The House met at noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Moran of Virginia).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC.
December 23, 2009.

I hereby appoint the Honorable James P. Moran to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

Nancy Pelosi,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER
The Reverend Gene Hemrick, Washington Theological Union, Washington, D.C., offered the following prayer:

In the Old Testament, the Canticle of the prophet Daniel rings with the exaltation of God’s Mother Nature:

Cold and Chill bless the Lord
Ice and Snow bless the Lord
Nights and Days bless the Lord
Light and Darkness bless the Lord
Lightning and Clouds bless the Lord

O Lord, the recent snowstorm in our Nation’s capital reminds us of this canticle and of the wise means You employ in maintaining the order and rhythms of nature with which You blessed this world.

Bless this Congress with the heavenly wisdom that is needed to be prudent stewards of Your ecological systems. Endow it with Your divine counsel and understanding as it seeks the most efficient and effective means for preserving their God-given order and balance. Amen.

THE JOURNAL
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

NOTICE
If the 111th Congress, 1st Session, adjourns sine die on or before December 26, 2009, a final issue of the Congressional Record for the 111th Congress, 1st Session, will be published on Thursday, December 31, 2009, to permit Members to insert statements.

All material for insertion must be signed by the Member and delivered to the respective offices of the Official Reporters of Debates (Room HT–59 or S–123 of the Capitol), Monday through Friday, between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. through Wednesday, December 30. The final issue will be dated Thursday, December 31, 2009, and will be delivered on Monday, January 4, 2010.

None of the material printed in the final issue of the Congressional Record may contain subject matter, or relate to any event, that occurred after the sine die date.

Senators’ statements should also be formatted according to the instructions at http://webster/secretary/congress_record.pdf, and submitted electronically, either on a disk to accompany the signed statement, or by e-mail to the Official Reporters of Debates at “Record@Sec.Senate.gov”.

Members of the House of Representatives’ statements may also be submitted electronically by e-mail, to accompany the signed statement, and formatted according to the instructions for the Extensions of Remarks template at http://clerk.house.gov/forms. The Official Reporters will transmit to GPO the template formatted electronic file only after receipt of, and authentication with, the hard copy, and signed manuscript. Deliver statements to the Official Reporters in Room HT–59.

Members of Congress desiring to purchase reprints of material submitted for inclusion in the Congressional Record may do so by contacting the Office of Congressional Publishing Services, at the Government Printing Office, on 512–0224, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. daily.

By order of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Charles E. Schumer, Chairman.

☐ This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., ☐ 1407 is 2:07 p.m.
Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.
PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.
The SPEAKER pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:
I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE HON. JOHN B. LARSON, CHAIRMAN, DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Honorable John B. Larson, Chairman, Democratic Caucus:

DEMETRICAL CAUCUS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Washington, DC; December 23, 2009.
Dear Madam Chair: This is to notify you that Representative Parker Griffith of Alabama has resigned as a Member of the Democratic Caucus.
Sincerely,
John B. Larson, Chairman.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE SPEAKER
The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

Hon. Bart Gordon, Chairman, Committee on Science and Technology, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.
Dear Mr. Chair: This is to advise you that Representative Parker Griffith's election to the Committee on Science and Technology has been automatically vacated pursuant to clause 5(b) of rule X effective today.
Best regards,
Nancy Pelosi, Speaker of the House.

ADJOURNMENT
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 11(b) of House Resolution 976, the House shall stand adjourned until 10 a.m. on Saturday, December 26, 2009, unless the conditions specified in section 11(c) of that resolution have been met, in which case the House shall stand adjourned sine die pursuant to House Concurrent Resolution 223.
Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 4 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.
Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

5190. A letter from the Assistant to the Board, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, transmitting the System's final rule — Truth in Lending [Regulation Z; Docket No. R11371] received December 1, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Financial Services.
5191. A letter from the Deputy Assistant Administrator For Regulatory Programs, NMFS, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration's final rule — Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Central Gulf of Alaska Rockfish Program; Amendment 85 [Docket No.: 0811204390-91372-03] (RIN: 0648-AX53) received December 1, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Natural Resources.
5192. A letter from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries, NMFS, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administrator's final rule — Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Reallocation of Pacific cod in the Bering Sea and Aleutian Islands Management Area [Docket No.: 0801204351-9087-02] (RIN: 0648-X569) received December 1, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Natural Resources.
5193. A letter from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries, NMFS, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administrator's final rule — Fisheries of the United States Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Fisheries of the Arctic Management Area; Bering Sea Subareas [Docket No.: 0801204390-91238-03] (RIN: 0648-AX53) received December 1, 2009, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Natural Resources.
The Senate met at 9:45 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Tom Udall, a Senator from the State of New Mexico.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, the source of peace on Earth, good will toward humanity, we feel delight because You are sovereign, causing all things to work together for good to those who love You, who are called according to Your purpose.

Help our lawmakers to see that each difficulty is an opportunity to see You work and that in Your time You will bring them to a place of abundance. May they face waiting tasks and challenges with Your gifts of understanding, kindness, civility, and self-control. Lord, astound them with new insight and fresh vision they could not conceive without Your blessings. Give them the faith to believe that if they listen to You, You will give them answers they cannot find by themselves. We pray in Your powerful Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The Honorable Tom Udall led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD).

The assistant legislative clerk read the following letter:

NOTICE
If the 111th Congress, 1st Session, adjourns sine die on or before December 26, 2009, a final issue of the Congressional Record for the 111th Congress, 1st Session, will be published on Thursday, December 31, 2009, to permit Members to insert statements.

All material for insertion must be signed by the Member and delivered to the respective offices of the Official Reporters of Debates (Room HT–59 or S–123 of the Capitol), Monday through Friday, between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. through Wednesday, December 30. The final issue will be dated Thursday, December 31, 2009, and will be delivered on Monday, January 4, 2010.

None of the material printed in the final issue of the Congressional Record may contain subject matter, or relate to any event, that occurred after the sine die date.

Senators’ statements should also be formatted according to the instructions at http://webster/secretary/cong_record.pdf, and submitted electronically, either on a disk to accompany the signed statement, or by e-mail to the Official Reporters of Debates at “Record@Sec.Senate.gov”.

Members of the House of Representatives’ statements may also be submitted electronically by e-mail, to accompany the signed statement, and formatted according to the instructions for the Extensions of Remarks template at http://clerk.house.gov/forms. The Official Reporters will transmit to GPO the template formatted electronic file only after receipt of, and authentication with, the hard copy, and signed manuscript. Deliver statements to the Official Reporters in Room HT–59.

Members of Congress desiring to purchase reprints of material submitted for inclusion in the Congressional Record may do so by contacting the Office of Congressional Publishing Services, at the Government Printing Office, on 512–0224, between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. daily.

By order of the Joint Committee on Printing.

CHARLES E. SCHUMER, Chairman.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, following leader remarks, the Senate will resume consideration of the health reform legislation. The time until 10 a.m. is equally divided between the two leaders or their designees. From 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. today, there will be 1-hour alternating blocks of time, with the majority controlling the first hour. The time between 2 p.m. and 2:13 p.m. will be equally divided and controlled between the two leaders, with the majority leader controlling the final half. The Senate will then proceed to a series of five or six rollcall votes in relation to the health care bill. I note the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I note the absence of a quorum. No one is here.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

SERVICE MEMBERS HOME OWNERSHIP TAX ACT OF 2009

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of H.R. 3590, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 3590) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to modify the first-time homebuyers credit in the case of members of the Armed Forces and certain other Federal employees, and for other purposes.

Pending:
Reid amendment No. 2786, in the nature of a substitute.

Reid (for HARKIN) amendment No. 2387 (to amendment No. 2786), to provide for the establishment of Offices of Minority Health.

Reid amendment No. 3392 (to amendment No. 2678), to change the effective date.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the time until 10 a.m. will be equally divided between the two leaders.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I just received this morning—and I am sure it is on the CBO Web site, the Congressional Budget Office Web site—an analysis of the health care bill we are considering. It is actually quite crystal-clear and confirms what CMS has told us; that is, the proponents of the legislation before us have been double-counting—double-counting—the savings from Medicare, and as a result, it cannot be said that this bill is going to create a surplus in the Treasury but, in fact, will put us in a deficit.

I think every Member of this body needs to read this communication before they cast their vote. I know a lot of Members of the Senate who voted for the bill did so under the belief that it would be deficit neutral. They have said so publicly. The President has repeatedly stated—and he did to the Joint Session of Congress—that not one dime will be added to the national debt, and that is not so.

I will reveal what we were told by CBO this morning in their report. This is what the CBO said to us, and it is very simple. It is actually stunning that we have been confused about this issue when we are talking about hundreds of billions of dollars. It is absolutely an amazing event that the U.S. Congress can’t get its act together when we are talking about hundreds of billions of dollars.

They say this:

The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund:

Talking about Medicare—

under the PPACA—

That is the health care bill we are considering—would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation or on other programs.

That is exactly what this bill proposes to do.

Just 2 days ago at this press conference, the President said:

Medicare will be stronger and its solvency extended by nearly a decade.

Then he goes on to say this:

The Congressional Budget Office now reports that this bill will reduce our deficit by $32 billion over the first decade.

That is counting the money twice. It is actually double-counting. And I am sure it is on the CBO Web site, the Congressional Budget Office Web site—an analysis of the health care bill we are considering. It is actually quite crystal-clear and confirms what CMS has told us; that is, the proponents of the legislation before us have been double-counting—double-counting—the savings from Medicare, and as a result, it cannot be said that this bill is going to create a surplus in the Treasury but, in fact, will put us in a deficit.

I think every Member of this body needs to read this communication before they cast their vote. I know a lot of Members of the Senate who voted for the bill did so under the belief that it would be deficit neutral. They have said so publicly. The President has repeatedly stated—and he did to the Joint Session of Congress—that not one dime will be added to the national debt, and that is not so.

I will reveal what we were told by CBO this morning in their report. This is what the CBO said to us, and it is very simple. It is actually stunning that we have been confused about this issue when we are talking about hundreds of billions of dollars. It is absolutely an amazing event that the U.S. Congress can’t get its act together when we are talking about hundreds of billions of dollars.

They say this:

The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund:

Talking about Medicare—

under the PPACA—

That is the health care bill we are considering—

would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation or on other programs.

That is exactly what this bill proposes to do.

Just 2 days ago at this press conference, the President said:

Medicare will be stronger and its solvency extended by nearly a decade.

Then he goes on to say this:

The Congressional Budget Office now reports that this bill will reduce our deficit by $32 billion over the first decade.

That is counting the money twice. It cannot be done. That is wrong, and it must not be allowed to occur.
leader moved to proceed to the health care reform bill before us today. And it has been more than 2 months since the Finance Committee reported its bill, a great deal of which is reflected in the bill before us today.

It has been 7 months since the Finance Committee publicly posted the 564 amendments that Senators filed for consideration in the committee.

It has been 7 months since the Finance Committee convened three bipartisan roundtable discussions on each of the three major areas of reform: delivery system reform, insurance coverage, and options for financing reform.

It has been 7 months since the Finance Committee issued three bipartisan policy papers detailing the options from which the committee chose to craft its bill.

It has been 18 months since the Finance Committee convened a bipartisan, day-long health care summit at the Library of Congress.

It has been 19 months since the Finance Committee began holding open hearings to prepare for the bill before us today.

It has been more than 15 long years since the last time that the Senate took on this fight to enact comprehensive health care reform.

It has been 38 years since our late Colleague, Ted Kennedy, proposed a plan to extend health insurance coverage to all.

It has been 44 years since Congress created Medicare, providing health care for America’s seniors, and Medicaid, providing health care for the poorest among us.

It has been 64 years since President Harry Truman asked the Congress to enact a national insurance program “to assure the right to adequate medical care and protection from the economic fears of sickness.”

It has been 23 years since President Theodore Roosevelt ran on a platform that called for “the protection of home life against the hazards of sickness... through the adoption of a system of social insurance adapted to American use.”

And it is now only hours until this Senate will pass meaningful health care reform.

It will not be long now until the law will prohibit insurance companies from canceling insurance policies when people get sick.

It will not be long now until people with preexisting conditions will have access to health care.

It will not be long now until the law will prohibit insurance companies from imposing lifetime or annual limits on benefits.

It will not be long now until parents will be able to include their children up to age 26 on their insurance policies.

It will not be long now until the law will require insurance companies to report on the share of premium dollars that goes to pay medical care, and the share that doesn’t.

It will not be long now until consumers will be able to shop for quality insurance in new Internet Web sites, where insurance companies will compete for their business.

It will not be too long now until millions of uninsured Americans will be able to buy coverage through new exchanges with tax credits to help make it affordable.

It will not be too long now until the law will prohibit insurance companies from discriminating against women in setting premiums.

It will not be too long now until the law will limit insurance companies in how much more they can charge when people get older.

It will not be too long now until more than 30 million Americans who otherwise would not have health care coverage will finally get that peace of mind.

It will not be too long now until more than 30 million Americans will have a better chance to live longer, healthier, less pain-ridden lives.

It will not be too long now until more than 30 million Americans will be able to share their family Christmas free of the fears of medical bankruptcy.

Mr. President, it will not be long now. It has been a long time coming.

I thank God that I have lived to see this day. I thank God for sustaining us and for enabling us to reach this time. Let us now, at long last, pass this historic legislation.

Mr. President, I yield 20 minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, first, it will not be long now until we achieve universal health care coverage affordable for all Americans. I thank Senator BAUCUS for making this moment possible. I know how hard he has worked for many weeks, so many months, so that we could bring very different views together but all focused on the goal of achieving affordable health care for every American.

Senator BAUCUS never lost sight of that goal. As a result, we are now just hours away from the last procedural hurdle until we will have a chance in the Senate to vote on a bill that for the 23 years I have been in Congress I have told the people of the Third Congressional District and the people of Maryland that I am going to fight to change our health care system so that every American has access to affordable, quality health care.

We are going to take a giant step forward to reaching that goal in the legislation we have before us today. Through the Chair, I thank Senator BAUCUS very much for his extraordinary patience and leadership to bring us to this moment.

Mr. President, there is a lot of discussion on many sides as to what the facts of the bill are. I am going to use the CBO because that is what we agreed to. That is the objective scorekeeper. They are not partisan. Everybody agrees to that.

The CBO tells us that for the under-65 group we are going to increase the number of insured from 83 percent to 94 percent. For all Americans, we are going to increase the number of insured by health insurance. That is universal. We are going to have a framework so that at long last America joins every other industrialized nation in the world with a health care system where everyone is included.

None of this is a moral issue. It is an issue of whether health care is a privilege or a right. I believe the values of America teach us that health care should be a right for all Americans.

The bill we will be voting on will take us very much in the direction of achieving that goal. Today in America too many people fall through the cracks. Too many families are literally destroyed because they cannot afford health care. Therefore, they don’t get the tests they need, perhaps a disease that could have been caught early or prevented is lost, and a person has to go through tremendous health care treatment; perhaps even losing their life.

We have too many families go through bankruptcy because they cannot afford the health care they need. We see too many literally cutting their prescription pills in half in the hopes of being able to keep their medicine for a longer period of time. These folks cannot afford it, knowing full well they are compromising their health.

I have mentioned the case of Deamonte Driver which, to me, is representative of so many tragedies in our community that could be avoided. Deamonte Driver, a 12-year-old in Prince George’s County, MD, very close to here, had a tooth ache. His mom tried to get him to a dentist, but he had no insurance, and they couldn’t find a dentist. They went to a social worker and made dozens of calls and still couldn’t find a dentist. Deamonte was complaining of severe headaches. After weeks of not being able to get to a dentist, he went to the emergency room—the only option that was still available. They found out the tooth had become abscessed, which went into his brain. He had emergency surgery. He lost his life because our health care system didn’t provide access to affordable, quality care for all Americans.

Mr. President, that is about to change. I am proud to be a part of it. I have been asked by many in recent days as to what is in it for the people of Maryland. The people of Maryland are going to get a national health care system that makes a lot more sense, a rational system for care in America. With the current system, too many people are being left out. Small employers have a hard time finding affordable products.

I have gotten many letters from constituents that I have read. I must tell you about the letter I received from a small business owner in Montgomery...
County. She and her husband had to take out two separate policies to cover their family of four. The private insurance companies discriminated and said each has preexisting conditions, and the only way to have full coverage is to have separate plans with two separate deductibles—which the family cannot afford—two separate premiums that the family cannot afford.

There is not competition to provide coverage to small businesses in America. Small businesses in Maryland want to have the opportunity to cover their employees, and they know competition will work, and this bill provides for a lot more competition.

This bill will help those who are losing coverage today. Many people in Maryland are losing their health care coverage every day. Hundreds lose their health insurance in my State every day. We live in the wealthiest nation in the world, and Maryland is the wealthiest State, and we are still losing people today.

Our Medicare beneficiaries are finding their program under attack. They want to have the stability of knowing Medicare will be there not just this year but for decades to come. This bill starts to reform Medicare by reforming health care so we can sustain it and fill in the prescription drug doughnut hole under which so many seniors are finding it very difficult to afford their medicine.

For the people of Maryland, this bill will provide a rational way in which they can maintain their existing coverage, find it more affordable, and certainly sustain coverage for our Medicare population and provide competition for small business owners to find affordable health care. It ought to bring down health care costs. Marylanders are very interested in that.

Again, let me use the CBO, the objective scorekeeper. They say for the overwhelming majority of Americans, their health premiums will go down because health care costs are coming down. This legislation invests in prevention and wellness. We know prevention and wellness works. We know if you can detect a disease early, you cannot only save lives, but you can save health care costs because the preventive services only cost a couple hundred dollars, and an operation you can avoid is tens of thousands of dollars. And early detection works. Management of diseases works.

Most of our health care costs in America are spent on the leading diseases such as cardiac care and diabetes. We know we spend a lot of money, but we can manage those diseases more effectively, and this bill takes us down that path. We can save money by investing in health information technology. Think about that—about how much paper we receive every year from our health care system. Think about our current records and how those could be used to help us each manage our own health care and take more responsibility. We are not doing that today. We know that we can use a card to go anywhere in the world, and they can track our financial records. But for health care, that is not true today.

By investing in health information technology, we can reduce a significant amount of wasted costs in the health care system and better manage each of our own health care needs. That is what this bill does.

This bill will cover 31 million more Americans. That is not what I am saying as a Democratic Senator from Maryland; that is what the CBO is saying this bill will achieve—31 million more Americans that will not have to go to an emergency room to get their primary care needs met.

Think about how much it costs each one of us when that person whose only option is to go to an emergency room, how much that costs us. You see, many of those individuals cannot afford those hospital charges, so it becomes uncompensated care. It is added to the rates that I pay hospital and I pay those of us who have health insurance.

The people in Maryland who have health insurance have a hidden tax of $1,100 every year. It is not only a waste of money that we have to pay. It is an efficiency that we cannot work that out. There should be facilities available so that everybody can get care in a much more cost-effective way. This bill moves us toward those goals. It provides competition so we can bring down the cost of health insurance through the local exchanges.

Another provision in the bill that I am very excited about is that we can cross State lines for competition, so if you are an employer in Maryland and you hire workers in Maryland and Virginia and Pennsylvania, you are able to get the regional and national competition so you have more choice on the health insurance companies. That will also bring down costs but also increase quality, which is what we are trying to do.

For Marylanders, this bill is important. This bill will help reduce the Federal deficit. How many of us have talked about that? I know that people who watch us say: Gee, I hear a Republican Senator and then a Democratic Senator; is this the same bill they are talking about?

Let’s talk about the Congressional Budget Office, the objective scorekeeper and the Congressional Budget Office says this bill will reduce the Federal deficit by $132 billion—billions, that is a B, billion. That is quite an accomplishment when you realize that to get everyone covered, the Federal Government is providing subsidies which will cost us some additional investments. To make sure small businesses can afford it, we provide tax credits. That costs revenues—people insured, they have tax preferences. Yet the Congressional Budget Office has confirmed that this bill brings down the deficit by $132 billion in the first 10 years.

Let’s look at the second 10 years because a lot of us want to look at the long-term impact. The Congressional Budget Office, the objective scorekeepers, tell us it will reduce the deficit by one-half of one percent of the GDP or about $1.3 trillion. It is quite an accomplishment to get everybody covered. We have the stability of knowing that confirmed by the Congressional Budget Office. That helps the people of Maryland, and that is why the people of Maryland benefit from this bill, as do the citizens of every State in the Nation.

I wish to talk about protecting consumers. Senator Baucus talked about this. I wish to make sure people understand what is involved. Senator Baucus mentioned a lot of the provisions that are in the bill about preexisting conditions and pediatrics for children take effect immediately, the caps we bring in, the lifetime caps we deal with covering children under the age of 26, the reinsurance insurance—55 to 64-year-olds, the loss ratios that were added to the bill by the managers’ amendment to make sure insurance companies are using your premium dollar to pay for benefits, the independent review of a decision made by an insurance company whether to cover a charge.

But I wish to talk about the Patients’ Bill of Rights because I think the people of this Nation would be surprised to find out we have not enacted the Patients’ Bill of Rights.

It was 1997 when we started talking about a Patients’ Bill of Rights, about enacting it so we had national protection against the arbitrary practices of private insurance companies. In 1998, President Clinton, by Executive order, applied the Patients’ Bill of Rights to the government insurance programs. But today there is still no protection for insurance companies with a Patients’ Bill of Rights.

I am very pleased the managers’ amendment has added four very important provisions I authored by an amendment, that I have been working with Democrats and Republicans over the last decade to get into Federal law.

Access to emergency care—let me talk about that for a moment because today there are people who live in New Mexico and live in Montana and live in Maryland who go to their emergency rooms. They read the fine print of their insurance plan. It says: Before you go to an emergency room, you have to call for preauthorization or you need to go to the emergency room with the network or we may second-guess whether you needed to go to that emergency room, if, in fact, your final diagnosis was you did not have an emergency need or condition. You may have suffered the traditional symptoms for a heart attack. You did exactly what a prudent layperson would do: get to that emergency room as quickly as possible. Then you find out it was not a heart attack. Today the insurance companies can second-guess your coverage.

Thanks to the managers’ amendment Senator Baucus helped us put together, we now are going to cover access to emergency care as a requirement for every private insurance company. Prudent layperson standards, no preauthorizations, get to the closest emergency room as quickly as you can—there are important protections to get into that.

Then there is the ability to choose your primary care doctor. Your primary care doctor is the person you have to have confidence in. If you are a woman with health issues, it has to be OB-GYN, you should have that right. Many insurance companies deny you that today. If you are a parent and you want a pediatrician for your child, you should be able to have a pediatrician as a primary physician for your child. It is not guaranteed to today. Many insurance plans deny it. This will make sure it is in law.

I am pleased, and I know the people of Maryland will be glad to know, at long last, we get the Patients’ Bill of Rights which I introduced.

There are a lot of groups that supported this over the years. I wish to acknowledge the long list of people, the long list of groups, bipartisan groups, that have worked on this issue, from AARP, the American Nurses Association, NAACP to the SEIU, YMCA—the list goes on and on of groups that have supported the Patients’ Bill of Rights against private insurance companies. At long last, we have the ability, with the passage of this bill on the Senate floor, to move it one step closer to passage and to be the law of the land.

I wish to talk about minority health. The reasons I wish to talk about minority health are twofold. First, I know my colleagues are interested to know that the amendment that is currently pending that the leader filed, technically on my behalf, which establishes the minority health protections within the different Federal agencies—I wish to assure my colleagues that it is in the underlying bill. It is in the package. It is in the managers’ package which has been adopted.

I am going to suggest to the body that we withdraw the amendment because we do not need it to pass; it is already in the underlying bill. This was the original amendment I submitted. I wished to explain that because the amendment I filed to establish the Minority Health Office at the Department of Health and Human Services within NIH also within NIH will be in the underlying bill because of the managers’ package.

This is an important moment because there are huge disparities in our health care delivery systems in America, bringing about huge disparities among different ethnic communities. The life expectancy of African Americans, for example, is 5.3 years lower than Whites. When we look at diabetes in America, the incidence of diabetes is two times greater among minorities than the White population. That means we need to have a strategy to deal with it. We need to know how can we reach out to minority communities to deal with their special needs. Unless you have a focus within the Department of Health and Human Services, unless you have a focus within NIH and the other agencies, you will not deal with it as effectively as we should. I, again, thank Senator BAUCUS. Senator KAUFMAN, the people that have understood this and put it into the managers’ package because we can then develop a national strategy to help deal with the issues of the minorities.

I also wish to mention heart disease. African Americans have a 33-percent higher death rate due to heart disease. The list goes on and on. That is why this bill codifies the Office of Minority Health in the Office of the Secretary of Health and Human Services, establishes individual Offices of Minority Health at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Health Resources and Services Administration, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, Health Care Research and Quality, Food and Drug Administration, the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, and it elevates the current Center on Minority Health and Health Disparities at the National Institutes of Health into an Institute. That is good news for this nation in dealing with this issue.

I, again, thank those who helped me get this into the managers’ package—and it is now in the bill—that we will be taking up for a vote tomorrow.

I also compliment Senator SANDERS—I have done this before—on the community health centers. I mention that because as we deal with the disparities in health care in America, we deal with minority health care issues, yes, we have to get people health insurance, we have to get people the financial wherewithal to provide health care, but you also have to have the facilities in place if you are going to deal with health care issues. It is one thing to say we will cover the costs, it is another thing to say we will have the doctors available.

I met with one of the leaders at Johns Hopkins University, which is located in the urban part of Baltimore city. He said: We need help. We need more community health centers. We need more primary care doctors. We need more nurses. We need help with more people seeking care through trauma centers rather than using emergency rooms. That is great news. With them being able to afford insurance, that is great news, but let us have the facilities.

There are many underserved in Maryland and around the Nation who just need facilities. Thanks to the Sanders amendment, of which I am proud to be a cosponsor and worked with him, that is in this bill. We are going to see $10 billion to expand community health centers and 25 million more Americans will have yet access to care through our community health centers. That is good news and that will help and we invest in creating more primary care doctors, which is a very valuable part of this bill. I applaud all those.

Let me point out this bill will help families in America. The choice is whether we pass this bill which sets up the framework for America to finally provide universal that provides universal coverage or we maintain the status quo. Let me tell you what happens if we maintain the status quo. These are the numbers. Right now, the average cost for a family for health insurance is $13,244. If this action, by 2016—that is not too many years away—it is going to be $24,291.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has consumed the 20 minutes he was yielded.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. May I have 2 more minutes, if that is possible?

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield the Senator 2 more minutes.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, if people are going to be able to maintain their existing coverage, we have to act, and this bill will allow us to act. That is why the American Medical Association supports the bill. This bill will help our Medicare population because it strengthens Medicare, as I pointed out. This is why the AARP supports it. We will be able to provide preventive services, such as annual physicals, for our seniors. This bill is important for small business owners who no longer will be discriminated against by paying 20 percent more than comparable large companies pay for the same type of insurance product.

This bill is good for Marylanders. It is good for every American. It moves us toward universal coverage. The bill is not perfect. I am disappointed with some of the things in the bill and some of the things that did not make it into the bill. But this bill establishes the framework for universal, affordable, quality care for every American. It speaks to the values of our Nation.

I am proud to support this legislation, and I know we will look back at this day as being one of the bright moments for America, where we said to the people of our Nation that, indeed, we will provide affordable, quality health care for every American. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield 15 minutes to the Senator from Delaware, Mr. KAUFMAN.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I thank the manager not just for this but for the many things he has done to make this bill a possibility. It is truly historic, transformational. To a large degree, it is because of his hard work. I appreciate that.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield him 30 minutes of my post cloture time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time will be so yielded.
Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I rise, once again, to express my support for this historic health care legislation before us. After more than a year of debate and months and months of negotiations, I welcome the extraordinary opportunity finally to enact meaningful health care reform. I have worked on health care reform, Congress has wrestled with it for 15 years and months, since this reform effort has been a long and deliberative process, not the rush job opponents of this effort have been claiming.

I must admit, however, there were times during this debate when I was not sure if we were ever going to reach this point. In fact, I was convinced we were not. But I found in my life that when you think things are never going to happen, as with every important thing I have ever done, you reach a point when you say this is never going to happen, and this is another example. There are many times I never thought this would happen.

From the bogus charge of death panels— -- just named Politifact.com’s “Lie of the Year”—to the tension over whether the bill will contain a public option, which I supported, there were some long days where it was hard to see how we were ever going to get to the end point.

But thanks to the hard work of the majority leader, as well as Senators BAUCUS, DODD and HARKIN and their staffs, we are finally here.

As many of you know, I have worked in and out of Congress for more than 36 years. I have learned quite a bit about how things operate in the Senate.

The Senate is commonly referred to as the most deliberative body in the world. But such deliberations are not always pretty. Sometimes tempers flare, sometimes debate does not reach the level we aspire to or the American people deserve. Sometimes the most important legislation actually fails to get the votes necessary to pass.

We all know what happened to health care reform the last time we attempted a major overhaul 15 years ago when President Clinton tried to pass his version of health care reform. The debate was just as passionate with charges and countercharges on both sides of the aisle. Because of the coarseness of that debate, because of the seemingly intractable opposition to health care reform, Congress has been wary in the intervening 15 years to take up this cause again, and it is understandable.

But over the past 15 years, our health care system has gotten more expensive. Rising medical costs, skyrocketing premiums, increasing numbers of the uninsured and the strain on both business and providers have brought the critical need for health care reform back to the Senate this year.

Make no mistake, we need health care reform now. The status quo—what I call this current health care system—is simply unsustainable.

Medical costs account for one-sixth of domestic spending and are headed upward. In 1979, we spent approximately $220 billion as a nation on health care. In 1992, we spent close to $850 billion. In 2009, we will spend $2.5 trillion on health care. Listen to this: $220 billion in 1979, $850 billion in 1992, and $2.5 trillion in 2009. How can anyone live with this health care reform and that the need is urgent? The trajectory of our national health care expenditures is out of control.

In addition, one of the biggest—if not the biggest—forces behind our Federal deficit, which we hear so much about on this floor, are the skyrocketing costs of Medicare and Medicaid. In 1996, Medicare and Medicaid accounted for only 1 percent of all government expenditures; they now account for 20 percent. If we do nothing to start bending the cost curve down for Medicare and Medicaid, we will eventually spend more on these two programs than on all other Federal programs combined.

We must slow the level of growth in Medicare and Medicaid, we will eventually spend more on these two programs than on all other Federal programs combined. We cannot afford the growth in the Medicare and Medicaid Programs if we are to ever get our budget situation under control.

In addition to the fiscal pressures crushing our Federal and State governments, the current health care system is also crushing families and workers. Just look at the rise in the insurance premiums in my home State of Delaware. In 2000, the average premium for family health coverage was just over $7,500. The number had jumped to $14,900—that is $14,900—almost doubling in just 8 years. If we fail to enact the pending health care reform legislation, the same premium for family coverage is expected in Delaware to reach $29,000 in 2016.

Let me repeat that: $29,000 for family coverage in Delaware in 2016 if we don’t pass health care reform now.

States around the country will see similar spikes. Many are simply unaffordable. Too many people are going bankrupt paying for their medical care. Today, the inability to pay for skyrocketing medical bills accounts for more than 60 percent of U.S. personal bankruptcies, a rate of 1½ times what it was just 6 years ago. Keep this in mind: More than 75 percent of families entering bankruptcy due to health care costs actually have health insurance.

Let me repeat this because it is a critical point: Three-quarters of all Americans filing for bankruptcy because of medical bills already have insurance. We also need reform to stop the worst abuses in the health insurance industry. In my year as serving as the Senator from Delaware, I have heard from far too many constituents who have been refused an insurance policy because they have a preexisting condition.

I have heard from fathers who were denied family insurance coverage because they were told their children had preexisting conditions too expensive to cover. Much to my shock—and I have talked about this on the Senate floor—I have received letters from women who have been turned down for coverage because their pregnancy was considered a preexisting condition. Pregnancy a preexisting condition? That is simply intolerable. Even worse, however, if that is the practice of rescission, where insurance companies drop coverage for individuals the moment they get sick and need their insurance the most. Being denied coverage after you have paid your premiums is just plain cruel.

For all those reasons and more, we must reform the present health care system. Thankfully, we now have the opportunity to bring about meaningful health care reform through the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, and I would like to take just a couple more minutes to discuss why this legislation has earned my support.

First off, it is fiscally responsible. President Obama laid down a marker that any health care reform legislation that landed on his desk could not add to our Nation’s debt. I am happy to say this legislation passes this test.

Second, the bill helps stabilize Medicare and Medicaid Programs. In the absence of this legislation, the Medicare trust fund is expected to go bankrupt in 2017. According to the head actuary at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, passing this bill would extend the solvency of the trust fund for an additional 9 years—9 years. Medicare is a sacred trust with Americans, and this bill ensures this trust is preserved.

In addition to reducing the deficit and shoring up the Medicare Program, this bill contains numerous provisions that will help Americans afford their premiums and prevent them from filing for bankruptcy protection. Starting next year, insurers will no longer be able to place lifetime caps on health care benefits. For the next several years, insurers will also be restricted in the annual limits they can place on benefits, and then these will be eliminated altogether in 2014.

These are huge changes for people with debilitating diseases and those who experience unexpected catastrophic events costing millions of dollars in treatment.

In addition, premium subsidies for families with incomes under 400 percent of the poverty level—or $88,000 for a family of four—will be available to help them afford their premiums once the insurance exchange is up and running. There will also be annual limits on out-of-pocket costs for individuals, and dependents will be able to be covered under their parents’ insurance policies until the age of 26.

All of these are meaningful reforms that will dramatically lower the rate of bankruptcies associated with medical costs.
The bill also contains some other great consumer protections that don’t currently exist in our present health care system. I have already highlighted the problems in the current system with insurers denying coverage for people with preexisting conditions and rescinding coverage when people get sick. Under this bill, Americans will finally be freed from the shackles of preexisting conditions that have kept so many from obtaining much needed health insurance.

Starting next year, insurers will no longer be able to deny coverage to children with preexisting medical conditions. This ban on covering preexisting conditions will be extended to all Americans in 2014. The bill also forbids insurers from rescinding health insurance after Americans have already paid their premiums. Americans will no longer lose their coverage when they get sick and need it most.

In addition, the bill dramatically expands coverage of prevention and wellness services. It provides incentives for employers to implement wellness programs and offers a new annual wellness checkup for seniors enrolled in Medicare.

These are all good, positive reforms to our health care system. Now, we are close to finishing this debate and to this bill. I am very pleased that the managers’ package includes the health care fraud enforcement amendment, which I introduced, along with Senators LEAHY, SPECTER, KLOBUCHAR, and SCHUMER as cosponsors. Again, this benefits all Americans not just Delawareans.

The National Health Care Anti-Fraud Association conservatively estimates that 3 percent of all health care spending—some $72 billion—is lost to health care fraud in both public and private health care plans. That is $72 billion lost in health care fraud in both public and private health care plans. Other estimates place the figure as high as 10 percent over $220 billion.

Fraud hits every one of us in every corner of our nation where we can least afford it—our health care premiums—while simultaneously driving down the quality of, and our trust in, the health care system. This amendment increases funding for fighting fraud by $50 million, and adds to the managers’ package, this bill should and must be passed. It brings quality, affordable health care within the reach of all Americans, including more than 30 million Americans who are currently uninsured. It strengthens the Medicare Program, extending its insolvency for 9 years. It helps restore fiscal order by reducing the deficit by approximately $132 billion over 10 years and more than $1 trillion over 20 years. It offers much needed consumer protections that provide stable coverage at an affordable cost.

In closing, I again want to acknowledge the hard work of Senators BAUCUS, REID, DODD, HARKIN, as well as their staffs—especially their staffs—because the staff has done incredible work on this piece of legislation. They have enabled us to reach this historic legislative moment.

I have ended many speeches by noting it is time to gather our collective will and do the right thing to join this historic opportunity by passing health care reform. I think we may have finally reached that goal. We certainly can’t afford to wait any longer. We need to act now. It is less. The American people deserve no less.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KIRK). The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of the time we have in our hour to the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. CONRAD.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise this morning not to talk about health care but to talk about the other critical matter that faces this body before we leave this session for the holidays and that is the matter of extending the debt limit of the United States. Let me start by saying it is imperative that we extend the debt limit. If we do not, the United States would default on its debt. The consequences for this country and the global economy would be nothing short of catastrophic.

If you think about the problems created in world markets by the fact that Dubai defaulted on $40 billion of debt, think of what it would mean to global markets if the United States were to default on $12 trillion of debt.

For those who say this is Obama’s fault—no. This is not Obama’s fault. He has been in office 11 months. I remind everyone that he walked into the biggest mess in 70 years—deficits and debt exploding, joblessness skyrocketing, economic growth plummeting. All that was happening before Barack Obama became President of the United States. He did not create the economic mess, he inherited it. He did not create the fiscal mess, he inherited it. Those are things he had to take on as the new President.

There were record deficits and a doubling of the national debt, there was the worst recession since the Great Depression, financial market and housing crises, ongoing wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, and a fragile long-term budget outlook with everything going in the wrong direction.

This is what was happening to deficits before President Obama took office. The deficits were skyrocketing. In fact, we have never held Presidents responsible for the fiscal affairs during the first year of their term of office because everybody here knows they inherit a budget from the previous President for the first year. That is not Barack Obama’s responsibility, that is the responsibility of the previous administration.

For those who say President Obama made things worse—no, he didn’t make things worse, he made things better. Yes, he added short term to the deficit, about $300 billion in 2009 because of the economic recovery package, but I remind people the difference the economic recovery package has made. We have 4 million jobs that never would have been there. The losses of 749,000 jobs a month when he came in—this is January of 2009, the month he came in. Job losses had mounted to 749,000 jobs a month. Look at the trend. Because of the recovery package and other measures that were put in place, the changes in private nonfarm payrolls have improved dramatically, from losses of over 700,000 a month in January to losses of 18,000 last month. We now believe that, in the first quarter of next year, those job losses will have become job gains.

The same thing happened on economic growth. Economic growth was sharply negative when President Obama came into office. In the last quarter, we now know the economy actually grew at a rate of 2.2 percent. That is a dramatic change. The fact is President Obama made things better. He inherited a disaster and he went to work to get America back on track.

Let me get to the debt. This is what happened under the previous administration. The gross debt of the United States skyrocketed, more than doubling under the previous administration. So this is what the current administration has inherited. He didn’t produce these deficits and debt. He inherited them.

It is true we are still on a course for long-term debt that is unsustainable. This was the cover of Newsweek on December 7, Pearl Harbor day. The Newsweek cover said this: ‘‘How great powers fall; steep debt, slow growth, and high spending kill empires—and America could be next.’’

What are you going to do? When you went inside to the story, it said this:

This is how empires decline. It begins with a debt explosion. It ends with an inexorable reduction in the resources available for the Army, Air Force. If the United States doesn’t come up soon with a credible plan to restore the Federal budget to balance over the next 5 to 10 years, the danger is very real that a debt crisis could lead to a major weakening of American power.

I don’t know what could be more clear than that. Here is what has happened. I don’t think most of this is on the shoulders, the responsibility of the previous administration, because the debt absolutely skyrocketed under their watch. But it is continuing to grow and we must face up to that.

What is even more alarming is the longer term outlook. On the trend we are on, the debt, which will reach over 100 percent of the gross domestic product by 2019, is projected to hit 400 percent of gross domestic product by 2060. That is the trendline we are on. That is the trendline that has been since 2001, a trendline of massively growing debt. The question is, can we face up to it? Do we have the strength, do we have the will to take on the burgeoning debt?

This is what the National Journal wrote on November 7 of this year:

The debt problem is worse than you think. Simply put, even alarmists may be underestimating the size of the (debt) problem, how quickly it will become unbearable and how poorly prepared our political system is to deal with it.

The reality we confront tomorrow morning is whether we will extend the debt limit of the United States. We have no choice. If we fail to pay the debts we have already accrued, the United States and other markets around the world would collapse. That is just the fact. We cannot permit that to happen.

How we got to this point is very clear to me. The previous administration put a forward a fiscal policy that doubled the debt of the United States and put us on track to continue doubling it every 8 years. The current administration has taken action to get the economy moving and growing again. Had they not taken those steps, which add to the deficit in the short term, the long-term debt outlook would be even worse.

This is the point from that fact that we have to deal with the reality that confronts us now. That reality is we are on a trendline that is absolutely unsustainable.

To those who say if you deal with the debt, you are going to have to do something about Social Security and Medicare and revenue—I say yes. That is true. We are going to have to do something about all of those. To those who say dealing with the debt means facing up to the hard reality that confronts this country and the fact that we are on a course that is unsustainable—I say yes. That is true. We are going to have to make changes in the entitlement programs. We are going to have to make changes in the revenue system.

When I say that, I don’t mean by that the first thing we do is raise taxes. The first thing we ought to do is collect the taxes that are already owed but are not being paid because of these offshore tax havens and abusive tax shelters and all the rest. We can get more revenue. We do not need to raise taxes to get more revenue. We need to collect the revenue that is currently owed and we need to get it from the people who are cheating. And we are going to be engaging in these tax schemes—offshore tax havens, abusive tax shelters. We even have companies now that are leasing sewer systems, buying them from European cities in order to depreciate them on the books in the United States to reduce their taxes here, then leasing those same sewer systems back to the European cities that built them in the first place. That is happening right now.

If you doubt we are losing money to offshore tax havens, Google ‘‘offshore tax havens’’ and see how many hits you get. You get over a million. Those sites describe a life of luxury, living offshore, tax free, on income received in this country, income on which taxes are owed in this country but not paid. That is the kind of thing that has to be stopped.

Mr. President, how much time do I have left for this statement?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5½ minutes.

Mr. CONRAD. Let me talk for a minute about what Senator Gregg and I have proposed: a bipartisan task force to deal with this long-term debt threat. Our proposal has 35 cosponsors now. The idea is to give a group of our colleagues and members of the administration the responsibility to come up with a plan to reduce the deficits and debt. If a plan enjoyed a supermajority among the group of 18 who would be given the responsibility to come up with such a plan—if 14 of the 18 could agree on a plan—it would have to come here for a vote. It would come here for a vote. Every Senator would retain their rights to vote up or down. Every Senator would retain their rights. And it would require 60 votes in the Senate to pass, it would require 60 percent of the House to pass and the President would be able to veto it if he didn’t like it.

I think it is clear that we have a real challenge facing our country and it is going to take some special process to deal with it. What have we outlined for what is on the table with 18 Members, 10 Democrats, 2 from the administration, and 8 Republicans. All task force Members would need to be currently serving in Congress or the administration. If 14 of the 18 could agree, that report would have to come to the Congress for a vote. The report would be submitted after the 2010 election and there would be fast-track consideration in the Senate and the House. There would be a final vote before the 111th Congress adjourned.

Put those who say that is going to shred Social Security and Medicare—I say no. What threatens Social Security and Medicare is our doing nothing. Both of those programs are already cash negative. The trustees of Medicare tell us the program will be insolvent by 2017 if we do nothing. The answer can not be to do nothing. I believe this is a challenge that requires us to come together now. Republicans and Democrats, House, Senate, the administration, we came together in the late 1990s and early 2000s and dealt with fiscal crises in the past. The Social Security Commission in the 1980s, the Andrews Air Force Base Summit in the 1990s—those were special procedures to deal with a special challenge and that is what is required now. We are on a course that is absolutely and utterly unsustainable.

Let me go back to the vote tomorrow, because a group of us have said we are not going to vote to pay any long-term interest of the debt without consideration of a special process to deal with the debt, but we are also prepared to extend the debt on a short-term basis. That is absolutely essential. That is the responsible thing to do. A failure to extend the debt tomorrow would send a message to markets around the globe that the United States is not going to pay its debt. The United States cannot renege on its commitment to pay the $12 trillion debt that has already been run up. Those are not future debts but debts that have already been incurred. Those are debts that are due now and will be due in the weeks to come.

The United States has never defaulted on its debt and it never can without grave consequences to our economy and to the world economy.

Let me say again as clearly as I can: for those who want to blame President Obama, that won’t wash. He has been in office only 11 months. He walked into the biggest mess in over 70 years—deficits and debt exploding, job losses skyrocketing, economic growth plummeting. President Obama didn’t create that economic mess, he inherited it. He did not create the fiscal mess, he inherited it.

Tomorrow will be a key vote for this country. Those of us who are concerned about the growing debt and are willing to take it on must also be responsible about what is going to happen in that the United States does not default on its already accrued debts. To do otherwise would be disastrous for this country.

How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 30 seconds.

Mr. CONRAD. Perfect. Merry Christmas.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. CORKER. Mr. President, I would inquire how much time is allotted to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority has 60 minutes.

Mr. CORKER. I have 10 minutes. I wonder if the Presiding Officer might let me know when I have 2 minutes remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do so.

Mr. CORKER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I have watched this body over the last period we have been discussing health care. The body itself, the integrity of this body has been challenged. I have watched as individuals have challenged each other’s integrity as it relates to this bill. I choose not to do that today.

I wish to say, as I do constantly in my State, that I consider it a privilege to wake up each day and come to work in this body. Obviously, things don’t always go as one might expect, but I do consider it a privilege. I thank the folks back home for allowing me to serve and to deal with these important issues.

I don’t think I will ever quite understand why we have raided an insolvent entitlement to create a new entitlement, weakening Medicare. I will never understand why we have done that to create this bill. I will never understand why this body chose to create such a large unfunded mandate for States through the provisions we have put in place as it relates to Medicaid, telling States they have to raise the levels at which they insure citizens across their State to 133 percent of federal poverty.

There is no question this bill violates the law put in place in 1995.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. CORKER. I thank the Chair.

I am glad CBO has actually come out and stated that clearly. There is no question why this body chose to put in place an unfunded mandate on States to pay their share of their Solvency Act and the various Senators trying to protect themselves.

Our Governor of Tennessee is a Democrat. He is on the other side of the aisle. We have worked closely on a bipartisan effort, a bill was passed that was more offensive than for the Commissioner of finance for a State. In many instances, there was nothing more infuriating.

Let me say again as clearly as I can: for those who want to blame President Obama, that didn’t wash. He has been in office only 11 months. He walked into the biggest mess in over 70 years—deficits and debt exploding, job losses skyrocketing, economic growth plummeting. President Obama didn’t create that economic mess, he inherited it. He did not create the fiscal mess, he inherited it.

I wish to say, as I do constantly in my State, that I consider it a privilege to wake up each day and come to work in this body. Obviously, things don’t always go as one might expect, but I do consider it a privilege. I thank the folks back home for allowing me to serve and to deal with these important issues.

I don’t think I will ever quite understand why this bill was put together the way it was. I certainly understand there are differences of opinion and differences of interest, but I don’t think I will ever understand why Medicare moneys, from an insolvent program, were used to fund a new entitlement. CBO has come out this morning clearly stating what we have been saying for over 6 months. The fact is, taking Medicare savings and using them to create a new entitlement does not work. It takes away from the solvency of Medicare itself. It is kind of late, but I am glad CBO has actually come out and said today, finally, after months of debate, what we have been saying from day one, that you could not take Medicare saving and use them to create a new entitlement without challenging the solvency of Medicare itself.

I will never understand why that building block, a flawed building block, was used to create this bill. Everybody knows it was that use of inappropriate funding that began this whole partisan divide. My guess is, we might have ended up with a bill that would stand the test of time had we not utilized that basic flawed building block in the bill.

There has been one, though, that I have found equally problematic; that is, the whole issue of creating an unfunded mandate for the State of Tennessee and for States across the country. The strength of the Senate’s personal integrity has been centered more around this issue than anything else, as various Senators trying to protect their States from an unfunded mandate have been challenged in that regard.

Many people who serve in this body used to be mayors, they used to be Governors, people who had to deal with budgets in their own States. Years ago, in a bipartisan effort, a bill was passed to ensure that we in Washington didn’t pass laws that increased costs for cities. I was a mayor of a city. I was commissioner of finance for a State. In those capacities, there was nothing that was more offensive than for the Federal Government to pass a law and then demand that a city or a State that costs money and yet not send the money that went with it. There was nothing more infuriating. We had to actually balance our budgets. We didn’t have the ability to borrow money from overseas, and to continue to operate in the red.

Back in 1995, a law was passed called the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act. It was done to do away with the arrogance that existed until that time—grandstanding. We exist in a day where the Federal Government would create laws that would increase costs on cities and States. It was passed in a bipartisan way. As a matter of fact, 15 Members from the other side of the aisle supported this law, voted for this law, and put this law in place. Many of the people who made this bill, created this bill participated. The chairman of the Finance Committee voted for this law. The majority leader voted for this law. The distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee for this law. The chairman of the HELP Committee who drafted a big part of this bill voted for this law. What this law said was that we could not pass legislation out of this body, out of Congress, that placed an unfunded mandate on States, on cities, and caused them to have to do things that raised expenses by laws we created without sending the money themselves. Our Governor of Tennessee is a Democrat. He is on the other side of the aisle. We have worked closely on a number of economic development issues. I have talked with him all the way through this process. He actually allocated to work with this administration on health care and on health care legislation. He has been involved in health care all of his life. He has managed our State well. He has dealt with many challenging health care issues. Much has been documented about the travails our State has had as it relates to Medicaid and our desire to try to fix that. He has called this bill, which appears to be ready to pass this body, the mother of unfunded mandates.

Mr. President, I have watched this body over the last period we have been discussing health care. The body itself, the integrity of this body has been challenged. I have watched as individuals have challenged each other’s integrity as it relates to this bill. I choose not to do that today.

I wish to say, as I do constantly in my State, that I consider it a privilege to wake up each day and come to work in this body. Obviously, things don’t always go as one might expect, but I do consider it a privilege. I thank the folks back home for allowing me to serve and to deal with these important issues.

I don’t think I will ever quite understand why this bill was put together the way it was. I certainly understand there are differences of opinion and differences of interest, but I don’t think I will ever understand why Medicare
The pending bill includes an unfunded intergovernmental mandate in excess of the annual statutory limit of $89 million within the next 5 years. Therefore, I raise a point of order against the substitute amendment pursuant to section 425(a)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to waive the point of order for consideration of the pending legislation and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The yeas and nays are ordered.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask my friend from Montana, Senator Baucus, to be alert because I want to raise a similar request to set aside. But before I do that, I want to explain why I am doing this. I worked for 6 years to pass the Congressional Accountability Act, which was signed into law by President Clinton in 1995. I worked so hard because I strongly believed there should only be one set of laws in this country.

Prior to 1995, there were two sets of laws—one for Capitol Hill and one for the rest of the country because Congress exempted itself. That is why, following that practice of 1995, I offered an amendment during the Finance Committee markup to require that Members of Congress and congressional staff get their employer-based health insurance through the same exchanges as our constituents. That is something for which I also heard complaints from the grassroots of Iowa during town meetings. I did offer that amendment, and it was adopted without objection.

But then after careful consideration and examination of the bill Senator Reid put together—and this was done by the Congressional Research Service—it was revealed that my amendment was changed under this closed-door merger process. Something cute, to give exemptions for some people on Capitol Hill but not for others.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an analysis from the Congressional Research Service.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

-----------------------------------

MEMORANDUM

To: Senate Finance Committee. Attention: Andrew McKechnie.

From: Ida Brudnick, Analyst on the Congress, Government and Finance Division; Todd B. Tatelman, Legislative Attorney, American Law Division.

This memorandum responds to your request for a review and potential statutory interpretation of 1312(d)(2)(D)(I)(II) of H.R. 3590, The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

The House of Representatives exempted itself. That is why, following that practice of 1995, I offered an amendment during the Finance Committee markup to require that Members of Congress and congressional staff get their employer-based health insurance through the same exchanges as our constituents. That is something for which I also heard complaints from the grassroots of Iowa during town meetings. I did offer that amendment, and it was adopted without objection.

But then after careful consideration and examination of the bill Senator Reid put together—and this was done by the Congressional Research Service—it was revealed that my amendment was changed under this closed-door merger process. Something cute, to give exemptions for some people on Capitol Hill but not for others.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an analysis from the Congressional Research Service.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

-----------------------------------

POTENTIAL STATUTORY INTERPRETATION

When interpreting the meaning of legislative language, courts will often use methods of statutory construction commonly referred to as "canons," or general principles for drawing inferences about language. Perhaps the most common "canon of construction" is the plain meaning rule, which assumes that the legislative body meant what it said when it adopted the language in the statute. Pursuant to another well-known statement of the statutory language is "plain," the court will simply apply that meaning and end its inquiry. As the United States Supreme Court stated in Connecticut National Bank v. Germain:

[In interpreting a statute a court should always turn first to one, cardinal canon before all others. We have stated time and again that courts must construe a statute as it says it and means in a statute what it says there . . . .]
When the words of a statute are unambiguous, then, this first canon is also the last: judicial inquiry is complete.9

Applying the plain meaning canon to the language in H.R. 3590, it appears possible to argue that the statute, as written, is at least ambiguous, as a Member of Congress’ “official office” most naturally refers to Member’s personal offices and, therefore, excludes other employees that a Member may hire to perform various functions. For example, Members who serve as committee chairman or ranking members may have staff affiliated with their service on a given committee, and a Member may hire an individual to control over hiring, promotion, and even termination, those staff are paid by the committee and, therefore, are not under the Member’s position on the committee is not commonly considered their “official office,” as committee assignments may change during a Congress and are determined by the chamber caucuses. Furthermore, it is worth noting that CRS has been unable to locate any previous use of the phrase “official office of a Member of Congress” in statute or appropriations laws.

Alternatively, applying the plain meaning canon to the language used in S. 1796, it appears possible that this language includes committee staff, leadership staff and most other congressional employees. The language, unlike that in H.R. 3590, turns on who is paid, not on who controls the earning of the funds, rather than who the employer is. As a result, the language in S. 1796 appears to be much broader, as most “congressional employees” have their pay disbursed from either the Secretary of the Senate or the Chief Administrative Office (CAO) of the House, regardless of whether they are employed in a Member’s personal office, a committee, leadership official, or in another capacity by the Congress. Moreover, unlike the language in H.R. 3590, similar text to that in S. 1796 has been used to categorize congressional staff for salary and benefits purposes.8

OTHER POTENTIAL ISSUES

The language in H.R. 3590 raises additional possible concerns in light of the way that the House and Senate conduct business. For example, one potential issue with proposing different standards for employees in Member office accounts and employees paid through other accounts is the category of the use of shared staff. Although the House and Senate have different rules regarding the use of shared staff, both chambers allow types of shared employees that do not result in an employee being both on the payroll of a Member office and another type of office. In the Senate, 2 U.S.C. 61–1a authorizes limited sharing of staff.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, appropriated funds are available for payment to an individual from pay of more than one position, each of which is either in the office of a Senator and the pay of which is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate or is in another office and the pay of which is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate, out of an appropriation under the heading “Salaries, Officers, and Employees”. If the aggregate gross pay from those positions does not exceed the statutory maximum rate specified in section 61–1(d)(2) of this title.

The Senate Handbook summarizes these laws, stating:10

An employee may be on the payroll of more than one Senator’s office or on the payroll of a Senator’s office and a leadership or administrative office, providing the aggregate pay received does not exceed the maximum rate specified in section 61–1a. An employee can only be shared between offices which are funded through the appropriations, “Senators’ Official Personnel and Office Expense Account” (Senators’ personal staff), and “Salaries, Officers, and Employees”. The House Member’s Handbook, as compiled by the Clerk, states the following about shared employees:11

The term shared employee means an employee who is paid by more than one employing authority of the House of Representatives.

Two or more employing authorities of the House may employ an individual. Such shared employees work out of the office of an employing authority, but are not required to work in the office of each employing authority. The pay from each employing authority shall reflect the duties actually performed for each employing authority. The name, title, and pay of such an individual will appear on each employing authority’s Pay Certification. Such employees may not receive pay totaling more than the highest rate of basic pay in the Speaker’s Pay Order applicable to the positions they occupy.

Employees may not be shared between a Member’s office and the office of an Officer of the House if the employee, in the course of duties for an Officer, has access to any personal information, payroll information, equipment account information, or information systems of other Member, Committee, or Leadership offices.

Applying the interpretation of H.R. 3590 suggested above, it is possible that certain shared staff could be covered by the provision, while other shared staff, even in the same office, could be excluded. Because the bill does not propose a standard for determining coverage, it is potentially left to the implementing authority to establish such a standard. The implementing authority could choose to apply any reasonable standard. If the implementation standard were applied by the implementing authority, it could arguably be covered. On the other hand, if the majority of a Member’s committee or leadership work, they may arguably not be covered.

As a result, it is not unreasonable to assume that an implementing authority could use a majority or a similar standard in making coverage determinations. In other words, shared employees would need to declare whom they spent time working for. If the staffer’s declaration was the Member’s official office, they could arguably be covered. On the other hand, if the majority of a Member’s committee or leadership work, they may arguably not be covered. It is important to note that this is but one possible standard and that unless otherwise stated in the bill, the implementing authority will determine the standard.

The language of S. 1793 arguably avoids this problem as it appears to encompass all shared employees because they all receive salaries through either the CAO or Secretary of the Senate.

Another potential issue is the scope of the disbursing authority of the CAO of the House and the Secretary of the Senate. The CAO has served as the disbursing officer for the House of Representatives since 1965. The Secretary of the Senate serves as the disbursing officer for the Senate. Both of these offices are required to publish reports on disbursements Pursuant to the FY2010 legislative branch appropriations act, the Secretary and CAO are each responsible for the disbursements for two accounts included as “Joint Office of the Committees of the Whole of the Senate and the House”. The new joint staff office also has responsibility for the Joint Committee on Taxation and the Office of Attending Physician. In addition, the CAO and Secretary also have disbursing authority for a number of House and Senate revolving funds.13 Thus, it appears possible to argue that, should the language of H.R. 3590 be interpreted as suggested, the employees would be excluded from coverage. Conversely, should the language from S. 1793 be utilized, it would appear that employees of these committees would be covered as they are paid by the CAO or Secretary of the Senate.

Finally, there is the issue of what, if any, other entities or employees of the Legislative Branch the CAO and/or Secretary of the Senate may serve as the disbursing officers. Our research indicates that although the CAO and Secretary of the Senate served as the disbursing officers for the U.S. Capitol Police (USCP) prior to 2003, the Chief of the Capitol Police currently serves as the disbursing officer for the USCP.14 Moreover, it appears that other Legislative Branch agencies such as the Architect of the Capitol and the Congressional Budget Office each have their own disbursing agents and do not use either the CAO or the Secretary of the Senate. In addition, it appears that the CAO and/or Secretary of the Senate may serve as the disbursing officer of other legislative branch entities or agencies.

ENDNOTES

1 See id.
3 Connecticut National Bank, 503 U.S. at 253–54 (citations and quotation marks omitted).
8 U.S.C. §§104a and 104b.

Mr. GRASSLEY. This carve-out creates a double standard and is totally unacceptable. This amendment goes beyond just going where my original amendment went to cover all people on Capitol Hill. The amendment I am asking consent for would also include the President, Vice President, political appointees, and the senior-level staff of the executive branch. It is only fair that if this bill becomes law, these leaders should themselves be subject to the reforms that make our constituencies go through the exchange.

I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment in order to offer amendment No. 3178 which is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAUCUS. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, Democratic leadership and the White House have spent months talking about accountability. With this objection, the majority will not even consider an amendment to make sure the White House and all Members employed on Capitol Hill, not just those in our personal offices, live under the same new health care system outside of the government for the same money that the government spends for the same care. That is a lot of power over people's lives concentrated in the Federal Government, and there are 1,697 delegations of authority to the Secretary of HHS to do things beyond authorities specifically given in this legislation.

