U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
*Washington, DC

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 2:15 p.m., in room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Richard J. Durbin, presiding.

Present: Senators Durbin and Kyl.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. RICHARD J. DURBIN, A U.S.
SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

Senator DURBIN. Good afternoon. This hearing of the Judiciary Committee will come to order. Today we consider five judicial nominees to the Federal bench: Andrew Hurwitz, nominated to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit; Kristine Baker, nominated to the Eastern District of Arkansas; George Russell, nominated to the District Court of Maryland; and two nominees for the Northern District of Illinois, John Lee and Jay Tharp. Each of these nominees has the support of their home State Senators, and I commend President Obama for sending them to the Senate for consideration.

At these hearings it is traditional for nominees to be introduced to the Committee by Senators from their home States. I am going to first turn to my Ranking Member and friend, Senator Jon Kyl of Arizona, for opening remarks he has relative to the nomination of Andrew Hurwitz. After Senator Kyl speaks, I will invite my colleagues at the witness table to make their introductions, and I know they have busy schedules, so after each of you has introduced your nominee, you are certainly free to leave.

Senator Kyl will be introducing Justice Hurwitz; Senator Mikulski and Senator Cardin for Judge Russell; Senators Pryor and Boozman for nominee Baker.

I will now introduce the two district court nominees from Illinois, John Lee and Jay Tharp. Before I do, I want to say with some sadness that my colleague Mark Kirk cannot be with us today. As we all know, he suffered a medical illness last Saturday, is hospitalized, and he has all of our thoughts and prayers with him every moment of the way until he returns. He fully supports both of these nominees, and we will enter his statement into the record reflecting that fact. We look forward to Mark's quick return to the Senate. Senator Kirk and I both support these nominees. These two will fill vacancies that have been identified as judicial emergencies by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, and we will work together to see that the nominees are confirmed.

The first Illinois nominee is going to be John Lee, nominated to the Chicago-based seat formerly occupied by Judge David Coar. He is currently a partner at the law firm of Freeborn & Peters where his practice concentrates on commercial litigation. Born to Korean parents, Mr. Lee came to this country as an immigrant at the age of 5. His father was a coal miner, his mother a nurse. They settled in Chicago's Albany Park neighborhood in a one-bedroom apartment that got a little crowded when they were later joined by Mr. Lee's grandmother and his younger brother.

From his humble beginnings, Mr. Lee went to Harvard College, graduating magna cum laude, then earned his law degree cum laude from Harvard Law School. After law school, he worked as a trial attorney in the Department of Justice Environment and Natural Resources Division, representing the United States in litigation. After his tenure at the Justice Department, Mr. Lee worked at the law firms of Mayer Brown and Grippio & Elden before joining Freeborn & Peters in 1999. His practice has focused on antitrust, intellectual property, environmental, and other complex litigation matters. He has received numerous awards and recognitions, including being named a Leading Lawyer from 2008 through 2011 by the Leading Lawyers Network. He has a distinguished record of community service in the Chicago area, serves as the president of the board of directors of the Asian Human Services of Chicago, an organization that provides social services to Asian American immigrant communities. He serves on the board of directors and was past president of the Coordinated Advice and Referral Program for Legal Services, which is a Legal Services hotline in Cook County, serving more than 50,000 low-income individuals each year. Additionally, Mr. Lee is a member of the board of directors of the Asian American Bar Association of Chicago.

Mr. Lee's nomination is historic. If confirmed—and I trust he will be—Mr. Lee would be the first Korean American ever to serve as a Federal Article III judge in Illinois. He would also be only the second Korean American to serve as a Federal district judge in our Nation's history. He is joined here by family and friends that I know he will have the opportunity to introduce when he comes to the table.

Our other Illinois nominee is Jay Tharp, nominated to fill the Chicago district court seat open with the fact that Judge Blanche Manning is taking senior status. He is currently a partner in the Chicago office of Mayer Brown, where he is co-leader of the firm's securities litigation and enforcement practice.

He has quite a military history in his family. He was born into a military family, the son of a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps. I might also add that he told me that he had a grandfather who was serving in the Marines in World War I, so it is a distinguished career in the Marine Corps including himself and his son, who is currently training in the Marine Corps.

He attended Duke University on an ROTC scholarship, an undergraduate degree summa cum laude, commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, served on active duty with the Marines from 1982 to 1987, achieving the rank of captain, earning the Navy Achievement Medal and the Navy Distinguished Midshipman Award.

After his military service, Mr. Tharp attended Northwestern University Law School where he graduated magna cum laude, served on the Northwestern University Law Review, served as judicial clerk for Judge Joel Flaum of the Seventh Circuit, then worked as Assistant U.S. Attorney from 1992 to 1997 in the appellate and general crimes divisions, also on the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force.

After his tenure as Federal prosecutor, he joined Mayer Brown where his practice specializes in complex commercial litigation and criminal investigations with a focus on securities fraud.

He has received numerous recognitions, including being named an Illinois Super Lawyer from 2009 through 2011, served as the adjunct professor of trial advocacy at Northwestern University Law School, a member of the Law Fund Board at Northwestern, served for a year as vice chair of the Chicago Bar Association Judicial Evaluation Committee.

At this point I would like to ask consent to include in the record the statement that I mentioned earlier by Senator Mark Kirk, who actually brought his name to nomination, and without objection, we will include that in the record at this point. I am sure Senator Kirk, were he here, would be joining in supporting both of these nominees enthusiastically.

Senator DURBIN. Senator Kirk and I each have established a bipartisan process with screening committees that are bipartisan in nature, and we each have an ultimate veto on the other's choice, so this is clearly a bipartisan effort from start to finish. Upon the strong recommendation of the committee, Senator Kirk came to me and suggested Mr. Tharp, and I agree with that choice, and I look forward to working with him, as he is going to work with me, to help Mr. Lee become a Federal district court judge as well.

Mr. Tharp is also joined by family and friends whom I am sure he will be introducing when he comes to the table.

Let me turn first to the first panel, the Ninth Circuit Court nominee, and I am going to ask Senator Kyl if he would be kind enough to introduce him.

PRESENTATION OF HON. ANDREW DAVID HURWITZ, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT, BY HON. JON KYL, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARI-ZONA

Senator KYL. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, and it is a privilege for me to introduce to the Committee Justice Andy Hurwitz from the State of Arizona to serve on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Senator McCain could not be here today but asked me to express his strong support for the nominee as well.

A bit about Justice Hurwitz. He received his undergraduate degree from Princeton University and law degree from Yale, where he was the note and comment editor of the Yale Law Journal. He served as a law clerk to Judge Jon Newman of the United States District Court for Connecticut and Judge Joseph Smith of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and finally to Associate Justice Potter Stewart of the United States Supreme Court.

He has served on the Arizona Supreme Court since the year 2003. Before joining the Arizona Supreme Court, Justice Hurwitz was a partner in the Phoenix firm of Osborn & Maledon, where his practice focused on appellate and constitutional litigation, administrative law, and civil litigation. He is a member of the bar both in Arizona and Connecticut and received the highest grade on the Arizona bar examination back when he took it, and I will not tell you what year.

He has argued cases before the United States Supreme Court. He served as chief of staff to the Governor of the State of Arizona, and I have known him since those days 30 years ago. That was Governor Babbitt, and then also Governor Mofford in 1988. He has been a member of the Arizona Board of Regents from 1988 through 1996, also having served as president of the board. That is the entity in Arizona that has jurisdiction over all of our universities and colleges.

He has taught regularly at Arizona State University Law College. He delivered the Willard H. Pedrick Lecture at the College of Law in 1999, and that is a big deal. I am going to be doing that this year, so I can tell you I am honored to do that. He was appointed by Chief Justice Rehnquist in 2004 as a member of the Advisory Committee on the Federal Rules of Evidence and reappointed to a second term by Chief Justice Roberts. It is very easy to see and it is obvious to those of us who have been in Arizona a long time why Justice Hurwitz was awarded the ABA's highest rating, unanimous well qualified.

So it will be my privilege to support his nomination, and I am honored to be able to introduce him to the panel today.

Senator DURBIN. Senator Kyl, thank you very much, and the other nominees, I am sure, are honored by the presence of four of our colleagues, and I would like to turn at this moment to Senator Barbara Mikulski.

PRESENTATION OF HON. GEORGE LEVI RUSSELL III, NOMINEE
TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MARY-LAND, BY HON. BARBARA MIKULSKI, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MARYLAND

Senator MIKULSKI. Thank you very much, Senator Durbin, Senator Kyl, and to you, Senator Durbin, we express our good wishes to Senator Kirk as well.

Today Senator Cardin and I are both delighted and enthusiastic to introduce to the Committee Judge George Russell III to serve on the United States District Court for Maryland. We want to thank Senator Leahy and Senator Grassley and their excellent staff for moving this procedure along.

We are so enthusiastic to bring this nominee, and as I look at taking this issue—Senator Cardin and I take this recommendation very seriously, and when I consider a nominee for the Federal bench, I have four criteria: absolute personal integrity, judicial competence and temperament, a commitment to core constitutional principles, and a history of civic engagement in Maryland. We want someone who both understands and grasps the law, but understands the human condition as well. I mention these standards because this is exactly what we are talking about, about Judge George Levi Russell III.

Mr. Russell already serves as a judge. He serves on the circuit court of the State of Maryland. It is a testimony to his commitment and the belief of those who appoint judges that he will render impartial justice by the fact that this man was recommended by a Republican Governor, Governor Ehrlich, and he has served with distinction there.

He comes with a wonderful education. He went to Morehouse for his undergraduate degree, the University of Maryland for his law degree, passed the bar, and has worked both in the public domain as well as in the private sector.

As a young attorney, he served as a law clerk for Judge Robert Bell, the chief judge for the Maryland Court of Appeals. He also worked in the public area for 10 years as an Assistant U.S. Attorney handling criminal and civil cases and then, because of his deft skills with people, was asked to be the community outreach coordinator to help reduce violent crime. He also then worked in the private sector working for three well-known Maryland law firms.

He is a homegrown guy, born and raised in Baltimore. His father is one of the most beloved and esteemed jurists in Maryland. His father, George Russell, Jr., was a legal pioneer, serving as the city's first African-American circuit judge, but he was not only the first, he served with such great distinction.

This George Russell maintains his—is well known and well respected for the number of cases that he has presided over, over 2,700. He is well known for having the appropriate judicial temperament in a hard-scrabble court, which is the Baltimore City Circuit Court, and at the same time to really be able to render justice in a way that everyone has confidence.

He has maintained his connection to everyday people by serving on the board of directors of the Enoch Pratt Library, his deep commitment to the empowerment of all. He has been a Big Brother, and he served in the Community Law Center.

So whether it is working in a private law firm as a skilled and deft litigator, as a tough, strong prosecutor, as someone who has already demonstrated a judicial ability, this is George Russell. He is joined here today by his mother and father, by his wife and his children, and by his in-laws. So when you have the endorsement of the Maryland Bar and your in-laws and the two hometown Senators, I think that is a pretty good set of recommendations.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you, Senator Mikulski.

Senator Cardin.

PRESENTATION OF HON. GEORGE LEVI RUSSELL III, NOMINEE
TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MARY-LAND, BY HON. BENJAMIN L. CARDIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MARYLAND

Senator CARDIN. Senator Durbin, Senator Kyl, thank you very much for the opportunity to introduce Judge Russell to the Committee. I join Senator Mikulski in my enthusiastic support for his confirmation, and I would ask consent that my statement be made part of the record.

Senator DURBIN. Without objection.

Senator CARDIN. Let me just summarize a few points.

Senator Mikulski mentioned how we take these appointments or recommendations very, very seriously. Like Senator Durbin, we have a nonpartisan process to try to get the very best on the Federal bench, and we think Judge Russell is the very best for this lifetime appointment to the district court for the District of Maryland.

I want to thank Judge Russell for his commitment to public service. He has been a trial court judge. He has served our community well. I want to thank him, his wife, and his entire family for the sacrifices that they make. This is a family commitment.

Senator Mikulski mentioned his father, who is here, a person whom I have known all my life. I have known the Russell family all my life. Judge Russell's father was a pioneer and leader in our community and has been a role model for many of our leaders today. I admire him greatly for his skills as a judge. He served on the same bench that my father served on, and we are good friends. He has been a civic leader and a person whom we look up to as one of the giants in the legal profession. His son is following in those footsteps. The family knows public service. His wife is a district court judge in Baltimore, so this is a family that takes public service very, very seriously.

Senator Mikulski mentioned the experience of Judge Russell, and I will not repeat it. But I do want to point out that he has been a prosecutor; he has handled civil cases in the U.S. Attorney's Office. He has experience in the private sector of law, and he has trial experience as a judge. I think that is the type of experience that we look at and we can judge that he will be the type of person we would want to have for a lifetime appointment on our district court.

He also brings community commitment. Senator Mikulski mentioned the Enoch Pratt Library where he is a trustee. There is Big Brothers and Big Sisters he is involved in; the Community Law Center, where he serves on the board of directors.

I asked him the question during the interview process why he wanted to be a Federal judge. I ask that usually routinely of our nominees. His answer was one that came from his heart about how he really wants to help the community and serve the community, and he thinks he can serve the people best by what he is doing on the bench.

He has taken on some of the toughest problems in our community. He is known for taking on drug violence. He is known for taking on mental health issues. And I think that sensitivity will serve him well on the district court.

I strongly encourage the Committee to report out his nomination. He has my strong support.

[The prepared statement of Senator Cardin appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator DURBIN. Thank you very much, Senator Cardin. You and Senator Mikulski are welcome to stay, but I also understand with your schedules you may have to absent yourself. But I am sure it is a great honor to your nominee that you are both present here and supportive of his candidacy.

I would like to now introduce Senator Mark Pryor of Arkansas to speak to the nomination of Kristine Baker.

PRESENTATION OF KRISTINE GERHARD BAKER, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, BY HON. MARK L. PRYOR, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARKANSAS

Senator PRYOR. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and I want to thank you and Senator Kyl for allowing me to come here today and introduce Kris. G. Baker. I would also like to thank her family and friends who made the trip. I am not sure if all of her family is here because it is awfully quiet in the room right now. Her four children, who are all 8 years old and under, came in my office earlier, and it was like having four little Arkansas tornadoes running around my office. But I kind of thought if she can handle these kids, she can handle any lawyer in the courtroom. So, anyway, I am glad that she brought them, and it is great to have them here.

I am really honored to sit here today and recommend her for confirmation as a Federal judge in the Eastern District of Arkansas, and I am also honored to be joined by Senator Boozman. I think one of the things that John and I both know is that Kris has earned a reputation in legal circles, in the business community, and also around the State of Arkansas as a hard-working and brilliant attorney.

While this Committee has seen its fair share of polarizing nominees and controversial nominations, you will not find that in Kris Baker. She is very well respected for her extensive experience in civil matters and has a strong commitment to a fair and impartial legal system.

I have a three-pronged approach when considering judges. First, I ask, Is the person qualified? Second, do they have the proper judicial temperament? And, third, do they have the ability to be fair and impartial? I am not only comfortable that she passes these, but I am confident that she far exceeds all of these standards. And as you learn about this nominee, I think you will feel the same way about her.

She currently practices law as a partner in the law firm of Quattlebaum, Grooms, Tull & Burrow in Little Rock, and she specializes in commercial, employment, and First Amendment litigation. In fact, before the hearing, one of her law partners, Steve Quattlebaum, who came up from Little Rock to be with her today, told me, "I just do not know what I would have done without her all these years."

She joined the firm as an associate in the year 2000 and became a partner in 2002. Previously, she worked at the law firm of Williams & Anderson in Little Rock from 1998 to 2000. She began her career as a law clerk to Hon. Susan Webber Wright of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas, from 1996 to 1998. She earned her law degree with honors from the University of Arkansas School of Law and her B.A. from St. Louis University in 1993.

It is not just her friends and family who think a lot of her, but she has been recognized as one of Chambers and Partners' America's Leading Lawyers for Business, named a Rising Star by Mid-South Super Lawyers, and listed with the Best Lawyers in America, the Martindale-Hubbell Bar Register of Preeminent Women Lawyers, and she has been named an Arkansas Business' Forty Under 40.

So character and integrity are two qualities that she also has, and she has done extensive pro bono work representing clients in a variety of cases through the Pulaski County Bar Association's Volunteer Organizations Center for Arkansas Legal Services that we call "VOCALS" down in Little Rock by helping elderly and sick prisoners receive the proper medical care. She is also involved in many other community and school organizations and efforts.

So I am very confident that she has what it takes to be a great Federal judge, and I want to thank the Committee again for giving her the consideration, and I would encourage you all to give her a good vote as she goes through the Committee.

Senator DURBIN. Thanks, Senator Pryor.

Senator Boozman.

PRESENTATION OF KRISTINE GERHARD BAKER, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF ARKANSAS, BY HON. JOHN BOOZMAN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARKANSAS

Senator BOOZMAN. Thank you, Senator Durbin and Senator Kyl, for allowing me to speak today at this really very important hearing. I am proud to be here to introduce and support, along with Senator Pryor, Kristine G. Baker's nomination as United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas. Her extensive experience and her impressive background I think unanimously qualifies her for the position of district judge.

I also would like to acknowledge her family. Her husband, John, is with us, and her four children. I know they are awfully proud of their wife and mom. Why don't you guys stand up? Again, this is an active little family. I have got three daughters, so I cannot relate to the little boys.

She was born in Colorado Spring, Colorado; moved to the State of Arkansas in 1994; received her J.D. from the University of Arkansas School of Law, where she graduated with high honors, was ranked No. 3 in her class. She was articles editor for the Arkansas Law Review, a member of the Board of Advocates, and a member of the University of Arkansas First Amendment National Moot Court Team.

Upon graduation, as Mark mentioned, she clerked for Susan Wright, then chief judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas. As also mentioned, Kris currently is in the Quattlebaum, Grooms, Tull & Burrow law firm, in which she became a partner in 2002, joined the firm in 2000. Her practice has been devoted to litigation in really a diverse range of topics, which is so important in assuming the position that she will be in, including allegation of deceptive trade practices, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud. She also handles First Amendment and Freedom of Information Act issues and has received several awards and accolades, including being recognized in commercial litigation in Chambers and Partners' America's Leading Lawyers for Business, listed with the Best Lawyers in America in the areas of commercial litigation, litigation of First Amendment, litigation of labor and employment law, individuals' employment law, management and labor law, named Best Lawyers 2012 Little Rock Litigation, and the list goes on and on. And I ask unanimous consent to put all of this in the record.

Senator DURBIN. Without objection.

[The information appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator BOOZMAN. Kris has had extensive jury trial experience, has also served as counsel in non-jury trials, arbitration, and very successful in that area. She is a member of the Pulaski County Bar Association, the Volunteer Organizations Center for Arkansas Legal Services, and devotes significant time each year to pro bono cases, which, again, is very important.

She is very active in her church, affiliated with the Presbyterian Village, Our Lady of the Holy Souls Catholic Church, Dress for Success Little Rock, and the March of Dimes.

So I believe that one of the most important things that we do in the Senate is the confirmation of judges, the process of selecting people with the right temperament and qualifications. I believe that Kris Baker will do an excellent job and we will all be proud of her future service on the bench. I congratulate her on her nomination and strongly support her confirmation.

With that, I yield.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you, Senator Boozman. Thank you, Senator Pryor. We appreciate your being here today.

Now the Committee will move to the consideration of the nominees. As is the custom of the Committee, the first panel will consist of the circuit court nominee, the Ninth Circuit nominee, Andrew Hurwitz, and I would ask, while we are changing some of the identification cards here, if Justice Hurwitz would please come to the witness table.

Remain standing for just one moment, please. If you would please raise your right hand. Do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before this Judiciary Committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Justice HURWITZ. I do.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you. Let the record reflect that the witness answered in the affirmative.

I might say to Senator Kyl, my only chance to ever be in a movie was a movie called "Contagion," which they filmed in Chicago, and I administered that oath. I thought I did it flawlessly, but I was lost on the cutting room floor.

[Laughter.]

Senator DURBIN. So I practiced for it a lot before I got here, Justice Hurwitz, as you can tell. Thank you for being here. Please at this moment, if you would be kind enough to introduce family and friends who are in attendance, and you are welcome to make an opening statement.

STATEMENT OF HON. ANDREW DAVID HURWITZ, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

Justice HURWITZ. Thank you, Senator Durbin, Senator Kyl. I do not have a formal statement today. I do want to thank the President for his confidence in me in making this nomination. I want to thank Senators Durbin and Kyl for holding this hearing. And I want to thank Senator McCain for his support and also Congressman Pastor for his support in this process.

I do want to introduce some guests who are here with me today:

The most educated person in our family, Dr. Sally Hurwitz, my wife, the associate dean of the Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College at Arizona State University;

My baby brother, Gary, who is a practicing lawyer in Pennsylvania, and his wife, Holly;

And five friends of longstanding whom I will not embarrass with their titles and how I met them: We have back here Brian de Vallance; Molly Broad; Hattie Babbitt; Iris Roman Burnett, whom I have known since I was a very small child. And have I forgotten someone in this group? I do not think I have.

And I also wanted to say hello to my children, who are watching online today, my three children; to my chambers family and colleagues at the court; and—I suspect they can hear me—to my father and mother, who are no longer with us, but I think are listening from someplace else.

Public Q&A Sessions

The Arizona Supreme Court typically goes "on the road" several times a year to hear oral arguments at locations throughout the State. After the conclusion of arguments, the Justices normally take questions from the audience, and during those sessions, typically lasting for about one-half hour, I would have answered a question or two about the Court's operations. Based on agendas and public announcements, I have identified the following list of public question and answer sessions. I have no notes or transcripts. Unless otherwise indicated, video is available for recordings from 2007 to present at <http://azcourts.gov/AZSupremeCourt/LiveArchivedVideo.aspx>. 13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

Judge Pro Tempore, Arizona Court of Appeals (Division 1). I served on two panels of the Court of Appeals (an intermediate appellate court) in 1993 and 1996, under a program in which private practitioners were appointed to serve with two sitting judges in an effort to reduce the court's backlog. I was appointed in each case to do so by the presiding judge of the court of appeals. This is the intermediate appellate court in Arizona, which has jurisdiction over appeals from virtually all judgments of the superior court, a court of general trial jurisdiction.

Justice, Arizona Supreme Court, March 2003 to present (Vice Chief Justice, July 2009 – present). I was appointed by the Governor and retained in a 2006 general election for a six year term. The Court has discretionary appellate jurisdiction over all cases decided in the Arizona Court of Appeals, special action (extraordinary writs jurisdiction), and direct appeal jurisdiction over death penalty cases and certain elections appeals. We also have discretionary jurisdiction in appeals involving attorney and judicial discipline.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

I have only served as an appellate judge

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	0%
bench trials:	0% [total 100%]
civil proceedings:	0%
criminal proceedings:	0% [total 100%]

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

See attached list of cases.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported). Not applicable

1. Citizen Publishing Co. v. Miller (Elleithe), 210 Ariz. 513, 115 P.3d 107 (2005).

The issue in this case was whether a suit for intentional infliction of emotional distress could lie against a newspaper for printing a letter to the editor stating: "We can stop the murders of American soldiers in Iraq . . . Whenever there is an assassination or another atrocity we should proceed to the closest mosque and execute five of the first Muslims we encounter." The suit was filed by two plaintiffs on behalf of a putative class of Islamic-Americans in the circulation area of the Tucson Citizen. The trial judge refused to dismiss the intentional infliction claim and the court of appeals, by a split vote, declined to exercise special action (mandamus) jurisdiction, thus leaving the trial court's decision standing.

The Court unanimously held (in an opinion I authored) that the letter to the editor was protected by the First Amendment, and did not constitute either an incitement to imminent lawless action, fighting words, or a true threat of violence.

2. Kromko v. Ariz. Bd. of Regents, 216 Ariz. 190, 165 P.3d 168 (2007).

The issue in this case was whether tuition charged at three Arizona state universities during the 2003-04 academic year violated a state constitutional provision requiring that the “instruction furnished shall be as nearly free as possible.” The suit was filed on behalf of a putative class of students against the Board of Regents, which under the state constitution governs the universities and sets tuition.

The Court unanimously held (in an opinion I authored) that the suit presented a nonjusticiable political question, entrusted to another branch of state government for resolution, in part because there were no judicial standards by which the issue could be decided.

3. State Farm Ins. Cos. v. Premier Manufactured Sys., Inc., 217 Ariz. 222, 172 P.3d 410 (2007).

The issue in this case was whether liability among tortfeasors in strict product liability actions is joint and several or several only.

The Court unanimously held (in an opinion I authored) that a statute adopted by the Arizona Legislature abolishing joint and several liability in all but certain cases extended to products liability actions, and that in such actions, liability is several only.

4. Seisinger v. Siebel, 220 Ariz. 85, 203 P.3d 483 (2009).

The issue in this case was whether a statute which prescribed qualifications for expert witnesses in medical malpractices cases conflicted with Arizona Rule of Evidence 702, and was therefore unconstitutional as encroaching upon the Arizona Supreme Court's preemptive rule making powers.

In a 4-1 decision (I authored the majority opinion), the Court held that (a) there was a direct conflict between the statute and the Evidence Rule; but (b) the statute was substantive in nature, and therefore did not violate the Arizona Constitution's separation of powers doctrine. The court also held that the statute, being substantive, did not apply retroactively to the case before it, which had been filed before the statute became effective and involved events prior to that date. One judge (sitting by designation with our Court) concurred only in the result, concluding that the challenged statute was unconstitutional.

5. State v. Western Union Fin. Svcs., Inc., 220 Ariz. 567, 208 P.3d 218 (2009).

The issue in this case was whether an Arizona court could seize Western Union money transfers sent from other states to Mexico.

In a 4-1 decision (I authored the majority opinion) the Court held that because the state court was solely seeking to exercise in rem jurisdiction over the wire transfers, and the transfers were not located within the state, the warrant was not enforceable. The Court noted that the State could have sought to exercise in personam jurisdiction over Western Union and sought court orders concerning the wire transfers, but could not proceed simply against the transfers themselves to establish jurisdiction. One judge (sitting by designation with our Court) dissented.

6. Turken v. Gordon, 223 Ariz. 342, 224 P.3d 158 (2010).

The issue in this case was whether an agreement between the City of Phoenix and a private developer violated the Gift Clause of the Arizona Constitution.

which prohibits governmental entities from making “any donation or grant, by subsidy or otherwise” to any private corporation.

The Court unanimously held (in an opinion I authored) that the particular agreement likely violated the Gift Clause. The opinion sought to clarify the Court’s previous Gift Clause jurisprudence. However, because the City and the developer had relied on our previous jurisprudence in structuring the agreement, the Court decided to apply its clarification of previous law prospectively only. The Court therefore affirmed the dismissal of the plaintiff’s claims in this particular case.

7. State v. Gant, 216 Ariz. 1, 162 P.3d 640 (2007), aff’d sub nom. Arizona v. Gant, 556 U.S. 332 (2009).

This case presented an important and unsettled Fourth Amendment issue: Whether a warrantless search of an arrestee’s car is constitutional when the arrestee is handcuffed and seated in the back of a patrol car under the supervision of a police officer, and the scene is otherwise secured.

A divided (3-2) Arizona Supreme Court held that the search-incident-to arrest exception to the Fourth Amendment’s warrant requirement, as explicated in Chimel v. California, 395 U.S. 752 (1969), and New York v. Belton, 453 U.S. 454 (1981), did not justify the search. The Supreme Court of the United States granted certiorari and affirmed the opinion of our Court, which was written by Justice Rebecca White Berch and in which I joined.

8. Gibson v. Kasey, 214 Ariz. 141, 150 P.3d 228 (2007).

The issue in this case was whether persons who are prescribed drugs owe a duty of care to others to whom they give the drugs. The trial court had held that the defendant, who allegedly had caused the death of a coworker by furnishing prescription drugs to her at an office party, could not be liable in negligence, as he owed the woman no duty of care. The intermediate appellate court held that a duty existed because the harm was foreseeable.

In a unanimous opinion (authored by Justice Scott Bales) our Court held that the trial court had erred. The opinion rejected the notion that foreseeability played any role in the duty determination. I concurred in the opinion of the Court, but wrote separately to suggest that Arizona consider in a future case adopting the approach of the Third Restatement of Torts, which recognizes that any actor generally had a duty to exercise reasonable care when the actor's conduct creates a risk of physical harms to others, and that a no-duty determination ought to be made by common law courts only when a strong policy against potential liability could be identified.

Counsel: James F. Brook, James F. Brook & Associates, 7150 East Camelback Road, Suite 415, Scottsdale, Arizona 85251, 480-990-0104 (for Gibson); Christopher Robbins, currently with Ehmann DeCiancio, PLLC, 1250 West Washington, Tempe, Arizona, 85281, 602-889-2440 (for Kasey).

9. Ariz. Together v. Brewer (Protect Marriage Arizona), 214 Ariz. 118, 149 P.3d 742 (2007).

This case involved the “separate amendment” rule of the Arizona Constitution, which requires that if more than one proposed constitutional amendment is submitted to the voters at an election, each proposed amendment must be submitted in such a way as to allow the voters to vote for or against them separately. A long line of Arizona cases had held that a single proposed amendment that dealt with more than one subject could not be placed on the ballot under this rule. The proposed amendment at issue in Arizona Together sought to define “marriage” and prohibit the State from providing a legal status for unmarried persons similar to that of marriage.

In a unanimous decision (authored by Chief Justice Ruth McGregor), the Court held that the proposed amendment did not violate the “single subject rule” and could be placed on the ballot. In so doing, the Court sought to clarify its previous “single subject” jurisprudence, which had focused on whether a voter who favored one provision of a proposed amendment could reasonably be expected to view another provision as dependant on the first. I had previously suggested that the “reasonable voter test” was unworkable in Clean Elections Inst., Inc. v. Brewer, 290 Ariz. 241, 248, 99 P.3d 570, 577 (2004) (concurring opinion) and the Court adopted that suggestion in Arizona Together. I joined the majority opinion, but wrote separately to emphasize that the Court's inquiry should be limited to whether various provisions of a proposed amendment were logically related to each other.

Counsel: Peter A. Gentela, Arizona House of Representatives, 1700 West Washington, Suite H, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, 602-926-5544, and Benjamin Bull, Alliance Defense Fund, 15100 North 90th Street, Scottsdale, Arizona, 85260, 480-444-0200 (for Protect Marriage Arizona); Lisa T. Hauser, 10. Lofts at Fillmore Condo. Ass'n v. Reliance Commercial Constr., Inc., 218 Ariz. 574, 190 P.3d 733 (2008).

The issue in this case was whether the purchaser of a home can sue a home-builder who was not the vendor of the residence under an implied warranty of workmanship and habitability.

The Court unanimously held (in an opinion I authored) that the absence of contractual privity did not bar the suit. This was an issue of first impression and of practical significance in Arizona, because homebuilders will often sell their products to a separate company which markets the buildings, and there is thus often no privity between the construction company and the original buyer.

Counsel: John F. McGuire, 2550 Fifth Avenue, San Diego, California 92103, 619-618-2984, and Curtis S. - i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

My court does not have an automatic recusal system. I utilize Rule 2.11 of the Arizona Code of Judicial Conduct to determine whether I should recuse myself in any specific case. On occasion, I have consulted with the Chief Justice and other Justices of the Court on recusal issues. On rare occasions, I have consulted with the Director of the Arizona Judicial Conduct Commission for advice.

In the following list of recusals, I have included all cases resulting in opinions from the time I have served on the Court, and all petitions for review (a request that the Supreme Court review a case) from 2006 to the present, as I do not have ready access to orders on petitions for review prior to that date. (If review was granted, the case would have resulted in an opinion, so the listing includes all cases actually decided by the Court from 2003 to the present.)

Ring remand cases

In 2002, I argued Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), in which the Supreme Court held that a jury trial was required to establish the aggravating circumstances that make a defendant eligible to receive the death penalty. After Ring was remanded to the Arizona Supreme Court for further proceedings, that Court decided to conduct a consolidated proceeding in which it considered issues arising from that decision common to capital defendants whose cases were still on direct appeal. I was appointed by the Court as lead counsel for those defendants, filed a consolidated brief on their behalf, and argued the case to the Court. (Counsel for individual defendants signed onto the brief and had the opportunity in later Supreme Court proceedings to argue issues specific to their individual cases). The Court issued its opinion in the remand cases in 2003, after I had joined the Court. State v. Ring, 204 Ariz. 534, 65 P.3d 915 (2003) (commonly referred to in Arizona as Ring III, to distinguish it from the U.S. Supreme Court decision and the original opinion on Ring's direct appeal.) Since joining the Court, I have recused myself in each case involving a defendant involved in Ring III. I have done so sua sponte. The following is a list of Ring III recusals:

Other recusals

Solimeno v. Yonan, CV-10-0104-PR (petition for review denied). I recused myself sua sponte because one of the lawyers, a close personal friend, had described the case to me when he was trying it. I have since told lawyers not to discuss any case they have in state court, even if not currently before our court, with me.

Havasupai Tribe v. Ariz. Bd. of Regents, CV-09-0007-PR (petition for review denied). - iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

Under a local court rule, lawyers practicing in Maricopa County are occasionally appointed to arbitrate civil cases where the amount in controversy is less than a stated amount. As a lawyer, I was appointed in several such cases, but I do not have records concerning these cases, none of which was significant.

- b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I practiced law at the Osborn Maledon firm and its predecessors from 1974 to 2003, with several breaks for public service. The majority of my practice was civil litigation, although I did some criminal trial work and some notable criminal appellate work. In the late 1970s, I began to do an increasing amount of appellate work, and by the time I left the firm in 2003 to join the bench, a majority of my work was in the appellate area. After leaving state service in 1983, I also began to do a significant amount of state administrative law practice, particularly with respect to state land and procurement issues, and that work continued throughout my tenure at the firm. In the 1980s and 1990s, I did a significant amount of work in the areas of telecommunications and media law. I also developed a sub-specialty in Indian law and in Indian gaming matters. I also did state elections work, particularly with respect to initiatives and referenda.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

At the outset of my career, I typically represented individuals and small businesses in civil litigation matters. As my career progressed, although I continued to represent individuals and small businesses, I began increasingly to represent larger entities such as AT&T, Lucent Technologies, the American Broadcasting Company, Arizona Public Service Company, and Clorox, to name a few. My representation of these entities included litigation, administrative proceedings, and other advice. I also represented municipal governments and other entities, including the City of Phoenix, the Central Arizona Water Conservation District, and the Arizona State Compensation Fund. These representations often involved election law and constitutional litigation. I developed an Indian law practice, and represented, both in litigation and in connection with a statewide initiative, the Salt River Pima Maricopa Indian Community. I also did state lands work for the Hopi Tribe. A large part of my appellate practice involved referrals from attorneys who had tried cases – in various subject matter areas – and wished to retain independent counsel on appeal.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

Approximately 90 percent of my practice was in litigation. I appeared in court frequently throughout my time in private practice.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 25% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 50% |
| 3. other courts: | |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 25% |

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 - 1. civil proceedings: 98%
 - 2. criminal proceedings: 2% (appellate)
- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I do not have precise records, but I estimate that I tried more than 40 cases to final decision. I was sole or chief counsel in the great majority (roughly 90 percent) of these cases.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 35%
 - 2. non-jury: 65%
- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have argued two cases before the Supreme Court of the United States: Bowen v. Public Agencies Opposed to Social Security Entrapment, 477 U.S. 41 (1986), and Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). In Bowen, I had submitted, along with Benna Ruth Solomon, then of the State and Local Legal Center, an amicus brief on behalf of the Council of State Governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the International City Management Association, the National Association of Counties, and the National League of Cities. I was then asked by the appellees to do the oral argument. In Ring, I submitted a certiorari petition, an opening brief and a reply brief. Copies of the briefs and oral argument transcripts are supplied.

I also submitted briefs in the following cases, copies of which are supplied:

PGA Tour, Inc. v. Martin, 532 U.S. 661 (2001) (certiorari petition, the opening brief and the reply brief).

Shoen v. Shoen, 176 F.3d 1150 (9th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1075 (2000) (opposition to certiorari).

O'Melveny & Myers v. F.D.I.C., 512 U.S. 79 (1994) (amicus brief in support of the petition for certiorari on behalf of my law firm, then known as Meyer, Hendricks, Victor, Osborn & Maledon).

State v. Herrera, 176 Ariz. 9, 859 P.2d 119 (1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 966 (1993) (certiorari petition).

State of Missouri v. Jenkins, 495 U.S. 33 (1990) (amicus brief on behalf of the National Governors' Association, the National League of Cities, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National Association of Counties, the Council of State Governments, the United States Conference of Mayors and the International City Management Association).

Georges v. Glick, 856 F.2d 971 (7th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1097 (1989) (opposition to certiorari).

Ewing v. State, 155 Ariz. 200, 745 P.2d 947 (1987), appeal dismissed, 486 U.S. 1002 (1988) (motion to dismiss).

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. Bowen v. Public Agencies Opposed to Social Security Entrapment, 477 U.S. 41 (1986).

This case arose out of an attempt by California agencies and political subdivisions to withdraw from the Social Security System. Amendments to the Social Security Act in 1950 permitted voluntary participation by states in the System, and also allowed withdrawal upon two years' notice. California entered the system after those amendments, and signed agreements with the federal government allowing withdrawal by participating agencies and political subdivisions on such notice. In 1983, however, the Act was amended to provide that no terminations would thereafter be allowed.

A three-judge district court held the 1983 Amendments unconstitutional. I was asked by the State and Local Legal Center in early 1986 to write an amicus brief on behalf of the Council of State Governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the International City Management Association, the National Association of Counties, and the National League of Cities. The brief was filed in March, 1986.

After the amicus brief was filed, the appellees (the State of California and a number of state agencies/subdivisions) asked me to argue the case to the Court. I did so on April 28, 1986. The Court issued its opinion on June 19, 1986, reversing the judgment of the district court.

My co-counsel was Benna Solomon, then with the State and Local Legal Center, now Deputy Corporation Counsel of the City of Chicago. Her address and telephone number are 30 North LaSalle Street, Chicago, Illinois 60602, 312-744-7150.

Opposing counsel was then-Assistant Attorney General Richard Willard, currently at Steptoe & Johnson, 1330 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington DC 20036, 202-429-6263.

2. State Compensation Fund v. Symington, 174 Ariz. 188, 848 P.2d 273 (1993).

This case involved an emergency "budget balancing" bill enacted by the Arizona Legislature in 1992. Under the bill, an "alternative minimum tax" was imposed on the income received by the State Compensation Fund, an agency formed to provide worker's compensation insurance to Arizona employers. The Fund contended that the tax violated a provision of the Arizona Constitution forbidding special legislation.

I was hired by the Fund in early 1993, when the tax was to become effective, to challenge its validity. I filed an original action (called a special action under Arizona procedure) in the Arizona Supreme Court, which accepted discretionary jurisdiction because of the importance of the question presented and because the issue was of first impression. The tax would have significantly affected premiums for many state employers. On February 23, 1993, the Court issued an opinion invalidating the tax.

I was lead counsel for the Fund, but was assisted by Mark Fuller, now at Gallagher & Kennedy, 2575 East Camelback Road, Phoenix, Arizona 85016, 602-530-8185.

Opposing counsel was Rebecca White Berch, who was then the Arizona Solicitor General. She is currently Chief Justice of the Arizona Supreme Court. Her address is 1501 West Washington, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, and her telephone number is 602-452-3535.

3. US West Communications, Inc. v. Arizona Corporation Commission, 201 Ariz. 242, 34 P.3d 351 (2001).

This case involved the constitutionality of regulations promulgated by the Arizona Corporation Commission concerning deregulation of local telephone services. I represented AT&T, starting with administrative proceedings before the Commission, then in the Superior (trial) Court, the Court of Appeals, and eventually before the Arizona Supreme Court.

The central issue was whether the Arizona Constitution required competitive telephone rates and charges to be set in the traditional method, under which the Commission first determines the fair value of a utility's property and then allows a reasonable rate of return on that value. The Commission's regulations instead relied largely on the market to set rates among competitive carriers. US West, the incumbent monopolist, challenged those regulations and licenses issued by the Commission to various competitive local exchange carriers ("CLECs"), including AT&T.

Although a number of CLECs were involved in the case, I wrote the brief on behalf of the group and argued the case in the courts. The Superior Court upheld the regulations and licenses, but the Court of Appeals reversed in part. US West Communications, Inc. v. Arizona Corporation Commission, 198 Ariz. 208, 8 P.3d 396 (Cl. App. 2000). I wrote a petition for review, which was granted by the Supreme Court; the Court also granted US West's cross-petition. After oral argument, the Court held that although the Arizona Constitution mandated the Commission to determine the fair value of a utility's Arizona property, competitive rates were not required to be determined on the old rate-of-return method.

