids in the current examination process—for example, establishing monitoring and interim security measures if a transaction is withdrawn from the examination process, even temporarily—and ensures that transactions may only be considered approved after the chairman and vice chairman of CFIUS sign off. Additionally, addressing what many in Congress view as a potential misreading of Congressional intent in the so-called “Byrd amendment” to Exon-Florio, the bill closes a loophole by mandating that all investments that are controlled by foreign governments undergo both a review and a national security investigation. The bill changes current practice, ensuring that a list of factors that currently “may” be considered while examining a proposal, in the future “shall” be considered, and adds security threats to critical infrastructure as a factor to be considered. Finally, the bill adds a formal analysis of every proposed transaction, to be performed by the Director of National Intelligence, but makes clear that the director has no policy role in the examination process, and makes appropriate provision for protection of classified and proprietary business information about a deal.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR LEGISLATION

The events following public disclosure early in 2006 of the proposal by a Dubai-based ports operator to buy the global port operations business of a British ports operator raised a series of concerns about the process by which the United States government scrutinizes foreign direct investment in the U.S. and raised calls for reform of that process.

Formed under a 1975 executive order to monitor U.S. policy on foreign direct investments, the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States is an interagency committee chaired by the Department of the Treasury. Other participating agencies are the Department of Commerce; Department of State; Department of Homeland Security; Department of Defense; Department of Justice; National Security Council; Council of Economic Advisors; Office of Management & Budget; Office of Science and Technology Policy; U.S. Trade Representative; National Economic Council; and Council of Economic Advisors. In 1988, as part of the Omnibus Trade Act, Congress expanded the role of CFIUS by passing the Exon-Florio amendment to the Defense Production Act of 1950. Under Exon-Florio, the President is authorized to suspend or prohibit foreign acquisitions of U.S. companies if the foreign controlling interest might threaten national security. The President delegated the Exon-Florio investigative authority to CFIUS.

Exon-Florio established a four-step process for examining a foreign acquisition: (1) voluntary notice by the companies; (2) a 30-day review to identify any national security concerns; (3) an optional 45-day investigation to determine whether identified concerns require more extensive mitigation efforts or a recommendation to the President for possible action; and (4) a Presidential decision to permit, suspend, or prohibit an acquisition in those instances where potential national security concerns are identified.

During the standard review period, the CFIUS responds to the requesting company within 30 days—after each CFIUS component agency has reviewed the proposed transaction. As companies often withdraw and restructure deals, however, this “30-day review” often takes much longer. If concerns are raised, the CFIUS can begin a 45-day investigation. By law, CFIUS is limited in what information it can provide to the public and to Congress because its statute requires confidentiality. It should be noted that the 30-day review period is equal to the antitrust review period under Hart-Scott-Rodino.

In general, most CFIUS referrals are routine: either the company agrees to minor mitigation procedures ranging from minor changes in the sales agreement to divestiture of a division, or else the company withdraws from the process. A withdrawal is most often made when it becomes clear that any mitigation that would prevent a recommendation to the President would render the remainder of the deal unattractive to the buyer or seller. Occasionally, a company will withdraw from the process during the “review” period, restructure the deal and re-submit its proposal. More than 1500 CFIUS reviews have been conducted since 1988, with the annual rate rising dramatically following 9/11. In 2005, the CFIUS handled about 65 proposed deals.

Of necessity, the reviews and investigations, which contain classified evaluations of national security vulnerabilities as well as extensive proprietary business information, are conducted in secret. Given this lack of transparency, there have been concerns over the years about CFIUS’s accountability to Congress and to the public, particularly with regard to fundamental questions of whether CFIUS policies are consistent with the statute that governs its operations and whether CFIUS policies are applied consistently and according to the statute in each transaction that comes before CFIUS.

The Committee has relied on expert testimony from public and private officials to assess concerns about CFIUS policies and procedures. Some of those concerns were examined in a report by the Government Accountability Office (GAO) released in September, 2005. The GAO report expressed concern about an overly narrow working definition of national security, the lack of clear and consistent procedures for monitoring transactions that have been withdrawn from CFIUS, and the lack of adequate reporting to Congress on CFIUS activities. The GAO also suggested that CFIUS has been too reluctant to initiate formal 45-day investigations.

This concern was evident in the aftermath of the ports-operations transaction when critics charged that CFIUS improperly ignored the second part of the so-called “Byrd Amendment” test requiring a 45-day investigation if a buyer were controlled by a foreign government and if national security concerns were implicated.