These excesses of this bill appear willfully ignorant of what is going on in the real world. As we have seen the auto industry go into bankruptcy. We have seen banks shutter their doors. The chart behind me shows how the Federal debt has increased by $1.4 trillion since inauguration. The chart also shows the growing amount of debt the Federal Government is taking on. The amount of increased debt added just since inauguration puts $11,000 more of debt on each household, and that total debt now exceeds $12 trillion for the first time in our history.

At the beginning of this debate, one of the key promises of health care reform was that it would bring down health care costs. This needs to be done before health spending sinks the Federal budget faster than the taxpayers. I have a chart that illustrates the upward expenditures of health care costs by $150 billion over the next decade, and that comes from this bill. The red area on this chart is the net additional Federal spending. According to not this Senator but the Congressional Budget Office, Americans have rightly lost faith in the face of the current economic crisis. It asks this $2.5 trillion restructuring of the health care system is a good idea. From rationing care to infringing on the doctor-patient relationship, this government-run system will guarantee U.S. taxpayers a staggering tax burden for generations to come.

When the debate began last year, interested legislators of both parties set forth benchmarks that were at the time no-brainers and still are. But this does not mean that the reform should lower the cost of premiums. It should reduce the deficit. Now, this bill does over the 10-year window, but if you look at when the program really starts, 4 years from now and look ahead 10 years at that time, you will find it does not. It should bend the cost curve of health care the right way, but it does not do that. The Reid bill does not do any of these things we set out to do at the beginning of this debate.

As we end this debate, I urge my colleagues to listen to the American people. The Reid bill is the wrong direction.

Mr. President, with widespread agreement that our health care system has serious problems, why do we have a partisan debate? There is a column from the Financial Times by a commentator, Clive Crook, that sheds some light on the cause of the partisanship.

Mr. Crook, a Brit, is sympathetic to the goals and methods of my friends on the other side. But, as one who knows a system of the universal coverage our friends on the other side seek, he is sober about the consequences.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of Mr. Crook's article entitled "The Honest Case for a Bungled Healthcare Reform," be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

[From the Financial Times, Dec. 20, 2009]

THE HONEST CASE FOR A BUNGLED HEALTHCARE REFORM
(By Clive Crook)

The US system of government has a lot in its favour, in my view, but if you wanted to argue the opposite, the fiasco of healthcare reform has it all.

The measure being fought over in the Senate—if a bill gets passed, ordain by House-Senate conference comes next—is detested with equal passion by left and right. A majority of the public is now opposed as well. Even its supporters do not like it all that much. Yet if the system is this thing up for the president's signature, the country will be deemed ungovernable and the Obama administration will be denounced forever. Expect the rending of garments either way.

It does not matter that conservatives oppose reform. Obviously, if conservatives are unmoved by the plight of the uninsured, want to block this administration's domestic initiatives regardless, and are incapable of uniting behind an alternative proposal, they have nothing to offer on the issue.

It does not matter that the loony left of the Democratic party opposes reform either. In fact, that is a plus. Progressives who want to kill the most far-reaching US social reform in decades because it would send more customers, public subsidy in hand, to private insurance companies are as stone-hearted on this matter—and as far from understanding the concerns of most voters—as their hard-right enemies. Their opposition is an endorsement.

What matters is the failure to rally the country behind an initiative that, at the outset, voters strongly support. A telling instance of the administration's ineffective ness as a spokesman for its own project came just last week. Howard Dean, speaking for the progressive wing of the Democratic party, said the reform would do more harm than good—that this was the policy the insurance companies had dreamed of. White House spokesmen rushed to explain that, on the contrary, the insurance companies hate the bill.

There is something odd about that. At the beginning Barack Obama promised people that if they liked their existing insurance arrangements—which are mostly private, of course—nothing would change. This was based on preserving, by popular demand, a mostly private model of insurance. And here is the administration endorsing the progressives' view that private insurers are evil, and citing the companies' opposition to the form as an argument in its favour.

The White House cannot have it both ways. If progressives are right about the wickedness of private insurance, they are right that the whole reform is misconceived. The administration cannot appease leftist opinion and also make the strong case for this reform to the middle of the electorate. Since it cannot appease leftist opinion in any case, why even try? Make a virtue of opposition from that quarter. Mr. Obama's reluctance to crosstracks that line has hobbled his administration from the start.
December 23, 2009

Be that as it may, the healthcare bill in its current form is a mess—and an unpopular mess to boot. Popular fears that the bill will drive up insurance premiums and add to public borrowing are probably justifiably instilled. The measure is timid about changing incentives to promote efficiency: it proposes lots of experiments, but little compulsion.

Advocates agree on that much. And it is likely to be a bigger problem than the reformers say: new rules would stop insurance companies denying coverage to the sick, and the quid pro quo of mandatory insurance may be insufficient to offset this. If the insurers’ risk pools deteriorate, premiums will rise. Deep cuts in Medicare, the public insurance programme for the elderly, are needed to balance the budget. But we are unlikely to materialise in full. Higher taxes as well as higher premiums are the likely result of this reform.

Would it therefore be better to abandon the effort altogether and start again? One can think of simpler, better blueprints, but the politics that led the country here would still be the same—and so would the economic constraints. It is delusional to suppose that you can significantly widen access to healthcare at no net public cost. You cannot both transform a system and leave its basic structure unaltered. Trying to squirm around these unavoidable realities has brought the effort to its current pass. Why expect a different result next time?

In the end, I think, everything depends on the weight one attaches to achieving security of coverage as quickly as possible. In my view, that is the overriding consideration. Abandoning the effort now might postpone that goal for another decade or more. The country should regard this as unacceptable. The American people, providers, and advocacy groups are simply reacting to the fact that this bill slid rapidly down the slippery slope to more and more government control of health care.

Mr. Crook states:

Popular fears that the bill will drive up insurance premiums and add to public borrowing for another poorly justifiable reason are also likely to be a bigger problem than the reformers say: new rules would stop insurance companies denying coverage to the sick, and the quid pro quo of mandatory insurance may be insufficient to offset this. If the insurers’ risk pools deteriorate, premiums will rise. . . . Higher taxes as well as higher premiums are the likely result of this reform.

Members on this side of the aisle, at each stage of the process, have focused on this reality. While recognizing the worthy goal of expanding coverage, we have been concerned about the effect on the currently insured. This bill contains the biggest expansion of Medicaid since it was created in 1965. It cuts Medicare by a staggering half a trillion dollars over the next decade. It creates a long-term care insurance program called the CLASS Act that the CMS Actuary says runs a significant risk of being unsustainable. It imposes an unprecedented Federal mandate for coverage backed by the enforcement authority of the Internal Revenue Service.

It increases the size of the government by $2.5 trillion when fully implemented. It creates dozens of new Federal bureaucratic programs and projects to increase the scope of the Federal role in health care.

That is a lot of power over people’s lives concentrated in the Federal Government. And the excesses of this bill appear willfully ignorant of what is going on in the rest of the economy outside of health care.

The cost of these excesses make this bill slippery slope to nowhere. This summer, official scorekeepers fleshed out the size of this cost of achieving the other side’s noble, but costly goal of expanded coverage. As on who agrees with the goal of universal coverage, Mr. Crook acknowledges it: It is delusional to suppose that you can significantly widen access to healthcare at no net public cost. You cannot both transform a system and leave its basic structure unaltered. Trying to squirm around these unavoidable realities has brought the effort to its current pass.

And yet, despite these cold hard facts, our Democratic friends continue to quest for the Holy Grail of expanded coverage. Mr. Cook captures that sentiment: In the end, I think, everything depends on the weight one attaches to achieving security of coverage as quickly as possible. In my view, this is the deciding consideration. Abandoning the effort now might postpone that goal for another decade or more. The country should regard this as unacceptable.

Does anyone doubt this is where our Members on the other side are coming from? Some are explicit about it, like my friend, the majority whip. I recognize that transparency. But to them, it is about for everyone to be insured, businesses, Federal and State taxpayers, and Medicare patients—is secondary.

Go back and look at the many pages in the RECORD and you will see two themes prove my point. One is the Democratic theme. Most of the debate from those on the other side has been about what they want this bill to do. They want it to expand the role of the Federal Government in health care.

Go look at all those pages of debate again. You will see another theme. It is the Republican theme. That theme is not about what we want the bill to do for the uninsured. It is about understanding and explaining what the costs and benefits of this bill are to all Americans: Insured and uninsured, young, middle-aged, and elderly, suburban, and rural. In this regard, Republicans reflect where the vast majority of Americans are right now.

Mr. Crook, again, firmly where our friends on the other side are, captures the polarity of the debate:

Once the reform is law . . . the real work begins. Getting a grip on costs will be even more urgent than it is already—especially when you recall the broader fiscal calamity that awaits the country during the next decade.

Mr. Crook is correct. At this point in our Nation’s history, we are a Nation facing very challenging economic times. We have seen the auto industry go into bankruptcy. We have seen banks shutter their boards. The Federal debt has increased by $1.4 trillion since inauguration. This chart shows the growing amount of debt that the Federal Government is taking on. Just the amount of increased debt added just since the inauguration is $11,535 per household.

It now exceeds $12 trillion for the first time in history.

In these perilous times, Mr. Crook notes the public is extremely sensitive to the fiscal consequences of the bill before the Senate. And that is where Republicans have focused all along. Mr. Crook describes the tension between the goal he shares with our Democratic Members and the public’s focus on the to the questions Republicans have asked for in one side of that tors the answers to Republican inquiries:

S13807
The honest case for reform along the lines of is that it fixes U.S. healthcare; still lesser, as the White nate’s fiscal distress. The truth is, it will create the problems than it solves.
On the other side of that tension is is the goal Democratic Members seek.
isking for. From Mr. Crook, who shares my Democratic friends’ goals, I quote:
Enacting this reform is not the end of the healthcare argument, but the beginning. If it does pass, it is filled so that in a the principle makes sense. As Crook puts it “of
And, if the other side prevails, what do mean for the future. From Mr. Crook, who shares my Democratic friends’ goals, I quote:
What is that price, Mr. President? To that extent, what we do know is so high for everyone, but the un they were so from Iowa. In fact, I would this letter be-and it is likely to of fiscally
From rationing care to infringing on that health care costs go up by over $230 here is a scam, a pure and simple scam people. That will lead to a bipartisan a large share of those savings and thus over-and affordability. But that goal of the principle of universal coverage is trumps everything else.
trump the financial burden. It places on small businesses and other left the price burden related premium costs increases will bring? Does it trump the negative impact it will have on the Medicare Program that our seniors count on?
Many would argue that this side, expanding coverage is a worthy goal. But it is not an absolute goal. We prefer to expand coverage through better access and affordability. But that goal of expanded coverage must be balanced with other goals.
We view it as relative to those other goals. It is relative to whether the related Federal and State tax burden is bearable. It is relative to realistic cost containment reforms. It is relative to whether the cost burden on employers, employees and the public is bearable.
It is relative to whether the impact on Medicare services and solvency is bearable.
The American people have tuned into this debate. They don’t like the participation. They agree with all of us that reform is needed. They have been telling us that expanding coverage is important, but not absolute.
I urge the other side to make the honest case for reform to the American people. That is a bipartisan response, process, and product. Americans don’t want bungled health care reform. I yield the floor.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.
Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I want to associate myself with the comments of the Senator from Iowa. In fact, I would like to incorporate them by reference in my comments because they were so inspired and put in this substance as to what this bill does not do and what it does do. In both instances, he is absolutely right. The bill does not accomplish what we set out to do, which was cover all Americans, which was to bend health care costs down, which was to let you keep your insurance if you had it and not have your premiums go up.
It does just the opposite.
It is a $2.3 trillion increase in health care spending—$2.3 trillion. That is how much the government will spend on Health care costs go up by over $230 billion in the first 10 years. We know premiums are going up.
Now we have this interesting issue involving Medicare. We have heard a lot of talk from the other side of the aisle about how Medicare is not being bent, and if it is being cut, it is just being used to help a new entitlement, and therefore it should be counted as part of the basic effort to bring fiscal responsibility to this bill. Well, that is not the case. That is the same hokum. Medicare is being cut by $500 billion the next 10 years, $1 trillion over the first 10 years of full implementation, and $3 trillion over the first 20 years. And then the money is being spent not to make Medicare more solvent, not to make Medicare stronger so it does not have a huge unfunded liability, it is being spent to create this brand new entitlement—an entitlement that no male, man alive can possibly expand the size of government by $23 trillion.
The American people understand this do not work. Common sense kicks in with the American people. They know—they know—from common sense that you cannot have Medicare by $3 trillion, spend it on a new entitlement, and have fiscal responsibility around here and claim Medicare is better off for it. And they do not have to know it through common sense; all they have to do now is listen to the CBO, which has now written us a letter. Let me quote from this letter because it is a devastating letter. I just wish this bill was going to be on the floor long enough for it to actually be open to public view and have some sunshine on it. It is being rushed through here just before Christmas so nobody can see what is actually in it. But here is what CBO says:
“The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund—
That is the Medicare trust fund—under the (bill)—
They use the acronym for it—would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current spending on other parts of legislation or on other programs.
Exactly what this bill does: It spends the Medicare money on other programs.
They go on to say—and this is CBO
speaking, not me:
“To describe the full amount of the [Medicare trust fund]—
Again, they use “HI trust fund”— savings as both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would essentially double-count—
I repeat: “double count”—
a large share of those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s table position.
The simple fact is, what is happening
here is a scam, a pure and simple scam on the American people and especially on the seniors in this country because Medicare is being cut by billions of dol-ars in order to create a new entitlement, and it is going to have a masively negative effect on the fiscal health of this Nation because we know that new entitlement will not be fully funded and we know Medicare has $35 trillion of unfunded liability out there.
If you are going to cut Medicare by $3 trillion, as the other side of the aisle is proposing, if you are going to eliminate Medicare Advantage for a large number of seniors—except those who live in southern Florida—not only they ought to be used to reduce the debt so that the Medicare system becomes more solvent. It is that simple in the long run. It is not being done here. CBO has pulled the curtain back from this game and made it very clear that it is not going to be done. Of course, nobody is going to learn this because they are going to pass this bill through here before you ever get a chance to figure that out and even listen to CBO.

It is just an outrage the way this bill was put together. We all know that. Dark of night, back rooms, deals everywhere, only a few people in the room; those people who really drafted the bill, very small crowd. Nobody else was allowed in. No cameras, no information about what was going on. And then you would bring in a Senator here and a Senator there and say: What do you need from me to get your vote, and something would appear in the bill, I guess. Then the bill arrived here.

It is not unusual around here to have earmarks in bills. If they were within the budget and the budget was reasonable, I would even ask for earmarks. But this goes way beyond the concept of earmarks—this bill. This bill fundamentally changes policy—that has never happened around here—for one part of the country versus another part of the country. In the other words, we have a country—all American seniors—will have to live by massive cuts in Medicare Advantage. That is a pretty good health insurance program for a lot of seniors; I think there are 11 million seniors enrolled in it. All of America has to live by that policy except for three counties in southern Florida. All of America has to live by an insurance situation where insurance companies are taxed at a certain rate, except insurance companies in Nebraska. All of America has to live by Medicaid reimbursement rates, which are going to cost the States billions of dollars—New Hampshire, $120 million over 10 years—except for Vermont and Massachusetts. And then there is a special exemption in Nebraska, and a host of other such deals. That is a total corruption of the concept of policy. Policy in America is supposed to cover everyone. When the Federal Government acts, it is supposed to be a policy that affects everyone equally. You are not supposed to have little cadres of exceptions for those policies.

This bill has been called historic—historic—by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. Well, the least historic thing about this bill is the fundamental damage it has done to the concept of open, thorough, and public debate that was at the heart of the thought process of Adams and Madison, our Founding Fathers, when they created the checks and balances system, with the Senate at the center. The Senate was supposed to be the place where bills come to the floor, they are open to debate, there are amendments, and you have a process where things get aired in the sunshine. No sunshine here—no, not at all. This is not majority rule, as conceived by our Founding Fathers in Philadelphia. This is closer to the single-party state system we see in Europe—or have seen in Europe. The minority is ignored, and there are no checks in this process on the autocratic rule of the majority. The irony, of course, is that the bill never went through the public’s consideration, never went through committee, and was drafted behind closed doors and has been on the floor for less than 72 hours. As a result, we are delivering a health care bill that has been corresponded by special interest, especially on the issue of policy, that is extraordinarily expensive and has a massive expansion in the Federal bureaucracy, to which, if you applied the word “reform,” you would have to call Bernie Madoff “honest.” The tests just simply do not apply here.

Unfortunately, this bill in its present form, I believe, will lead to fundamental harm to the fiscal health of this Nation. There is no question in my mind but that if we load $2.3 trillion of cost onto our government, expand our government in this manner, our children are going to be passing a nation where they have more opportunity than our generation had. Further, I do not think it is going to help the Nation’s people, our people relative to their health care. I think it will lead to a significant contraction of the quality of health care, especially for seniors but for all Americans, as we lose the innovation, the energy for innovation, and the resources for innovation. As a result, this bill, in my opinion, should be sent back to the drawing boards and should be redone.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KAUFMAN). The Senator from Texas, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. President, over the last few days, as we have dug into this bill and the process by which it was written behind closed doors, we have discovered the bill is chock-full of sweetheart deals.

When the Congress voted to change Washington last year, they did not think it would be politics as usual here, but unfortunately it has sunk to a whole new level. It is painful for me to read the editorial in hometown newspapers back in Texas and elsewhere around the country to see what editorial opinion and other opinion leaders are saying about the process by which this bill was written, but let me read a couple of lines from the Fort Worth Star-Telegram:

The tawdry use of earmarks to bury the doubts of recalcitrant moderate Democrats was a cynical display of ends-justifies-the-means horse-trading that President Barack Obama campaigned against as a Senator and a candidate.

This was an administration that was elected on the campaign slogan: “Change You Can Believe In.”

But when David Axelrod, one of the masterminds of the campaign, one of the advisers to the President, was asked about that, he said: Well, this is just the way it is. This is the way Washington works.

I, for one, want to stand up and say this is not the way it should work. I know Presidents campaign for office saying they are going to change Washington, but the truth is the hardest fight is to keep Washington from changing you. Unfortunately, it seems as though that is what has happened here.

Rather than listening to the American people, the creators of this health care bill started with the special interests first. That is where the meetings behind closed doors started—with the pharmaceutical industry, to cut a deal with them; with the insurance industry, to cut a deal with them. The insurance industry will get $476 billion worth of tax credits from this bill alone, and the hospital industry, and the list goes on and on. Colleagues will stand up and tout the endorsement of organizations such as AARP that has backed nearly $½ trillion in cuts out of Medicare because, as it turns out, they are in the insurance business and they can sell more Medicare policies with the Medicare Advantage, as this bill does.

In order to get the 60 votes for cloture on the motion to proceed, we didn’t hear high-minded and idealistic debates about what is the right policy for this country when it comes to reforming our health care system. If this bill could have passed or mustered 60 votes because it was such great policy and the American people were embracing it, you wouldn’t need to make all these sweetheart deals that were made behind closed doors to induce recalcitrant Senators to vote for cloture, not because they think it is the right policy but because their State got a special deal.

We know well about what happened in Louisiana and now in Nebraska, but of course there were special deals for Vermont that included $600 million in the managers’ package. We know that in California, the so-called “Botax” has been misplaced, where they cut a tax on tanning beds at the insistence of one of the businesses named Allergan out in California which led the lobbying campaign to defeat the cosmetic surgery tax.

We have heard this is all about keeping insurance companies honest, but the fact is there were special deals here for insurance companies in Nebraska—what has been coined the “Omaha Prime Cuts,” the carve-out from new fees for Mutual of Omaha and other insurance companies doing business in Nebraska that no other insurance company in the Nation is going to benefit from.

Then there is the so-called “Gator Aid” special deal for insurance companies in Florida.

There is a $100 million hospital deal in Connecticut—something called “U Con.”

And, of course, there were deals for Montana that were slipped in the bill. Although you know what, no one actually had the courage to mention the name of the State. You had to start to dig into it, like the Louisiana deal. At least the Senator from Nebraska was brazen enough to actually have Nebraska listed by name. The rest of them you have to dig out by trying to figure out: Who benefits from this deal and who doesn’t?

I want to raise a point of order. What about the other States? My State, under this unfunded mandate in this legislation, will have to pay the State taxpayers $21 billion in unfunded Medicaid liabilities over the next 10 years. We didn’t make a sweetheart deal to vote for bad policy because my State could get some extra money, because I think that is unprincipled. I wouldn’t do it. But what about the other States that voted for the bill without getting the sweetheart money, such as Arkansas, which faces an unfunded Medicaid mandate of $335 million; Colorado, $624 million; California, $3.5 billion—a State that is already nearly bankrupt. This is going to make their situation enormously worse, as Governor Schwarzenegger has acknowledged.

I am not saying other States should somehow get the sweetheart deals that were negotiated for these other votes, but I am saying this entire bill is a bad deal and we need to kill it and start over. We expunge all the earmarks, and bring the kind of transparency the President campaigned on and that I think the American people have a right to expect.

These sweetheart deals are egregious in and of themselves. What is worse—and I have been on the telephone talking to constituents back in Texas—there are some people who paint with such a broad brush, they say, Well, we think all of you are corrupt, because this verifies some of the most cynical suspicions that people have about government. I, for one, resent it. We have many honest and honorable people who serve in public life, and this taints us all with a broad brush and, simply stated, makes me furious. I resent it. I resent it. I resent it. It’s not directed spending item ensure as soon as practicable, the Senator shall ensure that a list of such items (and the name of any Senator who submitted a request to the Senate for each respectively included in the list) is printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

I would simply inquire of the Chair: Is the Chair aware whether this list of congressionally directed spending items and their Senate sponsors has been printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is not aware if such a disclosure has been made.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, under those circumstances, I raise a point of order that the amendment is not in order since it violates the provisions of Senate rule XLIV, paragraph 4(a).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Paragraph 4(a) of rule XLIV requires that the Senator who proposes an amendment (or a committee report of the Senate containing any congressionally directed spending item, limited tax benefit, or limited tariff benefit which was not included in the bill or joint resolution as placed on the calendar or as reported by any committee, in a committee report on such bill or joint resolution, or a committee report of the Senate on a companion measure, then as soon as practicable, the Senator shall ensure that a list of such items (and the name of any Senator who submitted a request to the Senate for each respectively included in the list) is printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, last week I had a little fun with an old holiday classic: Clemente Clark Moore’s “The Night Before Christmas” which you can check out on YouTube. While I meant this parody to bring some much needed levity to the process, the points I made are very serious. For the American people, there is nothing more serious than the reform bill we are considering today.

The majority’s so-called reform package will restructure one-sixth of our struggling economy, drive health care costs higher, force millions off their current plan, put health care decisions in the hands of bureaucrats, cut seniors’ Medicare, raise taxes, and hurt small businesses and cost jobs.

There is nothing funny about this health care bill. Americans faced with rising premiums asked for bipartisan reform to make health care costs affordable. But the Democrats fail to give the American people what they want, which is why Senator Reid has written bill after bill behind closed doors with no Republicans. The majority party doesn’t want Americans to know they are getting a lump of coal for Christmas until it is too late.

But Leader Reid has outdone himself on the latest deal he cut. His is Chicago-style politics at its worst: a 2,700-page backroom deal written behind closed doors, full of political payoffs, vampire votes in the dead of night, all to pass a health care bill before Christmas that the American people don’t want, that will increase health care costs, raise taxes, and cut Medicare for seniors, operating under an arbitrary deadline which seems designed to minimize transparency, understanding, and public involvement.

But I want the American people to know what they are getting from the Majority. They are getting a lump of coal.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I appeal the ruling of the Chair and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to table the appeal of the ruling of the Chair and I ask that the vote occur upon the expiration of all postcloture time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The yeas and nays on the bill are ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be.

The yeas and nays are ordered.
workers if it is going to cost them a pretty penny, at a time when the companies are trying to pinch pennies.

There is also a paperwork mandate which is a new administrative burden on small businesses which, according to the National Federation of Independent Businesses, will impose a direct $17 billion burden on businesses.

Unfortunately for small businesses, unlike larger businesses or unions, the news gets even worse. Unlike large businesses, small businesses can only find and purchase health insurance in the private insurance marketplace. That means to insure their employees, small businesses have to go to the big insurance companies on which the Reid bill is placing hefty new fees. Most folks don’t have a problem with paying more fees on insurance companies. It seems to be politically popular, but it is economics 101 that these insurance companies are not going to suck it up and swallow all of these new fees the GO has stated so explicitly. Instead, they will pass the fees on to small businesses that will have no choice but to purchase their services.

One of the gimmicks the majority is using to hide the cost of the bill is a weak tax credit that is supposed to help small businesses in purchasing health insurance. The hitch is that small businesses will only get full tax benefits if they have less than 10 employees. If they hire that 11th employee, the tax credit is reduced. At 25 employees the tax credit is no longer available.

In addition, a small business can only get full credit if it pays its employees an average of $25,000 a year or less. So no salary increase, no wage increases.

In other words, in what is already a horrible economic situation, where businesses are shuttering their doors and workers are being laid off, we are actually going to punish small businesses for hiring new employees and paying workers more.

This tax credit is also a case of bait and switch. If your small business happens to have below a normal qualification, it is only temporary—after 6 years the credit goes away—but the mandates and burdens on small businesses stay.

That is why the National Federation of Independent Businesses, in their strong opposition to the majority’s plan, stated that it:

will not only fail to reduce and control the constantly climbing healthcare costs small business owners face, but it will result in new and higher costs on their businesses. Reform that was supposed to be all about small business has turned out to be more about big business and other late-night dealmakers as the expense of our nation’s job creators.

That is not the kind of reform small businesses can afford.

Under the majority’s latest backroom deal, Americans are getting hundreds of billions of dollars in cuts to critical health care programs, such as $128 billion in cuts to Medicare Advantage, as well as cuts to hospitals, nursing homes, home health agencies, and hospices.

When government forced through massive cuts to home health in the late 1990s, the unintended consequences were costly and tragic in Missouri. A significant number of agencies closed, forcing patients into more expensive care. One example is in one county in Missouri, the county’s only home health agency, which served 40 patients they served in homes at a cost of $400,000 a year. When those patients were cut off, 30 were forced into hospitals or nursing homes. The cost skyrocketed for these patients to a staggering $1.4 million per the government tab or a $1 million larger hit to taxpayers. We don’t even know what happened to the other 10 patients who lost this critical care.

This is not the kind of reform Americans can afford. Under the majority’s latest backroom deal, States are also getting hit hard. For example, the majority’s big plan is to expand Medicaid, but their big plan for paying for it is to put the burden on the States; that is, unless they switch to a backroom deal like Nebraska, which leaves other States holding the bag for their costs. That brings me to my next point.

Under the majority’s latest backroom deal, Americans are forced to pay a number of political payoffs. There are such a large number of political payoffs, which is why this bill is starting to be dubbed “cash for clout.”

There is a carve-out for the insurance industry in rural Nebraska. There is an extra $300 million in Medicaid funding for Louisiana, now known as the “Louisiana purchase.” What was the mysterious $100 million for a “health care facility” turns out to be a hospital in Iowa.

Sadly, this isn’t even the entire list of sweetheart deals in Reid’s latest backroom deal. That is not the kind of reform Americans want.

With Chicago politics and backroom deals such as this, it is no surprise that poll after poll makes clear the American people are saying no to the Democrats’ proposals.

The latest poll released by Quinnipiac University found that American voters “mostly disapprove” of the plan—53 to 36 percent. A recent Washington Post/ABC News poll, detailed in a Post article, found the American public generally fearful that a governmental system would bring higher costs while worsening the quality of their care.

The American public is absolutely right. Americans don’t want this bill. In the classic tale called “The Christmas Carol,” Scrooge was given the opportunity to see the ghosts of Christmas past, present, and future. While the Democrats are trying to paint the GOP as “Scrooge,” they would do well to look at what the Christmas future would look like if their bill were to pass.

We don’t want to wake up next Christmas and have Americans paying more for health care or being unable to get it or losing their jobs. But under the majority’s latest backroom deal, that is the future.

Next Christmas, we don’t want to see small businesses that still cannot afford to offer health care to their employees or, worse, small businesses struggling to keep their doors open because of the costly new burdens in this bill. Under the majority’s latest backroom deal, that is the future. A year from now we don’t want to hear that seniors have lost access to services and care. Unfortunately, that is the Christmas future we face if the bill passes. Christmas future—several years from now—could look even worse.

That is why in my “The Night Before Christmas” parody it was not funny as much as it was scary and true when I said:

I could not catch the holiday spirit myself, how far away from common sense we’ve been led, our kids and our grandkids have their futures to dread.

In the last year, my colleagues on this side of the aisle have watched with dismay as the wheels have come off Federal spending; a trillion dollars of taxpayer money here and a trillion dollars there. Got a problem? Throw money at it. Will historians look back and say that the 111th Congress is where the decline of American economic power began in earnest? I don’t want that on my watch. We can reform health care without spending trillions of our children’s and grandchildren’s money.

If the majority were to bring up a bill that made health insurance more affordable for small business owners to purchase for their employees, that eliminated frivolous lawsuits, that emphasized wellness and prevention programs, they could go a long way to solving the problems of the uninsured and underinsured, and they could probably get 80 or 90 truly bipartisan votes. The problem that they want, apparently, is to take over health care, at a tremendous cost to individuals, families, and businesses, and to increase the dependency on the Federal Government. That is not a Christmas present I want, and I don’t want to give it to the American people.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. ENZI. I thank the Senator from Missouri for his comments. He has been chairman of the Small Business Committee. Small business plays a huge role, the biggest role, in the economy of the United States.

We could have, and we should have, spent the last 4 weeks talking about what needed to be done with small business. It is a big issue and it is important. I appreciate the emphasis the Senator from Missouri has put on it through the years.

I want to talk about the whole bill today, because a quote I ran into was that “absolute power corrupts—absolute power corrupts.”

The Democrats have absolute power right now. Under the biggest requirement for votes, it only takes 60 in the
The Democrats have 60 votes. In the House, they have a clear majority of the votes, and that is all that is required to pass a bill there. They are under the impression that they won the election, so they get to write the bills. Never before has that happened on a major piece of legislation.

Everyone in this country should be upset when the majority refers to bills like ending slavery and civil rights and Medicare and welfare reform and paint the Republicans as the opposition. Significant numbers on both sides of the aisle made those bills possible. I am pretty sure people remember that it was Lincoln, a Republican, who led the fight to abolish slavery. Leader Mansfield gives Everett Dirksen, a Republican from Illinois, credit for the leadership that made the civil rights bill possible. In every instance, until now, Republicans have had a leadership role and both sides have substantially participated in making and voting for those bills. That is how it has to work for our country to be successful.

Only one party, and especially one person, —gains— from this so-called health care reform bill. The President will not —he was allowed to accomplish something against all odds. Why against all odds? Because the Democrats of the Senate wrote off the 40 votes of the Republicans. That is right, we were written off from the start. One of the leaders was allowed to participate to see if we couldn’t be persuaded to take what the Democrats wanted to write and foist on America. Anything short of buying the whole Democratic plan and we could be and would be thrown overboard because our votes aren’t needed. We were thrown overboard with the excuse of phony time deadlines, when it was needing to do just the Democratic ideas.

Senator Kennedy and I were able to work through an incredible number of bills because we recognized that both sides had good ideas and both sides had bad ideas. The trick was to take as many of the good ideas as possible and have the courage to tell some on both sides that their idea wasn’t ready for prime time. With evenhandedness and both leaders promoting the surviving ideas, many of the bills were unanimous on both ends of the building. Were there flaws in some of the bills? Yes. But they were allowed to pass by one party—and no all-encompassing bill has been done this way ever before—when the bills are done by one party, those inevitable flaws result in justified finger pointing.

You can’t change such a basic part of the economy—something that affects every single person—by ignoring many who have experience in the business and in the area and not expect major flaws. The American people even recognize the flaws—already. Of course, everybody has some knowledge of health care, since it affects us all. When those flaws develop, and they will, in an avalanche, everybody will point to one hand and say why did you have to point your power? Why didn’t you work to get it right? Why did you have to polarize the issue to show you were the only ones concerned about people?

Of course the Republicans will be compelled to pull out the proof that we warned about the flaws but were ignored, because the Democrats are focused on proving that they won the election. Normally, there is plenty of blame to go around, but not on this one.

The Republicans were thrown overboard. That only left the 60 votes needed to pass the bill. Well, you cannot get 60 people to agree on 100 percent of those bills. But you can get 60 people to agree on a place to eat dinner. But all 60 had to agree. That is where you have to move away from legislating and into dealmaking. That is when you have to start playing games like “Let’s pretend this is right.” I don’t want to downplay how masterful the leader was. Everyone has to be in awe of his ability to give much to a few and none to many and get 100 percent to stay on what they can see from the polls is right.

I don’t want to downplay how masterful the leader was. Everyone has to be in awe of his ability to give much to a few and none to many and get 100 percent to stay on what they can see from the polls is right. I don’t have time to explain how the Democrats are planning to spend the $250 billion in adjustments to what they get paid because it wasn’t paid for, and we are going to come back and do that without it being paid for. It could have been paid for out of the Medicare money if they were using it for Medicare only.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the effects of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act on the Federal budget and the Balance in the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CBO has been asked for additional information about the projection of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), incorporating the manager’s amendment, on the Federal budget and on the balance in the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund, from which Medicare Part A benefits are paid. Specifically, CBO has been asked whether the reductions in projected Part A outlays and increases in projected HI revenues under the legislation can provide additional resources to pay future Medicare benefits while simultaneously providing resources to pay for new programs outside of Medicare.

HOW THE HI TRUST FUND WORKS

The HI trust fund, like other Federal trust funds, is essentially an accounting mechanism. In a given year, the sum of specified HI receipts and the interest that is credited on the previous trust fund balance, less spending for Medicare Part A benefits, represents the surplus (or deficit, if the latter is greater) in the trust fund for that year. Any cash generated when there is an excess of receipts over spending is not retained by the trust fund. Rather, it is transferred to the Treasury, which provides government bonds to the trust fund in exchange and uses the cash to finance the government’s ongoing activities. The description applies to Social Security trust funds; those funds have run cash surpluses for many years, and those surpluses have reduced the government’s need to borrow for other federal activities.

The HI trust fund is not currently running an annual surplus.

The HI trust fund is part of the Federal government, so transactions with the trust fund and the Treasury are intragovernmental and leave no imprint on the unified budget. From a unified budget perspective, any imprint or decrease in outlays in the HI trust fund represents cash that can be used to finance other government activities without requiring new government borrowing from the public. Similarly, any increase in outlays or decrease in revenues in the HI trust fund in some years will represent a draw on the government’s cash in that year. Thus, the resources to redeem government bonds in the HI trust fund and thereby pay for Medicare benefits in that year will be generated from taxes, other government income, or government borrowing in that year.

Reports on HI trust fund balances from the Medicare trustees and others show an increase in the amount of prefunding of benefits that theoretically is occurring in the trust fund. However, the government has used the cash from the HI trust fund surpluses to finance other current activities rather than saving the cash by running unified budget surpluses, the government as a whole has not been truly prefunding Medicare benefits. The nature of trust fund accounting within a unified budget framework implies that trust fund balances convey little information about the extent to which the Federal government has prepared for future financial burdens, and therefore that trust funds have important legal meaning but little economic meaning.

THE IMPACT OF THE PPACA ON THE HI TRUST FUND AND ON THE BUDGET AS A WHOLE

Several weeks ago CBO analyzed the effect of the PPACA as originally proposed on the HI trust fund and the government’s overall finances. CBO and the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) estimated that the act would reduce Part A outlays by $246 billion and increase HI revenues by $69 billion during the 2010–2019 period. Those changes would increase the trust fund’s balance by $69 billion, so they would be entirely offset by Part A’s costs during the next 10 years, but the government as a whole would be doing much less additional saving.

The improvement in Medicare’s finances would not be matched by a corresponding improvement in the Federal government’s overall finances. CBO and JCT estimated that the PPACA, as originally proposed, would add more than $300 billion ($246 billion plus $69 billion in interest) to the balance of the HI trust fund by 2019, while reducing Federal budget deficits by a total of $130 billion by 2019. Thus, the trust fund would be recording additional savings more than $300 billion during the 10 years, whereas the government as a whole would be doing much less additional saving.

CBO has not undertaken a comparable quantitative analysis for the PPACA incorporating the manager’s amendment, but the results would be qualitatively similar. The reductions in projected Part A outlays and increases in projected HI revenues would significantly raise balances in the HI trust fund and create the appearance that significant additional savings had been set aside to pay for future Medicare benefits. However, the additional savings by the government as a whole—which represent the true increase in the ability to pay for future Medicare benefits or other programs—would be a good deal smaller.

The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund under the PPACA would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current Medicare spending out of other parts of the budget or on other programs. Trust fund accounting shows the magnitude of the savings within the trust fund, and those savings in deed benefit Medicare and future generations of Medicare beneficiaries. However, even accounting ignores the burden that would be faced by the rest of the government later in redeeming the bonds held by the trust fund. Unified budget accounting shows that the majority of the HI trust fund savings would be used to pay for other spending, and that the PPACA would not enhance the ability of the government to redeem the bonds credited to the trust fund to pay for future Medicare benefits. To describe the full amount of those savings as if both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would be essentially equivalent is misleading. Those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s fiscal position.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask unan imous consent to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a December 22 article from the Casper Star Tribune, by nationally syndicated columnist Cal Thomas.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Casper Star Tribune, Dec. 22, 2009]

BY CAL THOMAS

There were two snow jobs in Washington over the weekend. One came from the sky as a record December snowfall blanketed the city. The other came from Capitol Hill where the Senate labored to cover up the real effects of its massive “health care reform” bill.

All you need to know about this monstrosity is contained in a paragraph from page four of the Congressional Budget Office’s 21-page letter to Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-Nev.) and the Senate Budget Committee (sponsoring the PPACA)’s assessment, enacting the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act with the manager’s amendment that would result in a net reduction in federal budget deficits of $132 billion over the 2010–2019 period. In the subsequent decade, the collective effect of its provisions would probably be continued reductions in federal budget deficits if all of the provisions continued to be fully implemented. Those estimates are subject to substantial uncertainty.

So uncertain are they that the CBO later noticed an error in its calculations and a day later on Sunday, Dec. 20 delivered another letter (in 2009 dollars) correcting that error with no impact on the estimated effects of the legislation during the 2010–2019 period. However, the correction reduced the degree to which the legislation would lower federal deficits in the decade after 2019.

The public is being asked to swallow a bill that most senators say doesn’t contain, contains cost projections that are substantially uncertain, and touts outcomes that can be reasonably predicted to be nothing that resem bles ObamaCare (health care) reform.

The Presiding Officer. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Wall Street Journal article entitled “ObamaCare’s Longshoremen Rules.”

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal]

OBAMACARE’S LONGSHOREMEN RULES

President Obama praised the Senate Wednesday for clearing a 60–40 procedural vote on his health plan in the dead of night and “standing up to the special interests who’ve prevented reform for decades and who are furiously lobbying against it now.” They’re furiously lobbying all right—not against ObamaCare but for the special interests in the Senate bill.

Start with the special tax carve-outs included in the “manager’s amendment” that Harry Reid dropped Saturday morning. Workers at defense contractors and aerospace companies would receive a $2,400 deduction on their taxes. This deduction of $2,400 for those workers at a time of double-digit unemployment. It includes a massive new entitlement program—the CLASS Act (Support for Community and Support Services)—which Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad has described as “a Ponzi scheme of the first order” and which has recently opposed by 11 Democrats, including Dick Durbin.

To their credit, Republicans have stood together in opposition to this health care fl a special tax carve-out. Their pledge to voters in the November 2010 election should be to repeal the measure and to offer real insurance and health care reform that will not include an abortion permission, new taxes, more entitlements and a bigger bureaucracy. Yes, it can be done.

He says:

There were two snow jobs in Washington over the weekend. One came from the sky as a record December snowfall blanketed the city. The other came from Capitol Hill where the Senate labored to cover up the real effects of its massive “health care reform” bill.

The Presiding Officer. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Wall Street Journal article entitled “ObamaCare’s Longshoremen Rules.”

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal]

OBAMACARE’S LONGSHOREMEN RULES

President Obama praised the Senate yesterday for clearing a 60–40 procedural vote on his health plan in the dead of night and “standing up to the special interests who’ve prevented reform for decades and who are fu riously lobbying against it now.” They’re furiously lobbying all right—not against ObamaCare but for the special interests in the Senate bill.

Start with the special tax carve-outs included in the “manager’s amendment” that Harry Reid dropped Saturday morning. Workers at defense contractors and aerospace companies would receive a $2,400 deduction on their taxes. This deduction of $2,400 for those workers at a time of double-digit unemployment. It includes a massive new entitlement program—the CLASS Act (Support for Community and Support Services)—which Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad has described as “a Ponzi scheme of the first order” and which has recently opposed by 11 Democrats, including Dick Durbin.

To their credit, Republicans have stood together in opposition to this health care fl a special tax carve-out. Their pledge to voters in the November 2010 election should be to repeal the measure and to offer real insurance and health care reform that will not include an abortion permission, new taxes, more entitlements and a bigger bureaucracy. Yes, it can be done.

He says:

There were two snow jobs in Washington over the weekend. One came from the sky as a record December snowfall blanketed the city. The other came from Capitol Hill where the Senate labored to cover up the real effects of its massive “health care reform” bill.

The Presiding Officer. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Wall Street Journal article entitled “ObamaCare’s Longshoremen Rules.”

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal]

OBAMACARE’S LONGSHOREMEN RULES

President Obama praised the Senate yesterday for clearing a 60–40 procedural vote on his health plan in the dead of night and “standing up to the special interests who’ve prevented reform for decades and who are furiously lobbying against it now.” They’re furiously lobbying all right—not against ObamaCare but for the special interests in the Senate bill.

Start with the special tax carve-outs included in the “manager’s amendment” that Harry Reid dropped Saturday morning. Workers at defense contractors and aerospace companies would receive a $2,400 deduction on their taxes. This deduction of $2,400 for those workers at a time of double-digit unemployment. It includes a massive new entitlement program—the CLASS Act (Support for Community and Support Services)—which Budget Committee Chairman Kent Conrad has described as “a Ponzi scheme of the first order” and which has recently opposed by 11 Democrats, including Dick Durbin.

To their credit, Republicans have stood together in opposition to this health care fl a special tax carve-out. Their pledge to voters in the November 2010 election should be to repeal the measure and to offer real insurance and health care reform that will not include an abortion permission, new taxes, more entitlements and a bigger bureaucracy. Yes, it can be done.

He says:

There were two snow jobs in Washington over the weekend. One came from the sky as a record December snowfall blanketed the city. The other came from Capitol Hill where the Senate labored to cover up the real effects of its massive “health care reform” bill.
union, which has negotiated very costly insurance benefits. The well-connected dock workers join other union interests such as miners, electrical linemen, EMUs, construction workers, fishermen, and retirees, early retirees and others who are absolved from this tax.

In other words, controlling insurance costs is enormous, unless your very costly insurance is provided by an important Democratic constituency.

The bill also allows a pass on the excise tax to the 17 states with the highest health costs. This provision applied only to 10 states in a prior version, but other Senators had made a fuss. So controlling health costs is enormously important, except in the places where health costs need the most control.

Naturally, the Secretary of Health and Human Services will decide how to measure "costs" and therefore which 17 states qualify. (Prediction: Swing states that voted for Mr. Obama in 2008 or have powerful Democratic Senators.)

These 11th-hour indulgences make a hash of Mr. Orszag's cost-control theories and Mr. Obama's cost-control claims. Their spin has been that wise men would convene and make benevolent decisions about everyone's health care based only on evidence and the public good. reality is that the Reid bill shows, politics will always dominate when Washington is directing a U.S. health industry that is larger than the economy of France.

Or take a separate $6.7 billion annual "fee" on insurance companies that is supposed to be divvied up by market share. This beaut has been that the federal government would use the fines levied on those who cannot afford to provide their employees with the federal minimum standard of health insurance. However, this mechanism singles out the construction industry by altering the exemption so that it applies only to those firms with fewer than 5 employees. This narrowly focused provision is an unprecedented assault on our industry, and the men and women who every day make the bold decision to strike out on their own by starting a business. Our members' benefit packages reflect the reality of their business models, and they proudly offer the best health insurance coverage that they can afford. It is unfortunate that small business owners can bear the increased cost of these new benefits simply because Congress mandates that they do so.

In the real world, the rhetoric surrounding this legislation will meet the stark reality of the employer struggling to make payroll, this specialty interest carve out is simply another bill to pay in an industry that, with an unemployment rate exceeding 18% and more than $200 billion in economic activity lost in the past year, already is struggling to survive.

And, we would be remiss if we failed to question the justification for singling out the construction industry to bear such a burden. We are unaware of any data or evidence that suggests that the needs and struggles of a construction contractor with fewer than 50 employees are so different from those of small business owners in other industries, and absent such convincing evidence, we are left to assume that this specific provision is merely a political payoff to satisfy the desires of a small constituency.

As Congress moves forward in the legislative process for H.R. 3590, we strongly encourage you to convene a provision that needlessly single out small construction industry employers.

Sincerely,

Mr. ENZI. It points out how there will be an excise tax in 17 States with the highest costs, but yet we made an exception for a number of unions, particularly the longshoremen's union not being subject to some of the taxes in the bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from a number of contractors.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DECEMBER 21, 2009

U.S. SENATE
WASHINGTON, DC

Dear Senator: We are writing to express our strong opposition to language contained in the Manager's Amendment to H.R. 3590, which excludes the construction industry from the small business exemption contained in the bill. We regret that this is our first opportunity to address this issue, though the fact that the Manager's Amendment was made public less than two days before the first vote on the matter has increased the difficulty of playing a constructive role in the legislative process.

In recognition of the negative impact that a mandate to provide health insurance will have on employers, H.R. 3590 exempts employers with employees from the fines levied on those who cannot afford to provide their employees with the federal minimum standard of health insurance. However, this exemption singles out the construction industry by altering the exemption so that it applies only to those firms with fewer than 5 employees. This narrowly focused provision is an unprecedented assault on our industry, and the men and women who every day make the bold decision to strike out on their own by starting a business. Our members' benefit packages reflect the reality of their business models, and they proudly offer the best health insurance coverage that they can afford. It is unfortunate that small business owners can bear the increased cost of these new benefits simply because Congress mandates that they do so.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a Wall Street Journal article that covers that same topic.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S13814

Mr. President, it is with great regret that we must inform you that the Senate has voted down a separate and a separate $6.7 billion annual "fee" on insurance companies that is supposed to be divvied up by market share. This beaut has been that wise men would convene and make benevolent decisions about everyone's health care based only on evidence and the public good. reality is that the Reid bill shows, politics will always dominate when Washington is directing a U.S. health industry that is larger than the economy of France.

Or take a separate $6.7 billion annual "fee" on insurance companies that is supposed to be divvied up by market share. This beaut has been that the federal government would use the fines levied on those who cannot afford to provide their employees with the federal minimum standard of health insurance. However, this mechanism singles out the construction industry by altering the exemption so that it applies only to those firms with fewer than 5 employees. This narrowly focused provision is an unprecedented assault on our industry, and the men and women who every day make the bold decision to strike out on their own by starting a business. Our members' benefit packages reflect the reality of their business models, and they proudly offer the best health insurance coverage that they can afford. It is unfortunate that small business owners can bear the increased cost of these new benefits simply because Congress mandates that they do so.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from a number of contractors.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate Health Bill Unfair to Construction Industry—NAHB

"In their rush to pass massive health care reform, before Christmas, House Democrats included a last-minute provision overtly targeted at the construction industry, including home builders," the National Association of Home Builders said in an alert to its 200,000 members Monday. "In order to find the 60 votes needed to pass health-care reform, a provision was slipped into the health-care bill to exclude the construction industry from the small business health-care exemption contained in the bill."

Employers with more than 50 employees would be required to offer insurance or pay a fine of up to $750 per employee if any employee obtains federal subsidies for coverage. But the builder group says the bill singles out the construction industry by "only giving construction firms an exemption from the bill's employer mandates if a firm employs less than five people. Every other industry is granted a provision if they have fewer than 50 employees." Many home builders are small, private organizations working to survive the worst downturn in decades. More than half of the NAHB's members have fewer than five employees. "You might as well take an industry that has been a cornerstone of the economy and kick it while it's down," said Jerry Howard, the Washington-based group's chief executive. "It makes no sense . . . and it's really bad public policy."

The NAHB is urging its members to quickly contact their senators to derail the measure. The Senate, however, is marching toward a Christmas Eve vote. The Senate version needs to be reconciled with a House-passed bill, but is likely to form the core of any final legislation presented to President Barack Obama for his signature.

If the Senate bill passes and goes to a conference committee with the House, as expected, the House is likely to do most of the rewriting. That's because Majority Leader Harry Reid—at the end of a deal with Senate Democrats to pass health-care reform before Christmas—promised that a key exemption so that it applies to only those employers with fewer than 50 employees is included in the Senate bill's employer mandates if a firm employs less than five people. Every other industry is granted a provision if they have fewer than 50 employees. Many home builders are small, private organizations working to survive the worst downturn in decades. More than half of the NAHB's members have fewer than five employees. "You might as well take an industry that has been a cornerstone of the economy and kick it while it's down," said Jerry Howard, the Washington-based group's chief executive. "It makes no sense . . . and it's really bad public policy."

The NAHB is urging its members to quickly contact their senators to derail the measure. The Senate, however, is marching toward a Christmas Eve vote. The Senate version needs to be reconciled with a House-passed bill, but is likely to form the core of any final legislation presented to President Barack Obama for his signature.

If the Senate bill passes and goes to a conference committee with the House, as expected, the House is likely to do most of the rewriting. That's because Majority Leader Harry Reid—at the end of a deal with Senate Democrats to pass health-care reform before Christmas—promised that a key have to tell them that if the Reid bill is passed, their jobs and their paychecks will be in danger. The bill being pushed through the Senate imposes $28 billion of new taxes on businesses that will eliminate jobs and reduce wages. Many business owners cannot provide health insurance. They cannot afford insurance for their workers or for their own families. They have looked at their bottom lines and understand that they simply cannot afford to buy insurance and continue to stay in business—health insurance simply costs too much.

Rather than addressing the issue and enacting reforms that would lower health insurance costs, the majority’s health care bill instead increase the taxes that these businesses will have to pay. These are the same businesses that are already barely making it. These are the same businesses that are laying off workers. They are already struggling to survive.

We know what the new employer taxes in the Reid bill will do, and who will ultimately have to pay the price for this misguided policy. These taxes will eliminate jobs and be paid for on the backs of workers.

The Congressional Budget Office has told us that the new job killing taxes in the Reid bill will lower wages across this country by $28 billion. We have shed 3.5 million jobs since January of this year and the average workweek is now down to 33 hours for the American worker. Yet the bill before us today will actually make that situation worse.

The workers who will be the hardest hit by the job killing tax in the Reid bill are those already making the lowest wages and with the fewest job opportunities. According to the Congressional Budget Office, employer mandates like those included in the Reid bill would reduce the hiring of low-wage workers.

Low-income workers are already hit hard by the current economic conditions. These low-income workers typically have less formal education and find it even more difficult to find work. Workers without a high school diploma have a 50 percent higher unemployment rate than workers with higher education levels.

Harvard Professor Kate Baicker reports that many employers, like the one in this bill, will mean that “workers who would lose their jobs are disproportionately likely to be high school dropouts, minority and women.” This is in part due to the fact that many of these workers are only making minimum wage. Their employers cannot reduce their wages, so consequently they will either have to reduce the number of hours these employees work or simply get rid of them to make up for the costs of the next tax.

Employer mandates and the job killing taxes that go with them are paid on the backs of low-income workers. The job killing taxes in this bill fall disproportionately on the people who struggle the most—putting the jobs they have at risk and making it even more difficult to find a new one.

At a time when Americans across this country are looking for signs of an economic recovery, the Senate should be debating a bill that helps the situation, rather than a bill that makes it worse.

The job killing tax in the Reid bill will:— require employers from hiring new workers and growing their business. Any small business that currently has 50 or fewer employees will do everything they can to avoid hiring that 51st employee in order to avoid these new taxes.

I filed an amendment to the Reid bill that would protect businesses and their workers from the worst effects of the job killing tax. My amendment would simply suspend the employer mandate any time the unemployment rate goes above 6 percent.

Between 1999 and 2008, the unemployment rate was about 5 percent. But when our economy began to struggle, we saw the unemployment rate rise to a point that now we are seeing more than 10 percent.

It seems only logical to me that if our economy is struggling and people are losing their jobs, we would want to protect workers from having their wages cut and even losing their jobs because of the job killing tax in the Reid bill.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana,

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I now yield to Senator MURRAY from Washington—I suggest she be recognized to speak for 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, the health insurance system in our country has been broken for a very long time. For far too long, families and businesses across my home State of Washington have been forced to make some tough decisions, spending nights struggling or whispering after their kids go to bed about how to pay the bills and praying they do not get sick.

I am proud to say that is about to change. Over the course of months of work on this issue, I have noticed it is very easy for this debate to tip into the realm of abstractions, to focus on numbers and charts—to devote into petty partisanship or ideological inflexibility. Too often real people get left out of this conversation—mothers and fathers who are scared they are going to lose their jobs; families scared they are going to lose their insurance; people with preexisting conditions who cannot get coverage and who know they are one hospital visit away from bankruptcy; small business owners who cannot increase and who want to cover their employees but they cannot keep up with the rising costs; senior citizens who are forced to cut their pills in half to make them last twice as long; people who pay their premiums and like their doctors, but when they get sick they find out that some of the most personal choices in their lives are being made by their insurance companies.

These are the real people who need real health insurance reform. Most Americans seem to fall into one of those categories.

Over the past few months, I have tried to ensure that the struggles of people in my home State are represented in this debate. I told my colleagues the stories that I have received in over 10,000 letters and e-mails and at roundtables and on the phone, stories told to me too often by men and women with tears in their eyes or a quiver in their voice, people who are not looking for a handout or a free ride but who are pleading for a fair system—a system that works for families or businesses like theirs.

One of the stories is Janet's from Seattle. She lost her job, lost her insurance, and succumbed to cancer after being forced to wait 6 weeks to see a specialist after her throat began to hurt. Janet's story is why we need real health insurance reform.

I told my colleagues the story of Joseph and his wife who was denied an MRI after complaining of pain in her chest, and only after 3 years of fighting her insurance company were they able to persuade her insurer to begin and begin the treatment she desperately needed. Their story is why we need real health insurance reform.

I told the story of Mark Peters from Port Townsend who owns a small technology company. He told me he is being crushed by skyrocketing premiums. He offers health insurance to his employees. He does the right thing. But he told me he just got a letter from his insurance company raising his rates 25 percent. We are saying his small business cannot sustain increases such as that; no business can. But in our current health insurance system, small businesses are often at the mercy of the insurance companies. This company’s story is why we need to reform the health insurance system.

I told the story of Patricia Jackson from Woodinville who has private insurance but cannot keep up with the rising premiums. To provide care for her young family of four, she paid $840 a month in 2007. The next year it was $900 a month, and then $1,186 a month, and again her rates were raised recently to a hike of $1,400 a month. That is an increase of over 66 percent in just 3 years. Patricia and her family’s story is why we need to reform the health insurance system.

I told my colleagues the story of Marcelas Owens. Marcelas Owens is a young man I have thought about every single day since I actually met him back in June. Marcelas is only 10 years old. He has two younger siblings whom you can see in the photo with him. This is his grandmother. He and his siblings have been through a lot. Two years ago, their mother Tiffany lost her life because she was uninsured. She was 27 years old. Tiffany was a single mom who worked as an assistant manager in a fast food restaurant. She had health care coverage through her job. But in September of 2006, Marceolas told me that she got sick, she lost her job, she lost her insurance, and ultimately she lost her life. Marceolas and his sisters lost their mom.

Health insurance reform is coming too late for Tifanny. But her story and the story Marceolas tells me why we need to reform health insurance.

Real people, real stories, real needs—that is why we are here now and that is why we have to get this done. When we pass this bill, Americans will be able to shop for coverage that meets their needs. For the first time, insurance companies will have to compete for our business, for the business of the American people.

When we pass this bill, we will end discrimination based on preexisting conditions and make it illegal to drop people when they get sick.

When we pass this bill, we are going to give tax credits to small businesses and help the self-employed afford care.

When we pass this bill, we are going to make preventive services free, end lifetime coverage limits, and cap out-of-pocket fees. We are going to extend the life of Medicare without cutting guaranteed benefits while shrinking the doughnut hole gap in drug coverage for our seniors.

When we pass this bill, people such as Mark and Patricia and Joseph and his wife will be helped. The memories of American people such as Janet and Tiffany will be honored. That is why we need to reform the health insurance system.

I thank the more than 10,000 people in my home State of Washington who sent me their personal health care stories. This has helped guide me as I worked on this bill and served as a co-sponsor with them. It is why I am here to represent.

I urge my colleagues to stand with these families and with the families of the small business owners in their States and across the country who desperately need this reform.

Health insurance reform has been a long time coming. But today we stand closer than ever to making it a reality.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield 18 minutes to the Senator from Minnesota, Mr. FRANKEN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. FRANKEN. Mr. President, we have been working on this bill for a long time, and I am proud of what we are doing here. Every Senator has had his or her chance to speak up and help make this a better bill or to make their case against the bill. Unfortunately, it has been a bit ran- corous, and I think that is too bad. There have been accusations flying back and forth. Umbrage has been taken. This place has become an umbrage factory. I even took umbrage once, and I feel badly about that. My colleagues across the aisle have taken great umbrage because we have accused them of using scare tactics. May I remind the op-ed entitled “The Health Bill Is Scary.” Exhibit A in our case that the other side has, indeed, used scare tactics—the op-ed entitled “The Health Bill Is Scary.” We are talking about people’s health, there is more than enough fear to go around. Instead of scaring people, we should be debating the merits of the proposal in front of us. We have heard a lot of stories. We all know our health care system is screwed up. We can all agree on that. The most important things to know about the bill are what is actually in it and will it help.

You say, this bill is too important for us to hide it from our bosses, the American people. We have a duty to let the American people know exactly what we are doing on their behalf. That is why I have been so disappointed when my friends and colleagues have not been honest with them. That is why Americans are confused about what is in this bill. They would not be so confused if everyone was being honest and forthright about what is in the bill.

I have heard a lot of misinformation over the last several weeks: some on the airwaves and, unfortunately, some right here on the Senate floor. Very early Monday morning, I heard a colleague on the floor say this bill is going to add $2.5 trillion to our deficit. That is simply not what the nonpartisan Chief Medicare Actuary found. This is the same Actuary who is often cited by opponents of the bill. He has determined that it keeps Medicare solvent for an extra 9 years.

Colleagues on my side are often making statements that might come under the heading of overselling, saying that for most people premiums will go down. It is true for many Americans, the out-of-pocket costs for better, more comprehensive health insurance will go down. But it is also true that most health care premiums will continue to go up. It is just that they will go up at a slower rate than they would have if this bill were not adopted. That is a really good thing.

This bill is going to pass. So we want people to understand what is happening. We are slowing the growth and the cost of health care. I want to be crystal clear because I do not want to confuse people either. So today I am going to try to cut through all this rhetoric and tell you about what is actually in the bill and how it will affect you.

When I first spoke on this floor on health care reform, I related three questions that I hear from most Minnesotans. I heard them when I was at the State fair, when I spoke with tea-partiers. I heard them in Minneapolis and St. Paul. I heard them in Willmar—all over the State—and on the Iron Range.

First, they say health care costs too much; what are we going to do about that.

Second, they ask: What am I going to do if I get sick or my spouse or one of my kids get sick and then someone in my family has a preexisting condition and then I lose my job? How am I going to get health insurance then?

Third, they ask: If something bad happens to me, how am I going to pay for everything; am I going to go bankrupt?