My co-counsel was Joan Burke, 1650 North First Avenue, Phoenix, Arizona 85003, 602-535-0396. The other CLECs were separately represented, but provided input on the briefing and oral arguments. I collaborated mostly with Thomas H. Campbell, Lewis & Roca, 40 North Central, Phoenix, Arizona 85004, 602-262-5723.

4. Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community v. Hull, 190 Ariz. 97, 945 P.2d 818 (1997).

This case involved the efforts of my client, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community (SRPMIC), to enter into a gaming compact with the State under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. An Arizona statute permitted the State to enter into gaming compacts with Indian tribes, but after signing compacts with sixteen tribes, the Governor refused to sign further compacts. The Arizona voters then adopted an initiative measure in 1996 requiring the Governor to sign a "standard gaming compact" with any tribe upon request. The initiative defined a standard compact. In late 1996, SRPMIC submitted a standard form of compact to Governor Symington and requested that he sign it on behalf of the State. The Governor instead tendered to the tribe a compact containing various non-standard provisions. On behalf of SRPMIC, co-counsel and I filed an original special action in the Arizona Supreme Court, seeking an order that the Governor sign the standard compact. I argued the case to the Supreme Court on behalf of SRPMIC.

The Court held that the Governor was obligated to enter into the standard compact, and rejected his arguments that the 1996 initiative violated separation of powers. The Court also rejected the Governor's arguments that there was no such thing as a standard compact. The Court left open, however, whether the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act permitted the Tribe to engage in all gaming specified in the standard compact.

My co-counsel were Thomas L. Hudson, Osborn Maledon, 2929 North Central Avenue, 21st Floor, Phoenix, Arizona 85012, 602-640-9000, and Philip J. Shea, 845 North Third Avenue, Phoenix, Arizona 85003, 602-254-3383.

5. Sears v. Hull, 192 Ariz. 65, 961 P.2d 1013 (1998).

This case involved an issue left open in Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community v. Hull, 190 Ariz. 97, 945 P.2d 818 (1997) – whether the provisions in the standard Indian gaming compact allowing casino-style gaming were illegal because Arizona did not generally allow such gaming by non-Indians. Shortly before the 1997 decision was entered, several residents of a community near the SRPMIC reservation filed suit in Superior Court, contending that the compacts were illegal for this reason. I represented SRPMIC in the trial proceedings. The trial judge found the compact illegal and enjoined the Governor from entering into the standard compact with SRPMIC.

I filed a notice of appeal on behalf of SRPMIC; the State also appealed. The Supreme Court granted a motion to transfer the appeal directly to that court, bypassing the intermediate Court of Appeals. I briefed and argued the case in the Supreme Court. After hearing oral argument, the Court reversed and vacated the injunction entered by the trial court, holding that the plaintiffs had no standing to challenge the compact. SRPMIC thereafter entered into a compact with the State and has since conducted very substantial gaming operations, the proceeds from which have greatly benefited the Community.

The State was represented by Thomas J. Dennis, currently at The Office of Legal Advocate, 3800 North Central Avenue, Suite 1500, Phoenix, Arizona 85012, 602-506-4111. The Governor was represented by Lisa Daniel Flores, now a Judge of the Superior Court, Maricopa County Superior Court, 201 West Jefferson, Phoenix, Arizona 85003, 602-372-0825.

Opposing counsel was Neil Vincent Wake, now a United States District Judge, who can be reached at United States District Court for the District of Arizona, 401 West Washington, Phoenix, Arizona 85003, 602-322-7640.

6. Medical Laboratory Management Consultants v. American Broadcasting Cos., 981 F. Supp. 1487 (D. Ariz. 1996); 30 F. Supp. 2d 1182 (D. Ariz. 1998), aff'd, 306 F.3d 806 (9th Cir. 2002).

This case involved a news report about the pap smear industry broadcast by the American Broadcasting Companies (“ABC”) on the national news show “Prime Time Live,” hosted by Diane Sawyer. As part of the broadcast, ABC submitted pap smears to various laboratories under fictitious names and then compared the results reached by each laboratory with previous readings of the pap smears. The suit was filed in 1995 in Maricopa County Superior Court by a Phoenix laboratory that was one of the subjects of the show, along with the manager of the laboratory, who was surreptitiously videotaped while in the laboratory’s corporate offices speaking to undercover ABC reporters. The suit made various tort and common law claims against ABC, Ms. Sawyer, and others, including defamation, invasion of privacy, fraud, and intrusion upon seclusion. My firm was retained to represent the defendants and we did so throughout the proceedings. I was lead counsel.

The suit was removed to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. In 1996, Judge Roslyn O. Silver denied the plaintiffs' motion to remand, and, after the defendants filed a motion to dismiss, dismissed several claims. After two years of intensive discovery, Judge Silver granted our motion for summary judgment on all but one claim; plaintiffs later voluntarily dismissed that claim and appealed.

The Ninth Circuit affirmed in 2002. The opinion held that (1) the visit to the laboratory's administrative offices by ABC's undercover representatives did not intrude upon a reasonably expected seclusion under Arizona law; (2) the secret videotaping of conversation with the laboratory manager by the undercover representatives for future public broadcast did not intrude on an objectively reasonable expectation of privacy; (3) the alleged trespass was not the legal cause of publication damages allegedly suffered by the laboratory; and (4) the news broadcast was substantially true. I argued the case to the Ninth Circuit.

My co-counsel were Diane M. Johnsen, now a Judge of the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division One, 1501 West Washington, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, 602-542-1432, and Jean Zoeller, Vice President Litigation, ABC, 500 South Buena Vista, Suite 108C, Burbank, California 91521, 818-560-8410.

7. Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002).

The issue in this case was whether the aggravating circumstances that must be found in order to subject a murder defendant to a potential sentence of death can be found by a judge, rather than a jury. Ring had been convicted of felony murder and sentenced to death after a superior court judge found two statutory aggravating circumstances. The Arizona Supreme Court vacated the finding of one aggravator, but affirmed the death sentence, rejecting Ring's argument that the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments required that a jury, not a judge, find the existence of the aggravating circumstance. The Arizona court acknowledged that recent Supreme Court decisions, such as Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), suggested that Arizona's capital sentencing scheme might be unconstitutional, but felt bound by Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639 (1990), which had upheld the Arizona statute against an identical attack.

In the fall of 2001, I was asked by Ring's counsel to file a certiorari petition on Ring's behalf. We filed the petition in September, 2001 and the petition was granted in January, 2001. The case was argued on April 22, 2002, with a compacted briefing schedule.

I argued the case on behalf of Ring. The Court overruled Walton, and held that the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments required that a jury, not a judge, find the aggravating circumstances that were necessary to subject a defendant to a capital sentence. The case was significant because it affected death penalty proceedings not only in Arizona, but in a number of other states. The Court remanded Ring's case to the Arizona Supreme Court for further proceedings.

My co-counsel were John A. Stookey, Osborn Maledon, 2929 North Central Avenue, 21st Floor, Phoenix, Arizona 85012, 602-640-9382, and Daniel L. Kaplan, now a Federal Public Defender, 850 West Adams Street, Suite 201, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, 602-382-2767.

Opposing counsel was Janet Napolitano, then Attorney General of Arizona, and now Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, Washington, D.C. 20528, 202-282-8000.

8. State v. Ring, 204 Ariz. 534, 65 P.3d 915 (2003).

After the Supreme Court's decision in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), which invalidated Arizona's death penalty scheme and required that aggravating circumstances that make a capital defendant eligible for the death penalty must be found by a jury, not a judge, the Supreme Court of Arizona appointed me in the summer of 2002 as lead counsel for all defendants under a death sentence whose cases were still on direct appeal. The court ordered those defendants to brief issues common to their cases raised by the United States Supreme Court's decision. Among those many issues were: (1) whether Ring error could be harmless; (2) whether a new sentencing proceeding was required where one aggravating factor had been found by the jury (or involved a prior conviction) but another had not; (3) whether any resentencing was barred by double jeopardy; (4) whether aggravating factors could be found by a jury other than the trial jury; (5) whether the Arizona Constitution provided a broader right to jury trial on aggravating factors than the United States Constitution; and (6) whether certain aggravating circumstances, even if not expressly found by the trial jury, were implicit in the verdict.

I drafted a consolidated brief, which then received comment from counsel representing the 27 other defendants whose cases were on direct appeal. After revising the brief, I argued the case to the Arizona Supreme Court, whose opinion was not issued until after I joined the bench. After the opinion was issued, counsel for individual defendants filed additional briefs in each case. With very few exceptions, the Court concluded (in opinions from which I recused myself) that the individual defendants (including Ring) were entitled to new sentencing proceedings.

Opposing counsel was Kent E. Cattani, Office of the Attorney General, 1275 West Washington, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, 602-542-8589.

9. PGA Tour, Inc. v. Martin, 204 F.3d 994 (9th Cir. 2000), aff'd, 532 U.S. 661 (2001).

The issue in this case was whether the PGA Tour, a professional golf association, was required by the Americans with Disabilities Act to allow a professional golfer with a malformed right leg to ride a golf cart in its competitive tournaments. My firm, Osborn Maledon, represented the PGA Tour, and my partner William J. Maledon represented the Tour at trial. In January, 1998, the United States District Court for the District of Oregon entered a permanent injunction requiring the Tour to allow use of the golf cart; the Tour appealed. I was asked to be lead counsel on appeal, had the lead role in drafting the briefs, and argued the case to the Ninth Circuit in 1999. That court issued its decision in March, 2001, affirming the judgment of the district court.

The Tour hired H. Bartow Farr III, as lead counsel in preparing a petition for certiorari, and I worked closely with him on the petition for certiorari. After certiorari was granted in the fall of 2000, I continued to work closely with Mr. Farr on the briefs, on which my name appears, and was intensively involved in the oral argument preparation. The case was argued in January 2001, and the Supreme Court issued its opinion in May of that year, affirming the Ninth Circuit.

10. Toscano v. Professional Golfers Association, 258 F.3d 978 (9th Cir. 2001).

This was an antitrust case brought by a professional golfer against the PGA and sponsors of Senior PGA Tournaments. The golfer alleged that by agreeing to abide by PGA Senior Tour rules, which allowed some golfers with historically good tournament records to be eligible for Tour events even if they had not achieved recent tournament success, the sponsors had entered into a combination in restraint of trade with each other and the Tour. (These rules allowed certain very popular golfers, such as Arnold Palmer, automatic entry in Senior Tour events, thus helping to boost attendance.) My partner William J. Maledon represented the sponsors and the Tour in the trial court, which entered a summary judgment in favor of the sponsors in 1999. The golfer appealed in late 1999, and I was asked to be lead counsel for the sponsors on appeal (the claims against the Tour were not summarily adjudicated). I drafted the briefs in coordination with trial counsel and argued the case to the Ninth Circuit in June, 2001.

The Ninth Circuit issued its opinion in August, 2001, holding that the sponsors had not violated the Sherman Act by agreeing to abide by the PGA Tour regulations. The decision was important to the continued success of the Senior Tour, as the presence of the golfers made eligible by the events were among the Tour's most popular participants.

Opposing counsel was Paul R. Smith, Bowman & Stella, 800 West Airport Freeway, Suite 860, Irving, Texas 75062, 214-922-0220.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Apart from the litigation activities already detailed, I would rank as most significant my participation as counsel for the Salt River Tribe and the Arizona Indian Gaming Association in a statewide initiative campaign in 2002. That campaign, which was successful, guaranteed the ability of all Arizona tribes to engage in gaming for the foreseeable future, even after then-existing compacts expired. I served as chief legal advisor for the Association during the campaign, had a lead role in the drafting of the complex initiative, and worked closely with the Association's consultants on strategy. The initiative prevailed by a narrow margin in November 2002, and has provided the structure for the continuation of Indian gaming and effective state regulation of such gaming activities.

After leaving state government service in 1983, I was occasionally called upon by those doing lobbying in my firm or other firms to assist in presentations to state agencies or the state legislature. I assisted a lawyer in another firm in pursuing legislation on behalf of Searle Corporation with respect to regulation of aspartame in the early 1980s. I pursued applications for planning permits, leases and sales in the State Land Department while in private practice during the 1980s and 1990s. While not typically viewed as lobbying, these activities arguably were covered by the Arizona lobbying law, so my firm (as a matter of precaution) typically registered all lawyers as lobbyists, and listed as lobbying clients all clients we represented in state agency non-litigation matters. The 1999 records of the Arizona Secretary of State (the last year available on line) indicate that the firm or I registered as lobbying for Jaren Associates and Ridgeway Oil Corporation, each of which I represented in connection with state land leases or purchases.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have regularly taught at the Arizona State University College of Law (now the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law) since arriving in Phoenix in 1974. From 1977 to 1980, I taught professional responsibility and Supreme Court litigation as an adjunct professor. The former course covered both ethics and professionalism and the latter focused on cases then pending before the Court. I cannot locate syllabi for those courses; the law school did not in those days require syllabi, and I believe that none were prepared.

After two terms in Government service, I returned as an adjunct professor to the College of Law in 1988, teaching a course on the legislative process, which focused both on the legal aspects of legislation and how legislation was pursued in Arizona. I cannot locate syllabi for those courses; the law school did not in those days require syllabi, and I believe that none were prepared.

In 1994 and 1995, as part of my firm's sabbatical program, I spent an academic year in residence at the law school as a visiting professor of law, teaching the first-year civil procedure courses to a small section. These courses covered, among other things, both jurisdiction and rules-based issues. I have not retained syllabi.

In the fall of 2001, again on sabbatical, I served as a Distinguished Visitor from Practice at the law school, again teaching civil procedure. I have not retained a syllabus.

I resumed teaching as an adjunct professor in the fall of 2002, again teaching civil procedure. In 2004, I taught a course on the federal courts, which focused on federal statutory and constitutional jurisdictional issues. From 2005 to 2010, I taught a civil procedure course each fall. I have retained syllabi for the 2004 federal courts course and the 2005-2010 civil procedure courses, and they are supplied. In 2010 and 2011, I also taught an appellate oral advocacy seminar, in which students prepare and then argue an actual case to a panel of lawyers and judges. The course does not have a syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I do not anticipate any such income or benefits.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I do not presently have such plans.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

The most likely area of conflict would be cases in which I had sat on the Arizona Supreme Court, particularly habeas corpus cases. I would recuse myself in any case in which I had a prior judicial involvement. Because I have been out of law practice since 2003, I do not believe there are any other categories of cases that are likely to present conflicts-of-interest. I would of course recuse myself from a case involving any company in which I had shareholdings.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

relations matters), I devoted substantial time to a number of appellate pro bono ventures. The two most significant were:

1. Bowen v. Public Agencies Opposed to Social Security Entrapment, 477 U.S. 1 (1986). In Bowen, I had submitted, along with Benna Ruth Solomon, then of the State and Local Legal Center, an amicus brief on behalf of the Council of State Governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the International City Management Association, the National Association of Counties, and the National League of Cities. I was then asked by the appellees to do the oral argument. I have no access to my time records, but I estimate that I devoted several months of time to the matter (in the area of 400–500 hours).
2. Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). In Ring, I was asked by counsel who had handled the appeal in the Arizona Supreme Court on behalf of Mr. Ring to file a certiorari petition. I did so (with help from others in my firm), and after certiorari was granted, filed as counsel of record an opening and reply brief. I also orally argued the case. After the Court held in Ring's favor, I was appointed by the Arizona Supreme Court to brief and argue on remand a consolidated action involving issues arising from the Court's decision common to all death row defendants whose cases were still on direct appeal. See State v. Ring, 204 Ariz. 534, 65 P.3d 915 (2003). I devoted the better part of a year to the Ring cases, and estimate that I spent about 1500 hours on them.

In addition to my pro bono litigation practice, I have devoted, both as an attorney and as a judge, substantial time to uncompensated teaching at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law at Arizona State University. I was in residence as a professor twice (once for a semester and once for an entire academic year) and have taught as an adjunct professor in most years over the past several decades. I am certain that this teaching has involved thousands of hours. I have also lectured at a great number of continuing legal education events, both as an attorney and later as a judge.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

There is no selection commission in Arizona to recommend candidates for nomination to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

I received a phone call from an attorney with the White House Counsel's Office on July 25, 2011 to discuss my interest in being considered as a candidate for nomination. Since August 8, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 12, 2011, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 2, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you, Justice.

Let me say at the outset, for those who have not attended these hearings before, that if you are waiting for Senator Kyl and I to ask those questions to catch the nominees in some erroneous ruling on a case or something, that is not likely to occur.

Justice HURWITZ. And I have made one error already, Senator. I think I forgot to introduce my friend Bartow Farr, who is back here in the audience also.

Senator DURBIN. What we do during the course of preparing for these nominations is to ask the prospective nominees to go through a series of screening committees, a number of questions, and that is just the beginning. Once they have cleared that hurdle, they are on to the White House where the White House and the Federal Bureau of Investigation go through extensive background checks. A lot of questions are asked preparing them for their next step to come before the Judiciary Committee. And if there is no controversy associated with their nomination, it is rare that these become controversial and contentious hearings. So instead we ask a few questions, but I hope that you understand that most of the questions of substance about character and knowledge and the like have been asked in detail before these witnesses arrive.

Let me turn it over first to my colleague Senator Kyl.

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you for making that comment. Back when I used to be able to chair the Committee, I said something similar because I think it was somewhat disappointing for folks who would come all the way back to Washington and then go home and say was that all there was to it. Well, that is just the tip of the iceberg. All of the hard investigation and the like has occurred really behind the scenes.

But sometimes there is a question that you just want to ask to be able to get something out into the open, and I do have—incidentally, I think, Justice Hurwitz, were you playing hooky from—I heard something about how you were not sure you could get to the hearing because you had some hearings in the court, and I think somebody said that would be an adequate excuse.

Justice HURWITZ. In fact, Senator Kyl, we had a calendar yesterday morning, and so I scooted out of town as soon as it was over. So you have not interfered with the business of the Arizona Supreme Court.

Senator KYL. That is a hard-working Justice.

I just wanted to make sure that one of my favorite subjects was covered, and that is, the ability of a person who has been active in life, including political life, as you have been, and working for political figures and a person with strong political convictions can get on the bench and put those personal convictions aside, applying the law as you believe it applies to any given case. It is not always easy for people to do, but I will say, Mr. Chairman, that Justice Hurwitz does not have a reputation as an activist judge and to my way of thinking has been quite successful in that very difficult job of separating political views from the job at hand, namely, deciding cases.

I wanted to read or at least comment on one decision, and that has to do with your personal disagreement with a very long, 200-year prison sentence that the appellant was arguing was unconstitutional. And you said in your concurring opinion that your personal opinion was that it was unduly long, but that you had to uphold the punishment anyway because you believed you were constrained by the power of the legislature and the precedents of the United States Supreme Court.

Now, that is not easy to do. Can you explain to us how you tried to accomplish that result in your jurisprudence?

Justice HURWITZ. Thank you, Senator. I think that for every judge, no matter what his or her background, one of the most difficult parts of the job is deciding the case in front of you on the law and the facts and trying not to let extraneous things interfere. In that regard, I had some interesting mentorship earlier in my career from Justice Stewart, who once said, I think, in an opinion that he regarded a law as “uncommonly silly,” but it was nonetheless constitutional. And our job is to decide whether on the law and the facts of the case a particular statute or particular set of facts meets legal muster, not whether we would have done it differently.

And I think that is something my career on the Arizona Supreme Court has demonstrated I can do and will do, if lucky enough to be confirmed to the Ninth Circuit.

Senator KYL. Thank you. Just one other point. It is related. You wrote something or said this in a comment—I think it was written down—that it is better for a court to confront issues when presented, briefed, and argued by the parties with a stake in the outcome, and yet I know at least your reputation is not one as an activist. So can you comment, if you recall what that statement was made in the context of, and what your views on how aggressively judges should approach deciding cases is?

Justice HURWITZ. Senator, I do not remember the particular context in which I made that remark, but I adhere to it. It seems to me that judges in almost every case should decide the issues in front of them as well and as completely as they can and leave for the next case the issues that are not posed by this one, where the parties have the opportunity in front of them to make the arguments, where people have the opportunity to know that the issue is before the court and might get decided. And I think without regard to liberal/conservative sort of political labels, I think that is a judicious conservative approach to decision-making. Decide the issue in front of you. Decide it fairly. Do not duck the issues in front of you, but do not reach out for issues that are not presented in the particular case.

Senator KYL. I appreciate it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator DURBIN. Justice Hurwitz, when you were in private practice, you argued a case, Ring v. Arizona, before the United States Supreme Court, and in that case the Supreme Court held that under the 14th Amendment, a jury, not a judge, is required to find the aggravating circumstances that make a defendant eligible to receive the death penalty. Interestingly enough, your opposing counsel in the case was then-State Attorney General of Arizona, Janet Napolitano, who later appointed you to the Arizona Supreme Court when she was Governor.

Could you tell me a little bit about the facts of that case and your involvement in it, both at the Supreme Court level as well as subsequent litigation on remand in Arizona?

Justice HURWITZ. Thank you, Senator. First, I should say that when I was appointed to the Arizona Supreme Court, then-Governor Napolitano said she did this so she would not have to argue against me ever again.

Justice HURWITZ. I took that with a grain of salt.

I got involved in this case because one of my law partners at the time, Larry Hammond, was one of the noted criminal lawyers in the State, and Mr. Ring's lawyers approached him to file a cert. petition, and he said, "That is not the kind of work I do but Andy Hurwitz does, and so maybe he will take this on for you." And I did because it was clear that it was an issue that the Court had to take in light of the Apprendi decision, which had talked about juries finding aggravating circumstances.

Our firm took on the argument pro bono, and I was helped by my friend Mr. Farr, who is in the back of the room. And it was a very expedited schedule. We took on the case in December, and the Court heard the argument in April.

I did have the privilege of arguing against an old friend and an excellent appellate lawyer, then-Attorney General Napolitano. And the issue for the Court was really whether or not the Apprendi decision would apply to capital cases, and the Court decided 7-2 that it did.

After that, in something that I thought was unprecedented, when we got back to Arizona and I thought I had exhausted the resources of my firm in doing this large pro bono representation, one of the Justices of the Court asked me to represent the 28 people who were still on Death Row on direct appeal in an argument about how the Ring case ought to apply to them. And so we had to put together a consolidated brief that covered these 28 cases, to which I argued to the Arizona Supreme Court just before I went on the bench. I learned of the decision after I got on the bench, which I thought was a tribute to my colleagues on the bench, none of whom told me how it was going to come out. And, essentially, the court decided that the Ring decision would apply to these people. Some of them go new trials; some of them did not. And as to the remainder of them, the State agreed to reduce their sentences to life.

Senator DURBIN. Let me ask you about one other case that you presided over, the case of State v. Gant in 2007, involving a compelling Fourth Amendment question, namely, whether it is constitutional under the search incident to the arrest exception to the Fourth Amendment's warrant requirement for police officers to conduct a warrantless search of a person's car when the person has been arrested and placed in handcuffs in the back of a police car and the scene has been secured. You joined with the majority of your court in holding this warrantless search was not constitutional, the view later upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

Can you tell us about the facts of the case and the reasoning that your court adopted?

Justice HURWITZ. Yes, and as you pointed out, Senator Durbin, I was not the author of that opinion. I think now-Chief Justice Berch was the author of that opinion.

The facts of the case, as I recall them, were that the police had a tip that Mr. Gant was coming to a particular place, and they suspected him of being involved in, I think, marijuana trafficking. When he got there, he was taken out of the car and arrested, put into the police car, and then the police thereafter searched the car. And the question, which was an open one under Supreme Court jurisprudence, at least as we viewed it, was whether or not the so-called Shermell exception to warrantless searches—the notion that the police are entitled to protect themselves by searching the scene around them and making sure there is nothing dangerous there—still applied once the defendant had been taken away from the car and effectively immobilized. And our court determined that because the defendant had been put in the back of the police car, there were no other people present, there was no danger to the police officers, there was no obstruction or no inability to get a warrant, that the warrant requirement of the Fourth Amendment applied.

That was a 3–2 decision in our court. It was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, and the U.S. Supreme Court took the position of the majority, that under the circumstances of this case, the warrant was required.

Senator DURBIN. The last case I want to ask you about is one that has been the subject of law school debate as well as debate in the Judiciary Committee, and will continue to be, I guess, as long as we try to understand the Bill of Rights in the context of modern America. It was Citizens Publishing Company v. Miller ex rel. Elleithe, 2005. You authored a unanimous opinion holding that a newspaper was protected by the First Amendment when it ran a letter to the editor that advocated to “execute five of the first Muslims we encounter” in relation to the Iraq war. Your court held that the letter did not constitute an incitement to imminent lawless action, fighting words, or true threat of violence.

Can you tell me your reasoning in that case?

Justice HURWITZ. Yes, Senator. The letter was in a strange context. It said the next time there is an atrocity in Iraq we should find the first five Muslims we see and execute them. So one of the questions in the case was did that mean in Iraq or in the United States. The plaintiffs in the case were Muslim American citizens from Tucson who were suing for intentional infliction of emotional distress, arguing that this letter was actionable. And what we did, I think, was applied classic First Amendment law, which is that, in general, we should not restrain newspapers from saying things; in general, speech is, as Justice Brandeis once said, the great disinfectant, that we enter into the American debate and we have this speech and people say bad things and we respond to them by telling them they are wrong.

In this case we found that, in context, this really was not truly a threat against anybody living in Tucson. It was hyperbole about the atrocities in the war, and that while it was a reprehensible statement and one that ought to be condemned, it ought not be condemned by the courts by removing it from the paper or making the newspaper liable, but condemned by responsible citizens responding to the statement, as they well did in the Tucson citizen letters to the editor section.

Senator DURBIN. Senator Kyl, anything further?

Senator KYL. No. Thank you.

Senator DURBIN. You get the closing argument. Is there anything you would like to say before—

Justice HURWITZ. I have been a lawyer long enough to know not to say anything when it is not needed, and so I have no closing remarks, sir.

[Laughter.]

Senator DURBIN. Justice Hurwitz, thank you for joining us today. We are honored.

Justice HURWITZ. Thank you both.

Senator DURBIN. And we thank all your friends and family for joining you as well.

Senator DURBIN. The second panel that we will have approach the witness table includes previously introduced Kristine Baker of Arkansas, George Russell III of Maryland—because I met George IV—John Lee of Illinois, and Jay Tharp of Illinois.

If you would please raise your right hand. Do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before the Committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. Baker. I do.

Mr. Lee. I do.

Mr. Tharp. I do.

Judge Russell. I do.

Senator DURBIN. Let the record reflect that the witnesses have answered in the affirmative, and let me start with Mrs. Baker. Please, if you would like to introduce family and friends who are present and make an opening statement, I invite you.

STATEMENT OF KRISTINE GERHARD BAKER, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF AR-KANSAS

Ms. BAKER. Thank you, Senator. I appreciate it. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Ranking Member Kyl, for convening the hearing today. I would like to thank President Obama for the nomination. I would like to thank Senator Pryor for recommending me to the President. And I would like to thank Senator Boozman for his support of my recommendation and also nomination. I would also like to take this time to thank Senator Pryor and Senator Boozman for their kind words today.

If I could briefly introduce family and friends who are in attendance: my husband, John Baker, is here, and as the Senators alluded to, my four children are in attendance as well.

My parents are here, Karl and Edie Gerhard; and my in-laws are here, Charlie and Nancy Baker.

In addition to those family members, I am joined today by several colleagues and friends, and I also have several family members, colleagues, and friends watching from home.

I have no other opening remarks. I appreciate the opportunity. Thank you.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1998 to 2000, I was an associate attorney at Williams & Anderson LLP. My practice was devoted to litigation. I handled and assisted in handling primarily commercial litigation cases, representing both plaintiffs and defendants. I participated in the trials of complex commercial litigation cases, including two one-week jury trials. I handled matters involving allegations of deceptive trade practices, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud. I also handled First Amendment claims, defamation and related privacy-tort claims, and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claims.

In 2000, I joined Quattlebaum, Grooms, Tull & Burrow PLLC, which was then a newly-formed firm. My practice has been devoted to litigation, and I continue to represent both plaintiffs and defendants. I handle and assist in handling numerous cases, including many complex commercial litigation cases that have culminated in multi-week jury trials in state and federal courts. I have also participated in bench trials. I have worked on class actions and cases involving multiple plaintiffs and multiple defendants. The types of claims I have litigated vary, and include matters involving allegations of deceptive trade practices, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud. I also handle First Amendment claims, defamation and related privacy-tort claims, and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claims. In addition, I have handled matters involving employment discrimination, securities violations, unfair competition, tortious interference, products liability, construction disputes, real estate disputes, Fair Housing Act claims, Freedom of Information Act claims, and insurance coverage disputes.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

Throughout my career, I have represented individuals and business organizations of all forms and sizes, including sole proprietorships, partnerships, limited liability companies, and corporations. Clients that I have represented include individuals, local businesses, regional businesses, Fortune 500 companies, and governmental bodies.

From 1998 to 2000, I worked on a variety of business-related disputes involving contract and tort claims. I represented an insurance company in a suicide exclusion case at trial and assisted in representing a manufacturing company in a case involving a tractor trailer load shift that resulted in the death of the plaintiff driver. I participated in a binding arbitration on behalf of a company challenging the territory for distribution of its products. I also worked on matters involving constitutional claims, including alleged Eighth Amendment violations.

From 1998 to the present, I have handled a variety of First Amendment and Freedom of Information Act issues, including but not limited to motions to quash reporters' subpoenas, challenges to prior restraints, claims of defamation, claims of invasion of privacy, and requests for access to public records and information.

Since 2000, some of the more significant cases I have worked on involved toxic tort claims in which multiple plaintiffs alleged product liability and tort claims and sought recovery for personal injury, nuisance, property damage, medical monitoring, and emotional distress due to alleged environmental contamination and allegedly defective products. Specifically, since 2005, I have worked on MDL products liability cases involving welding rods and manganese fume. I have participated in trials of these claims in various state courts, including Arkansas and Louisiana, and in the federal MDL court in the Northern District of Ohio.

Since 2004, the number of employment discrimination cases I have handled has increased. I have handled in administrative proceedings and in federal and state court claims for discrimination, harassment, wrongful termination, and retaliation, as well as claims arising under the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, wage and hour laws, and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act.

- (1) Farm Fresh Producers, LLC, et al. v. Catfish Producers, LLC, et al., No. 2004 CV 8775 (Cir. Ct., Pulaski Cnty., Ark. filed Aug. 13, 2004).

I represented two defendants in this securities-fraud case involving 13 plaintiffs and seven defendants. Plaintiffs sought up to $20 million in damages. The allegations centered on a two-tiered securities offering in a catfish processing plant in South Arkansas and business transactions that resulted from that offering. The case spanned several years, involved numerous business entities, and lead up to the involuntary bankruptcy of one entity. Many of the parties had guarantees and reimbursement obligations as a result of the business transactions at issue. I was associate counsel. I deposed numerous witnesses and briefed and argued many legal issues prior to and during trial. At trial, I assisted in jury selection, examined witnesses including several plaintiffs, argued motions in limine, argued the directed-verdict motions, and argued jury instructions. Following a six-week jury trial, the defense prevailed. The Honorable Jay Moody, Pulaski County, Arkansas, Circuit Court Judge presided. An appeal was filed with the Supreme Court of the State of Arkansas, but that appeal was later dismissed by all parties as moot as a result of settlement. *United Farms Inc., et al. v. I represented several defendant welding rod manufacturers in this case alleging products liability and failure to warn claims. The case was litigated in the Northern District of Ohio as part of an MDL proceeding. The plaintiff welder is an Iowa resident who spent much of his career in Iowa and alleges exposure there; his claims therefore were decided by reference to Iowa law. As associate counsel, I deposed numerous witnesses and briefed and argued many legal issues prior to and during trial. At trial, I assisted in jury selection, argued motions in limine, argued evidentiary motions, designated video testimony of several witnesses to be played during trial, argued the directed-verdict motions, and argued document admissibility issues. Following a three-week trial, the jury found in favor of plaintiffs and awarded damages and punitive damages in the amount of $5,787,500. The Honorable Kathleen M. O'Malley, then-United States District Court Judge for the Northern District of Ohio, presided. The case is now on appeal in the Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

(5) Columbian National Title Ins. Co. vs. Global Title Co., Inc., No. 2004 CV 011154 (Cir. Ct., Pulaski Cnty., Ark. filed Oct. 15, 2004).

I served as lead trial counsel for a title insurance company in this matter. The case involved a now-defunct real estate title company, whose principals allegedly committed fraud, breach of contract, and conversion. The claims against the business exceeded $2.9 million. I worked with counsel for claimants, counsel for the principals of the defunct real estate title company, and the court to develop a procedure to resolve efficiently through legal proceedings undisputed title insurance claims. I took the lead in developing and overseeing that procedure, reporting to the court periodically at hearings on the status of undisputed claims. In addition, I was sole counsel at numerous proceedings in the case, including lengthy evidentiary hearings seeking a receivership, seeking to impose constructive trusts, and resolving disputed claims against the title insurance company. The court appointed a receiver and imposed constructive trusts. The title insurance company prevailed on some, but not all, of the disputed claims. Certain of the principals pleaded guilty to related criminal charges in federal court, and others filed for bankruptcy protection. The case has resulted in two insurance coverage disputes; I was directly involved in briefing and handling one of these coverage disputes pending in federal court. I worked with the United States Attorney's Office, the United States Bankruptcy Trustee, and the court-appointed receiver throughout this matter to resolve issues. The Honorable Tim Fox, Pulaski County, Arkansas, Circuit Court Judge has presided.

(6) Estate of Hogan v. Potlatch Corp., No. 5:98 CV 00156 (E.D. Ark. filed Apr. 16, 1998).

I represented the defendant in this truck rollover case. The estate of plaintiff alleged that the tractor trailer he was driving rolled over, leading to his death, because the load was improperly braced and therefore shifted en route. I was associate counsel. I deposed witnesses, identified third-party witnesses, and briefed all issues prior to trial. At trial, I assisted in jury selection, examined witnesses, argued motions in limine, argued the directed-verdict motions, and argued jury instructions. The jury returned a defense verdict. No. 2007 CV 13856 (Cir. Ct., Pulaski Cnty., Ark. filed Oct. 16, 2007).

A business client sought a tax refund in excess of $2 million from the State of Arkansas for use taxes paid for purchases of natural gas. Raising an issue of first impression under Arkansas tax law, my client maintained that the natural gas purchased from sellers outside the state was not subject to taxation since it did not “finally come to rest” under Arkansas law before consumption in the business client’s manufacturing facility. The State of Arkansas prevailed in a bench trial. I served as associate counsel. I assisted in the work-up of this case for trial and advised as to legal strategy during the 2009 trial. The Honorable Jay Moody, Pulaski County, Arkansas, Circuit Court Judge presided. My client appealed the adverse ruling. I was involved in briefing the appeal, and the Arkansas Supreme Court affirmed the trial court’s decision in Alcoa World Alumina, L.L.C. v. Weiss, No. 09-688 (Feb. 5, 2010).

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Along with my litigation experience in state and federal courts, I counsel clients regularly on employment law matters. I represent clients in assessing, mediating, and responding to charges of discrimination filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("EEOC"). I have participated in over 30 mediations with the EEOC, including EEOC offices in Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Tennessee. I also regularly represent clients in litigating employment discrimination claims in federal and state court, including but not limited to claims of discrimination based on age, race, gender, disability, and pregnancy. In addition, I have handled Family and Medical Leave Act claims, wage and hour claims, Employee Retirement Income Security Act claims, and claims brought pursuant to the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act. I serve as lead counsel in these matters. I have obtained summary judgment rulings in favor of my clients in many cases I have handled, thereby resolving many of these cases prior to trial.

I have arbitrated seven cases with the American Arbitration Association, private arbitrators, and the National Association of Securities Dealers Dispute Resolution. These cases have included construction disputes, disputes regarding covenants not to compete, and securities violations.

As a partner of my law firm, I share administrative and management duties with the firm's seven other equity partners, and I am primarily responsible for handling all personnel matters at the firm. I am responsible for employment counseling and employee terminations. In the course of my practice, I regularly work with, supervise, and train associate attorneys and litigation support staff.

Since 2008, I have served as a member of the Arkansas Supreme Court Committee on Model Jury Instructions – Civil. I was appointed to this committee by the Justices of the Arkansas Supreme Court in 2008 and reappointed in 2010. The committee authors the book Arkansas Model Jury Instructions (Civil), which is published annually. The committee is charged with reviewing recently released court decisions, new and revised statutes, and other legal authority to create or revise the model jury instructions and comments to the instructions to reflect accurately the current state of Arkansas law. In addition, I and other members of the firm prepared for the Arkansas Press Association the publication Public and Legal Notices Digest: A compilation of Arkansas statutes requiring publication of public and legal notices in newspapers (Ark. Press Ass'n ed. 2011). This publication is available free of charge to the public on the Arkansas Press Association's website.

I have never performed any lobbying activities.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I anticipate receiving distributions of non-wage income from two family-owned limited liability companies of which I am a part owner. These companies hold investment and real estate assets, and future non-wage income distributions are not guaranteed and are subject to fluctuation.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If confirmed, I will carefully review and address any real or potential conflicts in accordance with the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, including Canon 3 of the Code, as well as all applicable policies and procedures of the United States Courts. I will follow all applicable laws, orders, rules, customs, and practices in addressing conflicts.

If confirmed, I will immediately resign from my affiliation and partnership with Quattlebaum, Grooms, Tull & Burrow PLLC. For a period of time after taking the bench, I will not accept cases brought by the attorneys of the law firm with whom I practiced. I will also recuse myself from any matters that I handled or supervised as an attorney in private practice, as well as any matters substantially related to matters I handled or supervised, although I am not aware of any such conflicts of interest.

My husband is a partner at Mitchell Williams in Little Rock, Arkansas. If confirmed, I will recuse myself from all matters involving him or his firm. My father-in-law is of counsel to the Rose Law Firm in Little Rock, Arkansas. I will follow 28 U.S.C. § 455, the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, including Canon 3 of the Code, and all applicable policies and procedures of the United States Courts in cases in which my father-in-law or his firm appear. Finally, I will recuse from all cases involving companies in which I own stock or with which I have an ongoing business relationship. I will diligently keep apprised of my financial and personal interests so as to address conflicts and potential conflicts proactively.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I will resolve any potential conflict of interest in accordance with the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 455, the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, including Canon 3 of the Code, and all applicable policies and procedures of the United States Courts. If confirmed, I will carefully review and address any real or potential conflicts or the appearance of conflict at the outset of each case.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I regularly accept prisoner and other appointment cases from the federal courts. These cases have included suits brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by a female inmate after a guard allegedly raped her, by inmates regarding allegedly deficient medical and dental treatment, and by elderly and infirm inmates regarding allegedly deficient medical treatment and the procedures required to obtain such treatment. All of these matters have involved representing clients through discovery, in responding to dispositive motions, on appeal at the Eighth Circuit on the issue of qualified immunity, and either through settlement or trial. I also have represented through federal court appointment plaintiffs in employment discrimination suits.

I am a member of the Pulaski County Bar Association's Volunteer Organization Center for Arkansas Legal Services ("VOCALS"). I regularly accept from it cases and assignments to review case files, research potential claims, and advise clients regarding the status of their potential and pending cases.

On average, throughout my legal career, I have devoted approximately 100 to 150 hours per year to pro bono legal matters.

I also have served on the boards of non-profit entities in the community and volunteer for non-profit entities. As a board member, I have reviewed by-laws, assessed director and officer liability policies, advised on employment matters, and participated in each entity's day-to-day projects. For example, as a board member of Dress for Success Little Rock, I regularly staffed the non-profit's clothing boutique and assisted women served by the organization in selecting outfits for job interviews. In addition to board service, I have volunteered with various other community organizations to plant trees, deliver food baskets, and serve meals to members of the community.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

There is no selection commission in Arkansas for vacancies on the federal bench. On November 17, 2008, after two sitting judges took senior status, I wrote to Senator Blanche Lincoln and Senator Mark Pryor, indicating my interest in the position of United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas. I filled out a questionnaire sent by Senator Lincoln and returned it December 19, 2008. On December 29, 2008, I met with Senator Lincoln in Little Rock. On or about January 2, 2009, I met with Senator Pryor in Little Rock. On July 17, 2011, Senator Pryor informed me that he was recommending me and others to the President for consideration. On July 20, 2011, Senators Pryor and Boozman publicly announced a list of three individuals they were recommending to the President for consideration. On July 26, 2011, I met separately with Senators Pryor and Boozman in Washington, D.C. Since July 29, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 7, 2011, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On November 2, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Mr. John Lee of Chicago, please introduce family and friends with you and make any opening statement you feel appropriate.

