2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

1 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

2 Congress finds the following:

3 (1) People in the United States spend approxi-
 4 mately 90 percent of their time indoors, where 5 5,700,000 households live with moderate or severe 6 housing conditions, including heating, plumbing, and 7 electrical problems, and 23,000,000 households face
 8 significant lead-based paint hazards.

9 (2) Housing-related health hazards can often be 10 traced back to shared causes, including moisture,
 11 ventilation, comfort, pest, contaminant, and struc-
 12 tural issues, but further research is necessary in

1 order to definitively understand key relationships be-
2 tween the shared causes, housing-related health haz-
3 ards, and resident health.

4 (3) Since many hazards have interrelated
5 causes and share common solutions, the traditional 6 approach of identifying and remedying housing-re-
7 lated health hazards one-by-one is likely not cost ef-
8 fective or sufficiently health-protective.

9 (4) Evidence-based, cost-effective, practical, and 10 widely accessible methods for the assessment and 11 control of housing-related health hazards are nec-
12 essary in order to prevent housing-related injuries
13 and illnesses, including cancer, carbon monoxide poi-
14 soning, burns, falls, rodent bites, childhood lead poi-
15 soning, and asthma.

16 (5) Sustainable building features, including en-
17 ergy efficiency measures, are increasingly popular,
18 and are generally presumed to have beneficial effects
19 on occupant health. However, the health effects of 20 such features need to be evaluated in a comprehen-
21 sive and timely manner, lest the housing in this 22 country unintentionally revert to the conditions of 23 excessive building tightness and lack of sufficient
24 ventilation characteristic of the 1970s.

1 (6) Data collection on housing conditions that
2 could affect occupant health, and on health out-
3 comes that could be related to housing conditions, is 4 scattered and insufficient to meet current and future
5 research needs for affordable, healthy housing. A co-
6 ordinated, multidata source system is necessary to 7 reduce duplication of Federal efforts, and to ensure 8 sufficient data collection of both the housing condi-
9 tions and the health problems that persist in the ex-
10 isting housing stock of the Nation.

11 (7) Responsibilities related to health hazards in 12 housing are not clearly delineated among Federal 13 agencies. Categorical housing, health, energy assist-
14 ance, and environmental programs are narrowly de-
15 fined and often ignore opportunities to address mul-
16 tiple hazards simultaneously. Enabling Federal pro-
17 grams to embrace a comprehensive healthy housing
18 approach will require removing unnecessary Federal 19 statutory and regulatory barriers, and creating in-
20 centives to advance the complementary goals of envi-
21 ronmental health, energy conservation, and housing
22 availability in relevant programs.

23 (8) Personnel who visit homes to provide serv-
24 ices or perform other work (such as inspectors,
25 emergency medical technicians, home visitors, hous-

1 ing rehabilitation, construction and maintenance
2 workers, and others) can contribute to occupant
3 health by presenting and applying healthy housing
4 practices. Cost-effective training and outreach is 5 needed to equip such personnel with current knowl-
6 edge about delivering and maintaining healthy hous-
7 ing.

8 (9) Housing-related health hazards are often
9 complex, with causes and solutions often not readily
10 or immediately recognized by residents, property
11 owners, or the general public. In the 2007 American
12 Housing Survey, significant numbers of residents ex-
13 pressed the highest level of satisfaction with their 14 homes, including 17 percent of residents in homes
15 with severe physical problems and 18 percent of resi-
16 dents in homes with moderate physical problems.
17 National awareness and local outreach programs are 18 needed to encourage the public to seek and expect
19 healthy housing, to think about housing hazards
20 more comprehensively, to recognize problems, and to 21 address them in a preventative, effective, and low-
22 cost manner.

23 SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

24 In this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

1 (1) HOUSING.—The term “housing” means any
2 form of residence, including rental housing, home-
3 ownership, group home, or supportive housing ar-
4 rangement.

5 (2) HEALTHY HOUSING.—The term “healthy
6 housing” means housing that is designed, con-
7 structed, rehabilitated, and maintained in a manner
8 that supports the health of the occupants of such 9 housing.

10 (3) HOUSING-RELATED HEALTH HAZARD.—The 11 term “housing-related health hazard” means any bi-12 ological, physical, or chemical source of exposure or 13 condition either in, or immediately adjacent to, hous-
14 ing, that can adversely affect human health.

13 ways of exposure, and human health effects that re-
14 sult from indoor exposure to biological, physical, and 15 chemical housing-related health hazards, including

17 mon residential and garden pesticides, and factors
18 that sensitize individuals to asthma.