Well, now that we are about to pass this bill, let me take each question and tell you how this will affect you; what this bill will do and what it will not do. Remember, this legislation is an important first step but not the final word.

First, what does this bill do about health care costing so much? Let’s take a look at a point Dr. Atul Gawande, a Harvard physician, makes. He points out that almost half this bill comprises programs to try out different ways to lower costs and improve quality. Some have criticized this as a weakness in the bill, but I think it is a strength. Gawande makes the point that when a system is as complex as ours, there is no one-time fix. There is not one simple solution. As much as I wish it were true, the whole country probably can’t be like the Mayo Clinic or HealthPartners or other insurance companies in my State or Inter-Mountain in Utah or Geisinger in Pennsylvania. So one size may not fit all.

But these projects and pilots will generate solutions to fix the biggest problems in health care, such as paying doctors fee for service, which rewards volume and not value. For example, thanks to the efforts of Maria Cantwell and my colleague, Dick Lugar from Indiana, and others, we have turned away or charged more because they happen to be a woman. It will let you choose to go into the exchange so they can pool their risk with other small businesses.

Diabetes prevention, minimum medical loss ratio, incentivizing value over volume—these are just a few of the innovative ways this bill will bring down costs. All the basic ingredients for success are here. Dr. John Gruber, professor of economics at MIT, agrees. He says this is the only bill that will limit insurers’ profits and put the brakes on skyrocketing costs. It’s really hard to figure out how to bend the cost curve, but I can’t think of a thing to try that they didn’t try. They really make the best effort anyone has ever made. Everything is in here. I can’t think of anything I’d do that they are not doing in the bill.

So when two of my colleagues said 2 days ago: There is no health care reform in this bill, well, that is confounding.

The next question I hear from Minnesotans is: What if I get sick and lose my job, what will I do?

This bill reforms the insurance markets, guaranteeing that having health insurance equals security. Some of these reforms will kick in when the bill passes, others will kick in 4 years from now.

I wish we could do everything at once, but we are making a complex set of reforms and it will take time to implement. We are generating the cost savings necessary to pay for the benefits you will receive.

For the Minnesotans who can’t afford the coverage they have because they are sick or have a preexisting condition, what will this bill do for them? Well, 6 months after this bill is passed, we will get rid of all preexisting condition exclusions for kids, and young adults will be able to stay on their parents’ insurance until they turn 27. That is big.

Within 90 days, families who get turned down because of preexisting conditions will have access to nonprofit insurance coverage designed to cover people who can’t pay for insurance on their own. These are called high-risk pools, as well as Minnesota, have these plans in some form. The good thing is, this bill will invest $5 billion to help people afford premiums in the high-risk pools.

In 2014, anybody who doesn’t have an affordable plan through work or has been denied coverage will be able to go to a Web site and purchase coverage through a new insurance marketplace called the exchange. No one will be turned away or charged more because of the way they happen to be a woman. It will let you compare plans and prices. What you pay will be based on your income. No one will pay more than 10.2 percent of their income toward premiums in the exchange. Low-income families will pay significantly less. If the coverage you are offered through your employer costs you more than 8 percent of your income, you can go to the exchange.

There are millions of people who have insurance and are worried about the coverage they have. In fact, a recent report from Minnesotans who work for small businesses that are squeezed by growing health care costs. Beginning in 2010, this bill will give small businesses tax credits to pay up to 35 percent of their employees’ premiums.

More small businesses will be able to cover more employees more affordably. Then, in 2014, the exchanges are up and running, small businesses can choose to go into the exchange so they can pool their risk with other small businesses.

These reforms will bring coverage to an additional 285,000 Minnesotans by 2014. There should be no confusion. This is real reform.

Lastly, Minnesotans ask me: Will I go bankrupt from health care costs? I hear from a lot of Minnesotans who have maxed out their health insurance or who are getting uncomfortably close to their annual or lifetime limits. These arbitrary limits let insurance companies off the hook and leave you holding the bill when you are sick and need help the most.

One size does not fit all. Some personal bankruptcies in this country are due to a health care crisis. The good news is, within 6 months of passing this bill, new plans will not have lifetime limits on benefits and will stop companies from imposing annual limits on needed care. When the exchanges are operational, the use of annual limits will be banned entirely.

I would like to ban all limits on all plans, new and existing, right away. But this is an example of how we have had to compromise in order to keep the cost of the bill down so we are being fiscally responsible and not adding to the debt. I wish to be very clear on that. When this bill is fully implemented, it will give Americans access to affordable health care so they can avoid going bankrupt when they get very sick. That is very good.

There is more. We will start closing the Medicare prescription doughnut hole in 2010. We will invest in home visits for new mothers, more loan forgiveness for primary care providers and for doctors who practice in rural areas, the Public Health Investment Fund, stronger antifraud laws, support for people with disabilities to stay out of nursing homes, and funding for community health centers.

I said at the beginning of this debate there would be amendments that make it an even better bill and there would be amendments that make it less than it could be. I wish to ban all limits, but I can’t think of anything I’d do that they are not doing in the bill.

For the Minnesotans and tens of millions more Americans who have bills that are squeezing their budgets, this bill will give them security in knowing that the debt. I wish to be very clear on that. When this bill is fully implemented, it will give Americans access to affordable health care so they can avoid going bankrupt when they get very sick. That is very good.

There is more. We will start closing the Medicare prescription doughnut hole in 2010. We will invest in home visits for new mothers, more loan forgiveness for primary care providers and for doctors who practice in rural areas, the Public Health Investment Fund, stronger antifraud laws, support for people with disabilities to stay out of nursing homes, and funding for community health centers.

I said at the beginning of this debate there would be amendments that make it an even better bill and there would be amendments that make it less than it could be. I wish to ban all limits, but I can’t think of anything I’d do that they are not doing in the bill. But I also said I would only support a bill if it makes quality health care available to tens of thousands of additional Minnesotans and tens of millions more Americans. We have all compromised on many fronts, but the bill we have before us is real reform and deserves our support.

The bill deserves our support because Minnesotans and Americans can’t wait any longer. As Martin Luther King, Jr., once said: ‘‘If we are that is a lie. Injustice in health care is the most shocking and inhumane.’’ We have the opportunity to express our humanity today, to make our country healthier and more secure for generations to come.

I would like to conclude by sharing a letter I received from John Goldfine in Duluth, MN. John operates a business on the shores of Lake Superior and wrote to share the requests he had received to donate money to fellow community members facing financial crises because of health care costs.

John was asked to donate to a cancer benefit for a woman who has melanoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. FRANKEN. I ask unanimous consent for 2 more minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRANKEN. John was asked to donate to a cancer benefit for a woman who has melanoma, to attend a spaghetti dinner for an 11-year-old with brain cancer, a bake sale for a woman in need of a new kidney, and a pancake breakfast for a burn survivor. This is what John says:

As a business owner in Duluth, these are just a few of the requests that we have received these last few years. We have given this donation towards these fundraisers to help people pay for their medical expenses. As I travel the country and go into grocery stores, restaurants and convenience stores, I always take a minute to look at what is going on in the area. Rare is the time that I do not see a fundraiser to help someone with their health care bill and I expect of you, know how wrong this is, but I am left wondering what some of your fellow Congressmen and Senators are thinking. Maybe they read and look at some of these community bulletin boards. Every time I look at one of these I want to cry. I know how hard this battle is. I know there will be more compromises, but please do not leave empty handed. There are so many people out there that really need some help. I am proud I am voting for this bill to provide help for the people who need it.

I thank the Presiding Officer for the extra time, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The deputy majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I wish to thank my colleague. That letter from his constituent is heartfelt and should be an inspiration to all of us to get this job done. We have sacrificed. This is the 24th day debating this bill. Some of these sessions have been early in the morning and late at night, but I think the time has been well spent. People have come to the floor and spoken at great length but no one more eloquently than your constituent who sent you that letter.

Come tomorrow morning, we will have the official vote—very early in the morning. I would like to say to my colleagues from West Virginia and Minnesota that we have a piece of news. A lot of what has been said on the floor has been said by others and said to tomorrow is this a piece of news worth reporting. Our bill—the health care reform bill—has been endorsed by the American Medical Association, the largest physician organization in this country; endorsed by the American Hospital Association, the largest organization representing our hospitals; it has been endorsed by the American Association of Retired Persons, the largest senior citizens organization, which focuses intensely on the future of Medicare; and today we have received the endorsement of what is regarded by most as the most highly respected medical organization in America. If you respect the most, it is the nurses. You know why. Because when you are in a hospital with someone you love or in the care of a doctor, it is the nurse who is with you in those moments that make a lifetime. The nurses today have issued their formal endorsement of this health care reform bill.

The nurses today have Rose Gonzalez, director of government affairs for the American Nurses Association, who writes:

Nurses across this country have waited decades for this historic moment and the time is at hand.

Once again, the need for fundamental reform of the U.S. healthcare system is critical. ANA and nurses around the country are ready to work with you toward enactment of the strongest possible health care reform legislation.

For all of our critics from the other side of the aisle, the simple fact is this: The people who are on the front line of health care, the people to whom we turn every day for critical care and critical treatment of the people we love, endorse this measure. They have come out foursquare for it. I would rather have their endorsement than any political endorsement we might find.

Now let me tell you how this is significant. This bill will change many things. Some on the other side have criticized the bill because it is too big; they want a small bill. I want a bill that is large enough to treat the problem. It is a little dooms: You can give me a prescription but only give me one; I can only take one prescription at a time.

In this bill we address problems existing in our health care system that go to the heart of the challenge that faces our Nation. We have great doctors and hospitals and nurses. But we spend more than twice as much as any other nation on Earth per person for health care in some areas. Many countries spend a lot of what we spend and get much better results.

We know the cost of health care is getting beyond us. We know a family of four with a health insurance plan now through their employer pays, on average, $12,000 a year for premiums. Ten years ago it was $6,000. It is projected to double again in just 8 years. People would be working to earn $2,000 a month just to pay for health insurance. That is before you take the first penny for your family. That is unsustainable.

The first thing we do is address affordability, start bringing down the increase in cost in health care. That is our first responsibility, and this bill does it. The second thing it does is extend the reach of health insurance protection.

As I stand here, one out of every six Americans has no insurance. These are not lazy, shiftless people. These are people who can’t afford it, who work at a place that doesn’t offer it, or happen to be unemployed. At the end of the day, 60 percent of those people with no insurance, will have the protection of health insurance. That is critically important.

This bill provides protections needed by the people who have health insurance. How many times have you heard about a friend or a family member who has to fight an insurance company for the payment for critical care that the doctor has ordered, or over a prescription which the doctor believes will keep a person healthy or make that person well? Those battles are now going to be a tip to the consumers of America. Health insurance companies will not be able to discriminate based on preexisting conditions or put caps on lifetime policies or tell kids that at age 24 they can no longer be covered by the health care plans. All of those things are changed in this bill, giving consumers across America a fighting chance when it comes to health insurance.

Last night I met with several of my colleagues. We talked over dinner about how America is going to react to this. It is hard enough to digest the contents of this bill, to expect the average American who has so many other concerns to digest it may be too much to ask. But I asked my staff to give me a list of the things that most Americans can expect to see, the changes they can expect to see on a timely basis—not the long-term changes where 94 percent of people have health insurance or would have a better standing to fight health insurance companies when they complain, but what will we be able to see. My staff came up with a convenient top 10 list which most of us are familiar with from late night television shows.

Within 6 months or a year after this bill is enacted into law, here are the top 10 things Americans will notice changing when they buy a new health plan:

1. If you own a small business or start one, you will get 6 months tax credits to help your business pay for health insurance for your employees beginning with tax year 2010. Mr. President, 144,000 small businesses in my State of Illinois will be eligible for the small business tax credit so that small businesses can afford to offer health insurance for the owners of the business and for their employees. That is No. 1—and this is all within 90 days of enactment.

2. We are going to create immediate options for people who can’t get health insurance today. We estimate that 8 percent of the people in my State have diabetes; 28 percent have... high blood pressure, and all of them could be denied coverage because of this so-called preexisting condition. We are going to put in place high-risk pools so these people who can’t buy health insurance today because of these preexisting conditions, have an option will be able to buy health insurance. That is No. 2.

No. 3, and this is good news for every family and every parent: Within 6 months after the enactment of this bill, the parents of loved ones—3.6 million kids—will sleep better knowing that whatever health insurance they have will be required to cover their child regardless of any preexisting condition. Any child under the age of 18 with a diagnosis of diabetes or a history of cancer or asthma or whatever it may be cannot be denied coverage under the family plan, within 6 months of this bill being enacted.

No. 4, you will no longer need to fear an insurance company dropping you from your policy if you get sick or called rescission, and it means as soon as you need the health insurance, the health insurance companies run away and say: We are not covering you anymore. Hire a lawyer and fight us if you don’t like that. That comes to an end within 6 months after this bill passes.

No. 5, you will no longer need to worry if you get sick or get in an accident because you are out of town and out of the network of hospitals and doctors your policy provides. This bill ensures access to emergency care in-network and out-of-network without additional cost sharing beginning 6 months after the date of enactment.

No. 6, you will have the freedom to choose your doctor, the person you think is right for you and your family. This bill protects your choice by allowing plan members to pick any participating primary care provider and prohibit insurance companies from requiring preauthorization before a woman, for example, goes in for a gynecological examination.

No. 7, you will no longer fear losing your job or going bankrupt because of a bad car accident or a serious illness such as cancer. This bill, when it becomes law, will bar insurance companies from taking lifetime benefits and severely restricting annual benefits under health insurance policy.

No. 8, the bill will require providing preventive services and immunizations without copay. Mr. President, 41 percent of the people in my State have not had a colorectal cancer screening; 22 percent of women in Illinois over the age of 50 have not had a mammogram in the past 2 years. Health insurance reform will ensure that people can access preventive services for free through the health care plans. It makes sense. It is an ounce of prevention and built into the law 6 months after it passes.

No. 9, senior citizens are going to notice the difference within 6 months. They will have access to dramatic discounts in the purchase of name-brand prescription drugs under Medicare Part D beginning July 1, 2010. Roughly 314,000 Medicare beneficiaries in Illinois hit the so-called doughnut hole, the gap in coverage. They are going to have protection. It is going to be provided to seniors and our national productivity and our national sense of self-esteem but, even more importantly, to our national soul, to our moral compass, to our conscience.

I may forget in the final days of 2009 we have had a profound opportunity to deliver on years and years of unmet promises and to begin a new decade by building a strong, new foundation for the American people, for all of them; to wit, a more secure and reliable health care system that works for virtually all Americans, where those who are uninsured finally have some place to go for health care; where those with insurance know that the coverage they bought and paid for will be there when they need it—they will know that—and where a profit-driven health insurance industry does not play mercilessly with people’s lives or steal their hope so that the health insurance company can have a good prosperous future, a very gloomy chapter in our Nation’s business history.

Each of us brings to this moment shared stories about the tragic and trying personal experiences of our friends and neighbors. I was moved by this bill. I know that West Virginia’s struggles with the health care system are not unique in America, but they are unique to me because I represent them. They are what drive me to work so hard to make things better. That never changes.

I talked about the Bord family. The Bords are two dedicated schoolteachers with health insurance through their employer whose son Samuel has leukemia and needed treatment well beyond the onerous annual insurance limits imposed upon him, without his knowledge, and, therefore, his health insurance stopped producing any care for him at all at 8 years old. What was he to know?

Samuel’s parents were desperate, and they feared for the worst. When he hit his $1 million cap on annual insurance, my office helped his parents to find another insurer who would provide comprehensive coverage. Program, for example—but none truly comprehensive in the way the Americans want to have their health care.

It is a history of the health care system that in 2009 we have had a one of narrow incremental change, some quite meaningful, others re-regulating the insurance marketplace, health reform will ensure that people can access preventive services for free through the health care plans. It makes sense. It is an ounce of prevention and built into the law 6 months after it passes.

No. 9, senior citizens are going to notice the difference within 6 months. They will have access to dramatic discounts in the purchase of name-brand prescription drugs under Medicare Part D beginning July 1, 2010. Roughly 314,000 Medicare beneficiaries in Illinois hit the so-called doughnut hole, the gap in coverage. They are going to have protection. It is going to be provided to seniors and our national productivity and our national sense of self-esteem but, even more importantly, to our national soul, to our moral compass, to our conscience.
Nation offered to these caring, hard-working parents with a sick child. How can that be? How can we allow that to be? The answer is, of course, that we cannot.

They did everything in their power, but they still lost Samuel passed away. There are no words. It breaks my heart to think of what his parents went through, not only the pain of watching their son fight a terrible disease but also the uncertainty of paying for his treatment as they could and then have the coverage they counted on and paid for suddenly cease to exist.

I say to my colleagues, when do we say collectively that enough is enough? When do we finally step in and try to solve such an enormous set of problems? So much is at stake, so many people’s needs and expectations are so high, and so are mine and so are yours, I say to the Presiding Officer. I know all too well that reform is not about shying away from the tough issues or the tough questions. Reform is about reaching perfect agreements on a perfect piece of legislation. Reform is making things better for people, as much as you can for as long as you can, with as much money as you can possibly get for it.

There are real and serious differences of opinion among us, among our esteemed colleagues in the House of Representatives as well—the Senate, the House, there are differences. Within the Senate, of the Senate, there are differences. Within the Democratic Party, there are differences. We have struggled to find solutions that will make a difference, that we can afford. We have had to negotiate and compromise.

Now we vote in a few short hours. It is an extraordinary moment in history. There is nothing like it that I have ever seen. We vote, I believe, to improve access to affordable and meaningful coverage; to control runaway costs—we have to do that so the Medicare trust fund doesn’t run out; and to rein in the health insurance industry’s rapacious and, to me, lugubrious practices. I don’t like them, and they don’t like taking care of us, and they don’t.

Am I disappointed that this legislation does not include a strong public option, like the one I first introduced, to keep private companies honest? Am I disappointed it does not include a sensible Medicare buy-in provision that should be a right for millions of Americans? Of course I am. Does that mean I turn my back and walk away from all of this because I didn’t get everything I wanted? Of course not. I am a public official. I represent people, I represent their interests, even as they, maybe in the majority, oppose what we are doing here because they know not yet entirely what is in this bill. But when they do, they will feel differently. Am I disappointed that we were unable to expand Medicare coverage for our most vulnerable Americans? Yes, of course I am. I live in a State where, in the average hospital, 85 percent of all patients are either under Medicaid or Medicare. As my colleagues on the Finance Committee heard me say often, 50 percent of all babies born in West Virginia are born under Medicaid. That is the way it is there for the people. I represent. Yes, of course I am disappointed it does not include a sensible Medicare buy-in provision that should be a right for millions of Americans. I still believe those are among the best and right solutions in this bill for our health care system. They are the best we can do at this particular time, and it is a great deal that we are doing. It is an unavoidable fact that this bill does not do everything I had hoped for but, again, that would not justify turning my back on what the bill does achieve.

Why is it that we always seek out the negative and avoid the positive? It is because the negative is easier to talk about. It is easier to criticize than to do, than to collect people together under an umbrella.

The ultimate question cannot be what the bill does not do. It cannot end there because in so many ways what this bill does do is make good on the powerful promise of meaningful reform that millions of people have dreamt of, have prayed for, have fought for, for so long. Passing health care reform will mean 31 million previously uninsured Americans will now get health care coverage. Excuse me, 31 million people—extraordinary. It is in the bill.

Passing health care reform will extend Medicaid so that vulnerable populations can get the health care they need.

Passing health care reform will close, almost, the doughnut hole that hurts 3.4 million seniors enrolled in the Medicare prescription drug program. Mr. President, 3.4 million seniors is a lot. So we close at least half the doughnut hole, and then we give people a bonus for this coming year. But by the end of the half, we are signaling that we are going to close it all. Health care now will be done each year, every year, to make things better.

Passing health care reform will mean the elimination of preexisting condition exclusions right away for our children. As soon as the exchanges are up and running, that will also apply to adults.

Passing health care reform will mean it is illegal for insurance companies to drop you, to drop them as they did annually on Samuel, or lifetime benefits, such as the Bord family faced so courageously.

Passing health care reform will mean insurance companies are required to spend more of their money—which comes from premiums we give them—on medical care, not fancy offices and executive salaries. They will be required to achieve a medical loss ratio of 85 to 90 percent. We shall see. They will have to prove it. We already have the information as to how to get the numbers. Nobody has done it. So they can play in their shifty darkness and deprive people of things, take things away. People do not know where to go to complain, and they just get referred somewhere else. This will be the very first time they are held accountable—and they will be held accountable. They will be held accountable by the law, by congressional oversight, by a skilled army of attorneys. Health insurance has done hurt so many people and how, now, they are going to behave in a very different manner whether they like it or whether they don’t.

Passing health care reform will mean family coverage must include dependent children up to the age of 26. That is exciting. It is also immediate. But it is exciting because young people don’t tend to get health insurance because they think nothing will happen to them. It actually doesn’t work out like that, and when they get hurt, somebody else has to pay. They should have their own health insurance, and so they are going to get it. They will not be outside the health care system; they will be inside the health care system.

Passing health care reform will mean protecting the Children’s Health Insurance Program, or CHIP, which John Chafee and I wrote back in the mid-1990s and Ted Kennedy and Orrin Hatch first established through the HELP Committee in 1997 in a show of bipartisanship—which, frankly, I am nostalgic for these days—which will cover more than 14 million children by the year 2013. Today, CHIP covers 7 million, but you see it has run out of its 10 years, so it has to be reauthorized. Then we add on 2 more years, and the program will keep going on and on, and children will have health insurance forever.

Passing health care reform will mean guaranteed prevention and wellness benefits for seniors so they can get the regular checkups that are so important. It is a big deal. Somebody told me once that there are about 9 million American seniors who live alone. In West Virginia, it might be on the tops of hills or it might be on some dusty plain, but they are basically alone, by themselves. They are aged, they have problems. Does anybody check in on them? Does anybody call them? Do they have a telephone? Have you eaten your food today? Do you have food? Are you OK? Did you fall down? Did you break your hip? Is there somebody to check? We have to do a lot better than that. Through this bill, we will.

Passing health care reform will mean we finally begin to get politics and lobbyists out of the business of deciding Medicare payments. That is very important to me because we can create new hope—perhaps our only hope—for keeping Medicare stable and solvent for the long term.

The list goes on and on—real, meaningful, life-changing, and in some cases, life-saving articles that will become law. Not since the creation of Medicare and Medicaid nearly 45 years ago has this body or the other body attempted to make a commitment as fundamental to our future in health care as we are doing here.

Fortunately, this commitment will not end with the passage of this legislation. We will not have to wait another 10 years to make a commitment to take up the cause of reform. Because of the intensity of the experience, the passion of the experience, the depth of the feeling in discussing the experience as we have talked back and forth with each other, this now becomes an annual commitment. I know that every State is doing health care, every single year until we get it exactly right. We have not gotten here by accident or by chance, and we will not get all the way across the finish line without more hard work and, hopefully, good will.

To those on the left who are disappointed in what this bill does not do—and in some cases, those folks are even calling for its demise—I implore you to reconsider, to be a part of this solution you can live with. I want to keep working with all others, which I promise you I will do, and I think you know that I mean what I say when I say it. To those on the right who in all these years somehow have not seen fit to accept any of the various ideas that any put on tables for comprehensive reform, I ask you to seek the facts, find the truth, follow the facts, follow the truth. There are legitimate disagreements between us about how best to solve the problems plaguing our health care system and hurting our people. But the status quo is unacceptable. Claims that we are rushing this process or have operated in secret are absurd. Claims that we will hurt seniors, close hospitals, take away people’s choices are reckless and disingenuous.

Our work in this institution affects people’s lives every single day in all the work we do for good or for ill. In public life, really, there is nothing neutral; you either do something that helps people improve something that hurts. We have a solemn responsibility to help our people in their hour of need, and that is the reason we are here. It is the only reason we are here—to achieve meaningful reform, not just in health care but in all other needs.

As somebody who has been involved in this debate from the very beginning and fought for strong reforms in the Senate Finance Committee, I know how far we have come to get here. And I, for one, am not going to allow this moment and its great promise to end in failure. The progress will be real. The greatly improved quality of life for millions of Americans will be its measure.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that after Senator HUTCHISON raises a point of order that Senator from Montana.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I ask the distinguished Senator from Montana if, following the post cloture time, my point of order will be put in the queue for the votes if I ask for the yeas and nays?

Mr. BAUCUS. That is my understanding.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, we truly are in uncharted waters. This bill has been written by the majority under a veil of secrecy. We are expected to vote on its final passage less than 2 days before families across the country will be sitting down for holiday celebrations. Over the last weeks, my colleagues and I have spoken about some of the things we know to be problematic, ranging from unsustainable cuts to Medicare that will result in catastrophic reductions in care—make no mistake. We may doze new taxes on individuals, medical devices, prescription drugs, and insurance companies that will clearly raise costs to consumers and stifle innovation, to taxes on small businesses at a time when we know one in 10 is already on the brink. We are in a recession. We are asking businesses to hire people. Yet we are forcing burdens on them, taxes on them that would have the opposite effect. It would cause them not to have a chance to hire someone who will have to go beyond all the expenses of an employee today. We have talked about that for the last 3 weeks.

Today I wish to talk about the concerns we have been able to have about 3 days to find on the constitutionality of parts of this bill. We have not had too much time to consider this. Certainly, constitutional issues will take much thought. But do we believe some of the bill’s provisions do violence to our constitutional protections? Members, staff, and legal experts are scrambling by the majority’s decision to draft a bill that we didn’t have a chance to look at in detail because it only was released on Saturday, and we haven’t had very much debate time on these legal issues.

I commend many of my colleagues for identifying one of my biggest concerns. The majority claims the commerce clause of the Constitution gives Congress the right to adopt much of what it is we are looking at in this substitute before us. What I disagree with and what I don’t think has been mentioned is, the power to regulate interstate commerce has not been the basis for a robust role in insurance regulation. Our States have the experience, the infrastructure in place to carry out this important regulatory role. In comparison, the Federal role in regulating private insurance has been limited. In fact, following the decision that Congress authorized agency activities from any antitrust role in the insurance market, it is our States that have been charged with providing this regulatory oversight during the last 60 years. Yet usurping the role of the States in regulating health insurance is precisely what the substitute that has been put forward will do.

Creating a big role for the Federal Government in the Constitution is making Congress actually believe our Constitution, which enumerates and protects our liberties and choices, can be perverted to require Americans to purchase something they may not want and may feel they do not need. Such a view is totally at odds with our Constitution. I believe strongly the individual insurance mandates in this bill are unconstitutional.

The person who has raised the point of order is also on the floor with me, Senator Ensign from Nevada. He is the person who has raised this point of order, and I think very strongly that the person who has raised this point of order is also on the floor with me.

Today, in the bill we have before us, we have a State, such as my State of Texas and States across the country, which have taken full responsibility for creating, maintaining, and providing oversight for a health insurance plan and will now have to justify changes to the terms of the insurance plan to the Federal bureaucrat. Today, in the bill we have before us, we have a State, such as my State of Texas and States across the country, which have taken full responsibility for creating, maintaining, and providing oversight for a health insurance plan and will now have to justify changes to the terms of the insurance plan to the Federal bureaucrat.
within the realm of the State. I believe it is very important, when we look at the bill before us, to see that the States now are going to be required, similar to every insurance provider, to justify with the Federal Government changed practices. The States are going to have to put forward all the background, what they are doing in their self-insured plans, and justify it before the States, apparently, will be able to go forward.

Of course, there is going to be a book written on the meaning of "justify." I can see it coming. What exactly does justify mean? I don't think we have to go that far to write the book on what justify means because this is an encroachment on the rights of the States guaranteed by the 10th amendment. Not only does it walk away from the words themselves of the 10th amendment but walks away from what the Founding Fathers intended; that is, that it is the prerogative of the States to make that affect the people. Even Congress, for the last 60 years, has kept the Federal Government restrained pretty much—not completely but pretty much—from mandates and regulation of insurance plans. Our country has largely been left to the States. The States have provided the infrastructure for what can be offered in a State. But here we go. In what is supposed to be the reform of our health care system, we are walking away from the prerogatives of the States, and also the expertise the States have come to have put together and formed through the years. The big Federal Government takeover is going to begin.

Let me mention a 1992 case by the Supreme Court, which stated, in New York v. United States:

The Framers explicitly chose a Constitution that confers upon Congress the power to regulate individuals, not States. This is not to say that Congress lacks power to regulate individuals, but only to say that the Constitution was never intended to authorize Congress to regulate individuals as an end in itself. The Constitution was intended to authorize Congress to regulate individuals in order to accomplish some legitimate end.

The United States has never, in its history, ever passed something such as this. This will dramatically expand the powers of the Federal Government, if this bill is passed, and if, God forbid, the Supreme Court upholds this piece of legislation.

I wish to make a couple points very briefly in one area where I think, on the individual mandate, this bill violates the U.S. Constitution. Nowhere, at no time, has this government, this Federal Government, ever passed a law that requires people who do nothing to engage in economic activity. In other words, if this bill passes and then you choose not to have health insurance, this bill requires you to purchase health insurance. If you do not do that, it charges you up to 2 percent of your income. So this bill is telling you, just because you exist as a citizen of the United States, you now have to do something.

The United States has never, in the Constitution of the United States, which I hold in my hand. There are several other documents in here, but that is how short the Constitution of the United States is. This short, concise document that limits the powers of the Federal Government. Our Founders were afraid of a powerful central government, so they put down on paper the powers they granted to this body, the House of Representatives, and the rest of the Federal Government.

When each one of us comes to this floor, after we are elected, we raise our right hand, put our hand on the Bible, and take an oath to defend and protect the Constitution of the States. We do not take an oath to reform health care or to do anything else that we may think is good to do. Anything on health care or any other good provision we want to enact has to fit within the limited powers that are listed within the Constitution of the United States. That is the oath, the solemn oath, each and every Senator takes. That is the oath each and every one of us needs to think about when we are voting on this constitutional point of order.

I wish to make a couple points very briefly in one area where I think, on the individual mandate, this bill violates the U.S. Constitution. Nowhere, at no time, has this government, this Federal Government, ever passed a law that requires people who do nothing to engage in economic activity. In other words, if this bill passes and then you choose not to have health insurance, this bill requires you to purchase health insurance. If you do not do that, it charges you up to 2 percent of your income. So this bill is telling you, just because you exist as a citizen of the United States, you now have to do something.

The United States has never, in its history, ever passed something such as this. This will dramatically expand the powers of the Federal Government, if this bill is passed, and if, God forbid, the Supreme Court upholds this piece of legislation.

I have read a lot of articles—and I submitted several of them yesterday—by constitutional scholars, who believe this bill is unconstitutional. Even folks who believe it is constitutional, some folks on the left, concede that there are legitimate arguments against the bill's constitutionality. They also recognize that there is potential that it is unconstitutionally written. So some wild-eyed radical debate. This is a legitimate debate about what this document, this Constitution of the United States, actually means.

I am not a lawyer similar to a lot of the other Members of the Senate, but I understand the importance of a pretty plain reading of the Constitution's text.
Within the enumerated powers, and within the fifth amendment, there are limitations on what this Congress can do. The Supreme Court has held that the interstate commerce clause, for instance—gives this body certain power to regulate commercial activity. Economic activity as a real thing that interstate in nature can be regulated if it has the potential to somehow substantially affect interstate commerce.

Unfortunately, this bill goes beyond even regulating any kind of commercial activity, such as economic inactivity. It says: If you choose not to do something, we are going to regulate you and we are going to tax you if you do not behave. This is a very dangerous precedent for the Congress to set. I made the point yesterday; others have made this point—if we could just require citizens to purchase certain things, why did we need a cash-for-clunkers bill? The reality is we lack the power to just tell people: Go out and buy a car.

The government is allowed to provide certain incentives for people to do activity that maybe they were not going to do. But Congress does not have the power to actually tell citizens what to do, in order to regulate inactivity.

There are all kinds of things this government could tell people what to do if something such as this precedent is upheld today. This is incredibly dangerous, and the people of America need to wake up and the people who are voting for this bill need to analyze the unintended consequences and the massive expansion of power this bill will provide for. If this bill passes, and if the Supreme Court does not strike it down. I am going to yield because I have listened to the senior Senator from Utah talk eloquently about the provisions that are unconstitutional. He is much more of a constitutional scholar than I would ever dream to be. I hope everybody pays attention to what he is saying and thinks about that oath each one of us made when we raised our right hand to defend and uphold the Constitution. Are we doing that if we vote for this bill? I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I am grateful for his kind words.

Each time this body has taken an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Not any Constitution, not their own personal Constitution, not a fake or pretend Constitution, but the real Constitution of the United States. That means that there will come times when politics says yes, but the Constitution says no. There will come times when the grand plans and good intentions of politicians meet the limits of the Constitution. I submit that this is one of those times, and I choose the point raised by the Senator from Nevada presents each of us with the choice of whether politics or the Constitution will win the day. I choose the Constitution and will vote to support the point of order.

America’s founders gave us a written Constitution that delegates certain powers to the Federal Government, separates those powers among three branches, and enumerates the powers given to Congress. They did all of that writing, delegating, separating, and enumerating for one overriding reason, to set limits on Federal Government power because liberty cannot survive without such limits. As Justice Sandra Day O’Connor reaffirmed in 1991 when writing the Supreme Court’s opinion in Gregory v. Ashcroft, our system of federalism and the separation of powers “was adopted by the Framers to ensure the protection of our fundamental liberties.” Liberty requires limits on government power, it always has and it always will. The question for us today is whether liberty is still more important than politics.

The Members of this body have our own, independent responsibility to ensure that the actions we take are consistent with the Constitution we have sworn to support and defend. We cannot simply assume that the Constitution means whatever we want it to mean, then we might as well take an oath to support and defend ourselves. Frankly, that is what it seems like we do sometimes. But we cannot take the power the Constitution provides without the limits the Constitution sets.

Turning to the legislation before us, we all want to see a higher percentage of Americans covered by health insurance. That is a desirable goal, but my friends on the other side of the aisle would achieve that goal with a very blunt instrument, an order that Americans purchase health insurance. That is a means that the Constitution does not permit. While the Constitution gives Congress power to regulate interstate commerce, that power does not mean anything and everything we want it to mean. Those words are not necessarily malleable. I agree with the 75 percent of Americans who say that this mandate to purchase health insurance is unconstitutional. If Congress’s power to regulate interstate commerce does not include telling Americans what they must buy.

When President Franklin D. Roosevelt chose Frances Perkins as his Secretary of Labor, they discussed social policy legislation including health insurance. As Secretary Perkins later described it, they agreed that such legislation would pose “very severe constitutional problems, including fundamentally altering Federal-State relationships. That is why the Social Security Act uses the payroll tax. Even the Roosevelt administration, which oversaw the most dramatic expansion of federal power in our Nation’s history, would not go as far as the legislation before us today would go. Even they knew that the Constitution put certain means off limits.

The goal of raising the percentage of Americans with health insurance could be achieved by constitutionally permissible means. My friends on the other side of the aisle know as well as I do, however, that those means are politically impossible. And so they have chosen politics over the Constitution, and that is why I will support the constitutional point of order.

In 1995, the Supreme Court reaffirmed that there are indeed limits on the means Congress may use to achieve its goals. The Court sustained a version of the power to regulate interstate commerce that would make it hard to imagine any activity by individuals that Congress could not regulate. The legislation before us would open any conceivable action in which individuals choose to engage, it would require that they engage in those transactions. This is the first time that Congress has ever ordered Americans to use their own money to purchase a particular good or service. Crossing that line would do exactly what the Supreme Court said we may not do, and would virtually eliminate whatever limits remain on federal government power. That would deprive the Constitution not only of its meaning, but of its function to protect liberty. I urge my colleagues to put the Constitution ahead of politics and support this point of order.

There is a lot of talk from the majority about why passing this bill is the right thing to do for the American people. It is a decision of conscience for them. Well, let us take a closer look at these decisions of conscience.

After weeks of closed-door, clandes- tinous negotiations, the bill so-called “Healthcare for All” finally emerged with a 383-page Christmas list. This bill is a dark example of everything that is wrong with Washington today. Despite all the promises of accountability and transparency, this bill is a grab bag of Chicago-style, backroom giveaways. It is nothing more than a private game of “Let’s Make A Deal” with the special interest groups financed by American taxpayers.

So who won and who lost in this game of political dodgeball? The AARP released a glowing statement of support for this bill. The Reid bill slashes Medicare by almost a $½ trillion to finance additional government spending. So why would the Nation’s largest lobbying organization, avowed to protect the interests of seniors, support this legislation? To find the answer, similar to anything else in Washington, follow the money.

AARP takes more than half its $1.1 billion budget in royalty fees from health insurers and other vendors. The sale of supplementary Medicare policies, called Medigap plans, make up a major share of this $1.1 billion royalty revenue. AARP has a direct interest in selling Medigap plans. However, there is a strong competitor to Medigap policies, and that happens to be the Medicare Advantage plans.

These private plans provide comprehensive coverage, including vision and dental care, at lower premiums for nearly 11 million seniors across the country. Seniors enrolled in Medicare Advantage do not need Medigap policies. So what happens when the Reid bill slashes this program by almost $120 billion to $15 billion? You heard me right. This is a “h” in your insurance.

Look at the Washington Post front-page story from October 27, questioning whether AARP has a conflict of interest. I quote:

Democratic proposals to slash reimbursement rates for Medicare Advantage and other Medicare managed care plans are wide- expected to drive up demand for private Medigap policies like the ones offered by AARP, according to health-care experts, legislative aides and documents.

One of the most disturbing developments in the Reid bill has been the perpetuation and even the doubling of the unconstitutional mandate tax from $8 billion to $15 billion. You heard me right. This unconstitutional mandate tax isotechnically referred to as a “h” in your tax bill.

We hear a lot of rhetoric from the other side about Republicans defending the big, evil insurance companies while they are the defenders of American families. The insurance mandate is a clear example of this partisan hypocrisy. Let me ask one simple question. Who would benefit the most from this unprecedented, unconstitutional mandate to purchase insurance or face a tax penalty collected through the Internal Revenue Service is highly unconstitutional.

We hear a lot of rhetoric from the other side about Republicans defending the big, evil insurance companies while they are the defenders of American families. The insurance mandate is a clear example of this partisan hypocrisy. Let me ask one simple question. Who would benefit the most from this unprecedented, unconstitutional mandate to purchase insurance or face a tax penalty collected through the Internal Revenue Service?
Poll after poll tells us about the growing opposition against this tax-and-spend health care bill. The latest Rasmussen poll shows that 55 percent of Americans are now opposed to this bill. The CNN poll is an even higher 61 percent. Americans seem to understand that the group most likely to use the health care system, only 33 percent are in favor while 60 percent are opposed. Independent voters are also opposed 2 to 1. Opposition in certain State polls such as Nebraska is even higher at 67 percent.

So what is the majority doing to address these concerns? Nothing. In fact, despite the efforts by many of us here on this side of the aisle to express our substantive policy disagreements for months, one Senator recently said the following:

They are desperate to break this President. They have ardent supporters who are nearly hysterical at the very election of President Barack Obama. The birthers, the fanatics, the people running around in right-wing militia and Aryan support groups, it is unbearably to them that President Barack Obama should even exist.

That statement is outrageous. It was made by a very dear friend of mine, and I know he probably didn’t mean it the way it comes out, but it is outrageous.

Instead of listening to the policy concerns of a majority of Americans, the other side is simply dismissing them as ranting from the far right. If the majority refuses to listen to what Americans are telling them now, I am sure they are going to have a rude wake-up call later. It should come as no surprise that this kind of arrogance and power has led to congressional approval ratings rivaling the most hated institutions on the planet at a dismal 22 percent and falling.

One of the biggest tragedies of letting this bill move forward is that it will not address the fundamental issue of rising health care costs in this country. According to the Congressional Budget Office, CBO, this bill will actually raise our national health care costs by $200 billion. The administration’s own Actuary at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, CMS, agrees with this assessment.

When this bill fails to work, Americans will no longer have anything in Congress to effectively address the issue of health care reform. The opportunity for Medicare and Medicaid from their impending financial collapse will be lost for another generation.

The historic blizzard in Washington earlier this month was the perfect symbol of the anger and frustration brewing in the hearts of the American people against this bill. I urge the majority once again to listen to the voices of the American people. Every vote for this bill is the 60th vote. Let me repeat that again. Every vote for this bill is the 60th vote. My Republican colleagues and I have united as the American people in our fight against this $2.5 trillion tax-and-spend bill. I implore my colleagues not to do this to the American people. Don’t foreclose on their futures. Don’t stick them with even more government spending and more government intrusion.

We can fix health care. Many of us have been working to do just that for months, to make sure that the bill that would garner 75 to 80 votes, which has always been the case in the past on these major pieces of legislation in the Senate, would be fiscally sound and provide the American people with the fixes they are asking for in the health care system that is easily achievable if we would just open our heart and work together. Many of us are standing at the ready, and have been for months, to step forward and pass meaningful health care reform that truly would help American families and please American taxpayers. To date, we have been rebuffed by an unfailing determination by a few to pursue a nearly Socialist agenda.

I would ask my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who do not believe in the Europeanization of America, who believe in doing truly bipartisan work here in the Senate, to step forward and vote against advancing this bill and work with those of us on this side of the aisle who are committed to making a difference to craft a health care reform bill they can be proud to support.

Having said that, I do praise my colleague from Montana, Senator BAUCKS, who literally did try for months in many meetings with first the Gang of 7—I was in that and then finally decided I could not support what they were going to come up with and expressed to my colleagues that I would have to in good conscience leave the negotiations. He tried, but he was too restricted in what he really could do, so that in the end no Republican supported what was done. We had a totally Democratic bill in the HELP Committee, a totally Democratic bill in the Senate, and the Reid bill has been done in back rooms here with the White House, with very few even Democrats involved, and many of the things some of my friends worked so hard to get in the bill were no longer in it.

Let me just say there are good people in this body on both sides of the floor, but I have suggested in times past and I suggest it again: If you can’t get 75 or 80 votes for a bill that affects every American, if it is, one-sixth of the American economy, then you know that bill is a lousy bill.

There are many on our side of the aisle who have stood ready, willing, and able to try to do something in a bipartisan way. I have spent 33 years here, and I have participated in a bipartisan way to help bring both sides together on all kinds of health care bills that work. This one would work, too, if we would just work in a bipartisan way.

I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Madam President, I wish to make a couple of points regarding the constitutional point of order I raised on the individual mandate.

Some folks have said that States mandate car insurance, that is require people who drive to carry car insurance; therefore, the Federal Government can mandate the purchasing of health insurance to individuals. Well, I think that should be pretty obvious that States can do things that the Federal Government cannot. The Constitution limits the Federal Government just as to what it can do and it reserves the power for the States and/or the people. Senator HUTCHISON raised this exact point in her constitutional point of order relating to the 10th amendment.

So this mandate of buying car insurance—comparing it to the mandate to buy health insurance from the Federal Government is a false comparison. The Federal Government cannot mandate you to buy car insurance, nor can it mandate you to have foundation. It is not within the enumerated powers given to this body and to this Federal Government in the Constitution.

This bill is a real threat to liberty because of the precedent it sets on the Federal Government being able to tell individuals what to do.

I wish to quote from a couple of articles that have been written. This one was written by David Rivkin and Lee Casey. I am quoting:

"The case was to simply avoid the constitutional limits on its power. Taxation can favor one industry or course of action over another, but a "tax" that falls exclusively on anyone who does not follow an order of any kind—whether to obtain health-care insurance [in this case] . . . or even to eat your vegetables.

"It literally sets the precedent to dramatically expand the powers of the Federal Government far beyond anything the Founders wrote or limited this Congress to doing in the Constitution."

I see the Republican whip here, and I wish to yield to him because of his expertise on the Constitution.

I want to make a real quick point reading from another article. I commend this article to our colleagues by Randy Barnett and Nathaniel Stewart and Todd Gaziano. It said:

"Never in the nation’s history has the commerce power been used to require a person who does nothing to engage in economic activity.

"There are constitutional experts out there telling us this bill is doing something the Federal Government has never done in its history. So I go back to this United States Constitution.

"When we take an oath to defend the Constitution, we better take it as a solemn oath and think about whether we are violating that oath we swore to uphold and defend when we are voting on this bill.

"You must uphold this constitutional point of order. It is not just up to the Supreme Court; it is up to us. We don’t just say we will pass anything, whether it is constitutional or not, and let the Supreme Court decide. That is the oath we take. It is our responsibility to uphold and defend the Constitution. We must think about that when we are passing laws here. That is the reason we have this authority to bring a constitutional point of order, so that this body considers whether it is constitutional. That is why we must consider the consequences of greatly expanded entitlements of the Federal Government in this bill, which are so dramatic that the threat to liberty is very real.

I yield the floor to the Republican who so he can make some comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I compliment my colleague who has raised a most important constitutional point. It is true, as Senators, we have an obligation to throw questions to the Supreme Court but to use our best judgment as to whether we would be violating the Constitution by adopting them.

I think the point of order he raises with respect to the 10th amendment is a very important question and should be carefully considered by our colleagues. I think you can only come to one conclusion. I support what he is trying to do.

I also want to make another point, which is that around the country people are calling in and raising questions about other aspects of the bill, also raising similar questions—the imposition of a supermajority rule, for example. Can one Congress bind another in that regard? We are only now learning of all of these things, and our constituents are only learning of them because the most recent amendment was filed just a few days ago.

As we read through it and begin to realize its implications, a lot of questions are being raised. The question I want to raise today goes right to the heart of the claim that supporters have made for this legislation; that is, that it reduces the Federal budget deficit.

Many colleagues on the other side of the aisle have said: I could not vote for this legislation now that I did not reduce the Federal budget deficit, or at least if it were not deficit neutral.

It turns out that from information received today from the CBO, it is not deficit neutral. In fact, it adds at least $170 billion to the deficit, which, of course, is very important since tomorrow we are going to be asked to increase the temporary debt ceiling. This legislation will add to our Federal debt, not make the situation better, as many of our colleagues have claimed.

I will describe why that is so. I heard another colleague on the other side on a talk show this morning say that we are going to extend the fiscal life of Medicare by 9 years. That is a claim that directly conflicts with the claim that the bill is budget neutral.

What both the CMS Actuary and the CBO have now said is, no; both are not true. There is only one sum of money. You can either extend the life of Medicare with that money, or you can buy a new entitlement under the bill with that money. But you cannot do both.

So if that money is spent on the new entitlement, for example, it cannot extend the life of Medicare. It cannot show a budget surplus of $130 billion.

In effect, they are saying you can’t sell the same pony twice. Here is exactly what the Congressional Budget Office had to say about it this morning. Incidentally, we were tipped off to this by a comment that was in the body of a letter from the CMS Actuary last week, or December 10, and as we read through it and tried to analyze the new amendment that was just filed, it became clear that, in effect, that is precisely what is being done by the other side.

I am not suggesting duplicity. What I am suggesting is that they, too, have been misled by the arcane accounting language, and until it became crystal clear with the language today, I can understand why there would be confusion—but no longer. You cannot vote for this legislation now and claim not to have known that it both buys an extension of the trust fund for Medicare and claims to buy a surplus of $130 billion.

Here is what the CBO says today, December 23, which is posted on their Web site:

The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund under this bill would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside and tried to pay for future Medicare spending and at the same time pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation.

In other words, the new entitlements that are allegedly paid for under the bill here is false.

To describe the full amount of the HI trust fund savings as both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would double-count a large share of those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s fiscal position.

It would essentially double-count the money. That is the point Senator GREGG and Senator SESSIONS and I tried to make earlier this morning.

This is new information, I grant you. But it is an illustration of why we should not try to force this bill to a vote before Christmas, when we haven’t tried to figure out what this all means and the American people haven’t had an opportunity to react to it.

I quoted to you from the CBO, the nonpartisan office that tells us what the fiscal impact is. Here is what tipped us off: Richard Foster, the CMS Chief Actuary, had sent a letter. This phrase caught our attention. He said:

In practice, the improved part A financing would essentially double-count the money.

What both the CMS Actuary and the CBO have now said is, no; both are not true. There is only one sum of money. You can either extend the life of Medicare with that money, or you can buy a new entitlement under the bill with that money. But you cannot do both.

So if that money is spent on the new entitlement, for example, it cannot extend the life of Medicare. It cannot show a budget surplus of $130 billion.

In effect, they are saying you can’t sell the same pony twice. Here is exactly what the Congressional Budget Office had to say about it this morning. Incidentally, we were tipped off to this by a comment that was in the body of a letter from the CMS Actuary last week, or December 10, and as we read through it and tried to analyze the new amendment that was just filed, it became clear that, in effect, that is precisely what is being done by the other side.

I am not suggesting duplicity. What I am suggesting is that they, too, have been misled by the arcane accounting language, and until it became crystal clear with the language today, I can understand why there would be confusion—but no longer. You cannot vote for this legislation now and claim not to have known that it both buys an extension of the trust fund for Medicare and claims to buy a surplus of $130 billion.

Here is what the CBO says today, December 23, which is posted on their Web site:

The key point is that the savings to the HI trust fund under this bill would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside and tried to pay for future Medicare spending and at the same time pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation.

In other words, the new entitlements that are allegedly paid for under the bill here is false.

To describe the full amount of the HI trust fund savings as both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would double-count a large share of those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s fiscal position.

It would essentially double-count the money. That is the point Senator GREGG and Senator SESSIONS and I tried to make earlier this morning.

This is new information, I grant you. But it is an illustration of why we should not try to force this bill to a vote before Christmas, when we haven’t tried to figure out what this all means and the American people haven’t had an opportunity to react to it.

I quoted to you from the CBO, the nonpartisan office that tells us what the fiscal impact is. Here is what tipped us off: Richard Foster, the CMS Chief Actuary, had sent a letter. This phrase caught our attention. He said:

In practice, the improved part A financing would essentially double-count the money.
We estimate that the aggregate net savings to the Part A trust fund under the PPACA would postpone the exhaustion of trust fund assets by 9 years—that is, from 2017 under current law to 2026 under the proposed legislation.

The combination of lower Part A costs and higher tax revenues results in a lower Federal deficit based on budget accounting rules. However, trust fund accounting considers the same lower expenditures and additional revenues as extending the exhaustion date of the Part A trust fund. In practice, the improved Part A financing cannot be simultaneously used to finance other Federal expenditures (such as the coverage expansions under the PPACA) and to extend the trust fund, despite the appearance of this result from the respective accounting conventions.

The estimated postponement of asset exhaustion under the Part A trust fund does not reflect the relatively small impact on HI payroll taxes due to economic effects of the legislation or the small increase in administrative expenses under the legislation. As noted in our December 10, 2009 memorandum on the estimated financial and other effects of the PPACA, reductions in Medicare payment updates to Part B providers, based on economy-wide productivity gains, are unlikely to be sustainable on a permanent annual basis. If such reductions were to prove unwarranted in the period 2010 through 2019, the actual HI savings from these provisions would be less than estimated, and the postponement in the trust fund exhaustion date would be reduced.

The Medicare expenditure reductions under the PPACA would also affect the level of Part B premiums paid by enrollees and the Part B beneficiary coinsurance amounts. The following table presents these estimated impacts:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CY</th>
<th>Part B Premium Impact (change in monthly premium amount)</th>
<th>coinsurance impact (change in years per capita amount)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2010</td>
<td>$0.00</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2011</td>
<td>$0.20</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2012</td>
<td>$1.80</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2013</td>
<td>$4.80</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2014</td>
<td>$7.80</td>
<td>136</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2015</td>
<td>$10.80</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2016</td>
<td>$13.80</td>
<td>246</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2017</td>
<td>$16.80</td>
<td>306</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2018</td>
<td>$19.80</td>
<td>367</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

As indicated, Part B premiums and average coinsurance payments would initially increase, reflecting higher overall Part B costs under the PPACA in 2010 as a result of the provision to postpone the 21.3-percent reduction in physician payment rates that would have been required by current law. Thereafter, there would be steadily increasing saving to Part B and associated reductions in the Part B premium and coinsurance amounts. For example, if Part B savings under the PPACA would result in lower beneficiary coinsurance payments for inpatient hospital and skilled nursing care. As before, all of these savings are conditional on the continued application of the productivity adjustments to the Medicare “market basket” payment updates. The expenditure reductions under Part B translate directly to lower financing requirements from general revenues and beneficiary premiums, with the full reduction annual to match program costs. Thus, in the case of Part B, the savings under the PPACA are not needed to help pay future Part B benefit costs, and the full reduction in Federal general revenues attributable to such savings can be used to offset other Federal costs, such as those arising under the PPACA coverage expansions.

Expenditure reductions under Part B translate directly to lower financing requirements from general revenues and beneficiary premiums, with the full reduction annual to match program costs. Thus, in the case of Part B, the savings under the PPACA are not needed to help pay future Part B benefit costs, and the full reduction in Federal general revenues attributable to such savings can be used to offset other Federal costs, such as those arising under the PPACA coverage expansions.

Mr. KYL. I am now happy to yield to Mr. BAUCUS. I ask my good friend from Arizona, is it not true that the last statement from CBO, on the degree to which the pending legislation does or does not reduce the deficit, stated that the legislation reduces the deficit by $132 billion—that is the last statement after addressing the deficit—and also stating that at the end of the decade, the deficit would be reduced by $650 billion and $1.3 trillion? Isn’t that the last statement from CBO addressing the question on whether this legislation reduces or increases the deficit. Isn’t that true?

Mr. KYL. Madam President, I don’t know the document that my friend is referring to as “the last document.” I think that document, dated December 23, today, is the last document.

Mr. BAUCUS. This is from a day or two ago. It is the CBO letter commenting on the modification.

Mr. KYL. I don’t know. I am not aware of that. My point is this: The document released today, in order to clarify the CBO’s position, said that the key point is that you can’t do both. The government only gets the money once. Therefore, they say, to describe the full amount as both providing a savings to Medicare and providing a surplus essentially doubles the money and thus overstates the improvement in the government’s position.

Mr. BAUCUS. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. KYL. I will not yield now. I have a unanimous consent request.

I ask unanimous consent that a Washington Post op-ed by Michael Gerson, dated December 23, be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Dec. 23, 2009]

For sale: One Senator (D-Neb.)

No principles, low Part A

By Michael Gerson

Sometimes there is a fine ethical line between legislative maneuvering and bribery.

At other times, that line is crossed by a speeding, honking tractor-trailer, with outlines of shapely women on mud flaps bouncing as it rumbles past.

It was the case in the final hours of Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid’s successful attempt to get cloture on health-care legislation. Ben Nelson, the last Democratic holdout, was offered and accepted a permanent exemption from his state’s share of Medicaid expansion, amounting to $100 million over 10 years. Eventually, he will.

Afterward, Reid was unapologetic. “You’ll find,” he said, “a number of states that are treated differently than other states. That’s why they showed up.”

But legislating, presumably, is also about giving public reasons for the expenditure of public funds. Are Cornhuskers particularly sickly and fragile? Is there a malaria outbreak in Grand Island? Ebola detected in Lincoln? Reid didn’t even attempt to offer a reason why Medicaid in Nebraska should be treated differently from, say, Medicaid across the Missouri River in Iowa. The majority leader voted with a cheque, not his heart. Does this conclusion sound harsh? Listen to Sen. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, who accused the Senate leadership and the administration of “bribing” states to accept Medicaid.

This special deal for Nebraska raises an immediate question: Why doesn’t every Democratic senator demand the same treatment for his or her state? Eventually, they will. After the Nelson deal was announced, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa enthused, “When you look at it, I thought well, God, it is good to be the captain of the ship. We have the states to stay at 100 percent (coverage by the federal government). So he might have done all of us a favor.” In a single concession, Reid undermined the principle that has—at least—designed as a shared burden between states and the federal government—and added to future federal deficits.

Unless this little sweetener is stripped from the final bill by a House-Senate conference committee in January, which would leave Nelson with a chosen battle-ground. Does this conclusion sound harsh? Listen to Sen. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, who accused the Senate leadership and the administration of “bribing” states to accept Medicaid.

How did Nelson gain such leverage in the legislation? Many assumed that his objections to abortion coverage in the health bill were serious—not a cover, but a conviction. Even though Nelson, a rare pro-life Democrat, joked in an interview that he might be considered a “cheater.” Republican leadership staffers in the Senate thought he might insist on language in the health-care bill prohibiting the use of federal funds to purchase public insurance plans that cover abortion on demand, as Democratic Rep. Bart Stupak had done in the House.

Instead, Nelson caved. The “compromise” he accepted allows states to prohibit the coverage of elective abortion in their insurance exchanges. Which means that Nebraska taxpayers may not be forced to subsidize insurance plans that cover abortions in Nebraska. But it will certainly allow states to subsidize such plans in California, New York and many other states.

In the end, Nelson not only surrendered his leverage; he also betrayed the trust the people of the Hyde Amendment, which since 1976 has prevented the coverage of elective abortion in federally funded insurance. Nelson not only voted for his pro-life ideology; he may force millions of Americans to violate theirs as well.
I can respect those who are pro-life out of conviction and those who are pro-choice out of conviction. It is more difficult to respect politicians willing to use their deepest beliefs—their deepest beliefs of others—as bargaining chips.

In a single evening, Nelson managed to undermine the logic of Medicaid, a panel that has already heard the story three times, and increase the public stock of cynicism. For what? For the sake of legislation that greatly expands a health entitlement without reforming the health system; that siphons hundreds of billions of dollars out of Medicare instead of using that money to reform Medicare; that imposes seven taxes on Americans making less than $250,000 a year; that makes Medicare cutbacks of 6 1/2 minutes a reality and the deepest beliefs of others—as the Senator convinced, as Senator GREGG about it—if we need to slow down be-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-correct?

Mr. SESSIONS. The leader's time is up at 6 minutes after the hour; is that correct?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader has 6 1/2 minutes re-
correct?
VerDate Nov 24 2008 02:41 Mar 11, 2010 Jkt 089060 PO 00000 Frm 00035 Fmt 0624 Sfmt 0634 E:\RECORD09\S23DE9.PT2 S23DE9mmaher on DSK69SOYB1PROD with CONG-REC-ONLINE

December 23, 2009

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S13829

increases. Small employers purchasing new policies in the reformed market would experience premiums up to 20 percent higher in 2019 than they would under current law.

Oliver Wyman also estimates that, if this bill is enacted, 2.9 million fewer Americans who buy their own coverage would earn too much to get a subsidy, according to the Congressional Budget Office.

So 14 million Americans will be required, by Washington, to purchase unsubsidized insurance that is more expensive than they would get under current law. And this is being called reform?

Second, those who do receive a subsidy may find the subsidy does not begin to cover the total cost of the increase.

And, finally, the heart of this debate is a basic question: What is the point of raising the price of insurance and then subsidizing a portion of the increase? You are still raising premiums and someone has to pay for subsidies.

Americans have asked us to lower healthcare costs, not raise them and then provide subsidies to those who qualify. And they certainly don’t want to pay more in taxes to subsidize their own insurance—but that is what the Democrats’ bill would have them do.

As the Wall Street Journal recently editorialized, “The [Reid] bill will increase costs, but it will then disguise those costs by transferring them to taxpayers from individuals.”

Not surprisingly, small business associations, whose members would be overwhelmingly impacted by this legislation, are disappointed.

The Coalition for Affordable Healthcare, for one, opposes this bill.

Their name says it all. This organization believes, as all of us do here in the Senate, that the status quo is not acceptable and not sustainable. But they disapprove of this legislation because, as they wrote in a letter to Congress, “it costs too much and delivers too little.”

Here are just a few of the dozens of business associations represented by this organization: The American Automobile Hotel and Lodging Association; American Bakers Association; the Independent Electrical Contractors; the National Association of Convenience Stores; the National Automobile Dealers Association; Printing Industries of America; the Society of American Florists. The list goes on and on.

