IN PRAISE OF MICHAEL COPPS

Mr. KAUFMAN. Madam President, I rise once again to honor one of our Nation's great Federal employees.

The Federal employee I am recognizing this week—and this is my 89th since last May, and here they are on the chart—has made a name for himself as an advocate for sensible regulation of the communications industry.

At the Federal Communications Commission, Michael Copps has been a tireless fighter for the public interest and a steadfast campaigner for localism in broadcasting. In his position as one of the five Commissioners appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate to oversee the regulation of our communications industry, Mike must work with the other Commissioners to come to agreement on key issues affecting broadcasting, the Internet, and other media. Whether they agree with him or not, I know they have to respect and admire his passion and energy in advocating for what he believes to be the best way to serve the American people.

I did not choose to honor Mike only because he is one of the FCC's Commissioners; he has had a distinguished public service career for three decades. His service as Commissioner is just his latest role in the Federal Government. Mike is currently in his second term, having been appointed twice by President George W. Bush.

Before his appointment to the FCC, Mike served at the Department of Commerce as the Assistant Secretary for Trade Development and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Basic Industries.

Prior to his service with the Commerce Department, Mike spent 12 years here in the Senate as chief of staff to former Senator Fritz Hollings of South Carolina. That is how I got to know Mike, when I was chief of staff for now-Vice President and then-Senator JOE BIDEN. I can say from personal experience that, as a chief of staff, Mike was truly first class. He earned the respect and admiration of his colleagues across the Senate on both sides of the aisle. Smart, exercising good judgment, and a very good listener, Mike embodied the skills and values that make someone a great chief of staff.

Before coming to Washington in 1970, he spent time working in the private sector for a Fortune 500 company, and he also taught as a history professor for some years at Loyola University of the South, in New Orleans. He holds a bachelor's degree from Wofford College in South Carolina and a Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

In his current role, Mike has been an untiring advocate for the public and has worked to push the FCC back toward its core mission: enforcing the regulations that maintain fair competition, protecting consumers, and ensuring that the communications industry serves the public interest. Particularly, he has been a crusader against control of the Internet by big corporations. His promotion of an open Internet is based on his belief that communications media should benefit all and foster the growth and development of communities.

Last week, I spoke from this desk about the dangers of regulatory capture. Over the past decade, many of our regulatory agencies have been caught up in a deregulatory mindset that viewed self-regulation as not only adequate but preferable. Michael Copps has long been a voice of reason against regulatory capture.

He is just one example of the many outstanding men and women at the Federal Communications Commission. They are all truly great Federal employees, and I hope my colleagues will join me in honoring their service to our Nation.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

NOMINATION OF ELENA KAGAN

Mr. JOHANNS. Madam President, a Senator has an enormous duty when it comes to evaluating a Supreme Court nominee. The duty demands that Senators examine whether the person nominated to the highest Court in the land will uphold and defend the principles contained in the Constitution, refrain from judicial activism, and respect the rule of law.

Some have characterized this duty as one of the most important and far-reaching decisions that a Senator will make, and it is one of the most important decisions in their entire time in the Senate.

As the nomination process for Ms. Kagan began, I went into it with an open mind and a steadfast resolve to evaluate the nominee's qualifications without looking through a partisan lens. In fact, having gone through the confirmation process myself before being sworn in as Secretary of Agriculture, I know what an important process this is.

Senators have a strong duty to take it seriously. Considering Supreme Court judgeships are lifetime appointments, these nominations require even closer scrutiny. Thus, Senators must carefully review any Supreme Court nominee's record and their judicial philosophy.

After this careful review and closely monitoring the hearings before the Judiciary Committee, I came to the conclusion that I could not support this nomination.

The Court is not a place to create laws, and I was not convinced that Ms. Kagan understands this fundamental premise. Additionally, her long career as a political adviser and academic insufficiently prepares her for a lifetime appointment to the country's highest Court.

For example, prior to her position as Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan had never taken a case to trial. I find that remarkable. Since her time as Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan has only argued six cases before the Supreme Court.

Beyond that lack of experience, there are several other areas that concern me about this nomination. Ms. Kagan's view of the second amendment is disturbing to me. As a law clerk for U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, she wrote that she was ''not sympathetic''—''not sympathetic''—to the legal assertion that the DC gun ban violated citizens' constitutional right to bear arms.

Probably the most recent glimpse into Ms. Kagan's view of the second amendment is her failure to file a brief on behalf of the petitioner in the McDonald case regarding Chicago gun bans. The Supreme Court had already been clear on the DC gun ban, and Chicago's law clearly impacted a variety of Federal laws and programs.

Yet, as Solicitor General, she chose to sit quietly, tacitly casting aside a very important constitutional protection. Her not filing demonstrated the government's lack of interest or concern in protecting this important constitutional right.

Ms. Kagan's lack of action is viewed by many as a bias against the second amendment, as if she were picking and choosing which constitutional provisions she liked. Judges cannot selectively disregard the Constitution when it is convenient or in line with their point of view. So Ms. Kagan's record in this area is enormously troubling for someone who wants to sit on the Supreme Court.

Another very serious concern is her actions as an adviser to President Clinton were instrumental in keeping partial-birth abortion legal in the 1990s. During her time in the White House, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists privately briefed Ms. Kagan on the partial-birth abortion procedure. Their opinion was clear and lacing equivocation.

According to a memo Ms. Kagan wrote, the medical group said:

> In the vast majority of cases, selection of the partial birth procedure is not necessary to avert serious adverse consequences to a woman's health. There just aren't many circumstances where use of the partial-birth abortion is the least risky, let alone the necessary approach.

The group's public draft statement went on to say:

> A select panel convened by ACOG could identify no circumstances under which the partial birth procedure would be the only option to save the life or preserve the health of the woman.

Upon hearing this news, Kagan wrote in a memo that the statement would be ''a disaster.'' Then she edited the document and advised the medical group to include a much different sentence claiming partial-birth abortion ''may be the best or most appropriate procedure in a particular circumstance to save the life or preserve the health of a woman.''

The original sentence and Ms. Kagan's sentence are vastly different, almost complete opposites. Yet Ms. Kagan's language was copied verbatim into the medical organization's final statement.

While Ms. Kagan has no medical credentials whatsoever, she bullied her personal views into the opinion of these medical professionals.

Unfortunately, this assumed expert medical opinion was relied upon heavily in subsequent court cases, including the one that struck down Nebraska's partial-birth abortion ban—my State. U.S. District Court Judge Richard Kopf devoted more than 15 pages of his opinion to the policy statement that Kagan wrote.

Judge Kopf believed the statement was entitled to judicial deference because, ''Before and during the task force meeting, neither ACOG nor the task force members conversed with other individuals or organizations,'' he wrote in his opinion.

It is beyond belief and beyond unfortunate that no one was aware of Ms. Kagan's extensive involvement in drafting the supposedly independent policy statement; otherwise, this horrific procedure may have been banned 10 years earlier.

This type of extreme political policy engineering should give us all great pause and solid reason to question whether Ms. Kagan could serve as a truly neutral umpire on the bench.

My concerns do not stop there. My concerns extend further to her role as dean of the Harvard Law School. Ms. Kagan was confronted with the Solomon amendment, a Federal law that requires schools receiving Federal funds to give equal access to military recruiters. It was very straightforward. Yet she chose to ignore this law and denied military access to Harvard's on-campus recruiting program.

Even the Supreme Court unanimously ruled against Ms. Kagan in this matter. This is especially troubling that Ms. Kagan would openly defy Federal law, especially in a time of war.

Her judgment and her reading of the law was fundamentally flawed, and every one of her potential colleagues agreed she was wrong. That is not a good sign for things to come.

For these reasons and others, I do not have confidence that Ms. Kagan will be able to put aside her personal or political agenda before sitting on the bench.

As the National Right to Life Committee noted:

> We anticipate that Ms. Kagan often will treat the U.S. Constitution not as a body of basic law that truly constrains both legislators and judges, but rather as a cookbook in which may be found legal recipes that will allow the imposition of the policies that Ms. Kagan deems to be justified or advisable, or that are so regarded by whatever groups she sees as the enlightened elites on a given subject.

A lifetime appointment to the highest Court in the land is far too important a decision to have so many concerns. When the Senate votes on the nomination of Ms. Kagan, I will vote no. Doing otherwise would ignore the integrity of our Constitution and it would not be in the best interest of this great country.

Madam President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. ROBERTS. I ask unanimous consent to speak up to 15 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, after careful consideration and assessment of the nominee's record and expressed views, I rise today to express my opposition to Solicitor General Elena Kagan's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the nomination process, a telling and inciteful statement by another Senator is most applicable and pertinent. During the Senate's debate on the nomination of Chief Justice John Roberts, then Senator Barack Obama stated:

> . . . that while adherence to legal precedent and rules of statutory or constitutional construction will dispose of 95 percent of the cases that come before the court, so that both a Scalia or Ginsburg will arrive at the same place most of the time on those 95 percent of the cases—what matters on the Supreme Court is those 5 percent of cases that are truly difficult.
> In those cases, adherence to precedent and rules will only get you through the 25th mile of the marathon.
> That last mile can only be determined on the basis of 1) one's deepest values, 2) one's core concerns, 3) one's broader perspectives on how the world works, and 4) the depth and breadth of one's empathy.

I respectfully disagree with this rationale and find it troubling. Our judges must decide all cases in adherence to legal precedent and rules of statutory or constitutional construction.

The role of a judge is not to rule based on his or her own personal judgments or comply with one's empathy, how they think the world really works, concerns and values—deep or shallow—all subject to personal views, ideology and the winds of time and political change. No, the role of a judge should adhere to the laws as they are written.

An appointment to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States is a lifetime term. It was crafted by our Founders to protect and insulate the highest Court of our land from personal concern, empathy, individual values or how one thinks the world really works at some point of time, not to mention the threat of any influence of politics.

Nominations to the highest bench should therefore not be considered lightly. It is one of the most important votes a Senator has the privilege to cast.

And I would submit compared to the standard of legal precedent, statutory rules, constitutional construction, again personal values, concerns, how the world allegedly works and one's personal criteria of empathy represents a lesser standard—sort of a standard lite.

The qualifications of the nominee must be carefully considered. As U.S. Senators, we have an obligation to ensure that our courts are filled with qualified, impartial judges.

In light of that I must ask—who is Elena Kagan?

In reviewing Ms. Kagan's qualifications, I find her lack of judicial experience striking.

While others note that serving as a judge is not a requirement for a Supreme Court nomination, it has also been noted that every nominee in nearly 40 years to the Supreme Court has had extensive judicial experience, whether from the bench or as a litigator in the courtroom.

Ms. Kagan's litigation experience is limited, with the majority of her arguments being made during her brief tenure as the U.S. Solicitor General.

Given her obvious lack of experience in the court room, one must ask if this is the best position to receive on-the-job-training? Will the ''craft'' of judging come innately to Ms. Kagan or is it a skill honed by years of practice and judicial experience?

Some have argued in defense of such a thin judicial resume that nominees can bring a ''real world''—- whatever that is—- perspective to the bench. Nonetheless, much of the nominee's experience lies in the hallowed, Ivy League, halls of academia, indeed a world of its own.

While I do not question the merits of a strong university background, I question how that makes one more in tune with the ''real world.''

Additionally, the nominee's resume includes her positions as special counsel and policy advisor in the Clinton administration—a role in which she truly relished her job. During her tenure she advocated for policies involving the second amendment.

In response to a Supreme Court decision which struck down the Brady Act's requirement of background checks before gun sales, documents from the nominee's tenure suggested that the administration explore how to maneuver around the Court's decision by executive action.

The advice here goes beyond legal counsel and indicates a clear interest in achieving a policy goal by going around the Supreme Court's decision, while forgoing the jurisdiction of Congress.

When determining how Ms. Kagan may approach a seat on the Court, her position as a policy adviser is one of the few records available to review.

Does this type of maneuvering indicate how Ms. Kagan would use her position as a Supreme Court Justice to justify an agenda where a policy goal is the intended outcome?

I must also say that as dean of Harvard Law School, Ms. Kagan's effort to ban military recruiters from the main placement office on campus is deeply troubling.

The justification for violating the Solomon Amendment—named after Congressman Gerald Solomon—was to protest the military's don't ask, don't tell policy. This action was also consistent with her own expressed views.

It must be noted, blocking access to military recruiters is counter to Federal law.

Only when threatened with the loss of Federal funding, did Harvard comply. Ms. Kagan then used a stayed decision by an appellate court, which determined the Solomon Amendment was unconstitutional, to reinstitute the ban. Shortly thereafter, the Supreme Court overturned the appellate court's decision by an 8–0 ruling.

According to Chief Justice John Roberts, ''A military recruiter's mere presence on campus does not violate a law school's right to associate, regardless of how repugnant the law school considers the recruiter's message.''

I must say, I don't know of any recruiter who would stand up and debate students in the circumstance of a policy judgment—more to the point, in regard to a policy that is as controversial as don't ask, don't tell. They are there to recruit individual students or to answer questions they may have.

U.S. servicemembers deserve our unfettered support, as they face unimaginable danger on the front line in defense of our Nation. Their willingness to sacrifice their time away from home and loved ones while serving in harsh and dangerous places under difficult circumstances should be honored.

It seems to me we dishonor their sacrifices and service by hollow justifications of policy agendas. These efforts are a clear indication to me, as well as my fellow Kansans, that Ms. Kagan's agenda is at odds with her role as a dean and a future Supreme Court Justice, and is clearly out of step with the average American no matter how deep her concern, empathy, values or the real world she believed she could change.

It is clear from her time as a policy adviser during the Clinton administration—a job she truly relished—that she supports methods of enacting policy changes through administrative means and around the jurisdiction of the legislative branch.

This type of disregard for the jurisdiction of the elected branch of government is concerning.

Ms. Kagan's zeal and enthusiasm as a political advisor and an academic does not qualify her for a lifetime appointment to our Nation's highest Court.

Not only does she lack experience on the bench, but her record clearly demonstrates a propensity towards pursuing an activist agenda.

In her own words, Ms. Kagan confessed difficulty in ''taking off the advocate's hat [to] put on the judge's hat.'' This admission is at best worrisome; at worst, a clear indication of her intent to legislate from the bench.

We have a constitutional obligation to ensure that our judges are impartial and faithful to the law. During Chief Justice John Roberts' confirmation hearing, he noted that ''Judges and Justices are servants of the law, not the other way around. Judges are like umpires. Umpires don't make the rules, they apply them. The role of an umpire and judge is critical. They make sure everybody plays by the rules, but it is a limited role. Nobody ever went to a ball game to see the umpire.'' They may go to criticize the umpire, but they do not go to see him.

I am not convinced that Ms. Kagan will limit herself to merely applying the rules.

Given the limited judicial background and a lack of forthrightness in queries as to her judicial philosophy during the nomination hearings, I am fearful that this nomination will serve as another tool in what we have witnessed in further encroachment of government into the everyday lives of the American people.

Kansans have made clear to me that they do not want activist judges on the Court and they do not want additional government intrusion into their daily lives and pocketbooks, especially coming from the bench.

Unfortunately, I think appointing Ms. Kagan to the Court will result in more of both. Therefore, I must oppose her nomination.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. BURR. The American people are worried about the direction of our country, and I absolutely share their concern. The public has witnessed Washington's growing disregard for the Constitution and its limits on government power. Too many of those powers see no limits to their authority, and that, to me, is frightening.

The size of government has exploded, spending is out of control, the national debt is soaring, and Congress has passed thousands of pages of legislation with little concern for the effects on the rights of everyday Americans and with no thought at all to the debt we saddle our children and our grandchildren with.

The Founding Fathers knew the dangers of expanding government power. The Founders knew what Barry Goldwater knew when he said: ''A government strong enough to give you what you want is strong enough to take it away.''

They established the judiciary branch in order to protect against an overly aggressive government. They envisioned it as a neutral arbiter of disputes based on the written law and as a check on government power grabs beyond the intended authority.

This is why the judiciary is so important and why the lifetime appointment of a Justice to the Supreme Court is one of the most serious actions any of us will consider. We must have judges who are committed to the job of holding us to the words of the Constitution and laws that are written.

We, in Congress, have proven again and again that we will not limit ourselves, and the executive branch continues to do the same. The American people knew this, and that is why they are concerned about President Obama's nomination of Elena Kagan to the U.S. Supreme Court. I am concerned that Ms. Kagan does not seem to recognize the limits the Constitution places on the Federal Government and does not understand or seem to understand the role of a Supreme Court Justice.

Ms. Kagan, of course, does not have a judicial record for us to base our decisions on. I do not think that alone should disqualify her, but it does make it difficult to discern how she will perform as a judge. Ms. Kagan has spent most of her career in political roles and in the academic world. I do not think it is appropriate to cast my vote based only on her politics, but I do think her record shows she has been unable to separate her politics from her legal advice, even in her purely legal role in clerking for the Supreme Court. This is incredibly problematic.

I am concerned Ms. Kagan will only further the rapid expansion of the Federal Government, that her actions, particularly on issues such as military recruiting, second amendment rights, and abortion, show that her first allegiance is to her own political views. Her record and her testimony demonstrate that she is likely to limit the powers of the Federal Government only based on her personal political views and not based on the enumerated powers of the Constitution.

Our Founding Fathers established a Federal Government of limited power. They enumerated those powers and intended the list to be exclusive. In the 10th amendment, they specifically state: Powers not expressly granted to the Federal Government in the Constitution are reserved for the States. Everything not specifically named in the list of congressional powers was intended to be beyond Federal Government reach.

Unfortunately, legal progressives have sought to stretch that list far beyond its breaking point. Often they have chosen as their tool the commerce clause, which gives Congress the authority to regulate commerce amongst the States. Over the years, Congress has relied on the commerce clause to pass laws well beyond the scope of what our Founding Fathers intended, laws regulating matters totally unrelated to interstate commerce, such as how much wheat a farmer can grow on his own land for his own use or where a person might possess a firearm.

The Framers intended the limited nature of Congress's power as a method to protect the freedom of individual Americans to go about their lives without undue interference from government, but the limits the Constitution established matter only if our judges are willing to enforce them.

I am sad to say I do not believe Ms. Kagan will enforce those limitations. During her hearings, Senator COBURN asked Ms. Kagan a very basic question, but it is an important question that deserves a direct and straightforward answer. Senator COBURN asked this: ''If I wanted to sponsor a bill and it said, Americans, you have to eat three vegetables and three fruits every day, and I got it through Congress, and it is now the law of the land, does that violate the commerce clause?''

While Ms. Kagan acknowledged this would be a dumb law, she repeatedly stated the Court should give great deference to the will of Congress. She said: ''We can come up with sort of, you know, just ridiculous sounding laws and the principal protector against bad laws is the political branches themselves.''

I can certainly see why the American people are afraid, if the task of protecting against bad laws is left solely up to the political branch. Ms. Kagan had extreme difficulty in recognizing any limit at all on Federal powers. She simply refused to acknowledge that the Federal Government cannot pass a law telling American citizens what to eat.

Of course, I can see why the Obama administration supports her. The recently passed health care legislation is an exercise of unprecedented government power. The new health care law mandates—mandates—that Americans purchase health insurance.

By forcing Americans to purchase government-regulated insurance and by threatening them with IRS tax sanctions, the Obama administration is forcing its way into American lives in a way this country has never witnessed. Never before has the Federal Government forced Americans, under threat, to purchase a particular good or service.

I strongly disagree and most Americans disagree with this expansive view of the Federal Government's powers. We need Justices on the Supreme Court who are ready and willing to stand and defend the Constitution. We need Justices who recognize that there are, in fact, limits to the Federal Government's powers.

Not only must Supreme Court Justices recognize and enforce the limitations of the Federal Government, but they cannot owe any allegiance to advancing the political agendas of the President who appointed them. I do not believe Ms. Kagan fully appreciates this critical point. To the contrary, I believe that, if confirmed, she will be tied more to her own political agenda than to the Constitution of this great country.

Ms. Kagan's record is truly disconcerting to me. Throughout her career, her record reveals that she put politics above the law. Such a philosophy has no place in the Supreme Court. I oppose Ms. Kagan not because of her political views, I oppose her because she has not demonstrated an ability to leave those political views at the courthouse door. As such, she fails to meet the minimum requirement for any judicial appointment: impartial fidelity to the written law.

On military recruiting, Ms. Kagan has fought zealously to keep recruiters off our campuses during a time of war. As dean of Harvard Law School, she sent e-mails to the entire Harvard Law School community saying she abhors it, the military's don't ask, don't tell policy, and calling it a ''profound wrong,'' a ''moral injustice of the first order.''

The Obama administration has defended her actions against military recruiters saying these claims were overblown because she ultimately continued the practice of her predecessor in allowing the military to recruit through the school's veterans organization, which was primarily a social organization with fewer than 20 members.

Yet even this paltry action was only a way to continue to receive Federal funding for the school. A Federal law, known as the Solomon Amendment, denies Federal funding to any institution of higher education that has a policy or practice that either prohibits or, in effect, prevents the military from gaining access to the campus or access to students on campus for the purpose of military recruiting in a manner that is at least equal in quality and scope to the access to campus and to students that is provided by any other employer.

Even then she explains that doing so caused great distress. Ms. Kagan did everything she could to fight the Solomon Amendment, even signing on to an amicus brief in the Supreme Court in the case of Rumsfeld v. FAIR, with about 40 other law professors opposing the amendment. The Supreme Court unanimously rejected their argument. Not one Justice found it convincing—not Souter, not Breyer, not Ginsburg, not Stevens.

Ms. Kagan has demonstrated similarly poor judgment on the second amendment. When she was clerking for Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, she had the opportunity to consider Sandidge v. United States, a DC firearms case remarkably similar to the 2008 DC v. Heller case, in which the Court ultimately struck down the DC gun ban. In evaluating the case for Justice Marshall, she recommended that the Court not even consider the case.

Ms. Kagan wrote that the petitioner's ''sole contention is that the District of Columbia's firearms statutes violate his constitutional right to 'keep and bear arms,' '' and then said, ''I'm not sympathetic.'' That was her remark to Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Ms. Kagan also worked on several anti-second amendment initiatives in the Clinton administration. She worked on the Clinton administration's response to the Supreme Court's 1997 decision striking down parts of the Brady handbill law. The Court there said that Congress could not command State and local chief law enforcement officers to conduct Federal background checks on handgun purchasers. She considered such proposals as outlawing the sale of handguns where a chief law enforcement officer was unavailable or unwilling to conduct a background check, and also suggested that President Clinton issue an Executive Order to do the same.

She coauthored two policy memos advocating for events and gun control proposals, including legislation requiring background checks for all secondary market gun purchases, a ''gun tracing initiative,'' a new law holding adults liable for giving children easy access to guns, and a call for a new gun design ''that can be shot only by authorized adults.''

She drafted an Executive Order restricting the importation of dozens of semiautomatic rifles that had been considered ''sporting'' and importable under the 1994 assault weapons ban. One of her colleagues in the White House described the plan by saying, ''We are taking the law and bending it as far as we can to capture a whole new class of guns.''

She also worked on an effort to allow background check information from lawful sales to be retained by law enforcement, and a member of her staff wrote, ''the longer we are able to keep records—even days, weeks—the more useful [it] will be as an overall law enforcement tool.

This, of course, is exactly what the gunners don't want.'' ''Gunners,'' a new word.

As Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan notably declined to submit a brief in support of the petitioner in the McDonald case—proably the biggest second amendment case in decades.

In working on the Volunteer Protection Act, Ms. Kagan expressed concern to the Department of Justice that ''Bad guy orgs'' like the NRA and the KKK might be included in a ''cumulative list'' of nonprofits whose volunteers would qualify for liability protection from lawsuits. To lump the NRA in with such a despicable organization is an insult to gun owners across America.

On partial-birth abortion and on taxpayer-funded abortions, Ms. Kagan also has a history of far-left advocacy on abortion issues, skewing even her legal judgments based upon personal politics.

When she was working for Justice Marshall, she urged him to vote to deny review of a lower court decision holding that prison inmates had a constitutional right to taxpayer-funded elective abortions, and even though she admitted that parts of the decision were ''ludicrous'' and that the facts showed no constitutional violations, she called it ''well-intentioned.'' She insisted the Court should deny review, and let this decision stand, because she was concerned that the Court might ''create some very bad law on abortion.''

Memos and handwritten notes during her time in the Clinton White House demonstrate that she pushed even the Clinton administration further to the left on the issue. President Clinton at the time had expressed a desire to ban all elective partial-birth abortions, to which, as she wrote in a handwritten note to the White House Counsel at the time, ''This is a problem. . . .'' She was the lead person working on a strategy to ensure that elective partial-birth abortions remained available without real restrictions. In one memo, she lays out her plan to support a ''ban'' that includes a ''general health exception'' that would make the ban largely meaningless.

Even when she heard that the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists was prepared to issue a statement stating that they ''could identify no circumstances under which [the partial-birth] procedure . . . would be the only option to save the life or preserve the health of the woman,'' she continued her fight.

In an internal White House memo, she notes that the medical statement ''would be a disaster'' for the White House's case against the partial-birth abortion ban. Documents show that she then drafted new language, hedging the original medical judgment, which the organization then published as their own, verbatim.

She then authored a memo to President Clinton arguing that his preferred approach, without the health exception, was unconstitutional, and that ''the groups will go crazy.'' Of course, in 2003, Congress passed, and President Bush signed, a law prohibiting partial-birth abortion, without such a health exception. The Supreme Court upheld that law.

Conclusion: I am afraid Ms. Kagan's record demonstrates that she substitutes her own political viewpoints for legal judgment. If confirmed, I believe Ms. Kagan will add to Washington's growing disregard for the Constitution of this country and its limits on government power, instead of protecting against intrusion and government actions, as the courts were designed to do.

I thank the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I am going to speak in support of Solicitor Elena Kagan for the Supreme Court in a minute, but just for a brief minute, I wish to speak about another very important issue, the legislation we are about to vote on, the legislation that will help teachers and police officers and firefighters and other workers retain their jobs.

I wish to thank my colleagues from Maine, Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE and Senator SUSAN COLLINS, for their courageous support of this measure. I would like to take a moment to talk about the critically important component of the legislation we will be voting on shortly.

That component is called the local share language that will send critical aid directly to county governments in any State. The counties in my State are always worried. When we send the money to Albany, they never see it or they see it much later and Albany takes a cut. But legislation that I have been able to put into the bill says: If the local area pays for part of Medicaid, then they should be reimbursed directly.

Anyone who is familiar with New York knows we have some of the highest property taxes in the Nation, way too high.

In fact, residents in West Chester County have the unfortunate distinction of having paid the most in property taxes in the entire country. Nassau County residents follow quickly. On the list of the top 20 counties with the highest property taxes, 5 are in New York. This provision, which will send a total of $530 million directly to local county governments, will have a tangible and important benefit for New Yorkers everywhere. Its No. 1 job is going to prevent counties from having to raise their already too high property taxes. County executives from one end of the State to the other—in Erie County, Nassau County, and others—have told me if they can get this money, this Medicaid relief—the Medicaid burden is so high—it will enable them to not raise property taxes. That is why I fought so hard to ensure this local share language was included in the first stimulus package and now in this bill. We know money sent to Albany far too often stays in Albany. The bill will not only provide property tax relief, it is an investment in our future. It will keep teachers in the classroom and cops on the beat and firefighters in the firehouses. A recession is no excuse to prevent the children from getting the best education they can get, no excuse for letting criminals get away from the dastardly crimes they commit.

Speaking of our children and their futures, I wish to mention one more important thing. We are making these investments without adding a dime to the Federal deficit. In fact, this bill, in addition to the benefits it contains, will reduce the deficit by over $1 billion. Congress should be focused like a laser on fighting unemployment and getting the economy humming on all cylinders again. This bill is part of that ongoing effort. For the good of the country, I implore my colleagues to support this sensible, important bill.

KAGAN NOMINATION

Madam President, later today, we will confirm an exceptionally well-qualified candidate to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and average Americans will be a step closer to once again having their voices heard in the highest Court in the land. This is because Solicitor General Elena Kagan brings both moderation and practical experience to a Court sorely in need of both.

Why, then, are so many fighting over General Kagan, a nominee who is mainstream through and through? Why are so many fighting? Our judicial system is at the tipping point. Of the six most conservative Justices in living memory, four are on the Court right now. Two of those four were confirmed within the last 5 years. It didn't happen by accident. Many conservatives decry what they call liberal judicial activism, but what they want is judicial activism of the right. Make no mistake about that. There can be activists on the left and on the right. Both seek to impose their views rather than follow the law.

The supposedly staunch opposition to judicial activism on the right has shown its true colors in this debate over a truly moderate and mainstream candidate. They themselves want rightwing judicial activism to pull this country into the past.

I have always said the far right is using the only unelected branch of government to do what it cannot do through the two elected branches—turn back history to a time when corporations and large special interests had more say in our courts than ordinary people. The right has created a kind of judicial activism that is as pernicious as the activism on the left. But they do not see it that way. Activism is their very ideology.

When George Bush was President and conservative majorities in the House and Senate still couldn't pull America back 100 years, they said: We need to do it by the Supreme Court. Hence, extremely conservative nominees were nominated and approved. As a result, our Court is on a collision course with precedent, with the other branches of government and, frankly, with the American people. General Kagan is exactly the antidote we need to put the Court back on the level, to put the bubble back on the plumb. General Kagan is a 6 or 7 on a scale of conservative to liberal, with 1 being the most conservative and the most liberal being 10. The President's nominees were ones, with an occasional two. They were way over to the far right. That is what independent, objective, not Democratic, not Republican analyses show. Again, four of the five most conservative Justices are on the Court right now.

The American people are reaping the bitter harvest from new laws that have been made and old precedents that have been overturned. Put simply, in decision after decision, this conservative, activist Court has bent the law to suit an ideology. At the top of the list, of course, is the Citizens United case where an activist majority of the Court overturned a century of well-understood law that regulated the amount of money special interests could spend to elect their own candidates to public office.

In the Ledbetter case, the Court upended decades of settled law and an agency interpretation to hold that a woman who received less pay than a male colleague is only discriminated against by the first paycheck, not by the last. There are many other examples, over and over—on the Clean Water Act, punitive damages against the Exxon Valdez, antitrust law where, again, favoring the special interests and turning back the law, this conservative majority has become the most activist Court certainly in decades. These truly activist decisions show little respect for Congress, for the executive branch, and for the well-settled understandings the American people commonly hold about our democracy. Yet somehow they label General Kagan as an activist, because she wants to follow precedent. That is not fair, and it is not true.

The record shows that General Kagan's record is replete with cases, articles, opinions, and discussion that shows and proves she is well within the judicial mainstream. First, in the course of her nomination hearing, she answered more than 700 questions. She answered them with a degree of candor and specificity we simply did not see when either Justices Alito or Roberts were before us, nominees who, I submit, actually had conservative agendas to hide from the American people, unlike General Kagan who has nothing to hide. When she was asked her views on interpreting the Constitution, she gave reasoned, detailed answers, the most reasoned, detailed answers I can remember from a nominee. She gave candid and detailed answers about her views of specific precedent governing the right to privacy, the commerce clause, freedom of the press, the second amendment, civil rights, cameras in the courtroom, even about her role as Solicitor General.

When Justice Alito was asked about his views of the takings clause, he gave an opaque answer about the value of owning private property, not even close to the specificity that General Kagan gave. But here we have Members on this side of the aisle saying they won't vote for Kagan because she is not specific enough, when they were in full support of Alito and Roberts who gave far less specific answers. Why? We know why. Again, the view on the right that they want their own brand of activism, judicial activism of the right to pull the Court and the country away from the mainstream.

My colleagues' continuing insistence that General Kagan is hiding and outside the mainstream agenda says more about their agenda than hers. It appears to me the only way to explain some of my colleagues' opposition to General Kagan is, they will vote for only ones and maybe a few twos on the Supreme Court, people way over to the right side. And if one believes in judicial activism of the far right, that is exactly what one would do.

A second sort of evidence of General Kagan's moderation is her stunningly broad bipartisan support. Each of the Solicitors General to serve under Democratic and Republican Presidents for the last 25 years has endorsed her. While at Harvard she got a standing ovation from, of all people, the Federalist Society, the training grounds for many of President Bush's conservative judicial nominees. She bridged the wide ideological divide between conservative and liberal faculty members. She brought together a faculty that had been fighting with one another. They came together under her thoughtful, pragmatic, and moderate decisions. As a result, to a Harvard faculty generally regarded as liberal, she bought in many conservative apppointments.

Why then does General Kagan not have more bipartisan support within this body? Why will she get fewer votes today than all but two Justices in the history of the Court, Justices Alito and Thomas? Again, one need look no further than the sheer amount of law that has been undone by the current Court in the last few years, law that protects ordinary Americans against special interests and corporate interests.

These are the wages of a war that the far right has mounted in order to remake the law. But General Kagan will not be a soldier in their fight and, hence, despite her moderation, does not get their vote.

Having studied the Court's decision in Citizens United, I am increasingly convinced that their war will not be won until we return to 1905, to what legal historians call the Lochner era of Supreme Court jurisprudence. In 1905, squarely in the age of the robber barons, big railroads and even bigger oil, a very conservative majority of Justices held that the people of New York, my State, could not pass laws that limited the legal workweek to 60 hours. This is because the Justices found, somewhere in the due process clause of the 14th amendment, that business had an inherent right to conduct itself without any government regulation, even if public safety was at stake. One hundred years later in Citizens United—same country, different setting, different rules—it does the same type of thing. Citizens United will go down as the 21st century example of 20th century Lochner. Allowing corporate and special interests, now because they have so much money, to pour that money into our political system without even disclosure, without even knowing who they are or what they are saying or why they are saying it, they are taking politics away, government away from the average person because of the influence of such large amounts of dollars.

Fortunately for Americans, General Kagan will be confirmed today, and gears of the time machine that is set to 1905 will be substantially slowed down. She will be confirmed with some bipartisan support, and I praise my colleagues on the other side who had the courage to break from the hard right. It takes courage to break from the extremes of either side. It is not easy. We all know that, no matter which party we are in. They have had the courage to do it. I salute them. She will be confirmed because she is mainstream, because enough of my colleagues recognize that her practical, real world experience will be a valuable asset to our judicial system and to our country.

And about practical experience, she has it in very real and tangible ways. She is an accomplished lawyer, first female dean of the Harvard Law School, a public servant who worked in all three branches of government. Yet some on the other side call her inexperienced. It is hard to believe. In fact, General Kagan's experience does measure up to her colleagues and predecessors. Like Justice Thomas and the late Justice Rehnquist, General Kagan held high-level political jobs in the executive branch. Like William O. Douglas and Felix Frankfurter, she spent much of her career in academia. And like 38 other Supreme Court Justices before her, she does not have direct judicial experience, although like many of them, she clerked for a Supreme Court Justice.

Some of my colleagues have belittled General Kagan's experience as better suited to the backwaters of academia than a seat on the highest Court. I think this is wishful thinking on their part, perhaps because they know her real world experience will bring the Court back to the center.

And, in fact, it is clear that her experience at Harvard Law School demonstrates, rather than undermines, her qualifications.

Unlike every other current Justice on the Supreme Court, General Kagan ran a business. She understands much about how the real world functions that many of our current Justices simply do not.

She managed 500 employees and a budget of $160 million annually. Plus, this real world management experience was forged in an environment that was ideologically charged when she arrived.

But it was much less so when she left. Jack Goldsmith, whom Elena Kagan hired and who had been head of President Bush's Office of Legal Counsel, wrote of her:

It might seem over the top to say that Kagan combines principle, pragmatism, and good judgment better than anyone I have ever met. But it is true.

General Kagan's skills as a consensus builder are sorely needed on a fractious Court that often struggles to find the moderate ground between its two wings. A recent study showed that last term, the Court issued ''conservative'' opinions 65 percent of the time—more than any term in living memory.

The fact that the pull to the right is so demonstrable suggests also that these decisions are often quite broad—as in the Citizens United case, where the issues that were decided had not initially been briefed. Someone as persuasive and perceptive as General Kagan could help to narrow these decisions, to put together 5 to 4 majorities that issue mainstream, modest opinions.

An important component of General Kagan's pragmatic experience is her gender. As difficult as managing an ideologically diverse law school faculty is for anyone, General Kagan did it as the first woman. I have heard it said that Ginger Rogers did everything Fred Astaire did, but backwards and in high heels.

The exact details obviously don't apply to General Kagan, but the sentiment does.

Serving as the first female dean of Harvard, and the first female Solicitor General, has surely broadened her views and deepened her understanding of how Americans work and relate to one another. Her role as a woman in each of these institutions enriches the practical experience that she will bring to the Court.

This is the candidate whom many of my colleagues have branded as an out-of-the-mainstream liberal activist.

At the end of the day, it is fine to disagree with General Kagan's views and ideology. But labeling such a mainstream candidate as a liberal ideologue sets a troubling precedent. It moves the center further and further to the right.

I am confident that General Kagan is the right candidate for the Supreme Court at the right time. I will proudly cast my vote for her.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

FAA AIR TRANSPORTATION MODERNIZATION AND SAFETY IMPROVEMENT ACT

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of the House message to accompany H.R. 1586, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

House message on H.R. 1586, motion to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 1586, an act to modernize the air traffic control system, improve the safety, reliability, and availability of transportation by air in the United States, provide for modernization of the air traffic control system, reauthorize the Federal Aviation Administration, and for other purposes, with an amendment.

Pending:

Reid motion to concur in the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill, with Reid amendment No. 4575 (to the House amendment to the Senate amendment to the bill), in the nature of a substitute.

Reid amendment No. 4576 (to amendment No. 4575), to change the enactment date.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, all postcloture time is considered expired, except there will be 20 minutes of debate equally divided and controlled between the Senator from Montana, Mr. BAUCUS, and the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. DEMINT, or their designees.

The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, how long do I have to speak?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Five minutes.

Mr. DEMINT. Thank you, Madam President. I think I can do it in that time.

It seems we have time to do almost anything, but what we need to do is address the economy and jobs in this country. Just about every economist, from all across the political spectrum, says one of the most important things we can do right now is not to raise taxes. Yet taxes are scheduled to go up in 5 months on almost every American, including the businesses that create the jobs.

Of the two amendments I will offer here today, one amendment will stop the increase in income tax rates, and the second will stop the tax increases on small businesses that file as individuals.

Clearly, it makes no sense in the middle of a recession to raise taxes on individuals. An individual in South Carolina making $40,000 a year will pay $400 more next year in taxes if we do not act. A married couple with a combined income of $80,000 will see their taxes go up nearly $2,200. A married couple earning $160,000 combined could pay $5,500 in additional taxes.

The same thing will happen to small businesses that create the jobs. We will be taking money out of their accounts and putting it in our accounts. At a time when they need to keep the money to grow our economy and to hire workers, we do not need the money to continue to waste it on what we have been doing.

Consider the stimulus bill. A couple of my colleagues this week came out with a report showing where a lot of this stimulus money went: $62 million for a Pennsylvania tunnel that Governor Rendell said was a tragic mistake; $193,000 for voter perception of the stimulus bill. I could go on and on. This is not money we need to spend right now.

What we need to do is assure businesses and individuals that the tax rate this year will be the same next year so they can make good decisions that will move our economy forward.

MOTIONS TO SUSPEND

Madam President, in accordance with rule V of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I move to suspend rule XXII for the purpose of proposing and considering the following motion to commit, with instructions, H.R. 1586: I move to commit H.R. 1586 to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with changes to include a permanent extension of the 2010 individual income tax rates, and to include provisions which decrease spending as appropriate to offset such permanent extension.

And, Madam President, in accordance with rule V of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I move to suspend rule XXII for the purpose of proposing and considering the following motion to commit, with instructions, H.R. 1586: I move to commit H.R. 1586 to the Committee on Finance with instructions to report the same back to the Senate with changes to include a permanent extension of current individual income tax rates on small businesses and provisions which decreases spending as appropriate to offset such permanent extension.

With that, Madam President, I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motions are pending.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, this is a stunt. It is a gimmick. It is not serious, and it is very sad. We are in very difficult times. The economy is in recession, going out of recession. We are facing the prospect of what to do about the so-called Bush tax cuts of 2001, 2003. Those are massive tax cuts that were put in place in 2001 and 2003. They expire at the end of this year. It is a big question: What should the Congress do, what should the country do about those tax cuts?

At the same time, we are facing terrific, unfortunately high deficits, very high deficits, almost as high as they were at the end of World War II—not quite but almost. The national debt now is approaching, as a percent of GDP, the levels that it was near the end of World War II—not quite. In fact, they were much higher at the end of World War II than they are today.

But the main point is, these are very serious questions. They require deliberate thought. They require Senators to work together to find solutions that help our country, help us decide: To what degree should these tax cuts be extended? Which ones make sense? Which ones do not?

We have several goals here. Clearly, people do not like paying taxes. But, clearly, Americans who are responsible know they must pay some taxes in order for our country to function. There are two extremes here. One is anarchy and the other States' outright total socialism. There is some balance in the middle for a civil society to function.

These questions are very big: How are we, as a society, going to properly function? To what degree should we begin and to what rate reduce the deficits and the debt? That is a very serious question. Other countries worldwide are facing these same questions, and we are interrelated, the United States, with other countries. That is a very serious question.

In addition, how much should the Bush tax cuts be extended? At what rate, what amount, et cetera? Should all rates be extended? Should some? Clearly, most Members of this body feel at least the so-called middle-income tax cuts should be extended permanently; that is, those whose incomes are $200,000 or lower or families with $250,000—at least. Then, there are other questions about what to do with the rest.

The motion offered by the junior Senator from South Carolina has this effect: He says all the tax cuts should be extended. First of all, we do not know what that means. Is that just individual rates? If it is, that is about $1.1 trillion it is going to cost over 10 years. Does he also want to include the alternative minimum tax for 10 years or does he also want to include dividend cap gains extended? I don't know. He doesn't say. But I assume he does. That is going to be about a $3 trillion cost—a $3 trillion cost—over 10 years. He wants that all replaced with spending cuts. I ask you, is that serious? That is not serious. I ask, is that a stunt? Yes, that is a stunt. Is it a gimmick? Yes, it is a gimmick. Is it serious? No, it is not serious.

These are serious times—very serious times—and we should not be engaged or even give comment to this kind of a stunt. I hate saying that. I don't like saying that. But I have to be candid. I have to be honest. If I am faulted for anything—and I am faulted for a lot—it is for being honest and candid. This is a stunt. I urge my colleagues not to fall for this.

Now, the $3 trillion—I asked: Where are we going to cut $3 trillion? Our total receipts, Federal receipts for the year, are about $2 trillion, a little over $2 trillion. That is pretty good. Well, OK, he wants to cut $3 trillion over 10. Now, where in the world? It can't be done. It cannot be done. Impossible. He knows that, but still he stands on the floor making this grand political statement. Does he say anything about small business? He doesn't say anything about small business. What is small business? I have no idea. It is kind of veiled a little bit under the cover of the top rates. He doesn't define it. We don't know what it is. I mean, it is just sad.

We don't have much time left to deal with these tax cuts. We don't have many legislative days left. We have to just do what Senators are supposed to do, do what most people in our States want us to do—be reasonable, be thoughtful, take on the hard issues. And they will give us a lot of slack if they think we are basically doing the right thing, if we are doing our best—it may not be perfect but doing our best, and that is what we should do. This amendment is not our best. It should be resoundingly defeated.

Madam President, how much time do I have remaining?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield my 4 minutes to the Senator from Louisiana.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, I appreciate the chairman yielding me just a few minutes. I wish to associate myself strongly with his remarks and urge our colleagues on this side to vote against the DeMint amendment. The Senator from Montana is absolutely correct. It is a stunt, and it is a very sad stunt.

If the Senator from South Carolina is trying to wave the flag of small business to try to convince anybody to vote for his amendment, I wanted to put some things in the RECORD that might convince them otherwise. This is a recent report that came out from the Tax Policy Center, the Urban Institute, and the Brookings Institution—very well respected. It is dated August 3, 2010.

I quote:

If the objective—

Which would be the extension of all the Bush tax cuts—

is to help small business, continuing the Bush tax cuts on high-income taxpayers isn't the way to go [because] it would miss 98 percent of small business owners . . .

It would miss 98 percent of small business owners.

So I beg my colleagues, if you want to have this debate over tax cuts, we can have it at a different time. Please don't wave small business out here.

What the Senator from South Carolina will do—the effect of his amendment, according to this very reputable report—would completely miss 98 percent of small businesses in America. They are desperate for help. His amendment misses them by a mile. If we were in target practice today, he wouldn't pass. He wouldn't hit the target for a mile.

I have been on this floor for over 2 weeks with dozens of Members on this side begging the Republican Party on that side to do something before we leave to help small business. There is $12 billion of tax cuts directly to them. The Senator from South Carolina voted no.

We have $30 billion that will turn into a $300 billion lending program directly to small businesses. Small businesses are the only people who could get it and community banks are the only people who could access it. Did the Senator from South Carolina vote yes or no? He voted no.

This is a stunt, and it is a sad stunt. I tell my colleagues, there is a lot at stake. I know my 4 minutes is over, but I wanted to come and strongly urge my colleagues to follow the lead of the chairman and vote no on this sad stunt.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, how much time do I have remaining?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 55 seconds remaining.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, I think it is a sad day in the Senate when keeping current tax rates the same and stopping the largest tax increase in history is called a stunt.

Over the last few weeks, the Democrats have voted to raise taxes on dividends and capital gains, affecting many senior citizens, and raised the death tax to over half of what people leave to their families. Now, today, they want to raise the marginal income tax rates. If we left the tax rates the same, it would do more to help small businesses and jobs in America than any of the bailout or targeted programs my colleagues are talking about.

My Democratic colleagues have had 4 years to address the coming tax increase and have done nothing. It is very important, but it is sad that they will not address it. They will do every kind of government program that comes to mind, but they won't leave the money in the hands of the American people so we can grow our economy.

I encourage my colleagues but also the American people to look in on what is happening today.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I would just like to correct the statement made by the Senator from South Carolina. He is saying this side has not wanted to extend tax cuts. That is totally inaccurate. This side does want to extend tax cuts, and we will. Come September, the Senator from South Carolina is going to see that this side of the aisle very definitely wants to extend those Bush tax cuts, including the 2001 cuts, the 2003 cuts. The only question is how much to do on AMT and how much to do on Federal estate tax. But we do want to extend them.

I see he is walking off the floor because I think he knows I am right and he doesn't want to have to hear it, but the fact is, we are going to extend. We will do our level best. The real question is whether we will have 60 votes to get that passed. That remains to be seen. I hope that happens. I don't see any Senators on that side of the aisle right now, but I hope there are a few—at least one—so hopefully we will get 60 votes in September. But we will make very strong recommendations to extend these tax cuts—maybe not all, entirely, but the vast bulk of them—in an effort to help the American people.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. All time has expired.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. On this vote, the yeas are 42, the nays are 58. Two-thirds of the Senators voting not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the next two votes be 10 minutes in duration.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the second motion to suspend.

The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, I think all of us know——

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. All debate time has expired.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, may I have 1 minute to explain the amendment?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, we all know the economic engine in this country is small businesses. Most of our jobs come from small businesses. It makes no sense in the middle of a recession for us to take more money from small businesses and bring it here.

This amendment simply keeps current tax rates the same for those who file individually as part of their small businesses. It is a simple idea. I think we all agree on it. It is important that we do it before the break and let small businesses know they can plan for next year. They can hire people. They can help grow our economy. I encourage my colleagues to support it.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I ask for 1 minute.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I do not know anybody who can responsibly vote for this amendment because we do not know what it is. What is the definition of ''small business''? It could be anything. I think it is a thinly veiled attempt to address the top rates. We are only talking about the top rates in effect.

The other amendment was totally irresponsible. It required a $3 trillion cut in spending over 10 years; $3 trillion—not a ''b,'' a ''t.'' This one is in the same vein.

Also, I think it is irresponsible because these are problems we must address seriously when we come back, not take this lightly with message amendments but seriously address when we come back in September what we do with the tax cuts and what we do on the deficits.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote against this motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN). The question is on agreeing to the motion. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 42, the nays are 58. Two-thirds of the Senators voting not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I understand there is a pay-go statement that needs to be read into the RECORD. I ask that be done at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the statement.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Mr. Conrad submits this Statement of Budgetary Effects of PAYGO Legislation for H.R. 1586, as amended by Senate amendment No. 4575. Total Budgetary Effects of H.R. 1586 for the 5-year Statutory PAYGO Scorecard, net increase in the deficit of $19.767 billion; Total Budgetary Effects of H.R. 1586 for the 10-year Statutory PAYGO Scorecard, net increase in the deficit of $12.634 billion. Also submitted for the RECORD as part of this statement is a table prepared by the Congressional Budget Office, which provides additional budgetary effects of this Act.

The table is as follows:

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, there can be no doubt of the need for this bill, which includes an extension of enhanced Medicaid funding to States and funding to help keep teachers in the classroom and out of the unemployment line. Failure to enact this extension would place services to those most in need at terrible risk, and it would place many States, including my own, in an untenable budget situation.

Failure to enact the continued enhancement of Federal assistance for Medicaid and other health care programs would leave a hole more than $300 million wide in the budget of my State. Other States would face similar shortfalls. Plugging that hole in the current economic environment would almost certainly require service cuts or tax increases above and beyond those suffered already by so many of our States.

There is also little doubt of the need for the funding included in this bill to preserve teaching jobs. In the current climate, we should be looking for ways to preserve jobs. But that is especially true when loss of the jobs at stake would harm not only workers and their families, but students depending on these teachers to help them prepare for the future. Failing to approve this funding would damage our nation now and in the future.

The excuses our colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle have used to prevent passage of important legislation in recent weeks do not apply here. This measure is fully paid for. I regret that some of the pay-fors are accomplished by borrowing from other important programs, and efforts are under way to correct that problem.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I come to the Floor today to discuss something very important to Illinois and so many others states FMAP.

As part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, we increased the Federal matching rate for Medicaid, FMAP.

This is smart policy in a recession, because not only does it help people in a time of need, it is also one of the most effective ways to stimulate the economy.

Temporarily increasing Medicaid costs allows States to sustain their programs, rather than cutting them when families need them most.

It also generates business activity, jobs and wages in States that they would not otherwise have seen.

But the temporary FMAP increase we passed is scheduled to end on December 31 right in the middle of most States' fiscal year.

For the 3rd consecutive year, States are facing vast revenue shortfalls. One estimate is that States will face deficits of over $350 billion over the next 30 months.

As a result, at least 30 States are proposing cuts to their Medicaid programs for fiscal year 2011—cuts that will harm people right when they need help most.

These include cuts to eligibility, fewer benefits, more cost-sharing, and lower payments to the medical providers who see Medicaid patients.

The measure we are considering today would extend and phase out increases in the Medicaid matching rate for 6 months, through June 30, 2011.

It will provide $16.1 billion to States to ensure that they continue to receive an increased FMAP rate through the end of most States' fiscal years.

Illinois would receive about $550 million in Federal funding to help keep the State's Medicaid program afloat.

The spending in this measure is fully offset. It will not add a dime to the Federal deficit.

My home State of Illinois is facing a budget shortfall of $13 billion in FY11.

This is at a time when the unemployment rate was 10.4 percent in June, and the State's revenues from sales tax and individual and corporate income taxes are down more than $3 billion since the fiscal year 08 peak.

The State doesn't expect to return to fiscal year 08 revenue levels based on the current tax rates until fiscal year 15.

Because of this deficit the State has already started making hard choices.

Just last week, the Governor announced that to save $18 million, 2,700 non-union State workers would be required to take 24 days off without pay.

That is just one measure to save money, and they will be forced to consider additional painful cuts if we do not extend the increased FMAP rate through the end of the State's fiscal year.

Today, the Medicaid program in Illinois covers 2.6 million low- and moderate-income people in the State, including children, pregnant women and people with developmental disabilities and mental illness.

Illinois saw its FMAP rate increase from 50 percent to 62 percent as a result of the Economic Recovery spending.

The state of Illinois assumed a 6-month FMAP extension in its fiscal year 2011 budget.

Without an extension, the State will be short an additional $750 million this year.

Illinois has reviewed its Medicaid program, and determined that without an extension of the increased Federal matching rate, it may be forced to consider eliminating services for: 168,000 children from families with incomes just above the Federal Poverty Level; 18,000 adults from families with incomes greater than 133 percent of the Federal Poverty level; 200,000 adults covered by Illinois Cares RX—a state program that helps low-income adults afford prescription drugs; 63,000 children covered by Allkids—a comprehensive State program to provide insurance to kids who would otherwise not have health insurance.

Illinois was not alone in planning for a 6-month FMAP extension in 2011.

In fact, 30 States assumed that an extension would be provided, and as of today, about half of those states do not yet have contingency plans for how to balance their budgets if an FMAP extension is not passed.

If Congress does not extend the funds, governors and legislatures will have to revisit those budgets and consider new cuts, which will hurt the Nation's most vulnerable residents and will affect a variety of services.

These will be on top of cuts that have already been made over the past few years.

The National Association of State Budget Officers estimates that even as the need for State-funded services rose, states cut funding for services by 4 percent for fiscal year 2009 and almost 5 percent for 2010.

That's why 47 governors—Democrats and Republicans alike—have signed a National Governor's Association letter urging Congress to extend the Recovery Act's additional Medicaid funding.

In these difficult economic times, we are trying to help Americans return to work AND take care of those who are between jobs.

These benefits include continued access to quality health care under the Medicaid program.

Extending and phasing down the increased FMAP rate for another 6 months is a win-win for all of us. It will protect the most vulnerable during this time of need and provide immediate relief to State and local economies.

MEDICAID PHARMACY REIMBURSEMENT

Mrs. LINCOLN. I ask to engage in a brief colloquy with the distinguished Senate majority leader and Senator MURRAY as it relates to the intent of a provision in this legislation regarding average manufacturer price—or AMP.

Do I understand that the provision in section 202 of this bill is solely intended to ensure that Medicaid rebates are collected from the manufacturers of the particular drugs specified in the bill, that is inhalation, infusion, instilled, implanted, or injectable drugs not generally sold at retail pharmacies?

Mr. REID. Yes, the intention of this provision is to ensure that rebate dollars are collected for those particular drugs. Drug rebate dollars have long helped support state Medicaid programs and the provision will ensure an accurate calculation of AMP for the purposes of these drug rebates.

Mrs. MURRAY. I thank the Senator for engaging in a colloquy with Senator LINCOLN and me and would also like to clarify that this provision is in no way intended to impact reimbursement to retail pharmacies participating in the Medicaid Program. Is that the Senator's understanding?

Mr. REID. The Senator is correct. The Secretary should direct drug manufacturers to calculate AMPs for these drugs to allow States to collect rebates. In order to maintain pharmacy reimbursement at appropriate levels for these drugs, the Secretary should use the discretion that is provided under the Patient Protection and Accountable Care Act to calculate a Federal upper limit, FUL, at an amount that is at least 175 percent of the weighted average AMP for those covered outpatient drugs.

Mrs. LINCOLN. We would like to thank the leader for his clarification and shared goal of protecting access to critical drug therapies for vulnerable populations at retail pharmacies.

Mrs. MURRAY. I agree.

Mr. REID. I agree with the Senators on the importance of protecting beneficiaries' access to these drug therapies and the retail pharmacies that faithfully serve them. I thank the Senators for their shared commitment to this goal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask for the yeas on the motion to concur in the House amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 1586 with amendment No. 4575.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

Amendment No. 4576 is withdrawn.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to concur in the House amendment to H.R. 1586, with amendment No. 4575.

Mrs. MURRAY. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BENNET. Madam President, today I was proud to vote for final passage of the amendment offered by Senators MURRAY, HARKIN, SCHUMER and REID to the FAA authorization bill. This amendment brings long overdue good news to teachers and kids in Colorado and those worried about losing access to the health care they need. I was elated to see the Senate break through the usual gridlock and pass this important legislation.

The package will save thousands of jobs and protect health services for kids and vulnerable populations across Colorado and the country. During this savage economy that is hurting families all over our state and our country, as we work to get our ship righted, our kids and our schools should be at the top of our list of priorities.

If we are going to ensure that we leave more opportunity for our kids than we ourselves have had then we must remain committed to education—to set the table for our kids' futures; to prepare them for the competitive world that awaits them; and to enrich their lives with a better education than the one that was offered to us.

I have tried to be a leader in the fight for the Medicaid Federal Medical Assistance Percentage, FMAP, funding and saving teachers' jobs. I was an original cosponsor of the Keep Our Educators Working Act of 2010, introduced by Senator TOM HARKIN. In February, I also led a group of 43 of my Senate colleagues in submitting a letter urging the majority leader to provide States with an additional 6-month FMAP extension.

The Medicaid FMAP extension passed today by the Senate was crucial in the effort to keep public servants at work across the country. Without it, States would be forced to layoff tens of thousands of more teachers and other public employees, cut education funding even further, and further reduce payments to health care providers. More than 900,000 public and private sector jobs could be lost.

Colorado alone would lose more than $200 million if the FMAP extension fell victim to Washington politics. Cuts could include eliminating state aid for full-day kindergarten for 35,000 children, eliminating preschool aid for 21,000 children, and increasing overcrowding in juvenile detention facilities, according the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. The education jobs funding would prevent the loss of between 2,000 and 3,000 teacher jobs in Colorado alone.

I am glad to see this package is paid for. However, I was very concerned about the House package which paid for teacher jobs in part by cutting education reform programs. I joined 15 of my colleagues in signing a letter requesting that we find other offsets to pay for this important measure. I am very pleased that we were able to avert the cuts to critical education programs and save teachers' jobs—all without raising the deficit.

Additionally, while I strongly support the measure, in no small part because it is completely paid for and does not add one dime to our deficit, I would like to raise a strong concern with one of the pay-fors in this package. A rescission of $1.5 billion from the Department of Energy's, DOE, renewable energy loan guarantee program was used to help offset this amendment.

In Colorado this important program has helped foster tremendous growth in the clean energy economy. Just last month, President Obama announced a conditional loan guarantee for a solar manufacturing facility in my home state and there are dozens of job creating renewable energy projects across the country waiting for approval from DOE.

This rescission places $15 to $20 billion of private investment in clean energy investment in jeopardy. While I am constantly reminded that the Senate needs to make tough choices as we strive to be fiscally responsible, I am compelled to raise my objection to this offset. It is my sincere hope that, in the future, this Chamber, the House of Representatives and the administration will avoid tapping into what are already scarce clean energy investments to pay for what are admittedly important recession-stopping items such as the ones we approved today.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, earlier today, I voted in favor of two motions designed to extend the 2001 and 2003 tax cuts. Let me be clear, I strongly support extending individual income tax rates. While I voted in favor of these motions to show my support for extending the tax cuts, I do not agree with the tactics being used to advance this goal. The repeated attempts to suspend rule XXII in order to make a motion to commit a bill back to committee are becoming part of an ongoing dilatory effort in the Senate. These tactics are not a serious attempt to come up with a legislative solution but are designed only to score political points and slow the progress of the underlying bill. The American taxpayers deserve more. I believe that instead of looking to score points both parties should work together on a serious effort to extend these expiring tax provisions, not waste time with procedural distractions.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. It is my understanding the bill is passed. I thank the Senate for passage of this bill.

This is a bill which the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence reported out by a unanimous 15-to-0 vote on July 19. This is the Senate's second time approving an intelligence authorization bill for fiscal year 2010. The committee reported S. 1494 unanimously in July 2009, and the Senate passed it by unanimous consent in September 2009. The House passed its bill, its 2010 authorization bill, in February 2010.

The House and Senate Intelligence Committees then worked for months, together with the administration, to agree on a bill that would make a substantial contribution to national security and that would be able to pass both Chambers and become law with the President's approval. S. 3611 is that agreement.

I thank the White House for their efforts to come to an agreement on the legislation, as well as the efforts of the vice chairman, Senator BOND, and his staff. This is his last bill and, as such, I thank him very much for his cooperation in this matter, for the ability to work with him over this period of time.

I would also like to acknowledge the leadership of the distinguished chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, Mr. REYES.

Broadly speaking, the bill advances the cause of effective oversight of the intelligence community and contributes significantly to the Director of National Intelligence's ability to direct and lead the intelligence community as an integrated whole.

It is my understanding that the House will be back in session next week. I would urge them to take up this important legislation at that time.

Our committee filed a detailed report on S. 3611, which is available both in print and on our Web site to all Members of the Senate, our colleagues in the House, and the public as Senate Report 111–223.

The bill contains 106 sections divided into eight titles. Let me commend the reading of the bill and our report to all who may be interested in why it is essential that the Congress complete action on this needed and overdue legislation. In these remarks, I will only mention a few highlights.

This is the committee's second report of an intelligence Authorization for fiscal year 2010. We reported S. 1494 unanimously in July 2009 and the Senate passed it by unanimous consent in September 2009. The House passed its fiscal year 2010 in February 2010.

The House and Senate Intelligence Committees then worked for months, together with the administration, to agree on a bill that would make a substantial contribution to national security and that would be able to pass both Chambers and become law with the President's approval. S. 3611 is that agreement.

Broadly speaking, the bill advances the cause of effective oversight of the intelligence community and contributes significantly to the Director of National Intelligence's ability to direct and lead the intelligence community as an integrated whole.

To illustrate, with respect to oversight, the bill will complete an effort that the Senate began in 2004 to create a strong and independent statutory inspector general for the intelligence community. A principal focus of that community-wide IG will be on progress and problems with the integration of the efforts of the 16 components of the intelligence community. The bill also strengthens the CIA inspector general and provides a statutory basis for IGs in the major intelligence elements within the Department of Defense.

This strengthened IG system within the intelligence community will provide greater visibility for the leaders of the IC, including the DNI, into management, information sharing and information security, and other problems within the intelligence community. The reports of their investigations and audits will also be, as IG reports have been, an invaluable aid for congressional oversight.

Other parts of the bill will also directly aid congressional oversight. These include requirements that executive and legislative procedures on full and timely notifications to the intelligence committees be in writing and that written records of notifications to the intelligence committees of intelligence activities and covert actions also be in writing.

Importantly, the bill also requires that the head of each intelligence element certify annually on compliance with substantial congressional notification requirements that already exist in title V of the National Security Act.

The bill takes important steps to improve both executive and congressional oversight of intelligence community procurement and budget matters. In the coming years, all parts of the government will need to address the reality that appropriation levels will not rise as they have in the past. This means that controlling cost overruns and promoting sound long term budget planning is an essential part of national security. The bill takes important steps toward those objectives.

The bill grants to the Director of National Intelligence important authorities to manage the intelligence community. These include authorities concerning personnel management, acquisition authority, and information sharing. There may be more to accomplish in all of these respects and we have invited General Clapper, if he is confirmed as I hope and expect he will, not to be hesitant in asking for additional authority if he identifies a need for it.

As is detailed in the committee's report, there are 10 provisions in this legislation that enhance the DNI's authority and management flexibilities. Eight of those 10 provisions were requested by this administration or the prior one.

There is more in this broad ranging legislation, from large to small items. Indeed, the very length of the bill is testimony to the fact that we have gone 5 years without an intelligence authorization. From fiscal years 1979 to 2005, the Congress had enacted an authorization for every fiscal year. The fiscal year 2010 bill is an opportunity, which we must not lose, to get back on track.

I will briefly note the reasons for the managers' amendment that the distinguished vice chairman, Senator BOND, and I have propounded.

Three provisions of S. 3611 as reported by our committee on July 19, sections 106, 333(c.), and 334 of S. 3611, have been enacted into law by provisions of the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 2010, sections 301, 308, and 3011 of Public Law 111–212, which the President signed into law on July 29. Accordingly, the managers' amendment deletes those now enacted provisions from S. 3611.

The managers' amendment also addresses requests from the Budget and Judiciary Committees. As requested by the Budget Committee, the amendment adds a pay-go provision. I should note that the Congressional Budget Office table that will be printed in the RECORD indicates that the bill makes no changes in the government's direct spending. As requested by the Judiciary Committee, the amendment clarifies that reports provided to the Congress under several sections of the bill will be provided to the Judiciary Committee.

This legislation reflects the negotiations with the House committee, the intelligence community, and the White House. Provisions that our committee, and the Senate, passed last September had to be removed due to veto threats or objections from the House of Representatives. I look forward to addressing some of those issues in future legislation.

Beginning with our distinguished vice chairman, Senator BOND, and acknowledging also the leadership of the distinguished chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, Mr. REYES, I would like to thank all of my colleagues for their work in producing a bill that will take important strides in improving the authority and oversight of the intelligence community through this 2010 bill, even as we recognize that there is more to achieve in authorization legislation for fiscal years 2011 and beyond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Madam President, I thank the chair of our committee. I thank her, her staff, for all of the good work that has gone into this bill, repeatedly, as she pointed out.

For too many years Congress has failed to pass an intelligence authorization bill that could be signed into law. I am very pleased to join with Senator FEINSTEIN, the distinguished chair of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, in achieving passage of S. 3611, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010.

Over the past several months, we worked closely with the House Permanent Select Committees on Intelligence and Administration to reach a compromise text that could serve as a conference report for this bill. The bill now before this Senate and having passed the Senate contains all of the elements of the compromise. It has been agreed to in advance by representatives of the administration. But, unfortunately, the House has thus far declined to move the process forward, bringing this bill formally to conference.

The chair and I agreed that we would be able to move this process forward by having the Senate pass the compromise text for the House to consider when it returns next week.

The intelligence authorization bill before us is a good bill. It will give the intelligence community the flexibility and authorities it needs to function effectively and will ensure appropriate intelligence oversight by this committee.

I have often said that in creating the Director of National Intelligence, we gave him an awful lot of responsibility without all the authority he needed. Well, our bill attempts to address that problem by giving the DNI clearer authority and greater flexibility in overseeing the intelligence community.

There are also a number of provisions in this bill that I believe are essential for promoting good government. Too often, we have seen programs or acquisitions of major systems balloon in cost and decrease in performance. That is unacceptable. We are in difficult economic times and the taxpayers are spending substantial sums of money to ensure that the intelligence community has the tools it needs to keep us safe. If we don't demand accountability for how these tools are operated or created, then we are failing the intelligence community, and, ultimately, we are failing the American people.

So, for the past several years, I have sponsored amendments that require the intelligence community to perform vulnerability assessments of major systems and to keep track of excessive cost growth of major systems. This latter provision is modeled on the Nunn-McCurdy provision which has guided Defense Department acquisitions for years. I am happy to say that these provisions are part of this year's bill, too. I believe that these, and other good-government provisions, will encourage earlier identification and solving of problems relating to the acquisition of major systems. Too often, such problems have not been identified until exorbitant sums of money have been spent—and, unfortunately, at that point, there is often reluctance to cancel the project.

Similarly, the intelligence community must get a handle on its personnel levels. In these tough economic times, it is more important than ever to make sure that the intelligence community is appropriately resourced to ensure that its personnel can effectively perform their respective national security missions.

However, I am concerned about the number of contractors used by the intelligence community to perform functions better left to government employees. There are some jobs that demand the use of contractors, for example, certain technical jobs or short-term functions, but too often, the quick fix is just to hire contractors, not long-term support. And so, our bill includes a provision calling for annual personnel level assessments for the intelligence community. These assessments will ensure that, before more people are brought in, there are adequate resources to support them and enough work to keep them busy.

These are just a few of the provisions in this bill that I believe are important for the success of our intelligence collection efforts and equally important for ensuring sound oversight by the intelligence committee.

I commend Senator FEINSTEIN for her leadership in shepherding this bill through the committee and the Senate. I appreciate her willingness to work through the countless issues raised throughout this process. I also thank my colleagues for supporting this bill.

It is well-past time that Congress send an intelligence authorization bill to the President for his signature. Only by fulfilling our legislative function will we get back on track with performing effective and much-needed intelligence oversight.

I, again, extend and expand my thanks to the distinguished chair for making sure the Senate Intelligence Committee can work in a bipartisan manner, which we have done on this bill, and on lengthy oversight matters that we have undertaken out of view of public scrutiny, obviously, but spending many days, many hours in meetings, looking over the wide range of critical efforts that are needed by our intelligence community to keep our country safe.

Why does passing an authorization bill matter at this late date in the fiscal year? An annual intelligence authorization bill does more than just authorize funding for intelligence activities, funding that in many cases has already been appropriated and spent. But it is vital that the intelligence committees be able to provide direction for the expenditure of funds for the intelligence community. But by providing current and congressional guidance and statutory authority we can ensure that the intelligence community has the maximum flexibility, the capability it needs to function effectively, spend taxpayer funds wisely, and keep our Nation safe.

The Senate bill has the full support of the Senate. Senior administration has said they will recommend the President sign this compromise text into law. I urge, once again, the Speaker of the House of Representatives to bring up this bill and pass it when the House returns to session next week so we can get back on track with performing effective intelligence oversight.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President. today the Senate passed a new version of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010 (S. 3611) with a manager's amendment to address key concerns of the Judiciary Committee. I appreciate the commitment of Senator FEINSTEIN, the chair of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, to work with me to strengthen this important legislation. The bill the Senate has approved recognizes the shared jurisdiction of the committee on the Judiciary and the Select Committee on Intelligence in several legislative areas.

Last fall, when an earlier version of this bill—S. 1494—was considered by the Senate, I recognized that several provisions in the bill fell under the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee. Senator FEINSTEIN and I engaged in serious negotiations concerning these provisions. We negotiated agreements regarding exemptions to the Freedom of Information Act, FOIA, as well as numerous reporting requirements, such as a significant, new requirement for the Federal Bureau of Investigation—FBI—an agency clearly under the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, and an important new cybersecurity oversight provision.

Negotiations I undertook with Senator FEINSTEIN last fall on the earlier version of the bill narrowed the operational files FOIA exemption for information provided by intelligence agencies to the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, ODNI, and struck a FOIA (b)(3) exemption for terrorist identity information. Those agreements were preserved in the new version of the bill, S. 3611.

Senator FEINSTEIN has told me she is also committed to ensuring that the Judiciary Committee will receive reports required by the bill's section 337, Cybersecurity Oversight. I appreciate Senator FEINSTEIN's support for these improvements. The manager's amendment to the intelligence authorization bill agreed to today explicitly identifies the Judiciary Committee as a recipient of relevant reporting provisions.

The intelligence authorization bill includes several reporting requirements that involve areas of long-standing interest and jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee. The new version of the bill, S. 3611, ensures that the Judiciary Committee is a recipient of those reports. Section 333 of the bill directs the Director of National Intelligence to provide a comprehensive report on all measures taken by the Office of the Director of National Intelligence and by elements of the intelligence community to comply with the provisions of applicable law, international obligations, and executive orders relating to the detention and interrogation activities of the intelligence community. These include compliance with the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005; the Military Commissions Act of 2006; common Article 3 of the Geneva Conventions; the Convention Against Torture; Executive Order 13492, relating to lawful interrogations; and Executive Order 13493, relating to detention policy options.

The managers' amendment to the intelligence authorization bill modifies section 333 to ensure that to the extent that the report addresses an element of the intelligence community within the Department of Justice, it shall be submitted, along with associated material, to the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate. This reporting requirement is a cornerstone of the agreement I reached with Senator FEINSTEIN last year. I am pleased to see it retained in the bill we passed today.

I fought for years to obtain information about the Bush administration's detention and interrogation policies and practices, and the legal advice from that administration authorizing those policies and practices. The last administration refused to give this information to Congress, instead issuing secret legal advice that misconstrued our laws and international obligations with regard to the treatment of people in our custody. Years later we found out that the administration had sanctioned cruel interrogation techniques, including torture. It is imperative that the Judiciary Committee be fully informed of the extent to which the government is complying with our laws and international treaties relating to detention and interrogation in order to be able to conduct proper oversight and ensure that our government cannot shield policies that authorize practices in violation of our laws. The Judiciary Committee is an important partner in this oversight.

Section 405 of the bill establishes a new Office of Inspector General of the intelligence community to conduct independent investigations, inspections, audits and reviews on programs and activities conducted under the authority of the Director of National Intelligence. Under this new authority, the inspector general is required to submit a semiannual report to the Director of National Intelligence summarizing its activities. The amendment incorporated into S. 1494 last fall, and carried over to S. 3611, modifies the reporting provision to require the inspector general to submit reports that focus on government officials to the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives with jurisdiction over the department that official represents.

Section 405 of the bill creates an entirely new inspector general with significant authority and responsibility in the intelligence community. That authority will implicate agencies within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee, including the Department of Justice and components of the Department of Homeland Security. I believe this modification to the bill provides an important recognition of the Judiciary Committee's need to be involved in the investigations and activities of this new inspector general.

Another significant new provision is section 445 of the bill, Report and Assessment on Transformation of the Intelligence Capabilities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which creates a broad new reporting requirement for the FBI. The Judiciary Committee has always had primary oversight over the FBI. As the FBI takes on more responsibility in the areas of intelligence and national security, its policies and practices in these areas must be subject to the oversight of Congress. The Intelligence Committees have particular expertise that make them an important partner in this oversight. However, it is the Judiciary Committee that has the primary legislative and oversight responsibilities over the FBI.

I am very pleased that the bill passed today contains several important improvements that I recommended to strengthen FOIA. I am particularly pleased that the bill, as amended, does not contain a broad and unnecessary exemption to FOIA's disclosure requirements for terrorist identity information. That provision was included in an earlier version of the bill, but I worked to ensure it was struck it prior to passage of S. 1494 last fall. It is not included in S. 3611, the successor to S. 1494.

No one would quibble with the notion that our government can—and should—keep some information secret to protect our national security. But, in the case of terrorist identity information, our government has successfully withheld this sensitive information under the existing FOIA exemptions for classified and law enforcement information. In addition, the many instances of mistaken identities and other errors on terrorist watchlists and ''no-fly'' lists make it clear that FOIA can be a valuable tool to help innocent Americans redress and correct mistakes on these lists.

Lastly, as a result of my negotiations with Senator FEINSTEIN last fall, S. 3611 narrows the exemption to FOIA's search requirements for operational files information that the Nation's intelligence agencies share with the ODNI. The bill makes it clear that operational files that are already exempt from these search requirements retain this exemption under circumstances where the files are disseminated to the ODNI. This carefully crafted compromise will help ensure both effective information sharing among our intelligence agencies and the free flow of information to the American public.

I believe that S. 3611 and the managers amendment passed today recognize the value and significance of the shared jurisdiction in many areas of national security between the Judiciary and Intelligence Committees. The Judiciary Committee has long engaged in oversight and legislative activity regarding cyber threats and cybersecurity. Senator FEINSTEIN and I have worked together in the Judiciary Committee for many years on these issues, and we both recognize the shared jurisdiction and responsibilities of the Judiciary and Intelligence Committees with regard to oversight of cyber matters and cybersecurity.

I appreciate Senator FEINSTEIN's cooperation in adopting these improvements. In a letter sent to me yesterday, August 3, 2010, Senator FEINSTEIN reiterated her commitment to work with the Judiciary Committee in the area of cyber matters. I ask unanimous consent to have her August 3, 2010 letter printed in the RECORD. I also ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD an exchange of letters between Senator FEINSTEIN and myself dated September 15 and 16, 2009, that discussed Senate jurisdiction over the section in the bill that addresses cybersecurity oversight. In the earlier version of the bill, S. 1494, the section was numbered 340. In the new version of the bill, S. 3611, the cybersecurity oversight section is numbered 337.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. (See exhibit 1.)

Mr. LEAHY. As Senator FEINSTEIN has described it, Section 337 of the bill is intended to provide a preliminary framework for executive and congressional oversight of cybersecurity programs, as defined in the section, to ensure that these programs are consistent with legal authorities, preserve reasonable expectations of privacy, and are subject to independent audit and review. Section 337 of S. 3611 creates several reporting requirements with regard to the executive and congressional oversight of cybersecurity programs. These include Presidential notifications to Congress, reports to Congress and the President from the head of a department or agency with responsibility for cybersecurity programs, in conjunction with the inspector general of that department or agency, and a joint report to Congress and the President from the inspector general of the Department of Homeland Security and the inspector general of the intelligence community on the status of the sharing of cyber threat information within 1 year. I look forward to continuing to work with Senator FEINSTEIN in the Judiciary Committee and in the Senate to ensure strong oversight and legislation with regard to cyber matters.

I am pleased the Senate today will pass the amended Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. The progress that Senator FEINSTEIN and I have made to improve this bill demonstrates the success we can have when we work together constructively.

U.S. SENATE,
SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE,
Washington, DC, September 15, 2009.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Dirksen Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY: As you know, our staffs have been in discussions since the beginning of recess over various provisions of S. 1494, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010, ordered reported from the Committee on July 22, 2009. Among the provisions at issue is Section 340, Cybersecurity Oversight.

Section 340 is intended to provide a preliminary framework for executive and congressional oversight of cybersecurity programs, as defined in the section, to ensure that these programs are consistent with legal authorities, preserve reasonable expectations of privacy, and are subject to independent audit and review.

Section 340 contains several reporting requirements. One requires the President to provide certain notifications to Congress. In addition, the head of a department or agency with responsibility for cybersecurity programs, in conjunction with the inspector general of that department or agency, is to submit to Congress and the President periodic reports on the program. Finally, the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security and the Inspector General of the Intelligence Community are jointly to submit a report to Congress and the President on the status of the sharing of cyber threat information within one year.

Under the provision as reported, notifications and reports under the section are to be submitted ''to the Congress.'' Vice Chairman Bond and I have consulted with the Senate parliamentarian to convey our recommendations for how referrals of notifications and reports under the section should be made.

As we have discussed before, cybersecurity is a matter of interest to many of the committees of the Senate. Of note is the longstanding interest in, and jurisdiction over, cyber matters by the Judiciary Committee. This includes but is not necessarily limited to the cybersecurity of the Justice Department and other departments and agencies under the Committee's jurisdiction, privacy interests of the American people, and legal dimensions of the government's cyber activities. Given the Judiciary Committee's role in these matters and the expectation that reports under Section 340 will touch on one or more of the Committee's areas of jurisdiction, it is my strong belief that documents provided to the Congress should be provided to the Judiciary Committee.

In addition, should the Intelligence Committee receive reports under this section that are within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee but that are not provided to the Judiciary Committee, I will ensure that access to those reports is provided to Judiciary Committee members and staff as appropriate.

Thank you for your cooperation over this issue, and other provisions of the intelligence legislation.

Sincerely,

DIANNE FEINSTEIN,
Chairman.

U.S. SENATE,
SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE,
Washington, DC, August 3, 2010.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Dirksen Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY: We exchanged letters last September about section 340 of S. 1494, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. As described in the report of the Select Committee on Intelligence, the purpose of section 340 is to establish a preliminary framework for executive and legislative oversight to ensure that the federal government's national cyber security mission is consistent with legal authorities and preserves reasonable expectations of privacy.

On September 16, 2009, you placed in the Congressional Record, at 155 Cong. Rec. S9451, my letter to you of September 15. Because section 340 provides for various reports or notifications to be submitted ''to the Congress,'' I wrote to convey to you my recognition of the Judiciary Committee's longstanding interest in, and jurisdiction over, cyber matters, and my belief that documents provided to Congress under section 340 should be provided to the Judiciary Committee. I also stated my commitment that should the Intelligence Committee receive reports under section 340 that are within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee but are not provided to it, then I will ensure your committee's member and staff access to those documents as appropriate.

The Intelligence Committee has now reported a second FY 2010 Intelligence Authorization, S. 3611, which is based on the work of the House and Senate Intelligence Committees and the Administration to reconcile S. 1494 and H.R. 2701, the House intelligence bill. Section 337 of S. 3611 is the direct descendant of section 340 of S. 1494. The legislative history of section 340 of S. 1494, including my letter to you of September 15, 2009, is part of the legislative history of section 337 of S. 3611.

The recognition I expressed of the role of the Judiciary Committee in cyber matters, my belief in the right of the Judiciary Committee to receive reports under section 337, and my commitment to provide to your committee access to such reports in the event they are provided to my committee but not to yours, apply as much to section 337 of S. 3611 as they applied to section 340 of S. 1494.

I look forward to working with your committee, and other interested committees of the Senate, in establishing a strong basis for cyber security oversight.

Sincerely,

DIANNE FEINSTEIN,
Chairman.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, September 16, 2009.

Hon. DIANNE FEINSTEIN,
Chairman, Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN FEINSTEIN: Thank you for your letter today regarding S. 1494, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010. I was happy to work with you to reach agreement on the amendment you are offering to the bill to include the Judiciary Committee as a recipient of relevant reporting provisions and to strike a proposed FOIA exemption and modify another FOIA provision. I appreciate your support for those improvements.

I had my first opportunity to review this legislation when it was hotlined on August 5. As you noted, our staffs have been in discussions over various provisions of S. 1494 that involve the jurisdiction of the Judiciary Committee and issues on which it shares an interest with the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Our understanding also includes the commitment in your letter to me today to ensure that the Judiciary Committee receives reports required by Section 340, Cybersecurity Oversight. As you know as a member and former chair of the Judiciary Committee Subcommittee on Terrorism and Homeland Security, the Judiciary Committee has long engaged in oversight and legislative activity regarding cyber threats and cybersecurity. You and I have long worked together in the Judiciary Committee on these issues and I appreciate your recognition of the shared jurisdiction and responsibilities of the Judiciary and Intelligence Committees with regard to oversight of cyber matters and cybersecurity. I appreciate your commitment to ensure that the Judiciary Committee will receive reports received under the Cybersecurity Oversight provision.

As you have described it, Section 340 is intended to provide a preliminary framework for executive and congressional oversight of cybersecurity programs, as defined in the section, to ensure that these programs are consistent with legal authorities, preserve reasonable expectations of privacy, and are subject to independent audit and review. Section 340 creates several reporting requirement with regard to the executive and congressional oversight of cybersecurity programs. These include Presidential notifications to Congress, reports to Congress and the President from the head of a department or agency with responsibility for cybersecurity programs, in conjunction with the inspector general of that department or agency, and a joint report to Congress and the President from the Inspector General of the Department of Homeland Security and the Inspector General of the Intelligence Community on the status of the sharing of cyber threat information within one year.

According to the legislative language, reports under the section are to be submitted ''to the Congress.'' As you noted in your letter, the Judiciary Committee has a ''longstanding interest in, and jurisdiction over'' cyber matters and cyber security. This includes criminal activities, cybersecurity matters handled by the Justice Department and other departments and agencies under the Judiciary Committee's jurisdiction, the privacy interests of the American people, and constitutional and legal dimensions of the Government's cyber activities, including all legal guidance. Thank you for your willingness to work together on this issue, and the other provisions of the intelligence legislation.

I look forward to continuing to work together with you in the Judiciary Committee and in the Senate to ensure strong oversight and legislation with regard to cyber matters.

Sincerely,

PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

COBELL SETTLEMENT

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, as we conclude our work prior to the August break, we are working very hard to try to address the Cobell settlement and the Pigford settlement, these settlements are the result of lawsuits that were filed, negotiations that ensued, and eventually reaching agreement to settle these two cases.

I would like to talk briefly about the Cobell settlement. To start, I want to show a photograph, a picture of a woman named Mary Fish. I wonder how anyone serving in this Chamber or how anyone in this country would feel had they been Mary Fish. She was an Oklahoma Indian. She lived in a small, humble home, never had very much. But she had a piece of property, 40 acres, and she had six oil wells on her land—six oil wells on her land.

How she got ''her land'' dates back to 1887 when the Federal Government first divided up tribal lands and gave individual Indians separate parcels of land and then said to the Indians: You know what. We are going to give you separate parcels of land that will be yours. But, we are going to manage them for you. We will hold them in trust and provide income from your land to you.

So poor Mary Fish, an Oklahoma Indian, had six oil wells on her land and lived a humble life and died a few years ago waiting, waiting for justice, justice that she never received. The Federal Government never explained to Mary how much oil was being pumped from the wells on her land.

Even with all of the oil wells on her land, Mary made only a few dollars a year from six wells. At one point she got a check from the Federal Government for 6 cents. Another time she got a check from the Federal Government for $3. One time she got a check for $3,000. Another time, although oil was still being produced, one of the statements that Mary received showed a negative $5 in her account.

She died waiting for the government to account for the royalties on her land, and for this legislation that would settle this matter. She died waiting for justice.

So what is the Cobell settlement, and what does it have to do with Mary Fish and all the oil produced from her land. The Cobell settlement is an agreement reached by the Secretary of the Interior and the all of the plaintiffs in the Cobell lawsuit—individual Indians like Mary. I am going to speak about the Cobell settlement, and a couple of colleagues are going to talk about the Pigford settlement. We are here today talking about settling both of these issues.

The Cobell settlement established deadlines for the Congress to act. The Court wants to see this matter resolved. The current deadline for Congress is August 6. We have already missed six deadlines established by the federal court. And if Congress does not act, the parties will return back to litigation, litigation that has gone on now for almost 15 years in the federal courts.

As I indicated, this situation in the Cobell case resulted from a century of mismanagement of Indian trust accounts. I want to show a photograph of the way trust records of the accounts for the individual Indians were kept on one Indian reservation—rat-infested warehouses with boxes laying all over. They would not be able to find a piece of paper in this pile to save their souls. And this is how the government kept records for individual Indian trust accounts. The result is, so many Indians were cheated. Yes, there have been circumstances in the last century in which Indians were systematically cheated and looted. Grand theft occurred, a substantial amount of money was made off these lands. Someone else got it, the Indians did not. After all these years, it is long past the time for us to agree to settle these grievances.

The government has long known about the problem. In 1915, a government report identified ''fraud, corruption and incompetence in the management of these Indian trust accounts.'' That was in 1915. In 1992, a House report compared the federal government's management of Indian trust accounts to ''a bank that doesn't know how much money it has.''

Finally, in 1994, Congress passed a law requiring that the government account for the money it was managing for American Indians, and then 2 years later, where there was still nothing being done and no progress, Elouise Cobell filed a case asking the government to follow the law.

Elouise Cobell is a member of the Blackfeet Nation of Montana. She is quite a remarkable woman. Like many American Indians, she grew up hearing stories of government checks and how the checks never made any sense. The checks arrived once in a while and were in amounts no one understood or could explain.

In 1996, she filed a lawsuit. Her lawsuit said: Give me an accounting of the money that you have collected from my lands, and do the same for every other American Indian. That was in 1996.