STATEMENT OF JOHN Z. LEE, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator. First of all, I would like to thank this Committee for your consideration of my nomination. I would like to thank particularly Senator Durbin for chairing this hearing and for recommending me to the President for nomination.

I would also like to thank Senator Leahy and Senator Grassley for this hearing, as well as Senator Kyl for being here today. Thank you very much.

I would also like to thank President Obama for the great privilege and honor of the nomination itself.

I would also like to thank Senator Kirk for his support of my nomination, and I am sure like everyone else here, I wish him a fast and speedy recovery.

If I may, I would like to introduce my friends and family who are here today. First of all, with my family, I would like to introduce Dr. June Lee along with our children: my daughter, Kaitlyn Lee, and our son, Noah. Also with me today are my parents, Sun Koo Lee and Hwa Za Lee, who brought me to this country many, many years ago, over 40 years ago.

I would also like to acknowledge my brothers, who could not be here today: my brother, Daniel, his wife, Carrie, and their sons, Wyatt and Ryder; as well as my brother, David, who is a school teacher in Chicago.

I would also like to acknowledge my grandmother, who passed away this last year. She raised me for much of my young childhood, and much of whom I am today I owe to her kindness, generosity, and love, so I was to acknowledge her.

Last, my friend and colleague, Jeff Cross, who joined me today, and I want to recognize all the friends and colleagues, particularly those at Freeborn & Peters, who are watching on the webcast.

Thank you.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

Since I started practicing law in 1992, the vast majority of my legal practice has been before the federal courts. As a trial attorney at the United States Department of Justice, my responsibilities included representing the United States in federal courts in the Third, Seventh and Ninth Circuits. Most of the cases arose under federal environmental statutes, such as the Clean Water Act, the Clean Air Act, RCRA and CERCLA.

Since joining private practice in 1995, I have expanded my legal practice to include the litigation of complex commercial disputes, including cases involving antitrust, intellectual property, employment and business tort issues. Most of these cases have been in federal courts, particularly those in the Seventh and Ninth Circuits. I have also represented clients in a number of criminal investigations in matters involving antitrust and financial regulations.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

During my tenure at the United States Department of Justice, I represented the United States in environmental matters and worked closely with the Environmental Protection Agency and the Departments of Defense and Interior. Since entering private practice, I have represented public and private companies as well as individual business persons. I have also represented low income clients on a pro bono basis.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My practice has consisted almost entirely of litigation. During the time that I served as a trial attorney in the Environment & Natural Resources Division of the United States Department of Justice, I appeared in court whenever my matters required it, typically once every several months. Since entering private practice, I have appeared in court on average once a month, often more frequently depending upon the needs of a particular case.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. federal courts: 85%
- 2. state courts of record: 10%
- 3. other courts: 0%
- 4. administrative agencies: 5%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. civil proceedings: 95%
- 2. criminal proceedings: 5%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried to verdict, judgment or final decision an eight-week jury trial as second chair counsel as well as three shorter bench trials as lead counsel. I have also served as co-lead trial counsel in a two-week AAA arbitration and as second chair counsel in a JAMS arbitration.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 1. jury: | 17% |
| 2. non-jury: | 83% |

e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

Trigen-Oklahoma City Energy Corp. v. Oklahoma Gas and Electric Co., No. 01-178, cert. denied, Oct. 29, 2001 (brief in opposition). Copy supplied.

Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
 - b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
 - c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

Mr. Benford was a fork lift operator seeking damages for wrongful termination. We were able to develop a litigation strategy that resulted in a favorable settlement. See generally *Benford v. In this case, the plaintiff, Ms. Boumehdi, filed an action under Title VII and the Equal Pay Act, alleging gender discrimination in the workplace. Representing the defendant as lead counsel, I was successful in obtaining summary judgment on behalf of the defendant in district court. The Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit reversed the ruling on several grounds, see Boumehdi v. Plastag Holdings, LLC, 489 F.3d 781 (7th Cir. 2007), and the matter eventually settled.

In this multi-district employment class action, plaintiffs were former employees of the Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Railway, who negotiated and executed settlement agreements to resolve claims of work-related hearing loss. Plaintiffs alleged, among other things, that they were fraudulently induced to enter into the agreements. We represented the defendant. After a multi-week trial, the jury rendered a verdict in our client's favor. I participated in all stages of this matter, including fact and expert discovery, class certification briefing, dispositive motion practice, and pre-trial preparations. I also served as second chair counsel during the trial.

6. McDonald's Corp. v. MGA Entertainment, Inc., 03-C-1026 (N.D. Ill.) (Gettleman, J.) (2003)

The dispute in this action involved McDonald's right to manufacture and use toys based upon the Bratz-line of dolls manufactured by MGA Entertainment. The parties had entered into a license agreement that provided McDonald's certain rights to use the Bratz trademark, design and copyrights. MGA, however, sent McDonald's a letter prohibiting McDonald's from using the dolls. McDonald's filed suit against MGA, alleging that it had breached its contract with McDonald's. MGA counterclaimed, alleging that McDonald's had breached its trademarks and copyrights, and filed a motion for preliminary injunction. Representing McDonald's, we prevailed after a multi-week preliminary injunction hearing. My partner, Michael Freeborn, and I served as lead counsel for McDonald's in this matter. Reported decisions include: McDonald's Corp. v. MGA Entertainment, Inc., No. 03-C-1026, 2003 WL 25669323 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 6, 2003).

We represented the plaintiff in this action against a number of defendants who were alleged to have been involved in a conspiracy to commit mortgage fraud. The defendants included building construction contractors, real estate brokers, title company agents and real estate appraisers. I was lead counsel for plaintiff in this case. As we were conducting extensive fact discovery, we were also assisting the United States Attorney's Office in Rockford, Illinois, in the government's investigation of the conspiracy. 8. Scialabba v. Sierra Blanca No. 1 Condo. Ass'n, 00-C-5344 (N.D. Ill.) (Conlon, J.)

In this pro bono matter, I was asked by the Chicago Lawyers' Committee on Civil Rights Under Law to represent Mr. Scialabba and his parents in a lawsuit against their condominium association for violations of the Fair Housing Act, among other claims. Mr. Scialabba had been seriously injured in an automobile accident and suffered from extensive brain injury. The court's ruling on summary judgment was significant because the court found that, under the Fair Housing Act, housing providers had a duty to make good faith efforts to accommodate disabled residents, even if the landlord or housing association believed that the resident posed a threat to the property, health or safety of others. See Scialabba v. Sierra Blanca No. 1 Condo. Ass'n, No. 00-C-5344, 2001 WL 803676 (N.D. Ill. July 16, 2002). I was the lead attorney in this matter.

This case involved a declaratory judgment action brought by a number of insurance companies to enforce the terms of certain general comprehensive liability insurance policies. At issue were environmental clean-up costs related to hundreds of different manufacturing and waste disposal sites located throughout the country. After a multi-week jury trial, the parties settled during jury deliberations. In one of my first cases at the Department of Justice, the government was sued by plaintiff for recovery of clean up costs associated with its manufacturing site. According to plaintiff, the government had used the facility in the early 1950's as a production plant for airplane parts. As lead attorney for the United States, I argued that the government could not be held liable under CERCLA for such actions under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. The district court agreed. See Rospatch Jessco Corp. v. Chrysler Corp., 829 F. Supp. 224 (W.D. Mich. 1993). In so doing, the court clarified the applicability of CERCLA to government activities.

This matter has also provided me with additional experience with a variety of criminal law issues, such as those pertaining to the Federal Sentencing Guidelines.

I serve on the Board of Directors of the Coordinated Advice and Referral Program for Legal Services ("CARPLS"), and have been a member of the Board since August 2004 and a past President of the Board. CARPLS is the legal services "hotline" for Cook County, serving more than 50,000 low income clients every year. My duties as a Board member require approximately 15 to 20 hours annually of my time.

The Willow Creek Legal Aid Clinic in Hoffman Estates, Illinois, is a partnership between Willow Creek Church and CARPLS and provides free legal services to low income individuals in the Northwest suburbs. I regularly serve as an attorney at the clinic and work approximately 40 to 60 hours a year advising clients at the clinic.

I serve as the President of the Board of Directors of Asian Human Services of Chicago ("AHS"), and have been a member of the Board since approximately August 2006. AHS was established in 1978 to meet the social service needs of the Asian American immigrant communities in Chicago. I spend approximately 20 to 30 hours a year on matters related to AHS.

In addition, I have represented low income clients on a pro bono basis in a number of matters in federal court, including Scialabba v. Sierra Blanca No. 1 Condo. Ass'n, 00-C-5344 (N.D. Ill.) (Fair Housing Act case), and Benford v. Chicago Beverage Systems, Inc., 07-CV-06958 (N.D. Ill.) (age discrimination case).

If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In January 2011, Senator Richard Durbin formed a bipartisan screening committee, chaired by Dick Devine, to evaluate applications for the position of United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. I submitted an application to the Committee. In February 2011, Mr. Devine contacted me to schedule an interview with two members of the screening committee. I interviewed with Mr. Devine and Ms. Betty Jang on February 16, 2011. I interviewed with the entire judicial screening committee on February 21, 2011.

In March 2011, I was contacted by Senator Durbin's office to schedule an interview with Senator Durbin. I interviewed with Senator Durbin at his Chicago office on March 28, 2011.

Since July 15, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 25, 2011, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On November 10, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? Senator DURBIN. Thank you.
Mr. John Tharp, same opportunity.

STATEMENT OF JOHN J. THARP, JR., NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF IL-LINOIS

Mr. THARP. Senator Durbin, thanks very much. As a trial lawyer, I am loath to waive an opening statement, but I will do so today in favor of just making a few thank-yous and introductions.

I would like to start out by thanking you for the kind words in your introduction and joining you in your wish to Senator Kirk for a very, very speedy recovery.

With respect to you and Senator Kirk, Senator Durbin, I also wanted to thank you for the bipartisan leadership that the two of you show through your cooperation and consultation in making judicial recommendations to the President for our State. It is a credit to the State of Illinois, and I think it is a great example for the rest of the country, so I thank you for that.

I would like to thank you and Senator Kyl for chairing and convening this Committee hearing today. I know that Thursdays are not the usual day for these hearings, and I greatly appreciate your work, Senator Leahy and Senator Grassley's work, and the work of the staffs for putting this hearing together.

I would like to make a couple of introductions, if I may. My wife of 28 years, Betsy, is here with me today, and I hope I got that 28 years right.

[Laughter.]

Mr. THARP. My middle daughter, Emily, who is a junior at Villanova University outside of Philadelphia was able to join me today. I am very happy about that.

I have two other children. You mentioned one. My son, Matt, is a lieutenant in the Marine Corps stationed at Camp Lejeune, training right now, and he could not join us. And I have a freshman down at Tulane University in New Orleans who—Mardi Gras is approaching, and I did not think she ought to be missing class just now, so we left her there. But I know they are watching on the webcast.

I also wanted to introduce my nephew, Michael Mulshine, who is a brand-new lawyer in the State of Maryland, just passed the bar, working there now, and he was able to join us.

And two friends, Peter Baugher, who was the chairperson of Senator Kirk's bipartisan recommendation Committee that you adverted to, Senator, and my very, very good friend, the Reverence Henry Brinton, whose friendship goes back to college, and I am just delighted he was here to join me, and I thank you for this opportunity.

[The biographical information of Mr. Tharp follows:]

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From approximately October 1991 to February 1992, I was a litigation associate at Kirkland & Ellis, generally conducting legal research and drafting memoranda and briefs on a variety of commercial litigation matters.

From February 1992 to August 1997, I was a federal prosecutor in the United States Attorney's Office in Chicago. I practiced criminal law exclusively, serving at various times in the Criminal Receiving and Appellate Division, the General Crimes Division, and in the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF). My cases included numerous narcotics and money laundering investigations, financial frauds, political corruption, tax crimes, bank robberies, and firearms offenses and other violent crimes.

Since leaving the U.S. Attorney's Office in 1997, I have been engaged in a commercial litigation practice at Mayer Brown, a large international law firm. My practice continues to include criminal matters (about one third involve criminal or quasi-criminal/investigative matters), but my practice now consists primarily of civil matters (about two thirds). I have worked on many different types of commercial matters, including tort, contract, intellectual property, environmental, tax, and unfair competition claims. My practice has focused, however, on securities fraud, professional liability (principally accountants and consultants), and associated work relating to the conduct of internal and governmental investigations. My practice is largely concentrated in federal courts, though it has broadened in geographic scope. In addition to numerous cases in the Northern District of Illinois, I have been involved in cases before federal district and bankruptcy courts in the Central and Southern Districts of Illinois, Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, New York, South Dakota, and Texas.

In addition, a portion of my practice (10 to 15 percent) has involved proceedings in state courts in Illinois, as well as in Alabama, Indiana, New York, Pennsylvania, and Texas, and another 5 to 10 percent of my practice has involved matters in private mediation and/or arbitration. Due to the nature of my current practice (which consists primarily of large, complex commercial litigation in which damage claims often exceed $100 million), the majority of the cases I work on are either resolved by motions before trial or settle. Most of the trials and other forms of contested evidentiary proceedings I have been involved with in private practice have been non-jury proceedings.

In 2009, I was appointed by my firm to serve as co-leader of the Securities Enforcement practice. In 2010, that practice group merged with the Securities Litigation practice group and I continue to serve as co-leader of the combined Mayer Brown Securities Litigation and Enforcement Practice.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

During my tenure as a federal prosecutor, my client was the United States. While in private practice, my clients have consisted primarily of a wide variety of corporations and partnerships, including financial institutions, investment companies and managers, manufacturers, pharmaceutical companies, mining companies, insurers, telecommunications companies, and accounting firms. I have also represented numerous individuals, usually in connection with regulatory and/or criminal investigations.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My entire legal career has been in litigation and my practice has always consisted of litigation matters exclusively. As an Assistant United States Attorney, I appeared in court on a daily basis. Since joining Mayer Brown in 1997, I have continued to appear in court frequently, though less so than as a prosecutor.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts	85%
2. state courts of record	10%
3. other courts	5%
4. administrative agencies	<1%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings	65%
2. criminal proceedings	35%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried seventeen cases to verdict or judgment, obtaining verdicts in my clients' favor in each case:

I tried fourteen criminal cases as an Assistant U.S. Attorney, ranging in length from two days to more than three months. Consistent with practice requirements of the U.S. Attorney's Office in Chicago, all of these trials were conducted with two attorneys sharing trial responsibilities equally.

I have tried two criminal cases (one lasting more than three months) while at Mayer Brown; I served as co-lead counsel and shared trial responsibility equally with my partner.

I have tried one immigration case before an INS administrative law judge; I was the supervising partner with two associates.

In addition to the foregoing merits trials, I have tried four matters in which opposing counsel sought preliminary injunctive relief; in each case, the motion for such relief was denied.

I have also tried three cases in private arbitration while at Mayer Brown; in two of these cases, I was co-counsel sharing equal trial responsibility; in the third, I was the sole counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 60%
 - 2. non-jury: 40%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I am admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, but have not appeared in any matters before the Court.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

- 1. United States v. Rosewell et al., 97 CR 441, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Judge Joan Gottschall (1995 – 1997).

Assisted by several other prosecutors and federal agents, I led the investigation and prosecution of Defendant Rosewell, the long-time Treasurer of Cook County, Illinois, on charges relating to a long-running ghost-payrolling scheme involving two state legislators. I was the lead prosecutor during the lengthy investigation of this case, which was indicted in June 1997, charging that Mr. Rosewell and Defendant Fuglsang, his First Assistant, had conspired and schemed with two state legislators to create phantom jobs for the legislators in the Cook County Treasurer's office, resulting in payments of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the legislators, who provided no services in return. Mr. Rosewell, his First Assistant, and a state senator subsequently pleaded guilty to the charges; the fourth defendant, State Representative Santiago, was acquitted following a jury trial (I did not participate in this trial as I had by that time joined Mayer Brown). Mr. Rosewell died before he was sentenced.

Defendant Fuglsang, the First Assistant Treasurer, was sentenced to imprisonment for 24 months. Defendant Farley, the state senator, was sentenced to imprisonment for fifteen months.

2. United States v. Kim et al., 95 CR 214, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Judge James Holderman (1996 – 1997).

This case resulted in the convictions of more than a dozen high-ranking members of a martial arts organization, including the organization's founder, Defendant Kim, for tax fraud conspiracy related to the operation of a chain of martial arts schools. The charges arose from the defendants' practice of requiring, and not reporting, cash payments from the schools' customers – practices that were facilitated by the cult-like reign of defendant Kim over many of the students of the schools. About half of the defendants pled guilty on the eve of trial in an effort to exculpate Kim, their leader. Five, including Kim, were convicted after a three-month trial; the jury hung as to two other defendants, who later pled guilty to misdemeanor tax charges. Defendant Kim was sentenced to imprisonment for five years; the remaining defendants received sentences ranging from one to five years. I served as one of four attorneys involved in the investigation of this case and served as co-lead counsel at trial with one other prosecutor.

3. United States v. Bartels et al., No. 98-40070-JPG, United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, Judge J. Phil Gilbert (1998 – 1999).

In this case, I successfully defended an executive of Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Illinois who was charged with conspiracy, fraud and false statements in connection with administration of the Medicare program by Blue Cross in Illinois. The jury returned a verdict within a few hours of deliberation, acquitting my client after the three-month jury trial. This trial is the subject of the Health Law Digest article referenced in response to Question 12a. In this case I served as co-trial counsel with one of my partners.

I wrote the government's brief in this appeal by a drug kingpin and his principal lieutenant, who were convicted of murdering a federal informant in furtherance of a continuing criminal enterprise (CCE) and numerous other drug and weapons offenses. This was the first federal murder case in which the death penalty was sought under the CCE statute (I was not involved in the trial of this case). Although the jury did not unanimously agree to recommend the death penalty, the appeal affirmed the reach of the CCE statute ("the Drug Kingpin" statute) to individuals other than "kingpins" who worked to further the objectives of the drug trafficking enterprise. The appeal also involved Batson challenges, fourth amendment issues, and sufficiency of the evidence claims. The court rejected all of these challenges and confirmed the convictions and life sentences received by both the "kingpin" and his lieutenant.

I was one of two principal attorneys representing venture capital firm Kleiner Perkins Caufield & Byers, along with two of its partners, in a series of securities cases involving the collapse of At Home Corporation, the original broadband cable internet service provider, in 2002. The principal cases pending in New York were federal securities fraud class action cases in which the plaintiffs sought hundreds of millions of dollars in damages. We convinced the lead plaintiffs to abandon their claims against our clients without the payment of any settlement monies; prior to the court's approval of that settlement, the defendants' motion to dismiss was granted by the court due to the failure to plead loss causation and the dismissal was affirmed by the Second Circuit.

I was one of two prosecutors handling the investigation and prosecution of extortion and bribery charges against Defendant D'Arco, arising from the period when Mr. D'Arco served as Majority leader in the Illinois Senate. Mr. D'Arco pled nolo contendere to the charges, which involved payment to a state court judge, and was convicted; under the sentencing guidelines, he was sentenced to five months of consecutive prison time in addition to the three-year prison term he was already serving on a prior extortion conviction. With respect to that prior conviction, I briefed the government's response to Mr. D'Arco's appeal. Mr. D'Arco dropped his appeal of that initial conviction after the government's brief was filed.

This case was a criminal prosecution of an internationally recognized expert on psittacines (parrots and macaws) and others for illegal smuggling of Hyacinth Macaws, an endangered species, into the United States from Paraguay and other South American countries, and related tax charges. I worked with two other federal prosecutors and several agents from the IRS and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in investigating and indicting the case, in which we conducted a three-week evidentiary sentencing hearing after the defendant pled guilty to the charges. The expert, Defendant Silva, was sentenced to prison for almost seven years; Defendant Daoud, Silva's mother, was sentenced to imprisonment for 27 months for her role in assisting the smuggling operation.

9. Kramer v. Lockwood Pension Servs., Inc. et al., No. 08-CV-2429, 653 F. Supp. 2d 354 (S.D.N.Y. 2009), United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, Judge Deborah A. Batts; Kramer v. Phoenix Life Ins. Co. et al., No. 09-3903, United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, Judges Ralph K. Winter, John M. Walker, and Rosemary S. Pooler; Kramer v. Phoenix Life Ins. Co. et al., 940 N.E.2d 535 (N.Y. 2010) (2008 – 2011).

This case involved the certification of a question of state insurable interest law of great significance in the multi-billion dollar life settlement industry. Following an adverse ruling in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit granted leave to file an interlocutory appeal and certified the question to the New York Court of Appeals (the highest state court in New York). In a decision that was widely publicized throughout the life settlement industry, the New York high court ruled in my client's favor, effectively reversing the district court's earlier ruling. I served as lead counsel and argued the case before the New York Court of Appeals. Following the ruling by the New York Court of Appeals, the claims involving my client were settled.

10. United States v. Budde et al., 94 CR 772, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, Judge Wayne R. Andersen (1993 – 1996).

These cases resulted from a large-scale undercover FBI investigation of a theft-ring comprised of Yellow Freight employees and others who were stealing and fencing high-value freight from shipments passing through Yellow Freight's Tinley Park terminal. I was one of the two principal prosecutors supervising the undercover investigation and handled all of the subsequent prosecutions, in which all 15 defendants pleaded guilty to a variety of theft, firearms, and drug charges. The defendants' sentences ranged from probation to imprisonment for 30 months.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Investigations and Litigation Matters that Did Not Proceed to Trial: Many of the matters on which I have worked at Mayer Brown have been resolved without the filing of a lawsuit or other proceeding, particularly matters in which I have been engaged to conduct internal investigations for clients. As a result, many of these matters are confidential, but I have described three of the most significant below (without identifying the clients involved where the matter is/was confidential).

(1) Representation of a major international investment bank in multiple investigations by federal agencies and state Attorneys General relating to the operation of the tax-exempt municipal bond market and the municipal derivatives markets. As this matter is ongoing, the resolution of the matters involved is not yet known. In addition to the ongoing federal investigations, this matter involves representation of our client in a related investigation by a group of more than 20 state Attorneys General, and in a MDL (multi-district litigation) proceeding involving at least ten putative private class action antitrust suits and more than twenty individual "opt-out" cases. I am the lead attorney for our client in all of these matters.

(2) Represented Corvis Corporation (later, Broadwing Corporation), a publicly traded manufacturer of fiber optic telecommunications equipment, in connection with investigations by the Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission of transactions and financial reporting of Qwest Communications. At the conclusion of these investigations, no action was taken against my client.

(3) Represented a publicly traded logistics company headquartered in Lombard, Illinois, and its Chief Financial Officer, in an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission relating to a large restatement of its financial statements. At the conclusion of this investigation, no action was taken against my clients.

Non-Litigation Legal Matters: The most significant non-litigation legal activity in which I have been involved has been my tenure as a Vice-Chair of the Judicial Evaluation Committee of the Chicago Bar Association. During the year I spent in this position, I was intimately involved in the review and evaluation of hundreds of applications for candidates for judicial positions in Cook County, Illinois, and for issuing the Bar Association's recommendations regarding the qualifications of those candidates. In addition to constituting a valuable service to the legal community and to the general public, this process provided me with insight into, and the opportunity to reflect on, the qualities that make good judges.

Lobbying Activities: I have not performed lobbying activities on behalf of any client.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

From 2002 to 2004, I served as an Adjunct Professor of Trial Advocacy at Northwestern University School of Law, assisting with the trial advocacy program run by Professor Steven Lubet through demonstrations and observation and critiques of students performing mock trial exercises. I was not responsible for the development of the materials for this court and do not have a course syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

None.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, patents, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (If you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here.)

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If I am confirmed, stock ownership presents the only significant potential conflict I can presently anticipate. In the event that a company in which I (or an immediate family member) had a financial interest (through stock ownership or otherwise) were a party in litigation before me, I would recuse myself from the matter.

While I would no longer have any financial interest in Mayer Brown LLP upon my resignation from the firm, due to my long financial and professional association with the firm I intend, for a period of at least several years, to recuse myself from matters in which the firm represents any party.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I will employ the court's established processes for identifying potential conflicts, including the review of disclosure statements and other information provided by litigants. I will consult and observe all applicable ethical canons.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I was not permitted to engage in outside legal activities and, accordingly, was unable to work on any pro bono matters. Before and after my government service, however, I have represented numerous pro bono clients and have also supervised other attorneys handling pro bono matters. Representative examples of the types of pro bono and other volunteer legal services and related work I have performed include:

- (1) Review of appellate briefs written by Mayer Brown attorneys as part of the Firm's "Seventh Circuit Project," in which attorneys represent indigent prisoners who seek to appeal their convictions. Assist with "moot courts" to prepare for oral arguments. (Recurring, 2 to 3 times per year; approximately 4-8 hours each).
- (2) Member of the Law Fund Board of the Northwestern University School of Law, which oversees fundraising efforts for general use and restricted fund gifts by alumni, including the legal clinic. (Current member; board meets 4-6 times per year; 20-30 hours annually).
- (3) Adjunct professor of law at Northwestern University School of Law, teaching trial advocacy. (Two fall semesters, one two-hour class per week and related preparation).

- (4) Annual participant in moot court programs at Northwestern University School of Law. (8-12 hours annually).
- (5) Worked in Legal Clinic of Northwestern University School of Law during final year of law school. Matters included appeal of denial of habeas petition of defendant convicted of murder in state court. (Substantially in excess of 40 hours total).
- (6) Represented the NAACP in connection with federal investigation of embezzlement of funds at an Illinois chapter. (Approximately 10-12 hours total).
- (7) Represented asylum petitioner from Zimbabwe; asylum granted. (Approximately 20 hours).
- (8) Represented an indigent defendant charged with first-degree murder in Cook County, Illinois. (Approximately 250 hours).
- (9) Represented an indigent prisoner in a Section 1983 case asserting claims of cruel and unusual punishment against a local police officer. (Approximately 35 hours).

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In March 2011, I applied to a Judicial Advisory Board established by Senator Mark Kirk to identify individuals to recommend to the President for nomination to federal courts in the Northern District of Illinois. I was interviewed by that Board on May 10, 2011 and was one of three individuals recommended by the Board to Senator Kirk. I interviewed with Senator Kirk on May 27, 2011, and was subsequently advised by Senator Kirk that I would be his first recommendation to the President to fill a current vacancy on the Northern District of Illinois bench.

Since July 13, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 23, 2011, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On November 10, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, please explain fully.

No.

STATEMENT OF HON. GEORGE LEVI RUSSELL III, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MARYLAND

Judge RUSSELL. Yes, good afternoon, Senator Kyl, as well as Senator Durbin. I am certainly honored and humbled by the nomination. I do not have any formal introductory remarks, but I do want to express great gratitude and thanks to President Obama for this nomination, Senators Mikulski and Cardin for their kind words and support of my nomination, in addition to both of you taking the time out of your busy schedule to afford me the opportunity for a hearing, as well as the other individual Senators that are on the Committee.

I am accompanied here today and honored and privileged to be accompanied here today by various family members. First and foremost, my mother and father, George and Marion Russell, are here, and I am also accompanied and honored to have my in-laws, Doward and Helen Patterson, who are in the back here.

And certainly, last but not least, my immediate family. My wife and friend, Devy Patterson Russell, has accompanied me here, as well as the two individuals who the sun rises and sets with, my two children: George, who just turned 10, and Madison, who is about to turn 13.

I do not have any other remarks, Senator. Thank you.

In the evening after the trial, defense counsel received information that one juror accused another juror of improperly using her cell phone to research the Defendant's criminal record during deliberations, despite instructions not to do so. Based upon this information the Defendant sought a new trial. Bruce v. State, rev'd, Case No. 2891 (Md. App. June 9, 2011)

The Defendant appealed his conviction by a jury of second-degree assault. During the cross-examination of the victim, who was also the State's key witness, defense counsel asked the victim whether she felt pressured to testify because of her pending theft and disorderly conduct charges. The State objected and the court advised the jury to disregard the question and answer. At a bench conference, defense counsel informed the court that he was trying to show that the victim may have been pressured into becoming a State's witness in order to gain favor with the State in another case. In an unreported opinion, the Court of Special Appeals reversed Defendant's conviction and held that the court erroneously limited defense counsel's cross-examination of the victim when it prohibited defense counsel from asking the victim about the pending charge to show her possible bias, prejudice, interest in the outcome of the proceeding, or motive to testify falsely. Court of Special Appeals opinion supplied.

Finnell v. State, rev'd, Case No. 600 (Md. App. June 27, 2011)

The Defendant was charged and convicted in two separate indictments with drug offenses. The first indictment charged him with possession of marijuana, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and distribution of marijuana. The second indictment charged him with possession of marijuana and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute. The court denied Defendant's motion to dismiss the second indictment on the basis that the charges were duplicative. In an unreported opinion, the Court of Special Appeals held that the court erred in permitting multiple convictions for possession of marijuana and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute because the two indictments arose out of one transaction, at one event on the same day, and in one location. The appellate court therefore vacated Defendant's second indictment. Court of Special Appeals opinion supplied.

Green v. JN Realty Corporation, rev'd, Case No. 1575 (Md. App. Oct. 9, 2009)

The Plaintiff, by his mother, filed a civil suit against the Defendants arising out of Plaintiff's alleged exposure to lead paint at his home which was owned and or managed by Defendants. The Court of Special Appeals, in an unreported opinion, held that the court erred in granting Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment because, contrary to the court's holding, the record showed the existence of a material dispute of fact regarding the time and duration of Plaintiff's tenancy at the property, which was material to the issue of Defendants' liability. Court of Special Appeals opinion supplied.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

I have issued 13 unpublished opinions. All of my opinions are unpublished and are stored and filed with the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Maryland for Baltimore City.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

To the best of my knowledge, I have not written any significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues.

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

My wife is a judge on the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City. As such, she often presides over matters that eventually come before the Circuit Court of Maryland for Baltimore City on appeal. For example, in criminal cases she may set a bail for a defendant after his or her arrest and that defendant may seek a review of the bail in the Circuit Court. She also signs search and seizure warrants that may be the subject of a motion to suppress in the Circuit Court. In the criminal context of bail reviews, I do not know the identity of the District Court judge who initially sets the bail until the case is called by the State's Attorney and the procedural history of the case is recited by pretrial services. When I know the potential conflict at the hearing, which may have happened two or three times, I always disclose my relationship to all parties on the record. I afford either party the right to have the matter set before another judge. I have searched my memory, records and internet databases and can only vaguely remember one instance where a party has asked that I recuse myself from hearing the case, which I did. I did not generate any notes or documents related to the recusal in the few instances that the issue arose. I have searched my records and memory and court records but I cannot identify the cases.

Potential conflicts also arise in civil cases, where a party may be appealing a District Court judge's decision to the Circuit Court. In this instance, I know whether my wife was involved in the decision when the case is assigned and before it is called. If the appeal is from her decision, I automatically recuse myself to prevent the appearance of any impropriety. The case is then reassigned to another judge. I did not generate any notes or documents related to the recusal in the few instances that the issue arose.

I also recuse myself when I find that I am related to witnesses in a case. One recent example occurred on August 8, 2011, in the case of In the Matter of Berry, Petition No. 808014008 (Cir. Ct. Balt. City August 8, 2011). In this Child-In-Need-of-Assistance case, involving an exception from a lower court Master's ruling regarding the Respondent's permanency plan, I discovered during the testimony of the first witness that I was related to another crucial witness in the case (my uncle). In response, I immediately asked the attorneys to approach, explained the conflict, and advised that I would have to recuse myself from the case. I recused myself and the case was reset before another judge.

To my knowledge, these are the only cases in which my recusal has arisen.

I have not held public offices other than judicial office. I have had no unsuccessful candidacies for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

As an Assistant United States Attorney in the Criminal Division from 2002 to 2007, I represented the United States in the criminal prosecution of violent crime and narcotics cases during the investigatory stage, at trial and on appeal. 1. United States v. Keenan, Criminal No. AMD-04-0484 (D. Md. 2004).

In April 2005, I tried this case before the Honorable Andre M. Davis in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case arose from the execution of a search and seizure warrant on the home of a licensed Maryland physician. During the execution of the warrant, authorities discovered a sealed pipe containing Ecstasy precursor materials baking in the oven. Further searches of the Defendant's office and homes owned by co-conspirators revealed more precursor materials and a manual related to the manufacturing of Ecstasy. The Defendants were charged and convicted of conspiracy to manufacture and attempt to manufacture Ecstasy. The primary defense to the case was that the physician was using the precursor materials for legitimate scientific experiments and research. The trial lasted five days and included testimony of experts on the legitimate and/or illegal uses of the precursor materials. I had primary responsibility for the preparation and presentation of the case.

Opposing counsel: Michael Kaminkow, Schulman, Treem, Kaminkow and Gilden, P.A., The World Trade Center, 401 East Pratt Street, Suite 1800, Baltimore, Maryland 21202, (410) 332-0850.

Co-counsel: Assistant United States Attorney, Phillip S. Jackson, 36 South Charles Street, 4th Floor, Baltimore, Maryland 21202, (410) 209-4800.

2. United States v. Fisher, Criminal No. RDB-04-0291 (D. Md. 2004).

In December 2004, I tried this case before the Honorable Richard D. Bennett in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case arose from a police officer's covert observations of the Defendant engaged in several hand to hand transitions of narcotics after going in and out of the kitchen of a vacant house. The officer made the observations at night using binoculars, looking through the kitchen window. Upon the Defendant's apprehension, a search of the house revealed loaded firearms and narcotics behind a stove in the kitchen. The Defendant was charged and convicted of possession with intent to distribute cocaine base and possession of firearms in furtherance of a drug trafficking offense. The trial lasted three days. I had primary responsibility for the preparation and presentation of the case.

Opposing counsel: Randolph O. Gregory Sr. (deceased).

Co-counsel: Assistant United States Attorney, Christopher Romano, 36 South Charles Street, 4th Floor, Baltimore, Maryland 21202, (410) 209-4800.

3. United States v. Smith, Criminal No. WDQ 03-0210 (D. Md. 2003).

In December 2003, I tried this case before the Honorable William D. Quarles in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved an employee of a licensed Maryland physician who forcibly took phentermine hydrochloride, a diet supplement, from a manufacturer of the drug. The Defendant was charged and convicted of robbery and possession with intent to distribute phentermine hydrochloride. The primary defense in the case was that the Defendant had a legitimate right to the drugs because of a business dispute and he was an employee of a licensed physician when he possessed them. I had primary responsibility for the preparation and presentation of the case. Additionally, I wrote the appellate brief when the Defendant appealed his conviction. The conviction was affirmed at United States v. Smith, 194 Fed. Appx. 155 (4th Cir. 2006).

4. United States v. Moye, Criminal No. MJG 03-528 (D. Md. 2003).

In May 2004, I tried this case before the Honorable Marvin J. Garbis, Sr., in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved a burglary of a gun store in which 25 large caliber firearms were taken. The Defendant and his co-conspirators were caught while the burglary was in progress. The co-conspirators plead guilty; the Defendant was charged and convicted after a three-day trial of being a felon in possession of firearms, possession of stolen firearms and aiding and abetting. The Defendant appealed his conviction on the grounds that the trial court erred in giving an aiding and abetting instruction on the felon in possession count, arguing he could not aid and abet himself. A Fourth Circuit panel reversed the Defendant's conviction on that count. The court then decided, sua sponte, to rehear the case en banc, and affirmed the conviction at United States v. Moye, 454 F.3d. 390 (4th Cir. 2006).

I had primary responsibility for the preparation and presentation of the case. Additionally, I wrote the appellate brief and argued the case in the Fourth Circuit. United States Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein argued the re-hearing before the en banc court.

Co-counsel: Assistant United States Attorney, Debra Dwyer, 36 South Charles Street, 4th Floor, Baltimore, Maryland 21202, (410) 209-4800.

5. Essex v. United States, Civil Action No. CCB 95-884 (D. Md. 1995).

In 1997, I litigated this case before the Honorable Catherine C. Blake in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved a slip and fall at a postal facility during a rainy day. The Plaintiff suffered a broken hip and had extensive medical bills. The elderly Plaintiff testified in deposition that she could not recall wiping her feet upon entry into the postal facility. At the conclusion of discovery, I moved for summary judgment, arguing that she was negligent as a matter of law and attaching an affidavit from a postal worker stating that the Plaintiff did not wipe her feet upon entry into the facility. Summary judgment was granted, based upon a finding that the Plaintiff was negligent as a matter of law. The decision was appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and was affirmed. Essex v. United States, 122 F.3d 1060 (4th Cir. 2006); 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 2943. I was chief counsel on the case including the appeal.

6. Nicholl v. Dalton, Civil Action No. PJM 94-3013 (D. Md. 1994).

In 1994, I litigated this case before the Honorable Peter J. Messitte in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved multiple allegations of discrimination and retaliation against a federal employee. At the conclusion of months of extensive discovery, I moved for summary judgment on the grounds that Plaintiff could not establish as a matter of law that any of the adverse employment actions taken against her were based on unlawful discrimination and that there were legitimate non-discriminatory reasons for all the action taken. Summary judgment was granted in the government's favor. I was chief counsel on the case.

7. Brennan v. Weiser, Civil Action No. DKC 98-1873 (D. Md. 1998).

In 1998, I litigated this case before the Honorable Deborah K. Chasanow in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved allegations of tortious conduct against four Department of Health and Human Services employees, including an attorney. The attorney was accused of misconduct in her handling of an administrative claim of discrimination filed by the same Plaintiff. The discrimination case was also handled by me once it was filed in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. As a result, her law license was placed in jeopardy of being suspended or revoked. After extensive discovery and a scope-of-employment hearing the court dismissed the complaint. I was chief counsel on the case.

8. Dachman v. Shalala, Civil Action No. AMD 96-873 (D. Md. 1996).

In 1996, I litigated this case before the Honorable Andre M. Davis in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved multiple allegations of religious discrimination and retaliation, including by the Plaintiff's supervisor and colleague pressing criminal charges against her for leaving a death threat phone message. The case required extensive investigation, including a working knowledge of the Orthodox Jewish religious practices. After almost one year of discovery and hearings, I moved for summary judgment, and the court granted my motion. The Plaintiff appealed to the Fourth Circuit, which affirmed the judgment. I was chief counsel on the District Court case. I did not handle the appeal.

9. Grant v. Widnal, Civil Action No. JFM 95-728 (D. Md. 1994).

In 1994, I litigated this case before the Honorable J. Frederick Motz in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The case involved multiple allegations of discrimination and retaliation against federal employees with the United States Air Force. The Plaintiff, an Air Force Reserve Technician, held both military and civilian positions, allowing the government to move to dismiss some claims but not others because her duties sometimes overlapped. She claimed both her military and her civilian supervisors conspired to discriminate against her. After a year of extensive discovery and hearings, including a temporary restraining order hearing in which the Plaintiff sought to enjoin the Air Force from denying her wrist surgery, I moved for summary judgment. The court granted my motion as to the vast majority of the claims. The case then settled for substantially less than what was initially demanded. I was chief counsel on the case.

Opposing counsel: Michelle Estrin Gilman, Professor, University of Baltimore School of Law, 1415 Maryland Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland 21210, (410) 837-5656 and Benjamin D. Wood, 2550 M Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20037, (202) 457-6685. Both attorneys were with the law firm of Arnold and Porter at the time the litigation commenced.

10. United States v. Yasin et al., Criminal Nos. AMD 04-05306 and L-05-0237 (D. Md. 2004 and 2005).

In December 2006, I litigated this case before the Honorable Andre M. Davis and the Honorable Benson E. Legg in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. The indictment resulted from a several month long wiretap investigation I initiated with the Drug Enforcement Administration to prosecute and break up a heroin distribution organization in Baltimore City, Maryland. The operation was named "Brother Keeper." The multiple-defendant case required initiating and monitoring the wiretap and also the execution of multiple search and arrest warrants in Maryland, New York, Michigan and the Dominican Republic. The Defendants eventually pled guilty and agreed to cooperate with the government in Maryland. The Honorable William D. Quarles in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland approved the wiretap and court orders related thereto. I was chief counsel and had primary responsibility for the preparation of the wiretap investigation and litigation.