These businesses wrote a letter to Congress expressing disapproval of the bill, arguing that the failure to bring down premiums, among other provisions, hurt small businesses. They believe that increased premiums have a domino effect, hurting both the employer and the employee, resulting in fewer jobs, depressed wages, and fewer choices.

I will share some excerpts from their letter, with regard to increased premiums and costs:

They write:

The bill does little to make insurance more affordable and the [small business] tax credit is so limited, few will be able to obtain affordable insurance.

They go on:

The impact on non-group premiums is . . . overwhelming. Increases of more than 10–13 percent per person. Those estimates, in addition to the financing provisions in the bill, slam the “savings” door shut.

Another organization, the National Federation of Independent Business, has also raised major objections to this bill with regard to increased premiums.

Here is a telling excerpt from a letter they wrote to the two Senate party leaders:

H.R. 3590 fails the small business test, and, therefore, fails small business. The most recent CBO study detailing the effect [this bill] will have on insurance premiums reinforces that, despite claims by its supporters, the bill will not deliver the widely-promised help to the small business community.

Bruce Josten of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce concurs. He recently said:

The fundamental failure of the Senate bill is its failure to address cost containment. We have a bill that raises taxes on pretty much everything that moves in the healthcare space. And successful cost containment practices that are in the marketplace, like health savings accounts or flexible spending accounts, are dramatically weakened in this . . . Healthcare cost increases are going to crowd out the compensation pool.

The majority leader recently disagreed with the notion that this bill increases costs, citing a prediction by the President’s Council of Economic Advisers that the bill before us would bring down costs.

This is the same council that told us unemployment would peak at 8 percent if only Congress would pass the stimulus. As Americans know, Congress passed the stimulus, and we are now at 10 percent unemployment.

Moreover, if the Council of Economic Advisors is supposed to be the Bible of economic analysis and administration officials know best, why is it that on the same day the President’s top economic advisor Larry Summers declared on This Week, “the recession is over,” the Council’s chief, Christina Romer, told Meet The Press viewers that “of course” the recession is not over? So, who should we believe on costs?

I submit that small business owners and their representatives have the most intimate knowledge of which policies will benefit them and which stand to hurt them. They are telling us this bill will hurt them.

Finally, I want to point out that this bill does not even guarantee that all Americans have insurance.

We are going to spend $2.5 trillion to raise the price of insurance for millions of Americans and keep affordable insurance out of reach for millions more.

There are much better ways to give access to affordable healthcare to all Americans.

We should start with serious medical liability reform, which has been proven in Texas, Arizona, and Missouri to bring down costs for patients and doctors.

We need to allow Americans to buy insurance across State lines. This is one of the most commonsense reforms out there. Why should Americans be denied access to lower-cost policies just because they are being sold in other states?

We should also allow small businesses to band together to pool their risk and purchase insurance at the same rates large corporations get.

Enacting these simple reforms would cost little, if anything, and would be sure to bring down costs. That is the kind of reform Americans would be sure to support.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Baucus motion to waive be set aside.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I want to take a moment to talk about the motion to table the appeal by Senator CORNYN and the ruling of the Chair that no point of order lies under rule XLIV.

Senator CORNYN’s appeal is not about transparency and certainly not about disclosure. It is about delay and obstruction. That is what the whole tenor of all the Republican statements has been regarding this legislation.

The vote is whether we create a whole new point of order even though Senate rules at this stage do not allow a point of order. They want to rewrite the rules at a whim, not for purpose of disclosure and transparency but for the purpose of delay and obstruction.

The legislative history of the Honest Leadership and Government Act specifically addresses the issue of whether a point of order lies in this instance:

If rule XLIV does not expressly provide for a point of order with respect to a provision, then the point of order shall lie under the provision.

We open a Pandora’s box if we reverse the ruling of the Chair on appeal. What would be the new rule? How would the new rules be implemented? What happens to the health care bill? Who decides the answers to these questions?

Moreover, if we overrule the Chair, we would be setting a dangerous precedent of order lie even if not provided for in Senate rules, standing orders, or procedures.

It is clear the purpose of this is to obstruct and delay. I urge my colleagues to vote to table the Cornyn appeal of the ruling of the Chair when that comes.

Mr. CORNYN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. REID. No, I will not. The health care votes we have held this week have been procedural in nature. Each has been a party-line vote and much of this debate is focused on politics. But health reform is not about procedure or partisanship or politics. It is about people—people like the thousands who write us every day. At my desk, we have a few of the letters we have picked up in the last day or so. Sorry, staff has had to lift that and I didn’t. This is a few we have gotten. Look at this. They are all essentially the same. Each of these letters right here represents a story, a tragedy, a life, a death, but most of all, a person—a person, people who wake up every morning and struggle to get health care or struggle to hold on to what they have, people who lie awake every night second-guessing the agonizing decisions they have to make about what to sacrifice just to stay healthy.

Here is a letter that was written to Senator Bob Casey of Pennsylvania. Listen to what this woman said:

Dear Senator CASEY.

In a country like the United States, we shouldn’t need a tip jar in an ice cream shop to raise money for a kid with leukemia. Jennifer Wood.

I am certain my story is not unique, but it is real. Stop forcing Americans to use the most expensive point of service, the emergency room, to get what the system won’t provide for in the eyes of health care, please.

This legislation is not about the number of pages of this bill. It is about the number of people—people such as the man whose letter I just read who was told by a doctor that he would likely outlive his son. It is about the number of people whom this bill will help. That is what this is all about. It is about fairness. So when people are hurt or sick, they can go see somebody who can help them and not lie awake at night wondering if they will outlive their 1-year-old son.

Mr. REID. How much time remains?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. REID. I yield back that time and ask the vote start earlier.

I withdraw that request.

I ask unanimous consent that prior to each vote today there be 2 minutes of debate equally divided and controlled in the usual form.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There is now 2 minutes equally divided.

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, stop the 2 minutes from running. I do want to explain. We will shortly have a series of up to seven votes. As we noted in the last few days, if Members remain at their desks, the votes can be concluded much earlier.

ENSKIN POINT OF ORDER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is now 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote on the constitutional point of order offered by the Senator from Nevada, Mr. Ensign.

Who yields time?

The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the vote sequence will be as follows: Ensign constitutional point of order; Cornyn funded mandates point of order; Baucus motion to table the Cornyn appeal ruling of the Chair; Hutchison constitutional point of order. I have been advised that a Republican Member will not vote, so he can offer his amendment under rule XXII. He is going to be allowed 10 minutes. This will require 67 votes because it is an effort to change the rules. Following that we will have adoption of the substitute amendment and cloture on H.R. 3590. So there is a series of seven votes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, the vote sequence will be as follows: Ensign constitutional point of order because I am concerned that the health reform bill violates Congress’s enumerated powers under article I, section 8 and the fifth amendment.

Each one of us makes an oath to defend the Constitution of the United States. We do not take an oath to reform health care. We do not take an oath to do anything else here but to defend the Constitution of these United States.

Health care reform needs to fit with the Constitution. The Constitution limits the powers we have. The Congress, the U.S. Government has never enacted anything that would regulate someone’s inactivity in the way the individual mandate in this health care bill would. Anything we have ever done, somebody actually had to have an action before we could tax or regulate it. In this case, if you choose to not do something, in other words, if you do not choose health insurance—this bill will actually tax you. It will act as an onerous tax. So for the first time in the history of the United States this bill will do something the Federal Government has never done before. This bill would do something that is beyond Congress’s powers to authorize. This bill is unconstitutional and I urge all Members to vote in support of the constitutional point of order.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, our committee and the HELP Committee have given a lot of thought to the provisions in this legislation. We also gave a lot of thought to the constitutionality of the provisions—how they work and the interrelationship between the power of Congress and the States and what States will be doing, particularly under the commerce clause and the tax-and-spending powers of the Constitution.

It is very strongly our considered judgment, and that of many constitutional scholars who have looked at these provisions, and many articles have been put in the Record—that clearly these provisions are constitutional. The commerce clause is constitutional, the tax-and-spending clause, and the provisions clearly are constitutional.

I yield back my time.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The bill clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning) would have voted ‘‘yea’’ on the amendment violence article I, section 8 of the Constitution, and the fifth amendment.

The question is, Is the point of order well taken?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, stop the 2 minutes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, our committee and the HELP Committee have given a lot of thought to the provisions in this legislation. We also gave a lot of thought to the constitutionality of the provisions—how they work and the interrelationship between the power of Congress and the States and what States will be doing, particularly under the commerce clause and the tax-and-spending powers of the Constitution.

It is very strongly our considered judgment, and that of many constitutional scholars who have looked at these provisions, and many articles have been put in the Record—that clearly these provisions are constitutional. The commerce clause is constitutional, the tax-and-spending clause, and the provisions clearly are constitutional.

I yield back my time.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The bill clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning) would have voted ‘‘yea’’ on the amendment violence article I, section 8 of the Constitution, and the fifth amendment.

The question is, Is the point of order well taken?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, stop the 2 minutes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, our committee and the HELP Committee have given a lot of thought to the provisions in this legislation. We also gave a lot of thought to the constitutionality of the provisions—how they work and the interrelationship between the power of Congress and the States and what States will be doing, particularly under the commerce clause and the tax-and-spending powers of the Constitution.

It is very strongly our considered judgment, and that of many constitutional scholars who have looked at these provisions, and many articles have been put in the Record—that clearly these provisions are constitutional. The commerce clause is constitutional, the tax-and-spending clause, and the provisions clearly are constitutional.

I yield back my time.

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The bill clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. KYL. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning) would have voted ‘‘yea’’ on the amendment violence article I, section 8 of the Constitution, and the fifth amendment.

The question is, Is the point of order well taken?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.
December 23, 2009

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
S13831

Inouye, Lincoln Sanders
Johnson, McCaskill, Schumer
Kasich, Menendez, Shaheen
Kerry, Merkley, Specter
Kirk, Mikulski, Stabenow
Klobuchar, Murray, Tester
Kohl, Nelson (NE), Udall (CO)
Landrieu, Nelson (FL), Udall (NM)
Lautenberg, Pryor, Warner
Leahy, Reid, Webb
Levin, Reid, Whitehouse
Lieberman, Rockefeller, Wyden

NOT VOTING—1

Bunning

The Acting President pro tempore. The point of order is not well-taken.

Corker Point of Order

The Acting President pro tempore. There is now 2 minutes equally divided prior to the vote on the motion to waive the point of order raised by the Senator from Tennessee, Mr. Corker.

Who yields time?

The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. Corker. Mr. President, thank you so much.

There is almost nothing held in lower esteem than for the Senate to pass laws in this body that cause mayors and Governors to have budgetary problems because we create unfunded mandates.

Many of you have been mayors and Governors, and for that reason, in 1995, in a bipartisan way, a law was created—15 Senators on the other side of the aisle who are now serving supported this law—to keep us from passing unfunded mandates. CBO has stated—15 Senators on the other side, knowing that those who are traveling that our friends on the other side, knowing that those who are traveling too far and too fast would have voted ‘nay.’

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 55, nays 44, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 390 Leg.]

YEAS—55

Akaka, F不出
Baucus, Gilibrand, Merkley
Begich, Hagan, Murray
Bennet, Heineman, Nelson (FL)
Bingaman, Inouye, Pryor
Boxer, Johnson, Reed
Brown, Kaufman, Reid
Burris, Kerry, Rockefeller
Byrd, Kirk, Sanders
Cantwell, Klobuchar, Schaefer
Cardin, Kohl, Specter
Carper, Landrieu, Stababenow
Casey, Leahy, Tester
Coons, Levin, Udall (CO)
Donovan, Landman, Udall (NM)
Durbin, Lincoln, Whitehouse
Feingold, McCaskill, Wyden
Feinstein, Menendez

NAYS—44

Alexander, Ensign, Murkowski
Barrasso, Enzi, Nelson (NE)
Bayh, Graham, Risch
Bennett, Grassley, Roberts
Bent, Gregg, Sessions
Brownback, Harkin, Snowe
Burr, Hatchison, Shelby
Chambliss, Inhofe, Snowe
Cochran, Isakson, Snowe
Cochran, Johnson, Thune
Collins, Kyi, Vitter
Conaway, LeMieux, Voinovich
Cornyn, Lugar, Warner
Crapo, McCain, Webb
DeMint, McConnell, Wicker

NOT VOTING—1

Bunning

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to waive section 429(a)(2) requiring a simple majority is agreed to.

The point of order falls.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, I have spoken to the Republican leader. Senators on both sides feel that it would be to their advantage if we had the vote on Christmas Eve at 7 a.m. rather than 8 a.m. That being the case, I ask unanimous consent that the vote start at 7 a.m. on Christmas Eve.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Leahy. May I address a question to the distinguished majority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. Leahy. Mr. President, it will not affect my travel plans because I long ago decided—

Mr. Reid. If I could interrupt my friend, what are you afraid of?

Mr. Leahy. You have your agreement on this. But there is any possibility that our friends on the other side, knowing that those who are traveling to the Midwest are going to face horrendous problems, that we could have that vote this evening? It will not affect the Senator from Vermont one way or the other, but it will affect a lot of Senators, Republicans and Democrats alike, who have to fly through the Midwest to get where they are going.

Mr. McConnell. Regular order.

Corker Appeal of the Ruling of the Chair

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Regular order has been called for.

There is now 2 minutes equally divided prior to a vote on the motion to table the appeal of the ruling of the Chair.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. Cornyn. Mr. President, upon passage of the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act, the majority leader said:

I believe last November Americans . . . asked us to make Government honest. We have done that . . . This is the toughest reform bill in the history of this body as it relates to ethics and lawmaker.

We have an appeal to the ruling of the Chair that that provision of rule XLIV is unenforceable. Why would anybody who voted overwhelming to make this the toughest reform bill in the history of the body render this rule toothless by agreeing with the attempt to set this aside and to waive its effect? I ask my colleagues to make sure we vote for transparency, for honesty, for open government. Vote no on this motion to waive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. Baucus. Mr. President, theplain text of the language in rule XLIV provides that no point of order lies against amendments. That is the way the drafter intended it. That is the way they wrote rule XLIV. That is why the President ordered that way on the advice of the Parlimentarian. We should support the Chair and the Parlimentarian and vote for the motion to table the appeal of the ruling of the Chair.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. Cornyn. Do I have time remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One second.

Mr. Cornyn. I ask my colleagues to vote no on the motion to waive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the appeal of the ruling of the Chair that there is no point of order under rule XLIV, paragraph 4(a).

The yeas and nays were previously ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. Kyl. The following Senator is necessarily absent: the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Bunning) would have voted ‘nay.’

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?
The result was announced—yeas 57, nays 42, as follows:

YEAS—57
Akaka
Baucus
Bayh
Bingaman
Boxer
Brown
Burr
Byrd
Cantwell
Cardin
Carper
Conrad
Carper
Cardin
Byrd
Baucus
Akaka

Mr. REID. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DURBIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

NAYS—42
Alexander
Baucus
Bayh
Bingaman
Boxer
Brown
Burr
Chambliss
Collins
Corker
Coburn
Cochran
Cassidy
Conrad
Carper
Cardin
Byrd

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DURBIN. I move to reconsider the vote.

The result was announced—yeas 39, nays 60, as follows:

YEAS—39
Alexander
Baucus
Bayh
Bingaman
Boxer
Brown
Burr
Chambliss
Collins
Corker
Coburn
Bennett
Bennett
Bennett
Bond
Brownback
Burr
Chambliss
Collins
Corker
Coburn
Bond
Bennet
Bayh
Akaka

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, in just a minute I will move to suspend the rules for the purpose of offering an amendment that would change the practice of trading earmarks for votes.

While I want to be careful not to suggest wrongdoing by any Member, there has been growing public concern that earmarks were used to buy votes for this legislation. It has been argued by some that this practice is acceptable because it is necessary to get things done in the Senate. I reject that argument, and I urge my colleagues to put an end to business as usual here in the Senate.

The House of Representatives has a rule prohibiting the use of earmarks to buy votes for legislation. If we were in the House considering this bill, vote trading would be a direct violation of the ethics rules. Unfortunately, a vote-trading rule does not exist in the Senate.

During the debate on the lobbying and ethics reform bill in the 110th Congress, the senior Senator from Illinois, Mr. DURBIN, and I offered an earmark reform amendment which contained the following language:

A Member may not condition the inclusion of language to provide funding for a congressionally directed spending project on the vote of another Member.

The Durbin-DeMint amendment was written to mirror Speaker PELOSI’s earmark reforms in the House. The Durbin-DeMint amendment passed the Senate by a vote of 96 to 2 and was included in S. 1, the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act, which passed the Senate by a vote of 96 to 2.

The rule against trading votes for earmarks was in the bill when it left the Senate, but then the bill moved to a closed-door negotiation in the House. Now, at some point in those closed-door negotiations, someone dropped the earmark-for-vote language. I have no idea who it was, and we may never know. Remember, this bill was called the Honest Leadership and Open Government Act. In any case, the vote-trading rule was dropped from the bill, which then passed the Senate and was signed by the President.

Just to confirm all of this, I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry to the Chair. Is the Chair aware of any prohibition in the Standing Rules of the Senate such as the previously referenced rule contained in the Durbin-DeMint amendment or in the Rules of the House of Representatives? The PRESIDING OFFICER. No such rule exists in the Senate.

Mr. DEMINT. No such rule exists. I have an amendment which would correct this error. It mirrors the Durbin-DeMint language which passed the Senate in 2009, and I will read the relevant parts. I quote:

It shall not be in order in the Senate to consider a congressionally directed spending
Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this is a move to table the motion to suspend the rules. The amendment is written in a way to become a source of delay. Senators could make one point of order after another under this provision, pointing to different provisions or in- dicting the integrity of different Senators. The amendment provides no way for determining how to rule on a point of order raised under it. A point of order cannot be decided without solid guidance. Points of order make the most sense when they are. The amendment to rule XXII would ask the Chair and the Parliamentarian to sort through purely subjective concepts such as the basis for a Senator's vote or the intent behind inclusion of a provision. How would the Chair be able to rule on such a point of order? Would the Parliamentarian have to question the chairman of a committee or a Senator who offers the amendment, under oath? Would the Parliamentarian have to question every Senator who requested a directed spending item, under oath, to ensure they did not condition their support on inclusion of the item?

The rule may sound good in theory, but it is actually unworkable as a practical matter.

I move to table the DeMint motion and ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a vote on whether we wish to reconsider the Senate amendment No. 2786, as amended.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 60, nays 39, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 395 Leg.]

YEAS—60

Akaka
Baucus
Bayh
Begich
Bennet
Ringo
Boxer
Bos
Brown
Burris
Byrd
Cantwell
Cardin
Carper
Casey
Conrad
Dodd
Durbin
Feingold
Feinstein

Not Voting

Running

Crapo

The amendment (No. 2786), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order and pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on H.R. 3590, the Service Members Home Ownership Tax Act of 2009.

Christopher Dodd, Richard Durbin, Mark Begich, Paul G. Kirk, Sheldon Whitehouse, Roland W. Burris, Max Baucus, Sherrod Brown, Claire McCaskill, Jon Tester, Barbara A. Mikulski, Bill Nelson, Maria Cantwell, Mark Udall, Arlen Specter, Kirsten E. Gillibrand, and Ron Wyden.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on H.R. 3590, the Service Members Home Ownership Tax Act of 2009, shall be brought to a close?

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I know Mr. Reid. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the motion on the table.

The yeas and nays are agreed to. The legislative clerk will report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The vote, the yeas are 60, the nays are 39. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion to invoke cloture on the underlying bill is agreed to.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I think we all recognize that things have gotten pretty tense around the Senate as we have worked three weekends in a row, and people are obviously concerned about the Christmas holiday. Sometimes the tension has boiled over into what has been said on and off the floor, and the way we treat each other, and that is very regrettable.

Two nights ago there was an unfortunate incident that deserves special mention, though. One of our colleagues, the Senator from South Carolina, attacked the Parliamentarian over a ruling relating to the difference between amendments to the Senate Parliamentarian’s concluded Senate Rules and procedural changes adopted in less formal ways. The former requires a 2/3rds vote to achieve cloture; the latter is treated like any other piece of legislation. The distinction is an interesting quirk of Senate rules. But it is a venerable and well-established distinction. The Senate Manual includes 70 pages of Standing Orders. The Budget Act process—which the minority used to make a point of order just today—is almost entirely dependent on procedures that are not part of the Standing Rules of the Senate.

In fact, in the last two Congresses, the Senate from South Carolina has authored or co-sponsored at least 17 bills or amendments that implicate the Parliamentarian to be accused of “redefin[ing] words,” “ignoring a rule” of the Senate, and a “truly historic” and unconstitutional “subvert[sion of] the principle we have operated under” for re-stating this longstanding distinction is completely unwarranted.

As I noted, tensions are running high and Senators are tired and, according to one recent article, cranky. But I hope that the body will do its best to ensure proper decorum as we proceed for the remainder of the year and the remainder of the Congress. We need to treat each other with respect. And we certainly need to treat the institution of the Senate and its hard-working employees with respect.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent there now be alternating blocks of time as follows: The first hour under the control of the Republicans; further, that after the first 2 hours, then there be alternating blocks of 30 minutes, with the Republicans controlling the first 30 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, there have been a lot of conversations on this floor in the last couple hours. There are a lot of people who are facing tough timetables tomorrow. I know of one Senator—

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, regular order. Regular order. Mr. President.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask consent I be given 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object. I would be happy for those 2 minutes to come out of the Democrats’ 1 hour without asking for regular order.

Mr. HARKIN. That is fine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Mr. Vitter is recognized.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I know one Senator whose family is with their in-laws. The husband is from England and the kids are over there and cannot make it for Christmas dinner tomorrow night. I know another person who has to get out to the West and there are a lot of storms out there. If they can get that early flight, they can make two legs and get home. If they have to go later, they have to do three legs and they may not make it there. There are a lot of people around here who are having a lot of problems that we are all here. There is no reason to hold over the vote so I am going to ask unanimous consent that the vote on the passage of the bill and the vote on the debt limit bill occur at 6 p.m. this evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. VITTER. Addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, that request has not been cleared on this side. On behalf of my colleagues, I object. If the Senate would like to talk to all his colleagues about it, that would be fine, but in the meantime, I would object.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, then I would further ask unanimous consent that the vote on the passage of the bill and the vote on the debt limit bill occur at 7 a.m. tomorrow occur at 12:15 a.m., in the morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, my response would be the same and I would object in the same vein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The objection is heard.

Mr. HARKIN. I want Members to know who is keeping us here.

Mr. RISCH. Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. RISCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote referred to by Senator HARKIN take place at 2 p.m. on January 20, 2010, when we return.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VITTER. I thank the Chair. Mr. President. I ask for order on the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I ask that time not be counted against me until the floor is in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this first block of time on the minority side be divided equally between the following Senators: myself, Senators COBURN, THUNE, SESSIONS, KYL, and INSENSE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I ask that the first block of time on the minority side be divided equally between the following Senators: myself, Senators COBURN, THUNE, SESSIONS, KYL, and INSENSE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in order.

Mr. VITTER. Mr. President, I rise to talk about this important health care issue but also to talk about another vitally important issue directly connected, which is spending and debt because we will also have an enormously important vote tomorrow morning on increasing the debt limit. It is already over $12 trillion, but the proposal is to increase it further.

In starting, let me refer back to a couple comments and parts of the debate yesterday because I think it will provide a good preface to this important debate. First, yesterday, as we were debating health care, my colleague from Louisiana, the distinguished senior Senator, Mr. LANDRIEU, was on C-SPAN’s “Washington Journal.” In discussing the health care bill, my participation came up. She said: “Senator VITTER has not lifted a finger to pass this bill.” I wish to say that this is a very kind and positive and generous comment of the Senator. I had suggested, and these issues are certainly connected in the hearts and minds of the American people. The American people have responded to this debate because health care is so vitally important and the health care issue is so personal.

There is even an overarching, larger reason the American people have responded so much to this debate. It is because they are connecting the dots. They are putting the larger pattern, and they are connecting the dots between bailing out and taking over insurance companies and financial companies and car companies, hiring and firing the CFO from the Oval Office to potentially bankrupt the U.S. economy in health care. They are connecting those dots in terms of spending and debt, as well, because that has been the dominant trend over the last 12 months at least.

We have a debt limit today. It is over $12 trillion. The motion tomorrow suggests that is not enough. We need to go higher. The American people are connecting the dots, particularly in the last year, and they are scared to death about where it leaves them in the future. Did we get this way? How did we come to this $12 trillion-plus point? Well, in July, 2008, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac were given an unlimited line of credit from the Treasury that, so far, has been $400 billion, and that bill increased the debt limit from $9.8 trillion to $10.6 trillion. But that wasn’t enough. Only 3 months later, in October, 2008, came the Wall Street bailouts, the $700 billion TARP that will raise the debt limit, that did add about $1 trillion; to $11.3 trillion, but we weren’t done yet. Only a few months after that, in February of this year, we passed the so-called stimulus bill. That will cost over $1 trillion before it is all over, and then the debt limit was raised to $12.1 trillion. Then we passed an omnibus spending bill earlier this year that increased spending by 8 percent over the previous fiscal year.

This month, we passed another omnibus spending bill that increased spending by another 12 percent on top of that. That is what is leading to tomorrow’s debt limit vote. That is what is leading to the statement that our debt limit is certainly connected in the hearts and minds of the American people. The American people have responded to this debate because health care is so vitally important and the health care issue is so personal. The American people have responded to this debate because health care is so vitally important and the health care issue is so personal.
now above $12 trillion. But that is not enough. Apparently, we need to go further.

The American people are connecting the dots. They see this trend, which has accelerated dramatically over the last 12 months, and they are truly scared for our collective future for their kids’ and their grandkids’ future. All these things I mentioned plus this health care bill are part of that.

The American people know in their gut—more than the marbled cover of the Congressional Budget Office technicalities, but they know in their gut that you cannot have it both ways. You cannot count $467 billion of Medicare cuts as both helping pay for the other spending in the bill and strengthening Medicare. It is one or the other. It cannot be both. It is the same thing in the health care bill with regard to Social Security—$52 billion double-counted. But you cannot have that both ways. It is the same thing in this health care bill cut with regard to the CLASS Act—$2 billion double-counted. You can’t have that both ways. Those factors alone put this bill out of balance, adding to the deficit, adding to the debt.

What about the doc fix, the fix of reimbursement under Medicare to health care professionals such as doctors, which is clearly needed. That was taken out of the health care bill. Why? Because that would cost money. It was taken out. It was just pushed down the road, the can was kicked down the road. That has to be revisited by March 1 of next year. If a real 10-year-or-more doc fix is passed, that will be another $200 billion unpaid for—more deficit and more debt.

The American people get it. They know in their hearts, in their gut, that we are on an unsustainable course. They know all these bailouts and so-called stimulus acts, all these spending bills and now this enormous health care bill, cannot do all that unemployment and the deficit and more debt. They are saying we must reverse course, we must save our Nation. I hope we do that starting here, starting now.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. Coburn, is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I ask consent to have 3 minutes outside of the time allotted to make a point of personal privilege, and I ask unanimous consent for that. I would say the reason is today is my 41st wedding anniversary, and I was going to discuss that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

HONORING MY WIFE ON MY 41ST ANNIVERSARY

Mr. COBURN. In 1953, I met a young lady—actually, it was 1954—a young lady when she was 6 years of age. Her name was Carolyn. I went through grade school with this young lady. I went through junior high with this young lady. I went through high school with this young lady. The only serious dating relationship I ever had in my life was with this young lady named Carolyn Denton. She became one of my best friends in high school. It just so happened that one weekend I couldn’t get a date, she didn’t have one, and I asked her out. From that point forward, in love with somebody. I have been married to for 41 years, my wife Carolyn Coburn.

On this day of significant votes in the Senate, and tomorrow, I wanted to take a moment to say how much I appreciate what I have learned from the past 41 years, how much stronger she has made me as a man, how she has completed every aspect of my life being my partner as we walk through life, and the gift she gave me of three wonderful daughters.

So to my wife Carolyn, in front of the body, I tell you thank you and happy anniversary.

I would like to go to my prepared remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I have spent 5 years in the Senate talking to my colleagues about spending. We find in front of us another opportunity to do the wrong thing. We have a debt limit increase. Yet, in those 5 years, after hundreds and hundreds of amendments the body has refused to agree to that would cut spending, we are going to increase the debt limit but we are not going to make any effort to cut the spending.

I have given seven complete speeches on the floor about the significant amount of waste in the Federal Government. I will not repeat those now. But that number is now annualized to $380 billion a year—every year, $380 billion worth of waste. Part of it is fraud, but a large part of it is duplication. Let me give some examples of the duplication because I think when Americans hear the word duplication and they recognize the comments of both my colleagues from Louisiana and Oklahoma touched on an issue that I think is becoming increasingly important to a lot of Americans.

America recognizes our incompetence, but we are going to spell it out. In this new year that comes forward, there is not going to be a week that comes by that I do not come to the floor and show another example to the American people of how we are not doing our work. It grieves me—not for me but for my children and everybody else’s children, for my grandchildren and everybody else’s grandchildren—that we fail to treat the real symptoms of our debt; that is, we will not do the hard work of oversight. We should be condemned for that. We are failing the American people. It ought not to be.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota, Mr. Thune, is recognized.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments of both my colleagues from Louisiana and Oklahoma touching on an issue that I think is becoming increasingly important to a lot of Americans.

I was listening this morning to one of my colleagues on the other side as he came down here and talked about how we are spending our way to these debt problems were all inherited from the previous administration. There is sort of a Bush-phobia or something around here among Members on the other side because they do not want to own up for the decisions they have made.

Granted, I would be the first one to admit that when Republicans were in control of the Congress, we didn’t do it right all the time and we lost our way a little bit with regard to spending. But having said that, since 2006—a Democratic Congress, I need to remind my colleagues that the President doesn’t spend a dime under said, appropriations spending—and this all the spending that is going on right for their own decisions. You cannot possible.

which the former President is responsible. That is not spending for the United States. That is not spending for a new entitlement program. That, too, is not something for which the previous administration is responsible. That is something this administration, the majority here in the Congress, has decided they want to push through. They want to finish it before the Christmas holiday. They want to get this in the rearview mirror before the American people have an opportunity to see what is in it, particularly in the last hurled rush here over the weekend where we got the 400-page amendment to all the special last-minute deals that were made to try to get that elusive 60th vote. What we have seen is now the $2.5 trillion in new spending is filled with all kinds of goodies that are going to favor individual Senators and individual States. The American people are starting to react.

The point I want to make about this is, the one thing that the President and Congress now have been talking about is how this reduces the deficit. This saves $132 billion over the next 10 years. Just remember that $132 billion over 10 years. If you look at what the deficit was for the month of October, if any of my colleagues know what the deficit was for the month of October, 1 month alone, this last October, it was $176 billion—in 1 month. They are crowing about $132 billion in savings over a 10-year period. Well, $132 billion is $1.3 trillion if you take away all the gimmicks and you look at all the phony accounting that has been done to get to that number, it goes down in a real hurry.

For example, the SGR fix, the physician reimbursement issue is a $200 billion-plus item. Let’s say they are saying they got $132 billion in savings over the next 10 years. But at some point you have to deal with that $200 billion SGR problem and end up with a negative $68 billion already. Then you add in this CLASS Act, which everybody who has any sense, any actuary has absolutely denounced, including even the Washington Post. But if you look at what the CLASS Act does, they can use those reserves in the first early years that come from the premiums paid in. That money will be spent. So when it comes time to pay out benefits, that’s going to be any money there. But they are showing a $72 billion savings or addition to their so-called savings in that first 10 years from the CLASS Act. The chairman of the Budget Committee has called the CLASS Act a Ponzi scheme of the first order, something that Bernie Madoff would be proud of.

You take that $72 billion out, which the Congressional Budget Office says is going to add huge deficits in the out-years, you take out that $72 billion, and you are already at a $130 billion deficit. We haven’t even dealt with the fact that because of the way they have set this up, by front end loading the tax increases and back end loading spending, that understates the total cost.

In the first 10 years, if you take those first 4 years when you have $56 billion out of the coming in and only $8 billion of spending going out, that is another $47 billion that you could add to the deficit. So you have gone from $132 billion in savings to a $177 billion deficit. That is before you even get to the more important issue, which is what the CBO came out with today in response to a question by the Senator from Alabama asking: How can you count money that is going to come from these Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would essentially double-count a share of those savings and thus overstate the improvement in the government’s fiscal position.

Every American knows you can’t spend the same money twice. That is what this does. They are going to cut $1 trillion over 10 years, when fully implemented, out of Medicare, but they will spend that money on a new entitlement program and still count the savings in Medicare. You can’t have it both ways. The American people have figured out this scheme and will not let you off the hook.

When you take a $177 billion deficit after you take out all these accounting gimmicks, you are already running a significant deficit. Then when you add in the fact that what the CBO now says, what most of us have believed to be true and have been arguing, that you can’t spend the same money twice, you cannot double-count that revenue, the Medicare trust fund is going to take a significantly big hit. I know the Senator from Alabama is going to talk more extensively about that. I want to point that out because we are going into a big debate about raising the debt limit. Everybody, now that the horse is out of the barn, wants to shut the gate. But you can’t spend $2.5 trillion on a new entitlement program and then claim to be fiscally responsible or say that you are doing something to reduce the deficit.

Interestingly enough, the CMS Actuary said these Medicare cuts are unlikely to be sustainable on a permanent basis. We all know we are not going to cut $1 trillion out of Medicare over the first 10 years. That just doesn’t happen here. All that money is going to get borrowed and put on the debt or they will have to raise taxes to pay for it. You can’t have it both ways.

As we debate the debate about the debt limit, it is important for us to put things into context. I want to say again that $132 billion in savings, which is what they are saying they get by this health care reform bill with all the cuts and the Medicare cuts, is suspicious in the first place, given the fact that the SGR, the $200 billion is not included, the $72 billion CLASS Act, and the $47 billion that they achieve by front end loading tax increases and back end loading spending brings you to a $177 billion deficit in the first 10 years. That does not even include the funny accounting being used with regard to the Medicare trust fund. We will get into this debate about the debt limit, but nothing bears on that more seriously than what we do with health care.

We need to defeat this. I hope we will still see some courage by a few of my colleagues to help us take this health care bill down, to go back to the drawing board and to actually put in place solutions that will meaningfully reduce the cost of health care for people in this country, not increase their premiums, and not add to the deficit and saddle future generations with an impossible debt that they don’t have. Remember, $176 billion was the deficit in the month of October alone. We are talking about, under their numbers, $132 billion in savings over 10 years which, when you sit down and figure it out, it just doesn’t add up.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, when the recession hit last fall, many Americans had been living beyond their means and had to quickly scale back. Families all across America have been tightening their belts. They have been forgoing vacations, meals in restaurants, extra Christmas presents, cutting back wherever they can. The government needs to take a lesson from those families. It is time that Congress and the administration get serious about cutting spending in a meaningful way. Spending did Obama’s first year in office, to put it charitably, has not been what most would describe as responsible. Government spending grew by $705 billion in fiscal year 2009, an increase of 24 percent. Appropriations legislation enacted this year will increase spending by another 8 percent in the year 2010. All of this spending, of course, has an impact on both the Federal deficit and the Federal debt.

Let me clarify the difference between those two numbers. The deficit is the amount of spending not covered by revenues in a given year. The debt is the sum of all of the Nation’s yearly deficits. The 2009 deficit made history and not in a good way. It exceeded $1.4 trillion in the last fiscal year. That is the highest amount in history and more than three times as much as the highest deficit during the last administration. The budget President Obama submitted to Congress doubles the deficit in 5 and triples it in 10. It also creates more debt than the combined debt under every President since George Washington. That seems almost impossible, but it is true.

The President’s budget creates more debt than all of his predecessor’s debt put together throughout the history of the country, from George Washington all the way up through George Bush, more debt under President Obama’s budget than all of that combined.

Even Management and Budget Director Peter Orszag has said that is not sustainable. The debt has reached an almost unimaginable sum of $12 trillion. To pay the Federal Government’s bills for the next 2 months, tomorrow we are going to raise the debt ceiling to roughly $300 billion increase in the allowable U.S. national debt known as the debt ceiling. That means our debt ceiling, now $12.1 trillion, will be $12.4 trillion. After those 2 months, we will need to add another $1.5 trillion to that debt ceiling to pay for the remaining spending in the year 2010.

Early next year our debt ceiling will be a whopping $13.9 trillion. Of the massive national debt, a paper by the Heritage Foundation tells us:

The recession and excessive spending have caused the debt held by the public to grow sharply to 56 percent of the economy, topping the historic average of 36 percent. To make matters worse, entitlement programs will double in size over the next few decades and cause the national debt to reach 30 percent of the economy.

That is so obviously unsustainable that it has to be of great concern to us. It is like the size of a credit card being several times more than our income, such that we can never pay the debt on the credit card. That is even to ignore the interest payments. Let’s not forget about what we might have to pay to pick up. I have only been talking about the principle. But in 2009 alone, interest payments were $209 billion. By the year 2019, interest payments are expected to reach $800 billion a year. That is just the interest on the debt.

How are we going to afford that? By the way, who do we pay that to? We pay it to all the people we borrow money from, one of which is the nation of China. China has indicated that they are very nervous about the amount of debt the United States is taking on.

In mid-March, Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao voiced concerns about U.S. Government borrowing. He said:

We have lent huge amounts of money to the United States. Of course we are concerned about the safety of our assets. To be honest, I am a little bit worried, and I would like to see that the United States honor its word and remain a credible nation and ensure the safety of Chinese assets.

What can a lender do when he or a nation becomes concerned that the borrower is going to have trouble paying back, when the borrower keeps coming back for more and more lending? What do you do is you raise the interest rate to reflect the greater risk in the lending of the money. That is what is going to happen to us. That greater interest rate is going to be manifest in payments that we have to make by our productivity and the taxes we pay.

President Obama has acknowledged the problem. He said:

We can’t keep on just borrowing from China. We have to pay interest on that debt, and that means we are mortgaging our children’s future with more and more debt.

He is right. So why does he propose more spending and more borrowing and more debt? What is the President in the history of the world?

It is time for words and actions to match. It is time for Congress and the President to start reining in this out-of-control spending and debt. I stand with my colleagues from Alabama in support of his amendment to reinstate statutory spending caps. While this is not a panacea for solving the fiscal problems the Nation faces, it is a good way to start on the path to responsibility. I will bet that most of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle will vote against it. It is wrong for them to expect Republicans to extend the debt ceiling as long as they are unwilling to do anything to get spending under control.

Americans expect us to get this spending and debt under control. When we return to the Senate in January, our first item of business will be a long-term debt ceiling extension, including consideration of the Sessions amendment and others. After pushing the stimulus, the auto bailout, cash for clunkers, the massive $2.5 trillion health care bill, and others, I would hope our Democratic colleagues are ready to take a breather from their big spending and support a more reasonable course so that we don’t have to continue to extend the Nation’s debt ceiling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I thank Senator KYL for his consistent performance over his entire career in the Senate of trying to impose fiscal responsibility in this body, and I respect him highly on that and many other issues.

There is so much we could say at this point on the debt limit, on which we are going to vote tomorrow. I would rather see the vote tomorrow not going to vote on a debt limit increase until we accompany it with some action that will actually reduce the incredibly irresponsible path we are on. That is going to be one of my positions, and I think others will take the same view.

Saying we have to increase the debt—well, we have to do something about reckless government spending. We really do. We have to do something about it. They always say: Next year. So I say: When? I believe we should condition any increase in the debt limit on the passage of legislation that would return to surplus the debt we owe. President Clinton increased spending, and it worked. A spending cap on the discretionary spending accounts, I thank Senator Kyl for supporting the legislation.

In other words, we can do that. We did it in 1996. You can see, as shown on this chart, the declining expenditures that followed once those numbers expired. We passed it in 1990. As shown on this chart, those yellow lines represent the deficit—up to $300 billion, and it began to shrink. In late 2000, 2001, we had surpluses in our accounts. It is odd to show a surplus, shown below the line on this chart, but we accomplished that.

President Clinton liked to claim credit for it. I have a vague memory that Republicans shut the government down to try to stop President Clinton’s spending. But there were battles over containing spending, and it worked. A big key to it was the spending limits, the spending caps. Those expired in 2002, and, look, we began to show a surplus again. So I think as a condition of voting for a debt increase we should have a fix of the restoring of the caps.

Senator Kyl made reference to the fact that under President Obama’s 10-year budget, he submitted earlier this year, which was scored by the Congressional Budget Office, a nonpartisan group, but the leaders were picked by the Democratic majority. What would it do to our deficit, I ask? He has a budget for 10 years. He shows what he expects to have in revenues during those 10 years and what he expects to spend. He does not show, however, what is spent in the health care legislation because that was not in law at the time the budget—scores it. So in truth it will be worse than this.

But let’s look at this. In 2008, the debt was $5.8 trillion; in 2013 it doubles to $11.8 trillion; and by 2019, it triples to $17.3 trillion. That is a stunning tripling of the public debt of the United States of America. It is an unsustainable path. One of the most grim parts of the scoring of this deficit expansion is it is not getting better. In years 8, 9, 10, the deficit is going up to almost $1 trillion a year: In 2019—the 10th year—it is $1 trillion. They are not expecting during that 10 years any recession. In fact, they projected that we would come out of the recession we are in now faster than we are coming out of it. So the numbers probably will be worse.

This is not made up. This is the President’s budget. It is scored by this Congress’s CBO, and it is the best numbers we have. It is a stunning development. We cannot continue. That is why people say it is unsustainable.

Senator Kyl made reference to this. I made a chart on it some time ago. I just could not believe it. In 2009, the total interest this government paid on the debt we owe was $170 billion. You can see, this chart shows the annual interest payments we make that are surging year after year. It is the result of several things.

The CBO is cautious, but they are acknowledging that interest rates are going to go up. We have virtually zero interest rates in short-term Treasuries today. That is not going to continue. So you have more debt and higher interest rates. You get surging interest payments.

In 2017, we have interest payments over $600 billion. It goes over, in 2019—1 year’s interest—$799 billion. As I recall, the supplementals we have used to fund the war in Iraq represented about $70 billion a year. A couple years ago, our highway spending was about $40 billion a year. Aid to education is about $100 billion a year. In 2019, in 1 year, we will pay $799 billion. I think, at a minimum, just in interest. You see how those numbers are? It is unsustainable. We cannot continue to do this.

The American people understand it. CNN did a poll last month. They asked this question of the American people:

Which of the following comes closer to your view of the budget deficit—the government should run a deficit if necessary when the country is in a recession and at war, or the government should balance the budget even when the country is in a recession and at war?

What do you favor? Sixty-seven percent say: “Balance the budget.”

Well, what is Congress doing? Running the most incredible series of deficits we have ever seen, tripling the national debt in 10 years—all in furtherance, basically, of President Obama’s budget’s, which calls for this.

Sure, President Bush was not as frugal and fiscally responsible as he should have been; however, of his debt was driven by war costs. But regardless, he could have been more frugal and spent less. But the deficits he had would come in at half or less than half of the deficits we are going to see on average over the next 10 years. So I have to say, we are losing our perspective.

This health care reform bill is a serious matter. We have a report this morning from the Congressional Budget Office that clarifies what has been pretty obvious to us for some time now, but it was difficult to get an official accounting of how these numbers are scored or added up by the Congressional Budget Office.

But, basically, what they say is pretty simple. They are saying that proposals in this bill that raise the payroll tax on Medicare and reduce expenditures within Medicare—cutting Medicare—saves money. It puts more money in the pot. But it is part of the Medicare trust fund pot. As to that savings, it is going to be treated as an excess, it is going to be treated as a surplus, and it will be paid over here and pay for this new health care program that was just voted on earlier today.

So we are going to take this savings and increased revenue to Medicare, and we are going to spend it over here. This is a chart I just put together to try to show that. As shown on this chart, here is Medicare. You raise Medicare income and you cut their costs and you come and you cut their costs and you come and you create some surplus still in Medicare. If we do not do something about it, Medicare will be in deficit in 2017—8 years. So this transfer of money then goes to the U.S. Treasury, and: Oh, we have extra money. Let’s spend it. We have a health care reform that has never before been passed, creating benefits for people who have never received these kinds of benefits before because we want to be helpful to those people, create more insured people in America.

But as the CBO said, you cannot count this money twice. What about the people who are paying into Medicare, who have been paying into it for 40 years? They have not received a dividend—and until they get to age 65—and it is their money they are putting into Medicare. They are not just giving it over here to the U.S. Treasury.

As one of them wrote me: You are taking my money. I am 67. I am just now beginning to draw Medicare. You are taking my money and giving it to somebody else. I have never received any benefits from Medicare until now, and you are taking it from me. So as a matter of the way our accounting occurs, the U.S. Treasury cannot take that money just free and clear. It is not extra, free money.

I see my colleague. I want Senator Baucus to recognize that according to the CBO Director—he told me last night, there are bonds issued. Treasury has to give a bond to Medicare, a Treasury note, an IOU. So when Medicare starts running in default—as it will within the next 15 years if this bill was to pass—when Medicare starts running into default, they are going to have the Treasury pay for it. So, in effect, this bond causes the U.S. Treasury to pay interest to Medicare.

During this first 10 years, the U.S. Treasury will pay interest to Medicare of $69 billion on the money they borrowed—this IOU here. Then, when it goes into default—as it is inevitably heading into default—the Treasury will have to pay those bonds. So it increases the debt.

What CBO says, without any equivocation, is—it is not disputable—the debt of the United States will be increased by this bill, not decreased. It will not be a $132 billion surplus in reduced deficits but will be a $170 billion deficit, just as that. Then, when you get to what Senator Thune talked about, other gimmicks in the bill, it makes that even worse.

You say, well, the CBO has a score that says it is a $132 billion surplus. It reduces out-of-pocket costs $132 billion. Well, the way they are doing this, and the way that accounting is done, with trust funds and nontrust funds in a unified government budget, they do not score this IOU because they seem to think it is all one government, and so what is one is not the other, and it is not debt. But it is a debt, and they said it explicitly. You cannot count the money here as adding to the life of Medicare and at the same time score this as free money to be spent over here on this program.

President Obama, Monday, at a press conference, said it is going to reduce our deficit $132 billion, and it is going to extend the life of Medicare by 9 years. Well, you cannot do both, as they have explicitly stated in the letter we got from CBO, and it is just a matter of absolute fact.

They say:

To describe the full amount of HI trust fund savings—

Over here in Medicare—

as both improving the government’s ability to pay future Medicare benefits and financing new spending outside of Medicare would essentially double count a large share of those savings. . . .

Well, these kinds of gimmicks and manipulations have been done before, but it is time to end it. I think the American people have said: In a time of war, in a time of recession, we need to get busy about the budget—by a two-thirds vote.

They are right. We are going to work our way out of this recession. This American economy will respond sooner or later, and hopefully, sooner for the people of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, is that the 10 minutes on this side? And is there time left on this side? I ask unanimous consent to have 3 additional minutes.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I think our side has another 10 minutes or so, with which I would perhaps enter into a colloquy with the Senator from Alabama.

I would ask the Senator, on the point he made—and I give the Senator great credit for raising that question to the CBO—because I think it is intuitive to most people that you cannot spend money twice; that you cannot somehow double-count it. That is essentially what the CBO said in their letter. I think the Senator quoted from it.

They went on to say—CBO has written a few different things that would be received by the government only once, so they cannot be set aside to pay for future Medicare spending and, at the same time, pay for current spending on other parts of the legislation or on other programs. That is the argument we are making.

But the way the Senator explained the interaction between the government trust funds, the unified budget, and the IOUs the government writes to itself, perhaps gives some explanation to how they came up with this actually achieving a savings. But the Senator made it very clear: $170 billion actually to the deficit. As I mentioned earlier, the accounting gimmicks that have been used have understated the 10-year cost of this. In today's way, my staff corrected. This off-the-top-of-my-head calculation was $177 billion in deficit; it is actually $187 billion. So you add that to what you mentioned, pretty soon you have what they are claiming is a $170 billion savings turns into a very sizable

So I would ask the Senator from Alabama—again, I give him great credit for bringing this to light, raising this issue with the CBO—what does that mean for this piece of legislation we are going to be voting on tomorrow, a $2 trillion expansion of the government financed through tax increases and Medicare cuts. Yet even with all that, the assumption is, this is not going to meet the requirement the President set out; that is, that it doesn’t add a single dime to the deficit.

What does that mean to that commitment made by the President and to this legislation’s sort of fiscal situation as we move forward and to these negotiations, if this is not the case, if this passes tomorrow, with the House of Representatives?

Mr. SESSIONS. This is a huge issue. I remember a few months ago, in a joint session of Congress, President Obama came before us. He looked out at the crowd and said: This bill will not add one dollar—or one dime—to the national debt. It was a firm commitment to all the American people who were listening, all the Congressmen and Senators in that room—it will not add to the debt. So what we now know is that this bill is going to add to the debt.

There is no doubt about it. The debt of the United States will increase. It is a dangerous trend that happens in a lot of different ways that has put us onto this course.

I think he recognized you shouldn’t increase the debt. He recognized, if he is going to create an entirely new health care program over here, it ought to be paid for, and he promised to do that. We have Members of this body.

Members of the House who supported the bill, based on the promise it would not increase the debt. But we have now, conclusive proof, in any number of different ways but particularly with the CBO score, that it will increase the debt. It is a decisive issue as far as I can see.

Mr. THUNE. If the Senator will further yield, in addition to this revelation from the CBO, which I think does change the game and the whole debate about whether this is a budget buster, which it has been described as, in spite of the fact that our colleagues on the other side have been arguing it extends the life of Medicare. I think the statement very clearly takes up the notion that you can have it both ways; that you can double count this money; that you can spend it twice. You can’t do that. I think the American people get that, which is why they believe it will add to the deficit as well.

But there are other things in this bill.

Mr. SESSIONS. I would just say my understanding, having looked at this at some length and given it thought, is the legislation will extend Medicare because it increases the Medicare tax, and that will bring in more money. It pretends we will slash provider pay-ments for health care and others and leave money that way. So, on paper, it definitely should extend the life of Medicare.

What do we do with the money? Well, the money that is saved is not staying in Medicare. It is being borrowed by the U.S. Treasury to spend on a new program, and the U.S. Treasury owes it to Medicare. We can see in the trends in Medicare it will not be too many years before Medicare is going to want that money. That is going to leave us outside, and that is going to add to a debt. It increases our debt, and we are going to have to pay that back—our children, our grandchildren—sooner than that. Hopefully, we will be around to pay some of that back. That is the problem we have. It is a misrepresentation to say this creates money that can fund a program on a permanent basis. It does not.

It is just an internal debt situation.

Mr. THUNE. If the Senator will further yield, a couple other items that are being used to get us to where this argument can be made, which is that there are savings from this, this $132 billion savings and deficit reduction the majority has talked about also includes the creation of an entirely new program called this CLASS Act.

There were eight Democratic Senators who wrote a letter, basically, asking that the CLASS Act not be included in this bill, recognizing what many have; that is, that the President has recognized that while it may show some savings in the early years, when people are paying premiums, it is similar to everything else. That money, when it gets spent on other things, isn’t there to pay out benefits when the time comes to pay out benefits. So we get this artificial $72 billion infusion of cash in the early years, which is being used to, again, underestimate the cost of this and to demonstrate—or to make the argument that there is, in fact, $132 billion in savings here or deficit reduc-

There is $72 billion that this CLASS Act represents in that first 10-year window which, as I described earlier, our colleague on the other side has described it as a Ponzi scheme. But it does create an entirely new program, not unlike some of the entitlement programs that already exist, where payments are coming in now that are being used to spend for other purposes and that money is going to be. Hopefully, we will be around to pay some of that back. That is the problem we have. It is a misrepresentation to say this creates money that can fund a program on a permanent basis. It does not. It is just an internal debt situation.
Mr. BAUCUS. If I might respond and answer the question—no; the exact opposite. CBO says so. CBO says it actually reduces the debt by $1 billion.

Mr. SESSIONS. I am asking the difference. The question is gross debt. Does it reduce or increase the gross debt?

Mr. BAUCUS. If I might, Mr. President, as the Senator knows, the debt is the accumulation of deficits, and by definition, if a deficit is reduced, therefore, the national debt is also reduced. That is a mathematical truism. If the deficit is reduced, automatically the debt is reduced. That is mathematics.

The next point I want to make, there was substantial debate today about the constitutionality of this bill. As I have discussed before, we have confidence that the health care plan we have crafted is an appropriate exercise of the commerce clause and does not violate the 10th amendment. We further believe that ample power is available under the takings and spending power, as well.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD two articles by Prof. Erwin Chemerinsky and Prof. Michael Dorf. There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HEALTH CARE REFORM IS CONSTITUTIONAL

(By Erwin Chemerinsky)

Those opposing health care reform are increasingly relying on an argument that has no legal merit: that the health care reform legislation would be unconstitutional. There is, of course, much to debate about how to best reform America’s health care system. But the idea that bills, that Congress has broad powers to tax and spend for the general welfare. Congress can require the purchase of health insurance as a condition for driving. Since the 19th century, the Supreme Court has consistently held that a tax cannot be challenged as an impermissible take of private property for public use without just compensation. All taxes are a taking of private property, and as such, have been invalidated on that basis. Since the late 1930s, the Supreme Court has ruled that government economic regulations that have a substantial effect on interstate commerce are constitutional. The Commerce Clause, under an unbroken line of precedents stretching back 70 years, Congress has the power to regulate activities that, taken cumulatively, have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. People not purchasing health insurance unquestionably has this effect. The relationship between health care coverage and the national economy is even stronger and more readily apparent. In 2007, health care expenditures amounted to $2.2 trillion, or $7,421 per person, and accounted for 16.2 percent of the gross domestic product. The relationship between health care coverage and the national economy is even stronger and more readily apparent. In 2007, health care expenditures amounted to $2.2 trillion, or $7,421 per person, and accounted for 16.2 percent of the gross domestic product.

Ken Klukowski, writing in POLITICO, argued that "people who declined to purchase government-mandated insurance would not be engaged in commercial activity, so there’s no interstate commerce." Klukowski’s argument is flawed because the Supreme Court never has said that the commerce clause is limited to regulating those who are engaged in commercial activity.

Quite the contrary: The court has said that Congress can use its commerce power to forbid hotels and restaurants from discriminating based on race, even though their conduct was refusing to engage in commercial activity. Likewise, the court has said that Congress can regulate the growing of marijuana for personal medicinal use, even if the person being punished never engaged in any commercial activity.

Under an unbroken line of precedents stretching back 70 years, Congress has the power to regulate activities that, taken cumulatively, have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. People not purchasing health insurance unquestionably has this effect.

There is a substantial likelihood that everyone will need medical care at some point. A person with a communicable disease will be treated whether or not he or she is insured. A more serious, and more common, concern is that a uninsured person will be rushed to the hospital for treatment, whether or not he or she is insured. Congress would simply be requiring everyone to be insured to cover their potential costs to the system.

Congress also could justify this as an exercise of its taxing and spending power. Congress can require the purchase of health insurance and then tax those who do not do so in order to pay their costs to the system. This is similar to Social Security taxes, which everyone pays to cover the costs of the Social Security system. Since the 1930s, the Supreme Court has accorded Congress broad powers to tax and spend for the general welfare and has left it to Congress to determine this.

Nor is there any basis for arguing that an insurance mandate violates the rights to liberty. No constitutionally protected freedom is infringed. There is no right to not have insurance. Most states now require automobile insurance as a condition for driving. There is no right to not face a financial penalty. Would such a mandate be constitutional?}

(BY MICHAEL C. DORF)

Although many key details remain to be negotiated, Congress appears poised to enact some substantial reform of American health care that will build on, rather than replace, our patchwork of government, private, and non-profit insurance. The bill that the President will likely contain, among other things, an “individual mandate” requiring that everyone obtain health insurance or face a financial penalty. Would such a mandate be constitutional?

In my last column and accompanying blog entry, I considered and rejected the objection that an individual mandate would be an unprecedented burden on liberty because it would affirmatively direct conduct, rather than either forbidding conduct or imposing affirmative obligations on only those who engage in conduct that the government has the power to forbid. As I explained, there are substantial precedents for such affirmative obligations, and even if there were doubts, there is no reason in principle why an affirmative duty is a greater restriction on liberty than a prohibition or condition.

In this column, I consider a different objection to the individual mandate: the claim that the federal government lacks the authority under the Constitution to impose the mandate, even if it were valid.

Is a Regulation of Health Care a Regulation of Interstate Commerce?

Under the Tenth Amendment, Congress may only enact legislation that falls within its enumerated powers. Most of those powers—and all of the powers that are potentially relevant in the health insurance reform debate—are found in Article I, Section 8. In particular, the powers of the federal government, as listed in the Commerce Clause, are relevant. In Lopez, the Court invalidated a federal criminal law forbidding... possession of a firearm near a schoolyard. In Morrison, the Court rejected a federal law providing victims of gender-motivated violence with a right to sue their attackers. Both cases are notable because Congress had clearly intended to regulate, and the Court held that Congress could not do so.

Thus, the necessity for the government to regulate non-economic, intra-state commercial activity is a matter of considerable debate and controversy. It is, however, widely recognized that the Constitution does not empower the federal government to regulate non-economic, intra-state commercial activity directly. The commerce clause does not provide a direct basis for federal regulation of non-economic, intra-state commercial activity.

The debate has been largely theoretical, with proponents and opponents arguing that the Constitution’s commerce clause provides a basis for federal regulation of non-economic, intra-state commercial activity. Proponents argue that the commerce clause was intended to give Congress the power to regulate commerce, which includes non-economic, intra-state commercial activity. Opponents argue that the commerce clause was intended to give Congress the power to regulate interstate commerce, which includes only economic, extra-state commercial activity.

The debate has been further complicated by the fact that the commerce clause has been interpreted to provide a basis for federal regulation of non-economic, intra-state commercial activity in some cases, while in other cases, the commerce clause has been interpreted to provide no basis for federal regulation of non-economic, intra-state commercial activity. The debate will likely continue, as the Supreme Court has yet to provide a definitive resolution of the issue.
on things such as unemployment insurance and Medicaid costs for folks who can no longer afford health care. To compensate for these increased outlays, Treasury has had to borrow more as well.

Finally, to keep the recession from becoming a lot worse than it has, the Obama administration had no choice but to enact a vigorous stimulus package, and the Treasury had to borrow the money to make up for this shortfall as well.

With the enactment of this stimulus, the economy could have well descended into a depression. We would have been in far worse economic shape had we not passed the stimulus legislation.

To cover the costs of all these measures—that is those in the Bush administration and those in the Obama administration—the Treasury Department has had to borrow record amounts of money. Unfortunately as it is, we had to do it. Had we not, we would have been in a far worse economic shape today.

As a result of this unprecedented borrowing, the Treasury is about to reach the current limit. It is clear that we have no choice but to raise the ceiling on the debt the Treasury can borrow.

We do not spend the money. We have to raise the debt limit so bills can be paid. If we do not, the United States will default on its interest payments for the first time in its 220-year history. We cannot let that happen. We will not be able to pay our monthly Social Security benefits to which people are entitled. That would be unthinkable.

It is true we have to work harder to reduce these deficits—we have no choice—also, therefore, to reduce our national debt, certainly as a percent of gross domestic product. We have no choice. The point is we are beginning to reach a crisis in the accumulation of deficits and therefore debt. That is clear. We must as a country, as a Congress, as a President, reduce those deficits in national debt. However, we have to pay our bills. If we do not pay our bills, we default. That would cause catastrophic consequences.