We are now in the year 2010, and finally agreement has been reached by the U.S. Department of the Interior and the U.S. Department of Justice to settle these accounts. It was 10 years ago when the court ruled against the Federal Government. The Federal Court said the Federal Government was wrong; they mismanaged these accounts, and violated the trust. Yes, there has been corruption, incompetence, and mismanagement.

So 10 years ago, the Federal court ruled against the Federal Government, saying the Federal Government had lost, damaged, destroyed trust records, and the Federal Government admitted it could not account for these trust moneys. After all of this, the government had the nerve to spend taxpayers' money to appeal the court's decision. So it goes on and on and on. Millions have been spent in endless litigation with no settlement in sight.

Finally, last December, and agreement was reached in settlement talks with the Interior Department and the Indians that resulted a settlement and this legislation to approve the settlement.

I want to just mention a couple of other brief points. I know a couple of colleagues wish to make some comments today.

The judge, when hearing of the settlement between the Federal Government and the Cobell plaintiffs, said the agreement was a win/win and that justice is on hold. That is what this is about. It is about providing the funding to settle the Cobell case and provide some amount of justice.

Others will talk about settling the Pigford case.

I will very briefly say again a lot of American Indians have died waiting for this moment. There are other stories I want to share.

This is Susie White Calf. She is a Blackfeet Indian from Montana. This picture was taken in 2001, the same year the courts found the Federal Government had broken its responsibility to Indians. Six years later, she passed away, in 2007. She will not get justice.

But perhaps we can provide justice for tens of thousands of other Indians by doing the right thing.

I have other things to say, but I know some of my colleagues wish to say a few words. If I might, the Senator from Arkansas has to be away from the Chamber very briefly. She wanted to say a few words. Then I know that Senator KYL and some others wish to say some other words as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

PIGFORD II SETTLEMENT

Mrs. LINCOLN. Madam President, I want to say a special thanks to my colleague, Senator DORGAN, not only for yielding, but also, most importantly, for his incredible passion for justice. He has worked long and hard in this body and in the other, but certainly working hard for justice for those whose voices are often quieted. He does a tremendous job at it. I think we are all very grateful for that passion and for that plea for justice.

I come to the Senate floor today to urge with great passion my Senate colleagues to support another important piece of legislation; that is, to fund the racial discrimination settlement known as Pigford II between African-American farmers and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The time is long overdue to move beyond USDA's discriminatory past and begin to right the wrong of African-American producers and what they have experienced. We have a keen opportunity today to be able to move forward and to see, again, justice as has been described by Senator DORGAN in talking about moving forward and away from the past and the discrimination that occurred and putting an end to these settlements that have already been settled. We have spent the time and the energy and the resources to settle these arguments. Now we need to make sure those who have been wronged will be right.

Between 1981 and 1996, African-American farmers seeking farm loans and credit were discriminated against, denying them access to government programs and to capital. In some cases, these farmers were discouraged from even applying for loans. They were told they were ineligible or that application forms were unavailable. In other instances, loan applications were intentionally delayed to miss deadlines, continuing to disadvantage those African-American farmers. As a result of the discrimination, many of these farmers were unable to run successful businesses and sustained severe damages to their credit histories.

Despite these challenges, despite all of what they were presented with and what they were dealing with, some of these farmers are still farming today, embodying the essence of resilience and the industrious characteristic of all American farmers. We should be proud they are still farming today, and we should honor that by making sure we move this settlement forward and make sure these awards are granted to those who have been wronged.

Another fallout faced by African-American farmers is their shaken faith in the USDA and, by extension, the U.S. Government. Who can blame them—to have been wronged and to be found they were in the right and yet still not to be made whole? Many farmers have spent more than 20 years seeking recognition of the discrimination they experienced. While no settlement can completely compensate them for the anxiety, the anguish, and, of course, the humiliation they experienced, finally funding this settlement is a critical first step in restoring the USDA's credibility among minority farmers.

I hope my colleagues will understand how critically important this is to the embodiment of who we are as a people and a government to move this forward. While it is understood that a legal settlement agreement is rarely perfect, funding this agreement will provide much needed reconciliation for African-American farmers. It is an opportunity to restore their faith in their government, by renouncing a past riddled with discrimination and rightfully honoring the settlement.

Time is of the essence, as many Pigford claimants have passed away waiting for closure on this matter, just as Senator DORGAN mentioned Native Americans who have passed away waiting for justice. We simply cannot afford to delay this process any further. We have seen multiple opportunities and efforts to try to move forward. I hope today is an opportunity none of us will deny to move the issue forward.

In my State of Arkansas, I have heard the stories of hard-working farm families who, despite years of neglect and discrimination from their own government, continue pushing ahead. I have heard from farmers such as Mr. Charlie Knott, a hard-working Arkansan who sought farm loans in the 1980s but was misled and mistreated in that process. Mr. Knott was refused timely access to sufficient capital because of discrimination, limiting production and ultimately crippling his business.

When Mr. Knott fell ill, his children tried to take over the farm but were also met with resistance and neglect from their government, leading to destroyed credit ratings, a loss of 230 acres, as well as the family tractor and other farm equipment. After farming on the same land for over 100 years, the Knott family was forced to quit.

Adding insult to injury, the Knott children were once again denied access to the Pigford claim because of missed filing deadlines. The Knott children are determined to return to farming, to restore the family business and their dignity, and to uphold the legacy of their father, who fought for years not only to serve his family and community but to contribute to the strong legacy of American farming.

Farmers such as Mr. Knott deserve justice and gratitude from a nation that wouldn't be what it is today absent their sacrifices and contributions. Farmers such as Mr. Knott have suffered gross injustices. It is incumbent on the Members of Congress to demonstrate the leadership to correct this injustice and to pass this legislation. If not today, when? When will we do this? This action is long overdue. The time has come to take this step, to live up to our founding principles, to begin the healing process that is so needed, and to restore faith in our government. I urge my colleagues to support this measure today as we move forward and put it behind us, as we begin to heal and rebuild faith in our government.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Arkansas for what she has said. It really is unfortunate that we cannot get this Pigford legislation passed.

I know the distinguished Presiding Officer, the junior Senator from North Carolina, has been working on this very hard as well. In fact, she and I have cosponsored a piece of legislation to give justice in this area as well.

Today, we have an opportunity to finally take care of this situation of bringing justice to Black farmers who have been waiting for decades to settle their discrimination claims against the Department of Agriculture. Earlier this year, Secretary Vilsack was able to reach a settlement agreement with the Pigford II claimants who were denied a determination on the merits of their claims against the USDA for no reason other than they had filed late.

The government has an obligation to fund the settlement, which is subject to court approval, and Congress must act to provide relief for these claimants and do it quickly. The Black farmers have been asking for stand-alone consideration of this bill. That is what I was hoping to get done today.

I have nothing against what my colleagues are doing on the Cobell settlement as well.

I think it is fair to say that such appropriation for the Pigford settlement ought to be offset.

There is an advocate for the Black farmers—John Boyd. I have been working with him for a long period. He was working hard on this a long time before I was. We should be getting this resolved for the benefit of the farmers but also for the advocates, those people who have been working so hard finding ways to get it done. We thought now was the opportunity to get it done.

The farm bill we passed last year does one thing right: it focuses a considerable amount of resources on new and beginning farmers and ranchers. Many of the Pigford claimants were in that same boat 20 years ago. We have an opportunity to rectify that misjustice. We know USDA has admitted the discrimination occurred. Now we are obligated to do our best getting relief to those who deserve it. It is time to make these claimants right and move forward into a new era of civil rights in the Department of Agriculture.

I look forward to the time we can get this done. I plead with my colleagues, as the Senator from Arkansas pleaded, to get this done right now.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, I add my voice in support of coming to closure on this important issue. I thank Senator DORGAN and Senator LINCOLN for their extraordinary leadership for the Pigford and Cobell claimants. We are very close to settling a grave injustice that has gone on in two communities, one the Native-American community and the other the African-American community. I surely hope we can find a way forward in the next few hours, before we leave, to get this done; if not, that it would be one of the first orders of business when we return.

Explanations have been made beautifully on both sides. I represent 1,000 African-American farmers. I am going to fight for them and advocate for them and continue to bring their cases before this body until we get justice.

People in Louisiana generally, of many different races, understand systematic injustice. Talking about oil moneys not coming the way they should, there are many people in Louisiana right now shaking their heads in great sympathy with the stories the Senator from North Dakota shared with us about Native Americans.

I support the Pigford settlement. I support the Cobell settlement. I hope we can find the $5 billion, approximately, so that it does not affect the deficit, paid for in a responsible way to end this discrimination and to provide some hope and support to these families.

I was proud to send Clarence Hawkins' name to run the USDA in Louisiana, the first African-American administrator to do so, former mayor of Bastrop. The President appointed him at my suggestion. We are making some headway in Louisiana to rectify past injustices.

Again, I thank Senators DORGAN and LINCOLN for their leadership.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Madam President, Senator BARRASSO and I, as chairman and vice chairmen of the Indian Affairs Committee, have been working on this issue for a long while. Senator KYL, Senator BAUCUS—we have had discussions. Senator KYL had to leave the floor, but I believe he will return. He very much wants to find a way to resolve these issues, as do I and others.

This is not complicated. This is a case where the Federal Government said to American Indians in the late 1800s: We are going to break up these tribal lands and give you personal ownership of these lands. And then we will manage the lands for you and take care of it for you in trust, and the income that comes off those lands will be yours. We will manage your trust accounts.

The fact is, they took control of the lands and created trust accounts. And the Indians got bilked, looted. Grand theft occurred.

Let me show one more photograph. This fellow is still alive. His name is James Kennerly. He is a Blackfeet Indian, standing in front of his rather humble home. He is hoping that Congress will resolve this by approving the settlement. His father was a World War I veteran, wounded, disabled in combat. The family lives on land that has considerable oil and gas leases. Thousands of barrels a week were pumped off that land. Years later, the oil wells still continue to pump, but all the lease documents have disappeared. This family lives in a humble home despite having had oil interests on their property.

Another person waiting for justice, Johnson Martinez, a Navajo Indian in his seventies, lives in a rundown trailer house near Bloomfield, NM. He has no running water and no electricity. At night, he builds a fire to keep himself and his dogs warm. He lives yards away from where the gas pipelines cross his family's land. He lives off the right-of-way fees for the gas pipeline. One month, he got a check for $80. Sometimes he gets a check for a few cents. A court-appointed investigator found that non-Indians were receiving 20 times more than Navajo Indians such as Johnson Martinez were receiving in the same circumstances.

And then there is Esther and Sam Valdez—Navajo Indians—they live 100 feet from natural gas wells. They have been producing natural gas for a long while. Yet this family has trouble putting food on the table. They receive checks for $6 and $8. Sometimes the checks come, sometimes they don't. The Federal Government can never explain to them what happens to the money. This is grand theft.

For more than a century, American Indians were cheated. Yes, there is some incompetence here. That is the comfortable word. But there is also looting and theft involved in having these folks cheated.

The lawsuit was filed 15 years ago. Ten years ago, the Federal court said the Federal Government is completely without merit and violated its trust. The court found in favor of the plaintiffs, saying that they have been bilked. That was 10 years ago. But, the case continued in Federal court with more and more money spent on lawyers.

Finally, at long last, Interior Secretary Salazar and Attorney General Holder, and the plaintiffs in this case negotiated an agreement, and the Federal judge in the case said: This looks like justice to me. This settlement was sent to the Congress for approval and to provide the funding for this agreement.

I came to the floor to offer a unanimous consent request to see if at long last we might put the Cobell litigation behind us and do the fair thing. I understand a unanimous consent request would be objected to at this moment because of what is called the ''pay-for.'' So we have a disagreement about that. But I also understand from discussions we have held that there is the possibility and the potential that this afternoon we might find a way to reach agreement on the ''pay-for'' portion of this and have the Senate finally approve the Cobell settlement, and also the Pigford settlement so that we can move beyond on this.

In the situation that led to the Cobell case, there are people who should hang their head in shame, many of them now departed, who have bilked the Indians out of so much money over so many years.

I would finally say this about the Cobell matter and the American Indians involved. This is a chart that shows the 10 poorest counties in America, the 10 counties with the most significant poverty in our country. Madam President, 8 of the 10 counties have Indian reservations in them—8 of them. We know that. We know what is going on.

Then I talk about these people, American Indians, who live in humble homes with no money, with six oil wells on their land. Somebody is getting the money, but the Indians are not. Who is cheating them? Who cheated them a decade ago, five decades ago, ten decades ago? Will we ever settle our account here? Will this country ever deal responsibly with what I call a shame?

Well, my colleague, Senator BARRASSO, and I have worked on this a long while. He has had some concern about certain aspects of the settlement, but I do not think there is a disagreement between us at all about the need to move forward to resolve this issue. My hope is we can do that very soon.

As I said, I was intending to seek a unanimous consent request, but I think I will stop short of that at this moment because there is the potential, perhaps later this afternoon, for us to reach agreement on the ''pay-for'' and a couple of other elements and get a unanimous consent request agreed to, which would be a very significant achievement in this body today.

I know Senator BARRASSO from Wyoming wishes to seek recognition. Let me yield the floor so that might happen.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURRIS). The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I appreciate the hard work done by my colleague from North Dakota and his commitment as chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee to try to come to a solution in the Cobell settlement.

He is absolutely right. We still need to work on some policy issues, as well as some issues in terms of how this will be paid for. He and I both agree we need to settle the Cobell lawsuit. There has been much rhetoric. We both agree we need to settle the Cobell lawsuit.

At the President's insistence, and the House and the Senate majorities, they have repeatedly tried to get this bill enacted outside the regular process. This settlement has been inserted into various bills over the past several months that have absolutely nothing to do with American Indian issues. You ask yourself why. Well, perhaps folks wanted to avoid some scrutiny—scrutiny by Congress, by the press, and, most of all, by those who have been most affected, the stakeholders.

Two weeks ago, I came to the floor and offered an amendment to legislation that addressed some of the more egregious problems with the settlement. I am talking policy as well as pay-for issues. The majority leader dismissed my amendment, and he called it the ''beat up the lawyers'' amendment. Well, he called it that because one of the provisions in the amendment establishes a $50 million cap on presettlement attorneys' fees—$50 million. The settlement says it should be between $50 million and $100 million. My amendment said, let's keep it at that lower figure. Only in Washington, DC, would anyone ever call a $50 million cap on attorneys' fees—$50 million of attorneys' fees—as beating up the lawyers.

Well, because attorneys' fees were capped at $50 million, the majority leader objected to both the Cobell and the Pigford settlements.

There was and still is a good reason for that cap. Every Member of this body should read a couple of op-eds on this Cobell settlement. One was in the August 1 edition of The Hill, the other in today's August 5th edition. The August 1 article: ''Cobell settlement worth doing right, together.'' The one from today: ''Unconscionable Cobell.''

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that both these articles be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COBELL SETTLEMENT WORTH DOING RIGHT, TOGETHER

(By Kimberly Craven)

Today, the Senate will be asked to approve by unanimous consent settlement of the proposed Cobell lawsuit (Cobell v. Salazar). Senators are not being advised that the proposed settlement is constitutionally dubious and greatly expands the original litigation. It authorizes a mandatory class of plaintiff with no regard to the due-process rights of individuals to opt. It creates a new class to settle land and natural resource mismanagement claims which were never part of the original litigation and not been part of the 14–year-long Cobell lawsuit which, we have been told, sought only an accounting of individual Indian money (IIM) accounts.

If Congress approves it, the settlement will consist of two classes: those of the historical accounting class and the new ''un-litigated'' class—the trust mismanagement class. The first class will receive $1,0oo and any traditional safe-guard of opting-out will be denied this class. The new second class will receive $500 and a formula based on the top 10 sums that have filtered through a person's IIM account.

Creation of the new class has been disturbing to many tribes and American Indians. The government will be authorized to pay more than $3.4 billion without even filing an Answer to the new Complaint of land mismanagement claims. What it means is that if you're a Native person whose land has been flooded or damaged, timber destroyed, mineral royalties underpaid, soil poisoned, grass lands over-grazed by your lessee or if you've just been the victim of trespass, your claims will be settled for $500 and a formula amount that bears no resemblance to actual damages or loss.

Many American Indians think this entire settlement, although cloaked in righteous language, has been cobbled together for the primary purpose of permitting the Administration to fulfill a campaign promise. This settlement will permit the attorneys to claim as much as $100 million in attorney fees with a side agreement they are not even required to document the time spent on the case for the first fourteen years. Personally, I find it disturbing that one of the plaintiff attorneys served on the Obama campaign, transition team, and posted pictures of himself on Facebook partying at the White House holiday party around the time the settlement was reached, and now is rumored to be up for 10th Circuit Court of Appeals nomination. The lead plaintiff has been very upfront that some Indians will get hundreds of thousands of dollars and is on record as saying, ''Some people will be very, very rich.'' I think we know who some of those people might be. The litigation was filed in a Court of Equity where only an accounting (an equitable action) could be ordered and money damages could not be awarded. The seven attorneys will share in $100 million and the lead plaintiff will also be entitled to up to $15 million in ''reimbursements'' for ''repayable grants,'' surely an oxymoron even in Washington-speak, plus an undisclosed amount in ''incentive fees for the four lead plaintiffs.''

As I wrote this opinion piece, I researched elements of an unfair class action lawsuit and found this information at www.classactionlitigation.com/faq. Elements include ''any settlement where the release being demanded as a condition of the settlement is extremely overbroad and encompasses claims that were neither pursued in the class complaint nor subject to true adversarial litigation prior to the settlement and virtual nonexistence of discovery by the class counsel who proposes a settlement.'' This surely meets those thresholds with no discovery, judicial record, or due process for the proposed second class.

Both the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians and the Great Plains Tribal Chairmen's Association are on record as wanting changes to the settlement. Sen. John Barrasso (R–Wyo.) has recommended many of these changes to address the fairness, restoration, due process, and other infirmities in the settlement proposed today and many Indian people appreciate his efforts in his leadership role as Vice Chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee. Having worked for a Republican Senator, Sen. Daniel J. Evans (R–Wash.), who also served in this capacity, I know firsthand that Indian issues are not partisan in nature. If this is worth doing to the tune of $3.4 billion, then it's worth doing right together.

UNCONSCIONABLE COBELL

(By Richard A. Monette)

A few facts about the Cobell settlement to be voted on in Senate today:

Number of published court opinions in the case: 80-plus;

Amount awarded to plaintiffs by courts at present: $0;

Amount to attorneys under settlement: $100 Million (through Dec. 7, 2009);

Amount to each account holder under settlement: $1,000.00;

Number of accounts with less than $15: 107,806;

Total amount of money in accounts with less than $15 (small accounts): $15,210.51;

Average balance in 107,806 small accounts: $7.09;

Total to be paid under settlement to small accounts: $107,806,000.

The Senate is asked today to give approval, sight-unseen and by unanimous consent, to a $3.4 billion ''settlement'' of a 14-year-old lawsuit brought by five individuals on behalf of all American Indians who have money or land held in trust by the United States. $2 billion of this amount will be earmarked to pre-fund an existing Bureau of Indian Affairs program for 10 years. The amount awarded by the courts to date after more than 10 trials is exactly zero dollars and zero cents. If approved by the Congress, and subsequently by the courts, the remainder of this money will be parceled out by formula in the form of reparations without regard to any individual's actual losses or damages.

The only individuals who will be permitted to present actual clams are the attorneys and the five named individual plaintiffs. The five named plaintiffs are authorized up to $15 million as ''reimbursements'' for ''repayable grants,'' plus an undisclosed amount as ''incentive fee awards.'' The lawyers will be authorized to claim up to $100 million off the top, plus their ''normal hourly rates'' for as long as it takes to settle up with some 300,000 individuals, more than 83,000 of whose whereabouts are unknown. Much smaller mass settlement awards have taken more than 10 years to close out.

More than 100,000 of these individuals have account balances of less than $15. Each of them will receive a check for $1,000, or an amount more than 6,600 percent of their current balance. Those individuals with more than $1 million in their accounts will receive $1,000 also, or less than one-tenth of 1 percent of their current balances. There is neither rhyme nor reason to this scheme.

The $2 billion, pre-funded BIA program completely usurps the authority of the Appropriations Committees for 10 years. This settlement also confers jurisdiction on a federal district court that does not presently have it; rewrites the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for this case to authorize the court to exercise the conferred jurisdiction; and presents the court not with a case or controversy as required by Article III of the Constitution, but with a pre-packaged financial program simply to administer. The sponsor of this measure in the Senate stated that no other committee (i.e., Judiciary) needs to review this measure before it is presented for a vote.

Proponents claim this settlement will ''turn the page'' on a dark chapter. Some who are familiar with the litigating history beyond this case of the lead counsel and lead plaintiff think this settlement is more likely only to fuel a war chest for subsequent, similarly entrepreneurial and extortionate litigation. No senator should think this settlement approximates ''justice'' that has somehow escaped the attention of the federal judges who have actually presided over the 14–year history of this case.

Mr. BARRASSO. So there are issues of policy dealing with transparency, dealing with the production of records by the attorneys who are involved in this. When you read one of these editorials, the one in today's Hill, ''Unconscionable Cobell,'' written by a law professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison:

Number of published court opinions in the case: 80-plus

Amount awarded to plaintiffs by courts at present: $0

Amount to attorneys under settlement: $100 Million. . . .

Amount to each account holder under [this] settlement:

We are talking now about those who have been affected by this—

$1,000.00

What an incredible disparity.

Well, if we were all to take the time to look through these two editorials, the changes to the settlement I have been proposing would not only seem reasonable, they would be absolutely necessary. They point out several real problems with the settlement, including the way the attorneys' fees are handled. I am continuing to work with my colleagues on dealing with that. These are the blunt facts.

So I agree with my colleague from North Dakota, the problems with the Cobell settlement are by no means insurmountable. They can and they must be resolved. In fact, I do not think it would be difficult to resolve the differences we have regarding the Cobell settlement. We can sit down, and we plan to do that, to discuss the issues directly. I think we can get beyond this impasse, and that is what I am committed to do.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, as I indicated, I intend to withhold the unanimous consent request because it would clearly be objected to. There are some people who disagree with the method by which this settlement would be paid for.

But I also wish to mention that I have some hope that later today, finally at long last, we may be able to come to the floor of the Senate with an agreement that would be able to withstand the unanimous consent request. If we do that before we break, we would have resolved a very longstanding issue, not just 15 years of litigation, or a century of mismanagement, but also since last December, when this agreement was reached and the Congress was given time to approve it, but then that deadline had to be extended six times. At long last, perhaps we will be able to decide we can do this together.

I very much appreciate the work Senator BARRASSO is doing and Senator KYL and Senator BAUCUS and others. My hope is that later this afternoon I will be able to come to the floor with such a unanimous consent request.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about the Pigford II settlement pending full action by the U.S. Senate.

We all know that farming is a difficult occupation. The hours are long, the weather is unpredictable, and the challenge of competing in a global marketplace is intense. Tens of thousands of Black farmers have had to face all those normal challenges. Tragically, they have also had to deal with a challenge that was unique to them based solely on race. The U.S. Department of Agriculture, USDA, was discriminating against them.

More than 12 years ago, Black farmers across America brought a class action suit against the USDA for racial discrimination. The history of that discrimination is a sad one, and it is well documented. Farmers, like all businesses, need access to loans. They need to borrow money for expensive equipment and they need funding to help them when droughts strike or when markets collapse. The Congress has recognized this need for decades, and we have established special loan programs in the USDA to support these special needs. But when it came to lending, tens of thousands of Black farmers were the victims of systemic discrimination. During the 1980s and 1990s, the average processing time for a loan application by White farmers was 30 days; the average time for a loan application by Black farmers was 387 days. Black farmers had to wait 12 times as long to receive a loan. This discrimination earned the USDA the regrettable nickname ''the Last Plantation.''

Black farmers finally sought justice through a class action lawsuit in 1997. More than 20,000 farmers initiated claims citing racial discrimination in the USDA farm loan programs. Two years after the action was initiated, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia entered a consent decree approving a class action settlement to compensate these farmers for years of racial discrimination by the USDA. Each farmer who could prove discrimination was entitled to damages. Out of the initial 20,000 farmers, 15,000 were meritorious in the claims they brought.

As the legal process continued, additional farmers began to join the class action and filed their own claims. Approximately 80,000 farmers eventually brought claims. Unfortunately, many of these farmers did not know about the class action suit, and by the time they learned of its existence, the filing deadline had passed.

In 2008, Congress recognizing the injustice of stopping 80 percent or more of the farmers who potentially suffered discrimination by our government—decided to take action and created a new cause of action for farmers previously denied access to justice. In the 2008 farm bill, with bipartisan support, Congress included $100 million for payments and debt relief as a downpayment to satisfy the claims filed by deserving claimants denied participation in the original settlement because of timeliness issues.

After years of litigation and negotiation between the Department of Justice, which represented the USDA, and lawyers for the farmers, a settlement was finally reached in February 2010. The Pigford II settlement agreement will provide $1.25 billion, which is contingent on appropriation by Congress, to African-American farmers who can show they suffered racial discrimination in USDA farm loan programs. Once the money is appropriated farmers can pursue their individual claims through the same nonjudicial process used in the first case.

To address this funding need, President Obama included $1.15 billion in additional funding for his fiscal year 2010 and fiscal year 2011 budgets. Both Chambers of Congress have worked to pass appropriations to fulfill the settlement agreement since February. The House of Representatives has passed funding language for the Pigford case twice; once as part of the war supplemental and the other on a tax extenders bill. But the Senate has not been able to do the same. Despite the majority leader's efforts in finding ways to pay for the legislation and move the legislation for full Senate consideration, we have been unable to proceed to a rollcall vote. This bill has come before the Senate a half dozen times. There are no known objections to the settlement, yet we have failed to pass the funding therefore denying the process for funding to these farmers who were discriminated against by our own government.

We must move to appropriate these funds. The settlement that was reached is only valid until August 18, 2010. Failure to appropriate the money by then could cause the agreement to be voided. William Gladstone once said that ''justice delayed is justice denied.'' Let us not be in the business of delaying and denying justice for African-American farmers. Let us be in the business of allowing the justice system to work and provide them with adequate redress. I urge my colleagues to support this funding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I think my friends and colleagues on the other side have blocked out some time. If they would not mind, I would be very grateful if I could take 5 or 6 minutes to make some comments about the Kagan nomination. I see heads nodding affirmatively, so I appreciate it.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF ELENA KAGAN TO BE AN ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES—Resumed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will proceed to executive session to consider the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Elena Kagan, of Massachusetts, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise this afternoon to express my very strong support for the nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to serve as an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. I would like to thank Chairman LEAHY and Ranking Member SESSIONS for their work during the Judiciary Committee's recent hearings, as well as Majority Leader REID for moving Solicitor General Kagan's nomination through the Senate confirmation process as he has.

There are very few powers exercised by this body that are more important than its constitutionally mandated duty to give advice and consent on the President's judicial nominations. The very essence of our Nation's government rests on the supremacy of the rule of law, and the Constitution is the highest embodiment of that principle. The men and women whom we confirm to this Court are more than just judges. As the chief interpreters of that seminal document, the Constitution, they are guardians of the supremacy of the rule of law, upon which the integrity of our entire system of justice has been built.

It is, therefore, no surprise that nominees to our Nation's highest Court are subjected to such an intense level of scrutiny during the Senate's confirmation process. Nevertheless, the Constitution does not lay out a precise roadmap for how to do this. Therefore, each Senator must decide for him or herself what criteria to use when evaluating the merits of an individual Supreme Court nominee.

For my part, I have used the same, simple three-part test for Supreme Court nominees since 1981, when I voted to confirm Sandra Day O'Connor as the Court's first female Justice. Indeed, this is the 13th Supreme Court nomination I have considered during my 30-year tenure in the Senate—from Justice O'Connor to Elena Kagan today.

First, does the nominee have the technical competence and legal experience to do the job of a Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court?

Second, does the nominee have the proper character and temperament to serve on the High Court?

Third, does the nominee's record demonstrate respect for and adherence to the principles underlying our legal system—that of equal justice under the law?

For anyone who has read about her life or watched her performance during the confirmation hearings held by the Judiciary Committee earlier this summer, I believe it is abundantly clear that Elena Kagan passes all three of these tests with flying colors.

On the question of Solicitor General Kagan's competency and experience, I think there is little doubt that we are dealing with a superbly qualified nominee.

Since her graduation from Harvard Law School in 1986, Elena Kagan has enjoyed an illustrious legal and academic career.

After her graduation, Solicitor General Kagan had the honor of clerking for two extremely distinguished and highly influential Federal judges: U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia circuit judge Abner Mikva, with whom I served in the House of Representatives, and has been a great friend of mine for many years; and Thurgood Marshall, the Nation's first African-American Supreme Court Justice.

Subsequently, after nearly a decade of legal work in the private sector, as a professor at the University of Chicago Law School, and as an Associate Counsel in the White House under the administration of President Clinton, Ms. Kagan returned to her prestigious alma mater, serving first as a professor of law and then as dean of the Harvard Law School.

In an auspicious return to public service, Elena Kagan became the Federal Government's chief lawyer before the Supreme Court last year when she was confirmed by this body as our Nation's 45th Solicitor General—a position often referred to, I might add, as the Court's ''10th Justice'' because of the extensive legal knowledge and close working relationship with the Federal bench it requires.

I realize some of my colleagues have questioned Solicitor General Kagan's nomination because of her lack of judicial experience—that because Solicitor General Kagan has never been a judge in either a State or Federal court she cannot be an effective Supreme Court Justice.

I would, however, gently remind my colleagues that there is absolutely no constitutional requirement that a Supreme Court nominee have served previously as a judge. In fact, there is no requirement to be a lawyer to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States. Since our country's founding, well over one-third of the 111 individuals who have served on our Nation's highest Court never put on a judge's robe before their confirmation.

Indeed, William Rehnquist, who served as Chief Justice from 1986 until his death in 2005, had no prior work experience as a judge when he was first appointed to the Court by President Nixon in 1971.

Nor did Justice Robert Jackson, a very close and dear personal friend of my father who served with him at the Nuremberg Trials in 1945 and 1946. Robert Jackson served as U.S. Attorney General under Franklin Roosevelt before being appointed to the Supreme Court in 1941.

I would, therefore, submit to my colleagues that there are other important measures of the quality of a Supreme Court nominee besides the depth of his or her experience on the bench. Solicitor General Kagan's impressive list of career accomplishments and extensive base of legal knowledge will, I believe, hopefully put those unfounded doubts over her experience to rest.

Moving on to the two remaining parts of my test, Elena Kagan once again proves she would make an excellent addition to our Nation's highest Court.

As to her character, her graceful performance before the Judiciary Committee and extensive list of enthusiastic recommendations from Democrats, Republicans, and others across the entire spectrum reveal her to be a person of the utmost integrity, professionalism, and sound judgment. They also reveal, I think, a key aspect of her legal philosophy—a deep and abiding respect for the rule of law and our Nation's cherished principle of equality under the law.

As I said previously, Supreme Court Justices are not just judges, they are stalwarts of our Nation's democratic values, guardians of the idea that the rule of law should always transcend the rule of men. Each of the Federal judicial nominees confirmed in this body has the ability to shape every facet of the law and, in a larger sense, American society in general. As a result, it is absolutely critical, in my view, that we have members of the Supreme Court whose first obligation, above all else, is to safeguard those guiding constitutional principles that form the foundation of our democratic system of government and to fight for the principle of equal justice under law.

I firmly believe that, when confirmed, Solicitor General Kagan will hew closely to those critically important values and work to ensure they are protected.

Once again, I wish to thank Chairman LEAHY, our colleague Senator SESSIONS, the ranking minority member, and the members of the Judiciary Committee, who I think gave her a very fair, competent, and thorough hearing during the nomination process. I also wish to commend Majority Leader REID for his hard work during this process. I urge my colleagues to join those of us who believe this is a quality nominee who will serve our country well as an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. President, I thank my colleagues on the other side for giving me a few minutes to express my views on this issue.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to participate in a colloquy with a number of my Senate colleagues.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, we wish to enter into a discussion this afternoon about a very critical issue in this confirmation process, and that is the second amendment and the right to keep and bear arms as provided for in our Constitution; the threat that now exists to that right that is plainly stated in the Constitution, and why we think it is worthy of serious consideration.

I will say that most Americans are totally unaware, perhaps, that the second amendment and the power of the second amendment hangs by a mere thread. Two five-to-four decisions recently have affirmed the second amendment, but had that vote been different—one Justice voting a different way—the second amendment would not apply to the District of Columbia. It would not be considered a right that would apply even to a Federal Government entity such as the District of Columbia as a result of the Heller case.

A more recent case in Chicago, McDonald v. the City of Chicago, dealt with whether the second amendment actually applies to the States and does it only apply to the Federal Government. That was a big deal. If it does not apply to the States, then any State in any city—and many cities are perfectly willing to do this—would have the power to ban firearms entirely, even though the Constitution plainly says you have the right to keep and bear arms. This was the effect of that decision.

I see my colleague Senator WICKER from Mississippi here. I wish to ask him if he would share with us: Does he believe Ms. Kagan's record would provide us any insight into her views on the second amendment? Because she would be one of the votes that would be critical as we go forward in the future as to whether that amendment still has power and force.

Mr. WICKER. I thank the ranking member for that question. I would answer: Yes, indeed, her record, taken together with her committee testimony, tells us a lot about Ms. Kagan's insight and feelings about the second amendment.

Let me agree with my colleague from Connecticut, however, and say I don't believe it is necessary for someone to have judicial experience to be an effective member of the Supreme Court. Clearly that is not called for in the Constitution. However, in a situation such as this, where the nominee has never written a judicial opinion of her own, where she has hardly any experience at all in the courtroom, I do think it is appropriate—and actually necessary—for us to examine her life experience and see what insights we can gain on her views on the second amendment.

I would also say this: The debate is drawing to a close. The issue is probably not in doubt, but I think we owe it to the RECORD, we owe it to our constituents, we owe it to the American people to outline our concerns with regard to the second amendment to the Constitution, to the second article in the Bill of Rights. So I ask my colleagues to indulge me by going through some of the life experiences this nominee has.

Ms. Kagan began her law career clerking for a very antigun judge, Abner Mikva, who later brought Ms. Kagan to the White House to serve as his deputy. Judge Mikva once likened the National Rifle Association to ''a street crime lobby.''

Next, Ms. Kagan's own hostility to the second amendment rights became evident during her time as a law clerk for Justice Thurgood Marshall where as a clerk she wrote that she was ''not sympathetic'' to the argument that the DC handgun ban violated an individual's second amendment rights. This is disappointing and troubling. In this memo she didn't cite text, precedent, or analyze the law or look to the Constitution. Ms. Kagan inserted her personal beliefs and said: I am not sympathetic to this individual right argument.

The case that comment involved was Lee Sandidge. A business owner was arrested and convicted in the District of Columbia for possessing ammunition and an unregistered pistol without a license. The law provided up to 10 years in jail for this offense. Mr. Sandidge's second amendment claim—the one that Ms. Kagan was not sympathetic toward—challenged the very same DC total gun ban that was struck down later by the Supreme Court in the Heller decision. Ms. Kagan's lack of sympathy for Sandidge's claim demonstrates she failed to recognize that we have an individual right as citizens to bear arms. I am very pleased that the Supreme Court has now recognized this on two occasions, in Heller as well as this year, in 2010, in McDonald.

Then Ms. Kagan embarked on what can only be described as a quest against gun ownership and second amendment rights during her years in the Clinton White House. She worked extensively on gun issues during President Clinton's administration which was well known for such gun control efforts. The record leaves no doubt that Ms. Kagan was a key player in shaping Clinton White House restrictive gun policies. During those years, she coauthored policy memos that advocated increased restrictions on lawful gun owners, including legislation requiring background checks for all secondary market gun purchases, a gun tracing initiative, and a call for a new gun design ''that can be shot only by authorized adults.'' According to the records of the Clinton Presidential Library, Ms. Kagan also drafted an Executive Order restricting the importation of certain semiautomatic rifles that were not covered by statute. In other words, she authored an Executive Order that went beyond the statute in her quest against gun ownership.

At the time of the import ban, a senior staffer who worked in the Clinton domestic policy shop that was run by Ms. Kagan, described the administration's plan as follows: ''We are taking the law and bending it as far as it can to capture a whole new class of guns.'' This was the office our nominee ran during that administration.

In addition, Ms. Kagan appears to have been in charge of the Domestic Policy Council's effort to respond to the Supreme Court's 1997 ruling in Printz v. the United States. The Printz case struck down parts of the 1994 Brady handgun law on tenth amendment grounds. According to the Clinton Library, even after the Supreme Court had ruled, the Clinton administration, with Ms. Kagan involved, worked to preserve unconstitutional provisions considered in many legislative and executive branch responses to the Court's decision.

I would reiterate what my friend from Alabama has said. The right of every American—the individual right we have to keep and bear arms under the second amendment to the Constitution—hangs by a single vote, and I am concerned that personal sympathies and a strong record of opposition to the second amendment would influence the way this person would act as a judge.

But there is one other thing, and I wish to ask my friend from Nevada about this. During her testimony before the Judiciary Committee, Ms. Kagan stated she had never had an occasion to look at the history on which Heller is based, and, therefore, she could not say whether she believed there is a preexisting individual, fundamental right to keep and bear arms.

Here is a talented and intelligent and articulate and brilliant law student and law professor and staffer who worked extensively on the issue of second amendment rights for years, and she taught constitutional law at one of the most prestigious institutions in this country, yet she stated in her testimony that she had never had occasion to look at the history on which this was based and, therefore, she could not say whether there was a fundamental right to keep and bear arms. I think her credibility was quite damaged by that statement.

I ask my friend Senator ENSIGN whether he was surprised when Ms. Kagan made that statement based on her extensive experience and interaction involving this issue?

Mr. ENSIGN. As a matter of fact, I was surprised. I think she did a real disservice to her prior employers, Justice Marshall, President Clinton, by not studying the history of the second amendment before she provided them with legal advice. I also think she did a disservice to her students, one that a professor of constitutional law should understand.

Ms. Kagan confirmed the importance of studying founding documents when interpreting second amendment rights when she said during her Solicitor General hearing:

The individual rights view and the collective rights view present cogent and sometimes powerful arguments. And I have come away thinking that immersion in the primary sources, which I have never attempted, would be necessary to choose between them with any degree of confidence.

That is what she said. She confirmed this when I met with her as well. Yet the choice between the individual and collective rights view was crucial to her work for Justice Marshall in the Sandidge case and was certainly important to her work during the Clinton administration.

Mr. THUNE. Would the Senator from Nevada yield for a question on that?

Mr. ENSIGN. Yes.

Mr. THUNE. I heard my colleague say—and I would be interested in having him confirm—didn't Ms. Kagan teach constitutional law and would it not have been appropriate at that time for her to have looked at the Founding Fathers' intent on the second amendment?

Mr. ENSIGN. As a matter of fact, she did teach constitutional law. I suspect that in the course of her career, she came to understand where the Founders included these words in the second amendment in the Bill of Rights:

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

I don't think there was a lack of time or certainly a lack of ability to find this source material, but I suspect it may be more of her unwillingness to accept and ultimately admit that the Constitution and the second amendment run contrary to her political beliefs. I find this extremely troubling.

I also think it shows this nominee's tendency to rely on her own personal beliefs and to read these into her decisions instead of the intent of the Framers of the Constitution.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Nevada, it is troubling—very troubling, and maybe even telling—that the President would ask us to confirm an individual who admittedly has not reviewed the justification for the second amendment in the Bill of Rights.

Mr. ENSIGN. I think my friend from South Dakota makes an excellent observation. This admission of her failure to study the history surrounding the second amendment is also in stark contrast to her emphasis on the importance of students studying international law at Harvard Law School.

When Solicitor General Kagan became dean of the Harvard Law School, she spearheaded a sweeping overhaul of the academic curriculum to require law students to take an international and comparative law course during their first year.

When asked, ''What specific subjects or legal trends would you like [Harvard] to reflect?'' she responded:

First and foremost, international law. . . . we should be making clear to our students the great importance of knowledge about other legal systems throughout the world. For 21st century law schools, the future lies in international and comparative law, and this is what law schools today ought to be focusing on.

She also said:

Our goal, then, has been to . . . better equip graduates to be proactive and creative problem solvers . . . to work with a global perspective, whether the particular problem involves a local contract dispute, or an international treaty.

Thanks to Dean Kagan, international law is a required course at Harvard Law School for first-year law students. However, constitutional law—U.S. constitutional law—is not only not a first-year requirement—in fact, somebody graduating from Harvard Law School can graduate without ever taking U.S. constitutional law.

Mr. SESSIONS. If the Senator will yield, this is a troubling thing. Justice Scalia has been a fierce critic of this, pointing out: What country do you pick? Do judges get to pick their own?

It seems to me, from what the Senator said, it is clear that the President's nominee to our highest Court in the United States has felt that the world of international law is more important than studying our own Constitution.

Mr. ENSIGN. That is the way it appears to me. This is another example of where her personal beliefs come in to affect the way she is going to be as a judicial activist.

Mr. SESSIONS. I agree. I think we must study what our Constitution says, what the people who wrote it meant, and what rights the people retained for themselves when they created it and gave certain limited rights to the Federal Government. I do believe the history of the second amendment is important. What is the history surrounding the founding of our country and the drafting of the second amendment?

Mr. ENSIGN. I am glad the Senator from Alabama asked that critical question. I think it is so important for Americans, people in this body, but especially our Supreme Court Justices, to understand.

We have to remember that the founding generation had just finished fighting the Revolution against a tyrannical government. They knew the true value of having an armed citizen population.

Thomas Paine wrote in ''Thoughts on Defensive War'' in 1775:

Arms discourage and keep the invader and plunderer in awe, and preserve order in the world, as well as property. . . . Horrid mischief would ensue were the law-abiding deprived of the use of them.

Thomas Jefferson once said in a 1787 letter to William Smith:

And what country can preserve its liberties, if its rulers are not warned from time to time that this people preserve the spirit of resistance? Let them take arms. . . .

Patrick Henry said:

Are we at last brought to such an humiliating and debasing degradation that we cannot be trusted with arms for our own defense? Where is the difference between having our arms under our own possession and under our own direction, and having them under the management of Congress? If our defense be the real object of having those arms, in whose hands can they be trusted with more propriety, or equal safety to us, as in our own hands?

In fact, if you only take a cursory look at the 20th century, every single government that has perpetrated genocide has first disarmed its citizens. It is my understanding that every known dictator who has come to power has followed this course.

Mr. SESSIONS. Well, did our Founding Fathers actually know this? What was their intent with regard to preserving the right to keep and bear arms when this language went into the Constitution?

Mr. ENSIGN. I know that our Founders certainly looked at writings of prominent philosophers when debating the importance of the right to keep and bear arms.

William Blackstone, whom the Supreme Court has called the ''preeminent authority on English law for the founding generation,'' cited the right to keep and bear arms as ''one of the fundamental rights of Englishmen,'' calling it ''the natural right of resistance and self-preservation—the right of having and using arms for self-preservation and defense.''

Judge St. George Tucker, who wrote the first commentary on the Constitution in 1803, describes the second amendment as ''the true palladium of liberty.''

He continued:

The right to self-defence is the first law of nature: in most governments it has been the study of rulers to confine the right within the narrowest limits possible. Wherever standing armies are kept up, and the right of the people to keep and bear arms is, under any colour or pretext whatsoever, prohibited, liberty, if not already annihilated, is on the brink of destruction.

Judge Tucker also said:

If, for example, a law passed by congress, prohibiting the free exercise of religion . . . or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people to assemble peaceably, or to keep and bear arms; it would, in any of these cases be the province of the judiciary to pronounce whether any such act were constitutional. . . . The judiciary, therefore, is the department of the government to whom the protection of the rights of the individual is by the constitution especially, confided, interposing its shield between him and the sword of usurped authority, the darts of oppression, and the safety of faction and violence.

I would like to ask my colleague from Mississippi, what did Ms. Kagan say about this natural right of self-defense?

Mr. WICKER. I simply look to her own testimony. I think it is troubling—particularly for a law professor and somebody who dealt with the issue for decades—when asked at her hearing whether she personally believes there was a right to self-defense that existed before the Constitution, she said she ''didn't have a view of what are natural independent of the Constitution.''

Maybe Solicitor General Kagan was tired by that time. Maybe she had been told by her handlers—the people at the Department of Justice—that it is best to simply not answer that. But I say to my colleagues, we are endowed by our Creator with certain inalienable rights. We don't get them from the Constitution. Those rights are there. Certain rights are enumerated, including the second amendment rights, in the Constitution. For a Justice of the Supreme Court not to understand that causes me problems, and it causes me to think that she just doesn't have a very well-founded view of the second amendment.

Mr. ENSIGN. Well, I think her statement was shocking. It also proves she doesn't believe the second amendment codifies the preexisting natural right to self-defense.

Her statement is in stark contrast with the belief of our Founders, who fervently believed that the right to keep and bear arms was a natural right. Our Founders discussed natural rights in one of the founding documents, the Declaration of Independence:

> We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Yet Ms. Kagan doesn't ''have a view of what are natural rights independent of the Constitution.'' The failure to recognize the natural right to self-defense as articulated by our Founders and expressed in the Bill of Rights, I believe, is deeply disturbing.

The Constitution doesn't create these inalienable rights, as the Senator from Mississippi said. It recognizes and protects these rights that are considered bestowed upon us by our Creator.

Mr. WICKER. The Senator is correct. The phrase ''a right of the people'' is used two other times in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights—in the first amendment's assembly and petition clause, the fourth amendment's search and seizure clause, and a very similar phrase is used in the ninth amendment, where the Founders stated that ''the enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.''

In all three instances, the Framers were referring to individual rights and not to collective rights. Nowhere in the Constitution does a ''right'' attributed to ''the people'' refer to anything but an individual right. It is the same with the second amendment.

This has been affirmed in the Heller case. Judge Sotomayor, when testifying before us, said she thought that was settled law. The decision this year, in which she dissented, makes me wonder about that, and it gives me grave concern, with a 5-to-4 Court, about what might happen to precedent and what I believe now is settled law.

Let me ask the ranking member, during Ms. Kagan's hearing, she was questioned about her statement that she believes precedent trumps original intent. What does this mean with regard to the second amendment rights, based on the pre-Heller precedent?

Mr. SESSIONS. It is a troubling statement. I think, clearly, it allows her to justify voting—if confirmed to the Supreme Court—to eviscerate the second amendment. There are some earlier cases before the 14th amendment was even passed, or before the first 10 amendments, the Bill of Rights, were applied to the States in any systematic way that you could rely on as precedent, which could indeed trump, in her words, the original intent of the Constitution.

What did the people ratify? They ratified the Constitution that, in fact, just before the Founders signed it, they said ''we do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States''—not some other judicial opinion 100 years later.

I think it raises troubling questions about where she stands on that. In the light of Heller and McDonald, which were razor-thin 5-to-4 decisions, made within the last 2½ years, we have to acknowledge that the Supreme Court is not, with clarity, committed to the plain application of the second amendment.

Mr. THUNE. If I might ask the Senator from Alabama this—because he is the ranking member on the Judiciary Committee. I know he has dealt with numerous nominees to the Supreme Court in the past, as well as probably hundreds of other judicial nominees. Does the Senator recall how often those nominees had a record on second amendment rights?

Mr. SESSIONS. Well, most nominees have not had a record on it, but it is interesting, and perhaps noteworthy, that President Obama, who himself has not been a strong supporter of the second amendment rights, and many of his supporters and Cabinet members are openly hostile to it, the two nominees for the Supreme Court he has submitted, Justice Sotomayor and Kagan, have had records that indicate a hostility to it. Even though Judge Sotomayor, in her testimony, indicated she considered this settled law—the Heller decision—her decision less than a year later in the Chicago McDonald case, on a similar but somewhat different issue, was not consistent with the belief that the Supreme Court had settled the question in Heller. So this was a troubling thing. I think the Attorney General of the United States, Eric Holder, has argued very vociferously to restrict gun rights.

This is the top law enforcement officer in the country. I do believe this is a matter of some concern, in fact, that we may be moving into a period in which the government, the big city in Washington, the elites who control this, who come out of an environment where they are not comfortable with guns, are oblivious and insensitive to the right that I believe was critical to our Founders in ratifying the Constitution. They wanted to know that they had a right to keep and bear arms, and it was important to them that the right was in the Constitution.

I ask Senator THUNE, have any of the outside groups that are concerned about these issues spoken out about this nomination?

Mr. THUNE. They have. I simply say to my colleague from Alabama, in his remarks he noted the pattern we are starting to see that exists with regard to—the Senator from Alabama mentioned the Attorney General of this administration and their nominees to the Supreme Court. What that has done is galvanized those at the grassroots level who are very concerned about what they see happening and how it might threaten and put in danger the second amendment right that many of them have enjoyed and believe is something that ought to be protected in the future—it ought to be protected by the Supreme Court, it ought to be protected by the Congress, it ought to be protected by the President of the United States.

We see some of these grassroots people who are concerned about this issue give voice to their concerns through organizations such as the NRA, for example, and Gun Owners of America. I wish to point out, if I may, that both of these organizations have written letters in opposition to Ms. Kagan's nomination.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD these letters.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION
OF AMERICA,
Fairfax, VA, July 1, 2010.

Hon. PATRICK LEAHY,
Chairman, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Hon. JEFF SESSIONS,
Ranking Member, Senate Committee on the Judiciary, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY AND RANKING MEMBER SESSIONS: We are writing to announce the National Rifle Association's position on the confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Other than declaring war, neither house of Congress has a more solemn responsibility than the Senate's role in confirming justices to the U.S. Supreme Court. As the Senate considers the nomination of Solicitor General Kagan, Americans have been watching to see whether this nominee—if confirmed—would respect the Second Amendment or side with those who have declared war on the rights of America's 80 million gun owners.

During confirmation hearings, judicial nominees make carefully crafted statements regarding issues with which they do not personally agree. They often speak in terms of ''settled law'' or ''I understand the right''. When those statements are contradicted by an entire body of work over a nominee's career, however, it would be foolhardy to simply take them at face value. In Ms. Kagan's own words, ''you can look to my whole life as to what kind of justice I would be.'' We agree.

As she has no judicial record on which we can rely, we have only her political record to review. And throughout her political career, she has repeatedly demonstrated a clear hostility to the fundamental, individual right to keep and bear arms guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution.

As a clerk for Justice Thurgood Marshall, Ms. Kagan said she was ''not sympathetic'' to a challenge to Washington, D.C.'s ban on handguns and draconian registration requirements. As domestic policy advisor in the Clinton White House, a colleague described her as ''immersed'' in President Clinton's gun control policy efforts. For example, she was involved in an effort to ban more than 50 types of commonly-owned semi-automatic firearms—an effort that was described as: ''taking the law and bending it as far as we can to capture a whole new class of guns.'' And as U.S. Solicitor General, she chose not to file a brief last year in the landmark case McDonald v. Chicago, thus taking the position that incorporating the Second Amendment and applying it to the States was of no interest to the Obama Administration or the federal government. These are not the positions of a person who supports the Second Amendment.

During her confirmation hearings last year, Justice Sonia Sotomayor repeatedly stated that the Supreme Court's historic Heller decision was ''settled law''. Even further, in response to a question from Chairman Leahy, she said ''I understand the individual right fully that the Supreme Court recognized in Heller.'' Yet last Monday in McDonald, she joined a dissenting opinion which stated: ''I can find nothing in the Second Amendment's text, history, or underlying rationale that could warrant characterizing it as 'fundamental' insofar as it seeks to protect the keeping and bearing of arms for private self-defense purposes''.

We would also note that both Heller and McDonald were 5–4 decisions. The fact that four justices would effectively write the Second Amendment out of the Constitution is completely unacceptable. Ms. Kagan has repeatedly declined to say whether she agrees with the dissenting views of justices Stevens, Breyer, Ginsburg and Sotomayor, which leaves unanswered the very serious questions of whether she would vote to overturn Heller and McDonald or narrow their holdings to a practical nullity.

This nation was founded on a set of fundamental freedoms. Our Constitution does not give us those freedoms—it guarantees and protects them. The right to defend ourselves and our loved ones is one of those. The fundamental, individual right to keep and bear arms is another. These truths are what define us as Americans.

Any individual who does not believe that the Second Amendment guarantees a fundamental right and who does not respect our God-given right of self-defense should not serve on any court, much less receive a lifetime appointment to the highest court in the land. Justice Sotomayor's blatant reversal on this critical issue requires that we look beyond statements made during confirmation hearings and examine a nominee's entire body of work. Unfortunately, Ms. Kagan's record on the Second Amendment gives us no confidence that if confirmed to the Court, she will faithfully defend the fundamental, individual right to keep and bear arms of law-abiding Americans.

For these reasons, the National Rifle Association has no choice but to oppose the confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to the U.S. Supreme Court. Given the importance of this issue, this vote will be considered in NRA's future candidate evaluations.

Thank you for your attention to our concerns. Should you have any questions or wish to discuss further, please do not hesitate to call on us personally.

Sincerely,

WAYNE LAPIERRE,
Executive Vice President, NRA.
CHRIS COX,
Executive Director, NRA–ILA.

GUN OWNERS OF AMERICA,
Springfield, VA, August 5, 2010.

DEAR SENATOR: You will soon vote on the confirmation of Elena Kagan to the U.S. Supreme Court.

During her confirmation hearings, Kagan ducked and dodged questions about the Second Amendment and refused to declare whether she believes the Second Amendment protects an individual right.

Kagan insisted that the Supreme Court decisions in Heller and McDonald should be treated as precedent and ''settled law,'' but this in no way precludes her from ruling that almost any gun law—including gun owner registration, purchasing limits, waiting periods, private sale background checks, and more—is consistent with the Constitution.

Recall the confirmation hearings of Sonia Sotomayor, the newest Supreme Court Justice. Sotomayor assured the Senate, and the American people, that she accepted the Court's ruling in Heller that the Second Amendment protects an individual right.

Yet, in the McDonald case, Sotomayor joined the dissent in writing that ''I can find nothing in the Second Amendment's text, history, or underlying rationale that could warrant characterizing it as 'fundamental' insofar as it seeks to protect the keeping and bearing of arms for private self-defense purposes.''

Ms. Kagan has made the same promises to the Senate, but the available evidence portrays her as a forceful advocate of restrictive gun laws and as a person driven by political considerations rather than the rule of law.

While Ms. Kagan does not have a record of judicial opinions, her views on the Second Amendment are no mystery. Some considerations that have come to light since her nomination include:

While serving in the Clinton administration, Ms. Kagan drafted an executive order to ban certain semi-automatic firearms;

Ms. Kagan suggested that the President could issue another executive order—bypassing Congress—to ban gun purchases without prior approval from the federal government;

As a law clerk, Elena Kagan advised against the Supreme Court considering Sandidge v. United States in a case that questioned the constitutionality of the D.C. gun ban, writing that she was ''not sympathetic'' to the gun owner's Second Amendment claims; and,

Kagan was part of the Clinton team that pushed the firearms industry to include gun locks with all gun purchases and was in the Clinton administration when the President pushed legislation that would close down gun shows.

Elena Kagan poses such a threat to the Second Amendment that it would be better for the Supreme Court to begin its 2010–2011 session with only eight Justices, than for this radical nominee to be confirmed.

On behalf of over 300,000 members of Gun Owners of America, I urge you to ''NO'' on this nominee's confirmation.

Sincerely,

JOHN VELLECO,
Director of Federal Affairs.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I continue by saying that after reviewing Ms. Kagan's record of testimony at the confirmation hearing, Gun Owners of America concluded:

. . . the available evidence portrays her as a forceful advocate of restrictive gun laws and as a person driven by political considerations rather than the rule of law.

The NRA went on to write:

. . . Ms. Kagan's record on the Second Amendment gives us no confidence that if confirmed to the Court, she will faithfully defend the fundamental, individual right to keep and bear arms of law-abiding Americans.

For these reasons, the National Rifle Association has no choice but to oppose the confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to the U.S. Supreme Court. Given the importance of this issue, this vote will be considered in the NRA's future candidate evaluations.

Yes, the answer to the question of the Senator from Alabama is both the NRA and Gun Owners of America have opposed not only this nomination but also Justice Sotomayor's nomination.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the NRA's letter in opposition to the Sotomayor nomination.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION
OF AMERICA,
Fairfax, VA, July 23, 2009.

Hon. HARRY REID,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, The Capitol, Washington, DC.
Hon. MITCH MCCONNELL,
Republican Leader, U.S. Senate The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR LEADER REID AND LEADER MCCONNELL: We are writing to express the National Rifle Association's opposition to the confirmation of Judge Sonia Sotomayor as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

From the outset, the National Rifle Association respected the confirmation process and hoped for mainstream answers to bedrock questions. Unfortunately, Judge Sotomayor's judicial record and testimony during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings clearly demonstrate a hostile view of the Second Amendment and the fundamental right of self-defense guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution.

We are particularly dismayed about the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit's recent decision in the case of Maloney v. Cuomo, in which Judge Sotomayor refused to follow Supreme Court precedent by conducting a proper incorporation analysis of the Second Amendment, concluding instead that the right to keep and bear arms does not protect all law-abiding Americans living in every corner of this nation.

In addition, Judge Sotomayor was a member of the panel in the case of United States v. Sanchez-Villar, where (in a summary opinion) the Second Circuit dismissed a Second Amendment challenge to New York State's pistol licensing law. That panel, in a terse footnote, cited a previous Second Circuit case to claim, ''the right to possess a gun is clearly not a fundamental right.''

It is only by ignoring history that any judge can say that the Second Amendment is not a fundamental right and does not apply to the States. The one part of the Bill of Rights that Congress clearly intended to apply to all Americans in passing the Fourteenth Amendment was the Second Amendment. History and congressional debate are clear on this point.

We believe any individual who does not agree that the Second Amendment guarantees a fundamental right and who does not respect our God-given right of self-defense should not serve on any court, much less the highest court in the land. Given the importance of this issue, the vote on Judge Sotomayor's confirmation will be considered in NRA's future candidate evaluations.

Thank you for your attention to our concerns. Should you have any questions or wish to discuss further, please do not hesitate to call on us personally.

Sincerely,

WAYNE LAPIERRE,
Executive Vice President, NRA.
CHRIS COX,
Executive Director, NRA–ILA.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, the NRA wrote in that case:

. . . Judge Sotomayor's judicial record and testimony during the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings clearly demonstrate a hostile view of the Second Amendment and the fundamental right of self-defense guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask my friend from South Dakota, why is it so significant that both of these groups have opposed her nomination?

Mr. THUNE. I say to my colleague from Nevada, it comes down to their horrible record on gun rights. It made it impossible for these two organizations to conclude that they would be impartial constitutional judges on this issue even though they tried to convince Senators otherwise during their confirmation hearings.

These groups had their concerns about Justice Sotomayor validated on June 30, 2010, when she ruled again that the second amendment is not a fundamental right. Justice Sotomayor assured Senators during her hearing that she believed the second amendment guaranteed an individual right to keep and bear arms. But then in her first ruling on the second amendment as a Supreme Court Justice, she joined the minority opinion in McDonald v. Chicago and failed to protect this individual right, as confirmed by the majority of the Court, for citizens living in the 50 States.

Specifically, at Justice Sotomayor's hearing, she said that she ''understood the individual right fully that the Supreme Court recognized in Heller'' and ''knew how important the right to bear arms is to many Americans,'' and that she did not consider the right ''unfundamental.''

This is in stark contrast to the opinion she signed onto in McDonald that I said—this is a quote from the McDonald opinion:

I can find nothing in the Second Amendment's text, history, or underlying rationale that could warrant characterizing it as fundamental, insofar as it seeks to protect the keeping and bearing of arms for private self-defense purposes.

I know that many in this body, especially those who supported her confirmation, were surprised by what is seemingly a 180-degree turn.

While I had hoped we could trust her word, I was concerned that her record did not fit her statements at the hearing. I had concerns that her true feelings were much more hostile toward the second amendment right than what she was letting on.

Specifically, I had concerns with two different cases she decided as a circuit court judge, including one after the Supreme Court already recognized the second amendment was an individual right, where she held in that case that the second amendment was ''clearly not a fundamental right'' and did not apply to the States.

There were some Senators at the time who were not as concerned by this record as I was and some of the others of us in the Chamber were and went so far as to say—this is a quote from one of our colleagues:

I do not see how any fair observer could regard her testimony as hostile to the second amendment personal right to bear arms, a right she has embraced and recognized.

That is something said by one of our colleagues in the Senate during the Sotomayor confirmation.

While what Justice Sotomayor said during the hearing certainly gave the impression that she believed in the individual right to keep and bear arms, her prehearing record demonstrated her true beliefs.

I am here today to urge those Members who proclaim to strongly support the second amendment not to be fooled a second time. Ms. Kagan was asked about the second amendment on a number of occasions at her hearing, and each time her response was merely a mimic of Justice Sotomayor's statements on the second amendment at her hearing.

Ms. Kagan would go no further than to acknowledge that the important Supreme Court decisions in Heller and McDonald are ''precedent'' and ''settled law entitled to all the weight the precedent usually gets.''

I believe there is no question that Ms. Kagan will follow in the footsteps of Justice Sotomayor and revert to the beliefs demonstrated by her anti-second amendment record rather than her posturing during her confirmation hearing.

That is the reason the NRA and other groups that treasure the fundamental right to keep and bear arms, such as Gun Owners of America, oppose her nomination, just as they did Justice Sotomayor's.

The only question that remains for us in the Senate is whether pro-second amendment Senators who voted for Justice Sotomayor have learned their lesson and will vote against the Kagan nomination.

I say to my colleagues from Nevada and Alabama, as the old saying goes: Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me. For the sake of gun owners across the country, I hope they will not be fooled again.

I say to my colleagues from Nevada and Alabama, with all the unanswered questions that remain after the Heller and McDonald cases, are there not lots of reasons why those grassroots people across this country—those gun owners, those people who care profoundly about the right to keep and bear arms—ought to be concerned? For example, what is a sensitive place? Who needs to register? There are going to be registration laws that are put in place. How is the issue of microstamping and the mandates and requirements that might be associated with that going to impact this fundamental second amendment right?

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I ask the ranking member about the McDonald case, and maybe he can go into some details about the McDonald case and the significance of that when it comes to future decisions.

Mr. SESSIONS. The McDonald case was a hugely important case. It dealt for the first time in recent memory with the question of whether the second amendment, which had been held in Heller to apply to the Federal Government, whether it passed through the 14th amendment to apply to all the States—and cities are creatures of States, so whether it applied to cities.

This is a big deal because it is not generally so much the Federal Government that is willing to deny gun rights, but certain States and certain cities seem very aggressively willing to deny people's second amendment rights.

The question for the Court was: Is it a fundamental right in the Bill of Rights, a stated fundamental right, and if it is fundamental, it passes through the 14th amendment and all States must comply with it, just as States must comply with the right to free speech and other rights in the Constitution.

By a razor thin 5-to-4 majority, the Supreme Court in McDonald held that it is a fundamental right and does apply to the States, and no State, therefore, and no city can deny an individual right of an American citizen to keep and bear arms. This is a big, important case.

Justice Sotomayor—who suggested otherwise in her testimony—as Senator THUNE said, her record suggested she would rule that way, rule with the four that it did not apply to the States. It is a big deal.

Mr. ENSIGN. In the McDonald case, as I understand, there were several restrictions put on citizens when it came to their second amendment right: paying a $100 processing fee and a $15 fee for each gun registered; undergo and pass a firearms safety test which consists of 4 hours of training and 1 hour target range practice, which, by the way, costs about $100 for each one of those activities; undergo and pass a vision test, if you do not have an Illinois driver's license; provide fingerprints; be at least 21 years of age or 18 years with parents' permission; wait 45–120 days for processing; own only one operational firearm; and reregister every 3 years.

I ask the ranking member, why are these restrictions necessary?

Mr. SESSIONS. The question becomes: Does it impact a fundamental right? At some point it does. We decided you cannot put a poll tax on people to say you have to pay money for your right to vote. People do not have to pay for the right to speak out about advocate beliefs because you have a right to free speech.

I do think these restrictions, as they increase, can reach a point of denial of people's individual right to keep and bear arms. We want to be sure that a judge not only recognizes it is a constitutional individual right but that the judge recognizes that some of these restrictions we accept and are legitimate go too far.

Mr. ENSIGN. I will add, concluding my remarks, that this issue is of critical importance. Without the second amendment, the rest of the Bill of Rights can go away. That is what our Founders recognized. Our colleagues, before they vote on Solicitor General Kagan, need to understand that. That is why this colloquy is so important today. We have brought out some very important points.

It was an honor to be with my colleagues to discuss Solicitor General Kagan's views on the second amendment and how that potentially could impact her decisions in the future.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I close by saying as well, I think in all cases, you have to judge people not by what they say but by what they do. Clearly, the record would suggest, as it did with Justice Sotomayor, a certain hostility toward the second amendment right. Obviously, statements at the Judiciary Committee hearings suggesting an openness to this or acknowledging settled law or precedents or all those sorts of things were meaningless in regard to the Chicago case with regard to Justice Sotomayor.

If we look at the long history of Ms. Kagan with regard to this issue, I think we can conclude where she is going to end up.

It is a critical issue because these are 5-to-4 decisions. These are very narrow decisions that strike at the very heart of a fundamental constitutional right that people in this country deserve to have their leaders, both elected leaders and people on the Court, protect. I am very concerned about where that is headed with this nominee.

I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank my colleagues for this nice and valuable discussion. I will say that one of the unjustifiable actions of the judicial activist philosophy that is too much afoot in America today is their willingness to completely be oblivious to plain constitutional rights, things that are flatly stated, and then to create rights that do not exist.

For example, the Constitution gives the right to free press, but we had Solicitor General Kagan arguing before the Supreme Court in defense of this campaign finance bill that a corporation could be prohibited from producing a pamphlet before an election that might be critical of a politician. I mean, that is what the first amendment was about. It wasn't about pornography or flag burning, for heaven's sake. It was about political speech, plainly in the Constitution. Yet we had four members of the Supreme Court—a vote in an opinion recently—who said the government could ban the pamphlets. Actually, another lawyer for the government argued you could ban books.

The Supreme Court, by a 5-to-4 majority did, in fact, say that you could take a man's private drugstore—the government could—and give it to another man who had a competing drugstore; in other words, taking private property for private use. The Constitution says you can't take private property except for public use under condemnation. A plain violation, 5-to-4 approved.

By two 5-to-4 decisions—the narrowest of margins—we had the plain constitutional right that Americans have to keep and bear arms hang by one vote. We have another example of a judge in California yesterday declaring that the Constitution somewhere says a State must declare that a union between same-sex couples has to be defined in the same way and recognized in the same way as a marriage, even after California had a referendum in which millions of Californians voted differently. A single judge, with no clear constitutional authority at all—in fact, no real constitutional authority—declared that invalid and wiped it out.

So I would suggest that people who are using this court to promote their agendas need to be careful. Don't think you can play with the first amendment. Don't think you can play with the second amendment. Don't think you can play with the constitutional right to have your property not taken by the government except for public use. If you can start wiping those rights out, what right next will the Court come and take? What right next will the central government come and take from you?

So if you love this Constitution and respect it and believe it is a great bulwark for freedom, prosperity, and liberty, I suggest there is only one way to handle it, Mr. President: enforce it as written whether you like it or not.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I want to address the nomination of Solicitor General Kagan to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. Earlier this week, I discussed my opposition to the nomination, but at that time I didn't go into any depth about my concerns with regard to her participation in the military recruiting policy that banned the U.S. military from the Office of Career Services at Harvard Law School.

While this incident has been discussed a lot, I think it is very important to establish for the record exactly what happened. I believe a due respect for the men and women of our military and the gravity of this debate demand a full review of the facts behind what Elena Kagan did as dean of the Harvard Law School to exclude and stigmatize the U.S. military.

Harvard Law School adopted an antidiscrimination policy in 1979. This policy states that any employer that wished to use the Office of Career Services at the law school had to sign a statement affirming that it does not discriminate on various bases, including sexual orientation. The military—not just because of its policy but because of the policy of the Congress and the law that we passed—could not sign this statement because of the don't ask, don't tell policy adopted during the Clinton administration.

In 1993, when a Democratic Congress and the Clinton administration changed the military's outright ban on gays in the military to adopt this don't ask, don't tell policy, Harvard took the position that the military was still not in compliance with its antidiscrimination policy. As a result of Harvard's policy, from 1979 through 2002, the U.S. military was barred from recruiting individuals at the Harvard Law School's Office of Career Services, where everyone else who was recruiting on campus was allowed to conduct interviews and recruit potential candidates.

While this ban on the services of the Office of Career Services was in effect, the Harvard Law School Veterans Association essentially took the place of the Office of Career Services and established an off-campus interview forum for law students interested in serving their country in the U.S. military. So because they were banned from the Office of Career Services, the military had to look for an alternative venue or forum provided by the Harvard Law School Veterans Association in order to conduct those interviews.

But then something very important happened. In 1995, Congress enacted another law, popularly known as the Solomon Amendment. The Solomon Amendment said you cannot receive Federal funds—if you are an educational institution—if you, in effect, prohibit military recruiting on your campus. In other words, they could have continued their policy of discrimination against the military, but they would have been denied Federal funds under the plain wording of the Solomon Amendment passed in 1995.

The Secretary of Defense, under the Solomon Amendment, has to make a finding that the school is not offering access to military recruiters that is ''equal in quality and scope to the access that the school provides other employers.'' That was the 1995 law. In 2002, the Secretary of Defense of the United States found that Harvard's exclusion of military recruiters from the Office of Career Services was not ''equal access.''

In response to this Federal law and the finding by the Secretary of Defense, Ms. Kagan's predecessor, Robert Clark, essentially capitulated and gave the military access to the Office of Career Services in 2002. So Dean Robert Clark, Dean Kagan's predecessor, rather than be denied Federal funds to Harvard by violating the Solomon Amendment and denying access to military recruiters to the Office of Career Services, decided in 2002 to change Harvard's policy. Thus, when Ms. Kagan became dean of the law school in the spring of 2003, the military had full access to the Office of Career Services to recruit interested candidates for military service.

For a while, Dean Kagan maintained the military's access to the Office of Career Services in compliance with the Solomon Amendment. But it is clear that Dean Kagan did not like that because she voiced her political opposition to the don't ask, don't tell policy—in other words, the law enacted by Congress and to which the Department of Defense was accountable for enforcing—in an e-mail she sent to all of Harvard's law students saying that she ''abhorred'' the ''don't ask, don't tell policy'' and she considered it ''a moral injustice of the first order.''

In January 2004, Dean Kagan joined 53 other members of the Harvard law faculty in filing a friend of the court brief supporting a challenge to the Solomon Amendment in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. So even though she maintained access for a while, inherited that policy under her predecessor, in 2004, when a lawsuit was filed to challenge the Solomon Amendment, Dean Kagan and other Harvard Law School faculty joined in a friend of the court brief to try to strike down the Solomon Amendment.

In November of 2004, a split panel on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals actually held that the Solomon Amendment was reasonably likely to be unconstitutional and sent the case back to the district court with instructions to issue an injunction halting the Solomon Amendment's enforcement.

Now, this is very important because the Third Circuit is one of our circuit courts of appeal in the United States, but it is not the U.S. Supreme Court. By that I mean when it makes a decision, its decision only applies to the territory or that part of the United States that is within the Third Circuit. That is important because Harvard is not in the Third Circuit. Harvard is in the First Circuit. So in effect, the Third Circuit panel's decision had no legal effect on Harvard Law School.

Nevertheless, the very next day, after the Third Circuit issued its decision, Dean Kagan changed the Harvard Law School policy to once again bar the military from using the services of the Office of Career Services. In other words, she was not compelled to do so by law but exercising her discretion as dean, she chose to reinstate this policy of barring military recruiters from the Office of Career Services.

Then, in January of 2005, the Third Circuit issued an order staying its enforcement pending a decision by the U.S. Supreme Court. After this, of course, the Third Circuit ruling did not even have any effect even in the Third Circuit, much less in the jurisdiction in the circuit with jurisdiction over Harvard. But even after the order was stayed, Ms. Kagan continued the policy of barring military recruiters from the Office of Career Services.

While her policy barring military recruiters from the Office of Career Services was in effect, Dean Kagan approached the Harvard Law School Veterans Association and asked them to serve as an alternate channel for military recruiting at Harvard Law School. In 2005, the law school veterans declined, writing:

> Given our tiny membership, meager budget, and lack of any office space, we possess neither the time nor the resources to routinely schedule campus rooms or advertise extensively for outside organizations, as is the norm for most recruiting events.

In short, the law school veterans told Dean Kagan that the separate access she wanted them to offer the military would not be equal because they didn't have the ability to match the resources of the Office of Career Services.

In May 2005, the Supreme Court of the United States then said they were going to hear an appeal of the Third Circuit's decision, and they granted the writ of certiorari to the Defense Department's appeal of that case to review their finding on the Solomon Amendment. Over the summer of 2005, the Defense Department notified Dean Kagan that it would rescind Harvard's funding—in other words, it would deny Federal funding to Harvard pursuant to the Solomon Amendment—if she continued to deny the military access to the Office of Career Services.

Faced with this ultimatum, on September 20, 2005, Dean Kagan finally ended her 10-month unlawful denial of access and announced that pending the Supreme Court's decision she would lift the ban and give the military access to the Office of Career Services. But in the meantime, she filed another friend of the court brief, this time in the Supreme Court of the United States, arguing the Solomon Amendment should not apply to her actions barring the military from the Harvard Law School's Office of Career Services.

Ultimately, the Supreme Court unanimously rejected Dean Kagan's position and unanimously upheld the Solomon Amendment.

To recap: Dean Kagan's ban on military recruiters lasted for 10 months—from November of 2004 through September of 2005. During that entire span of time, the Department of Defense position was always—was always—that the ban violated the congressionally passed Solomon Amendment. Never in that span of time did the Supreme Court, the First Circuit, or any other court with jurisdiction over Harvard adopt Dean Kagan's view regarding the scope or enforceability of the Solomon Amendment. In that span of time, only a split panel of the Third Circuit held that the Solomon Amendment was unenforceable, and for all but 2 months of that time, the Third Circuit's order was stayed.

Despite all of this, Dean Kagan persisted in barring military recruiters from the Office of Career Services and insisted that the military could obtain separate but equal access to Harvard Law School through alternate routes. Dean Kagan held that the Supreme Court's position ran afoul of the Solomon Amendment, the findings of the Secretary of Defense, and ultimately the legal judgment of the entire Supreme Court. I believe these are the undisputed facts of the case.

So why do Ms. Kagan's actions matter? I would argue that they matter for two reasons. First is the message her actions sent about her lack of respect for the U.S. military at Harvard Law School during her deanship. Ms. Kagan claims she holds the military in the highest respect, but I have to ask you, this notion that you are going to provide separate but equal access to interviewing services is not one that shows respect. It is one that provides an unnecessary and really reprehensible stigma on the U.S. military, which had no control over a policy passed by Congress under the Solomon Amendment.

Of course, she did this at a time when hundreds of thousands of young men and women deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan were wearing the uniform of their country to protect their fellow citizens and the rule of law. Dean Kagan's actions in taking every step legally possible to relegate the military to what she herself believed was separate but equal status placed an unmistakable stigma on the military during a time of war.

I believe her decision to stigmatize the military is reason enough to oppose her nomination to a lifetime seat on the U.S. Supreme Court, but her actions as dean are troubling for another reason as well. I believe her actions as dean indicate strong evidence that, as a Justice, someone sitting in judgment on the U.S. Supreme Court, she would tend to advance her political preferences rather than take a traditional approach of a judge in following the law.

Many of our colleagues have pointed out correctly that Ms. Kagan has never been a judge. While that is not a requirement to serve on the Supreme Court, this lack of judicial experience makes it difficult to tell whether Ms. Kagan would adopt a judicial activist philosophy if she takes a seat on the Court. Because she has never held the job of a judge—we don't have any record to judge her by—we must look to the jobs she has held and the actions she has taken to see how she is likely to perform her job as a member of the U.S. Supreme Court.

In the 10 months during which she banned the U.S. military from the Harvard Law School campus, I believe Dean Kagan showed a willingness to bend the law and facts to advance her own political goals of protesting the don't ask, don't tell policy and, as I said, stigmatizing the military in the process. Despite the lack of any binding authority, she adopted an interpretation of the Solomon Amendment so tenuous that it could not garner the vote of a single Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court, and she did so for the express purpose of advancing her objections to a policy she said she abhorred.

Bending the law and the facts to reach a preferred result is exactly what judicial activists do, and there is a pattern in Ms. Kagan's legal career of bending the law and facts to advance her preferred policy results. So while Ms. Kagan has never been a judge, she has established a disturbing pattern of doing what judicial activists do. Ms. Kagan's actions in her previous jobs showed she is very likely not to embrace the role of a judge who decides cases based on the Constitution as written and the law as passed by Congress that she is responsible for enforcing if they are, in fact, constitutional but, rather, she gives every indication of someone who believes it is within her role and prerogative as a Justice to basically make the law rather than to enforce the law as written. No Member of this Chamber should be surprised if, for the rest of her life as a Supreme Court Justice, Ms. Kagan does not merely follow the law as written but, rather, bends the law to advance her progressive political agenda.

Our Constitution is too precious and the Supreme Court is too powerful for us to accept without question a President's nominee to the Supreme Court. The Framers of the Constitution recognized the importance of this appointment and the power given to a Supreme Court Justice, who serves for life without any political accountability to the electorate. That is why they gave us the responsibility to give our advice and consent.

The nomination and confirmation of a Supreme Court Justice is really a two-step process. First, the President makes his nomination. The President can nominate anyone the President wants who meets the qualifications of the Constitution. But then it is our responsibility to exercise our constitutional duty to provide advice and consent.

I believe Ms. Kagan has failed to embrace the traditional view of judging that I believe all judges must adhere to at the risk of, rather, them becoming a lawmaker, which is incompatible with the role of a Justice. I believe a judge who assumes a role of being a policymaker or a lawmaker is, in essence, a lawbreaker.

Indeed, Ms. Kagan's career up to this point shows a willingness to bend the law and the facts to advance her own beliefs, and I fear this trend will continue in an activist tenure on the Supreme Court. For these reasons, I oppose her nomination and will vote no.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the President's nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to be Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Senate has no more important responsibility than to advise and consent on nominations to our Nation's highest Court. It will be an honor on behalf of the people of my State to cast my vote to confirm Elena Kagan.

Ms. Kagan is a distinguished lawyer with a remarkable legal background. She brings very diverse experiences to the Court that I believe will add to the important perspective of the high Court as it reviews cases of critical importance to the American people.

Throughout her career she has been a legal trailblazer and a role model. She will be the fourth woman to serve on the high Court, and for the first time in history, three women will be serving on the bench when oral arguments are heard this fall. Her nomination marks an historic milestone of progress for women in the legal profession and in serving as leaders for our Nation.

A graduate of Harvard Law School, Ms. Kagan began her career as a law clerk to former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, who like her, served as Solicitor General prior to being promoted to the high Court. Justice Marshall made history as the first African-American Solicitor General at the time and Ms. Kagan has followed suit as the first female Solicitor General.

Following her clerkship, Ms. Kagan worked in the private sector where she handled first amendment, commercial and criminal litigation. She then served in the highest ranks of academia as a law professor. This ultimately led to her becoming dean at the Harvard Law School, one of our nation's most prestigious institutions. Her ascension to dean marked the first time in Harvard Law School's 186-year history that a woman held this position. As dean, Ms. Kagan bridged ideological divides among faculty, recruiting professors from across the ideological spectrum, managing the largest and most prestigious law school in our nation and improving the quality of life for students.

Prior to becoming dean, Ms. Kagan served in high legal and policy positions in the Clinton administration, where she learned the operations of the executive and legislative branches of our government, which will help the Court better understand how policy judgments are made and the effect that the decisions of our government and courts have on the lives of everyday Americans.

Most recently, Ms. Kagan has dutifully served our Nation as the U.S. Solicitor General. The Solicitor General is often referred to as the 10th Justice because of the frequency that he or she appears before the Court on behalf of the United States. This experience exposed Ms. Kagan to nearly every case that has come before the current Court and she has had to weigh all of the same legal considerations as the current Justices prior to deciding the position of the U.S. Government. Few positions provide better preparation for the high Court.

While she has not previously served as a judge, though she was previously nominated to be one, I see her varied background as an asset. We need different life experiences on the Supreme Court. If confirmed, Ms. Kagan will be the first nonjudge since former Chief Justice William Rehnquist was nominated by former President Richard Nixon.

Her mix of professional experience will help ensure that we do not have a Court out of touch with the American people. Ms. Kagan has taught the law in the classroom, practiced in the public and private sector, worked in the judiciary as a clerk and crafted the policies of the executive branch. Everywhere she has worked, Ms. Kagan has excelled. Her experience is the kind of experience we should aspire for all of our justices to have before serving on the high Court.

The Supreme Court is too important to not hold our justices to high standards of intellect and achievement—a standard Ms. Kagan meets. It is our best and brightest who should serve in these important positions. We need Justices who respect precedent, hew closely to the text of the law and do not pursue an agenda from the bench.

We do not need activist judges whether they come from the right or left. The American people do not want an ideologically driven Supreme Court that is pursuing a political agenda. We want a Court that respects precedent and helps resolve the legal questions of our time as they affect our daily lives.

I would like to close by thanking outgoing Justice John Paul Stevens for his service to our country. Justice Stevens presided on the Court during a period of great change and accomplishment for our nation. He is a member of the Greatest Generation and is a true patriot for his service during World War II. Justice Stevens has been an intellectual heavyweight on the bench and provided a voice of reason even while we have seen the Court drift so heavily in favor of the most powerful interests. He has left large shoes to fill and will be missed.

President Obama has nominated someone who can fill these shoes. Because of the breadth and diversity of her experience, Elena Kagan has a profound understanding of the law and effect the Supreme Court has on the lives of all Americans. She is an intellectual heavyweight in her own right and will help the Court bridge the divides of recent years.

I am proud to commit my vote in favor of this nominee.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am proud to support the confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan as the next Associate Justice of the United States.

Solicitor General Kagan is eminently qualified to serve on our Nation's highest Court. As a student, she excelled at Princeton, Oxford and Harvard Law School. She has stellar legal credentials that have been recognized by liberal and conservative lawyers alike. And, throughout her career, including as a professor of law, as a key advisor to President Clinton, as dean of Harvard Law School, and as Solicitor General, she has demonstrated a great mind and intellect.

Moreover, Solicitor General Kagan will bring important diversity to the Court. First, when the Senate confirms her, she will be only the fourth woman to serve on the Court; and for the first time in history, three women will serve on the Supreme Court together.

Second, Solicitor General Kagan's experiences as someone who has worked in the legislative and executive branches will provide a vital perspective that is currently lacking among the Justices. In fact, for the first time in history, the current Court is comprised entirely of Justices who were promoted directly from the lower Federal courts. While judicial experience is important, it is also important to recognize that some of our most consequential Justices—Louis Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter, Earl Warren, Robert Jackson and William Rehnquist, to name just a few—did not have prior judicial experience. I am glad the President recognized how crucial it is to have on the bench Justices with varied life experiences.

Mind you, I am hopeful that next time the President will look to one of the many qualified lawyers who did not graduate from Harvard or Yale, or one who resides east of the Appalachian Mountains. But nominating someone from outside the Federal courts is a refreshing change.

As I evaluate Solicitor General Kagan's qualifications, an additional factor is important for me: she clerked and learned from two judges for whom I have enormous respect—Judge Abner Mikva and Justice Thurgood Marshall. These two jurists exhibited a deep and abiding passion for justice, and each strived throughout his career to ensure that ''equal justice under law'' is more than an ideal chiseled on a marble facade, but a concrete reality for all our citizens.

In her opening statement before the Judiciary Committee, Solicitor General Kagan noted:

> My first real exposure to the Court came almost a quarter century ago when I began my clerkship with Justice Thurgood Marshall. Justice Marshall revered the Court—and for a simple reason. In his life, in his great struggle for racial justice, the Supreme Court stood as the part of government that was most open to every American—and that most often fulfilled our Constitution's promise of treating all persons with equal respect, equal care, and equal attention.

In a 1993 law review article, she expressed a fondness for Justice Thurgood Marshall's vision of constitutional interpretation, which she described as ''demand[ing] that the courts show a special solicitude for the despised and disadvantaged.'' She described this vision as ''a thing of glory.'' I am hopeful that Solicitor General Kagan will follow in the best traditions of Judge Mikva and Justice Marshall and continue to strive to make our Nation's laws more just.

Considering her outstanding intellect and credentials, there simply is no doubt Solicitor General Kagan should be confirmed.

However, for me, there is another, equally important, consideration. I also believe that Solicitor General Kagan will be an important and needed voice on the Court to ensure that appropriate respect and deference is given to Congress, and proper effect is given to our most important statutes, such as the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Civil Rights Act, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, so all Americans receive the fullest protections of the law.

Too often debate regarding the Supreme Court seems to focus on a handful of divisive cultural issues. Indeed, many of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have come to the floor to focus on gays in the military, abortion and guns. To be sure, these issues are important. But, what typically get overlooked in a debate like this are the many technical, statutory cases—often involving esoteric legal principles—that nonetheless have a tremendous impact on the everyday lives of ordinary Americans.

Unfortunately, the sad truth is that, in case after case, often in narrow 5–4 decisions, today's Court has too often slammed shut the courthouse door in the face of these ordinary Americans. The Court has used arcane legal doctrines and strained readings of Federal statutes to prevent citizens from vindicating their civil rights and consumer protections. The result is that many people who suffer grievous wrongs are not able to bring meritorious lawsuits, and to hold corporations and the government accountable.

In case after case, the Court has undermined vital protections and sided with the powerful against the powerless—for instance, in cases such as Ledbetter v. Goodyear, Gross v. FBL Financial, and Riegel v. Medtronic. In doing so, the Court has repeatedly ignored the clear intent of Congress in passing important laws.

In the ''Sutton trilogy'' the Court repeatedly misread the Americans with Disabilities Act and narrowed the scope of individuals deemed eligible for protection under that landmark statute. The result of these decisions was to eliminate protection for countless thousands of Americans with disabilities. These flawed, harmful decisions were reversed in the last Congress when we unanimously enacted the ADA Amendments Act.