Co-counsel: Assistant United States Attorney Phillip Jackson, 36 South Charles Street, 4th Floor, Baltimore, Maryland 21202, (410) 209-4800.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I served as the Project Safe Neighborhood Coordinator for the office from 2002 until approximately 2005. I participated in community outreach programs, including attending community meetings on behalf of the office and attending meetings with the Baltimore States Attorney's Office, to reduce violent crime in Baltimore neighborhoods. I also served on the Board of Directors for the Community Law Center which is an organization designed to help neighborhoods organizations improve the quality of life for their residents.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I will receive payments from the Maryland Judiciary and the Federal Employees Retirement System once I reach retirement age.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I do not have any plans, commitments, or agreements, with or without compensation, to pursue outside employment during my service with the court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

As previously disclosed, my wife is a judge on the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City. As such, she often signs search and seizure warrants that may be the subject of a motion to suppress. There is a small possibility that a criminal defendant who is the subject of the warrant could be indicted by the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Maryland, and that case could be assigned to me. In the event that occurs, I would recuse myself from hearing the case.

I would also recuse myself from cases involving entities for which I served as a director, trustee or officer; close friends or relatives; and any other instances as directed by the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and any other canon or policy of the United States Courts.

At the present time, I cannot think of any category of litigation which, by its nature, would present a conflict of interest for me.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would resolve all matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest through careful application of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, as well as other relevant canons and statutory provisions. I would consult the Code of Conduct Committee of the Judicial Conference as necessary.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I am currently serving as a Director and Trustee on the Board of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, which serves the disadvantaged throughout the State of Maryland. I also currently speak to young and disadvantaged youth about the practice of law in my current position as a judge to inspire and motivate them to pursue an education and become productive members of our society. I estimate that I devote approximately 40 hours per year to these activities.

When I practiced law, I served as a board member on several organizations that devoted substantial resources to helping the disadvantaged. These included the Community Law Center, the Public Justice Center, and Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Maryland. During this time, I devoted approximately 40 to 80 hours per year.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In February 2009, after hearing that the Honorable Andre M. Davis was a candidate for nomination to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, I sent a letter of interest about filling the District Court position to United States Senators Barbara Mikulski and Benjamin Cardin.

In early June 2009, Senator Mikulski posted a notice for applications on her office website. A deadline for the submission of the applications was set at July 1, 2009. I filed a timely application. On August 10, 2009, I met with several attorneys appointed by Senators Mikulski and Cardin for an interview. In November 2009, I met with Senators Mikulski and Cardin in separate interviews.

On June 7, 2011, I was directed by Senator Mikulski to submit a supplemental application by June 15, 2011, which I did. On July 14, 2011, I met with Senators Mikulski and Cardin again. On August 4, 2011, I received a call from Senator Mikulski in which she advised that she was recommending me for nomination to the United States District Court for the District of Maryland.

Since August 5, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 9, 2011, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 10, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Maryland State Judge Pension Plan

My wife and I both currently serve as state judges in Maryland. After 15 years of service, we are able to retire. Upon retirement, we would continue to be paid our full salary if we sit three months a year, or two-thirds of our salary if we do not. Should either of us leave the state bench prior to 15 years of service, we would be entitled to receive a pro-rated share of our pension.

My Commission Expires 10/1/13

Senator DURBIN. Well, thank you very much. It has been my pleasure to meet some of the members of your families, and I know that they are proud of your achievement in reaching this point.

Repeating briefly what I said earlier, the process to this point for all four nominees has involved extensive investigation, interrogation, a lot of questionnaires, which I am sure they got very tired of filling out, that led them to this moment, followed by more formal investigations at the White House level of all nominees, and coming to this Committee, where staff and members will be looking closely. But each and every one of these nominees would not have reached this point were it not for their success in dealing with questions and issues that have been raised.

The difference, of course—and most everyone in the room knows it—is that these four judges who face the opportunity of serving at the district court level will, for the most part of every day, see real people and not just attorneys. Before them will appear defendants and plaintiffs, jury members, the public at large on a regular basis, unlike judges at a higher level who work a lot of time directly with attorneys and in research with law clerks. So it is a little different style of law that the district court judges face. I spoke to Mr. Lee and Mr. Tharp earlier about my limited experience in that field before coming to Congress.

My first question goes to a point which most every lawyer, if honest, will say is the most important thing. Has this judge with this lifetime appointment becomes so full of himself or herself that they have forgotten what real life is like, that they become imperial in their manner, that they do not have a temperament where they really care who is standing in front of them? That was a nightmare for every trial lawyer, and I think most people who practice trial law have run into judges like that. So here is your chance on the record under oath to say what you think about that subject. Kristine Baker can start.

Ms. BAKER. Thank you, Senator, for the question. I agree that I think, win or lose, most litigants and folks who appear in court remember how they were treated by the bench. As a result of that, I think, if honored to be confirmed to a position as a district court judge, the most important thing is temperament, to treat everyone who appears before the court with an attentive listening ear, to be patient, to treat them with dignity and respect.

Senator DURBIN. Judge Russell.

Judge RUSSELL. I think judicial temperament is an absolutely critical criteria that a judge must possess. In my court, I treat every litigant the way—every litigant, every party, the way I wanted to be treated when I practiced law. But it is not—it does not just stop at the litigants. It stops at the clerks, the deputy sheriff, and all of the people that are associated with my part or my courtroom. So I think it is an absolutely critical criteria and factor that I think every judicial candidate and certainly nominee should have.

Senator DURBIN. Mr. Tharp.

Mr. THARP. Thank you, Senator. If I could say at the outset, despite my best efforts here to name everybody to thank, I think I omitted the most important person in the process, the President for the nomination, and I certainly thank him for the honor of this nomination.

In response to your question, Senator, I think it really goes to what I think one of the most important characteristics of a good judge is, and that is humility. And by that I do not necessarily mean or exclusively mean personal modesty, but humility in the sense that you recognize your role in the process and that you are serving a system and you are serving individual litigants, and that you are really the face of justice. As you so rightly point out, we are the judges—the district court judges are the judges that those litigants see in court, and you have got to respect your role in the system, your limited role, your duty to apply the law, and to be fair and impartial to those litigants, and to recognize that this is what they see and take away from the judicial system. And I think if you keep that in mind, you will go a long way to having the appropriate temperament.

Senator DURBIN. Mr. Lee.

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator. I do not know if I can add anything to what my esteemed colleagues here have stated. I do completely agree that judicial temperament is extremely important. I believe a judge must have an abiding and deep respect for the rule of law so that he or she can apply the controlling law to the facts of a particular case without regard for personal belief or background.

I also believe that humility and humbleness is extremely important, realizing that a judge's personal view may not be the controlling view and be open to all sides of an argument in a case before him or her.

Senator DURBIN. A number of lawyers came to see me in Chicago a few years ago after I had been involved in this process for a little while and said to me—they were from the defense bar, and they said, "Why do you keep picking prosecutors? Aren't there any criminal defense lawyers who could be judges? A lot of our people think we kind of go in at a disadvantage if a judge thinks like a prosecutor and cannot put themselves in the shoes of a defense."

Judge Russell, you have been through this. You went from the prosecutor's role to the judge's role. Tell me how you could have that experience and the criminal defendant before you feel like they have a fair shake coming.

Judge RUSSELL. Well, I was very fortunate to have worked with some tremendous colleagues over at the U.S. Attorney's Office, and mentors, both in the Civil Division as well as the Criminal Division. And one of the tenets that I always practiced by, whether I was in criminal prosecution or civil prosecution, was fairness and justice. And I think that is critical—that is a critical characteristic for me as a judge. I must be fair. And as a prosecutor, I strove to be fair. There was not a criminal defense lawyer that would, I dare say, say that I was not fair.

My pursuit was not winning or losing. It was simply justice. And so the transition from a prosecutor to a judge was not as difficult as maybe it would be for others.

Senator DURBIN. Before I ask another question or two, I will turn to my colleague Senator Kyl.

Senator KYL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Let me ask a couple of specific questions.

First of all, John Lee, to you. One of the things that we learned about your background was looking at the firm profile at Freeborn & Peters. There the website indicates that during your time at the Department of Justice you served as Special Assistant to the Counsel to Attorney General Janet Reno. I think I have that title correctly. But that was not in the answers to your Senate questionnaire. I wondered, first of all, why that was not the case and what your responsibilities for Attorney General Reno were.

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator, for that question. Basically, I was a trial lawyer officially at the Environmental and Natural Resources Division assigned to the Environmental Defense Section. I was asked to take a special assignment to assist Attorney General Reno's office with regard to particular issues regarding the environment, particularly issues with regard to, for example, the scope of CERCLA regulation, the impact of RCRA, and citing issues. And so while I was on special assignment or designation to her office for, I believe, a period of 4 to 5 months, I still remained a trial lawyer at the Environmental Defense Section with all my usual responsibilities.

Senator KYL. So it just did not seem necessary to put on the Senate questionnaire. Is that correct?

Mr. LEE. That is correct, Senator. Perhaps in hindsight, to make it more complete I should have put that on, but because I was a trial attorney at EDS at the time, I thought that that would cover that time period.

Senator KYL. Second, in a case called Taylor, Bean and Whitaker Mortgage Company v. Sevuleck, the judge dismissed a myriad of civil RICO claims that you had filed on behalf of your client saying that the complaint contained a glaring deficiency and citing the plaintiff's failure to properly plead. Do you recall why you made the allegations that you did and if, as the judge implies, you had no factual basis to back them up?

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator. We believed that at the time—certainly the client believed and we believed that we did have a factual basis for a good claim, a good-faith claim under RICO. As the Senator is probably aware, the area of civil RICO has been a developing area over time, and we certainly believed that at the state of the case law at the time that we had a good-faith basis to state a RICO claim, particularly in light of the allegations that we made, which was that there was a cadre or a conspiracy of people involved in mortgage fraud in the Chicago area.

Senator KYL. Kristine Baker, let me ask you a question that relates back to the testimony of Justice Hurwitz from Arizona. You will recall I said he had firm political opinions, but at least has a reputation of being able to distinguish those from his judicial decisions and the way he approaches judging. You, too, have a record of supporting Democratic candidates and causes in your State, and so I wonder if you have given thought to how you will commit to all of us who will be involved in your confirmation that you, too, will approach judging in a way that leaves out your own political beliefs.

Ms. BAKER. I do not believe, Senator, that political beliefs or personal views have any place in the role of a district court judge. I think a district court judge—I was fortunate enough after law school to serve as a law clerk to a United States district judge in the Eastern District of Arkansas, and I witnessed Judge Susan Webber Wright making decisions that came before her based upon the rule of law. I believe that a district court judge's role is an important one but a limited one. It is to follow the precedent. It is to decide the facts of the case based upon applicable law. And, again, I do not believe political views or personal views play a role in that position or that job.

I believe in my conduct this far as an advocate I have shown that I can be fair to all sides of an issue when reviewing issues, and I think my colleagues have that confidence in me as expressed through the Senators and the recommendations that I have received through this process today.

Senator KYL. And I gather for the other three members of the panel—and, by the way, congratulations to all of you for your nominations—that you share more or less the views that have been expressed by Ms. Baker. If you have a different view, I would like to hear it, but at least to confirm for us that this is the approach that you will take if you agree with the approach expressed.

Mr. Lee.

Mr. LEE. Certainly I am in agreement, Senator.

Senator KYL. Mr. Tharp.

Mr. THARP. Absolutely, Senator.

Senator KYL. Judge Russell.

Judge RUSSELL. I am in agreement as well.

Senator KYL. Thank you. I am within my time, Mr. Chairman.

Senator DURBIN. Thanks a lot, Senator Kyl.

Ms. Baker, in your practice you have handled a number of cases involving First Amendment and Freedom of Information Act issues. Can you talk about your work in this area and how you think it will affect your service on the Federal bench?

Ms. BAKER. Thank you for the question, Senator. I have spent a lot of time looking at those issues to the extent they have come up in my practice. Our firm has served as counsel to the Arkansas Press Association, and I have done work on their behalf, as well as on behalf of other newspapers throughout the State. So I have studied those issues and looked at them in practice.

On the bench, I do not know that that brings very much to bear other than I have looked at constitutional issues in the First Amendment area as a practitioner. I have looked at it from both sides, from folks who have come seeking to bring a claim and also folks who have been sued under First Amendment claims.

So I think I can analyze issues from both sides, but, again, I think the role of a judge is to decide the case on applicable law, on precedent, and on the facts before the court.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Mr. Tharp, I do not know enough about securities litigation to engage in a meaningful conversation, but I note in your background that you have written and spoken several times on the new Dodd-Frank law, questions of extraterritoriality and the like. Could you comment on your observations, at least from your current vantage point, and what impact that might have if an issue involving that law comes before the bench?

Mr. THARP. Certainly, Senator. Dodd-Frank obviously is a very large piece of legislation with a lot of moving parts, many of which are still under study and review, and I would guess under still legislative or agency consideration in terms of further rulemaking or legislation. But, clearly, there are a number of aspects of Dodd-Frank that have impacted my practice that I am quite familiar with in terms of the implementation of new whistleblower provisions, provisions relating to the scienter requirement for securities fraud cases under the securities statutes and things like that.

In terms of how those developments would affect me as a judge, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I will approach those as I do any statutory question in terms of interpreting the statute, applying any precedent that the higher courts have applied, and considering the ongoing legislative and regulatory amendments and changes to that law as they go forward. But my experience with the law, I have got experience with lots of Federal laws. There are plenty of Federal laws that I have never dealt with before, but my approach as a judge to them will be exactly the same.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Mr. Lee, your family and life story is a compelling one. Like many of our families, yours comes from a very humble beginning, and your immigration to the United States is part of the great story of our Nation. At what point did you come to realize you wanted to get into law and that you would aspire to serve on the Federal bench?

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator. I decided to go into law really with the realization and I think appreciation as a first-generation immigrant that this country is a country that is governed by the rule of law. That is what drives a lot of immigrants to come here and to seek out a new life in this country.

I saw that in practice as my parents were developing their new life here, as I was coming up through school and given the opportunities that I had. And so as I started to get older and started to realize and really appreciate—have a deep appreciation for the rule of law as one of the central elements of this country. It was that, Senator, that really kind of drove me to a career in law and ultimately in my belief that the judiciary is the embodiment of that principle, the principle of the rule of law, and that is why I am here today.

Senator DURBIN. The last question I will have for each of you, and you can answer this brief, I hope. Could you give us some indication of how you have used your personal or legal skills in a pro bono capacity before you have come to this hearing?

Ms. Baker.

Ms. BAKER. Thank you, Senator. Prior to hearing, in my capacity as an advocate I have worked on behalf of individuals as appointed counsel by Federal courts in Arkansas on behalf of prisoners who have brought 1983 claims. One of them was a female inmate who had been raped by a guard, and others were inmates who made claims in regard to medical care.

In addition to that, I have accepted cases through VOCALS. Both Senator Pryor and Senator Boozman referenced that, and that is a program for indigent clients to seek out representation in a variety of legal matters.

Senator DURBIN. Thanks.

Mr. Lee.

Mr. LEE. Thank you, Senator. I have dedicated a large amount of my time to pro bono practice and to provide access for indigent clients to the court system. Over the years I have been intimately involved in an organization called CARPLS, which is the Cook County legal hotline. It is really what we consider the legal triage of Cook County, and we are proud to say that we serve 50,000 to 60,000 clients a year at an average cost of $25 per client consultation. That is just kind of how we figured it out.

Also, over the last couple of years, a couple of partners at Freeborn & Peters and I recognized that there was a dearth of legal services up in the northwest Chicago suburbs area, and so we created a partnership between CARPLS and Willow Creek Church to start a legal clinic up in the northwest suburbs at Hoffman Estates, and we are open Tuesday mornings and Tuesday afternoons, and it is open to anyone who comes in, whatever their background, whatever their religious affiliation. If they have a legal issue, they can come and speak to one of the lawyers there. And in that capacity, I have had the opportunity to assist a lot of people with their issues as well.

Senator DURBIN. Thanks.

Mr. Tharp.

Mr. THARP. Thank you, Senator. Throughout my legal career, really going back to law school, I have been involved in a number of pro bono representations in various matters, most recently in an immigration asylum case, the defense of a first-degree murder case, among those.

In addition, our firm has a longstanding program where we provide assistance in the Seventh Circuit to criminal defendants appealing their criminal convictions that typically involve an associate and a partner supervising the work of the associate on criminal appeals in the Seventh Circuit, and I have regularly participated in those kinds of appeals.

And then, more broadly, I have certainly made contributions through work through, for example—and you mentioned this in your very generous introduction—the Chicago Bar Association’s judicial evaluation process for candidates and retention of judges in Cook County, Illinois.

So those are some of the primary examples, Senator.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Judge Russell.

Judge RUSSELL. Thank you. Thank you very much, Senator. During the course of my employment with the Federal Government in the United States Attorney’s Office, I was somewhat limited in my ability to be able to represent individuals in court on a pro bono basis. However, I did serve as the office’s Project Safe Neighborhoods coordinator which required me to go outside into the community with community group leaders to discuss with them the problems that they were having with violent crime and narcotics.

In addition to that, I served on the board of directors for the Community Law Center, Big Brothers and Big Sisters, the Enoch Pratt Free Library, all the organizations that serve the underprivileged here in Baltimore City.

Finally, as a judge, I often speak to young people, especially our middle school kids in some of the tougher sections of Baltimore, and I bring them into the court, and especially the ones that want to—aspire to become a judge or a lawyer. I bring them up on the bench, I let them try on my robe, just to try to inspire them that they, too, can be a lawyer or they even can be a judge 1 day.

And so that community outreach is very personal to me, and it is something that is very important to me. So those are examples.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you.

Senator KYL. do you have any further questions?

Senator KYL. Mr. Chairman, I do not have any other questions. Obviously, there will be some questions for the record for all of the members of the panel, but, again, I congratulate them all on their nominations and wish them all the very best.

Senator DURBIN. Thank you, Senator Kyl.

Without objection, a statement from Chairman Leahy will be included in the record.

[The prepared statement of Chairman Leahy appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator DURBIN. If there are no further questions, we will conclude this hearing. I want to thank all the nominees and their families and friends who are in attendance today. The record is going to be open for a week for additional letters, statements, and questions from Committee members.

Thank you for being here today, and this Committee will stand adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 3:24 p.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

[Questions and answers and submissions for the record follows.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Responses of Kristine Gerhard Baker
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

- 1. You indicated in your questionnaire that you have very little experience dealing with criminal matters. If confirmed, how will you prepare yourself to be fully competent to handle the criminal cases that will come before you?

Response: Although my experience with criminal matters as a practicing lawyer is limited, I observed criminal proceedings and assisted with them during my two years as a federal law clerk for a district court judge who remains on the bench in the Eastern District of Arkansas. I also have handled civil fraud cases in which I consulted with criminal counsel on behalf of clients, and I have appeared in minor criminal matters as counsel for individuals. Even with that, I recognize my limited experience as a practicing lawyer in dealing with criminal matters. I will utilize all available resources to study this area of the law, including utilizing the resources available through the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, participating in the education programs offered by the Federal Judicial Center, and spending time reading and studying on my own about the issues that will arise. I have confidence in my ability to master an area of the law in which I have limited experience. I have tried a variety of cases in a variety of courts throughout my legal career, educating myself on the complex substantive areas of the law and mastering new procedural rules to be applied by the courts in which I have appeared. If fortunate enough to be confirmed, I believe I will have the opportunity, and will avail myself of the opportunity, to observe criminal matters and trials and to consult with fellow judges in the Eastern District of Arkansas should I have general questions about criminal trial practice and the criminal docket.

- 2. At your hearing you stated that political beliefs or personal views have no place in the role of a district court judge. I agree with that sentiment but I have a few follow-up questions based on that statement. To clarify, please respond to the following:

- a. You seemed to emphasize that a district court judge should not allow political beliefs or personal views while deciding cases. How about Circuit Court judges?

Response: Circuit court judges also should not permit political beliefs or personal views to decide a case. Cases should be decided by judges impartially finding or reviewing facts, as appropriate, and then faithfully applying the law to those facts, with respect for the rule of law and without fear of or favor for a particular party or outcome.

- b. If confirmed as a federal judge, what steps will you take avoid showing partiality?

Response: Throughout my legal career, I have endeavored to interpret and advocate the law faithfully and to treat all parties fairly, without regard to their political beliefs, economic condition, or social status. I believe that my experience demonstrates that, if I am confirmed as a district judge, my decisions will be rooted exclusively in the law and I will treat all parties who come before me fairly and courteously. Should I be confirmed, I pledge that each person who appears before me will receive equal access, just treatment, and a decision grounded in precedent and the text of the law.

c. Would you recuse yourself from any case involving a political party dispute or if any party in the case was associated with a political party?

Response: I have never held a paid or unpaid position in a political party, political campaign, or election committee. My participation has been limited to serving as a fundraising co-host for a variety of candidates, including non-partisan state court judicial candidates, as my primary focus has always been on the full-time practice of law. If confirmed and confronted with a case involving a political party dispute or if a party in the case was associated with a political party, I would carefully review and address any real or potential conflict in accordance with the provisions of 28 U.S.C. § 455, the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, including Canon 3 of the Code, as well as all applicable policies and procedures of the United States Courts. I would follow all applicable laws, orders, rules, customs, and practices in addressing any real or potential conflict or the appearance of conflict at the outset of each case.

d. What plans do you have to support future Democratic candidates as a federal judge?

Response: If confirmed, I will not be involved in any political activities or support any future candidates. I will abide by the letter and spirit of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, including Canon 5 of the Code.

3. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is integrity. A judge must be able to render a fair and impartial decision based on the facts and applicable law that is void of any bias or preconceived ideas. A judge must not be swayed by passion, sympathy, or prejudice but must decide cases on the rule of law. I believe I possess the integrity necessary to be a good judge.

4. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must be an attentive listener and treat all individuals who appear before him or her with dignity, respect, patience, and humility. I believe I meet this standard.

5. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes. The Supreme Court and the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals sitting en banc each can change its precedent with justification, making clear the reasons for rejecting it or departing from it. However, that is not the role of a district court judge.

6. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that dispositively concluded an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If confirmed as a district court judge, to resolve a case of first impression involving the interpretation of a statute or a Constitutional provision, I would determine and apply the plain and ordinary meaning of the statute or provision. If the language of the statute or provision is unclear, for persuasive authority, I would look to analogous cases or issues presented in cases first from the Supreme Court and then from the following courts in this order: the Eighth Circuit, other circuits, the district courts in Arkansas, other district courts within the Eighth Circuit, and other district courts in other circuits. I would reach a decision that is narrowed to the facts of the case presented, explaining fully the basis for the decision.

7. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: A district court judge is bound by the precedent of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals. In all matters, I would apply the precedent of the Supreme Court and Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals.

8. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Assuming the litigants presented the case with proper jurisdiction and standing, the federal court must first ascertain whether a construction of the statute is fairly possible by which the constitutional question may be avoided. If that is not possible and only in rare circumstances should a district court judge declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional. Such circumstances might be if the statute violated the plain and ordinary meaning of the Constitution or if Congress clearly exceeded its constitutional boundaries.

9. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I will employ a case management schedule that ensures the prompt and efficient resolution of cases. I will set reasonable and timely deadlines in scheduling orders, require adherence to the schedule except in exceptional circumstances for good cause, adhere to the Speedy Trial Act, promptly resolve pending motions, and continually monitor case reports and dockets. I will be available to address and promptly decide discovery issues or other issues that arise in a case.

10. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, I believe a judge should be involved in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. If confirmed, I will hold attorneys and litigants accountable for moving their cases along to ensure that all parties secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding. I would decide all matters before the court as quickly as would be consistent with the ends of justice, and I would make full use of all the business hours of the courthouse to conduct the court's business. In addition, if confirmed, I would follow the specific steps outlined in response to Question 9 to control the docket.

11. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the questions on February 2, 2012. I reviewed the questions and prepared my answers over the next several days. I submitted my answers in final form to the Department of Justice on February 5, 2012, for submission to the Committee on February 6, 2012.

12. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Kristine Gerhard Baker
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: My judicial philosophy is that district court judges must demonstrate a respect for the rule of law and an understanding of the limited, but important, role of judges in our constitutional system. District court judges should decide only cases or controversies that are properly before the court, and those cases should be decided as narrowly as possible based on the law at issue and the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. Judges must decide all cases fairly and impartially without regard for the judge's personal views or opinions.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: Throughout my legal career, I have endeavored to interpret and advocate the law faithfully and to treat all parties fairly, without regard to their political beliefs, economic condition, or social status. I believe that my experience demonstrates that, if confirmed as a district judge, my decisions will be rooted exclusively in the law and I will treat all parties who come before me fairly and courteously. Should I be confirmed, I pledge that each person who appears before me will receive equal access, just treatment, and a decision grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying ideology or motivation.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: In my opinion, a commitment to the doctrine of stare decisis should not vary depending on the court. Proper respect for precedent must be the rule at all levels of our judicial system. Judges must respect precedential opinions in order to instill confidence that the result in a given case is based on the rule of law. The Supreme Court and the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals sitting en banc each can change its precedent with justification, making clear the reasons for rejecting it or departing from it. However, that is not the role of a district court judge.

Responses of Andrew D. Hurwitz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Tom Coburn, M.D.

- 1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The principles of the Constitution do not change with the times.

- 2. Do you believe judicial doctrine rightly incorporates the evolving understandings of the Constitution forged through social movements, legislation, and historical practice?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The principles of the Constitution do not change with the times.

- 3. Do you believe empathy is an essential ingredient for arriving at just decisions and outcomes and should play a role in a judge’s consideration of a case?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: A judge should decide cases based on the law and the facts of the case before him.

- b. Can you provide an example of a case where you had to set aside your feelings of empathy for the litigant and, instead, pursue a result that was consistent with the law?

Response: In a recent decision involving foreclosure of a deed of trust on a residence, I noted that the Court of course understood the difficult personal situation created by the loss of a home, but nonetheless was required to apply the law as written. In Re Vasquez, 228 Ariz. 357, ¶ 4, 621 Ariz. Adv. Rep. 22 (Nov. 18, 2011).

- 4. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: I would of course look to binding Supreme Court precedent first. If there were none, I would then look to precedents within my circuit. Assuming that neither my circuit nor the Supreme Court had addressed the issue, I would then analyze the language of the statute and the Constitution. If the language of the relevant provisions does not solve the issue, I would look to persuasive opinions of other courts for guidance. I would also look at the origin and history of the constitutional provision and would always start from the presumption that if a statute can reasonably be interpreted as constitutional, a court should do so.

5. The U.S. Supreme Court held in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), that the Second Amendment of the United States Constitution “protects an individual right to possess a firearm unconnected to service in a militia, and to use that arm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense within the home.” As Justice Scalia’s opinion in Heller pointed out, Sir William Blackstone, the preeminent authority on English law for the Founders, cited the right to bear arms as one of the fundamental rights of Englishmen. Leaving aside the McDonald v. Chicago decision, do you personally believe the right to bear arms is a fundamental right?

Response: As a sitting judge, I do not believe I should express a personal opinion as to matters settled by Supreme Court decisions. McDonald holds that the right to bear arms is a right protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment because it is fundamental to our scheme of ordered liberty, and thus settles this issue as a matter of law. 130 S. Ct. 3020, 3050 (2010). As a judge, I would faithfully apply this Supreme Court precedent.

- a. Do you believe that explicitly guaranteed substantive rights, such as those guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, are also fundamental rights? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes, at least as against infringement by the federal government. As I note below, not every protection in the Bill of Rights has been held by the Supreme Court to be applicable against the states under the Fourteenth Amendment.

- b. Is it your understanding of Supreme Court precedent that those provisions of the Bill of Rights that embody fundamental rights are deemed to apply against the States? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. With some exceptions, the Supreme Court has held that the rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights are fundamental rights that apply against the States under the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. But the Court has not held that all rights guaranteed by the Bill of Rights are fundamental. For example, the Fifth Amendment’s Indictment Clause does not apply to the States, Hurtado v. People of State of Cal., 110 U.S. 516, 534-38 (1884); the Sixth Amendment's unanimous jury requirement does not apply to the States, Apodaca v. Oregon, 406 U.S. 404, 406 (1972) (plurality opinion); and the Seventh Amendment's guarantee of a jury trial in civil cases does not apply to the States, Minneapolis & St. L.R. Co. v. Bombolis, 241 U.S. 211, 217-222 (1916).

- c. The Heller Court further stated that “it has always been widely understood that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right.” Do you believe that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right? Please explain why or why not.

Response: I have not done independent research on the historical origins of the Second Amendment, but have no reason to disagree with the Supreme Court's statement.

- d. What limitations remain on the individual, Second Amendment rights now that the amendment has been incorporated against the States?

Response: The Court identified some limitations in Heller, explaining that “nothing in our opinion should be taken to cast doubt on longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms.” 554 U.S. at 626. But because the Supreme Court's decisions in Heller and McDonald do not fully resolve what limitations may be legally placed on an individual's right to bear arms, I do not believe it appropriate to speculate on how the Court may rule in future cases.

6. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy relied in part on the “evolving standards of decency” to hold that capital punishment for any murderer under age 18 was unconstitutional. I understand that the Supreme Court has ruled on this matter and you are obliged to follow it, but do you agree with Justice Kennedy's analysis?

Response: I do not believe it appropriate for a sitting judge to comment about whether he agrees with the analysis in an opinion of the Supreme Court, which both as a state judge, and, if confirmed, as a circuit judge, I am obligated to follow. Under Roper, I am obliged to hold that the death penalty cannot be imposed on a murderer under the age of 18.

- a. When determining what the “evolving standards of decency” are, justices have looked to different standards. Some justices have justified their decision by looking to the laws of various American states,¹ in addition to foreign law, and in other cases have looked solely to the laws and traditions of foreign countries.² Do you believe either standard has merit when interpreting the text of the Constitution?

Response: I believe the laws and traditions of foreign countries do not control the interpretation of our Constitution. Decisions of the Supreme Court, which I am obliged to follow, however, hold that reference to law of the various American states is permissible in determining whether a punishment is “unusual” under the Eighth Amendment.

i. If so, do you believe one standard more meritorious than the other? Please explain why or why not.

Response: As noted above, I do not believe that the laws and traditions of foreign countries should control the interpretation of the Eighth Amendment.

7. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: No, although as Justice Scalia’s recent opinion in United States v. Jones, 2012 WL 171117 (2012), demonstrates, the Founders’ understanding of English common law traditions may inform constitutional interpretation.

a. If so, under what circumstances would you consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution?

Response: Only in the instance noted above.

b. Do you believe foreign nations have ideas and solutions to legal problems that could contribute to the proper interpretation of our laws?

Response: As stated above, foreign laws should not be relied upon when interpreting our laws.

8. In 2002, you published an article in the New York Law School Legal Review entitled, “Jon O. Newman and the Abortion Decisions: A Remarkable First Year.” The article analyzes two opinions (Abele I, Abele II) authored by Judge Newman and their influence on the Supreme Court’s decision in Roe v. Wade. You clerked for Judge Newman at the time he authored these opinions. Further, in footnote 55 of the article, you wrote,

The author received some small inkling of the influence of Abele II on the Court’s thinking in the fall of 1972, when interviewing for clerkships at the Supreme Court. Justice Powell devoted over an hour of conversation to a discussion of Judge Newman’s analysis, while Justice Stewart (my future boss) jokingly referred to me as ‘the clerk who wrote the Newman opinion.’ I assume that the latter was based on Judge Newman’s generous letter of recommendation, a medium in which some exaggeration is expected.

Did you assist Judge Newman in researching and/or writing the Abele opinions?

Response: I assisted in research, but Judge Newman wrote the opinion, as he did all opinions which bore his name during the time I clerked for him.

- 9. Your article states Abele II had a “crucial influence” on the Roe decision and Judge Newman’s “careful and meticulous analysis of the competing constitutional issues” in Abele II was reflected in “almost perfect lockstep” in Roe. Numerous other scholars have credited Judge Newman’s opinion as having a decisive effect on the thinking of the Roe majority. Do you still believe Abele II had a “crucial influence” on Roe?

Response: I think that the historical record, particularly the papers of retired Justices, indicates the influence of the Abele II opinion, whether or not one agrees with the Supreme Court’s decision.

- 10. In Abele II, Judge Newman opines: “If the fetus survives the period of gestation, it will be born and then become a person entitled to the legal protections of the Constitution. But its capacity to become such a person does not mean that during gestation it is such a person. The unfertilized ovum also has the capacity to become a living human being, but the Constitution does not endow it with rights ...” Similarly, in your article, you wrote that Judge Newman “candidly conceded that a court could never resolve the philosophical issue of whether a fetus was a human being from the moment of conception, or whether abortion amounted to murder.”

- a. Do you believe the question of when a fetus becomes a human being is a philosophical question?

Response: In the article, I was accurately describing what Judge Newman said in fn. 9 of his Abele II opinion, which was that there was a wide range of views on this topic in philosophy and religion. I did not express my personal opinion in the article, and I do not think it appropriate for a sitting judge to express his views on such issues.

- b. Does science play a role in when a fetus becomes a human being?

Response: As explained above, I do not believe that it is appropriate for a sitting judge to express a personal view on this issue or how that determination should be made. If presented with a case implicating these issues, I would apply the law as determined by Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedents, without regard to my personal views.

c. What is the difference between being a “human being” and believe alive?

Response: I am unaware of any Supreme Court or Ninth Circuit jurisprudence making a distinction between being a “human being” and “being alive.”

i. Please explain.

Response: See above.

d. Do you believe there is a difference between an unfertilized ovum and a fetus?

Response: Yes.

i. Please explain.

Response: Although I am not a scientist, there is an obvious biological difference. The decisions of the Supreme Court also recognize a legal distinction, allowing far greater state regulation of abortion than of contraception.

11. In your article, you state: “in language that once again virtually echoes that of Abele II, Roe concluded that ‘by adopting one theory of life,’ Texas may not ‘override the rights of the pregnant woman.’” Does it matter to the legal reasoning whether the “theory of life” is based on science or philosophy?

Response: As a sitting judge, I do not believe that it is appropriate for me to criticize the reasoning of a Supreme Court decision. The point of the article was simply to suggest that the Supreme Court seemed to have followed the reasoning of Abele II.

a. Should the courts take into consideration these questions about science and technology and how they affect the law or should they rely solely on stare decisis?

Response: Trial courts do, and should, hear evidence in appropriate cases about science and technology, and make factual findings based on these matters. In general, appellate courts should rely on trial courts to hear evidence and find the relevant facts, and should not make such factual findings on their own. The principle of stare decisis suggests that appellate courts should be reluctant to overturn prior decisions. In the Ninth Circuit, a three-judge panel may not overrule a prior decision of the Court – only the en banc Court may do so.

12. In all 50 States, death is recognized and defined as the irreversible cessation of the brain and heart activity. It seems like common sense and logic that if a lack of brain waves and a heartbeat signifies death, then the presence of brain waves and a heartbeat signifies life. Do you agree that the irreversible cessation of brain and heart activity constitutes death under the law?

Response: I have not researched the law in other states. In Arizona, a statute, Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 14-1107, requires that “a determination of death must be made in accordance with accepted medical standards.” The Arizona Supreme Court has stated that “while the common law definition of death is still sufficient to establish death, the test of the Harvard Medical School or the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws [for brain death], if properly supported by expert medical testimony, is also a valid test for death in Arizona.” State v. Fierro, 124 Ariz. 182, 185-86, 603 P.2d 74, 77-78 (1979).

a. Does the presence of brain waves and a heartbeat equate to life under the law? Please explain.

Response: I am not familiar with the law of other states. Arizona law defines knowingly and recklessly causing the death of an unborn child at any state of its development as manslaughter, but the legislature has determined to exempt a death caused by a lawfully performed abortion. Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 13-1103.

13. If someone driving a car hits a pregnant woman who has a 28-week-old fetus and the woman survives but the fetus dies, that person can be held prosecuted for murder of the fetus. Thus, society recognizes that fetus as a life, as evidenced by law. However, if a pregnant woman wants to terminate that fetus at 28 weeks, the courts prevent states from protecting that life and recognizing the termination of that life as murder. How do you explain this inconsistency in the law?

Response: I do not think it appropriate for a sitting judge to opine on issues that may someday come before him, as Chief Justice Roberts recognized when posed similar questions during his confirmation hearing. As noted above, I am not familiar with the law of other states, but Arizona law does allow for prosecution for manslaughter pursuant to Ariz. Rev. Stat. § 13-1103 for causing the death of an unborn child, but expressly exempts from the criminal statute lawfully performed abortions. As the Arizona Supreme Court stated in State v. Brewer, “[we] can assume that the legislature, when it drew up this statute in 1983, considered the complex issue of when the murder statute should apply.” 170 Ariz. 486, 508, 826 P.2d 783, 805 (1992).

14. In Abele II, Judge Newman writes: “perhaps in the view of some of the legislators who enacted this statute, abortion is considered the deliberate killing of a human being. ... But under the Constitution, their judgment must remain a personal judgment ... a judgment they may not impose upon others by force of law.” Do you believe judges are better equipped to decide the standards of human decency than the people’s elected representatives?

Response: No.

15. Do you agree with Judge Newman that abortion is a “constitutional right of special significance?”

Response: The Supreme Court has held that under certain circumstances, the Constitution prohibits a state from denying access to an abortion. I would refrain from ranking constitutional rights.

Responses of Andrew D. Hurwitz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. You clerked for Judge Newman, then a District Court Judge for the District of Connecticut, when he presided over the two abortion cases, known as Abele I and Abele II. Over 30 years later, in 2003, you wrote a lengthy law review article entitled “Jon O. Newman and the Abortion Decisions: A Remarkable First Year.” Your article chronicled the influence Abele II had on the Supreme Court’s Roe v. Wade decision.

In footnote 55 of your article, you wrote that in fall of 1972, just after you finished clerking for Judge Newman, you interviewed for a Supreme Court clerkship. Is it fair to say that this interview occurred after the Abele II opinion was issued but before the Supreme Court ruled in Roe v. Wade?

Response: Yes.

2. In your article, you state that Judge Newman hoped to “side-step” the constitutional confrontation in Abele I by holding Connecticut’s interest in protecting the life and morals of the mother was not a sufficient state interest to overcome the right to privacy. You then disclosed the following about Judge Newman’s rationale:

“The clear unstated premise of Judge Newman’s approach (made express in conversations with his law clerk) was that the Connecticut legislature... would leave well enough alone and not provoke a constitutional attack on a second statute.”

You seem to be suggesting Judge Newman believed the Abele I decision not only struck down a 110 year-old statute outlawing abortion, but at the same time, had effectively precluded the legislature from offering a revised statute.

Do you believe Judge Newman’s approach was the appropriate?

Response: I do not think it appropriate for a former law clerk to comment on the correctness of an opinion written by a judge during the clerkship term. I did not mean in the article, however, to suggest that Judge Newman’s concurring opinion in Abele I had precluded the legislature from offering a revised statute (it did not), but rather to document his prediction (which turned out to be incorrect) that such a statute would not be passed.

3. You note in your article that, contrary to what Judge Newman believed would happen, the Connecticut legislature quickly responded to Abele I and passed a new statute. The new statute included all of the same prohibitions as the original, but this time it expressly stated the State’s interest was in protecting the life of the unborn child. You wrote:

“[Judge Newman] candidly conceded that a court could never resolve the philosophical issue of whether a fetus was a human being from the moment of conception, or whether abortion amounted to murder.”

Do you agree that Judge Newman should have deferred to the legislature upon recognizing that the court could never resolve these “philosophical” questions?

Response: As noted above, I do not think it appropriate for a former law clerk to comment on the correctness of an opinion written by a judge during the clerkship term. Judgments about policy matters are within the province of the legislature, and courts should not second-guess such judgments. However, a court may be required to determine whether a statute before it is constitutional, notwithstanding the good faith belief of the legislature that the statute rests on sound policy grounds.

- 4. You also observed that the development of Roe’s much-criticized trimester framework “provides the most direct evidence of Judge Newman’s influence on the . . . decision.” In your article, you emphasize a portion of Judge Newman’s opinion in Abele II that suggests viability as an appropriate threshold. You then chronicled how, originally, Justice Blackmun’s draft opinion drew the line for legal abortion at the first trimester. But, Judge Newman’s opinion influenced the Justices’ thinking. You therefore conclude:

This viability dictum, first introduced by Justice Blackmun into the Roe drafts only after Justice Powell had urged that he follow Judge Newman’s lead, effectively doubled the period of time in which states were barred from absolutely prohibiting abortions.

Even though Judge Newman expressly stated in Abele II that “we need not and should not express any conclusion about statutes advancing more limited interests” such as preserving life after viability, he nonetheless speculated that “the state interest in protecting the life of a fetus capable of living outside the uterus could be shown to be more generally accepted and, therefore, of more weight in the constitutional sense.” Judge Newman then took the opportunity to note that there “appears to be a medical consensus that the fetus normally becomes viable approximately 28 weeks after conception.” Ultimately, Judge Newman’s dictum on viability became the line the Supreme Court chose to draw in Roe.