Another criticism in the aftermath of the ports transaction was that there has not been consistent or adequate senior-level accountability for CFIUS decision making, reflected in this case in the fact that senior officials in the Administration, including those directly charged with CFIUS responsibilities, were unaware of the Dubai transaction until it was reported in the media.

H.R. 5337, the National Security FIRST Act of 2006, seeks to address legitimate concerns about CFIUS procedures and policies. It creates a “regular order” process by which no proposed transaction could appear to disappear temporarily or permanently from the security-review process and establishing a clear process by which any potential minor security issues could be addressed along with a clear and permanent process of post-transaction monitoring. The bill seeks to increase Administration accountability, make it far easier for Congress to perform its necessary oversight of the CFIUS process, better protect classified and proprietary business information involved in the examination process—all without creating any unnecessary new barriers to normal investment in the United States. The bill envisions a process in which a threat analysis would be conducted by the Director of National Intelligence (DNI)—who would not be a member of CFIUS and who would play no policy role—and decisions made in such a way that no individual CFIUS member’s concerns might be masked or ignored. Additionally, the CFIUS chairman and vice-chairman (or their deputies) are both required to sign all CFIUS decisions, ensuring that while the review or investigation process remains objective, there is a clear and direct senior level responsibility for CFIUS decisions. The Committee specifically requires that the DNI make requests for information from the Office of Foreign Assets control and the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, to determine any terrorism, sanction or financial crime nexus with funding sources or principals in a transaction, and requires the DNI to affirmatively check with all national intelligence sources, particularly the Defense Intelligence Agency, and incorporate any pertinent information from them in his report to CFIUS.

In making the changes, the legislation also strengthens the President's capacity to refuse, suspend, modify or reverse any transaction if a written notice of such transaction is not filed with CFIUS or if there is an intentional material omission or falsehood in any filing with the CFIUS or an intentional material breach in any post-transaction mitigation agreement, and establishes a formal requirement that all filings with CFIUS must be complete and accurate to the best of the filing party's ability. Thus, the Committee establishes a clear signal that all violations of such notice certification should be considered in the context of Title 18, Section 1001, and all intentional breaches or misstatements could also lead to severe modification or unwinding of any transaction at any time.

H.R. 5337 makes clear that national security encompasses threats to critical U.S. infrastructure, including energy-related infrastructure. The Committee expects that acquisitions of U.S. energy companies or assets by foreign governments or companies controlled by foreign governments will be reviewed closely for their national security impact. If such acquisitions raise legitimate concerns about threats to U.S. national security, appropriate protections as set forth in the statute should be instituted including potentially the prohibition of the transaction.

The Committee expects, however, that such determinations will be objective, based upon criteria that are reasonably related to protecting the security of the United States while encouraging and respecting the need for free flows of investment globally and the international agreements that govern those flows. The Committee notes that these CFIUS procedures stand in stark contrast to actions taken by some foreign governments, where expropriations of assets, often in the energy sector, have occurred arbitrarily, without justification, and without recompense for U.S. investors. The Committee rejects in the strongest possible terms any suggestion that CFIUS reforms contained in H.R. 5337 represent a mistreatment of foreign capital and that there is equivalence between CFIUS reform efforts and the actions of foreign governments that violate international agreements on the treatment of foreign capital. The Committee will continue in its longstanding efforts to seek to ensure that U.S. investors are treated fairly in foreign markets and that foreign governments honor their commitments in international agreements.

The Committee expects that CFIUS will consider all aspects of a covered transaction to determine if the investment threatens to impair national security. The participation by foreign governments in the boycott of vital allies of the United States, such as Israel, or the failure of foreign governments to ban groups the Department of State designates as foreign terrorist organizations, may have an impact on U.S. national security, and such factors should be considered when companies that are owned or controlled by such a government seek to acquire or invest in a U.S. company, particularly one involved in critical defense production infrastructure. The Committee believes that affirmative requests by the Director of National Intelligence for information from the Treasury Department's Office of Foreign Assets Control, as required by this Act for every covered transaction, will make clear in the future such connections in any investment proposals. However, the committee is concerned about a general lack of knowledge about the investments in the United States by state-owned or state-controlled companies that are from governments that participate in the boycott of Israel or that decline to ban terrorist organizations. The Committee therefore requires in this Act that CFIUS report within six months on all such investments, with such report also to include any recommendations from CFIUS members on how the government should consider and treat any future proposed investment in the United States by such governments or persons.

Hon. MICHAEL G. OXLEY,
Chairman, Committee on Financial Services,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 5337, the National Security Foreign Investment Reform and Strengthened Transparency Act of 2006.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Matthew Pickford.