To prevent those catastrophic consequences—that is, other countries having less confidence in the government, less confidence in the ability of the United States to pay its debt, less confidence in the U.S. dollar—we must increase the Treasury’s borrowing limit. For a short period of time, I think it is appropriate and prudent.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this legislation. There is no way around it. It is a necessity. We simply have no choice. We have to pay our debts, but in the near future we’ll have to pay even harder to get our deficits under control.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I am not a member of the Finance Committee, but I do not have the responsibility Senator BAUCUS does in dealing with these debt ceiling issues. But let me corroborate what he has been saying. Someone once drew the analogy that this is like going out to dinner, ordering a good meal, and then refusing to pay the bill at the end of it. We have a meal in front of us—tragically a meal that got too large because, frankly, the previous administration accumulated a debt with our borrowing out sperm than human people to pay for it, including the war in Iraq and other items that left us in a hole larger than created by all administrations combined over 225 years of our history—a remarkable achievement. It is not only my administration but all 43 Presidents combined had never accumulated what one administration did in 8 years.

I commend my colleague from Montana. This is no easy task. It is a painful vote for anyone to cast, but it is obviously critical. This is more than just a vote in this Chamber. It goes to the very stability of the global economy.

We have to meet our obligations. I, for one, am certainly glad to cast a vote that is extremely difficult. We are in a difficult vote. It is a hard vote considering what is at stake. But the implications of refusing to support this would be catastrophic to our country.

I thank my colleagues.

Mr. President, 10 minutes short of 12 hours from now, we are going to cast our final vote on the national health care proposal. I have some closing remarks on this historic debate.

Before I do so, I wish to thank once again staff and staff members who have been involved in all of this. I know my dear friend and colleague from Iowa will talk about this more specifically. I have already announced the names of the majority staff who have made a contribution to this effort.

I think it is fairly clear that tomorrow morning at 7 a.m., when we cast our votes on this proposal, this is going to be a very divided Chamber. Sadly, we are going to end up on a very partisan vote. I think it is going to be on the lines of 60-40, although obviously we need less than 60 votes to pass the bill at this point. But I expect the vote will be something like that. I regret that deeply. It saddens me we have come to that moment. But it is what it is.

While last evening I mentioned the members of the staff who are part of the majority staff who made such a contribution—and I thank them once again for their talent and for their dedication to this effort, certainly during the markup of our bill in the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee that Senator Kennedy chaired for so many years, that I had the honor of taking over for him during his period of illness, and is now chaired by my friend from Iowa, Senator HARKIN.

The Senator from Wyoming, Mr. Enzi, is the ranking minority member of that committee. And ultimately he had a divided, partisan vote in that committee. But as my colleagues have heard me say over and over again during these days and weeks of debate, a good part of our bill, even though it ended up with a partisan vote, included 161 amendments offered by the minority in that markup session. More than half of all the amendments considered were offered by folks on that committee, on my committee at the time that were adopted almost unanimously in most cases.

I wish to mention the minority staff tonight who make that possible. They strengthened our bill by supporting our effort. But tonight, on the floor of the Senate, it will be a stronger one. Beginning with Frank Macchiarella, Chuck Clapton, Katy Barr, Todd Spangler, Hayden Rhudy, Keith Flanagan, Amy Muhlbery. They work for Senator Enzi.

Liz Wroe and Jeff Gonzales work for JUDG GREGG of New Hampshire. Jay Khosla, Patty DeLoatsche—I may have mispronounced that last name; I apologize if I did—along with that Williams of Senator Hatch’s staff made a significant contribution to the bill.

While, again, there was division on a partisan basis, I thank them for their efforts. They put in long hours as well. On that note, let me get to the substance of my remarks, I chair the Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee. We have been working diligently. In fact, today my good friend and colleague from Alabama, RICHARD SHELBY, and I spent an hour or so together and then about five or six members, Republicans and Democrats on that committee, spent another hour together, as we work every day to craft our last several weeks trying to fashion a bill on financial services reform that we hope to present to our colleagues on our return in January and February that will deal with the catastrophe that has occurred economically in our Nation.

My hope is as a Chamber—I know my colleagues have heard me say this—I arrived in this Chamber as an employee of the Senate about 50 years ago. I sat on the steps right where Senator Johnson sat in the Presiding Officer chair. John Kennedy was the President of the United States. I was a Senate page and listened to the all-night debates in the early 1960s on civil rights and got to witness history. I got to watch the Members of this Chamber, some of the historic figures—Hubert Humphrey, Lyndon Johnson, Everett Dirksen—remarkable people who served here. Barry Goldwater came here and got to watch the Members of this Chamber for a period of time when I arrived in the Senate.

Thirty-five years ago on January 3 of next month, I arrived as a 30-year-old freshman Senator. Thirty years later I arrived here as a freshman Senator 30 years ago. Going back to the sixties, I had a lot to do with this Chamber and watched it over the years.

The best moments occur when we work together. This has been a bitter and difficult battle over the last number of months. But as someone who... takes great pride in having been part of this Chamber, as my father was before me, for more than a quarter of the life of our country, I want to see us once again return to the days when we have our partisan debates, which we should because it has been so for 225 years, and do not have an appreciation of what this Chamber means and how we work together.

While we have our differences, the ability to walk away from differences and forge those relationships over the next day is critically important. It is always the newest Members who fail to understand how the Senate has worked for more than two centuries. We need to get back to that sense of civility once again. I hope when we return in January to deal with new issues that we will get back to that comity that is important. Not the disagreements. The disagreements, the bitter debates within the walls of this Chamber in which all of us are so proud to serve. We do not have the luxury of tackling only those challenges that can be solved easily. But as Thomas Paine wrote: "The harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph.

Those words come from a pamphlet called "The American Crisis." It was published 233 years ago this very week at another very uncertain moment in American history. That pamphlet begins with these words:

"These are times that try men's souls; the winter soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it out, deserves the love and thanks of mankind.

GEN George Washington, outmanned, outnumbered, and sensing that morale was flagging in light of recent setbacks, wrote as a Member of this Chamber, and these words be read to his deeply troubled and impoverished troops. And on Christmas Eve, 1776, he gathered his officers at McConkey's Ferry to plan the crossing of the Delaware. This body has been in session on Christmas Eve only once since 1963—and we will tomorrow—when in the wake of President Kennedy's assassination, the Senate met to consider a bill to fund our operations in Vietnam. We will be in session tomorrow morning. I have become a little bit numb to times that certainly try men's souls. Like GEN George Washington, we have an opportunity to meet history's gaze, to steel ourselves to the difficult work of making our Union more perfect.

The journey we complete tomorrow has been a long and difficult one. But I, for one, would not trade it for anything. We who now have the privilege to cast our votes at 7 a.m. tomorrow morning for health care reform will never cast a more important vote in our Senate careers. History will judge harshly those who have chosen to shrink from this moment, but those of us who stand up to make this country more secure, to make our Union more perfect, we will never forget this Christmas Eve. For this Christmas Eve, we have given an incredible gift. We have been granted a rare opportunity to deliver an enormous victory for the American people for generations to come. We have a chance to alleviate tremendous burdens of anxiety and fear and suffering, to make our country stronger and healthier, to deliver the leadership our constituents have demanded—and rightfully so—and the real and meaningful change they voted for 13 months ago. So in the last week of a decade in which so much has been asked of the American people, that is what history now asks of us in this Chamber.

Over the past weeks and months, I have come to this floor to talk about what this bill will do for the citizens of my State and my country. I have talked about how reform will guarantee every American will have access to quality, affordable care when they need it, from the doctor they choose. I have talked about how reform will reduce our national deficit by finally getting health care costs under control. I have talked about what reform will do for small businesses—giving them access to health insurance exchanges where they can find the best deals for their workers and a tax credit to help them pay for it. And I have talked, as others have, about how reform will help our older citizens, our seniors, by strengthening Medicare and closing the so-called doughnut hole for prescription drugs and creating a new, voluntary program to pay for long-term care. I, along with others, have talked about how reform will help doctors and health care providers spend more time caring for their patients, which they want to do, and less time fighting with insurance company bureaucrats. I and so many others have talked about how reform will finally make insurance affordable for the 350,000 residents of my State and the 31 million people across our Nation who today don't have it, whether it is because they can't afford it or because they have been denied coverage due to a preexisting condition. I have also talked, along with my colleagues, about how reform will finally make insurance a buyer's market, ending a wide variety of abusive insurance industry practices and empowering consumers to make smart decisions.

As has been said so many times, this bill is far from perfect, and we all know that. It represents not the end but, as my friend and colleague from Iowa has said so many times, the beginning of our work. Long after all of us have left this Chamber, however we depart, those who come after us will work on our product. They will make it better, they will make it stronger, they will find our shortcomings in this bill, they will improve it, and they will correct from it. But they can never engage in those efforts if we do not do the job I am confident we will do tomorrow morning at 7 a.m. on Christmas Eve, and that is to renew the American dream, to revitalize our middle class, and rebuild the foundation upon which future generations will stand.

I am very proud of this legislation, with all its shortcomings. I am proud to have had a role in bringing it to a vote—an accidental role, as all of us know. I wouldn't be standing here talking about it in this context, other than as a Member of this Chamber, were it not for the tragic death of my great friend and colleague from Massachusetts.

President Teddy Roosevelt famously said:

"It is not the critic who counts; not the man [or woman] who points out how the strong man stumbles, or whether the doer of deeds成败 or fail. It is the man who acts, who sticks to his work and who does not turn his back when things go bad. It belongs to the man who [or woman] is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust..."
and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs; who comes short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievements, even in the face of defeat, in the midst of error and shortcoming; who erras; who comes short again and again, and yet knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he knows in the end the trium
Obama signs this into law. We will own the fact that next year insurance companies will be required to cover the preexisting conditions of children. We will own that. Think about that. There will be a program to extend coverage to uninsured Americans with preexisting conditions.

We will own the fact that this bill provides immediate support to health care coverage for early retirees. We will own the fact that this bill will immediately shrink the size of the doughnut hole by raising the ceiling on the initial coverage period by $500 next year. We will own the immediate guarantee of this bill of 50 percent price discounts on brand-name drugs and biologics purchased by low- and middle-income Medicare beneficiaries who are in the doughnut hole. We will own the fact that this bill will provide tax credits to small businesses to make employees' coverage more affordable. Tax credits of up to 35 percent of the cost of premiums will be available to small businesses next year.

In addition, we will own the fact that this bill requires health insurance companies to allow children to stay on their family's policies until age 26. Democracy is the fact that the bill prohibits health insurers from imposing lifetime limits on the benefits consumers believe they are paying for and will tightly restrict the use of any annual limits.

Let me mention one other extremely important thing that, in the minority leader's word, Democrats will own. Our bill, immediately, will stop insurers from the devastating practice of rescinding or cancelling health insurance coverage when a policyholder is seriously ill. All of those things I mention will happen right away, Madam President, as soon as the bill is signed into law.

Today, on the eve of this historic vote, we should refocus on the big stuff, the moral imperative that drove this legislation back in the 1990s. The time is now to move forward on this big issue. With this landmark legislation we get rid of the shameful dividing line between poor and well-off Americans from the worst abuses of the health insurance companies, and this starter home has plenty of room for additions and improvements.

We Democratic Senators are proud to own this starter home. We are proud of the fact that this starter home is fully paid for. It is a starter home without a mortgage.

Indeed, as I said earlier, this bill will reduce the Federal deficit by $332 billion in the first decade and by at least $550 billion in the second decade. So, Madam President, I urge my Democratic colleagues to own this bill, because this late date before the vote tomorrow morning, I say to our Republican colleagues, Democrats are proud to own this legislation and this starter home. We are proud to own the many reforms and benefits in this bill and we would be very pleased to share ownership with as many of our Republican colleagues who care to join us.

With all due respect to William F. Buckley, it is not written in stone that conservatives have to say no to historic reform, and the wrong side of progress. They are "athwart history yelling 'stop.'" That is exactly what our Republican colleagues have to say yes to. This bill has many authors. But in a very real sense this is Senator Ted Kennedy's bill. Our late beloved colleague would be so proud to see the Senate on the cusp of passing landmark health care reform.

With this bill, immediately, we will stop insurers from the devastating practice of rescinding or cancelling health insurance coverage when a policyholder is seriously ill. All of those things I mention will happen right away, Madam President, as soon as the bill is signed into law.

With all due respect to William F. Buckley, it is not written in stone that conservatives have to say no to historic reform, and the wrong side of progress. They are "athwart history yelling 'stop.'" That is exactly what our Republican colleagues have to say yes to. This bill has many authors. But in a very real sense this is Senator Ted Kennedy's bill. Our late beloved colleague would be so proud to see the Senate on the cusp of passing landmark health care reform.

Today, we are on the verge of making that dream a reality. So often Senator Kennedy talked about the moral imperative of health reform. Too often in the debates of recent weeks we have lost sense of this moral imperative. We have heard speeches. We have had charts, back and forth and back and forth on some of the small stuff; who wins, who loses, because of this or that minor point.

Today, on the eve of this historic vote, we should refocus on the big stuff, the moral imperative that drove Senator Kennedy. With this bill we will get rid of the shameful dividing line that has excluded millions of Americans for too long. For too long, tens of millions of Americans have been on the wrong side of that divide, without health insurance, without regular medical care for their children, just one serious illness away from bankruptcy. With this bill we can say to everyone that we erase that shameful divide within our American family. With this bill we say for every American, for every member of our American family, access to quality affordable care will be a right, not a privilege. It is a monumental achievement.

I urge all of our colleagues to vote yes on this bill.

Now, Madam President, a lot has been said about all of us who have been in leadership on this bill: Senator Reid, Senator Baucus, Senator Dodd, myself, and so many others. It is important to etch in history in our Jenelle Krishnamoorthy. I want to thank her for just focusing laser-like the last couple of years or so on this and making sure it became a big part of our health care reform bill.

On my personal staff, Jim Whitmire, Beth Winchell, Cynthia Gutierrez, and Lee Perselay. Let me mention Lee. Lee does all my work on disability issues. As many people know, it is my name on the Americans With Disabilities Act. Nineteen years ago we passed that. Lee Perselay does all my work on the disability issue.

There is another part of the bill not too many talk about, but it is so profoundly important to people with disabilities. In this bill there is a provision that will have the Federal Government give a 6 percent increase in the amount of money that the Federal Government gives to a State for Medicaid, 6 percent increase for a State that will enact legislation to put in place the provisions of the Olmstead decision by the Supreme Court over 10 years ago; that is, that every person with a disability has a right to a least restrictive environment. That means living in their own communities and their own homes with personal assistant services, support so they can live at home rather than going to a nursing home.

This has been a dream of the disability community since we passed the Americans With Disability Act in 1990. We have never been able to get it done. Now we have it in this bill. It is not talked about much, didn’t hear much about it. But this will have more of a profound effect on people with disabilities than any other single thing in this bill or anything that we have done, literally, since 1990. Now people with disabilities can live at home and live in their own communities and the State will get money from the Federal Government to enable them to do that.

Lee Perselay; thank you very much, Lee.

Kate Cyrul of my staff, Dan Goldberg, and the Senate legislative counsel. A special thanks to Bill Baird, along with Stacy Kern-Scheerer and Ruth Ernst, who was present throughout the entire HELP Committee, and they have gone above and beyond.

To all the floor staff here, too, we forget about all they have done—Mike Spath, my staff, and Staci Dickey, and Tim Mitchell and Tricia Engle and Lula Davis, wonderful floor staff working with us to get us to this point, where we have a final vote on this tomorrow morning.

I wished to particularly mention these individuals. In many ways, they are the unsung heroes and heroines of what we have done. They can be content in knowing, as they go through life, they did a big thing here. They did something so important to help transform not only my life but each and every one of them and wish them the best of the holiday season, Christmas, New Year. We will come back next year, and we will start implementing this bill. As the chairman of the HELP Committee, we will start looking at building those additions and those expansions.

I yield the floor and thank my friends from Illinois, Lee and Mr. BURRIS. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURG. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. BURRIS. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 10 minutes.

Mr. BURRIS. Mr. President, the Senate has long been a forum for great debate. This institution is equipped to handle the most difficult questions our Nation faces.

Since we took up the issue of health care reform, the debate has been fierce, and our differences of opinion have played out in dramatic fashion on the national stage.

Over the last several months, I have said time and again that this health reform bill must accomplish the three distinct goals of a public option in order to win my support:

1. It must create real competition in the health care system.
2. It must provide significant cost savings to the American people.
3. And it must restore accountability to the insurance industry.

For months, I have told my colleagues that I would not be able to support a final bill that fails to meet these goals.

I believe they are the keys to comprehensive health reform in America, and without them, our legislation would be ineffective and incomplete.

I expressed my concerns about the compromise bill, and I asked tough questions.

I have reviewed the CBO score and the final legislative language as soon as it became available.

I believe the way forward is clear.

This bill is not perfect. It does not include everything I had hoped for.

But I am convinced that it can meet the three goals of a public option.

I believe it represents a monumental step forward—a strong foundation we can improve upon in the months and years to come.

This is not the end of health care reform in America—it is the beginning.

That is why we need to take the next step in this process. Although this is not the bill I had hoped I might be voting on, I am confident enough to pass this legislation on to the next step.

Let us send the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act to a conference committee, where it will be merged with the House bill.

There, I have every hope that the conferees will have the opportunity to strengthen some of these provisions and make this legislation better.

We must not neglect the one thing I find most important: that each and every one of us have the opportunity to live at home rather than going to a nursing home.

That is why I am confident that this bill will meet the three goals of a public option: competition, cost savings, and accountability.

And while this bill will not satisfy many of us, it would be a mistake to overlook all the good it will do for tens of millions of Americans.

So let me explain exactly why I am convinced that this bill will satisfy the three goals of a public option.

According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office, the exchanges that will be created under this legislation will dramatically enhance competition in the insurance market. This will drive premiums down, allowing consumers to shop around for the plan that is best for them, their family, or their small business.

CBO projections show that this would force providers to compete for the first time in many years, reducing costs and bringing everyone’s premiums under control.

As a result, many more people would be able to get better coverage for less money.

This bill will enhance the choices that are available for individuals and small businesses.

Everyone will have the choice to keep their current insurance coverage if they are happy with it, but if they are not, they will have real options for the first time in many years.

This bill will give consumers the tools they need to hold insurance companies accountable.

It includes strong consumer protections—many of which take effect immediately—and it contains significant insurance reforms designed to put ordinary folks back in the driver’s seat.

This bill will eliminate annual and lifetime caps on coverage, prohibit companies from dropping patients who get sick, and prevent discrimination against people who have preexisting conditions.

It will also require insurance providers to cover essential health benefits and recommended preventive care, so more people can get the treatment they need.

Based on these provisions, it is quite clear that this measure will provide immediate and lasting improvements in the health care system for everyone in this country.

It will extend quality coverage to 31 million Americans who are currently uninsured, and increase access to preventive care.

This will reduce emergency room visits, help more people to treat preventable and chronic diseases, and help to bring health care costs under control.

In fact, the Congressional Budget Office projects that this legislation will cut the deficit by more than $130 billion in just the first decade, and will save nearly $1 trillion over the next several decades.

That is why I am confident that this bill will meet the three goals of a public option: competition, cost savings, and accountability.

It may not be the legislation I would have written at the beginning of this process, but after nearly a century of debate about health care reform, under the leadership of 11 Presidents and countless Members of Congress, this legislation represents a strong consensus.

So it is time to take the next step in this process—to send this bill to conference and keep building upon this foundation. This is not a perfect bill, but it contains a number of fundamentally good components.

Most importantly, it will ensure that 94 percent of Americans can get the health coverage they need.

After decades of inaction, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is a monumental step in the right direction.

There were many competing ideas that gave rise to this bill.

There were many voices, inside this Chamber and outside of it, shouting to be heard on these issues.

There were concessions and compromises.

But, out of a century of dissent—out of decades of discussion and debate—we have arrived at a basis for comprehensive reform.

It is time to put aside our differences and move forward as one Congress, and one Nation.

There is much work left to do on this and a host of other issues. But in the messy process of debate and compromise, along the path that has led us to this point, this body has reaffirmed the enduring truth of the motto inscribed in this Chamber, just above the Vice President’s chair: “E pluribus unum.” It is there, Madam President, right over your head. It means “Out of many, one.”

For our entire history, it has been the creed that binds us to one another and to our common identity as Americans. It is the principle that drives us to assemble in this august Chamber to debate the toughest issues we will ever face.

Although we come from every section of this country, from many States, we are one country, and together, we can create a health care system that will be worthy of the people we represent.

It is time to make good on the promise of the last century and move forward with the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act.

Let’s take the next step, and send this bill to conference.

I yield the floor.

MEDI CARE GEOGRAPHIC INEQUITIES IN REIMBURSEMENT

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the legislation pending before the Senate today, which will ensure that 31 million Americans will finally have access to affordable, quality health coverage, which will crack down on outrageous abuses by the insurance industry, and which will, at long last, put prevention and wellness at the heart of our health care system. I rise today, however, to signal that there is an area of this legislation that remains of concern and that I will be working to fix as we head to conference; namely, provisions to rectify the geographic inequities in the low Medicare reimbursement rates.

Across the country, Americans pay equal premiums to support Medicare. Yet there is a substantial geographic reimbursement disparity, which is evident in lowering quality levels in the Medicare Part B Program. The degree of this disparity is unjustified and inherently unfair—and it is having an increasingly negative impact on the number of providers that are accepting Medicare and magnifying the workforce shortage problem—especially in rural areas. The unfairness in this disparity in reimbursement rates is compounded by the fact that the States with the lowest reimbursement rates are often those that deliver the highest quality of care. The system must change and reward the quality of service delivered instead of the volume of care served.

I see that my colleague from Oregon, Senator MERKLEY, is here on the floor. He and I discussed this issue, as his State is also one that provides outstanding care and yet suffers from unduly low reimbursement rates. I wonder if my distinguished colleague shares my view that this is something we must continue to work on before this bill is finalized?

Mr. MERKLEY. I thank my distinguished colleague for raising this issue, which has also been a concern of mine. I agree with him that my State consistently bears the brunt of those States on Medicare reimbursement and per capita spending. I strongly believe that a fundamental way to achieve the goal of more efficiency in Medicare is to realign the Medicare payment system to reward health care providers for the quality of care they deliver, not simply the quantity of services they provide. Medicare is spending over one-third more for each Medicare beneficiary in some States compared to Oregon, to the point that, in the care of one of my good friends from Minnesota, Senators KLOBUCHAR and FRANKEN, who are also here on the floor with us today.

The simple fact is, this antiquated payment formula penalizes rural providers and penalizes medical efficiency, and I know in Oregon it has forced many physicians to stop accepting Medicare patients or limit the number of Medicare patients they serve, and that is why I feel so strongly that we must fix this in the final health reform bill. I wonder if the Senators from Minnesota have had a similar experience in their state.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. I want to thank you, Senator MERKLEY and Senator HARKIN, for your work on this issue. I have observed the same problems with Medicare reimbursement in my home State. We represent States and regions that have demonstrated true leadership in lowering costs to Medicare while increasing the quality of care patients receive. The areas we represent are known for utilizing integrated health delivery systems and innovative quality measures to provide Medicare beneficiaries with better value. Research shows that these efficient delivery practices can save the Medicare Program upwards of $100 billion a year while also providing beneficiaries better access to the care they need. Unfortunately, the current Medicare payment structure penalizes those who provide efficient care while rewarding those who order unnecessary tests and services. It is critical that this is addressed in conference, and it will be a priority as we move forward through this process.

Mr. FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator HARKIN, for your leadership, and also thanks to my other colleagues for working on this issue. I agree with all that has been said, and I would like to reiterate that our States have some of the best health care in the country. And it just doesn’t make sense that under the current Medicare reimbursement system, our States gets punished and the less effective, more expensive care gets rewarded. The result is that we are not providing health care in this country; we are providing sick care. We need incentives for providers for high-value care, and the best way to do this is through Medicare payment reform.

These geographic disparities in Medicare payments are unfair, and they are not good for patient care. We are forcing excellent providers out of business because reimbursement rates are low and they just can’t make ends meet. This is counterproductive to the goal that I know we all want to increase access to high-quality health care for all Americans. It is a top priority for me that in conference we make some changes so high quality care that is provided at a reasonable cost will no longer be punished. Instead, we need to move toward a system that the bill rewards providers for being effective partners in their patients’ care. I appreciate the opportunity to share these concerns and discuss these issues with my colleagues.

Mr. HARKIN. I couldn’t agree with my colleagues more. It is long past time to take action to fix this system. I appreciate the commitment of the Senator from Oregon and the Senators from Minnesota to fixing this problem once and for all.

DEFINITION OF FULL TIME WORK

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I would like to engage my friends, the Senator from Iowa and Chairman of the Health, Education Labor and Pensions Committee, and the Senator from Montana and Chairman of the Finance Committee, in a conversation about how “full time” is defined in the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. It is time to clarify understandings about how the legislation resolves the potential for exclusion of certain work group such as flight crews and railroad workers due to the definition of “full time” work and the unique way their work hours are calculated.

Is it the Senators’ understanding that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act resolves a potential problem of excluding from employer incentives to provide coverage for employees who work in professions that use unique calculations for hours worked, such as flight crews and rail workers? And that it does this by indicating that the Secretary of HHS, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe such regulations, rules, and guidance as may be necessary to determine the hours of service of an employee, including rules for employees who are not compensated on an hourly basis.

Mr. HARKIN. Yes, the Senator is correct. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is designed to expand access to high quality and affordable health coverage for all workers. Because of the nature of work, some industries uniquely calculate total daily and monthly working time to determine full-time schedules. That is why this legislation gives the Secretaries of Health and Human Services and Labor discretion to establish rules and regulations for the hours of service for workers outside of standard hours. This provision is meant to be construed broadly.

Mr. BAUCUS. I would concur with my friend, the Senator of Iowa, in his understanding of the act. This provision is meant to be construed broadly, and to expand access to high quality and affordable health coverage for all workers.

Mrs. MURRAY. Of particular concern to me are groups such as pilots and flight attendants, cabin crew who, under “full-time” contracts, “work” on average only 70 hours per month due to the unique way their hours are calculated. For obvious safety reasons, a pilot is limited, through Federal regulations, to flying 100 hours per month, or 1,200 hours annually, even though he or she contributes many more hours of service outside of the time spent flying plane. Long hours and irregular work schedules, however, raise the potential that a pilot might not be considered a full-time employee for purposes of this legislation under a rule that defined full-time employees with unique work schedules from the benefits under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act or from incentives for employers to provide these workers with quality healthcare coverage.

Mr. BAUCUS. Again, I am pleased to concur with the Senator from Iowa in his understanding. The Secretaries of Health and Human Services and Labor will establish standards to govern workers in these industries so they are fully entitled to the protections under this bill. It is not the intent of Congress to exclude or prevent workers with unique work schedules from the benefits under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act or from incentives for employers to provide these workers with quality healthcare coverage.

Mr. HARKIN. Yes, that is my understanding, that the Secretaries of Health and Human Services and Labor will establish standards to govern workers in these industries so they are fully entitled to the protections under this bill.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I would like to thank the Senators from Iowa and Montana for their time and clarification on this issue.

Mr. DURBIN. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act offers community health workers some overdue recognition and in many instances, to govern workers in these industries so they are fully entitled to the protections under this bill.

Community health workers are from the communities they serve. From rural small towns to the urban inner city, community health workers reach out to underserved communities in ways that the current healthcare system cannot. Providing culturally and linguistically appropriate health information in a more familiar and welcomed manner, their work helps to bridge the healthcare gap and diminish disparities.

Northeast is this more evident than in the community-based doula program. Community-based doula supports pregnant women during the months of pregnancy, birth, and the immediate postpartum period. They provide parent education, logistical and emotional support. They help new mothers make better choices and deliver healthier babies. What makes these programs work is the culturally sensitive mentoring within the community.

In Chicago, the community-doula model has made a big difference in the lives of these young moms and their babies. The Chicago Health Connection came up with this model. They trained mentors from the community to work with at-risk moms, many of whom didn’t know where else to turn. These mentors spend time in the neighborhood, finding and befriending pregnant women who need help.

With the guidance of the doula, the Chicago Health Connection found that more young mothers were going to their prenatal care appointments, making better lifestyle choices, and—not surprisingly—delivering healthier babies. The doula stays with the moms and helps the entire family, encouraging breastfeeding, cuddling, and interactive play.

Bina Holland is a community-based doula at the Easter Seals Children’s Development Center in Rockford, IL. She has had a powerful impact on one of her clients—a 14-year-old girl who was 5 months pregnant and severely underweight. Bina taught her about healthy nutrition habits to strengthen her body to carry a baby. Bina also encouraged the young woman to visit her doctor regularly and to openly talk with the doctor about the health status of the baby.

The girl delivered her baby early at 2.5 lbs, and Bina was there to explain the health benefits of breastfeeding.

The young mom agreed to nurse her child, and each week Bina monitored the baby’s growth. The child was nursed to health, and the mother successfully graduated from the doula program. Thanks to Bina.

Community-based doula is a powerful resource for maternal and child health, and the model is effective. In communities that have employed it, outcomes include better prenatal care, higher birth weight, higher breastfeeding rates, better parenting skills, fewer preterm births and cesarean deliveries, and delays in subsequent pregnancy for teenagers.

With Chicago Health Connection’s success, they took on the challenge of working with other communities to build their own community-based doula program. Today, they have transformed into Health Connect One, a training organization for communities nationwide interested in starting their own community-based doula programs. The need is everywhere, and these women are working hard to make these important services available everywhere for all moms.

I am encouraged by the language in Section 5133 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, Grants to Promote the Community Health Workforce and to ensure that the definition of community health worker includes community-based doula. The Federal Government currently funds community-based doula programs through the Maternal and Child Health Bureau’s Special Projects of Regional and National Significance. Expanding the definition of community health workers in the reform bill will give these evidence-based programs greater support to meet the needs of families in underserved communities.

Community-based doula programs are just an example of the health outcomes that education, prevention and health literacy can bring. With grants to promote the community health workforce, doula will continue to promote positive health behaviors in pregnant women and improve the lives of families nationwide.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will vote for the comprehensive health reform bill being offered in the U.S. Senate, but I will also work to improve its flaws. There is much that is good about this legislation. It will, over the course of 10 years, help ensure that nearly every American has access to good and affordable health insurance. It will put Medicaid and Medicare spending on a more sustainable and stable path. It will increase access to home and community-based long term care services, increase our medical workforce, and end some of the worst abuses by the private insurance. But there are serious deficiencies—like the failure to establish a public health insurance option—that we know of, and there will undoubtedly be some gaps in the bill that we will discover during implementation. The commitment that is made with this legislation is ongoing, and will require diligent oversight and improvements in the years to come.

I am pleased that many of the priorities I laid out at the start of this process have been addressed in this bill. The bill includes provisions I fought for that help make sure Wisconsin is treated fairly. Those provisions include fixes to flawed Medicare formula that does not fairly reimburse Wisconsin and many other States, being a victim of domestic violence, or because they had to renew their health insurance year after year. If a claim is denied, policy holders have a guaranteed right to appeal. And group insurers are required to spend at least 85 percent of every premium dollar on actual health care; if they are spending less, they are required to refund the difference to the customer. This policy, along with others, will require an unprecedented level of transparency in the way insurers do business.

One of the strongest points of this bill for me, and perhaps one of the most underappreciated, is the commitment made to realign Medicare spending to reward our doctors and hospitals for the quality of care they provide to their patients, rather than the quantity of care. Moving to a value-based system is one of the single most effective ways to reduce health care spending and improve the quality of care. Wisconsin is a national leader in value-based purchasing. Nearly 60 percent of every health care provider operated like those in Wisconsin, over $100 billion a year in taxpayer dollars could be saved. Just last year, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that nearly 30 percent of Medicare spending could be avoided by integrating and coordinating care, in the manner of high-value providers.

As a result of this bill, Medicare reimbursement for certain health care providers will be based, in part, on the quality of care they deliver to their patients. Health providers will now have the opportunity to voluntarily join together as Accountable Care Organizations to coordinate the care they deliver to their patients, and to share in the savings they generate for Medicare. They will be given numerous opportunities and incentives to change the way they deliver health care, and will, for the first time, be penalized for delivering low-quality care. For example, if children are hospitalized at high rates of readmissions or hospital acquired infections, they will receive less reimbursement from Medicare. Not only will patients receive smarter care from their physicians, these policies will help ensure that taxpayer dollars are going to pay for the value of care Medicare patients receive, as opposed to the volume of care.

In addition to these positive changes to the way Medicare pays for health care, there is language to finally address the historic inequity in Medicare reimbursement that Wisconsin and over 50 other rural States have suffered. Thanks to the leadership of Senator CHUCK GRASSLEY in the Senate Finance Committee, this bill includes language that will increase Medicare reimbursement for Wisconsin physicians and directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to analyze and adjust the current formula to ensure more accurate payments for rural providers in the future. Fixing the flawed Medicare formula so that Wisconsin receives its fair share long has been a priority of mine.

I am pleased that this bill more fairly reimburses Wisconsin for the leadership my state has demonstrated in extending coverage to residents through BadgerCare, our State Medicaid program. I was concerned that the Senate Finance Committee bill would have denied Wisconsin much-deserved Medicaid dollars, and I worked hard to try to ensure the bill before the Senate fixed this problem. As a result, relative to the bill that the Senate Finance Committee reported, this bill will bring hundreds of millions more in Medicare assistance back to Wisconsin. I appreciate the leadership of my fellow Wisconsin Senator, HERB KUKLINSKI, the Chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator MAX BAUCUS, and Senator RINDE in working with me to ensure that Wisconsin’s investment in agriculture is acknowledged.

I am also pleased by the attention to long-term care reform in this bill. Modern medicine has turned fatal diseases into chronic diseases, and enabled individuals to live much longer. These tremendous accomplishments mean that the reality is that these individuals need even more assistance because of medical advancements—from their families, communities, and government.

Long-term care reform is intrinsically linked to overall health reform, and one cannot truly succeed without the other. While this bill does not include a comprehensive strategy to reform our long-term care system as I had hoped, it does remedy a number of critical building blocks to assist reform efforts in the future. One of these critical pieces is the Community Living Assistance Services and Supports Act, or CLASS Act. The CLASS Act would create a voluntary insurance program to help pay for home care and other assistance for adults who become disabled. Those choosing to participate could access a cash benefit if they become disabled and need assistance.

Another critical component of this bill is the attention paid to expanding home and community-based care options. Again, Wisconsin has been a national leader in increasing access to home and community-based care, beginning with the Community Options Program almost 30 years ago. As a State Senator, I worked to help expand Wisconsin's Community Options Program, known as COP, which provided flexible, consumer-oriented and consumer-directed long-term care services in community-based settings, enabling thousands of people needing long-term care to remain in their own homes rather than going to a nursing home. Over time, the COP program turned into Wisconsin's FamilyCare program, which is our newest State entitlement program for low-income and disabled adults to receive necessary care, support, and services in their homes and communities.

The progressive vision that is the driving force behind Family Care is also the driving force behind the long-term care provisions in this Senate bill. The bill will establish the Community First Choice Option, which gives States the option to create a new Medicaid benefit through which States could offer community-based attendant services and supports to Medicaid beneficiaries with disabilities, who would otherwise require the level of care offered in a hospital, nursing facility, or intermediate care facility.

This bill also removes barriers to expanding home and community-based services; protects recipients of home and community-based services from spousal impoverishment; and increases appropriations by $40 million to help fund Aging and Disability Resource Centers.

And finally, as a result of Senator Reid's amendment, the bill provides new financial incentives for States to shift Medicaid beneficiaries out of nursing homes and into home and community-based care.

Over 10 million Americans are currently in need of long-term care, and that number is expected to rise to 15 million in the next 10 years. These individuals struggle to remain independent with limited assistance. Policies like those included in this bill, which increase options for home and community-based care so that nursing homes are not the only choice, are smart changes that will benefit consumers of long-term care and save taxpayer money.

One of my most important priorities for the bill was that it be fiscally responsible. Based on the most current projections, the Congressional Budget Office expects this legislation to reduce the deficit by $1.3 trillion by 2019 and roughly $1 trillion by 2029. While the bill does not go as far as I would like to rein in health care spending, the $871 billion price tag on the bill is fully offset and will not add a penny to the deficit.

Deficit reduction is achieved through a number of policies, three of which are included in legislation I introduced to bring down the deficit, the Control Spending Now Act. These policies, which make prescription drugs more affordable and require wealthy individuals to pay their fair share of Medicare premiums, generate $24.6 billion in savings.

For all the positive aspects of this bill, I am deeply disappointed by the lack of a public option. I have been fighting all year for a strong public option to compete with the insurance industry and bring health care costs down. I continued that fight during recent negotiations, and I refused to sign onto a deal to drop the public option from the Senate bill.

Removing the public option from the Senate bill is the wrong move. I am concerned that without a public option, there will be no true competition for the insurance industry. We have included mechanisms to protect against egregious year-to-year increases in private insurance. From this point on, but we have no mechanism to force insurance companies to decrease premiums as they are set today. A strong public health insurance option would provide a powerful incentive for less responsible insurers to re-evaluate their operations and benefit plans to ensure they are an attractive option for consumers.

The public option would give consumers a strong voice in the marketplace. If the private market was not working, we would have a public option as an alternative. Competition is how we can reduce our health care costs, but there is no real competition in the private market. Private insurers compete to generate the most profit, and the best return on investment for their shareholders. There is at most a secondary motivation to compete to give the best value to consumers. A public option serves as an outside factor to force private insurers to consider more than just shareholder interests.

The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the public option in the bill that was brought to the floor could save up to $25 billion. The CBO's analysis of Senator Reid's amendment, which strikes the public option and replaces it with multi-state plans, says the following about the new policy:

Whether insurers would be interested in offering such plans is unclear, and establishing a nationwide plan comprising only of nonprofit insurers might be particularly difficult. Even if such plans were arranged, the insurers offering them would probably have participated in the insurance exchanges anyway, so the inclusion of this provision did not have a significant effect on the estimates of federal costs or enrollment in the exchanges.

Removing the public option gives up a huge opportunity to reduce costs for American families and the government, and I will work to try to ensure the final bill fixes this serious mistake.

I also am concerned about the excise tax on high-cost health plans. Under this bill, health insurers will be taxed on the value of any health care plan sold that is valued above $8,500 for an individual and $23,000 for a family.

Improvements have been made to this policy during Senate consideration, and the thresholds for the tax, along with exemptions for high-risk professions, have been expanded. But I have heard from many in my State that have already worked for solid health insurance benefits in the past years. I have heard from teachers and laborers and union members who are worried they may lose the health benefits they have fought for, and can't reclaim the funds. While this policy is often referred to as the "Cadillac" health care tax, they will be the first to tell you that they hardly live the Cadillac lifestyle. I urge my colleagues in the Senate and the House to consider the real-life impact that this policy could have on working Americans and their families.

I am concerned about the cuts to home health and hospice providers under this bill. Home health and hospice providers offer a truly valuable service to our communities. But under this bill, their reimbursements will be drastically cut and I am concerned that access will decrease as a result. Improvements have been made under Senator Reid's amendment, but we must do better for home health and hospice providers.

I am disappointed that the bill does not permit the safe importation of prescription drugs, which would reduce health care spending for consumers and the Federal Government. I will keep fighting to enact this common-sense reform.

Lastly, I oppose the sweetheart deals that some Senators and interest groups apparently cut. These deals weaken the bill by subsidizing States or interest groups at taxpayer expense. They are unjustified, and they should be eliminated.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act is a fundamental first step toward providing all Americans with affordable, quality health care. The health care system is complex, and that is why this Senate and two of its committees, including the Senate Finance Committee of which I am a member, have taken the better part of this past year crafting this legislation. I believe several provisions of this bill are transformational for American health care and will begin to move us toward more competition, choice, and quality.

The first provision is in the managers' amendment, and it is called free choice vouchers. This section creates something that has never existed before in the American health care system: a concrete way for middle-income Americans who cannot afford their health care to actually push back against the insurance lobby and force insurance companies to compete for their business. In the insurance exchange, under this provision, working, middle-class American can't afford just the one health insurance policy available to him at his job, with this new provision, there will be a different health care marketplace, with free enterprise choices that can actually drive down costs for the middle class while ensuring those choices are of good quality. And in that new marketplace, who cannot afford his employer’s health plan can get a tax-free voucher for the same amount the employer contributes under the health plan and use that voucher to buy a more affordable plan in the insurance exchange. I have been an advocate for consumer empowerment and choice my entire career in public service. Exchanges are a new pathway to creating a competitive marketplace for the first time for health care in this country. Massachusetts led the way, opening the door to showing Federal legislators the potential for insurance exchanges when Massachusetts enacted its own health reform law. Many other States lead the way with health care reform, including States like Oregon and Vermont. That is why I have authored and championed in the Senate Finance Committee section 1332, the waiver for State innovation. If States think they can do health reform better than under this Federal law and other members of the Congress and I think they can, they can do it. If, when they discover the number of people with the same comprehensive coverage, they can get a waiver exempting them from the legislation and still get the Federal money that would have been provided under the bill. To that extent, this provision is a safety valve, if certain provisions in this bill will not work as intended in a given State. This provision will give States a way to tailor health reform to best meet the needs of their citizens. I intend to work with Senator SANDERS and other colleagues to make sure that State waivers will be available even sooner than they are under the current bill.

The waiver for State innovation and free choice vouchers will improve the number of choices in the bill, for states, for employers and for employees. The Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act will also increase quality of care, particularly in the Medicare Program. I worked in the Finance Committee to increase bonus payments to high quality plans in the Medicare Advantage Program. In Oregon, Medicare Advantage is a lifeline given the low traditional Medicare reimbursement rates. This bill will reward the high quality plans that exist in Oregon, but will also encourage other plans across the country to increase the quality of the care they provide. By boosting payments to the highest quality plans—the four and five star plans—the Federal Government will be incentivizing plans that provide preventive care, manage chronic diseases well, and have high levels of consumer satisfaction.

Another provision that will add quality to the Medicare Program is Independence at Home, IAH, section 3024 of the bill, that I won approval for in the Finance Committee. This provision stems from legislation that I introduced with 11 other Members on both sides of the aisle. As the name indicates, the Independence at Home program will provide a way for seniors with chronic medical conditions to get medical treatment at home. The IAH program is a call team approach that has proven successful in reducing costs and improving the quality of care for high cost patients with multiple chronic illnesses, patients who account for 65 percent of Medicare spending. The Independence at Home program requires providers to achieve minimum savings on health care provided to the highest cost Medicare beneficiaries as a condition of participating in the program.

Providing care at home makes sense, and is the right direction for the future of health care delivery. But there is another aspect of the future of health care that I think holds much promise: personalized medicine. We won approval in the Finance Committee, along with Senator CARPER, for including section 3113 in the bill. This provision will increase access to innovative molecular diagnostic tests that provide the foundation for the application of personalized medicine, enabling patients suffering from life threatening diseases such as cancer and heart disease. These tests hold the promise of getting patients the right type of chemotherapy for their specific case of cancer. Personalized medicine will be a transformation in the way we save the lives of millions who are not covered because they can’t afford to see a medical professional. Like that July afternoon in 1965 when President Lyndon Johnson signed Medicare into law I am especially pleased to see that our great Nation once again has taken the right step to its health care future.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, at a handful of moments, Members of the U.S. Senate have faced choices that could fairly be described as critical, each of these choices was between progress—sometimes incomplete progress—and an intolerable status quo. In our finest hours, we have overcome fear and doubt and stood for the principle that our Nation, though great, could aspire to do better. When our ambition has weakened, we have taken the timid path. That is an easier journey and less laden with fear or political peril, but it has not served our own true well or prevented the progress of history.

We have come to another of those times. We can vote, now, to address decades of frustration and anguish over a health care system most Americans know is broken. Or we can destroy the hopes of millions of Americans whose most ambition is not a perfect system, but an improved one. We cannot vote to end every problem in health care; this bill will not do that. But we can make life safer, more secure, less costly, for most Americans, because we can give them a better health care system.

Briefly, here is some of what this legislation will accomplish:
People with preexisting conditions who are currently left out of the system will be able to get access to health care in the future. Within 6 months of enactment, this legislation will allow those not covered at work and who are unable to find insurance in the individual market because of preexisting conditions to buy a plan that will remain in place if they get sick. And it will offer free preventive services and immunizations.

The bill has provisions to help strengthen Medicare by giving seniors access to important preventive services that they may otherwise not be able to afford. And also for seniors, this bill reduces the Medicare doughnut hole, a gap in prescription drug coverage that I hope we are able to eventually close altogether.

After 2014, new plans will be barred from imposing annual limits on coverage, and sliding tax credits will be available to make insurance more affordable for those earning below $32,000 for a family of four, or earning below $43,000 for an individual. The credits that will be offered to make coverage more affordable will bring millions of Americans under the umbrella of health insurance. An important improvement for those families now without insurance and a step toward reducing burdens and inefficiencies that make health care more expensive for all of us. State-based exchanges will offer those seeking individual coverage both the purchasing power of belonging to a larger group, and a transparent marketplace in which benefits are standardized and costs are clear.

The bill also helps small businesses that are struggling to get a handle on ever-increasing health care insurance costs. Beginning in 2010, small businesses will receive a tax credit of up to 35 percent of their costs for insuring their employees and their employees’ families. In 2014 and beyond, the tax credit can be as much as 50 percent of an employer’s costs for covering employees. These credits will encourage these employers, which are the backbone of our economy, to provide health care insurance coverage.

The bill also includes some major insurance company reforms. Beginning in 2011, plans that do not spend a high percentage of their revenue for patient care—85 percent of revenue for large-group plans and 80 percent of revenue for individual and small-group market—will have to provide rebates to their enrollees.

One of the benefits of this new requirement on insurance companies is reversing the troublesome trend that has seen more and more of our health care dollars spent on administration. Since 1970, the number of administrative positions in our health care system has increased by nearly 3,000 percent, far outstripping the growth in the number of patient care workers over the same period. It is long past time to ensure that we are spending precious health care dollars on care and not on paperwork and bureaucracy. Hospitals will become more transparent as well—every hospital in the Nation will publish a list of standard charges for the items and services it provides.

The bill includes incentives to boost the availability of medical care, including financial incentives under Medicare to increase the number of primary care physicians. And it also promotes standardizing health information technology in an effort to reduce costly administrative overhead.

This is not what we hoped for. But it is what we can get done. It is what we should do.

The minority has offered no alternatives, just apocalyptic rhetoric. Some of them stood before rallies, leading chants about socialism. They claimed it is a big government takeover. “Kill the bill” was their slogan. Before television cameras our efforts to produce reform were compared to the activities of financial fraudsters like Bernie Madoff.

For those familiar with the facts, these notions are rightly seen as falsehoods. One of these falsehoods—the notion that health care reform would mean “death panels” voting to end the lives of citizens—has been named by an independent fact-checking organization its “Lie of the Year.” That’s quite a distinction. When discussing the scare tactics being used by opponents of health reform, the policy director of AARP told me that while opponents of health reform have targeted (seniors) and have . . . misrepresented the facts, and have consciously tried to scare seniors who depend on health care. So no surprise that they feel anxious, because they’re hearing messages every day designed to scare the bejesus out of them.

The extreme rhetoric of the minority is a repeat of similar rhetoric which was used when Social Security and Medicare were being considered by the Congress.

In 1935, as Social Security was being debated, one Republican warned the program would “enslave workers,” and another declared “the lash of the dictator will be felt” if it passed. Three decades later, as the Congress debated the Medicare Program, one Republican Member of Congress said, “Let me tell you here and now, it is socialized medicine.” A future Republican President of the United States has suggested that if Medicare passed, “you and I are going to spend our sunset years telling our children and our children’s children what it was like in America when men were free.”

Incredibly, the same Republican Party that once equated Medicare with socialism would now have the public believe they are defending Medicare from the threat of socialism. The mental gymnastics this requires is breathtaking. If this bill is such a threat to seniors, why does AARP support it? And if Medicare is a threat to our children’s children, why do the American Medical Association, the American Heart Association, and dozens of others support passage of this bill? If this bill will explode the deficit, why does the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office tell us it will reduce the deficit by $132 billion over the first decade after enactment, and up to $1.3 trillion in the second?

Are all these organizations, the nonpartisan CBO, independent checkers, scores of economists and health care experts—are they all engaged in a conspiracy to engineer a socialist government takeover of medicine? I am afraid that some of our Republican colleagues have latched onto any argument at hand to justify their opposition to health care reform.

Let me ask one final question: What do opponents say to our constituents who speak to us every day of their belief that the time for health reform has come? That today is not the time? The man from Kalamazoo, MI, who went bankrupt because his health insurance would not cover $40,000 in costs for a life-saving heart operation, did they tell him this is not the time? The woman from Jackson, Michigan, who spent months fighting to get coverage because insurance companies considered her pregnancy a preexisting condition—did they tell her this is not the time? The worried mother who wrote my office to say, “We will lose too many bright young people—if something is not done”—will they tell her this is not the time?

This is the time. Now is the time to embrace the same call of history that led our predecessors to ignore the apocalyptic rhetoric and establish Social Security and Medicare. We must pass this bill, so that generations after us do not look back on a broken health care system and say, “Here was another lost moment when it could all have changed.” We must pass this bill. Now is the time. Just as we are ploughing the roads of record snow to get to work, our work now is to plough through the endless filibusters to get our job done.

Mr. REID. On behalf of Senator Baucus, Senator Dodd, and myself, I submit this statement under the spirit of rule XLIV of the Standing Rules of the Senate. We hereby certify that, to the best of our knowledge and belief, the managers’ amendment to the substitute amendment to H.R. 3990 does not contain any congressionally directed spending items as defined in rule XLIV.

Rule XLIV defines a congressionally directed spending item as “a provision or report language included primarily at the request of an entity, approving, authorizing, or recommending a specific amount of discretionary budget authority, credit authority, or other spending authority for a contract, loan, loan guarantee, grant, loan authorization, or other disbursing authority or targeted to an entity, or targeted to a specific State, locality or Congressional district, other than through a statutory or administrative formula-driven or competitive award process.” To the best of our belief, no item meets this definition. There are numerous items that affect one or more States or localities differently than others, but none of the definitions bear the names of more than one or more of the following reasons—(A) no specific amount is associated with the provision, (B) the provision involves distribution through “a statutory lottery fund,” or “a competitive award process” or (C) the criteria are such that more than one State or locality will or may benefit. It is quite common in legislation for formulas and programs to make adjustments to affect States or locality-specific needs.

The rule defines a “limited tax benefit” as “any revenue provision that provides a Federal tax deduction, credit, exclusion, or preference to a particular beneficiary or limited group of beneficiaries under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and (B) contains eligibility criteria that are not uniform in any respect to potential beneficiaries of such provision.”

Section 10905 provides exceptions to the annual fee on health insurance providers for certain insurers. One of these exceptions is available only if the entity has an average medical loss ratio for all markets (independent and large group—2008 was 90 percent or higher). The performance-based exception is available only if the entity has an average medical loss ratio for years after 2011 for the previous three years for all markets of 85 percent or higher (prior year for 2012 fee and prior two years for 2013 fee). This provision could be considered a “limited tax benefit” as defined in rule XLIV, and I anticipate that Blue Cross Blue Shield of Nebraska may benefit from this provision, provided that they maintain the high performance level necessary to secure the provis. My purpose for requesting this provis. was so that Nebraska’s sole non-profit insurer would not receive the exemptions from the insurance fee as set forth in Section 10905. Consistent with the requirements of paragraph 9 of Rule XLIV, neither I nor my immediate family have any pecuniary interest in this item.

Sincerely,

E. BENJAMIN NELSON.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as we finish this session, there are many people who have worked to get us to this point. From the staff in the Senate to the Capitol Police, many employees have given their time to make sure that the Senate could complete its work on health care.

In particular, I would like to recognize the work of the employees of the Government Printing Office. Each day, the GPO works with the Secretary of the Senate to meet the needs of the Senate and the American people. The employees who have used for the health care debate have been printed and delivered by the employees of the GPO.

This past weekend, when the heavy snow blanketed the city and shut down most government agencies and operations, the men and women of the GPO came to work and remained at their posts. Some GPO employees spent the night to ensure that the Senate was able to get the documents we needed. Their performance throughout the health care debate was commendable and I would like to ask my colleagues to join me in thanking the GPO for a job well done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, as we approach the vote tomorrow morning, I know a lot of people are calling it a historic vote. In some contexts, I guess it is. However, many of us are concerned it is a historic mistake rather than a history-making opportunity.

To be honest, I am very much concerned about whether this legislation is the right or wrong way to improve health care for all Americans. We have had hours and hours, in fact, days and weeks of committee hearings and meetings with good bipartisan discussion on options and ways to accomplish this. But now, apparently, we have a mandate by the majority demanding we have a final vote in the Senate before Christmas.

While we debate this, let me say I believe we need to have open dialogue with the people who are going to be most affected, the American people, because the final details of this bill were not crafted in front of the American public. I think most people in America know the President pledged that this legislation be crafted in front of the public. What the Senate was trying to do was what is that is public, where, in fact, he said C-SPAN cameras could be present—in his words: So people could see the deal people were making and who was working for the American people and who was cutting deals.

The C-SPAN camera was not present, the table was not open, the room was closed, and the bill was negotiated in secret. But we are starting to find out what the deals were, and the deals are outraging the American people as they see specific exceptions in the bill that is public. It is quite obvious to see that is public. It is quite obvious to see the deals are particular beneficiary or limited group of beneficiaries in order to get the votes from the Senators for those States.

We heard about different proposals dealing with the State of Louisiana, the State of Florida, the State of Connecticut, the Senate Amendment 3276, and the list is growing as we have an opportunity to deeply delve into the bill and determine exactly what is in it.

But we will not have time to know all the details of these deals. We will not have time to even know all the details of how the bill works because this 2,700-page bill, 400 pages of which were only disclosed last Saturday, will be voted on at 7 o’clock in the morning.

Three days ago, I asked Idahoans who, similar to most Americans—in fact, all Americans—want health care reform, to sign a petition on the Internet asking the Senate to—

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if we defeat H.R. 3590 because we need reform that will lower costs while increasing quality . . . and keeping health care decisions between a patient and their doctor.

The response to this request has been remarkable. In fact, I suspect that, as I am speaking, we have already gotten over 20,000 signatures on the petition on the Internet. I asked people to go to my Internet site, milkecrapo.com, and simply sign the petition. Here is a partial stack. We are still printing out the rest of the names of the people who signed the petition, but somewhere between 19,000, 20,000, 20,000签名的人签名的请愿书。

The response to this request has been remarkable. In fact, I suspect that, as I am speaking, we have already gotten over 20,000 signatures on the petition on the Internet. I asked people to go to my Internet site, milkecrapo.com, and simply sign the petition. Here is a partial stack. We are still printing out the rest of the names of the people who signed the petition, but somewhere between 19,000, 20,000签名的人签名的请愿书。 list, people on their Facebook, their Facebook friends, everyone who is within their circle of influence—and ask them to also sign the petition and, if they didn’t live in Idaho, to contact their Senator and encourage their Senator to do the same. I agree with them, if they agreed with me that it is not the path our Nation should follow.

Remarkably, more than half the people who have so far signed the petition did not get that information from me. They got the request or encouragement to sign the petition from the friend or relative. A huge proportion of them do not live in Idaho. In fact, we have had people from all over America, in every one of the 50 States, sign this petition.

Why is this happening? By the way, the number is growing. It is happening because the more Americans know about this bill, the more they know it is not the path they want us to take for health care reform. Health care is personal, private, and a sensitive matter for among individuals and their doctors and their family. This bill makes health care a public policy decision controlled by a government bureaucracy. Americans don’t want that kind of government control over our health care. This bill forces Americans to see an administration and a congressional majority forcing this bill down their throats in a rush to pass it before public opposition legitimately overwhelms this wrongheaded monstrosity. Thousands of letters to Congress are telling us that they desperately want Congress to listen, but they know that their collective voice has been ignored. The petition is one way they can make themselves heard in hopes that this Congress will pass needed and sensible reform, but not this bill.

In fact, another point about this petition is in addition to getting on the Web site and signing the petition, I have individuals calling my offices and saying, ‘Senator, I am giving you an avenue to try to reach out to the Senate and tell the Senate to stop. I think thousands of Idahoans and people from all over America are eager to have an avenue to speak out, and we need to stop and listen. I thank the thousands of Idahoans and Americans across the country for being willing to get involved as citizens and petition their government to respect our rights and to honor our values and to reform health care. The national poll results indicate people oppose this bill. They want commonsense, lower cost action that will reduce the cost of premiums and doctor visits.

This legislation instead raises taxes on the middle class, increases premium costs for many people now carrying insurance, cuts senior programs, and fails to lower health care costs. Simply put, there has not been a piece of legislation this decade that has come forward with more opposition than this health care reform bill. The more I talk to Idahoans and Americans know about the bill, the more they dislike it. Health care is a personal, private, and sensitive matter; and this bill goes the opposite direction. But the majority is moving full steam ahead in hope that they can pass it before the public can understand what it is and register their opposition. If we will take the time, we will see if it drives our health care system without the tax increases, without the massive increase in the growth of government, without the pork barrel spending and the sweetheart deals, without the Medicare cuts and the unconstitutionality of State governments this bill presents.

Among the steps many of us are trying to see enacted are things such as allowing insurance companies to compete across State lines, allowing small businesses to band together to negotiate group rates for insurance, requiring pricing disclosures from health care providers to promote a competitive, consumer-driven health care market, and offering incentives for patients and the private sector to create wellness programs and other efficiencies in health care delivery. In fact, when a bill similar to this was presented as an alternative in the House, with the provisions the House Republicans proposed, it was scoured, contrary to the bill we will be voting on, by CBO that it would actually reduce the cost of health care in America by significant percentages. Yet we are now continuing to pour full steam ahead with a vote at 7 o’clock in the morning on a bill that will increase the cost of health care.

The petition I brought forward asks Congress to listen. It registers the fears of many Americans that they are being ignored by the administration and by the majority in Congress. I am going to continue to aggressively push for their wishes on the floor of the Senate.

I wish to take an opportunity now to go ahead and get into a little bit more of the detail we do know about this bill. Why do I say it is the wrong direction? Let’s look at it. Let’s ask what Americans want in health care reform. If you asked most Americans—and there have actually been a number of polls that have shown this—do they want health care reform, they say yes. When they are asked what they mean by that and what they want, the overwhelming answer is that they want to stop the skyrocketing increases in the cost of their health care insurance, that they want to control the skyrocketing increases in medical care. They also say they want to see increased access for those who don’t now have access to quality insurance, both because they are compassionate and want to see that kind of health care for everyone and because they are paying for it in their insurance premiums, for those who have insurance, and in their taxes, those who pay taxes. They want to assure that we continue to have the highest quality of health care possible. That is what we are supposed to be doing. That is what this bill should be working on. That is the objective we should be achieving.

Yet what are we achieving? In an earlier discussion of the House bill, I believe the Wall Street Journal said it was the worst bill ever. We now have a different bill in the Senate, but it is still falls into the same category. Why? Because it forces the unsanctioned uninsured and those who do not have insurance into a government system. It raises taxes by hundreds of billions of dollars. It cuts Medicare by hundreds of billions of dollars. It grows the government by $2.5 trillion. It forces the needy uninsured not into a program where most of them can get insurance but into a failing and less robust medical system, Medicaid. It imposes damaging unfunded mandates on our State governments that are already sharing the burden of Medicaid and facing difficult troubled economic times. It means increased taxes not just at the Federal level but at the State level with unfunded mandates. It leaves millions of Americans uninsured, and it establishes massive government controls over our health care economy.