- a. Do you agree that Judge Newman’s discussion of viability was dictum?

Response: Yes. He described it as such in Abele II.

- b. Please explain your view on the proper use and role of dictum in judicial opinions.

Response: I believe that courts should not decide issues not posed by the case before them. As I have said in several opinions, if the issue is important, it will be posed by a subsequent case in which the court will have the benefit of arguments by counsel and, in the case of an appellate court, the benefit of an opinion below. If a judge believes that it is important to flag an issue for future consideration, he can do so simply by noting that the issue was not decided because it was not argued, as I have done in the past. See, e.g., Gipson v. Kasey, 214 Ariz. 141, 148 ¶ 41, 150 P.3d 228, 235 (2007) (Hurwitz, J., concurring).

c. In what circumstances do you believe it is appropriate for a judge to opine on matters not essential to the disposition of the case?

Response: As noted above, I do not think it appropriate for judges to decide an issue not before the Court.

5. Do you believe there is a right to privacy in the U.S. Constitution?

Response: Yes, the Supreme Court has so held in a line of cases that includes Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965).

a. Where is it located?

Response: The Supreme Court has indicated that the right to privacy is a liberty interest protected by the due process clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. As a Ninth Circuit judge I would be bound by and would follow those Supreme Court decisions.

b. From what does it derive?

Response: The Court has held that the due process clauses protect certain fundamental rights and that the right to privacy is one of those rights.

c. What is your understanding, in general terms, of the contours of that right?

Response: The Court has described the right to privacy protected by the due process clause as including “the rights to marry, to have children, to direct the education and upbringing of one’s children, to marital privacy, to use contraception, to bodily integrity, and to abortion.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997).

6. In Griswold, Justice Douglas stated that, although the Bill of Rights did not explicitly mention the right to privacy, it could be found in the “penumbras” and “emanations” of the Constitution.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Douglas that there are certain rights that are not explicitly stated in our Constitution that can be found by “reading between the lines”?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that there are certain fundamental rights protected by the Constitution that are not expressly enumerated. I do not think, however, that those rights are identified by “reading between the lines” of the Constitution. The Supreme Court has held that those rights are identified by determining whether they are “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997).

- b. Is it appropriate for a judge to go searching for “penumbras” and “emanations” in the Constitution?

Response: No. Although some Justices have so suggested, I do not think that the Supreme Court has adopted such an approach and I believe that the job of a judge interpreting the Constitution is difficult enough without requiring a judge to search for “penumbras” and “emanations.”

7. During an ABA-sponsored panel covering capital punishment cases and the affects they have on civil litigation, you said Judges presiding over capital cases often ‘take the easy way out’ by relying on the harmless error standard of review rather than confronting the “real issues of the case.”

- a. Please explain what you meant by this comment?

Response: I do not have a transcript or notes from that panel, but my recollection is that I spoke at that panel about a problem peculiar to capital cases, where the jury is not only the finder of fact on guilt but also makes the decision on sentencing. Appellate courts correctly find error at trial harmless when the proof of guilt is overwhelming, as it often is in capital cases. But I was concerned that some courts did not independently determine whether trial error could have affected the jury’s sentencing decision, given that Chapman v. California, 386 U.S. 18 (1967), requires the state to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that error of a constitutional dimension could not have affected a jury verdict.

I did not suggest that the harmless error doctrine is not applicable in capital cases. I have both written and joined opinions in which harmless error was found and death sentences were affirmed.

- b. How are judges shirking their duty by hiding behind the harmless-error standard rather than confronting the real issues of the case?

Response: See above. Because in many cases there is overwhelming evidence of the guilt of a capital defendant, the issue of importance is often whether the penalty phase of the trial has been conducted without prejudicial error, and courts should separately determine whether harmless error during the guilt phase contributed to a verdict in the penalty phase.

8. Are you personally opposed to the death penalty?

Response: As a sitting judge, I do not believe that is appropriate to express personal opinions as to matters that come before our courts. The Supreme Court has made clear that, except in very limited instances, the death penalty is not cruel and unusual punishment, and I have voted in scores of cases to impose a death penalty.

9. Do you believe capital punishment is a constitutionally valid form of punishment?

Response: Yes. The death penalty is a constitutionally appropriate form of punishment with very limited exceptions (youth, mental retardation) specified by the Supreme Court.

10. While a member of the Arizona Board of Regents, the Board confronted the issue of affirmative action on several occasions. In fact, it undertook two formal studies on minorities in the Arizona university system, one in 1989 and another in 1996. During the 1989 study, you chaired a sub-committee on the task force.

a. What was the name of the sub-committee and its particular function in the study?

Response: I cannot recall, or find any records, as to the nature of the subcommittee I chaired.

b. Please describe your roll in the context of the overall study process.

Response: In 1989, I was one of 31 citizens (and 5 members of the Board of Regents) asked to study the issues of minority recruitment, retention, and graduation in the Arizona University systems as a member of the Ad Hoc Committee on University Access and Retention. The Committee eventually submitted a report, entitled "Our Common Commitment," to the Board of Regents, and I have supplied a copy of that report to the Judiciary Committee. I left the Board in 1996, and did not participate in the study undertaken that year.

11. Beginning in 1995, questions were raised in Arizona about the propriety of the affirmative action policies used by the state's universities. In 1996, the Board of Regent's commissioned a follow-up study to the 1989 study.

Part of the genesis of this debate was California's then-recently passed Proposition 209, which prohibited, in part, the use of "race, sex, or ethnicity" in public school admissions criteria. You cited Proposition 209 in a 1999 article for the Arizona Business Gazette that praised affirmative action and criticized Proposition 209.

Since that time, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in Grutter v. Bollinger, which declared a 25-year sunset on Constitutionally-permissible affirmative action policies.

- a. In light of Grutter, have your views on affirmative action changed? If so, how?

Response: Grutter holds that law schools can have a compelling interest in attaining a diverse student body and can use narrowly tailored admission programs to achieve that goal consistent with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. The Grutter opinion endorses Justice Powell's opinion in Regents of California v. Bakke, 438 U.S. 265 (1978). My view before Grutter was that Justice Powell's opinion effectively was the controlling opinion in Bakke -- and thus binding on lower courts -- as it stated the narrowest ground for the Court's disposition of the case. By endorsing Justice Powell's opinion (although finding it not necessary to conclude whether it was formally binding as precedent), Grutter was consistent with my previous views.

- b. Justice Thomas, in his opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part in Grutter, cited more recent Boalt Hall admission statistics. He noted that, despite Prop. 209, Boalt Hall eventually was able to increase the representation of minority students in its entering class to levels higher than when affirmative action policies were in place. In light of this information, do you still believe that affirmative action policies are necessary to avoid a "mediocre" legal profession?

Response: I have no reason to question the statistics cited by Justice Thomas. Nor am I aware of the measures taken by Boalt Hall before Grutter to recruit and retain qualified minority applicants. In the article cited, I suggested that law school classes "made up of only the majority" would lead to a mediocre profession and suggested that there were appropriate mechanisms available under the Constitution to avoid that result. I believe those statements are consistent with the later opinion of the Court in Grutter. Since Grutter, all law schools of which I am aware have managed to avoid admitting classes made up of only the majority, while still maintaining high standards of quality.

12. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I think that the most important attribute of a judge is fidelity to the law and the ability to decide cases solely on the facts and law before the court. I believe that my record on the Arizona Supreme Court demonstrates that I possess this attribute, and the surveys conducted by the Arizona Judicial Performance Review Commission confirm that those who have appeared before me believe I have this attribute.

- 13. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: Above all, a judge must have humility. Humility requires that a judge understand that his role in our system of government, while important, is limited. The role of a judge is not to make policy decisions or second-guess the other branches of government, but rather to apply the law to the facts of the case before him. Humility requires that judges recognize that they are not infallible. Humility also requires that judges interact with all who come before them in a courteous and professional fashion and accord all a fair judgment of their cases. I believe that my record on the Arizona Supreme Court demonstrates that I possess this temperament, and the surveys conducted by the Judicial Performance Review Commission confirm that those who have appeared before me believe I have such a temperament.

- 14. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

- 15. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that dispositively concluded an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If the case of first impression involved statutory or constitutional interpretation, my first resort would always be to the language of the relevant provision. If the language is clear and unambiguous on the point at issue, there is no need to resort to other sources. If not, I would consider the historical context in which the provision was adopted, the intent of the drafters of the provision, and in the case of statutory construction, the provision's relationship with the broader statutory scheme as a whole. I would also review relevant decisions of the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit. Even when there is no controlling precedent that conclusively resolves the issue at hand, there is often precedent which gives some guidance. If the issue were one on which neither the Supreme Court nor the Ninth Circuit had spoken, but which other courts (including state courts) had addressed, I would also look to such out-of-circuit authority for guidance.

- 16. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own best judgment of the merits?

Response: As a circuit judge, I would be obliged to follow a Supreme Court decision even if I believed it in error. As a state court judge, I have the same obligation. A circuit judge should follow previous decisions of the Circuit unless and until they are reexamined through the en banc procedure or overruled by the Supreme Court.

17. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A statute enacted by Congress is entitled to a strong presumption of constitutionality. Members of Congress take an oath to support and defend the Constitution, and courts should start from the premise that other branches of government have acted in a constitutional fashion. If, however, a court concludes that a statute was not authorized by the powers granted Congress under Article I of the Constitution, or infringes upon rights protected under the Constitution, it has a duty to say so.

18. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? What factors would you consider in reaching this decision?

Response: In general, I think that the principle of stare decisis dictates against an appellate court overturning its own precedent within the circuit. If, however, a panel decision is contrary to Supreme Court precedent, contrary to another decision of the circuit (something that should very rarely be the case), or otherwise manifestly flawed, the en banc procedure provides a mechanism for overturning the decision.

19. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I personally drafted these responses and reviewed the draft with an official of the Department of Justice before submitting them.

20. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Andrew David Hurwitz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: I do not find it useful to use labels in describing my judicial philosophy. I think that the central philosophy of all judges should be to decide the individual case before them solely on the basis of the law. The role of the judge in our constitutional system, while important, is limited. Judges should not second-guess legislative or executive policy judgments, but should and must ensure that the other branches of government do not infringe upon individual constitutional rights or exceed the powers granted them under Articles I and II.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: I believe I have acted in this fashion throughout my career on the Arizona Supreme Court, and commit to doing so if confirmed as a circuit judge. Those who have appeared before me have indicated in responses to surveys distributed by the Arizona Judicial Performance Review Commission that they regard me as having acted impartially in cases before me.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: Stare decisis is important because it provides predictability in the law; the law should not change simply because the composition of a court has changed. The Supreme Court should, however, reserve the right to overrule manifestly incorrect prior decisions, as it did in Brown v. Board of Education. Lower courts should be even more firmly committed to stare decisis in the case of their own prior decisions, as appellate review is available to a litigant who believes that a decision is in error.

Responses of Andrew D. Hurwitz
 Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit
 to the Written Questions of Senator Jeff Sessions

1. In 2002, you published an article in the New York Law School Legal Review entitled, “Jon O. Newman and the Abortion Decisions: A Remarkable First Year.” The article analyzes two opinions (Abele I, Abele II) authored by Judge Newman, then on the U.S. District Court of Connecticut, and their influence on the Supreme Court’s decision in Roe v. Wade. According to your article and your Senate Questionnaire, you clerked for Judge Newman at the time he authored these opinions.

- a. In your article, you praised Judge Newman’s reasoning in these cases as a “careful and meticulous analysis of the competing constitutional issues” and described his decision in Abele II as “striking, even in hindsight.” Are these your opinions today?

Response: The article was written for a New York Law School Law Review Symposium dedicated to Judge Newman’s first thirty years on the bench, and I was invited as one of his former clerks to submit an article. I tried at that time to document the historical record about the effect of Judge Newman’s decisions on subsequent Supreme Court jurisprudence without expressing my personal opinions as to the correctness of the Judge’s reasoning, something I think it would be improper for a law clerk to do, either then or now. As a sitting judge, I would regard it as inappropriate to express such opinions today (the article was written before I joined the bench, although published thereafter). Whether or not one agrees with his conclusions, I do believe that Judge Newman carefully identified the important competing constitutional interests involved in the Abele case, particularly in light of then-existing Supreme Court jurisprudence, and that the Supreme Court’s attention to this new district judge’s opinion was striking.

- b. In your article, you wrote that Judge Newman “placed primary reliance on the natural implications of Griswold: if the capacity of a fetus to be born made it a person endowed with Fourteenth Amendment rights, the same conclusion would seemingly also apply to the unfertilized ovum, whose potentiality for human life clearly could lawfully be terminated under Griswold.” Do you believe that there are any significant differences between an unfertilized ovum and a human fetus? Please explain your answer.

Response: The quoted language is an accurate description of the starting point of Judge Newman’s analysis in Abele II. He eventually did conclude, however, that a state has a substantially greater interest in protecting a fetus than an unfertilized ovum. There are obvious biological differences between an unfertilized ovum and a human fetus. Subsequent Supreme Court decisions reflect those distinctions, allowing greater state regulation of abortion than of contraception.

- c. In your article, you wrote that Judge Newman “candidly conceded that a court could never resolve the philosophical issue of whether a fetus was a human being from the moment of conception, or whether abortion amounted to murder.” Do you believe that the question of when human life begins is a matter of biology or of philosophy? Please explain your answer.

Response: The quoted language is an accurate description of what Judge Newman said in Abele II. I recognize a wide variety of sincere views are held by reasonable people as to this issue, but, as a sitting judge, I believe that I should not express personal views on such matters. I can assure the Committee that my personal views on this subject, or any other, would not play a role in my judicial decision making, and never have.

- d. Do you believe that the Constitution, properly interpreted, confers a right to abortion?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that, although states may regulate a woman’s access to abortion, they may not entirely prohibit the procedure. As a circuit judge, I would be bound to follow all Supreme Court precedent.

- e. Do you believe that the Constitution, properly interpreted, compels taxpayer funding of abortion?

Response: No. The Supreme Court held in Harris v. McRae, 448 U.S. 297 (1980), that the Constitution does not compel such funding.

- f. Do you believe that the Constitution, properly interpreted, prohibits informed consent and parental involvement provisions for abortion?

Response: No. The Supreme Court held in Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992), that the Constitution does not prohibit informed consent and parental involvement provisions.

- g. In your article, you wrote: “In sweeping dictum, Judge Newman then went on to confront the state’s argument that its laws were necessary to prevent the abortion of viable fetuses.” Do you believe that it is appropriate for judges to engage in “sweeping dictum”? Please explain your answer.

Response: No. I believe that courts should not unnecessarily decide issues not posed by the case before them. As I have said in several opinions, if the issue is truly important, it will be posed by a subsequent case in which the court will have the benefit of arguments of counsel and in the case of an appellate court, the benefit of an opinion below. See, e.g., Gipson v. Kasey, 214 Ariz. 141, 148 ¶ 41, 150 P.3d 228, 235 (2007) (Hurwitz, J., concurring).

- h. In your article, you cited correspondence between Justices Blackmun, Powell, and Marshall concerning “when the State’s legitimate interests might allow restriction of abortion rights” – after the first trimester, following viability, or at some other point. Ultimately, the Justices were influenced by Judge Newman’s choice of viability as the point at which a state may place restrictions on a woman’s “abortional freedom.” The Justices agreed to this cut-off despite the fact that, as you wrote, “Justice Powell recognized that the Court did not have to treat the issue at all.” Do you believe that it is appropriate for judges to decide an issue not before the court in order to choose among competing policy considerations? Please explain your answer.

Response: As noted above, I do not think it appropriate for judges to decide an issue not before the Court, and I do not think that choosing among competing policy considerations justifies doing so.

2. You served as pro bono as lead counsel in the seminal Supreme Court case of Ring v. Arizona, which struck down Arizona’s death penalty sentencing scheme as unconstitutional, and also invalidated several other States’ statutes as well. You were quoted in an article by the Arizona Attorney newsletter as saying that the experience was “the best episode in [your] wonderful career in private practice.”

- a. Assuming the Arizona Attorney accurately quoted you, please explain whether you were referring to the experience of arguing before the Court, or the outcome of the case.

Response: I was referring to the experience of arguing before the Supreme Court.

- b. Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment? Please explain your answer.

Response: Yes. The death penalty is a constitutionally appropriate form of punishment with very limited exceptions (youth, mental retardation) specified by the Supreme Court.

- c. Do you believe that the death penalty constitutes cruel and unusual punishment under the Constitution? Please explain your answer.

Response: No. The Supreme Court has made clear that the death penalty is not cruel and unusual punishment. I have voted in scores of cases to impose a death penalty, and could not have done so consistent with my oath to support and defend the Constitution if the penalty were per se cruel and unusual.

3. In Roper v. Simmons, Justice Kennedy relied in part on “evolving standards of decency” in holding that capital punishment for any murderer under the age of 18 was unconstitutional.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Kennedy’s analysis? Please explain your answer.

Response: As a judge, I am bound to follow Supreme Court precedent, whether or not I would have employed the same analysis as the opinion of the Court in any particular case. I therefore would be required to conclude that capital punishment could not constitutionally be imposed on a murderer under the age of 18.

- b. How would you determine what constitutes “evolving standards of decency” and how it determines constitutionality? In your answer, please include what factors you would consider in that analysis.

Response: All legislation begins with a presumption of constitutionality, and it is the job of the political branches of government to determine matters such as standards of decency. Supreme Court decisions since Trop v. Dulles, 356 U.S. 86 (1958), have required use of “evolving standards of decency” in evaluating Eighth Amendment claims, and if confronted with such a claim, I would be mandated to first look to Supreme Court precedent, and, if none existed, then to precedent in the court on which I am serving. I do not believe that a judge’s personal opinions play any role in determining whether a statute violates the Eighth Amendment.

- c. In your view, could a judge conclude that “evolving standards of decency” dictate that the death penalty is unconstitutional in all cases? In your answer, please include what factors you believe are relevant to a judge’s analysis.

Response: I do not believe that a judge could so conclude, given that the death penalty is mentioned in the Constitution and has been repeatedly held constitutional by the Supreme Court.

- d. Could a judge conclude that a “changing legal landscape” dictates that the death penalty is unconstitutional in all cases? In your answer, please include what factors you believe are relevant to a judge’s analysis.

Response: I do not believe that a judge could so conclude, given that the death penalty is mentioned in the Constitution and has been repeatedly held constitutional by the Supreme Court.

- e. In your view, is it possible for something to be constitutional one day and unconstitutional the next in light of a “changing legal landscape”?

Response: I do not believe that the Constitution changes from one day to the next, although I recognize that the Supreme Court may effectively produce that result when it overrules a prior decision. That is one reason why the Court should be very cautious in doing so.

4. In a 2007 speech to Planned Parenthood, then-Senator Obama said:

“We need somebody who’s got the heart, the empathy, to recognize what it’s like to be a young teenage mom. The empathy to understand what it’s like to be poor, or African-American, or gay, or disabled, or old. And that’s the criteria by which I’m going to be selecting my judges.”

a. Do you agree with the President’s statement?

Response: I would not presume to tell the President by what criteria he should be selecting judges, a task given to his discretion (subject to the advice and consent of the Senate) under the Constitution. Nor can I speak with authority as to what other criteria the President uses in judicial selection, although I can say that I was never asked about empathy during the selection process. I emphasize that I have, and will continue to, base my judicial decisions on the law, not on personal beliefs or other extraneous matters.

b. Do you believe you fit the President’s criteria?

Response: I believe that the law must govern a judge’s decisions, and that they should not be based on personal characteristics of the judge or his or her personal beliefs. I believe that judges must treat all who come before them with courtesy and humility, and I believe that I possess and have exhibited those traits.

c. Do you believe judges should ever base their decisions on a desired outcome as opposed to the law and facts presented? If so, under what circumstances?

Response: No.

d. Do you believe a judge should consider his or her own values or policy preferences in determining what the law means? If so, under what circumstances?

Response: No.

Responses of John Z. Lee
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. In Taylor Bean & Whitaker Mortgage Corp. v. Cebulak, the judge dismissed a myriad of civil RICO claims you filed on behalf of your client, saying the complaint contained a “glaring deficiency” and citing Plaintiff’s failure “to properly plead.” You were asked about this at your hearing, but your reply did not address my concerns.

- a. Your response indicated you and your client believed you had a good-faith basis to state a RICO claim. Why did the judge describe this as a “glaring deficiency”? Do you disagree with the judge’s determination and dismissal? Did you appeal that decision?

Response: In its opinion, the court held that the facts as alleged in the complaint were insufficient to satisfy the “continuity plus requirement” under civil RICO. More specifically, although it recognized that the Seventh Circuit had not established a per se durational requirement under RICO, the court found that a duration of less than two years between the first and final predicate acts was insufficient to establish the element of continuity under the closed-ended analysis of the “continuity plus requirement.”

If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I may be asked to decide a similar question in a future case. Accordingly, I do not believe it would be appropriate for me to state my agreement or disagreement with the court’s determination.

I would like to add, however, that when we filed the complaint on behalf of the client, we believed that it had sufficiently asserted the relevant facts to satisfy the pleading obligations under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure as applied to civil RICO claims, including the “continuity plus requirement,” as discussed in prior rulings of the Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit and the District Court of the Northern District of Illinois. Once the court issued its ruling, we did not appeal that aspect of the order because such an order generally does not constitute an appealable final decision and the case was allowed to proceed on other grounds.

- b. Do you think it is appropriate for attorneys to make all claims theoretically possible in a lawsuit, even if there is no factual basis for them?

Response: No. I do not believe that it is appropriate for attorneys to assert claims if there is no factual basis for them.

- c. What is the duty of a judge in reviewing pleadings? How much latitude should a judge give a party when pleadings are deficient?

Response: The duty of a judge in reviewing pleadings is to apply the relevant procedural rules and controlling precedents to the case before the court. If a pleading does not comply with the relevant procedural rules and controlling precedents, a judge should reject the pleading and, if appropriate, dispose of the case in its entirety.

- 2. In a Harvard Crimson article published during your time at law school, you are quoted discussing a civil rights claim filed by the Harvard Civil Rights Coalition. The claim alleged students were harmed by a lack of diversity in the Harvard faculty and sought damages. It was dismissed for a lack of standing. According to the news article, you said: "When they talk about dialogue they talk about us dropping the law suit"

- a. Were you a member of the Harvard Civil Rights Coalition?

Response: The Harvard Civil Rights Coalition was a coalition of various law student organizations, including minority law student organizations and the women's law student organization. The Asian American Law Students Association ("AALSA") was a minority law student organization and a member of the Coalition. During this time period, I was the president of AALSA and served as AALSA's liaison to the Coalition.

- b. Were you a party to this suit?

Response: No. I was not a party to the lawsuit.

- c. Can you explain the reasoning behind seeking damages due to the alleged lack of diversity in the Harvard faculty?

Response: I believe that the Coalition sought equitable relief from the court as part of its lawsuit. I do not recall whether the Coalition sought monetary damages as part of its claims or, if it did, the basis for that claim.

- d. Do you believe that students are harmed by a lack of faculty diversity, and if so, should there be a legal remedy?

Response: I believe that law students benefit from an opportunity to interact with a faculty that includes professors from all types of backgrounds with diverse views and experiences. In the lawsuit filed by the Coalition, the Massachusetts trial court dismissed the action on the basis that law students lacked standing to file claims against their law school under the Massachusetts statutes at issue. The Massachusetts Supreme Court affirmed this determination, and I respect that ruling. As for whether there should be a legal remedy, I believe that any such determination should be left to the legislative bodies of Congress and/or the state legislatures, and not the courts. The role of a judge is to apply existing law to the facts before the court, not to make new laws. And, if I am confirmed as a district judge, I will adhere to this fundamental principle.

3. Do you think racial quotas should play a part in university hiring processes or admissions?

Response: The Supreme Court made clear that the use of racial quotas in public university admissions is unconstitutional. See Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 334 (2003); Regents of the Univ. of Cal. v. Bakke, 438 U.S. 265, 315 (1978) (opinion of Powell, J.). If confirmed, I would strictly follow and apply all Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedents in this area.

a. In public universities, should such quotas be mandatory? What about private universities?

Response: As noted above, the Supreme Court made clear that the use of racial quotas in public university admissions is unconstitutional. The same precedents also make clear that the government may not mandate the use of racial quotas by private universities. If confirmed, I would strictly follow and apply all Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedents in this area.

4. Do you think the race or socio-economic status of a defendant in a criminal case should be a determining factor in the outcome or sentencing?

Response: No. I do not believe that an individual's race or socio-economic status should be a factor in the outcome or sentencing in a criminal case. In making sentencing determinations, if confirmed, I will demonstrate deference to the Federal Sentencing Guidelines and consider all legally relevant factors.

5. Given that you received a partial "Not Qualified" rating from the ABA's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, I wanted to give you an opportunity to outline your qualifications and experience. I note that you have only one publication and did not begin doing pro bono work until later in your legal career. Would you please explain to the Committee why you believe you are qualified to sit as a United States District Judge?

Response: I believe that the breadth and nature of my federal litigation experience over the past twenty years have prepared me to be a district judge, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed. Throughout my career, my legal practice has consisted predominantly of representing clients in complex cases before federal district courts. As a trial attorney at the United States Department of Justice, my responsibilities included representing the United States in federal courts in the Third, Seventh and Ninth Circuits. Most of these cases arose under the federal environmental statutes and involved complex legal issues as well as extensive factual and expert discovery. Since entering private practice, I have represented clients in complex commercial disputes, including cases involving antitrust, intellectual property and business torts issues. I have represented all types of clients from large multi-national corporations to small businesses and individuals, both as plaintiffs and defendants. Most of these cases have been in federal courts, particularly in the Seventh and Ninth Circuits, and have required months, if not years, of fact and expert discovery, as well as extensive motion practice. I have also participated in a number of contested evidentiary hearings, multi-week jury trials, mediations and arbitrations. Additionally, I have served as an adjunct professor in antitrust law at The John Marshall Law School and trained numerous attorneys in procedural and substantive areas of the law while a partner at my firm. In light of my experience, I am confident that I will be able to perform the duties of a district judge, if confirmed.

6. Of the current justices sitting on the Supreme Court, which justice's judicial, legal and constitutional philosophy do you agree with most? Why?

Response: There is no single Justice sitting on the Supreme Court with whose judicial, legal and constitutional philosophies I most agree. As an attorney, I hold the Supreme Court and all of the current Justices in the highest regard and have the utmost respect for all of their views and opinions. Moreover, as a district judge, if confirmed, I would adhere faithfully to all of the Supreme Court's rulings, as well as those of the Seventh Circuit, regardless of my personal beliefs or views.

7. In Federalist No. 78, Alexander Hamilton said, "To avoid an arbitrary discretion in the courts, it is indispensable that they should be bound down by strict rules and precedents, which serve to define and point out their duty in every particular case that comes before them."

a. Do you agree that judges are bound by "strict rules and precedents" when making decisions?

Response: Yes. I believe that judges must apply strict rules and precedents in making decisions.

8. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is to have a deep respect for the rule of law and an unwavering commitment to apply the controlling law to the particular facts before the court, without regard to the judge's personal background and beliefs. I am confident that I have this attribute, and as a district judge, if I am confirmed, I will abide faithfully by it.

- 9. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: Above all, a judge must be fair and impartial to all of the parties that appear before the court. A judge must also be respectful of the parties as well as their counsel and all courtroom personnel and demonstrate integrity, patience, courtesy and humility in all matters before the court. Finally, a judge must exercise judicial restraint by narrowly ruling only on the specific issues in controversy before the court. I have demonstrated these characteristics throughout my professional life and will continue to do so, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed.

- 10. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes. I am committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if I personally disagree with such precedents.

- 11. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that dispositively concluded an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In deciding a case of first impression, I would look first and foremost to the language of the relevant statute to decide the issue at hand. In the event that the meaning of the statutory provision could not be ascertained from its plain language, I would also consider the purpose and structure of the statutory scheme as a whole, determine whether identical language appears in other parts of the statute, and employ traditional tools of statutory interpretation. I would also consider any decisions issued by the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the Seventh Circuit, as well as other Circuits, interpreting analogous statutory provisions. Finally, if questions remain regarding the meaning of the provision at issue, I would consider legislative history for additional guidance, being mindful of the limitations of such an inquiry.

- 12. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: A district judge must apply the controlling precedents of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, regardless of his or her personal judgment or beliefs. If I am confirmed as a district judge, I will apply controlling precedents without regard to my personal judgment or beliefs.

13. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: All statutes enacted by Congress are presumed to be constitutional. A federal district court must declare a statute unconstitutional only in those instances where Congress has exceeded its constitutional authority and/or enacted legislation that violates the Constitution. In so doing, the district court should consider and apply the binding precedents of the Supreme Court and the relevant Circuit in which the district court sits.

14. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: District courts face increasingly busy dockets. As a district judge, if I have the honor of being confirmed, I intend to actively manage the cases to which I am assigned by conducting early and regular status conferences in an effort to facilitate the prompt resolution of matters. I would also inform all parties that they are expected to adhere to the local rules and issue clear standing orders governing such items as dispositive motions, discovery motions and pre-trial procedures. Additionally, I would establish firm but reasonable deadlines for discovery and set and enforce trial dates. For criminal matters, in particular, I would conduct proceedings in accordance with the Speedy Trial Act. Finally, I would utilize alternative dispute resolution methods, such as settlement conferences and the services of magistrate judges, to explore expeditious resolution of cases prior to trial.

15. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes. I believe that district judges have an indispensable role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, I would implement the steps described in response to Question No. 14.

16. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: These responses were prepared personally by me and reviewed by officials at the United States Department of Justice. I have authorized them to be submitted to the Committee.

17. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of John Z. Lee
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: I believe that a judge must have a deep and abiding respect for the rule of law and should apply the controlling law to the facts before the court, regardless of his or her personal background or beliefs. A judge should also demonstrate judicial restraint and decide only the contested issues raised by the parties. Such a narrow approach to deciding cases is appropriate because judges are not permitted by our constitutional system to make new laws, but only to apply existing laws to the particular disputes raised by the parties before the court.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: As a first generation immigrant to this country, I have developed a deep respect for the rule of law and for the principle that everyone should be treated fairly regardless of their racial or ethnic background, social-economic status or political beliefs. These are the very principles that attracted my parents to this country over 40 years ago and that provided me with the professional opportunities that I have enjoyed throughout my career. I believe that I have adhered to those principles throughout my professional and personal life and am deeply committed to them.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: District judges must strictly apply the controlling precedents of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the Circuit in which they sit. I do not believe that district judges should refuse to follow controlling precedents under any circumstances.

Responses of George Levi Russell, III
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of Maryland
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. In your questionnaire, you indicated that you have ruled that at least three criminal defendants have received ineffective assistance of counsel. Can you describe the process of how you decide when a defendant has received ineffective assistance of counsel? If confirmed as a United States District Judge, what standard would you use to review such claims?

Response: When deciding if a defendant has received ineffective assistance of counsel, I apply the relevant case law precedent. The basic standard for ineffective assistance of counsel was established in the case of Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). Under Strickland, counsel is deemed to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel if his performance "fell below an objective standard of reasonableness" and "there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different." Id. at 688, 694. If confirmed, I would use the same standard as further interpreted by subsequent precedents of the Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit.

2. Please describe your judicial philosophy.

Response: My judicial philosophy is to allow the lawyers to try their case and to decide the case or controversy before the court based on the facts and the law as determined by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and Court of Appeals.

3. In 1996, you were represented the FDA in an employee termination case where the plaintiff claimed that she was fired because of her religion. You successfully argued that she was not discriminated against based on religion. As a federal judge, how would you make decisions when confronted with religious liberty issues?

Response: At the time of the litigation I was an Assistant United States Attorney representing the government. The case involved allegations of adverse employment action taken against the employee based upon her religion. At the conclusion of the case it was established that there were legitimate non-discriminatory reasons for the action taken against the employee. I have not had the occasion to work on religious liberty issues since that case. If confirmed as a district judge, I would neutrally and faithfully apply the relevant statutes, constitutional provisions, and precedent in all cases involving religious liberties, including employment discrimination cases.

4. What is your understanding of the current state of the law with regard to the interplay between the establishment and free exercise clause of the First Amendment?

Response: I have not had the opportunity to work on establishment and free exercise clause cases during my career as a judge and attorney. If confronted with such cases as a district judge, I would carefully research and apply the Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit case law in these very important areas.

5. Given that you received a partial “Not Qualified” rating from the ABA’s Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, I wanted to give you an opportunity to outline your qualifications and experience. Would you please explain to the Committee why you believe you are qualified to sit as a United States District Judge?

Response: I believe I am qualified to sit as a United States district judge based upon my twenty years experience as a judge and a lawyer. I have served as a judge in the Circuit Court for Baltimore City for the past five years, handling cases in all four dockets: criminal, civil, family, and juvenile. When I practiced law for fourteen years before being a judge, I received diverse legal experience in both civil and criminal litigation, most of which has been in the United States District Court for the District of Maryland. I have also served as a law clerk to a state appellate court judge.

In the area of civil litigation, I have defended businesses in commercial disputes; defended the government, as an Assistant United States Attorney, in medical malpractice, intentional torts, discrimination and personal injury cases; instituted litigation to collect on overdue student loans and rent court actions; represented plaintiffs in class action products liability cases; and represented plaintiffs in lawsuits arising from medical malpractice and personal injury cases. In the area of criminal litigation, as an Assistant United States Attorney I have prosecuted numerous individuals for committing violent crimes and violations of the narcotics and firearm laws. I have also initiated and supervised wiretap investigations in order to prosecute persons supplying the narcotics to low-end dealers in the State of Maryland. Having seen the practice of law through many prisms, I am able to prepare, organize, and resolve issues in cases quickly, but with care.

6. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe that the most important attributes of a judge are fidelity to the law, independence, integrity, fairness, good judgment, an appropriate temperament, and a commitment to treating all those before him with dignity and respect. I believe that I possess these attributes.

7. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: I believe that having an appropriate judicial temperament is critical to a judge's ability to administer justice faithfully and to the public's confidence in the judicial system. It is especially important that a judge be consistently fair, respectful, courteous, patient, humble, open-minded, evenhanded and decisive. I believe that if confirmed as a district court judge, my conduct will meet that standard.

8. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

9. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that dispositively concluded an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If confirmed and faced with a case of first impression, I would start with the text of the provisions at issue. If the plain language and structure of the text did not yield a clear answer I would look to the precedents of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit interpreting analogous provisions, as well as precedent from other federal courts, for guidance.

10. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: If confirmed, I would faithfully apply any relevant Supreme Court or Fourth Circuit precedent, regardless of my personal judgment or views of the precedent.

11. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: It is appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional if it violates a provision clearly set out in the U.S. Constitution, or if Congress has exceeded its constitutional authority. In considering a constitutional challenge to a statute, a district judge must apply any applicable precedent of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals.

12. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would set reasonable and timely scheduling orders, adhere to the Speedy Trial Act, promptly resolve pending motions, and continually monitor case aging reports. I would also utilize alternative dispute resolution tools such as mediation and settlement conferences.

13. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: I believe judges play a vital role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. I would set reasonable and timely scheduling orders in every case. I believe that one of the most important aspects of keeping cases moving is the prompt resolution of pending motions before the court. Litigants often cannot advance the discovery process, settlement negotiations, or trial preparation without rulings from the court on numerous pretrial issues.

14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the written questions on Thursday, February 3, 2012. I prepared my responses over the following several days and reviewed my responses with representatives of the Department of Justice. I finalized my responses and authorized their transmittal to the Committee.

15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of George Levi Russell, III

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy? How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: My judicial philosophy is to allow the lawyers to try their case and to decide the case or controversy before the court based on the facts and the law as determined by the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and Court of Appeals.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: Throughout my career I have treated all litigants fairly regardless of political or economic status. This record of fairness is the assurance that I will continue to do so.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: The doctrine of stare decisis applies to all courts and if confirmed as a district judge, I would firmly adhere to the doctrine.

Responses of John J. Tharp, Jr.
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. Much of your current work as an attorney centers on assisting clients with both government and internal investigations of securities and other types of fraud. Do you think judicial and civil remedies are a more effective way of preventing and dealing with securities fraud than regulatory actions and investigations from executive branch agencies?

Response: In my experience, I have not found private civil litigation to be a more effective way of preventing and dealing with securities fraud than regulatory actions and investigations from executive branch agencies.

2. In some of your writings, you discuss a current “controversial” practice of executive agencies such as the SEC in which they delegate investigatory authority to counsel of corporations potentially facing allegations of securities fraud. You state this allows the executive branch agency to offload some of their work on the private sector and, at the same time, affords the corporation the ability to “control” the investigation and possibly reach an agreement with the government not to prosecute.

a. Do you think this practice is effective or wise?

Response: The practice that I have referred to does not involve any delegation of legal authority or responsibility by executive agencies to counsel for corporations. Rather, I have noted the increasing expectation of enforcement attorneys from such agencies that corporations will themselves conduct credible and thorough internal investigations of potential violations of law (whether they come to the attention of the corporation via whistleblower complaints, the corporation’s own compliance procedures and internal controls, or other means) and provide to the agencies the factual information developed through those internal investigations. In my experience, this approach has been very effective in helping agencies maximize their resources and identify and resolve securities fraud claims in a fair and efficient manner.

b. Do you think this practice is legal?

Response: The practice that I have referred to does not involve any delegation of legal authority or responsibility by executive agencies to counsel for corporations. I am not aware of any suggestion or argument that encouraging corporations to affirmatively and pro-actively investigate potential violations of law, and to report them to regulatory agencies, is unlawful.

- c. If you, as a judge, were presented with a case where a litigant was challenging this authority, how would you approach such a case?

Response: I would not approach such a case differently than I would approach any other case. I would consider the evidence and legal arguments of the parties and decide the case impartially and in accordance with the applicable law.

3. You also write that the SEC and other organizations are being more aggressive than ever with securities investigations, presumably in response to the recent financial crisis and undiscovered issues such as the situation at Lehman Brothers.

- a. If a case involving a civil or criminal claim relating to securities fraud came before you on the court, do you feel you would be able to be fair and impartial in adjudicating the matter?

Response: Yes. In my career, I have both prosecuted and defended securities fraud cases.

- b. Can you think of any situations relating to securities fraud cases where you would need to recuse yourself?

Response: At present, I cannot think of a situation in which I would need to recuse myself from a case solely because it involved allegations of securities fraud (other factors, such as a party being represented by my current firm, could, however, prompt a recusal in a securities fraud case). In all cases, however, I would employ established processes for identifying potential conflicts and consult and follow the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

4. You have a distinguished service career in the US Marine Corps. In the current state of the war on terror, a federal judge may have to rule on the legal status of “military detainees” captured or arrested pursuant to the president’s authority found in the current Authorization for Use of Military Force (AUMF) or new authority found in Section 1021 of the 2012 National Defense Authorization Act.

- a. In his dissent in Hamdi v. Rumsfeld, Justice Scalia says: “The very core of liberty secured by our Anglo-Saxon system of separated powers has been freedom from indefinite imprisonment at the will of the Executive.” Some legal scholars believe Section 1021 of the recently passed NDAA allows for just that. Do you agree with Justice Scalia?

Response: I agree that no person to whom the protections of the United States Constitution apply may be deprived of liberty without due process of law, as stated in the Fifth Amendment. As a District Judge, I would endeavor to follow legal precedent and other applicable law in resolving any matter presenting the question of whether the imprisonment of a military detainee constituted a violation of the Constitution.

- b. In Hamdi, a Supreme Court plurality ruled that while the executive has the authority to detain enemy combatants, detainees who are US citizens are entitled to due process before a judge, explaining that this review did not have to meet the usual stringent standard applied in ordinary criminal matters. However, this was a plurality opinion and binding precedent is arguably unclear on the issue. Do you feel the government has the ability to detain non-citizen enemy combatants without trial? What about citizen detainees?

Response: Although it was a plurality opinion in the sense that no single view as to all issues in the case commanded a majority of the Supreme Court, in Hamdi a majority of the Court agreed that the petitioner was entitled to a meaningful opportunity to contest the factual evidence on which his detention was based. See 524 U.S. 507, 533 (plurality of four Justices so holding) and id. at 553 (opinion of two Justices concurring that petitioner "should at the least have the benefit" of the opportunity "to offer evidence that he is not an enemy combatant"). As a District Judge, I would apply that precedent, and any other applicable precedent and law, to resolve any question that came before me regarding whether the detention of an enemy combatant, whether a citizen or non-citizen, constituted a violation of the Constitution.