Similarly, in June, 2009, the Supreme Court decided Gross v. FBL Financial, Inc. In a case involving an Iowan, Jack Gross, the Court made it harder for those with legitimate age discrimination claims to prevail under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. In doing so, it reversed a well established, 20-year-old standard, consistent with that under title VII of the Civil Rights Act, that a plaintiff need only show that membership in a protected class was a ''motivating factor'' in an employer's action. Instead, the Court held that a plaintiff alleging age discrimination must prove that an employment action would not have been taken against him or her ''but for'' age. In other words, the plaintiff must now prove that age discrimination was not a cause or a motivating factor, but that it was the determinative cause of an adverse employment action. Proving ''but for'' cause is extremely difficult and will greatly limit potentially meritorious suits involving discrimination Congress sought to prevent.

In doing so, the Court did not even address the question on which it granted certiorari. As Justice Stevens noted in dissent, ''I disagree not only with the Court's interpretation of the statute, but also with its decision to engage in unnecessary lawmaking. The Court is unconcerned that the question it chooses to answer has not been briefed by the parties or uninterested amici curie. Its failure to consider the views of the United States, which represents the agency charged with administering the [Age Discrimination in Employment Act], is especially irresponsible.''

In University of Alabama v. Garrett, a case whose oral arguments I personally attended, the Court limited the rights of people with disabilities. In doing so, it ignored numerous congressional hearings and a task force which collected evidence through 63 public forums around the country attended by more than 7,000 persons. In United States v. Morrison and Kimel v. Florida Board of Regents, the Court completely ignored extensive congressional fact-finding and struck down parts of the Violence Against Women's Act and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, respectively.

The contrast with Solicitor General Kagan is stark. She repeatedly made clear her approach to judging: respect for congressional intent and for long standing precedent. She consistently made clear that a judge's personal views should play no role in interpreting a statute and ''the only question is Congress's intent.'' Unlike some current members of the Court, moreover, she made clear that where the text of a statute is ambiguous she will look to legislative history—''a judge should look to other sources, should look to the structure of the statute, should look to the history of the statute in order to determine Congress's will.'' After her confirmation hearing and based on my personal meeting with her, I am convinced she will give full effect to our most important statutes.

Finally, as I listen to the debate surrounding Solicitor General Kagan's confirmation, I find it remarkable that conservatives continue to accuse every Democratic appointed nominee of being ''activist.'' It is a tired bumper sticker slogan that not only has no meaning but is divorced from reality.

In fact, what is clear from this debate is that it is the conservatives who want to use the courts to achieve a desired political result and to thwart the democratic will of the people, as expressed through their elected representatives.

For example, the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator SESSIONS, noted his concern that Solicitor General Kagan ''will bring to the bench a progressive activist judicial philosophy which holds that unelected judges are empowered to set national policy from the bench.''

I find it ironic that this charge is bandied about by the same people most eager to have the courts strike down as unconstitutional the recently enacted health care reform bill. To strike down this law would require an unelected judge to ignore the clear language of the Constitution, reverse precedents that go back to John Marshall, disregard extensive fact-finding by Congress, and overturn a decision of a majority of both Houses of Congress and the President of the United States. That would be the height of judicial activism, the height of ''making national policy from the bench.''

The reality, is that, the Rehnquist and Roberts Courts have invalidated more laws than any previous Courts.

It is conservatives who not only want the Court to make national health care policy, but also to limit the ability of Congress to keep the corrupting influence of corporate spending out of our democracy, as the Court did in Citizens United.

It is conservatives who second guess decisions by Congress, including a unanimous Senate, to ensure the rights of all Americans to vote, as the Roberts Court suggested in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder.

It is conservatives who want the judiciary to second guess decisions made by local sheriffs in keeping guns out of the hands of criminals.

It is conservatives who want the judiciary to second guess local zoning decisions, environmental and land use regulations.

It is conservatives who want the courts to invalidate efforts by Congress and local governments to eliminate racial discrimination.

Given the current Court's repeated disregard for Congress and for our efforts to expansively protect American citizens, I believe it is imperative that the next justice be someone who respects precedent, strives to apply congressional intent and purpose, and understands the importance of this nation's landmark civil rights protections. Based on her record and after meeting her, I am confident Solicitor General Kagan will be that type of jurist.

Solicitor General Kagan clearly has the intellect, experience and judgment to be an outstanding Justice. I am proud to support her nomination.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I want to speak briefly about the nomination of Elena Kagan to be an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

First, I commend the chairman of the Judiciary Committee and his staff for their efforts to make this confirmation process so thorough and transparent. The committee had the opportunity to review nearly 200,000 pages of internal memos and emails from Ms. Kagan's service as a law clerk to Justice Thurgood Marshall and as a White House aide during the Clinton administration—making the examination of her record one of the most thorough and searching in history. I appreciate that President Obama and President Clinton did not raise claims of executive privilege to try to stop the release of documents, which was a refreshing change and a practice that I hope future Presidents will follow in years to come.

All but a tiny fraction of these documents were made available online, granting extraordinary access to the public. I said after last year's hearings for Justice Sotomayor that Chairman LEAHY had set a new standard for transparency and public access to Supreme Court nomination hearings, and in these proceedings he did it again. I commend him and his staff for their tremendous work over the past few months.

There is no question that Elena Kagan is eminently qualified for a position on the Supreme Court. She has an impressive education, she has worked at the highest levels of government, and she has served as dean of a top law school. During the hearings, she demonstrated a keen mind, thoughtful analysis, and a wide-ranging command of the law. She has developed a reputation as someone who can reach out to those with whom she may not agree and work together, and that skill should prove very valuable on the Court. I believe that because she has not previously been a judge, she will bring a different and important perspective to a Court that is otherwise entirely populated by former appellate judges.

I appreciated Solicitor General Kagan's efforts to improve the confirmation process by being forthcoming in her answers. Fifteen years ago she quite fairly criticized the process in an article, arguing that the American people deserved more substantive discussions of the law. While I can't say that she quite lived up to the high standard that she set for nominees in 1995, I do believe that she tried to answer our questions as openly and comprehensively as she could, given what the confirmation process has become.

I came away from the confirmation process convinced that Elena Kagan understands the appropriate relationship between the courts and Congress. As she explained at the Judiciary Committee hearing, her work with Congress during her time at the White House taught her a healthy respect for the political branches and how difficult it can be for Congress to pass legislation. I hope that she will keep this in mind before she votes to overturn a bill that Congress may have spent years drafting and debating.

But while this deference is important, Solicitor General Kagan also demonstrated that she recognizes the critically important role of our judicial system in serving as a check on the other branches of government—in ''policing constitutional boundaries,'' as she put it. She spoke eloquently about the early experiences of Justice Marshall and his efforts to eradicate Jim Crow laws and racial segregation. She explained that what was so incredible about his struggle for equality was that ''the courts [took] seriously claims that were not taken seriously anyplace else. . . . In other words, it was the courts' role to make sure that even when people have no place else to go that they can come to the courts and the courts will hear their claims fairly.'' She said this was a miraculous thing about courts, and I agree with her. With regard to executive power, she emphasized that ''no person, however grand, however powerful, is above the law.'' She also talked about ''the importance of adhering to the law, no matter the temptations, no matter the pressures that one might be subject to in the course of one's career.'' These insights indicate that she will take seriously the Court's role in safeguarding individual rights and protecting the rule of law.

In addition to informing the committee about the nominee, the hearings also taught us more about the Supreme Court. We have heard a lot in recent years about ''judicial activism.'' But I think the hearings helped underscore that activism is in the eye of the beholder. As Justice Souter explained in a recent speech, the truth is that the Supreme Court has to decide hard cases—cases in which a judge cannot simply read the words of the Constitution and objectively evaluate the facts. That is, a judge cannot simply act as an umpire. Judges often have to choose between positive values in the Constitution that are in tension with each other, he noted.

Justice Souter reminded us that facts may look very different in different historical contexts. The quintessential example of this is the Court's historic decision in Brown v. Board of Education to overturn Plessy v. Ferguson—a case that by current standards would surely qualify as judicial activism but that is one of the most revered in our nation's history. What this shows us is that judging is not a ''robotic enterprise,'' as Solicitor General Kagan told the Senator from Minnesota, Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Judging is hard and it does, in fact, require judgment. But, Justice Souter explained, ''we can still address the constitutional uncertainties the way [the Framers] must have envisioned, by relying on reason, by respecting all the words the Framers wrote, by facing facts, and by seeking to understand their meaning for living people.'' I believe Elena Kagan will fulfill that vision admirably.

So I will vote to confirm Elena Kagan to be an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. I look forward to her confirmation as only the fourth woman in history to serve on our Nation's highest Court, and I expect she will serve with distinction—and with good humor, which she demonstrated throughout this arduous process—for many years to come.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the confirmation of Elena Kagan to serve as the next Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Having carefully examined her record, monitored her confirmation hearings, and personally met with her, Solicitor General Kagan is clearly qualified to serve on the Court. Given her tremendous educational accomplishments at Princeton, Oxford, and Harvard, as well as her success as a constitutional and administrative law scholar at Chicago and Harvard, there is little question that she is intellectually qualified for the job.

General Kagan has had an impressive career, having clerked for Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall, worked as the first female dean of Harvard Law School, and served as the first female Solicitor General of the United States. During that time, she has impressed all with whom she has worked with both her character and her talent.

Some of my colleagues are concerned that previous Federal judicial experience is not among her list of accomplishments. Historically, however, large numbers of our Supreme Court nominees have not had prior judicial experience. The last Supreme Court nominee appointed without any such experience served was former Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

Indeed, the outgoing Court represents the first time in history when all nine Justices had Federal judicial experience. That is what prompted Justice Antonin Scalia to say that he was ''happy to see that this latest nominee is not a federal judge.'' I share that view, and welcome the unique academic perspective that General Kagan will bring to the Court.

Others with concerns about General Kagan have pointed to her treatment of military recruiters as the dean of Harvard Law School or memos she wrote when she was an advisor in the Clinton administration. In addition to the explanations provided to me by General Kagan during our meeting, I am reassured about these controversies by the fact that she has received strong support from legal minds across the political spectrum.

General Kagan has earned high praise from conservatives like Jack Goldsmith and Miguel Estrada, as well as from every former Solicitor General since 1985, including Ted Olson and Ken Starr. These are not people who make such endorsements lightly. They would not speak well of someone who is outside the mainstream.

When considering my vote on nominees to the Supreme Court, my key test is whether or not the President's nominee is qualified to serve on the Court, not whether I agree with everything he or she have ever done. As Senators, we must examine the record, accomplishments, intellect, and character of each judicial nominee put before us, and determine whether each individual is worthy to serve on the bench. This is the standard I used when I voted to confirm Chief Justice John Roberts, Justice Samuel Alito, and Justice Sonia Sotomayor. And that is the standard I am using in voting to confirm Elena Kagan.

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about Solicitor General Kagan's experience. Over the past few months, there has been a lot of talk from our friends across the aisle about whether Ms. Kagan is qualified to be our country's 112th Supreme Court Justice.

They say she has never been a judge. How conveniently they forget that some of the most well-respected Justices in the history of the Supreme Court also brought life experiences outside the ''judicial monastery,'' which President Obama so ably encouraged us to look beyond. Former Chief Justice William Rehnquist is one example. Former Justice Lewis Powell, Jr., is another.

They also conveniently forget that just a few decades ago, most Justices had little or no judicial experience. In fact, it is General Kagan's diversity of life experiences that, in my opinion, make her exceptionally qualified for the High Court. President Obama said one of the primary reasons he nominated General Kagan was because of her ''understanding of law—not as an intellectual exercise or words on a page—but as it affects the lives of ordinary people.'' I couldn't agree more.

The inscription that greets visitors to the Supreme Court building just across the street reads: ''Equal Justice Under Law.'' That inscription is at the heart of the experience General Kagan would bring as the newest member of the High Court.

That experience includes a reputation as one of the Nation's foremost legal minds; as a legal advisor to two Presidents; as the first woman to serve as Dean of Harvard Law School; and as the Nation's first female solicitor general.

It also includes more personal experiences, many of which mirror the lives of the American people she has committed her own life to serve.

She is the child of immigrants. She is the daughter and sister of public schoolteachers, and she has been a teacher herself. She is an advocate for her students. And she is a proponent of discussion and debate that educates, respects and improves upon the lives of all it impacts.

It is because of all of these experiences—as President Obama said on the day he introduced her—that General Kagan will make the Nation's highest Court ''more inclusive, more representative, more reflective of us as a people than ever before.''

I am confident that Solicitor General Kagan has the experience that will make her a stellar Justice, and I look forward to casting my vote in favor of her confirmation to the Supreme Court.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I come here today to discuss one of the most important duties we exercise as Senators the confirmation of a United States Supreme Court Justice.

As a U.S. Senator, I have a responsibility under the Constitution to determine if nominees to the Supreme Court are qualified for the job. In making this determination, I consider a nominee's knowledge of the Constitution and the law as well as their ability to be deliberate and to hear every case that comes before them impartially and without personal bias.

I believe Ms. Kagan passes that test and that she is qualified to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

I have made this decision after carefully reviewing the Judiciary Committee record on her nomination and visiting with Ms. Kagan personally on two occasions to discuss her nomination. I was impressed with her knowledge, humility, and candidness, and I believe she was as forthcoming in our conversations as any individual whose Supreme Court nomination I have considered.

As Solicitor General for the United States, Elena Kagan served as the Federal Government's lawyer in chief, representing all Americans, including Arkansans, before the U.S. Supreme Court.

A passion for public service and the law has been the driving force behind her career. Elena Kagan is the first woman to serve as Solicitor General, and the first woman to serve as the Dean of Harvard Law School. She previously worked in the Clinton White House as Deputy Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy and as Associate Counsel to the President. She spent several years in private practice after serving as a law clerk for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and for Justice Thurgood Marshall on the U.S. Supreme Court.

I believe the fact that Elena Kagan has not worked as a judge will benefit the Court. She will bring a fresh voice and unique perspective to the discussion on cases that come before the Court. There is already a persuasive precedent for a nominee with no judicial experience to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court. In fact, 41 Supreme Court justices, including Chief Justice William Rehnquist, had no experience serving on a lower federal or state court. And many former justices who also did not previously work in the judicial branch have similar backgrounds to that of Solicitor General Kagan.

Since Ms. Kagan was nominated for this position in May, I have heard from many Arkansans both for and against her confirmation. In terms of the concerns that have been raised by those who oppose her confirmation, I have examined her record regarding those issues and have spoken to the nominee on two occasions to discuss those matters further. After careful thought and consideration in fulfilling my responsibility to judge her fitnesss for this position, I have found nothing that I believe disqualifies her from being confirmed.

There is no doubt Elena Kagan holds the Constitution and the Court's precedents in high regard. During her nomination hearings, Elena Kagan responded to numerous questions about a variety of issues. In response to one question regarding recent Supreme Court rulings involving the Second Amendment, she stated, ''there is no question that the Second Amendment guarantees Americans the individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation.'' Further, General Kagan explicitly said that the recent Heller and McDonald decisions that secure a fundamental and individual right to own a firearm for self protection is ''settled law.'' Ms. Kagan has personally assured me she has no desire or intention of working to overturn either decision.

It is true Ms. Kagan has not promised how she would decide future Second Amendment cases that may come before the Court. Neither Justice Roberts nor Justice Alito made any pledges or promises in that regard either during their confirmation hearings. To do so would betray one of the basic foundations of our system of government which is a fair minded and independent judiciary. Further, after reviewing the Judiciary Committee hearing record for Ms. Kagan, Justice Roberts and Justice Alito, in my view Ms. Kagan was as, if not more, forthcoming regarding her views on the Second Amendment than the two most recent nominees made by a Republican President.

One final comment General Kagan made to me during our last conversation about the Second Amendment was her desire to join Justice Scalia on one of his hunting trips to get better acquainted with her colleagues on the Court if she is confirmed. Sounds like a good idea to me.

Elena Kagan has also shared with me her deep respect and honor for the military and the men and women in uniform who risk their lives to defend our freedoms. Her father was a veteran, and she has taken with her the reverence for the military he instilled in her. In 2007, Elena Kagan was invited to speak at West Point military academy, where she spoke to cadets about fidelity to the Constitution and the rule of law. General Kagan said she accepted this invitation, something she rarely does, as an opportunity to thank the senior cadets for their contributions and service to our country.

Both in our personal conversations and in her testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Ms. Kagan has explained her actions as Dean of Harvard Law School regarding military recruiting.

The bottom line for me is that Elena Kagan never denied military recruiters access to students on campus and that she holds the men and women in uniform who fight to defend the freedoms we cherish as Americans in high regard. Evidence of this is supported by military veterans themselves associated with the law school who have spoken favorably of Ms. Kagan's treatment of students in the military and the military in general. A group of Harvard Law School Iraq War Veterans published a letter stating that Kagan, ''has created an environment that is highly supportive of students who have served in the military.''

It is also worth noting that Solicitor General Kagan is supported by a long and distinguished list of law associations, organizations, members of Republican and Democratic administrations, unions, advocates and professionals. The list of supporters even includes every former Solicitor General since 1985, including Ted Olsen and Ken Starr.

As I have said with previous Supreme Court nominees selected by two different Presidents, I won't agree with every decision that he or she makes. However, the standard for evaluating Supreme Court nominees should be whether he or she is qualified for the job and is prepared to place the law and the integrity of our Constitution ahead of any personal or political beliefs he or she may have. I believe Ms. Kagan meets that standard which is why I will support her confirmation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to serve as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. A lifetime appointment to the highest Court in the land is a serious matter, and confirming each Justice is one of the most solemn duties of any Senator.

When I sat down with her, I was struck by Ms. Kagan's obvious intelligence and candor. It was also obvious that her wealth of professional experience has given her a real reverence for our country's rule of law. As the confirmation process went on, I paid close attention to the answers Ms. Kagan gave to my colleagues on the Judiciary Committee in her hearing. What comes across loud and clear when one listens to Ms. Kagan is that she has a strong belief in the Constitution and an understanding of its purpose to serve and protect the American people.

Throughout the arduous process of being a Supreme Court nominee, Ms. Kagan has impressed me at every turn with her intellect, integrity, and independence. These are fundamental traits our Nation needs in every member of the highest Court in the land.

But being a Supreme Court Justice requires more than surviving the confirmation process. If confirmed, Ms. Kagan would be ruling on the most important and urgent matters facing our Nation. Her voice would carry with it the rich and varied background of professional experience that would sound a note of true intellectual independence.

Although some have found fault with the fact that she has never served as a judge, I have never believed that lack of prior judicial experience should stop someone from serving with distinction on the Court. After all, some of our greatest jurists had no experience as a judge—Justices John Marshall, Louis Brandeis, Felix Frankfurter, and William Rehnquist among them. In place of that singular legal experience, Ms. Kagan brings expertise that she has earned in all three branches of government, as well as the private sector as an attorney in private practice and as the dean of Harvard Law School.

In talking with Ms. Kagan, I came away confident that she well understands the proper role of a judge and will not attempt to legislate from the bench. I discussed with Ms. Kagan her views and approach to some of the important issues the Court will address in upcoming years, such as national security, the limits of executive power, and the protection of civil liberties.

I also spoke with Ms. Kagan about an issue of particular concern to Oregonians one which they have endorsed twice at the ballot box—the right to control end-of-life decisions. Oregon voters twice approved death with dignity ballot measures. I have long believed that their decision should be respected by the courts, and I am pleased the Supreme Court has agreed with that view. While not taking a position on specific questions that could come before the Court, Ms. Kagan reassured me that she sees this as Oregonians do. She believes end-of-life decisions are protected by constitutional privacy rights, and she believes the Federal Government should not contravene State laws that protect individual rights on this issue.

Finally, I was also comfortable with the way Ms. Kagan explained her views on a frequently litigated constitutional issue, the limits of congressional power to act under the commerce clause. Ms. Kagan's answers assured me she has a very thorough and nuanced understanding of commerce clause jurisprudence and that she will rule on commerce authority cases with both deference and wisdom.

I am convinced, based on everything I have heard, that Ms. Kagan possesses the intellect, integrity, and independence to serve as an extraordinary Justice on the Supreme Court. With the retirement of Justice Stevens, Ms. Kagan certainly has large shoes to fill.

But I have no doubt she is more than up to the task, and our country's laws will be safely guarded in her hands. That is why Elena Kagan has my support, and I will vote to confirm her as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan as Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. By any objective standard, Elena Kagan offers a well-rounded combination of academic legal expertise and real world application of law and public policy. The President has nominated Ms. Kagan to a job she may hold for three decades or more, and in which she will have the opportunity to touch the lives of Americans in countless ways. So just being an intelligent and hard-working public servant is not enough for this vital position. That is why I have taken my time and my responsibility seriously, to thoroughly review her record before deciding to support her.

Decisions by the Supreme Court have immediate impacts on the lives of everyday Americans when the rulings are handed down. These decisions may continue to play a role in the lives of Americans for generations. Considering my vote on a Supreme Court nominee, a task I will perform soon for the second time in my brief Senate career, is a duty I take very seriously.

I approach this decision from the perspective of a government chief executive. It is the constitutional role of the President to nominate Supreme Court justices. In the case of a nominee to the Federal courts, especially to the Supreme Court, this choice is not about a President's ability to carry out a stated agenda. Rather, justices on the highest court in the land are there to protect and interpret the Constitution, so the highest standards must be applied.

In my meeting with Solicitor General Kagan, I found her to be intelligent and engaging, and open to hearing my thoughts on what is important to Alaskans. I listened as Ms. Kagan described the way she approached legal issues, and heard from her an approach to the law and the Constitution that indicated she will not be an activist judge. I agree with my colleague from South Carolina, Senator LINDSAY GRAHAM, who said the job of a senator is not to second guess the President's judgment in selecting Supreme Court nominees, but to determine if the candidate is qualified, of good character and understands the difference between being a judge and a politician. Ms. Kagan is such a person.

For me as an Alaskan, there were some issues I needed to make front and center in our discussion, especially the rights we enjoy and which the Supreme Court has recently spoken to under the second amendment of the Constitution.

Alaskans take their second amendment rights very seriously. In a State where the daily life for many includes subsistence hunting, personal protection and basic survival, our right to keep and bear arms is not an academic question. It is a fundamental part of our lives. The State of Alaska has gone so far as to pass laws requiring firearms be kept in survival gear carried in private airplanes. Unlike much of the ''Lower 48,'' the wilderness in Alaska is reachable within minutes from even our largest cities. Even in the greater Anchorage area encounters with wildlife are commonplace and serious injuries occur regularly. That is why firearm ownership and use in Alaska transcends the debates in Washington over what the second amendment means.

Much of the opposition to Ms. Kagan's nomination has focused on what some charged was her alleged lack of support for second amendment rights. Some oppose Ms. Kagan's nomination because she worked for Justice Thurgood Marshall and President Bill Clinton. When she was asked by Judiciary Chairman LEAHY if, after the Supreme Court's decisions in Heller and McDonald that the second amendment secures an individual's fundamental right to own a firearm and use it for self-defense, Ms. Kagan's response could not have been more clear: ''There is no doubt, Senator LEAHY. That is binding precedent and entitled to all respect to binding precedent in any case. That is settled law.'' Instead of second-guessing or making assumptions about her views, I am taking Ms. Kagen at her word.

Even before the Court's decision in McDonald applied the reasoning of Heller beyond the District of Columbia, Ms. Kagan was clear about the fundamental nature of the rights protected by the Second Amendment. During her confirmation hearing to be Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan responded to a question about the meaning of Heller from Senator GRASSLEY: ''There is no question, after Heller, that the second amendment guarantees Americans the individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation.''' In subsequent questioning, Ms. Kagan responded regarding Heller that she would give that decision and its reasoning ''the full measure of respect that is due to all constitutional decisions of the Court.''

What Elena Kagan said about the second amendment, especially in light of the Heller and McDonald decisions that I supported, cannot be considered anti-gun, or anti-second smendment.

In our meeting, I also asked Ms. Kagan about unique status of Alaska Native people and issues. I pointed out that Alaska is home to nearly half the 562 federal recognized tribes in the United States and that Alaska Natives comprise nearly 20 percent of our State's population. Ms. Kagan admitted to being no expert in ''Indian law,'' but expressed a willingness to learn about the challenges and opportunities facing Alaska Native people. She also expressed support for encouraging the courts to adopt procedures making it easier for people whose first language may not be English to understand court proceedings.

Another significant issue for Alaskans is the Supreme Court's decision in the Exxon Valdez case. Thousands of Alaskans were damaged by that oil spill, yet Exxon took every possible advantage in the U.S. court system to delay payment of damages as long as they could. As a result, an estimated 20 percent of those damaged by the spill died before they could collect any compensation. Ms. Kagan agreed with the tragedy of that case and expressed frustration with it dragging on so long.

Mr. President, because of what I have learned in looking at the career and record of Ms. Kagan, and reviewing her statements and testimony on matters that are important to the people of Alaska I am privileged to serve, I am pleased to confirm Elena Kagan as an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to speak to the nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to be the next Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. After a careful and considered review of her testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, her overall record, and my personal meeting with her in May, I have concluded that General Kagan should be confirmed as the next Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

General Kagan would succeed Justice John Paul Stevens who has served our country as a decorated war veteran, a distinguished Federal appellate judge, and a Supreme Court Justice for nearly 35 years. I appreciate his service to our Nation, and believe that all of us in public service can learn from his dignified manner and sound advice to ''understand before disagreeing.''

As with the previous nominees to the Court that I have had the responsibility to review, I have not arrived at my decision lightly. It has been said that, of all the entities in government, the Supreme Court is the most closely identified with the Constitution—and that no other branch or agency has as great an opportunity to speak directly to the rational and moral side of the American character; to bring the power and moral authority of government to bear directly upon the citizenry.

The Supreme Court passes final legal judgment on the most profound social issues of our time. The Court is uniquely designed to accept only those cases that present a substantial and compelling question of Federal law; cases for which the Court's ultimate resolution will not be applied merely to a single, isolated dispute—but, rather, will guide legislatures, executives, and all other courts in their broader development and interpretation of law and policy. Ours is a government of liberty and order, of State and Federal authority, and of checks and balances, and the remarkable challenge of calibrating these fundamental balance points is entrusted ultimately to the nine Justices.

To help meet this extraordinary challenge, any nominee for the Court must, as I stated for previous nominees under both Republican and Democrat administrations, have a powerful intellect, a principled understanding of the Court's role, and a sound commitment to judicial method. A nominee must have the capacity to engender respect among the other Justices in order to facilitate the consensus of a majority. And to warrant Senate confirmation, the nominee must have a keen understanding of, and a disciplined respect for, the great body of law that precedes her.

It is with these high standards that we should also evaluate the record of General Kagan to serve as the Court's 112th Justice. General Kagan is a distinguished graduate from Princeton, Harvard, and Oxford Universities where she earned several distinct honors. She served as a law clerk to two judges, United States Court of Appeals Judge Abner Mikva and United States Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. General Kagan then worked in private practice as an associate at a leading D.C. law firm and a law professor at two of the Nation's most regarded law schools.

General Kagan has also served as a special counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee; a lawyer in the Office of the Counsel to a President; a policy advisor to a President; and dean of the Harvard Law School. Most importantly, she has served as the 45th Solicitor General of the United States where she has participated in six oral arguments and overseen briefs and certiorari petitions in approximately 100 cases.

For her work as Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan has won the support of every one of the 10 Solicitors General who have served since 1985, including 5 Republican appointees. She has also earned the support of over 50 deputy and assistant solicitors general who have served over the last 42 years.

As these highly skilled professionals have noted, the ''job of Solicitor General provides an opportunity to grapple with almost the full gamut of issues that come before the Supreme Court and requires an understanding of the Court's approach to numerous issues from the criteria for certiorari review to the Justices' approach to oral argument. The constant interaction with the Supreme Court that comes with being the most-frequent litigator before the Court also ensures an appreciation for the rhythms and traditions of the Court and its workload.''

Prior to her 15 months as Solicitor General, Ms. Kagan had relatively little experience as an active practitioner. The American Bar Association's principle expectation for a Federal appellate nominee is ''at least'' 12 years experience actually practicing law, and even now she continues to fall short of that. This is due in part to the fact that she does not appear to have performed any amicus curiae or pro bono work while serving as a law professor.

Such practical experience often helps the Justices remain connected to the effect of their decisions on the lives of everyday people. All Supreme Court Justices, regardless of judicial philosophy, weigh the Constitution's text, history, context and precedents when deciding the landmark cases. Active practice of law experience helps with that process because, as prior Justices and distinguished scholars alike have observed, the Justices' decisions in landmark cases are inevitably ''channeled and constrained by who [they] are and what they have lived through.''

General Kagan has not given us the clearest insight into those experiences that she has ''lived through'' that will ''channel and constrain'' her sense of constitutional boundaries. At the same time, I find that her experience in working at the highest levels of all three branches of government will provide her with valuable insights as she approaches her work on the Court. I also accept her comments from our personal meeting that she did indeed have a ''formative experience'' as a young lawyer in learning that ''behind legal questions are real people with real lives.''

As regards General Kagan's lack of prior judicial service, I do not find that to be disqualifying. Nearly 40 Justices have served on the Court without prior judicial experience, including in more recent times Louis Brandeis, Hugo Black, Robert Jackson, Earl Warren, Lewis Powell, and William Rehnquist. Especially on the current Court where all of the existing members come from the Federal appellate courts, General Kagan should bring a new and different perspective.

This brings us to the additional factors we must consider when providing our consent on a President's nominee for Associate Justice—judicial temperament, methodology, integrity and philosophy. By their very nature, these attributes are often challenging to measure, but they can be assessed through a careful analysis of a nominee's complete record.

With regard to the first consideration, judicial temperament, we all agree that it is absolutely essential that a judge be fair, open-minded and respectful. Our citizens simply must have confidence that a judge who weighs their legal claims does so with an even temperament. A judge must be truly committed to providing a full and fair day in court, while projecting a sincere equanimity and respect for the law. When these attributes are not clearly present in our judges, the public justifiably begins to lose faith in the integrity of our courts.

By all accounts, whether from conservative former Solicitors General Ken Starr and Ted Olson, and Assistant Solicitor General Miguel Estrada, General Kagan has a clear reputation for a sound judicial temperament. She projected poise throughout this process, during her hearing and in our personal meeting. Likewise, she has testified and spoken about the necessity of courts to provide a ''level playing field,'' of maintaining a fidelity to the law, and of the essential requirement not to prejudge any case, stating during her hearing that judging is about ''what the law says, whether it's the Constitution or whether it's a statute . . . the question is always what the law says . . . it's what the text of the Constitution says . . . what the law says, not a judge's personal views.''

Turning to the considerations of judicial methodology and integrity, General Kagan does not have a judicial service record to review. We can, however, examine her scholarship. Here, she has six scholarly articles, two scholarly book reviews and a variety of other commentaries. I have some concern that this collection is, by academia's standards, not especially prodigious, and that General Kagan did not continue her scholarship during her six years as Harvard's dean.

Her eight scholarly publications do, however, tackle the difficult subjects of Presidential power, the delegation doctrine, and hate speech. In particular, her Presidential Administration and Chevron's Non-delegation Doctrine article from 2001, as well as The Changing Faces of First Amendment Neutrality article from 1992, demonstrate both close attention to complicated legal detail and careful legal analysis—skills essential for the difficult work of the Court.

We can also review her approach to judicial methodology from her answer to my request to identify three of the Court's constitutional opinions—majority, concurring or dissenting—that in her view exemplify sound judicial methodology. First, General Kagan chose Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes' 1905 dissenting opinion in Lochner v. New York. In that case, the Court invalidated a State law prohibiting an employer from requiring a baker to work more than 60 hours per week. The Court reasoned that the statute ''necessarily interferes with the right of contract between the employer and employees,'' a right that is ''part of the liberty of the individual'' protected by the 14th amendment.

General Kagan cited this opinion as a ''concise and persuasive formulation of the proper role of the judiciary in relation to the political branches of government,'' highlighting these passages:

> I strongly believe that my agreement or disagreement [with the law] has nothing to do with the right of a majority to embody their opinions in law. . . . The Constitution is . . . made for people of fundamentally differing views, and the accident of our finding certain opinions natural and familiar, or novel, and even shocking, ought not to conclude our judgment upon the question whether statutes embodying them conflict with the Constitution of the United States. [Justices should not use their office] to prevent the natural outcome of a dominant opinion, unless it can be said that a rational and fair man necessarily would admit that the statute proposed would infringe fundamental principles as they have been understood by the traditions of our people and our law.

Next, General Kagan selected a 1927 concurring opinion in Whitney v. California where the Court unanimously upheld a conviction for conduct threatening to overthrow our government by unlawful means. Calling the concurrence an ''inspiring example of a commitment to protecting constitutional rights'' and a ''stirring reminder of the value of freedom of speech in our society, including its importance to democratic self-governance,'' General Kagan cited her admiration for this paragraph:

Those who won our independence believed that the final end of the state was to make men free to develop their faculties, and that in its government the deliberative forces should prevail over the arbitrary. They valued liberty both as an end and as a means. They believed liberty to be the secret of happiness and courage to be the secret of liberty. They believed that freedom to think as you will and to speak as you think are means indispensable to the discovery and spread of political truth; that without free speech and assembly discussion would be futile; that with them, discussion affords ordinarily adequate protection against the dissemination of noxious doctrine; that the greatest menace to freedom is an inert people; that public discussion is a political duty; and that this should be a fundamental principle of the American government. They recognized the risks to which all human institutions are subject. But they knew that order cannot be secured merely through fear of punishment for its infraction; that it is hazardous to discourage thought, hope and imagination; that fear breeds repression; that repression breeds hate; that hate menaces stable government; that the path of safety lies in the opportunity to discuss freely supposed grievances and proposed remedies; and that the fitting remedy for evil counsels is good ones.

Finally, General Kagan identified a 1952 concurring opinion in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer. There, the Court held that President Truman exceeded his constitutional authority when he ordered the Secretary of Commerce to take possession of most of the Nation's steel mills in the face of a labor strike during the Korean war. Respecting a concurring opinion as the ''definitive framework for evaluating the constitutionality of presidential action,'' General Kagan observed that:

Two aspects of the opinion are notable. First, Justice [Robert] Jackson's opinion is a classic formulation of the propositions that executive authority is not unlimited even in wartime and that the President is not above the law. That is all the more remarkable given that its author had served in the Executive Branch for much of his career, including as Solicitor General and Attorney General. Second, Justice Jackson refused to oversimplify constitutional analysis. . . . [H]is analysis depended in large measure on an assessment of relevant historical practices and political processes. That analysis was resolutely legal in its nature; it was not based on the Justice's political preferences or personal views. But the analysis took into account the full complexities of constitutional interpretation in its relation to modern governance. That is what has given Justice Jackson's concurrence its staying power and has made it the Court's principal precedent on executive power.

These three replies by General Kagan are informative. Together they argue for a limited judicial role, and demonstrate her command of the philosophical underpinnings of core constitutional doctrine and her insight into the necessity of aligning those theories with the functional ''complexities of modern governance.'' They also convey an awareness of, and therefore perhaps a capacity for, judicial statesmanship. As Justice Felix Frankfurter once noted, ''breadth of vision'' and ''capacity to transcend one's own experience'' are often the defining qualities that matter most in guiding a Justice's work on landmark cases.

As regards her views on substantive subjects of law, conservative attorneys such as Charles Fried, Michael McConnell and Paul Clement have agreed that General Kagan is in the mainstream. For example, she has affirmed forcefully that stare decisis is a critical command for the Court. As she wrote to the committee, that command requires a careful inquiry into whether the precedent has ''been found unworkable, whether subsequent legal developments have left the rule an anachronism, or whether premises of fact are so far different from those initially assumed as to render the rule irrelevant or unjustifiable.'' Moreover, she testified that:

The entire idea of precedent is that you can think a decision is wrong. You can have decided it differently if you had been on the court when that decision was made. And nonetheless you are bound by that decision. That's—if the doctrine of precedent enabled you to overturn every decision that you thought was wrong, it wouldn't be much of a doctrine. . . . I think when the court looks as though it's flipping around and changing sides just because the justices have changed, that's bad for the credibility of the institution and it's bad for the system of law.

General Kagan has also stated that the Constitution protects a right of privacy and that Roe v. Wade is not only ''settled law'' but has been ''doubly settled'' by Planned Parenthood v. Casey. Likewise, she has stated that foreign law should not have precedential weight in ''any but a very, very narrow set of circumstances,'' such as limited cases involving ''ambassadors'' or the ''law of war.'' And finally, she has testified, as noted above, that Youngstown Sheet & Tube remains the ''determinative'' governing standard in assessing Presidential wartime powers.

With respect to the second amendment, in my view, as a long-time, ardent supporter of second amendment rights, I have carefully examined General Kagan's work as the President's attorney a decade ago on a variety of legislation affecting gun ownership rights. This is a fair question and, here, General Kagan testified as follows:

The work that I did in the Clinton White House was all work . . . before Heller was decided, and so we really . . . did not consider . . . regulations through the Heller prism . . . because Heller didn't exist at that time. . . . What President Clinton was trying to do back in the 1990s and what I as his policy aide was trying to help him do, was to propose a set of regulations that had very strong support in the law enforcement community, that had actually bipartisan support here in Congress to keep guns out of the hands of criminals, to keep guns out of the hands of insane people. It was very much an anti-crime set of proposals that I worked on back then in the '90s.

A former White House colleague corroborated General Kagan's testimony: ''In all these cases, [President] Clinton had already settled views on these questions. Our job was to make sure the government's policy reflected what he wanted. He'd already made up his mind on most of these contentious issues.''

As several members of the committee during General Kagan's hearing noted, this same point—that a lawyer's job is to represent the client's views, and not the lawyer's own views—was also made by Justices Roberts and Alito when they were asked during their confirmation hearings about advice they gave while serving as executive branch attorneys. Both nominees testified that their executive branch legal counsel reflected ways to advance their elected client's, not their own personal, legal interests and policy preferences.

With respect to the fact that, more recently, General Kagan did not file a brief for the United States in McDonald v. City of Chicago—McDonald did present an important question regarding the interplay of the second and 14th amendments, and I joined an amicus brief in support of Mr. McDonald's claim to incorporate the second amendment through the 14th amendment, so that the protections of the second amendment would apply not just against Federal acts, but against the acts of State and local governments as well. Here, several observations are warranted.

First, McDonald presented only the question of whether the second amendment applied to State and local governments, and not what the scope of the protections of the amendment is. As a result, McDonald, unlike Heller, presented no implications for the constitutionality of Federal gun laws. Accordingly, the United States was not a party in the case.

Second, the issue of incorporation is by its very nature one of primarily State and local, and not Federal, concern. This explains the amicus brief signed by 38 States in this case. This also explains why the Solicitor General's Office has a tradition of not weighing in on incorporation cases. General Kagan wrote to the committee in response to a supplemental question that:

It has long been the practice of the Office of the Solicitor General not to file an amicus brief in cases concerning the application of a constitutional provision to the states (so-called incorporation cases). Although incorporation cases raise important issues of constitutional interpretation, and may matter greatly to individual citizens, those issues do not implicate the responsibilities and obligations of the federal government under the Constitution. Incorporation cases therefore do not fall within the category of cases in which the Office of the Solicitor General files amicus briefs: those where the federal government itself has a clear and specific interest in the resolution of the case.

This response is consistent with the reported statement of former Solicitor General Erwin Griswold, who was uniquely appointed by a Democratic President, President Johnson, and retained by his Republican successor, President Nixon. In 1970, General Griswold reportedly wrote that incorporation cases are rarely of direct interest to the Federal government because ''fundamental considerations of federalism militate against executive intrusion'' into issues of State and local law.

Further, although former Solicitor General Paul Clement did appear in Heller for the United States, under the Bush administration, Heller was not an incorporation case. Moreover, the broader question presented by Heller, unlike McDonald, did implicate the basic scheme of Federal firearms regulations.

Yet even then, General Clement argued in Heller for a somewhat narrower ruling regarding personal rights. He also argued for a somewhat higher level of judicial scrutiny of challenges to regulation of such rights in order to ensure that the longstanding existing Federal laws—like possession of machine guns, possession by convicted felons, or possession on Federal property—that his office is required to defend were protected. A majority of the Court ultimately respected and accepted General Clement's concern in both Heller and McDonald. As Senator CORNYN noted at the hearing, Justice Alito wrote for the majority in McDonald that:

> We made it clear in Heller that our holding did not cast doubt on such longstanding regulatory measures as 'prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, . . . laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms.' We repeat those assurances here; . . . incorporation does not imperil every law regulating firearms.

Perhaps most importantly, General Kagan testified repeatedly that both McDonald and Heller are settled law. As regards McDonald, General Kagan said, ''I do think that . . . decision [McDonald] [is] settled law; entitled to all of the weight that any precedent of the Supreme Court has; [and] . . . can only be overturned if there is strong evidence the ruling [among all of the other stare decisis factors] is unworkable.''

On Heller, she said: ''I think that Heller is settled law and Heller has decided that the Second Amendment confers such an individual right to keep and bear arms. I have absolutely no reason to think that the court's analysis was incorrect in any way. I accept the court's analysis and will apply it going forward.'' She also said that Heller's finding that a personal right of possession is ''deeply rooted in this Nation's history and traditions'' is a ''central part of the rationale'' of Heller and, again, is ''settled law.''

Moreover, she testified that she has ''never believed that the president had the power to prohibit [the sale of firearms] without legislative authorization. . . . In fact, that's one [issue] that Heller and McDonald don't effect, that the president didn't have that power before and doesn't have that power after.'' She also testified that ''the Second Amendment question, as defined by Heller, was so peculiar to our own constitutional history and heritage that . . . foreign law didn't have any relevance.''

Turning to another important issue, I also share the concern for how General Kagan approached the issue of military recruiting at Harvard Law School. Under the Solomon amendment, universities like Harvard that receive Federal funding are required to permit military recruiters on campus. Opposing the military's don't ask, don't tell policy, General Kagan was one of several deans to relegate military recruiters to a less preferred position by withholding Office of Career Services' sponsorship.

General Kagan also participated in a lawsuit challenging the Solomon amendment as unconstitutional. Had she prevailed in that suit, colleges and universities across the country could have denied the military on-campus access to students across the country. Fortunately, the Supreme Court summarily and unanimously rejected this challenge in 2006 in Rumsfeld v. F.A.I.R.

General Kagan continues to defend her decision as a difficult mediation of competitive on-campus interests. But the prevailing recognition here is that the Nation was fully engaged in two wars designed to advance national security, and so I continue to be troubled that General Kagan chose to relegate the military rather than her institution's financial or policy interests.

Reviewing the final consideration of judicial philosophy, General Kagan has spoken directly to the important but appropriately limited role that the Court plays in our constitutional scheme of government. She recognizes that the Court is the ''least accountable'' of our governmental institutions and that the Court is not ''self-starting.'' Citing Alexander Bickel and his 1961 seminal article, General Kagan stated in our personal meeting that the ''passive virtue'' of the Court rests in what it does not do, and that the Court should work hard ''not do more than is called for'' and ''not go too far.'' Likewise, she said in her questionnaire that ''I think it is a great deal better for the elected branches to take the lead in creating a more just society than for courts to do so.''

We recently witnessed what happens when the Court does not adhere to such decision-making restraints. We are all familiar with Citizens United v. F.E.C. where the Court overruled a mere 7-year-old precedent to strike down the electioneering communications provision of the Bipartisan Campaign Finance Reform Act.

There, the majority effectively converted on its own motion an as-applied challenge into a facial challenge through its order for re-argument. According no deference to our 100,000-page factfinding record that took Congress over 10 years to assemble, and further dismissing the commands of stare decisis, the majority then rejected the relatively recent 1990 precedent of Austin v. Michigan Chamber of Commerce and the very recent 2003 precedent of McConnell v. F.E.C. Instead, the majority inflated the precedential value of the majority's very recent—only decided in 2006—and readily distinguishable F.E.C. v. Wisconsin Right to Life and eschewed arguments to decide the case on narrower statutory grounds. Consequently, and in striking contrast to claims of ''judicial modesty,'' the majority then struck down the electioneering communications provision of BCRA on the broadest of grounds.

Even granting that General Kagan was an advocate in the case, I was pleased to hear her say in our personal meeting that the Citizens' majority ''did not respond in the right way. Congress had gone through an enormous record and the Court had ruled only a few years earlier. From where I sat, the Court was wrong.''

I also agree with Justice Stevens' dissent in Citizens that the activist ''path'' taken by the Citizens'' majority will ''do damage'' to the Court itself. Citizens is not, of course, the only recent case in which Justices and scholars from across the political spectrum have viewed the Court's majority as overreaching. Indeed, opinions in Montejo v. Louisiana, Gross v. FBL Financial Services, Ashcroft v. Iqbal, and related commentaries have all expressed the same concern.

Finally, I note that, if confirmed, General Kagan will become the fourth female Justice ever to serve on the Supreme Court. She will follow Sandra Day O'Conner and join Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Sonia Sotomayor. General Kagan has already become the first woman to serve as Solicitor General of the United States, and the fact remains that it does make a difference who women and girls see at the pinnacles of government and industry. As Justice Ginsburg observed at the time of Justice Sotomayor's nomination, ''women belong in all places where decisions are being made.''

Ultimately, when the Framers accorded us the special role of confirming judicial nominees that we are exercising here today, having delegated the power of nomination to the Office of the President, and having recognized that elections to that office may affect the overall composition of the Court, the Framers expressly intended that we review judicial nominees not by their affiliations, but by their qualifications. This is why Alexander Hamilton wrote in Federalist 76 that the Senate should deprive a duly elected President of his or her nominee only for ''special and strong reasons.''

In reviewing the record of General Kagan's scholarship, the to, evidence of her reputation, and her responses to the committee and other Members throughout this process, I find in that General Kagan has a very capable intellect and a deep respect for the rule of law. She has a command of the important but limited role of the courts, and a demonstrated commitment to stability in the law. It is therefore my conclusion that Solicitor General Elena Kagan is qualified to serve as the next Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, it is with great pride that I express my strong support for the nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to be the next Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. A trailblazer in many ways, Solicitor Kagan was the first female to serve as Solicitor General of the United States and the first female Dean of Harvard Law School, one of the most prestigious legal educational institutions in our Nation. Her nomination as Solicitor General garnered the bipartisan support of every Solicitor General who served from 1985 to 2009, including Charles Fried, Ken Starr, Drew Days, Walter Dellinger, Seth Waxman, Ted Olson, Paul Clement, and Greg Garre, a testament to her ability to build bridges across partisan lines and her fidelity to law above politics.

Solicitor Kagan brings a wealth of historic legal experience to the position of Associate Justice, including serving as law clerk to Justice Thurgood Marshall, the first African-American to serve on the Supreme Court, working as an associate at the law firm of Williams & Connolly, teaching as a law professor at the University of Chicago and Harvard University, and acting as policy counsel to President Clinton and special counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee. In these capacities she handled legal and policy issues ranging from public health, to education, to war crimes, to campaign finance and welfare.

Solicitor Kagan's experience with different branches of government equips her with a unique perspective on the law and the challenges the Court will face in the coming years. Her confirmation honors the legacy of Justice John Paul Stevens, the outgoing Justice, who was well known for his service of dignity and intellect, without regard for partisan divides.

If we confirm her—and I am confident we will—Solicitor Kagan will be only the fourth woman in history to serve on the Supreme Court, and will be the third woman to sit on the current Court, the highest number of female justices to serve at one time.

Solicitor Kagan's confirmation will be an inspiration for generations of female lawyers and legal scholars to come, and will make an indelible impression on this country's legal landscape. Today, women comprise only 19.2 percent of federal district court judgeships, and 20 percent of federal appellate judgeships, highlighting the need for increased gender representation on our Nation's highest courts. Solicitor Kagan's confirmation is only a step towards reducing this gender disparity in our Nation's judiciary.

I followed closely Solicitor Kagan's hearings, and I am impressed by Solicitor Kagan's commitment to respect the rule of law. The hearings for Solicitor Kagan, who testified for more than 17 hours and answered over 540 questions, were thorough and fair. In her opening statement, Solicitor Kagan observed that, ''the Supreme Court's role in our society is to act as a safeguard to the rule of law by maintaining a commitment to impartiality, principle, and restraint; and the role of a Supreme Court justice is to approach each case with even-handedness and fair-mindedness, to ensure that everyone who comes before the Court receives a fair shake.''

Solicitor Kagan also expressed her admiration for Justice Thurgood Marshal; under whom she clerked, for his view of the Supreme Court as a means of access to justice for those left without redress after unfair treatment. Her expressed judicial philosophy of impartiality and fairness, to individuals of all classes, income levels, and interests, is a critical component to the High Court in a climate where we see increasing judicial activeness and partiality to special interests.

Solicitor Kagan's experiences as a scholar and policy advisor unquestionably qualify her for a position on the Supreme Court. I find it disingenuous that several of my conservative colleagues have attacked Solicitor Kagan's lack of judicial experience. The last two of the previous four chief justices of the Supreme Court, William Rehnquist and Earl Warren, had no judicial experience when first nominated to the Court. Nor did, Felix Frankfurter, Louis Brandeis, and John Marshall, known as the ''Great Chief Justice.'' Over one-third of the past 111 Supreme Court justices had no judicial experience when they were first nominated. Rather than being a product of the judicial monastery, Solicitor Kagan brings a real world perspective on the role of a justice, with a view to the practical contexts and implications of the Court's decisions. Solicitor Kagan's two decades of experience working in every branch of government exceptionally qualify her as an Associate Justice, and as one of the top legal thinkers in the country.

My conservative colleagues have also criticized Solicitor Kagan's enforcement of Harvard Law School's anti-discrimination policy. Solicitor Kagan did not assert her own personal agenda and oppose military recruitment on campus, as several of my colleagues have alleged. Instead, as Dean, Kagan was charged with enforcing an anti-discrimination policy in effect at Harvard since 1979 that prevented organizations discriminating against selected individuals from recruiting through the school's office of career services. Kagan's enforcement of this policy was consistent with her predecessors, Dean Robert Clark and Harvard President Larry Summers. However, Kagan ensured that military recruiters still had access to students. Kagan noted, ''[M]ilitary recruiters had access to Harvard students every single day I was dean . . . I'm confident that the military had access to our students and our students had access to the military throughout my entire deanship.'' Solicitor Kagan's work to ensure student access demonstrates her support of our military and her encouragement of the brightest students' involvement in our Armed Services.

Solicitor's Kagan's widespread support is a testament to her impact on not only her colleagues and peers, but also upon a large number of those in the legal profession. The American Bar Association, after conducting an investigation over several weeks that included peer reviews, concluded that Solicitor Kagan merited its highest rating of unanimously ''well qualified.'' To merit the Committee's rating of ''well qualified,'' a Supreme Court nominee must be a preeminent member of the legal profession, have outstanding legal ability and exceptional breadth of experience, and meet the very highest standards of integrity, professional competence, and judicial temperament.

In addition, Solicitor Kagan has received support from Democrats and Republicans and a range of civil rights, non-profit, and advocacy organizations, including the National Women's Law Center, the National Partnership for Women and Families, Earthjustice, the American Bar Association, the Alliance for Justice, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) Legal Defense and Education Fund, the National Association of Women Judges, the Hispanic Bar Association, the Service Employees International Union (SEIU), and the Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights (LCCR). Solicitor Kagan is also endorsed by her colleagues in academia, and a group of over sixty-nine law school deans across the country expressed their written support for her nomination to the Senate Judiciary Committee in a June 15, 2010 letter. Her supporters also include her former students, including one, a former law clerk to Justice Antonin Scalia, who called Solicitor Kagan, ''a person of utmost integrity, extraordinary legal talent and relentless generosity.''

Solicitor Kagan's intellectual aptitude and commitment to justice was demonstrated early in her life. She was born in New York City, NY, the daughter of a school teacher and a public housing lawyer. She graduated from Princeton University, received a Masters in Philosophy from Worcestor College of Oxford University, and received her law degree magna cum laude from Harvard Law School. She then clerked for Justice Thurgood Marshall, was an associate with Williams & Connolly, and then counsel to President Clinton, as Associate Counsel, Deputy Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy, and Deputy Director for the Domestic Policy Counsel. She led the Clinton administration's inter-agency effort to analyze all legal and regulatory aspects of the Attorney General's tobacco settlement and then participated actively in the development and congressional consideration of tobacco legislation. She also handled legislative issues involving constitutional issues, including separation of powers, governmental privileges, freedom of expression, and church-state relations.

As Dean of Harvard Law School, she joined other deans in opposing an amendment to strip the courts of the power to review detention practices, treatment and adjudications of guilt and punishment for detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. This reflects a fair view, with an eye to checks and balances on different branches of government.

In her first case as Solicitor General, Solicitor Kagan argued before the Supreme Court on behalf of the government in the Citizens United v. FEC case. As Solicitor Kagan notes, however, her role as Solicitor General was to argue on behalf of the country, not to advance her personal beliefs.

In my meeting with her, Solicitor Kagan confirmed her commitment to protecting the right to privacy enshrined in our Constitution. I believe she will preserve that right.

Solicitor Kagan is uniquely qualified to serve as Associate Justice because she not only possesses an impressive intellectual capacity and commitment to fairness, but also because she is committed equal justice. As she remarked in her opening statement, ''Equal Justice under the Law. It means that everyone who comes before the Court—regardless of wealth or power or station—receives the same process and the same protections . . .''

Solicitor Kagan demonstrates a readiness to serve on our Nation's Highest Court and I am confident that she will make a fine justice who will not only uphold the Constitution and legal precedent of the country, but continue to preserve one of the most treasured tenets of our legal system, equal access to justice for all Americans.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, earlier this week I spoke on the Senate floor, calling for the confirmation of Solicitor General Elena Kagan to the position of Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. I added my voice to a chorus of bipartisan praise for her qualifications and abilities to be a Supreme Court Justice, joining supporters such as Miguel Estrada, Assistant Solicitor General in the George H.W. Bush administration; former Solicitors General Kenneth Starr and Drew S. Days and a number of my Republican colleagues, including Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM and Senator JUDD GREGG. These voices across the political spectrum recognize Elena Kagan's years of practical, pragmatic experience, and value, in the words of Professor Michael McConnell, director of the Constitutional Law Center at Stanford Law School, her ''fidelity to legal principle even when it means crossing her political and ideological allies.''

Despite her abilities and her tremendous legal career, Solicitor General Kagan continues to be the subject of baseless attacks. For instance, the National Rifle Association, NRA, has taken out full page advertisements in multiple newspapers and has aired national television commercials claiming Elena Kagan is unfit for the Supreme Court because of her supposed opposition to the second amendment rights of Americans. The NRA's charges are unfounded and are refuted by the nominee's own words during her confirmation hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

For example, in regard to the Supreme Court's 2008 Heller decision, which ruled that the second amendment protects an individual's right to possess a firearm for private self-defense purposes in a Federal enclave, and the Supreme Court's recent McDonald decision, which applied the Heller holding to the States, the NRA has said that Solicitor General Kagan has left unanswered ''very serious questions of whether she would vote to overturn Heller and McDonald.'' Perhaps the NRA lobbyists were not watching her confirmation hearing when she replied to a question from Senator TOM COBURN saying, ''I very much appreciate how deeply important the right to bear arms is to millions and millions of Americans. And I accept Heller which made clear that the second amendment conferred that right upon individuals, and not simply collectively.'' In addition, in response to a related question from Senator CHARLES GRASSLEY, Solicitor General Kagan said ''those decisions are settled law . . . I will follow stare decisis with respect to Heller and McDonald as I would with any case.''

It seems pretty clear, contrary to the NRA's claims, that Solicitor Kagan has answered questions concerning her position on the second amendment rights of Americans, and she will defend those rights.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that there now be 1 hour remaining for debate with respect to the Kagan nomination for the U.S. Supreme Court, with 15-minute blocks controlled as follows: Senator SESSIONS, Chairman LEAHY, Leader MCCONNELL, and Senator REID of Nevada; that upon the use of the allotted hour, the Senate proceed to vote on confirmation of the nomination; that upon confirmation, the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid on the table, the President be immediately notified of Senate's action, and the Senate then resume legislative session. Further, I ask that when Members cast a vote on the nomination, they do so from their seats.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Will the Chair withhold please, Mr. President.

You have heard my request. What is the ruling of the Chair?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, at 3:30 today we will vote on the nomination of Elena Kagan to be an Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, in the midst of President Johnson's ''Great Society,'' Ronald Reagan explained that our Nation had arrived at a crossroads, at a time for choosing.

The choice, Reagan explained, was ''whether we believe in our capacity for self-government or whether we abandon the American Revolution and confess that a little intellectual elite in a far-distant capital can plan our lives for us better than we can plan it for ourselves.''

Forty years later, our Nation once again finds itself at a crossroads. Government is getting larger and larger. Spending is out of control, and a little intellectual elite, in a far distant capital, is trying harder than ever to plan the lives of the American people. Even basic choices about how we care for our own health are now made by career bureaucrats whose names Americans will never hear and whose faces they will never see.

Our Nation has a choice to make. We either restore or relinquish our great heritage of limited constitutional government. Part of that choice will be made here today. Part of that choice will be made as we consider the nomination of Elena Kagan to the Supreme Court. In recent years, the progressive wing of the Supreme Court has offered opinions that would have denied Americans their right to keep and bear arms, and severely diminish the right to free speech during election time.

These same progressive Justices succeeded only a short time ago in ruling that a citizen's property could be seized by the State for private commercial development. These Justices are ignoring the text of our Constitution, the plain rights guaranteed by our Constitution, in order to advance what they think are better ideas, their vision, their political agendas, frankly.

This progressive, activist judicial philosophy strikes at the heart of our democracy and is a direct threat to our liberty. Judges are lifetime appointed. They are not accountable to the people. President Obama himself has said that judges must shed their neutral constitutional role and impose upon the nation ''their broader vision of what America should be.'' That is how he said he would pick judges, and this is certainly the kind of judge President Obama believes he has found in Ms. Kagan, someone who shares his progressive, elitist vision and is willing to advance it from the bench.

Indeed, throughout Ms. Kagan's career, she has been more deeply involved in politics than law, and has frequently put her politics above law. She has never been a judge, never argued even a case before a jury. She has practiced law for 3 years. She has less real legal experience than any nominee in the last half century.

The experience Ms. Kagan does have, however, is mostly that of a political lawyer and a policy advocate, and whenever her political views have clashed with her legal obligations, her vision of what America should be and not her duty have too often won the day.

As a Supreme Court clerk she pursued a progressive agenda without regard to the Constitution's text or history. She even wrote she was not sympathetic to an American's constitutional right to keep and bear arms. As a top aide to President Clinton she was closely involved in efforts to restrict private gun ownership, including a plan to block firearm importation into our country that one Clinton official admitted was ''taking the law and bending it as far as we can.''

She also worked aggressively to ensure the wide availability of partial-birth abortion. Instead of providing President Clinton with sound legal advice based on the best medical evidence, she pushed the President away from his moderate position, and away from his willingness to reach a compromise on this issue. She even helped revise a medical statement to imply a medical need for the gruesome partial-birth abortion procedure that did not exist, when the expert panel had indeed said it was never an appropriate procedure.

Next, as dean of Harvard Law, Ms. Kagan would once again sacrifice legal principle for political gain for advancement of an agenda she believed in. Ms. Kagan inherited a policy of equal and unfettered access for military recruiters on campus. That was the policy. But she reversed this policy, kicking the military out of the campus recruitment office as our troops at that very time were risking their lives overseas. She did this in clear, knowing violation of Federal law, the Solomon amendment. The Solomon amendment, passed by this Congress four times, requires unrestricted, equal access on campuses for military recruiters. Ms. Kagan knew what the law said, and as she herself admitted, knew that it was in force every single day she was dean. But she put her own views, her political ideas, her ideologies above the law and above the best interests of our soldiers, stripping the military of their official access availability on campus.

Ms. Kagan justified this conduct by saying she was objecting to don't ask, don't tell. That statute, however, was passed by Congress and implemented by President Clinton, her former boss. But instead of complaining to the politicians who made the rule, to those of us in Congress who were involved in passing it and maintaining it, working within the democratic system, Ms. Kagan took it upon herself to defy the law and to demean the people who were merely following the law, our noble men and women who serve our country.

Perhaps some of those on that campus recruiting had just come off the battlefield, having served their country, placing their lives at risk. For that there can be no justification.

After Harvard, Ms. Kagan assumed the post of Solicitor General of the United States. In that job it is her sworn duty to defend all Federal laws, including those she may personally oppose. These are the laws of Congress which the Solicitor General must defend. As every good lawyer knows, her job is to represent her clients, and the client of the Solicitor General is the United States of America.

Did she fulfill that duty? Did she faithfully represent her client? No, she did not. When the liberal Ninth Circuit issued a deeply flawed ruling against don't ask, don't tell, the law Ms. Kagan had so strongly opposed at Harvard, she did not appeal the ruling, despite great chances of success on appeal to the Supreme Court. Instead, she did exactly what the ACLU, the group who was leading the fight in representing the individual in that lawsuit, who opposed the statute and wanted it stricken, she did what they desired and let the ruling stand, and missed the opportunity to get a clear appeal. This was a test of Ms. Kagan's legal character, and she failed that test. I studied the case closely. I want to be fair to her about that.

The only explanation for her not appealing to the Supreme Court was that she did not want them to uphold the statute to win a victory for the United States. In short, she did not fulfill her duty. Her duty. Is that a word that is out of fashion today? And she did not live up to her explicit, sworn promise made to this Senate, to vigorously defend that very statute, when she was confirmed to be Solicitor General.

Given this record, it is not surprising that Ms. Kagan's judicial heroes are activists who reject and repudiate sometimes even the very idea of objectivity. But it is objectivity, the search for what is right and true, that makes our system of justice so extraordinary and so unique. The whole goal of our trials is to find the truth. These concerns were addressed during the hearing. Ms. Kagan was given every opportunity to respond. But she opted, I thought, for political spin at the expense of rigorous honesty and accuracy. In so doing, she only further demonstrated she lacked the qualities necessary to sit on the Court. Other Senators have the same impression of that testimony.

Some have said that Senators are opposing this nomination for partisan reasons, that her qualifications are not in question. But what qualification is more essential for the Supreme Court than impartial fidelity to the law? This is not an ideological litmus test but a core bipartisan standard to which any nominee of any party ought to be held.

Senators can and will disagree on the question of how much deference a President is due in his nomination. But surely that deference cannot extend so far as to include a nominee who is unable to serve under the Constitution as they take an oath to do.

The American people will not easily forgive the Senate if we confirm Ms. Kagan to the Supreme Court. They will not forgive the Senate if we further expose our Constitution to revision and rewrite by judicial fiat, to advance what President Obama says is a broader vision of what America should be. That is the Congressional role, not the judicial role, to figure out what the vision and the policy of this country should be.

Now more than ever we need this Court to be an impartial defender of our constitutional liberty. As Vice President BIDEN's own chief of staff and close friend of Ms. Kagan emphatically said, ''Ms. Kagan is clearly a legal progressive.'' If confirmed, I fear she will continue putting her politics above the law, as she has so often done before. So I invited those who supported this nomination to refute the record and the analysis I have stated over the several past weeks, but I do not think one error has been raised and identified by Ms. Kagan's supporters in what I have said.

So we are left with the same concern, that Ms. Kagan would ally herself not with the constitutional liberties of all Americans but with the big government agenda of the President who nominated her. In fact, at the hearing, Ms. Kagan was unable to identify any limits on the government's power to control America's economic decisions. What Ms. Kagan perhaps fails to realize is that the people should control their government, not the other way around.

That is why no Supreme Court Justice should simply rubberstamp any political agenda of a President or Congress, nor should any Senator. Our liberties are far more precious than any partisan allegiance.

After the Constitution was drafted, Benjamin Franklin was asked what kind of government had been created. Franklin replied: A republic, if you can keep it. Again, the choice is ours. Either we embrace our great, magnificent constitutional heritage that I love so much or we let it slip away to judges who believe they can allow their own personal core beliefs and philosophies to help them decide how a case should go. Either we move forward more secure in our freedom or we fall back to the old bankrupt idea of big government—an idea that has failed at every place, every time it has been tried.

Let's take a step today in the right direction. Let's listen to the American people and strengthen our commitment to constitutional values. It is that commitment that impels me to vote against this nomination and why I urge my colleagues in both parties to do the same.

I see the chairman of the committee, Senator LEAHY. He and I don't agree on this nomination, but he is a proven professional chairman. He has gone through a host of these nominations. He is tough, but he is fair. He let us have our say. I thank the chairman for the privilege of working with him on this important constitutional effort.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRANKEN). The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Alabama for his kind words. We both set out with the goal of making sure the United States had a chance to hear this nomination, to hear the debate on it, and to have Senators speak. We both decided before the debate that would happen, and it has. I thank the Senator from Alabama.

We are about to conclude debate on the nomination of Elena Kagan to be Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court. This is the time when the 100 of us stand in the footsteps of 300 million Americans and make the decision whether she will be confirmed to a lifetime appointment. I predict right now she will be confirmed and I look forward to her bipartisan confirmation.

She has been nominated to succeed Justice John Paul Stevens, someone who served with integrity for so many years, a man I consider a friend. Her qualifications, intelligence, temperament, and judgment will make her a worthy successor to Justice John Paul Stevens.

When she is appointed by the President after we confirm her, three women will serve together on the Supreme Court of the United States for the first time in our Nation's history, three women on the nine-member Supreme Court. As I said 5½ weeks ago, when the Judiciary Committee began Solicitor General Kagan's confirmation hearing, we are a better country for the fact that the path of excellence Elena Kagan has taken in her career is one now open for both men and women. I look forward to the day when I see many more women on that Court.

Solicitor General Kagan's legal qualifications are unassailable. She earned her place at the top of the legal profession. No one gave it to her; she earned it. As a student, she excelled at Princeton, Oxford and Harvard Law School. She was a law clerk to a giant in American justice and American law, Justice Thurgood Marshall. She worked for then-Chairman BIDEN on the Judiciary Committee. These experiences, combined with her work as an advisor to President Clinton, give her background in all three branches of our government. She also taught law at two of the Nation's most respected law schools. In the decade since the Republican Senate majority pocket-filibustered her nomination to the DC Circuit—remember, when people say she does not have judicial experience, of course, Republicans did block her from going on the court—Elena Kagan became the first woman dean of Harvard Law School and then the first woman Solicitor General of the United States, often referred to as the 10th Justice.

The 100 of us who serve in the U.S. Senate stand in the shoes of more than 300 million Americans as we discharge this constitutional duty to consider nominations to our Nation's Federal courts. We will conclude our consideration of this nomination after 12 weeks. If we can do that for a Supreme Court nomination, we ought to be able to consider the other judicial nominations that have been stalled for months after being favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee.

This is the 15th time since I have been in the Senate that I have been able to consider a Supreme Court nomination. I have applied the same standards to this nomination as I have to the ones that preceded it. I looked to see whether Solicitor General Kagan would fairly apply the law and use common sense. That is the same standard I used on the first Supreme Court Justice I voted on, a man from Chicago, Justice John Paul Stevens, nominated by a Republican President. I proudly voted for him. For Solicitor General Kagan, I looked to see whether, as a Justice, she would appreciate the proper role of the courts in our democracy. Would she be the kind of independent Justice who would keep faith with each of the words inscribed in Vermont marble over the front doors to the Supreme Court: ''Equal justice under law.'' My answer to these questions, based on her record and testimony, is a resounding yes.

Solicitor General Kagan demonstrated an impressive knowledge of the law and fidelity to it. She spoke of judicial restraint and respect for our democratic institutions, her commitment to the Constitution and the rule of law. She made clear that she will base her approach to deciding cases on the law and the Constitution, not politics or an ideological agenda. So today I will cast my vote for Elena Kagan's confirmation.

I observed at the outset of this confirmation process that there was no one President Obama could nominate who would not be opposed by some. Some Senators announced their opposition to Solicitor General Kagan's nomination even before a hearing took place. The opening statement of others at the Judiciary Committee hearings struck me more like prosecutors' closing arguments. Senators who last year disregarded Justice Sotomayor's years of judicial service to focus on a few phrases taken out of context from her speeches reversed their course this year to proclaim that an extensive judicial record is imperative. Standards shift almost every time. They then faulted Solicitor General Kagan for not having been a judge, while ignoring the fact that it was Senate Republicans who pocket-filibustered her judicial nomination more than 10 years ago.

Senators can make their own judgments, and they have. I ask of them only two things: Fairly consider Solicitor General Kagan's testimony and adhere to the standards of fairness and objectivity that you are demanding of her as a Justice. History will judge whether Senators have fairly considered the nomination of Solicitor General Kagan. I commend those Senators who have shown the independence to join the bipartisan confirmation of this nomination.

I also defend the right of every Senator to vote as he or she chooses. I understand that some statements made in opposition to this nomination were seen as insulting to the nominee and to others. I disagree with the many inferences, conclusions and judgments expressed in opposition, but I do not think Senators intended their remarks to be disparaging.

Five years ago, I followed the Democratic leader's statement in opposition to the nomination of John Roberts with my statement in favor of that nomination. That was my judgment based on the record and his testimony, including his pronouncements on judicial restraint, deference to Congress, and respect for precedent. At the time, Senators on the Democratic side of the aisle—a number of them—disagreed with me, including one Senator who disagreed with me but, nevertheless, came to the floor to defend my position. That Senator was the then-junior Senator from Illinois. Of course, he now serves as President of the United States. As I told President Obama the other day, his defense of me meant a lot then, and 5 years later, it still does.

In the course of our consideration of this nomination, I have spoken several times about the key role real world judging and judicial independence have played in furthering the Constitution's purpose of forming a more perfect union. It is essential that judicial nominees understand that, as judges, they are not members of any administration. I believe Solicitor General Kagan has that understanding. Courts are not subsidiaries of any political party or interest group, and our judges should not be partisans. That is why the Supreme Court's intervention in the 2000 Presidential election in Bush v. Gore was so jarring and why the recent decision by five conservative activist Justices in Citizens United to throw out 100 years of legal developments in order to invite massive corporate spending on elections for the first time in 100 years was such a jolt to the system.

It is also essential that judges and Justices understand how the law affects Americans each and every day. I expect Elena Kagan learned early on in her legal career, when she clerked for Justice Marshall, that Justices ought to understand how their decisions affect real Americans. In the hard cases that come before the Supreme Court, in the real world, we want and need Justices who have the good sense to appreciate the real world ramifications of their decisions. The American people live in the real world of great challenges. The Supreme Court needs to function in that real world.

It took a Supreme Court that, in 1954, understood the real world to conclude in Brown v. Board of Education that the seemingly fair sounding doctrine of separate but equal was in reality a straitjacket of inequality and inconsistent with the constitutional guarantee of equality. It took a Supreme Court 75 years ago that understood the real world and the Great Depression to reject conservative judicial activism to accept the constitutional authority of Congress to outlaw child labor, to guarantee a minimum wage, and to establish a social safety net for all Americans. Through Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, Congress ensured that growing old no longer means growing poor and that being older or poor no longer means being without medical care. That progress continues today with our efforts to pass laws to ensure protection from natural and manmade disasters, to encourage clean air and water, to provide health care for all Americans, to ensure safe food and drugs, to protect equal rights, to enforce safe workplaces and provide a safety net for seniors.

Vermont did not vote to join the Union until the year the Bill of Rights was ratified. Those of us from the Green Mountain State are protective of our fundamental liberties. Vermonters understand the importance the Constitution, including the Bill of Rights and the subsequent constitutional amendments have had in expanding individual liberties over the last 220 years. I believe Solicitor General Kagan shares this understanding. As she said in her opening statement at the hearing:

> What the rule of law does is nothing less than to secure for each of us what our Constitution calls ''the blessings of liberty''—those rights and freedoms, that promise of equality, that have defined this nation since its founding.

All of us are better for our historic progress to greater freedom, equality, and security.

Every February, the Senate hears President George Washington's Farewell Address. It is usually read by the Senate's most junior Member. In that pronouncement by our first President, George Washington warns against the danger of factions, partisanship, and what he called ''the spirit of party,'' noting:

> [T]he common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.
> It serves always to distract the Public Councils, and enfeeble the Public Administration. It agitates the Community with ill-founded jealousies and public alarms; kindles the animosity of one part against another, foments occasionally riot and insurrection.

That was George Washington, a long time ago. But today our Nation faces many challenges. It is a time when we should be pulling together and working together. Instead, we have seen too much obstruction, negativity, and devotion to the failure of the other party instead of the success of the country.

The nomination of Solicitor General Elena Kagan is a matter on which I expect the President had hoped we would come together. Her nomination really is one worthy of broad bipartisan support.

With Elena Kagan's confirmation, the Supreme Court will better reflect the diversity that has made our country so great. We will write another chapter in the history of our Nation's highest Court. And we will take another step forward in fulfilling the hopes and dreams of the trailblazers who set the path for Elena Kagan to follow.

I will proudly vote for her confirmation.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to express my appreciation to my staff who worked tirelessly during these past few months on this nomination. They spent many long hours combing through and distilling information in hundreds of thousands of documents provided by Solicitor General Kagan, the Clinton Library and the Pentagon. On a short timeline, my staff worked around the clock to prepare for the hearing before the Judiciary Committee, which occurred merely 49 days after President Obama announced Solicitor General Kagan's nomination to the Supreme Court. Because of their hard work and dedication, our members were well-prepared and well-informed, which allowed us to conduct a fair and thorough hearing.

Mr. President, I would like to thank my staff and Senator LEAHY's staff, the Judiciary Committee staff, for their fine work during this nomination process. It has gone on for a number of weeks, and it has been very stressful, with a lot of late nights, and people really have worked hard. I believe that has provided us with good and accurate information.

I particularly would like to express my appreciation to my staff director, Brian Benczkowski, on whom I have relied repeatedly through this process, for his good judgment and wise counsel, his integrity and experience as we have dealt with this difficult challenge. I would also note my chief counsel for nominations, Danielle Cutrona, who has also worked exceedingly hard, as well as my deputy staff director, Matt Miner.

I would like to acknowledge and thank the other hard-working and talented lawyers on my permanent staff who worked on this nomination, including William Smith, Ted Lehman, Bill Hall, Mark Patton, John Ellis, and Kimberly Kilpatrick.

I would also like to extend my appreciation to the talented lawyers who joined my staff as Special Counsels specifically to work on this nomination, including Ralph Johnson, Jason Tompkins, and Susanna Dokupil. And I would be remiss if I did not mention the efforts of our Law Clerks, two of whom dedicated their time while studying for the bar exam, including Amanda Lavis, Ed Liva, and Taylor-Lee Wickersham.

I would also like to acknowledge our dedicated support staff: Lauren Pastarnack, Sarah Thompson, Andrew Bennion, Allison Busbee, Kate Laborde, and Ivy Williams.

Finally, I cannot overstate the important work done by our press team. My Communications Director Stephen Boyd, Press Secretaries Sarah Haley and Stephen Miller, and Press Assistant Andrew Logan have worked tirelessly throughout this process.

All of these individuals shouldered the brunt of this enormous task, working late hours and through weekends and holidays. They deserve our recognition for their hard work, professionalism, and dedication to public service.

I would also like to thank the other talented lawyers on my staff who, among others I have just mentioned, handled the regular legislative business that came before the Judiciary Committee during this process: Joe Matal, Bradley Hayes, and Sam Ramer.

And let me express my gratitude to the Republican Leader and his staff, specifically John Abegg, Josh Holmes, and Webber Steinhoff; along with Republican Policy Committee Counsel Gregg Nunziata who provided invaluable assistance to my staff.

I'd also like to express my thanks to Chairman LEAHY for his work on this nomination. We didn't always agree on everything, but he was respectful of Republicans' rights during this process and he conducted a fair and thorough hearing. He would not have been able to do that without the help of his staff, including his Staff Director and Chief Counsel Bruce Cohen and his Chief Nominations Counsel Jeremy Paris.

Finally, I would like to thank the Judiciary Committee's Chief Clerk, Roslyne Turner and her assistant, Erin O'Neill.

Every one of these talented staff members contributed to this process, and their dedication and hard work helped us conduct a fair and thorough hearing. I extend my heartfelt thanks to each of them. We could not have fulfilled our Constitutional duty of Advice and Consent without them.

Mr. President, there are in the hearing nine letters in opposition to the nomination of Elena Kagan to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court from Gonzalo Vergara, Lt. Col., USAF (Ret); the Judicial Action Group; National Right to Life Committee; Military Families United; the Liberty Counsel; The Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention; the American Association of Christian Schools; the Center for Military Readiness; and the National Rifle Association of America.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD four letters from the National Right to Work Committee; the American Conservative Union; C. Everett Koop, former U.S. Surgeon General, and the Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission of the Southern Baptist Convention.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL RIGHT TO WORK COMMITTEE,
Springfield, VA, July 1, 2010.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR: On behalf of the over 2.6 million members of the National Right to Work Committee, I strongly urge you to vote against confirmation of Elena Kagan for a lifetime seat on the United States Supreme Court. Her record as an high-level White House advisor to President William Jefferson Clinton demonstrates that her views about the First-Amendment and statutory rights of American workers are far outside the judicial mainstream.

In 1976, in Abood v. Detroit Board of Education, a case in which National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation attorneys represented the plaintiff, public school teachers, the U.S. Supreme Court considered whether nonunion public employees can constitutionally be compelled as a condition of employment to subsidize their union monopoly bargaining agent's political activities. The Court, unanimously, held ''that a State cannot constitutionally compel public employees to contribute to union political activities which they oppose.''

The First-Amendment right of workers not to be forced to subsidize union politics, first recognized in Abood, has been reaffirmed by the Supreme Court in several subsequent cases brought to the Court for workers by National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation attorneys, cases such as Ellis v. Railway Clerks (1984), Teachers Local 1 v. Hudson (1986), Lehnert v. Ferris Faculty Ass'n (1991), and Davenport v. Washington Education Ass'n (2007).

The Court's Abood ruling relied on the principle underlying the Supreme Court's 1976 decision about the Federal Election Campaign Act in Buckley v. Valeo, that ''contributing to an organization for the purpose of spreading a political message is protected by the First Amendment.'' The Court has reiterated that principle repeatedly, and relied upon it again as recently as this year in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission.

However, in 1996, when she was Associate Counsel to President Clinton, Ms. Kagan rejected this long, unbroken line of Supreme Court precedent that protects the First-Amendment right of public employees—and of Americans generally—not to be compelled by government to subsidize political activities of private, voluntary associations.

In an e-mail message on October 31, 1996, to Paul J. Weinstein, Jr., Chief of Staff of the White House Domestic Policy Council, Ms. Kagan said (emphasis added):

It is unfortunately true that almost any meaningful campaign finance reform proposal raises constitutional issues. This is a result of the Supreme Court's view—which I believe to be mistaken in many cases—that money is speech and that attempts to limit the influence of money on our political system therefore raise First Amendment problems . . . I also think the Court should reexamine its premise that the freedom of speech guaranteed by the First Amendment entails a right to throw money at the political system.

In her Senate Judiciary Committee testimony on June 29, 2010, Ms. Kagan claimed in answer to a question from Senator Orrin Hatch that these were merely the Clinton Administration's, not her personal, views.

However, later, on October 31, 1996, Ms. Kagan was one of several White House staff members whose memorandum recommending how the White House should respond to questions about President Clinton's ''Campaign Finance Reform Announcement'' was transmitted to White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta. That memo from Ms. Kagan and others incorporated Ms. Kagan's argument that the First Amendment does not protect the right to spend money for political activities. In short, in 1996 Ms. Kagan both suggested and endorsed that crabbed view of the. First Amendment.

Thus, Ms. Kagan's testimony this week before the Senate Judiciary Committee clearly is disingenuous. It is reasonable to conclude from her record that, if confirmed, Ms. Kagan would be willing to overrule Abood's well-established protection of the constitutional right of workers not to be forced to subsidize union politics.

This conclusion is supported by other documents the Clinton Presidential Library recently produced for the Senate Judiciary Committee in preparation for its hearings on Ms. Kagan's Supreme Court nomination.

On November 14, 1996, Ms. Kagan sent a memorandum on White House stationery to then White House Counsel Jack Quinn and then Deputy White House Counsel Kathleen Wallman about a draft ''memo to the President on campaign finance.'' In her memo, Ms. Kagan said:

The memo does not address what seems to me the key issue in developing a strategy on campaign finance legislation: how to deal with Republican efforts to restrict labor union spending. I think the Republicans will insist on including in any campaign finance legislation a provision making it difficult for unions to use money from compulsory union dues in political campaigns. . . . We should start thinking now how we're going to deal with this Republican poison pill.

In 1988, of course, in Communications Workers v. Beck, yet another case in which National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation attorneys represented the plaintiff workers, the Supreme Court had already held that the National Labor Relations Act—like the First Amendment—prohibits unions from using compulsory union dues of objecting workers in political campaigns. Thus, any provision that would make ''it more difficult for unions to use money from compulsory union dues in political campaigns'' would simply protect a constitutional and statutory right of workers recognized by the Court in the Abood line of cases and in Beck.

Ms. Kagan nonetheless subsequently recommended that President Clinton oppose any legislation protecting the right of workers not to be forced to subsidize union politics, despite the First Amendment's guarantee of that basic worker freedom of speech and association.

On February 12, 1997, Kathleen Wallman, then Deputy Assistant to the President for Economic Policy, circulated an 11:30 a.m. draft memorandum for the President on possible policy announcements of labor issues that the Vice President could make at a meeting of the AFL–CIO's Executive Committee later that month. The draft indicates that Ms. Kagan, by then Deputy Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy, was writing two sections of the memo that were not included in the draft. One of those sections that Ms. Kagan ''agreed to draft'' concerned the Administration's ''[p]osition on Beck legislation aimed at limiting the use of union dues in political activity.''

Later that same day, Ms. Kagan e-mailed Ms. Wallman her recommendation about ''legislation aimed at limiting the use of union dues in political activity'' (italics added): John Hilley [Director of Legislative Affairs], Bruce Reed [Director of the Domestic Policy Council], and I all recommend that you state strong opposition to Beck legislation, no matter what it is attached to.''

In sum, as a high-level White House official Ms. Kagan both disagreed with the well-established legal principle that underlies the long line of Supreme Court decisions recognizing the constitutional right of workers not to be compelled to subsidize union political activities as a condition of employment and opposed any legislation designed to protect that fundamental right of free speech and free association. This puts her far outside the judicial mainstream and demonstrates a disdain for the rights of independent-minded American workers.

Consequently, on behalf of the National Right to Work Committee's over 2.6 million members, I strongly urge you to vote NO on confirmation of Ms. Kagan's nomination to the Supreme Court.

Respectfully,

MARK A. MIX.

DEAR SENATOR: On behalf of the American Conservative Union, I strongly urge you to vote ''NO'' on the confirmation of Elena Kagan to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Elena Kagan's entire career is more suited to that of a political activist than a legal scholar, as she has been described by President Obama and as she described herself in her testimony. Kagan began public life as a political operative for the U.S. Senate campaign of Elizabeth Holtzman of New York in 1980. The documents produced for the Judiciary Committee show that, as a member of the Clinton Administration's Justice Department, Kagan's primary role was to develop political strategy in dealing with the Congress on legal issues. A good example of this is when the issue of partial birth abortion came before the Senate during the Clinton administration. At this time Kagan proceeded to negotiate changes to a statement by the American Council of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) that said there were no serious medical reasons for conducting a partial birth abortion. Kagan's involvement made it more difficult for the Senate to pass a ban on partial birth abortion. This example clearly displays that Kagan is more of a political operative than a legal scholar.

Another serious impediment to Kagan's nomination is her deep involvement as the Obama Administration's Solicitor General on issues that will continue to come before the Supreme Court. This may mean that Kagan will or should have to recuse herself from key decisions of the court. As outlined in a letter from Republican members of the Committee on July 13 to Kagan, there is even a question as to whether recusal will be an issue when the constitutionality of the recently passed health care bill comes before the court.

Kagan has also shown herself willing to ignore the law for political purposes. As Dean of the Harvard Law School, Kagan banned military recruiters on campus in violation of the Solomon Act to satisfy campus activists. Her actions were voided by a unanimous 8–0 decision of the very court on which she has been nominated to serve.

Although through the mid-twentieth century, court appointments of politicians were sometimes made to satisfy political deals, such as the appointment of Earl Warren in the 1950s, in recent years judicial experience and legal background have been at the forefront of nominations. The nomination of Elena Kagan is more akin to President Lyndon Johnson's nomination of political crony Abe Fortas as Chief Justice, which had to be withdrawn.

It was President Obama, as a U.S. Senator, who changed the criteria for judges from minimum qualifications to judicial philosophy and more subjective criteria. The nomination of Elena Kagan is a blatant attempt to place on the court a political operative who will work as an advocate of Administration policies rather than look at rulings from an objective view of constitutionality. Please vote ''NO'' in the confirmation of Elena Kagan.

Sincerely,

LARRY HART,
Director of Government Relations, The American Conservative Union.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE:

For many years, before, during and after my service as surgeon general of the United States, I've been known for presenting my unvarnished opinion on medical matters, regardless of the views of political parties or outside influences. The time has come for me to do so again.

I was deeply disturbed to learn that Elena Kagan, the nominee for Supreme Court scheduled for a Senate committee vote next week, manipulated the medical policy statement on partial-birth abortion of a major medical organization, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) in January 1997.

The problem for me, as a physician, is that she was willing to replace a medical statement with a political statement that was not supported by any existing medical data. During the partial-birth abortion debate in the 1990s, medical evidence was of paramount importance.

Ms. Kagan's amendment to the ACOG Policy Statement—that partial-birth abortion ''may be the best or most appropriate procedure in a particular circumstance to save the life or preserve the health of a woman''—had no basis in published medical studies or data. No published medical data supported her amendment in 1997, and none supports it today.

Indeed, there was, and is, no reliable medical data that partial-birth abortion is safe or safer than alternative medical procedures. There are other medical options.

In my many decades of service as a medical doctor, I have never known of a case where partial-birth abortion was necessary in place of a more humane and ethical alternative. Not only have I never seen such a case, but I have never known of any physician who had to do a partial-birth abortion—nor have I ever met a physician who knew of anyone who had to perform one out of medical necessity. In fact, partial-birth abortion has risks of its own, and could injure a woman.

Medical science should not have been twisted in 1997 for political or legislative gains.