Let me go through a few of those to give more specifics. First, I don’t think most Americans, when they talk about health care reform, think that means we need to grow the size of our government by $2.5 trillion. Although there is some smoke and mirrors in the way this bill is put together, because the first 4 years of its costs are not started until 4 years into the bill, so when you try to count the first 10 years, you only take the first true 10 years of spending in this bill, it increases the cost of this government’s health care expenditures by $2.5 trillion. As we can see on this chart, look at the first 4 years. The spending is basically deferred. Why would that happen? I will explain that when I talk about deficit issues. But what it does is hide the true cost of the bill. If you measure the true cost of the bill in the first full 10 years of spending, the $2.5 trillion rather than the $1.2 trillion it would be if you counted it otherwise.

What we see is a massive growth of the Federal Government. That is not what people were asking for and, frankly, it makes them kind of do a doubletake when you explain to them that we are increasing the size of our government by such massive amounts with health care reform. Those proposing that we adopt this bill often talk about the objective of making sure the American people want to drive the cost curve down. I often ask, what cost curve are they talking about? If they are talking about the cost of health care or the cost of health care premiums, they are going up. If they are talking about the size of the Federal Government and the level of Federal Government spending, that is going up.

There is one that they talk about. It is called the deficit. That is whether we are spending more than we are taxing and cutting. They argue that the deficit is going down. There is only one way you can argue that this bill does not increase the deficit, and that is if you assume that we don't have nearly $1 trillion of Medicare cuts, that we don't have $1 trillion worth of taxes in the first year and $1.2 trillion of taxes in the first full 10 years of implementation and that we don't have several budget gimmicks.

What are the gimmicks? The first and biggest is the one I showed on the previous chart. They don't count the first 4 years of spending. They stop the spending and don't let it start happening for 4 years so that we have 10 years of taxes, 10 years of Medicare cuts, and 6 years of spending. When you balance that out, you can claim it doesn't increase the deficit because you don't have a full 10 years of spending.

There are other budget gimmicks. We have something called the SGR fix. The adjustments in compensation rates for physicians that we all know on both sides we must do. We must keep the physician compensation comparable and moving up with inflation. That is going to cost $245 billion, approximately, over the next 10 years. That $245 billion cost to reform and adjust the Medicare compensation system is absent from the bill. Why? Because they are going to do it in a separate bill. You will not pay for that. In other words, not have offsets. We will see whether they have offsets, but it is not in this bill. If it were, it would drive the deficit numbers by $245 billion in the wrong direction.

There are other types of gimmicks. For example, there is double counting of the Medicare cuts. The CBO came out with a report today that said that if you cut Medicare by $465 billion, claiming that you are going to use that $465 billion to help make the financial situation for Medicare more stable, you can't then take that same $465 billion and use it to establish a massive new government program, yet a third major government health care entitlement system. It increases the cost of health insurance. It increases the cost of health insurance. It pushes up every cost curve, not small for these families.

Budget gimmicks. There is another one and claim you are saving one that is already facing fiscal collapse. It is these kinds of budget gimmicks that make many of us object to the bill. If you didn't have those budget gimmicks, if you didn't have, those tax increases, if you didn't have those Medicare cuts, there is no way you could say this bill is deficit neutral.

One of the things CBO does report—I want to move to the question of the cost effect—is that the premiums in the individual market will go up, not down. What does that mean? CBO breaks the insurance market into three categories: the individual market, the small group market, and the large group market. The individual market is the one that is primarily there for small businesses that don't have a large or a small group opportunity or individuals who don't get their insurance through their employer. It represents about 17 percent or almost 51 million of all insured people in the country. Their insurance rates under this bill—17 percent of all Americans—are going to go up. The amount by which they will go up is about 10 to 13 percent, according to CBO.

The next group is the small group market. They represent about another 13 percent. Again, CBO says under this bill their rates are going to go up, not quite as much as between 1 and 3 percent, but up, not down. That brings us to the large group market. The large group market actually fares a little better. This is the remaining 70 percent of those insured in the United States. Basically, the CBO report says that for them there is a chance theirs may go down by a percent or two, but basically, it could be stable, a zero-percent change as well. Because individuals in the large group market, those who get their insurance from larger employers, have less liability of a harmful impact because they have that large group that can continue to negotiate to control their health care costs.

So what do we see? Even under the best scenario—and there have been nine or ten studies of this and the CBO report is the one that is the most favorable toward the bill; most of the other reports have said that the rates are going to go up for everybody—but even under this the CBO report says that for them there is a chance theirs may go down by a percent or two, but basically, it could be stable, a zero-percent change as well. Because individuals in the large group market, those who get their insurance from larger employers, have less liability of a harmful impact because they have that large group that can continue to negotiate to control their health care costs.

What does it do to Medicare? It cuts Medicare by $463 billion in the first year, and $1.28 trillion of taxes in the first full 10 years of implementation, and that we don't have several budget gimmicks.

What is the problem? The first and biggest is the one I showed on the previous chart. They don't count the first 4 years of spending. They stop the spending and don't let it start happening for 4 years so that we have 10 years of taxes, 10 years of Medicare cuts, and 6 years of spending. When you balance that out, you can claim it doesn't increase the deficit because you don't have a full 10 years of spending.

There are other budget gimmicks. We have something called the SGR fix. The adjustments in compensation rates for physicians that we all know on both sides we must do. We must keep the physician compensation comparable and moving up with inflation. That is going to cost $245 billion, approximately, over the next 10 years. That $245 billion cost to reform and adjust the Medicare compensation system is absent from the bill. Why? Because they are going to do it in a separate bill. You will not pay for that. In other words, not have offsets. We will see whether they have offsets, but it is not in this bill. If it were, it would drive the deficit numbers by $245 billion in the wrong direction.

There are other types of gimmicks. For example, there is double counting of the Medicare cuts. The CBO came out with a report today that said that if you cut Medicare by $465 billion, claiming that you are going to use that $465 billion to help make the financial situation for Medicare more stable, you can't then take that same $465 billion and use it to establish a massive new government program, yet a third major government health care entitlement system. It increases the cost of health insurance. It increases the cost of health insurance. It pushes up every cost curve, not small for these families.

Budget gimmicks. There is another one and claim you are saving one that is already facing fiscal collapse. It is these kinds of budget gimmicks that make many of us object to the bill. If you didn't have those budget gimmicks, if you didn't have, those tax increases, if you didn't have those Medicare cuts, there is no way you could say this bill is deficit neutral.

One of the things CBO does report—I want to move to the question of the cost effect—is that the premiums in the individual market will go up, not down. What does that mean? CBO breaks the insurance market into three categories: the individual market, the small group market, and the large group market. The individual market is the one that is primarily there for small businesses that don't have a large or a small group opportunity or individuals who don't get their insurance through their employer. It represents about 17 percent or almost 51 million of all insured people in the country. Their insurance rates under this bill—17 percent of all Americans—are going to go up. The amount by which they will go up is about 10 to 13 percent, according to CBO.

The next group is the small group market. They represent about another 13 percent. Again, CBO says under this bill their rates are going to go up, not quite as much as between 1 and 3 percent, but up, not down. That brings us to the large group market. The large group market actually fares a little better. This is the remaining 70 percent of those insured in the United States. Basically, the CBO report says that for them there is a chance theirs may go down by a percent or two, but basically, it could be stable, a zero-percent change as well. Because individuals in the large group market, those who get their insurance from larger employers, have less liability of a harmful impact because they have that large group that can continue to negotiate to control their health care costs.

So what do we see? Even under the best scenario—and there have been nine or ten studies of this and the CBO report is the one that is the most favorable toward the bill; most of the other reports have said that the rates are going to go up for everybody—but even under this the CBO report says that for them there is a chance theirs may go down by a percent or two, but basically, it could be stable, a zero-percent change as well. Because individuals in the large group market, those who get their insurance from larger employers, have less liability of a harmful impact because they have that large group that can continue to negotiate to control their health care costs.
year and, again, if you want to look at the first full 10 years, by $953 billion in Medicare cuts. Basically, what we have here in this part of the bill is an absolute transfer—an absolute transfer—from America’s senior citizens right over to the new government entitlement, as a redistribution of that wealth to other people.

Senior citizens who have throughout their life paid the Medicare tax, the Medicare payroll tax, will now see the Medicare they thought they were going to get. Instead, as we are talking about that we may be dealing with here? The biggest one is Medicare Advantage—$120 billion of cuts.

About one in four American seniors has Medicare Advantage insurance. This is insurance that was provided in a contract relationship with the private sector. In other words, it was an experiment to see if we could let the private sector deliver Medicare and how they would do it. They found they could do it, and through the Medicare Advantage Program, increase the benefits seniors get.

This is probably the most popular part of the Medicare Program. It is growing rapidly. The reason it is growing rapidly is because it provides better coverage. Those in the Medicare Advantage Program are going to see their benefits cut.

Another pledge the President made was: If you like what you have, you can keep it. Well, if you do not have Medicare Advantage, it is also not true about a lot of people who have their insurance through their employers these days because that is going to be lost to millions of Americans too.

But in addition to the Medicare Advantage cuts, you are going to see hospital reimbursements, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, hospice, and others cut to the tune of $465 billion in the first 10 years. The experts have told us, what that is going to do is to make impossible for many health care providers in these categories to keep their doors open, or it will cause them to reduce the amount and quality of services they provide.

So senior citizens are going to see their Medicare, particularly their Medicare Advantage, benefits cut and their access to care restricted and reduced under this bill.

In summary, there has been a lot of talk about the winners under this Draconian cut—Americans want health care reform. But we need to do it in a smart and sensible way. Many have argued there are no alternatives being put forward by our side. As I indicated earlier in my remarks, that is simply not true. In fact, the alternative that was put forward by the House and the alternative many of us have been talking about here have been scored to actually achieve the results Americans are asking for:

We do not need to rush this bill through in a claim that we are making history but in a way that will be a huge historical mistake. The American people, in huge numbers, are asking us to slow down and stop it and start working together in ways that do not create a government takeover of health care, that do not drive up the size and reach of the Federal Government, that do not drive up taxes but instead provide the right kind of approaches to medical care. And that means slash Medicare benefits to our seniors, that do not put massive burdens on our States, and that do not force the neediest of our uninsured into a failing health care system, Medicaid.

We are not going to have to be back at this in the future if we do not get it right now. Only then will we be facing much worse fiscal circumstances and very difficult problems with sustaining the fiscal stability of the two programs we are now dealing with trying to sustain: Medicare and Medicaid.

I urge my colleagues to listen to the people who signed this petition—people all across this Nation in every one of the 50 States—who are saying: Wait. Do not cut Medicare Advantage, do not cut the most direct rebate, but do not make this mistake.

I encourage all my colleagues, as we are literally on the eve of the vote that will determine whether this bill makes it through the Senate, to step back and take a look at whether it will not be better for all of America for us to move a little slower and start trying to build a bipartisan solution that can have true benefits for the American people.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, there is a lot of talk from the majority about why passing this bill is the right thing to do for the American people. It is a decision of conscience for them. Well, let us take a closer look at these decisions of conscience.

After weeks of closed-door clandestine negotiations, Senator Reid finally emerged with a 383-page Christmas list. This is a grab bag of Chicago-style, back-door, lobbyist-written, with-the-IRS acting as the collection agent, with the largest lobbying organization, avowed conflict of interest: questioning whether AARP has a conflict of interest?

Democratic proposals to slash reimbursements for . . . Medicare Advantage are widely expected to drive up demand for private Medigap policies like the ones offered by AARP, according to health-care experts, legislative aides and documents.

One of the most disturbing developments in the Reid bill has been the perpetuation and even doubling of the unconstitutional individual mandate tax from $8 billion to $15 billion. You heard Mr. President—this unconstitutional mandate tax actually doubled behind closed doors. I have long argued that forcing Americans to either buy a Washington-defined level of coverage or face a tax penalty collected through the Internal Revenue Service is highly unconstitutional.

We hear a lot of rhetoric from the other side about Republicans defending the big, evil insurance companies while Democrats are the defenders of American families. The insurance mandate is a clear example of this partisan hypocrisy. Let me ask one simple question: Who would benefit the most from this unprecedented mandate to purchase insurance or face a stiff penalty enforced by our friends at the Internal Revenue Service?

The answer is simple. There are two clear winners under this Draconian policy—and neither is the American family. The first winner is the Federal Government, which could easily use this authority to increase the penalty, or impose similar ones, to create new streams of revenue to fund out-of-control spending. Second, the insurance companies are the most direct winners under this individual insurance mandate because it would force millions of Americans who would not otherwise do so to become their customers. I cannot think of a bigger giveaway for insurance companies than the Federal Government ordering Americans to buy their products. If you do not believe me then just look at the stock prices of the insurance companies that have recently shot to their 52-week highs.

Jane Hamsher, the publisher of the very liberal blog Firedoglake, said the following in a recent posting: “Having to pay 2 percent of their income in annual fines for refusing to comply—with this unprecedented legislative experiment—just might wind up being the most widely hated legislation of the decade. Barack Obama just might achieve the more Medigap plans. However, there is a strong competitor to Medigap policies—Medicare Advantage plans.

These private plans provide comprehensive coverage, including vision and dental care, at lower premiums for nearly 11 million seniors across the country. But in the Reid bill, Medicare Advantage do not need Medigap policies. So what happens when the Reid bill slashes this program by almost $120 billion? Just look at the Washington Post front-page story from October 27 questioning whether AARP has a conflict of interest:
bipartisan unity on health care he always wanted—Democrats and Republicans are coming together to say kill this bill.’’

Now that we clearly understand the huge windfalls the Reid bill provides AARP and insurance companies, yea, the Senate Speaker PELOSI, to ensure that the Hyde amendment, which prohibits use of federal dollars for elective abortions, applies to any new federal health programs created in this bill. The Hyde amendment has been public law since 1976.

The so-called abortion compromise does not stop there. The Reid bill creates a State opt-out charade. However, this bill can do nothing to assure that state’s tax dollars from paying for abortions in other states. Tax dollars from Nebraska can pay for abortions in California or New York. This bill also creates a new public option run by the Office of Personnel Management, OPM, that will, for the first time, create a federally funded and managed plan that will cover elective abortions.

When you have Senator BOXER and Speaker PELOSI, two of the largest pro-choice advocates in the Congress, supporting this sham so-called compromise and everyone from the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops to the National Right to Life Committee and the Family Research Council opposing it, there is only one clear loser—the majority of Americans who believe in the sanctity of life and oppose the use of federal dollars for elective abortions.

Last but not least, I would like to spend a couple of minutes to talk about the real deals confered on States in this $2.5 trillion spending bill. How hefty are the pricetags for decisions of conscience? Here are some highlights: $300 million for Louisiana; $600 million for Vermont; $500 million for Massachusetts; $100 million for Nebraska.

At a recent news conference, when the authors of this legislation were asked about the Nebraska earmark for Medicaid funding, the majority leader simply replied, “A number of states are treated differently than others. That’s what legislation is all about. That’s compromise.’’

The next logical question is pretty straightforward—Who will pay for these special deals? The answer is simple. Every other State in the Union, including Utah, who are collectively facing $200 billion in deficits and are cutting jobs and educational services to survive, will now pay to support these special deals.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, the Medicaid expansion in the Reid bill creates a $26 billion unfunded mandate on our cash-strapped States. Coincidentally, only one state avoids this unfunded mandate—Nebraska.

Of course, let us not forget about the biggest loser in this bill—the hard-working American taxpayer. This bill imposes a trillion dollars of new taxes, fees, and penalties on individuals, families, and businesses. The new fees begin in 2010, while the major coverage provisions do not start until 2014. Almost $37 billion in new taxes are collected before any American sees the major benefits of this plan, which are largely delayed until 2014. It is also no coincidence that through the use of these budget gimmicks the majority can claim this bill reduces our national deficit when we all know these reductions will never be realized.

Based on data from the Joint Committee on Taxation—the nonpartisan congressional scorekeeper—this bill would break another one of President Obama’s campaign promises by increasing taxes on 42 million individuals and families making less than $250,000 a year.

At a time, when we are struggling to fight a double-digit unemployment rate, the Reid bill not only increases the payroll taxes by nearly $87 billion but also imposes $28 billion in new taxes on employers that do not provide government-approved health plans. These new taxes will ultimately be paid by American workers in the form of reduced wages and benefits.

However, it is hard to say we didn’t see these new taxes coming. For years now, many of us have warned that the out-of-control spending in Washington will eventually have to be repaid on the backs of American families. In this bill, the repayment comes in the form of stifled economic growth, lost jobs, and new and increasing taxes—and they are just the first installment of what will be a long and painful exertion of citizens’ taxes if Congress doesn’t stand up and stop these terrible bills.

According to a recent study of similar proposals by the Heritage Foundation, these new job-killing taxes will place approximately 5.2 million low income workers at risk of losing their jobs or having their hours reduced and an additional 10.2 million workers could see lower wages and reduced benefits.

Polls after poll tell us about the growing opposition against this tax-and-spend health care bill. The latest Rasmussen poll shows that 55 percent of Americans are now opposed to this bill. The CNN poll has it even higher at 61 percent. Among senior citizens, the group most likely to use the health care system, only 33 percent are in favor while 60 percent are opposed. Independent voters are also opposed almost 2 to 1. Opposition in certain states polls, like Nebraska, is even higher at 67 percent.

So what is the majority doing to address these concerns? Nothing. In fact, despite the efforts by many of us here on this side of the aisle to express our substantive policy disagreements for months, one Senator recently said the following: “They are desperate to break this president. They have ardent supporters who are nearly hysterical at the very election of President Barack Obama. They view the Democrats as the people running around in right-wing militia and Aryan support groups, it is unbearable to them that President Barack Obama should exist.’’

This statement is outrageous. Instead of listening to the policy concerns of a majority of Americans, the other side is simply dismissing them as rants from the far right. If the majority refuses to listen to what Americans are telling them now—I am sure they will have a rude wake-up call waiting for them later. It should come as no surprise to anyone that this kind of arrogance of power has led to congressional approval ratings rivaling the most hated institutions on the planet and dismal 22 percent and falling.

One of the biggest tragedies of letting this bill move forward is that it will do nothing to address the fundamental issue of rising health care costs in this country. According to the Congressional Budget Office, this bill will increase our health care costs by $200 billion. The administration’s own actuary at the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, CMS, agrees with this assessment. When this bill fails to work, Americans will not take any more, so to effectively address the issue of health care reform. The opportunity to save Medicare and Medicaid from their impending financial collapse will be lost for another generation.

The historic blizzard in Washington earlier this month was a perfect symbol of the anger and frustration brewing in the hearts of the American people against this bill. I urge the majority once again to listen to the voices of the American people. The fix for this bill is the 60th vote. Let me repeat that again—every vote for this bill is the 60th vote. My Republican colleagues and I are united with the American people in our fight against this $2.5 trillion tax-and-spend bill. I implore my colleagues not to do this to the American people. Don’t foreclose on their futures. Don’t stick them with even more government spending and government intrusion.

We can fix health care. Many of us have been working to do just that for many years. A truly bipartisan bill that would garner 75 to 80 votes in the Senate, would be fiscally sound and provide the American people with the fixes they are asking for in the health care marketplace is easily achievable. Many of us are standing at the ready, and have been for months, to step forward and pass meaningful health care reform that truly would help American families and people. I believe we can do it.

To date, we have not been enabled by an unfilling determination by a few to pursue a nearly Socialist agenda. I would ask my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who do not believe in the Europeanization of America, who believe in doing truly bipartisan work here in the Senate, to step forward, vote against advancing this bill and work with those of us on this side of the aisle who are committed to making a difference for health care and provide a form bill they can be proud to support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, it is truly our honor to be here on this historic evening and speak in support of the bill which we will vote on early tomorrow morning, Christmas Eve morning. It is an honor because anyone who looks at this country knows the problems we have, and that two problems caused by the health care system are at the top of the list. One represents a more conservative point of view and one represents a more liberal point of view. But I am proud to say the bill we will pass tomorrow morning, Christmas Eve morning, the bill which we will vote on early tomorrow morning, God willing, I hope, will pass.

The more conservative issue is controlling costs. The health care system costs this country a whole lot of money. By and large, we get good health care—not everybody but most people are happy with what they get. It is a competitive globally. We have seen some improvement in the early stages. We do that. We have reduced a lot of fraud, waste, and abuse. The more conservative issue is competition. We do provide competition in the exchanges. We do put some limits on the insurance companies with the medical loss ratio provisions that Senator ROCKEFELLER, Senator FRANKEN, and Senator NELSON helped craft. If we could have had a public option, it would have created more competition. That is one of my great regrets, that we don’t. I worked hard for it, but we don’t. Nonetheless, we still get some limitation on insurance companies and create more competition.

The fourth is the hardest: fee for service. The fee-for-service system is what drives up the costs. This bill, more than any other provision ever passed in America, begins to grapple with that most difficult issue. You do those four things, and you will bring costs down.

It is no wonder that CBO has said that in the first 10 years, we save $1.27 trillion, even though we are covering 31 million more people, and in the second decade, we will save $1.3 trillion. I forget the number. I think it is $1.3 trillion. We are doing whatever becomes President in 2020 a huge favor because with the cost-control provisions in this bill, should they become law, we will get control on costs. It will take a while, but it will do the job. On the other side, we don’t cover everybody, but 94 percent of all people will be covered, so it is an amazing feat to both cover many more people and cut the costs, and that is what this bill does.

I wish to say, for my home State of New York, there are lots of good things in this bill. We have 800,000 seniors who would be cut from Medicare who will not be because of provisions we were able to get in the Finance Committee. Graduate medical education, intermediate medical education—a lifeline for jobs in New York because training doctors is probably our second biggest industry in New York City—is not cut even though it was proposed to be cut. Money for neighborhood national health services and community health centers will provide physicians in inner cities and in rural areas where they don’t have health care. They will get really good health care.

This bill is far from perfect. Had I written it, I would have written it a different way. Had Senator CANTWELL or Senator CASEY or Senator KASICH written it, they would have written it differently from me. But if every one of us in this Senate insisted that the bill had to be written exactly our way, we would have 100 bills, each with 1 vote, and no progress. So great progress has been made, and this is a profound red line.

There are many people I wish to thank.

My staff—I do want to mention Meghan Taira, Katie Beirne, and all of the others who worked so hard; Jeff Hamond, who worked so hard and so diligently on this bill.

I thank MAX BAUCUS. He soldiered on and on when things looked bleak and pursued his dream of a bipartisan bill, which would have been a better product. It wasn’t to be but not because of lack of his efforts.

Thanks go to Senator DODD and Senator HARKIN on the HELP Committee and my colleagues on the Finance Committee but at the top of the list is just one person, and I was proud to be one of his lieutenants on this, and that is HARRY REID. I was up close. What an amazing job that man did, modestly, without complaining, without looking to win but for him. He had a mission, a job: get us 60 votes on this very difficult, complicated proposal. And he did it. He will never get the credit he deserves because he is such a modest man, but I wanted to share that with my colleagues and with the country as I am sure others have done before.

So this bill is a very good bill on both sides of the ledger. It will reduce costs rather significantly and in a smart way, without hurting patient care. It will reduce costs for the whole system. It will reduce the fraud and the waste and the abuse and duplication. At the same time, it will cover many more people.

This is a very fine day for this country, this Senate, and Leader Reid. Tomorrow will be another day to vote for this piece of legislation, certainly one of the most important I have ever voted on in my 35 years as a legislator.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I am proud to be out on the floor tonight with my colleagues.

I thank the Senator from New York for his comments and his work in the Finance Committee. He literally did work night and day in that committee and then worked with Leader Reid on trying to get consensus within our caucus on this legislation. So I appreciate his strong, active support in making reform.

I, too, wish to add my congratulations tonight because we are here to talk about controlling health care costs and what we are going to do to help the American people. I too wish to thank my colleagues, Senator BAUCUS and Senator REID, for their active leadership, as well as Senator DODD and Senator HARKIN.

I add my thanks to the whole Finance Committee staff. I don’t think people realize they have worked from January until December, many weekends as well as during the week, many late nights as well as early mornings, and they deserve a lot of credit for the details behind this legislation and making sure the ts are dotted and the is are crossed.

I wish to thank my staff, all of my staff but in particular Mark Iozzi, who worked on this legislation, as did the rest of the Finance Committee members of the staff, for about the last four months. I was glad to send him off on a plane today to reach his family, and hopefully he will be watching the vote tomorrow morning by television. It should be a proud moment for him.

I also wish to add a particular thanks to President Obama. I wish to say to the President that he started this year with the dedication that this was going to be a year where we got health care reform. He stated that at the beginning of his Presidency and held steady to that during the very raucous debate that happened in the early months regarding who we would have the money to do health care reform. He remained committed as we went over the summer and many things happened at town meetings. He came back and was determined that we would get it. Even as we got legislation out of the Finance Committee and had to combine bills, remained active and intent about this legislation.

It reminds me of a saying my father used to make to me because he was a Navy man and always came up with nautical terms to kind of describe the direction in which he would want his children to go. The President’s actions on health care this year remind me of the saying “steady as she goes” because that is what the President has done for the last many months—steady as she goes so that we can get health care reform.

So I wish to thank my thanks and congratulations to him and to his administration and to the many members of that administration who were down here on the Hill, including Mr. Messina, who made many frequent visits, I think, we would forebode to talk about some of the details.

I am glad I am following my colleague from Idaho, from the Northwest, who spoke earlier, because I think it shows you can be from the same region of the country and have the very same interests but look at this legislation differently—not that I don’t share some of his concerns, and I am going to fight to make changes and add to the legislation as we move into conference and in the years after its implementation. I think the Senator has brought up some good points that we need to follow up on.

Controlling health care costs in general is what is driving us to take action tomorrow morning on Christmas Eve. We know we have already seen a 120 percent increase in insurance premiums for the last 10 years; that is, from 1999 to 2009, we have seen a 120 percent increase in insurance premiums and their premium costs. That is something the American people can’t afford. And when my colleague from Idaho talks about the increase we are going to see in the next 10 years, he is right. In health premiums are going to go up again. This debate is about what we are going to do to try to control those costs, whether this legislation we are discussing today will have an impact in reducing those costs so that maybe premiums are going to stay up another 120 percent in the next 10 years and make insurance even more unaffordable for the American people.

We know there are organizations that have done multiple studies. We know there is at least $700 billion in waste each year in our health care system. That is according to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. We know that is the kind of money that, if we were to get all of those savings, every five health care dollars today. The more expensive Medicare is, the end result is the more expensive insurance is in general. So it is very important for us to reform the Medicare system, to have provider reform, which this legislation has, and to change the system.

Part of this is reforming Medicare and the cost of Medicare because Medicare dollars are the biggest health care dollars today. The more expensive Medicare is, the end result is the more expensive insurance is in general. So it is very important for us to reform the Medicare system, to have provider reform, which this legislation has, and to change the system.

But we also have to deal with the cost of the uninsured because we know that Americans right now who don’t have insurance and who go to the emergency room are adding something like $43 billion a year in premium costs. That is $1,000 for each family in their premium increases. I know we can do nothing and have these same costs on the backs of the American people or we can try to change the system. I look forward to this legislation, to improve the quality of care and access and to lower the costs for Americans. That is why one of the main reforms I fought for in this legislation was about paying for value, not for volume, that fee-for-service system that rewards physicians for how many procedures they do or how many patients they have seen a day but not for the value of the system. So I know that because of the change we have in this legislation, we are going to reward physicians, starting several years from now—something that has worked in my State and many States in the Pacific Northwest that are more efficient at lowering the costs by increasing efficiency and thereby rewarding those States with better Medicare payments.

What it actually means for individuals is that they are going to get shorter waits, they are going to get better access to doctors, they are going to get more coordinated care, and they are going to get better outcomes. Why? Because that is what we are going to incent in these reforms. That is the kind of system that is working in parts of the country that have done multiple studies. We know how much waste each year in our health care system. The more expensive Medicare is, the end result is the more health care dollars today. The more expensive Medicare is, the more expensive insurance is in general. We know that is the kind of money that, if we were to get all of those savings, every five health care dollars today. The more expensive Medicare is, the end result is the more expensive insurance is in general. So it is very important for us to reform the Medicare system, to have provider reform, which this legislation has, and to change the system.

But we also have to deal with the cost of the uninsured because we know that Americans right now who don’t have insurance and who go to the emergency room are adding something like $43 billion a year in premium costs. That is $1,000 for each family in their premium increases. I know we can do nothing and have these same costs on the backs of the American people or we can try to change the system. I look forward to this legislation, to improve the quality of care and access and to lower the costs for Americans. That is why one of the main reforms I fought for in this legislation was about paying for value, not for volume, that fee-for-service system that rewards physicians for how many procedures they do or how many patients they have seen a day but not for the value of the system. So I know that because of the change we have in this legislation, we are going to reward physicians, starting several years from now—something that has worked in my State and many States in the Pacific Northwest that are more efficient at lowering the costs by increasing efficiency and thereby rewarding those States with better Medicare payments.

What it actually means for individuals is that they are going to get shorter waits, they are going to get better access to doctors, they are going to get more coordinated care, and they are going to get better outcomes. Why? Because that is what we are going to incent in these reforms. That is the kind of system that is working in parts of the country that have done multiple studies. We know how much waste each year in our health care system. That is according to the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. We know that is the kind of money that, if we were to get all of those savings, every five health care dollars today. The more expensive Medicare is, the end result is the more expensive insurance is in general. So it is very important for us to reform the Medicare system, to have provider reform, which this legislation has, and to change the system.
State for that leadership and to thank those in my State who have performed the same way on efficiency to deliver this kind of health care reform. A second cost control of this legislation that I supported that I think will do well for many people in this country is in the area of long-term care reform.

Some people may know that my colleague, Senator HARKIN, was on the floor and was talking about long-term care in the insurance sector, but part of what we added in this bill is also to incent States to move off of nursing home care and on to community-based care.

Home care juxtaposed to nursing home care is 70 percent cheaper and better meets the needs of individuals. I say that because my State implemented this policy to focus on long-term, community-based care decades ago. The end result is that kind of care has been more cost-effective, less expensive, personalized care, and individuals do well for their communities. I do not know any senior in America who would choose to go to a nursing home over staying in their home or in their community. But they have had very little choice up until now on this legislation. They were able to do that because we continue to incentivize nursing home care.

There are some who need nursing home care because they need a higher level of delivery of care, and those people will stay in their facilities. But we will save a lot in our Federal budget, as we look at our Medicare and Medicaid budgets, for the future if we simply take this one action. This bill alone would be worth passing just for this one provision because of how much money it is going to save the Federal Government.

The Basic Health Plan. Many of my colleagues may have heard me talk about the Basic Health Plan as a basis for this legislation. It is a public-private mechanism that I think will be very important. It has been a plan that has worked effectively. No one has tried to emulate it in this country. Many people across the country may not understand the Basic Health Plan because they do not have something similar to the Basic Health Plan in their States.

Nearly 20 years ago, the Washington State Legislature passed the Basic Health Plan because it allowed States to negotiate for lower rates. Essentially, it is a public-private partnership. Some people call it a public option. We call it a public plan. I call it cost-effective health care delivery. It is cost-effective because we have proven for 20 years that we get 35 to 40 percent lower rates for individuals by grouping into this kind of plan and having the State negotiate the rates. We have been able to have that plan now for 20 years.

This provision of allowing States to do something similar to the Basic Health Plan is a provision we added in the Finance Committee that now will allow every State in America to take money they would get instead for tax credits and use that money in the delivery of negotiated rates for their States. This will allow 70 percent of the uninsured to have full coverage. What does that mean from a cost-effective perspective? Let’s take an example. If this legislation is not passed and we have the current system in America, an individual in 2016 trying to get access to the individual market would have to pay over $5,850, and the individual would pay everything. The government would be paying nothing; that is, if this bill does not pass. That is what would happen.

Let’s look at what would happen if, in fact, this bill does pass. You will have the option of going into the exchange. The estimates are by CBO that you will be able to reduce from where we normally would be, about 11 percent, the cost of health care. In that exchange, an individual who would be covered at 200 percent of poverty would end up paying $1,200, and the Federal Government would end up paying $4,000. Already somebody is coming out ahead. That means that $3,700 sounds like a better deal than me being able to afford this current rate. That would be $5,850. It means I would be uninsured.

The Basic Health Plan has been in operation for 20 years, driving down costs through negotiated rates, as I said, by 35 and 40 percent, and it is a far different picture for the individual. In our State, the individual only pays $400–$500 versus $1,200. Look at the government. The government rate adds to that. $3,700, but it is cheaper. Why? Because the State has negotiated with insurers and driven down the cost. That is what is missing in the exchange.

While some of my colleagues, I know, think the exchange is going to deliver great clout through the Office of Personnel Management, I hope they are right. I am anxious to see the results of that. But I am unapologetic about the fact that the States have been such a leader in this country. Washington has delivered these kinds of savings through negotiated rates and that many States in our country have been the most cost-effective tools for delivering new and efficient health care models, while we at the Federal level still struggle to try to drive those policies.

I know this legislation has cost controls. I know my colleague from Idaho is very concerned about this, and he is right to be concerned. We will be judged by how much we are going to drive down the costs. But the American people should understand that rates are going to go up another 120 percent in the next 10 years if we do nothing. So this legislation is about bending the cost curve. It is great looking at the projected growth, looking at general inflation, and trying to drive health care costs somewhere below what they would be on an annual basis. That is our objective. We are going to have a challenge in monitoring this legislation, but that is why I am going to fight and cheerlead for the Basic Health Plan and hope that every State in the country takes the option of delivering health care through that kind of negotiated public plan that will allow them to drive down insurance costs.

I hope we can expand the Basic Health Plan in concert with an even more robust plan that would cover more people. It does not make sense to me to continue to subsidize expensive insurance by giving Federal tax credits when I know the bill to the Federal Government and to the individual taxpayer can be cheaper by implementing negotiated rates.

While we have not been able to fully implement that at the Federal level, let’s not hold States back. Let States do what they have done best for the last several decades; that is, innovate—innovate more quickly, more effectively, not without a Federal partnership but in a partnership with the Federal Government and in a partnership with a public-private mechanism that I think has been cost-effective for the last 20 years.

Tomorrow, I will be voting in support of this legislation because I believe in the innovation this legislation enables. I know when we passed the Basic Health Plan in the mid-eighties people said the same thing. There were concerns about whether we were going to be able to implement the cost-effectiveness. In fact, at that time, it was said that some stakeholders believed it would be an entitlement. Others saw it as essentially a cost-containment measure that would reduce uncompensated care. Some others thought it would demonstrate the viability of government-subsidized health care. Advocates wanted to implement something quickly so they could develop constituencies.

All these things are similar arguments to what we are hearing today and what this debate has been about. But we have put a plan in place that hundreds of thousands of Washingtonians got more affordable health care. It has been a plan that has worked effectively. No one has tried to dismantle the program from a political perspective. I think working together with the Federal Government we can show more cost containment for the American public.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I ask to speak for 12 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I come to the floor in support of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. It is an honor to follow my friend from Washington, Senator CANTWELL, who has been such a leader on the Finance Committee in focusing on the very issues that is key for my State; that is, cost reform, delivery system reform, because for too long the people in cost-efficient States, such as Minnesota, Washington, and Wisconsin, have been seeing other States not quite offering that kind of quality care we would like to see all over the country.

I think it always shocks people. If you go to a hotel and you say you want to go to a room, usually if you spend more money you have a better view and you have a better view. That is not true with health care.

Time and again, we see studies across this country—academic, bipartisan studies—showing in fact, some of the highest quality health care comes with some of the lowest costs.

As the Senator from Washington talked about how we can save that $700 billion year that is wasted in our system, a lot of it comes not at the cost of care but actually at getting better care, because if you reduce unnecessary waste, if you stop having people running around to 20 different specialists who are giving them conflicting advice and not conferring and not knowing about the treatments they are taking, when you have those disorganized systems, they not only cost too much money for everyone, they also give worse care. That is why the Mayo model, an integrated care model with one primary care doctor working with a team of specialists is a model we would like to see all across this country.

We cannot simply keep pushing our problems to another day. Rising health care costs are unsustainable, busting the budget of families and businesses alike. If we do not act, these costs are going to break the backs of the American people.

This country spends $2.4 trillion on health care alone. That is 1 out of every $6 in the American economy. It is projected to be 20 percent of our whole economy in 2020 if we do not act. Despite spending 1½ times more per person on health care than any other country in the world, we all know there are many problems in our health care system.

Wages simply do not keep pace with premiums. Peoples’ wages have been stagnant or maybe gone up a little, gone down some or they lost their jobs, but health care costs continue to skyrocket.

I always tell the people in my State there are three numbers we need to remember—6, 12, and 24. Ten years ago, the average American family was spending 6% on their health care. Now they are spending $12,000, with many people spending a lot more. What will they be spending in 10 years if we do not act? Mr. President, $24,000, up to $36,000 a year on their health care premiums.

When I go around my State, I hear these stories all the time. Granite Gear, a little backpack company up in Two Harbors, MN, makes backpacks for our soldiers. They have done well. They built their business. The guy in charge of it said he would not have started that business if he knew then what he knows now; that is, for his family of four, a small little business in Two Harbors, MN, he is spending $24,000 a year on his health care.

I have heard from doctors at Gunner-son Lutheran in La Crescent, MN. They told me the story of how at one of their hospitals in their region they had three patients in a 1-month period come into the lower stomach and each problems. They had ruptured appendixes. Do you know what they said as to why it got to that point? For two of them, they worked at small businesses and they were afraid it was going to get them free forms for health care coverage for that little company. The third one could not afford the copays. They waited and waited and waited. They got a doctor and that doctor was the emergency room, some of the most expensive care in this country.

I heard from a mom in Bemidji, MN, who has a daughter named Micki. The mom’s name is Sheryl. She wrote me a letter. She said:

I just got off the phone with my daughter Micki. At first, I couldn’t understand her because she was sobbing so hard. Her husband had just been told by his boss that they wouldn’t be carrying health insurance on his employees, they were a small company and it was costing them $13,000 a month. For her, this is a matter of life and death. She has cystic fibrosis. Her medication costs can run anywhere from $7,000 to $13,000 a month. Because it is a preexisting condition, the insurance companies won’t touch her unless it is under a group plan like the one her husband just lost.

She went on to say in her letter:

You need to stand and be my voice, be Micki’s voice. Micki is a fighter but she can’t keep fighting a system that is so against her. Micki has already lived longer than any of her doctors expected. We need you to be her voice.

That is why this bill is so important.

The status quo is simply not sustainable, not for families, not for small businesses, businesses that are trying to compete internationally against other companies and countries that have more efficient health care systems.

Despite claims from my friends on the other side of the aisle, we have spent months debating this issue. The C-SPAN viewers know what I am talking about. If you look at the input the Republicans have had on this bill, you can see that over 160 amendments were accepted in the HELP Committee. Dozens of hearings and roundtable discussions were held in the Senate Finance Committee.

They have engaged across this country—so many people, badly—in a campaign of misinformation. I know a lot of people in Minnesota and across the country are left trying to wade through all the ads, misinformation, and scare tactics to find out what this bill is about. Well, this bill is not perfect, as so many of my colleagues have said. We will work to make changes forward. I would like to see more cost reform in this bill. But what we do with this bill is a beginning not an end. We work to reduce cost, we work to expand coverage and increase choice and competition for American consumers.

First, and very important to me and to my mother—who is 82 years old—this bill protects Medicare and our seniors. Medicare is one of the most valuable social programs our country has produced in the last half century. Yet it is also a program in dire need of reform if it is to survive on sound financial footing and continue to provide the fine medical care our seniors have come to expect.

By 2011, the first baby boomers will enter the Medicare system. Without action, if we sit and put our heads in the sand, it will go in the red by 2017. So think of people such as my mom—82 years old. She wants to live well into her 90s and beyond. Think of people who are 55 and who want to be on Medicare when they are 65. It is going to go in the red by 2017 if we don’t do something to make sure it is on strong financial footing.

With this bill, we start to do that. We extend Medicare solvency by 10 years. I am encouraged that my legislation can create a value index, which the Senator from Washington discussed, as part of the reforms that will enhance Medicare’s fee schedule. That was included in the Senate’s bill. This indexing will help reduce unnecessary procedures because those who produce more volume will also need to improve care or the increased volume will negatively impact fees. Doctors will have a financial incentive to maximize the quality and the value of their services instead of just the quantity.

My favorite story along these lines is not from Minnesota but from Geisinger, PA. They were trying to figure out: How do we best treat diabetes. We are not happy with the results. They realized with the routine cases, those were the people they wanted someone to see more often, to check in on them. So they had them assigned to nurses and the more difficult cases to the endocrinologists. The endocrinologists would review the nurses’ work and make sure there was proper followup if there had to be adjustments. At the end of year, they had much happier patients. The quality of care went way up, and they saved $200 per month per patient.

What does our system in America do now that the Medicare system do? It punishes them for that good work. So that is what we are talking about, actually getting that higher quality. You can save money if you have the right incentives in place.

With this legislation, we also stop paying for care that doesn’t result in quality patient outcomes. Who wants to go into the hospital to be treated and get sick from something else during that hospitalization? When you have to go back again, that is called a hospital readmission. In fact, hospital readmissions cost Medicare $17.4 billion. A 2007 report by the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission found

December 23, 2009  CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S13863
Medicare paid an average of $7,200 per readmission that was likely preventable. This practice must stop. This isn’t good care for patients, and it is not a good investment for taxpayers.

The bill also establishes an independent Medicare Commission tasked with presenting Congress with comprehensive proposals to reduce health care costs and improve quality of care for Medicare benefits. The current Medicare payment policies are not working well for patients, doctors, and hospitals. We have to control costs and we have to get that high-quality care we see in Minnesota throughout the country.

In this bill, we also work to stop fraud and abuse. Law enforcement authorities estimate that Medicare fraud costs taxpayers more than $60 billion every year—$60 billion going to con men, $60 billion going to storefronts that say they are a doctor’s office, when all that is behind it is a bunch of fraudsters and criminals. We have to get those payments from the government to those providers, so we don’t have people ripping us off with an antiquated system of bad and false checks. With this change, we put a stop to criminals running phony businesses that deal Medicare checks from our seniors.

We are also working to help our seniors with the cost of their prescription drugs. Millions of Americans depend on prescription drugs to help them manage chronic disease or other illnesses. But drug prices continue to skyrocket. That is why I voted for reimportation, to allow these safe drugs to come in from places such as Canada. We are not afraid of getting our medications from Canada. We have a right to shop abroad to vacation and to fish in Minnesota, and we go to Canada to shop and to work and to fish. We don’t have a problem with their drugs. Sadly, that proposal did not pass the Senate, but I will continue to advocate for that.

What does this bill do so far? What it does is to help fill that doughnut hole, that point where seniors who had been getting help with paying for their prescription drugs stop getting that help. That doughnut hole is now filled. This provides relief for our small businesses. Right now, small businesses pay 20 percent more than large businesses for the cost of care. In a recent national survey, nearly three-quarters of small businesses that did not offer benefits cited high premiums as a reason. Beginning in 2011, with this legislation, small businesses will be eligible for tax credits worth up to 35 percent of their contribution to their employees’ health insurance plans. In 2014, these tax credits will even increase more.

This legislation, as we all know, also creates insurance exchanges known as small business health option programs—or SHOP programs—where small businesses can finally pool their numbers and do what big businesses do—negotiate for better rates for their insurance.

Beginning with the passage of this bill—and this is one of my favorite parts—kids can’t be denied coverage due to preexisting conditions. If your son or daughter gets sick, an insurance company can’t look at you and say: I am sorry your kid got sick, you don’t have any insurance. That is something we hear a lot about.

Look at the story I just read with Micki, the woman whose husband lost his insurance. She has cystic fibrosis, and she is not sure if she is going to be able to get insurance. This puts an end to that and for kids it does it the minute the bill gets signed into law.

Insurance companies will be barred from limiting the total benefits Americans can use over the course of a year or over their lifetime. Affordable insurance plans will also be made immediately available through a high-risk pool for Americans who have been uninsured and have been denied coverage because they have a pre-existing condition. With this payment, insurance companies immediately must fully cover regular checkups and tests that help prevent illness, such as mammograms or eye and foot exams for diabetics.

In addition, children would continue to be eligible for family coverage through the age of 26. I see my friend, the Senator from Pennsylvania, is here. Maybe he has four children who will soon be 26. I know many people are glad this bill has contained in it a provision that says you can keep your kids on your insurance until they are 26.

We know this bill isn’t perfect, no big piece of legislation ever is. There is still work that needs to be done in connection with unforeseen true negotiations that will take place. There are still things that need to be fixed. We know this is only the beginning of reform, not the end, but we must keep looking to the future. For too long, health care costs have been spiraling out of control. That is why we can’t afford to hold off any longer on reforming health care.

I am going to close by reading something Vicki Kennedy—Ted Kennedy’s widow—wrote for the Washington Post. This is what she wrote this weekend:

The bill before Congress will finally deliver reform health care will, first, not only be deficit neutral, but over the first 10 years of the bill it will save $132 billion—reduce the deficit $132 billion.

Something we haven’t talked enough about, we have already had a lot of important debates, but in terms of covering those who don’t have any coverage today, this bill will cover 31 million Americans. We know, for example, the Medicaid Program, which is more than 60 years old, covers 40 million Americans, and Medicare covers 45 million. So in this one piece of legislation, not after 10 or 20 or 30 years but once it is fully implemented over the next couple years, it will cover 31 million Americans. That will not only be beneficial to those individuals and their families, but I would argue it is good for our economy. They will be more productive workers and our economy will be stronger because we covered those citizens.

The bill extends Medicare solvency. That is something we hear a lot about. We have heard a lot of discussion about Medicare but what about making sure it is solvent. Our bill does that.

Prescription drugs. A lot of families have benefited from our prescription drug program, but then they fall into a time period where they are paying the whole freight. It has been referred to as the “doughnut hole,” but that doesn’t capture the gravity of the problem for seniors and for our older citizen. When they fall into that so-called doughnut hole, they are in big trouble because they have to carry the... whole burden. They have to pay for those prescription drugs all by themselves. This bill addresses that, something that has gone unaddressed for a number of years.

The number of children in our country who will be covered by the Children’s Health Insurance Program has grown, thankfully. We will be growing from 7 million kids covered under the prior legislation to 14 million under the children’s health insurance. But a lot of those children who don’t have access to the Children’s Health Insurance Program might be caught in the preexisting condition problem. Their ability to have coverage will be limited because they have a preexisting condition. What our bill does is to say that upon passage of this bill, within months of the passage of this bill, in 2010, children will be fully protected in this sense: Any kind of act by an insurance company to deny them coverage because of a preexisting condition will be illegal in 2010.

We also, over a number of years, will make it illegal for an insurance company to deny someone coverage due to a preexisting condition for adults. For those who are discriminated against, even before the bill is implemented, we provide a high-risk pool for them.

We protect consumers in other ways. I was holding a copy of the first half of the bill here. Sometimes bills get real complicated, and I know our colleagues on the other side have complained about the size of the bill. But to get it right, you have to put in a lot of detail. On page 78 of the bill, it is very clear. On page 78, the bill deals directly with the preexisting condition problem. Millions of Americans have been denied coverage over the last couple of years because of preexisting condition exclusions. Here is what it says, very simply, on page 78:

A group health plan and a health insurance issuer offering group or individual health insurance coverage may not impose any preexisting condition exclusion with respect to such a plan or coverage.

It is not long or complicated. It is one sentence—one sentence that, at long last, provides the kind of protection insurance companies have refused to provide to adults and children, and the protection for children goes into effect within a matter of months after enactment.

Let me make two more points, and then I wish to talk about an individual and her family. The Children’s Health Insurance Program, as I said, has been extended. But what happened in the earlier versions of the bill was the full funding was cut off in 2010. In the bill, we now have added to that. Now the children’s health insurance funding will be extended 2 more years. So at least through the end of September 2015, the Children’s Health Insurance Program is fully funded.

We also have done some things in this bill that didn’t get a lot of attention. When we were in the early stages of this bill way back in the summer, in the Health, Education, Labor, and Pension Committee, I and others included provisions in the bill long before it was amended in the original bill we put before our committee this summer.

For example, mandating prevention and screenings for children’s, 2, ensuring pediatric benefits as well as pediatric input into the formation of benefits; vision and oral health care for children, and, finally, in this section, strengthening the pediatric workforce. If we are going to give children the kind of expert help they have a right to expect and we have a right to expect for their care, we have got to make sure we have the workforce, the high-skilled work force, the doctors, who, in fact, pediatricians; so all kinds of benefits for our children and for our families.

But this isn’t just a debate about policy and the provisions of the bill. That is, obviously, part of what we are here to do. What we are here to do is meet the needs of Americans. I have met a number of them in Pennsylvania, and every Member here, whether they are for or against the bill, whether they are trying to kill the bill on the other side or whether they are trying to support and pass the bill on this side, could tell a story. Each of those Senators could tell a story about many families in their State.

One story is to remain an inspiration for me from one day, going way back in February when I received a letter. This woman in Pennsylvania who wrote to me remains an inspiration. Her name is Trisha Urban, from Berks County, PA, right near Reading and the eastern side of our State. She wrote this letter. I will quote major portions of the letter. She talked about herself and her husband; She said her husband had to quit his job for 1 year to complete an internship and so frustrated by what the insurance company was doing. Her pregnancy was unpaid and we could not afford COBRA. She goes on to say that on this exact day, that that day, that was the day that her baby was born and she found her husband dead in the driveway.

The chart depicts the headline from the Reading Eagle dated February of this year: “Tilden Township Woman Tends to Baby Born Hours After Her Husband’s Death.”

I will cite a few facts from the story: Just after noon, Thursday, Trisha A. Urban’s husband, Andrew, died. Less than nine hours later, she gave birth to their first child, Cora Catherine. Because of that tragedy and maybe only because of that tragedy I met Trisha Urban months after she wrote a letter to me, and I met her daughter. They came down to hear the President’s speech to a joint session of Congress. I held her daughter Cora. I probably never would have met that beautiful little girl and wonderful parents if it were not for this story.

I am not sure what I would do if I were in her case. I am not sure if I would have remained so saddened by it and so frustrated by what the insurance companies did to her or didn’t do for her. Anyone would understand that, if I or anyone else who suffers that tragedy would look within themselves and suffer alone with their family. Patricia Urban didn’t do that. She didn’t just tell us about the problems she had with the insurance company; she didn’t just tell us about the tragic death of her husband; she did more than that. She wrote to me.
For those who say, well, we don’t need to do anything about this health insurance problem, I would ask them to listen to Trisha Urban. She said at the end of her letter:

I am a working class American and do not have the money or the insight to legally fight the health insurance company. We had no life insurance. I will probably lose my home, my car, and everything we worked so hard to accumulate in our life will be gone in an instant.

But then she says this:

If my story is heard, if legislation can be changed to help other uninsured Americans in a similar situation, I am willing to pay the price of losing everything. I am asking you to share my story with others in Congress and I’m willing to speak on behalf of my husband so that his death will not be in vain.

So says Trisha Urban in this letter. She challenged me with that letter, or at least I took it as a kind of challenge I wanted to accept. I think she challenges all of us. If Trisha Urban, who lived through those problems with the health insurance company, denied coverage because of preexisting condition, dropped coverage, medical bills going through the roof, and then the ultimate tragedy, the death of her husband, if she can endure all that and still stand up and say, I am willing to pay the price of losing everything I need, I am going to do that to try to help pass a health care bill—if she can do that, the least we can do is to do what a lot of us have tried to do over many years which is to work on this, to debate it, and to fight hard to pass it. So tomorrow morning in the early hours of the morning, when it might still be dark out, it is my hope and prayer there will be a little light in that darkness in the early morning tomorrow when we pass this bill, and we can say that we did our best.

I know we are not done yet to get this bill out of the Senate. I know we are not done yet. We can at least say we did our best, that we tried as best we could to be responsive to, to answer the plea for help and the invocation of hope that Trisha Urban has in her letter.

I have remained ever inspired by her courage, by her willingness to speak up, and by her willingness to be a witness not just to what has been going wrong with our system and not just giving testimony about her husband’s death but the way Trisha Urban has been a witness to the hope and the promise of change that will come with this bill. I know tomorrow morning isn’t the end of the road. But tomorrow morning is at least the beginning of the end of a lot of these tragedies and a lot of these stories.

So on Trisha’s behalf as we say on behalf of so many others, we need to get this legislation passed tomorrow morning and to move forward in a positive new direction in terms of what happens to our system.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIVE AMERICAN APOLOGY

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I wish today to discuss the Native American apology resolution that was recently passed as part of the fiscal year 2010 Defense appropriations bill.

I believe that it is well known to most Members of this body that the original inhabitants of the lands that now constitute the United States, the aboriginal, indigenous, native people of America, occupied and exercised sovereignty over more than 550 million acres of land prior to the first European contact.

In the early days of our history, well before our Nation was formed, the native people fought alongside our soldiers in the Revolutionary War. The Indian tribes enabled the survival of General George Washington and his troops during the harsh winter at Valley Forge by providing food to the troops.

A few years later, as our Founding Fathers were engaged in the challenge of forming a new nation, they drew upon the democratic model of government that they learned from the Native Nations of the Iroquois Confederacy. There they found the well-institutionalized practice of the fundamental principles of freedom of speech and a system of governmental checks and balances provided through the separation of governmental powers.

In our early days as a nation, we entered into treaties with Native Americans pursuant to the provisions of the U.S. Constitution that recognize them as sovereigns. But later, we abandoned the path of peace and honor, often turned to war. Thousands lost their lives through these battles and horrific massacres. The native population everywhere was decimated.

Forced marches to relocate the native people from their traditional homelands to areas west of the Mississippi in the dead of winter cost thousands of more lives. Few Americans know that there was not one Trail of Tears—but many.

The treaties that had signaled a return to a course of honorable dealings with the native people had the United States not proceeded to break provisions in every single one of the treaties that were ratified by the United States Senate.

Amazingly, notwithstanding these appalling deeds, the native people of the United States have always been and continue to be staunchly patriotic and loyal to this country. They have volunteered to serve in the defense of our Nation in every military action and war in which we have been engaged and on a per capita basis, more Native Americans have put themselves in harm’s way and given their lives to protect the United States than any other ethnic group of Americans. They have made the greatest sacrifice, but their contributions do not end there.

We know that the native people of the United States have made significant contributions to our society in every walk of life, in every profession, in medicine and agriculture and as stewards of the lands and resources we all hold dear. There have been great men and women who have led their native nations out of war, poverty, and despair. Throughout the generations, they have shown us the true meaning of courage in the face of the greatest odds, and the quiet strength to persevere.

This provision signifies a new day, brings a message of hope, and provides a foundation for the future.

Mr. President, I would like to thank Senator Brownback for his leadership on this measure.

LEGISLATIVE WORK OF COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, this has been an extraordinary year in the history of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. Thanks to the members and their work through 87 hearings and 33 business meetings this year we have been productive. Here are some of the legislative highlights:

We have considered and reported to the Senate several important legislative initiatives. We successfully considered and reported to the Senate the Fraud Enforcement and Recovery Act that President Obama signed into law in May. We reported the important Patent Reform Act, which can help our economic recovery and lead to additional American jobs. We reported significant cyber security legislation, including the Personal Data Privacy and Security Act.

We also reported the Improving Assistance to Domestic Violence Victims Act; Public Corruption Prosecution Improvements Act; the Crime Victims Fund Preservation Act; and the Performance Rights Act. We reported the Railroad Antitrust Enforcement Act; the Terrorist Safehäuser Act; and the Preserve Access to Affordable Generics Act, to end anticompetitive pay-for-delay schemes in the drug industry.

Mindful of the end of the year deadline, we worked hard to report with bipartisan support the USA PATRIOT Act Sunset Extension Act and the Satellite Television Modernization Act.

December 23, 2009
We reported the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Reauthorization Act just last week. And after many working sessions, we were finally able to report the historic Free Flow of Information Act to establish a qualified privilege for legal professionals on their confidential sources and the public's right to know.

Through the course of the year Senators on this Committee contributed to enactment of the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay Act, Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act, the Fraud Enforcement and Recovery Act, the OPEN FOIA Act, the Human Rights Enforcement Act, the Webcasters Settlement Act, an extension of the EB-5 program for three years, an end to the "widow penalty" in immigration law, the Judicial Survivors Protection Act, the Reserve Officers Modernization Act, the charter for the Military Officers Association of America, as well as legislation to keep the Patent Office on a financial footing, and legislation to clarify statutory time periods for litigation. We worked to include in the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act provisions to provide needed funding to state and local law enforcement and to protect privacy as we improve healthcare information technology.

Within the health insurance reform legislation being passed by the Senate this week are provisions we worked on to improve our anti-fraud efforts and to provide recourse for those harmed by health services.

I thank the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee for their contributions and cooperation.

JUDICIAL AND EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I have been calling on the Republican leadership to end the delays and obstruction of judicial nominations and join with us to make progress in filling some of the many vacancies on Federal circuit and district courts. I have done so repeatedly for most of the year, and several times over this last month. Regrettably, as we head into the winter recess and the end of the first session of the 111th Congress, Republican obstruction is setting a new low for the Senate in our consideration of judicial nominations.

The Senate has been allowed to confirm only one judicial nominee all month. It is now December 23. By this date in President Bush's first year in office, the Senate with a Democratic majority confirmed 10 nominations just in December to reach a total of 28 confirmed Federal circuit and district court nominees in the first session of the 107th Congress. That is 10 times as many nominations as the Senate has considered and confirmed this month. During the first year of President Bush's tumultuous administration, with the Senate majority changing in the middle of the year and Democrats then in the majority, we worked from July through December to confirm 28 judicial nominees. That was, of course, a total of 28 in the last 6 months of that year, and 100 in the 17 months I served as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee during President Bush's first term.

By contrast, thus far this month, with 12 judicial nominees now available to the Senate for final consideration, Senate Republicans have only allowed a vote on Judge Jacqueline Nguyen to the Central District of California. She was confirmed unanimously after being defeated earlier this year. They have even refused to consider the nomination of Beverly Martin of Georgia to the Eleventh Circuit, despite strong support from her home state Senators, both Republicans. Instead of acting on her nomination, which has been awaiting final action since September 11, and that of Judge Greenaway of New Jersey, who has been nominated to the Third Circuit and was reported on October 1, they insist on delaying debate on her nomination for at least a month. I hope the Senate will turn to that nomination when the Senate returns in late January.

The refusal by the Republican minority to enter into customary time agreements to consider non-controversial nominees has led us to fall well short of the confirmations achieved in the first years of other Presidents. On the eve of the end of the session, the Senate has confirmed little more than one-third as many as President Obama's circuit nominees as President Eisenhower, who only made nine nominations in 1953. Of course, all nine were confirmed. The total this year stands to be the fewest confirmed in any President's first year in more than a century. Judge James Wynn and Judge Alphonso D. Bell Jr. of the Eleventh Circuit, despite strong support from Senator Nelson of Florida, have been confirmed. Senator Nelson is the most senior Republican in the U.S. Senate, my respected friend from Indiana, Senator Lugar. Other examples are the nominees to vacancies in Alabama supported by Senators Sessions and Shelby, in South Dakota supported by Senator Thune, and in Florida, supported by Senators Martinez and Lamieux.

Still others are the President's nominations to the Eleventh Circuit from Georgia, supported by Senators Isakson and Chambliss, which the Senate will not consider until the end of January because of Republican objection, and his nomination to the Sixth Circuit from Tennessee, supported by Senator Alexander.

Last week we held a confirmation hearing for two more well-respected and well-qualified nominees that were the result of President Obama's effort to reach out and consult with home state Senators from both sides of the aisle in a bipartisan manner to assemble the most non-partisan, well-qualified, and well-qualified nominees that were the result of President Obama's effort to reach out and consult with home state Senators from both sides of the aisle in a bipartisan manner to assemble the most non-partisan nominees to the Senate. Both are from North Carolina. Senator Burr and Senator Hagan worked with each other and with the White House on these nominations. I thank them both for their testimony before the committee last week in strong support of these nominees.