- c. In a separate Hamdi dissent, Justice Thomas disagrees with both Justice Scalia and the plurality. Justice Thomas argues the executive has vast power in certain circumstances to detain citizen enemy combatants without judicial review, stating: "Because a decision to bomb a particular target might extinguish life interests, the plurality's analysis seems to require notice to potential targets." Do you find this view persuasive?

Response: Justice Thomas' dissent in Hamdi did not garner the support of other members of the Court. As a District Judge, I would not apply the rationale of that dissent in resolving a question of whether the detention of an enemy combatant constituted a violation of the Constitution.

5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I would cite integrity as the most important attribute of a judge because it is a quality that encompasses many characteristics that a judge should possess, such as honesty, impartiality, humility and respect for the rule of law. I believe I possess these qualities.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge's temperament should promote confidence in the integrity of the judge and, by extension, of the judicial system. A judge must therefore be respectful, even-tempered and patient with all litigants. I believe I meet this standard.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that dispositively concluded an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In the absence of binding precedent, if the issue presented was one of constitutional, statutory or regulatory interpretation, I would look first to the text of the provision in question; if that text was unambiguous, I would apply it as written. If ambiguous, I would consider whether there was precedent from the Supreme Court, the Seventh Circuit, and other Circuit and District courts (in that order) interpreting analogous provisions and whether there was legislative history relevant to the provision at issue. If the issue was not one of textual interpretation, I would look to precedent in the Supreme Court, the Seventh Circuit, and other Circuit and District courts (in that order) relating to analogous issues.

9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: As a District Judge in the Northern District of Illinois, I would apply binding precedent from the Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, even if I did not agree with it.

10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: It is appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional when (i) a claim cannot be decided on a non-constitutional ground; (ii) the statute at issue violates the Constitution or Congress exceeded its authority in enacting the statute; and (iii) there is no binding authority affirming the constitutionality of the statute.

11. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would endeavor to ensure that cases move forward expeditiously and efficiently, as overcrowded dockets can diminish the quality of justice available to all. To do so, I would pro-actively manage cases on my docket with frequent status hearings, firm deadlines and flexible procedures tailored to the specific needs and circumstances of different types of cases. I would seek to resolve discovery disputes, dispositive motions, and other motions promptly with rulings and opinions that are narrowly focused on the issues presented by the litigants.

12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, I do believe that judges play a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. A judge must balance the needs of individual litigants against the needs of the public as a whole; if individual cases do not move through the judicial system in an efficient manner, the availability of that system, and the quality of justice it provides, may be compromised for all litigants. Please see my response to question 11 above as to the specific steps I would take to control my docket if confirmed as a District Judge.

13. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I reviewed the questions and prepared my responses after receiving these questions on February 2, 2012. My responses were reviewed by representatives of the Department of Justice and I subsequently finalized my responses before submitting them on February 6, 2012.

14. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of John J. Tharp, Jr.
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: A judge should adhere to, and promote respect for, the rule of law. To do so, the judge must apply the law, not create it, and must do so impartially and efficiently, with integrity, an even temperament, and respect for all who come before the court.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: First, I believe I have developed a reputation of integrity in my legal community, which attests to my honesty and fairness, even in the role of zealous advocate for clients. Second, during my professional career, I have represented a wide spectrum of clients, as both plaintiffs and defendants, in many different types of cases, so I would not come to the bench with only one perspective on justice. And third, I believe I have demonstrated a commitment to public service that reflects my concern with making a contribution to the public good—a goal that is inconsistent with the notion of applying the law with bias and favoritism.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: I believe that all judges should be committed to the doctrine of stare decisis and are obligated to apply binding precedent regardless of whether they personally agree with that precedent. Fidelity to the doctrine of stare decisis is critical to the integrity of the judicial system, so I do not believe that the commitment to stare decisis should vary from court to court.

RE: Application of John Z. Lee for Judicial Vacancy, United States District Court, Northern District of Illinois

Dear Senator Leahy:

On behalf of the Asian American Bar Association of Greater Chicago ("AABA"), I am pleased to write this letter in support of John Z. Lee's nomination to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. If he is confirmed, Mr. Lee would be only the second Asian American to serve as an Article III judge in Illinois, and the first Korean American Article III judge in the Midwest.

AABA is the largest bar organization representing the interests of Asian Pacific American attorneys, judges, law professors and law students in the Midwest. We are deeply committed to supporting the appointment of qualified Asian Pacific Americans ("APAs") to the judiciary, where Asian Pacific Americans are significantly underrepresented. Nowhere is the underrepresentation of APAs more apparent than on the federal bench. Mr. Lee has a distinguished record of professional accomplishments, and a long record of service to the community. It is therefore our distinct pleasure to recommend and support the confirmation of Mr. Lee, as he is exceedingly well-qualified to serve as a United States District Court Judge.

First and foremost, Mr. Lee is a highly skilled lawyer who has years of significant experience in the federal courts. After graduating magna cum laude from Harvard University and cum laude from Harvard Law School, Mr. Lee served as a trial attorney at the United States Department of Justice's Environment and Natural Resources Division. There, he tried cases arising under federal environmental statutes. Mr. Lee has also practiced with Mayer, Brown & Platt, Grippio & Elden and, since 1999, Freeborn & Peters, where he is a partner. For most of Mr. Lee's private practice career, he has focused on the litigation of complex commercial disputes involving antitrust, intellectual property, and business tort issues. In this regard, Mr. Lee is well-known as a lawyer with tremendous ability who can meticulously evaluate legal and factual issues while remaining focused on the needs of his client. Mr. Lee also has significant experience in negotiating complex settlements. He is well-known for his practical, common-sense approach to legal issues and disputes.

Other organizations have recognized Mr. Lee during his distinguished legal career, cementing his outstanding reputation in the legal community. For example, in 2004, Mr. Lee was selected by the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin and Chicago Lawyer publications as one of "40 Attorneys Under 40 in Illinois to Watch." He has also been selected as a "Leading Lawyer" in Commercial Litigation and Class Action/Mass Tort Defense Law by the Leading Lawyers Network.

Despite his busy litigation practice, Mr. Lee has given generously of his time to the local community. Indeed, he has gone beyond mere participation by taking on leadership positions within numerous public-interest institutions that assist minority and low-income communities. He is currently president of the Board of Directors for the Coordinated Advice and Referral Program for Legal Services ("CARPLS"), a legal aid service that provides assistance to low-income residents of Cook County through a Legal Aid Hotline and several court-based advice desks. Mr. Lee is also President of the Board of Directors of Asian Human Services, which provides social services to low-income, Asian American immigrant and refugee communities. He has served on its board since 2006. Through Asian Human Services, Mr. Lee has had the privilege of using his personal influence to bring about positive social change for his clients.

As a partner and co-chair of the Diversity Committee at Freeborn & Peters, Mr. Lee has encouraged his firm to become a major supporter of the programs of AABA. Through the support of influential attorneys such as Mr. Lee, AABA has been able to expand its programming, including opening a second pro bono legal clinic, establishing a law foundation, and creating a mentoring program. In the interest of full disclosure, Mr. Lee currently serves as a director on AABA's Board of Directors. His participation with AABA as a board member underscores his commitment to the APA community, and his involvement informs AABA's direct knowledge of Mr. Lee's accomplishments and qualifications. Mr. Lee is an active member or co-chair of several AABA board committees, including the Business Development and In House Counsel/Partners Committees, which provide networking opportunities and training sessions to help both younger and more experienced Asian American attorneys advance their careers.

Re: Letter of Support for John Z. Lee

Dear Senator Leahy:

Asian American Institute (AAI) enthusiastically recommends John Z. Lee for a judgeship with the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. As a litigation partner at the law firm of Freeborn & Peters LLP, Mr. Lee has demonstrated his vast legal knowledge and ability. Mr. Lee is a top notch writer and speaker. His professional experience and public service activities demonstrate his fair temperament and commitment to the community.

Mr. Lee has actively contributed to the vitality of the Asian American community and the public at large. As the President of Asian Human Services, he leads a nationally accredited, Medicaid-certified social service agency that serves Chicago's Asian immigrant communities. He is also the President of Coordinated Advice and Referral Program for Legal Services (CARPLS), one of Cook County's primary legal aid providers, which has assisted hundreds of thousands of clients. Mr. Lee also serves on the board of Asian American Bar Association of Chicago and volunteers for various other community organizations. Additionally, through his role on his law firm's Professional Review and Recruiting Committees, Mr. Lee serves as an important link between minority and women attorneys and other attorneys, because he is adept at communicating with all groups.

AAI is a non-profit, non-partisan organization dedicated to empowering the pan-Asian community in Illinois through advocacy, research, education, and coalition-building. AAI is a member of the national Asian American Center for Advancing Justice. AAI diligently works to raise the visibility of the Asian American community and spotlight its concerns so that elected officials, policy makers, and other public servants will be responsive to these issues.

AAI strongly encourages the appointment of qualified individuals to the judiciary who are sensitive to the needs of Asian Americans. Mr. Lee is not only sensitive to the needs of this community, but also to the needs of all people. Mr. Lee has shown a strong responsible mindset throughout his career and has been an example of ethical professionalism and would therefore excel as a judge. Thank you very much for your time and consideration.

OPENING STATEMENT BY SENATOR BENJAMIN L. CARDIN ON THE NOMINATION OF JUDGE GEORGE LEVI RUSSELL, III
TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE, DISTRICT OF MARYLAND
SENATE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE HEARING

Thursday, January 26, 2012

I am pleased to join with Senator Mikulski in recommending that the Judiciary Committee favorably report Judge George Levi Russell III of Maryland to be a US District Judge for the District of Maryland.

The Constitution provides for lifetime appointments for federal judges, which is unique in our federal government. I know that both Senator Mikulski and I take this obligation very seriously in terms of the advice and consent role played by the Senate.

When evaluating judicial nominees, I use several criteria. First, I believe judicial nominees must have an appreciation for the Constitution and the protections it provides to each and every American.

I believe each nominee must embrace a judicial philosophy that reflects mainstream American values, not narrow ideological interests. I believe a judicial nominee must respect the role and responsibilities of each branch of government, including a healthy respect for the precedents of the court. I look for a strong commitment and passion for the continued forward progress of civil rights protections. And I want judges who have the necessary experience and temperament. I am confident that Judge Russell meets these criteria and standards.

Judge Russell was nominated to fill the vacancy created during the end of President Bush's term of office, when Judge Peter Messitte took senior status in 2008.

Judge Russell brings a wealth of experience to this position in both state and federal courts. Earlier in his career he served as a federal prosecutor and as an attorney in a private law firm. He now sits as a state court trial judge in Maryland.

Judge Russell graduated from Morehouse College with a B.A. in political science in 1988, and a J.D. from Maryland Law School in 1991. He passed the bar examination and was admitted to practice in Maryland in 1991. He then clerked for Chief Judge Robert Bell on the Maryland Court of Appeals, our state's highest court.

He worked as a Litigation Associate for 2 years at Hazel, Thomas, and then briefly at Whiteford, Taylor. He then served as an Assistant US Attorney for the District of Maryland from 1994 to 1999, handling civil cases. In that capacity he represented various federal government agencies in discrimination, accident, and medical malpractice cases.

He then worked as an associate at the Peter Angelos law firm for 2 years.

In 2002 he went back to the US Attorney's office handling criminal cases until 2007. He represented the United States in the criminal prosecution of violent crime and narcotics cases during the investigatory stage, at trial, and on appeal. This included the initiation and monitoring of wiretaps to infiltrate and break up violent gangs in Baltimore City. He also served as the Project Safe Neighborhood Coordinator for the office from 2002 until 2005. He participated in community outreach programs, including attending community meetings on behalf of the office and attending meetings with the Baltimore State's Attorney's Office, to reduce violent crime in Baltimore neighborhood.

In January 2007, Governor Ehrlich appointed him to serve as an Associate Judge of the Baltimore City Circuit Court for a term of 15 years. As a trial judge, Judge Russell has presided over hundreds of trials that have gone to verdict or judgment, and has experience in handling jury trials, bench trials, civil cases, and criminal cases.

Judge Russell has strong roots, legal experience, and community involvement in the state of Maryland. He was born and raised in Baltimore City, and has extended family who live in Baltimore. He serves as a Director and Trustee on the Board of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, which serves the disadvantaged through the State of Maryland. He served on the Board of Directors of the Community Law Center, which is an organization designed to help neighborhood organizations improve the quality of life for their residents.

He has also served as a board member of several organizations that devoted substantial resources to helping the disadvantaged, including Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Maryland. I know that he has often spoken to young people in school about the obligation, duty, and mandate of a judge, and tries to demystify the role of a judge in a black robe. Judge Russell is particularly concerned with addressing the drug violence and mental health problems that plague Baltimore City.

Judge Russell comes from a distinguished legal family in the state of Maryland. Judge Russell's father is George L. Russell, Jr. who was a groundbreaking African-American lawyer in Maryland. He was the first African-American judge on Maryland's Circuit Court in the 1960's, and was later Baltimore's first African-American solicitor. He was also the first African-American president of the Baltimore City Bar Association, and the first African-American to run for mayor of Baltimore in 1971. In later years, Judge Russell was named by the governor to chair the Maryland Museum of African-American History and Culture Commission, and served as chairman of the board of the Maryland African American Museum Corporation. He was also asked to chair Baltimore's Judicial Nominating Commission. He received numerous awards from the Maryland Bar Foundation and the NAACP.

Indeed, Judge Russell's family believes so strongly in public service that even he wife is a judge, sitting on the District Court of Maryland for Baltimore City.

I am absolutely confident that Judge Russell possesses the qualifications, temperament, and passion for justice that will make him an outstanding United States District Court Judge for the District of Maryland. He will serve the people of Maryland very well in this position. I therefore recommend the Committee favorably approve this nomination and send it to the full Senate for confirmation.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

It is with great enthusiasm that I write to support the appointment of Judge George L. Russell, III, to fill the vacancy on the United States District Court for the District of Maryland Northern Division. I ask that this letter be made part of the permanent record associated with the consideration of his nomination.

I have known George for many years. He presently serves as a Circuit Court Judge for the City of Baltimore. Judge Russell is a brilliant and highly respected jurist who has distinguished himself throughout his service on the bench. He has demonstrated superior legal acumen and the highest integrity. He is compassionate and fair and conducts himself with the greatest level of dignity. He is well-qualified to sit on the United States District Court.

Judge Russell has acquired a wealth of knowledge of the law and its application during his impressive career. He previously worked as a clerk with Chief Judge Robert Bell on the Maryland Court of Appeals, our state's highest court. He has also worked in private practice and with the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Maryland.

Of deep concern to me is that we maintain diversity on the federal court. In Judge Russell, you will find a highly competent jurist who, as an African American, is sensitive to the needs of people of color and disadvantaged groups. This characteristic is important not only to my constituency, but to the State of Maryland.

I am certain that George's appointment would be a source of pride for you, the legal community and the public at large. With his experience, commitment to justice and life-long dedication to public service, he would make an exceptional U.S. District Court Judge. It is with the above in mind that I urge you to advance his nomination to the full Senate.

Sincerely,

Elijah E. Cummings

Re: Recommendation of John Z. Lee
Nominee for the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois

Dear Senator Leahy and Senator Grassley:

It is with great pleasure that I recommend John Z. Lee for confirmation as a United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois.

I have known John for over ten years and have had the pleasure of working with John while I was a partner at Freeborn & Peters LLP. In my current position as the Chief Judge Elect of the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit of the State of Illinois and as the former United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois from 1990 to 1993, I have had the opportunity to encounter many talented attorneys over the years. I can state without reservation that John is an excellent attorney and a person of great integrity and character. He would make an excellent United States District Judge.

Thank you for your consideration.

With sincerest regards,

John J. Tharp, Jr., to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois

George Levi Russell, III, to be United States District Judge for the District of Maryland

January 26, 2012

Mr. Chairman:

I welcome five nominees to today's hearing: one nominated to the Ninth Circuit and four nominated to district courts.

Andrew David Hurwitz is nominated to be United States Circuit Judge for the Ninth Circuit. Upon graduation from Yale Law School, Justice Hurwitz clerked for Justice Potter

Stewart on the Supreme Court. Following this clerkship, Justice Hurwitz joined the law firm presently known as Osborne Maledon. Justice Hurwitz has also served under two Arizona governors as Chief of Staff: Governors Babbitt and Mofford.

In 2003, then Arizona Governor Janet Napolitano appointed Justice Hurwitz to the Arizona Supreme Court. In 2009, he became Vice Chief Justice.

Kristine Berhard Baker is nominated to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Arkansas. She graduated from University of Arkansas School of Law in 1996 and clerked for the Honorable Susan Webber Wright of the US District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas upon graduation. In 1998, she became an associate at Williams & Anderson. In 2000 she joined the law firm Quattlebaun, Grooms, Tull & Burrow. There, she has focused on complex commercial litigation cases.

John Z Lee is nominated to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. He received his JD from Harvard Law School in 1992. Mr. Lee began his legal career as a trial attorney for the US Department of Justice for the Environment and Natural Resources Division. In 1994, he joined the private sector and is currently a partner at Grippo & Elden. He handles cases involving complex commercial disputes and represents clients in criminal investigations of antitrust and financial regulations violations.

George Levi Russell, III, is nominated to be United States District Judge for the District of Maryland. Judge Russell received his JD from University of Maryland School of Law in 1991. He began his legal career as an associate attorney and became an Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Maryland in 1994. He rejoined the private sector in 2000 for two years. Then, in 2007, he was appointed to be an associate judge on the Circuit Court of Maryland. In 2008, he was elected to a 15 year term. Judge Russell has sat on each of the four dockets of this court: Criminal, Civil, Family, and Juvenile.

John J. Tharp Jr. is nominated to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois. Prior to law school, Mr. Tharp served in the Marine Corps for 6 years, receiving several military honors. Mr. Tharp received his JD from Northwestern University School of Law in 1990. Upon graduation, Mr. Tharp clerked for Judge Glaum on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals. He spent the next year as a litigation associate at Kirkland & Ellis. From there, he became an Assistant United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois for five years. Mr. Tharp returned to the private sector in 1997, joining his current law firm Mayer Brown where he handles complex commercial litigation.

Again, I welcome the nominees and their families. I look forward to reviewing the testimony.

Re: Nomination of Kristine Baker
United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas

Dear Senators Leahy:

I was most pleased to learn of President Obama's nomination of Kristine Baker to serve as a judge here in the Eastern District of Arkansas. I was also pleased to read of the bipartisan support you each have extended to her.

Though I am a Republican, I must give the President his due- he could not have made a more solid pick for this important judicial post. I have worked closely with Ms. Baker in complex matters of litigation. She has shown herself to be smart, even-handed, and mature in the practice of law. She will take these same key traits to the bench and serve our federal courts with distinction.

During my many years of practicing law, I have learned that shepherding a federal judgeship nomination through to a floor vote take a steady and adroit hand. I respectfully ask that you both continue in the admirable bipartisan spirit you have shown and help ensure that Ms. Baker received prompt consideration by the Senate. I stand ready to answer for you and the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee any questions about the bases for my unqualified support of Ms. Baker to serve in this important post.

Sincerely,

Mike Huckabee

Kirk Recommends John Tharp for Federal Judicial Nomination

Tharp, veteran, family man, known corruption fighter to be submitted to President Obama to fill U.S. District Court vacancy in Chicago

Tuesday, Jul 5

CHICAGO - With public integrity at the forefront of Illinois' consciousness, U.S. Sen. Mark Kirk (R-Ill.) today recommended former prosecutor John Tharp of Chicago for appointment to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

Under Senate tradition for Illinois, the senator from the party not in control of the White House generally makes nomination recommendations to the White House for one federal district court judgeship for every three of the party in power. Under that tradition, this is the first recommendation by Senator Kirk. Senators Kirk and Durbin have consulted regarding each other's recommendations and will work to secure prompt confirmation of nominees. This arrangement is intended to ensure the orderly filling of federal judge vacancies on the Illinois bench.

Sen. Kirk formed a bipartisan, statewide Judicial Review Advisory Board in February. The Advisory Board was charged with identifying "the strongest applicants from Illinois for consideration by the President and U.S. Senate." Chaired by Peter Baugher of Schopf & Weiss LLP, the 14-member Advisory Board received nearly 50 applications. The Advisory Board spent over 300 man hours and met five times to review judicial candidates and their backgrounds. The Advisory Board's review process included personal interviews as well as calls to colleagues, opposing counsel and judges.

Today's announcement is the result of that process. Advisory Board members were: Peter Baugher, Chair (Schopf & Weiss LLP), Wayne Andersen (former federal judge), Keith Beyler (SIU Law School), Congresswoman Judy Biggert (R-IL), James Buda (Caterpillar Inc.), Roxane Busey (Baker & McKenzie), James Figliuolo (Figliuolo & Silverman, P.C.), Victor Henderson (Holland & Knight), Larry Kuster (Rammelkamp Bradney P.C.), Lynn Mirabella (Mirabella, Kincaid, Frederick & Mirabella, LLC), James Montana (VedderPrice PC), Jennifer Nijman (Nijman Franzetti LLP), Richard Porter (Kirkland & Ellis LLP), and Ronald Safer (Schiff Hardin LLP).

John Tharp is married to Betsy Tharp and has 3 children, Matthew, Emily and Ellen. Tharp led the U.S. Attorney's 1995 investigation of Edward Rosewell, the former long-time Cook County Treasurer who pled guilty to engaging in a ghost-payrolling scheme. Tharp also handled the investigation and prosecution of extortion charges against former Illinois Senate Majority Leader John D'Arco.

"It's time to put Illinois corruption and Blagojevich-style politics behind us," Senator Kirk said. "As a prosecutor and lawyer, John Tharp is uniquely qualified to both serve as a federal judge and to send a signal that Illinois is not synonymous with corruption." Kirk continued, "John Tharp made a name for himself as an Assistant U.S. Attorney whose cases included political corruption and money laundering. His impressive tenure in that office includes service in the General Crimes Division and the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force."

Tharp, age 50, attended Duke University on a ROTC scholarship and was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps after graduating summa cum laude with a degree in political science. Tharp served in the Marine Corps from 1982 to 1988, achieving the rank of Captain and earning the Navy Achievement Medal and the Navy Distinguished Midshipman Award. He subsequently attended Northwestern University Law School on a full merit John Henry Wigmore Scholarship. While at Northwestern, Tharp served as book review editor of the Northwestern Law Review. He graduated magna cum laude in 1990.

Following graduation, Tharp served a one-year clerkship under Judge Joel Flaum of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals from 1990 to 1991. In 1992, Tharp was hired as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the Northern District of Illinois. It was there that Tharp tried the cases of Rosewell and D'Arco. Since leaving the U.S. Attorney's office in 1997, Tharp has worked at Mayer Brown LLP, where he was made partner in 1999. Tharp is currently co-leader of Mayer Brown's securities litigation and enforcement practice. Tharp was originally nominated for a federal judgeship in 2008 but the Senate failed to process many nominations due to the pending election.

Re: Nomination of Andrew D. Hurwitz for U.S. Circuit Judge, Ninth Circuit

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

On November 2, 2011, President Obama nominated Vice Chief Justice Andrew D. Hurwitz of the Arizona Supreme Court for a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. As former law clerks to Justice Hurwitz, we are uniquely qualified to attest to the many outstanding qualities that would make him an excellent addition to the Ninth Circuit bench. We write today to share some of these with the Committee and, in so doing, we urge the Committee to promptly report Justice Hurwitz's nomination to the full Senate for consideration.

First and foremost, Justice Hurwitz has an intellect that is second to none. His mastery of the law and his facility for legal reasoning is evident from the moment he begins considering a case, to his questions during oral argument, and ultimately to the careful and considered opinions he writes. His understanding of the intricacies of the law has made him an outstanding judge and an outstanding teacher, in the classroom at the Arizona State University Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, in the myriad of public events he attends as a representative of the Arizona Supreme Court, and most especially to those of us who spent a full year working with him at the Court.

Second, Justice Hurwitz is deliberate. His clerks all have had the experience of watching draft opinions go through twenty-five rounds of revisions as he refines his language. This drafting process occurs as part of an ongoing dialogue about a case with his colleagues and frequent meetings with his law clerks to ensure that no stone is left unturned. The inevitable result of his hard work is an opinion which is both well-reasoned and a concise statement of the law, providing clarity for both practitioners and the general public.

Third, Justice Hurwitz is fair. Every person who has appeared before the Arizona Supreme Court during his tenure has received the benefit of his full and unbiased consideration of the issues. Justice Hurwitz understands that the purpose of his work is the proper resolution of the case before him. Because of his hard work and comprehensive examination of every case, the parties are not penalized for the poor advocacy of their attorneys. Justice Hurwitz always cuts through the folderol to reach the issues at the heart of the case, and he studies those issues for as long as necessary to reach the correct result.

Finally, Justice Hurwitz has a magnetic personality that makes him approachable by all. His wit and broad knowledge make a lunchtime conversation with him a true pleasure, whether the topic is politics, sports, history, the arts, or the law. He will bring to the Ninth Circuit a level of collegiality that is crucial to the proper functioning of an appellate court.

A clerkship with Justice Hurwitz has been described by at least one senior attorney in the Phoenix area as "attending the Andy Hurwitz Finishing School." We have all been fortunate enough to have our legal careers molded in part at that "Finishing School," and for that, we are proud and grateful. Justice Hurwitz has served the State of Arizona well for the past eight years, and our State's loss will most certainly be the Ninth Circuit's gain. We respectfully urge the Committee promptly report Justice Hurwitz's nomination to the full Senate.

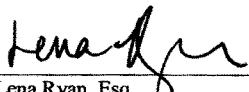

Sincerely,

Statement Of Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.),
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee,
Hearing On Nominations
January 26, 2012

Today, the Judiciary Committee holds its first confirmation hearing of 2012. I thank Senator Durbin for chairing today's important hearing on the nominations of Andrew Hurwitz to fill a judicial emergency vacancy on the Ninth Circuit, Kristine Baker to the Eastern District of Arkansas, George Russell to fill a judicial emergency vacancy in the District of Maryland, and two nominees from his home state, John Lee and John Tharp, both nominated to fill judicial emergency vacancies in the Northern District of Illinois. I know Senator Kirk, the Republican Senator from Illinois, supports these nominees and we will continue to seek to move them forward while he recovers.

I had hoped to proceed with a hearing on these well-qualified nominees last year, but accommodated Senator Grassley's preferred schedule and did not proceed on them as the Republicans had not reviewed their materials. I am pleased that we will consider their nominations today and hope that we can now resume our reasonable schedule of regular confirmation hearings every two weeks. With vacancies on Federal courts across the country remaining extremely high, as they have throughout the term of the Obama administration, we cannot afford to slow down our consideration of nominations. I have not proceeded with hearings in back to back weeks as the Republican Chairman of this Committee did for President Bush's nominees at the beginning of 2004, a presidential election year.

I thank Senator Kyl for working with the President and for his strong support of Justice Hurwitz, and for serving as Ranking Member today. I hope that we can turn a page and provide better treatment to President Obama's well-qualified consensus nominees than the Senate has done during the last three years. President Obama's nominees have been confirmed at a lower percentage rate than the nominees of any president in the last 35 years. The Senate has confirmed just over 70 percent of President Obama's circuit and district nominees, leaving more than one in four not confirmed. In stark contrast, the Senate confirmed nearly 87 percent of President George W. Bush's nominees, nearly nine out of every 10 nominees he sent to the Senate over two terms.

We remain well behind the pace set by the Senate during President Bush's first term. By the end of President Bush's first term, the Senate had confirmed 205 district and circuit nominees. At the beginning of his fourth year in office, the Senate had lowered judicial vacancies to 46 and already confirmed 168 of his judicial nominees. In contrast, the Senate has confirmed only 125 of President Obama's district and circuit nominees, leaving judicial vacancies at 85. The vacancy rate remains nearly double what it had been reduced to by this point in the Bush administration.

Senate Republicans continue to use a strategy of across-the-board delays that has led to a shamefully high number of judicial vacancies. In 2009, the Senate was able to confirm only 12 Federal circuit and district court judges, the lowest total in 50 years. In 2010, the Senate was able to confirm 48 Federal circuit and district judges. That has led to the lowest confirmation total for the first two years of a new presidency in 35 years. As a result, judicial vacancies rose again over 110 and stayed near 90 for the longest period of historically high vacancies in 35 years.

Right now, nearly one out of every 10 Federal judgeships is vacant. Judicial emergency vacancies in Florida, Utah, California, Nevada and Texas remain unfilled despite nominees that were on the calendar to fill those vacancies at the end of last year, but who are still awaiting a final Senate vote. All but one of the 18 nominees still on the calendar was reported last year with significant bipartisan support, with 16 of them reported unanimously. These nominees should have been confirmed last year.

I am hopeful that the New Year will bring greater cooperation from Republican Senators, and that we can expedite consideration of President Obama's judicial nominees to address the serious vacancies crisis currently in our Federal courts. Today's hearing is a good start. First, we will consider the nomination of Justice Andrew Hurwitz to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Justice Hurwitz has spent the last nine years as a Justice on the Supreme Court of Arizona. Prior to that, he practiced for over 25 years at a law firm in Phoenix, Arizona, and has also served as Chief of Staff to Arizona Governors Bruce Babbitt and Rose Mofford. Justice Hurwitz has argued two cases before the U.S. Supreme Court, one which led to a groundbreaking decision on an issue relating to a defendant's right to a jury trial. A graduate of Yale Law School, Justice Hurwitz clerked for Justice Potter Stewart on the U.S. Supreme Court. He was rated unanimously well qualified by the ABA Standing Committee, the highest possible rating. He has the support of both his home state Senators – Republicans John McCain and Jon Kyl.

Justice Hurwitz has been nominated to fill one of four judicial emergency vacancies on the Ninth Circuit. The Ninth Circuit serves more than 61 million Americans, and handles double the caseload of the other Federal circuit courts. The Chief Judge of the Ninth Circuit, Judge Alex Kozinski, a Reagan appointee, along with the members of the Judicial Council of the Ninth Circuit, have written to the Senate emphasizing the Ninth Circuit's "desperate need for judges," urging the Senate to "act on judicial nominees without delay," and concluding that they "fear that the public will suffer unless our vacancies are filled very promptly."

The judicial emergency vacancies on the Ninth Circuit are harming litigants by creating unnecessary and costly delays. The Administrative Office of U.S. Courts reports that it takes nearly five months longer for the Ninth Circuit to issue an opinion after an appeal is filed, compared to all other circuits. The Ninth Circuit's backlog of pending cases far exceeds other Federal courts. As of March 2011, the Ninth Circuit had 13,913 cases pending before it. The second closest – the Sixth Circuit – had 5,231 cases pending before the court. Thus, it is critical that the Senate proceed without further delay to vote on the nomination of Judge Jacqueline Nguyen to the Ninth Circuit and that we expedite Committee consideration of the nomination of Paul Watford and that of Justice Hurwitz's nomination to alleviate this crushing burden.

We will also proceed with the four district court nominees – three of whom are nominated to fill judicial emergency vacancies. Kristine Gerhard Baker has been nominated to the Eastern District of Arkansas. Ms. Baker has been a partner at the law firm of Quattlebaum, Grooms, Tull & Burrow in Little Rock, Arkansas since 2002. In her 25-year legal career, Ms. Baker has worked on a variety of complex, business-related litigation disputes and has tried approximately 13 cases to verdict. She has been named numerous times by Chambers Magazine as one of America's leading lawyers for business. Ms. Baker has the bipartisan support of Senator Pryor, a Democrat, and Senator Boozman, a Republican, from her home state of Arkansas.

John Z. Lee and John "Jay" Tharp have been nominated to the Northern District of Illinois. Mr. Lee is currently a partner at the law firm Freeborn & Peters, where he has been a litigator since 2001. There, Mr. Lee has litigated cases involving a wide-range of issues, including antitrust, intellectual property, labor and employment, and complex commercial disputes. He has been named a "Leading Lawyer" in commercial litigation for the last three years by the Leading Lawyers Network. Mr. Lee also spent three years at the Department of Justice, where he was a trial attorney at the Environment & Natural Resources Division. He received his undergraduate degree, magna cum laude, from Harvard University, and his law degree, cum laude, from Harvard Law School. If confirmed, Mr. Lee would be only the second Korean-American to serve as a Federal district court judge.

Mr. Tharp, formerly a nominee of President Bush at the end of his second term, is currently a partner at the law firm Mayer Brown, where he specializes in criminal investigations and complex commercial litigation. Prior to joining private practice, Mr. Tharp worked for five years as an Assistant United States Attorney at the Northern District of Illinois. He also clerked for Seventh Circuit Judge Joel Flaum for two years after graduating from Northwestern University Law School, magna cum laude. Mr. Tharp has been rated "Unanimously Well Qualified" to serve on the Northern District of Illinois by the ABA Standing Committee on the Federal Courts, its highest possible rating. Both Mr. Lee and Mr. Tharp have the bipartisan support of both their home state Senators, a Democrat and a Republican.

George Levi Russell III has been nominated to fill a judicial emergency vacancy on the District of Maryland. Judge Russell is currently serving as an associate judge in the Circuit Court of Maryland for Baltimore City, where he has been since 2007. Prior to that, Judge Russell served two separate stints at the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Maryland – first in the Civil Division from 1994-1999, and then at the Criminal Division from 2002-2007. Judge Russell has also worked in private practice at several law firms. As an attorney, he tried 13 cases to final verdict or judgment. Judge Russell has the support of his distinguished home state Senators.

I look forward to moving forward to consider these nominations without further delay.

Re: Recommendation of John Z. Lee, nominee, United States District Court, Northern District of Illinois.

Dear Senators:

I write in enthusiastic support of the nomination of John Z. Lee to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. I do not offer an unqualified recommendation often, but I am proud to do so in this case. Let me tell you why:

I have known John since 1989, when we were law students together. Upon graduation, we both moved to Washington, D.C., and remained friends as he worked at the Department of Justice and I in the White House. Today, I am general counsel for the Chicago Cubs baseball club and work regularly with attorneys and those at the forefront of the law in Chicago. Based on his intellect, ability and character, I know John Lee will protect the rule of law and enhance the practice of law in Illinois, if his nomination is confirmed.

I do not say this lightly. John is one of the most talented, dedicated people I know and has the ideal temperament to serve the law on the federal bench. In my experience, his integrity, commitment, enthusiasm, hard work, judgment and respect for the law are second to none. He is consistently balanced and even-tempered, thorough, respectful of colleagues and dedicated to his work. He has a superb ability to synthesize and apply the law. He is exceedingly bright and perceptive, has sound judgment and the ability to analyze issues quickly and thoroughly.

Through the years, I have watched and been regularly impressed as John's talent and intellectual ability have earned him the respect of his peers. His acumen has allowed him to approach any task or challenge with complete understanding and his communications skill and outstanding demeanor have earned him the friendship of his colleagues.

On a more personal level, I know John to have a tremendous commitment to family, a dedication to continuing education, a hunger for learning and a devotion to the law. John is committed to using his considerable talent and passion toward the pursuit of just causes and his integrity and sense of fairness are admirable.

As must be obvious by now, I offer my highest and most unqualified support for the nomination of John Z. Lee to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. There are very few people to whom I would offer such an endorsement, but John is worthy of the highest praise. As an attorney practicing primarily in Illinois, I will be proud to know the law is being guarded by judges like John Lee.

I recommend John to you without qualification and respectfully urge you to confirm his appointment to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. If you have any questions or need anything else from me, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely,

Michael R. Lufrano

OF CHICAGO

If confirmed, John will be an impressive, balanced, and intelligent judge. He will uphold the values and goals of the Court with integrity, wisdom, and honor. As a first generation immigrant who came to Chicago when he was a boy, John's life story and numerous professional accomplishments truly demonstrate the qualities and possibilities that make this nation great. As another first generation immigrant myself, I find his accomplishments to be even more profound and inspiring. I know that countless other attorneys in the Korean-American and Asian-American communities feel exactly the same way.

I strongly believe that it is time that we elevate more qualified Asian-American attorneys to federal judge positions. If confirmed, John would be the first Korean-American Article III judge in the Seventh Circuit and will join Judge Lucy Koh (N.D. of California) as only the second Korean-American Article III federal court judge in the United States.

In short, I believe that John's educational credentials, stellar legal career, and service to community speak for themselves. If you have any questions about John's qualifications, please feel free to give me a call at 312-558-7931 or email me at spark@winston.com. I will be happy to discuss with you why the Korean American Bar Association and the public as a whole will be lucky to have John as a judge in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

Re: Nomination of John Z. Lee for Judicial Vacancy
United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois

Dear Senator Grassley:

It is with great pleasure and enthusiasm that I write this letter in support of John Z. Lee's appointment to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. I have known John since 2004 when he became a member of the CARPLS Board of Directors, on which he currently serves as Board President.

CARPLS Legal Aid is a major Cook County legal aid organization which serves more than 57,000 clients annually. Through our legal aid hotline and court-based help desks, we provide direct access to experienced attorneys who are trained to quickly assess and respond to the wide range of civil legal problems experienced by low income families. CARPLS attorneys resolve over 85% of all cases in-house by providing limited representation legal services, including legal advice, third party negotiations, document review, and drafting of legal documents and pleadings. Clients with more complex needs are referred by CARPLS to a network of specialized legal and social service providers. Our unique "legal triage" system serves as a model for legal aid communities across the country and has increased access to justice by dramatically reducing the cost of legal aid services to the poor.

As the Executive Director of CARPLS, I have had the unique opportunity to interact with John on many different levels: as a superior, a colleague, a volunteer and a friend. While I could fill multiple pages with accounts of John's academic and professional accomplishments, the focus of my remarks will be on those qualities which I have come to rely upon most and which have propelled John to important leadership roles here at CARPLS.

First and foremost, I know John to be a person with a deep and abiding commitment to public service. In addition to his service on the CARPLS Board,

No. 0081 P. 3

John has held leadership positions on the boards of the Asian American Bar Association and Asian Human Services. John was also the driving force behind the establishment of a new legal aid clinic in Hoffman Estates in 2009. John saw the compelling need for legal aid help in and around his home town in the northwest suburbs and brought together his firm, CARPLS and a local church to establish a part-time legal clinic which assists low-income families in an area which was not served by the legal aid providers in Cook County. John himself is one of the volunteer attorneys who works at the clinic, so he not only sees the big picture of the need for access to justice, but has also rolled up his sleeves to share his own talents and expertise with these needy clients.

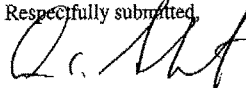

John's work on the legal clinic is a good example of his leadership style. John leads by example. During his tenure on the CARPLS Board, John has served in every executive office position, chaired every committee and worked every fundraising event. He is intimately familiar with his fellow board members, most of the CARPLS staff and many of CARPLS' volunteers. He knows CARPLS inside and out because he has taken the time to come to know the people who define CARPLS and the clients we serve.

The energy and passion which John brings to his every pursuit is infectious. It is no coincidence that the six years John has served on CARPLS' Board have been the most successful years in the organization's history. After the release of a state-wide legal needs study in 2005, which documented the inadequacies of the legal aid safety net in Illinois, John was one of the driving forces behind a Board initiative to significantly expand CARPLS' service capacity. That initiative resulted in a four-fold increase in the number of clients served by CARPLS annually.

John has many other fine qualities that I believe are important for serving on the bench. He is a good listener who is always open to the positions and ideas of others. He is skilled arbiter with a keen intellect who is able to follow discussions and lines of arguments and positions well. Yet, when the time comes, he is able to move decisively and with authority. John is honest and upright in all his dealings with and work for CARPLS, and because of all these personal traits, John has the respect of his fellow Board members, and of all the staff at CARPLS.

I offer my strongest recommendation of John Lee for the federal bench. If I can provide any further information or be of any other assistance to you concerning this recommendation, please do not hesitate to contact me at 312-421-4423 (direct).

Respectfully submitted,

Allen C. Schwartz

Re: John Lee Nomination to the Federal District Court for the Northern District of Illinois

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

I write in enthusiastic support of John Lee's nomination to the federal District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. I have known John since 1997, when we practiced together in the Chicago law firm of Grippo & Elden. John was smart, hard-working and even-keeled, earning the respect and admiration of his colleagues.

After I joined McDonald's Corporation in 2000, John represented McDonald's in a number of significant matters. Now a partner at the law firm of Freeborn & Peters, John worked hard to understand our business goals, as well as the legal issues he so clearly enjoys. His respect for the law, intellectual rigor and good humor under pressure made him a valued advisor to my colleagues at McDonald's and me.

Throughout his legal career, John has not only represented corporate clients brilliantly and effectively, but also devoted many hours to representing individuals pro bono. John's commitment to the community and volunteer work is another reason I wholeheartedly support his nomination.

I believe John Lee will be an excellent addition to the prestigious bench for the Northern District of Illinois, and respectfully urge your support for his nomination.