Ms. Kagan's political language, a direct result of the amendment she made to ACOG's Policy Statement, made its way into American jurisprudence and misled federal courts for the next decade.

She misrepresented not only the science but also misrepresented her role in front of your elected representatives in the United States Senate.

This is unethical, and it is disgraceful, especially for one who would be tasked with being a measured and fair-minded judge.

Americans United for Life Action has released a thorough and comprehensive report on this matter, a report that provides substantive evidence of Ms. Kagan's actions in this matter. I ask that Senators and the American people give this report their most serious consideration. I urge the Senate to reject the politization of medical science and vote no on the Kagan nomination.

Sincerely,

C. EVERETT KOOP, M.D., SC.D.,
Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, 1981–89.

THE ETHICS & RELIGIOUS LIBERTY COMMISSION OF THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION,
Washington, DC, July 20, 2010.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Hon. JEFF SESSIONS,
Ranking Member, Senate Judiciary Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEAHY AND RANKING MEMBER SESSIONS: On June 25, we sent you a letter expressing serious concerns about Elena Kagan's nomination as the next associate justice to the U.S. Supreme Court. As we stated, we have been alarmed about Kagan's lack of respect for the First Amendment's right to free speech, her admiration for extreme judicial activists, and her role in advancing pro-abortion policies. We also expressed our distress about Kagan's attempts, while dean of Harvard Law School, to bar military recruiters from campus because of her own personal views in opposition to the military's ''Don't Ask, Don't Tell'' policy. Unfortunately, these concerns remain.

During the Judiciary Committee's confirmation hearings, Kagan failed to satisfactorily clarify her actions and opinions. Many of her answers were confusing and unclear. She refused to respond to several key questions in an open and honest manner. She also avoided many issues altogether. Since Kagan has had no judicial experience and possesses limited experience as a practicing attorney, we were interested in learning about her judicial philosophy. However, we learned little about her beliefs and judicial views during the confirmation hearings. Rather than providing answers to our concerns, Kagan's responses have only raised more serious questions.

After careful consideration, we believe Elena Kagan is not a suitable nominee for the Supreme Court. She has evaded too many questions and her record is too obscure to confirm her to this lifetime appointment. Consequently, we urge you to vote against Kagan's confirmation to the Supreme Court.

Sincerely,

RICHARD D. LAND.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY and Senator SESSIONS, on conducting a dignified and respectful hearing on the Kagan nomination.

Let me just add that, in my view, the way Republicans on the Judiciary Committee have conducted themselves in the minority over the past few years underscores that the kind of hyperbole and hysteria that has too often accompanied the Supreme Court nominations of Republican Presidents is hardly an essential part of the process. The committee hearings gave Senators and the American people a valuable opportunity to focus our attention on a woman whom President Obama would like to see deciding cases on some of the most important and consequential issues we face as a country. Ms. Kagan will be ruling on some of the most important legal questions that arise during President Obama's administration and long after he leaves office. It was vitally important that we have an opportunity to question her on her views about the law. What we learned from the hearing and what we were unable to learn from it form an important part of the record on her nomination.

But this, of course, is just a part of Ms. Kagan's record. Senators have spent weeks examining Ms. Kagan's experience and background in light of the awesome responsibility that comes with a lifetime appointment on our Nation's highest Court. As I have said previously, my own judgment is that Ms. Kagan is not suited to assume a lifetime position on our Nation's highest Court. Now I would like to explain why in more detail.

As we know, Ms. Kagan does not have the judicial or private practice experience most modern-day Supreme Court Justices have had—far from it. This is relevant not because one has to have prior judicial experience in order to be a good Supreme Court Justice—that is not my view now, and it never has been—but the absence of judicial experience makes it all the more important that we look more closely at the kind of experience Ms. Kagan has, in fact, had. A review of Ms. Kagan's experience reveals a woman who has spent much or her adult life not steeped in the practice of law but in the art of politics.

When we look at her resume, we find a woman who has worked fervently to advance the goals of the Democratic Party and liberal causes, usually at the expense of those with whom she disagrees politically or ideologically. In college, she spent one summer working 14 hours a day for a liberal Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate from New York. When her candidate lost, Ms.

Kagan wrote that it was her hope that one day a ''more leftist left will once again come to the fore.''

In fairness, few of us would want everything we said or wrote as college students put up on a billboard. But the trajectory of Ms. Kagan's career and the records from her time as a political advisor in the Clinton White House suggest someone, as one news story put it, who, long after college and even at the highest peaks of political influence, was ''driven and opinionated, with a flair for political tactics. . . .''

What else do we find in Ms. Kagan's resume?

Well, 8 years after that first Senate race, she volunteered for the Dukakis Presidential campaign, working as an opposition researcher to defend the then-Governor of Massachusetts from attacks and to look for ways to attack the Republican opposition. I note her job as an opposition researcher because it is part of a pattern of partisan political activity and because Democrats themselves have strongly questioned the impartiality of Republicans who have held this type of job.

As a Supreme Court law clerk, Ms. Kagan often inserted her own personal views into her legal advice. In one case, for example, she was dismissive of a man's second amendment claim because it was something that, in her words, she did not find to be ''sympathetic.''

Later, as an aide to President Clinton, she did not serve as an attorney but as a policy advocate, seeking legal advice rather than giving it. It was in this role that she helped lead a task force on changing the Nation's campaign finance laws and gleefully noted when one specific proposal would disadvantage Republicans. She also went out of her way to deter lawyers at the Justice Department from officially noting their serious constitutional concerns with a campaign finance proposal because it might complicate the pursuit of the Clinton administration's political goals.

It was also at the Clinton White House that she suggested turning a routine literacy event at a Maryland school into a chance to score political points against—you guessed it—Republicans. And it was there that she went to extraordinary lengths to prevent the enactment of a ban on partial-birth abortion, a procedure the vast majority of Americans strongly oppose.

From the Clinton administration, she went on to academia. She had strongly held views and acted upon them there as well. As dean of Harvard Law School, she refused to give our military, at all times, the full and good access to which they are entitled under Federal law. Indeed, she was so driven by her own personal views on this issue that she took a position in a case before the Supreme Court that was so legally dubious that not a single Justice agreed with it.

From Harvard, President Obama—her friend and former colleague at the University of Chicago Law School—selected her to be his Solicitor General. I, and the vast majority of my Republican colleagues, voted against her nomination to that position, given her lack of litigation experience. Indeed, Ms. Kagan made her first oral argument in any court, for any purpose, just last year in the Citizens United case. Having been in the courtroom myself that day, I heard her argue to an astonished Supreme Court that the power of the Federal Government is so vast it can ban political speech with which it disagrees, such as political pamphlets, despite the clear commands of the first amendment to the contrary.

So when we look at Elena Kagan's background, what we find again and again is someone who has worked tirelessly to advance a political agenda or ideology, often at the expense of the law.

Let's look for a moment at her relationship to the current administration.

We know the President and Ms. Kagan are former colleagues and friends. We know that the President views her as an important and loyal member of his team and that he was particularly pleased with her handling of the Citizens United case. And we know the President is confident that Ms. Kagan shares his view that judges should be judged especially on their ability to empathize with some over others—in other words, that she embraces the so-called empathy standard whereby judges act on, to quote the President, ''their broader vision of what America should be,'' which may or may not be what the law says is required. All of which brings us to the question of whether Ms. Kagan is suited to sit on the Supreme Court.

We do not have a judicial or private practice record to go to, but from the record we do have—that of a passionate policy advocate, a zealous political operative, and a loyal member of the Obama administration—the President picked precisely—precisely—the kind of judge he said he would. But is this the end of the inquiry? The President won the election. Ms. Kagan is bright. She has a good humor. Does the Constitution suggest that we therefore must assent to her nomination? Is that what the Founders envisioned?

Well, the Federalist Papers say two things that are particularly relevant here.

First, let's look at Federalist 76, which gives examples of specific disqualifiers for confirmation. The common theme for these disqualifiers is someone who is nominated not because of their objective qualifications but because of a personal connection to the Executive—be it friendship, family relationship, or a belief that they will exhibit a bias. It says the Senate's power to disapprove a nominee ''would be an excellent check upon a spirit of favoritism in the President, and would tend greatly to prevent the appointment of unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity.'' That is Federalist 76.

Now let's look at Federalist 78, which talks about the role of the courts in our democracy and the proper philosophy for a judge. Here, Hamilton writes that courts may not ''substitute their own pleasure to the constitutional intentions of the legislature.'' He adds that their job must be to ''declare the sense of the law'' and that if, instead, they should exercise their ''WILL''—which he puts in all capital letters—''the consequence would be . . . the substitution of their pleasure to that of the legislative body.'' In other words, Hamilton was cautioning against judges so motivated by their own passions and sympathies that they would use their judicial power to implement, as President Obama puts it, ''their broader vision of'' what ought to be.

So while Hamilton, in Federalist 76, listed some of the reasons for disqualifying a nominee, this was clearly not an exhaustive list. Surely he did not lay out the critical qualification for a judge in Federalist 78 and then leave the Senate powerless to enforce it. Both papers must be read together, not in isolation, which brings us back to Ms. Kagan.

If you believe the role of a judge is to be an impartial arbiter, Ms. Kagan's background as a policy advocate and political lawyer—and oftentimes a very partisan one—cannot be ignored. Indeed, Members of both parties should appreciate the importance of confirming judges who are more interested in what the law says than in how the law can be used to advantage any one side.

As the chairman of the Judiciary Committee once put it:

> No one should vote for somebody that's going to be a political apparatchik for either the Democratic Party or the Republican Party.

If you believe the role of a judge is to be an impartial arbiter, Ms. Kagan's relationship to the President can't be ignored either. I think our friend, the senior Senator from Ohio, put his finger on what Federalist 76 was talking about in this regard. As he put it earlier this week:

> I would argue that General Kagan has been nominated based on her friendships and her personal attachments with President Obama and others at the White House, not based on objective qualities that would indicate she is qualified to be a Supreme Court Justice.

As for the empathy standard, well, empathy may be a very good quality in general, but in a court of law it is only good if you are lucky enough to be the guy the judge empathizes with. It is only good enough if you happen to share the judge's ''broader vision of what America ought to be,'' which is the exact opposite of what the author of Federalist 78 had in mind.

Let's say you are a pro-life group challenging a restriction on late-term abortion and you are appearing before a Justice Kagan. In light of the lengths she went to in order to arrive at her preferred result on the subject of partial-birth abortion, do you think you are going to get a fair shake?

Let's say you think the government is infringing upon your second amendment rights. Given that she dismissively said she is not sympathetic to this sort of challenge, do you think she is going to apply the law or her own broader vision of how America should be?

Let's say you are a conservative nonprofit group that wants to publish a pamphlet or show a movie before an election. In other words, let's say you are a group such as Citizens United. Given her record of partisan advocacy, how do you think you are going to fare before her in that case?

Ms. Kagan has never made a secret of her professional aspirations. She has cultivated all the right friendships along the way, including the President of the United States. This is all well and good but, in my view, it strains credulity to think that Ms. Kagan's strong political views will be more constrained by the Constitution once she reaches her goal than they have been up until now.

Some of Ms. Kagan's supporters would like us to focus on her personality. They say she has a knack for making friends and getting along well with different kinds of people. Once again, these are all fine qualities. No one has any doubt that Ms. Kagan is bright and personable and easy to get along with. But the Supreme Court is not a social club. If getting along in polite society were enough reason to put someone on the Supreme Court, then we wouldn't need a confirmation process at all.

The goal was not to determine whether we think someone is smart and easy going; it is whether someone can be expected to be a neutral and independent arbiter of the law rather than a rubberstamp for this administration or for any other.

Whether it is small claims court or the Supreme Court, Americans expect politics to end at the courtroom door. Nothing in Elena Kagan's record suggests that her politics will stop there.

Ms. Kagan's background as a political operative, her lengthy resume of zealous advocacy for political and ideological causes, often at the expense of the law and those whose views differ from her own, her attachment to the President and his political and ideological goals, including his belief in the extraconstitutional notion that judges should favor some over others, make her precisely the kind of nominee, in my view, the Founders were concerned about and that Senators should have reason to oppose.

For these reasons, I will vote against the nominee, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Republican leader and I recommend that Senators proceed to the Senate floor to cast their votes. We ask that Senators be seated when they cast their votes.

Decades before America's founding—when its direction was only roughly charted and its doctrines still in draft form—a lawyer from Massachusetts wrote that ours must be a nation of laws and not of men. That man, John Adams, knew that the rules and rights of a free land must withstand personal whims and political winds. It is a belief so basic Adams would later enshrine it in his State's constitution.

Today we will send to our highest Court another brilliant lawyer from Massachusetts, Elena Kagan, someone whose respect for the rule of law is matched only by her appreciation for those laws that concern the daily lives of the people they govern. The roots of General Kagan's respect for the rule of law are in her respect for our separation of powers. It is a reverence she developed during her service in all three branches of government, defending the first and second amendments, strengthening our national security, and protecting children's safety.

Wherever Elena Kagan has gone throughout her considerable career, she has succeeded. At Princeton and Oxford, at the law schools at Harvard and the University of Chicago and back to Harvard once again, in the private sector and in the highest levels of government, she has brought together people of every ideological stripe.

In recent weeks, we have again seen how effectively she impresses and unites those she meets. Look at the incredibly diverse array of people and organizations speaking in unison in favor of her nomination, including every Solicitor General, no matter the party, over the last quarter century. Now she is poised to join a Court whose power she respects as well as its limits. She understands that the laws are made only on this side of the street and only interpreted on the other side of the street.

Our Supreme Court promises equal justice for all who come before its bench. We must also fulfill the promise of greater equality among those who sit behind the bench.

Although the Founders did not want ours to be a government of men, for a long time men were the only ones running it. The most qualified women were turned away—turned away—one after another. Justice O'Connor graduated third in her law school class at Stanford, one of the premier law schools in this country, while others her age were just finishing college. The only job offer she got after graduating third in her class was a job as a legal secretary.

Justice Ginsburg graduated first in her law school class at Columbia, another premier law school, but not a single law firm would hire her either. She was denied a clerkship not by one but two Supreme Court Justices because, as they readily admitted, she was a woman.

It took nearly 200 years before the Court welcomed Sandra Day O'Connor as its first woman and more than a decade longer before Ruth Bader Ginsburg would join her as its second. A year ago today, Ginsburg was the only woman Justice, but when it opens this fall, three women—a full third of the bench—will preside together for the first time. That is progress. It is not yet completely equitable in a nation where women represent more than one-half the population, but it certainly is progress.

That Sotomayor and Kagan can join the Court in such relatively rapid succession is a tribute to the path their predecessors cleared.

Justice Ginsburg said last year that ''women belong in all places where decisions are being made.'' The Supreme Court is certainly one of those places. Elena Kagan is certainly one of those women.

As the Senate votes for this nominee on her merits, we are also voting for the most inclusive Court in its long history. It will be even more inclusive when we confirm more Justices who don't come from Ivy League schools.

In the oath General Kagan will soon take—the same oath sworn by 111 Justices before her—she will pledge to ''do equal right to the poor and to the rich.'' That is a commitment her predecessor, Justice John Paul Stevens, always fulfilled. We are grateful for Stevens' long record of service as a decorated war veteran, a successful lawyer, and an impartial judge and Justice who summoned common sense in his opinions. He was always passionate but always a gentleman.

Stevens once wrote: ''Corporations are not part of 'We, the People' by whom and for whom our Constitution was established.'' General Kagan believes that too. It is the principle she defended in her first case as the first female Solicitor General; that is, our country's chief lawyer, when she fought to stop foreign and domestic corporations from drowning out American voters' voices. She knew it would not be an easy case, but she stood for fairness, transparency, and citizens' rights because that is what a nation of laws demands.

General Kagan learned from another trailblazing Justice and her personal hero, Thurgood Marshall, that behind the law lived real people. She knows the Court's rulings can affect working families as intimately as they do wealthy interests.

The American people deserve a Justice who understands that one litigant's case is no more justified simply because he has more money than his opponent. Elena Kagan will be that Justice.

We need a voice on the Supreme Court who remembers and reveres the rights of individuals, not because people are always right and corporations are always wrong but because the argument of even the poorest citizen should be heard just as loudly, with the same patience and deliberation and impartiality as that of the richest firm.

Elena Kagan has demonstrated, time and time again, that she understands that.

In fact, listening is one of her strong suits. Justice Stevens often said that openly debated differences benefit democracy and he promoted what he called ''understanding before disagreeing.'' The lawyer and teacher the President has chosen to succeed Justice Stevens believes the same.

When General Kagan spoke last year to graduates of Harvard Law School, where she was beloved by the students and faculty alike, she reminded them: ''You only learn something when your ears are open, not when your mouth is open.'' That shows wisdom. It takes a smart person to recognize that we make progress and make the right decisions when we approach each person and each problem with an open mind. It takes a smarter one to say as much.

So I hope each Senator will approach this vote the way General Kagan will approach each question that comes before the Court: with deference to the facts, the evidence, and our shared national interests.

General Kagan is a public servant who has remained far above the political fray and will be the only Justice who comes from outside the judicial monastery. She is a student and teacher of the law who looks up from her books out into the real world. She knows that while we are a nation of laws and not of men, the former has a genuine and personal impact on the lives of the latter.

Because of her intellect and integrity; her reason, restraint, and respect for the rule of law; her unimpeachable character and unwavering fidelity to our Constitution, I am proud to cast my vote for Elena Kagan's confirmation to be a Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

We are going to wait until the hour of 3:30 arrives before we start to vote. Senator LEAHY, at that time, will have a request to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the nomination of Elena Kagan to be an Associate Justice on the Supreme Court of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Elena Kagan, of Massachusetts, to be an Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court?

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The nomination was confirmed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion to reconsider this vote is considered made and laid on the table. The President shall be notified of the Senate's action.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the Senate has concluded our consideration of the nomination of Elena Kagan and confirmed her as an Associate Justice on the U.S. Supreme Court. For the second time in 2 years, we have considered a nomination for a lifetime appointment to the Supreme Court, one of our most consequential responsibilities. I am proud that process we followed in considering this nomination in the Judiciary Committee and in the Senate has garnered praise from many Senators for its fairness and thoroughness.

We could not have given this nomination the attention it deserved without the help of dedicated staff. For months, the staff of the Judiciary Committee has worked long hours dutifully to obtain and review extensive amounts of documents and information and help Senators in our review. I wish to thank the following members of the majority staff in particular, Jeremy Paris, Erica Chabot, Kristine Lucius, Shanna Singh Hughey, Maggie Whitney, Hasan Ali, John Amaya, Sarah Hackett, Sarah Hasazi, Michael Gerhardt, Elise Burditt, Noah Bookbinder, Anya McMurray, Liz Aloi, Tara Magner, Kelsey Kobelt, Juan Valdivieso, Matt Virkstis, Curtis LeGeyt, Roslyne Turner, Erin O'Neill, Julia Gagne, Brian Hockin, Joseph Thomas, Elizabeth Saxe, Katharine McFarland, Miles Clark, Christine Paquin, David Zayas, Lydia Griggsby, Adrienne Wojciechowski, Dan Taylor, Patrick Sheahan, Matt Smith, Scott Wilson, Kiera Flynn, Rachel Pelham, Bree Bang-Jensen, Chuck Papirmeister, and Bruce Cohen. I also thank my staff for their hard work on this nomination, in particular, Edward Pagano, David Carle, Laura Trainor, and Kevin McDonald. I would also like to thank Stacy Rich from Senator MURRAY's staff who helped manage the floor.

I commend and thank the hard-working staffs of the other Democratic members of the Judiciary Committee for their tremendous contributions to this effort.

I also commend and thank Senator SESSIONS, the committee's ranking Republican, and his staff, in particular, Brian Benczkowski, Danielle Cutrona, Ted Lehman, and Lauren Pastarnack, for their hard work and professionalism.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 3454

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, it is obvious we are not going to be able to get to the Defense authorization bill this week. However, it is important we get to it as soon as possible after we return. In order to facilitate that, I ask unanimous consent that at a time to be determined by the majority leader, following consultation with the Republican leader, the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 414, S. 3454, national defense authorization.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCAIN. Reserving the right to object, and I do so with some reluctance, I remind my colleagues that last year we took up the consideration of the Defense authorization bill without warning. The distinguished chairman of the committee introduced a hate crimes bill which had no business on the Defense authorization bill, filled up the tree, and then, of course, we spent a great amount of time on hate crimes.

I have only been a member of this committee since 1987. I have never seen what the chairman of the committee did last year by bringing forth a totally irrelevant and very controversial issue and putting it on the Defense authorization bill. We spent weeks on that when we should have been spending time on defending this Nation. It was a betrayal of the men and women who are serving this country.

I am not going to allow us to move forward, and I will be discussing with my leaders and the 41 Members of this side of the aisle as to whether we are going to move forward with a bill that contains the don't ask, don't tell policy repeal before—before—a meaningful survey of the impact on battle effectiveness and morale of the men and women who are serving this Nation in uniform.

It is, again, the chairman of the committee and the majority leader and the other side moving forward with a social agenda on legislation that was intended to ensure this Nation's security.

Along with it, abortion now is going to be performed in military hospitals for the first time in a long time. There is going to be a transparency. The distinguished chairman and his staff, without informing me or anybody else, put in $1 billion worth of porkbarrel projects instead of the $1 billion the administration asked for us to aid Iraq as we are finally leaving.

It is a terrible piece of legislation, ramrodded through. My greatest concern, of course, is about repeal of don't ask, don't tell without any survey being done to find out the battle effectiveness and morale, which we were assured would take place before the repeal of don't ask, don't tell. It is purely a political promise on the part of the President of the United States and the Members on the other side of the aisle, and it is disgraceful to have it on this legislation without a survey being done about our battle effectiveness and the morale of the men and women in the military from whom I am hearing all the time.

Therefore, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, each of the items which the Senator from Arizona mentioned were voted on in committee. These are decisions that were made by the committee, and if we can get this bill to the floor, the decision will not be left up to the Armed Services Committee; it will be left up to the Senate. If anyone wishes to strike a provision that is in this bill—and the provisions which the Senator from Arizona talked about are all relevant provisions. It was a Senate Armed Services Committee bill which put into place don't ask, don't tell. The provision we have in there now which changes that policy makes it conditional upon that survey being completed and a certification from the military leaders that there is no negative impact on morale. So we have taken into consideration that survey.

The main point is that the place to debate these policies is on the floor of the Senate. The Senate will determine, if we can get this bill to the floor, whether we make that conditional change in the don't ask, don't tell policy or whether we do a number of other things, some of which I objected to in committee.

Some of the amendments of the Senator from Arizona that were adopted in committee I objected to and voted against. I am not going to deny the Senate the opportunity to take up a bill which is essential for the men and women in the military because I disagree with some provisions in that bill. I will then move to strike those provisions if I disagree that much, if we can get the bill to the floor. That is what the Senate debate is supposed to be about.

I am sorry there is an objection to this bill coming up. Obviously, we are going to try to get this bill up in September so we can debate the issues which the Senator from Arizona points to. They are legitimate issues for debate. We should debate them, but the only way we can debate them is if we get the bill to the floor.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I will respond again. Last year, the Senator from Michigan did not allow exactly what he is espousing now. He brought up hate crimes and filled the tree so that even if the Senator from Arizona wanted to have an amendment on it, I could not do it. The hate crimes bill had nothing to do with national defense. It had everything to do with the social agenda of the chairman of the committee.

What we have done is, we have eroded the confidence of Members on this side of the aisle as to what the agenda is going to be.

Perhaps the Senator from Michigan can tell me what hate crimes had to do with the defense of this Nation. It had everything to do with his social agenda. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I will be happy to tell the Senator from Arizona what hate crimes has to do with the defense of this country. Men and women who defend this country defend this country for a lot of reasons. One of them is we try to act against hate in this country. That is one of the values we stand for; that we try to defeat hate. That was debated last year. It was voted on last year. The vote maybe did not come out the way the Senator from Arizona wanted.

If we want to debate last year, that is OK. Let's bring the bill to the floor so we can debate it. But the objection now makes it much more difficult to bring a bill to the floor so we can debate the very issues the Senator from Arizona wants to debate.

We should debate the don't ask, don't tell decision we made in the committee. It was debated there; it should be debated on the Senate floor. By the way, it is a conditional change in the don't ask, don't tell policy. The policy was put in place by the Pentagon and by the Armed Services Committee and by the Senate. It is perfectly appropriate that it be considered as part of this bill because it was our committee which put that policy in effect to begin with.

The debate is appropriate. But how do we have that debate unless we can get it to the floor of the Senate? How can we debate the amendments of the Senator from Arizona? There were two or three that he offered in committee that I objected to. How do we get to those debates unless we can get the bill to the floor?

I cannot get a guarantee from everybody that I will prevail in my effort to strike the amendments of the Senator from Arizona. I cannot get that guarantee in advance, nor should the Senator from Arizona seek a guarantee in advance as to what will be in the final bill or will not be in the final bill.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I can guarantee that we would not fill up the tree the way the Senator from Michigan did last year and would probably do again this year in violation of what I believe is what the Senate should be all about—amending on different legislative proposals that are before the Senate instead of filling up the tree and not allowing amending of the bill, despite what the chairman says had something to do with national defense.

Hate crimes? Really? Then that means that everything in the social agenda of the Senator from Michigan has to do with the men and women who are serving in the military. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, it was the Senate which made a decision last year on hate crimes. It was not the Senator from Michigan, although I very much favored what the Senate of the United States did. But it was the Senate of the United States which acted in a way which the Senator from Arizona does not agree to—I don't know how many amendments we adopted last year, but it was a large number of amendments which were adopted. A large number of amendments were defeated. I don't know if that tree was filled up, as the Senator puts it, last year or not, or when it was filled up. But we had a huge number of amendments that were considered on this bill.

It is the intention, I hope and believe, of the leader, and it is surely my intention this year, that we have an amendment process which is traditional for the Defense authorization bill; that it be a very open process for amendments on this bill. That is my intention. It is the intention of the majority leader as well. I want to assure my friend from Arizona that will be the case again this year.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. SHAHEEN). The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I won't repeat myself over and over. The fact is, last year, the Senator from Michigan brought up hate crimes, filled up the tree, and we spent almost all of the first 2 weeks debating hate crimes, which had nothing to do with the purpose and mission of the Senate Armed Services Committee. It is the first time I have ever seen such a thing happen. I am not going to let it happen again if I have anything to say about it.

As I have said to the Senator from Michigan, I will talk to our leadership and our caucus and all the Members over on this side of the aisle, and when we get back a decision will be made as to whether we will object to the motion to proceed. In the meantime, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Is the Senator from Arizona suggesting we did not have a vote on hate crimes last year?

Mr. MCCAIN. The Senator from Arizona is saying that the Senator from Michigan filled up the tree; did he not? Was the tree filled up? You are the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LEVIN. It is not my recollection, but that is not my question. My question is whether we had a vote on hate crimes.

Mr. MCCAIN. My response is did you prevent the tree from being filled?

Mr. LEVIN. We did not prevent a vote on hate crimes last year. That is my answer.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

HEALTHY, HUNGER-FREE KIDS ACT OF 2010

Mrs. LINCOLN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 363, S. 3307, the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3307) to reauthorize child nutrition programs, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Madam President, there is a Lincoln-Chambliss substitute amendment at the desk, and I ask that the amendment be considered and agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD, without intervening action or debate, and that the pay-go statement from Senator CONRAD be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4589) was agreed to.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Text of amendments.'')

The bill (S. 3307), as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, this is the Statement of Budgetary Effects of PAYGO Legislation for S. 3307, as amended.

Total Budgetary Effects of S. 3307 for the 5-year Statutory PAYGO Scorecard: net increase in the deficit of $814 million.

Total Budgetary Effects of S. 3307 for the 10-year Statutory PAYGO Scorecard: net increase in the deficit of $2.189 billion.

Also submitted for the RECORD as part of this statement is a table prepared by the Congressional Budget Office, which provides additional information on the budgetary effects of this Act.

The table is as follows:

[1] Savings in Title IV that would result from a change to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program that was previously designated as emergency.

[2] If H.R. 1586 were to clear the Congress prior to this bill, the net deficit impact would change because some of the savings in Title IV of the child nutrition legislation that would result from a change to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program are also included in H.R. 1586. Total savings would decline from $14.4 billion to about $2.5 billion over the 2010–2020 period. The net decrease in the deficit would be $1.7 billion over the 2010–2015 period and $287 million over the 2010–2020 period, if H.R. 1586 were to clear the Congress prior to this bill.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Madam President, for the past 2 weeks, I have come to the floor of the Senate to speak about the critical importance of passing child nutrition legislation before we adjourn for the August recess, and I want to say a very special thanks to all of my colleagues for their hard work on this initiative, their willingness to rise above partisan politics, regional differences, or anything else, to seize this opportunity. I am so pleased today to say we have seized this opportunity to make a historic investment in our children.

I started out my discussion here on the floor last week by saying all we would need to get this bill done was a mere 8 hours—a simple 8 hours to pass a bill that would improve the lives of millions of children across this country. With the assistance of my colleagues, we were able to accomplish this goal in much less time than that, and I want to thank my colleagues again for sending such a strong bipartisan message of support for child nutrition.

Before I go any further, I wish first to thank my good friend and the ranking member of our Agriculture Committee, Senator CHAMBLISS, for his tremendous assistance in crafting this legislation and bringing us to this vote today. He is a wonderful partner in the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, and he has been a true partner in this effort. I greatly appreciate all his work on this bill. We could not have gotten to this point, nor could we have passed this, without him. So I am grateful to him. I also add my thanks to his staff—Martha Scott Poindexter and Kate Coler. And, of course, all my thanks go out to my staff on the Agriculture Committee—Robert Holifield, Brian Baenig, Dan Christenson, Hillary Caron, Courtney Rowe, and Julie Anna Potts. They are the absolute best.

I also need to thank the administration—the President and First Lady, as well as Secretary Vilsack—for their incredible leadership on childhood nutrition. Their hands-on involvement, particularly in the last few days, has ensured that we will be able to accomplish this goal. I know this is an issue they all care very deeply and passionately about, and that is reflected in the many shared priorities between the Congress and the administration that are included in this bill.

I must say the presence of the First Lady, her compassion, her diligence, her tenacity in wanting to see something happen on behalf of the children of this country that was productive, was progressive, and that moved us forward past the benchmarks we had been at since 1973 have been amazing, and I am certainly grateful to her for all she has done.

With the passage of this bill, I am pleased we are bringing some fresh bipartisan air into the Senate. It goes to show that when you are willing to roll up your sleeves, work across the aisle in a collective and bipartisan manner, you truly do see results. That is what the American people elected us to do. That is what they expect and that is what this bill represents.

Most importantly, this bill is about our children, and about doing what is right for them and for their families. It is about connecting more children with the child nutrition programs which their families depend upon to make ends meet. It is about making sure they get the nutritious meals they deserve so they can succeed in the classroom and learn better. It is about making sure our schools and classrooms, our childcare settings are all places that promote good health and wellness, because we know that children who are healthier learn better and they also grow up to be healthier adults, contributing more and more to our communities and our industries and businesses and families.

They say an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and that is certainly true with this bill, which makes huge leaps forward in the fight against childhood obesity and chronic disease. We know that better nutrition and more physical activity are at the heart of tackling the obesity epidemic in this country, and this bill promotes both. It provides the largest increase in the child nutrition programs since their inception—nearly 10 times the amount we provided in the last authorization. It includes the first real increase in the reimbursement rate for the National School Lunch Program in almost 40 years. Madam President, 40 years. It is amazing to me—I believe I may have been 10 years old at the time—to see that finally, after 40 years, we are making the kind of investment in our reimbursement for school nutrition programs that we should. In exchange for that extra cash, children will receive healthier school meals. That is the deal, and it is a good deal. It is a good deal for us as a Congress and those who are stewards of the taxpayers' dollars, and it is good for our children too.

It also includes an historic agreement between schools, parents, public health and nutrition advocates, and the leaders in the food and beverage industry to establish national school nutrition standards throughout the school campus, not just in the lunchroom. This provision complements the commonsense steps we have already taken in my home State of Arkansas to ensure that our school environments are as healthy as possible for our children. With passage of this bill, we will be bringing some of that Arkansas wisdom to the rest of our country, and I am very proud of the hard work that has gone into our schools in Arkansas as well as our fight against childhood obesity. We are so incredibly proud of the steps we have taken and the successes we have already seen.

The bill also takes tremendous steps forward in the fight against childhood hunger in Arkansas and all across our country. It reduces the redtape that serves as a barrier to accessing child nutrition programs and will connect over 100,000 additional children per year with free school meals. In this day and age—and particularly in this economy—that is so critical for working families. It improves the way we feed hungry children during the out-of-school time. Because of this bill, an additional 29 million meals per year will be served through afterschool programs so children don't have to go to bed hungry, they don't have to leave school hungry, they don't have to go home hungry.

I know there are many who wish to have seen us do more. I too would have liked to have gone further and made even bigger investments. But in this budget environment, with record deficits, we have been able to produce a bill that is fully paid for and will not add one dime to the deficit. It is the fiscally responsible and right thing to do by our children. At a time when families are scrimping and saving to make their own budgets work, we simply must pass this bill so their children can live longer, healthier, and more productive lives. And we will. We have.

Today, in this Chamber, we have taken a major step forward. We have made a strong commitment to our children and to improving the health of the next generation of Americans. With the passage of this bill we are ushering in a new era that will feed the minds and the bodies and the souls of millions of children across this country. I look forward to continuing to work with my colleagues to see this legislation signed into law as well as making sure we are implementing this as quickly as we can, as we know that schoolchildren will be starting back to school here in the next couple of weeks. We must work hard to see this legislation signed into law so we can make an investment in our children—our greatest blessings, our greatest resource—that will last them a lifetime.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I am very pleased that the Senate has passed the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010. I am supportive of the final product before us to reauthorize these important child nutrition programs.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry had three goals in mind as we drafted the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010: expand access to existing programs to better reach children in need, improve the nutritional quality of meals, and simplify program rules to improve operations. I am extremely pleased that all three of these goals are met with this legislation.

The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 makes a significant investment of over $3 billion to improve the nutritional quality of school meals. The performance-based increase to the reimbursement rate should entice more schools to meet higher standards faster than an across-the-board increase.

This legislation also gives USDA the authority to regulate all foods sold on school campuses, far beyond the existing authority to regulate only meals served through the National School Lunch Program. I have been impressed with industry efforts to work with schools to create consistent voluntary guidelines to reduce caloric intake of food and beverages sold on school campuses. I urge the Secretary of Agriculture to look closely at the success of existing voluntary agreements and use them as a model for future regulations.

The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010 also provides greater access to nutrition programs for low-income children across the country. By expanding afterschool meals, promoting direct certification, and expanding community eligibility for universal meal service, this legislation will ensure that more children who need nutrition assistance will be able to participate in the programs.

I would like to thank all the members of the Senate Agriculture Committee for their efforts and support of this legislation, as well as thank chairman LINCOLN for her leadership throughout the process.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, today the Senate has passed legislation that will make a historic investment in our children by approving the first increase in real terms of the reimbursement rate for school lunches in 40 years.

Now 10,000 children a year will have new access to free school meals. Throughout the country, there are people working hard to make sure these kids have a least one healthy meal each day. In my State, one of the people who makes that happen is Betty Brain of the Blazers Boys and Girls Club in Portland. She is known as Chef Betty and every day she cooks meals for more than 200 underserved kids, dishing up healthy foods with fresh ingredients to keep them healthy and strong.

Chef Betty is not just a cook. She is an inspiration to the kids who come to the Boys and Girls Club every day. These kids are family to her, and she makes it her personal responsibility to make sure they get not only a good meal but also a kind word and a helping hand.

I can guarantee that there is a Chef Betty in every Boys and Girls Club in America—someone who understands how important it is to help a child in whatever way she can.

For all the Chef Bettys in America, we need to reauthorize these programs so they can keep those kids from being forced into eating not just any food but good food made by good people.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate just passed the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act. This legislation makes historic investments in the health and nutrition of our Nation's children. In addition to increasing funding for a number of programs, without adding a penny to the deficit, it requires a long overdue update of the nutrition standards for the food in our schools. I commend the chairwoman of the Agriculture Committee, Senator LINCOLN, and its ranking member, Senator CHAMBLISS, and their staffs for their hard work on this important legislation. I also thank our leadership for working to ensure this bill passed.

I am particularly glad the bill includes provisions based on legislation, the Student Breakfast and Education Improvement Act, Senator KOHL and I introduced last year to improve school breakfast programs. The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act will help schools invest in their breakfast programs. Many of my colleagues know that school breakfast programs face hurdles that reduce participation. This bill will help schools start new breakfast programs, as well as expand or improve existing programs.

As I mentioned, this legislation also includes a provision to update school nutrition standards based on legislation introduced for the past several Congresses by Senator HARKIN that I have cosponsored. I am pleased that these standards will be updated and expanded to foods sold outside of the cafeteria.

I have long advocated programs and policies that ensure schools have access to fresh, local food. I worked with other Senators to ensure the 2008 farm bill removed barriers to local procurement and preference for our country's schools. Along those lines, I am glad that the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act provides funding for farm-to-school programs which help connect farmers to schools and provide children with a new perspective on nutrition and food. Many Americans are now generations removed from the farm, and these programs can provide valuable knowledge of where food comes from and how it is grown. They can also provide farmers with a new marketing opportunity and allow them to collaborate directly with local schools.

The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act also reauthorizes a number of important programs outside of schools, including the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children, WIC, the Child and Adult Care Food Program, afterschool feeding programs and Summer Meals. These programs are all critical to ensuring that our children do not go hungry outside of the school environment as well.

I am also glad that the bill includes provisions to streamline our nutrition programs, such as direct certification, categorical eligibility, and community eligibility. It also includes funding for pilot programs to improve methods of providing healthy food to our children, which will allow local schools to try programs that work for them and will likely generate creative new ideas to national problems.

I commend Senators LINCOLN and CHAMBLISS for ensuring the full cost of this legislation is offset. Though I might have preferred different offsets, I am pleased that we are able to improve our child nutrition programs without passing the cost onto the very children these programs will help.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today the Senate has taken a lengthy stride toward improving the health of America's children and addressing two of the greatest threats to their wellbeing and security: hunger and obesity. By passing the bipartisan Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act to reauthorize Federal child nutrition programs, we will be making a historic investment in our children's future and in the Nation's future. With others in this body, I have pressed for action on this bill before the Senate completed its business this week. I am pleased that the Senate and our leaders made this bill the priority that our children deserve it to be.

I have heard from countless Vermont parents, teachers, school administrators, food service workers, community leaders, farmers and others about the importance of making sure every child in America has access to nutritious meals at school. They all want what's best for our children, and they all know how crucial it is that we have passed this legislation today.

In March of this year, more than 4 months ago, the Senate Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry Committee unanimously approved this bipartisan bill, upon which our Chairman and Ranking Member have worked so hard. Today's action has come just in time, as the September 30 deadline to reauthorize these programs is quickly approaching. Without action today, I have been concerned that we would have been forced into another long-term extension of these vital programs, sidelining the tremendous improvements that the Agriculture Committee has been working on for months.

I am grateful for Chairman LINCOLN and Ranking Member CHAMBLISS for all that they have done to ensure that we could pass this bipartisan bill. Our First Lady also deserves credit for the impetus that has helped propel our efforts forward. She has vigorously and ably taken up the cause of solving the problem of childhood obesity within a generation, so that kids born today can reach adulthood at healthy weights. The groundbreaking legislation that the Senate has passed today will bring fundamental changes to our schools and will improve the food options available to our children.

When the first national school lunch program was created in 1946, children in this country were plagued with malnutrition from not having enough of the proper nutrients for health, growth and development. At the time it was considered a matter of national security to safeguard the health and well being of our nation's children. That was a far different era in the health of our Nation, but the importance of these programs and the children they help has not diminished. Unfortunately, the health statistics for children in this country today are troubling; in fact one in five children in this country is considered obese.

Thankfully this bill will help to put those children on the road to healthier, more productive and longer lives. The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act establishes for the first time, ever, national school nutrition standards to ensure our children have healthier options available throughout the entire school day. With this legislation, parents across the country will know that the snacks and foods offered to their children at school, even the vending machine and a la carte lunch line options, are based on national standards established by USDA to ensure healthier diets.

I believe that our school cafeterias should be treated as an extension of the classroom and as an opportunity for students to learn about nutrition, well-balanced meals, and where their food comes from. I thank the Chairman for including funding for the Farm to School program, which is a proven, common-sense, community-driven approach to improve the health and wellbeing of children while supporting our local farmers and economy. My goal in authoring the Farm to School program was the powerful logic of this ''two-fer'' an opportunity to get money into the hands of American farmers for their locally grown products, while supporting local economies and teaching kids about nutritious foods and where they come from. Vermont is leading the country in this effort, and I hope other States will be able to learn from our experiences as they incorporate more local and healthy foods into their cafeterias.

It is a sad reality that hunger is a regular part of life for far too many children in America today, and for many children, the meals they get at school are sometimes the only things they will eat all day. In Vermont one in ten people live in food insecurity, and many of these are our most vulnerable, our children. In addition to increasing reimbursement rates and streamlining the nutrition programs to make them easier for families to utilize, this legislation also improves summer and afterschool meal programs.

I again thank the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Agriculture Committee for doing a remarkable job with this legislation. Their hard work and dedication, and that of their staff, have resulted in bill that makes a historic investment in the future of this country.

Mr. BENNET. Madam President, I am thrilled that today the Senate has passed what must be a top Senate priority every day: the health and well being of our children.

The Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act reauthorizes child nutrition programs before they expire on September 30. This bipartisan, completely paid-for legislation will make the most historic investment in child nutrition programs since their inception. And I am proud to support this bill.

At a time when childhood obesity rates are skyrocketing and child poverty is increasing, this bill couldn't be more important. For kids to be successful in the classroom they must be well nourished—kids who eat right, learn better.

More than 390,000 Colorado kids and millions more nationwide—rely on school meals, and this bill will make sure that those meals—and other foods kids have access to while at school—are nutritious and healthy. And that is just one example of the important investments this bill makes.

Coloradans know the value of healthy living—perhaps that is one reason why my State is the fittest State in the Union—but we too are struggling with rapidly increasing obesity rates, particularly among children.

Colorado is tackling the concurrent problems of child hunger and childhood obesity head-on with a State-led effort of ending childhood hunger by 2015 and a roadmap to do it. Simultaneously

Colorado has school districts and communities that are leading the Nation in piloting innovative models that put healthy eating and active living at the top of their priority list.

I am thrilled that the bill we passed today builds on and supports the work that my State is already doing, while challenging Colorado and other States to go even further, to eliminate childhood hunger, to tackle childhood obesity, to emphasize wellness, and to build a healthy foundation for all kids.

Chairman LINCOLN, Ranking Member CHAMBLISS, thank you for your leadership and diligent work on this historic bill. Passage of the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act is an example of the Senate doing exactly what it should—delivering for our kids.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. LEMIEUX. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

FREE TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. LEMIEUX. Madam President, I rise to speak this afternoon on the floor of the Senate about an issue that is very critically important to the people of this country, and that is our relationship with Latin America.

This weekend, the new President of Colombia will be sworn in—Juan Manuel Santos—and he follows a great leader in Colombia, President Uribe, who, in my mind, is the Abraham Lincoln of that country. He kept that country unified at a very difficult time, while it was wracked with what was then a civil war. Eight years ago, President Uribe brought the country back together. He was able to fight the FARC, keep the country from falling into a narcoterrorist state, and has brought stability to Colombia. They are perhaps our best friend in Latin America.

Colombia is a vibrant, beautiful country, full of good people, with a democracy that now works. This last election is a tribute to President Uribe. On behalf of my State of Florida and the Senate, I rise to congratulate President Uribe and the great work he did on behalf of Colombia, as well as to welcome in President Santos.

Our relationship with Colombia is very important. They are a key trading partner to the United States and a key trading partner to my home State of Florida. When you are walking around and perhaps seeing some fresh flowers—there are some here in this Congress—but wherever you are in this country, there is a very good chance those flowers came from Colombia. Seventy percent of the flowers we have in this country that are purchased by local florists come from Colombia, and they come through Miami on their way to your local florists.

We have a great trading relationship. That is why, in 2006, we entered into a free trade agreement with Colombia. Unfortunately, we have not ratified that agreement. Along with the free trade agreements for Panama and South Korea, they have languished without approval. The President spoke about this in his State of the Union Address—the importance of passing these free trade agreements—yet we still don't have those agreements before us here in the Congress. For one reason or another, they have yet to be ratified.

There is a lot of talk in this Chamber about the creation of jobs, and that that should be our focus. Well, passing these free trade agreements would get Americans back to work. Right now those countries basically have free trade with us but we don't have free trade with them. Ninety percent of all Colombian products sold in the United States enter our country duty free. Yet American goods face tariffs of up to 35 percent when entering Colombia.

According to the Latin America Trade Coalition, in 2008, more than 6,000 small- and medium-sized American businesses exported to Colombia. If we were to pass the Colombia Free Trade Agreement, more than 80 percent of U.S. consumer and manufacturing products and most U.S. farm goods would immediately enter Colombia duty free.

Implementing this treaty could increase our gross domestic product by $2.5 billion. I say to my friends in the majority, if they want to create jobs in this country—and that certainly should be what we are focused most on in this most troubling economy—let's pass these free-trade agreements. Let's do it when we get back from the break; let's do it in September. We should have already done it.

When I met with President Uribe in January of this year and talked to him about a variety of issues, he looked at me painfully and said: Why is our friend, the United States of America, not ratifying this agreement?

Our greatest friend in the region, a bright spot of democracy, a President who has fought the narcoterrorists, stabilized this country as a bulwark against Venezuela and all the threats that posed to our region, and we can't ratify this agreement? It is a shame. It is something we need to do. We need to do it as well as ratify the agreement with Panama, as well as the one with South Korea.

REMEMBERING REAR ADMIRAL LEROY COLLINS, JR.

Mr. LEMIEUX. Madam President, I rise today to give special recognition to the life and work of a great Floridian who was tragically killed in Florida unexpectedly just a few weeks ago. RADM LeRoy Collins, Jr., is the son of our former Governor, Governor LeRoy Collins. He was an admiral in the Navy. He was the head of the Veterans Affairs Division in the State of Florida where I had the opportunity to personally work with him when I served the Governor. A native of Tallahassee, FL, he received his commission from the Naval Academy in June 1956 and began a long career in the Navy.

His first tour was aboard the amphibious transport USS Calvert, followed by the Submarine Officer's Basic Course in Groton, CT, and he later served abroad the U.S. submarine Chivo.

Through hard work, dedication and sacrifice, LeRoy earned the rank of rear admiral.

Admiral Collins served as an analyst for naval Intelligence in Washington, DC, and as a ballistic missile weapons officer aboard the nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarine USS James Madison. After a brief tour working missile test operations at the Naval Ordnance Training Unit, in Cape Canaveral, he transferred to the Navy Reserve in 1966.

While a naval reservist, Admiral Collins served as commanding officer of the coastal minesweeper USS Thrush and later as commander of various Navy Reserve submarine units. During his time, he was the Navy's liaison to the Florida National Guard and also commanding officer of the Navy liaison unit at U.S. Readiness Command, headquartered at MacDill Air Force Base, FL.

The admiral served as Commander, Naval Reserve Readiness Command, Region 8 and later as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Reserve) for Logistics, Pentagon, until his retirement from the Navy Reserve as a two-star rear admiral in October, 1990.

Admiral Collins also had a career in business. He spent time with the Florida Power & Light Company and IBM. He was the founding president of Financial Transaction Systems, Inc., and president of Telecredit Service Center, Inc. In addition, he served as president of Dynamic Realty of Tampa, Inc., was chairman of Gateway Holdings, Inc., and served as president of the Armed Forces Financial Network.

He was a great Floridian. The Collins family is perhaps Florida's first family. Governor Collins is perhaps our greatest Governor. Admiral Collins upheld the tradition of his family that traces it roots all the way back to the founding of Florida. The property upon which our Governor's Mansion sits was given by the Collins family. Their home, The Grove, sits right next door.

Admiral Collins was in many ways everything you would expect of a great Floridian. He was genteel, he was kind, he was smart. Public service mattered to him.

On behalf of the people of Florida, on behalf of the Senate, I extend our condolences to his wife Jane and their family on the passing of a truly great Floridian. He and they are in our thoughts and prayers.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

PIGFORD SETTLEMENT

Mrs. HAGAN. Madam President, I rise to associate myself with the remarks of the chair of the Agriculture Committee, Senator LINCOLN, as well as Senators GRASSLEY and LANDRIEU, concerning the importance of providing funding to pay the still pending claims of the Black farmers who were discriminated against by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This case has North Carolina roots. Timothy Pigford, a Black farmer, was the focal point for this class action lawsuit. He grew up in Columbus County and had a farm in Bladen County, NC. He was first denied a Federal loan to buy a farm in 1976.

Mr. Pigford and others filed a lawsuit in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia against the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Pigford v. Glickman, alleging that the USDA maintained a pattern and practice of discrimination against Black farmers.

In 1999, the government settled the Pigford v. Glickman case, finding that thousands of African-American farmers were in fact discriminated against when applying for benefits that would help their farms.

Under the terms of the settlement, eligible farmers initially were required to submit completed claims packages by October 12, 1999. This deadline was subsequently extended by the court to September 15, 2000. Approximately 61,000 petitions were filed after the original October 1999 deadline but before the September 2000 late filing deadline. Of these 61,000 petitions, only around 2,500 were permitted to proceed to a determination on the merits. Over 25,000 additional petitions were filed after the September 2000 late filing deadline and before the May 2008 enactment of the 2008 farm bill.

It is quite clear that inadequate notice was provided to those who had viable claims of discrimination against the USDA. Because of this inadequate notice, many farmers were denied participation in the Pigford claims resolution process as late filers.

The 2008 farm bill provided $100 million to pay the outstanding claims of the so-called late filers. However, the amount of money that was set aside in the farm bill for the settlement is totally inadequate to satisfy the damages that more than 4,000 African-American farmers in North Carolina, and a total of 75,000 nationwide, could be eligible to receive.

Last February, Agricultural Secretary Tom Vilsack reached a settlement agreement with the farmers who filed claims after the deadline set by the court who were originally denied a determination of their Pigford claims. This settlement agreement provides, once and for all, sufficient awards for farmers who were the victims of discrimination at the hands of their own government, the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Federal Government has failed to live up to its obligations to our Black farmers, including more than 4,000 in my State of North Carolina.

Today the Senate has the opportunity to live up to its obligations and right this wrong. I believe it is imperative that we address this inequity for Black farmers across the country, including those in North Carolina, and I hope we are able to reach an agreement to resolve this issue today.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. BURRIS. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BURRIS. Madam President, even though he has left the floor, I would like to thank the distinguished Senator from Wyoming for permitting me to proceed. I want to comment on what the distinguished Senator from North Carolina spoke on because that is my topic as well. We hope to be able to bring up this issue on the Senate floor and get some justice for the Black farmers.

I come to the floor today to speak about justice and the Department of Agriculture. Let me go back a few years.

Though civil rights legislation in the 1960s was supposed to have outlawed racial discrimination, at least on the Federal level, a 1982 report issued by the Civil Rights Commission stated that the USDA was ''a catalyst in the decline of the black farmer.''

That year, African-American farmers received only 1 percent of all farm ownership loans, only 2.5 percent of all farm-operating loans, and only 1 percent of all soil and water conservation loans. That year, too, the Reagan administration closed the USDA's Civil Rights Office—the very arm that investigated discrimination complaints.

Adding insult to injury, when African-American and other minority farmers filed complaints, the USDA did little to address them. In 1983, President Reagan pushed through budget cuts that eliminated the USDA Office of Civil Rights—and officials admitted they ''simply threw discrimination complaints in the trash without ever responding to or investigating them'' until 1996, when President Clinton ordered the office re-opened.

Even when there were legal findings of discrimination at USDA, they often went unpaid—and those that did get paid, the money often came too late, since the farm had already been foreclosed.

In 1984 and 1985, the USDA lent $1.3 billion to farmers nationwide to buy land. Of the almost 16,000 farmers who received those funds, only 209 were Black. By 1992, in North Carolina, the number of Black farms had fallen to 2,498, a 64 percent drop since 1978.

In Illinois, there are many similar stories. As a child growing up on the family farm in west central Illinois, Lloyd Johnson remembers cropland extending for miles around, all of it owned by African-Americans like himself. ''For a stretch of four miles, it was black-owned land,'' the 66-year-old farmer recalls. ''Now there's mighty few.''

Today, Johnson's farm in Alton, IL, is one of just 59 run by African Americans across the State, down from 123 in 1997, according to revised figures from a 2002 census. As farming has become a big business, it has become one of the least diverse businesses around.

It was not always. In 1920, Illinois had 892 Black farmers, and African Americans owned 14 percent of the Nation's farmland. Now they hold less than 1 percent. The same pressure to consolidate that has reduced the ranks of farmers for the past century is making any turnaround unlikely, demographers say. The number of Black farmers in Illinois, currently less than one in 1,000, appears destined to eventually hit zero. Probably there will be none very shortly.

In 1990, The Minority Farmers Rights Act, created to address the injustices noted at USDA, and passed in this body by former Senator Wyche Fowler of Georgia, who sat on the Agriculture Committee, authorized $10 million a year in technical assistance to minority farmers.

The new program was only able to garner $2 to $3 million a year under President Reagan, and was in danger of being de-funded altogether. As working capital and technical assistance was systematically denied to Black farmers across America, most rural African-American farmers did not have access to essential legal assistance and fell prey to land speculators and unscrupulous lawyers.

In 1994, the Land Loss Prevention Project filed a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit on behalf of Black farmers, turning key information over to Congress to investigate discriminatory practices by the USDA. Again, USDA released a report analyzing data from 1990 to 1995, and found that ''minorities received less than their fair share of USDA money for crop payments, disaster payments, and loans.''

In 1997, a USDA Civil Rights Team found the agency's system for handling civil rights complaints was still in shambles: the agency disorganized, the process for handling complaints about program benefits ''a failure,'' and the process for handling employment discrimination claims was ''untimely and unresponsive.''

A follow-up report by the GAO in 1999 found that 44 percent of program discrimination cases, and 64 percent of employment discrimination cases, had been backlogged for over a year.

It was against this backdrop in 1997, that a group of Black farmers led by Tim Pigford of North Carolina filed a class action lawsuit against the USDA. In all, 22,000 farmers were granted access to the lawsuit, and in 1999, the government admitted wrongdoing and agreed to a $2.3 billion settlement—the largest civil rights settlement in history.

However, African-American farmers had misgivings with the process of the Pigford settlement. Many farmers who joined the lawsuit were also denied payment. By one estimate, 9 out of 10 farmers who sought restitution under Pigford were denied. The Bush Department of Justice spent 56,000 office hours and 12 million contesting farmers' claims; and many farmers feel their cases were dismissed on technicalities.

I would like to remember what Congresswoman Eva Clayton, an African-American Democrat from North Carolina, said at a March 1999 Black farmers rally at the Federal Courthouse in Washington, DC: ''There is reason to despair . . . There are several reasons why the number of black farmers is declining so rapidly. But the one that has been documented time and time again, is the discriminatory environment present in the Department of Agriculture . . . the very agency established to accommodate the special needs of farmers . . . Once land is lost, it is very difficult to recover . . . We stand here today in despair over this history. Yet, we also stand here today in hope that justice will prevail, and that the record will be set right for those farmers who have been wronged . . . ''

Shortly after coming into office, President Obama's Secretary of Agriculture, Tom Vilsack, signaled a change in direction at USDA. The Secretary has declared ''A New Civil Rights Era at USDA,'' and stepped-up handling of civil rights claims in the agency.

This year, Secretary Vilsack responded to concerns over handling of the original Pigford case, agreeing to a historic second payment in April, known as Pigford II, that would expand the settlement to farmers who were excluded from the first case.

We are here today to help put an end to this long-standing injustice. Pigford II is before us and will help make right this history of discrimination by one of our own government agencies.

I want to thank Leader REID for his unceasing efforts in bringing the Pigford II and Cobell settlements before us, and I thank others who came before me and those of us here today, on both sides of the aisle, who have advanced the force of justice on this issue.

I urge my colleagues to consider carefully this important question today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

SECOND OPINION

Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, I come to the floor today, as I have week after week since the health care bill was signed into law, with a doctor's second opinion of the health care law. I do this as someone who has practiced medicine, taking care of the families in Wyoming as an orthopedic surgeon for 25 years; as someone who has been the medical director of the Wyoming Health Fairs, to give people low-cost blood screenings so they can have early detection of medical problems to help them find problems early. And early treatment following early detection is something that always works to keep down the cost of their medical care.

I wish to talk about the fact that we have seen again this week a new development, and the development this week is that the American people have spoken. They have done it in the Show Me State of Missouri. The Show Me State has shown Washington that they have rejected the President's takeover of the health care system in this country.

Like so many Americans, voters in Missouri are sick and tired of Washington forcing things upon them, telling them what they need to do, and now telling them what they need to buy—specifically in terms of the Federal mandate that people have health insurance, that they must go out and buy that or face penalties, taxes, fines related to the fact that they make a choice to not buy health insurance.

I think the voters are also tired of being ignored by Washington. That is why 71 percent of the voters in Missouri on Tuesday—71 percent, over 7 out of 10—who went to the polls rejected the demand by Washington that they be forced to buy a product, to buy health insurance. It is part of the law. It is a mandate. They have to have health insurance, have to buy it.

So how did the White House respond to this rejection of what has now been forced down the throats of the American voters? Well, Robert Gibbs, the White House Press Secretary, was questioned on this during the White House press conference, and he was asked what it means that voters in Missouri would vote against this Federal mandate, and Gibbs said ''nothing.'' It means nothing. Well, to the voters of Missouri whom I have talked to, this is an insult. It does mean something. They expressed their opinion, and the White House said: Your opinion means nothing to us.

So instead of trying to address the concerns and fix the new law, right now the White House seems to be more focused on a slick public relations program. They have a whole campaign going.

It is interesting because the people of Missouri are not the only ones who are opposed to this law. Later this year, voters in a couple of other States will be voting as well on the impact and the mandate.

A new Rasmussen poll out just this past week says that 57 percent of Americans—I am talking about likely voters; that is how they polled this, likely voters—said this recently passed health care law, in their opinion, is bad for our country. So 57 percent of Americans feel the law that was forced down the throats of the American people, with the American people screaming: Do not pass this law—even today, 57 percent of Americans, as they learn more and more about what is in the law, believe it is bad for the country. That is actually the highest level of pessimism about this law since the law was passed in March.

Support for the law continues to erode. So what happens? Well, the White House comes out with a public relations campaign, and once again they are setting their sights on America's seniors. They did it with a very expensive glossy mailer that went out to the seniors on Medicare. It looked to me like a propaganda piece—very misleading. Once again, they are focused on the seniors. Why? Well, because the seniors are those who are most opposed to the new health care law, the one that takes $500 billion away from Medicare, not to save Medicare, the health care program for our seniors, but to start a whole new government program for someone else.

So this week, what happened? At the end of last week, the new director of Medicare and Medicaid, Dr. Berwick—and we have talked about him on the Senate floor. He is the one who had a recess appointment, the one who is in love with the British health care system, the new director who had the recess appointment who has never come to the Senate to share his answers with the American people. The American people have been denied the right to hear from him. He did not have time to share his views with the American people, but he did have time to introduce a slick new ad campaign to try to sell the new law to Medicare patients.

The health care law is out there now being promoted in a television ad for which the American taxpayer is going to have to pay the bill. The American taxpayers are going to pay the bill, and the ad stars Andy Griffith. During this ad—and we know Andy Griffith from Andy of Mayberry, the television show, and in later years, Matlock. He is used as the spokesman now to our seniors, telling seniors a number of things, making a number of promises. Let's go through them.

One is, he says seniors will have their ''guaranteed benefits.'' Well, only in Mayberry does a $500 billion cut equal better care for American seniors. Even the administration's own actuaries and own specialists in Medicare took a look at this, and they don't even agree with the commercials. They say the cuts are unlikely to be sustainable over time. They say that one in six hospitals and doctors offices related to Medicare providers are going to become unprofitable within 10 years, and many may be forced to close. They say the new law is going to jeopardize patient access to medical care.

Well, then Mr. Griffith says: ''Well, more good things are coming.'' Well, what kinds of things for our seniors on Medicare? When you take a look at how the cuts are out there—there are cuts for home health, which is a lifeline for seniors who try to stay out of a nursing home. There are cuts to nursing homes for Medicare. There are cuts in physical therapy. There are cuts to hospice, where many people spend the last days of their lives. There are cuts across the board. I do not know how that can be related to ''more good things are coming.''

The President's Medicare experts tell us that benefits aren't going to remain the same because things would happen with Medicare Advantage. One out of four people on Medicare is signed up for Medicare Advantage, and the reason they do it is because there are advantages of being on Medicare Advantage in terms of preventive care, in terms of coordinated care. There are good reasons people sign up for that. Yet there are going to be cuts there.

In the commercial, they also say the law will lower prescription costs, but the Congressional Budget Office estimates that is not true, that the cost of prescriptions will continue to go up.

There are people who look at ads, political ads, different kinds of ads. There is an organization called factcheck.org, and what they did is they said this commercial uses—their words are ''weasel words,'' they say, to avoid telling the truth. Well, that is the fundamental problem. As much as most Americans love to hear from Andy Griffith, we would prefer to hear the truth from President Obama. Instead of spending hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars of taxpayer money—taxpayer money—on a misleading ad, the President should put this money toward the $500 billion that has been cut from our seniors on Medicare.

The White House continues to believe the American people do not understand what is in the health care law, and they say that is the reason it is unpopular. They say that if more people understood the law, well, then it would be more popular. But week after week, something else comes out, another broken promise that makes people realize this is not good for them. It is not good for them as patients; it is not good for the providers, the nurses and doctors who take care of the patients; and it is not good for the payers, the people who are paying for their health care, the taxpayers of America. Across the board, people realize, as they learn more and more about what is in this law, that it is not good for them.

When I go to senior centers and visit with seniors, I say: How many of you believe it is going cost you more for our health care? Every hand goes up.

Then I say: How many of you believe the quality of your care is going to go down? Every hand goes up.

You see the same thing if you go to a Kiwanis Club or a Lions Club or a Rotary Club, civic organizations, whomever you visit. Do you think the cost of your care is going to go up? Every hand goes up. Do you think the quality of your care is going to go down? The hands go up again. That is not what the American people want—paying more and getting less.

Well, I think the American people are really getting a good understanding of what is in this bill, and the people of Missouri have clearly reflected that Tuesday in the voting booth.

Earlier this week, I joined Senator COBURN, the other physician in the Senate—there are only two physicians who serve in this body—and other Members of the Senate in sending a letter to Secretary Sebelius, the Secretary of Health and Human Services. What we requested is that the Department stop running this ad, reimburse the U.S. Treasury for any taxpayer money spent on the ad, and explain which one of the accounts in Health and Human Services paid for this advertisement.

Take a look at this. We as a nation are $13 trillion in debt, and the White House's ongoing propaganda campaign should not be funded by American taxpayers. And that is why, week after week, every week since this bill became law, I have come to the floor to give my second opinion about the health care law and to say that it should be repealed and replaced—replaced with something that is patient centered, not government centered, not insurance company centered, but patient centered. Allow people to buy insurance across State lines. That will help bring down the cost and will help more people to be insured. Give people who buy their own health insurance the opportunity to have the same tax breaks the big companies get. Give people who buy their own health insurance, and others, opportunities through nutrition and diet and exercise and taking responsibility for their own health care. Let them reap the benefits of that. Then, of course, we need to deal with lawsuit abuse and the expense of all of the unnecessary tests, the defensive medicine doctors all across the country will tell you they end up practicing.

Those are the things we need to do—and opportunities for small businesses to join together to bring down the cost of their care. With the individual mandate that is out there and the business mandate, we are seeing more businesses saying: You know, I am not going to want to provide health insurance under this new law. I will just pay the penalty and go on. That is going to make it harder for people.

Here we are with a huge national debt, high unemployment, and a health care law that, in my opinion, would best serve the country if it was repealed and replaced. That is why I come to the floor again today, the last day the Senate is in session, as Senators are heading out around the country to visit with those in their communities. I am hoping the American people continue to speak out and tell their elected representatives it is time to repeal and replace this health care law.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EMERGENCY BORDER SECURITY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2010

Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, I am going to ask unanimous consent for a proposal on the border. First, I will speak for a minute and then ask consent. I know my colleague from Arizona will then speak and offer some amendments to it.

Today, I join my cosponsors—Senators REID, INOUYE, MURRAY, FEINSTEIN, BINGAMAN, MCCASKILL, CASEY, UDALL of Colorado, BEGICH, and BURRIS—to try to make our borders as secure as possible. We are asking unanimous consent to pass a smart and tough $600 million emergency border security appropriations package that will provide immediate relief to the border.

Here is what our border security package will do: It will provide over $250 million to hire 1,500 new agents to permanently patrol our southern border and ports of entry.

It will also create a strike force that will be deployed in different areas of the southwest border, depending on where the need is greatest at any particular moment.

It will provide funds to deploy unmanned drones to fly along our southern border and provide our patrol officers on the ground with real time information on unlawful border crossings. I believe there are seven working now. They have been very successful, and they should be expanded quickly and immediately.

It will provide funds to improve communications capabilities between Federal border enforcement and State and local officers along the border.

It will provide funds to construct forward operating bases for the Border Patrol to use that are actually located on the border instead of being hundreds of miles away.

It will provide funds for Immigration and Customs Enforcement to conduct investigations of drug runners, money launderers, and human traffickers along our border.

It will provide over $200 million to increase the number of ATF, DEA, and FBI agents on our border because the focus on drug dealing and crime on our border is very important and has to be coordinated with immigration enforcement and bolster the number of prosecutors and court resources along our border so wrongdoers can be immediately brought to justice.

The best part of this border package is it is fully paid for and will not increase the deficit by a single penny. The emergency border funds will be paid for by assessing fees on foreign companies known as chop shops that outsource good, high-paying American technology jobs to lower wage, temporary immigrant workers from other countries. These are companies such as Infosys. But it will not affect the high-tech companies such as Intel or Microsoft that play by the rules and recruit workers in America.

This border package will, therefore, accomplish two important goals. It will make our border far more secure extremely quickly, and it will level the playing field for American companies and American workers to compete against these foreign companies known in the industry as using ''outsourcing visas.''

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 5875, which is at the desk; that the Schumer substitute amendment, which is the text of S. 3721, a bill making emergency supplemental appropriations for border security for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2010, be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read three times and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, reserving the right to object, I ask unanimous consent to engage in a short colloquy with my colleague from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, my understanding, I say to my colleague from New York, is this provides for 1,000 new Border Patrol agents; is that correct?

Mr. SCHUMER. Yes; 1,000 Border Patrol and 500 ICE and DEA.

Mr. MCCAIN. One-hundred ICE, $39 million for Customs and Border Protection, 250 new Customs and Border Patrol agents you mentioned, communications equipment, money to deploy forward operating bases. I wish to go over it again with my colleague.

Mr. SCHUMER. So far, exactly right.

Mr. MCCAIN. A Federal law enforcement training center, additional funding for the Department of Justice.

Anyway, the reason I mention this is because I think these are significant. It comes to a total of about $600 million; is that correct?

Mr. SCHUMER. Yes.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank my colleague. I think this is significant legislation. I ask the Senator if he would amend his request to include the adoption of three amendments. Those amendments are Nos. 4590, 4591, and 4592. They are: $200 million for Operation Streamline, which is a program that charges those individuals who have crossed the border illegally with a petty crime or misdemeanor with jail time. This has proved to be a great deterrent for repeat crossers; $68 million additional for the Customs inspectors and the other third would be $20 million for the Law Enforcement Support Center which helps the Federal Government, States, and localities identify those individuals who are here illegally and also determines their status regarding eligibility.

If I may mention to my colleague, I am not complaining about these provisions. I would like to point out that Operation Streamline on the border has been a very effective tool as disincentives to repeat crossers. I hope that either in this legislation the Senator from New York would consider it and, of course, we need more Customs inspectors.

The Law Enforcement Support Center is to identify individuals because right now they are overtaxed, as we know, with the number of illegals, how to identify them and to determine their status.

These three amendments I would obviously pay for out of the stimulus package.

My question to my colleague from New York, I understand he is paying for them—maybe he can elaborate—for these provisions by increasing fees or taxes on companies that issue or need H–1B visas and those companies that have less than 50 percent of their employees as American citizens; is that correct?

Mr. SCHUMER. That is basically correct, yes.

Mr. MCCAIN. Would the Senator describe that.

Mr. SCHUMER. The bottom line is this. I like the H–1B program, and I think it does a lot of good for a lot of American companies. In fact, in the immigration proposal I made, along with Senator REID and Senator MENENDEZ, as well as the outline with Senator GRAHAM, we expand H–1B in a variety of ways.

There is a part of H–1B that is abused, and it is by companies that are not American companies or even companies that are making something. Rather, they are companies that take foreign folks, bring them here, and then they stay here for a few years, learn their expertise, and go back. We think we should increase the fees when they do that.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank my colleague. Again, I ask if the Senator from New York would amend his request to include the adoption of those three Kyl-McCain amendments.

Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, first, I appreciate the spirit in which the Senator from Arizona has talked about the proposal. Let me try to be in the same spirit. I always said I believe in comprehensive immigration reform. I know my colleague from Arizona has focused on this issue for at least as long as I have. I was involved in the original legislation back in the late eighties with a great deal of care, a great deal of concern, and a great deal of focus.

I hope, even though I cannot accept these amendments, that maybe we could come together on something that we could bring back in September because I do believe we have to secure the border. Even in the comprehensive proposal that we made, we said we have to secure the border and do other things as well. It is my belief that securing the border alone will not solve our immigration problems; that until we have comprehensive reform, particularly in making sure employers do not hire illegal immigrants—which they now do, even though they do not know they are illegal immigrants because documents are so easily forged, that we have to do comprehensive. But we should do the border. To say we have to do comprehensive does not gainsay that we have to work on the border and work on it quickly and soon.

My problems with the amendments are as follows: First and foremost, taking funds from the stimulus is something I could not support. The reason is very simple. In my view—and it may be different than my colleague's—the stimulus creates jobs. I do not want to tell my constituents in Buffalo that they may be laid off or not have the opportunity for a job to work on a road, to be employed as a sheriff or firefighter or teacher because there are less stimulus dollars. I do not believe in robbing Peter to pay Paul.

I prefer our source, which is from these companies which are not, as I say—they are companies whose whole purpose is to bring people in on H–1B and the vast majority of them from other countries who go back to the other countries. That is a better funding source.

On the third amendment, I do believe we have that one, the $21 million for the center. I believe that is in our bill, the Law Enforcement Support Center. I believe that is in our proposal.

As for the second amendment, which is probably the one where we have a substantive disagreement, Operation Streamline is, first, expensive. If you are going to immediately incarcerate everyone who is apprehended at the border, you pay for their medicine, you pay for their health care, you pay for their food. It is over $100 a day. DHS has been using a different program. When they find someone crossing the border illegally, they bring them to the Mexican interior. Secretary Napolitano has shown some good documentation that works, and it is a lot cheaper.

Until proven otherwise, I think we ought to continue that program and maybe expand that program based on the agreement we have that there should be more people on the border so there are more apprehensions.

What we learned in a different area—asylum—is that building detention centers for all those who are caught creates problems.

In New York, we have a large number of asylees—and I support asylum in many justified cases—and it has proven to be very expensive. It has proven to be cumbersome, and oftentimes you don't have the supply of space to keep up with the demand.

So I would respectfully oppose the three amendments and urge that the original proposal be supported.

I yield to my colleague.

Mr. MCCAIN. I think my colleague may have been referring, when we are talking about the law enforcement support center provision that says U.S. Immigration Customs Enforcement salaries and expenses, maybe that is the area that he is referring to that falls under——

Mr. SCHUMER. I believe so, yes.

Mr. MCCAIN. The stimulus money. I would remind my colleague that just this morning he voted to use $1.5 billion in stimulus funds for the DOE Loan Guarantee Program. But that is a subject of a different discussion.

Let me just say again about Operation Streamline that I would invite my colleague from New York to come and see one of these facilities and talk to our people down at the border. One of the problems, as you know, is we have had this catch and release, or even catch and take to another part of the United States and put them across the border. So we seem to have these repeat crossers. The experience that we have had, and the people down there will tell you about, is keeping these people incarcerated for a period of time—and it isn't just everybody who comes across, it is somebody who has committed a petty crime, a misdemeanor, et cetera—we have found those individuals do not return or are much less likely to do so.

So I say to the Senator from New York, there is no fence money in here, and we would have liked to have seen that. We need to complete and reinforce the fence. We want 3,000 officers down on the border, but the bill has 1,200, which is certainly a major step forward. And there is 1,000 Border Patrol. We think we need as many as 3,000, as I mentioned.

But I think this $600 million is important. I think it is going to a lot of the right purposes. We will fight some more on these three additional amendments I am talking about. While I appreciate the addition of UAVs, we need more surveillance capability on the border and, obviously, in my view, we need to finish the fences. But this is a step forward, so I would ask unanimous consent on behalf of myself and Senator KYL to be added as cosponsors. This will move forward our 10-point plan we have put forward to get our border secured.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator, and I am glad we were able to—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Goodwin). Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from New York?

Mr. SESSIONS. Reserving the right to object, I think we are a little out of sync.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. I yield to the Senator for a few thoughts.

Mr. SESSIONS. If the Senator from New York wishes, he can proceed to the UC, which I will support, and then I would like to have a few moments to make some comments. That would be fine.

Mr. SCHUMER. I have been told they need to do some conferring in our cloakroom, so the Senator may speak and I will hold off for a minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I appreciate Senator SCHUMER's legislation, and I also would support it. It is clearly a step in the right direction, and it is one of the things we need to do.

I guess as we leave this Congress to go home and get ready to campaign, many of my colleagues may be able to say they did something that was helpful in eliminating illegal immigration—something other than suing the State of Arizona, where the Department of Justice is trying to block Arizona from participating effectively in reducing the amount of illegal immigration.

On June 11, the National Immigration and Customs Enforcement Council, acting on behalf of approximately 7,000 ICE officers and employees—Immigration and Custom Enforcement—cast a unanimous vote of ''no confidence'' in Mr. John Morton, the Director, saying that he is more interested in politics than in in enforcing our immigration laws. So I am concerned about that.

Also, Senator MCCAIN was correct to say that we voted for 700 miles of double-layer fencing, and even appropriated money for its construction. Only 400 miles have been completed and of that, only about 40 miles are double layer. I am not aware that any other construction is ongoing. Why aren't we completing that? It multiplies dramatically the capability of an agent to be effective on a long border if there are barriers there. So I am not happy about our not completing that. It is very much a failure. This Congress committed to the American people more than one time to build that fence and we still have not done it.

This is typical of why the American people are not happy with us; why our approval rating is getting close to single digits. You can't get much lower than it is. After much debate, we agreed to build a 700-mile fence, yet we end up getting 400 and saying that is great.

Then we have this administration, immediately after taking office causing a big stir by investigating its own ICE agents. ICE agents raided a business in Washington State which was employing a whole bunch of illegal workers and do you know what Ms. Napolitano, the Secretary of Homeland Security says? She says: We are going to get to the bottom of it.

Did she mean we are going to get to the bottom of the people who were illegally working and the company who was illegally hiring them? No. She wanted to get to the bottom of what it was this agent was doing trying to enforce the law.

She sent a signal throughout the entire Federal law enforcement community. What was that signal? Don't raid businesses. That is exactly what that did.

Operation Streamline does work. It absolutely works. CNN had a guy on; he was caught within hours, Senator MCCAIN. They took him down to the border and walked him to the middle of the bridge and let him go back, and he just came back the next day. So this Operation Streamline is really a dramatic improvement where it is in effect.

The 287(g) program ought to be expanded, which calls on and provides a mechanism for great partnership with local people. Instead, Secretary Napolitano narrowed the program and when the State of Arizona tries to help DHS, the Obama Administration say: No, that is not a good idea. We are going to sue you.

So, in my view, this bill is a good step. I salute my colleague from New York. I think we have some potential to work in the right direction. But there is a lot more to be done, and what is lacking is a firm commitment from this administration and this Congress to end the massive illegality at our border. It is within our grasp to do so. A lot of people think it is not possible—it is possible. We have done it on certain sectors of the border. We could complete that, and then we could begin to focus on what to do about the people who have been here for many years and how to handle that. But until we focus on ending the illegality, we can't get anywhere.

So I will be thankful for what we have. Senator MCCAIN would like to add 3,000 more agents, but 1,200 is a step in the right direction. But a number of other things, if done effectively, with the will to reduce the illegality, will work. It is not impossible.

The thing about Operation Streamline, and the reason it saves money instead of costing money, is that when it is utilized, the number of people entering illegally goes down because they know they are not just going to be taken back to the border the next day and released to then reenter. They actually get a misdemeanor conviction and maybe some sort of probation, and then they are released and are much, much, much less likely to come back because it would be a more serious offense the second time.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, we are waiting to see if there are other Members on our side who would like to come and speak, so I would like to either yield time to the Senator from Rhode Island, who has been waiting on another subject, and then come back to this, or suggest the absence of a quorum, whichever would be OK with my colleague.

Mr. President, I temporarily yield the floor to my colleague from Rhode Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Rhode Island.

CLIMATE CHANGE

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I intend to speak for a few minutes on climate change and the need for a new energy strategy for this country.

I will just note that if any of my colleagues intend to seek the floor to conclude the business Senator SCHUMER and Senator MCCAIN were engaged in, they can just signal me and I will yield the floor to allow them to finish that business.

Mr. President, we are now at the end of this work period, and we will shortly be going back to our home States for our home work during the August recess from Washington. We are doing so without having done anything about our dependence on fossil fuels, the carbon pollution that we subsidize going into our atmosphere, the undisputed science of what is happening in our atmosphere as a result of that, and the consequences that are beginning to pile up on our planet as a result of our negligence in addressing this pressing issue.

It is easy when you are in Washington to think that this is the center of the universe and that the little fights and quarrels that happen here and the politics of this town are what is most important. In this Chamber, which is very often a hotbed of those politics, I think that problem is particularly severe. There are political situations where, if we don't get it resolved, then it just keeps going along and there is no real harm done. But nature doesn't give a darn about our politics. Nature doesn't give a hoot about our campaign contributions. Nature doesn't care about what motivates delay. Nature doesn't care whether you are lying or telling the truth. Nature just goes on about her business, driven by chemistry, biology, physics—the basic elemental forces of nature.

We are getting ourselves into a situation where by ignoring those forces we are beginning to imperil ourselves and future generations.

It is astonishingly irresponsible to be in the predicament we are in right now, with what is fair to describe as a looming global emergency that we can't get anything done on.

The big oil companies, the big coal companies, the big energy companies are able to drop into this particular Chamber their delay, their desire to have nothing happen on this subject, and that trumps the interests of all the people of the United States, all the people of the planet, their children and grandchildren, off into our future.

I want to read into the RECORD a few things that have come out in the press in the last few weeks. Here is USA Today, in the middle of last month:

> The world is hotter than ever. March, April, May and June set records, making 2010 the warmest year worldwide since record-keeping began in 1880. . . .

That is not some fringe group reporting this. That is the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration of the Government of the United States of America.

In my home State, back in Rhode Island, ''July was more than 4 degrees above normal,'' quoting from the Providence Journal on August 2, ''and the second hottest month on record for Providence; 4.2 degrees higher than normal.''

Here is a newsclip about what effect these temperatures are having on our oceans:

> The rising temperatures have been particularly hard on oceans, which have absorbed more than 90 percent of the heat trapped by greenhouse gases over the past 50 years.

This was another NOAA report.

> Oceans are taking in increasingly more carbon. The report's analysis of global ocean uptake of carbon dioxide estimates that the seas stored 33 percent more anthropogenic [man made] carbon in 2008 than they did 14 years earlier. Oceans' absorbsion of CO_2 has caused rising acidity that is damaging the ability of shellfish, crustaceans, corals and plankton to build shells and skeletons.

You might ask, who cares about shellfish, crustaceans, corals, and plankton? Shellfish keep a lot of American fishermen busy and occupied and productive, and feed an awful lot of families. Ditto crustaceans—the Rhode Island lobster in particular. Corals are the nurseries of our tropic seas. When they die, it has a pronounced effect throughout the oceanic food chain. And phytoplankton—all plankton—are the base of the oceanic food chain. When you have a collapse in the phytoplankton, you have a potential collapse of the entire oceanic food chain.

There have been massive die-offs in the historic record of the ocean and we are trending toward having another one, with an ocean that is more acidic now than it has been in 8,000 centuries. We are getting to the point where the small animals that form the base of the ocean food chain are becoming soluble in the water that is their environment.

Lobsters in particular—again from the Providence Journal of July 29:

> Meanwhile, the water off our coast has been unusually warm. Lobsters like cold water and in the colder waters east of Cape Cod, the heartland of the fishery, the crustaceans seem unaffected. No moratorium has been recommended there. The lobstermen explain a decline in the local stocks by saying there has been a general migration toward cooler waters.

So the warming of our waters is having a pronounced effect on Rhode Island businesses, on Rhode Island lobstermen. I was out the other day with Rhode Island lobstermen, hauling in pots, seeing what was down there, and the fishery has not been wiped out, but it is suffering, it is under pressure, and it relates to our warming planet and to climate change.

It is a global situation. According to the Wall Street Journal, there are 400 oxygen-depleted dead zones identified by scientists in our oceans—oxygen-depleted dead zones in our oceans, 400 of them, covering an area of nearly 100,000 square miles of dead ocean because there is not enough oxygen in it to support life, as though it is on some alien planet.

Now a very recent study, July 29, reported:

> Researchers at Canada's Dalhousie University say the global population of phytoplankton—

Again, the basis of the oceanic food chain—> has fallen about 40 percent since 1950. That translates to an annual drop of about 1 percent of the average plankton population between 1899 and 2008. The scientists believe that rising sea surface temperatures are to blame.

There is another side to this story and, frankly, most of it is phony baloney science. It is bought-and-paid-for mercenary science. It is not the real deal. It masquerades as the real deal, it is designed to fool the public, and it is designed to prevent us from taking action. Regrettably, for a while it is working.

Here is what Paul Krugman wrote the other day, looking at the variety of evidence that supports the need for us to do something about that for the sake of our planet, our children, and our grandchildren.

> Nor is this evidence tainted by scientific misbehavior. You probably heard about the accusations leveled against climate researchers—allegations of fabricated data, the supposedly damning e-mail messages of ''Climategate,'' and so on. What you may not have heard, because it has received much less publicity, is that every one of these supposed scandals was eventually unmasked as a fraud concocted by opponents of climate action, then bought into by many in the news media.

This should be a win-win. This is an issue that is important to us as humans trying to live on this planet as dramatic changes begin to take place in our atmosphere and ecosystems. This should be a win for us economically as green jobs grow, as we compete with China and India, as we stop losing the race to China and India for this next economy, as we stop sending money overseas to people who do not care for us much, who fund our enemies, and who drain hundreds of millions of dollars a year out of our economy.

It should be a win on national security, protecting us from those circumstances. It should be a win across the board. But the special interests will not let go, will not step into the future. They know they control enough votes in this place to make this not happen.

I promise my colleagues this is a day that the future will look back at and look at this Senate, and this will be our day of infamy. This will be the day when all of the evidence was before us, we had every chance in the world to do what was right, we in fact knew what was right, and we allowed lies and phony science, concocted evidence and the big money from big oil, from big coal, from the big polluters, to steer us away from our duty.

I hope when we come back in September we will take this back up, that we will take it up seriously. It is my strong belief that if we go at this with real diligence as a Senate—if we have the White House with us and behind us and fighting for us, if we have the environmental groups out there in the field doing their work, pushing this issue, and if we have the hundreds of thousands of Americans who work in green energy industries and who are green energy investors and who are going to grow into this green energy economy out there explaining the true economic value, and if we have our national security apparatus making the point as to how important this is, as all the national intelligence estimates have already said—we can push this over the top. Not the first time, because the lies and the money will trump the first time. But if we do it a second and a third and fourth time and force this issue, I think we can bring it home. I hope we will at least try. Some battles are worth the fight even if you are not sure you can win.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the Senator is recognized.

CHILD NUTRITION

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for yielding me a few minutes to go in front of him even though he was here before me.

I want to say a couple of words in support of the child nutrition bill. I know the Senator from Pennsylvania also wants to speak about that, the child nutrition bill that was passed by unanimous consent here in the Senate this afternoon.

I thank Chairman LINCOLN, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, for her tireless efforts to bring this bill to fruition. She has been a great advocate, a great champion of child nutrition and making the changes necessary to get better food for our kids in schools.

I also thank Senator CHAMBLISS, with whom I served on the Agriculture Committee for a number of years, either as ranking member or as chairman, working on agriculture bills.

I also particularly want to thank Senator MURKOWSKI of Alaska. She and I have worked together as partners in this effort for several of the past years on trying to get this bill put together and get the provisions we have in the bill done. She has been a great champion of better food in our school lunch program, school breakfast program, afterschool meals.

I also thank our leader, Senator REID, and Minority Leader Senator MCCONNELL, for working together on both sides to get this bill to the point where we could actually get to a unanimous consent today.

There are many important components of this bill, many of which I had pushed for many years when I was chairman of the Agriculture Committee. I am particularly supportive of the provisions to increase reimbursement for school meals, expanded use of direct certification in the National School Lunch Program, the expansion of afterschool meals, a new and great focus on promoting breastfeeding, and the very real advances that that makes to health promotion in the early stages of childhood.

I want, however, to mention one provision I worked on for about 15 years, a provision that would require the adoption of school nutrition standards for all foods in all schools. Since the 1970s, the rates of childhood obesity have tripled among children and adolescents in the United States. Type 2 diabetes has increased dramatically. Current estimates suggest that among children born today, the lifetime risk of developing diabetes is 30 percent for boys, 40 percent for girls, and for African Americans and Latinos it is even higher.

Again these are complicated problems that will require multifaceted solutions. To improve the health of our children, all sectors of society must be involved—parents, the media, community organizations, corporate America, and of course our schools.

Again, I am well aware that schools are not the only places where our kids have access to sugary beverages and fried foods, candy, and high sodium foods. But schools can and should do more to provide healthy foods to our kids. What kids learn to eat at an early age they tend to develop habits and tastes for and eat those foods later on in life.