Sincerely,

DONALD B. MARRON,
Acting Director.

Enclosure.

H.R. 5337—National Security Foreign Investment Reform and Strengthened Transparency Act of 2006

Summary: H.R. 5337 would amend the Defense Production Act of 1950 to establish in law the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS). The committee would consist of at least 12 members (including six cabinet secretaries). In addition, the legislation would authorize the appropriation of $10 million annually over the 2007–2010 period for the Secretary of the Treasury to pay for activities of the committee that are conducted by the Department of the Treasury.

Assuming appropriation of the authorized amounts, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 5337 would cost $40 million over the 2007–2011 period. In addition, CBO expects that complying with the bill's provisions would increase the administrative expenses of some federal agencies, but because of the confidential nature of the CFIUS review process, the number of agencies involved, and the confidential information needed to prepare an estimate for some provisions of the legislation, CBO cannot determine a precise estimate of the likely total costs of this bill. Enacting the bill would not affect direct spending or revenues.

H.R. 5337 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 5337 is shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 800 (general government).

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—
	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION
Authorization level ¹	10	10	10	10	0
Estimated outlays	9	10	10	10	1

Basis of estimate: For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 5337 will be enacted by the end of fiscal year 2006. We assume that the necessary amounts will be appropriated for each year and that outlays will occur at historical rates for similar programs.

H.R. 5337 would establish in law the CFIUS. Under the bill, the committee would consist of at least 12 permanent members including the Secretaries of the Departments of Treasury, State, Defense, Commerce, and Homeland Security; as well as the Attorney General, Director of the Office of Management and Budget, the United States Trade Representative, the Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, the Director of the National Economic Council, the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy; and the President's Assistant for National Security Affairs. The committee would coordinate reviews of foreign investment in the United States that involves national security or critical infrastructure in the United States. The legislation would formalize and expand this review and investigation process.

The legislation also would authorize the appropriation of $10 million annually over the 2007–2010 period for the operations of the committee. Assuming the appropriation of the authorized amounts, CBO estimates that the provision would cost $40 million over the 2007–2011 period.

In addition, CBO expects that complying with the bill's provisions would increase the administrative expenses of federal agencies that are represented on the committee, but because of the confidential nature of the CFIUS review process, the number of agencies involved, and the confidential information needed to prepare an estimate for some provisions of the legislation, CBO cannot determine a precise estimate of the likely total costs of this bill. Additional costs over the 2007–2011 period, however, would generally come from agencies' salary and expense budgets which are subject to annual appropriation. Such costs would probably total at least a few million dollars per year.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: H.R. 5337 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

Previous CBO estimate: On May 3, 2006, CBO transmitted a cost estimate for the Foreign Investment and National Security Act of 2006, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs on March 30, 2006. The two pieces of legislation are both concerned with CFIUS but have some different provisions. H.R. 5337 would authorize the appropriation of $10 million annually over the 2007–2010 period while the legislation approved by the Senate committee would not authorize a specific amount to be appropriated.

Estimate prepared by: Federal costs: Matthew Pickford; impact on state, local, and tribal governments: Sarah Puro; impact on the private sector: Paige Piper/Bach.

Estimate approved by: Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

FEDERAL MANDATES STATEMENT

The Committee adopts as its own the estimate of Federal mandates prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office pursuant to section 423 of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE STATEMENT

No advisory committees within the meaning of section 5(b) of the Federal Advisory Committee Act were created by this legislation.

CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY STATEMENT

Pursuant to clause 3(d)(1) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee finds that the Constitutional Authority of Congress to enact this legislation is provided by Article 1, section 8, clause 1 (relating to the general welfare of the United States) and clause 3 (relating to the power to regulate interstate commerce).

APPLICABILITY TO LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

The Committee finds that the legislation does not relate to the terms and conditions of employment or access to public services or accommodations within the meaning of section 102(b)(3) of the Congressional Accountability Act.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF THE LEGISLATION

Section 1.—This section establishes the short title of the bill as the “National Security Foreign Investment Reform and Strengthening Transparency Act of 2006.”

Section 2.—This section amends Section 721 of the Defense Production Act of 1950 to reform and clarify the way acquisitions of United States companies by foreign companies are analyzed for their effect on national security.

Subsection (a) defines a number of terms used often in the bill: Committee, control, covered transaction, foreign government-controlled transaction. It also clarifies that for the purposes of Section 721, “national security” will be construed to include “homeland security” including its application to critical infrastructure.