Very truly yours,

Re: January 26, 2012 Judicial Confirmation Hearing

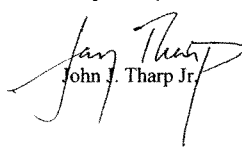

Dear Senators Durbin and Kyl:

I write to thank you for the honor and privilege of appearing on January 26, 2012, before the Senate Judiciary Committee for a hearing regarding my nomination (among others) to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois. It was one of the high points of my professional career.

Immediately following the conclusion of the hearing, I realized that during my introductions, I neglected to acknowledge my mother, Shirley Tharp, who was also in attendance at the hearing. My mother has always been a source of unwavering love and support, and I am deeply dismayed that I inadvertently omitted her from the introductions I made during the hearing. I would be grateful if this letter could be included in the hearing record to serve as a belated acknowledgment of, and my gratitude for, my mother's attendance at the hearing.

Thank you again for inviting me to appear at the hearing and for your consideration of this request.

Respectfully,

John J. Tharp Jr.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 2:34 p.m., Room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Chris Coons presiding.
Present: Senators Grassley, Graham, Coburn, and Lee.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. CHRIS COONS, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF DELAWARE

Senator COONS. (Off microphone) U.S. Senate and congratulate them on being before us today, the nominees.

I would also like to welcome those of my colleagues who are here to introduce the nominees. I think the sheer number of my colleagues speaks to the high regard in which the nominees are held.

The judicial roles we will discuss today carry life tenure and, thus, require the highest levels of character, temperament and judgment. And the participation of Senators here today in offering introductions and commendations speaks to the importance of nominations as an important part of the work of this Committee.

As we approach the summer before a Presidential election, the longstanding Thurmond rule, as it is known, may once again prevent the Senate from confirming any more judges this Congress. Notwithstanding the Thurmond rule, however, the vacancy rate in our Federal judiciary currently stands near 10 percent, a very high rate in the third year of any modern President's administration.

So it is my belief that it is urgent the Committee and the full Senate give today's nominees fair and reasonably expeditious consideration without procedural obstacles.

Due to the large number of home State Senators here to give introductions, I will refrain from offering any longer opening statement.

Senator Grassley, would you like to proceed with a statement at this time?

STATEMENT OF HON. CHUCK GRASSLEY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF IOWA

Senator GRASSLEY. Today we are continuing our progress on processing President Obama's judicial nominees. Earlier this afternoon, we confirmed the 127th Article 3 judge nominated by our President.

With today's confirmation, we have confirmed over 62 percent of the President's circuit judge nominees. This is the same confirmation percentage for President Bush's circuit nominees at a comparable time in the first term.

Today marks the 21st nomination hearing held in this Committee during this Congress, and we will have heard from 80 judicial nominees. All in all, nearly 85 percent of President Obama's judicial nominees have received a hearing.

Even as we go forward with a hearing today, there remains an underlying concern about the President's abuse of appointment power. I am not going to elaborate on that again, because you heard me speak about it many times. But I want to note that that does affect the operating environment that we are in. It is the President who has put a cloud over the confirmation process.

I welcome the nominees today. And I will put the balance of my statement in the record.

[The prepared statement of Senator Grassley appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

I know my colleagues' schedules are tight. So I would encourage you to feel free to leave after you have concluded your introduction.

Following statements and introductions, each of the nominees will be invited to give an opening statement and to recognize their family, friends and supporters when the panels are called.

We will begin with Timothy Hillman, nominated to be the United States District Court Judge for the District of Massachusetts.

Senator Kerry, please proceed, if you would, with a statement and an introduction.

PRESENTATION OF TIMONTHY S. HILLMAN, NOMINEE TO BE
U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHU-SETTS BY HON. JOHN F. KERRY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator KERRY. Thank you very much, Chairman Coons, Ranking Member Grassley, Senator Graham. Thank you for the privilege of being here today to introduce Judge Tim Hillman. And I can reaffirm in doing so what Senator Scott Brown and I said when we recommended Judge Hillman jointly to President Obama.

This jurist is the best of the best, and we are convinced that he is going to do a tremendous job. And I say that not only for myself, and, obviously, Scott will also join me here in speaking for him, but a broad segment of the judicial community in Massachusetts was involved in this.

Senator Brown and I have continued a tradition that we have had for some years in Massachusetts. Senator Kennedy and I did it together for some 27 years. And that is to have a nonpartisan group of judicial—of a search committee. And it's a system of nonpartisan judicial search that has served our State very, very well.

The Committee was made up of many of our State's top lawyers, former prosecutors, representatives of the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Worcester Bar, the Hamden Bar, and they undertook an exhaustive screening of candidates. And it surprised no one that Judge Hillman emerged from this process at the top of their list, and the details of his outstanding career were widely known from the State.

He served in private practice as counsel to several municipalities in Massachusetts, and, finally, as a magistrate judge in Worcester.

His reputation has been that of a thoughtful, fair, honest jurist, and I might say that he has shown considerable creativity and thoughtfulness in his approach.

Mr. Chairman, he has worked diligently on the reentry court, the kind of initiative that I think a lot of us really value in a judge.

As a former prosecutor, I was particularly impressed by the work he has done in lowering recidivism and putting people back on track.

The Restart program that he began in 2008 is a national model for reentry courts. He has turned the courtroom into a major community asset. And all you have to do is look at some of the cases he has handled, which include terrorist plot, economic espionage, and I think it is very, very clear that Judge Hillman is not going to face any kind of learning curve serving on the district court.

So I am grateful to the President for nominating him. I am grateful that he and his family—his wife, Kay, is here with him—that he is prepared to serve enthusiastically. And I think that serving on the district court in Worcester, Massachusetts is really a capstone to decades of tireless public service. I know he is going to bring his signature brand of thoughtful deliberation to that bench.

I would defer to my colleague, Senator Brown, if I may, Senator Coons.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Kerry.

Senator Brown.

PRESENTATION OF TIMONTHY S. HILLMAN, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS BY HON. SCOTT P. BROWN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator SCOTT BROWN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member, and Senator Graham.

I, too, first of all, want to thank Senator Kerry for the process that we went through. It was clearly bipartisan and it was actually quite informative for me personally, being my first go-around in this endeavor, and the fact that we were able to come up with a nonpartisan Committee to make the recommendations to us, and which we took the time to interview each and every candidate.

So, John, I want to thank you for that opportunity, and I think we have done a great job.

We have in Judge Hillman somebody who is greatly respected in Massachusetts and especially in the Worcester area through his innovation and integrity and dedication to fairness. He is really to be commended, and I want to thank he and his wife for, obviously, putting up with the process. And I am going to do everything in my power to encourage my colleagues to make sure that we get a vote on this right away, because Massachusetts needs a jurist like him right away to do the people's business, and that is so critically important.

John has references a lot of his actions and activities. I will not duplicate them, but just note that the process for me and I think for the judge has been really beyond reproach.

So, John, once again, I want to thank you for that, and I am looking forward to making our next recommendation. And I appreciate you taking me out of order.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator.

Next, we welcome Patty Shwartz, who is currently a magistrate judge in the district of New Jersey. She has been nominated to be a Circuit Judge for the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Senator Lautenberg, please proceed.

PRESENTATION OF PATTY SHWARTZ, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT BY HON. FRANK R. LAUTENBERG, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Senator LAUTENBURG. Thanks, Mr. Chairman and members of the Judiciary Committee, for the opportunity to introduce Judge Patty Shwartz to the Committee.

Although I came from a business career before the Senate, I have always been deeply conscious of the fact that the backbone of our society is respect for the law. In fact, I am proud to have a Federal courthouse in Newark carry my name, and Judge Patty Shwartz, the nominee you will meet today, works in that courthouse.

I requested that an inscription be placed on the wall, a plaque, at the front of that courthouse that says "The true measure of a democracy is its dispensation of justice."

The sentiment behind that quote is one of the reasons that I am pleased to introduce to this Committee Judge Shwartz, President Obama's nominee to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Judge Shwartz has been an outstanding magistrate judge, with a solid reputation in the New Jersey legal community for dispensing justice fairly and wisely. She will make an excellent addition to the third circuit court of appeals.

John Lacey, past president of the Association of the New Jersey Federal Bar, said Judge Shwartz is, and I quote him here, "thoughtful, intelligent, and has an extraordinarily high level of common sense."

Thomas Curtin, the Chairman of the Lawyers Advisory Committee for the U.S. District Court of New Jersey, said, and I quote him, "Every lawyer in the world will tell you that she is extraordinarily well qualified, a decent person, and an excellent judge."

Since 2003, she has served as the U.S. magistrate judge in the district of New Jersey, where she has handled more than 4,000 civil and criminal cases. Before joining the bench, Judge Shwartz spent almost 14 years as an assistant U.S. attorney for the district of New Jersey. In this role, she supervised hundreds of criminal cases, including cases involving civil rights, violent crimes, drug trafficking, and fraud.

Judge Shwartz graduated from Rutgers with highest honors. She received her law degree from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where she was an editor of the law review and was named her class' outstanding woman law graduate.

Judge Shwartz's roots in New Jersey run deep. Like me, she is a native of the city of Patterson, where she learned the value of hard work from her parents, who owned and operated a store there for more than 50 years.

Judge Shwartz inherited her parents' strong work ethic, and that is another reason why I believe she is so well qualified to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals.

When President Obama announced her nomination, he said, I am going to quote, "Judge Shwartz has a long and impressive record of service and a history of handing down fair and judicious decisions. She will be a thoughtful and distinguished addition to the third circuit court."

Like President Obama, I believe Judge Shwartz is well qualified to serve on this court, and I am confident that this Committee will agree.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Lautenberg.

Senator Menendez.

PRESENTATION OF PATTY SHWARTZ, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT BY HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

Senator MENENDEZ. Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. And let me say how thrilled I am to see your quick ascension to chairing the hearing. So my congratulations to you.

To my dear friend, the Ranking Member, we sit on the Finance Committee, always good to be with you.

And to all the distinguished members of the Committee, I am here today to express my unqualified support for Judge Patty Shwartz for the third circuit court of appeals.

As the nominee's home State Senator, I take my advise and consent role for judicial nominations extremely seriously. These are lifetime appointments to the Federal bench and should not be taken lightly. And when it comes to the circuit court, the last stop before the United States Supreme Court, that responsibility takes on even more weight.

Because of that, I undertake an in-depth and thorough review not only of a nominee's past record, but also of their understanding of the law, their intellect, their analytical thinking and reasoning.

I have had the opportunity on more than one occasion to pursue with Judge Schwartz the important issues that I believe reflect the high standards to which a nominee for the circuit court should be held. And having that full breadth of understanding and the fact that I am here supporting her speaks volumes to the nominee's character and, I believe, suitability for the position.

Aristotle said "Character may be called the most effective means of persuasion," and I can say that in my meetings with Judge Schwartz, I have learned that she is clearly a person of character.

In short, Mr. Chairman, I have been persuaded to be supportive of Judge Schwartz, and I join with Senator Lautenberg in introducing Judge Schwartz to the Committee, urge the Committee to send her name to the full Senate with a unanimous recommendation to be confirmed to the third circuit court of appeals.

I will not replicate all of the judge's achievements, which my distinguished colleague has listed, but certainly they are worthy of the Committee's consideration.

I would also like to mention in closing that during this process, I had the benefit of invaluable advice and counsel from many members of the Federal bar who spoke very highly of Judge Schwartz, and I would like to specifically mention three of them, among others, but three of them who were very helpful—Gerry Krovin, James Cecchi, and John Vazquez, who came forward to affirm what I subsequently discovered for myself in discussions with Judge Schwartz—that she possesses the intellect, the character, and the integrity to be confirmed to the third circuit court of appeals.

And I look forward, Mr. Chairman, to the swift and favorable consideration of Judge Schwartz. And notwithstanding some of the comments both you and the Ranking Member have made, I hope that the administration of justice ultimately needs judges to ultimately effectuate that process.

So I look forward to—that environment is not a reason not to move qualified judges forward, and I think this Committee has taken that seriously on both sides of the aisle and I am looking forward for this opportunity for it to become a reality on the floor, as well, after the Committee's recommendation.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Menendez. Thank you, Senator Lautenberg.

We next welcome Jeffrey Helmick, who is nominated to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio. And his home State Senator, Sherrod Brown of Ohio, is here for an introduction.

Senator Brown.

PRESENTATION OF JEFFREY J. HELMICK, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO BY HON. SHERROD BROWN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF OHIO

Senator SHERROD BROWN. Thank you, Chairman Coons, Ranking Member Grassley, and Senators Graham, Lee and Coburn. Thank you for the important work you do on this Committee.

It is my pleasure to introduce Jeffrey Helmick of Ohio, a brilliant and distinguished lawyer, who has been nominated to serve as the next judge for the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio. I have a northern and a southern district, as most of you know.

Jeff was born in Toledo. He lives there with his wife, Karen, an attorney, as well, and their son, Joel. I will leave it to Jeff to make the introductions of all of his family members, his mother, his in-laws, and his niece.

Joel gets to take a break from school to attend today's hearings. His parents are making him write a journal of his experiences visiting the Capitol, the White House, the monuments, and getting a sense for both the separation of powers and the cooperation of powers in our government. Good luck, as we would like to see his writings and insight after that.

Jeff and Karen met in law school at the Ohio State University. They tell me their lockers were next to each other. Their last names both began with H, and, fortunately, they were not going to business school, because it took him 3 years before he had the courage to ask her out, supposedly, her words—his words—his words, I guess.

One of the great privileges of our job, Mr. Chairman, as you know, is meeting people who make us proud of our States, and Jeff Helmick is exactly that.

In 2007, then Senator Voinovich, a Republican, and I assembled a commission of distinguished Ohio lawyers, roughly half Republican and half Democrat, including a former Republican Congressman. It included leading legal professions from the southern district of Ohio to recommend for this appointment in the northern district, and we did the opposite for potential nominees in the southern district.

In June of 2010, U.S. District Court Judge James Carr took senior status, creating this vacancy. The members of the bipartisan commission spent a substantial amount of time screening, interviewing, and discussing the candidates. I spoke with almost every one of—each put a report together. I spoke with almost every one of the 17 members. Each was impressed by Jeff's thoughtfulness, his temperament, his reputation among his peers, including opposed counsel.

The chair of the commission, Nancy Rogers, former dean of Ohio State's Law School and former attorney general of Ohio and daughter of a Republican cabinet member in, I believe, the Eisenhower Administration, said that Jeff has shown a commitment to integrity and to excellence and a dedication to his community and to the administration of justice.

Based on the bipartisan committee's recommendation and based on my own judgment, I had no hesitation suggesting Jeff Helmick's name to President Obama. I am honored that President Obama nominated him. It is my hope this Committee will act soon to approve his nomination.

This vacancy has been there for some 20 months. The northern district would benefit immensely from his breadth of experience, which includes more than 20 years of legal practice.

He has worked in large law firms and small firms. He has tried complex business and corporate cases. He has counseled small business owners and large corporations. He has argued capital murder and terrorism cases, counseling defendants, while working closely with the United States Department of Justice, U.S. attorneys, and Federal and State authorities.

He has practiced in Federal and State courts. He has tried cases at the trial and the appellate levels. In their totality, his experiences illustrate a skilled lawyer, an outstanding professional of the bar, and an imminently qualified nominee for the bench.

U.S. District Judge Jack Zouhary has been a judge in the northern district since 2006, in fact, 6 years ago today. He is a Bush Administration nominee, testified in front of this Committee during his own confirmation hearing. He is currently the sole active judge of the court in the western division and the northern district. He will work closely with whoever is appointed.

Judge Zouhary wrote to this Committee recommending Jeff Helmick's expedient confirmation. He wrote, "You'll find no better candidate than Jeff. He possesses the intelligence, the passion for our justice system, the necessary temperament and people skills to be an outstanding district court judge."

Ohio State Senator Mark Wagoner, Chairman of the Ohio Senate Judiciary Committee, longtime member of the Toledo bar and a Republican, wrote that "Jeff is someone who stood for principles, litigated honestly, ably defended our constitutional system of government, and Mr. Helmick would make an outstanding Federal judge."

Mr. Chairman, I ask that those statements from Judge Zouhary and State Senator Wagoner be included in the record.

Senator COONS. Without objection.

[The statements appear as a submission for the record.]

Senator SHERROD BROWN. In addition to having a brilliant legal mind, Jeff Helmick understands the needs and challenges facing the northern district and our legal system generally.

He is a courtroom innovator, having worked with the courts to integrate cutting-edge technologies into courtrooms to ensure that the administration of justice is efficient and fair and equal and open to all who seek it.

Outside the courtroom, he is equally devoted to serving the public, a supporter of pro bono service. He volunteers at the Maumee Valley Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, and he is past president of the Timberville Boys Ranch, which helps troubled young men who need a home or a safer environment to reach their potential.

Mr. Chairman, Jeffrey Helmick will make an outstanding judge on the U.S. District Court for our Northern District in Ohio, and I ask for his speedy confirmation.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Brown.

Finally, we welcome Mary Geiger Lewis, who is nominated to the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina.

Senator Graham.

PRESENTATION OF MARY GEIGER LEWIS NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA BY HON. LINDSEY GRAHAM A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Senator GRAHAM. Mr. Chairman, we have Congressman Clyburn from the House who would like to speak, if that is appropriate, and I will follow him.

Senator COONS. Absolutely. We welcome the distinguished Congressman from South Carolina. It is a pleasure to have you with us.

PRESENTATION OF MARY GEIGER LEWIS NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA BY HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN, A U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVE FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Congressman CLYBURN. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ranking Member, other members of the Committee.

I am pleased to come over to this side of the building today to join with my good friend, Senator Graham, in support of Mary Geiger Lewis. That is the way we pronounce it in South Carolina. I suspect Delaware may have a different pronunciation.

Senator COONS. I stand corrected.

Congressman CLYBURN. But I thought that in view of some of the often thought about and even sometimes expressions about my home State of South Carolina, I thought it was appropriate for me to come over today and to add my voice of support to Ms. Lewis.

I have known her and her husband a long, long time. I consider them to be the kind of people that all us would be proud to be associated with, and I am very pleased to be here today in support of her nomination. And I am hopeful that this Committee and this Senate will approve her forthrightly.

Thank you so much, and I will yield back.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Congressman Clyburn.

Senator Graham.

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I want to thank Jim for coming over and lending his voice to this nomination.

Mary has been practicing law for 25 years in South Carolina, one of the best known lawyers in our State, working with a very prominent law firm, Lewis, Babcock & Griffin. I think Mr. Babcock is with her today.

She is a graduate from the University of South Carolina, went to law school—excuse me—Clemson University, undergraduate, University of South Carolina School of Law to get her law degree.

She was unanimously rated qualified by the ABA. She has been involved in plaintiff and defense work and very complex litigation. She is a real bright person to have on the bench and well respected by all her colleagues.

Our Supreme Court Chief Justice, Jean Toal, has written a letter and had planned to be here, but she, unfortunately, had a doctor's appointment, but she has nothing but great things to say, says Ms. Lewis is a top-notch lawyer, the best of a new generation of South Carolina lawyers, and I think that is a view widely shared.

Kevin Hall, who is a well known Republican lawyer in South Carolina, has represented our party in many legal conflicts, has also written a letter that I would like to introduce into the record, saying that “Mary is a woman of sound character, integrity, a fine legal talent, a compassionate soul and extraordinary woman,” and I just want to echo that.

[The letter appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator GRAHAM. So from a South Carolina perspective, this is a nominee that we all can be proud of, a lot of bipartisan support. And the most important thing is that if she is chosen by the Senate, if the Senate approves this request, she will be a great judge for our State and I would not hesitate for 1 second to have any member of my family, someone I cared about, appearing before her, because I know she would be fair and apply the law as it should be applied.

So, Mr. Chairman, I cannot tell you how much support she has throughout our State, and we look forward to voting on you. And Cam, her husband, is a West Point graduate—we won’t hold that against you. But it is a good family, two bright kids that are in college.

So thank you very much, Mary, for offering yourself to the Federal judiciary and I look forward to supporting your nomination.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Graham. Thank you, Congressman Clyburn.

Now, I would like to ask Judge Shwartz to come forward and please remain standing.

[Nominee sworn.]

Senator COONS. Thank you. Let the record reflect the nominee has been sworn and has answered in the affirmative.

Judge Shwartz, I welcome you and encourage you to acknowledge your family members and friends you have with you here today, and then to offer a statement.

STATEMENT OF JUDGE PATTY SHWARTZ, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you, Senator.

First, I don’t have an opening statement, but I would like to take the opportunity to say some thank yous and to give some acknowledgments.

First, please let me extend my thanks for your having this hearing today and for the Committee to consider my nomination.

Of course, I’d like to thank the President for the honor of the nomination.

I would like to thank my two home State Senators from New Jersey for their support and their kind words today.

I’d also like to thank the members of the Department of Justice and the White House Counsel’s Office who have led me through this and guided me through this process. I’m grateful.

I’d like to also thank and acknowledge three categories of families I have. Without belaboring you with the names of all of them, I have a family of friends that I’ve had since I was a child, through high school, college, law school, into my professional life, who have been tremendously supportive. Some are present. Some are present by Web, but all are incredibly important to me.

In addition, I have been the member of a second family which we call in New Jersey the Federal family. It's a family of lawyers, agents, agencies, practitioners who all appear before the Federal court.

I became a member of that family when I became a law clerk to the honorable Harold Ackerman, who we have lost, but I remember with fondness today and with great appreciation. And honoring his memory and me are some of the law clerks he had during his more than 50 years as a judge. So I didn't clerk with all the people who are here, but they honor me with their presence.

In addition to that, I have a chambers family. I have a family of law clerks I've worked with in the past, both my own and others. And then there's, of course, the very generous Federal bar that I have been a member and participate in both as a practitioner and as a member of the court, and I give great thanks to all of them, as well as members of the court family that I'm a member of.

Finally, I would like to take a moment just to introduce you to and acknowledge members of my family. I have cousins who are watching, hopefully, by Web from New Jersey to California, and perhaps one even in Israel.

I have with me today members of my immediate family and I would like to be able to at least mention them by name and mention others who are watching by the Web.

With me today I have my brother, Richard; my sister, Nancy; my brother, Jeff; and, my nephew and Godson, Max. Max's brother is watching from the University of Arizona by Web, and they are the son of our late sister, Betty, and she would be incredibly proud of both of them.

Also watching by the Web are my brother Jeff's two greatest accomplishments, my two nieces. They're in elementary school and they're watching with their mom, Linda, also by Web.

My sister's fiancé, John, is watching by Web. Max and Jake's dad is watching by Web, Mitchell Smith.

Notably absent today are my parents, Jean and Harold Shwartz. We've lost them, but I obviously am here because of them, both from a biological standpoint, of course, but also because of all the great support, and they've always given my life adventure.

And, finally, with us today is someone who has been associated with my family for such a long time, he's practically a member of the family, Jim Nobile. And I have others who are here in the audience and I know they'll forgive me if I don't mention them by name.

On October 3, 2003, March 11, 2008 and November 18, 2009, I met with foreign prosecutors and/or government officials visiting the United States for the purpose of learning about the federal criminal justice system. Their visits were coordinated through the Department of Justice and United States Attorney's Office. Throughout my time as a judge, I also have sworn-in various people for admission to practice law in New Jersey state and federal courts and to serve as United States Pretrial Service and Probation officers or assistants. When I knew the individual personally (such as law clerks or former interns), I made an effort to personalize the occasion. I do not have a comprehensive list of the individuals I administered the oath to or the dates on which I administered it. Based upon a review of calendars and other records, I have identified the following dates on which I administered such oaths: July 14, 2003 (Probation Officer Assistant), December 17, 2003 (former intern from the United States Attorney's Office), January 26, 2006 (law clerk), December 27, 2007 (law clerk), September 25, 2008 (Pretrial Services Officers), November 25, 2008 (former court intern), November 13, 2009 (law clerk to Judge Ackerman and the law clerk's wife), May 27, 2010 (law clerk), and November 19, 2010 (former court intern).

As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, I participated in the annual training for U.S. Pretrial Services and Probation Offices. In addition, I spoke to members of the New Jersey American Correctional Association, the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner of New York County, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Administration, Internal Revenue Service, United States Postal Inspection Service, United States Customs Inspection Service, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco and Firearms. In addition, in about 1999, I was on a panel of professional women discussing advancement in the workplace. I have no notes, transcripts, or recordings of these events and do not have a recollection of the specific date or location of the sessions.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

I was appointed as a United States Magistrate Judge for the District of New Jersey by the District Judges of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey in 2003 and continue to serve in that position. As a Magistrate Judge, I am authorized to handle cases pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636.

In the District of New Jersey, civil actions (with limited exceptions) are automatically assigned to a United States District Judge, who serves as the presiding judge, and a Magistrate Judge, who serves as the referral judge. The assigned Magistrate Judge is responsible for managing all aspects of the pretrial process. This includes convening scheduling conferences, resolving discovery disputes, ruling on other nondispositive motions, holding settlement conferences, and presiding over final pretrial conferences. In addition, a Magistrate Judge may be asked to prepare Reports and Recommendations on dispositive motions (e.g., motions to dismiss, motions for summary judgment, motions for class certification). I have been designated as the referral judge in more than 4000 civil cases. In addition, parties have consented to my jurisdiction in whole or in part in more than 70 civil cases. In consent cases, I serve as the presiding judge and thus have the authority to render case-dispositive rulings and preside over trials. I have presided over ten civil jury trials and three civil bench trials.

I also handle criminal cases that are presented when I am serving as the criminal duty judge. In addition to presiding over preliminary proceedings in felony cases, I have handled more than 20 misdemeanor cases with the consent of the parties, including one criminal jury trial. In addition, United States District Judges have referred more than 185 felony guilty plea proceedings to me for Reports and Recommendations.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment? 14

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	79%
bench trials:	21%
civil proceedings:	93%
criminal proceedings:	7%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

The Clerk's Office's electronic filing and case management system reflects that I issued 55 written opinions and 34 Reports and Recommendations. These items are set forth on the attached list. This is not the universe of dispositions memorialized in writing. I issue hundreds of orders each year. Some of these orders embody the opinions explaining the reasons for the ruling. The Clerk's electronic case filing system does not have a tool to distinguish orders containing the opinions from among the hundreds of orders I have issued. In addition, there may be opinions that have been filed but not docketed in a fashion that would cause them to be captured in the electronic filing system's report.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

For each case, the addresses listed for counsel reflect their last known business address.

1. Stillman v. Staples, Civ. No. 07-849

This was a collective action under the Fair Labor Standards Act filed on behalf of employees who held the position of assistant store sales manager. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. After a six-week trial, the jury returned a verdict against the defendant and in favor of the more than 300 members of the collective action. After the judgment was entered, the Judicial Panel on Multi-District Litigation ["MDL"] transferred cases from other jurisdictions to a United States District Judge in the District of New Jersey. As part of the MDL case, the parties have sought approval of a settlement that would also resolve the Stillman case. As a result, the appeal of the Stillman judgment has been dismissed on the joint motion of the parties. The motion for final approval for a settlement class and a class settlement was referred to me and my recommendation concerning the motion was adopted, but final disposition regarding the attorney fee award is pending before the United States District Court Judge. The following are citations of opinions from Stillman: Stillman v. Staples, Civ. No. 07-849, 2007 WL 7261450 (D.N.J. July 20, 2007); Stillman v. Staples, Civ. No. 07-849, 2008

WL 1843998 (D.N.J. Apr. 22, 2008); Stillman v. Staples, Civ. No. 07-849, 2009 WL 1437817 (D.N.J. May 15, 2009).

2. Araoz v. United States, Civ. No. 06-2149

This was a medical malpractice action under the Federal Tort Claims Act. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. I resolved several in limine applications and presided over a five-day bench trial that included testimony from several witnesses, such as competing expert obstetricians and pediatric neurologists. Based upon the evidence, there was a finding of no cause for action on the part of the plaintiff. Araoz v. United States, Civ. No. 06-2149, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23495 (Mar. 24, 2008). 3. United States v. Hartman, Civ. No. 07-3843

In this case, defendant Hartman was alleged to have failed to pay estate taxes and several co-defendants were accused of receiving real estate on which the government placed estate tax liens. Certain defendants filed third-party and fourth-party complaints against real estate and legal professionals involved in the real estate transactions. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. All parties, except the United States and defendant Hartman, reached resolution without trial, and defendant Hartman proceeded to trial. After a six-day trial, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant.

This was a criminal tax case against an accountant who failed to file his tax returns despite having earned over $250,000 during a four-year period. I presided over this case with the consent of the parties, made in limine rulings and addressed disputes concerning the jury charge. After a four-day trial, the jury returned a guilty verdict and, thereafter, the defendant was sentenced to a term of incarceration. The conviction and sentence were affirmed. *United States v. This was a diversity action in which the plaintiff sought payment pursuant to his homeowner's insurance policy for damage due to a fire. The defendant denied coverage, in part, based upon the arson exclusion. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. During the trial, and with counsel's consent, the jury was permitted to submit written questions of each witness for the Court to ask on the jury's behalf. After a four-day trial, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant and against the plaintiff.

This was a Rehabilitation Act case in which the plaintiff alleged discrimination and retaliation for his complaints of discrimination. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. I resolved the motion for summary judgment, which limited the number of claims for the jury to consider. Mastrolia v. Potter, Civ. No. 08-5967, 2010 WL 1752531 (D.N.J. Apr. 27, 2010). This was a diversity case alleging that a rotary hammer was defective and injured the plaintiff's hand. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties and resolved several in limine and post-trial applications. After a ten-day trial, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant. The verdict was reversed based upon an evidentiary ruling. Harold v. Black & Decker, 295 F. App'x 530 (3d Cir. 2008). The appellate court noted that at the time of trial, the trial court did not have the benefit of an appellate ruling governing the evidentiary issue. After remand, a second jury was empanelled and the case settled.

9. Linz v. Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. et al., Civ. No. 04-785

This patent case involved a claim that the defendants infringed the plaintiff's patent on an item used to dispense cans of soup. I addressed motion practice, which resulted in allowing the defendants to assert antitrust and common law tortious interference counterclaims. During the discovery period, the plaintiff asserted that he had shared his idea for this dispensing device with representatives of one of the defendants and, as a result, sought and obtained an order that permitted him to inspect items in one of the defendants' archives. I presided over the case with the consent of the parties. The case settled.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

I know of no cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

In the cases in which the parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, I was reversed one time. In Harold v. Black & Decker, 295 F. App'x 530 (3d Cir. 2008), the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit reversed an oral ruling that barred the defendant from offering evidence of the absence of any complaints about the allegedly defective product. The Court of Appeals noted, however, that I did not have the benefit of a ruling that it had rendered after the trial. A copy of the order is supplied.

In all other cases, appeals of a Magistrate Judge's decision are filed with the presiding United States District Judge. The Clerk's Office Electronic Filing system has reports of appeals to the extent the appellant properly docketed the appeal. Based upon searches of electronic databases and my recollection, the following are cases in which decisions I made were reversed or a report and recommendation was not adopted:

BCI Comm's, Inc. v. Nat'l Grid Wireless Holdings, Inc., Civ. No. 07-2143, slip op. (D.N.J. Feb. 6, 2008), declined to adopt, slip op. (D.N.J. May 20, 2008). The United States District Judge declined to adopt a Report and Recommendation to compel the parties to participate in contractual arbitration. The decision of the District Judge was appealed to the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit but the case settled before the appeal was decided. Copies of the opinions are supplied.

Beye v. Horizon Blue Cross & Blue Shield, Civ. Nos. 06-5337, 06-6219, slip op. (D.N.J. May 6, 2008), rev'd in part, 2008 WL 3064757 (D.N.J. July 29, 2008). This case involved a challenge to an insurance company's decision not to pay health benefits. Certain plaintiffs were covered by ERISA plans and others were covered by non-ERISA plans. I permitted similar discovery to occur without regard to whether a plaintiff's plan was subject to ERISA. A copy of the Order is supplied. The United States District Judge reversed the portion of the discovery ruling that permitted discovery from individuals who were covered by ERISA plans.

Boyd v. John Doe Doctor, Civ. No. 07-769, slip op. (D.N.J. Nov. 16, 2009), rev'd, slip op. (D.N.J. Feb. 3, 2010). I entered an order denying the pro se plaintiff leave to file a Second Amended Complaint to substitute certain individuals for fictitiously named defendants because the plaintiff had not provided a copy of the proposed pleading as required by the Local Rules and because the Final Pretrial Order made no mention of these individuals. After the order was entered, the United States District Judge reopened discovery for defendants named in the First Amended Complaint and vacated the Final Pretrial Order. As a result, the procedural posture of the case changed. In addition, the pro se plaintiff attached a copy of the proposed pleading to his appeal papers. Based on these subsequent events, the District Judge vacated the order and permitted the pro se plaintiff to file the Second Amended Complaint. Copies of the orders are supplied.

Cataldo v. Moses, Civ. No. 02-2588, slip op. (D.N.J. May 11, 2004), declined to adopt in part, 361 F. Supp. 2d 420 (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2004). The United States District Judge adopted all aspects of the recommendation granting summary judgment in favor of the defendants except for a part concerning the New Jersey Tort Claim Act in light of the new rulings from the New Jersey Supreme Court. These decisions were issued after the Report and Recommendation was filed, and dictated a result different from the one recommended. A copy of the Report and Recommendation is supplied.

Chevra Kadisha of Bobov, Inc. v. Washington Cemetery Mgmt. Corp., Civ. 06-5473, slip op. (D.N.J. Jan. 24, 2007), rev'd, slip op. (D.N.J. Mar. 28, 2007). I denied a motion for intervention filed by an entity and three individuals. The proposed intervenors appealed. In an oral ruling, the United States District Judge reversed the order denying the entity and certain individuals permission to intervene. The Court's order reflects that, after my order was entered, a third-party complaint was filed against the intervenors, which gave them a separate basis to be parties. Copies of the orders are supplied.

E-Beam Services, Inc. v. AECL Techs., Civ. No. 02-2256, slip op. (D.N.J. July 1, 2003), vacated, slip op. (D.N.J. July 10, 2003). I imposed monetary sanctions against a party for knowingly disclosing information in a public filing that had been subject to a mediation confidentiality agreement. The United States District Judge entered an order vacating the sanction in conjunction with a consent order dismissing the case.

Franco v. Connecticut General Life, Civ. No. 07-6039, slip op. (D.N.J. Sept. 20, 2010), rev'd, slip op. (D.N.J. Dec. 22, 2010). In an oral ruling, the United States District Judge reversed an order denying an extension of the deadline to raise discovery disputes arising from requests for information from nonparties. Copies of the orders are supplied.

In re Gabapentin Patent Litig., MDL 1384, Civ. No. 00-2931, slip ops. (D.N.J. Oct. 8, 2010), rev'd in part, slip op. (D.N.J. Jan. 25, 2011). In an oral ruling, the United States District Judge reversed orders that struck a surreply expert report and limited the testimony of another expert concerning late-disclosed data. The Court concluded that the testimony may aid the jury and disagreed with a finding concerning whether actions of the party demonstrated bad faith sufficient to warrant preclusion of evidence. Copies of the orders are supplied.

Kounelis v. Sherrer, Civ. No. 04-4714, slip op. (D.N.J. Oct. 4, 2007), rev'd in part, 529 F. Supp. 2d 503 (D.N.J. 2008). After a hearing, I found that the defendants had failed to preserve a video tape that would have recorded an area where an alleged assault occurred. I imposed certain spoliation sanctions, which included a payment to the pro bono fund, but declined to impose an adverse inference instruction or award the plaintiff's pro bono counsel attorney's fees. A copy of the Order is supplied. The United States District Judge affirmed the decision on sanctions but reversed the instruction, pro bono fund payment, and fee ruling and awarded plaintiff's pro bono counsel attorney's fees, vacated the pro bono fund payment in light of the fee award, and granted the request for an adverse instruction.

Lee v. Krieg, Civ. No. 06-278, slip op. (D.N.J. June 22, 2006), adopted, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 58486 (D.N.J. Aug. 21, 2006), vacated and remanded, 227 Fed. App'x 146 (3d Cir. 2007). The United States District Judge adopted the recommendation that the Complaint be dismissed as it involved the same claims as those pending in an earlier case that had been closed. The recommendation did not specify whether the dismissal should be with or without prejudice. The District Judge dismissed the Complaint with prejudice. The Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit vacated the order that dismissed the case with prejudice, stating that the District Court did not consider measures less drastic than dismissal with prejudice, such as dismissal without prejudice to the plaintiff's filing a motion to reopen the earlier case. A copy of the Report and Recommendation is supplied.

Louis v. NCR, Civ. No. 06-422, slip op. (D.N.J. Oct. 20, 2006), adopted in part, declined to adopt in part, 2006 WL 3419834 (D.N.J. Nov. 27, 2006). As a result of the plaintiff's failure to provide responses to discovery and failure to appear for a court-ordered settlement conference, I issued an order directing him to show cause in writing by a specific deadline why sanctions should not be imposed. The order to show cause specifically notified him that if he failed to respond, I would recommend to the United States District Judge that the complaint be dismissed. He provided no response and I recommended dismissal. The United States District Judge adopted the recommendation to impose sanctions, but chose to impose monetary sanctions instead of adopting the recommendation to dismiss the complaint based upon explanations provided to the District Judge as to why the plaintiff failed to appear at the settlement conference and the representation that a deposition had occurred after the recommendation had been issued that enabled the defendant to obtain discovery and thereby ameliorate the prejudice that the defendant suffered from the absence of the written discovery from the plaintiff. A copy of the Report and Recommendation is supplied.

Ngai v. Old Navy, Civ. No. 07-5653 slip op. (D.N.J. May 21, 2009), partially vacated, slip op. (D.N.J. May 27, 2009). The United States District Judge vacated a portion of an order directing that a deposition occur on a particular date based upon a representation made to the District Judge that the witness retained counsel. Copies of the orders are supplied.

Patterson v. City of Perth Amboy, Civ. No. 06-4780, slip op. (D.N.J. June 29, 2007), rev'd in part, 2007 WL 3054939 (D.N.J. Oct. 11, 2007). I barred plaintiff from serving two expert reports because they were untimely. A copy of the order is supplied. The United States District Judge affirmed the ruling as to one of the experts, but reversed the ruling as to the other expert based upon the Court's view of the significance of the expert's opinion on an issue in the case.

Richards v. Johnson & Johnson, Inc., Civ. No. 05-3663, slip op. (D.N.J. Nov. 21, 2006), slip op. (D.N.J. Dec. 29, 2006), reconsideration denied, slip op. (D.N.J. Jan. 4, 2007) rev'd, 2007 WL 2123697 (D.N.J. July 20, 2007). In this employment discrimination case, I precluded the plaintiff from obtaining discovery concerning the employee ratings of individuals who held the same positions as plaintiff as well as other positions that he sought but did not obtain and denied the request to reconsider this decision. Copies of the orders are supplied. The United States District Judge found that the discovery might reveal how similarly situated employees were treated under the employee rating system and remanded to enable the defendant to develop a record concerning the burden of producing such information and to enable the plaintiff to make arguments concerning whether a uniform employee evaluation system for all employees existed.

Sery v. Fed. Bus. Ctrs., Civ. No. 06-1026, slip op. (D.N.J. May 7, 2007), set aside and remanded, slip op. (D.N.J. July 20, 2007). In this case, I precluded the plaintiff from offering an expert report because it was untimely. The United States District Judge set aside the order and remanded for further findings on whether or not the plaintiff flagrantly disregarded the scheduling order and whether the defendant would be prejudiced by the untimely report. Copies of the orders are supplied.

United States ex rel. Anthony Kite v. Besler Consulting, Civ. No. 05-3066, slip op. (D.N.J. Sept. 2, 2008), rev'd, slip op. (D.N.J. Nov. 3, 2008). I administratively terminated a motion to sever a defendant based upon a claim of improper joinder without prejudice to refiling at a later time, explaining that coordinated pretrial proceedings advanced judicial economy and would conserve resources. The United States District Judge vacated the termination order because the Court believed it lacked a full explanation addressing the movant's arguments of prejudice and efficiency. On remand, I issued an order denying the motion without prejudice to it being renewed as part of the final pretrial process. The movant appealed. The United States District Judge affirmed and agreed with the view I expressed both before and after remand that pretrial case management supported consolidated pretrial proceedings for all defendants. Copies of the orders are supplied.

Wachtel v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., Civ. No. 01-4183, and McCoy v. Health Net, Inc., 03-1801, slip op. (D.N.J. July 28, 2005), rev'd in part, 239 F.R.D. 376 (D.N.J. 2006). The United States District Judge affirmed several discovery rulings but reversed one decision that barred plaintiffs from supplementing their expert report. A copy of the order is supplied.