If you start feeding kids sugary soda and French fries for lunch, they tend to keep eating that as they grow older, with all of the health problems that brings on.

To that end, it is critically important that we establish strong nutrition standards for all the foods sold in school through vending machines, snack bars, a la carte lines in the schools. There are several reasons we need to set such standards. Existing USDA nutrition standards for the foods sold outside of school meals are outdated. They allow for the sale of foods that are low in nutrition and high in fat, sugar, and salt. In addition, in recent years science has greatly increased our knowledge of how kids' diets affect their health. Yet we have done very little to adjust our nutrition standards to this new knowledge.

We have had a big loophole here and this is the way it is. The Secretary of Agriculture can set nutritional guidelines for all of the foods sold in the school lunch, in the school lunchroom—school breakfasts, school lunches, and can adopt those standards to follow the dietary guidelines. However, the Secretary has no authority to regulate the foods sold outside the lunchroom. So you have a big loophole here. Kids can eat lunch, they can have good food prepared according to dietary guidelines, but down the hall there are vending machines with candy bars and potato chips and sugary sodas and all kinds of things such as that, which undermines what we are trying to do to get better food for our kids in schools.

It undermines parental supervision. Parents think that if they send their kids to school, they are going to get good meals. Yet they can go down the hallway from the school lunchroom and buy all of those bad foods. So that is what this bill does. It provides that the Secretary of Agriculture now, for the first time, has the authority to regulate all of the foods in schools, even in the vending machines, snack bars, and a-la carte lines.

Again, I am proud this provision has had broad support on both sides of the aisle, among public groups and food and beverage companies. I particularly would like to thank the following groups for their help through all these years to bring this bill to this point: the Center for Science in the Public Interest, the American Heart Association, the American Dietetic Association, the American Diabetes Association, the American Public Health Association, the American Association of School Administrators, and the National PTA. They have all been wonderful in working together to get this bill put together and through the floor of the Senate. On the food and beverage side, I particularly wish to thank the American Beverage Association, Mars, Incorporated, the dairy industry, Pepsi, Coca-Cola, and many others who brought us to this point.

We cannot ignore the rising toll of diabetes, heart disease, and childhood obesity. By including the commonsense provisions to protect the nutrition environment in our schools, this bill makes a major step forward in efforts to protect our children and promote their health.

I sincerely thank my friend and colleague from Pennsylvania for allowing me to take this time even though he was next in line.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I renew my unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCAIN. Reserving the right to object—I will not object—I wish to thank the Senator from New York and those on the other side for taking a significant step forward. I believe we have a lot more to do, but this will contribute to our effort to get our border secured. And we will be continuing to fight for all of the provisions Senator KYL and I have put forward, but I thank my colleague for his cooperation in sending some $60 million to help our border get secured, and at this time, it is not. But I think this is movement in the right direction. I thank my colleague.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I wish to thank my colleague. As you know, our goal—most of us on this side—is comprehensive reform. We believe securing the border is part of that, and this bipartisan effort can help move us in that direction. I hope we can move forward in a bipartisan way on many other parts of immigration reform beyond the border in the future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 4593) was agreed to as follows:

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTHY, HUNGER-FREE KIDS ACT OF 2010

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise this evening to speak about the bill we passed today, what is known as the child nutrition bill, but the actual title is the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010. We passed it by unanimous consent, which means we have done something that happens all too rarely around here. We passed a major piece of legislation in a bipartisan way, we got consent from the whole Chamber, and we did not have to have a vote on it. That is a good development, to pass a big piece of legislation which will have a tremendously positive impact on our children, and passing it in that manner is encouraging.

I am grateful, as so many of us are, to our chairman, Senator LINCOLN, for her continued leadership to craft a child nutrition bill that protects and assists the most vulnerable of our society—pregnant women and children who are food insecure, especially in a time of economic difficulties for so many families and high unemployment in so many communities across the country.

In the Scriptures, they tell us that a faithful friend is a sturdy shelter, and he or she who has found a faithful friend has indeed found a treasure. I am paraphrasing a little bit, but I think that line from the Scriptures about a faithful friend being a sturdy shelter has application to this discussion we have had about the Child Nutrition Act and helping our children because so many elected officials around the country say they are a friend of children. That is a good sentiment. We like to hear that. But often we do not have the opportunity to demonstrate our friendship, our concern for children, and sometimes we don't take the opportunity even when it is presented to us. So in our efforts to show and demonstrate—sometimes in small ways, sometimes in more substantial ways here in the Senate or in other instances as well—we have a chance to demonstrate, to prove or to provide some proof that we are trying to be a friend to children.

The bill itself reauthorizes our Nation's major Federal child nutrition programs which are administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. As many people who watch these proceedings know, reauthorization means we want to do it again, we want to continue a policy and keep the policy moving in the right direction and fund it.

Under this program, the following are included: the National School Lunch Program and the School Breakfast Program; the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children, known by the end of that program's name, WIC—women, infants, and children; the Child and Adult Care Food Program, which is not something we hear a lot about but is critically important; and the Summer Food Service Program.

The act itself—the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010—provides $4.5 billion in additional funding over the next 10 years, nearly 10 times the amount of money provided for the previous child nutrition bill and the largest new investment in child nutrition programs since the inception of these particular programs.

This historic new investment provided by the act could not come at a more important time, particularly given the incidence of hunger and the corresponding need for Federal nutrition assistance, which has increased in recent years. We know the economic realities. The numbers do not begin to tell the story, but the numbers are part of the story.

Throughout the country, more than 15 million people are out of work. In Pennsylvania, for example, a 9.2-percent unemployment rate equates to 591,000 Pennsylvanians out of work. I know some States are at 10 percent unemployment and 11 percent and 12 percent and some even over 13 percent. But in our State, having more than 591,000 people out of work is close to if not a record number of people.

I have always believed that when it comes to programs and policies that impact our children, whether it is a nutrition program or an education program, whether it is helping to protect our kids, I have always believed that what motivates us and what motivates people across this country to take steps to help children is a basic and fundamental belief that every child in America is born with a light inside them.

Some children, because of their circumstances, because of the family they are born into or because of other reasons, do not need a lot of help, and their light shines so brightly, it is blinding, it is boundless, it is assimilating—you can fill in lots of other words. Some children are born with a light inside them, but it does not burn as brightly because of limitations or because of adverse circumstances they are born into or because the family they are born into does not have some of the advantages many of us have had. They do not have a steady job. They do not have income. They do not have the ability to provide for their family.

I have always believed that it is the obligation of every public official, whether you are in the Senate or whether you are a State official or local official, but especially if you are elected, to do everything you can, to take every opportunity you can to help our children at a minimum with at least four things: nutrition and the prevention of hunger, early education, health care, and certainly basic safety and protection. This legislation takes a substantial step forward in at least one of those areas—the area I mentioned as it relates to preventing hunger and making sure kids are being given nutritious meals.

We know providing care at the beginning of a child's life is so important. That starts with that child's mother. Through the WIC Program, pregnant women and new mothers have access to nutritious foods and learn more about healthy eating—something we could all learn a thing or two about. The program encourages breastfeeding and supplies formula, food packages, and farmers market vouchers. The WIC Program is a strong investment in our future and serves more than half—more than half—of all infants in the United States. As babies grow into toddlers, they benefit from the nutritious meals and snacks provided by childcare homes and centers and Head Start Programs participating in that program.

I mentioned before that we don't hear a lot about the Child and Adult Care Food Program. That program allows children to develop, it prepares children to enter school ready to learn, and it helps working families to work.

In the vast majority of States, the Child and Adult Care Food Program—the afterschool program that it is—only provides reimbursement for a snack. The bill we passed today gives communities in all 50 States the ability to be reimbursed for a meal.

When toddlers grow into young children and arrive for their first day of school, many are able to enter the cafeteria and eat a healthy meal for breakfast and for lunch. These meals fuel them with the energy they need to grow into healthy adults. We know the numbers on these for children are so substantial. More than 10 million children receive a free or reduced-priced breakfast, and nearly 20 million children in the United States receive a lunch. In Pennsylvania, that translates into 1 million kids having the benefit of school lunch and just about a quarter of a million children getting the benefit of the School Breakfast Program.

Congress has taken a step now—at least the Senate has today—to ensure more eligible children receive meals, increasing the number of eligible children and increasing the nutritional value of meals. Hungry and malnourished children cannot fully participate in school. If a child can't, during school, have the benefit of a school lunch or a school breakfast or sometimes both, they can't learn. It is as simple as that. None of us could learn. None of us can function if we don't have enough to eat. I have always thought that if we invest in children, making sure they can learn at a very young age, they can learn more now and earn more later. We have to remain committed to these programs.

I have had a very strong interest in and have advocated for a long time for the so-called universal feeding concept because I believe the experience in a major urban school district—in this case, the city of Philadelphia—in that school district, that universal feeding concept as a model in one school district has reduced the stigma of poverty and increased participation in the School Lunch Program. Philadelphia schools are reimbursed for only the number of students who qualify for free or reduced-price meals but agree to offer free meals to all children. It covers everyone; it doesn't single children out for different treatment. Universal feeding enhances efficiency by dramatically reducing the administrative burdens of the program, and it maintains the integrity and congressional intent of the National School Lunch Program.

There is a lot more I could talk about with regard to the bill, but I wish to move very quickly and then conclude by highlighting some photographs.

This first photograph was made available to us by a Dr. Mariane Chilton. Dr. Chilton is at Drexel University. I have met a lot of people who have been champions for our children, who have stood up for children in all circumstances, but if there is one person who I can think of in any university of the United States who has done so much for our children and has stood up for them, who has been even more than just a faithful friend—Dr. Chilton has been the person who, time and again, has reminded us about the moral gravity of making sure children are first on our list.

She developed a program called Witnesses to Hunger. This particular project began after consent was given by mothers across the city of Philadelphia who agreed to participate. More than 40 of them were given a camera. They took pictures of their lives, the lives of their children, their own life, what happens in their homes. They made these pictures available. They gave us a window into their own lives by their own consent. By providing that insight, they allowed us to see the real misery of hunger for children. They allowed us to see the horrific nightmare so many children and so many families were living through, even before this recession.

The first picture I have is a photograph of a young boy sitting at a table.

Here is what his mother Melissa said about him:

My son, he's already on the small side and he needs every bit of food that he can get to make him healthy, keep him healthy. He has failure to thrive. He has a bone deficiency that doesn't allow him to grow. He's only 30 pounds. He has acid reflux. He had RSV, failure to thrive, chronic asthma.

This is one example of a child who doesn't have enough to eat, which leads to the obvious health problems that entails.

This next picture is a photograph of three children sitting at a table. They have beautiful smiles. They are wonderful children. The title of this picture is ''Oodles of noodles.'' These children are eating lots and lots of noodles. Their mother says:

And the kids know my food stamps got cut off. Because when they came home from school today, they didn't have their snacks. So they know that I didn't go to the market. I really didn't tell them why or anything like that, because I don't think they understand. But it affected them.

When people make decisions about cutting programs or voting against programs, we know they have real consequences.

The last picture is a young boy holding bananas and giving the photographer a great smile. In this photo, Gale, his mother, captures her son's happiness as he holds up a bunch of bananas.

Some people tell us people choose to eat unhealthy foods. They use that as a rationale, a pathetic and insulting rationale. But sometimes they make that argument. We know families want more access to fresh fruits and vegetables. But, frankly, in a lot of inner cities, they are not available, not at all. We have to recognize that, rather than denigrate or judge people who live in those communities. There are plenty of folks in Washington who are good at judging. They are not real good at responding to the needs of people.

There is so much in this bill. I will not go through more of it because we don't have time. I believe this bill does meet that basic obligation to do everything we can, at least in this program, at least with this opportunity, to make sure that light inside every child burns as brightly as the full measure of that child's potential, as brightly as we can possibly allow it to burn with our help. I believe this bill does one thing as well, going back to that reference to Scripture about a faithful friend being a sturdy shelter. This bill will not solve all the problems of the families who will be positively impacted. It will not eliminate hunger. It will not rescue a child from so many challenges in the life of a child who lives in a poor family. But this bill is one example of one way we can demonstrate what that scriptural reference tells us. It gives us a chance to demonstrate in a significant way that we are trying to do all we can to be that faithful friend to our children and to provide some measure of shelter when the storms of this recession hit that family and hit that child. We can take a step in proving that we are trying to be that faithful friend to children.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

SMALL BUSINESS LENDING FUND ACT

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I rise to speak on an issue that is still pending before this body. Unfortunately, it looks as though we will not be able to wrap this up in the next few hours. It looks encouraging that we may be able to take it up immediately when we return in September.

Before I speak about that, I compliment Senators LINCOLN, CASEY, HARKIN, and others who have come to the floor in the last few hours but have been working for months, if not years, on the child nutrition bill. It is quite extraordinary that this Chamber at this late hour, because of the work of Senators LINCOLN, HARKIN, CASEY, and others, has decided by unanimous consent to pass a significant and major piece of legislation the Senator from Pennsylvania beautifully described. I compliment all of them for their work.

I wish we had been able to do the same thing for the small business bill we have been fighting for, the Small Business Job Creation Act of 2010. We can't seem to get to a point where we can get unanimous consent. So we will have to fight this out a step at a time. We had some significant votes this last week by including a Republican amendment, including in the small business bill a $30 billion lending program. We have potentially other aspects to strengthen it. But the bill is in extremely good shape.

I wish to put this up for a visual. I know people will find it hard to believe we could have literally over 100 organizations, extraordinarily strong and powerful bipartisan, conservative, moderate and liberal organizations, supporting small business. It may seem surprising that with all this support, we couldn't pass the bill before we leave. I wish to call out again just a few: The American Hotel and Lodging Association, the American International Automobile Dealers Association, the Associated Builders and Contractors of California, the California Bankers Association, Engineering Contractors, Hispanic Bankers of Texas, National Association of Self-Employed, National Restaurant Association, Recreation Vehicle Industry Association, the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. I just listed one-half dozen or a dozen. Members can see we have hundreds of extraordinary organizations that have stepped up to say what I have been saying, what the Senator from Washington, Ms. CANTWELL, has been saying, what the senior Senator from Washington, Senator MURRAY, and Senators BOXER and MERKLEY are saying: We are not going to end this recession until we find a way to get capital and cash in the hands of small business. That will lead the way out of this recession. It is not going to be led by Wall Street. It is going to be led by Main Street.

I would like to put up our Main Street sign. Main Street is going to lead the way. There was a beautiful article written by Harold Meyerson. It was dated August 4 in the Washington Post. The article is entitled ''Jobs in the Cards?'' It reads, in part:

All things considered, American big business is doing just fine, thank you. Profits, productivity and exports are up. New hires, rehires and wage increases, as I have written, are nowhere to be seen. They're no longer part of the U.S. corporate business plan, in which higher profits are premised on having fewer employees. Sell abroad, cut costs at home—the global marketplace that American business has created is paying off big-time.

Not so for American small business, which inhabits those less rarified realms of the economy in which depressed domestic demand and bottled-up credit remain a mortal threat. The great private-sector trickle-down machine has largely stopped working for small business.

He is right. If we don't get small business started up again and focus on them and help them, this recession will never come to an end. Maybe that is what some people on the other side of the aisle want. Maybe they put politics before progress. But this is dangerous, it is wrong, and it is painful. We have to figure out a way.

I ask unanimous consent to have the article from which I just quoted printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Aug. 4, 2010.]

JOBS IN THE CARDS?

(By Harold Meyerson)

All things considered, American big business is doing just fine, thank you. Profits, productivity and exports are up. New hires, rehires and wage increases, as I have written, are nowhere to be seen. They're no longer part of the U.S. corporate business plan, in which higher profits are premised on having fewer employees. Sell abroad, cut costs at home—the global marketplace that American business has created is paying off big-time.

Not so for American small business, which inhabits those less rarefied realms of the economy in which depressed domestic demand and bottled-up credit remain a mortal threat. The great private-sector trickle-down machine has largely stopped working for small businesses. A May report from the Congressional Oversight Panel on the TARP (chaired by consumer advocate Elizabeth Warren) found that bank lending to small businesses has plummeted, particularly among the big banks that taxpayers helped bail out. The Wall Street banks' lending portfolio declined 4 percent between 2008 and 2009, the report concludes, but their lending to small business declined 9 percent. Smaller banks—''strained by their exposure to commercial real estate and other liabilities''—have similarly reduced their lending.

As the corporate sector hums along without hiring, hope for a recovery increasingly depends on boosting consumer demand through public investment and jump-starting small-business expansion through tax credits and a reopened lending window. For the past half-year, the administration and congressional Democrats have been unable to overcome Republican senators' resistance to increasing public investment. Senate Republicans have also blocked their efforts to cut taxes and increase loans to small business—even though such policies have long been GOP priorities and small business has long been considered a key Republican constituency.

Late last week, the Senate's 41 Republicans united to block a bill that would have temporarily eliminated the capital gains tax on small businesses that issue stock, increased the tax deduction for start-ups, increased their depreciation allowance, and established a $30 billion fund, offset by budget cuts elsewhere, dedicated to small-business lending by small banks. The bill was backed by generally pro-Republican business lobbies; to add a further note of absurdity to the GOP opposition, some of the bill was written by Republican senators. The Republicans' ostensible reason for opposing these motherhood-and-apple-pie provisions was that Democrats were limiting the number of amendments they could bring up. Their actual reason was to deny Democrats a legislative victory on the kind of stimulus package that still commands substantial public support and, just possibly, to forestall any economic uptick before November.

Republicans are certainly right that Democrats, for political and economic reasons, are focusing more on helping small business recover. A June survey from the firm of Democratic pollster Stan Greenberg argued that ''Democrats can win the economic debate by making small business the center of their agenda.''

But there's another way Democrats can assist small business besides continuing to press for their small-business stimulus. The president can choose a champion of small business to direct the newly created Consumer Financial Protection Agency. He can nominate Elizabeth Warren.

To date, we have heard chiefly that the big banks look askance, and then some, at the prospect of Warren heading the agency. She is among the nation's leading critics of the credit card rip-offs that big banks have long inflicted on cardholders as a matter of policy. Precisely for this reason, she stands out as a small-business hero, because in the absence of bank lending, small businesses increasingly are turning to credit cards as a source of funding or operating revenue. Fully 83 percent of small businesses, the Federal Reserve reported in May, use credit cards. Three-quarters of small businesses that apply for business credit cards secure them, according to a 2010 survey from the National Federation of Independent Business, while just 39 percent of bank-loan applicants obtain loans. A 2009 study from the National Small Business Association concluded that 59 percent of small businesses used cards to meet their capital needs.

Bank loans to small businesses have been increasingly supplanted by bank credit cards. And no one is more expert that Warren on how banks exploit their cardholders. She is, by common consent, one of the leading academic authorities on the topic as well as a passionate advocate for getting cardholders a fairer shake.

Enemy of Wall Street? When necessary, absolutely. Friend of Main Street? None better. If he nominates Warren and can get her confirmed, President Obama will have found one more way to aid American small business.

Ms. LANDRIEU. The bill we have put forward, supported by hundreds of organizations, has a way forward.

I wish to also include for the RECORD another editorial by Mr. Richard Neiman of the Wall Street Journal. I submit it again because it is so good. The Journal mistakenly editorialized against this bill, but there are people sending letters to the Wall Street Journal to take a second look. Richard Neiman is one of them.

He writes:

Unlike TARP, the SBLF would incentivize banks to loan by lowering the dividend rate at which banks must repay the government if the banks meet lending performance metrics. Further, the SBLF removes the TARP stigma that discouraged small banks from participating in government programs that support lending. It is these banks that are the primary source of credit for small businesses which lack the same access to capital markets as large companies.

The SBLF is not a sequel to TARP, but it can be a segue toward a stronger future for our nation's small businesses and their employees.

I ask unanimous consent to have this article printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, Aug. 5, 2010]

SMALL BUSINESS LENDING FUND WILL HELP RECOVERY, JOBS

(By Richard Neiman)

Your editorial, ''Son of TARP'' (July 30) is unfortunately titled, and underestimates the potential of the proposed Small Business Lending Fund (SBLF).

Small business growth is the only way out of this recession. Yet our entrepreneurs are not being provided the credit they need, as the TARP Congressional Oversight Panel often hears from small business owners. Our recent report on the issue demonstrates that, during the crisis, lending to small businesses fell by 9 percent at our Nation's largest banks, and the bankruptcy of nonbank business lenders such as the CIT Group has further limited credit options.

The financial crisis and recession have created the lack of demand for credit that your editorial points out, but it is as important to point out the lack of supply. Small banks are reluctant to take on more risk when small businesses' customer base is weak. Breaking this stalemate requires old-fashioned underwriting to identify the good deals which are still waiting to be made.

The SBLF is intended to provide public-sector support to bring credit- and lending-worthy parties back to the table. Unlike TARP, the SBLF would incentivize banks to lend by lowering the dividend rate at which banks must repay the government if the banks meet lending performance metrics. Further, the SBLF removes the TARP stigma that discouraged small banks from participating in government programs that support lending. It is these banks that are the primary source of credit for small businesses which lack the same access to capital markets as large companies.

The SBLF is not a sequel to TARP, but it can be a segue toward a stronger future for our nation's small businesses and their employees.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD another very nice article that appeared in the Wall Street Journal by Ruth Simon, one of their reporters, who outlines a particular story about Pinnacle Bank, which is basically in support of our bill. This is a story about a bank in Florida. It will be in the RECORD for Members to read.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SBA PROGRAM PROVES A HIT, BUT NOW IT IS IN LIMBO

(By Ruth Simon)

Pinnacle Bank made just two loans through the Small Business Administration in 2007 and 2008. So far this year, the Orange City, Fla., bank's total is nine, to borrowers from an auto dealer to a computer-equipment wholesaler to a bakery.

''The SBA program is the only way we can continue to lend right now,'' says David Bridgeman, president of Pinnacle, which has two branches and assets of $213 million, including about 600 loans. For many of the $3.4 million in loans Pinnacle made through the SBA in 2010, the bank has to set aside capital against only the 10% slice that isn't guaranteed by the U.S. government.

Across the nation, many banks have turned to the SBA's so-called 7(a) program to help unfreeze credit. Nearly 3,000 lenders have made 7(a) loans in the current fiscal year, up 21% from 2008.

The 7(a) program, the SBA's largest loan program, is hardly a cure for the credit shortage affecting many borrowers. The agency is involved in less than 10% of all small-business loans, and some banks won't participate because of red tape. Lenders must follow the SBA's rules when making 7(a) loans, which can be used for working capital, fixed assets and other business expenses. The term of the loan can be as long as 25 years.

Last year, Congress temporarily sweetened the 7(a) program by increasing the SBA guarantee to 90% of any given loan from as little as 75% previously. Lawmakers waived fees costing borrowers as much as 3.5% of the loan amount, as well as costs charged in a separate SBA program providing structured financing for fixed assets.

But the sweetened program is now in limbo, drawing complaints from borrowers and lenders, as lawmakers haggle over broader small-business legislation.

Since the SBA program was sweetened, more than 1,300 lenders that hadn't made an SBA loan since at least 2007 have barreled in, while existing participants like Pinnacle have been pushing more borrowers through the agency's pipeline to take advantage of better terms.

About $16.2 billion in 7(a) loans have been made under the more-attractive terms. By May, the program's loan volume had returned to before-the-credit-crunch levels.

''The extra 15% of guarantee helped us stretch a little more,'' says Vito Pantilione, president of Parke Bank, a unit of Parke Bancorp Inc. The five-branch Sewell, N.J., bank recently used the program to make loans to two printing companies looking to adapt to electronic publishing.

Since hiring a local banker with expertise in SBA loans in August 2009, Bank of Holland, a Holland, Mich., unit of Lake Michigan Financial Corp., has made more than two dozen loans through the federal agency.

''We do not have capital issues, but it's very difficult to find businesses that . . . have not lost money and suffered some weakening of their balance sheet,'' says Garth Deur, Bank of Holland's president.

Sweetened government backing makes it easier for banks to stomach the risks of lending to local businesses that hit bumps when the economy slowed or to finance entrepreneurs with a solid business plan but little track record, Mr. Deur says.

The SBA has repurchased 0.2% of the loans made with the higher guarantees. That rate, which reflects defaults, is in line with the program's historical levels.

Congress extended the higher guarantees three times, but the latest round of funding was exhausted in May, causing a decline in SBA loan volume. A provision included in the small-business job-creation bill now before the Senate would resuscitate the 90% guarantee through Dec. 31 and allow the SBA to increase the maximum loan amount to $5 million from $2 million. The bill already has passed the House, but the Senate is bogged down by disputes over the broader bill.

''On the financing side we're stuck'' until Congress acts, says Mark DeHaan, who is hoping to get a 7(a) loan for $1.6 million from the Bank of Holland to pay construction and start-up costs for an educational child-care center in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Pinnacle largely avoided the worst sins committed by banks throughout in Florida, such as lending on raw land being purchased for housing developments. Still, Pinnacle had a net loss of $1.8 million in 2009 as falling real-estate values and rising unemployment forced the bank to boost loan-loss reserves. Pinnacle has shed about a third of its troubled loans but is looking for additional capital.

Mr. Bridgeman, who started his banking career 28 years ago as a teller in Kentucky and took over as Pinnacle's president in 2003, says the bank decided to rev up its SBA lending after a tough regulatory exam forced it to halt most traditional lending in order to conserve capital.

Pinnacle made 11 SBA loans for $3 million in 2009. The bank has generated fee income by selling some of its SBA loans on the secondary market.

Car dealer J. Brendan Hurley was rejected by four other banks before Pinnacle won approval in March for a $560,000 loan through the SBA to help him add Dodge cars to his Chrysler franchise in DeLand, Fla. Since getting the loan, Mr. Hurley has hired six new employees, and service volume has doubled, he says.

''The fact that I had a commitment from Pinnacle sealed the deal to get the Dodge franchise,'' he adds. Mr. Hurley is seeking a second SBA loan from Pinnacle that would allow him to build a new facility designed to meet Chrysler Group LLC's requirements.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Finally, I have another article written by Barbra Barrett of the Miami Herald. It reads:

The U.S. Senate might leave town this week without finishing up what Democrats had hoped would be a significant political achievement . . .

On its face, the legislation would pour billions into a slate of programs to help small business obtain federal microloans, government contracts and export assistance.

I ask unanimous consent to have this article printed in the RECORD.

SMALL BUSINESS BILL APPEARS TO BE STUCK IN SENATE

(By Barbra Barrett)

WASHINGTON.—The U.S. Senate might leave town this week without finishing up what Democrats had hoped would be a significant political achievement before the August recess: passing a multibillion-dollar swath of programs to help struggling small businesses.

On its face, the legislation would pour billions into a slate of programs to help small business obtain federal microloans, government contracts and export assistance. But the bill also is part of the political wrangling that's going on in Washington ahead of fall's midterm elections.

Republican senators unanimously blocked the legislation a week ago, preventing an up-or-down vote that could have given the Democratic majority a political victory going into the August recess. In response, President Barack Obama gave a speech Monday urging the Senate to pass the bill.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid has vowed to try again this week, but it's uncertain whether the vote will happen.

Observers say the legislation could have sweeping effects in North Carolina.

More than 85 percent of companies in the state have fewer than 100 employees, said Scott Daugherty, N.C. small-business commissioner and executive director of the Small Business and Technology Center.

''We are substantially a state of small companies,'' he said.

The Economic Policy Institute recently calculated that there are nearly five job seekers for every open job. The unemployment rate in North Carolina remains above 10 percent.

Failure to pass the bill would bring Democrats such as U.S. Sen. Kay Hagan, who supports the act, back to their states this weekend with one fewer success to show from their party.

And it would give Republican U.S. Sen. Richard Burr, who is running for reelection, another point of criticism against the Democratic majority and the Obama administration.

Burr declined to be interviewed for this story, but in a prepared statement, his spokesman, David Ward, turned blame for the struggle of small businesses on the Democrats.

''What (small businesses) really need is for Congress and the administration to stop overburdening them with federal mandates, excessive bureaucratic red tape, tax increases and high energy costs,'' Ward said.

Carter Wrenn, a Republican political consultant in Raleigh, said Burr should easily be able to defend his ''no'' vote to his Tar Heel constituents.

''He can explain that all the job programs haven't worked, and he can explain that this is just one more,'' Wrenn said.

He said the legislation is a spending bill dressed up as a bailout.

''The truth is there's a trillion dollars now in the banking industry now that's loanable that ain't being loaned,'' Wrenn said. ''The real problem is everybody's so uncertain about the future that no one wants to loan money.''

Burr's no vote last week on the procedural question on the bill drew immediate criticism from the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, which supports his challenger, Elaine Marshall, in the upcoming Senate race.

''Again and again, Burr shows he's more loyal to Republican leaders in Washington than to North Carolina small businesses,'' Deirdre Murphy, DSCC spokeswoman, said in a statement.

And David Axelrod, Obama's senior adviser, said Tuesday that GOP senators can expect to hear questions from constituents about why the bill didn't move forward.

''Make no mistake: It will be an issue if politics intrudes on what we should be doing,'' Axelrod said. ''I think if I was in the position of Senator Burr, I'd rather go home and say I did something constructive for the small businesses of my state.''

Much of the bill includes bipartisan proposals. Among them are provisions that would increase amounts of Small Business Administration loans, leverage $1 billion in export capital, offer tax breaks for investments and startup costs, and give temporary funding for rural exports.

At the bill's center is a $30 billion program for community banks to extend loans to small businesses. Burr's opposition puts him at odds with the N.C. Bankers Association, which supports the legislation.

''We think it is imperative,'' said Thad Woodard, the group's president. ''Our folks have emphasized this as a lubricant for small-business lending.''

Ms. LANDRIEU. She is right. We have worked across the aisle as much as we could. But for some inexplicable reason, we can't seem to get unanimous consent to move such an important and extraordinary bill forward.

The small business bill, the Main Street bill, has $12 billion in tax cuts for small business. Democrats are for tax cuts for small businesses that will help them to create the jobs we need. It is very targeted, very strategic, very thoughtful, very careful, and focused on reducing the deficit as well. All I hear from the other side is: Extend tax cuts permanently to everybody, to heck with the deficit. Who cares if we get to a balanced budget. We want to go back to the way things were.

Democrats don't want to go back to the way things were. We want to go forward in a new way—with sound fiscal policy, balanced budgets, focused on Main Street, focused on small business. That is what Democrats and a handful of our Republican colleagues want—unfortunately, not enough to get the job done. I do thank the great coalition of Senators who have helped.

I also wish to submit an article by Jeff Cox, of CNBC, ''Four Things That Could Help Companies Start Hiring Again.'' He talks about positive momentum, loans to small business, and foreign demand.

One of the things he mentions is:

American consumers—even those with jobs and savings—are focused on paying down debt and not greasing the economic skids.

As such, job markets may have to rely on low export prices and consumers in robust developing economies to help generate demand.

He is correct. We are going to have to rely on markets outside the United States to sell our goods there and pull ourselves out of this recession. Do Members think small businesses get the least amount of help with exports? No, they don't. In our bill, we have extra support for the Department of Commerce and the Small Business Administration to help small businesses in Louisiana, in West Virginia, and around the world to reach out from our main streets to main streets in foreign countries to try to sell goods. It is going to be a Main Street-to-Main Street partnership around the world. With the Internet, this is possible. Before the Internet, it would be laughable to even suggest such a thing.

But with the Internet, with the global air transportation, with expanded trucking and train transportation, we literally can move goods from Main Street right here. I would not be surprised if Georgetown Cupcake, which I spoke about yesterday, ships their cupcakes to India or China because they are really good cupcakes and maybe they do not make them as well there. That may be a little exaggeration, but I think it makes the point that if we can help our small businesses, there is no telling where these cupcakes—and in my State, it would be King Cakes—can go to support businesses on Main Street.

So I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

FOUR THINGS THAT COULD HELP COMPANIES START HIRING AGAIN

(By Jeff Cox)

Job creation in 2010 has been slow but unsure, coming in a weak trickle that has left investors unsatisfied and asking what it will take to actually get employment moving in a meaningful way.

Thursday's weekly jobless claims report only reinforced what Wall Street already knew—that despite halting signs of improvement, 479,000 new filings for unemployment insurance was hardly indicative of a robust recovery.

As such, the stock market sold off and strategists and analysts were left to ponder how long it will take for things to turn accelerate off the weak growth that has taken place this year.

''The question is when is that going to pick up enough to meaningfully lower the unemployment rate and spark the virtuous cycle of upward momentum, to get employment, wages and aggregate demand higher,'' says Tom Higgins, chief economist at Payden & Rygel in Los Angeles. ''That takes time. If you look back at the last two cycles, employment recoveries have been slow.''

Economists and employment experts say four things will have to happen to get jobs moving:

1. POSITIVE MOMENTUM

Slowdowns are as much psychological phenomena as they are economic, with confidence the key as much as any other factor.

With the news mostly bad about the economy, companies are afraid to hire until a more positive tone comes about.

''Hiring has tended to be slow the last two cycles,'' Higgins says. ''The trajectory coming out of this recession is even shallower. That likely means the trajectory of hiring is much shallower.''

One of the main problems is an economic Catch–22: Companies won't hire until they see more strength from consumers, and consumer spending can't get stronger if people don't have jobs. That means corporate America will have to rely on ''small positives'' to keep building until confidence is established, says Kurt Karl, chief US economist at Swiss Re in New York.

''Businesses like to look at year-over-year growth in sales, and that just isn't that strong yet. But it should be better and better as we get deeper into the recovery,'' Karl says. ''With these unemployment recoveries, you either get one extreme or the other. You're either booming, or it's crash and burn. But we're muddling in between.''

2. LOANS TO SMALL BUSINESS

While the biggest companies sit on the lion's share of the $1.8 trillion in cash on corporate balance sheets, small businesses are groping for funds.

That's not been made any easier by banks that have been loathe to lend as they meet capital requirements laid out in the new financial reform legislation. Without that access to capital, small businesses will be unlikely to add new employees.

''We need small businesses, which generate 60 percent of the jobs, to get more access to lending, to capital, so people can take risks,'' says John Challenger, CEO at job outplacement firm Challenger, Gary & Christmas. ''Entrepreneurs rely on savings, but those savings have been depleted.''

The ability to invest in companies and develop products will help spur the demand needed to create jobs, Challenger says.

Small businesses in the recessionary environment ''don't have access to the savings they might normally have. On the front end, with small businesses not there to pick up the slack, that's a very important hindrance to getting this economic engine going,'' he says.

3. FOREIGN DEMAND

American consumers—even those with jobs and savings—are focused on paying down debt and not greasing the economic skids.

As such, the jobs market may have to rely on low export prices and consumers in robust developing economies to help generate demand.

''One thing we do know is exports are strong. Overseas economies are doing quite well,'' says Brian Gendreau, market strategist with Financial Network Investment, based in El Segundo, Calif. ''For large-cap stocks, more and more revenues are going to come from abroad. That's where we're going to get the growth.''

Of 250 companies in the Standard & Poor's 500, 46.6 percent of all sales came outside the US in 2009, actually a slight decrease from the previous year, according to S&P.

But Gendreau sees capital expenditures increasing in a way that seems to anticipate more spending coming soon.

''Companies seem to be spending a lot of money in anticipation of demand that doesn't look obvious it will show up,'' he says.

4. CAPITAL SPENDING

Indeed, one of the main precursors seen for employment growth is capital spending by companies on plants and equipment.

In fact, Deutsche Bank analysts say cap-ex spending this year is robust—growing 20 percent over the previous quarter—and the trend traditionally leads the jobs market by a full quarter. The movement in cap-ex, says Deutsche economist Joseph A. LaVorgna, suggest a strong jobs-creation move in the third quarter.

''Taken literally (the comparison between cap-ex and jobs) implies we will see several million jobs created over the next few quarters,'' LaVorgna said in a note to clients. ''While we are not so bold to forecast such sizeable job gains, we wonder whether there is some upside risk to our slightly above consensus forecast for July private payrolls.''

Deutsche is projecting Friday's nonfarm payrolls to show job gains of 110,000 in July, compared to the consensus of 90,000.

That would be some indication that Wall Street is putting cash to work.

''We all know companies are sitting on mounds and mounds of cash, possibly record amounts of cash,'' Gendreau says. ''The question is, when are they going to start putting it to work?''

MORATORIUM IN THE GULF COAST

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I know there are Senators who wish to speak, but I have one more subject to speak about before I yield the floor.

In addition to fighting for Main Street, I am going to come back here in September—and continue through the August recess with many hearings in my State and meetings in my State—to fight for justice for the gulf coast.

I have not spent a lot of time in the last week or two here on the floor on this issue because I have been handling this small business bill, but I have been spending an awful lot of time on the phone, in meetings, and in Louisiana and will continue around the country to talk about this tragedy that has occurred.

As shown on this chart I have in the Chamber, this is what the gulf coast looked like before the moratorium was put in place—this blanket moratorium, unnecessary moratorium—by the administration. We had 33 deepwater rigs in the Gulf of Mexico. As you can see, many of them were off the coast of New Orleans and Louisiana.

As shown on this other chart, this is what it looks like today. Nobody is working. There is one rig being drilled. It is the Deepwater Horizon current site of the relief well. Everybody else has been put out of business in the Gulf of Mexico. This represents, at a minimum, 40,000 direct jobs—40,000 direct jobs.

I want to show you a picture of the shallow water. This other one is of the deep water. That is what it looks like shut down. This one is of the shallow water. There is no moratorium in the shallow water. But before the moratorium, there were 55 wells in the shallow Gulf of Mexico. These wells—each one of them—represent hundreds of people supporting them and on the shore supporting them. We are down to 13. And I have to fight so hard to get one permit issued by MMS.

I am proud, very proud, that my colleague in the House of Representatives, CHARLIE MELANCON, did what I did not believe was even possible: he got the entire Democratic caucus on record asking the President basically to lift this moratorium. Yes, there was some language in there. I would have liked it to have been immediately. But the fact that we have now every Democrat and every Republican in the House of Representatives on record lifting this moratorium and helping us get back to work in the gulf is really extraordinary.

I am looking forward to coming back to lead the effort in the Senate to follow the lead of the Congressman from the district that is most affected, Mr. MELANCON, to get the gulf back to work. There are 25 idle rigs, there are 5 nondrilling operators, one Deepwater Horizon, and 2 wells being drilled. We have to get the gulf coast back to work.

So in addition to passing the small business bill that we have to pass for the whole country, we have work to do along the gulf coast. We have a liability issue to settle. We are working on a compromise. I have a justice for the gulf document I am going to submit, a bill I am going to ask to be filed right now so that we can work in earnest.

I hope that before we get back here, the President will administratively lift this moratorium. That is what he should do. We have put new safety requirements in. BP is going to pay the fines, billions of dollars of fines. They put $20 billion in escrow. Claims are being paid. That part is working fairly well. What is not working are the people in the gulf of Mexico. We do not want handouts. We do not want welfare. We do not want food stamps. We want to go back to work, and that is what we are going to work on.

So this Senate has some work to do. The House has done its job in this regard. I hope, Mr. President, you and your team and the Secretary of Interior will think very hard about the economic damage that is being done right now. I understand safety is at issue. I understand we want our oceans clean. Nobody wants them cleaner than those of us who swim in the gulf, live in the gulf, fish in the gulf, and have for decades and centuries. But enough is enough. We have to get back to work. There are things that can be done, and I submit the bill at this time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTHY, HUNGER-FREE KIDS ACT OF 2010

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, I rise to express strong support and to echo the comments of the previous speaker before Senator LANDRIEU, Senator CASEY, for the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act of 2010.

Chairwoman LINCOLN has led the reauthorization efforts—chairing hearings of the Agriculture Committee, on which I sit, and speaking eloquently in this Chamber about what is at stake in the Healthy, Hunger-Free Kids Act.

The health and well-being of our Nation's children, it goes without saying, has a direct effect on the health and well-being of our Nation. Our economic security depends on a strong and capable workforce. Our national security depends on a highly skilled and physically fit military. In fact, when President Truman signed the National School Lunch Act—laying the foundation for President Johnson to sign the Child Nutrition Act of 1966—he did so at the request of our military leaders, who saw firsthand the malnutrition plaguing so many of our soldiers—especially rural soldiers, White and Black alike—in World War II.

When Congress passed the National School Lunch Act in 1946, it said:

> It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress, as a measure of national security, to safeguard the health and well-being of the Nation's children.

Today, our military leaders once again support the Child Nutrition Act and have joined with hunger and nutrition advocates to urge Congress to pass this critical legislation.

So, too, are educators and business leaders and health care providers, who are worried about the costs of poor nutrition to our economy and our health care systems and the educational development of our children.

As Senator CASEY said so well, hungry children simply cannot learn. And my guess is, there are few, if any, in this Chamber who went to school so hungry as kids that they could not learn. But it certainly is proven, and we know that from observing kids, from talking to children, from watching their performance.

Study after study indicates that access to healthy, nutritious foods is critical, obviously, to our children's health and their ability to learn. Yet the stories behind these studies put a real face on the issue of childhood hunger.

Twenty percent of Ohio children under 18 years of age—570,000 children—think of that, 1 out of 5 children in a State, in a generally wealthy State, in a very wealthy country; 20 percent, 1 out of 5 children in my State under 18 years of age, more than 500,000 children—live in food-insecure homes. Those numbers are comparable in the Presiding Officer's State, in cities such as Huntington and Charleston and Morgantown and Beckley and all over his State.

Too many students nationwide—more than 1 million children—slip through the cracks and do not receive free or reduced-priced lunches for which they are eligible. In Ohio, about 700,000 children are eligible for reduced-priced or free breakfast or lunch. Every day, that number is significantly fewer as to those children who actually receive lunch and breakfast.

Understand, too, on weekends in the summer months, those numbers shrink dramatically. There are feeding programs in the summers, but only about 1 out of 10 children who are eligible actually gets those free breakfasts, free lunches, free snacks in those summer months. So the effects of poor nutrition reach beyond the boundaries of hunger. It also fuels childhood obesity, ironically. So it plagues communities across the Nation.

That is why this reauthorization is so important. Every 5 years, we have a chance to make the programs and resources available to our children better and more effective. This year we did that, and the Senate passed it today.

The bill will improve the quality of food in the National School Lunch Program and make sure children who need the help most are actually getting it. Each day, some 30 million schoolchildren across the country participate in the National School Lunch Program, from cities as large as Cleveland and Cincinnati and Columbus to rural towns such as Gallipolis and Galion and Grafton.

Each school day, the number of schoolchildren receiving free or reduced-price meals increases as more families struggle with high unemployment and increased poverty. We know that during the extension of unemployment benefits, the number of families who lost their jobs, then lost their unemployment insurance, then lost their health care, then lost their cars in some cases and in far too many cases then lost their homes to foreclosure—that those families even more relied on the school breakfast and lunch program.

The reauthorization includes provisions from the Hunger Free Schools Act that Senator CASEY from Pennsylvania and Senator BENNET from Colorado and I introduced earlier this year.

This legislation would auto-enroll eligible children and eliminate duplicative paperwork that costs schools and families valuable time and, in too many kids' cases, access to healthy school meals. It would allow eligible schools in high-poverty areas to serve universal free school lunches and breakfasts. In Ohio, an estimated 432 schools enrolling more than 150,000 students could opt into this program. So making this part of the reauthorization absolutely matters to embrace more children in these programs.

This bill is about reaching the very children—the neediest and most vulnerable—we should have been reaching in the first place.

The reauthorization would also expand the Afterschool Meal Program and the Summer Food Service Program, which play critical roles in childhood development outside of the classroom. We know that for particularly young children, if they are not eating right, their development as sentient, strong, healthy, intelligent human beings is significantly arrested.

Less than 10 percent of Ohio's eligible schoolchildren receive summer nutrition assistance. As I said, in rural Appalachia, across the river from the Presiding Officer's State, the numbers are bleaker as meal locations are fewer and farther between. The numbers are not good enough in Cleveland. They are not good enough in Youngstown. They are even worse in Malta and McConnelsville, in Pomeroy, in Piketon, and especially in the even more rural areas such as Colton in Jackson County, Coolville in Athens County, and those small remote areas where meal locations are even harder to reach. By strengthening these summer programs, we ensure more children have a nutritious breakfast, lunch, or snack during the summer months. It is a key ingredient in keeping children healthy, educated, and active.

Steve Garland of the E.L. Hardy Center—a summer feeding site outside of Columbus—tells a story of a single father with three sons who relies on the center for meals and mentoring. The father says that without the center, his young sons are at risk of falling behind in school and getting in trouble in the community.

It is not just keeping children fed. It also matters for their school work. It matters for keeping them out of trouble. It matters for their intellectual development.

Fifty children per day in past summers would show up for a healthy meal and recreational activities at the Hardy Center. This summer, because of enthusiastic and dedicated VISTA volunteers, attendance at the Hardy Center has ballooned to 300 children per day.

Now, get this: Typically, only about 1 out of 10 eligible children across the country—Ohio is actually slightly above the national average—only about 1 out of 10 children across the country who are eligible for free breakfast and free lunch is getting it during the school year. Only 1 out of 10 gets these breakfasts, lunches, or snacks in the summer—1 out of 10.

That is why what we did when Senator DORGAN and Senator KAUFMAN and all of us worked together in expanding national service—VISTA; Peace Corps; City Year, which two of my daughters have been part of as volunteers; AmeriCorps; all of those programs—more of those kids, more of those volunteers are now helping these summer feeding programs.

So instead of feeding 50 people at the Hardy Center, thanks to the VISTA volunteers, 300 children—all those 300 were eligible last summer; they just were not there because they did not know about it, they could not get there, whatever—now, because of these VISTA volunteers, 300 children are getting fed almost every day this summer. That is the good news. The bad news is that Steve Garland of the Hardy Center says there are still some 5,000 children in the surrounding communities who do not have a site in their area.

I said 5,000, and that is just Columbus. That is not the whole State. That is not the whole country. That is 5,000 children in Columbus who aren't getting fed who are eligible, who won't do as well in this life probably because they are not getting adequate nutrition as children.

When the President signs this bill into law, we will help countless other community leaders such as Steve provide more meals and activities to keep our children healthy.

The reauthorization dramatically reshapes and updates nutrition standards to help us reduce childhood obesity rates ands put healthier food in school cafeterias.

Steve Grundy, director of Nutrition Services for Dayton Public Schools, faces the choice between doing what is right—feeding our children healthy foods—and what is cost-effective—serving cheaper, less healthy foods.

Craig Hokenberry of Cincinnati Public Schools sees children with stunted growth because they have too little to eat. Without access to healthier fresh foods, families and schools look to the local food bank for afterschool or weekend meals. Because they are just getting these programs during the week, they are getting breakfast and lunch. Weekends, not so good; summers, not so good.

As Nora Nees of Ohio's Association of Second Harvest Foodbanks can attest to, these programs are in demand now more than ever.

Ginny Black in Columbus teaches children about healthy eating habits. Ms. Black has been a school nurse in Columbus for more than 20 years. She has seen firsthand how good nutrition contributes to higher academic achievement and better classroom behavior. According to her, reauthorizing the Child Nutrition Act means no more vending machines with junk food, no more having to rely on outside vendors for pizzas and burgers.

I was recently in Mansfield, my home town, about 50,000 people, visiting with community health workers at CHAP—women who travel across the country to provide prenatal care for underserved communities. CHAP is a facet of the social service safety net that is working to improve outcomes and reduce costs, but it is stretched thin.

By authorizing the Child Nutrition Act, we can help these workers and educators and parents do much more for our Nation's children. The more children who are healthy, the more we can lower rates of childhood obesity and diabetes. The more children who are not going hungry during school, the greater their chance to learn and succeed.

It is important we took this step today. This legislation means not just a lot for hungry children today; it means a lot for the future of this country, because children who in the past have not been so well served will have the opportunity to eat better, will have the opportunity to grow better, will have the opportunity to intellectually develop better, and will have the opportunity to be healthier. We owe that to our children. We took an important step.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RESTORING MARKET CREDIBILITY

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I rise to discuss the need of the Securities and Exchange Commission to take meaningful action to protect the credibility of our markets.

As my colleagues know, I believe deeply in the importance of our capital markets to America's future economic success and the ability of Americans to invest for their retirement years. I have said many times on this floor that democracy and our capital markets are the fundamental pillars that make America great. I have always maintained that if we do not have credible markets, our country will be in serious trouble. Credible capital markets are one of America's crown jewels and we should protect them as such.

I am deeply concerned about the state of our equity markets. Many rapid and dramatic developments have inextricably changed the way stocks are traded in today's marketplace. The markets have become fragmented and dominated by high-frequency trading.

These changes came to a head on May 6 when stock prices spiraled out of control, ultimately dropping and recovering over 500 points during a dizzying 20-minute time period.

It is clear we must rely more than ever on our regulators to protect the integrity and credibility of our capital markets. Without a doubt, the SEC—the Securities and Exchange Commission—along with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission—CFTC—has worked heroically to study the flash crash and put circuit breakers in place to prevent another event of the magnitude we witnessed on May 6 from occurring, or even more. But that is not anywhere—nowhere even close—to enough.

As Chairman Mary Schapiro has repeatedly stated, our markets exist to perform two principal functions: capital formation so that companies can raise capital and invest, create jobs and grow; and attracting and serving long-term investors to help facilitate that process. The May 6 flash crash revealed structural flaws in our market structure that must be addressed—must be addressed—in order to ensure our markets are performing their best and highest purposes.

There are many questions that remain unanswered and many solutions that I hope the SEC already has been exploring. More and more market participants and regulators are sharing their own concerns about the overall performance of our equity markets.

Michael Cembalest, the chief investment officer of J.P. Morgan's private banking division, wrote a commentary on July 13. This is J.P. Morgan. Mr. Cembalest outlined several areas of current market structure, including the market's increasing reliance on volume driven by high-frequency traders, which merit careful review.

In addition to supporting circuit breakers, Mr. Cembalest suggested that high-frequency traders should: ''be required to register as broker-dealers . . . [and] act more like the floor specialists they're replacing.''

Cembalest also noted that while high-frequency volume has ostensibly made trading cheaper by narrowing the spreads investors often pay to get their orders filled, there are other costs associated with trading that might be less obvious. One such cost, according to Cembalest, occurs when high-frequency traders ''spray the tape'' with thousands of quotes to ''ferret out'' the intentions of large investors, and then trade ahead of their order flow.

A draft report submitted by a British member of the European Parliament to the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs expresses similar concerns.

The report, which could influence the European Union's ongoing review of market structure, states ''limiting systemic risk must be prioritized.'' Accordingly, it proposes that all trading platforms should ''stress-test their technology and surveillance systems.'' It also called for ''an examination of the costs and benefits of high frequency trading on markets and its impact upon other market users. . . .'' Finally, the report calls for ''the regulation of firms that pursue high frequency trading strategies to ensure that they have robust systems and controls with ongoing regulatory reviews of the algorithms they use.''

While I stated many of these concerns last August 21 in a letter to Chair Schapiro, it has taken almost a year later—and in large part due to the May 6 flash crash—that these ideas have finally gone mainstream and people are talking about it in all the different areas of the news media. Although the task before us is daunting, as even tweaking the market's structure is rife with potential unintended consequences, the SEC must act to protect investors and restore market credibility in the coming months. Navigating these issues will be difficult, particularly with so many business models based, or even dependent, on the existing regulatory framework.

Another challenge comes in the form of the recently enacted Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act which places a raft of new responsibilities, including 95 rulemakings and 22 studies, on the Securities and Exchange Commission. Nevertheless, the SEC must triage its responsibilities and work expeditiously to adopt much needed reforms in the market structure area. There can be no back burner when it comes to resolving a broken market structure. There can be no delay when long-term investors are losing confidence. The time for action is now.

The direction the Commission takes in its bid to fulfill its mission will say much about the type of country in which we live. As difficult as it might be, regulators must stand apart from the industries they regulate, listening and understanding industry's point of view, but doing so at arm's length and with a clear conviction that on balance, our capital markets exist for the greater good of all Americans.

This is a test of whether the Commission is just a ''regulator by consensus,'' which only moves forward when it finds solutions favored by large constituencies on Wall Street, or if it indeed exists to serve a broader mission and therefore will act decisively to ensure the markets perform their two primary functions of facilitating capital formation and serving the interests of long-term investors.

A consensus regulator may tinker here and there on the margins, adopt patches when the markets spring a leak, and reach for low-hanging fruit when Wall Street itself reaches a consensus about permissible changes. In these times, however, the Commission must be bold and move forward. The American people deserve no less.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST H.R. 4994

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, earlier today we had some suggestion on the floor of the Senate about the Cobell case—that is the settlement of the Cobell case—the Federal court case Cobell, et al. v. Salazar. A negotiation ensued late last year with an agreement in December of last year that would settle at last—at long, long last—a 15-year litigation in Federal court dealing with American Indians and the mismanagement of their trust accounts—literally stealing and looting trust accounts over the years and, in addition to that, a substantial amount of incompetence along the way.

I described today people who have had oil wells on their land and who have lived in poverty because somebody else got the money from their oil wells. They didn't get it, despite the fact that the government held their land in trust and promised to provide them their income from that land, whether it was from minerals, oil, grazing, agriculture, or another activity. For 140 years, American Indians have too often been cheated.

Well, a court case that has existed now for 15 years determined that the Federal Government had a responsibility and liability. Rather than have that court case continue for more years in the Federal courts, there was a negotiation late last year with Interior Secretary Ken Salazar and Cobell plaintiffs. They reached an agreement and the Federal judge gave Congress 30 days to provide the funding and approve the settlement. The Congress did not do that in 30 days. In fact, the deadline for the settlement has been extended now six times during which the Congress has not acted.

We have tried very hard to find ways to satisfy everybody here, but apparently that is not capable of being done today. I am profoundly disappointed in that. I think my colleague from Wyoming wishes he were one of the negotiators. He was not, of course. It was the Interior Secretary who and the plaintiffs who negotiated. The Congress simply is an evaluator of whether it wishes to dispense the funding for the settlement that was done. I was not a negotiator. Nobody in Congress was a negotiator.

The question isn't, by the way, whether Indians were cheated or whether they are owed money as a result of mismanagement and fraud over these decades. The Federal court has already determined that was the case. They found in favor of the plaintiffs, and then the case was appealed further by the Federal Government.

The question is whether we have a responsibility here. We do. The Federal court has already found that to be the case. The question is whether we will meet our responsibility. This negotiation that ensued with Cobell v. Salazar, as far as I am concerned, represented a sound and reasonable approach, and I believe we should fund and approve it and move forward.

The unanimous-consent request that I am going to offer includes Cobell v. Salazar and the authorized settlement in that case, as well as the approval and funding for the final settlement of claims from the Black farmers discrimination litigation that has been discussed at some length on the floor as well.

Mr. President, having said that, I ask unanimous consent that the Finance Committee be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 4994, and that the Senate proceed to its consideration; that the substitute amendment at the desk, which authorizes the settlement of Cobell, et al., v. Ken Salazar, et al., and to provide an appropriation for final settlement claims from In re Black Farmers Discrimination Litigation, be considered and agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read a third time, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, all without intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I do support the Cobell lawsuit. I have great admiration for my colleague from North Dakota and the considerable work he has done as chairman of the committee. He has worked very effectively and passionately and he also worked with Secretary Salazar to get to a point where we can move forward. We are not quite there yet in terms of the policy or the payment issue. We are not quite there, but I will offer the following alternative to the proposal the chairman has presented to the Senate. It is along the lines of things I have been discussing with Secretary Salazar and the administration.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3754, which was introduced earlier today; that the bill be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DORGAN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Is there objection to the original request?

Mr. BARRASSO. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me say again how extraordinarily disappointed I am. I have in my hand the proposal Senator BARRASSO offered to the Secretary of the Interior.

By the way, I don't accuse anybody of bad faith. The Senator from Wyoming is a friend of mine. I am enormously disappointed with him at this point. He has a right to be disappointed with me, if he wishes. Let me just say this. This negotiation ensued last November and December, resulting in a settlement. None of us here were part of that settlement—excuse me, we weren't a part of the negotiation that reached the settlement. That is not the role of the Senate, to be involved in a 100-person negotiation.

The lawsuit was a suit brought by plaintiffs against the Secretary of the Interior. The negotiations were negotiations with the Secretary of the Interior, who was the defendant in that suit. That is appropriate and the way it should be.

If we don't like what that negotiations developed and don't support the settlement and believe we can do better, then we should object. But then we don't get this done. That has happened six times this year. Over and over and over again, we have failed to act on this matter.

My colleague has five things he wants that are different than the settlement. Maybe they are better, I don't know. I don't have the foggiest idea. I said to him a while ago that I wish he would take yes for an answer because the response to his requests of the Interior Secretary was a letter from the Secretary saying he agreed with him and would do them. But my colleague wants them in legislative language. That changes the settlement and the negotiation.

It is 7:30 on a Thursday night in August, months and months and months after the settlement was sent to the Congress by a Federal judge, saying do this in 30 days. I just say it is very hard to get things done. Next, it will be somebody else who has four provisions or five provisions or who can write the settlement better or think it through more clearly. I don't know. I do know this. The people who have been cheated—and there are a lot of them and many of whom have died waiting for this settlement—are not going to get any benefits from this settlement until this Congress decides whether it is going to pass legislation dealing with the settlement.

It may be that any Member of the Congress can do a better job and write better provisions, except that we weren't the negotiators because we were not the defendants in the lawsuit. We have every right to say no, if that is the point. We have said no since last December. If that is the point, I suppose more plaintiffs will die. They will wait years and probably go back to Federal court. Maybe we can go another 10 years in Federal court, having lawyers earning money and Indians living on lands with oil wells 100 yards from their house and they get checks of 5 cents or 8 cents or maybe $3 as revenue from the wells. That is what has been happening for the last 130 years.

I understand why there is frustration. If I sound frustrated, think of the people I describe who have been cheated and have lived in poverty most of their lives because they have not had the opportunity to get income from the lands they owned. I don't understand it. I guess people see competing UCs, and wonder what is the result of what are called in the Senate competing UCs? Does anybody go home feeling good? Not me. We are either going to do this or not. If we don't like this settlement, let's not do it. I happen to like it; let's do it. My colleague, perhaps, wants to respond.

I will yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, again, I have a great deal of respect for my colleague from North Dakota. He is compassionate and makes a compelling argument. We do need to settle the Cobell lawsuit. I ask the leaders to, over the next couple weeks, come together and allow for a very limited debate, possibly a few amendments on the floor, and then an up-or-down vote.

That is the sort of thing we need to do—in the light of day—with the Members of the Senate, not something that continues to be brought forth with the goal of getting a unanimous-consent agreement. We are not there.

I think the ideas I have brought forward are good. They come forward because those are the ideas I have had brought to me through various tribes from around the country who have concerns about the settlement. There have been large meetings of different tribes who have come out in support of these ideas that they have brought to me. I think it is very reasonable for the Senate, if we can arrange for a limited time for debate on the specifics and not be asked in a unanimous consent on the last evening before Members of this body have scattered home to their States, when they are no longer here. They have been told they are not going to vote again until the middle of September.

I think it is reasonable to ask the Senate to have a discussion on this and then a vote. If the Senate, in its wisdom, decides that is what they want and they want to pass this as written, then the will of the Senate has been worked. That is why I raise these concerns tonight.

With great admiration for the chairman, who has worked so well, in a bipartisan way on our committee, we have worked together on legislation on Indian affairs. He is chairman and I am vice chairman. I can understand his concerns and wanting to get this settled. I do too. I feel obligated to bring forth the concerns I have heard from across this country and bring them here.

That is the reason I object to the settlement tonight, and I would love to have our leaders work together to bring this forward to the floor for discussion, debate, and then an up-or-down vote.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, let me describe the difficulty with the procedure my colleague described. We can't just bring something up for a vote, because if somebody here doesn't like it, they object. Then you have to file a cloture motion, and it takes 48 hours to get a cloture vote. Then you have 30 hours postcloture. That is what we run into. I agree with that; let's put the best idea up and have a vote on it. If you don't like the settlement and decide that somehow these plaintiffs are not worthy, despite the fact they have been bilked for 130 years, then vote no. But we can't even get a vote.

At any rate, I will wait and see if there is a better idea that will get votes in the Senate or are we going to continue every 30 days or so to say to this Federal judge that we understand a settlement was negotiated and reached on behalf of the United States of America, but we don't intend to vote for it?

I have another bill at the desk. Before I ask unanimous consent, I will describe it. In the piece of legislation we passed today, dealing with FMAP, and funding for teachers, and so on, there was a provision that was first described as a pay-for but actually scored as zero, which meant it was a pay-for that had zero impact. It does have an impact on American Indians, and I wanted to describe it briefly.

When the Economic Recovery Act was passed, we proposed that at least a small amount of money go to Indian reservations around this country because they had the highest rates of unemployment. So there was put in place a piece of legislation that provided an Indian guaranteed loan program account. There was $6.8 million remaining in that account that would support a substantial number of projects around the country—somewhere in the neighborhood of $80 million—that would put a lot of people to work—investing in new infrastructure and projects. That legislation—the so-called pay-for that is scored as zero in the bill passed today—in my judgment, we need to rescind that action because it had no impact on the legislation the Senate passed. But it will have a substantial impact on loan guarantees for these Indian reservations, most of which have the highest rates of unemployment in the country.

I have spoken to a good many people about the need to do this. Again, I have been on the phone to the Congressional Budget Office. They say that a zero score—as I introduced it today, it will not score. Therefore, I believe it is very important to do.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 3761, which is at the desk; that the bill be read the third time and passed; that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; and that any statements related to the bill be printed in the RECORD, as if read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, this is something my colleagues have not had a chance to review. As a result, and not knowing the specific details and with colleagues now traveling back to their home States, on behalf of them, I do object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I understand my colleague from Wyoming suggests there are some here who may not be acquainted with this legislation. I have spoken to both Republicans and Democrats today, during the course of the proceedings, because I think it is very important. I think this is something we need to fix as well. I understand my colleague from Wyoming is objecting on behalf of others.

Let me make one other point on this. I have spent a fair amount of time talking to Senator KYL about this. He is on an airplane at the moment. He was not able to hear from the Congressional Budget Office before he left town. I do hope, even though there is an objection now—and to be fair to my colleague, he is objecting on behalf of other Senators with respect to this—that we can find a way to repair this because I think it is very important that we do so.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter dated August 5, 2010 from the CBO.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, August 5, 2010.

Hon. BYRON L. DORGAN,
Chairman, Committee on Indian Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As you requested, CBO has reviewed a draft bill to ensure that amounts appropriated to the Bureau of Indian Affairs under the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 remain available until September 30, 2010. The draft bill would repeal a provision in H.R. 1586, the FAA Air Transportation Modernization and Safety Improvement Act, as passed by the Senate on August 5, 2010, that would rescind certain unobligated balances from the Indian Guaranteed Loan Program Account.

CBO estimates that for the purpose of budget enforcement procedures in the Senate, passage of the draft bill would be considered to have no budgetary effect, because it would be amending legislation that had not yet cleared the Congress.

We also estimate that if the draft bill is passed by the Senate, passage of both bills by the House would lead to about $3 million more in direct spending than passage of just H.R. 1586 because the rescission in H.R. 1586 would be repealed. For the purpose of budget enforcement procedures in the House, that $3 million would affect the cost of whichever bill cleared the House later.

That $3 million cost would not count for the purpose of statutory pay-as-you-go procedures, because the funds affected were designated as an emergency requirement when originally appropriated.

I hope this information is helpful to you. If you wish further details on this estimate, we would be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Jeff LaFave who may be reached at 226–2860.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS W. ELMENDORF,
Director.

Mr. DORGAN. With that, I yield the floor.

TRIBUTE TO HERCULEZ GOMEZ

Mr. REID. Mr. President, today I come to the Senate floor to congratulate Herculez Gomez, a dedicated and disciplined soccer player from Las Vegas, who was one of 23 men to represent the country during the 2010 FIFA World Cup in South Africa as part of the U.S. Men's National Team. Herculez, who currently plays in Mexico's Professional First Division for Pachuca F.C., made the final cut after being selected from the 30-man provisional World Cup U.S. roster.

As the oldest of five children, Herculez was born in Los Angeles to Mexican-American parents and later moved to Las Vegas where he was raised. While attending Las Vegas High School, he joined the high school's soccer league, where he cultivated a passion that would launch his career in the MLS league, and later earn him an unexpected, but well-deserved slot to represent his home State of Nevada and the United States in the 2010 World Cup this past June.

Throughout the years Herculez has developed a very successful soccer career, playing for several teams both in the United States and Mexico. Despite having suffered several physical injuries, such as broken foots and torn ligaments, through perseverance and patience Herculez has made a name for himself as dedicated player and rising star. While playing with the Puebla F.C. in Mexico, he became the first American player to score the most number of goals for a foreign league, netting 10 goals in the 2010 Mexican season.

During the 2010 FIFA World Cup, Herculez played in three of the four U.S. men's team World Cup games, and started in one of them. Although the team's quest for our first World Cup ended in the round of 16, Herculez represented Nevada and his country brilliantly and I look forward to seeing bigger and better performances from this Las Vegan star.

FOR-PROFIT COLLEGES

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, lately it seems that there is nothing the Senate can agree on. We argue on partisan lines over every issue imaginable.

But I know of at least one issue that would bring every Member of the Senate to the floor in agreement: Pell grants.

This is a program designed to help poor students get the education they need to give themselves and their families a better future. Millions of Americans have seen the benefits of the Federal investment in Pell grants first hand.

Over the past 2 years, the Congress has provided significant increases in funding to the Pell grant program. We have raised the maximum Pell grant to an all time high of $5,550 and we set a course so the grants will continue to rise reaching almost $6,000 in 2017.

I have supported those increases. The recent expansion of the Pell grant program is essential for our economic recovery as Americans are returning to college to learn new skills.

But the investment does not come without a cost. To finance the higher Pell grant levels, we invested $17 billion from the Recovery Act and $36 billion from the recent reconciliation bill.

And we still have a shortfall this year caused by the tremendous new demand for Pell grants.

I have spoken before about my concern that increases to Federal student aid are diminished by the skyrocketing cost of higher education at many colleges and universities, but today I want to discuss a new threat to the Federal Pell grant program—in the form of for-profit colleges.

I am worried that a portion of the investment of taxpayer funding into higher education may be going to waste at the hands of for-profit colleges.

For-profit institutions of higher education have experienced a meteoric rise. Two decades ago, the phrases ''for-profit college'' or ''proprietary school'' would have conjured up images of the beauty school around the corner or the trade school down the street. Most of those schools were small mom-and-pop operations. Some were bad apples that wasted taxpayer money and some provided needed training to students with no other opportunities, but their impact was small.

That is no longer the case. Today, the largest recipient of Federal financial aid is a for-profit institution that enrolls over 450,000 students, many of those online.

Enrollment at for-profit colleges has grown by 225 percent over the past 10 years.

The 14 publicly traded companies in the industry enrolled 1.4 million students as of 2008.

Because of the high price of tuition and the active recruitment of low-income students, for-profit colleges receive a tremendous amount of Federal financial aid funding. For-profit colleges received $4.3 billion in Pell grants in 2009.

We also need to examine the funding that for-profit schools are receiving from other Federal sources.

Along with the billions of dollars in Pell grants and Federal student loans, the for-profit college industry also receives significant funding from the Department of Defense through tuition assistance and from the Department of Veterans Affairs through the G.I. bill.

Some for-profit institutions serve active-duty students and veterans well by offering flexible course schedules, distance learning, and course credit for military training.

But there are also reports of for-profit colleges aggressively targeting military personnel. One prominent for-profit has 452 military-focused recruiters. It is troublesome that so much money is spent on recruiting students whose tuition is paid by the Federal Government.

The tuition payments for active military and veterans funding does not count towards the 90 percent Federal funding limitation, which makes Defense and G.I. bill funding particularly attractive to for-profit colleges.

Their tactics are working. Seven of the top 10 recipients of G.I. bill funding in the last school year were for-profit colleges.

It is time we examined these sources of funding. This week, Senator WEBB and I are sending letters to Secretary Gates and Secretary Shinseki asking some important questions about the Federal investment in for-profit colleges as well as the quality controls over these institutions.

And students who attend for-profit colleges are more likely to borrow student loans than students attending public or nonprofit colleges. And they take out larger student loans.

In 2008, one-quarter of graduates from for-profit schools had borrowed more than $40,000 to finance their education.

There are good trade schools and for-profit colleges, and they serve an important purpose with job training that provides a way up the economic ladder.

But that is not the case across the board. Too often, those loans and Pell investments are not paying off.

For-profit schools enroll just 10 percent of all students in higher education, but their students use 25 percent of all Federal aid and represent over 40 percent of all student loan defaults.

Students are enrolling in for-profit colleges in search of opportunity. At some of these schools they learn important skills, graduate, and move on to good careers.

But too many students drop out or graduate only to realize that the education they have borrowed so heavily for has not provided them the skills or credentials they need to find employment.

These students will often find their high monthly student loan payments impossible to meet and stop paying.

A few weeks ago, the Chicago Tribune told the story of Denise Parnell. Denise is a single mother who dreams of becoming a nursing assistant.

She enrolled at an Illinois for-profit college where she completed an 8-month program that she was promised would lead to a career.

But in June, Denise and the other students in her program learned that the school's program wasn't approved by the State Department of Public Health. Denise was not eligible to take the exam she needed to become a certified nursing assistant.

Denise had wasted a year of her life in a program leading nowhere. And even worse, she owes more than $13,000 in student loans for her trouble.

Before she enrolled at that for-profit college, I wish Denise had looked to her local community college.

There, she would find many programs of study that could give her the skills she needs to start a new career as a health care worker. But community colleges are not able to compete with the marketing skills of for-profit colleges.

Many for-profit colleges spend substantial sums of money on recruiting and marketing through television commercials, billboards, phone solicitation, and other direct marketing.

In fact, many for-profit colleges spend barely half of their budget on education and nearly one-third on recruiting and marketing. At least one prominent school actually spends less on teaching than it does on marketing.

This is a recipe for disaster. Low-income students come to for-profit colleges in droves, lured by promises of high-paying careers, flexible courses, and easy financial aid.

But when they enroll, they may find that far less money is put into educating them than on recruiting them.

Today, the Government Accountability Office released a report documenting the recruiting practices of for-profit colleges.

Senator HARKIN asked GAO to send undercover investigators to determine if for-profit colleges' admissions representatives were engaged in deceptive marketing tactics.

GAO sent undercover applicants to 15 for-profit colleges, including two in Illinois.

At every single one, they found that recruiters made deceptive or otherwise questionable statements.

And at four of the schools, the for-profit college representatives actually encouraged fraud.

Some of the tapes of those encounters would shock you.

The recruiters made false claims about potential salaries, program duration, cost, and graduation rates. Other recruiters encouraged students to lie on their financial aid forms.

In one video, the representative informs a prospective applicant that some graduates are making $1,000 a day as barbers in the District of Columbia. That would be a salary of around $250,000 per year. The average barber in DC makes $19,000.

In another video, the recruiter claims that you don't have to pay back your student loans at all. She says that unlike a car loan, no one will come after you for not paying a student loan.

In several videos, recruiters refuse to let the applicant speak to financial aid officers until he enrolls in the school.

Throughout, the representatives of the for-profit colleges employ aggressive tactics and convey false information to prospective students in order to sign them up.

Why is all this pressure placed on students? Money.

In many for-profit schools, recruiters' salaries, bonuses, or promotions are determined by how many students they sign up.

As a result, they try to bring in as many students as possible—regardless of their ability to succeed or complete the program—and load them up with loans.

Students deserve full and complete information when enrolling in a college and taking on large amounts of debt.

Students should be informed about debt loads, completion rates, job placement rates and salaries, and accreditation information so that they and their families can make smart choices.

Instead, students are being misled, misinformed, and lied to.

Students are not the only ones being taken advantage of by the worst for-profit colleges. Taxpayers are on the hook as well when Pell grants are wasted or when student loans are defaulted on.

When a student cannot repay his loan, the college he attended bears no responsibility. Instead, the taxpayers take the loss.

Steve Eisman, profiled in the book ''The Big Short,'' has discussed the similarities between the subprime mortgage industry and the for-profit college industry. Some of his predictions are startling.

He estimates that over the next 10 years, former students of for-profit colleges will owe $330 billion on defaulted loans and fees. Given our current fiscal situation, that is not a cost we can bear.

Eisman believes that if we don't rein in this industry, we will face another social disaster akin to the collapse of the housing industry. I hope that does not come to pass.

This is a situation that demands our attention.

Along with several of my colleagues in the House and Senate, I've asked the Government Accountability Office to review the quality of for-profit colleges and make recommendations based on its findings.

I commend Senator HARKIN for holding oversight hearings in his committee on this important issue, including a hearing this week on marketing and recruitment by for-profit colleges. I look forward to working with him on legislative action.

I also commend the administration and specifically the Department of Education for their engagement on this issue.

Unfortunately for the taxpayer and for countless students, the previous administration loosened many regulations that have made it easier for abuses to occur. I am pleased to see the current administration back on the appropriate track. The Department of Education has proposed a number of new regulations that will address some of the abuses in the industry.

Several of my colleagues are working with me on the President's Deficit Reduction Commission. One of the principles guiding our work is not just what we're spending, but how wisely.

Does it make sense for the Federal Government to send Pell grants to schools that are spending more of that money on marketing than on education? Does it make sense for the Federal Government to guarantee loans to students who are given no realistic chance at the career they think they are training for?

We need to look carefully at this trend in for-profit schools. If enrollment has increased by 225 percent over 10 years, while $4 billion in Federal dollars went to for-profit schools last year, and 40 percent of their students are defaulting on their loans . . . this may not make sense.

REMEMBERING SENATOR ROBERT C. BYRD

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, the death of Senator Robert Byrd is a tremendous loss to the Senate, the State of West Virginia, and the entire Nation. As the longest serving Member of Congress, his political career spanned multiple Presidencies, and he was a witness to countless American advances and achievements. He has served his state and our country for more than half a century, and he will be greatly missed.

Senator Byrd embodied the history and traditions of the Senate, and his incredible knowledge of our Constitution, Congress and the legislative process benefited every Member who served alongside him. I met with Senator Byrd when I was first elected to the Senate, and I will be forever grateful for his generosity and willingness to assist his colleagues.

I will always remember Senator Byrd as a committed public servant who was deeply devoted to his State and his country. He was known as the conscience of the Senate for his dedication to the body's history, legislative process and rules, serving as a principled legislator. He made many sacrifices to give his life to public service, and we owe a lot to Senator Byrd for this reason. I am deeply saddened by his passing and know he will be missed.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, I rise to pay tribute to a colleague whose devotion to this body, and to this Nation, was personal, heartfelt and legendary. I am talking about none other than the senior senator from West Virginia, Senator Robert Byrd.

Senator Byrd's time on Earth was a life characterized by commitment. He exemplified this rare quality through his 70-year marriage to his high school sweetheart Erma James Byrd. But this was far from the only deep commitment in Senator Byrd's life. His dedication to the U.S. Senate was proved by his actions and his storied career. His life in the Senate began in 1958 with a victory that included 59 percent of the vote, the smallest margin of victory in Senator Byrd's half century-plus career. During his 57 years in Congress, Byrd worked with 12 future Presidents. He was known for telling his colleagues that he did not serve under any Presidents, but alongside them.

In Senator Byrd's portrait in the Old Senate Chamber, his image is surrounded by his wife, the Bible, and the U.S. Constitution. This is only fitting, considering that Senator Byrd used references from the Bible and the U.S. Constitution in many of his speeches and in his everyday dealings with fellow lawmakers. In a speech by Senator Byrd on October 13, 1989, he said, ''The Constitution is the old landmark which they have set. And if we do not rise to the call of the moment and take a stand, take a strong stand, against our own personal interests or against party interests, and stand for the Constitution, then how might we face our children and grandchildren when they ask of us as Caesar did to the centurion, 'How do we fare today?' and the centurion replied, You will be victorious. As for myself, whether I live or die, tonight I shall have earned the praise of Caesar.' ''

I can say that Senator Byrd is deserving of the praise of West Virginians, and, indeed, all Americans, for his devotion to the Senate and to our Nation. He will be missed by his colleagues, and we are grateful for his life's work.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, no Senator has ever loved the institution of the U.S. Senate more than Senator Robert Byrd. I firmly believe that. He truly believed that the upper Chamber of Congress was the greatest deliberative body on Earth and he always strived to preserve its traditions and history for the generations to come as well as being the Senate's foremost instructor on Senate procedure and process.

I was able to be a ''student'' of Senator Byrd's instruction when we worked together in 2005 to preserve Senate rule XXII, commonly known as the ''filibuster.'' Senator Byrd joined with me, along with six other Republican Senators and six Democrat Senators to form what became the ''Gang of 14.'' During the meetings between these 14 Members, which were often held in my office, I fondly recall the silence that would overcome the room when Senator Byrd spoke about the history of the filibuster and the rights of the minority in the Senate. It is not often that 13 members of the Senate are quiet for any given period of time. But Senator Byrd's stature and intellect brought the room to a standstill.

Senator Byrd is remembered for being a strong majority leader and minority leader for his party. But as he reminded all of us during those meetings in my office, when he served as majority leader during President Reagan's time in office, Senator Byrd did not lead his Democratic caucus to filibuster any of President Reagan's judicial nominees. That was a different time with different leaders, but Senator Byrd's actions reflect his sincere desire for statesmanship and his respect for the President's nominees. His speech on the Senate floor in 2005 regarding the filibuster reflected this desire when he said:

> I rise today to make a request of my fellow Senators. In so doing, I reach out to all Senators on both sides of the aisle, respectful of the institution of the Senate and of the opinions of all Senators, respectful of the institution of the Presidency as well. I ask each Senator to pause for a moment and reflect seriously on the role of the Senate as it has existed now for 217 years, and on the role that it will play in the future if the so-called nuclear option or the so-called constitutional option—one in the same—is invoked. I implore Senators to step back—step back, step back, step back—from the precipice. Step back away from the cameras and the commentators and contemplate the circumstances in which we find ourselves. Things are not right, and the American people know that things are not right. The political discourse in our country has become so distorted, so unpleasant, so strident, so unbelievable . . .

He was not only a leader in 2005 against removing the judicial filibuster rule, he was a life-long leader in the Senate against allowing Senators to issue secret holds. His motives were noble, and he fought for its elimination until the end. In his final speech, entered into the RECORD but not delivered, he defended an individual Senator's right to block legislation in secret. ''Our Founding Fathers intended the Senate,'' he lectured colleagues last month in one of his last appearances, to have ''unlimited debate and the protection of minority rights.''

Senator Byrd's respect for Senate rules and procedure were second only to his defense and passion for the Constitution. Because of his leadership, we were able to establish September 17 as Constitution Day. Now, annually, students across the country will learn about and celebrate the document that governs our Nation and hopefully understand the significance of this unparalleled document that has established freedom and sovereignty of our citizens for hundreds of years.

Senator Byrd spent practically all of his adult life serving the American people for which we are all grateful. Even when he disagreed with his peers in the Senate, he respected their intellect and views. I am honored to have served beside him. He once said, ''On the great issues, the Senate has always been blessed with senators who were able to rise above party and consider first and foremost the national interest.'' I agree and hope the Senate continues to attract candidates who will rise above politics for the good of our country and who will appreciate the history of the institution as Senator Byrd did.

Senator Byrd gave his life to the service of his country and the Senate and the Nation will miss him and the important leadership and sense of history that he brought to this body every day.

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. President, today I would like to add to the heartfelt sentiments we have heard expressed by many colleagues and many more around the country over these past several weeks in paying tribute to our departed colleague, Senator Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

As an American, pondering what Senator Byrd has done, the history he has been a part of, and the path he took from the small towns of southern West Virginia's coalfields, is inspiring. From the perspective of a new Senator, I must say that the life and career of Senator Byrd is more than a little daunting. I have served just shy of 20 months, and I have voted in this Chamber slightly more than 600 times.

Those numbers seem like rounding errors compared to the numbers we have heard over the last several days in reference to the service of Senator Byrd: Elected to nine full terms, more than 51 years in the Senate—more than 4 years longer than the next longest serving Senator; he cast nearly 19,000 votes, 18,689, including 4,705 consecutive votes; he was twice majority leader; served also as Whip, conference secretary, minority leader, and President pro tempore; and he served on the Appropriations Committee continuously since being placed there in 1959 by then-majority leader Lyndon Johnson as a freshman in this body—more than 3 years before I was born and only about 2 weeks after Alaska became a State.

I am told by colleagues who served longer with Senator Byrd that while he was proud of those facts, the record he cherished the most was the time he spent with the love of his life, his childhood sweetheart and wife of 68 years, Erma. Senator Byrd was a man of deep faith, but from what I have heard of them as a couple, I do not doubt that all the glories of the afterlife pale for Senator Byrd compared to rejoining Erma.

I came to the Senate too late to hear most of his greatest speeches, but when he spoke, whether it was about a funding bill or the wars that we continue to wage, you listened. We all felt a great sadness when Senator Kennedy died last year, but many of us probably came to appreciate the depth of the historical significance of his departure from this body months earlier when we heard and saw another of the great legislators in American history, Robert C. Byrd, weep openly and unabashedly as he paid tribute to his friend and colleague. My service with Senator Byrd was nowhere as lengthy as his with Senator Kennedy, but I am profoundly affected by the honor of knowing the man, even for these past 2 years.

In the short time we did serve together, I have still been able to learn from Senator Byrd. He was a statesman and a pillar of this institution, and a genuine historical figure that my son Jacob will learn about in school. But the thing that I will take from watching Senator Byrd that showed every day that we served together was that nothing was more important than the work he did for the people of the State that sent him here. All of us look to the people of our States for guidance on the matters of the day, and certainly Senator Byrd was attuned to the thoughts of the people of West Virginia. But there was more to it than just knowing what the people of his State thought.

His whole career was about making West Virginia a better place, expanding its infrastructure, educating its people, supporting its industries, and providing the circumstances in which economic development could take root and flourish. Improving the lives of the people of his State was what motivated Senator Byrd to come here almost 19,000 times for votes on any number of issues.

As I think of the impact Senator Byrd's career has had on West Virginia, I cannot help but think of the similarities between our two States. Alaska and West Virginia are both mostly rural, energy-producing States with pockets of intractable poverty. It is a mark of respect for his success at changing the world for the better that West Virginia has fewer poverty-stricken residents, and that remote regions of his state are less difficult to travel to and from than when Senator Byrd was first elected to Congress. He was an ardent supporter of the Appalachian Regional Commission, ARC, which was created to help solve the problems of poverty and hopelessness in his State by upgrading insufficient public infrastructure, building and maintaining educational facilities, and providing access to public and private sector assistance to improve health care, foster economic development and diversity, and provide opportunities for the people of the region beyond energy extraction and the few other traditional industries that existed there.

It is no surprise that when my predecessor, Senator Ted Stevens, was looking for a way to improve the lives of Alaskans, he saw in the ARC that his close friend and colleague, Senator Byrd, had worked so hard to support a model for the Denali Commission that he believed could create similar hope and opportunity in our State. My colleagues and I in the Alaska congressional delegation today are just as dedicated to the potential the Denali Commission represents for our State. We can only hope to have as much positive impact on the lives of Alaskans as Senator Byrd had with those of the West Virginians he was so proud to represent.

I do not have as many great stories about Senator Byrd as many of our other colleagues, but I will close with observations about the man, hard at work doing what he knew was right for his people, which inspired me. As the Senate worked to reform the Nation's health care system last year, a number of votes were late at night or early in the morning, and as many will remember, the weather last December was uncharacteristically cold and snowy. As an Alaskan and a relatively young man, getting to the Capitol during a blizzard was not a big ordeal. Watching Senator Byrd, in his nineties and in obvious frail health, make his way to the Senate Chamber time and time again in his wheelchair, including for a final vote very early on the morning of Christmas Eve, was an inspiration. Seeing it then, and reflecting on it in the last several days, made me appreciate more fully the man's dedication to the people he served.

Every State deserves Senators with those motivations, and while I will always marvel at the man's encyclopedic knowledge of the Senate and countless other things, the thing I will emulate about the life and career of Robert C. Byrd, for however long the voters of Alaska choose to have me as their Senator, is that my job is to make the lives of Alaskans better.

I believe Senator Byrd would approve.

Mr. BROWN of Massachusetts. Mr. President, today I rise to speak about our Nation's longest serving Senator who dedicated his life to public service. Senator Byrd first came to the Senate the same year I was born, 1959, and I took office just a few months before he passed away. Though I did not have the opportunity to know him well, each day I learn more of his legacy and his impact on what he referred to as the Second Great Senate.

Robert Byrd was a staunch defender of the Constitution and the institution of the Senate. Many have told the story of how he carried his pocket Constitution in his jacket wherever he went to remind us all of that document's importance in making the laws of today. His speeches on the Senate floor were legendary and illustrated his devotion to the place where he served for more than 50 years.

In his role as a Senator from West Virginia, Robert Byrd worked tirelessly to modernize his State and end its economic isolation. But he did more than just serve his State. Robert Byrd's dedication to the complexity and the many traditions of the Senate was extraordinary. He was passionately, and often solely, committed to the Founders' wise intent that the Senate was to remain a bulwark against the power of the Presidency.

Through relentless effort, dedication, and commitment, Robert Byrd rose from humble beginnings to become one of our Nation's most skilled legislators. I thank him for his many years of public service in representing West Virginia and our Nation. My thoughts and prayers go out to his family and friends as they mourn his great loss.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my sincere condolences following the passing of my friend and colleague, Senator Robert C. Byrd. This is obviously the end of an era. Senator Byrd has seen the landing of man on the Moon, the passage of the Civil Rights Act, the resignation of one President and the impeachment trial of another, and countless other significant and historical landmarks during his unparalleled Senate career.

Each of us has his or her own memories of Senator Byrd's kindness and devotion to the Senate as an institution. The place will not be the same without him.

My wife Joyce and I extend our deepest condolences to his daughters and the entire Byrd family.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR HOLD

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I rise today to inform the body that I have placed a hold on Executive Calendar nomination No. 1051, the nomination of Ambassador Frank Ricciardone to be Ambassador to the Republic of Turkey.