These nominations are just the most recent examples of this President reaching out to home State Senators from both parties to consult before making nominations. Just as I worked... last year to end a decade-long impasse on the Sixth Circuit with the confirmation of Judge Helene White and Ray Kethledge of Michigan. I will work to see that these nominations from North Carolina are considered fairly and confirmed quickly. With the help of the senior Senator from North Carolina, a Republican, and the determined efforts of Senator HAGAN, a Democrat, North Carolina will finally have the representation on the Fourth Circuit that it deserves.

Instead of praising the President for consulting with Republican Senators, the Republican leadership has doubled back on what they demanded when a Republican was in the White House. No more do they talk about each nominee being entitled to an up-or-down vote. That position is abandoned and forgotten. Instead, they now seek to filibuster and delay judicial nominations. They have also walked back from their position at the start of this Congress, when Republicans seduced their nominee on which home state Senators were not consulted. We saw with Judge Hamilton that they filibustered a nominee supported by Senator LUGAR.

When President Bush worked with Senators across the aisle, I praised him and expedited consideration of his nominees. When President Obama reaches across the aisle, the Senate Republican leadership delays and obstructs his qualified nominees. It is clear that the Republican leadership has returned to their practices in the 1990s, which resulted in more than doubling circuit court vacancies, and led to the pocket filibuster of more than 60 of President Clinton’s nominees. The crisis they created eventually led even to public criticism of their actions by Chief Justice Rehnquist during those years.

The Republican obstruction and delay in considering well-qualified non-controversial nominees comes at a tremendous cost to the ability of our Federal courts to provide justice for all Americans. We have seen a tremendous spike in judicial vacancies. Although there have been nearly 110 judicial vacancies this year on our Federal circuit and district courts around the country, only 10 vacancies have been filled. That is wrong. The American people deserve better.

In the first 5 months of President Bush’s first year in office when I served as Senate Judiciary Committee chairman and with a Democratic Senate majority, we confirmed 28 judicial nominees. During 17 months of President Bush’s first 2 years in office, we confirmed 100 of his judicial nominees. Although two Republicans chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee and Senate Republicans held the Senate majority for more than half of President Bush’s time in office, more judges nominated by President Bush were confirmed than supported by the Senate Democratic majority and when I served as Senate Judiciary Committee chairman. During President Bush’s last year in office, we had reduced judicial vacancies to as low as 34, even though it was a Presidential election year. When President Bush left office, we had reduced vacancies in 9 of the 13 circuits since President Clinton left office.

As the Republicans in control today, judicial vacancies have spiked and are being left unfilled. We will start 2010 with the highest number of vacancies on article III courts since 1994, when the vacancies created by the last comprehensive judicial authorization bill were still being filled. While it has been nearly 20 years since we enacted a Federal judgeship bill, judicial vacancies are nearing record levels, with 97 current vacancies and another 23 already announced. If we had proceeded on the judgeship bill recommended by the Judicial Conference to address the growing burden on our Federal judiciary, as we did in 1984 and 1990, in order to provide the resources the courts need, current vacancies would not be a crisis.

The true measure of how far behind we have fallen. I know we can do better. Justice should not be delayed or denied to any American because of overburdened courts and the lack of Federal judges.

When again, Republicans minority to allow Senate action on the 12 judicial nominees on the Senate Executive Calendar before the end of the session. We have now wasted weeks having to seek time agreements in order to consider those that were reported by the Judiciary Committee unanimously and confirmed unanimously by the Senate when finally allowed to be considered. The 12 judicial nominees are Beverly Martin of Georgia, nominated to the Eleventh Circuit; Joseph Greenaway of New Jersey, nominated to the Third Circuit; Edward Chen, nominated to the District Court for the Northern District of California; Dolly Gee, nominated to the District Court for the Central District of California; Barbara Keenan of Virginia, nominated to the Fourth Circuit; Jane Stranch of Tennessee, nominated to the Sixth Circuit; Thomas Vanaskie of Pennsylvania, nominated to the Third Circuit; Louis Butler, nominated to the District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin; Denny Chin of New York, nominated to the Second Circuit; Rosanna Malouf Peterson, nominated to the District Court for the Eastern District of Washington; and William Conley, nominated to the District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin.

At the end of the Senate’s 2001 session, only four judicial nominations were left on the Senate Executive Calendar, all of which were confirmed soon after the Senate returned in 2002. At the end of the first session of Congress during President Clinton’s first term, just one judicial nominee was left on the Senate Executive Calendar. At the end of the President George H.W. Bush’s first year in office, a Democratic Senate majority left just two judicial nominations pending on the Senate Executive Calendar. At the end of the first year of President Reagan’s first term—a year in which the Senate confirmed 41 of his Federal circuit and district court nominees—not a single judicial nomination was left on the Senate Executive Calendar.

In stark contrast, there are now 12 judicial nominees on the Senate Executive Calendar, and unless there is a burst of cooperation from Republicans, they will remain on the calendar awaiting Senate consideration beyond the end of this session and into next year. That is a significant change from our history and tradition of confirming judicial nominations that have been reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee by the end of a session.

The record of obstruction of the Senate Republicans is just as disappointing when we consider the executive nominations that have been reported by the Judiciary Committee. There are currently an incredible 20 executive nominations that have been reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary Committee pending on the Senate Executive Calendar, including nominations for Assistant Attorneys General to run three of the 11 divisions at the Department of Justice. Each of these nominations has been pending 4 months or longer. An editorial in today’s Washington Post entitled “Nominies in Limbo” and subtitled “The Senate should do its job before taking a vacation” describes the Republican obstruction of the nomination of Dawn Johnson to head the Office of Legal Counsel, which has been stalled on the Senate Executive Calendar since March, as “[p]erhaps the greatest nominations travesty.” The editorial concludes: “[T]he president should be given deference in choosing executive-branch officials who share his views. Ms. Johnson is highly qualified and should be confirmed. At the very least, senators should have the decency to give her an up-or-down vote.”

Senate Democrats praised President Bush’s first nominations for these same posts quite differently than Senate Republicans are now treating President Obama’s nominees. We promptly reported the President’s nominees to head the Office of Legal Counsel, the Office of Legal Policy, and the Tax Division, and they each received Senate consideration in a matter of days or weeks after they were reported by the committee. We have heard no explanation for the five months of Republican obstruction of the nomination of Chris Schroeder to head the Office of Legal Policy after his nomination was reported by the committee in June without dissent. The Washington Post editorial rightly calls for Mr. Schroeder’s confirmation as well as for the confirmation of the long-pending nomination of Mary Smith to run the Tax Division.

As with the judicial nominations, the Republicans have employed new standards of demanding a supermajority and
THE TORTURE VICTIMS PROTECTION ACT

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the U.S. Supreme Court recently granted certiorari in a case involving the Torture Victim Protection Act of 1991, TVPA, a law I supported from the earliest days following its introduction by Senator Specter and I worked for years to see this historic human rights bill become law in 1991. Yet today I am concerned that the TVPA’s crucial role in protecting human rights may be weakened or even rendered meaningless by the Supreme Court case, Samantar v. Yousuf, which may decide the fate of this landmark law.

The TVPA provides a Federal cause of action against any individual who subjects another to torture or extrajudicial killing. This cause of action is available where the individual acts under actual or apparent authority, or under color of law of any foreign nation. Congress passed the TVPA in response to widespread use of official torture and extrajudicial killing that took place around the world, despite the universal consensus condemning such practices. Congress recognized that neither federal nor international law was strong enough to curb such egregious human rights abuses. We enacted the TVPA to ensure accountability for those who commit atrocious violations of human rights.

The case currently before the Supreme Court, Samantar v. Yousuf, raises the question of whether the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, FSIA, allows an action filed under the TVPA to be brought against a former government official of a foreign country who is now living in the United States. The answer is clear in the TVPA and its legislative history. The answer is yes. Congress expressly intended the TVPA to apply against former government officials. In enacting the TVPA, Congress made it explicit that the FSIA would not apply to actions against former officials if they escaped from the country of abuse. Congress took this step because it believed that governments that had allowed torture to occur within their jurisdiction would not necessarily provide meaningful redress to victims. Furthermore, torture victims who escaped from the country of abuse would not eagerly return to that country to file suit. Congress designed the TVPA specifically to respond to that situation by opening U.S. courts to these cases and providing a civil cause of action here in the United States for torture committed abroad.

Second, by creating a Federal cause of action in our own courts, Congress ensured that torturers would no longer have a safe haven in the United States. The legislation served notice to individuals that their actions were anathema to American values and they would not find shelter from accountability here.

Congress explicitly drafted the TVPA to strengthen and expand the scope of action that victims of torture could take in our courts, but Congress was nonetheless conscious of the bill’s limits. The TVPA was not meant to over-ride traditional diplomatic immunities or the FSIA’s grant of immunity to foreign governments. The act struck a measured balance established in the well-considered judgment of Congress.

For example, Congress clearly intended the TVPA to extend to former officials of foreign countries if they choose to come to the United States after leaving their positions of authority. Congress also stated that the FSIA does not extend immunity to individuals. Claims that a suit brought against a former official would undermine the FSIA and endanger foreign relations are simply inaccurate. Congress properly weighed the foreign policy concerns when it passed the TVPA. The Supreme Court should not overrule the well-considered judgment of Congress.

DETERIORATING SITUATION IN NEPAL

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, over the years, both during and since the end of the monarchy in Nepal, I have urged the Nepali people to respect human rights and cooperate with civilian judicial authorities in investigations of its members who abuse human rights. I spoke on this subject a few days ago in relation to the horrific case of Maina Carrara, a 15-year-old Nepali girl who was tortured to death by Nepal Army officers who then sought to cover up the crime.

I have also, similarly, urged the Maoists to stop committing acts of violence and extortion against civilians, respect human rights, and work to improve the lives of the Nepali people through the political process. The fact that the Maoists laid down their arms and entered into a peace agreement gave the Nepali people the first chance in Nepal’s history to build a democratic government that is responsive to their needs.
It is therefore disheartening that the Maoists continue to engage in tactics that serve little purpose but to make the lives of the Nepali people, already difficult, even harder. They have just staged their latest general strike, which for the past 3 days crippled Nepal’s economy.

For 3 days, Nepal, already a poor country, neither imported nor exported goods through its land entry points, causing a significant loss of revenue. Tourism, one of Nepal’s most important sources of income for hotels, shops, transport, restaurants, and guide services, has been damaged. The garment industry, also among Nepal’s largest, was brought to a halt. And there is the risk that foreign companies will decide that Nepal is still too unstable, and look elsewhere to invest.

What possible good does this kind of protest do? It angers and hurts the very people whose interests the Maoists claim to serve. In fact, it hurts poor farmers, because they reintroduce the need for their children not do savings, and go hungry. And it can hardly make other political parties more likely to accede to the Maoists’ demands.

The latest news is that the Maoist leaders have threatened an indefinite national strike unless the government puts in place within a month a unity government headed by the Maoists. This kind of ultimatum, which has no place in a democracy, would be disturbing enough if it were not for the fact that the Maoists headed a coalition government last year after winning national elections, only to leave the government in May when it failed to replace the then army chief of staff. I also felt that Nepal needed a new army chief who was not tainted by past abuses, but for the Maoists to quit the government and then accuse the President of forcing them to do so when their demands were not met, was irresponsible. In fact, Nepal has a new army chief. Time will tell if he is the right person for the job.

As an observer of developments in Nepal, I have been encouraged by the positive steps the country has taken since the events that led to the end of the monarchy. But the desires that led to that courageous demonstration of popular will remain unfulfilled. The institutions of democracy are barely functioning and the political situation continues to deteriorate. Only 5 months remain until the deadline for drafting a new constitution, and growing distrust between the political parties threatens to derail the peace process. Indeed, the political parties have often seemed more concerned with promoting their own interests than with addressing the needs of the Nepali people. The army has yet to reform. Though its ex-combatant families need to be demobilized and trained for jobs in the civilian workplace. Unless the political parties work together to address these issues, the situation will go from bad to worse, and at some point the Nepali people may again take matters into their own hands.

In the meantime, the periodic economic shutdowns and acts of violence and intimidation perpetrated by the Young Communist League, cause one to question that the Maoist leaders understand or accept the responsibilities that are inherent in a democracy. Rather than orchestrating acts of collective punishment to try to force a result, the Maoists need to earn the public’s trust and respect. There is also a responsibility to exercise power in a manner that strengthens, not erodes, popular support. So far, the Maoists have failed to demonstrate a capacity for either.

The Communist Party of Nepal—Maoist—today remains a designated foreign terrorist organization under U.S. law. I am among those who would like to see that designation lifted, as I believe the U.S. could, through technical assistance and exchange programs and other assistance to the Thai military, demonstrate that they have abandoned those tactics and are accountable to the people. Organizing harmful strikes that serve no logical or legitimate purpose, encouraging acts of violence, refusing to punish its own members who committed crimes and making threats, are not consistent with a responsible political organization.

Mr. President, poverty and injustice have been a fact of life in Nepal for centuries. Three and a half years ago the Nepali people rose up against a corrupt, abusive monarchy and demanded something better. They are still waiting, but they will not wait forever. Like Nepal’s other political parties, the Maoists will be judged by what they deliver.

FATE OF HMONG REFUGEES

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to speak briefly about a worrisome humanitarian situation that is developing in Thailand, which could cause problems for our relations with the Thai military.

Thailand and the United States are longtime friends and allies, and our Armed Forces have developed a cooperative relationship. Many Thai military officers have been trained in the United States, and Thai soldiers have participated in joint U.S.-Thai training exercises such as Operation Golden West. I expect this relationship to continue. But I am very concerned, as I know are other Senators, that the Thai Government may be on the verge of deporting roughly 4,000 ethnic Hmong back to Laos where many fear persecution.

The history of generosity towards refugees from Burma, Laos, Cambodia and Vietnam. It is a history to be proud of. But the Thai Government, which insists that the Hmong are economic migrants who should be repatriated, has reportedly deployed additional troops to Petchabun province where most of the Hmong are in camps. There is a growing concern that the Thai military may expel the Hmong before the end of the year. There is also concern that a group of 158 Hmong in Nongkhai province, who have been screened and granted United Nations refugee status, may be sent back against their will. The United States and several countries have told the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and the Thai Government they are prepared to consider this group of refugees for resettlement. Potential resettlement countries should be given an opportunity to interview these individuals in Thailand.

It may be that some of the 4,000 Hmong are economic migrants. It is also likely that some are refugees who have a credible fear of persecution if they were returned to Laos. I am aware that many Hmong fought alongside the U.S. military during the war. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, working with Thai authorities, needs to determine who has a legitimate claim for asylum and who does not, in accordance with long-standing principles of refugee law and practice. No one with a valid claim should be returned to Laos except on a voluntary basis. The United States, and other countries, can help resettle those who do have valid claims but need access and the opportunity to consider relevant cases.

I mention this because I cannot overstate the consternation it would cause here if the Thai Government were to forcibly return the Hmong to Laos in violation of international practice and requirements. The image of Laotian refugees including many who the United Nations and the Thai Government itself have stated are in need of protection being rounded up by Thai soldiers and sent back against their will during the Christmas season, and the possible violence that could result, is very worrisome. On December 17 I joined other Senators in a letter to the Thai Prime Minister about this, and I urge the Thai Government to protect these individuals and allow them the opportunity to interview these individuals in Thailand before any efforts to deport them.

As chairman of the Department of State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee which funds international assistance programs, I have supported U.S. military training programs and other assistance to the Thai military. We share common interests and want to continue to work together. But we will be more likely to support assistance to China if Uighur refugees by Cambodian authorities last week, we expect better of the Thai Government. Should the Hmong be treated similarly we could badly damage the Thai military’s reputation, and force us to consider the risk of putting our military collaboration at risk.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record the December 17, 2009 letter to which I referred.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. ABHAY V. VIJAYAN.

Prime Minister, Kingdom of Thailand, Wisconsin Ave., N.W., Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Prime Minister, We are writing to express our concern regarding reports of a possible repatriation to Laos of Lao Hmong from the Huay Nam Khaob camp and Nong Kha detention center in Thailand. While we recognize that the Kingdom of Thailand is burdened by a large number of refugees it hosts on its territory, we encourage you to not take steps to repatriate any individuals to Laos at this time. Thailand is a strong ally of the United States and we look forward to working with your government to strengthen this important relationship.

Sincerely,

Russell D. Feigenblatt, United States Senator; Barbara Boxer, United States Senator; Sheldon Whitehouse, United States Senator; Richard G. Lugar, United States Senator; Patrick J. Leahy, United States Senator; Lisa Murkowski, United States Senator; Amy Klobuchar, United States Senator; Mark Begich, United States Senator; Al Franken, United States Senator.

TRIBUTE TO LEWIS K. BILLINGS

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, today I express my deep appreciation to a great Utahn and friend, Provo City Mayor Lewis K. Billings, whose tenure as mayor will soon come to an end. It has been my distinct pleasure to work with Mayor Billings over the past 12 years.

Nestled at the base of the Rocky Mountains, Provo was founded by rugged pioneers in 1849 and is one of the oldest cities in the West. Today, Provo is one of the largest cities in the State of Utah. Mayor Billings and his beautiful wife Patti are longtime residents of Provo and raised eight wonderful children there.

Mayor Billings was elected Provo City Mayor in November 1997, after completing 3 years as chief administrative officer and director of community and government relations for the city of Provo. He and I share many of the same conservative values and principles and his service as mayor is a strong reflection of his dedication to those ideals. Mayor Billings will long be remembered for focusing on effective public safety and law enforcement, fiscal responsibility, economic development and job creation, neighborhood and downtown revitalization, the arts, tourism and developing a base of military, other local, regional, and national public policy issues. During his tenure, Provo City has consistently received national recognition for low crime rates, high quality of life, and positive business development.

Mayor Billings has accomplished a great deal during his tenure as Mayor of Provo. His dedicated public service and determination to shape Provo into the wonderful city it is today will be remembered for years to come. I ask my colleagues to join me, Mayor Billings and the citizens of the great State of Utah in thanking Mayor Billings for his many years of dedicated service. We all appreciate his efforts and service, but none so more than me.

GUN OWNERS SUPPORT GUN SAFETY LAWS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the debate surrounding gun legislation is often an acrimonious one, creating the perception that Americans are hopelessly divided on this policy issue. After listening to the positions of the National Rifle Association, NRA, a person could conclude that progress toward a national consensus on sensible gun legislation is a long way off. This perception, however, is just that: merely a perception. In reality, Americans of all political stripes share much common ground when it comes to issues of gun safety, and I am hopeful that this consensus will produce tangible legislative results.

In a recent poll conducted by well-known pollster Frank Luntz, NRA members and non-NRA gun owners expressed strong support for a number of proposed gun safety laws. These gun-owning Americans did not see a contradiction between supporting legislative efforts to reduce gun violence and their right to bear arms. Specifically, 86 percent of non-NRA gun owners and 69 percent of NRA gun owners supported closing the ‘‘gun show loophole’’ by requiring all gun sellers at gun shows to conduct a Brady criminal background check on prospective purchasers. In addition, 86 percent of non-NRA gun owners and 62 percent of NRA members favored a proposed bill that would prevent individuals listed on a terrorist watch list from purchasing firearms. Seventy-four percent of non-NRA gun owners and 69 percent of NRA members also agreed with this statement: ‘‘the federal government should not restrict the police’s ability to access, use, and share data that helps them enforce federal, state, and local gun laws.’’

At first glance, these polling numbers may not seem very surprising. After all, these gun safety proposals are founded on common sense and are crafted to keep firearms out of the hands of criminals and terrorists. Unfortunately though, the NRA leadership continues to oppose these federal gun safety bills that, according to the recent poll, their own members support: the Gun Show Background Check Act, S. 843, which would close the ‘‘gun show loophole;’’ the Denying Firearms and Explosives to Dangerous Terrorists Act, S. 137, which would prevent individuals listed on a terrorist watch list from purchasing a gun; and the Pre-
SMALL BUSINESS LENDING ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2009

Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mr. President, as our Nation begins its economic recovery, our unemployment numbers still remain far too high. Too many Americans are unable to find work, which only slows the pace of our economic recovery. As part of my continuing effort to support tailored, fiscally responsible methods to getting our economy back on track, I am proud to discuss a bipartisan bill that I introduced this week with several of my Senate colleagues from both sides of the aisle.

The bill is the Small Business Lending Enhancement Act of 2009, which is cosponsored by Senator SCHUMER, Senator LieBERMAN, Senator SNOWE, Senator BOXER, Senator COLLINS, and Senator GILLIBRAND. If enacted, this legislation would immediately allow increased lending for small businesses to the tune of billions of dollars. It would do so in a fiscally responsible way, without calling on the Federal Government to spend a dime. And best of all, it could lead to large-scale job creation in my home State of Colorado and around the country. For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to join us in urging swift passage of this common-sense legislation.

Small businesses are the engine of our Nation’s economy. In the last 15 years, small businesses have generated more than half of all new jobs created in the United States, and they currently employ more than half of the American workforce.

However, small businesses continue to struggle accessing credit, as large banks have significantly cut back on Main Street lending. According to a recent Treasury Department report, the 22 banks that have received the most funding through the Troubled Asset Relief Program, TARP, cut their collective small business loan balances by $11.6 billion from April through October of this year.

America’s community banks, which by-and-large did not receive Federal bailout funds, are doing all they can to fill the Main Street credit vacuum created by these large financial institutions. While this legislation I have authored is aimed at helping credit unions ramp up their small business lending, I have also joined with many of my colleagues this year in support of a number of initiatives that will help community banks increase lending to small businesses.

The Small Business Lending Enhancement Act will further these efforts to free up credit for small business. Under current statute, credit unions are required to limit member business lending to 12.25 percent of the credit union’s total assets. This bill would raise that cap to 25 percent of total assets, and increase the minimum business loan balance from $50,000 to $250,000. These provisions would increase the amount that credit unions already offering business loans could provide to small businesses, while also encouraging more credit unions to enter the business loan market. Under current law, many credit unions find it difficult to start member business lending programs because the cost of meeting high regulatory and staffing requirements relative to the cap. Raising the member business lending cap would make it easier for credit unions to recover costs, and therefore would increase the number of credit unions able to start small business lending.

The Credit Union National Association estimates that these sensible reforms would increase small business lending by $10 billion within the first year of their enactment, including an increase of nearly $200 million in my home State of Colorado. This new access to credit would likely produce more than 100,000 new jobs nationwide within the first year of the bill’s enactment. That is the sort of pro-business, pro-jobs policy that we need.

Mr. President, these simple statutory changes would not increase Federal outlays one cent, but they would dramatically increase the amount of private capital available to small businesses. Credit unions can make payroll, buy inventory, and expand and innovate. Moreover, these proposed statutory changes are safe and fully supported by the National Credit Union Administration, the independent Federal regulator with oversight of our Nation’s credit unions. To further ensure the safety and soundness of credit unions, this bill requires the NCUs to submit a semiannual report to Congress on the status of credit union member business lending, including any recommendations for legislative changes. In sum, this is a responsibly drafted bill that could help spur much-needed economic growth and job production.

Mr. President, we have to do all we can to increase credit market access for small businesses in Colorado and throughout the country. I believe this legislation is an important part of that effort. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to quickly pass the Small Business Lending Enhancement Act, and allow our nation’s small businesses to again set our country on a path toward job growth and further prosperity.

TAX EXTENDERS

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, as the Senate moves forward toward ending the debate on health care reform and restoring the number of affordable housing units along the Gulf Coast. Tough economic conditions, however, have prevented many of these projects from moving forward at the pace necessary to meet the placed-in-service deadline of January 1, 2011.

Together this bipartisan group of Gulf Coast senators has been working to extend this deadline for two years, to allow 77 low income housing tax credits to be included in any tax extenders legislation. We write to request your support for extending the placed-in-service date for affordable housing developments in the Gulf Opportunity Zone.

As you know, GO Zone low income housing tax credits have been vital in our effort to restoring the number of affordable housing units along the Gulf Coast. As part of this effort, I have written requesting an extension of the placed-in-service provision of the GO Zone low-income housing tax credit, at least 77 low-income housing projects in the Gulf Coast are at risk of not being completed.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter I wrote requesting an extension of the placed-in-service provision of the GO Zone low-income housing tax credit be included in any tax extenders legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. Max BAUCUS, Chair, Senate Committee on Finance, Washington, DC.

Hon. Charles Grassley, Ranking Member, Senate Committee on Finance, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Baucus and Ranking Member Grassley: We write to request your support for extending the placed-in-service date for affordable housing developments in the Gulf Opportunity Zone.

As you know, GO Zone low income housing tax credits have been vital in our effort to restoring the number of affordable housing units along the Gulf Coast. Tough economic conditions, however, have prevented many of these projects from moving forward at the pace necessary to meet the placed-in-service deadline of January 1, 2011.

Together this bipartisan group of Gulf Coast senators has been working to extend this deadline for two years, to allow 77 low income housing projects in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama to move forward and creating more than 13,000 construction-related jobs. This legislation would not allocate any new credits—it would merely provide additional time to take full advantage of the credits that were issued in the aftermath of the 2005 hurricanes.

Extending the placed-in-service deadline is critical to improving the availability of affordable housing in the Gulf Coast.

FEMA estimates that the 2005 storms destroyed or heavily damaged 82,000 rental
So today, as always, I wish you all a safe return, and a very Merry Christmas.

AMERICAN HIKERS DETAINED BY IRAN

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise today to renew my appeal to the Government of Iran to immediately release the three American hikers—Shane Bauer, Sarah Shourd, and Josh Fattal—who were detained by Iranian authorities in July.

According to available information, the three young adults, who are all graduates of the University of California, Berkeley, inadvertently crossed an unmarked border into Iran while hiking in the Kurdish region of northern Iraq.

Shane, Sarah and Josh have now been held in semi-isolation for over 140 days without charge, access to legal representation, or information on the current status of their case and future proceedings. This is deeply troubling and incredibly difficult for their families.

I recently spoke to the Iranian Ambassador to the United Nations on behalf of the hikers and reiterated my call for their release. I also asked that they be able to call their families and continue to be visited by Swiss consular officials.

During this holiday season, Americans from all walks of life are celebrating and renewing ties of family, friendship, and good will.

The extended absence of these young Americans from their families is particularly painful during such a festive time. As such, I call upon the Iranian authorities to immediately release Shane, Sarah and Josh so that their families can welcome them home.

20TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE U.S. ARMY SPECIAL OPERATIONS COMMAND

Mrs. HAGAN. Mr. President, this month, the U.S. Army Special Operations Command, USASOC, celebrates 20 years of service to the Army and Nation. Having been at war for over one-third of that time, the men and women of USASOC continue to make great contributions worldwide with an operations tempo that has never been greater. USASOC remains committed to maintaining the world’s finest ground special operations force. Its personnel take quiet professional pride in executing each mission with excellence, honor and valor.

I am proud that USASOC’s headquarters are in North Carolina. USASOC Commander LTG John Mulholland has done a tremendous job in training, organizing, and Equipping Army Special Forces units, capable of conducting global Special Operations missions. Army Special Forces units perform a variety of missions, including special reconnaissance, psychological, civil affairs, unconventional warfare, foreign internal defense, direct action, counterterrorism, and counterinsurgency.

The principle units that make up today’s USASOC include the John F. Kennedy Special Warfare Center and School, U.S. Army Special Forces Command, 75th Ranger Regiment, 160th Special Operations Aviation Regiment, 3rd and 7th Special Forces Group, 4th Psychological Operations Group, 95th Civil Affairs Brigade and the 528th Sustainment Brigade.

Since its inception on December 1, 1989, the pace of USASOC’s operations has been extraordinary; operating around the world, often behind-the-scenes, in some of the most remote and hostile regions on the planet.

At more than 27,000 personnel, USASOC is only 5 percent of the U.S. Army. However, USASOC is the largest of the service components that make up Special Operations Command, USSOCOM, and provides approximately 70 percent of the special operations personnel in Central Command’s theater and approximately 63 percent of America’s total overseas military commitments. USASOC provides ready Army special operations forces to support the Geographic Combatant Commanders, GCC, the Theater Special Operations Commands, TSOC, and Ambassadors throughout the world.

Today the operations tempo for Army Special Operations has never been greater, and is unlikely to decrease in the near future. USASOC currently has soldiers deployed on 103 missions in 56 countries around the world, and is operating across the spectrum of operations.

Currently 222 of the Army’s 228 Continental United States-based Special Forces operational detachments “A”- Teams are Special Operations Forces worldwide, either deployed or preparing for deployment. USASOC’s ability to manage the high operations tempo is directly attributable to the caliber of its personnel. The range of skills within USASOC is embraced by a spectrum of Army unconventional units.

I would like to take this opportunity to highlight the great contributions of USASOC units currently in theater, particularly the 3rd and 7th Special Forces Groups in Afghanistan, the 95th Civil Affairs Brigade and the 4th Psychological Operations Group in Iraq and Afghanistan.

President Obama has stated in his agenda for defense, “We must build up our special operations forces, civil affairs, information operations and other units and capabilities.” The demand for special operations personnel, skills in training remains a priority. Faced with often desperate, unconventional enemies, our approaches for defeating them involve unwavering commitment combined with unique unconventional skills.

USASOC’s expertise ensures the Army’s special operations forces can execute the most lethal, highly complex and sensitive special operations, wage unconventional warfare, conduct high risk helicopter operations, or prosecute civil military and influence operations.

For those in today’s USAOC, the pace is fast, the challenges great, but morale and satisfaction, however, have not come without a sizable cost in lives lost. In the 8 years since the start of Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom, 244 of USAOC’s personnel have made the ultimate sacrifice. Their names are cast in bronze on a wall in USAOC’s Memorial Plaza at Fort Bragg, NC.

In closing, the performance and contributions of Army Special Operations Forces in the Central Command theater of operations and around the world have been nothing short of magnificent. Whether in Iraq and Afghanistan, the Philippines, Trans-Sahara Africa or wherever friends and partners find themselves challenged by the forces of disintegration, oppression and extremism, Army Special Operators from across the Command’s formations are unquestionably among America’s finest ground special operations force. The Command’s motto, “Without Equal”, captures the spirit of its personnel and their commitment to maintaining the world’s finest ground special operations force.

Jim Pitcock has served on my staff from the very first day of my tenure as a Member of the U.S. Senate. His knowledge of the State of Arkansas and government has guided some of my most important decisions and for that I will be forever grateful. His wise, steady counsel is always held in high esteem. Jim has been faithful and selfless in his service to the State of Arkansas, and his contributions will be sorely missed by me, my staff, and the many Arkansans who have had the great fortune of working with him.

Jim has served on my staff from the very first day of my tenure as a Member of the U.S. Senate. His knowledge of the State of Arkansas and government has guided some of my most important decisions and for that I will be forever grateful. His wise, steady counsel is always held in high esteem. Jim has been faithful and selfless in his service to the State of Arkansas, and his contributions will be sorely missed by me, my staff, and the many Arkansans who have had the great fortune of working with him.

Jim has served on my staff from the very first day of my tenure as a Member of the U.S. Senate. His knowledge of the State of Arkansas and government has guided some of my most important decisions and for that I will be forever grateful. His wise, steady counsel is always held in high esteem. Jim has been faithful and selfless in his service to the State of Arkansas, and his contributions will be sorely missed by me, my staff, and the many Arkansans who have had the great fortune of working with him.

Jim has served on my staff from the very first day of my tenure as a Member of the U.S. Senate. His knowledge of the State of Arkansas and government has guided some of my most important decisions and for that I will be forever grateful. His wise, steady counsel is always held in high esteem. Jim has been faithful and selfless in his service to the State of Arkansas, and his contributions will be sorely missed by me, my staff, and the many Arkansans who have had the great fortune of working with him.
This kind of collaborative effort by local groups can be the kind of national model other struggling rural communities should consider as they work to rebuild their infrastructure and economies. Cities across America are realizing that investing in outdoor recreation options like bikeways is an affordable way to significantly improve their quality of life and, in the process, improve their competitiveness to attract new businesses and jobs.

It is time to remember that our infrastructure must be focused on ways to bring more cars onto our already stressed roads. Fixing highways and bridges is critically important, but for better health, relaxation, and the economic benefits they can bring, bikeways can also be part of the solution to fix our infrastructure and help revitalize struggling communities back home.

RESPONSE TO SLATE ARTICLE
BY JACOB WEISBERG

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to address an article written by Jacob Weisberg for Slate magazine on December 12, 2009. This article is entitled, "Are Republicans Serious About Fixing No, and here's the proof." In this article, Mr. Weisberg unfairly and misleadingly takes aim at my position in the current health reform debate.

The author reports that I have criticized the Reid bill for creating an "indefensible new entitlement" and that it "expands the deficit, threatens Medicare, and does too little to restrain health care inflation." I don't dispute Mr. Weisberg attributing these criticisms to the Reid bill to me. But, Mr. Weisberg can't dispute these serious shortcomings of the Reid bill that I and other Members on this side of the aisle have been discussing on the Senate floor for the past weeks. In fact, I have written a bipartisan Congressional Budget Office, CBO, and the independent Department of Health and Human Services, HHS, Chief Actuary have confirmed that the Reid bill would not only establish this indefensible new entitlement, but also represent the largest expansion of government-run health care in history. But let me go through each criticism of the Reid bill that Mr. Weisberg has correctly reported.

The Reid bill will expand the deficit. Mr. Weisberg identifies the 10-year CBO score of the bill to be $848 billion, but that is comprised of 10 years of Medicare cuts and tax increases and only 6 years of outlays. So if he were intellectually honest, Mr. Weisberg would have used the cost of 10 years of outlays, which budget analysts assume to be closer to $2.5 trillion. But the use of budget gimmickry does not end there when supporters of the Reid bill claim that it is deficit neutral.

One of the biggest problems in Medicare that we have to address in Congress every year is the Medicare physician payment formula or the sustain-able growth rate, SGR. Comprehensively fixing the SGR costs well over $200 billion. Only providing a two-month temporary patch for the problem will result in a more than 20-percent drop in Medicare physician payments beginning in March of next year. To me, like other Members of Congress, health care reform includes fixing the SGR so that physicians can be assured of not facing drastic Medicare payment cuts year after year and beneficiaries can be assured of having access to physicians. But there is no SGR fix in the Reid bill. Do the math and you will see why. A comprehensive SGR fix of over $200 billion would wipe away the $132 billion in budgetary savings that the Reid bill is currently reported to have.

In fact, the Congressional Budget Office noted that the estimated cost of repealing the SGR and replacing it with a permanent freeze would be about the $207 billion once physician-administered drugs were removed from the calculation of the SGR formula. That was done in the physician rule that CMS finalized on October 30, 2009. However, according to CBO, the removal of those drugs from the SGR formula would not affect spending for physician services, as well as federal spending under TRICARE by $78 billion over the 2010-2019 period. The net impact on the budget would be close to $207 billion over 10 years, none of which is reflected in the Reid bill.

And let's take a look at what is in the bill. I certainly hope Mr. Weisberg did when he wrote his article. A good portion of the budgetary savings in the Reid bill is from the CLASS Act. This program apparently produces budgetary savings during the first 10 years, but only because no benefits pay out for the first 5 years. This makes the revenues outpace the program's outlays. But CBO has stated that outlays will exceed revenues from the first 10 years. This means that the CLASS act will result in deficit spending over the long run. In fact, the chairman of the Budget Committee, a Democrat, called the CLASS Act a massive government Ponzi scheme. So this casts serious doubt on those who tout that the Reid bill is deficit neutral or saves money.

The Reid bill also threatens Medicare. I don't think Mr. Weisberg can argue that close to $2 trillion in Medicare will be cut. No, and here's the proof. The Reid bill jeopardizes beneficiary access to care. Even the White House's own Chief Actuary confirmed that the Reid bill jeopardizes beneficiary access to care. He raised concerns in particular about two categories of these Medicare cuts. First, the Chief Actuary warned about the permanent productivity adjustments to annual payment updates. Under the Reid bill, these productivity adjustments automatically cut annual Medicare payment updates based on productivity measures of the overall economy. In his analysis of these provisions, Medicare's own Chief Actuary stated, "It is doubtful that many could improve their own productivity to the degree achieved by the economy at large," and that they "are not aware of any empirical evidence demonstrating the medical community's ability to achieve productivity improvements equal to those of the overall economy." In fact, the Chief Actuary's conclusion is that it would be difficult for providers to even remain profitable over time as Medicare payments fail to keep up with the costs of caring for beneficiaries. Ultimately, the Chief Actuary's conclusion is that providers who rely on Medicare might end their participation in Medicare, "possibly jeopardizing access to care for beneficiaries."

The Chief Actuary even has numbers to back up these statements. His office ran simulations of the effects of these drastic and permanent cuts. And based on these simulations, the Chief Actuary found that during the first 10 years, 20 percent of Medicare Part A providers would become unprofitable as a result of the productivity adjustments. That's on hospitals, nursing homes and hospices. It is for this reason that the Chief Actuary found, "reductions in payment updates based on economy-wide productivity gains, are unlikely to be sustainable on a permanent annual basis."

The second category of Medicare cuts that the Chief Actuary raised concerns about would be imposed by the new Independent Payment Advisory Board created in the Reid bill. This is the new body of unelected officials that would have broad authority to make even further cuts in Medicare. These additional cuts in Medicare would be driven by arbitrary cost growth targets. This board would have the authority to impose further automatic Medicare cuts even absent any Congressional action. The Chief Actuary gave a reality check to this proposal. He showed how tall an order the Reid bill's target for health care cost growth is according to the HHS Chief Actuary, limiting cost growth to a level below medical price inflation "would represent an exceedingly difficult challenge." He pointed out in this analysis that Medicare cost growth was below this target in only 4 of the last 25 years.

The HHS Chief Actuary also pointed out that the backroom deals that carved out certain types of providers would complicate this board's efforts to make Medicare cuts. He asked, "will any Medicare cost savings mandated by this board's cuts at the expenses of doctors, seniors enrolled in Medicare Advantage plans and seniors who will pay higher premiums for their Medicare drug coverage. If we surveyed the nation's senators and asked them one question, I would say that raising their premiums for Medicare drug coverage or limiting preventive benefits in Medicare Advantage is what they would call health care reform.

And this board is guaranteed to have to impose these additional Medicare cuts. According to the Chief Actuary’s analysis of the Medicare cuts in the Reid bill with the Medicare cuts already in the Reid bill are “quite substantial” they “would not be sufficient to meet the growth rate targets.” So this means the board will be required by law to impose even more Medicare cuts in addition to the massive cuts already in the Reid bill. And this will make it even harder for our seniors to find providers who will treat them.

Not only does the Reid bill “[do] too little to restrain health care inflation,” it actually increases health care inflation. According to the HHS Chief Actuary, the Reid bill would bend the health care cost curve the wrong way. Over the next 10 years, the Administration’s own Actuary stated that “total national health expenditures under this bill would increase by an estimated total of $234 billion.” As a result of that increase, health care would then be projected to grow from 17 percent to 20.9 percent of the gross domestic product in 2019. So using the Reid bill to curb health care cost growth would be like putting out a fire with gasoline.

The Chief Actuary also found that a good portion of the increase in national health expenditures would be caused by the so-called fees in this bill on medical devices, on prescription drugs and on health insurance premiums. He stated that these “fees would be passed through to health consumers in the form of higher drug and device prices and higher insurance premiums.” This would result in, “an associated increase of approximately 11 billion dollars per year in overall national health expenditures.”

Higher premiums from the Reid bill are no trifling matter. In fact, one estimate concluded that the Senate bill would increase premiums by about 50 percent on average for individuals without employer-based coverage, and more than 20 percent for small businesses. And even the Congressional Budget Office’s more conservative analysis predicts that premiums will increase 10 to 13 percent for 14 million Americans as a result of the Reid bill.

But that is where my agreement with Mr. Weisberg ends. He then proceeds to lob several troubling and incorrect claims at me in his attempt to portray me as “incoherent.”

Mr. Weisberg distorts what I said in response to a constituent’s question at a town hall meeting in Iowa last August when he accuses me of playing the “age card.” This is what Mr. Weisberg claims that I said: “There is some fear, because in the House bill, there is counseling at the end of life. And from that standpoint, you have every right to fear.”

But this is what was actually said at that meeting:

Question from Iowa: “Thank you, Senator Grassley, for coming. The Democrats tell us all the time that it’s a right of every American to have health care. Yet it seems this human right is only given to very few people or to very few groups like the elderly. And I, as a person in my 60’s I’m getting very concerned about the health care that I might be able to have.”

Iowan Restating the Question: “Ok...[the question] involves limited coverage because of a person’s background and age, race, physical condition such as that. Basically it was on the lady’s age.”

Senator Grassley: “[Very recently in things that I have taken out in our negotiations has been just exactly what you brought up. I won’t name people in Congress or people in Washington, but there’s some people that think that it’s a terrible problem that Grandma’s laying in the hospital bed with tubes in her, and think that there ought to be some government policy that enters into that. I’m just on the opposite. I think that’s a family and a religious and or ethical thing that needs to be dealt with and there’s some fear because in the House bill there’s counseling for end of life. And from that standpoint, you have every right to fear. You shouldn’t have counseling at the end of life. You ought to have counseling 20 years before if you’re going to need these things out. And, you know, I don’t have any problem with things like living wills, but they ought to be done within the family. We should not have a government program that determines you’re going to pull the plug on Grandma. Thank you all very much for coming.”

Mr. Weisberg is not the first person who has taken what I said in this exchange and twisted it to attempt to portray me as a fearmongerer. And unhappily he probably won’t be the last. What’s even more unfortunate is that Mr. Weisberg and those like him fail to see the legitimate cause for concern when you have a combination of the expanded role of government in health care generally plus funding for advance care planning consultations alongside cost containment proposals. Some commentators took my comments and twisted the quote I made as saying the House health care reform bill would establish death panels, and this was blatantly incorrect. As you can see from what was said at the town meeting, I said no such thing. As I said then, putting end-of-life consultations alongside cost containment and government-run health care causes legitimate concern.

And to address another point that Mr. Weisberg makes, a provision that provides for advance care planning was in a bill I supported. In 2003, Congress enacted a narrow provision to offer coverage for hospice consultation services for Medicare beneficiaries who have been diagnosed as terminally ill. Under this provision, this consultation would be covered only when provided by a health care provider with expertise in end-of-life issues such as a hospice physician. The covered services include a pain and care management evaluation, counseling, the provision of other optional services such as advice on advance care planning. This provision was designed to assure that advice on advance care planning in this context is only offered by qualified professionals and done in an appropriate manner.

In his article, Mr. Weisberg misses the point. The core of this issue is whether it comes to advance planning, what role, if any, the government should play. When the government attempts to influence these sensitive decisions, it raises the possibility that government’s involvement may be different and potentially incompatible with the patient’s interests.

When provisions to increase the government role in advance care planning are included alongside cost containment provisions, it raises the concern that the purpose for the proposal is to save money rather than to ensure appropriate care at the end of life. And that is in fact what has already happened. The idea of encouraging living wills was originally proposed by the Carter administration in 1977 as an option to produce both federal and system-wide savings in health expenditures. More recently, the Urban Institute, a leading authority on health, has taken what I said during this exchange and twisted it to attempt to portray me as a fearmongerer. And unfortunately he probably won’t be the last. What’s even more unfortunate is that Mr. Weisberg and those like him fail to see the legitimate cause for concern when you have a combination of the expanded role of government in health care generally plus funding for advance care planning consultations alongside cost containment proposals.

Some commentators took my comments and twisted the quote I made as saying the House health care reform bill would establish death panels, and this was blatantly incorrect. As you can see from what was said at the town meeting, I said no such thing. As I said then, putting end-of-life consultations alongside cost containment and government-run health care causes legitimate concern.

And to address another point that Mr. Weisberg makes, a provision that provides for advance care planning was in a bill I supported. In 2003, Congress enacted a narrow provision to offer coverage for hospice consultation services for Medicare beneficiaries who have been diagnosed as terminally ill. Under this provision, this consultation would be covered only when provided by a health care provider with expertise in end-of-life issues such as a hospice physician. The covered services include a pain and care management evaluation, counseling, the provision of other optional services such as advice on advance care planning. This provision was designed to assure that advice on advance care planning in this context is only offered by qualified professionals and done in an appropriate manner.

In his article, Mr. Weisberg misses the point. The core of this issue is whether it comes to advance planning, what role, if any, the government should play. When the government attempts to influence these sensitive decisions, it raises the possibility that government’s involvement may be different and potentially incompatible with the patient’s interests.

When provisions to increase the government role in advance care planning are included alongside cost containment provisions, it raises the concern that the purpose for the proposal is to save money rather than to ensure appropriate care at the end of life. And that is in fact what has already happened. The idea of encouraging living wills was originally proposed by the Carter administration in 1977 as an option to produce both federal and system-wide savings in health expenditures. More recently, the Urban Institute, a leading authority on health, has taken what I said during this exchange and twisted it to attempt to portray me as a fearmongerer. And unfortunately he probably won’t be the last. What’s even more unfortunate is that Mr. Weisberg and those like him fail to see the legitimate cause for concern when you have a combination of the expanded role of government in health care generally plus funding for advance care planning consultations alongside cost containment proposals. Some commentators took my comments and twisted the quote I made as saying the House health care reform bill would establish death panels, and this was blatantly incorrect. As you can see from what was said at the town meeting, I said no such thing. As I said then, putting end-of-life consultations alongside cost containment and government-run health care causes legitimate concern.

And to address another point that Mr. Weisberg makes, a provision that provides for advance care planning was in a bill I supported. In 2003, Congress enacted a narrow provision to offer coverage for hospice consultation services for Medicare beneficiaries who have been diagnosed as terminally ill. Under this provision, this consultation would be covered only when provided by a health care provider with expertise in end-of-life issues such as a hospice physician. The covered services include a pain and care management evaluation, counseling, the provision of other optional services such as advice on advance care planning. This provision was designed to assure that advice on advance care planning in this context is only offered by qualified professionals and done in an appropriate manner.

In his article, Mr. Weisberg misses the point. The core of this issue is whether it comes to advance planning, what role, if any, the government should play. When the government attempts to influence these sensitive decisions, it raises the possibility that government’s involvement may be different and potentially incompatible with the patient’s interests.

When provisions to increase the government role in advance care planning are included alongside cost containment provisions, it raises the concern that the purpose for the proposal is to save money rather than to ensure appropriate care at the end of life. And that is in fact what has already happened. The idea of encouraging living wills was originally proposed by the Carter administration in 1977 as an option to produce both federal and system-wide savings in health expenditures. More recently, the Urban Institute, a leading authority on health, has taken what I said during this exchange and twisted it to attempt to portray me as a fearmongerer. And unfortunately he probably won’t be the last. What’s even more unfortunate is that Mr. Weisberg and those like him fail to see the legitimate cause for concern when you have a combination of the expanded role of government in health care generally plus funding for advance care planning consultations alongside cost containment proposals. Some commentators took my comments and twisted the quote I made as saying the House health care reform bill would establish death panels, and this was blatantly incorrect. As you can see from what was said at the town meeting, I said no such thing. As I said then, putting end-of-life consultations alongside cost containment and government-run health care causes legitimate concern.

And to address another point that Mr. Weisberg makes, a provision that provides for advance care planning was in a bill I supported. In 2003, Congress enacted a narrow provision to offer coverage for hospice consultation services for Medicare beneficiaries who have been diagnosed as terminally ill. Under this provision, this consultation would be covered only when provided by a health care provider with expertise in end-of-life issues such as a hospice physician. The covered services include a pain and care management evaluation, counseling, the provision of other optional services such as advice on advance care planning. This provision was designed to assure that advice on advance care planning in this context is only offered by qualified professionals and done in an appropriate manner.
Medicare was already 37 years old when Congress added prescription drug coverage. The Medicare structure was well-established. Congress worked in a bipartisan way to set aside the funding to improve the program and do so without disrupting the parts that already worked well for the people. Don’t forget that 76 senators voted in favor of the Senate bill for the drug benefit including 35 Democrats and one Independent. We certainly can’t say the same for the current health care reform efforts.

One key difference is the fact that the prescription drug benefit is purely voluntary, unlike the mandatory system of insurance coverage for everyone proposed in the current health reform bills. That is backed up with the imposition of stiff fines on those who don’t comply. Under the Medicare benefit, seniors who don’t need prescription coverage or who don’t see it is a good value for the premium don’t have to pay for it. Coverage is administered by private entities, which compete for beneficiaries’ business. And this competition between plans has kept the overall cost of the program down.

And let’s not forget what we were trying to do back in 2003 compared to what is happening in Congress now. Back in 2003, we were operating on a budget surplus, and there was bipartisan support to address a need by creating the Medicare drug benefit. The Medicare Modernization Act met this need.

The situation is totally different in 2009. We are now operating on record budget deficits. So the goal of any health reform legislation should be to bend the cost curve. But as the HHS Chief Actuary has established, the Reid bill fails to do so.

In response to those who say the drug benefit only added to Medicare’s expenses, the Medicare Modernization Act also expanded coverage of preventive services to emphasize less expensive prevention over more costly treatment. The law created a specific process for overall program review if general revenue spending exceeded a specified threshold. And it took the politically bold step of introducing the concept of income testing into Medicare, with higher income people paying larger Part B premiums beginning in 2007.

Also, Mr. Weisberg makes several additional points about Medicare Part D that are simply wrong. For example, he states that it expands the deficit, threatens an indefensible new entitlement. He claims that it will cost $400 billion, but the law created a specific process for overall program review if general revenue spending exceeded a specified threshold. And it took the politically bold step of introducing the concept of income testing into Medicare, with higher income people paying larger Part B premiums beginning in 2007.

Also, Mr. Weisberg makes several additional points about Medicare Part D that are simply wrong. For example, he states that the government prohibition of negotiation with drug manufacturers only raises the Medicare Part D price. CBO, the Chief Actuary, and noted economists have all found the exact opposite to be true. The Chief Actuary stated that “direct price negotiation by the Secretary would be unlikely to achieve prescription drug discounts of greater magnitude” even if Medicare prescription drug plans responding to competitive forces.” And CBO has concluded that “the Secretary would be unable to negotiate prices across the broad range of covered Part D drugs that are more favorable than those obtained by PDPs under current law.”

Even the Washington Post editorial page has stated that “governments are notoriously bad at setting prices, and the government has long been bad at setting prices in the medical realm.” What’s more, the idea of private negotiation on drug costs originated with none other than President Bill Clinton. Under President Clinton’s plan, drug prices would be determined through negotiations between the private benefit administrators and drug manufacturers.”

President Clinton’s plan was introduced on April 4, 2000 as S. 2342 by the late Senator Moynihan by request.

Mr. Weisberg also uses incorrect data to compare the 10-year cost of Medicare Part D and the Reid bill. Medicare Part D costs do not “dwarf” the Reid bill costs as Mr. Weisberg claims because the 10-year cost of the Reid bill, as acknowledged by supporters of the bill on the Senate floor, is $2.5 trillion and not the $848 billion figure that he uses.

So attempting to portray me as being “uninformed” for opposing the Reid bill even though I championed the Medicare Modernization Act is absolute nonsense.

The Medicare Modernization Act did not impose a $21/2 trillion tab on Americans. It did not kill jobs with taxes and fees that go into effect 4 years before the reforms kick in. It did not kill jobs and lower wages with an employer mandate. It did not impose a half a trillion in higher taxes on premiums, on medical devices, on prescription drugs, and more. It did not jeopardize access to care with massive Medicare cuts. It did not impose higher health care costs. And it did not raise health premiums for millions of Americans like the Reid bill will.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the December 12, 2009, Slate article by Jacob Weisberg.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Slate, Dec. 12, 2009]

ARE REPUBLICANS SERIOUS ABOUT FIXING HEALTH CARE?

(By Jacob Weisberg)

Iowa Sen. Charles Grassley, the top Republican on the Senate finance committee, has emerged as one of the harshest critics of what the right likes to call “Obamacare.” And leading the opposition is an indefensible new entitlement. He complains that it expands the deficit, threatens Medicare, and does too little to restrain health care inflation. Of the 76-year-old Iowaan played the age card. “There is some fear, because in the House bill, there is counseling for end of life. And let’s not forget that about a government program?”

Medicare was already 37 years old when Congress added prescription drug coverage. The Medicare structure was well-established. Congress worked in a bipartisan way to set aside the funding to improve the program and do so without disrupting the parts that already worked well for the people. Don’t forget that 76 senators voted in favor of the Senate bill for the drug benefit including 35 Democrats and one Independent. We certainly can’t say the same for the current health care reform efforts.

One key difference is the fact that the prescription drug benefit is purely voluntary, unlike the mandatory system of insurance coverage for everyone proposed in the current health reform bills. That is backed up with the imposition of stiff fines on those who don’t comply. Under the Medicare benefit, seniors who don’t need prescription coverage or who don’t see it is a good value for the premium don’t have to pay for it. Coverage is administered by private entities, which compete for beneficiaries’ business. And this competition between plans has kept the overall cost of the program down.

And let’s not forget what we were trying to do back in 2003 compared to what is happening in Congress now. Back in 2003, we were operating on a budget surplus, and there was bipartisan support to address a need by creating the Medicare drug benefit. The Medicare Modernization Act met this need.

The situation is totally different in 2009. We are now operating on record budget deficits. So the goal of any health reform legislation should be to bend the cost curve. But as the HHS Chief Actuary has established, the Reid bill fails to do so.

In response to those who say the drug benefit only added to Medicare’s expenses, the Medicare Modernization Act also expanded coverage of preventive services to emphasize less expensive prevention over more costly treatment. The law created a specific process for overall program review if general revenue spending exceeded a specified threshold. And it took the politically bold step of introducing the concept of income testing into Medicare, with higher income people paying larger Part B premiums beginning in 2007.

Also, Mr. Weisberg makes several additional points about Medicare Part D that are simply wrong. For example, he states that it expands the deficit, threatens an indefensible new entitlement. He claims that it will cost $400 billion, but the law created a specific process for overall program review if general revenue spending exceeded a specified threshold. And it took the politically bold step of introducing the concept of income testing into Medicare, with higher income people paying larger Part B premiums beginning in 2007.

Also, Mr. Weisberg makes several additional points about Medicare Part D that are simply wrong. For example, he states that the government prohibition of negotiation with drug manufacturers only raises the Medicare Part D price. CBO, the Chief Actuary, and noted economists have all found the exact opposite to be true. The Chief Actuary stated that “direct price negotiation by the Secretary would be unlikely to achieve prescription drug discounts of greater magnitude” even if Medicare prescription drug plans responding to competitive forces.” And CBO has concluded that “the Secretary would be unable to negotiate prices across the broad range of covered Part D drugs that are more favorable than those obtained by PDPs under current law.”

Even the Washington Post editorial page has stated that “governments are notoriously bad at setting prices, and the government has long been bad at setting prices in the medical realm.” What’s more, the idea of private negotiation on drug costs originated with none other than President Bill Clinton. Under President Clinton’s plan, drug prices would be determined through negotiations between the private benefit administrators and drug manufacturers.”

President Clinton’s plan was introduced on April 4, 2000 as S. 2342 by the late Senator Moynihan by request.

Mr. Weisberg also uses incorrect data to compare the 10-year cost of Medicare Part D and the Reid bill. Medicare Part D costs do not “dwarf” the Reid bill costs as Mr. Weisberg claims because the 10-year cost of the Reid bill, as acknowledged by supporters of the bill on the Senate floor, is $2.5 trillion and not the $848 billion figure that he uses.

So attempting to portray me as being “uninformed” for opposing the Reid bill even though I championed the Medicare Modernization Act is absolute nonsense.

The Medicare Modernization Act did not impose a $21/2 trillion tab on Americans. It did not kill jobs with taxes and fees that go into effect 4 years before the reforms kick in. It did not kill jobs and lower wages with an employer mandate. It did not impose a half a trillion in higher taxes on premiums, on medical devices, on prescription drugs, and more. It did not jeopardize access to care with massive Medicare cuts. It did not impose higher health care costs. And it did not raise health premiums for millions of Americans like the Reid bill will.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the December 12, 2009, Slate article by Jacob Weisberg.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Slate, Dec. 12, 2009]
One might credit the sincerity, if not the validity, of such concerns were it not for an inconvenient bit of history. Not so long ago, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Grassley helped create a program that allowed Medicare beneficiaries to privately purchase prescription drugs under Medicare Part D. But Grassley's program was not without its problems. Many seniors complained that the program was not effective, and others believed that it was a way for Medicare to avoid paying for prescription drugs. In 2009, a federal judge ruled that the program was unconstitutional because it interfered with Medicare's mandate to provide health care. Grassley, who was a strong proponent of the program, was quoted as saying, "We've got to do something to ensure that our seniors have access to prescription drugs." Despite the problems with the program, Grassley continues to support it, and he has been quoted as saying, "Medicare Part D is a major step forward in ensuring that our seniors have access to the prescription drugs they need."
which Judge Diaz has been nominated. Mr. Matthews had the support of his home state senators and received an ABA rating of Substantial Majority Qualified. He was a graduate of Yale Law School and had a distinguished career as a private practitioner in South Carolina. Despite his exemplary qualifications, Mr. Matthews waited 485 days for a hearing that never came. His nomination was returned on January 2, 2009.

Another of President Bush’s nominees, Chief Judge Robert Conrad, was nominated to the seat for which Judge Wynn is now nominated. He had the support of his home state senators and received an ABA rating of Unanimous Well-Qualified. Further, Judge Conrad met Chairman Leahy’s standard for a noncontroversial, consensus nominee because he previously received bipartisan approval by the Judiciary Committee and the Senate when he was confirmed by voice vote to be a U.S. Attorney in North Carolina and later to the District Court for the Western District of North Carolina. On October 2, 2007, Senators Burr and Dole sent a letter to Senator Leahy requesting a hearing for Judge Conrad, and they spoke of his belief at a private conference on June 19 that featured a number of Judge Conrad’s friends and colleagues who had traveled all the way from North Carolina to show their support for his nomination. That request was ignored. On April 15, 2008, Senators Burr and Graham, and DeMint sent a letter to Senator Leahy asking for a hearing for Judge Conrad and Mr. Matthews. Despite overwhelming support and exceptional qualifications, Judge Conrad, who was nominated on July 17, 2007, waited 585 days for a hearing that never came. His nomination was returned on January 2, 2009.

Judge Glen Conrad also had the support of his home State Senators— cabeza, Chairman Matthew, and Mr. Matthews. Despite overwhelming support and exceptional qualifications, Judge Conrad, who was nominated on May 8, 2008, waited 240 days for a hearing that never came. His nomination was returned on January 2, 2009.

Earlier this year, we confirmed Judge Andre Davis to the “Maryland” seat on the Fourth Circuit. A brief history of that seat bears mention. President Bush nominated Rod Rosenstein to fill this vacancy on November 15, 2007. The ABA rated Mr. Rosensteins Unanimous Well-Qualified, and in 2005, he was confirmed by a noncontroversial voice vote to be the United States attorney for the District of Maryland. Prior to his service as U.S. attorney, he held several positions in the Department of Justice under both Republican and Democrat administrations. Despite his stellar qualifications, Mr. Rosenstein waited 414 days for a hearing that never came. His nomination was returned on January 2, 2009. The reason given by his home state senators for why his nomination was blocked was that he was "doing a good job as the U.S. attorney for Maryland, ... and that’s what we need him.” I think that a 2008 Washington Post editorial painted a more accurate picture: “blocking Mr. Rosenstein’s confirmation hearing ... would elevate ideology and ego above substance and would unfairly penalize a man who people on both sides of this question agree is well qualified for a judgeship.”