Subsection (b) establishes the method by which covered transactions are reviewed and investigated by the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States to determine if they threaten to impair United States national security; establishes that any transaction involving a foreign government-controlled company must undergo an “investigation” by CFIUS; establishes the process for notifying CFIUS of a proposed transaction and a procedure for treating transactions that are withdrawn from the CFIUS process and later re-submits notice; establishes a procedure for the President to unilaterally initiate a review of a transaction in the case of submission of false or misleading information to CFIUS or intentional material breach of mitigation agreements; makes clear that national security reviews of transactions take no longer than 30 days and, if necessary, investigations that follow reviews take no longer than 45 days unless 2/3 of the members of CFIUS vote to extend, and then by no longer than 45 days; describes reasons for a transaction to undergo an investigation; establishes that no review or investigation is complete until the chairman and vice chairman of CFIUS sign the resulting reports; requires that any investigation must be approved by a majority of CFIUS members in a roll call vote; specifies that in the case of a dissenting vote by any CFIUS member, the decision on a foreign government-controlled transaction must be made by the President; and specifies that the Director of National Intelligence must conduct an analysis of each transaction.

Section 3.—This section formally establishes the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States; establishes its membership; specifies that the Secretary of the Treasury shall be the chairman and the Secretary of Homeland Security the vice chair; allows the temporary addition of non-member Executive Branch agencies; establishes guidelines for meeting and gathering information; and authorizes the appropriation of $10 million annually for the operation of the Committee.

Section 4.—This section establishes that the list of factors in Section 721 that currently “may” be considered when reviewing or investigating any transaction, instead “must” all be considered, and adds as new factors whether a transaction is a foreign government-controlled transaction and whether a transaction has a security-related impact on critical infrastructure in the United States.

Section 5.—This section makes clear that while submitting notice to CFIUS remains voluntary, if the United States must take action to dissolve, suspend or modify a transaction, the U.S. is not liable for any losses or other expenses by any party to a completed transaction if a notice of such transaction was not filed with the CFIUS prior to completion of the transaction.

Section 6.—This section establishes that the CFIUS may enter into agreements with parties to a transaction to mitigate any threats to national security; establishes that the CFIUS shall name an appropriate lead Federal agency to monitor compliance with such agreements, negotiate any changes in such agreements and report back to the CFIUS on compliance and modifications; and establishes a method of tracking transactions that are withdrawn from the review or investigation process as well as a process for setting interim protections on such transactions to address specific national security concerns.

Section 7.—This section establishes a broad new system for reporting information on CFIUS activities to Congress so that it may conduct appropriate oversight of the CFIUS. This includes reports to Congress within 5 days after the final action in an investigation; a mechanism for Congress to request a detailed, classified briefing on a transaction; and affirmative protections for proprietary business information. The CFIUS is required to file semi-annual reports with Congress that contain information on transactions handled by the CFIUS, cumulative and trend analysis of transactions by business sector and country of origin, information on security and mitigation agreements, folds into the semi-annual reporting the contents of the previously required quadrennial reporting on foreign industrial espionage in the U.S. and on foreign attempts to control a particular U.S. business or industrial sector, and requires a report on investments in the U.S. by countries that do not ban foreign terrorist organizations and by countries that support the boycott of Israel. The quadrennial report is repealed as redundant.

Section 8.—This section makes clear that parties to a transaction must certify that the information they file with CFIUS is complete and correct.

Section 9.—This section directs the President to cause regulations to be issued to carry out the requirements of Section 721, and specifies that to the extent possible they minimize paperwork burden and coordinate new reporting requirements with existing ones.

Section 10.—This section clarifies that no portion of the bill should be construed as affecting or altering other existing law or regulation.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE BILL, AS REPORTED

In compliance with clause 3(e) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, changes in existing law made by the bill, as reported, are shown as follows (existing law proposed to be omitted is enclosed in black brackets, new matter is printed in italic, existing law in which no change is proposed is shown in roman):

(B) ADDITIONAL ACTIONS REQUIRED IN CERTAIN CASES.—In the case of an investigation under paragraph (2) of any foreign government-controlled transaction, an investigation shall not be treated as final or complete until the findings and report resulting from such investigation—

(i) are approved by a majority of the members of the Committee in a roll call vote; and

(ii) in the case of any roll call vote pursuant to clause (i) in which there is at least 1 vote by a Committee member against approving a foreign government-controlled transaction, are signed by the President (in addition to the Chairperson and the Vice Chairperson of the Committee under subparagraph (A)).