COMMENDING SENATOR ALAN K. SIMPSON

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, in Wyoming's 120 year history, only 21 people have served as U.S. Senator for our State. One stands out as a compassionate, skilled and illustrious figure. United States Senator Alan K. Simpson is a lifelong public servant who is dedicated to his family, to Wyoming, and to the United States.

Al Simpson has fought to uphold the values and ideals of our country for most of his life. Whether he was serving in the U.S. Army in Germany, the Wyoming House of Representatives or in the U.S. Senate Chamber, his commitment and contributions were evident. When the Nation calls on Al Simpson to serve, he is always there to work and fight for our best interests.

United States Senator Alan K. Simpson served in this Chamber from 1979 to 1997. Fortunately for Wyoming and our Nation, his service did not end when he retired. He has enthusiastically served numerous groups and organizations, which all have benefitted from his presence. From his beloved alma mater, the University of Wyoming, to the world renowned Buffalo Bill Historical Center, Al Simpson devotes his time, talent and treasure. When Al sees an unmet need in our community, he works to see that it is addressed. Wyoming—and America—are better because of him.

This year, the Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Wyoming have selected Al Simpson as their Man of the Year. While Al has received many honors throughout his life, to be honored by the Boys and Girls Clubs is very special to him.

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Wyoming plays a vitally important role in our State. They serve all youth regardless of economic circumstances. They continue to expand thanks to the generous support of the McMurry Foundation, the Martin Family Foundation, the Daniels Fund, the Casper Star Tribune and the Reader's Digest Foundation. Their inspiration and work has spread to adjacent counties.

The work of the Boys and Girls Clubs' dedicated staff and volunteers creates a positive environment for all children. As a result of the Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Wyoming, hundreds of Wyoming youth will have the opportunity to gain the experiences and build the skills needed for success. Their mission is the same as Al's—to make our community and our Nation a better place.

This award is special to Senator Al Simpson because his life's success is due in large part to the strength of his family. He lovingly called his mother Lorna 'the velvet hammer.' His father Senator and Governor Milward Simpson was Al's model for public service and civic leadership. His big brother Pete Simpson explains, ''The extent to which we became men we owe to our father.'' Even Pete helped mold Al into the man who continues to have a positive impact on Wyoming and our Nation. Al readily admits that he and Pete were a spirited duo and gave their parents heartburn. Certainly, Al would have benefitted from the influence of a Boys and Girls Club! However, he was fortunate that the strong love and solid support of his parents carried him through a tumultuous adolescence.

It was Al's good fortune that Ann Schroll accepted his proposal for marriage. Over the years, Ann has been a guiding force for Al. He regularly says he would not have accomplished anything without Ann by his side.

Many years ago, in a high school commencement address, Al said, ''The real reason I made it in life is because there were other people who believed in me, even when I didn't believe in myself. They were people willing to give me a second chance. Those are the people I never forgot in life: parents, teachers, many people who took time with me, and for me. . . . '' Just like Al had folks who stood by him and held him accountable, the staff and volunteers at the Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Wyoming believe in our youth. Al Simpson is a wonderful choice for the 2010 Man of the Year award. He is thankful for the support he received as a youth and is committed to give all young people in Wyoming a second chance.

It is because of his strong family values and his sense of duty to his community that the Boys and Girls Clubs Man of the Year is so meaningful to Al Simpson. This award tells this great statesman that Wyoming is thankful for his leadership.

I am so proud to call Al Simpson my friend. He is a respected mentor and adviser. It is fitting and terrific that the Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Wyoming have named him Man of the Year—and I ask that my colleagues join me in sending our congratulations to Al for this well-deserved honor.

REMEMBERING CONGRESSMAN EMILIO DADDARIO

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the life of former Connecticut Congressman Emilio Daddario who passed away on July 6, 2010.

One of the unique strengths of the United States of America is that our government derives its power from the people. It is dependent upon an educated populace, engaged in public affairs, and prepared to offer their services to make our society better and fairer for all of our benefit.

That system has worked well for more than 200 years thanks to citizens such as Emilio Daddario.

He was born in Newton Center, MA, on September 24, 1918. As a young man, he moved south to Middletown, CT, to attend Wesleyan University where he starred on the baseball and football teams. He was an exemplary athlete who twice received MVP honors in football, and was named team captain in 1938.

Upon his graduation in 1939, Emilio chose to pursue a career in law. After beginning law school at Boston University, he graduated from the University of Connecticut in 1942. He successfully passed the bar and moved back to Middletown to begin private practice. But then the call to serve his country came.

In 1943, he enlisted as a private in the U.S. Army. He was sent to the Mediterranean theater during World War II. There he was a key member of the team which captured Rodolfo Graziani, then-chief of staff to Italian Dictator Benito Mussolini, at the Hotel Milan in 1945. His distinguished service earned him the rank of captain, as well as the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal, and the Italian Medaglia d'Argento.

After the war, he could have easily gone back to private legal practice and no doubt would have been very successful at it. Instead, he chose to continue his military service as a member of the Connecticut National Guard and to pursue a life in the public arena by running for mayor of Middletown.

At just 28 years old, fresh from his service overseas, Emilio Daddario won that election. He served as mayor from 1946 until 1948 and was appointed judge of the Middletown Municipal Court.

In 1950, the Nation called on him again. This time, the 43 Division of the Connecticut National Guard, of which he was a member, was sent to engage in the Korean war. His military service in that conflict as a member of the Far East Liaison Group earned him promotion to the rank of major.

Upon returning to the United States in 1952 he chose to resume private law practice, this time in Hartford, CT. But the call to serve proved to be too strong, and in 1958, Daddario ran for the opportunity to serve the people of Connecticut's 1st Congressional District.

He won that election, as well as five more, serving as a member of the U.S. Congress until 1971. While in Congress, he sat on the House Science Committee where he became an advocate for science and technological innovation. He chaired two subcommittees and also in the planning and development of the Apollo missions to the moon.

In 1970, Emilio decided not to run for reelection to the House, and instead ran for Governor of Connecticut. He did not win that race. But he sought ways to remain involved in public policy, in particular issues related to science and technology. He returned to Congress in 1973, not as a member, but as the Director of the Office of Technology Assessment.

He also went on to serve as the president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and as co-chair of the American Bar Association's Association for the Advancement of Sciences, Conference of Lawyers and Scientists.

Emilio Daddario was just the sort of American citizen that our Nation's Founders were hoping for, and his legacy is one of exemplary public service, and commitment to making our Nation a better place for future generations. He was a devoted husband and father, and I know that he will be deeply missed. My deepest sympathies and prayers go out to his children, Richard, Anthony, and Stephen, and to the rest of his family.

90TH ANNIVERSARY OF WOMEN'S RIGHT TO VOTE

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today in honor of the 90th anniversary of women gaining the right to vote on August 26, 1920, and to acknowledge the celebration of this anniversary by the community of Las Cruces, NM.

The struggle for the right to vote began in 1848 at a convention in Seneca Falls, NY, hosted by Lucretia Mott, Mary Ann McClintock, and Elizabeth Cady Stanton. This convention began the seventy-two year struggle by women to win the right to vote, which was also a struggle to rise from second class citizenship and a struggle to gain equality. Women throughout the United States are empowered by the efforts of the brave and pioneering suffragists Susan B. Anthony, Carrie Chapman Catt, and Alice Paul. These women serve as an inspiration to those who secure leadership positions in industry, government, the military, and academia.

Las Cruces was founded in 1849 and became a town of the Territory of New Mexico in 1907. After gaining the right to vote, the women of Las Cruces sought elected office. These women include Bertha Paxton, who was the first female elected to the New Mexico State House of Representatives in 1922, Mrs. E. C. Wade, who was the first female elected as a Trustee in the town of Las Cruces in 1932, Ellen Steele, who was the first female elected as a New Mexico State Senator in 1985 from Dona Ana County and Dolores C. Archuleta who was the first Native American female elected to the Las Cruces City Council in 2001. In continuation of this tradition, the first female Governor will be elected by New Mexicans on November 2, 2010.

To celebrate and commemorate the 90th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th amendment to the U.S. Constitution, women will continue to advocate for responsible and responsive government through the election process. The League of Women Voters of Greater Las Cruces will hold a celebration with an informative panel on women's history of performance and films on the suffragists and the role of women in the political system to further commemorate this praiseworthy day.

I join with the League of Women Voters, the people of Las Cruces, and the people of New Mexico in celebration of this important day, August 26 when women finally won the right to vote and greatly enhanced their great contributions to our government and our society.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, tomorrow marks the 45th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act, a landmark piece of legislation which helped guarantee the right to vote to all Americans. As we approach the upcoming midterm elections, it is important to remember the journey of voting rights in America. Without this right, words and phrases like ''democracy,'' ''land of the free,'' and ''equality'' lack true meaning.

The right to vote traveled a long ugly road—a road we must all remember. Edmund Burke once said ''those who do not remember history are destined to repeat it.'' Some would say they are doomed to repeat it. For this reason, on this day and every day, we should remember how Americans, Black and White; young and old; men and women; stood, marched and fought together for equal access to the voting booth. We must ensure that all barriers to voting are removed.

There are many people who contributed to the voting rights movement. Today I would like to highlight one woman—Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer, a woman who was ''sick and tired of being sick and tired'' when it came to the denial of equal voting rights. Hamer, a great American hero, led a life most people could not imagine today. Despite having polio and only 4 months of schooling, Hamer became a matriarch of the voting rights movement.

On August 31, 1962, Hamer decided to exercise her constitutional right to vote by traveling 26 miles in Mississippi to register only to be confronted by the highway patrol and literary test requirements. After being denied her right to vote she didn't just sit down, she stood up and joined the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee and traveled all across the country speaking and registering other people to vote.

Hamer also helped organize ''Freedom Summer'' in 1964. She and thousands of civil rights supporters, many of them White college students, traveled to Mississippi and other Southern States to try to end the long time political disenfranchisement of African Americans in the region. Despite these nonviolent efforts for equality, on the very first day of Freedom Summer, three volunteers were brutally murdered. As America continued to march toward equality the Nation and its political leaders began to realize the horrific battle being waged against African Americans seeking equal treatment under the law.

As violence and frustration mounted, President Johnson pushed Congress to act and pass voting rights legislation. After research, multiple hearings and the longest filibuster in Senate history, Congress passed the Voting Rights Act of 1965. This bill provided all Americans—regardless of color—with nationwide protections against barriers and access to the voting booth. It contained protections against systematic methods of disenfranchisement by States and localities. Since its enactment, Congress has reauthorized the landmark legislation in an effort to remain vigilant against any forms of disenfranchisement.

In 2006, when Congress last took up reauthorization of this legislation, civil rights leader Congressman JOHN LEWIS said, ''forty-one years ago I gave a little blood on that bridge. So when I see what's happening in New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, it's a beginning of an effort not only to violate the letter but the spirit of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. And that must not be allowed to happen.'' With overwhelming bipartisan support, the House of Representatives passed the bill by a vote of 390–33 and the U.S. Senate passed the bill by a vote of 98–0.

Despite the bipartisan support and a large array of evidence demonstrating the continuing need for this legislation, some have argued that this legislation is no longer warranted. To those people, I say you are wrong. I have seen examples in my own State that prove how necessary this legislation is today. During my Senate campaign, just 4 years ago—the very same time the Congress was providing near unanimous support for the Voting Rights Act—I had the unfortunate experience of witnessing deceptive practices and tactics used to undermine the constitutional right to vote. Lines were inexplicably longer and slower at polling locations in African-American districts and not simply because there were more people voting. Phone calls were made to minority districts reminding them to vote on Wednesday, not Tuesday; and a fraudulent sample ballot was targeted to confuse minority voters. I remind you that this was in 2006, not 1956.

Just two years later, in the 2008 election, substantial barriers were implemented making it difficult for eligible voters to vote. These included the purging of voter rolls, misleading voter information and voter intimidation. Take for example, an election administrator in Mississippi improperly purging approximately 10,000 voters from the rolls from her home computer; or the local prosecutor in Ohio who requested via subpoena personal information for 40 percent of voters who had registered during the same day registration and voting period in the State. These are real examples of incidents occurring today—45 years after we passed the Voting Rights Act.

Despite attempts to ignore or chip away at the protections provided to all Americans by the Voting Rights Act, this legislation remains relevant and provides the most significant and essential tool in ensuring continuity and the integrity of our democratic system. Our former colleague Ted Kennedy once said we need to ''seek the reign of justice in which voting rights and equal protection of the law will everywhere be enjoyed.'' On this 45th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act, I urge my colleagues to continue their bipartisan support for this critical legislation and for equal access to the voting booth for all.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on behalf of the women of America to recognize, honor, and celebrate the 90th anniversary of their voting rights on August 26, 2010—Women's Equality Day. I know my colleagues join me, in acknowledging the tremendous contributions women have made to America and the historic significance of reaching this milestone in women's history.

The 72-year struggle of suffragists, from the first women's rights convention held in Seneca Falls, NY, in July 1848 to the passage of the 19th amendment of the U.S. Constitution on August 26, 1920, bears witness to the sacrifice and dedication of the leaders of the early women's rights movement who never wavered from their intent to reach the goal of full enfranchisement.

We must thank Elizabeth Cady Stanton, born in 1815 in Johnstown, NY, who organized the first women's rights convention with Lucretia Mott and other courageous women in 1848. Their early advocacy for voting rights, protection from domestic violence, the right to own property, and other social reforms that promoted equality are what we continue to support for women today. The ''Declaration of Sentiments'' speech Mrs. Stanton delivered at that July convention called for ''all men and women'' to be recognized as created equal under the law. Her celebrated 50-year partnership that began in 1851 with Susan B. Anthony brought to the public consciousness the importance of equality rights for women. That is a sacred trust we must continue to support.

On August 26, 1970—the 50th anniversary—the National Organization of Women, NOW, called upon women nationwide to strike for equality in protest of the fact that women still did not have equal rights, 40 years after passage of the 19th amendment. In New York City, 50,000 women marched down Fifth Avenue to demonstrate in support of the women's movement and securing equality rights, as did women in 40 other cities across America that day. U.S. Representative Bella Abzug addressed the NYC crowd and was instrumental in getting Congress in 1971 to officially recognize August 26 as Women's Equality Day.

In 1776, Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, sent an urgent message to her husband, who was a delegate to the Second Continental Congress, stating: ''In the new Code of Laws, I desire you would remember the ladies.'' It took 144 years for women's equality rights to be sanctioned by Congress, and I ask, Mr. President, that we take this opportunity on August 26, 2010, to honor this 90th anniversary and the remarkable contributions women have made to this country. The American people owe a debt of gratitude to the early suffragists for remaining steadfast in the face of overwhelming opposition in advocacy on behalf of the equality rights for all American citizens that our Constitution supports today.

SECURE AND RESPONSIBLE DRUG DISPOSAL ACT

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues for their support in passing S. 3397, the Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act by unanimous consent this week. I thank the Senate cosponsors of this bill—Senator GRASSLEY, Senator BROWN of Ohio, Senator GILLIBRAND, Senator COLLINS, Senator CORKER, Senator FEINGOLD, Senator KOHL, Senator SCHUMER and Senator DURBIN. I especially thank my lead cosponsor, Senator CORNYN, and his counsel Gustav Eyler for their significant efforts on behalf of this important legislation.

When the Drug Enforcement Administration brought this issue to my attention, I was eager to work on it because this is such a commonsense bill.

We know that prescription drug abuse is on the rise and what is even scarier is that it is on the rise among teenagers. In fact, teens abuse prescription drugs more than any illicit drug besides marijuana. And according to the Partnership for a Drug-Free America, 55 percent of teens say that it is easy to get prescription drugs from their parents' medicine cabinets. We also know that up to 17 percent of all prescription drug medication goes unused each year.

This bill is an important step towards getting unused, unwanted or expired medication off families' shelves and into the hands of proper authorities. The bill makes it possible for State and local law enforcement ''take-back'' programs to accept controlled substances as well, which is something that is currently very difficult for them to do. I introduced this legislation because I believe we have to give families a better option than either leaving dangerous medication in their homes or flushing such medication into the water supply.

Parents know that keeping unwanted prescription drugs in their homes increases the risk that young people will find them, but current law provides them with few alternatives. By making it easier for people to dispose of controlled substances they no longer need, we can reduce teens' access to these drugs and help curb teen drug abuse. This bill amends the Controlled Substances Act to allow the Attorney General to draft regulations permitting authorized entities to accept and dispose of controlled substances. These regulations will enable state, local, and private entities to operate drug take-back programs for all prescription drugs, while taking the necessary steps to prevent unlawful diversion and promote safe disposal.

Senator CORNYN recounts with great specificity the provisions of this bill that were added after consultation with many of our House colleagues and their staffs. I want to mention those members whose contributions to this bill have improved it greatly: Representatives HENRY WAXMAN, JOE BARTON, JAY INSLEE, BART STUPAK, and LAMAR SMITH. I am grateful to their offices for working with us to get this bill to a place where it could obtain the unanimous support of the U.S. Senate, and I second Senator CORNYN's comments about the specific contributions of each of those individuals and their offices.

The provisions that we added after collaboration with House offices, along with the bill's ''no cost'' estimate from the Congressional Budget Office, are among the many reasons the bill enjoys the support of 41 State attorneys general, the Department of Justice, and the National Association of Chain Drug Stores. They also prove that this bill is bicameral in its design, as well as bipartisan.

I want to thank all of my colleagues again for their support.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I rise to thank and congratulate my colleagues for passing the Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act by unanimous consent. I am proud to have worked closely with Senator KLOBUCHAR to draft and introduce the bill, and I thank her and her chief counsel, Paige Herwig, for their ideas and advocacy of commonsense drug disposal solutions.

The Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act will make a cost-free change to the Controlled Substances Act to permit State and private entities to accept unused controlled substances through drug take-back programs. As the Senate unanimously recognized, the Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act is necessary because up to 17 percent of prescribed medication goes unused every year.

State, local, and private entities already have established drug take-back programs to keep some of this unwanted medication away from children and drug abusers. But the Federal Controlled Substances Act, CSA, currently prevents these drug take-back programs from accepting the most dangerous medications—controlled substances. The CSA particularly prohibits people prescribed controlled substances from giving them to any person or entity without express permission from the Drug Enforcement Administration. As a result, individual consumers and long-term care facilities now either stockpile unwanted controlled substances or dispose of them in improper ways, such as flushing them into the water supply. This can lead to drug diversion or water pollution.

Diverted prescription drugs contributed to a 114-percent increase in overdose deaths involving prescription opioids between 2001 and 2005, and the number of treatment admissions for prescription opioids increased 74 percent from 2002 to 2006. Troublingly, over one-third of new prescription drug abusers are teenagers, who now abuse prescription drugs more than any controlled substance except marijuana.

This bill will fix the problems of unwanted prescription drug stockpiling and improper disposal by amending the CSA to allow the Attorney General to draft regulations permitting authorized entities to accept and dispose of controlled substances. These regulations will enable state, local, and private entities to operate drug take-back programs for all prescription drugs in a safe and effective manner consistent with diversion controls.

In discussing how the bill will allow drug take-back programs to accept unwanted controlled substances, I want to highlight certain provisions we added to the bill after collaborating with House colleagues and their staff. First, in authorizing new drug disposal regulations, the bill makes clear that ''the Attorney General shall take into consideration the public health and safety, as well as the ease and cost of program implementation and participation by various communities.'' Representative JAY INSLEE, who has been a strong advocate for drug disposal programs, suggested this important provision. It ensures that the planned drug disposal regulations will give States and private entities wide latitude to design the most effective take-back programs for their communities. This includes considering the differences between rural and urban communities.

Second, the bill notes that the Attorney General's regulations ''may not require any entity to establish or operate a delivery or disposal program.'' Representative JOE BARTON, along with other members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, proposed this language to clarify that no State, town, or business will have to run a drug take-back program unless they want to do so. This provision is a welcomed change from the type of unfunded mandates we so often see in Federal laws.

Third, the bill allows long-term care facilities to dispose of their residents' medications, and it permits ''any person lawfully entitled to dispose of [a] decedent's property'' to deliver the decedent's unused medication for disposal. These common-sense provisions were advanced by Representatives BART STUPAK, HENRY WAXMAN, LAMAR SMITH, and other House members. They address the specific concerns of long-term care facilities and the practical worries of anyone who loses a loved one.

These collected provisions, along with the bill's ''no cost'' estimate from the Congressional Budget Office, are among the many reasons the bill enjoys the support of 41 State attorneys general, the Department of Justice, and the National Association of Chain Drug Stores. They also prove that this bill is bicameral in its design, as well as bipartisan.

By passing this bill, we have taken a major step toward getting unwanted prescription drugs out of medicine cabinets and off our streets. We have given State, local, and private groups more authority to serve their communities, and we have done so in a cost-free manner.

I believe the Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act exemplifies the type of bipartisan legislation Congress should look to pass. I thank my colleagues again for supporting it unanimously, and I look forward to it becoming law.

75TH ANNIVERSARY OF SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I celebrate and honor the venerable life, not of a person, but of the most important and successful domestic program in our Nation's history. On August 14, Social Security will turn 75.

In a special Message to Congress in June 1934, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt stated the promise of Social Security, saying:

> If, as our Constitution tells us, our Federal Government was established among other things, to promote the general welfare,' it is our plain duty to provide for that security upon which welfare depends.

President Roosevelt outlined his intention to ''undertake the great task of furthering the security of the citizen and his family through social insurance.'' Executive Order 6757 created the committee on Economic Security, putting his plan into action. The committee included 5 Cabinet-level officials and 21 government experts from several Federal agencies.

At the committee's 25th birthday celebration, Francis Perkins, who was Secretary of Labor and member of the Committee on Economic Security, recounted the work of that committee. And she remembered an embarrassing oversight in the rush to create it—the committee had not been funded. But that was not going to stop its members. Relying on a small personal loan from one committee member, the committee hired unemployed stenographers and typists and recruited professionals and experts to help out. They sent a telegram that stated:

> We have no money. We can pay your railroad fare and your expenses if you really need expenses while you are in Washington, but there is no salary.

The response was huge. A team of great minds converged on Washington, DC, in the heat of August, long before air conditioning. They worked tirelessly. And about 6 months later, in early January 1935, they presented their committee report to the President. He, in turn, brought it to Congress.

Congress heard the call. Or perhaps Congress heard the voices of its constituents. Or perhaps Members of Congress carried with them the pictures of closed factories, desolate farms, and breadlines that weaved around city blocks. Unemployment topped 20 percent, and the homeless population was growing.

In a 1962 speech, Francis Perkins described the backdrop of the creation of Social Security:

> People were so alarmed the specter of unemployment—of starvation, of hunger, of the wandering boys, of the broken homes, of the families separated while somebody went out to look for work—stalked everywhere. The unpaid rent, the eviction notices, the furniture and bedding on the sidewalk, the old lady weeping over it, the children crying, the father out looking for a truck to move their belongings himself to his sister's flat or some relative's already overcrowded tenement, or just sitting there bewilderedly waiting for some charity officer to come and move him somewhere. I saw goods stay on the sidewalk in front of the same house with the same children weeping on top of the blankets for 3 days before anybody came to relieve the situation!

Congress went to work. Committees held hearings, and a long list of individuals and groups, charities, hospitals, industries, actuaries, historians, and interested citizens testified. There were debates and arguments, compromises and drafts, more drafts and then more meetings and compromises. And then, 7 months later, on Wednesday, August 14, 1935, at about 3:30 in the afternoon, President Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law.

Upon the law's enactment, the President appointed a three-person Social Security Board to run the new program. One of the Board's first daunting tasks was to register employers and workers by January 1, 1937, when workers would begin earning credits toward old-age insurance benefits. The Board contracted with the Post Office to distribute applications, and numbers were assigned in local post offices. Long before computers, typists created each card in typing centers and delivered it to Social Security's headquarters in Baltimore. Between November 1936 and June 1937, Social Security issued more than 30 million Social Security numbers through this manual process. By June 30, 1937, Social Security had established 151 field offices, and these field offices took over the task of assigning Social Security numbers.

Over the course of the next several decades, Social Security expanded to help more people secure themselves, as President Roosevelt said, ''against the hazards and vicissitudes of life.'' In 1939, Congress broadened the program to include payments to dependents and survivors of retirees. In 1956, Congress created the disability program and later expanded the program to include benefits for dependents of disabled workers.

The Social Security Act of 1965 created a new social insurance program called Medicare that extended health coverage to almost all Americans aged 65 or older or receiving disability benefits.

In 1969, under the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act, Social Security began processing claims for disabled coal miners suffering from black lung disease and to their dependents or survivors.

Legislation passed in 1972 provided for automatic annual cost-of-living allowances and created the Supplemental Security Income program. SSI, funded from general revenues, provides a small benefit to people with limited income who have reached age 65 or are blind or disabled.

The Social Security Amendments of 1980 made many changes in the disability program. Most focused on various work incentive provisions for disability beneficiaries.

In the early 1980s, the Social Security program faced a financial crisis. President Ronald Reagan appointed the Greenspan Commission to study the issues and make recommendations on how to sustain Social Security. In 1983, Congress enacted comprehensive changes in Social Security coverage, financing, and benefit structure.

On December 17, 1999, President Bill Clinton signed the ''Ticket to Work and Work Incentives Improvement Act,'' which placed greater emphasis on assisting beneficiaries in efforts to return to work.

In 2003, Congress enacted the Medicare Prescription Drug, Improvement, and Modernization Act to give seniors extra help in paying for prescription medications.

Throughout the years, Congress passed amendments, added programs, and addressed issues with Social Security. Presidents from both parties repeatedly acknowledged Social Security's importance.

President Richard Nixon said, ''This Nation must not break faith with those Americans who have a right to expect that Social Security payments will protect them and their families.''

A few years later, President Jimmy Carter said, ''The Social Security program represents our commitment as a society to the belief that workers should not live in dread that a disability, death or old age could leave them or their families destitute.''

Today, Social Security benefits are essential to the economic security of millions of Americans. An estimated 159 million workers, or about 94 percent of all workers, are covered under Social Security. Social Security is critical, as 52 percent of the workforce has no private pension coverage, and 31 percent has no savings set aside for retirement.

In 2009, nearly 51 million Americans received a total of $672 billion in Social Security benefits. In Montana, 181,000 of our 975,000 residents or about 19 percent of all Montanans receive Social Security benefits. The payments were modest, with the average retiree receiving about $14,000 annually. The average monthly benefit for a disabled beneficiary was about $1,060.

Virginia Reno, vice president for Income Security from the National Academy of Social Insurance testified before the Subcommittee on Social Security: ''If seniors had to count on only their income other than Social Security, almost one out of two would be living in poverty.''

Social Security is anchored by a promise between generations. But its success has been due in large part to the vision and sincerity of its creators and the ongoing commitment of its stewards, the public trustees, Advisory Board members, Members of Congress and the approximately 70,000 employees who work for Social Security. As well, we owe a debt to the thousands of dedicated employees who have worked for Social Security since its inception. For those that have embodied the agency's mission, ''to promote the economic security of the nation's people through compassionate and vigilant leadership in shaping and managing America's Social Security programs,'' we owe a big thank you.

Social Security's success was not built with the stroke of a pen. Social Security did not simply survive for 75 years. Rather, Social Security was built by embracing the promise of assisting people through life's hazards.

In a campaign speech in 1944, President Roosevelt said, ''The future of America, like its past, must be made by deeds—not words.'' Social Security is the embodiment of many good deeds. In times of crisis, over and over again, Social Security has risen to the challenge.

Fifteen years ago, a bomb in Oklahoma City took the life of fifteen Social Security employees, one office volunteer, and 21 office visitors. Social Security employees across the country responded to help survivors and the families of victims. Employees from around the country converged on Oklahoma to assist taking claims, answering questions, and providing comfort to the hundreds of victims and their families.

Following the devastation of September 11, 2001, employees in the New York region immediately came to the assistance of families of those killed in the World Trade Center, at the Pentagon, and at the plane crash site in Pennsylvania, so that claims could be taken and paid as quickly as possible. Social Security allowed payment of survivors' claims with airline manifests or employer records rather than death certificates. Within days, Social Security launched a full-scale outreach effort to find families of victims and help them apply for benefits. A special Web page was set up. Public information spots aired on television. And Social Security contacted about 60 consulates to ensure that foreign survivors who might be eligible for benefits were reached.

By December 2001, Social Security had taken more than 5,000 disaster-related claims. Social Security set up Family Assistance Centers at Pier 94 in Manhattan and Liberty State Park in New Jersey. The New York Regional Commissioner continued to work with the Bureau of Vital Statistics to post death certificates for the survivors of victims whose bodies had not been recovered.

Social Security was also one of the first agencies at the Pentagon Family Assistance Center in Virginia offering assistance to victims and their families. In Pennsylvania, Social Security staff assisted family members of victims on applying for benefits.

In the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, Social Security moved quickly to ensure that monthly payments to beneficiaries continued uninterrupted. Immediate payment procedures allowed for on-the-spot payments if beneficiaries could not get their benefit check. Social Security opened a temporary office in the Houston Astrodome, and provided service 7 days a week. Social Security employees were on site at FEMA's Family Assistance Centers, and many offices offered extended hours of service through Labor Day weekend to help evacuees.

Just recently, in my home State of Montana, in the old city hall building next to the Libby Police Department in Lincoln County, eight employees from Social Security arrived. They quickly set up a processing center to assist the victims of the Environmental Protection Agency's first-ever public health emergency. The Social Security employees tirelessly answered questions and handled a steady stream of claims from applicants diagnosed with asbestos-related disease. Social Security's work helping the good people in and around Libby Montana was deeply important to me.

Social Security has been described as the bedrock of our industrial society. It has been called the beacon of light for those on life's stormy seas. It has been called a pillar of our democracy. Social Security offers Americans peace of mind.

Social Security has lived up to its message. It has stood as a silent partner to those in need. It has done all this by sending about 99 percent of its annual budget back to the people as benefit payments. Only about 1 percent of Social Security's budget goes toward administrative expenses. The rest fulfills the promise of its mission.

Social Security can and should work for the next 75 years, and for generations beyond that. Now that Social Security is here, now that Social Security has proven itself, it is up to all of us to protect and maintain it. It is up to us to assure the millions of Americans that currently rely on Social Security and the millions more who pay into it that Social Security is a promise that we can and will keep.

In the words of Carl Sandburg, ''In these times you have to be an optimist to open your eyes when you awake in the morning.'' Our optimism can be found in the accomplishments of Social Security. I celebrate its 75th birthday.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, next week our Nation celebrates the 75th anniversary of Social Security, a vital program that has provided comfort and security for millions of Americans through the years.

During my career in the Senate, I have fought to protect Social Security benefits for our Arkansas seniors. I believe in the promise our government made to working Americans—that if we work hard, Social Security will be there to help us in our golden years. Social Security has made a healthy and secure retirement possible for tens of millions of Americans, including my own mother.

Since its inception, Social Security has helped provide stability for Arkansans who otherwise may not have had an income at all.

When President Roosevelt signed Social Security into law on August 14, 1935, he said:

> The civilization of the past hundred years, with its startling industrial changes, has tended more and more to make life insecure. Young people have come to wonder what would be their lot when they came to old age. The man with a job has wondered how long the job would last. This law, too, represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete. It is, in short, a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness.

More than 600,000 Arkansans are enrolled in Social Security, and I am proud of my work on their behalf. Last year, I pushed for relief for Arkansas's beneficiaries who would not receive cost-of-living adjustments because of the economy. I have consistently opposed attempts to privatize Social Security, and I do not support a reduction in Social Security's current guaranteed benefits.

I have met with Arkansans from all four corners of the State to hear their concerns about Social Security. I believe that providing adequate resources for the Social Security Administration is a crucial first step toward strengthening this vital program. As the baby boom generation enters retirement, we will be asking more of the Social Security Administration's services, and we must work to make certain the trust funds are well maintained.

As we commemorate the 75th anniversary of Social Security, I remain committed to protecting Social Security benefits for Arkansans and all Americans. I will continue to use my position as the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Social Security to fight to ensure seniors receive the benefits they have earned and deserve.

ALCOHOL REGULATORY EFFECTIVENESS ACT

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to bring the attention of the Senate to a recent joint resolution passed by the California State Legislature. This resolution, S.J. Res. 34, urges Congress to defeat the Comprehensive Alcohol Regulatory Effectiveness Act of 2010, H.R. 5034, a bill that would restrict legal challenges to unconstitutional alcohol regulation laws and negatively impact the American wine industry.

This bill is being described by its proponents as an effort to promote regulation of alcohol and protect the public from dangerous effects. What the bill does instead, however, is to erect new legal barriers which give preference to in-State beer, wine, and spirits wholesalers at the expense of free and open competition. With its broad sweep, the bill cedes Federal authority over licensing, labeling, advertising, taxation policy and other matters.

Under current Federal law, each and every State has authority to set its own law regarding the direct shipment of alcohol. A State can allow direct shipments to consumers, or a State can prohibit it. What a State cannot do, however, is to allow in-State producers to ship directly to consumers while barring out-of-State producers from doing so. This is a constitutional requirement, stated most recently in the case of Granholm v. Heald.

The House bill could not constitutionally alter this system. Instead, it would erect new legal barriers that would make it more difficult for out-of-State producers to enforce their rights to equal treatment under State laws.

I am very proud to say that my State of California is the fourth largest wine-producing region in the world. Our wine industry creates more than 330,000 jobs and contributes $61.5 billion to the States economy each year.

We are not, however, alone. Nationwide, the coast-to-coast wine industry, active in all 50 States, has an economic impact of some $122 billion annually.

And, in fact, 37 States and the District of Columbia currently allow direct shipment of wine from winemakers to consumers. Such laws increase choice for consumers. They also keep small wineries in business as wholesalers grow increasingly consolidated, offering less selection and squeezing out producers in the process.

As the joint resolution passed Monday, August 2, 2010, makes evident, H.R. 5034 threatens serious harm to winemakers in California and across the country, as well as to consumers and competition in these markets. Should it be introduced in the Senate or passed by the House, I will oppose it and will urge my colleagues to do the same.

TIBETAN REFUGEES

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I want to call attention to language in Senate Report 111–237 accompanying the fiscal year 2011 Department of State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs appropriations bill, which passed out of the Appropriations Committee on July 29, 2010.

That language notes the committee's concern with recent events in Nepal, where Tibetan refugees have been forcibly turned over to Chinese border police. This contradicts Nepal's long and generous history of providing safe passage for Tibetans on route to India, and it is inconsistent with international law. In the past, Nepal has provided safe haven, and the United States, the United Nations, and other donors have provided the funds necessary to care for these people in transit.

This is a matter of grave concern to the Congress and to people everywhere who know of the danger of arrest and imprisonment and the physical hardships Tibetans face, fleeing their homeland by crossing the Himalayas with little more than the clothes on their backs. I hope the Nepali Government will take note of the committee's concern and take immediate steps to reaffirm its policy of permitting Tibetan refugees to travel safely to India.

I ask unanimous consent that this language in Report 111–237 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

''Tibetan Refugees.—The Committee is concerned with recent actions by the Government of Nepal to prevent safe passage for Tibetan refugees, including reports that some fleeing Tibetans have been turned over to Chinese border authorities. The Committee urges the Government of Nepal to reaffirm its long tradition of permitting Tibetans to safely transit Nepal, and continues to support assistance for these refugees as well as Tibetans who have resettled in India.''

CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURANCE PROGRAM

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today, the Children's Health Insurance Program turns 13. But instead of facing the difficulties of adolescence, CHIP is enjoying the advantages that come with being one of the most popular programs in the country.

I would like to take this moment to reflect on the history of CHIP and to think about the role that CHIP will play in the future.

Prior to 1997, kids of the working poor had nowhere to go to get health insurance. Their parents' employers didn't offer health insurance benefits, and the individual market offered only low-quality insurance options at unaffordable prices.

Without health insurance, kids couldn't see the doctor for a checkup, couldn't get a prescription for an earache, and couldn't get treatment for common chronic conditions like asthma. Unhealthy kids can't run and play, can't do well in school, and can't grow into healthy and productive adults.

In 1997, Congress took action to address this problem by establishing the Children's Health Insurance Program. And today, we celebrate 13 years of success—expanding high quality coverage to kids all across the country.

I would like to remind my colleagues of CHIP's history—its bipartisan roots and its tremendous success in achieving what we created the program to do: cover low-income, uninsured kids.

Congress enacted the Children's Health Insurance Program as a bipartisan compromise back in 1997, with leadership from Senator ROCKEFELLER, Senator HATCH, and the late Senators Kennedy and Chafee. At that time, Members of Congress wanted to address the rising number of children without health insurance.

The Finance Committee reached a compromise that allowed States to set up Children's Health Insurance Programs that would meet their unique needs. CHIP is optional for States, but within just 2 years of its creation, all States decided to participate to address the health care needs of our country's most vulnerable children.

I am proud to have helped write and pass CHIP 13 years ago. It has been a tremendous success.

In its first decade, CHIP cut the number of uninsured children by more than a third. Today, more than 7½ million children get the doctor's visits and medicines they need to have a healthy childhood, enabling them to become healthy and productive adults.

After 10 years of success, CHIP came up for reauthorization in 2007. In the summer and fall of that year, Congress worked hard to pass a bipartisan reauthorization package. But President Bush vetoed it twice. Ultimately, we had to settle for an extension.

In January of 2009, with two of our former colleagues in the White House, I was thrilled to get started on a CHIP reauthorization bill as soon as possible. Finally, the stars had aligned—President Obama was looking forward to signing the CHIP reauthorization bill, and the Congress was prepared to act. We were finally able to deliver what Americans had asked for—reestablishing kids' coverage as a national priority.

President Obama signed the bill on February 4, 2009. The new law maintained coverage for all children in the program at that time and started on a path to reach more than 4 million additional uninsured, low-income kids.

We had a couple of goals in mind as we drafted the CHIP Reauthorization Act of 2009.

We kept CHIP focused on low-income kids. We prioritized coverage of the lowest-income kids, but without limiting State flexibility in designing CHIP programs. We set up parameters to transition adults out of CHIP and into Medicaid or other appropriate coverage. And we also encouraged States to improve their outreach practices and streamline their enrollment procedures in order to reach all eligible kids.

We maintained State flexibility. We gave States the option to cover legal immigrant children and pregnant women during their first 5 years in America and receive the corresponding Federal match. We also created a State option that allows States to designate CHIP funds to offer premium assistance, helping families afford private coverage offered by employers or other sources.

And we improved the quality of care. The CHIP Reauthorization Act launched a substantial new initiative to improve children's health quality. This initiative invested $45 million a year for 5 years to develop national core measures for children's health quality, improve data collection in CHIP and Medicaid, and promote the use of electronic health records.

The CHIP Reauthorization Act I helped to craft allowed us to cover as many uninsured low-income kids as possible. I made sure that we respected our budgetary limits, and made compromises in good faith with my Republican colleagues. In committee, further compromises were made which I hope strengthened the act even more.

The only disappointment that came out of the 2009 CHIP Reauthorization Act was that we weren't able to come to agreement with Senators GRASSLEY and HATCH, two colleagues that worked tirelessly to reauthorize CHIP in 2007. But I'm proud to say that CHIP's bipartisan reputation has not been marred.

Senators on both sides of the aisle continue to support CHIP and have even used it as a model for other programs. And I have continued to work with Senator GRASSLEY and all Senators on the Finance Committee overseeing the implementation of the CHIP Reauthorization Act.

A year and a half after enactment, more than half the States have taken advantage of the new coverage options in the CHIP Reauthorization Act, including 15 States that expanded income eligibility levels for CHIP or Medicaid to cover more kids. States have also taken advantage of the enrollment simplification options—making it easier for kids to get enrolled and stay covered.

In health reform, we extended CHIP for an additional 2 years, ensuring that kids will have a stable source of coverage as we expand coverage to other groups. In 2015, Congress will revisit CHIP in a new context. CHIP has been instrumental in providing children with access to care where none existed before, but it may need to take on a different role as health reform is implemented.

Whatever happens in 2015, I am confident that CHIP will continue to be an important part of our health system. CHIP is tried and true, and things just keep getting better and better in the program. As we celebrate CHIP's 13th birthday, we can be proud of everything Congress has done to provide low-income kids with high quality, affordable coverage.

TRIBUTE TO FIRST RESPONDERS

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I wish to discuss a heart wrenching tragedy that occurred in my home State earlier this week and to acknowledge the heroic efforts of our local first responders. On Monday evening, under sweltering temperatures that had surpassed 100 degrees, two Shreveport families gathered on the banks of the Red River, in Shreveport, LA, to enjoy a picnic. What is normally a routine summer outing for millions of people across America quickly turned into a disaster.

Seven teenage children from these two families had wandered off into an unfamiliar part of the river. One of the children stepped off of a sand bar and into deeper, more dangerous water and began to scream for help. The other six children followed in an attempt to rescue the drowning teen. None of the seven children knew how to swim, nor did the adults who were with them. As the seven children struggled for their lives against the treacherous waters of the Red River, witnesses called 911 for help.

Teams of first responders from Shreveport and Bossier City were dispatched and arrived on the scene at 6:30 p.m., roughly 10 minutes after the 911 call was made. Dive teams entered the water four at a time in search of the drowning children. Despite the tremendous efforts of the divers, the river's waters claimed the lives of six of the seven children. The lone survivor was rescued by a bystander named Christopher Partlan, before the dive teams could get to the area.

At 7:51 p.m., the first of the victim's bodies was recovered from the water. This unthinkable task continued for more than 2 hours before the last of the victims was recovered at 10:02 p.m.

At this time, I would like to read the names of the first responders from Shreveport and Bossier City who were dispatched to this tragic accident:

Captain John Davis; Fire Engineer Craig Bynog; Firefighter Jared Mourad; Firefighter Chad Alexander; Battalion Chief Tim Thames; and Fire Engineer Jimmy Lockey of the Shreveport Fire Department. Officer Phillip Tucker of the Shreveport Police Department; Fire Driver Chad Arnette of the Bossier City Fire Department; and Christopher Partlan, the bystander who rescued 15-year-old DeKendrix Warner.

All these brave men deserve to be recognized for their heroism. First responders in Shreveport and Bossier and in cities and towns across America protect our communities every day. We depend on them during fires, floods and other disasters and they put their lives on the line to save ours. For that, we owe them a debt of honor and gratitude.

I would also like once again to send my condolences to the Warner and Stewart families for their tragic loss. I know the Shreveport community will wrap its arms around them and pray for them, comfort them and support them during this difficult time.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss an important matter involving the future of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

As you may know, TVA is led by a Board of Directors that consists of nine individuals appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. These board members serve for staggered 5-year terms.

For some time, it has been understood that each State within TVA's service area should be represented on the board. This makes sense given TVA's diverse energy production and economic development activities, which affect communities in each State differently as do the Authority's various power plants and dams.

Recognizing this, President Bush, in 2006, nominated to the board a fabulous individual from my State, Howard Thrailkill. The Senate confirmed the nomination unanimously.

Mr. Thrailkill has undoubtedly served with distinction. He was president of AdTran, a successful technology company in Huntsville, and he brought to TVA a familiarity with the complexities of running a large organization.

Upon his confirmation, Mr. Thrailkill immersed himself in the financial records, business plans, and technical data surrounding TVA's many functions. He became an expert on the organization in a way that many board members do not. When he identified a poor performing project or a proposal with downsides, he was not afraid to say so. And he was especially familiar with TVA's activities in North Alabama, where he lived.

Undoubtedly, Mr. Thrailkill's willingness to devote his personal time and energy to the position was of great benefit to both TVA and its Alabama customers.

Unfortunately, Mr. Thrailkill's term on the Board is now nearing its end. I was dismayed to learn recently that President Obama apparently failed to recognize the importance of this position to the people of Alabama, and had nominated an individual from another State to fill it.

This is no small matter. Of the seven States that make up TVA, Alabama is the second largest in terms of revenue, the second largest in terms of employees, and the third largest in terms of service area.

Also, Alabama is home to several important TVA facilities, such as Guntersville Hydroelectric Dam, Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant, and the Bellefonte facility—which could become one of the first new nuclear power plants in the country.

Seven States make up the TVA service area. There are nine seats on the board. It is unacceptable that Alabama's long term representation be put in jeopardy.

Accordingly, I have been forced to use my position in the Senate to block the progress of these TVA nominations until this matter could be resolved.

I am pleased to inform the Senate today that after a series of conversations with the White House, we have reached an agreement that the next opening on the board will be filled by a nominee from the State of Alabama.

That vacancy is expected in March of next year, and we have agreed to begin in the next month discussing which individuals should be considered for this important position. I wish to thank the President and his staff for working with me on this compromise.

Senator CARPER, who chairs the Environment and Public Works subcommittee that considers TVA nominations, has also stated his willingness to begin consideration of the Alabama nominee early to ensure he or she is confirmed before the start of the term. I thank him for that offer.

I am pleased we could reach an agreement on this issue, and I look forward to the Senate confirmation of an individual from my State who will offer strong leadership to TVA in the coming years.

Accordingly, I am also pleased today to lift my hold on the nominations to the TVA Board that are currently pending in the Senate. I urge my colleagues to move quickly with the nominations to ensure that the Board of Directors will have a quorum in August so that it may effectively conduct the business before it.

1099 REPORTING REQUIREMENT

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise to express my concerns about a provision in the new health care law that will impose monumental burdens on small businesses, reduce wages and eliminate jobs.

A provision that was included in the new health care law will require businesses to submit new tax forms every time they purchase more than $600 worth of goods. This new government mandate will impose significant new costs on 26 million businesses across America.

Given the economic challenges that our Nation already faces, this is a burden that we cannot afford. If it is not fixed, this new mandate will slow economic growth and prevent the creation of new jobs. The Commerce Department reported last week that the pace of economic growth is slowing down. U.S. economic growth slowed to an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the second quarter, the weakest showing in nearly a year. According to the Labor Department, wages and salaries are also suffering and the unemployment rate still hovers around 9.5 percent.

If these numbers are going to improve, it's going to be a result of the hard work and ingenuity of our Nation's small business owners. The entrepreneurial small business community has been the driver to pull us out of all recent recessions. They are the key to job creation that will pull us out of this economic downturn as well. Small businesses create 65 percent of all new jobs in America. In Wyoming, that number is a lot higher. We have 62,000 small businesses in Wyoming that employ nearly 70 percent of our workforce. We need to advance policies that encourage small businesses to grow and hire new workers.

Unfortunately, buried in the new healthcare law is a provision that will have the opposite effect. It will cost every business, even the smallest of the small, more money to file their taxes.

Because of the new healthcare law, beginning in 2012 businesses will have to send new tax forms to the IRS for every business to business transaction of $600 or more for both goods and services. This new requirement creates a punishing new paperwork mandate for small businesses.

The new paperwork requirement means that a small business owner will have to file two forms—one to the vendor and one to the IRS—for almost every purchase his or her business makes. Imagine you're a freelance writer and you buy a new laptop. Well, now you have to send Form 1099 to Apple and the IRS or, be labeled a tax cheat. Oh, and you'll need Apple's Taxpayer Identification number too so don't forget to ask the salesman for that.

Complying with the tax code is already one of the most expensive burdens placed upon small businesses. According to the National Federation of Independent Businesses, the typical small business pays as much as $74 per hour to prepare and file various tax-related documents. Because they cannot afford to have their own finance departments, the costs of complying with the Federal tax code are 66 percent higher for small businesses as compared to their larger competitors. The new healthcare law will significantly increase these tax burdens and the costs that come with them.

This new reporting requirement hits small businesses hardest because they typically don't have in house accounting departments and have to hire outside help. Every penny a small business spends on these services is money they can't spend on hiring new workers and expanding their business. Every hour a small business owner spends filling out these new tax forms is time he or she is not making a sale, manufacturing a product or working with a customer.

I understand the challenges this can create for a small business. Before I came to the Senate, my wife and I started and owned several shoe stores back home. When you own a small business, you have to be the CEO, the bookkeeper, the salesman and the person who empties the trash and cleans the toilets.

Every hour that I spent filling out government-mandated paperwork, was an hour I couldn't spend selling shoes. Government mandates, like the new 1099 requirement, have a real cost, and it is small businesses who end up having to pay them. The National Taxpayer Advocate, based inside the IRS, has already warned of the new reporting burden on small business.

This new reporting requirement hurts small businesses at the same time our economy needs them to help our recovery. Small businesses across this country are still struggling to stay open. Rather than forcing these businesses to comply with burdensome new paperwork requirements, we should be finding ways to encourage them to reinvest their money in growing their businesses and hiring more workers.

Our country has always relied on small businesses to grow the economy and create new jobs and they have always been the drivers to pull us out of economic downturns. Given the still difficult challenges facing our economy, the last thing we should be doing is piling on the paperwork that takes their time and precious resources away from creating jobs.

I believe things like the 1099 requirement are causing our entrepreneurs to think twice about taking new risks for fear of more government burdens and regulations. That's the worst thing Washington should be doing right now. Instead, we need to be focused on creating an environment where small businesses can grow and aren't worried about what might be the next new burden thrown on them from Washington.

It seems like a reoccurring bad dream around Washington over the past few years. Washington politicians tuck something into a giant bill that's rammed through Congress without fully understanding the impact in the real world.

This 1099 reporting requirement is just one of the many things in the new health law that need to be re-examined. Our small businesses need to be focused on creating jobs and helping our economy recover, not on new paperwork burdens. When a business is considering making new long term investments in employees or equipment, they shouldn't have to be worried about the next new wrinkle to be uncovered in the health reform law.

We can make a statement right now to America's small businesses that we want you out there creating jobs, hiring new employees and growing your business—not worrying about what Washington will require of you next. Let's tell our small business men and women that we stand behind them, not on top of their backs, and let's repeal this new tax paperwork burden. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

FDA FOOD SAFETY MODERNIZATION ACT

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about an issue important to us all—the safety of our food. Food safety is not a partisan issue—we all want to be confident that the food we eat and give to our children will not make us sick. That is why I have been working with my colleagues in a bipartisan way to pass S. 510, the FDA Food Safety Modernization Act.

This bill goes a long way to bringing the regulation of food into the 21st century. No longer will outdated laws hold the FDA back from protecting us. This bill takes into account the changes in our food supply over the more than 100 years since food safety authorities were first granted to the agency. This bill provides real consumer safety improvements, while maintaining an appropriate balance between regulatory burden and food safety benefit.

I want to thank Senators GREGG, BURR, and DURBIN for their hard work and leadership in developing and introducing this bill. Their efforts to ensure that this was a bipartisan process, starting from a blank piece of paper, were critical to seeing this bill move. I also commend Senator HARKIN, the chairman of the HELP Committee, for prioritizing this bill and moving it through committee.

We, along with Senator DODD, have continued to work together over the last few months, which resulted in only a few issues remaining to debate on the floor. That kind of cooperation is what the American people expect of us. It certainly wasn't easy at times, but this is how we are supposed to legislate, and I am glad we met our obligations.

The House passed a food safety bill 1 year ago. There are significant differences between the House and Senate bills, and I hope we can bring this bill to the Senate floor as soon as possible so that there is sufficient time to conference the two bills and see legislation signed into law this year.

FAIR SENTENCING ACT OF 2010

Mr. KAUFMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to praise the enactment of the Fair Sentencing Act of 2010, S. 1789, which was signed into law on Tuesday by President Obama. This reform, which significantly narrows the sentencing disparity between crack and powder cocaine from 100:1 to 18:1, is a long overdue victory for a criminal justice system rooted in fundamental fairness.

I am all for tough antidrug laws, but those laws must also be fair. Current law is based on an unjustified distinction between crack cocaine and powder cocaine. The mere possession of 5 grams of crack—the rough equivalent of five packets of sugar—carries the same sentence as the sale of 500 grams of powder cocaine.

As it turns out, this 100-to-1 disparity is unjustified by science. Moreover, it disproportionately affects African Americans who make up more than 80 percent of those convicted of Federal crack offenses.

Law enforcement experts say that the disparity has undermined trust in the criminal justice system, particularly in minority communities.

Making this change a reality required leadership from the very top: from President Obama's personal involvement to great efforts by Senators DICK DURBIN, JEFF SESSIONS, ORRIN HATCH, and others. Achieving this reform took significant political muscle and it took a continuing effort.

I especially want to note the Vice President's early and sustained leadership on this issue.

Back in 2002, when very few in this body wanted to touch this politically toxic problem, then-Senator BIDEN held a hearing that exposed the need to reduce the crack-powder disparity. Particularly significant was his willingness to admit that he, and Congress generally, made a mistake when they created the distinction back in 1986.

In June 2007, Senator BIDEN without any cosponsors on either side of the aisle introduced the first Senate bill that would have equalized the penalties for crack and powder cocaine without raising penalties for powder. The introduction of this bill changed the entire landscape of the crack-powder debate. No longer was the question ''Should the disparity be reduced?'' No longer was the debate about whether the 100:1 disparity was reasonable. The Biden bill shifted the burden to the naysayers to justify why 1:1 wasn't the right policy solution.

After Senator BIDEN assumed his duties as Vice President of the United States, Senator DURBIN picked up the Senate torch and reintroduced the Biden bill. I was proud to join him as a cosponsor of S. 1789. He then worked closely with colleagues on both sides of the aisle to find a compromise that would both satisfy the needs of law enforcement and return fundamental fairness to the sentencing for these sorts of offenses.

I would be remiss if I did not mention one more crucial participant in this long-running effort. As my colleagues in this body know, much of what we accomplish here on behalf of the American people is influenced greatly by our talented staff.

In this case, reducing the disparity between crack and powder cocaine—without increasing penalties for powder—would not likely have been achieved without the dedication of a very talented public servant, Alan Hoffman.

Alan, while serving as then-Senator BIDEN's chief of staff, delivered one of the first pushes that started to roll this stone forward, and he kept at it for many years. It is undeniable that many had significant roles to play in this remarkable achievement. But it is equally undeniable that Alan's longstanding drive to right this wrong and shift the policy debate fundamentally was crucial to our being able to celebrate this accomplishment today.

As my colleagues know, I have spoken many times in the Senate about the outstanding men and women who constitute our Federal workforce. Alan Hoffman has been a loyal and dedicated public servant who deserves credit for his work today.

FINDINGS OF THE NTSB

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss the findings of the National Transportation Safety Board's final report on its investigation into the fatal June 22, 2009, Metrorail crash on the Red Line near Fort Totten.

This report is a call to action for Congress to pass legislation that will help prevent such tragedies on our Nation's public transit systems from ever happening again.

Last week, the NTSB presented the findings of its year-long investigation into last year's Metrorail crash that killed eight passengers and the train's conductor nine total. The fatal accident also hospitalized 52 passengers with serious injuries and left approximately 30 others with minor injuries.

The investigation concluded:

> The cause of the crash was a series of faulty track circuits that failed to detect the presence of a stopped train on the right-of-way.
> The severity of the accident was compounded by the poor crashworthiness of the 30-plus year-old railcars involved in the accident where most of the injuries and fatalities occurred.
> Lastly, NTSB determined that safety has not been a priority for WMATA. Simply put, Metro lacks a ''Culture of Safety'' throughout its entire organization.

NTSB Chairman Deborah Hersman aptly put it in her statement regarding the release of its findings: ''Metro was on a collision course long before this accident. The only question was when Metro would have another accident—and of what magnitude.''

The root cause of the crash was a faulty track circuit that failed to detect the presence of a train pulling into Fort Totten Station.

As a result, the system did not signal a second approaching train to hold at a safe distance on the track.

When working properly, the track circuits are designed to detect and trace the presence of trains on the right-of-way. This effectively prevents two trains from occupying the same stretch of track at the same time.

A particularly troubling finding of the NTSB's investigation is that a 2005 ''near accident'' on the Orange and Blue lines' in the Potomac River tunnel coming into the Rosslyn Station was caused by an identical track circuit malfunction to the one that caused the June 22 crash.

In other words, Metro knew, from firsthand experience, about the serious risks track circuit failures present.

The NTSB concluded that if WMATA had taken a lesson from the 2005 ''near accident'' at Rosslyn and made fixing the track circuit failures throughout the system a priority, the June 22, 2009, tragedy would have been avoided entirely.

The second layer of safety meant to prevent a crash in the case of a track circuit failure are automatic alerts sent to Metro Central Command to alert control officers when a track circuit failures occurs.

However, ignoring these warnings were part of Metro's operational protocol.

The NTSB reported that prior to the Red Line crash, track circuit failures were such a frequent occurrence, that Central Command was receiving an average of 3,000 system alerts a week.

Central Command's response to the overwhelming number of alerts was to implement an automatic override program.

The override allowed Metro to operate around the alerts, rather than fixing the circuit failures triggering the alerts.

The constant barrage of alerts ended up creating a culture of complacency rather than creating a culture of urgency.

This negligent managerial approach to solving the warning rather than solving the problem is entirely irresponsible and exemplifies the lack of a Safety Culture at Metro.

Because the approaching train was under automatic control it was completely reliant on receiving the correct operations signals from the track circuits.

Since the system failed, it was on the train's conductor to stop the train. The investigation concluded that operator Jeanice McMillan, of Fairfax, VA, acted quickly and appropriately to do all she could to stop the train.

The curvature of the track, combined with the high speed that the automatic controls had her train travelling at, made it impossible for Ms. McMillan to prevent her train from striking the train ahead.

Based on the emergency brake marks on the tracks, Operator McMillan acted as soon as she had visual contact with the train ahead.

She made a selfless choice to remain at her post and do everything she could to slow the train, even when she surely must have realized that a collision was inevitable.

Operator McMillan gave her life to save her passengers. Ms. McMillan's heroism surely prevented an even greater tragedy and for that we are all grateful.

The NTSB pointed to the crashworthiness of the railcars as a major contributing factor in the severity of the accident.

These are the first-generation 1000 series cars that are subject to shearing in crash situations.

Metro has known about the compromised crashworthiness of its oldest railcars for many years.

A relatively low-speed accident at the Woodley Park Station in 2004 demonstrated how dangerous these railcars are in a crash situation. Fortunately, in that accident no one was seriously injured.

After the June 22 accident, Metro implemented a plan to place the older 1000 series cars in the center of trains as claiming that this shelters the older, less crashworthy cars in an accident.

The NTSB has pointed out that there is no factual basis for this practice, known as ''bellying,'' in creating safer trains.

The only way to make for safer trains is to get the old, unsafe railcars off the system. I am happy to report, that WMATA is working to replace the 1000 series cars incrementally with newer, safer cars.

In fact, last Monday, Metro announced it has placed the order for the 7000 series cars that will finally replace all of the oldest, most unsafe, railcars on the system.

The NTSB's top-line recommendations to the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority are the following:

Expedite the detection and replacement of all faulty track circuits within the System.

Expedite the replacement or reinforcement of all of the oldest least crashworthy railcars in operation.

Ensure that all new and current railcar cockpits are outfitted with event data recorders.

And lastly, management, starting with the board, must establish a culture of safety that pervades the entire organization.

The last point is incredibly important because despite Metro's ongoing budget woes, making safety a genuine priority would come at no additional cost to WMATA.

The NTSB also had many compelling recommendations for how the Federal Transit Administration should establish better safety guidance.

Because of Metro's unique relationship with the Federal Government, the FTA should provide immediate guidance to Metro on improving the safety of its operation.

Because the FTA has no actual regulatory authority, Congress must take the NTSB's safety improvement recommendations as a call for legislative action.

We must act to ensure that the NTSB's recommendations to FTA can be implemented in a way that achieves results.

Senators DODD, MENENDEZ, MIKULSKI, and I introduced legislation requiring the Transportation Secretary to establish and implement a comprehensive transit Public Transportation Safety program.

With the support of Senator SHELBY, this bill was reported out of committee and is awaiting action on the floor.

This legislation will give the FTA the ability to take decisive actions such as conducting inspections, investigations, audits, examinations of public transit systems.

The Public Transportation Safety Program Act of 2010 came about at the request of the President and Transportation Secretary LaHood.

I applaud the Obama administration for recognizing the need to give the FTA legal enforcement authority of its standards and rules.

This legislation establishes the type of safety enforcement authority for the FTA that currently exists for the Federal Railroad Administration's over commuter rail systems and that the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration has for commercial trucking.

It makes sense for public transit systems that receive federal funding to meet federal safety requirements set by the FTA.

These are safety requirements that could have saved the lives lost in last year's Red Line crash and would help make transit systems across the country safer for all users.

Just as I believe that the Federal Government has a role in ensuring Metro is safe for its riders and employees, I also believe the Federal Government has a responsibility to help fund the safe operation of the system since Metro provides the Federal Government and its employees a vital transportation service.

I was proud to work alongside Senators MIKULSKI, WEBB and former Senator John Warner to include major new funding authorization for Metro in the Federal Rail Safety Improvement Act, which was signed into law in 2008.

This law authorizes $1.5 billion over 10 years in federal funds for WMATA, and is matched dollar-for-dollar by the local jurisdictions, for capital improvements.

This arrangement will finally provide Metro with the dedicated funding the system needs.

President Obama's fiscal year 2011 budget request to Congress includes $150 million for Metro.

This builds on the substantial down-payment Senators MIKULSKI, WEBB, MARK WARNER and I were able to secure for Metro last year. I am happy to see that the Appropriations Committee has included this request in the Transportation appropriations bill reported out of Committee.

This is an important investment, but it is not nearly enough to fulfill all of Metrorail's obligations.

Metro maintains a list of ready-to-go projects totaling about $530 million and $11 billion in capital funding needs over the next decade.

When Metro was a relatively new system it was the epitome of safe and reliable public transit.

After 34 years of operation, and a managerial focus on system expansion rather than system preservation, the backlog of maintenance needs have taken its toll.

I find it unacceptable that the transit system in our Nation's Capital does not have enough resources to improve safety and maintain its aging infrastructure.

My deepest sympathies remain with the families and friends whose lives are forever affected having lost someone dear to them in last year's tragedy.

I want them to know that you and the loved ones you lost are not forgotten.

This tragedy has served as a constant reminder and inspiration for my work to fix the problems that led to the tragedy.

I call on my colleagues to honor the memory of those by working to pass the Public Transit Safety Act so that we can prevent similar tragedies from happening in the future.

SMALL BUSINESS TAX RELIEF

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we spent nearly 6 weeks debating a bill that would help small business.

My friends on the other side of the aisle exclaimed that the bill was a jobs bill, one that would help small business—the engine of our economy.

The senior Senator from Louisiana—for whom I have great admiration as an advocate for small business—said, ''If the Democrats aren't for small business, I don't know what we're for.''

Well, the small business jobs bill was not passed by this body.

My friends on the other side will claim that Republicans blocked the bill.

But I think my friends need to look in the mirror when placing blame on their inability to govern.

Even if the small business jobs bill would have passed, the tax measures in that bill are only a drop in the bucket when it comes to the taxes and increased regulation small business is going to have to endure.

That's right, although Democratic leadership and the White House continue to say that they are for small business, any legislative measure that has been advertised as helping small business has not lived up the hype.

Let's start with the new health care reform law.

During the debate over health care reform, my friends on the other side of the aisle—including top officials in the White House—explained that the new law would provide tax credits to small business to help them pay for health insurance.

My friends said it so many times, you would almost think that the so-called tax credit was the best thing since sliced bread.

Many Democratic Senators based their vote in favor of the health care reform bill solely on the belief that the small business tax credit for health insurance would help struggling small businesses.

Well, even after the White House spent taxpayer dollars to send postcards to 4 million small businesses informing them of the so-called tax credit for health insurance, the tax credit has been a dud.

That is not according to this Senator; that is according to small business owners and brokers who are in the business of selling insurance to small business.

For example, just the other day—Thursday, July 29—the Bloomberg news organization wrote an article noting that the response to the so-called tax credit for small business ''has been cool'' according to ''health-plan brokers across the country.''

Here are some quotes from the article about the small business tax credit:

James Stenger, director of business development for Benefit-Mall, said, ''The reality is it doesn't meet the hype . . . It's had very little traction so far . . .''

Russ Childers, a broker in Americus, GA, said, ''It fell short of what was needed to help businesses.''

Todd Page, of Warrenville, IL, said, ''We've really wanted it to work, because we'd sell more . . . It just hasn't worked out, and most firms have been disappointed.''

Thomas Harte, president of Landmark Benefits, Inc., said, ''We're not seeing more people becoming insured as a result of a subsidy coming their way.''

They are not the only ones decrying the so-called tax credit for health insurance.

The chief executive officer of the largest organization representing small business—the National Federation of Independent Business—questioned the effectiveness of this tax credit.

Small business owners who also had high hopes that the credit would help them were surprised and extremely disappointed when they found out they did not qualify for the credit.

A May 20 Associated Press article chronicles these frustrations.

I would like to read one passage from the article before I move on. The article said:

> Zach Hoffman was confident his small business would qualify for a new tax cut in President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law. But when he ran the numbers, Hoffman discovered that his office furniture company wouldn't get any assistance with the $79,200 it pays annually in premiums for its 24 employees. 'It leaves you with this feeling of a bait-and-switch,' he said.

Every day, I hear from Iowa small business owners who are frustrated with the so-called small business tax credit for health insurance.

I have been told that—after gathering all of the required information and paying an accounting professional to calculate all of the phaseouts and limitations—the time and cost almost outweighs any benefit for those businesses lucky enough to qualify.

Steven Yeater of Wilton, IA, the co-owner of a products finishing business, wrote me a letter telling me that the tax credit is ''(1) not well thought out or discussed, (2) ridiculously complicated for a small business owner to understand and implement, and (3) once again, Congress is over-selling/over-promising the benefits of the tax credit.''

This is just one example where the Democratic majority has failed small business.

This is one example where the Democratic majority has touted a so-called benefit for small business that did not live up to its hype.

And now, small business is faced with mounting tax increases and regulatory burdens.

What do I mean?

The new health care reform law included 20 tax increases. Thirteen of them fall on individuals and families, and 7 of them hit businesses.

These tax increases will be devastating for small business. Moreover, these tax increases far outweigh the benefit of the so-called small business tax credit for health insurance that some businesses are lucky enough to receive.

And this is not the only tax increase small business will face. When Congress returns after the August recess, we are going to debate the bipartisan tax relief that was enacted back in 2001 and 2003. That tax relief is set to expire at the end of this year unless Congress acts. Allowing the bipartisan tax relief to expire will result in the largest tax increase in our Nation's history.

My friends on the other side of the aisle have indicated that they would like to extend the bipartisan tax relief for the ''middle class.''

I want to emphasize that this means that my Democratic colleagues want to extend 80 percent of the bipartisan tax relief that they like to call the Bush tax cuts.

Actually, the only reason why they call it the Bush tax cuts is to vilify the tax relief. But my friends seem to support 80 percent of the tax cuts they enjoy vilifying so often.

Which brings me to my final point. My friends on the other side of the aisle would extend some of the tax relief but not all of it. My friends want to allow the top marginal tax rates—and a number of hidden taxes that affect these taxpayers—to expire. Why? Because my friends say the country—our Federal Government—cannot afford to give tax cuts to the ''rich.''

But, it is not the rich who are going to be burdened if the rates were allowed to expire; it is small business that will suffer.

So in closing, I refer back to the statement of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, which was, if Democrats are not for small business, I don't know what we are for.

The Democratic leadership is not for extending all of the bipartisan tax relief. So I will leave it to others to decide whether or not my Democratic colleagues are for small business.

I ask unanimous consent to have the items to which I referred printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SMALL BUSINESS SLOW TO EMBRACE HEALTH TAX CREDITS, BROKERS SAY

(By David Lerman and Liz Smith)

One of the ways President Barack Obama envisioned expanding coverage under the health overhaul was by giving small businesses a tax credit worth tens of thousands of dollars to help cover their employees.

Though 4 million postcards were mailed to eligible firms, response has been cool, say health-plan brokers across the country. The reason is that the credit starts to phase out for companies that pay average annual wages of more than $25,000, leaving out many businesses in higher-wage states and discouraging others who don't think the credit will help.

''The reality is it doesn't meet the hype,'' said James Stenger, director of business development for BenefitMall, which sells small-group plans in New Jersey. ''It's had very little traction so far.''

Todd Page, vice president of sales at JLBG Health in Warrenville, Illinois, said about 40 percent of the 460 small businesses his firm contacted were eligible for the credit. Only about seven would get the full benefit and be able to claim a credit equal to 35 percent of the premiums they pay.

Independent brokers sell small-group policies from insurers such as UnitedHealth Group Inc. and Aetna Inc. to firms with up to 50 employees and can assess how tax incentives affect coverage decisions.

Karen Mills, administrator of the U.S. Small Business Administration, said complaints about the credit's limited reach are premature.

''I think this is all still in anecdote land,'' Mills said in an interview. ''The math says it's likely to be positive.''

Mills said the income cap was necessary because Congress was intent on keeping program costs under control. ''It's just trying to get to the people who need the help the most.''

ESTIMATED SAVINGS

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the tax credit will save small businesses $40 billion by 2019, and Obama said it will help millions of companies solve one of their biggest worries: offering health insurance to their workers.

The plan is intended for enterprises such as independent printers, mechanics shops and restaurants, which lack the negotiating power that big companies have with insurers. The biggest breaks go to the smallest, least-wealthy workforces under the plan.

TARGETED EMPLOYERS

The Internal Revenue Service said the plan is for employers who pay at least half the cost of individual coverage for their employees in 2010. From 2010 to 2013, the maximum credit goes to companies with 10 or fewer full-time employees that pay annual average wages of $25,000 or less.

The credit is completely phased out for employers that have 25 or more workers or that pay average wages of $50,000 a year or more. Because eligibility rules are partly based on the number of employees, brokers complain that the tax break diminishes relatively quickly. For example, a firm with 14 workers that pays an average of $30,000 gets to claim a credit worth 19 percent of premiums paid.

The Obama administration said the program can help as many as two thirds of the nation's 6 million small businesses, based on Small Business Administration figures.

''It's worth perhaps tens of thousands of dollars to your companies,'' Obama said in a May 25 speech at the White House. ''And it will provide welcome relief to small business owners, who all too often have to choose between hiring or keeping your health care for yourselves and your workers.''

Mills said ''a huge proportion'' of these small businesses haven't been able to afford insurance or get access to it.

''This could very well tip the scales for some of them,'' she said.

COST OF LIVING

Many businesses who buy small-group health insurance have 10 or fewer employees. Most won't enjoy anything close to that 35 percent maximum credit because they pay more than $25,000 in average wages, the brokers said.

Stenger said the average family plan in New Jersey costs $1,500 to $1,800 a month. So a tax break that ends up cutting premium costs by 10 percent, for example, wouldn't induce firms to start offering coverage.

''The impact is a lot less than the crafters of this provision thought it would be, at least in New Jersey,'' he said.

'BLEEDING WOUND'

Brokers in other regions said the income issue isn't isolated to high-cost states like New Jersey.

''The income hurts the worst,'' said Russ Childers, a broker in Americus, Georgia. ''It fell short of what was needed to help businesses.''

The National Federation of Independent Business, a small-business lobbying group, disputed the administration's estimates for how many businesses will benefit.

''It's the equivalent of putting a band aid on a profusely bleeding wound,'' said Michelle Dimarob, head of legislative affairs for the federation. ''It won't solve the number-one problem for small businesses.''

The group in May joined Florida's legal challenge to the health-care reform law, becoming the first private organization seeking to overturn the measure.

Some 46 percent of companies have fewer than 10 workers, and many of those businesses insure only owners' families, Dimarob said. The credit, which expires in its current form in 2014 and fully in 2016, isn't likely to change this, she said. The credit can increase to 50 percent for the last two years if owners purchase insurance through a state exchange.

MICHIGAN INSURERS

Insurers in Michigan are scaling back attempts to sell to small businesses, said Steven Selinsky, the incoming president of his industry's trade group, the National Association of Health Underwriters. Selinsky closed his agency that sold small-group health insurance.

''After the economy collapsed, people just weren't purchasing,'' said Selinsky, who now works for BeneSys Inc., a third-party insurance administrator for unions. ''It's just not doing what we had hoped.''

Page, the Illinois broker, said his staff has provided 61 new quotes for potential clients and has sold two new policies to that group.

''We've really wanted it to work, because we'd sell more,'' said Page, whose clients include doctors' offices and auto-body repair shops. ''It just hasn't worked out, and most firms have been disappointed.''

Thomas Harte, president of Landmark Benefits Inc., who serves about 400 employers in New Hampshire and Massachusetts, said he hadn't come across any clients eligible for the tax credit. He has a long list of customers that exceed allowable income thresholds, or who have too many full-time workers.

''We're not seeing more people becoming insured as a result of a subsidy coming their way.''

BLUE CROSS GAINS

One exception to the experience of many insurance brokers has been Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas City, which started an intensive advertising campaign to promote the tax credit when the law was enacted.

The group sold 227 plans to small businesses in the past three months—an 80 percent increase in sales compared with a normal three-month period, said Tom Bowser, chief executive officer.

Even with the added business, Bowser said most small businesses in the Kansas City market don't qualify for the tax credit. Of the firms with fewer than 25 employees, no more than a quarter of them qualify, he said.

HELP FOR IDAHO

The credit has potential to help in Idaho because its economy is dominated by small businesses averaging eight workers, said Scott Leavitt, owner of an insurance brokerage in Boise and the immediate past president of the health underwriters association. On the other hand, Idaho's average per capita income is $33,000, and more than $35,000 for his block of customers, he said.

About a quarter of his clients could see some relief, though it would only be significant for 12 percent, he said.

Administration officials say they expect more businesses to warm to the incentives.

''These tax credits will make it easier for small businesses to give their workers the insurance they need,'' said Nicholas Papas, a spokesman for the White House. ''We're working diligently to ensure small businesses know about this credit.''

''Small businesses are looking into it because they're not dumb,'' Mills of the Small Business Administration said. ''People want to provide health insurance. The reason is they're losing good employees when they don't.''

FACT CHECK: TAX CUT MATH DOESN'T ADD UP FOR SOME

FACT CHECK: 'BROAD' HEALTH CARE TAX CUT FOR SMALL BUSINESS LEAVES OUT SOME COMPANIES

(By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar, Associated Press Writer)

WASHINGTON (AP).—Zach Hoffman was confident his small business would qualify for a new tax cut in President Barack Obama's health care overhaul law.

But when he ran the numbers, Hoffman discovered that his office furniture company wouldn't get any assistance with the $79,200 it pays annually in premiums for its 24 employees. ''It leaves you with this feeling of a bait-and-switch,'' he said.

When the administration unveiled the small business tax credit earlier this week, officials touted its ''broad eligibility'' for companies with fewer than 25 workers and average annual wages under $50,000 that provide health coverage. Hoffman's workers earn an average of $35,000 a year, which makes it all the more difficult to understand why his company didn't qualify.

Lost in the fine print: The credit drops off sharply once a company gets above 10 workers and $25,000 average annual wages.

It's an example of how the early provisions of the health care law can create winners and losers among groups lawmakers intended to help—people with health problems, families with young adult children and small businesses. Because of the law's complexity, not everyone in a broadly similar situation will benefit.

Consider small businesses: ''The idea here is to target the credits to a relatively low number of firms, those who are low-wage and really quite small,'' said economist Linda Blumberg of the Urban Institute public policy center.

On paper, the credit seems to be available to companies with fewer than 25 workers and average wages of $50,000. But in practice, a complicated formula that combines the two numbers works against companies that have more than 10 workers and $25,000 in average wages, Blumberg said.

''You can get zero even if you are not hitting the max on both pieces,'' Blumberg said.

Hoffman used an online calculator to figure his company's eligibility. At least three are available: from the House Energy and Commerce Committee, which helped write the legislation; from the progressive Center for American Progress; and from the National Federation of Independent Business, which is seeking to overturn the law in federal court. All produced the same result.

''I think (the administration's) intentions are good, but the numbers and applications don't come out to what they intend,'' said Hoffman, part owner of Wiley Office Furniture, a third-generation family business in Springfield, Ill.

The Treasury Department, which administers the new credit, did not dispute the calculations.

''The small-business tax credit was designed to provide the greatest benefit to employers that currently have the hardest time providing health insurance for their workers—small, low-wage firms,'' said Michael Mundaca, assistant secretary for tax policy. ''Small employers face higher premiums and higher administrative costs than large firms and in many cases cannot afford to provide coverage.''

Small business owners are a pivotal constituency in the fall congressional elections, and Democrats are battling to win them over. Major benefits of the health care law—competitive insurance markets, more stable premiums and a ban on denying coverage to those in poor health—don't take effect until 2014. But the health care credit is available starting this year.

It can be a boon for smaller companies paying lower wages. Betsy Burton, owner of The King's English Bookshop in Salt Lake City, estimates that she will get a credit of roughly $21,000 against premiums of about $67,800. She has 11 full-time equivalent employees averaging $26,100.

''What it means is that I can afford to carry this insurance and insure people's families,'' said Burton. ''I was afraid that we were fast approaching a time when I would have to choose between insuring my employees and closing my doors.''

Burton believes offering health insurance is the right thing for an employer to do—and also makes good business sense because it helps her retain valued employees. Except at the beginning, she has provided coverage for most of the 33 years the bookstore has been in business.

Slightly more than a third of companies with fewer than 10 employees offered coverage in 2008, down about 10 percent since the start of the decade, according to an Urban Institute analysis.

Hoffman, the furniture store owner whose business missed out on the credit, says he understands that lawmakers writing the health care legislation had a limited amount of money to work with. But his company's premiums rose 15 percent this year, and it's a struggle to keep paying.

To get the most out of the new federal credit, Hoffman said he'd have to cut his work force to 10 employees and slash their wages.

''That seems like a strange outcome, given we've got 10 percent unemployment,'' he said.

DEAR MR. WYATT: I am contacting you as I believe you are the individual who assists Sen. Grassley on tax matters connected to his Senate Finance Committee position.

I am writing you to comment on the Small Business Health Care Tax Credit.

Some brief background about our company:

We are a small manufacturer of abrasives in Wilton, IA, currently employing 17 full-time people.

Our major competitors are the Chinese, Korean, and Japanese sandpaper manufacturers and the recession has hit us hard.

We provide some of the following historical benefits to our employees:

We pay 100% of all employees' health insurance premiums;

We provide $40,000 of life insurance to each employee;

We contribute approximately 14% of each employee's compensation into a profit-plan for their retirement;

Paid vacation;

Approximately 2 weeks paid time off during Christmas which does not count against an employee's vacation time;

What the recession has done to us:

Like many small businesses, we are losing money;

This has caused us to hire some workers through a local temporary business to replace full-time employees as we have turnover and as we try to expand into other areas to keep our business going;

For the last 2 years we have only been able to contribute the 3% safe harbor to the profit-sharing plan (for at least the prior decade we contributed the full roughly 14% of compensation to the profit-sharing plan);

We were forced to change the safe harbor profit-sharing contribution from a 3% mandatory to a matching type plan since a few of the temporary workers will have met the 1,000 hours/12 month rule—essentially punishing the full-time work force as we don't have the discretionary cash to make the contributions for the temps (a whole other tax issue for small businesses); and

We have continually had to reduce some health benefits (via increasing deductible to $1,000; however, we continue to pay 100% of the premium cost).

Now back to the Small Business Health Care Tax Credit.

Early on I had high hopes that the credit would be quite helpful in defraying the health care premium costs. We currently pay $11,410.39 per month in Wellmark BCBS premiums (nine on the single plan at $413.67/month and eight on the family plan at $960.92/month) for a total annual premium cost of $136,924.68; and this is before anyone gets sick as we self-insure for the co-insurance. Our annual premium increase will be communicated to us by Wellmark about August and I anticipate another 20+% jump.

However, now some of the details of the credit are leaking out. Today I received the attached letter from our CPA firm, RSM McGladrey. I point you to the limitations and phase-out of the credit. Are you kidding me? By the time I gather all the required information, pay RSM McGladrey to calculate all the phase-outs, the resulting credit will not even cover the expected annual premium increase from BCBS!

What small business is this helping? This is about like all the back to work credits, or whatever they are called, which we concluded with RSM McGladrey are not worth the manpower costs to fully investigate and gather the information.

This credit is worthless. If Congress thinks this is going to encourage small businesses to keep providing health care for their employees, they are grossly mistaken. It just isn't meaningful enough to even enter into the equation in making a decision of what to do for my employees.

Effective today, we can no longer hire someone and provide them with subsidized health insurance beyond what is required by law. We hope to continue with existing employees, but clearly, with what little bit I know about the Health Care Act, come 2014 we are dropping our health plan; if not sooner.

I would hope as Senator Grassley's Finance Committee tax assistant, someone who would understand ''the devil in the details'', you will pass on to him my frustrations. Such frustrations with respect to the Small Business Health Care Tax Credit being, but not limited to: (1) not well thought out or discussed; (2) ridiculously complex for a small business to understand and implement; and (3) once again, Congress' over selling/promising the benefit of.

I would greatly appreciate if you would convey my thoughts on this matter to Senator Grassley to help him understand what is happening with small business on this issue.

Sincerely,

STEVEN D. YEATER,
Co-Owner.

SPRINGFIELD CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Mr. RISCH. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the centennial of the town of Springfield in my home State of Idaho.

On September 13, 1910, the County Commission of Bingham County approved a plat plan for the town-site of Springfield. It was an ambitious vision of a city on the shores of Springfield Lake—a body of water created years earlier to supply irrigation water from Danilsen creek. The area was a popular stopping place on Goodale's cutoff along the Oregon Trail.

In Springfield, 1910 was a busy and exciting time. Water from the Aberdeen-Springfield Canal reached Springfield. The Oregon Short-Line railroad came through and provided service to the community. And in June, a group of women organized the Springfield Domestic Science Club with a focus on community service.

The club quickly became a force in the community, establishing a hot lunch program at the local school and creating and managing the Springfield Cemetery, something members did until 1946. The club also sponsored many educational, cultural and entertainment events.

The Aberdeen-Springfield Canal was a major asset to the area. Not only did it provide much-needed water to the surrounding agricultural land, it provided jobs for many of the early settlers. The canal, begun in 1895, was dug using horse-drawn equipment and manual labor.

Today, the canal is a tribute to private enterprise. No government money was used during its construction. It is owned by its shareholders under a Carey Act corporation and is a ''not for profit'' organization, which financed it by the sale of shares in the company. The canal was completed at a cost of about $886,000, irrigates about 63,000 acres of field and helps produce crops valued at roughly $140 million each year.

On August 28, 2010, the Springfield community will honor its early pioneers with a centennial celebration. During the festivities, a monument in honor of the early settlers will be unveiled. The monument identifies those settlers who formed the backbone of the community by building the canal, operating the markets and shops and organizing the schools and churches. The names of these early pioneer families with the vision of seeing the desert bloom are:

Anderson, Baird, Bedwell, Berg, Blackburn, Bradley, H. Chandler, W. Chandler, Criddle, Cushman, Edwards, Evans, Gravatt, Grover, Hawker, Holland, Houghland, Judge, Line, Leach, Lloyd, Lofgreen, Loomis, Parmalee, Reid, Rupe, Sainz, Sellers, Shelman, Stoddard, Stufflebean, Snyder, Sommercorn, Thurston, Wells, Whyte, Willis.

Although the present day Springfield town-site did not quite live up to the vision laid out in the original plat, those living in the community strive to honor their heritage. Out of that sturdy pioneer stock have come doctors, lawyers, politicians, farmers, ranchers, chemists, accountants, educators, firemen, homemakers, artists, laborers, mechanics, business owners, civil servants, religious leaders and military servicemembers.

I congratulate the people of Springfield on this occasion and pay tribute to those pioneers and others like them across our land, who, with vision, determination and hard work, created what we now enjoy.

TRIBUTE TO MARK KOSTER

Mr. BURR. Mr. President, today I wish to honor and recognize Mark Koster. This month, the Senate will bid farewell to one of the unsung heroes of this body. Mark, an associate counsel in the Office of Senate Legislative Counsel, is retiring and concluding his career on Capitol Hill.

Over the last two decades, there is hardly a major Federal education law that doesnt have Marks imprint. Marks areas of focus have included higher education, special education, career and technical education, literacy, elementary and secondary education, and a number of early education programs. Mark has more bipartisan legislative accomplishments than many Members of Congress.

Mark has made certain our ideas are drafted into legislation with technical precision, and his dedication to his work over the past two decades exemplifies true professionalism. Mark has treated every legislative initiative equally, no matter if he was drafting a relatively small amendment or a major reauthorization proposal for the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the Higher Education Act, or the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. Senators and their staffs all knew that when one saw Marks legislative signature, ''KOS,'' atop a document that the draft that had emerged from legislative counsel was in perfect technical shape and it was now up to us, as Members of the Senate, only to argue the draft's merits and relevance, not the format.

As a member of the Senate HELP Committee, I am proud and honored to say that we, both present and former committee members, have considered Mark our staff, even though he has never been on the HELP Committee's payroll. Mark has been one of our cornerstones because he has always treated every HELP member and staffer with the greatest respect. Additionally, Mark has demonstrated a rather large dose of patience in dealing with time constraints, deadlines, and all the various personalities that traverse the Halls of the Senate.

Although those of us who are members of the HELP Committee have consumed most of Marks time during his years as legislative counsel, Mark has always been of great assistance to every other Senate office that has needed aid in drafting education-related issues. All of us, Republican, Democrat, and Independent, have been lucky to have had Mark Koster on our side.

Mark, we thank you for your service and dedication. The HELP Committee will always consider you both an honorary member and a part of our family. We and the entire Federal education lawmaking process will miss you. May your next chapter in life be even more successful and more rewarding than the one that is coming to a conclusion. We wish you, your lovely wife, Kathy, and your two children the very best.

EDUCATION JOBS FUND

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, as an elected representative of the great State of Texas, I swore a solemn oath to uphold and defend the Constitution. So it is a great disappointment to discover that some Members of the other body are attempting to undermine the separation of powers enshrined in our Constitution. I am speaking, of course, about the House-passed language that was included in Senate amendment No. 4575, which I opposed earlier today.

The language in the amendment unfairly requires the State of Texas to maintain fiscal year 2011 levels of State funding for elementary, secondary, and higher education spending for 2 additional fiscal years in order to receive a portion of the $10 billion Education Jobs Fund. This places an undue burden on a single State that is likely an unconstitutional condition on funding in violation of the Supreme Court's holding in South Dakota v. Dole.

Specifically, the language conditions Texas's receipt of Federal education dollars on an event that would violate the Texas Constitution. The Texas Governor cannot make the required assurances because the Texas legislature, not the Governor, decides how to spend the State's money. Any attempt by the Governor to bind the legislature's hands would be ineffective because that office lacks the power, and the mere attempt could violate the Texas Constitution. Nor can the Governor make an assurance regarding the actions of a future legislature, as the amendment requires. Such conditions, which cannot be lawfully met, can have no possible relation to the Federal interest in education spending.

