

to do is take the nuclear power plants—that's 20 percent of our electric generation in America—take the 20 percent and double it. So we have 40 percent of our electric coming out of nuclear. If you do that, you would get rid of all the CO<sub>2</sub> from every passenger car in the country. And yet we have come up with this complicated, tremendously intrusive, huge tax increase, when you could just simply say in a page or two, just double the number of nuclear.

Now, here what you have got is, you have got all this folderol about health care, we have got to take it over, the government has got to do all this stuff, and you have got 4 percent of people who are uninsured. It just seems like, it seems like we have made our conclusion ahead of time that we want our government to run everything, and our excuse is that little tiny 4 percent wedge. Even I like cherry pie. If all I got was 4 percent, it isn't worth it. It just plain isn't worth it. That's the obvious conclusion of your chart.

And I appreciate you just taking us into the world of free enterprise and what's really going on with our Federal Government. I appreciate your leadership. The gentleman from Iowa is really a saint, and we are thankful to have some good old midwestern common-sense values here on the floor of the U.S. Congress.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Let me conclude. I reflect upon a pair of auto mechanics that run a repair shop in my hometown of Kiron called Sandberg Brothers. They have a sign behind their counter that says, "Complicated, difficult, technical nearly impossible jobs are our specialty. Simple jobs are beyond our comprehension."

I think that's what we have here. We have taken a simple job and turned it into a complicated, technical, difficult problem. And I think it falls back to the wisdom of Congressman Tom COLE, who said one day that highly intelligent people will always overcomplicate things. If they didn't, there wouldn't be any particular advantage to being highly intelligent.