It was only when President Obama nominated Judge Davis to this seat that we heard Democrats’ outrage over the fact that the seat had been vacant for 9 years. Ironically, however, Judge Davis fared far better than President Bush’s nominees to the Fourth Circuit. He received a hearing a mere 27 days after his nomination, a committee vote 36 days later, and finally, confirmation earlier this year. There are other examples of Democrats’ unreasonable delay and obstruction but I will not detail them here. Suffice it to say that Democrats are now capitalizing on these eight years of obstruction by seeking to pack the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

It has been said that the overall federal judiciary vacancy rate is higher than it was when President Bush was in office. I was disappointed in what the Senate did to confirm more judicial nominees. But, as the story of the Fourth Circuit obstructionism illustrates, that is a specious argument. During the Bush administration, Democrats held up qualified judicial nominees—for years in some cases—denying them an up-or-down vote even though the majority of Senators were ready and willing to confirm them. And, in any event, the need to fill vacancies should not under-cut the need to properly vet these lifetime appointments. As the minority party, we have a duty and a right to ask the important questions that may not be asked by those who agree with the President’s point of view.

In that regard, we can only process nominees that we have before us. President Obama has nominated only 12 circuit court nominees, all of whom have had hearings; there are currently 20 circuit court vacancies. Similarly, President Obama has nominated only 19 district court nominees, all 6 of whom have had hearings; there are currently 78 district court vacancies. These numbers stand in stark contrast to the 65 nominees President Bush put forth during his first year in office. I have said many times that I do not wish to engage in a back and forth on this issue but I will not stand by while some in this body attempt to rewrite history in their favor. Facts are stubborn things and despite the statements by some to the contrary, they cannot alter the state of the facts and the evidence.

NOMINATION HOLDS
Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. President, I Senator Chuck GRASSLEY, intend to object to proceeding to the nominations of Lael Brainard to be Under Secretary of the Treasury, Michael Muddanca to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mary Miller to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Charles Collyns to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

My support for the final confirmation of these nominees will rest on the response to concerns I have with respect to the Internal Revenue Code section 6707A. A letter outlining these concerns was sent to both Secretary Geithner and Commissioner Shulman on December 22, 2009, and I ask unanimous consent that my letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
Hon. TIMOTHY F. GELSTON, Secretary, U.S. Department of Treasury, Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC.
Hon. DOUGLAS SHULMAN, Commissioner, Internal Revenue Service, Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY GEITHNER AND COMMISSIONER SHULMAN:
I am writing to express my disappointment with actions taken by both the Department of the Treasury (Treasury) and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) with respect to notice 2010–2 as well as any documentation of, Treasury and IRS discussions and approvals for Notice 2010–2 as well as any discussions about the impact this notice would have on the tax gap. In cooperating with the Committee’s review, no documents, records, data, or other information related to these matters, either directly or indirectly, shall be destroyed, modified, removed, or otherwise made inaccessible to the Committee.

I understand that Treasury believes that Notice 2010–2 was justified, in part, because it would help protect the government’s interest in Citigroup, Inc. Yet, it appears that Notice 2010–2 may generate billions of dollars of tax savings for Citigroup, Inc. Please provide documentation of any discussions of impact on the tax gap resulting from Notice 2010–2.

The quick and immediate relief provided to Citigroup, Inc. stands in stark contrast to Treasury and IRS’s position on providing relief to small business owners who have been assessed penalties under IRC section 6707A. As you know, Chairmen, we have been working throughout this year with our counterparts in the House of Representatives to provide relief that can only be accomplished through legislation and we expect that legislation to be enacted very soon. As a supporter of closing the tax gap, I very much appreciate the IRS’s difficult position with respect to protecting the government’s interest in collecting taxes and penalties due and appreciate the IRS’s moratorium on collection activity.

However, according to Commissioner Shulman’s letter to Chairman Baucus dated July 17, 2009, 72% of section 6707A penalty assessments were imposed on small businesses and small business owners. The penalty is clearly being assessed disproportionately on small businesses compared to larger taxpayers. Placement of liens on these taxpayers, even though they are not yet being enforced, is a significant threat to their operations. Many small businesses use business assets or mortgage personal residences to secure lines of credit for the businesses. Imposing liens has significant negative implications for a small business that has limited access to capital.

I discussed this issue with Commissioner Shulman last month. I understand my staff has also discussed this with IRS staff since then but that the IRS insists that placement of liens is necessary to protect the government’s interest. I am troubled and frustrated at the IRS’s heavy-handed approach to these small business taxpayers. It is inconsistent with the administration’s publicly expressed concern about the difficulties facing small businesses in accessing capital.

I note that there is a disconnect between what Treasury and IRS staff in Washington, DC think is happening and what is actually happening in the field. For example, when my staff discussed with your staff the issue of IRC section 6723 being used to justify the placement of liens, your staff denied this was happening. Yet, providing the name of a specific taxpayer who was subject to such a lien, my staff was informed that there may be a systemic issue in either the Automated Lien System or the Integrated Collection System.

My staff has also informed me that some of the assessments and liens are the result of Treasury and IRS regulations and procedures, such as the decision to disallow disclosures on amended returns and the decision to pursue 6707A assessments while other examination issues remain unresolved. Unlike Treasury and IRS procedures that can be revised to clear up the confusion, I request that IRS remove all liens on small businesses. 6707A assessments unless there is a known risk that the taxpayer will evade payment of the penalties. Since the pending legislation will significantly reduce the 6707A assessment amount, liens may no longer be necessary.

As a supporter of closing the tax gap, I very much appreciate the IRS’s difficult position with respect to protecting the government’s interest in collecting taxes and penalties. If the IRS believes that removal of a lien would result in the IRS being unable to collect a debt, I agree that placement of liens on these taxpayers, even though they are not yet being enforced, is a significant threat to their operations. Many small businesses use business assets or mortgage personal residences to secure lines of credit for the businesses. Imposing liens has significant negative implications for a small business that has limited access to capital.

I discussed this issue with Commissioner Shulman last month. I understand my staff has also discussed this with IRS staff since then but that the IRS insists that placement of liens is necessary to protect the government’s interest. I am troubled and frustrated at the IRS’s heavy-handed approach to these small business taxpayers. It is inconsistent with the administration’s publicly expressed concern about the difficulties facing small businesses in accessing capital.

I note that there is a disconnect between what Treasury and IRS staff in Washington, DC think is happening and what is actually happening in the field. For example, when my staff discussed with your staff the issue of IRC section 6723 being used to justify the placement of liens, your staff denied this was happening. Yet, providing the name of a specific taxpayer who was subject to such a lien, my staff was informed that there may be a systemic issue in either the Automated Lien System or the Integrated Collection System.

My staff has also informed me that some of the assessments and liens are the result of Treasury and IRS regulations and procedures, such as the decision to disallow disclosures on amended returns and the decision to pursue 6707A assessments while other examination issues remain unresolved. Unlike Treasury and IRS procedures that can be revised to clear up the confusion, I request that IRS remove all liens on small businesses. 6707A assessments unless there is a known risk that the taxpayer will evade payment of the penalties. Since the pending legislation will significantly reduce the 6707A assessment amount, liens may no longer be necessary.

As a supporter of closing the tax gap, I very much appreciate the IRS’s difficult position with respect to protecting the government’s interest in collecting taxes and penalties. If the IRS believes that removal of a lien would result in the IRS being unable to collect a debt, I agree that placement of liens on these taxpayers, even though they are not yet being enforced, is a significant threat to their operations. Many small businesses use business assets or mortgage personal residences to secure lines of credit for the businesses. Imposing liens has significant negative implications for a small business that has limited access to capital.
doesn’t seem to take the vetting done by a Senate Committee seriously is the reaction we have seen by others, including some who serve in this body. Some apparently see the due diligence and vetting done on nominees as an assembly line that produces a guaranteed outcome.

We have seen what I believe to be political operatives from outside the Senate selectively leak information in an effort to target the Finance Committee’s process of vetting nominees and even the specific staff members who carry out this work. These political operatives have had a lot of work to do, as Dr. Brainard is the fifth nominee from the current administration to run into significant problems during the Finance Committee vetting process. The Finance Committee vetting process has not changed in the nearly 9 years I have been chairman or ranking member. What has changed are the specific nominees and the apparent willingness of some to tolerate and excuse issues that would have disqualified nominees from the previous administration.

Nominees in the previous administration would have had trouble garnering support if they had these sorts of problems, and I made it clear my job was not to defend a problematic nominee. Most people do not know about these problematic nominees from the past because in some cases they did not get a hearing and in others they were not nominated in the first place.

There is only one person who could tell us why the vetting process for this nominee took so long, and that person is Lael Brainard.

I have been trying to ask her questions for 9 months now without much success, so now my questions are for the critics of the Finance Committee process and those determined to see this nominee confirmed no matter what.

How long should we allow a nominee to provide incomplete and contradictory answers before we simply decide that person ought to be confirmed anyway?

Who is important enough not to be obligated to follow the same rules and obligations as all other nominees?

What high government official is so important that they ought to be exempt from the burden of routine Congressional oversight?

Is knowing the right people a substitute for simple honesty and strength of character?

As for myself, I am going to answers these questions by reiterating my opposition to the nomination.

I, Senator Chuck Grassley, do not object to proceeding to the nominations of Lael Brainard to be Under Secretary of the Treasury, Michael Munda to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mary Miller to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Charles Collyns to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO TARAS G. SZMAGALA

Mr. VINOVIČ Mr. President, today I wish to recognize Taras G. "Tary" Szmagala, on the occasion of his retirement from the Greater Cleveland Regional Transit Authority in Cleveland, OH. Tary has dedicated his life to public service and has worked tirelessly to improve the quality of life for the citizens of our community. His career demonstrates a commitment to excellence and exemplary leadership, and has earned him the respect and admiration of his friends and associates.

For 23 years, Tary has served the Greater Cleveland Regional Transit Authority, during which time he has held a number of positions, including: director of governmental relations, manager of communications, deputy general manager, interim general manager, and executive director of external affairs. He made significant contributions towards procuring Federal and State capital improvement funds for the RTA’s major projects, including, but not limited to, the Euclid Corridor Project and the extension of the Waterfront Line, and the Walkway from Tower City to Gateway.

Additionally, Tary’s distinguished career in public service includes serving as special assistant to U.S. Senator Robert Taft, teacher and administrator for the Parma Board of Education, and public and personnel coordinator for the Cleveland Regional Sewer District. Moreover, he has served numerous government leaders and organizations, and has devoted countless hours to civic organizations, including the Stella Maris Board of Directors, the National Highway Safety Advisory Committee, the Ohio Public Transit Association, St. Ignatius High School and several colleges.

Tary has worked tirelessly to provide many communities with a tangible connection to their Ukrainian heritage by serving on the Ukrainian Museum Archives Board of Directors, the Ukrainian National Association Board of Directors and as a representative of the Ukrainian-American community in many official capacities, including as Member of Presidential Delegation to Ukraine in 1991.

It is my privilege to recognize Tary for his diligent commitment and dedicated service to the Greater Cleveland Regional Transit Authority, and to the community that he has served for over three decades.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mrs. Neiman, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations and a withdrawal which were referred to the appropriate committees. (The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

NOTIFICATION OF THE PRESIDENT’S INTENTION TO DESIGNATE THE REPUBLIC OF MALDIVES AS A BENEFICIARY DEVELOPING COUNTRY AND TO TERMINATE THE DESIGNATIONS OF CROATIA AND EQUATORIAL GUINEA AS BENEFICIARY DEVELOPING PROGRAMS UNDER THE GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES PROGRAM—PM 39

The President notified today the Senate of his intention to designate the Republic of Maldives as a beneficiary developing country and to terminate the designations of Croatia and Equatorial Guinea as beneficiary developing countries under the GSP program.

To the Congress of the United States:

The Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) offers duty-free treatment to specified products that are imported from designated beneficiary developing countries. The GSP is authorized by title V of the Trade Act of 1974, as amended (the “Act”).

In accordance with sections 502(c)(1)(A) and 502(c)(2) of the Act, I am providing notification of my intent to add the Republic of Maldives to the list of beneficiary developing countries under the GSP program and my intent to terminate the designations of Croatia and Equatorial Guinea as beneficiary developing countries under the GSP program.

In Proclamation 6813 of July 28, 1995, the designation of Maldives as a beneficiary developing country for purposes of the GSP program was suspended. After considering the criteria set forth in sections 501 and 502 of the Act, I have determined that the suspension of the designation of Maldives as a GSP beneficiary developing country should be ended.

In addition, I have determined that Croatia and Equatorial Guinea have each become a “high income” country, as defined by the official statistics of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. In accordance with section 502(e) of the Act, I have determined that the suspension of the designations of Croatia and Equatorial Guinea as beneficiary developing countries under the GSP program should be terminated, effective January 1, 2011.

Barack Obama,

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

At 1:42 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mrs. Cole, one of the reading clerks, announced that the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. VAN HOLLEN) has signed the following enrolled bill:

December 23, 2009

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S13881
EC-4157. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a petition to add workers from the Hanford site of the United States Department of Energy, to the Special Exposure Cohort; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-4158. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a petition to add workers from the Brookhaven National Laboratory in Upton, New York, to the Special Exposure Cohort; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-4159. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a petition to add workers from the Metals and Controls Corporation in Attilboro, Massachusetts, to the Special Exposure Cohort; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-4160. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Community Services Block Act Discretionary Activities; Community Economic Development and Rural Facilities Programs; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-4161. A communication from the Director, Strategic Human Resources Policy Division, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Training; Supervisory, Management, and Executive Development” (RIN2006–AK75) received in the Office of the President of the Senate on December 17, 2009; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

EC-4162. A communication from the Director, Strategic Human Resources Policy Division, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Proxy Disclosure Enhancements” (RIN235–AK26) received in the Office of the President of the Senate on December 17, 2009; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC-4163. A communication from the Director of Environmental Policy and Compliance, Office of the Secretary, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Implementation of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) of 1969” received in the Office of the President on December 17, 2009; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-4164. A communication from the Chief of the Publications and Regulations Branch, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled “Tier II Issue: Cost Sharing, Compensation, and Risk Sharing” received in the Office of the President on December 17, 2009; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-4165. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a petition to add workers from Picua Organic Modern Farm in Piqua, Ohio, to the Special Exposure Cohort; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.
and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mrs. LINCOLN (for herself and Mr. SANDERS).

S. 2826. A bill to amend the XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for the applicability of a consistent Medicare part B premium for all Medicare beneficiaries in a budget neutral manner for 2010, to provide an additional economic recovery payments to certain beneficiaries, and to assess the need for a consumer price index for elderly consumers to compute cost-of-living increases upon certain governmental benefits; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. SANDERS, Mr. WHITTHOUSE, and Mr. BROWN).

S. 2827. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to impose a tax on certain securities transactions to fund job creation and deficit reduction, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. GRASSLEY.

S. 2828. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to enact a tax on certain securities transactions to fund job creation and deficit reduction, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Mr. Whitehouse).

S. 2829. A bill to prohibit secret modifications and revocations of the law, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. GRAHAM).

S. 2830. A bill to deter terrorism, provide justice for victims, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 624

At the request of Mr. DURBIN, the name of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG) was added as a cosponsor of S. 624, a bill to provide 100,000,000 people with first-time access to safe drinking water and sanitation on a sustainable basis by 2015 by improving the capacity of the United States Government to fully implement the Senator Paul Simon Water for the Poor Act of 2005.

S. 891

At the request of Mr. BROWNBACK, the name of the Senator from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 891, a bill to require annual disclosure to the Securities and Exchange Commission of activities involving cobalt—tantalite, cassiterite, and wolframite from the Democratic Republic of Congo, and for other purposes.

S. 1402

At the request of Mr. SPECTER, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 1402, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to increase the amount allowed as a deduction for start-up expenditures.

S. 2824

At the request of Mr. KOHL, the name of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) was added as a cosponsor of S. 2824, a bill to establish a small dollar loan—loss guarantee fund, and for other purposes.

S. 2854

At the request of Mr. KOHL, the name of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND) was added as a cosponsor of S. 2854, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend and modify the credit for new qualified hybrid motor vehicles, and for other purposes.

S. 2828

At the request of Mr. WYDEN, the name of the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. FRANKEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 2828, a bill to establish a grant program to benefit victims of sex trafficking, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 295

At the request of Mr. SCHUMER, the name of the Senator from Michigan (Ms. STABENOW) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 295 intended to be proposed to H.R. 3590, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to modify the first-time homebuyers credit in the case of members of the Armed Forces and certain other Federal employees, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 2941

At the request of Mr. WYDEN, the name of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. MERKEL) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 2941 intended to be proposed to H.R. 3590, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to modify the first-time homebuyers credit in the case of members of the Armed Forces and certain other Federal employees, and for other purposes.

STATMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. GRASSLEY.

S. 2928. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend certain disaster tax relief provisions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I have introduced a bill to extend deadlines for a number of provisions in the Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act of 2008, as well as a number of national disaster tax relief provisions, through 2010.

The Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act has been critical in rebuilding the lives and communities of those affected by the terrible floods and tornadoes from last year.

Because of delays in Federal funding and tighter credit conditions, many individuals, families, and businesses affected by the 2008 floods and storms will be unable to meet the deadline for the tax relief intended to help with recovery.

Louisiana is still rebuilding from Hurricane Katrina in 2005. Congress extended tax incentives for that disaster twice, and might even extend them a third time. I am just proposing a second year of the same kind of tax incentives that have been in effect for Hurricane Katrina victims for over 4 years.

This is especially important when small businesses are struggling to recover, and small businesses create 70 percent of all net new jobs.

It is only fair to extend the deadlines and give these individuals, families, and businesses the chance to recover and rebuild.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SEC. 201. CREDIT TO HOLDERS OF TAX CREDIT BONDS.

Section 702(d)(7)(C) of the Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act of 2008 (Public Law 110–343; 122 Stat. 3918) is amended by striking “or 2009” and inserting “2009, or 2010”.

SEC. 202. SPECIAL RULES FOR USE OF RETIREMENT FUNDS.

Section 702(d)(10) of the Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act of 2008 (Public Law 110–343; 122 Stat. 3918) is amended by striking “or 2009” and inserting “2009, or 2010”.

SEC. 203. NET OPERATING LOSSES ATTRIBUTABLE TO FEDERALLY DECLARED DISASTERS.

Section 702(d)(15) of the Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act of 2008 (Public Law 110–343; 122 Stat. 3918) is amended by striking “or 2009” and inserting “2009, or 2010”.

SEC. 204. WAIVER OF CERTAIN MORTGAGE RECAPTURE REQUIREMENTS.

Section 702(d)(7)(B) of the Heartland Disaster Tax Relief Act of 2008 (Public Law 110–343; 122 Stat. 3918) is amended by striking “or 2009” and inserting “2009, or 2010”.

TITLE II—NATIONAL DISASTER AREAS

SEC. 201. LOSSES ATTRIBUTABLE TO FEDERALLY DECLARED DISASTERS.

(a) No Liability for 2010.—Paragraph (1) of section 165(h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking “$500 ($100 for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2009)” and inserting “$100 for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2009, and before January 1, 2011”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2009.

SEC. 202. EXPANDING QUALIFIED DISASTER EXPENSES.

(a) In General.—Subparagraph (A) of section 198A(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking “January 1, 2009” and inserting “January 1, 2011”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to disasters occurring after December 31, 2009.

SEC. 203. NET OPERATING LOSSES ATTRIBUTABLE TO FEDERALLY DECLARED DISASTERS.

(a) In General.—Subclause (I) of section 172(j)(1)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking “January 1, 2010” and inserting “January 1, 2011”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to disasters occurring after December 31, 2009.

SEC. 204. WAIVER OF CERTAIN MORTGAGE RECAPTURE REQUIREMENTS.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (11) of section 143(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is... amended by striking “January 1, 2010” and inserting “January 1, 2011”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to bonds occurring after December 31, 2009.

SEC. 205. SPECIFIC DEPRECIATION ALLOWANCE FOR QUALIFIED DISASTER PROP.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subclause (I) of section 168(k)(2)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking “January 1, 2010” and inserting “January 1, 2011”.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to disasters occurring after December 31, 2009.

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Mr. WHITEHOUSE):

S. 2929. A bill to prohibit secret modifications and revocations of the law, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today Senator WHITEHOUSE and I will introduce the Executive Order Integrity Act of 2009. The bill prevents secret changes to published Executive Orders by requiring the President to place a notice in the Federal Register when he has modified or revoked a published Order. Through this simple measure, the bill takes an important step toward reversing the growth of secret law in the executive branch. The principle behind this bill is straightforward. It is a basic tenet of democracy that the people have a right to know the law. Indeed, the notion of “secret law” has been described in court opinions and law treatises as “repugnant” and “an abomination.” That’s why the laws passed by Congress have historically been matters of public record. But the law that applies in this country includes more than just statutes. It includes regulations, the controlling legal interpretations of courts and the executive branch, and certain Presidential directives. As we learned at a hearing of the Judiciary Committee’s Constitution Subcommittee that I chaired last year, some of this body of executive and judicial law was increasingly kept secret from the public, and too often from Congress as well, under the Bush administration. The administration concealed Department of Justice legal opinions and interpretations of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. The shroud of secrecy extended to Executive Orders and other Presidential directives that carry the force of law. The Federal Register Act requires the President to publish any Executive Orders that have general applicability and legal effect. But through the diligent efforts of my colleague Senator WHITEHOUSE, we learned in late 2007 that the Department of Justice took the position that a President can “waive” or “modify” any Executive Order without any notice to the public or Congress—simply by not following the words even in cases where the President is required to make the public, the President can change the law in secret.

The Office of Legal Counsel memorandum that contains this position is still classified, but Senator WHITEHOUSE convinced the Department of Justice to declassify certain propositions in the memorandum. Among these was the claim that the President “may do so, because ‘an executive order cannot limit a President.’” And he doesn’t have to change the order, or give notice that he is violating it, because “depar[t]ing from the executive order,” the President “has instead modified or waived it.”

Now, no one disputes that a President can withdraw or revise an Executive Order at any time; that is every President’s prerogative. But abrogating a published Executive Order without any public notice works a secret change in the law. Worse, because the published Order stays on the books, it actively misleads Congress and the public as to what the law is. This is not just a hypothetical problem dreamed of by the Office of Legal Counsel. It has happened, and it could happen again. To list just one example, the Bush administration’s warrantless wiretapping program not only violated the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act; it was inconsistent with several provisions of Executive Order 12333, the longstanding executive order governing electronic surveillance and other intelligence activities. Apparently, the administration believed its actions constituted a waiver of that Executive Order. Who knows how many other Executive Orders were secretly revoked or amended by the conduct of the administration over the past 8 years.

The bill that Senator WHITEHOUSE and I are introducing provides a simple solution to this problem. If the President revokes, modifies, waives, or suspends a published Executive Order or similar directive, notice of this change must be placed in the Federal Register within 30 days. The notice must specify the Order or the provision that has been affected; whether the change is a revocation, a modification, a waiver, or a suspension; and the nature and circumstances of the change. If information about the nature and circumstances of the change is classified, it is exempt from the publication requirement, but the information still must be provided to Congress so that we, as legislators, know how the law has been changed.

That is what our bill does; now let me talk briefly about what our bill does not do. First, it does not expand the existing requirements under the Federal Register Act, that determine which Executive Orders must be published. To the extent the Federal Register Act permits a certain amount of “secret law” in the form of unpublished Executive Orders, our bill leaves that framework in place.

Second, our bill does not require public notice when the President revokes or modifies an unpublished Executive Order—even if the substance of the unpublished order is well-known to Congress and even the American people. This bill is narrowly aimed at the situation in which the American people are kept in the dark about the law. This bill does not take issue with the Bush administration’s assertion that any deviation from the Executive Order by the President is a permissible amendment of that Order. It will simply require the President to place a notice in the Federal Register at any time that he makes a change in the law, no matter how slight, by “depar[t]ing from the executive order,” that will not end the need for this legislation. At last year’s Secret Law hearing, the Deputy Assistant Attorney General for OLC testified that during the Iran-Contra scandal in the 1980’s the Reagan White House’s practice of purporting to amend the law in secret, but can never justify lying to the American people about what law applies, is just that—deceiving the American people about what law applies to the Government’s conduct.

It is my hope and my expectation that the Obama administration will not continue the previous administration’s practice of purporting to amend the law in secret. But even if the administration agrees to end this practice, that will not end the need for this legislation. On rare occasions, national security information is classified, it is exempt from the publication requirement, but the information still must be provided to Congress so that we, as legislators, know how the law has been changed.

Fourth, the bill does not require the publication of classified information about intelligence sources and methods or similar information. The basic fact that the published law is no longer in effect, however, cannot be classified. On rare occasions, national security can justify elected officials keeping some information secret, but it can never justify lying to the American people about what law applies, no matter how slight. Maintaining two different sets of laws, one public and one secret, is just that—deceiving the American people about what law applies to the Government’s conduct.

I commend Senator WHITEHOUSE for his tireless work to bring this issue to light, and I urge all of my colleagues in the Senate to support this modest effort to ensure the integrity of our published laws.
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Executive Order Integrity Act of 2009”.

SEC. 2. REVOCATIONS, MODIFICATIONS, WAIVERS, AND SUSPENSIONS OF PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATIONS AND EXECUTIVE ORDERS.

Section 1605 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(d) REVOCATIONS, MODIFICATIONS, WAIVERS, AND SUSPENSIONS OF PRESIDENTIAL PROCLAMATIONS AND EXECUTIVE ORDERS.—

“(1) NOTICE REQUIRED.—If the President, whether formally or informally, and whether through express order, conduct, or other means—

“(A) revokes, modifies, waives, or suspends any portion of a Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive that was published in the Federal Register; or

“(B) authorizes the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension of any portion of such Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive; notice of such revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension, in accordance with the terms under paragraph (1) shall specify—

“(i) the Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive, and any particular portion thereof that is affected;

“(ii) for each affected directive or portion thereof, whether that directive or portion thereof was revoked, modified, waived, or suspended; and “(iii) except where such information is classified, the specific nature and circumstances of the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension.

“(2) CONTENT OF NOTICE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under paragraph (1), the notice required under subsection (b) shall specify—

“(i) if the President, whether formally or informally, and whether through express order, conduct, or other means—

“(A) revokes, modifies, waives, or suspends any portion of such Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive; notice of such revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension shall be published in the Federal Register within 30 days after the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension; and

“(ii) in the case of a revised Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive that replaces or amends the one that was revoked, modified, waived, or suspended, the notice required under subsection (b) shall specify—

“(A) the revised Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive; and

“(B) for each affected directive or portion thereof, whether that directive or portion thereof was revoked, modified, waived, or suspended; and

“(B) REVISED EXECUTIVE ORDER.—Where the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension of a Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive is accomplished through the publication in the Federal Register of a revised Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive that replaces or amends the one that was revoked, modified, waived, or suspended—

“(1) the revised Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive shall constitute notice for purposes of paragraph (1).

“(2) CLASSIFIED INFORMATION.—If the information specified under paragraph (2)(A)(iii) is classified, such information shall be provided to Congress, using the security procedures established under section 502(d) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 432(d)), in the form of a classified annex delivered to—

“(A) the majority and minority leader of the Senate;

“(B) the Speaker, majority leader, and minority leader of the House of Representatives;

“(C) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and “(D) the select committee or subcommittee with jurisdiction over national security matters, if the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate and the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives.

“(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as either authorizing or prohibiting the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension of any Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive that was published in the Federal Register within 30 days after the revocation, modification, waiver, or suspension of any portion of a Presidential proclamation, Executive Order, or other Presidential directive that was published in the Federal Register; or

“By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, and Mr. GRAHAM):

S. 2900. A bill to deter terrorism, provide just compensation to victims, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to urge support for the legislation I have just introduced, the Justice Against Sponsors of Terrorism Act. The legislation would amend the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act, FSIA, and the Anti-Terrorism Act, ATA, to ensure that foreign sponsors of terrorism and Financial Intelligence has contributed to their declared goal of carrying out large-scale terrorist attacks within the U.S. In our continuous efforts to prevent such attacks, we have appropriately focused our attention on stemming the flow of money to terrorists through the Treasury the Department’s Undersecretary for Terrorism and Financial Intelligence has observed, “the terrorist operative who is willing to strap on a suicide belt is not susceptible to deterrence, but the individual donor who wants to support violent jihad may well be.” Testimony of Stuart Levey, Under Secretary for Terrorism and Financial Intelligence, before the Senate Committee on Finance, April 1, 2008. Holding them liable in American courts may be the most effective—and, given the absence of effective criminal sanctions, often only—way to deter them from sponsoring terrorist attacks. “Suits against financiers of terrorism can,” as renowned federal judge Richard Posner recently phrased it, “out the terrorist’s lifeline.” Boin v. Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development, 549 F. 3d 685 (7th Cir. 2008). As carefully written by Congress, the FSIA abrogates the sovereign immunity of foreign countries and permits suit against them in Federal court when, among other things, a foreign country commits terrorists acts or other tortious conduct that results in injury on our soil. The ATA authorizes suit in Federal court by any U.S. national injured “by reason of an act of international terrorism” and permits the recovery of “threefold the damages that are assessed” along with treble damages, as well as the costs of suit and attorneys’ fees. “18 U.S.C. § 2333(a).

But a number of lower Federal courts have frustrated Congress’s intent by erecting unfounded jurisdictional barriers to suit. No such decision is more significant in its effect than the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit’s In re Terrorist Attacks on September 11, 2001, 538 F. 3d 71 (2d Cir. 2009). That decision arose from litigation brought by the victims of the 9/11 attacks, including family members of the nearly 3,000 innocent people killed and commercial entities that suffered in excess of $10 billion in damage to their property. The plaintiffs sought damages against, among other defendants, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, several Saudi officials, and a purported charity under the control of the Kingdom known as the Saudi High Commission for Relief of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Substantial evidence exists to establish that the defendants had provided funding and sponsorship to al-Qaeda without which it could not have carried out the 9/11 attacks. Even the Second Circuit acknowledged that plaintiffs had offered a “wealth of detail, conscientiously cited to public and unpublished sources,” as to the defendants’ sponsorship of al-Qaeda.

None of the plaintiffs had their day in court, however, for the Second Circuit upheld the Federal courts have no jurisdiction over the principal defendants. As for Saudi Arabia and its official state agencies, the Second Circuit held that they were not subject to suit under the FSIA’s tort exception because, having not been designated by the President as a state sponsor of terrorism, Saudi Arabia was not covered by a separate FSIA exception for suits against designated state sponsors of terrorism. Suits arising from terrorist activities, the court concluded, can only be brought under the FSIA’s exception governing designated state sponsors of terrorism. As for the Saudi princes, the Second Circuit held that the courts lacked personal jurisdiction over them because, though they “could have foreseen [that] the recipients of their donations would attack targets in the United States,” they did not themselves “direct” any terrorist attacks or “command” any “agent” to “commit them.”

Both conclusions are wrong. The former is especially troubling because it establishes an immunity from suit under the FSIA that Congress did not intend. A foreign state is subject to suit for its terrorist activities under the FSIA’s tort exception without regard to whether it is subject to suit under the separate exception for designated state sponsors of terrorism—that is, without regard to whether the United States has designated it as a state sponsor of terrorism. The Second Circuit effectively read into the tort exception an exception for terrorist-related torts. Even the Solicitor General, who has adopted an unduly restrictive interpretation of the FSIA’s exceptions, concluded that the Second Circuit misread the statute on this critical point.

The Second Circuit’s and other lower courts’ decisions on these seemingly technical jurisdictional points not only deprive the victims of terrorism the compensation to which they are entitled but also remove a powerful weapon in our arsenal against foreign terrorism. We can no longer wait for the Supreme Court to correct these errant decisions. The Court’s refusal earlier this year to hear the plaintiffs’ appeal of the Second Circuit’s decision in In re Terrorist Attacks, despite the importance of the case and the conflicts among the lower courts on the key issues it presents, suggests that the Court may well never do so.

That is why I have introduced the Justice Against Sponsors of Terrorism Act. The act is main provisions would amend FSIA to make clear that, as Congress originally intended, a foreign state may be sued under the torts exception if it sponsors terrorists who commit terrorist attacks on our soil, without regard to whether it is a state-designated sponsor of terrorism, and amend the ATA to ensure that its anti-terrorism provisions, like FSIA’s, are given the meaning Congress intended. I urge my colleagues to support these modest, but critical, amendments.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET
COMMITTEE ON FINANCE
Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Finance be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on December 23, 2009, at 2 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR
Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Marques Chavez be granted the privilege of the floor for the remainder of today’s session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NUCLEAR FORENSICS AND ATTRIBUTION ACT
Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 244, H.R. 730.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The bill clerk reads as follows:

A bill (H.R. 730) to strengthen efforts in the Department of Homeland Security to develop nuclear forensics capabilities to permit attribution of the source of nuclear material, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs with an amendment to strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Nuclear Forensics and Attribution Act”.

SEC. 2 FINDINGS.
Congress finds the following:
(1) The threat of a nuclear terrorist attack on American interests, both domestic and abroad, is one of the most serious threats to national security of the United States. In the wake of an attack, attribution of responsibility would be of utmost importance. Because of the destructive power of a nuclear weapon, there could be little effective forensic evidence except the radioactive material in the weapon itself.
(2) Through advanced nuclear forensics, using both existing techniques and those under development, it may be possible to identify the source and pathway of a weapon or material after it is interdicted or detonated. Though identifying exactly where a weapon or material now resides is often not possible in some cases, pre-detonation forensics is a relatively undeveloped field. The post-detonation nuclear forensics field is also immature, and the challenges posed by the pressures and time constraints of performing forensics after a nuclear or radiological attack.
(3) A robust and well-known capability to identify the source of a nuclear or radiological material intended for or used in an act of terror could also deter prospective proliferators. Furthermore, the threat of effective attribution could compel improved security at material storages and transport or storage facilities, preventing the uncontrolled transfer of nuclear or radiological materials.
(A) In order to identify special nuclear material and other radioactive materials confidentially, it is necessary to have a robust capability to acquire samples in a timely manner, analyze and characterize samples, and compare samples against known signatures of nuclear and radiological material.
(B) Many of the radioisotopes produced in the detonation of a nuclear device have short half-lives, so the timely acquisition of samples is of the utmost importance. Over the past several decades, the ability of the United States to pathologically analyze the signature of various radiometric materials has improved, the preferred method of sample acquisition—has diminished. This ability must be restored and modern techniques that could complement or replace existing techniques should be pursued.
(C) The discipline of pre-detonation forensics is a relatively undeveloped field. The radiation associated with a nuclear or radiological device may affect traditional forensics techniques in unknown ways. In a post-detonation scenario, radiochemistry may provide the most useful tools for analysis and characterization of samples. The administration already funds programs and radiochemists in United States National Laboratories and universities has dramatically declined over the past several decades. The narrowing pipeline of qualified people into this critical field is a serious impediment to maintaining a robust and credible nuclear forensics program.
(5) Once samples have been acquired and characterized, the discipline of nuclear forensics may affect traditional forensics techniques in unknown ways. In a post-detonation scenario, radiochemistry may provide the most useful tools for analysis and characterization of samples. The administration already funds programs and radiochemists in United States National Laboratories and universities has dramatically declined over the past several decades. The narrowing pipeline of qualified people into this critical field is a serious impediment to maintaining a robust and credible nuclear forensics program.

SEC. 3. DESIGNATION OF SUBCOMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENTS FOR FORENSICS CO-OPERATION.
It is the sense of the Congress that the President should—
(1) pursue bilateral and multilateral international agreements to establish, or seek to establish, an amendment to existing international agreements, or to agree to new international agreements, to create, as a matter of law or practice, binding international agreements that would establish a United States right of inspection for a nuclear or radiological source term.
(2) develop protocols for the data exchange and dissemination of sensitive information relating to nuclear or radiological materials and samples of controlled nuclear or radiological materials, to the extent required by the agreements entered into under paragraph (1) and
(3) develop expedited protocols for the data exchange and dissemination of sensitive information relating to nuclear or radiological materials and samples of controlled nuclear or radiological materials, to the extent required by the agreements entered into under paragraph (1) and

The text continues with more detailed provisions and amendments relevant to nuclear security and forensics capabilities.
nuclear forensics during the course of the student's graduate career; and “(ii) require each recipient to commit to serve for 2 years in a post-doctoral position in a technical nuclear forensics-related specialty at a national laboratory or appropriate Federal agency after graduation;

“(iii) be payable if at the time the scholarship was awarded shall be liable to the Secretary, who is dismissed for disqualification liability regime.

“(iv) require that:

“(I) a scholarship recipient who fails to maintain a high level of academic standing, as defined by the Secretary, who is dismissed for disqualification liability regime.

“(II) a scholarship recipient who voluntarily terminates academic training before graduation, from which the scholarship was awarded shall be liable to the Secretary, who is dismissed for disqualification liability regime.

“(v) make available to faculty awards, with such scholarship funds paid to such recipient and to the institution of higher education on the behalf of such recipient the repayment agreement may be extended by the Secretary if the Secretary determines it necessary, as established by regulation; and

“(c) the Director of the Domestic Nuclear Detection Office and each of the relevant departments that are partners in the National Nuclear Forensics Center—

“(A) in subparagraph (A)(ii), by striking ''; and''; and'';

“(B) in subparagraph (B)(iii), by striking the period at the end and inserting ': and'; and''; and

“(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

“(x) include, as part of the assessments, evaluations, and reviews required under this paragraph, each office's or department's activities and investments in support of nuclear forensics and attribution activities and specific goals and objectives accomplished during the previous year pursuant to the national strategic five-year plan for improving the nuclear forensic and attribution capabilities of the United States required under section 1036 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010;

“(y) attach'' the appendix to the Joint Interagency Annual Review, the most current version of such strategy and plan; and “(z) require'' the Secretary, or amended bilateral and multilateral agreements and efforts in support of nuclear forensics and attribution activities accomplished during the previous year.

Mr. CASEY. I ask unanimous consent that the committee substitute amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time and passed, the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table and any statements be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 3819) was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

DISCHARGE AND REFERRAL—EXECUTIVE NOMINATION

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Environment and Public Works be discharged from further consideration of the following nomination and that the nomination be referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

Timothy McGee, of Louisiana, to be an Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 2009

Mr. CASEY. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until 6:45 a.m., Thursday, December 24; that following the prayer and pledge, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate resume consideration of H.R. 3590, with the time until 7 a.m. equally divided and controlled between the two leaders or their designees, and the Senate proceed to vote on passage of the bill at 7 a.m., as provided for under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, there will be two rollover votes beginning at 7 a.m. tomorrow. The first vote will be on passage of H.R. 3590. The second vote will be on passage of H.R. 4314. Senators are encouraged to be in the Chamber at the beginning of the first vote and to vote from their desks.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 6:45 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. CASEY. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that it adjourn under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 8:15 p.m., adjourned until Thursday, December 24, 2009, at 6:45 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate:

STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE

DANIEL J. BECKER, OF UTAH, TO BE A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE FOR A TERM EXPIRING SEPTEMBER 17, 2010, VICE ROBERT NELSON BALDWIN, TERM EXPIRED.

JAMES R. HANNAH, OF ARKANSAS, TO BE A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE FOR A TERM EXPIRING SEPTEMBER 17, 2010, VICE JOSEPH FRANCIS BACA, TERM EXPIRED.

GAYLE A. NACHTIGAL, OF OREGON, TO BE A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE FOR A TERM EXPIRING SEPTEMBER 17, 2012, VICE SOPHIA H. HALL, TERM EXPIRED.

JOHN B. NALBANDIAN, OF KENTUCKY, TO BE A MEMBER OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE STATE JUSTICE INSTITUTE FOR A TERM EXPIRING SEPTEMBER 17, 2010, VICE KEITH MCNAMARA, TERM EXPIRED.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

ANDRE BIROTTE, JR., OF CALIFORNIA, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE THOMAS P. O'BRIEN.

DAVID A. CAPPS, OF INDIANA, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF INDIANA FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE JOSEPH S. VAN BOKKELEN, RESIGNED.

RICHARD S. BARTUNIK, OF NEW YORK, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE GLENN T. SULLIVAN, RESIGNED.

WILLIAM JOSEPH HOCHUL, JR., OF NEW YORK, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE TRISTRANCE P. FLYNN, RESIGNED.

RONALD C. MACHEN, JR., OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE KENNETH L. WAINSTEIN, RESIGNED.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

SALLY QUILLIAN YATES, OF GEORGIA, TO BE UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE DAVID E. NAHMIAS, RESIGNED.

NOEL CULVER MARSH, OF MAINE, TO BE UNITED STATES MARSHAL FOR THE DISTRICT OF MAINE FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE DAVID DONALD VILES.

GEORGE WHITE, OF MISSISSIPPI, TO BE UNITED STATES MARSHAL FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF MISSISSIPPI FOR THE TERM OF FOUR YEARS, VICE NHEMIANA FLOWERS.

BEATRICE A. HANSON, OF NEW YORK, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE FOR VICTIMS OF CRIME, VICE JOHN W. GILLIS.

DISCHARGED NOMINATION

The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works was discharged from further consideration of the following nomination by unanimous consent to be re-referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation and the nomination was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation by unanimous consent under authority of the order of the Senate of 12/23/2009:

TIMOTHY McKEE, OF LOUISIANA, TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE.

WITHDRAWAL

Executive Message transmitted by the President to the Senate on December 23, 2009 withdrawing from further Senate consideration the following nomination:

In 1962 Jim joined WMAL, the predecessor of WJLA (ABC Channel 7), where he served as a dedicated television journalist for more than 40 years. Jim did an outstanding job for Channel 7 and served our region well before retiring just a few years ago. Jim was a man of integrity who will be greatly missed by all of those who had the pleasure of knowing him. My thoughts and prayers go out to his wife, Lizbe, and the rest of his family during these difficult times.

I would like to share an obituary for Jim that ran in the Washington Post on December 22.

[From the Washington Post, Dec. 22, 2009]

Jim Clarke, Emmy-Winning WJLA Anchor and Reporter, Dies (By T. Rees Shapiro)

Jim Clarke, 75, an Emmy Award-winning television journalist for more than 40 years at what became WJLA (Channel 7), died Dec. 21 at his home in Annandale. Mr. Clarke had a heart attack in his sleep after shoveling snow for most of the day before.

In 1962, Mr. Clarke joined WMAL, the predecessor to WJLA, as an evening news anchor and reporter. During his career at the ABC affiliate in Washington, Mr. Clarke focused many of his investigations on consumer advocacy stories and government corruption. He won numerous awards for his work, including nine local Emmy Awards, the Ted Yates Award for courageous journalism and the National Headliner Award for an investigative report on abuses at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where several psychiatric patients died from neglect.

Mr. Clarke was in Norway when the news broke in 1998 about the sex scandal surrounding President Bill Clinton and former White House intern Monica Lewinsky, and he caught the first flight back to begin his coverage. To get a head start during the plane ride home, he wrote his script for the next newscast on the back of an airickness bag.

James Davis Clarke, a native of Auxier, Ky., was a 1956 communication arts graduate of Fordham University in New York. One of his earliest jobs in the news business was as a copyboy for NBC newscaster John Cameron Swayze.

Mr. Clarke's big break came in the early 1960s as a radio reporter for WGH radio in Newport News, Va. He secured a taped interview at the home of Francis Gary Powers, the U-2 spy plane pilot who had been shot down over Russia. The report made news across the country as a rare first-person account of the crash and eventually reached the ears of the WMAL newsman Ed Meyer, who recruited Mr. Clarke to join the ABC affiliate in Washington.

Mr. Clarke retired from WJLA in 2003 as a national affairs reporter.

Survivors include his wife of 48 years, Lizbe Schuster Clarke of Annandale; four children, Christopher Clarke of Washington, Kimberly Allen of Albuquerque, Katie Adamson of Arlington and Suzanne Sprague of Portland, Ore.; and eight grandchildren.

Among colleagues, Mr. Clarke was known to be intrepid. One evening during the 1970s, Mr. Clarke had been out late in Virginia covering a story that was in danger of not making the 6 o'clock evening news.

According to his co-worker John Corcoran, rather than not make the broadcast, Mr. Clarke hopped a ride on the station's helicopter and ordered an assignment editor and intern to pick up an emergency blanket and meet him on the roof of the station. The problem was, there was no helicopter landing pad.

Leaning out the hovering helicopter, Mr. Clarke dropped the tape from his report into the outstretched blanket below, and the segment made it into the editing bays for that evening's news.

INTRODUCING DEcabROMINE ELIMINATION AND CONTROL ACT

HON. CHELLIE PINGREE

In the House of Representatives

Wednesday, December 23, 2009

Ms. PINGREE of Maine. Madam Speaker, I am very proud to introduce the Decabromine Elimination and Control Act today. Since 2005 there have been 44 state-based initiatives to ban brominated flame retardants (PBDEs), but only four have been signed into law, including one in my home state of Maine. That bill was sponsored by my daughter, Maine Speaker of the House Hannah Pingree, and passed by the Maine legislature.

Today, I am honored to continue the long tradition of bringing good ideas from Maine to Washington.

PBDEs are known endocrine disruptors, interfering with the transmission and regulation of thyroid and reproductive hormones. Exposure of infants to PBDEs is of particular concern because these chemicals have produced developmental neurotoxicity in laboratory animals, impairing memory, learning and behavior. Even more worrisome is the fact that breastfeeding infants are exposed to higher concentrations of PBDEs because of the presence of these chemicals in mother's milk. The time has come to remove this chemical from children's toys and clothing. We must take immediate steps to ban this toxic and dangerous chemical.

This bill phases out, and ultimately bans, the last hazardous type of PBDE, Decabromine, by 2013. It mandates disclosure of products containing Decabromine to the Environmental Protection Agency and requires safer alternatives to be created to replace this toxic chemical. I have worked closely with the International Association of Fire Fighters, the Environmental Working Group, Maine Department of Environmental Protection and Environmental Health Strategy Center to develop this important piece of legislation, and I greatly appreciate the contributions of each of these groups in getting us to this critical point.

I look forward to working with my colleagues in the 111th Congress to pass this vital legislation and finally enact a long overdue ban on Decabromine.
RECOGNIZING THE MIRAMAR HIGH SCHOOL PATRIOTS

HON. ALCEE L. HASTINGS OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 23, 2009

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the Miramar High School Patriots’ football team of my hometown, Miramar, Florida. On Friday, December 18, 2009, Miramar beat the DeLand Bulldogs 42–20 to become the first team from Broward County to win a 6A championship. Their 14–1 record and their convincing win in the title game are two things of which all Broward County citizens and all true football fans can be proud.

I congratulate Coach Damon Cogdell and the entire team for a job well done. I especially want to praise quarterback Ryan Wililiams, who passed for five touchdowns in the game, and receiver Ivan McCartney, who caught three of them. I am delighted to laud a team that has achieved great success.

The Miramar High School Patriots are fine examples of young men who have excelled at athletics and academics. By working hard and focusing on the tasks at hand, they have reached the pinnacle of their sport. They are people of whom their peers and everyone can be justifiably proud. I look forward to more championships from them in future years.

CELEBRATING THE NEVADA COUNTY ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS’ 75TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. TOM MCCLINTOCK OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 23, 2009

Mr. McCCLINTOCK. Madam Speaker, I rise to honor the Nevada County Association of Realtors’ 75th anniversary. For 75 years the Nevada County Association of Realtors has been dedicated to helping protect the investment Americans place in their homes.

In 1935, a group of local real estate agents established the Nevada County Association of Realtors with the goal of offering clients and their families the highest level of professional real estate service.

The Nevada County Association of Realtors seeks to maintain and enhance programs, products and volunteer participation as well as develop new services and relationships to meet the demands of its members, clients and the community. The Association promotes the preservation of real property rights and is a tremendous asset to its community.

Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the Nevada County Association of Realtors and also ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing its 75 years of continued service to its community as well as the State of California.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, December 24, 2009 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.
Senate

Chamber Action

Routine Proceedings, pages S13795–S13888

Measures Introduced: Five bills were introduced, as follows: S. 2926–2930. Pages S13882–83

Measures Reported:

S. 69, to establish a fact-finding Commission to extend the study of a prior Commission to investigate and determine facts and circumstances surrounding the relocation, internment, and deportation to Axis countries of Latin Americans of Japanese descent from December 1941 through February 1948, and the impact of those actions by the United States, and to recommend appropriate remedies. (S. Rept. No. 111–112)

S. 1178, to extend Federal recognition to the Chickahominy Indian Tribe, the Chickahominy Indian Tribe-Eastern Division, the Upper Mattaponi Tribe, the Rappahannock Tribe, Inc., the Monacan Indian Nation, and the Nansemond Indian Tribe, with amendments. (S. Rept. No. 111–113)

Measures Passed:

Nuclear Forensics and Attribution Act: Senate passed H.R. 730, to strengthen efforts in the Department of Homeland Security to develop nuclear forensics capabilities to permit attribution of the source of nuclear material, after agreeing to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. Pages S13886–87

Commercial Space Transportation Liability Regime: Senate passed H.R. 3819, to extend the commercial space transportation liability regime, clearing the measure for the President. Page S13887

Measures Considered:

Service Members Home Ownership Tax Act—Agreement: Senate continued consideration of H.R. 3590, to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to modify the first-time homebuyers credit in the case of members of the Armed Forces and certain other Federal employees, taking action on the following amendments proposed thereto:

Adopted:

By 60 yes to 39 nays (Vote No. 394), Reid Amendment No. 2786, in the nature of a substitute. Pages S13796–S13834

Withdrawn:

Reid (for Cardin) Amendment No. 2878 (to Amendment No. 2786), to provide for the establishment of Offices of Minority Health. Pages S13796, S13833

Reid Amendment No. 3292 (to Amendment No. 2878), to change the effective date. Page S13796

During consideration of this measure today, the Senate also took the following action:

By 39 yeas to 60 nays (Vote No. 389), Senate determined that the point of order against Reid Amendment No. 2786 (listed above), as being in violation of Congress’s enumerated powers in article 1, section 8, and in being in violation of the 5th Amendment of the United States Constitution, was not well-taken. Pages S13830–31

By 55 yeas to 44 nays (Vote No. 390), Senate agreed to the motion to waive section 425(a)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 with respect to Reid Amendment No. 2786 (listed above). Thus, the point of order raised was rendered moot. Pages S13804, S13831

Appeal of the Ruling of the Chair with respect to Senate Rule 44, paragraph 4 (disclosure of congressionally directed spending) on Reid Amendment No. 2786 (listed above). (By 57 yeas to 42 nays (Vote No. 391), Senate tabled the Appeal.) Pages S13810, S13831–32

By 39 yeas to 60 nays (Vote No. 392), Senate determined that the point of order against Reid Amendment No. 2786 (listed above), as being in violation of the 10th Amendment of the United States Constitution, was not well-taken. Pages S13822, S13832

Motion to suspend Rule 22 of the Standing Rules of the Senate for the purpose of proposing and considering DeMint Amendment No. 3297 (create point of order). (By 53 yeas to 46 nays (Vote No. 393), Senate tabled the Motion.) Pages S13832–33

By 60 yeas to 39 nays (Vote No. 395), three-fifths of those Senators duly chosen and sworn, having voted in the affirmative, Senate agreed to the motion to close further debate on the bill. Page S13834

A unanimous-consent agreement was reached providing for further consideration of the bill at 6:45
a.m., on Thursday, December 24, 2009, with the time until 7 a.m. equally divided and controlled between the two Leaders, or their designees; and Senate vote on passage of the bill at 7 a.m., as provided for under the previous order.

Message from the President: Senate received the following message from the President of the United States:

Transmitting, pursuant to law, the notification of the President’s intention to designate the Republic of Maldives as a beneficiary developing country and to terminate the designations of Croatia and Equatorial New Guinea as beneficiary developing programs under the Generalized System of Preferences program; which was referred to the Committee on Finance. (PM–39)

McGee Nomination—Referral Agreement: A unanimous-consent agreement was reached providing that Committee on Environment and Public Works be discharged from further consideration of the nomination of Timothy McGee, of Louisiana, to be an Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and be referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation.

Nominations Received: Senate received the following nominations:

Daniel J. Becker, of Utah, to be a Member of the Board of Directors of the State Justice Institute for a term expiring September 17, 2010.

James R. Hannah, of Arkansas, to be a Member of the Board of Directors of the State Justice Institute for a term expiring September 17, 2010.

Gayle A. Nachtigal, of Oregon, to be a Member of the Board of Directors of the State Justice Institute for a term expiring September 17, 2012.

John B. Nalbandian, of Kentucky, to be a Member of the Board of Directors of the State Justice Institute for a term expiring September 17, 2010.

André Birotte, Jr., of California, to be United States Attorney for the Central District of California for the term of four years.

David A. Capp, of Indiana, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Indiana for the term of four years.

Richard S. Hartunian, of New York, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of New York for the term of four years.

William Joseph Hochul, Jr., of New York, to be United States Attorney for the Western District of New York for the term of four years.

Ronald C. Machen, Jr., of the District of Columbia, to be United States Attorney for the District of Columbia for the term of four years.

Anne M. Tompkins, of North Carolina, to be United States Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina for the term of four years.

Sally Quillian Yates, of Georgia, to be United States Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia for the term of four years.

Noel Culver March, of Maine, to be United States Marshal for the District of Maine for the term of four years.

George White, of Mississippi, to be United States Marshal for the Southern District of Mississippi for the term of four years.

Beatrice A. Hanson, of New York, to be Director of the Office for Victims of Crime.

Nomination Withdrawn: Senate received notification of withdrawal of the following nomination:

Suedeen G. Kelly, of New Mexico, to be a Member of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for the term expiring June 30, 2014, which was sent to the Senate on July 28, 2009.

Messages from the House:

Measures Referred:

Executive Communications:

Executive Reports of Committees:

Additional Cosponsors:

Statements on Introduced Bills/Resolutions:

Additional Statements:

Authorities for Committees to Meet:

Privileges of the Floor:

Record Votes: Seven record votes were taken today. (Total—395)

Adjournment: Senate convened at 9:45 a.m. and adjourned at 8:15 p.m., until 6:45 a.m. on Thursday, December 24, 2009. (For Senate’s program, see the remarks of the Acting Majority Leader in today’s Record on page S13887.)

Committee Meetings

(Committees not listed did not meet)

BUSINESS MEETING

Committee on Finance: Committee ordered favorably reported the nominations of Lael Brainard, of the District of Columbia, to be Under Secretary, Michael F. Mundaca, of New York, and Mary John Miller, of Maryland, both to be Assistant Secretary, and Charles Collyns, of Maryland, to be a Deputy Under Secretary, all of the Department of the Treasury, Michael W. Punke, of Montana, to be a Deputy United States Trade Representative, with the rank of Ambassador, Islam A. Siddiqui, of Virginia, to be Chief Agricultural Negotiator, Office of the United States Trade Representative, with the rank of Ambassador, and Jim R. Esquee, of New York, and Ellen Gloninger Murray, of Virginia, both to be Assistant Secretary, and Bryan Hayes Samuels, of Illinois, to be Commissioner on Children, Youth, and Families, all of the Department of Health and Human Services.

---

House of Representatives

Chamber Action

Public Bills and Resolutions Introduced: There were no public bills or resolutions introduced today.

Reports Filed: There were no reports filed today.

Speaker: Read a letter from the Speaker wherein she appointed Representative Moran (VA) to act as Speaker Pro Tempore for today.

Chaplain: The prayer was offered by the Guest Chaplain, Reverend Gene Hemrick, Washington Theological Union, Washington, DC.

Membership of Standing Committees: Read a letter from Representative Larson (CT), Chairman, Democratic Caucus wherein he informed the Speaker that Representative Parker Griffith is no longer a member of the Democratic Caucus. Subsequently, read letters from the Speaker wherein she advised Chairman Oberstar, Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, Chairwoman Velázquez, Committee on Small Business, and Chairman Gordon, Committee on Science and Technology that Representative Parker Griffith’s election to the Committees on Transportation and Infrastructure, Small Business, and Science and Technology have been automatically vacated pursuant to clause 5(b) of rule X, effective today.

Quorum Calls—Votes: There were no Yea and Nay votes, and there were no Recorded votes. There were no quorum calls.

Adjournment: The House met at 12 noon and at 12:04 p.m., the House stands adjourned until 10 a.m. on Saturday, December 26, 2009 unless it sooner has received a message from the Senate transmitting its concurrence in H. Con. Res. 223, in which case the House shall stand adjourned pursuant to that concurrent resolution.

Committee Meetings

No committee meetings were held.

Joint Meetings

No joint committee meetings were held.

---

NEW PUBLIC LAWS

(For last listing of Public Laws, see DAILY DIGEST, p. D1511)

S. 1422, to amend the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 to clarify the eligibility requirements with respect to airline flight crews. Signed on December 21, 2009. (Public Law 111–119)

---

COMMITTEE MEETINGS FOR THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 2009

(Committee meetings are open unless otherwise indicated)

Senate

No meetings/hearings scheduled.

House

No committee meetings are scheduled.
Next Meeting of the SENATE
6:45 a.m., Thursday, December 24

Senate Chamber

Program for Thursday: Senate will continue consideration of H.R. 3590, Service Members Home Ownership Tax Act, and vote on passage of the bill, and passage of H.R. 4314, an act to permit continued financing of government operations at 7 a.m.

Next Meeting of the HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
10 a.m., Saturday, December 26

House Chamber

Program for Saturday: To be announced.

Extensions of Remarks, as inserted in this issue

HOUSE

Hastings, Alcee L., Fla., E3068
McClintock, Tom, Calif., E3068
McCollum, Betty, Minn., E3067
Pingree, Chellie, Me., E3067
Wolf, Frank R., Va., E3067

Congressional Record

The Congressional Record (USPS 087-390). The Periodicals postage is paid at Washington, D.C. The public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, are printed pursuant to directions of the Joint Committee on Printing as authorized by appropriate provisions of Title 44, United States Code, and published for each day that one or both Houses are in session, excepting very infrequent instances when two or more unusually small consecutive issues are printed one time. ¶ Public access to the Congressional Record is available online through GPO Access, a service of the Government Printing Office, free of charge to the user. The online database is updated each day the Congressional Record is published. The database includes both text and graphics from the beginning of the 103d Congress, 2d session (January 1994) forward. It is available through GPO Access at www.gpo.gov/gpoaccess. Customers can also access this information with WAIS client software, via telnet at swais.access.gpo.gov, or dial-in using communications software and a modem at 202-512-1661. Questions or comments regarding this database or GPO Access can be directed to the GPO Access User Support Team at: E-Mail: gpoaccess@gpo.gov; Phone 1-888-293-6498 (toll-free), 202–512–1800 (D.C. area); Fax: 202–512–1262. The Team’s hours of availability are Monday through Friday, 7:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Eastern Standard Time, except Federal holidays. ¶ The Congressional Record paper and 24x microfiche edition will be furnished by mail to subscribers, free of postage, at the following prices: paper edition, $252.00 for six months, $503.00 per year, or purchased as follows: less than 200 pages, $10.50; between 200 and 400 pages, $21.00; greater than 400 pages, $31.50, payable in advance; microfiche edition, $146.00 per year, or purchased for $3.00 per issue payable in advance. The semimonthly Congressional Record Index may be purchased for the same per issue prices. To place an order for any of these products, visit the U.S. Government Online Bookstore at: bookstore.gpo.gov. Mail orders to: Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, PA 15250-7954, or phone orders to 866-512-1800 (toll free), 202-512-1800 (D.C. area), or fax to 202-512-2250. Remit check or money order, made payable to the Superintendent of Documents, or use VISA, MasterCard, Discover, American Express, or GPO Deposit Account. ¶ Following each session of Congress, the daily Congressional Record is revised, printed, permanently bound and sold by the Superintendent of Documents in individual parts or by sets. ¶ With the exception of copyrighted articles, there are no restrictions on the republication of material from the Congressional Record.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to the Superintendent of Documents, Congressional Record, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, along with the entire mailing label from the last issue received.