According to the Congressional Research Service, the State's share of the $10 billion is estimated to be over $830 million. By ensuring that the State will not be able to access these funds, the Texas provisions effectively create a significant and substantial amount of discretionary funds available to the Secretary of Education. The practical effect of this petty, partisan gamesmanship will be to saddle future generations of Texans with a debt for which they are unlikely to receive any benefit.

This was a shameful, irresponsible exercise in raw political power. Texas students deserve more than to be political pawns. Forcing the legislature and Governor to choose between violating the Texas Constitution or accepting Federal dollars is an abuse of Federal power and is a clear threat to the separation of powers. A State's elected government should not be made subjects of political appointees and unelected bureaucrats at the Department of Education.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING BISHOP DR. JERRY LOUDER

● Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am honored to recognize the career accomplishments and service of the late Bishop Dr. Jerry Louder—clergyman, educator, community leader, and author. Dr. Louder was born in Riverside in 1947 and remained dedicated to his community throughout his life. Dr. Louder passed away on July 2, 2010.

As a student at Pacific High School in San Bernardino, Jerry Louder excelled in academics and athletics. He advanced his education at the University of California, Riverside and earned a dual major bachelor's degree, a master's degree, and a doctorate. Dr. Louder later completed a second doctorate at Friends International Christian University and began his ministry in 1970.

Dr. Louder was an acknowledged leader among his ministerial peers. He served as pastor of New Jerusalem Foursquare Church for 22 years and became founding pastor of New Jerusalem Christian Center. He was heavily active in a diversity of clergy groups in San Bernardino and Riverside counties, including the Riverside Clergy Association; the Riverside Area Pastors' Association; the Inland Area Ministers' Alliance; and the Riverside Interfaith Fellowship. He also served as president of the United States Pastors' Association, a communication network of nearly 100,000 pastors representing more than 40 denominations and independent churches.

Riverside mayor, Ron Loveridge, described Dr. Louder as a ''community healer.'' In addition to helping forge stronger relations between the Riverside Police Department and the communities it serves, Dr. Louder also cofounded and served as executive director of the Opportunities Industrialization Center, which led to his founding the Riverside Opportunity Center to address the needs of the poor, homeless, and marginalized in his community. These and other similar efforts earned the recognition of many groups and organizations throughout his life, including being named a 2010 Alumnus of the Year by the Riverside Community College District.

I extend my heartfelt condolences to Dr. Louder's family, friends, colleagues, and all those whose lives were influenced by Dr. Louder's commitment, compassionate leadership, and personal and professional integrity. He will be truly missed.●

TRIBUTE TO ABRAHAM WEINRIB

● Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. President, Columbus, OH, the State's capital city, is home to more than 710,000 Ohioans who trace their heritage from a mix of races, religions, and ethnicities. Many Columbus residents can trace their heritage back to Germany, Italy, and England. Neighborhoods like German Village, Italian Village and Victorian Village are examples of places these new Americans created in the early 20th century.

Recent waves of immigration have brought men and women from Somalia, Vietnam, and Mexico to the city and our State.

Throughout the demographic changes to Columbus, there remains one small community that continues to draw from the strength of their shared experiences.

Mr. President, 217 Holocaust survivors reside in the city of Columbus and its suburbs from Bexley to New Albany. Among the unforgettable stories told by these heroic men and women is 97-year-old Abraham Weinrib, of the Berwick neighborhood, southeast of Columbus.

Mr. Weinrib's journey from hardship to hope began in 1939 when he and his family were forced from their home in Lodz, Poland. After being forcefully removed from his home in Lodz, he fled to Warsaw, Poland, where on September 6, 1939 at the age of 25 Mr. Weinrib was arrested by the Nazi's.

For the next 5½ years, he was sent to a total of nine concentration camps.

In Hanover, Germany, he was a slave laborer at the Continental rubber factory, where he made tires for Nazis to use against the Allied troops.

At Bergen-Belsen, he was forced to drag dead prisoners to a ditch to be buried in mass graves.

On April 14, 1945, Mr. Weinrib, weak with typhus, fell asleep on top of one of these mass graves. That night, he woke up from the open grave and stumbled into nearby barracks. There he found English troops liberating the camp.

Unfortunately, Mr. Weinrib's parents, two older brothers, and most of his extended family were among the more than 6 million Jews who perished during the war.

Mr. Weinrib spent the next year in a Swedish hospital recovering from years of starvation, beatings, and a gunshot to his forehead.

After regaining his strength, Mr. Weinrib began to attend events through a Holocaust survivor's club in Sweden. There he met a young woman named Anna who was freed from Auschwitz in 1945. Together, they spent more than a year recovering in the hospital and several more years recovering at home in Sweden. By 1950, Anna and Abraham Weinrib married and had their first child, Ruth, in 1952.

In 1954, after living with his sister Hela who also survived the war Mr. and Mrs. Weinrib left Stockholm and moved to Columbus where Mr. Weinrib's brother's Morrui and Chaim lived. In Columbus, Mr. Weinrib was hired by Sam Melton to work at a Capitol Supply factory. Mr. Weinrib quickly rose through the ranks from lineworker to manager. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Weinrib raised three children, sending them to school and working hard to ensure they had every opportunity that was robbed from their own youth.

Prior to Anna's passing in 1979, Mr. Weinrib rarely spoke of his experiences during the war. But since then, he uses his own experience to ensure that future generations never forget the tragedy of the Holocaust.

Abraham Weinrib has become a fixture at the Jewish Community Center in Columbus and frequently speaks to students throughout the community. At one recent speaking engagement, a student asked Mr. Weinrib what his experiences during the Holocaust can teach younger generations. Without hesitation, he responded with his thick polish accent, that ''life is short; you have to be nice to each other.''

Then, Mr. Weinrib referred to a heartbreaking experience he remembers during his time at Auschwitz. The Nazi's were separating prisoners into two lines, those who were old enough and healthy enough to work, and those who were not. One young mother was unwilling to be separated from her young daughter. Both were sent to the crematorium.

Abraham Weinrib has seen firsthand what intolerance, prejudice, and hate can do to undermine our basic humanity. He talks about how unfair and challenging life can be but does not attribute his survival or the survival of three of his siblings to any sort of miracle. Instead, he attributes his survival to the ability to persevere.

His own children have also used the strength of their father to succeed. The three Weinrib children—Bruce, Ruth, and Irene—overcame many of the hardships often faced by first-generation children: parents with a limited understanding of English, low paying jobs, and the feeling of being an outsider. By any measure, all three children have succeeded. Ruth and Bruce are both graduates of the Ohio State University. All three children have postsecondary degrees, and all have made Abe a proud grandfather of seven grandchildren.

The impact Abraham Weinrib has had on his family and community is clear and the message he shares is powerful. Elie Wiesel said ''Not to transmit an experience is to betray it.'' Abraham Weinrib is helping to ensure that generations to come will learn his enduring lessons.

Thank you, Abraham Weinrib, for all that you do to make our State and Nation live up to our highest ideals.●

TRIBUTE TO JIM WEATHERLY

● Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to commend Jim Weatherly of Pontotoc, MS, for his contribution to American music through prolific song writing and the attention that he has brought to the many talented artists in my home State of Mississippi.

This weekend, Pontotoc County will celebrate Jim Weatherly's accomplishments at its annual Bodock Festival. Governor Haley Barbour has designated a ''Jim Weatherly Day'' as part of the festival. I believe this is a fitting tribute to a man who is a source of pride for many in Mississippi.

Jim Weatherly has not only excelled in the arts; he has also excelled both academically and athletically. While I was a law school student at the University of Mississippi, Weatherly was a member of the Ole Miss football team. As quarterback, Weatherly led the Ole Miss Rebels to an unbeaten and untied season, resulting in a national championship in 1962 and Southeastern Conference Championships in 1962 and 1963. As a star quarterback at my alma mater, Weatherly earned three letters and was honored as a member of the All Southeastern Conference team in 1964.

Jim Weatherly first started writing songs around the age of 12. He moved to Los Angeles, CA, in 1966 to pursue a career in the music industry. Weatherly has written pop, R&B, country, gospel and jazz songs, some of which have become classics. Weatherly has authored numerous hits for artists such as Gladys Knight and the Pips, Dean Martin, Kenny Rogers, Reba McIntire, Kenny Chesney, Hall & Oates and The Temptations. Some of his well-known hits include ''Midnight Train to Georgia,'' ''Love Finds Its Own Way'' and ''Where Peaceful Waters Flow.'' He was nominated for a Grammy in the R&B Songwriter of the Year category and helped win numerous Grammys and awards for other artists. He has released seven albums, including a Christmas album that he wrote and recorded.

The American Society of Publishers, Authors, and Composers named Weatherly Country Songwriter of the Year in 1974. Weatherly is also a member of the Nashville Songwriters Hall of Fame and the Mississippi Musicians Hall of Fame.

Weatherly's ''Midnight Train to Georgia'' was inducted into the Grammy Hall of Fame in 1999. In 2001, The National Endowment for the Arts and the Recording Industry Association of America ranked this song 28th among 365 Songs of the Century.

Since moving back to the Southeast, Weatherly has continued to write, publish and record songs. Weatherly recently cowrote an album with Vince Gill that sold over 5 million copies, and he continues to have No. 1 country hits on the charts.

I congratulate Mr. Weatherly on being honored by his hometown of Pontotoc, MS, and on his long, illustrious career. I wish him the best in his future endeavours.●

TRIBUTE TO MICHEL BAIK

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, it is with a heavy heart that today I pay tribute to fire fighter Michel Baik, who sadly lost his life on July 24, 2010.

A lifelong resident of Bridgeport, Michel graduated from Central High School, where he played football. Throughout his life, he remained engaged in sports playing softball and basketball and was also an active member of the St. Nicholas Antiochian Orthodox Church congregation.

He was well known as a loving husband and father who was very engaged in the lives of his children, Andrew, Thomas, and Margaret. He coached Junior Varsity basketball, volunteered with the Boy Scouts, and was a constant presence at their various school plays, sports events, and dance recitals.

For many years, Michel worked for companies like Norelco and Alcon Data, as well as at the Connecticut Post newspaper as distribution manager. He also helped teach computer skills to the unemployed as an instructor at a nonprofit workforce development organization called Career Resources.

Then, in 2007, he decided to take on a new challenge. He trained hard, studied hard, and ultimately became—at the age of 47—the oldest ''probey,'' or rookie, member of the Bridgeport Fire Department. It was a job he loved, and he was proud to have been able to serve his community as a member of the department and the Ladder 11 team.

When a person becomes a firefighter, they are not simply taking a job; they are following a calling.

We have all felt our chests tighten and our pulses quicken with anxiety at the sound of a fire engine screaming through town. For most of us, this signals two important things: There is an emergency somewhere nearby, and—more importantly—that help is on the way.

Of course, for the people riding on those rigs, all the commotion is just another day at the office. They are focused solely on the task at hand.

When the unthinkable happens—a devastating hurricane, industrial accident, terrorist attack, or three-alarm fire—these brave men and women are the first on the scene and the last to leave. In between, they give all they have to make sure the emergency is contained and our communities are safe.

For Michel Baik and firefighters all over our Nation, the call to serve means facing danger every day. The commotion of an emergency becomes secondary to the need to help people, and the dangers they personally face must take a backseat to the task at hand.

That was the case on the afternoon of July 24, 2010, when Michel and his colleague, fire lieutenant Steven Velasquez, were conducting a search-and-rescue mission on the third floor of a burning house in Bridgeport. They were deepest into the blaze, looking for people in need of assistance and trying to ventilate the structure. None of the inhabitants of the home were injured. But tragically, both of these courageous men lost their lives, despite the quick action of their colleagues to pull them out of danger and get them to the hospital.

Tragedies are inherent in this profession, and the risks are shared by every single person who has ever gotten the call, rushed to their gear, and has run headlong into danger in order to save the life of someone else. These shared risks help to bind those called to take them together in a solemn way.

Firefighters will do anything for one another, both on the job and when the worst happens. The more than 7,000 of their fellow firefighters—from as far away as western Canada—who attended the memorial services for Fire Fighter Baik and Lieutenant Velasquez were an impressive testament to that bond.

I believe that the eulogy offered in tribute to Michel Baik by International Association of Fire Fighters president Harold Schaitberger at his memorial service speaks well of this solemn commitment. Through these difficult times, the community which Michel served, and those he served with, can provide support and comfort to his loved ones, and I will ask that President Schaitberger's words be printed in the RECORD.

Of course, no tribute will ever be enough to ease the suffering of their families. I offer my deepest condolences to Mich's wife Laurie, his children, and his entire family. Their sacrifice is unimaginable, and they will always be in our thoughts and prayers.

I know that we can never make this right for them. But we must celebrate the life and service of Firefighter Michel Baik and make sure that his memory—as a role model and true hero—lives on and helps to inspire others to take up the call to serve.

I ask that President Schaitberge's words to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

The information follows:

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FIRE FIGHTERS

President Harold Schaitberger

EULOGY FOR FIRE FIGHTER MICHEL BAIK, BRIDGEPORT LOCAL 834, JULY 30, 2010

To Fire Fighter Michel Baik's mother Mary, to his wife Laurie, to his children Andrew, Thomas and Margaret, and to his sister Rania—thank you for allowing me the honor of taking part in this beautiful service to commemorate Mitch's life, his service, and his sacrifice.

To Mitch's family, to his friends, to his brothers and sisters in the Bridgeport Fire Department and Local 834, and to his extended fire fighter family, I stand before you like the man we honor today, a servant unto God, to offer the thoughts and prayers on behalf of our General Secretary Treasurer, our Executive Board, and the 298,000 fire fighters we represent across two great nations.

These are the times that words are a poor substitute as we try to make sense of such a profound loss and provide comfort to each other in this time of great sadness. I know words can do little to heal the heart-wrenching pain that we all feel. But I also know that I—and that all of Mitch's brothers and sisters in the fire service who traveled from across two nations to be here—want you, Mitch's family, to see and feel the love and the sorrow that each and every brother and sister in the fire service family feels today.

These emotions are as strong and as heartfelt as anything I can say. They are as genuine as anything I've written on these pieces of paper in my hand.

I want you to know that all of us have come here today to put our collective arms around you. Many of us are gathering for a second time today. We also paid tribute to Lieutenant Steven Velasquez.

Sadly, we are back together again and it's no easier the second time to say goodbye to one of our own.

Many outside of our ranks will refer to Mitch and Steven as heroes. But they didn't set out to be heroes and they didn't think of themselves that way. No, if they were here they would simply tell you they were just doing their jobs.

I did not have the honor of knowing Mitch personally, but I do know who he was. I do know that like many who came before him Mitch was drawn to ''The Job'' like countless young men and women who follow their childhood dreams—who experience the calling to service to become fire fighters. But for much of his life Mitch pursued other dreams, and at age 47—two years ago—he answered the calling.

He entered this close knit profession like so many of his brothers and sisters in dress blues who surround us now, with a humble confidence, eager to put in the hours with no expectation or desire for public recognition.

He summoned the quiet courage that resides in all who come to this work, and he decided he could do it. He was determined—not only that he wanted to do it—but that he needed to do it. And at age 47 he realized a life-long dream, and he joined us on ''The Job.''

Mitch was so excited and so proud when he became a fire fighter. He held up his badge to show his kids what Dad had done. He was Local 834's oldest probey.

Though he was a rookie, Mitch approached the job like the man he was—accustomed to hard work and long hours and eager to sacrifice for his family and his community.

The journey he took to get on the job is remarkable.

Sadly, it takes a tragedy like this to remind us just how fragile life can be and how our own journeys can end all too quickly.

Sadly, too often it takes a tragedy for a community and its citizens to recognize the courage, dedication, commitment, sacrifice, and service that people like Mitch make day in and day out.

And sadly, it takes a tragedy for the rest of the world to see the sacrifice that their families make.

So today as we pay our respects to Mitch we also pay our respects to his family—for giving more than you should ever be asked to give. And we pay our respects to you for the sacrifice you have made.

Remembering and honoring our fallen is the most solemn, most revered tradition in the fire service.

Every year across the United States and Canada a hundred or more fire fighters make the ultimate sacrifice. And when one of our brothers or sisters falls, the fire service family comes together.

We come together no matter how near or how far to make it clear to you—Mitch's family—that our hearts ache.

We want you to know that his brothers and sisters in the fire service loved him—but we understand that you loved him more.

We want you to know that we will miss him tremendously—but we know you will miss him more.

We have gathered to embrace you and let you know that your extended family is here, standing with you—and we're not going away.

For almost a century we've come together in times of loss to show the love and respect we have for our family and to stand strong for our IAFF brothers and sisters, including here in Bridgeport.

We use the tradition-bound symbols of our profession—the men and women in their crisp dress blues, the bagpipers and drummers who play their mournful songs, the Honor Guard standing at attention—to salute those we have lost. And then the ring of the Bell sends them home.

This is how we cope.

This is how we mourn.

This is also how we salute YOU.

From all of us in this great union—this brother and sisterhood called the IAFF—we want you to know that your loved one may be gone—but he will never be forgotten.

Mitch's name will remain, forever etched in the granite walls of our Fallen Fire Fighters Memorial in Colorado Springs.

We do that to show that he left an indelible mark on our lives, that he will forever be a part of our fire fighter family—and so will all of you.

Thank you Brother Baik for the gift of your life.

May you rest in peace. God bless you and may God bless the fire fighters on the front lines everywhere.●

REMEMBERING THEODORE H. FOCHT

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the life of Theodore H. Focht, a former lawyer, educator, and public servant who passed away on April 22, 2010, at the age of 75. I extend my deepest condolences to his wife of 53 years, Joyce, his sons, David and Eric, and his grandson Jason.

Over the course of more than four decades, starting with his graduation in 1959 from law school at the College of William and Mary, Theodore—or Ted, as he was more commonly known to his family and friends—enjoyed an illustrious legal career that took him from academia to the halls of Congress to senior leadership positions at the Securities Investor Protection Corporation, or SIPC. Throughout his career, Ted earned a well-deserved reputation as an extremely knowledgeable and experienced voice on matters related to securities law and as a dedicated and hardworking public servant.

Following a stint as a legal assistant at the Securities and Exchange Commission in the early 1960s, Ted became a faculty member at the University of Connecticut School of Law in my home State, where he taught classes on securities regulation, administrative law, and property law. In 1969, Ted took a leave of absence from his work at UCONN and moved to Washington, DC, to take on a temporary assignment as special counsel to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

When Ted took that position on Capitol Hill, the House Commerce Committee was in the middle of working to pass legislation that would provide critical new protections to U.S. investors from bankrupt and financially troubled brokerage firms. As the committee's special counsel on securities policy, Ted jumped right into the issue, playing an absolutely instrumental role in crafting the Securities Investor Protection Act. This legislation, which was signed into law by President Nixon, created the SIPC—a nonprofit entity that insures the assets of investors against brokerage firm failures—and with it, an important new layer of security and sense of confidence for Americans who wanted to invest in the stock market.

But Ted's work on investor protection issues did not end with the enactment of that landmark bill. Following its creation, Ted became the SIPC's president and general counsel, where he successfully shepherded the corporation through its first two decades of existence. Between 1971, when he took the helm at the SIPC, until 1994, when he retired from the corporation, Ted became inextricably linked to the organization's work and mission. Indeed, I believe that Ted's work with SIPC, both in helping to build the organization as a young congressional staffer and run it after establishment, are among the most striking aspects of his impressive professional legacy.

And so I would like to take this opportunity today to thank Ted for his years of dedication to the law—whether as a professor helping to shape the minds of young law students at UCONN, or as a senior executive at the SIPC working to build a safer environment for Americans to invest.

And I once again extend my most heartfelt condolences to all of the people who knew and loved him.●

REMEMBERING SERGEANT ORVILLE SMITH

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, today I honor the life of a true American hero. Police SGT Orville Smith, a 39-year veteran of the Shelton, CT, Police Department, died July 7, 2010, of injuries he sustained while in the line of duty. I express my deepest condolences to his family, colleagues on the Shelton Police Force, and the entire community of Shelton for this tragic loss.

It goes without saying that American law enforcement officers such as Sergeant Smith are a very rare and special breed. Every day, police officers around the country go to work with a singular objective—to selflessly protect the communities and the people that they know and love. It is an incredibly rewarding career, but one fraught with potential dangers and sacrifices. And unfortunately, men and women in law enforcement are all too often forced to make the ultimate sacrifice, giving their own lives in defense of their fellow citizens.

That is exactly what Orville Smith, the first Shelton police officer to be killed in the line of duty since 1964, did. Late in the evening on July 3, while directing traffic outside of a local fireworks event commemorating the July 4 holiday, Sergeant Smith was struck by a drunk driver. He passed away 4 days later, leaving behind a loving wife, two children, four grandchildren, and a legion of fellow police officers who, during his nearly four decades of service on the force, came to know Sergeant Smith for his fearlessness and unflinching dedication to his job.

Indeed, to say that Sergeant Orville Smith was committed to public service and helping his fellow citizens regardless of the personal sacrifice required is, in my view, a bit of an understatement. From his service as a U.S. marine in the Vietnam war to his work as a volunteer firefighter, Sergeant Smith made protecting and defending his community and countrymen his life's mission.

While he planned to retire from the force next year, his heart truly belonged to the Shelton Police Department. It is therefore fitting that Shelton Police Chief Joel Hurliman called him ''one of the bravest guys I ever met'' and went on to say, ''He wasn't scared of anything, except retirement.''

It was that kind of professional dedication and unwavering commitment to public service that made Sergeant Smith not only an exemplary police officer but a wonderful human being. He spent his entire life devoted to helping others and relished every minute of it. Several weeks ago, on the eve of Independence Day, he died that way, too—loyally and courageously fulfilling his duty to ''protect and serve'' until the very end.

I express my deepest gratitude to Sergeant—Smith or ''Smitty'', as he was more commonly known by his friends at the Shelton Police Department—for his tremendous record of service to the people of my State and the Nation. I once again extend my most heartfelt condolences to all those who knew and loved him. While the death of a loved one is never easy to accept, it is my hope that the fact that Sergeant Smith died doing what he loved will bring them some measure of comfort during the months and years ahead.●

REMEMBERING LIEUTENANT STEVEN VELASQUEZ

● Mr. DODD. Mr. President, it is with a heavy heart that I pay tribute to LT Steven Velasquez, who sadly lost his life on July 24, 2010.

We have all felt our chests tighten and our pulses quicken with anxiety at the sound of a fire engine screaming through town. For most of us, this signals two important things: There is an emergency somewhere nearby, and—more importantly—that help is on the way.

Of course, for the people riding on those rigs, all the commotion is just another day at the office. They are focused solely on the task at hand.

When the unthinkable happens—a devastating hurricane, industrial accident, terrorist attack, or three-alarm fire—these brave men and women are the first on the scene and the last to leave. In between, they give all they have to make sure the emergency is contained and our communities are safe.

They do this every day of the week, every week of the year. Being a firefighter certainly isn't a job for the faint of heart. In fact, it is not so much a job as it is a calling.

At least it was for Steven Velasquez. His 20-year career took him from a position with the Fire Department of Prince Georges County, MD, to the rank of Lieutenant in the Bridgeport Fire Department in my home State of Connecticut.

Along the way, he built a reputation as a tremendously dedicated team member and as someone whose discipline and bravery made him a leader. This reputation, and the urging of many of his colleagues, helped secure him a place on the department's elite Rescue Squad—despite the fact that there were others in line for the prestigious assignment before him.

In his 16 years in Bridgeport, Velasquez never took a sick day. He was committed to his family, his community, and to his fellow firefighters.

His attitude and work ethic led to his being awarded the Bridgeport Fire Department's third highest honor in 2000, the Medal of Merit.

But awards and accolades were not why Lieutenant Velasquez became a firefighter. In fact, he never displayed the many citations he had received throughout his career on his uniform. He also turned down a job with the New York City Fire Department.

The reason being?—Bridgeport has more fires.

For Lieutenant Velasquez, and firefighters all over our Nation, the call to serve means facing danger every day. The commotion of an emergency becomes secondary to the need to help people, and the dangers they personally face must take a backseat to the task at hand.

That was the case on the afternoon of July 24, 2010, when Lieutenant Velasquez and his colleague, Michel Baik, were conducting a search-and-rescue mission on the third floor of a burning house in Bridgeport. They were deep into the blaze, looking for anyone who may need help, and trying to ventilate the structure.

Through these difficult times, the community which Steven served, and those he served with, can provide support and comfort to his loved ones.

Of course, no tribute will ever be enough to ease the suffering of their families. I offer my deepest condolences to Lieutenant Velasquez's wife Marianne, his son Aaron, his daughter Salina, and to his entire family. Their sacrifice is unimaginable, and they will always be in our thoughts and prayers.

I know that we can never make this right for them. But we must celebrate the life and service of Lieutenant Velasquez and make sure that his memory—as a role model and true hero—live on and help to inspire others to take up the call to serve.

I ask to have printed in the RECORD President Schaitberger's words to which I referred.

The material follows:

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FIRE FIGHTERS

President Harold Schaitberger

EULOGY FOR LT. STEVEN VELASQUEZ, BRIDGEPORT LOCAL 834, FRIDAY, JULY 30, 2010

Lieutenant and IAFF Local 834 member Steven Velasquez—just 40 years on this Earth—was taken too soon.

To Steven's mother, Carol, thank you for giving me the honor of being here today to celebrate your son's life.

To his bride Marianne, his son Aaron and his daughter Salina, to his sister Cindy and his brother Jason, to his family and friends, to his brothers and sisters in the Bridgeport Fire Department, and to his extended fire fighter family, I have traveled here today to make sure you know that the thoughts and prayers of our General Secretary-Treasurer, our entire International Executive Board, and the more than 298,000 members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, the Bravest in North America, are with you today.

I know that my words won't make you forget your pain or forget your loss.

But I hope I can help you understand that to those of us who have come from cities and towns across two great countries—''Stevie V.'' was family to us.

Even though many of us didn't have the privilege of knowing Stevie personally, we know who he was.

We know him because there is so much about those who enter this profession of ours that are so similar.

A quiet courage, humble, understated—never wanting to bring attention to themselves or their work.

Their willingness to serve a community and a public and their readiness to sacrifice—that's how we know who ''Stevie V.'' was.

Everyone who goes on what we call ''The Job'' becomes part of this extended family.

We all know what this career can demand and we all know how cruel the consequences can be.

Everyone who has taken the oath to serve in our profession comes into it knowing the risk, and being here today reaffirms just how dangerous this job is.

We know when we get into this calling that it could take any one of us at any time.

It can take us after 30 years on the job or after 30 days.

That's why we are one big family—no matter where we really call home—because everyone here knows just how rewarding—and yet how brutal, this job is.

And even while we know the consequences nothing prepares us to cope with the grief that we feel when we lose a brother or a sister in the line of duty—let alone two.

Many of us are together for the first time today.

We will come together again this afternoon to honor Mitch Baik.

We will come together and we will be there for each other because no one in our fire service family should ever have to go through this alone.

And no family member of a fallen fire fighter should ever have to go through this alone.

But Mitch's loss and Stevie's loss will not prevent us from celebrating their lives today.

It will not prevent us from celebrating their service to their community today.

It will not prevent me from saying that my heart is broken that they are gone but we were blessed to have them in our lives.

Stevie Velasquez was both a young man and a grizzled veteran.

At just 40 years of age he already had two decades in the fire station.

He already was wise beyond his years.

For 20 years in two departments Stevie demonstrated his work ethic and set an example for others to follow.

That's why he received the Medal of Merit—the department's third-highest award—in? 2000.

That's why he made lieutenant five months ago.

Bursting at the seams with enthusiasm ready to hop on a rig and respond to any call afraid of nothing, eager to experience everything, and ready to give everything he had to do The Job.

He had an efficient, studious approach.

He understood the importance of training and the importance of being prepared.

Committed, duty bound, ready to serve in the hardest, most rewarding job imaginable—that's who Stevie was.

Ready to rush to the aid of strangers, no questions asked—that's who he was.

Ready to protect his community, ready to comfort those in need, ready to lead people to safety who couldn't find their way out—that's who he was.

A devoted family man standing vigil over his newborn daughter's bedside while she gained the strength she needed to persevere—that's who he was.

He protected his community and his family—that's who ''Stevie V'' he was.

Like many of us he probably considered himself lucky to be a fire fighter, lucky to be able to answer the call, lucky to do something he loved.

But we were the lucky ones.

The Bridgeport Fire Department, Local 834, the IAFF—we were the lucky ones.

His brothers and sisters in Prince George's County Maryland where Stevie started his career in the fire service—they were the lucky ones.

His wife, his children, his parents, his brother and sister—you were the lucky ones.

That's what I would tell him if he were standing here today.

We had quite a gift in Lieutenant Steven Velasquez.

And that's why we feel cheated that we have to give him back to the Lord so soon.

But we will not forget him.

How could we?

A young gun . . . a rising star.

A shining example of courage, of professionalism.

Stevie's name will be etched in our Wall of Honor in Colorado Springs.

His name will remain there forever, engraved in that beautiful granite wall—to be honored every year as part of our Fallen Fire Fighter Memorial service.

To Stevie's family, we want you to know that you aren't alone.

You should know that long after the last word of the last eulogy, the IAFF and Local 834 will be here for you. Today, tomorrow, and for years to come.

To Lieutenant Steven Velasquez, who gave his life so others could live, from your 298,000 brothers and sisters in the IAFF—thank you for the gift of your life. May you rest in peace. God bless you and may God bless the fire fighters on the front lines everywhere.●

TRIBUTE TO KEVIN M. SIMPSON

● Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, today I thank and congratulate Kevin M. Simpson, an individual who has already enjoyed a distinguished career as a public servant and who is preparing once again to answer the call to service.

Kevin is a skilled attorney and litigator, and early in his career he made the decision to devote his formidable legal talents to public service. He defended numerous Federal agencies in a variety of matters during his years as a young trial attorney with the Department of Justice.

In 1997, he served as minority counsel to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee during its campaign finance investigation. During 1998, Kevin was Deputy Chief Investigative Counsel to Minority Members of the House Judiciary Committee during the impeachment of President Clinton. In 1999, he became impeachment counsel to Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle and the Minority Members of the United States Senate.

Following his service in the legislative branch, Kevin returned to the executive branch as the Deputy General Counsel of Programs and Regulations at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, a position he held until the end of the Clinton administration. It was my pleasure to work with Kevin Simpson at HUD. Kevin earned a reputation for achieving results—all while maintaining unwavering respect for his colleagues and a dedication to fairness and courtesy. He made a difference, and he turned rivals into friends in the process.

It was this commitment to making a difference that led Kevin to join Max Stier, another outstanding HUD alumnus, in launching the nonpartisan, nonprofit Partnership for Public Service.

Armed with the seeds of an exciting idea and a generous financial commitment from the late philanthropist Samuel J. Heyman and his wife Ronnie, Max Stier and Kevin Simpson built the Partnership for Public Service to inspire a new generation to serve and transform the way government works. This impressive organization works with Federal agencies to improve their leadership and management, conducts groundbreaking research, and works closely with universities and job seekers, especially young people, to build new pipelines of talent into government service. In less than a decade, the Partnership has made a measurable, positive impact on our government and the story of the Partnership's success cannot be told without Kevin Simpson in a leading role. As the Partnership's Executive Vice President and General Counsel, there are few achievements in the history of the Partnership in which Kevin has not played a pivotal part.

After doing so much to improve the effectiveness of the Federal Government and inspiring a new generation to serve, Kevin is once again answering the call to service—he will soon leave the Partnership for Public Service for his new position as Principal Deputy General Counsel at the Department of Housing and Urban Development. These are extraordinary times for our Nation and our government, and we need extraordinary talent. Kevin Simpson will bring to HUD his intellectual heft, a keen strategic mind and his natural ability to build bridges; he is a stellar addition to an already strong leadership team led by a most able Secretary.

I thank Kevin Simpson for his years of service to and on behalf of our government and the Federal workforce, and I congratulate him on this next chapter of his public service career. I know all of those who have worked with Kevin share my optimism that our Nation will be a better place thanks to his pursuit of excellence in Federal service.●

TRIBUTE TO MICHAEL FREY

● Mrs. MCCASKILL. Mr. President, today I pay tribute to Mr. Michael Frey, a disabled Missouri veteran whose courage, perseverance, and fortitude are remarkable and in keeping with the finest traditions of Missouri and American values: hard work, independence, humbleness, selfless sacrifice, and more.

As a young 19-year old soldier in Vietnam, Mr. Frey served as a squad leader in Alpha Company 3/21 of the 19th Infantry Brigade. On July 14, 1969, Mr. Frey and the members of Alpha Company were ambushed near the Chu Lai base camp. His spinal cord was shattered by enemy fire, and the injuries rendered him paralyzed from the neck down and dependent on a ventilator for assistance in breathing. Given the extent of his injuries, many doctors would have given Mr. Frey a short time to live, but this special Missourian was about to prove that his case and that he himself was special.

Mr. Frey returned to the United States and began receiving full-time care through St. Louis-area Veterans Administration, VA, hospitals, where he gained the respect and admiration of the hospital staff for his resilience, problem-solving approach, and positivity even as he faced almost unthinkable limitations. On December 7, 1984, 15 years after his spine was shattered in Vietnam, more than double the time individuals with his type of injuries are projected to survive, Mr. Frey moved out of the Spinal Cord Injury facility at Jefferson Barracks Veterans Hospital and into his own home—a remarkable accomplishment for a person with complete tetraplegia.

Since then, Mr. Frey has lived on his own for over 25 years, and he is still going strong. Today he actively manages his daily care with the help of a team of care specialists, and he continues to take full charge of his health through preventative care and regular collaboration with VA doctors. He has the benefit of a strong social network and a self-confidence that has allowed him to bounce back from setbacks. He also remains an avid St. Louis Cardinals fan and regularly attends games. In fact, Mr. Frey developed a special friendship with the late, great St. Louis Cardinals broadcaster Jack Buck, who befriended Mr. Frey in the 1970s and encouraged him along the way.

Having survived over 40 years since his injury, Mr. Frey is one of the longest living tetraplegics in the VA system. I honor him today for his wonderful example in coping with his disability. His spirited approach to life is emblematic of the courage, honor, and strength of this country's veterans who fight for our freedom. His partnership with the many great professionals in the VA healthcare system in St. Louis, who at once serve him and revere him, is uplifting and embodies how our VA system can work best. I join the people of Missouri, and all Americans, in saluting Mr. Frey's courage and to humbly thank him for all that he has done, and for all that he endured, for this country. Mr. Michael Frey is a true American hero.●

REMEMBERING EERO SAARINEN

● Mrs. MCCASKILL. Mr. President, I wish to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of Mr. Eero Saarinen.

Mr. Saarinen was born in Finland on August 20, 1910, immigrated with his family to the United States in 1923, and became an American citizen in 1940. A master of American 20th century architecture, Mr. Saarinen passed away on September 1, 1961.

In 1948, Mr. Saarinen won the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Competition with his design for the Saint Louis Gateway Arch, creating a monument which, in his words, ''would have lasting significance and would be a landmark for our time.'' One of our Nation's most iconic monuments, the Gateway Arch symbolizes Saint Louis' role as the ''Gateway to the West'' and celebrates our Nation's westward expansion. Famed architect Cesar Pelli commented that the Arch is ''a perfect combination of a free gesture with a romantic view of modern technology.'' Today, the Arch remains Mr. Saarinen's most widely recognized work.

Mr. Saarinen also designed several well known structures including the Trans World Airlines Flight Center at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport and the main terminal at Washington Dulles International Airport, which is renowned for its gracefully curving roof, suggestive of flight. Missouri is fortunate to also host the Firestone Baars Chapel. Designed by Mr. Saarinen, the chapel features a unique four-foyer design, and is located on the campus of Stephens College in Columbia.

In addition to his accomplishments in the field of architecture, Mr. Saarinen was also a groundbreaking designer of furniture. In 1956, he created the tulip chair, featured on the original Star Trek television series and considered a classic of industrial design.

In recognition of his many achievements, Mr. Saarinen was elected, in 1954, a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, considered the highest formal recognition of artistic merit in the United States. In 1962, Mr. Saarinen was posthumously awarded the Gold Medal from the American Institute of Architects. The highest honor bestowed by the organization, it is conferred in recognition of a ''significant body of work of lasting influence on the theory and practice of architecture.''

On behalf of me and the people of Missouri, it is my sincere pleasure to honor the life, achievements, and enduring contributions of Mr. Eero Saarinen to Missouri and the Nation.●

TRIBUTE TO JOHN ''JACK'' BISCOE

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I pay tribute to a Maine champion for the wilderness and a strong proponent of protecting our natural world. John ''Jack'' Biscoe, who died last year on November 20, possessed a stirring passion for the uninterrupted forests of Maine, the mighty Penobscot and Kennebec Rivers, and the White Mountains which extend from Maine into New Hampshire.

Jack's passion for the environment was not limited to Maine, and in fact extended to the breathtaking wilderness of Alaska. He first traveled to Alaska in the 1950s tagging salmon in the Aleutian Islands for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Subsequently, his involvement in the cleanup of the Exxon Valdez oil spill only spurred his engagement in wildlife conservation. At the end of his career, Jack was one of Maine's most renowned organizers behind protecting Alaska's wilderness, and he frequently reminded me that Mainers care about protecting the environment throughout the world.

Upon his return to Maine, Jack's concern for wildlife was channeled through the Sierra Club, and other groups, of which he was an avid member, including the Alaska Wilderness League and the Alaska Coalition of Maine. Jack's zeal for environmental protection never waned and his vision for a better environment never faltered, and we will long remember him as an inspiration of what one person can contribute to the greater good. Jack's life and legacy were emblematic of Maine's deep commitment to retaining our quality of life, and I appreciate the effort that he provided on behalf of our Nation's wilderness.●

RECOGNIZING COURTYARD CAFÉ

● Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, small businesses are not only the lifeblood of our economy, they are often quite literally the heart of our neighborhoods and communities. One such business is the Courtyard Café in the northern Maine town of Houlton, which is at the top end of Interstate 95 in the United States. Houlton is the county government seat for Aroostook County—the largest east of the Mississippi River geographically—and it serves as a major border crossing with our State's largest trade partner, Canada.

Yet, despite Houlton's critical role in international commerce, it is at its core a prime example of small town America. And although downtowns across America, including Houlton, have been suffering over the past several years, people like Joyce and Henry Transue, the owners of Courtyard Café, have stepped forward to help revitalize these regions by opening small businesses that bring new customers and increases revenues to downtown stores. In recognition of their efforts, today I honor Courtyard Café and its owners for the tremendous work they have done to bring their world-class dining establishment to Houlton.

The Courtyard Café got its start over a decade ago, when Chef Joyce Transue and her husband Henry opened the quaint restaurant on Main Street in downtown Houlton. But the restaurant's origins date back to 1993, when Chef Transue began small catering business that she called the Traveling Gourmet. This operation allowed Chef Transue to merge her passion for cooking with her zeal for beautiful presentation and exceptional hospitality. The Courtyard Café continues this tradition as Chef Transue offers her catering services to local clients either at the restaurant or at a location of their choosing.

The Courtyard Café has quickly earned a reputation for fresh and exciting meals prepared with tremendous skill and attention. Given the abundance of local fruits and vegetables in Aroostook County, most notable potatoes, Chef Transue takes painstaking efforts to carefully incorporate these items into her divergent menu options, while also utilizing other items such as farm-fresh eggs and locally produced maple syrup. All breads, salad dressings, and desserts are homemade at the Courtyard Café, and the restaurant sells its famed Raspberry Vinaigrette, Greek, and White Wine Vinaigrette salad dressings to customers in store or online thanks to a small manufacturing grant she accessed through the Northern Maine Development Center.

The restaurant offers delicious and affordable lunch dishes, and provides fresh seafood, poultry, and meat dishes for its dinner entrees. Desserts made from scratch include seasonal fruit crisp, cheesecake, and tiramisu. In addition, guests can sit at the newly renovated Garden Bar for a more casual dining option. As a truly hands-on owner, Chef Transue takes her craft seriously, and can always be seen in the kitchen arranging meals for customers, starting early in the morning preparing fresh sauces and soups for the day ahead. She has certainly succeeded in providing clients with a small, intimate restaurant tailored to producing exquisite gourmet food in a comfortable setting and relaxing atmosphere.

The Courtyard Café has rightfully gained recognition as an upscale dining destination, with customers travelling from as far away as Presque Isle and beyond just to enjoy the delicious meals prepared by Chef Joyce Transue. Her dedication and enthusiasm for culinary excellence have been exemplary, and I wish her and everyone at the Courtyard Café continued success in their delectable endeavors.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. KERRY:

S. 3711. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish, promote, and support a comprehensive prevention, education, research, and medical management referral program for viral hepatitis infection that will lead to a marked reduction in the disease burden associated with chronic viral hepatitis and liver cancer; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, a silent killer is loose in America. It contributes to the deaths of 15,000 and threatens the health of 5.3 million Americans each year. It is more common than HIV/AIDS. It is the leading cause of liver cancer, which is on the rise and continues to be a fatal and costly disease. Yet it remains unrecognized as a serious threat to public health. This silent killer is viral hepatitis.

That is why I am introducing the Viral Hepatitis and Liver Cancer Control and Prevention Act of 2010, which authorizes $600 million to develop a national strategy over the next five years to prevent and control Hepatitis B and C.

Most people don't even know they have it until years later when it causes cancer or liver disease. We can help avoid such needless tragedies with prevention and surveillance programs and by educating Americans on the pervasive nature of Hepatitis B and Hepatitis C.

In January, the Institute of Medicine, IOM, released a report entitled ''Hepatitis and Liver Cancer.'' The report concludes that the current approach toward treating hepatitis is not working. Too many Americans at-risk for hepatitis or living with it do not know it and too many health providers are not screening for it. That should come as no surprise because there is no Federal funding of core public health services for viral hepatitis. Also, there is no federally funded chronic Hepatitis B and C surveillance system.

The IOM report calls for a national strategy to prevent and control Hepatitis B and C.

Hepatitis B is 100 times more infectious than HIV and, left untreated, can cause liver disease, liver cancer and premature death decades after infection. About 2 billion people worldwide have been infected with Hepatitis B and about 170 million people are chronically infected with Hepatitis C. Tragically, ⅔ of those infected, on average, are unaware of their status, which increases the chance of spreading the disease.

Dr. Howard Koh, Assistant Secretary of Health, has convened a task force including representatives from all Department of Health and Human Services agencies to develop an action plan to implement the recommendations of the Institute of Medicine Report.

Unless action is taken to prevent chronic Hepatitis B and Hepatitis C, thousands more Americans will die each year from liver cancer or liver disease related to these preventable diseases.

The Viral Hepatitis and Liver Cancer Control and Prevention Act directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop a national plan for the prevention, control and medical management of viral hepatitis in coordination with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, CDC, the National Institutes for Health, the National Cancer Institute, NCI, the Health Resources and Services Administration, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, SAMHSA, the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality and the Department of Veterans Affairs.

The national plan is required to include the following components: education and awareness programs; an expansion of current vaccination programs; counseling regarding the ongoing risk factors associated with viral hepatitis; support for medical evaluation and ongoing medical management; increased support for adult viral hepatitis coordinators; and the establishment of an epidemiological surveillance program to identify trends in incidence and prevalence in the disease.

The Viral Hepatitis and Liver Cancer Control and Prevention Act of 2010 also enhances SAMHSA's role in hepatitis activities by providing the agency with the authority to develop educational materials and intervention strategies to reduce the risks of hepatitis among substance abusers and individuals with mental illness.

It authorizes nearly $600 million over the next five years to fund the national strategy to prevent and control viral hepatitis.

I believe this investment in hepatitis control and prevention could save our country billions of dollars in the coming years. The baby boomer population is estimated to account for two out of every three cases of chronic Hepatitis C. As these Americans age into Medicare they are likely to develop complications and require expensive medical interventions at great cost to taxpayers. In the next decade, the costs of Hepatitis C to commercial insurance and Medicare will more than double, and within 20 years Medicare costs will increase five-fold. Projecting further out, over the next 20 years, total medical costs for patients with Hepatitis C infection could increase more than 2.5 times—from $30 billion to more than $85 billion.

However, the costs for early detection and intervention are dramatically less than the costs for treatment post-infection. The costs for Hepatitis B vaccinations vary but range from $75 to $165, whereas treatment can cost up to $16,000 per year. Screening for Hepatitis C is also relatively inexpensive compared to treatment that can cost up to $25,000 per year. Untreated, these infections will develop into liver disease that can cost up to $110,000 per hospital admission. We can do better.

Viral hepatitis is an increasingly significant issue for Massachusetts. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health reports over 2,000 cases of newly diagnosed chronic Hepatitis B infection and 8,000 to 10,000 cases of newly diagnosed chronic Hepatitis C infection each year. Viral hepatitis infections are by far the highest volume of reportable infectious diseases to the state. Additionally, there has been and continues to be a striking increase of cases of Hepatitis C infection among adolescents and young adults in the state. The Department of Public Health has received reports on over 1,000 cases in people under the age of 25 years every year since 2007, indicating that there is a new epidemic of Hepatitis C disease.

Resources to address these complex problems have been extremely limited. Federal resources are scarce with the average award per state of $90,000 from the Division of Viral Hepatitis at CDC. That is less than the cost of one hospital admission for liver disease.

The Massachusetts State Legislature has, until recently, provided modest funding to support Hepatitis C initiatives in the state. At this time, all of that funding, $1.4 million annually for the past several years, has been eliminated due to the ongoing fiscal crisis. However, past funding has allowed Massachusetts to develop innovative programs in many areas.

State funds have supported disease surveillance initiatives so that changes in the epidemics can be detected, such as the increase of cases of Hepatitis C infection among young people or to identify cases of viral hepatitis that are being transmitted through non-sterile practices in health care settings. Disease surveillance programs have been used to identify women of childbearing age that are infected with Hepatitis B so that transmission to their babies can be prevented.

The Viral Hepatitis and Liver Cancer Control and Prevention Act of 2010 would provide critical assistance to Massachusetts and other states by starting to provide appropriate levels of funding to address these epidemics of disease.

In Massachusetts, funding would be used to expand disease surveillance efforts so that we can better understand the impact of these infections and direct services appropriately to highly impacted communities. It would help to expand screening and educational services to help identify the large numbers of people in the state living with Hepatitis B and C that have not been identified. It would provide support to address the complex prevention needs of adolescents and young adults who are using drugs and at-risk for infection.

Increased funding for adult immunization would assist the State in better targeting and providing Hepatitis B vaccine to the adults at highest risk, including those that are incarcerated and being treated for drug abuse. Finally, it would also help to provide essential medical management for people already infected with Hepatitis B and C who are not able to access appropriate care currently.

I would like to thank a number of organizations who have been integral to the development of the Viral Hepatitis and Liver Cancer Control and Prevention Act of 2010. I am pleased that 102 hepatitis focused organizations from across the Nation have endorsed the legislation, including the National Viral Hepatitis Roundtable, National Alliance of State and Territorial AIDS Directors, NASTAD, the Hepatitis B Foundation, the Hepatitis C Association, American Association for the Study of Liver Disease, and the Hepatitis Education Project.

We have no time to waste. This legislation, along with strategic investments in public health and prevention programs, can save billions of hard earned taxpayer dollars. It can improve the quality of life for tens of thousands of people all over America. I urge my colleagues to support activities that promote early detection and education and to cosponsor this important legislation.

By Mr. CORNYN (for himself, Mr. CRAPO, and Mr. ROBERTS):

S. 3712. A bill to rescind the 3.8 percent tax on the investment income of the American people and to promote job creation and small businesses; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Economic Growth and Jobs Protection Act of 2010. This legislation would repeal the 3.8 percent tax on investment income that was included in the Health Care Reconciliation Act of 2010, P.L. 111–152, signed into law by the President earlier this year. I am pleased that Senator ROBERTS and Senator CRAPO are cosponsors of this legislation.

We know that taxpayers already face the largest tax increase in history when the 2001 and 2003 tax relief expire at the end of the year. Unless Congress acts, in less than 150 days: the highest individual tax bracket will rise from 35 percent to just under 40 percent; people in the lowest tax bracket will see a 50 percent tax increase, from 10 percent to 15 percent; the marriage penalty will increase; the child credit will be cut in half; and taxes on capital gains and dividends will increase. In other words, every taxpayer will pay higher taxes to Washington.

But while taxpayers may be concerned about the upcoming tax shock, many may not be aware of another unpleasant surprise that will soon follow. The Health Care Reconciliation Act that was jammed through the Senate along partisan lines includes a $123 billion tax on the capital gains, dividends, rents, and interest earned by certain taxpayers. Enacting this permanent tax hike was a mistake then and is a mistake now. It will discourage savings and investment; it will reduce productivity and will depress wages and the standard of living for millions of Americans. According to the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation—a non-profit economic policy research and educational organization, a 2.9 percent tax would depress economic growth by 1.3 percent and reduce capital formation by 3.4 percent. The damage on job and economic growth would be even greater from a 3.8 percent investment tax.

Simply put, increasing taxes on investment income is a job killer and increases uncertainty at a time that the Chairman of the Federal Reserve has told Congress that the economic outlook is ''unusually uncertain.'' Taxpayers, including small businesses, are already scheduled to get hit with the largest tax increase in history in less than 160 days if Congress fails to act. In fact, the top tax rate on capital gains will eventually be 23.8 percent as the rate bounces back to 20 percent from 15 percent. And the top tax rate for dividends will eventually rise to 43.4 percent.

Why do we want to pile on the backs of working families and job creators with more taxes that do nothing to create jobs at a time that the national unemployment rate remains 9.5 percent and where in some States, such as Nevada, there is record unemployment? We know the key to job creation is to grow the economy and allow small businesses to flourish, invest and create jobs.

In fact, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, we will need several years of very strong growth to reach 5 percent unemployment. For example, to reach 5 percent unemployment by the end of 2013, the economy would need to average 5 percent per year. To reach 5 percent unemployment by 2015 would still take growth of 4.2 percent a year. This is just one reason, that during the health care debate I offered a motion that would have directed the Senate Finance Committee to report the bill back without the 3.8 percent tax on the investment income. Although my attempt to strip out this job-killing tax fell short, I want to take this opportunity to note that 6 of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle supported my motion.

Not only will this legislation protect jobs and the investment security of taxpayers, it will also make sure that Congress restores one of the President's campaign promises. On September 12, 2008, then-candidate Obama promised the American people that, ''Everyone in America—everyone—will pay lower taxes than they would under the rates Bill Clinton had in the 1990s.'' But when combined with the President's budget proposal, this additional tax on investment will raise taxes on many Americans higher than they were under the rates President Clinton had in the 1990s.

I ask that my colleagues support this legislation that will repeal this job-killing tax on small business investment, and thus will protect economic growth, jobs, and the retirement savings of taxpayers. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3712

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Economic Growth and Jobs Protection Act of 2010''.

SEC. 2. REPEAL OF UNEARNED INCOME MEDICARE CONTRIBUTION.

Section 1402 of the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–152) and the amendments made by such section are repealed.

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 3713. A bill to improve post-employment restrictions on representation of foreign entities by senior Government officers and employees; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce legislation that will tighten restrictions on individuals who move between the public and private sector—the so-called revolving door. The legislation that I am introducing today aims to better protect the United States from conflicts of interest posed by this practice, particularly where it comes to senior government officials and employees going on to represent foreign entities—sometimes even the governments of the very foreign countries in which they had just finished representing the United States.

There was a time when public service was held in high esteem, but the ever expanding revolving door between public and private employment has generated cynicism and frustration. By placing meaningful restrictions on how quickly former officials can access this door and where it will take them, we can reverse the trend of government employees going off to lobby for foreign entities by making clear they are not ''for sale.'' This legislation is an important reminder that public service should be treated as an honor and a privilege, and will help to ensure that government officials make decisions based on the best interests of the American people, and not on their future career prospects.

Foreign governments and businesses have come to rely on U.S. lobbyists to advocate for their interests and interact with key policy makers. According to an article in the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel earlier this year, data analyzed by watchdog groups found that ''[m]ore than 340 foreign entities—from governments to separatist groups to for-profit companies—spent at least $87 million on lobbying efforts in the United States between July 2007 and December 2008.'' Former senior government officials are in demand to represent or advise foreign entities after leaving office. Even from the limited data available, it appears at least four recent U.S. Ambassadors—the President's chief representatives abroad—have done this kind of work in recent years. It is not just ambassadors who go on to represent foreign entities, but also deputy secretaries, under secretaries, other categories of executive branch officials, and, of course, former members of Congress.

The bill I am introducing today will strengthen the post-employment restrictions on foreign entity representation that are already in place by both length and scope. It will cover those officials, including in the legislative branch, that are already subject to revolving door restrictions, but expand the current 1-year restriction on representing, aiding or advising a foreign entity with intent to influence to 5 years. It will also expand the definition of prohibited entities to include foreign businesses as well as foreign governments and political parties.

Revolving door restrictions are supposed to protect the U.S. Government and the people it serves from conflicts of interest and from Government officials appearing to cash in on their public service. They help ensure that people representing the United States at the most senior levels are not being influenced by the possibility of securing lucrative jobs from outside entities while still in Government and they help prevent inside knowledge and personal connections to colleagues still in Government from being used on behalf of private parties. These are clearly important and legitimate goals and the current 1-year prohibition on foreign entity representation is insufficient to secure them.

Critics of tightening these restrictions may argue that former Government officials lobbying on behalf of foreign governments can sometimes pursue very laudable aims for those governments, such as securing resources for public health needs. This is surely true. But for every such positive example envisioned, another can come to mind that is notably less constructive, such as lobbying on behalf of governments with reprehensible human rights records. Moreover, I question how healthy it is when a culture of lobbying becomes so prevalent that foreign governments seeking to advance their objectives in the United States may feel obliged to hire their own advocates in this country.

We need to restore faith in government, and we can help to do that by ensuring those who serve at the highest levels do not turn around and use their influence and expertise gained during public service for personal profit and foreign interests. My legislation will help buttress the framework of restrictions that we as members of the Government impose on ourselves to ensure this broader good. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3717. A bill to amend the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Investment Company Act of 1940, and the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 to provide for certain disclosures under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act), and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today, I am pleased to introduce an important bipartisan bill to ensure that the Freedom of Information Act, FOIA, remains an effective tool to provide public access to critical information about the stability of our financial markets. My bill would amend the Securities and Exchange Act, the Investment Company Act and the Investment Advisers Act to eliminate several broad FOIA exemptions for Security and Exchange Commission records that were recently enacted as part of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act. I thank Senators CORNYN, KAUFMAN and GRASSLEY for cosponsoring this important open government bill.

I am a proud supporter of the historic Wall Street reform bill that has now become law, because this legislation makes significant strides toward enhancing transparency and accountability in our financial system. But, I am concerned that the FOIA exemptions in Section 929I of that bill, which was originally drafted in the House of Representatives and included in the final law, could be interpreted and implemented by the SEC in a way that undermines this very important goal.

The Freedom of Information Act has long been the people's window into their Government, showing where the Government is doing things right, but also where Government can do better. The FOIA has also long recognized the need to balance the Government's legitimate interest in protecting confidential business records, trade secrets and other sensitive information from public disclosure and the public's right to know. To accomplish this, care must always be taken to ensure that exemptions to FOIA's disclosure requirements are narrowly and properly applied.

When Congress enacted these exemptions, we were seeking to ensure that the SEC had access to the information that the Commission needs to carryout its new enforcement powers and to protect American investors—not shielding information from the public.

I have been troubled by the Commission's attempts in recent weeks to retroactively apply these exemptions to pending FOIA matters. I am also troubled by the sweeping interpretation that the Commission has expressed, to date, that these exemptions would shield all information provided to the Commission in connection with its broad examination and surveillance activities.

This week, I called on the Commission to promptly issue guidelines that interpret the FOIA exemptions in Section 929I in a manner that is both consistent with congressional intent and with the President's January 21, 2009, Executive Memorandum on the Freedom of Information Act. I look forward to the public release of those guidelines. Given the overwhelming public interest in restoring stability and accountability to our financial system, Congress must also take steps to address concerns about the exemptions in Section 929I.

I thank the many open government organizations, including OpenTheGovernment.org, the Project on Government Oversight, the American Library Association and the Sunlight Foundation for their support of this bill.

I have said many times that open government is neither a Democratic issue, nor a Republican issue—it is truly an American value and virtue that we all must uphold. It is in this bipartisan spirit that Senators from both sides of the aisle have joined me in supporting this bill. I look forward to working with them and others in Congress to ensure that the American public has access to important information about the SEC's oversight of our financial markets.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and a letter of support be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

''(e) FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT.—For purposes of section 552(b)(8) of title 5, United States Code, (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act)—

AUGUST 3, 2010.

SENATOR CHRISTOPHER DODD,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

REPRESENTATIVE BARNEY FRANK,
Chairman, House Committee on Financial Services, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMEN DODD AND FRANK: We, the undersigned organizations concerned with government accountability and transparency, are writing to express our concerns about Section 929I of the recently passed Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (the Dodd-Frank Act). If interpreted broadly, this provision has the potential to severely hinder the public's ability to access critical information related to the oversight activities of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), thereby undermining the bill's overarching goals of more transparency and accountability.

As you know, Section 929I states that the SEC cannot be compelled to disclose records or other information obtained from its registered entities—including entities such as hedge funds, private equity funds, and venture capital funds that will now be regulated by the SEC—if this information is used for ''surveillance, risk assessments, or other regulatory and oversight activities'' outlined in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Investment Company Act of 1940, and the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

SEC Chairman Mary Schapiro wrote to you last week defending this provision. She argued that registered entities need to be able to provide the SEC with access to sensitive or proprietary information ''without concern that the information will later be made public.'' She further explained that, prior to the passage of the Dodd-Frank Act, ''regulated entities not infrequently refused to provide Commission examiners with sensitive information due to their fears that it ultimately would be disclosed publicly.'' She also claimed that investment advisers routinely refuse to turn over personal trading records of investment management personnel, ''instead requiring staff to review hard copies of the records on the adviser's premises,'' which ''materially impacts the staff's ability to detect insider trading activity.''

These arguments do not adequately describe the SEC's existing regulatory authority, and they fail to acknowledge that the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) already provides sufficient exemptions to protect against the release of sensitive and proprietary information. Furthermore, the SEC has a troubling history of being overly aggressive in withholding records from the public. For these reasons, we strongly urge you to repeal Section 929I, or to at least curtail the SEC's broad authority to withhold critical information from the public.

First, we are not convinced by Chairman Schapiro's claim that ''existing FOIA exemptions were insufficient to allay concerns [about public disclosure] due in part to limitations in FOIA.'' For instance, Exemption 8 protects matters that are ''contained in or related to examination, operating, or condition reports prepared by, on behalf of, or for the use of an agency responsible for the regulation or supervision of financial institutions.'' Chairman Schapiro argues that this exemption may not apply to all registrants, but it's worth noting that the courts have broadly construed the term ''financial institutions,'' holding that it is not limited to depository institutions and can also include investment advisers. In addition, Exemption 4 protects ''trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential.'' The Department of Justice's (DOJ) FOIA guide states that this exemption ''encourages submitters to voluntarily furnish useful commercial or financial information to the government and it correspondingly provides the government with an assurance that such information will be reliable,'' calling into question Chairman Schapiro's claim that additional exemptions are needed in order for the SEC to collect information from its registered entities.

Second, the SEC's track record with FOIA raises additional concerns about giving the agency even more authority to withhold information from the public. Last year, an audit conducted by the SEC Office of Inspector General (OIG) uncovered a wide range of problems related to the SEC's FOIA operations. We were particularly troubled by the OIG's finding that the SEC Chief FOIA Officer was not operating in compliance with Executive Order 13392 or the OPEN Government Act; that few FOIA liaisons have written policies and procedures for processing FOIA requests, increasing the risk that the agency is unnecessarily withholding information from the public; and that there is an insufficient separation between the initial FOIA determination and the appeal process.

The OIG concluded that the SEC's FOIA release rate was ''significantly lower when compared to all other federal agencies.''

The OIG put forth a number of recommendations for correcting the glaring deficiencies in the SEC's FOIA operations, such as ensuring that accurate searches are made for responsive information, providing guidelines or written policies for all FOIA-related staff that address the concerns raised by the OIG, and ensuring that all FOIA-related staff has access to sufficient legal expertise to process requests in compliance with FOIA. But according to the OIG's most recent semiannual report to Congress, the SEC has not completed final action on any of these recommendations. Rather than giving the SEC any more leeway to improperly withhold information from the public, we urge you to hold Chairman Schapiro accountable for the excessive delays in implementing the OIG's recommendations.

Third, we notice that Chairman Schapiro is ''asking the Commission to issue and publish on our website guidance to our staff that ensures [Section 929I] is used only as it was intended.'' The solution for addressing the uncertainty surrounding this provision is not additional guidance. The solution is clarification in the law that public access is vital to accountability and that the existing FOIA exemptions can adequately protect confidential business information provided by regulated entities.

Fourth, Chairman Schapiro neglected to mention that the SEC already has the authority to compel registered entities to provide information and records. Under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the SEC has the authority to subpoena witnesses and require the production of any records from its registered entities. If these entities fail to comply, the SEC has the authority to suspend these entities, impose significant monetary penalties, and refer cases to DOJ for possible criminal proceedings. But instead of using these existing authorities, Chairman Schapiro seems to think that Congress needs to provide blanket FOIA exemptions in order to convince the SEC's registered entities to cooperate. We think such a blanket exemption fosters an environment that defers to the entities it regulates and is unadvisable.

Finally, it is unclear what Chairman Schapiro's plans are for implementing other blanket FOIA exemptions in the Dodd-Frank Act, such as Section 404, which exempts the SEC from FOIA with respect to any ''report, document, record, or information'' received from investment advisers to private funds.

In the aftermath of the recent financial crisis, the need for greater transparency in our financial system is all too apparent. The SEC's ongoing effort to withhold vital records from the public undermines the spirit of the transparency reforms in the Dodd-Frank Act, and flies in the face of President Obama's guidance instructing agencies to adopt a ''presumption in favor of disclosure, in order to renew their commitment to the principles embodied in FOIA, and to usher in a new era of open Government.''

We call on you to repeal the unnecessary FOIA exemption in Section 929I, examine the SEC's current record on withholding information, and take whatever steps are necessary to ensure that the SEC isn't given any additional authority to keep its records under a veil of secrecy. We welcome an opportunity to discuss this issue with you further. To reach our groups, you or your staff may contact Angela Canterbury at the Project On Government Oversight.

By Mr. CARDIN:

S. 3718. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to ensure that beneficiaries of Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance receive financial counseling and disclosure information regarding life insurance payments, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the ''Securing America's Veterans Insurance Needs and Goals Act of 2010 or the SAVINGS Act of 2010. This is similar to a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congresswoman DEBORAH HALVORSON and House Committee on Veterans' Affairs Chair BOB FILNER.

This bill ensures that beneficiaries of the Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance, SGLI, program receive financial counseling and full disclosure information regarding life insurance payments. Active duty members of the Armed Forces will be given more information as they decide on disbursement options for their beneficiaries. The SAVINGS Act offers specific protections and alternatives to life insurance policy beneficiaries. This bill requires an explanation of how the retained-asset accounts differ from traditional checking accounts and leaves flexibility for the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs to add more disclosure guidelines as he sees fit.

I present this bill to improve the process for our servicemembers and their families. My concern is that what has become a common industry practice, may not be an appropriate solution for every family. The SAVINGS Act addresses this challenge by requiring a greater level of disclosure and financial counseling to beneficiaries. This bill helps families make sound financial decisions during a most difficult time.

It will assist Marylanders and other Americans in difficult times. Last week National Public Radio profiled my constituent Cindy Lohman, of Great Mills, MD. Ms. Lohman lost her son Ryan when he was killed in a bombing in Afghanistan in August 2008. She had no idea that the package sent to her from the life insurance company would lead to more difficulty, during an already unbearable time.

While a mother grieved, Prudential the company that administers the SGLI policies on behalf of the Veterans Affairs Secretary began to process her survivor's benefits. Understandably too distraught to take immediate action, Ms. Lohman put away the package for 6 months. After looking over the many pages of printed forms and seeing what appeared to be a checkbook, Ms. Lohman assumed the money was in a checking account.

There were many details in that packet from the insurance company disclaimers and other specifics about the account. It turns out that this was not a standard, FDIC-insured account, but a retained-asset account managed by the insurance company.

As we send soldiers to fight overseas, our support for our servicemembers and their families must remain steadfast and strong. I am proud to serve in this Congress that has worked to honor our commitment to our nation's veterans and to the families of our fallen heroes. This is a good bill because it shows our commitment to do what is in the best interest of the families of the noble men and women who serve in uniform.

By Mr. WYDEN (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 3725. A bill to-prevent the importation of merchandise into the United States in a manner that evades antidumping and countervailing duty orders, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Enforcing Orders and Reducing Circumvention and Evasion Act—or the ENFORCE Act—of 2010.

We all know what a tax cheat is; well let me tell you about a trade cheat.

You see, under U.S. trade laws, when a certain import is found to be unfairly traded, that is, it benefits from government subsidies or is sold below market prices, the U.S. Department of Commerce imposes additional duties on these imports. These duties, we call them anti-dumping and countervailing duties, or AD/CVD, ensure that American producers are only asked to compete on a playing field that is level.

But we have these trade cheats out there. They cheat American taxpayers out of the revenue that is supposed to be collected on imports, and which is needed to reduce the budget deficit, and they cheat American producers out of business that may otherwise be theirs. In short, the trade cheats steal American jobs and America's treasure.

The U.S.' AD/CVD laws form its industries' protective backbone against injury from illegally dumped or subsidized imports. However, these trade remedy laws are only effective to the extent that they are enforced. We have an enforcement problem.

The trade cheats are increasingly—and brazenly—employing a variety of schemes to evade AD/CVD orders. Sometimes, they hustle their merchandise through foreign ports to claim that it originates from somewhere it doesn't. Other times, the trade cheats will provide fraudulent information to government authorities at American ports of entry, or engage in schemes to mislabel and misrepresent imports.

U.S. industry sources estimate that approximately $91 million in AD/CV duties that were supposed to be applied to just four steel products went uncollected as a result of evasion in 2009. This is an amount equal to 30 percent of all AD/CV duties CBP collected that year. With 300 current AD/CVD orders in place on countless products from over 40 countries, the potential for AD/CV duty evasion is vast, and hundreds of millions of AD/CV duties may be unaccounted for. Every penny counts and we have an obligation to the American businesses, and the workers they rely on, to do a better job.

The U.S. Customs and Border Protection, or CBP, is the nation's frontline defense against unfair trade and is responsible for enforcing U.S. trade remedy laws and collecting AD/CV duties. Yet if you listen to the concerns of domestic producers, as I and many of my colleagues do, timely and effective enforcement of AD/CVD orders remains problematic and AD/CV duty evasion continues, seemingly unabated.

I have enormous respect for the men and women of CBP who manage U.S. borders, and believe its new commissioner is committed to improving the trade enforcement and trade facilitation functions of CBP. When U.S. producers spend the time and resources to submit to CBP evidence of AD/CVD evasion, CBP should be held accountable to acting on that evidence and communicating its actions to U.S. industry in a timely manner. It is not held accountable now to the degree it should be. I grow concerned that U.S. producers are spending too much time and resources trying to indentify unfair trade and help government agencies enforce the trade laws. American industry needs to be free to do what it does best, which is to innovate and produce goods that are competitive in free and fair markets.

The bill I am introducing today, with my friend and colleague, Senator SNOWE from Maine, will go a long way toward empowering the Federal Government to do a better job to combat the trade cheats and enforce U.S. trade laws. I'd like to highlight just a few of the main provisions.

First, the ENFORCE Act will expand the U.S. Department of Commerce's authority to investigate circumvention to include misrepresented merchandise that might evade AD/CVD orders. As the agency tasked with investigating allegations of dumping and harmful government subsidization, Commerce has the industry and product expertise to investigate this type of AD/CVD circumvention. This bill will not diminish CBP's role; rather, it will bolster greater cooperation and information sharing between the two agencies to combat the unfair trade practices that hurt U.S. industry and its ability to create jobs.

Second, the bill will create a process by which U.S. industry can submit to CBP a formal petition containing allegations of AD/CVD evasion, and CBP must reach a conclusive determination within a set time period. If it cannot, then the petition is transferred to the Department of Commerce for separate circumvention proceedings. The ENFORCE Act will require a greater level of responsiveness and accountability to U.S. producers while providing for increased collaboration between these two government agencies to improve enforcement of U.S. trade laws.

Third, the bill will enhance information among the federal agencies once an importer is suspected of evading an AD/CVD order. Many of the same schemes importers employ to evade an AD/CVD order, like mislabeling, often shirk other regimes put in place to ensure that products are safe for consumption by American families. Enhanced information sharing will provide greater protection against imports that may cause harm to U.S. consumers.

This bill presents a commonsense strategy to combat trade cheating and the evasion of antidumping and countervailing duty collection. Enforcing U.S. trade laws and combating unfair trade practices must be a central pillar of an economic and trade policy that is designed to promote economic growth and job expansion. I look forward to working with my colleagues in the Senate and with my friends in the House of Representatives to build support for this initiative and to take action on behalf of American producers.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. SCHUMER (for himself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Ms. SNOWE, Mrs. BOXER, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. KOHL, and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 3728. A bill to amend title 17, United States Code, to extend protection to fashion design, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I wish to express my support for the Innovative Design Protection and Piracy Prevention Act. For years I have been supportive of moving this legislation forward. It not only underscores the importance of the fashion design industry to our economy but will ensure that new and innovative fashion designs are afforded proper copyright protection.

Throughout my service in the Senate, I have worked on a whole host of intellectual property-related initiatives. There is no doubt that legislating in this area is difficult. It is necessary, however, to maintain our position at the forefront of the world's economy and to continue our country's leadership in global innovation.

Make no mistake about it: piracy and counterfeiting are the new face of economic crime around the world, far exceeding traditional property crimes. These crimes are the very antitheses of creativity—crippling growth and stifling innovation in their wake.

Last Congress I worked closely with my Senate Judiciary Committee colleagues and others in passing the PRO–IP Act, which was signed into law by President George W. Bush on October 13, 2008. There is no doubt the PRO–IP bill will ensure that resources are available to enforce intellectual property laws and coordinate the government's intellectual property policies.

Yet there are no laws prohibiting design piracy.

Currently, original designs are copied and the apparel is manufactured in countries with cheap labor, typically in mainland China, Hong Kong, Pakistan, and Singapore. The garments are then shipped into the U.S. to directly compete with the garments of the original designer, sometimes before the originals have even hit the market. As a result, the U.S. apparel industry continues to lose billions of dollars to counterfeiting each year.

We must ensure that all property rights, including fashion designs, are protected both here and abroad. Counterfeiting and piracy sap our country's economic strength. Plain and simple, when a company loses revenues to piracy or counterfeited goods, it does not have those resources to reinvest into making more of its goods. And that means lost jobs. This domino effect ensnares all within its reach.

These crimes not only affect the individual company, but they also adversely affect the companies that would have contributed to or benefitted from the unmade goods. Suppliers of raw materials and components as well as shippers, distributors, and retailers, all take the hit.

In my home State of Utah, I am mindful of the designers who make a meaningful contribution to the fashion industry. Utah designers like Nappi, Modurrn, and CherellaUSA are committed to quality and original clothing lines. These designers, and many more across the Nation, must know that after spending their time and money in developing new and unique fashion designs, their works are protected from infringers. They should be able to secure and enforce adequate copyright protections for their hard work.

The Innovative Design Protection and Piracy Prevention Act represents a true compromise. The proposed legislation is the product of an intensive year of negotiations with interested stakeholders. Among other things, the compromise language provides protection to truly unique fashion designs. In order to be considered an infringing design, a plaintiff must demonstrate that a design copy is ''substantially identical.''

I am pleased with the progress that has already been made on the bill and look forward to working with my colleagues on further refinements as it moves through the legislative process.

By Mrs. SHAHEEN (for herself, Mr. REID, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. KAUFMAN, Mr. BEGICH, Mr. BINGAMAN, and Mr. KERRY):

S. 3732. A bill to establish within the Department of Education the Innovation Inspiration school grant program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mrs. SHAHEEN. Mr. President, today I introduce a bill, the Innovation Inspiration school grant program. This legislation will give high school students in New Hampshire and across the country access to non-traditional science, technology, engineering, and mathematics programs as well as the opportunity to be mentored by professionals in those fields.

I am proud to be joined in introducing this bill today with Senators REID, DORGAN, KAUFMAN, BEGICH, BINGAMAN and KERRY and thank them for their support.

We hear so often about the importance of STEM fields and our future economy. These fields—commonly defined as the science, technology, engineering, and mathematics—are central to U.S. economic competitiveness and growth. In fact, projections by the U.S. Labor Department show that STEM-related fields are expected to be the fastest growing occupations of the next decade.

What is worrisome, though, is that too few students in the United States are pursuing education in these STEM fields to keep up with the increased demand in the workforce. For those students that do embark in STEM education, too often they are being outperformed by international competitors.

Simply put, I believe that in today's global economy American students must have access to better STEM training, have the opportunity to be mentored by professionals in the field and be engaged in the study of these critical fields at deeper, more meaningful levels.

This legislation, the Innovation Inspiration School Grant Program, does that. It will bolster our student's access to quality non-traditional STEM programs. It will grow the STEM pipeline and broaden access to careers in science, technology, engineering and math.

We all recognize that community partnerships and especially mentors for our young people are essential to their success. The Innovation Inspiration School Grant Program will provide states and schools critical resources to engage community members and professional mentors who are working in the STEM fields. I believe that by connecting students with well-trained teachers and community mentors, we can foster innovation at the high school level and inspire young people to graduate high school, enter the workforce, or go onto college to major in science and engineering and pursue careers in these fields.

Students in New Hampshire have been participating in non-traditional STEM opportunities, such as those provided by FIRST Robotics, for over 20 years. And for these students, the experience has been life-changing.

Take, for example, Aletha Evangelou, from Nashua, NH. As a result of her experience in the Nashua High School FIRST Robotics team, a love of engineering grew. She went on to major in mechanical engineering at the University of New Hampshire and is now employed at a defense and aerospace company in our state. She says ''I have been a full time mechanical engineer at BAE Systems for two and a half years now, and I can honestly say that I would not be here if I hadn't joined the FIRST Robotics program. It completely changed my life.''

Aletha is just one example of many students who have benefitted from the type of programs that are supported by this legislation. Every student in every school across the country should have the opportunity to have these sorts of experiences. This legislation does that.

I urge my colleagues to join me to ensure that high school graduates have the skills and knowledge in the STEM fields necessary to succeed in postsecondary education and develop the workforce of the 21st century.

By Mrs. LINCOLN (for herself and Mr. CHAMBLISS:

S. 3735. A bill to amend the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act to improve the use of certain registered pesticides; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, our farmers, foresters, and ranchers provide our Nation and the world with a safe, secure, and affordable source of food and fiber. I have vigorously supported rural America through my work as Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry. We must do all we can to support these communities, which are the backbone of our great Nation.

Unfortunately, because of aggressive litigation and federal courts misinterpreting Congressional intent, our farmers, foresters, and ranchers are facing new restrictions on their operations. Too often, this results in obligations that are time-consuming, expensive, and plainly unnecessary.

A prime example of this is the Environmental Protection Agency's, EPA, effort to regulate the use of crop protection products under the Clean Water Act. EPA, at the direction of the Federal courts, is requiring Clean Water Act permits for pesticide applications even if an application does not occur directly into the water. Congress never intended for agricultural chemicals to be regulated under the Clean Water Act.

Farm and forest chemical applications are already subject to another federal statute that protects human health and the environment, the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, FIFRA. Farm and forest protection products regulated under FIFRA are subject to rigorous scientific testing before they can be sold and used. In addition, farmers and foresters must adhere to use instructions contained on pesticide labels.

Subjecting farmers to an additional layer of bureaucracy under the Clean Water Act is duplicative and unnecessary since human health and the environment is already protected by FIFRA.

Clean Water Act permits for farm and forest chemical use will also be expensive for pesticide applicators and for state regulatory agencies. EPA has said that these new requirements will nearly double the number of permittees under the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System, NPDES. This will result in tens of thousands of dollars in new costs and burdens for producers and state regulatory agencies who are already suffering from lack of resources.

Today I am introducing legislation to clarify Congress' intent. Farmers, foresters, and ranchers already comply with FIFRA and further unnecessary regulation should not be required. I am pleased to be joined by Agriculture Committee Ranking Member SAXBY CHAMBLISS. The bill is very simple: as long as a farmer is complying with FIFRA, then no Clean Water Act permit will be required. During the more than 35 years since the enactment of the Clean Water Act, the EPA has never required a NPDES permit for the application of FIFRA-registered crop protection products. My bill would extend this common sense approach and avoid duplicative, unnecessary burdens on our farmers, foresters, and ranchers.

I urge my Senate colleagues to join us in taking action on this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3735

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. USE OF REGISTERED PESTICIDES.

Section 3(f) of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. 136a(f)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(5) USE OF REGISTERED PESTICIDES.—Notwithstanding any other law, no permit shall be required for—

''(A) the use of a pesticide that is registered or otherwise authorized for use under this Act, if that use is in accordance with this Act; or

''(B)(i) the use of a biological control organism (as defined in section 403 of the Plant Protection Act (7 U.S.C. 7702)) for the prevention, control, or eradication of a plant pest or noxious weed, if that use is in accordance with that Act (7 U.S.C. 7701 et seq.); or

''(ii) the conduct of any other plant pest, noxious weed, or pest control activity under that Act, if that activity is conducted in accordance with that Act.''.

By. Mr. INHOFE:

S. 3736. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to allow States to opt out of the corn ethanol portions of the renewable fuel standard; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, with the passage of the 2007 energy bill (EISA), Congress doubled the corn-based ethanol mandate despite mounting questions surrounding ethanol's compatibility with existing engines, its transportation and infrastructure needs, its economic sustainability, and numerous other issues. Then, as now, I argued it was just too early to significantly increase the mandate and that the fuels industry and engine manufacturers needed more time to adapt and catch up with the many developing challenges facing corn-based ethanol. From everything we have witnessed over the past 2½ years, I was right. These mandates allow no room for error in a fuels industry already constrained by tight credit, dwindling capacity, environmental regulation, and volatile market conditions.

The corn ethanol mandate has also led to consumer backlash in parts of the country. In my home state of Oklahoma, one convenience store chain experienced a 30 percent drop in fuel sales once they began selling fuel blended at E–10 levels. The consumers didn't want it. In 2008, the New York Times reported this growing consumer discontent from Oklahoma City:

> Why Do You Put Alcohol in Your Tank? demands a large sign outside one gas station here, which reassures drivers that it sells only ''100% Gas.''
> ''No Corn in Our Gas,'' advertises another station nearby. Along the highways of this sprawling prairie city, and in other pockets of the country, a mutiny is growing against energy policies that heavily support and subsidize the blending of ethyl alcohol, or ethanol, into gasoline.
> Many consumers complain that ethanol, which constitutes as much as 10 percent of the fuel they buy in most states, hurts gas mileage and chokes the engines of their boats and motorcycles.

Despite this consumer backlash, corn advocates are today pushing Washington to require higher consumptions of ethanol. The most pressing issue facing corn ethanol is the so-called ''blend wall'' of 10 percent. EISA mandated 15 billion gallons of corn-based ethanol by 2015. But here is the problem: Federal regulations require that a gallon of gasoline should contain no more than 10 percent ethanol. So there will soon be more corn ethanol production than the amount of ethanol allowed in gasoline.

So what is the solution? Corn ethanol advocates have the wrong approach. Rather than rethink EISA's corn mandates, they are lobbying for higher, mid-level ethanol blends in gasoline—higher than E10. Sounds like a simple solution, except its consequences would be dire, with potential damage to agriculture, the environment, and engine equipment manufacturers.

Many on-road and non-road engines, vehicles, and equipment are not specifically designed to run on ethanol blends of E10, let alone blends as high as E15. The available evidence indicates that lawnmowers, chainsaws, snowmobiles, recreational boats, motorcycles, and non-flex-fuel cars and trucks produce higher evaporative and engine exhaust emissions using mid-level ethanol blends. Also, mid-level ethanol blends are more corrosive on certain metals and plastics used in many fuel systems, and cause many gasoline-powered engines to run hotter and at higher RPM levels. In turn, this results in adverse impacts on starting, durability, operation, performance, and operator safety, due to the degradation of critical components and safety devices.

The American Lung Association has noted that degradation of catalyst efficiency, caused by increasing the ethanol content in gasoline, ''can have a major impact on emissions.'' These higher blends of ethanol can also cause NO_X emissions to increase up to 25 percent. In short, we need to be careful that the rapid ramp-up in ethanol use doesn't result in the degradation of our country's air quality.

And many consumers complain about decreased fuel efficiency. Corn Ethanol is 67 percent of the BTU content of gasoline. According to EPA, vehicles ''operating on E85 usually experience a 20–30 percent drop in miles per gallon due to ethanol's lower energy content.'' These results were seconded by a Consumer Reports study that found E85 resulted in a 27 percent drop in fuel efficiency.

In my home state of Oklahoma, ethanol's blendwall has eliminated consumer choice. Where consumers could once choose to purchase clear gas, the blendwall is now forcing motorists to buy E10. The fuel blenders and gas station owners have no option but to sell ethanol blended gasoline despite strong consumer demand for clear gas.

Today I am introducing a simple three-page bill that responds to the increasing call for more consumer choice in the ability to purchase ethanol-free gasoline. Simply put, my bill allows a State to opt out of the corn ethanol portions of the renewable fuel standard. To do so, a State must pass a bill, signed by the governor, stating its election to exercise this option. The opt-out would be recognized by the administrator of the EPA, who would then reduce the amount of the national corn ethanol mandate by the percentage amount of the State which chooses to opt out. The bill also provides for the generation of credits to hold harmless the refiners who would produce clear gasoline sold in an opt-out State.

This legislation would allow a State to opt out of only the corn ethanol mandate. It would not affect other portions of the renewable fuel standard such as the cellulosic or advanced biofuels volumetric requirements.

I believe Congress blundered in pushing too much corn ethanol too fast. This bill will merely allow for fuel producers to respond to market demands when and where consumers prefer clear gas. Right now they can't do that.

By Mr. KERRY:

S. 3738. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide incentives for clean energy manufacturing to reduce emissions, to produce renewable energy, to promote conservation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act. This legislation would provide tax incentives for clean energy manufacturing, renewable energy, and conservation. This is a critical package of incentives to drive the development and deployment of clean energy technology in the United States. It also will expand our manufacturing base to ensure that these advanced energy technologies are made here in America.

This bill is not intended to serve as a substitute for comprehensive energy and climate legislation. However, it does provide a near-term opportunity to support the development and deployment of clean energy technologies.

Congress must continue working on legislation that will put us on a course to substantially reduce greenhouse gas emissions, but the events of the last several weeks have made it clear that there is no bipartisan support for a strong energy and climate bill. In the interim, we should act on areas where there is potential agreement. The Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act is broad energy tax legislation that focuses on tax incentives to encourage renewable energy and conservation. This legislation would extend and improve existing provisions in the tax code and provides some targeted new incentives.

The legislation would promote clean energy manufacturing by providing additional funding for the advanced energy manufacturing credit and uncapping the credit for solar energy property, fuel cell power generation, and advanced energy storage systems, including batteries for advanced vehicles. In addition, the legislation would extend the credit for domestic manufacturers of energy appliances.

To encourage the production of renewable energy, the Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act would extend for 2 years and codify the grant in lieu of tax credit program created by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009. It modifies the program to clarify that real estate investment trusts and public power would be eligible for the program. The legislation provides an additional $3.5 billion for clean renewable energy bonds, with 60 percent allocated to public power and the remaining 40 percent to cooperative electric rural companies. The Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act extends the research and development tax credit retroactively through 2012. For 2011 and 2012, it would increase the R&D credit by ten percent for research expenditures related to the fields of fuel cells and battery technology, renewable energy, energy conservation technology, efficient transmission and distribution of electricity, and carbon capture and sequestration.

To encourage conservation, the Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act would extend and modify tax incentives for new energy efficient homes, nonbusiness energy property improvements, and energy efficient commercial buildings. The bill also would provide incentives for clean transportation by providing incentives for natural gas use in heavy vehicles.

These provisions will encourage investments in developing and deploying renewable energy and conservation solutions, which will result in lower greenhouse gas emissions. The Clean Energy Technology Leadership Act is not a comprehensive energy and climate solution, but I believe it is an important starting point. I am hopeful that we can secure bipartisan support for these and other important tax provisions and pass them this year.

''Sec. 4156. Effect on other laws.''.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND. Mr. President, today, I am pleased to join Senator ROBERT CASEY and eight of my colleagues in introducing the Safe Schools Improvement Act. This important legislation will help to address a crisis going on in our schools—the bullying and harassment of our children. We know that no child can achieve the high academic standards set for them if they are living in fear of bullying or harassment. This legislation will help change the culture in our classrooms and provide schools with the tools they need to promote a safe learning environment.

Findings from the 2007 National School Climate Survey demonstrated that a significant number of students experienced harassment in our schools, often because of their sexual orientation or gender identity. This study also revealed that 96 percent of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender students in New York often heard words such as ''gay'' used in a negative connotation. Furthermore, 93 percent of students regularly heard homophobic remarks. The National School Climate Survey also found that 20 percent of students in New York were physically assaulted in their school because of their sexual orientation, while another 13 percent were assaulted because of their gender expression.

This environment of harassment and bullying in our schools lowers the academic performance of our students. In fact, 35 percent of LGBT students reported to have skipped classes at least once in the past month because they felt unsafe in their own school. I find this to be unacceptable.

The Safe Schools Improvement Act will require schools and districts receiving designated Federal funds to adopt codes of conduct specifically prohibiting bullying and harassment, including conduct based on a student's actual or perceived race, color, national origin, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity or religion. The act would ensure that schools and school districts focus on effective prevention programs in order to better prevent and respond to incidences of bullying and harassment, and would require that States report data on incidences of bullying and harassment to the Department of Education.

This bill has received support from a broad coalition of nearly 70 education, civil rights, disability, religious, and youth service organizations, such as the American Association of School Administrators, American Federation of Teachers, American School Health Association, National Association of School Psychologists, National Education Association, National Parent Teacher Association, American Association of University Women, Asian American Justice Center, the Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network, Human Rights Campaign and the National Council of La Raza. Additionally the National Safe Schools Partnership, strongly endorses the Safe Schools Improvement Act.

I urge my colleagues to join me in cosponsoring the Safe Schools Improvement Act. I believe that we must support this legislation to ensure that all our children can learn in a safe and productive environment.

By Mr. BEGICH:

S. 3740. A bill to supplement State jurisdiction in Alaska Native villages with Federal and tribal resources to improve the quality of life in rural Alaska while reducing domestic violence against Native women and children and to reduce alcohol and drug abuse and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. President, today I introduce legislation to address issues of great concern to me and to all who care about public safety in Alaska Native villages. Last week President Obama signed the Tribal Law and Order bill into law. That legislation passed because Congress recognized the great need to provide more support for the criminal justice system and communities in Indian Country. While this law has some important provisions that will benefit Alaska Native communities, I believe the remoteness and other unique conditions of many Native villages in my State compel us to do more. That is why I am introducing the Alaska Safe Families and Villages Act of 2010.

My bill will establish a demonstration project for Alaska Native tribes to allow tribes in Alaska to set up tribal courts, establish tribal ordinances, and to impose sanctions on those people who violate the ordinances. It would enhance current tribal authority, while maintaining the State's primary role and responsibility in criminal matters. Additionally, those communities selected to be part of the demonstration project would be eligible for an Alaska Village Peace Officer grant to serve those communities in a holistic manner.

Unfortunately, because of the vastness of Alaska, too many of our Alaska Native villages lack any law enforcement. Too often, minor cases involving alcohol and domestic abuse go unreported because the nearest State Trooper resides in a hub community, located a long and expensive airplane ride away. Frequently, harsh weather prevents the Troopers from flying into a community even when the most heinous acts have occurred. Approximately 71 villages have a sole unarmed Village Patrol Safety officer, VPSO, who must be on duty 24 hours a day and 7 days a week. These hard-working VPSOs are underpaid, and while communities try to provide some housing and heating assistance, in places where fuel oil can cost as much as $8 a gallon, it can be difficult to sustain the funding for these public servants.

As one who believes strongly in community involvement, I strongly believe tribes in Alaska should have a role in their law enforcement needs. This local control not only provides security for the communities, but also encourages local acceptance of the judicial system as a whole. With the changes in place that my bill would require, residents of Alaska Native villages will see a system that does more than just fly in after a tragedy has occurred.

Just recently communities in the Yukon-Kuskokwim Delta have experienced an alarming suicide cluster. Unfortunately Alaska Native communities have grown accustomed to alarming suicide rates, but in the past two months there have been at least nine self-inflicted deaths in these villages. Nick Tucker, an elder in Emmonak, recently wrote a letter to the State of Alaska's rural affairs director to try to bring attention to the issue. Part of his letter begged for the Governor to call the legislature in session and said it is no longer acceptable for them to wait for the Troopers because ''in the villages, they take forever.'' Part of this continuing suicide cycle is the presence of drugs and alcohol. Predators do not fear police action when they bootleg alcohol or sell drugs in villages, because there is no police presence. One can walk into a village, speak with an elder and that person will tell you who is bootlegging alcohol.

These communities are full of rich heritage and culture, however many have high unemployment due to the remoteness and lack of opportunity in the village. Most economic development in Alaska happens in either the metropolitan areas, or in very remote areas for resource extraction. Many of the villages have unemployment rates above 20 percent. Alaska Natives survival is highly dependent on the land. They subsist on game, berries, and fish. However, as hunting and fishing stocks dwindle many people are feeling disconnected from their heritage and have turned to drugs and alcohol. Too many people in the villages feel isolated and lack a connection, both figuratively and literally. Though educational attainment in the last 40 years has increased dramatically, the dropout rate in Alaska still hovers at 40 percent. Too many of our young men and women have lost hope and are losing a sense of community.

We must give our communities the tools necessary to protect themselves. Too often, we pour resources into urban areas, but become stuck when we try to work toward solutions for our most remote communities. We should no longer allow the answer from anyone to be ''we don't have the resources.'' Alaska Native villages are vibrant, strong communities and we should do everything in our power to work with these communities and answer their calls for help.

I encourage my colleagues to join me on this legislation, and ask for the full Senate to consider and pass it to provide help to some of the places in our country most in need.

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 3744. A bill to establish Pinnacles National Park in the State of California as a unit of the National Park System, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Pinnacles National Park Act.

This legislation would elevate the Pinnacles National Monument to a National Park. The legislation would also rename the current Pinnacles Wilderness as the Hain Wilderness after Schuyler Hain, an early conservationist whose efforts led to the establishment of the Monument in 1908.

The Pinnacles National Monument ascends out of the beautiful Gabilan Mountains, east of central California's Salinas Valley. Established by President Theodore Roosevelt, the monument protects the spectacular remains of the Neenach Volcano. Colossal monoliths, sheer-walled canyons and talus caves exhibit millions of years of volcanic evolution and tectonic plate movement.

Originally 2500 acres, the monument has grown to encompass 26,000 acres of diverse California wildlands. These parklands represent one of only 5 regions, or less than 2 percent of the world's surface area, supporting a Mediterranean habitat. Less than five percent of the world's Mediterranean habitat remains protected, so it is essential that we preserve this special resource.

Mediterranean habitats provide a rare combination of cool wet winters, hot dry summer days, and evening fog—supporting many plants and animals found nowhere else in the world. One of the animals that calls the Pinnacles home is the critically endangered California condor. Recently, a condor hatched in the wild just outside the monument's boundary—the first to do so in this country in at least 70 years.

The Pinnacles area, famously rendered by John Steinbach in ''Of Mice and Men'' and ''East of Eden,'' is also an important part of California's cultural heritage. The area has held significance for several Native American tribes, early Spanish settlers, and Western homesteaders. Today, the Pinnacles are a global destination for naturalists and outdoor enthusiasts of all kinds, who are attracted by the park's scenic trails, natural resources, and some of the most unique rock-climbing in the world. The Pinnacles National Monument is an important driver of the local tourist economy and jobs, and elevating this site to a National Park will draw even more attention to this incredible destination.

I have worked with Congressman SAM FARR to craft legislation that will further protect this recreational treasure. It has strong support from the surrounding communities and the California Wild Heritage Campaign, a coalition of over 500 businesses and organizations.

I hope my colleagues will join me in recognizing this diverse natural and cultural resource by creating Pinnacles National Park.

By Mrs. LINCOLN:

S. 3745. A bill to amend the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act to require the Secretary of Agriculture in the case of low-income States to use 95 percent of the national average nonmetropolitan median income for purposes of determining the eligibility of communities in the States for certain rural development funding; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I rise today to offer the Rural Infrastructure Improvement Act of 2010. This legislation will help rural communities have better access to the funding available through the Rural Development programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, specifically the Rural Water and Wastewater Program and Community Facility Program.

As Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry, I am strongly concerned that communities in low-income states such as my state of Arkansas have limited ability to qualify for grant funding through certain Rural Development programs due to current non-metropolitan median household income requirements. The structure we have today creates barriers for many of our poorest rural communities that are most in need. Some of these rural communities have median household incomes well below the national average, yet they are ineligible for any grant funding because USDA applies the State's non-metropolitan median household income to funding formulas instead of the national median household income.

This structure creates disparities for many low-income rural States. For example, in Arkansas, a rural community with a median household income greater than the State's non-metropolitan median household income of $31,845 is ineligible for grant funding through the Rural Water and Community Facility programs. Rural communities in Arkansas who meet all of the other eligibility requirements for funding through these programs are ineligible for grant funding simply because of their low median income level. In fact, 45 States have a higher non-metropolitan median household income level. The legislation I am introducing today is designed to even the playing field for low-income rural communities in Arkansas and several other States.

Forty-eight percent of my home State's population lives in a rural community. The programs offered through USDA Rural Development are vital to our efforts to meet basic needs and foster economic development. Without the types of key infrastructure improvements that can be made through these rural development programs, it will be difficult for many of these communities to reach their full potential and prosper.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill he printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3745

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Rural Infrastructure Improvement Act of 2010''.

SEC. 2. MEDIAN INCOME REQUIREMENT ADJUSTMENT.

Section 306 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1926) is amended by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

''(c) MEDIAN INCOME REQUIREMENT ADJUSTMENT.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary applies a median income requirement to communities for purposes of determining eligibility for the community facilities programs and water, waste disposal, and wastewater programs authorized under this section and sections 306A, 306C, 306D, and 306E, in the case of a State for which the State nonmetropolitan median income is equal to or less than 90 percent of the national average nonmetropolitan median income, the Secretary shall use an amount equal to 95 percent of the national average nonmetropolitan median income in applying the median income requirement for any community in the State.

''(2) TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority provided by paragraph (1) terminates on September 30, 2012''.

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself, Mrs. SHAHEEN, Mrs. BOXER, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN):

S. 3746. A bill to amend the Energy Policy Act of 2005 to improve the loan guarantee program of the Department of Energy under title XVII of that Act; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, today I am introducing two bills, S. 3746 and S. 3759, making improvements to the operation of the Department of Energy's loan guarantee program. The first makes a number of changes that will ease the administration of the program and allow for quicker processing of applications within the Department. In addition, the bill will add a fourth category to the subsidized loan guarantee program created and funded in the American Reinvestment and Recovery Act that would allow energy efficiency projects to gain access to the program. This bill is substantially similar to a provision that the House of Representatives passed last year as a portion of H.R. 2847 but which did not receive consideration in the Senate.

The second bill institutes a time limit on consideration by the Office of Management and Budget of loan guarantee applications submitted by the Secretary. If the Secretary submits a term sheet for conditional commitment to OMB for review and comment, then OMB has 30 days to submit such comments. After 30 days the Secretary may issue a conditional commitment on the guarantee, taking into account any comments received from OMB, without further authorization from OMB. This provision would not affect the currently used OMB-approved subsidy cost model for loan guarantees or its application.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 3747. A bill to provide for a reduction and limitation on the total number of Federal employees, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Reduce and Cap the Federal Workforce Act. This is a simple straightforward bill that would reduce the number of civilian federal employees—excluding those serving in the Departments of Defense and Homeland Security—to the pre-2009 numbers in each government agency through attrition. Once this reduced number is reached, then each agency would cap the number of employees at that level. Each hire would then have to be offset by another employee leaving that agency.

It is not hard to locate illustrations where the Federal Government is growing at an exceptionally fast pace. Looking at the number of Government employees as a percentage of America's population, one easily sees how we have increased the size of the government.

In 1815, the total population in America was 8.3 million people, yet there were only 4,837 Federal Government employees. That represents nearly 1/20 of 1 percent of Americans who were Federal employees. From 1981 through 2008, the civilian work force remained at about 1.1 million to 1.2 million.

The Obama administration says the Government will grow to 2.15 million employees this year serving roughly 310 million Americans. That is nearly 1 percent of the population, or put another way, is 20 times the number of government employees than there were in 1815 and almost a 50 percent increase since 2008. The actual numbers are likely to be much higher.

Some have estimated the newly enacted health care bill could add many thousands of Federal employees—as many as 16,000 new Internal Revenue Service employees alone. It has been reported that the recently enacted financial regulatory bill will result in the hiring of at least one thousand new federal government employees. It has been reported the SEC will need to hire an additional 800 employees alone.

I am introducing this legislation in order to ensure that the size of our federal government is reduced to the pre-2009 size and does not expand thereafter. This legislation is supported by Americans for Tax Reform, the American Conservative Union, and Americans for Limited Government.

I believe we need a limited federal government and this legislation is one way we can limit the size of the Government while decreasing Government spending. Our Nation, children, and grandchildren cannot be buried in debt created by an agenda to exponentially grow the size of the Government. Enough is enough.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. BURR, Mr. REED, Mr. ENSIGN, and Mr. FRANKEN):

S. 3751. A bill to amend the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Act of 2005; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am pleased today to introduce the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Reauthorization Act of 2010 which reauthorizes the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Act of 2005, P.L. 109–129, through the end of 2015. I am also grateful that Senators DODD, BURR, REED, ENSIGN and FRANKEN have joined me as sponsors of this bipartisan bill.

Over the past few months, we have worked with the National Marrow Donor Program, NMDP, and cord blood transplantation experts, specifically Dr. Linda Kelley of the University of Utah and Dr. Joanne Kurtzberg of Duke University. It is my strong hope that our bill is considered by the Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions when the Congress returns in mid-September and is signed into law before the end of the year.

Our legislation makes several small but important additions to the existing program.

First, the bill reauthorizes both the C.W. Bill Young Cell Transplantation Program, which is commonly referred to as the Program and the National Cord Blood Inventory program, which is often called the NCBI, for an additional 5 years through 2015.

The total authorization levels for both programs combined would be $53 million in each of the 5 years, thus staying consistent with the authorization level established in the original statute. Specifically, the authorization level for the program would be $30 million in fiscal years 2011 through 2014 and $33 million in fiscal year 2015. The authorization levels for NCBI would be $23 million for fiscal years 2011 through 2014 and $20 million in fiscal year 2015.

Second, the original statute intended for cord blood banks to become self-sufficient in the future. Five years ago, it was our intent that cord blood banks would eventually be able to function and operate without federal funding. In fact, the HELP Committee's August 31, 2005 report states the following on this important issue: ''The committee anticipated that the funding authorized for establishing and strengthening the cord blood unit inventory will be devoted primarily to defraying the start-up expenses, including developing the expanded inventory in an optimal fashion. While we feel that such activities clearly have the potential to be self-supporting in time, we also recognize that sufficient funding over an adequate period of time will be necessary for these activities to realize their full potential. It is the committee's expectation that the Secretary will closely scrutinize all costs related to this legislation, so that tax dollars are spent judiciously to achieve the maximum effect.''

Almost 5 years have passed since the original statute was signed into law and cord blood banks are still dependent on Federal funding due to the many obstacles surrounding cord blood collection and cord blood storage. Therefore, our bill includes language to the contracting section requiring qualified cord blood banks to develop an annual plan and demonstrate ongoing measurable progress toward achieving self-sufficiency. While I recognize and understand that cord blood donation and collection is a new, challenging field of research, this modification was extremely important to me to ensure that taxpayers' precious dollars are spent prudently and that public cord blood banks are actually doing what the drafters of the original law intended.

The contracting provisions of our bill also require cord blood banks to provide a plan on how to increase cord blood collection, assist with the establishment of new collection sites or contract with new collection sites. Both the self-sufficiency requirements and the cord blood collection requirements would apply to both new cord blood bank applicants and existing cord blood banks extending their contracts.

Third, our bill also calls for the collection and maintenance of at least 150,000 new units of high-quality cord blood to be made available for transplantation through the C.W. Bill Young Cell Transplantation Program. The original statute called for the collection of 150,000 new units, and we believed that there needed to be some flexibility on the total number of units collected.

Fourth, in order to ensure that the appropriate science is reflected in this bill, the legislation modifies the definition of a first degree relative as the sibling of an individual in need of a transplant. According to scientists and researchers who specialize in cord blood transplantation, the only immediate family members able to donate cord blood are the siblings of a person in need of a transplant. The original statute defined first degree relatives as parents and siblings.

Fifth, the Program would support studies and demonstration projects that would study increasing cord blood donation and collection from a genetically diverse population, including exploring novel approaches or incentives to expand the number of cord blood collection sites partnering with federal cord blood banks.

Sixth, our bill extends the privacy protections included in the original statute for cord blood transplant patients and donors to bone marrow transplant patients and donors.

Finally, the legislation includes a study on cord blood donation and collection by the General Accountability Office. The final report would be submitted to the appropriate House and Senate Committees one year after enactment of our bill.

I am proud of this legislation because it proves that bipartisanship still exists in the United States Senate. This subject is near and dear to my heart. When this legislation was signed into law in 2005, it offered us a rare opportunity to make a difference in the lives of those suffering from a serious illness or those who have family members with illnesses requiring cord blood or bone marrow transplants. Back then, our goal was to increase the number of bone marrow and cord blood donors. Today, our goal continues to be increasing the number of bone marrow and cord blood donations and passage of this legislation will make it easier to do just that.

I will continue to do everything possible to provide transplant patients with the best possible options by ensuring a strong future for bone marrow and cord blood transplantation in this country. Patients in need of a transplant deserve nothing less and passing this legislation is the pathway to being successful in that endeavor.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(G) recommendations about methods cord blood banks and collection sites could use to lower costs and improve efficiency of cord blood unit collection without decreasing the quality of the cord blood units collected.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator HATCH, Senator REED, Senator BURR, Senator ENSIGN and Senator FRANKEN in introducing the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Reauthorization Act of 2010, a bill that will benefit some of the most gravely ill patients—those in need of a blood stem cell transplant. The bill we are introducing today reauthorizes the vital work being done for patients as a result of the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Act of 2005.

I first joined Senator HATCH more than seven years ago on legislation to create a national network of cord blood banks and a cord blood registry. Five years ago, when the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee took up cord blood legislation, Senator HATCH and I, working with many of our colleagues on and off the committee, expanded the scope of our legislation to include a reauthorization of the national bone marrow program and updated the cord blood provisions to be consistent with the recommendations made by the Institute of Medicine's report, ''Cord Blood: Establishing a National Hematopoietic Stem Cell Bank Program.'' In the end, that legislation, the Stem Cell Therapeutic and Research Act of 2005, passed the senate unanimously.

Since then we have learned a lot of about adult stem cell transplantation. There are currently twelve public cord blood banks across the U.S. and cord blood cells account for 22 percent of all transplants as of 2009. Among minorities, transplants using cord blood as the cell source are even higher. As of 2005, survival rates for transplants involving an unrelated donor are almost identical to those of a related donor which represents a near doubling of the survival rates for unrelated donor recipients over the past 15 years.

The bill we are introducing today builds on the success of the National Cord Blood Inventory and the national bone marrow transplantation program, making minor improvements to both. Among the most critical changes to the law is the prioritization of the creation of new cord blood collection sites so that we can increase the National Cord Blood Inventory. The 2005 law set a goal of collecting and maintaining 150,000 new units of high-quality cord blood. Unfortunately, the inventory is well below that goal and the transplantation needs of patients. In part, that is because the funding has not kept pace with what was authorized by the 2005 law. While I applaud President Obama for including additional funding for the National Cord Blood Inventory and the national bone marrow transplantation program in his fiscal year 2011 budget, I find it regrettable that President Bush did not provide full funding for these programs in any of his budgets, despite his vocal support for these programs and adult stem cells generally.

In my own state of Connecticut, there are more than 128,000 donors participating in the National Marrow Donor Program. There is some very exciting work going on at Yale University and Yale New Haven Hospital involving marrow or cord blood transplantation. In fact, last May, I had the privilege of meeting Ms. Teena Conquest, a bone marrow donor from Middletown, Connecticut, and the recipient of her bone marrow, Rebecca Christy, from Iowa. It was truly inspiring to hear their story and how one woman's generosity saved another woman's life.

I am deeply disappointed that there are currently no cord blood collection sites in the state of Connecticut through the National Cord Blood Inventory program. Currently, more than 160 hospitals in the U.S. have an agreement with a public cord blood bank through the National Cord Blood Inventory program to perform collections for banks within the National Marrow Donor Program network. While none of those hospitals are in Connecticut, it is my strong hope that with this reauthorization, we will be prioritizing the establishment of new cord blood collection sites for the public program. I strongly encourage hospitals in Connecticut who meet the criteria to become a cord blood collection site and help increase the inventory of cord blood so that patients in need can find a match.

As was the case for Ms. Conquest and Ms. Christy, the therapeutic benefits of bone marrow are tremendous and well established. Bone marrow transplants have been used for nearly half a century to treat patients suffering from diseases such as leukemia, Hodgkin's Disease, sickle cell anemia, and others. The National Marrow Donor Program, NMDP, provides a single point of access, the National Registry, to nearly 8 million volunteer bone marrow donors and 160,000 cord blood units, including more than 28,000 federally funded units in the National Cord Blood Inventory. The NMDP has helped countless patients and families understand their disease and treatment options with educational resources and one-on-one case management support.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join me and my colleagues in support of this important legislation. It is my strong hope that we can move quickly to mark up this legislation in September and shortly thereafter pass this bill in the Senate.

By Mr. REED (for himself, Mrs. SHAHEEN, and Mr. WHITEHOUSE):

By Mr. ROCKEFELLER:

S. 3756. A bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to provide public safety providers an additional 10 megahertz of spectrum to support a national, interoperable wireless broadband network and authorize the Federal Communications Commission to hold incentive auctions to provide funding to support such a network, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Public Safety Spectrum and Wireless Innovation Act.

Radio spectrum is a very valuable resource. It can grow our economy and put new and innovative wireless services in the hands of consumers and businesses. It can enhance our public safety by fostering communications between first responders when the unthinkable occurs. But it is also scarce. That is why we need a forward-thinking spectrum policy that promotes smart use of our airwaves—and provides public safety officials with the wireless resources they need to keep us safe.

The Public Safety Spectrum and Wireless Innovation Act will do just that.

First, this legislation will provide the Federal Communications Commission with the authority to hold incentive auctions. This will help put valuable spectrum resources into the hands of companies that can create innovative new services for American consumers and businesses. This proposal will not require the return of spectrum from existing commercial users, but will instead provide them with a voluntary opportunity to realize a portion of auction revenues if they wish to facilitate putting spectrum to new and productive uses.

Second, this legislation will provide public safety officials with an additional 10 megahertz of spectrum known as the ''D-block.'' This spectrum will support a national, interoperable wireless broadband network that will help first responders protect us and keep us from harm. I believe this is the right thing to do, because we owe those courageous individuals who wear the shield the resources they need to do their job. But more than that, by providing authority for incentive auctions, this legislation will offer a revenue stream to assist public safety with construction and maintenance of their network.

The American people deserve to have the best and most innovative uses of wireless networks anywhere. They deserve to know our first responders have access to the airwaves they need when tragedy strikes. So I urge my colleagues to join me and support this important legislation.

S. 3760. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand personal savings and retirement savings coverage by allowing employees not covered by qualified retirement plans to save for retirement through automatic IRAs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Automatic IRA Act of 2010. When fully phased in, this bill will give nearly 42 million Americans nationwide an easy, effective way to take responsibility for their financial futures and plan for a secure retirement. The act incorporates the President's call, in his proposed fiscal year 2010 and fiscal year 2011 budgets, for Congress to enact automatic IRA legislation.

Currently, about half of American workers have no opportunity to save for retirement at work. In my home State of New Mexico, that share is nearly 60 percent. Among those lacking coverage at work, only 1 in 10 contributes annually to an individual retirement account, IRA; the rest generally make no dedicated savings for retirement. The result? An alarming number of American workers are woefully unprepared for a financially secure retirement. According to Boston College's Center for Retirement Research, ''in 2009 half of today's households will not have enough retirement income to maintain their pre-retirement standard of living, even if they work to age 65, which is above the current average retirement age.'' Especially in this period of economic uncertainty, it is imperative that Congress focus on this retirement savings crisis. My bill takes a commonsense approach to doing so.

Under this bill, most private sector employees working in establishments of 10 or more employees who are not currently covered by a workplace retirement plan would be given the opportunity to save through regular payroll deposits that continue automatically, unless they elect out. The savings will be deposited into the worker's own IRA, which will be subject to the laws already in place governing IRA accounts. Employers' administrative functions will be minimal. And the arrangement is market oriented; other than the smallest of accounts, automatic IRAs will be provided by the same banks, mutual funds, insurance carriers, and other institutions that currently provide them.

The automatic IRA approach is intended to help these households overcome the barrier of inertia. It builds on the successful use—encouraged by reforms I strongly supported the Pension Protection Act of 2006—of automatic features in 401(k) plans that encourage employees toward sensible decisions (while allowing them to make alternative choices). We have already seen evidence that automatic 401(k) enrollment can dramatically boost employee participation rates, from seven in ten eligible workers to nine in ten. And in the 401(k) context, the gains are even more striking for population groups least likely to save, including women, Latino, and low-income workers.

Of the 75 million American workers who now are not covered by employment-based retirement plans, an estimated 42 million would be eligible to save and enroll under automatic IRA legislation. This includes more than 250,000 in my home State of New Mexico. Many of these individuals are familiar with IRAs. But when asked why they have not used the existing program, about half point to issues relating to setup and decisionmaking as the key barriers. The automatic IRA would eliminate these barriers, and the Retirement Security Project estimates that automatic IRA legislation could increase net national saving by nearly $15 billion annually.

This is the third consecutive Congress in which I have introduced automatic IRA legislation. The concept was initially developed by scholars at the Brookings Institution and Heritage Foundation. Indeed, the automatic IRA concept has long enjoyed broad support across the political spectrum. For instance, Martin Feldstein, chief economic advisor to President Reagan, has described himself as ''a great enthusiast of automatic enrollment IRAs'' who thinks ''as a policy, it's a no-brainer'' and ''can't imagine why there would be any significant opposition from political players on either side of the aisle.''

Finally, this bill seeks to send a strong signal of preference for employers to offer qualified retirement plans, like 401(k)s. Among other features, it doubles the credit for employers that newly establish qualified plans and it directs the Secretaries of the Treasury and Labor to implement final regulations and establish a model plan for Multiple Employer Plans.

I am grateful that my colleague on the Senate Finance Committee, Senator KERRY, is joining me in introducing this bill. I am also pleased to note the broad range of stakeholders supporting the automatic IRA concept, including AARP; the American Society of Pension Professionals & Actuaries; Aspen Institute's Initiative on Financial Security; the Business and Professional Women's Foundation; CFED; Consumers Union; FINRA; the Minority Business Roundtable; New Economics for Women; the United States Black Chamber; the United States Women's Chamber of Commerce; Women Impacting Public Policy; and the Women's Institute for a Secure Retirement.

Ensuring easy access to a retirement account and the ability to have part of their wages go directly from their paycheck into this account are proven strategies to encourage retirement savings. I call on the Senate to take up this bill in the fall and to include it in legislation extending the 2001 and 2003 tax cuts.

By Mr. REID (for himself and Mr. ENSIGN):

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 607—RECOGNIZING THE MONTH OF OCTOBER 2010 AS ''NATIONAL PRINCIPALS MONTH''

Mr. DORGAN (for himself, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. FRANKEN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BAUCUS, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. CONRAD, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. TESTER, Mr. BEGICH, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. GOODWIN, Mr. MENENDEZ, and Mr. CASEY) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 607

Whereas the National Association of Elementary School Principals and the National Association of Secondary School Principals have declared the month of October 2010 as ''National Principals Month'';

Whereas school leaders are expected to be educational visionaries, instructional leaders, assessment experts, disciplinarians, community builders, public relations experts, budget analysts, facility managers, special programs administrators, and guardians of various legal, contractual, and policy mandates and initiatives, as well as being entrusted with our young people, our most valuable resource;

Whereas principals set the academic tone for their schools and work collaboratively with teachers to develop and maintain high curriculum standards, develop mission statements, and set performance goals and objectives;

Whereas the vision, dedication, and determination of a principal provides the mobilizing force behind any school reform effort; and

Whereas the celebration of ''National Principals Month'' would honor elementary, middle level, and high school principals and recognize the importance of school leadership in ensuring that every child has access to a high-quality education: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes the month of October 2010 as ''National Principals Month''; and

(2) honors the contribution of school principals in the elementary and secondary schools of our Nation by supporting the goals and ideals of ''National Principals Month''.

SENATE RESOLUTION 608—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR SHOULD TAKE IMMEDIATE ACTION TO EXPEDITE THE REVIEW AND APPROPRIATE APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS FOR SHALLOW WATER DRILLING PERMITS IN THE GULF OF MEXICO, THE BEAUFORT SEA, AND THE CHUKCHI SEA

Mrs. HUTCHISON (for herself, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. WICKER, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. VITTER, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. BEGICH, Ms. MURKOWSKI, and Mr. SHELBY) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources:

Whereas on May 6, 2010, in response to the oil spill from the mobile offshore drilling unit Deepwater Horizon, and without prior public review or notice, the Secretary of the Interior announced an immediate moratorium on the approval of all offshore oil and gas drilling permits until an offshore safety review was completed;

Whereas on May 28, 2010, following a Department of the Interior safety review, and with the support of many members of the Senate, the President lifted the offshore moratorium for shallow water drilling operations for those drilling rigs or platforms equipped with blowout prevention equipment located above the water surface;

Whereas on June 2, 2010, the Secretary of the Interior confirmed in a press release that the shallow water drilling moratorium was lifted, but that such drilling operations must ''satisfy new safety and environmental requirements'';

Whereas on June 3, 2010, the President publicly stated that ''the [offshore drilling] moratorium has not extended to the shallow waters'';

Whereas on June 8 and June 18, 2010, the Secretary of the Interior issued documents entitled ''Notice to Lessees 05 and 06'' (referred to in this preamble as ''NTL–05'' and ''NTL–06'', respectively) imposing new safety and environmental requirements applicable to the filings for new drilling permits, exploration plans, or development plans;

Whereas as of July 14, 2010, the Secretary of the Interior has not provided adequate guidance and information for the shallow water drilling industry to comply with new drilling application requirements imposed by NTL–06;

Whereas approximately 35 percent of the available shallow water drilling rigs in the Gulf of Mexico are now without work and idle, putting thousands of jobs at risk and affecting the orderly production of domestic natural gas resources in the Gulf Coast;

Whereas more than 25,000 jobs are at risk if the Secretary of the Interior does not continue to issue any new shallow water permits and existing permits expire;

Whereas every Gulf of Mexico shallow water operation provides approximately 500 direct and indirect jobs;

Whereas the failure to approve the final Application for Permit to Drill for 3 exploration wells in the Beaufort and Chukchi Seas in 2010 represents a loss of 600 jobs and harms oil and natural gas exploration critical to the national energy infrastructure; and

Whereas the lack of guidance from the Secretary of the Interior regarding new safety regulations has resulted in only 1 new shallow water permit being granted since May 6, 2010: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) national energy security and the regional Gulf Coast economy depend upon the full and immediate restoration of shallow water drilling operations in the Gulf of Mexico;

(2) the long term economic health of the State of Alaska depends upon the responsible development of the oil and natural gas reserves of the Beaufort and Chukchi Seas; and

(3) the Secretary of the Interior should—

(A) provide written guidance and clarification to applicants regarding new safety requirements; and

(B) take immediate and effective action to expedite the review and appropriate approval of applications for shallow water drilling permits in the outer Continental Shelf.

Whereas the programs of the League not only emphasize the importance of leadership and community in local areas, but also enhance the quality of life by studying and addressing specific problems within the communities;

Whereas, throughout 100 years of service, the League has assisted millions of people in the United States, especially African-Americans, in combating poverty, inequality, and social injustice;

Whereas the League has outlined 4 aspirational goals as part of the ''I AM EMPOWERED'' campaign, which marks the centennial anniversary of the League;

SENATE RESOLUTION 610—RECOGNIZING THE 40TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE CUMBRES AND TOLTEC SCENIC RAILROAD

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico (for himself, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BENNET, and Mr. UDALL of Colorado) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

S. RES. 610

Whereas the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad (C&TSRR) was initially constructed in 1880 as part of the narrow gauge Denver and Rio Grande Railroad's San Juan Extension;

Whereas the San Juan Extension provided a critical freight and passenger transportation link in the Southwest until the line was abandoned in 1969;

Whereas, in 1970, the States of New Mexico and Colorado jointly purchased the track between Chama, New Mexico, and Antonito, Colorado, along with locomotives, cars and facilities and renamed it the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad in an effort to preserve the history of the railroad and maintain access along the scenic corridor;

Whereas the C&TSRR is recognized as both a national historic site and a historic civil engineering landmark;

Whereas the C&TSRR traverses the highest railroad pass in the country at 10,015 feet and is the highest and longest surviving narrow gauge railroad in the United States;

Whereas the C&TSRR uses steam locomotives dating back to the 1920s, including the ''Mudhen'', once owned by Gene Autry;

Whereas preservation of railroads like the C&TSRR is critical to preserving the history of the American interest in expanding our Nation's railroad system;

Whereas the C&TSRR continues to serve a critical role for the region through attracting tourists and industry including serving as a backdrop for over 10 movies including Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade;

Whereas the C&TSRR Commission will be celebrating 40 years of railroad co-ownership by New Mexico and Colorado this year: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate

(1) recognizes the Cumbres & Toltec Scenic Railroad days;

(2) acknowledges the critical role of freight and passenger rail in our nation's intermodal transportation system; and

(3) commends the efforts of the State governments of Colorado and New Mexico, the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad Commission, the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad Management Company, and Friends of the C&TSRR for their ongoing efforts to maintain this historic and scenic railroad.

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. President, today, I join Senators BINGAMAN, BENNET of Colorado, and UDALL, in submitting a resolution to recognize the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad on its 40th anniversary this August. Representative LUJÁN, a member of the New Mexico delegation, is introducing a companion resolution in the house.

The Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad has been an integral part of the Northern New Mexico and Southern Colorado economies since its construction in 1880 as part of the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad's San Juan Extension.

From its construction until it was abandoned in 1969, the railroad provided a critical passenger and freight link serving communities throughout New Mexico and Colorado.

In 1970, recognizing the economic impact abandonment of the line would have on communities served by the railroad and appreciating the railroad's historic significance, New Mexico and Colorado came together to purchase the facilities, locomotives, cars and line between Chama, NM and Antonito, CO. To acknowledge the sheer beauty of the route, they renamed it the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad.

Since that time the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad has been recognized as a national historic site and, by the American Society of Civil Engineers, as a civil engineering landmark acknowledging the challenging terrain the railroad crosses.

Today, the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic railroad continues to be critical to the local communities. The railroad offers tourists trips daily between May and October and serves to showcase the history and beauty of this region of the country.

These trips offer a glimpse into railroad travel of the past and provide the visionary tourist a taste of what could be with future expansion of passenger rail in the West.

In August, the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad will celebrate 40 years of co-ownership and this resolution honors its efforts in preserving the history of and building a future for railroad in America.

I ask all my Senate colleagues to join Senators BINGAMAN, BENNET, of Colorado, UDALL of Colorado and me in recognizing the Cumbres and Toltec Scenic Railroad days by agreeing to this resolution.

Whereas Bonnie Buxton of Toronto, Canada, the co-founder of the first International Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Awareness Day, asked ''What if ... a world full of FAS/E [Fetal Alcohol Syndrome/Effect] parents all got together on the ninth hour of the ninth day of the ninth month of the year and asked the world to remember that during the 9 months of pregnancy a woman should not consume alcohol ... would the rest of the world listen?''; and

Whereas the ongoing reduction of United States combat and combat support units from Iraq and the conclusion of United States-led, direct support and combat operations provides an opportunity to recognize and honor the important contributions of the United States Armed Forces and the critical civilian agency support that have enabled the Iraqi Security Forces to take the lead in conducting security and stability operations across the 18 provinces of Iraq;

Whereas the surge of United States military units into Iraq in 2007 and 2008 was instrumental in seizing the initiative from insurgent and terrorist elements and providing the space and time for the development of the Iraqi Security Forces and the establishment of governmental, political, and economic capacity at the local level;

Whereas the meticulous and persistent contributions of the United States military and civilian leadership under General David Petraeus and Ambassador Ryan Crocker contributed greatly to the successful build up of the Iraqi Security Forces and the development of stable governance in Iraq;

Whereas, in June 2006, the Iraqi Security Forces numbered approximately 152,000 and due to the subsequent deployment and employment of critical United States Military Transition Teams, Border Transition Teams, and Police Transition Teams and the extensive partnering of additional United States military units with Iraqi units, the total Iraqi Security Forces grew from approximately 559,000 in May 2008 to reach approximately 665,000 in August of 2010;

Whereas the ongoing security and stability provided by the partnership between the United States Armed Forces and Iraqi Security Forces has allowed United States Provincial Reconstruction Teams, embedded with United States military units and working alongside Iraqis at the local and provincial levels, to have facilitated thousands of reconstruction projects across Iraq that provide necessary access to capital and subject matter expertise for the repair of petroleum production facilities and desalination plants, expansion of electrical generation and telecommunications networks, building of schools, initiation of agricultural projects, spurring of Iraqi-owned businesses, and the attracting of foreign investment to improve the infrastructure of Iraq;

Whereas improved communication and coordination between the Government of Iraq in Baghdad, the Provincial Governors, and local political and tribal leaders has helped foster legitimate political alliances that, while still fragile, have exhibited the resiliency and potential for the resolution of conflicts through civil discourse, rather than violence;

Whereas the security situation in Iraq has improved markedly since 2007, and while it remains uneven and violent attacks by anti-government elements persist, the frequency of these attacks and the resources available to the insurgents and terrorists have declined to such an extent that the Government of Iraq remains capable and secure; and

Whereas these positive developments and trends are evidence of the success of the United States civil-military strategy in Iraq and are essential to the ongoing reduction of United States military forces from the current troop levels of approximately 64,000 to approximately 50,000 combat and combat support troops by September 1, 2010, further signaling a robust and ongoing commitment to advise and assist Iraqi Security Forces, while retaining the ability to respond in direct support of Iraqi Security Forces when necessary and to conduct counterterrorism operations against insurgent and terrorist elements: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the counterinsurgency and counterterrorism strategies of the United States initiated in 2006 and sustained from 2007 until the present day have successfully enabled the Government of Iraq to reach major milestones in the critical areas of security, governance, and rule of law and have set the conditions for the responsible and gradual reduction of United States combat and combat support units from Iraq and the change of their mission to advising and assisting the Iraqi Security Forces;

(2) United States Forces-Iraq was instrumental in effecting the recruitment, training, retention, and employment of approximately 700,000 Iraqi Security Forces who have assumed and maintained the lead for security operations within the 18 provinces of Iraq; and

(3) United States commanders, their troops, their civilian partners in the Department of State, the United States Agency for International Development, the Department of the Treasury, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Justice, and the Department of Defense, Federal contractors, and the Provincial Reconstruction Teams should be commended for their ingenuity, resourcefulness, courage, commitment, and sacrifice and their continued dedication and service to the United States.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 70—SUPPORTING THE OBSERVANCE OF ''SPIRIT OF '45 DAY''

Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. BURR, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. AKAKA, and Mr. INOUYE) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. CON. RES. 70

Whereas on August 14, 1945, the people of the United States received word of the end of World War II;

Whereas on that day, people in the United States and around the world greeted the news of the Allies' noble victory with joyous celebration, humility, and spiritual reflection;

Whereas the victory marked the culmination of an unprecedented national effort that defeated the forces of aggression, brought freedom to subjugated nations, and ended the horrors of the Holocaust;

Whereas these historic accomplishments were achieved through the collective service and personal sacrifice of the people of the United States, both those who served in uniform and those who supported them on the home front;

Whereas more than 400,000 Americans gave their lives in service to their country during World War II;

Whereas August 14, 1945, marked not only the end of the war, but also the beginning of an unprecedented era of rebuilding in which the United States led the effort to restore the shattered nations of the Allies and their enemies alike and to create institutions to work towards a more peaceful global community;

Whereas the men and women of the World War II generation created an array of organizations and institutions during the postwar era which helped to strengthen American democracy by promoting civic engagement, volunteerism, and service to community and country;

Whereas the courage, dedication, self-sacrifice, and compassion of the World War II generation have inspired subsequent generations in the United States Armed Forces, including the men and women currently in service in Iraq, Afghanistan, and around the world;

Whereas the entire World War II generation, military and civilian alike, has provided a model of unity and community that serves as a source of inspiration for current and future generations of Americans to come together to work for the continued betterment of the United States and the world; and

Whereas the second Sunday in August has been proposed as ''Spirit of '45 Day'' to commemorate the anniversary of the end of World War II on August 14, 1945: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress supports the observance of ''Spirit of '45 Day''.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 71—RECOGNIZING THE UNITED STATES NATIONAL INTEREST IN HELPING TO PREVENT AND MITIGATE ACTS OF GENOCIDE AND OTHER MASS ATROCITIES AGAINST CIVILIANS, AND SUPPORTING AND ENCOURAGING EFFORTS TO DEVELOP A WHOLE OF GOVERNMENT APPROACH TO PREVENT AND MITIGATE SUCH ACTS

Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Ms. COLLINS) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. CON. RES. 71

Whereas, in the aftermath of the Holocaust, the international community vowed ''never again'' to allow systematic killings on the basis of nationality, ethnicity, race, or religion;

Whereas a number of other genocides and mass atrocities have occurred, both prior to and since that time;

Whereas the United States Government has undertaken many initiatives to ensure that victims of genocide and mass atrocities are not forgotten, and as a leader in the international community, the United States has committed to work with international partners to prevent genocide and mass atrocities and to help protect civilian populations at risk of such;

Whereas the United Nations General Assembly adopted the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in 1948, which declares genocide, whether committed in a time of peace or in a time of war, a crime under international law, and declares that the parties to the Convention will undertake to prevent and to punish that crime;

Whereas the United States was the first nation to sign the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, and the Senate voted to ratify the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide on February 11, 1986;

Whereas the Act entitled, ''An Act to establish the United States Holocaust Memorial Council'', approved October 7, 1980 (Public Law 96–388) established the United States Holocaust Memorial Council to commemorate the Holocaust, establish a memorial museum to the victims, and develop a committee to stimulate worldwide action to prevent or stop future genocides;

Whereas the passage of the Genocide Convention Implementation Act of 1987 (Public Law 100–606), also known as the Proxmire Act, made genocide a crime under United States law;

Whereas, in response to lessons learned from Rwanda and Bosnia, President William J. Clinton established a genocide and mass atrocities early warning system by establishing an Atrocities Prevention Interagency

Working Group, chaired by an Ambassador-at-Large for War Crimes Issues from 1998 to 2000;

Whereas, in 2005, the United States and all other members of the United Nations agreed that the international community has ''a responsibility to use appropriate diplomatic, humanitarian and other peaceful means, in accordance with Chapter VI and VIII of the United Nations Charter, to help protect populations from genocide, war crimes, ethnic cleansing and crimes against humanity,'' and to take direct action if national authorities are unwilling or unable to protect their populations;

Whereas the 2006 National Security Strategy of the United States stated, ''The world needs to start honoring a principle that many believe has lost its force in parts of the international community in recent years: genocide must not be tolerated. It is a moral imperative that states take action to prevent and punish genocide. . . . We must refine United States Government efforts—economic, diplomatic, and law-enforcement—so that they target those individuals responsible for genocide and not the innocent citizens they rule.'';

Whereas the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, the American Academy of Diplomacy, and the United States Institute of Peace convened a Genocide Prevention Task Force, co-chaired by former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and former Secretary of Defense William Cohen, to explore how the United States Government could better respond to threats of genocide and mass atrocities;

Whereas the final report of the Genocide Prevention Task Force, released in December 2008, concluded that the lack of an overarching policy framework or a standing interagency process, as well as insufficient and uncoordinated institutional capacities, undermines the ability of the United States Government to help prevent genocide or mass killings and offered recommendations for creating a government wide strategy;

Whereas the former Director of National Intelligence, in his annual threat assessment to Congress in February 2010, highlighted countries at risk of genocide and mass atrocities and stated, ''Within the past 3 years, the Democratic Republic of Congo and Sudan all suffered mass killing episodes through violence starvation, or death in prison camps . . . Looking ahead over the next 5 years, a number of countries in Africa and Asia are at significant risk for a new outbreak of mass killing.'';

Whereas the Quadrennial Defense Review, released in February 2010, states that the Defense Department should be prepared to provide the President with options for ''preventing human suffering due to mass atrocities or large-scale natural disasters abroad'';

Whereas the 2010 National Security Strategy notes, ''The United States is committed to working with our allies, and to strengthening our own internal capabilities, in order to ensure that the United States and the international community are proactively engaged in a strategic effort to prevent mass atrocities and genocide. In the event that prevention fails, the United States will work both multilaterally and bilaterally to mobilize diplomatic, humanitarian, financial, and—in certain instances—military means to prevent and respond to genocide and mass atrocities.'';

Whereas genocide and mass atrocities often result from and contribute to instability and conflict, which can cross borders and exacerbate threats to international security and the national security of the United States;

Whereas the failure to prevent genocide and mass atrocities can lead to significant costs resulting from regional instability, refugee flows, peacekeeping, economic loss, and the challenges of post-conflict reconstruction and reconciliation; and

Whereas United States leadership and actions toward preventing and mitigating future genocides and mass atrocities can save human lives and help foster beneficial global partnerships: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Senate—

(1) recommits to honor the memory of the victims of the Holocaust as well as the victims of all past genocides and mass atrocities;

(2) affirms that it is in the national interest and aligned with the values of the United States to work vigorously with international partners to prevent and mitigate future genocides and mass atrocities;

(3) supports efforts made thus far by the President, the Secretary of State, the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development, the Secretary of Defense, and the Director of National Intelligence to improve the capacity of the United States Government to anticipate, prevent, and address genocide and mass atrocities, including the establishment of an interagency policy committee and a National Security Council position dedicated to the prevention of genocide and other mass atrocities;

(4) urges the President—

(A) to direct relevant departments and agencies of the United States Government to review and evaluate existing capacities for anticipating, preventing, and responding to genocide and other mass atrocities, and to determine specific steps to coordinate and enhance those capacities; and

(B) to develop and communicate a whole of government approach and policy to anticipate, prevent, and mitigate acts of genocide and other mass atrocities;

(5) urges the Secretary of State, working closely with the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development—

(A) to ensure that all relevant officers of the Foreign Service and particularly those deploying to areas undergoing significant conflict or considered to be at risk of significant conflict, genocide, and other mass atrocities receive appropriate advanced training in early warning and conflict prevention, mitigation, and resolution;

(B) to determine appropriate leadership, structure, programs, and mechanisms within the Department of State and the United States Agency for International Development that can enhance efforts to prevent genocide and other mass atrocities; and

(C) to include relevant recommendations for enhancing civilian capacities to help prevent and mitigate genocide and mass atrocities in the upcoming Quadrennial Diplomacy and Development Review;

(6) urges the Secretary of the Treasury, working in consultation with the Secretary of State, to review how sanctions and other financial tools could be used against state and commercial actors found to be directly supporting or enabling genocides and mass atrocities;

(7) recognizes the importance of flexible contingency crisis funding to enable United States civilian agencies to respond quickly to help prevent and mitigate crises that could lead to significant armed conflict, genocide, and other mass atrocities;

(8) urges the Secretary of Defense to conduct an analysis of the doctrine, organization, training, material, leadership, personnel, and facilities required to prevent and respond to genocide and mass atrocities;

(9) encourages the Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense to work with the relevant congressional committees to ensure that a priority goal of all United States security assistance and training is to support legitimate, accountable security forces committed to upholding the sovereign responsibility to protect civilian populations from violence, especially genocide and other mass atrocities;

(10) supports efforts by the United States Government to provide logistical, communications, and intelligence support, as appropriate, to assist multilateral diplomatic efforts and peace operations in preventing mass atrocities and protecting civilians;

(11) calls on other members of the international community to increase their support for multilateral diplomatic efforts and peace operations to more effectively prevent mass atrocities and protect civilians;

(12) encourages the Secretary of State to work closely with regional and international organizations, the United Nations Special Adviser for the Prevention of Genocide, and civil society experts to develop and expand multilateral mechanisms for early warning, information sharing, and rapid response diplomacy for the prevention of genocide and other mass atrocities; and

(13) commits to calling attention to areas at risk of genocide and other mass atrocities and ensuring that the United States Government has the tools and resources to enable its efforts to prevent genocide and mass atrocities.

SA 4604. Mr. REID (for Mr. LEVIN (for himself and Mr. LUGAR)) proposed an amendment to the resolution S. Res. 322, expressing the sense of the Senate on religious minorities in Iraq; as follows:

Strike all after the resolving clause and insert the following: That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the United States remains deeply concerned about the plight of vulnerable religious minorities of Iraq;

(2) the United States Government and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq should urge the Government of Iraq to enhance security at places of worship in Iraq, particularly where religious minorities are known to be at risk;

(3) the United States Government should continue to work with the Government of Iraq to ensure that members of ethnic and religious minorities communities in Iraq—

(A) suffer no discrimination in recruitment, employment, or advancement in the Iraqi police and security forces; and

(B) while employed in the Iraqi police and security forces, where appropriate, be assigned to their locations of origin, rather than being transferred to other areas;

(4) the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan regional government should work towards a peaceful and timely resolution of disputes over territories, particularly those where many religious communities reside;

(5) the United States Government and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq should urge the Government of Iraq to—

(A) implement in full those provisions of the Constitution of Iraq that provide protections for the individual rights to freedom of thought, conscience, religion, and belief and protections for religious minorities to enjoy their culture and language and practice their religion; and

(B) reduce onerous registration requirements so that smaller religious groups are not disadvantaged in registering;

(6) the Government of Iraq should take affirmative measures to reverse the legal, political, and economic marginalization of religious minorities in Iraq;

(7) the United States Government should assist, consistent with local aspirations and developmental needs, ethnic and religious minorities in Iraq to organize themselves civically and politically to effectively convey their concerns to government;

(8) the United States Government should continue to fund capacity-building programs for the Iraqi Ministry of Human Rights and the independent national Human Rights Commission, and should continue to help reconstitute the minorities committee to make it an effective voice for Iraqi minorities;

(9) the Government of Iraq should direct the Iraqi Ministry of Human Rights to investigate and issue a public report on abuses against and the marginalization of minority communities in Iraq and make recommendations to address such abuses; and

(10) the United States Government should encourage the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan Regional Government to protect the linguistic and cultural heritage, religious beliefs, and ethnic and religious identities of minority groups, in particular those living in the Nineveh Plain.

SA 4605. Mr. REID (for Mr. LEVIN (for himself and Mr. LUGAR)) proposed an amendment to the resolution S. Res. 322, expressing the sense of the Senate on religious minorities in Iraq; as follows:

Strike the preamble and insert the following:

Whereas the territory of Iraq, the land of Mesopotamia, has millennia of rich cultural and religious history;

Whereas the Sumerians, Babylonians, and Assyrians thrived within what are now the borders of Iraq;

Whereas the biblical patriarch Abraham was born in Ur, King Hammurabi ruled from Babylon, and Imam Ali, the founder of Shiite Islam, died in Kufa;

Whereas during the 35-year rule of the Baath Party and Saddam Hussein, and despite the Provisional Constitution of 1968 that provided for individual religious freedom in Iraq, the Government of Iraq severely limited freedom of religion, especially for religious minorities, and sought to exploit religious differences for political purposes, leading the United States Government to designate Iraq as a ''country of particular concern'' under the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998 (Public Law 105–292) because of systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom;

Whereas members of religious minority communities of Iraq, both those who have been forced to flee the homeland in which their ancestors have lived for thousands of years and those who remain in Iraq, are committed to maintaining their presence in Iraq and keeping alive their communities' cultures, heritage, and religions, but threats against them jeopardize the future of Iraq as a diverse, pluralistic, and free society;

Whereas despite the reduction in violence in Iraq in recent years, serious threats to religious freedom remain, including religiously motivated violence directed at vulnerable religious minorities, their leaders, and their holy sites, including Chaldeans, Syriacs, Assyrians, Armenians and other Christians, Sabean Mandeans, Yeazidis, Baha'is, Kaka'is, Jews, and Shi'a Shabak;

Whereas the March 2010 Report on Human Rights issued by the Department of State identifies ''insurgent and extremist violence, coupled with weak government performance in upholding the rule of law'' resulting in ''widespread and severe human rights abuses'' as among the significant and continuing human rights problems in Iraq;

Whereas although violence has impacted all aspects of society in Iraq, there have been alarming levels of religiously motivated violence in Iraq in recent years;

Whereas the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom continues to recommend that the Secretary of State designate Iraq as a ''country of particular concern'' under the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998, because of the systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom in Iraq;

Whereas scores of holy sites in Iraq have been bombed since 2004;

Whereas members of small religious minority communities in Iraq do not have militia or tribal structures to defend them, often receive inadequate official protection, and are legally, politically, and economically marginalized;

Whereas in the Nineveh and Kirkuk governorates, where control is disputed between the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan regional government, religious minorities have been targeted for abuse, violence, and discrimination;

Whereas before 1951, non-Muslims comprised some 6 percent of the population of Iraq, with Jews as the oldest and largest of these communities, tracing back to the Babylonian captivity of the sixth century BCE, but today the Jewish community in Iraq numbers in the single digits and essentially lives in hiding;

Whereas religious minorities in Iraq, who made up about 3 percent of the population of Iraq in 2003, make up a disproportionately high percentage of registered Iraqi refugees;

Whereas the number of Christians in Iraq was approximately 1,400,000 according to the 1987 Iraqi census but, according to the 2009 Report on International Religious Freedom issued by the Department of State, may now number only 500,000 to 600,000;

Whereas the United States is gravely concerned about the viability of the indigenous Christian communities of Iraq and other religious minority communities, and the possible disappearance of their ancient languages, culture, and heritage;

Whereas the Sabean Mandean community in Iraq reports that almost 90 percent of its members have fled Iraq, leaving only about 3,500 to 5,000 Mandeans in Iraq as of 2009;

Whereas the Baha'i faith, estimated to have fewer than 2,000 adherents in Iraq, remains prohibited in Iraq under a 1970 law;

Whereas although hundreds of thousands of Iraqi refugees and internally displaced persons have returned to their areas of origin, the numbers of religious minority returnees to Iraq are disproportionately low; and

Whereas members of religious minority communities of Iraq in diaspora have organized to support their communities in Iraq in ways that also benefit the whole of Iraq society by encouraging the rule of law, enhanced security, employment, education and health services: Now therefore be it

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the President's nominee to be the next Director of National Intelligence, DNI—GEN James Clapper, U.S. Air Force, Lieutenant General retired.

I am pleased his confirmation will be approved by unanimous consent.

General Clapper is well qualified to be the Director of National Intelligence. He has as much experience in the intelligence profession as anyone serving in the government today.

He has held a wide range of positions that have prepared him for this position, in the U.S. military, as the head of two intelligence agencies, and in the private sector. General Clapper is currently the highest ranking intelligence official in the Department of Defense, serving as the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence.

He has clearly expressed his views on the position of the DNI and described how he intends to carry out those views.

Last week, the Senate Intelligence Committee reported out his nomination on a rollcall vote of 15–0.

Not a single objection that was raised in the Senate following the committee's unanimous vote was related to the nominee, his background, his views, or how he intends to serve.

And now I am pleased to report that those objections have been worked out and General Clapper will be approved by unanimous consent.

Let me take a few minutes and describe the position to which General Clapper has been nominated, the Director of National Intelligence, or DNI.

The DNI position was first seriously considered by the so-called ''Joint Inquiry'' into the attacks of September 11, 2001—a joint panel of the Senate and House Intelligence Committees that studied the events leading to the attacks of 9/11 and the structural problems in the U.S. Government that led to our failure to prevent them.

The Joint Inquiry concluded that the Intelligence Community—the collection of intelligence agencies and offices across the Federal Government—could not be led by the same person who was simultaneously serving as the Director of the CIA.

This congressional panel recommended, in December 2002, that the National Security Act be amended ''to create and sufficiently staff a statutory Director of National Intelligence who shall be the President's principal advisor on intelligence and shall have the full range of management, budgetary and personnel responsibilities needed to make the entire U.S. Intelligence Community operate as a coherent whole.''

Two years later, the 9/11 Commission, led by former Governor Tom Kean and former Congressman Lee Hamilton, came to the same conclusion and recommended the creation of a National Intelligence Director to ''manage the national intelligence program and oversee the agencies that contribute to it.''

A few months later, in December 2004, the Congress passed the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act, IRTPA, that created the position of DNI.

By statute, the position of the Director of National Intelligence is the senior-most intelligence position in the U.S. Government. The DNI is, under the law:

The head of the 16 different offices and agencies that make up the U.S. intelligence community;

The principal advisor to the President on intelligence matters; and

The official in charge of developing the intelligence budget.

Despite that expansive charge, the first 5 years with a Director of National Intelligence at the helm of the intelligence community have been unsteady times. There have been three Directors in 5 years: Ambassador John Negroponte, ADM Mike McConnell, and ADM Dennis Blair.

It is the strong hope of the Senate Intelligence Committee that General Clapper will provide some stability to the office and set it on a more stable path.

He was asked about this in the committee's confirmation hearing. Senator WHITEHOUSE asked General Clapper if he intended to stick around. General Clapper responded ''Yes, sir, I will. I wouldn't take this on without thinking about that. And I do think my experience has been, it does take time to bring these changes about.''

And certainly changes are needed. I have discussed with General Clapper my concern that the position of DNI could be considered the job of a coordinator someone—who makes sure the 16 agencies are carrying out their roles and working harmoniously.

But that was not what the job was designed to be, and that isn't going to be sufficient to put in place the changes we need. The Director needs to set priorities, develop the budget accordingly, oversee agencies' implementation, and make changes when problems or gaps arise. These include:

Making sure the systems and personnel are in place to make sure the dots are connected before a terrorist attack;

Ensuring there is sufficient intelligence collected by human and technical means so that decisionmakers have an accurate and full set of facts before setting policies—for example, on sending troops to war;

Reviewing intelligence programs and activities to make sure they fit squarely within the Constitution and the law, and that Congress is provided with the information it requires to conduct independent oversight; and

Managing the intelligence budget to make sure it is spent without waste, abuse, or inappropriate duplication.

These are not the jobs of a coordinator; they are the jobs of a Director. General Clapper recognizes these as the obligations of the DNI.

The last thing I would like to note on the position of the DNI is its statutory authorities, and the limits placed on them.

In particular, the DNI is constrained from directing 15 of the 16 agencies and offices of the intelligence community, because they reside in various Federal departments. The Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, IRTPA, states that in carrying out his responsibilities, the DNI may not ''abrogate'' the statutory responsibilities of Cabinet Secretaries. This is often interpreted to prevent centralized direction.

The 16th agency, the CIA, is not housed within a department, but it, too, has demonstrated its ability to thwart the DNI's directives it dislikes by importuning the White House.

We understand from former officials in the DNI's office that both problems have greatly frustrated past DNIs' ability to lead.

General Clapper has served on the DNI's executive committee under Directors McConnell and Blair. He has seen firsthand how this tension between the DNI's direction and the views of a Cabinet Secretary has played out.

Indeed, General Clapper has been very forthright that as the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence since 2007, part of his responsibility has been to uphold and support the interests of the Secretary of Defense.

But he has also assured the Intelligence Committee that, if confirmed, this would change. During his confirmation hearing, General Clapper said, ''I have been, for the last three years, the Undersecretary of Defense for Intelligence. And I considered it my responsibility and my obligation to defend and protect the secretary's authorities and prerogatives to the maximum extent I could. If I were confirmed as the DNI, I will be equally assiduous in ensuring that the DNI's prerogatives and authorities are protected and advanced.''

Even so, General Clapper has a track record of taking concrete steps to ensure that the interests of the Department of Defense and the intelligence community are synchronized, and both are enhanced to improve our national security.

What is more, General Clapper is perhaps unique in that he has strong relationships with the President and the national security team at the White House, the Secretary of Defense, and the CIA Director—the three most important relationships for a DNI to be successful.

So in short, I believe that General Clapper will bring to the position of the DNI the right approach, skills, and gravitas to make this work.

I will continue to work with him, like the committee has worked with past Directors, to make changes in the law to give him the authorities and flexibility that he needs.

The Senate has just passed unanimously a revised version of the fiscal year 2010 Intelligence Authorization Act. That bill includes 10 provisions to strengthen the DNI's ability to run his office and direct the intelligence community. Eight of those ten provisions were requested by this administration or the last one, and I will continue to push to get this important bill signed into law soon.

Let me say a few words now about General Clapper himself.

General Clapper has served in the intelligence field for 46 years, almost all of which was in military and government service.

His 32 years of military service in the U.S. Air Force included wartime operations, flying 72 combat support missions over Laos and Cambodia and being a wing commander.

He has served as the Director of Intelligence, the J–2, for three warfighting commands—at U.S. Forces Korea, the Pacific Command, and the Strategic Air Command.

In the 1990s, Lieutenant General Clapper led the Defense Intelligence Agency, DIA, one of the biggest and most complex of the agencies in the intelligence community.

He retired from active duty in 1995 after this position and worked in the private sector until he was asked to return to government service and lead the National Imagery and Mapping Agency, NIMA—since renamed the National Geospatial Intelligence Agency, NGA. He led NGA for 5 years—an unusually long tenure heading an intelligence agency—until a difference of opinion with Secretary Rumsfeld cost him his job in 2006—and provided a notable example of General Clapper's willingness to ''speak truth to power.''

In 2007, General Clapper once again put aside the benefits of a private life and agreed to serve under Secretary Gates as the Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence.

As he said in his confirmation hearing, the nomination to be DNI ''was an unexpected turn of events. I'm in my third tour back in the government, and my plan was to walk out of the Pentagon about a millisecond after Secretary Gates. I had no plan or inkling to take on another position.''

Nonetheless, he has agreed to take on this challenging and somewhat thankless position.

General Clapper was nominated by the President on June 7, 2010. He answered more than 150 tailored pre-hearing questions in addition to our standard questionnaire and appeared before a lengthy confirmation hearing on July 20.

After the hearing, he answered another 79 questions for the record and appeared in a subsequent closed session meeting with four members of the committee who had additional questions.

If there were questions or doubts about his nomination, they have been answered. In fact, when General Clapper was nominated, I had my doubts about having another person in this position with a military background and whether he viewed the position of DNI as a coordinator or a director.

My concerns have been allayed. I am confident that he will be mindful of the important intelligence needs of the military and the Department of Defense, but he will be independent of Pentagon interests. He understands that the responsibility of the DNI is to provide strategic intelligence to policymakers and that the job requires more than simple coordination.

On July 29, the Intelligence Committee voted out General Clapper's nomination on a roll call vote of 15 to 0.

The committee has expressed its full support of General Clapper. He has excellent credentials, support from the White House and other key intelligence officials, and will be a strong Director of the Intelligence Community.

I congratulate General Clapper on his confirmation.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, as a member of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, I voted in support of the confirmation of General Clapper to be Director of National Intelligence. He is clearly qualified for the position and his extensive experience at various intelligence agencies and at the Pentagon should give him a clear sense of the challenges ahead.

Over the course of the confirmation process, General Clapper provided encouraging responses on a number of issues. He expressed clear support for the declassification of the top-line intelligence budget, which would allow for the establishment of a separate intelligence budget. This reform, which was recommended by the 9/11 Commission and passed by the Senate, would improve transparency, accountability and oversight. He also agreed with the principle that the public should be made aware of secret interpretations of law. Finally, in a welcome shift from the previous DNI, General Clapper expressed openness to recommendations provided by an independent commission related to the integration of the intelligence community and those in the U.S. Government who collect information openly. Legislation to create this commission has also passed the Senate.

On other issues, General Clapper's responses were less encouraging. He indicated that he would be a ''zealous advocate'' for full notification of the committee, and I have no reason to doubt that. But, when asked about statutory reporting requirements under the National Security Act, he cited an incorrect interpretation of the law, specifically the assertion that the ''Gang of Eight'' provision that appears only in the covert action section could apply to other intelligence activities. As DNI, General Clapper will be responsible for adhering to the law, regardless of the views of counsel.

I am also concerned about his responses to questions on the PATRIOT Act, in which he described proposed safeguards on National Security Letter authorities as ''crippling.'' As he becomes familiar with these and other surveillance authorities, and the abuses associated with them, I hope that he will become more open to efforts to protect the privacy and civil liberties of Americans.

General Clapper has testified that the DNI already has sufficient authorities, and I agree that the ODNI should not be expanded for its own sake. But there are specific, identifiable problems with how the intelligence community spends taxpayer dollars which are addressed in provisions of the intelligence authorization bill and my Control Spending Now legislation. While I will continue to fight for those provisions, I have asked General Clapper to tackle these issues with or without new statutory authorities. I will also continue to seek greater access by the GAO to the intelligence community, an issue on which General Clapper has expressed some flexibility.

Finally, General Clapper is in a unique position to address one of the great failings of intelligence reform thus far—the extent to which intelligence and intelligence-related activities are conducted by the military, away from the oversight of the congressional intelligence committees. In some cases, such as cybersecurity operations, I remain concerned about the division of authorities but have been kept reasonably informed. In other cases, specifically the Department of Defense's use of ''Section 1208'' authorities to assist foreign forces and irregular groups supporting counterterrorism operations around the world, I have generally been stonewalled. General Clapper has stated that, as DNI, these activities will not be his responsibility. But the DNI, particularly one with General Clapper's background, should be assertive in ensuring that the intelligence community and the military are operating in a coordinated fashion under coherent and consistent policies, and that the congressional intelligence committees are kept fully informed of all relevant programs and operations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at a time to be determined by the majority leader, following consultation with the Republican leader, the Senate proceed to executive session and consider Calendar No. 886, Kimberly Mueller to be a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of California; that there be 1 hour of debate with respect to the nomination, with the time equally divided and controlled between Senators LEAHY and SESSIONS or their designees; that upon the use or yielding back of time, the Senate proceed to vote on confirmation of the nomination; that upon confirmation, the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table; the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MCCONNELL. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, we just confirmed 47 nominations plus 3 district court judges, a circuit court judge, and we will continue to work on the balance of these when we return.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I understand there has just been an agreement reached and entered into the RECORD regarding a number of appointments that were on the Executive Calendar. I understand further that—in fact, I discovered just recently—there is a rule anybody who is pending on the Executive Calendar when there is a recess of longer than 30 days needs to be resubmitted.

There are a number of judges who, applying that rule and the order, would need to be resubmitted by the President. Two of them, as I understand it, are district judges. What I would like to do is ask unanimous consent regarding those two. I know there is nobody from the minority party on the floor of the Senate right now, so I am not going to ask that unanimous consent and take advantage of the lack of their presence on the floor. But I would like to ask that someone come to the floor so I may ask unanimous consent, as to district court judges who are pending on the Executive Calendar, that the application of that rule be waived for this recess.

These are names that are going to be resubmitted anyway. It adds nothing to the process other than just an extra, sort of deliberate and unnecessary hassle to require those submission and committee procedures to be replayed.

It is also my understanding there has been a tradition in this body that while circuit court nominees are considered what one might call, for better or worse, political fair game, there has been a tradition of courtesy and comity regarding district court judges who sit in the Senator's home State when both of the home State Senators have agreed to and accepted the President's recommendations and supported it, given their blue slip to the committee and so forth.

So I guess I will put the Senate back into a quorum call so that I can discuss this with my colleagues on the other side. But I hope very much that as a personal courtesy they would accept that amendment to the order that was just entered, which I believe is consistent with the traditions and practices of the Senate.

For now I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, I am in an interesting predicament. I am informed there is no one from the minority party in town; this being the end of session, everybody has headed home. Therefore, there is no one around to respond to my unanimous consent request.

I will confess, I am inclined to take advantage of this moment by propounding the unanimous consent, which I would obviously win. The Presiding Officer would grant the order, since there would be no objection.

But I also believe that to do so would be inconsistent with the courtesies and the traditions of the Senate, and so I will not take that step at this time. But it is frustrating to be in this position of holding myself back out of respect for the traditions and courtesies of the Senate, when I feel that, at the moment, I am on the losing end of a violation of the courtesies and the traditions of the Senate.

So by the rule of what is good for the goose, my inclination to take advantage of this moment is reinforced. But I have great respect for this body, and I think the tradition that one does not propound unanimous consent requests without a member of the minority party present to object or otherwise respond or vice versa is one that merits respect.

Notwithstanding the predicament I find myself in, let me just say, in that absence of courtesy that has brought me here, I will yield the floor and we can return to this question when the Senate resumes. But for any who are listening, I think we are taking a step that some may regret, when the tradition of respect for the judgment of the home State Senators regarding a district court judge in their home State is disregarded in this way.

I will say no more. I will follow up when we return to session.

I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I am pleased to be here today to speak about the passage of a bill that is a top priority for the disability community—Rosa's Law. As always, I have greatly appreciated the opportunity to work with Senator MIKULSKI on this bill. I would like to thank her for her leadership and her commitment to this issue.

The bill is simple in nature but profound in what it will do when it is enacted. Rosa's Law will change the phrase ''mentally retarded'' to ''an individual with an intellectual disability'' in all of the laws that fall under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, HELP, without negatively impinging or expanding upon the rights, services, benefits, or educational opportunities that people with this diagnosis are entitled to. It will make a greatly needed change that should have been made well before today.

Some people will ask why this bill is so important and why it is needed. They will wonder if Congress has more important work to do than to change a few words in our laws for the sake of being politically correct. In response, I would share what Rosa's brother Nick said to the Maryland General Assembly. ''What you call people is how you treat them. What you call my sister is how you will treat her. If you believe she's 'retarded' it invites taunting, stigma. It invites bullying and it also invites the slammed doors of being treated with respect and dignity.''

For far too long we have used hurtful words like ''mental retardation'' or ''MR'' in our Federal statutes to refer to those who are living with intellectual disabilities. While the way people feel is important, the way people are treated is equally important. When words such as ''MR'' are used to describe a person, it dehumanizes them, and as Nick said, it leads to a situation in which some people are not treated with the dignity and respect they deserve.

This is not the first time Congress has taken similar action. Our laws once referred to people with intellectual disabilities with terms like ''feeble minded'' and other language that I cannot bear to say. Back then we thought that was the appropriate language to use until we switched to using the term ''MR.'' Forty years later, we are taking another big step and replacing ''MR'' with ''intellectual disability.''

This change is already taking place across the country with organizations like the American Association on Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities which dropped the term ''MR'' from its name. Likewise, The Arc of the United States has stopped using this archaic terminology and dropped the term from their agency name. The American Psychiatric Association, which publishes the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, has already voted to use the term ''Intellectual Disability'' in the next publication of their manual. Internationally, the World Health Organization uses the term ''intellectual disability.''

This bill will start the process of change in the Federal Government and make such terminology consistent. The President's Committee on Mental Retardation was changed by executive order so it is now the Committee on Individuals with Intellectual Disabilities. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention also uses the term ''intellectual disability.'' After the House passes this bill it will become law and begin a chain of events that I hope will lead to the Finance Committee's action on this matter so we can see similar changes in Medicaid and Social Security programs.

In 1963, the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. said, ''I have a dream that my four children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.'' That same concept rings true for people with intellectual disabilities—that they will also be judged by who they are and not by a label that has been forced upon them. That's the beauty and simplicity of this bill—and why it is so important.

Finally, there are a number of people I would like to thank for their assistance with passing this bill out of the Senate. First, on my staff I would like to thank Frank Macchiarola, HELP Committee staff director, Greg Dean, HELP Committee general counsel, Beth Buehlmann, education office staff director, and Aaron Bishop, professional staff member on disability policy for their determination and hard work on this bill. I always say that I have the best staff in Congress and I couldn't have done it without them. I would also like to thank Mario Cardona with Senator MIKULSKI's office and Lee Perselay and Michael Gamel-McCormick, with Senator HARKIN's office, for their leadership and effort to get this bill through the Senate, and for working with us in a true bipartisan fashion. I would also like to thank Pattie DeLoatche and Karen LaMontagne from Senator HATCH's office, Karen McCarthy from Senator MURKOWSKI's office, and David Cleary from Senator ALEXANDER's office for their assistance with putting this bill together, Liz King with Legislative Counsel for drafting the bill, and Cassandra Foley from the Congressional Research Service for her work.

Next, the bill would not have been a success without the work of so many families and groups. We all need to thank Rosa Marcellino, her brother Nick and the entire Marcellino family for their strength, determination, and willingness to lead, teach and for not being afraid to voice their opinion and say that this just hasn't been right.

While this bill may not change the whole world, it will make the world a little better, more hospitable place for us and for the entire disability community.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee-reported substitute amendment be agreed to, the bill, as amended, be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and that any statements related to the matter be printed in the RECORD.

S. 1674

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Improving Access to Clinical Trials Act of 2009''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Advances in medicine depend on clinical trial research conducted at public and private research institutions across the United States.

(2) The challenges associated with enrolling participants in clinical research studies are especially difficult for studies that evaluate treatments for rare diseases and conditions (defined by the Orphan Drug Act as a disease or condition affecting fewer than 200,000 Americans), where the available number of willing and able research participants may be very small.

(3) In accordance with ethical standards established by the National Institutes of Health, sponsors of clinical research may provide payments to trial participants for out-of-pocket costs associated with trial enrollment and for the time and commitment demanded by those who participate in a study. When offering compensation, clinical trial sponsors are required to provide such payments to all participants.

(4) The offer of payment for research participation may pose a barrier to trial enrollment when such payments threaten the eligibility of clinical trial participants for Supplemental Security Income and Medicaid benefits.

(5) With a small number of potential trial participants and the possible loss of Supplemental Security Income and Medicaid benefits for many who wish to participate, clinical trial research for rare diseases and conditions becomes exceptionally difficult and may hinder research on new treatments and potential cures for these rare diseases and conditions.

SEC. 3. EXCLUSION FOR COMPENSATION FOR PARTICIPATION IN CLINICAL TRIALS FOR RARE DISEASES OR CONDITIONS.

(a) EXCLUSION FROM INCOME.—Section 1612(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1382a(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''and'' at the end of paragraph (24);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (25) and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(26) the first $2,000 received during a calendar year by such individual (or such spouse) as compensation for participation in a clinical trial involving research and testing of treatments for a rare disease or condition (as defined in section 5(b)(2) of the Orphan Drug Act), but only if the clinical trial—

''(A) has been reviewed and approved by an institutional review board that is established—

''(i) to protect the rights and welfare of human subjects participating in scientific research; and

''(ii) in accord with the requirements under part 46 of title 45, Code of Federal Regulations; and

''(B) meets the standards for protection of human subjects as provided under part 46 of title 45, Code of Federal Regulations.''.

(b) EXCLUSION FROM RESOURCES.—Section 1613(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1382b(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''and'' at the end of paragraph (15);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (16) and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (16) the following:

''(17) any amount received by such individual (or such spouse) which is excluded from income under section 1612(b)(26) (relating to compensation for participation in a clinical trial involving research and testing of treatments for a rare disease or condition).''.

(c) MEDICAID EXCLUSION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1902(e) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(e)), is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(14) EXCLUSION OF COMPENSATION FOR PARTICIPATION IN A CLINICAL TRIAL FOR TESTING OF TREATMENTS FOR A RARE DISEASE OR CONDITION.—The first $2,000 received by an individual (who has attained 19 years of age) as compensation for participation in a clinical trial meeting the requirements of section 1612(b)(26) shall be disregarded for purposes of determining the income eligibility of such individual for medical assistance under the State plan or any waiver of such plan.''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1902(a)(17) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(17)) is amended by inserting ''(e)(14),'' before ''(l)(3)''.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the date that is the earlier of—

(1) the effective date of final regulations promulgated by the Commissioner of Social Security to carry out this section and such amendments; or

(2) 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) SUNSET PROVISION.—This Act and the amendments made by this Act are repealed on the date that is 5 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4. STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 36 months after the effective date of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to evaluate the impact of this Act on enrollment of individuals who receive Supplemental Security Income benefits under title XVI of the Social Security Act (referred to in this section as ''SSI beneficiaries'') in clinical trials for rare diseases or conditions. Such study shall include an analysis of the following:

(1) The percentage of enrollees in clinical trials for rare diseases or conditions who were SSI beneficiaries during the 3-year period prior to the effective date of this Act as compared to such percentage during the 3-year period after the effective date of this Act.

(2) The range and average amount of compensation provided to SSI beneficiaries who participated in clinical trials for rare diseases or conditions.

S. RES. 411

Whereas hardwood trees grown in the United States are an abundant, sustainable, and legal resource, as documented annually by the Forest Inventory and Analysis Program of the Forest Service;

Whereas, despite development pressure and cropland needs, Department of Agriculture data show that the inventory of United States hardwood has more than doubled over the past 50 years;

Whereas the Department of Agriculture reports that annual United States hardwood growth exceeds hardwood removals by a significant margin of 1.9 to 1, and net annual growth has exceeded removals continuously since 1952;

Whereas the World Bank ranks the United States in the top 10 percent of all countries for government effectiveness, regulatory quality, and rule of law with respect to hardwood resources;

Whereas United States hardwoods have been awarded the highest conservation crop rating available under the Department of Agriculture Environmental Benefits Index;

Whereas United States hardwoods are net absorbers of carbon and are widely recognized to be critical to reducing the United States carbon footprint;

Whereas United States hardwoods are a valuable raw material that, when used properly, provide an incentive for landowners to maintain their land in a forested condition rather than clearing the land for development or other alternative land use;

Whereas United States hardwoods are a renewable resource and bio-based material;

Whereas United States hardwoods are recyclable, and hardwoods used in construction can often be restored and reused in later construction;

Whereas United States hardwoods are grown primarily in those States located along or east of the Mississippi River and in the Pacific Northwest, but, with a presence in every State, the hardwood industry is 1 of the major sources of economic activity and sustenance in many rural communities;

Whereas United States hardwoods are grown by thousands of small family landowners who may harvest trees only once or twice in a generation; and

Whereas United States hardwoods and the products derived from United States hardwoods are prized throughout the world as a superior and long-lasting building material: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes that United States hardwoods are an abundant, sustainable, and legal resource under United States law; and

(2) urges that United States hardwoods and products derived from United States hardwoods should be given full consideration in any program to promote construction of environmentally preferable commercial, public, or private buildings.

Whereas Manute Bol traveled to the United States in 1983 and played college basketball at the University of Bridgeport during the 1984–1985 season;

Whereas Manute Bol began his National Basketball Assocation (NBA) career with the Washington Bullets in 1985, setting the rookie shot-blocking record;

Whereas Manute Bol played in the NBA for 10 years, setting numerous shot-blocking records;

Whereas, after beginning his career in the NBA, Manute Bol used his fame and fortune to raise funding and awareness for the people of Sudan;

Whereas Manute Bol was admitted to the United States as a religious refugee and lost over 250 members of his extended family to a civil war rife with religious tensions, but nevertheless spent his life working for reconciliation between Christians and Muslims in Sudan;

Whereas Manute Bol's last project to foster reconciliation was to build 41 schools for Christians and Muslims to learn and live together in the spirit of reconciliation;

Whereas Manute Bol constantly put himself in danger to bring peace and stability to Sudan, including by flying into war zones and visiting refugee camps that were targeted for aerial attack;

Whereas, on Manute Bol's last humanitarian visit to Sudan, the President of Southern Sudan, Salva Kiir, requested that Manute Bol extend his visit to make appearances at Sudan's national election and use his influence to counter corruption, which ultimately led to the deterioration of his health and his sudden death;

Whereas Manute Bol advocated for human rights in Sudan by appearing before Congress and lobbying Members of Congress, thus positively influencing United States foreign policy on Sudan;

Whereas, after Manute Bol retired, he resided in West Hartford, Connecticut, and Olathe, Kansas;

Whereas Manute Bol died at the age of 47 on June 19, 2010; and

Whereas Manute Bol's perseverance in his advocacy for Sudan affected the lives of thousands, and possibly millions, of people in Sudan: Now, therefore, be it

Whereas fetal alcohol spectrum disorders are the leading cause of cognitive disability in western civilization, including the United States, and are 100 percent preventable;

Whereas fetal alcohol spectrum disorders are a major cause of numerous social disorders, including learning disabilities, school failure, juvenile delinquency, homelessness, unemployment, mental illness, and crime;

Whereas the incidence rate of fetal alcohol syndrome is estimated at 1 out of 500 live births and the incidence rate of fetal alcohol spectrum disorders is estimated at 1 out of every 100 live births;

Whereas although the economic costs of fetal alcohol spectrum disorders are difficult to estimate, the cost of fetal alcohol syndrome alone in the United States was $6,000,000,000 in 2007, and it is estimated that each individual with fetal alcohol syndrome will cost taxpayers of the United States between $860,000 and $4,000,000 during the lifetime of each such individual;

Whereas in February 1999, a small group of parents of children who suffer from fetal alcohol spectrum disorders came together with the hope that in 1 magic moment the world could be made aware of the devastating consequences of alcohol consumption during pregnancy;

Whereas the first International Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Awareness Day was observed on September 9, 1999;

AMENDMENT NO. 4604

(Purpose: In the nature of a substitute to the resolution)

Strike all after the resolving clause and insert the following: That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the United States remains deeply concerned about the plight of vulnerable religious minorities of Iraq;

(2) the United States Government and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq should urge the Government of Iraq to enhance security at places of worship in Iraq, particularly where religious minorities are known to be at risk;

(3) the United States Government should continue to work with the Government of Iraq to ensure that members of ethnic and religious minorities communities in Iraq—

(A) suffer no discrimination in recruitment, employment, or advancement in the Iraqi police and security forces; and

(B) while employed in the Iraqi police and security forces, where appropriate, be assigned to their locations of origin, rather than being transferred to other areas;

(4) the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan regional government should work towards a peaceful and timely resolution of disputes over territories, particularly those where many religious communities reside;

(5) the United States Government and the United Nations Assistance Mission for Iraq should urge the Government of Iraq to—

(A) implement in full those provisions of the Constitution of Iraq that provide protections for the individual rights to freedom of thought, conscience, religion, and belief and protections for religious minorities to enjoy their culture and language and practice their religion; and

(B) reduce onerous registration requirements so that smaller religious groups are not disadvantaged in registering;

(6) the Government of Iraq should take affirmative measures to reverse the legal, political, and economic marginalization of religious minorities in Iraq;

(7) the United States Government should assist, consistent with local aspirations and developmental needs, ethnic and religious minorities in Iraq to organize themselves civically and politically to effectively convey their concerns to government;

(8) the United States Government should continue to fund capacity-building programs for the Iraqi Ministry of Human Rights and the independent national Human Rights Commission, and should continue to help reconstitute the minorities committee to make it an effective voice for Iraqi minorities;

(9) the Government of Iraq should direct the Iraqi Ministry of Human Rights to investigate and issue a public report on abuses against and the marginalization of minority communities in Iraq and make recommendations to address such abuses; and

(10) the United States Government should encourage the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan Regional Government to protect the linguistic and cultural heritage, religious beliefs, and ethnic and religious identities of minority groups, in particular those living in the Nineveh Plain.

The amendment (No. 4605) was agreed to, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4605

(Purpose: In the nature of a substitute to the preamble)

Strike the preamble and insert the following:

Whereas the territory of Iraq, the land of Mesopotamia, has millennia of rich cultural and religious history;

Whereas the Sumerians, Babylonians, and Assyrians thrived within what are now the borders of Iraq;

Whereas the biblical patriarch Abraham was born in Ur, King Hammurabi ruled from Babylon, and Imam Ali, the founder of Shiite Islam, died in Kufa;

Whereas during the 35-year rule of the Baath Party and Saddam Hussein, and despite the Provisional Constitution of 1968 that provided for individual religious freedom in Iraq, the Government of Iraq severely limited freedom of religion, especially for religious minorities, and sought to exploit religious differences for political purposes, leading the United States Government to designate Iraq as a ''country of particular concern'' under the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998 (Public Law 105–292) because of systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom;

Whereas members of religious minority communities of Iraq, both those who have been forced to flee the homeland in which their ancestors have lived for thousands of years and those who remain in Iraq, are committed to maintaining their presence in Iraq and keeping alive their communities' cultures, heritage, and religions, but threats against them jeopardize the future of Iraq as a diverse, pluralistic, and free society;

Whereas despite the reduction in violence in Iraq in recent years, serious threats to religious freedom remain, including religiously motivated violence directed at vulnerable religious minorities, their leaders, and their holy sites, including Chaldeans, Syriacs, Assyrians, Armenians and other Christians, Sabean Mandeans, Yeazidis, Baha'is, Kaka'is, Jews, and Shi'a Shabak;

Whereas the March 2010 Report on Human Rights issued by the Department of State identifies ''insurgent and extremist violence, coupled with weak government performance in upholding the rule of law'' resulting in ''widespread and severe human rights abuses'' as among the significant and continuing human rights problems in Iraq;

Whereas although violence has impacted all aspects of society in Iraq, there have been alarming levels of religiously motivated violence in Iraq in recent years;

Whereas the United States Commission on International Religious Freedom continues to recommend that the Secretary of State designate Iraq as a ''country of particular concern'' under the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998, because of the systematic, ongoing, egregious violations of religious freedom in Iraq;

Whereas scores of holy sites in Iraq have been bombed since 2004;

Whereas members of small religious minority communities in Iraq do not have militia or tribal structures to defend them, often receive inadequate official protection, and are legally, politically, and economically marginalized;

Whereas in the Nineveh and Kirkuk governorates, where control is disputed between the Government of Iraq and the Kurdistan regional government, religious minorities have been targeted for abuse, violence, and discrimination;

Whereas before 1951, non-Muslims comprised some 6 percent of the population of Iraq, with Jews as the oldest and largest of these communities, tracing back to the Babylonian captivity of the sixth century BCE, but today the Jewish community in Iraq numbers in the single digits and essentially lives in hiding;

Whereas religious minorities in Iraq, who made up about 3 percent of the population of Iraq in 2003, make up a disproportionately high percentage of registered Iraqi refugees;

Whereas the number of Christians in Iraq was approximately 1,400,000 according to the 1987 Iraqi census but, according to the 2009 Report on International Religious Freedom issued by the Department of State, may now number only 500,000 to 600,000;

Whereas the United States is gravely concerned about the viability of the indigenous Christian communities of Iraq and other religious minority communities, and the possible disappearance of their ancient languages, culture, and heritage;

Whereas the Sabean Mandean community in Iraq reports that almost 90 percent of its members have fled Iraq, leaving only about 3,500 to 5,000 Mandeans in Iraq as of 2009;

Whereas the Baha'i faith, estimated to have fewer than 2,000 adherents in Iraq, remains prohibited in Iraq under a 1970 law;

Whereas although hundreds of thousands of Iraqi refugees and internally displaced persons have returned to their areas of origin, the numbers of religious minority returnees to Iraq are disproportionately low; and

Whereas members of religious minority communities of Iraq in diaspora have organized to support their communities in Iraq in ways that also benefit the whole of Iraq society by encouraging the rule of law, enhanced security, employment, education and health services: Now therefore be it

The resolution (S. Res. 322), as amended, was agreed to.

The preamble, as amended, was agreed to.