Wachtel v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., Civ. No. 01-4183, and McCoy v. Health Net, Inc., 03-1801, slip op. (D.N.J. Sept. 28, 2005), rev'd in part, 2006 WL 2506771 (D.N.J. Aug. 29, 2006). I issued an order barring plaintiff from making in limine motions not listed in the final pretrial order. The United States District Judge reversed the order based on additional evidence disclosed at hearings before the Court. The evidence was not disclosed at the time the final pretrial order was signed. The District Judge also reversed based upon logistical issues that were contemplated to occur during trial. A copy of the order is supplied.

Worthy v. City of Newark, Civ. No. 05-2115, slip op. (D.N.J. Aug. 22, 2007), rev'd in part, 2008 WL 413309 (D.N.J. Feb. 13, 2008). The United States District Judge reversed a ruling that partially granted a motion to quash a subpoena served upon the plaintiff's former criminal defense counsel. The decision to quash was based upon the assertion of privilege. A copy of the order is supplied. The District Judge found that the plaintiff had waived the privilege based upon the plaintiff's disclosure of privileged information in a brief filed in a state court proceeding.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

As a Magistrate Judge, I issue orders on nondispositive matters that range from discovery disputes, motions to amend pleadings, motions to extend discovery schedules, motions to disqualify, and other motions and applications. I issue hundreds of such orders each year. If the issue is dispositive and the parties have not consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, then the orders must be done in the form of a Report and Recommendation to the presiding United States District Judge. If the parties consent to the jurisdiction of the magistrate judge, then I issue orders addressing both dispositive and nondispositive motions and applications. Very few of the opinions and orders that I issue are published, although I file all of my orders, written opinions, and written reports and recommendations on the Court's electronic filing system. In addition, to facilitate the expeditious resolution of disputes, I frequently prepare opinions that I dictate into the record. Although orders memorializing the ruling are electronically filed, these oral opinions are not captured on the Clerk's electronic filings. If a party or the Court orders the transcript of the opinion, then it may be filed as part of the docket but, to my knowledge, there is no electronic filing report that keeps track of these transcripts. Other than the few opinions that I have designated for publication or requested to be transcribed, I have no control over which opinions and orders are published on Westlaw or Lexis Nexis or which dictated opinions are transcribed.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Mayer v. Gottheiner, 382 F. Supp. 2d 635 (D.N.J. 2005)

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

4. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

The Clerk of the Court has a system that randomly assigns civil cases to pairs of United States District Judges and Magistrate Judges. Before final assignment is made, the Clerk reviews a list of persons or entities whose presence automatically causes a recusal. At present, I own no stock and have no financial interests that require automatic recusal. When a case is assigned to me, I review the parties, counsel, and facts to ensure there are no conflicts or other grounds for recusal. I have recused from certain cases the Clerk has automatically assigned to me based upon my former duties as an Assistant U.S. Attorney and the current role of my significant other as an Assistant U.S. Attorney, and I have identified such cases on the attached list.

I also receive assignments of criminal cases and matters when I serve as the week's criminal duty judge. The duty assignment rotates approximately every six weeks. When a case or matter is presented, my staff immediately asks if the case or matter was pending in the United States Attorney's Office before March 10, 2003. If the case or matter was pending before that date, I recuse because of the breadth of my former duties at that Office. In addition, I recuse from all cases that are assigned to Assistant U.S. Attorneys in the division that my significant other supervises as well as any cases that he handles or handled. I do not have a list of case or matters that have triggered these immediate recusals.

Listed below are cases from which I recused based upon my relationship with either a lawyer or a party:

Unum Life Ins. Co. v. Estate of Morabito, Civ. No. 09-4320; Metro. Life Ins. Co. v. Delrusso, Civ. No. 10-1250: At the initial conference, I notified the parties that I had worked with defense counsel when he was an Assistant U.S. Attorney and met his client during at least one social event. At plaintiff's request, I recused.

Trelease v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., Civ. No. 07-3841: A childhood friend served as defense counsel and, at her request, I recused.

N.Y. Susquehanna v. Campbell, Civ. No. 05-4010: I recused because a party was a relative of my significant other.

Listed below are cases in which a party sought or discussed my recusal:

N.J. Sand Hill Band of Lenape & Cherokee Indians v. New Jersey, Civ. No. 09-683, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36874 (D.N.J. Mar. 31, 2011): Plaintiffs sought recusal of both the United States District Judge and me based upon disagreement with certain rulings. The movant also generally asserted that the District Judge and I were biased and prejudiced. The District Judge found that the plaintiffs had presented no facts showing either prejudice or bias. The motion was denied.

Goldberg v. County of Essex, Civ. No. 04-3901: At the early stage of the case, I notified the parties that I once worked with one of the defendants, who was named in her official capacity. The plaintiff initially submitted a letter suggesting recusal may be warranted. The plaintiff was instructed to file a formal motion if he decided to seek recusal. The plaintiff did not pursue the issue.

Abdel-Whab v. Middlesex County Jail, Civ. No. 04-1846: The pro se plaintiff sought recusal based upon his disagreement with an adverse ruling. There were no facts showing bias or partiality. The motion was denied.

Jones v. Green, Civ. No. 02-6029: The pro se plaintiff sought recusal based upon my judicial decisions. There were no facts showing bias or partiality. The motion was denied.

Jones v. Zara, Civ. No. 03-3947: The pro se plaintiff sought recusal based upon a claim that improper telephone conversations had transpired between the Court and defense counsel. The plaintiff was notified that no such conversations occurred and the motion was denied.

5. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I have not held any public office other than judicial office. I have had no unsuccessful candidacies or elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

I have not held any office in or rendered services to any political party or election committee. I have not held a position or played a role in a political campaign.

6. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

- a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:
- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

1987 – 1989; I served as a law clerk to Judge Harold A. Ackerman, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I have not practiced alone.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I never served as a private mediator or an arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

After law school graduation, I joined the labor department of Pepper, Hamilton & Scheetz (now Pepper Hamilton LLP) and received assignments ranging from responding to discovery to drafting in limine motions and client letters. I also had the opportunity to appear before a state court judge and seek a temporary restraining order. I left the firm to begin my District Court clerkship. At the conclusion of my clerkship, I joined the United States Attorney's Office and was assigned to the Criminal Division, where I handled violent crime, drug, and white collar cases. After several years in the Criminal Division, I was assigned to the Special Prosecutions Division, which focuses on public corruption cases. After a brief tenure in that division, I was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Criminal Division, where I supervised dozens of Assistant U.S. Attorneys. In February 1999, I was appointed Chief of the Criminal Division. I served in that position until August 2001, when I was appointed Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney. In that role, I supervised the Criminal, Civil and Fraud Divisions. I returned as Criminal Chief in January 2002 and remained in that position supervising an expanded and reorganized division until my appointment as a United States Magistrate Judge in March 2003.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

While working at Pepper, Hamilton, & Scheetz, I was assigned to the labor department. It represented parties in both traditional labor matters and employment discrimination cases. While working for the United States Attorney's Office, I represented the United States in federal criminal cases.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My entire career has involved federal litigation, and I have appeared in court frequently. That frequency, however, decreased as my supervisory duties increased. To the best of my recollection, I appeared before New Jersey state judges less than five times, and I appeared with a client while in private practice before a representative on the National Labor Relations Board one time.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|-----------------------------|-------|
| 1. federal courts: | 99.9% |
| 2. state courts of record: | .09% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | .01% |
- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|--------------------------|--------|
| 1. civil proceedings: | .01% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 99.99% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried more than 15 cases to verdict in the United States District Court. In each case, I was either sole or chief counsel. I also served in a supervisory capacity at trials with relatively junior Assistant U.S. Attorneys who were handling their first trials.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 100%
 - 2. non-jury: 0%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

7. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

Listed below are ten cases in which I was sole or chief counsel for the United States before the United States District Court. I was responsible for the case throughout its entire investigation and prosecution. Any appeals were handled by other Assistant U.S. Attorneys assigned to the Office's Appeals Division. Certain defendants may have had post-conviction proceedings after I became a Magistrate Judge and, accordingly, I had no role in those proceedings. The addresses for the attorneys are the most recent business addresses I could locate.

- I. United States v. Smith, Crim. No. 00-399, before the Hon. John C. Lifland, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendants were five police officers who were convicted of violating the civil rights of an individual whom the officers had wrongly suspected of having murdered a fellow police officer. The individual died as a result of the defendants' acts of police brutality. The trial lasted more than two months, and involved dozens of fact witnesses and several medical experts. I delivered the opening statement and rebuttal summation, handled numerous witnesses and motions as well as the charge conference. The jury returned guilty verdicts on all counts. The United States District Judge granted the post-trial motion for acquittal on the conspiracy count. The Court of Appeals of the Third Circuit reinstated the conviction on the conspiracy count. United States v. Smith, 294 F.3d 473 (3d Cir. 2002). The defendants were sentenced after I became a Magistrate Judge.

2. United States v. Nunes, Crim. No. 96-231, before the Hon. William H. Walls, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

A jury convicted the defendant of carjacking an employee of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The defendant brutally assaulted her both physically and sexually. There was no fingerprint, DNA or other forensic evidence. Rather, the case rested on eyewitness testimony, corroboration of statements that the defendant made to the victim during their encounter that confirmed his identity as the perpetrator, and other-act evidence admitted under Fed. R. Evid. 404(b). Specifically, the investigation revealed that the defendant had engaged in similar violent conduct against other women. The conviction was affirmed. United States v. Nunes, 135 F.3d 767 (3d Cir. 1997) (table).

3. United States v. Pollard, Crim. No. 91-210, before the Hon. Garrett E. Brown, Jr., United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

Two defendants were charged with conspiring to transport, transporting, and kidnapping minor boys for the purpose of engaging in illegal sexual activities with them. The defendants used various lures to convince the boys to travel with them, including telling them that they ran a modeling agency and that they could get the boys jobs as models. Some of the victims reported that they were offered something to drink which caused them to pass out and that upon awakening they were partially disrobed and in pain. One defendant entered a guilty plea. Because of my role from the outset of the investigation, I handled all of the victims who testified and many of the law enforcement witnesses as well as all of the jury addresses, many motions, and the charge conference. Following an approximately one-month trial, involving multiple youthful victims who were asked to recount sensitive details, a jury convicted the remaining defendant. The jury verdict was affirmed. United States v. Pollard, 986 F.2d 44 (3d Cir. 1993).

4. United States v. Santini, Crim. No. 91-443, before the Hon. Dickinson R. Debevoise, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendants were involved in the manufacture of cocaine at a clandestine cocaine conversion laboratory in New York. The chemical conversion process polluted the property and resulted in its placement on the New York Superfund list of hazardous sites. Another noteworthy portion of the case involved an emergent petition to the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit seeking review of the trial court's order precluding the execution of a lawfully issued arrest warrant for a fugitive residing outside of the United States. The Third Circuit ruled that the doctrine of separation of powers prevents the court from interfering with the power of the executive branch to arrest fugitives pursuant to a valid warrant. United States v. Santini, 963 F.2d 585 (3d Cir. 1992). Three defendants entered guilty pleas. Following a trial that lasted several weeks, in which I handled multiple witnesses, motions, jury addresses, and the charge conference, a jury convicted the remaining defendant.

5. United States v. Vitacco, Crim. No. 95-132, before the Hon. Harold A. Ackerman, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

These defendants were, respectively, the superintendent of schools and the business administrator for the Board of Education in Lincoln Park, New Jersey. Together with my co-counsel, we conducted a grand jury investigation, which resulted in the return of a multiple count indictment charging each defendant with tax evasion and fraud associated with the manipulation of their vacation and sick time. In the midst of trial preparation, the defendants pleaded guilty to felony tax offenses embodied in the indictment filed against them.

6. United States v. D.T., Crim. No. 99-65, before the Hon. Nicholas H. Politan, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendant was a juvenile offender charged with bank robbery. Because of his lengthy and increasingly violent juvenile record, the defendant was transferred for prosecution as an adult. Very strict procedural protections are accorded to juveniles and to ensure that these protections were satisfied, the agent and I closely examined both the offense and the criminal, educational, and social history of the offender to ensure that a request to transfer him to adult status was warranted. He entered a guilty plea to bank robbery.

7. United States v. Redmond, Crim. No. 92-270, before the Hon. H. Lee Sarokin, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendant committed a series of bank robberies. Because forensic evidence was not recovered from each bank, other means were used to identify the perpetrator, including a live line-up. Working with law enforcement, we brought together individuals who resembled the defendant and allowed the defense counsel to challenge those he did not believe to sufficiently resemble his client. The defendant was ultimately identified as the robber of more than a dozen banks. After he was charged, the defendant provided law enforcement with information concerning how he selected his targets and this information helped law enforcement educate banks about ways to protect themselves from robberies. He entered a guilty plea to multiple bank robberies.

The defendant was under investigation for committing automobile lease fraud. During the investigation, law enforcement approached the defendant while he was driving one of the fraudulently obtained vehicles. Instead of complying with their requests to exit the vehicle, the defendant accelerated and struck two federal agents. Following a jury trial, during which I handled multiple witnesses, jury addresses, and the charge conference, the defendant was convicted of fraud and assault on federal agents. The jury verdict was affirmed. United States v. Williams, 157 F. App'x 537 (3d Cir. 2005).

9. United States v. Londono, Crim. No. 90-241, before the Hon. John C. Lifland, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendant was involved in an international drug trafficking organization that distributed multiple kilograms of cocaine. Following a several week trial, which involved multiple witnesses and motions, a jury convicted the defendant for violating the federal drug laws. The conviction was affirmed. United States v. Londono, 998 F.2d 1006 (3d Cir. 1993).

10. United States v. Barkerswoode, Crim. No. 93-309, before the Hon. Joseph H. Rodriguez, United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The defendants were convicted for their role in a multinational drug trafficking organization following a wiretap investigation. Among the members was a professional soccer player from Ghana. To facilitate resolution of the case, my co-counsel and I made presentations to almost every defendant and his counsel that highlighted the evidence, including readings of portions of wiretapped conversations that implicated the particular defendant in the conspiracy. All defendants entered guilty pleas to drug offenses. One defendant appealed his sentence. The sentence was affirmed. United States v. Barkerswoode, 103 F.3d 114 (3d Cir. 1996) (table).

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Most of my career has been spent in public service and my legal work has been in the federal trial court. More specifically, as an Assistant and Supervisory Assistant U.S. Attorney, my work was almost exclusively focused on federal criminal law. I personally investigated, prosecuted, and supervised hundreds of cases. In addition, I was responsible for several special matters, including coordinating the United States Attorney's Office's investigative support in the aftermath of September 11, 2001.

Outside of court, I have devoted my time to training. As a Supervisory Assistant U.S. Attorney, I developed an in-house training program for new Assistant U.S. Attorneys, lectured Assistant U.S. Attorneys on various topics, including ethics and plea bargaining, and provided training to law enforcement officers on various aspects of federal criminal law and procedure. In my current position, I have participated in continuing legal education through participation on panels and teaching. I also assisted the Administrative Office of the United States Courts with a video regarding a program to gather Magistrate Judge workload statistics. A copy of the DVD is supplied in response to question 12d. In addition, I serve on several court governance committees, including the Patent Rules committee, which recommended Local Patent Rules that govern the management of patent cases filed in the District of New Jersey. A copy of the Rules is supplied as part of my response to Question 12b.

I have performed no lobbying activities.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In the Spring of 2009, 2010, and 2011, I taught an evening course entitled "Discovery and the Pretrial Process" at Fordham University Law School. This is a "skills" class focused on pretrial federal civil litigation. A copy of the 2011 syllabus is supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

Upon retirement, I am eligible to receive benefits from the Federal Employee Retirement System. Otherwise, I do not expect to receive any deferred income or future benefits.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

Subject to the approval of the Chief Judge of the Circuit, I am scheduled to teach one evening class at Fordham Law School in the Spring of 2012. I have no other commitments to pursue outside employment.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

My significant other supervises one division of the United States Attorney's Office and, if confirmed, I would continue to recuse myself from all matters he handles or supervises and would recuse from any cases in which he has a financial interest. In addition, because of the various supervisory positions I held, I would continue to recuse myself from any matters pending in the United States Attorney's Office before March 10, 2003.

Other than those situations, I am not aware of any conflicts in the categories described, but in any event, I would review each case to determine if any conflict existed, and if it did, I would recuse myself from the case.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would continue to follow and carefully apply the Code of Conduct for United States Judges as well as other ethical canons and statutory provisions.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

As a judicial law clerk, Assistant U.S. Attorney, and Magistrate Judge, I have been limited in the type of pro bono work that I can do. While I was an Assistant United States Attorney, the Code of Federal Regulations prevented all Assistant U.S. Attorneys from undertaking the type of pro bono representation required of New Jersey bar members and Assistant United States Attorneys were granted an exemption from the requirement of accepting such pro bono appointments. Consistent with the limitations of my positions, I have attempted to fulfill Canon 2 through teaching and speaking to various groups, including bar associations, law enforcement groups, and students.

In addition, I organized and managed the summer intern programs at both the United States Attorney's Office and the United States District Court, participated in our law clerk orientation program, participated in the "Take Your Child To Work Day" events, and have met with elementary, high school, college, and law students to educate them about careers in the law, our government, and public service. During the academic year 2006 – 2007, I also served as a workplace mentor for a high school senior participating in the Senior Experience Internship from the Bergen Academy, Hackensack, New Jersey.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

To my knowledge, there is no selection commission for appointments to this court. Since July 26, 2011, I have spoken with attorneys at the White House Counsel's Office. On August 4, 2011, I was notified that my name was being forwarded to the Department of Justice for vetting for a potential nomination. Since August 4, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 8, 2011, I interviewed with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. I have also interviewed with Senator Frank Lautenberg and Senator Robert Menendez. On October 5, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

JOHN KEVIN STONE
NOTARY PUBLIC OF NEW JERSEY
My Commission Expires ~~January 1, 2014~~
SEP. 13, 2015

Thank you for allowing me to do that, and I will look forward to answering your questions.

Senator COONS. Absolutely. Thank you, Judge Schwartz, and thank you for participating in the nominating process and for volunteering to continue to serve after your long service with the U.S. attorney's office.

Now, let me start, if I might, an initial round of 5-minute questions.

My first question, Judge Schwartz, if you would, please, just briefly describe your judicial philosophy.

Judge SHWARTZ. My judicial philosophy is to decide only the case in front of me based upon the law and the facts established in the record before the court; to give the opportunity to the parties to be heard; to consider those impartially; and, to render fair and prompt decisions and give reasons for those decisions both for the benefit of the litigants, the public, and, in the event there's a review by a reviewing court, the reviewing court.

Senator COONS. How would the skills you've developed as a magistrate judge translate to your responsibilities as a judge on the third circuit? And if you feel compelled to add, and the experience you had as clerk in the district court, feel free to do so.

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you. And I understand you clerked, as well, so you know how important that experience is.

Senator COONS. For the third circuit, yes.

Judge SHWARTZ. That's right. It's a formative experience for all.

I'm of good fortune of having a collection of experiences. I was an assistant U.S. attorney for 13 years. I clerked for a Federal district judge for a little more than 2 years, and I've been a magistrate judge for what will be 9 years on March 10.

As an assistant U.S. attorney, of course, I became exposed to a variety of areas of criminal law and the legal process that is involved in the criminal area.

As a magistrate judge, I work in a district where the district judges give the authority to the magistrate judges to the broadest extent possible based upon the Constitution and the Federal Magistrate Judges Act and, as a result, I've had the opportunity to handle civil cases, pretty much the entire pretrial process, with the exception of dispositive motions and trial, unless the parties have consented to my jurisdiction.

And I've had the good fortune of having parties consent to my jurisdiction in civil cases more than 70 times, where I've been able to take the cases through judgment. I've tried 14 cases as a magistrate judge and more than 15 as an assistant U.S. attorney.

And all of those collective experiences have sensitized me to many things, including, obviously, legal research and writing, understanding the development of a record and where to perhaps find something in a record, if I'm fortunate enough to be confirmed for this other position.

I have an understanding of how a record is developed and where to find things. Of course, I'm accustomed to legal research and writing, which is a large part of that position, should I be lucky enough to be confirmed.

So those are just some of the experiences that I have that I hope that would enable me to serve in this other position.

Senator COONS. Some 25 years ago——

Judge SHWARTZ. Yes.

Senator COONS [continuing]. At your law school graduation, you stated, in part, in a much longer address, that lawyers should take a, “active position in the development of the law.”

Do you still feel that way today? And tell me how you would respond to those who might be concerned that you would take an active role or how you understand that concept today, should you be confirmed as a judge on the third circuit?

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you for asking. The remarks I think you’re referencing are remarks I made 25 years ago when I was about ready to receive my law school diploma, and I was giving remarks to my classmates who were very talented, blessed group who had a terrific legal education. And so I was speaking to future advocates, not to—not as a judge nor did I think I was speaking to a group of judges.

And I was trying to encourage them to use all their good skills to school themselves on the law and to advocate for their clients, but certainly I wasn’t speaking at that time as a judge.

Senator COONS. You are also going to face an interesting situation. As a magistrate judge, a large portion of your work consists of developing recommendations and reports for the review and potential action by district court judges. That’s some portion of your work.

The district court is also responsible for decisions about whether to appoint and reappoint magistrates to the bench.

As a circuit judge, you will be called to review and, where appropriate, reverse rulings of those very same judges. How would you guard against being unduly deferential or having your decisions in any way complicated by judges who have supervised you in your current role?

Judge SHWARTZ. I would apply the same approach that I’ve taken in the job that I have now. I have people who appear in front of me who I’ve known from walks of life other than the one that I currently lead, and I’m duty-bound to apply the law that’s governing to the issue, to the facts that have been established, and reach what I think is an appropriate decision.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much, Judge Shwartz.

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you.

Senator COONS. Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. According to press reports, Senator Menendez initially declined to support your nomination. These accounts centered on the Citizen United case. The second interview with him also appeared to focus on this, and I would read that quote. “In my opinion, Judge Shwartz did not adequately demonstrate the breadth of knowledge of constitutional law and pivotal Supreme Court decisions, such as Citizen United, that we should expect from a United States circuit court judge.”

First question. What did you discuss in these interviews?

Judge SHWARTZ. What I can tell you, during our two interviews, is at no time did the Senator ask nor did I say how I would rule on any case. You heard his remarks, how we did meet twice, and during the course of our collective sessions, we talked generally about my understanding of certain substantive areas of the law.

But, again, at no time did he ask me what my opinion was or what my views were of any of those cases.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, then, I am going to read a second quote from him. "Judge Schwartz satisfactorily answered questions covering important legal topics, such as current law on rights of corporation under the First Amendment, constitutional limits on executive branch power, and the application of heightened standards of review under the Constitution. She adequately allayed my earlier concerns."

So what changed between the first and second interview?

Judge SHWARTZ. I don't know that I'm in a position to say what the Senator felt about that.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, you could at least tell us what maybe you said that changed his mind.

Judge SHWARTZ. I can't say what it is that changed his mind.

Senator GRASSLEY. Did you change your answers or give him any assurances on any legal topic or case?

Judge SHWARTZ. I did not give him any assurances nor did he ask. Perhaps we talked in more detail about certain of the subject areas, but—

Senator GRASSLEY. I have further questions along this line. Did you discuss Citizen United during the second meeting with Senator Menendez?

Judge SHWARTZ. We discussed the corporate rights in a general sense, and then I—we talked a little bit about the difference between the Constitution's rights.

Senator GRASSLEY. Did your views on these subjects change after your initial meeting with Senator Menendez?

Judge SHWARTZ. At no time did I express any of my views during either of the sessions with the Senator. We discussed legal principles.

Senator GRASSLEY. Did you discuss any topics at the second meeting that you did not discuss at the first one?

Judge SHWARTZ. I can't remember. I'm sorry.

Senator GRASSLEY. In Citizen United, the Supreme Court reconsidered the ruling of Austin. In a 5–4 decision, the Supreme Court overturned its decision in Austin and held that campaign finance restrictions on corporations at issue in the case were unconstitutional.

Many, including the President, have been highly critical of the Supreme Court decision. Do you believe Citizen United was correctly decided?

Judge SHWARTZ. It would be improper for me to have a personal opinion on that subject.

Senator GRASSLEY. Are you sure of that answer? I mean the answer you just gave to me.

Judge SHWARTZ. Am I sure that I—it would be—

Senator GRASSLEY. You mean you do not feel that you could tell me whether or not you think Citizen United was properly decided.

Judge SHWARTZ. What I can tell you, Senator, is because I'm a sitting judge, I'm duty-bound to apply the law to the facts without regard to my personal views concerning whether a decision is properly decided or not.

It's the United States Supreme Court's precedent that I'm duty-bound to follow.

Senator GRASSLEY. The President has characterized the Supreme Court's decision as reversing, "a century of law." Do you believe that this is a fair and accurate characterization of the Supreme Court's decision?

Judge SHWARTZ. I don't know that I could characterize it. That was the President's characterization, as you've quoted it to me. I know what the opinion said and it had reviewed its precedent in reaching its conclusion.

Senator GRASSLEY. Before I ask another question—going back to what the Chairman asked you about your commencement address, what did you mean when you said, quote, "We must not simply be satisfied with precedent, but rather must embellish upon it to satisfy the needs of both individuals and society?" And I'm going to follow-up with another question.

Do you believe it is ever proper for a judge to embellish or manipulate precedent?

Judge SHWARTZ. Answering your latter question first, if you don't mind, of course not. The judge is duty-bound to apply the precedent to the facts before it.

My remarks 25 years ago were to my law school classmates who were future advocates, and maybe my word choice should have been more along the lines of good faith extensions of the law was an appropriate thing for an advocate to take a position about on behalf of a client. So it was a different context than the context I work in today.

Senator GRASSLEY. At that particular time, what did you mean when you said "use our creativity to manipulate the preexisting doctrine to best accommodate the demands of a greater society?" Then I will stop here and let my colleagues ask questions.

Judge SHWARTZ. What I was trying to do to my future classmates was to energize them and let them know what important roles they're going to have in society in whatever way they choose to use their law degrees, and that's all I was trying to do to a group, as I said, of future advocates.

Senator GRASSLEY. I will conclude with this. Just simply, I think you are trying to tell us—and I do not question your veracity—that none of these views you expressed are with you today as far as being a judge.

Judge SHWARTZ. That's correct.

Senator COONS. Thank you.

Senator Lee.

Senator LEE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

And thank you, Judge Shwartz, for being with us today. You have had an interesting and distinguished career, and this is an exciting step that you have been nominated to take.

If you are confirmed to this position, let us suppose that you discovered perhaps as you are—I do not know—on the Metroliner going from Newark down to Philadelphia the day before argument, while doing your last review of the bench memos and the briefs in a particular case, you discovered circumstances present in the case that you had not noticed before suggesting that perhaps Article 3 standing was lacking in that case the day before oral argument.

How might you proceed in this circumstance, supposing further that the issue of Article 3 standing had not been raised or briefed either before the third circuit or before the district court?

Judge SHWARTZ. Well, of course, Senator, we would know that you have to have standing in order to bring an action. It's one of the core first steps out of the box when you bring a lawsuit.

Having not been in the appellate court, I'm not sure of the procedures that one would follow. But applying that scenario—and not that I've had exactly a standing issue, but where I've had an issue with the parties that have come up after I've reviewed and thought we were ready to rule, I've either issued orders to invite them to brief an issue or to raise things orally with me on the narrow point that would be presented that perhaps hadn't been discussed before, and, certainly, an issue of standing would have to be one of those issues or else the court couldn't rule.

Senator LEE. And you would certainly be willing to raise it sua sponte.

Judge SHWARTZ. I think the court is obligated to do that to be sure that there is standing of the parties and that all the other justiciability doctrines are satisfied.

Senator LEE. Right. So assuming that this does come up again in this scenario or you discover it the day before oral argument, such that there is not time to ask for supplemental briefing prior to argument, how might you proceed at oral argument? What questions might you ask of the advocates?

Judge SHWARTZ. Again, since I've never been in the appellate posture as a judge, I'm sure among the first things I would do is speak to the other panelists to let them know I had found this issue and then confer with them to see the best way to elicit a response on the subject either at oral argument or to give them an opportunity for supplemental briefings.

But, again, I imagine there's some procedural requirements that the internal operating rules of the appellate court or its local rules may guide us in how to handle that situation.

Senator LEE. Sure. But setting aside those procedural rules, those internal operating procedures for a minute, just talk about the substance, what kinds of questions? What kinds of facts would you be looking for?

Judge SHWARTZ. Sure. Well, in terms of the issue of standing, of course, the party has to have a redressable issue that can be addressed by the court in that context; that they had injury, in fact, and that there's redressability. That is, the lawsuit could lead to an address of that alleged injury.

Senator LEE. Do you believe that Congress has powers other than those that are enumerated in the Constitution? Does it have implied powers that are not expressly granted?

Judge SHWARTZ. Well, not my belief, but my understanding of the Constitution is the Tenth Amendment sets forth the enumerated powers, and there are provisions of the Constitution that provide Congress with its authority to act, whether it's the commerce clause, the necessary and proper clause, the taxing and spending authority and the like.

Senator LEE. So outside of that, if you did not have one of those, you would not be inclined to imply a power of Congress.

Judge SHWARTZ. I'd have to look at the precedent to see if there's some interpretation that's been given by the Constitution—of the Constitution—to determine what the authority was for the act.

Senator LEE. In light of the fact that there is sometimes legislation passed by Congress that may come before you from time to time that does not expressly invoke any enumerated power in the Constitution, how might you approach that situation? Would you be willing to invalidate legislation if it did not invoke one or more express authorities granted to Congress?

Judge SHWARTZ. I think if an issue concerning examining a statute came before the court, the analytical process that I would follow is look at the plain meaning of the statute first; if it weren't clear, look at the legislative history, the scheme in which the particular provision falls, and try to glean from that which authority Congress was acting on, assuming that the challenge to that statute was a challenge that Congress was acting outside of its authority as opposed to some other challenge.

Senator LEE. Right. Assuming that the text does not get you there, how could the legislative history provide the necessary link to an enumerated power under the Constitution?

Judge SHWARTZ. It would depend on what the history said, if there was a history. There could be legislative history that would give an indicator of what authority Congress was relying upon in acting in the way it did.

The other area, of course, is if there's been—finding precedent that's already examined the particular provision at hand.

Senator LEE. Certainly. Certainly. I see my time has expired, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Lee.

Senator COBURN.

Senator COBURN. Thank you, Senator Coons.

Welcome.

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you.

Senator COBURN. You have done a great job so far.

Judge SHWARTZ. Well, thank you.

Senator COBURN. Can you assure this Committee that at no time in the future, should you be appointed to this position and confirmed, that you will rely on foreign law in any way whatsoever to make a decision that is before you?

Judge SHWARTZ. American law dictates the outcomes of cases in the United States courts, and only if the binding precedent for some reason directed consideration of that, but that would be the only circumstance that I would rely on foreign law, unless there was some precedent that required it or some treaty that required it.

Senator COBURN. Well, I am going to go back and ask it again, because I want a yes or no answer. Can you assure this Committee that at no time, should you be confirmed to this position, that you will rely on anything other than the Constitution, the statutes and the precedents before you to make a decision about the outcome of that case?

Judge SHWARTZ. I can assure you of that.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. When you visited with Senator Menendez about the rights of corporation under the Constitution, what did you say those rights were under the Constitution? What are they? What did you tell him?

Judge SHWARTZ. Based—well, I can tell you what my understanding is.

Senator COBURN. Under the First Amendment. I am just asking the First Amendment.

Judge SHWARTZ. Just under the First Amendment, my understanding from the precedent of the United States Supreme Court is that under the First Amendment, corporations have free exercise to political speech and restrictions on that would be subject to the highest level of scrutiny.

Corporations have other rights under the Constitution, but not every constitutional provision gives a corporation rights. There are differences.

Senator COBURN. So does the Citizen United ruling reflect the same rights under the First Amendment, in your mind?

Judge SHWARTZ. Same rights as to an individual's rights?

Senator COBURN. Yes.

Judge SHWARTZ. The Supreme Court precedent says that at least for political speech, it's not judged based upon the speaker. To judge based upon the speaker the Supreme Court found to be improper.

Senator COBURN. Well, that is the law. That is the law. That is the precedent now, correct?

Judge SHWARTZ. That's my understanding of the precedent, yes.

Senator COBURN. So you are bound to follow those precedents.

Judge SHWARTZ. I am.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. One last question for you. When Senator Menendez asked you about the constitutional limits on the executive branch power, was there a specific branch power he was referring to?

Judge SHWARTZ. I don't recall that during the two conversations. We talked generally just what my understanding was of executive power in a very general way.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. I have no other questions.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Coburn.

I will begin a second round, if I might. Judge Shwartz, if you would, just what are your views on the role of the court in interpreting laws written in the past by an elected legislative body? Just to follow-up on some of the questions.

Judge SHWARTZ. Sure. The court is duty-bound to recognize that if legislation comes before it presumed to be constitutional, if there's a challenge made to it, the court would apply the standards that are applicable.

When a court gets a statute in front of it and it's called upon to apply it to a set of facts, of course, it first looks to the plain text of the statute. If there's ambiguity in the text, the court would then turn to the interpretation tools it can use, such as looking at precedent, looking at the provision in the context of the overall statute, looking at legislative history, if that is helpful.

So those are among the tools the court would use.

Senator COONS. And just to return to this topic, in your two sessions visiting with Senator Menendez—in introducing you earlier in this hearing, Senator Menendez actually specifically quoted Aristotle, if I remember correctly.

Judge SHWARTZ. He did.

Senator COONS. Character is the best persuader, and said that he was persuaded to actively support your nomination because of your character.

To be clear, you answered some questions about your conversations with Senator Menendez. Did you at any time give him any assurances about a future decision or an inclination as to how you might decide any case or controversy that might come before you?

Judge SHWARTZ. I did not nor did he ask me anything like that.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Judge Shwartz.

Senator Lee.

Senator LEE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I want to get back to this speech for just a minute. I understand this is 25 years ago. It was at your law school graduation. You were probably trying to impress your friends and classmates.

But there are a couple of statements in there that are fairly strong and I just want to make sure I have a good feel for how you approach the law.

Judge SHWARTZ. Sure.

Senator LEE. One of the segments of that quote that I think did not come out during the previous questioning was a suggestion you made that lawyers should, quote, "manipulate preexisting doctrine to best accommodate the demands of a greater society."

Now, from the prior question, I gather that you do not believe judges should manipulate the law.

Judge SHWARTZ. That's correct.

Senator LEE. But do you believe that it is proper for lawyers, as officers of the court, to manipulate the law?

Judge SHWARTZ. My word choice was poor. I wish that what I had said was that lawyers are allowed, under the rules of ethics, to make good faith estimates based upon the existing doctrine, and that—I wish I had used those words. I wish I was as conversant with word choice at that time as I may be today.

Senator LEE. We are not all as sophisticated the day we graduate from law school. We might hope to be later.

So you would say then, Judge, that you would not phrase this the same way today.

Judge SHWARTZ. That would be correct.

Senator LEE. This does not accurately reflect how you would counsel lawyers in your courtroom today.

Judge SHWARTZ. No. Indeed, I expect lawyers, as do all my colleagues in the district of New Jersey, to have the highest ethical actions by those lawyers as good advocates on behalf of all their clients.

Senator LEE. Do you have any particular judicial role models who have served on the U.S. Supreme Court in the last century?

Judge SHWARTZ. My mother taught me something very important. Love all your children the same. And I'm not blessed with children, but I love all my judicial officers the same and I know that you have a particular judicial officer that you have perhaps a strong feeling with, as does Senator Coons, and so I'm hesitant—Senator LEE. I am a member of the third circuit, in fact.

Judge SHWARTZ. Indeed. So I'm hesitant to say that and it's not—no disrespect to the Supreme Court, but you can't help but be touched by the judge with whom you worked most closely.

Senator LEE. Would you feel more comfortable answering the question if I allowed you to mention only those who have gone on to a better world who are no longer living?

Judge SHWARTZ. I love all my children the same.

Senator LEE. Very well said. I can see that you were an effective advocate in the court before you became a judge.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have got no further questions.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Lee.

Senator Grassley had requested a second round.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes. According to your Senate questionnaire on December 21, 2010, you spoke to a high school group on the role of the U.S. court system and our government. In your handwritten notes, you discuss current subjects and cases that have been the subject of debate.

You included the decision in Citizen United, the issue of civil unions, and whether terrorists should be tried in military tribunals or in Federal courts. In your notes, this discussion comes under the bracketed heading of "court role is politics."

What specifically do you mean when you say "court role is politics?" What is your general view on the role politics plays in the judicial decision-making? And do you believe it is the role of a judge to make rulings based on desired outcomes or policy preferences?

Judge SHWARTZ. Again, to answer your last question first, it is not the court's role to decide things based on policy. That's what the elected officials do. Courts make decisions based upon the law and the facts in front of them following the binding precedent.

If I could give you a little context, first, my handwriting is not terribly legible. The background to that, those notes, is I was invited to speak to a group of high school students called "The Voters of Tomorrow." And my good friend who asked me to do this, young Jack, who was a sophomore at the time, he said, "I want you to come and talk about politics." And I said, "Well, I can't, for a few reasons. One, I'm certainly not well versed in that subject. Second, it's improper. I'm a judge."

"Well, maybe you can talk about some intersection with the court." And so I was trying to think of subjects that would be recognizable to that group of individuals. They were basically freshmen to high school seniors.

And so what I was trying to do was identify cases that subjects that may be of interest to them and familiar to them would come up, and that's how I ended up making some notes to that effect so that I could talk to them about these cases without talking about my views of the cases, just to try to make it a little bit more concrete for them.

Senator GRASSLEY. As an assistant U.S. attorney, did you ever prosecute someone who was death penalty eligible? If so, have you ever sought the death penalty?

Judge SHWARTZ. I was assigned to a case when I first started. I was maybe on the case for about 2 weeks and it was right after I had ended my clerkship.

And I was then taken off that case, because it was assigned to the judge that I had just clerked for. So that was my only contact with a death penalty case.

Senator GRASSLEY. So I think you answered my second part of that. Do you believe that—so then I will ask you a little different approach.

Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment?

Judge SHWARTZ. The United States Supreme Court, in its precedent, has found that it is acceptable in all but a few circumstances.

Senator GRASSLEY. In Roper v. Simmons, the Supreme Court relied on foreign law in holding that the execution of minors violated the Eighth Amendment. Do you think it is proper to look to foreign law to determine the meaning of the Eighth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution?

Judge SHWARTZ. My view is that the American law governs cases brought in the United States courts, and I would follow the American law on that subject.

Senator GRASSLEY. A little more general question along the same line. Do you believe it ever appropriate for a judge to consult foreign law when determining the meaning of the U.S. Constitution?

Judge SHWARTZ. The U.S. Constitution should be governed by U.S. precedent, and that's what should guide interpretations.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you very much. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Any further questions, Senator Lee?

Judge Shwartz, I noted that Governor Christie, who I believe served with you when he was U.S. attorney, said to us, in support of your nomination, that you have committed your entire professional life to public service and New Jersey is the better for it.

And I want to thank you for appearing before this Committee today and look forward to the steady progress of your nomination. Thank you.

Judge SHWARTZ. Thank you very much for your time.

Senator COONS. Thank you.

I would like to ask the second panel of nominees to come forward and remain standing, please, if you would. And if you would each raise your right hand.

[Nominees sworn.]

Senator COONS. Thank you. Let the record reflect the nominees have answered in the affirmative. Please be seated.

Each of you will now be invited to give an opening statement and to recognize your family and friends who may be present or watching on the Web.

Mr. Helmick, starting with you, I would encourage you to acknowledge family and friends and give an opening statement, if you would.

STATEMENT OF JEFFREY J. HELMICK, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you, Senator. I'll be brief, but I appreciate that very much.

First, I'd like to introduce my family and, also, some friends that are here today. Senator Brown got a start on that for me, so I'll move quickly, I assure you.

My wife, of course, Karen Helmick; our son, Joel, who, as the Senator said, is 10 years old. Also, Judy Purpuard, my mother; my sister, Julie Vitale; Gabrielle Vitale, my niece; and, Lee and Marilyn Henry, my in-laws, are all here. And I also have friends and colleagues who have traveled that were able to make it into the hearing room today, I'm pleased to say, Dick and Shelley Walinski, Katherine Hoolihan, Neal McEroy, Spiros Cocoves, and David Douton.

There's a number of people watching on the Webcast and if I might just recognize my dad and step-mom, Jim and Barb Helmick, out in Colorado, who were unable to make the trip, but I hope are watching today; and, my uncle, Robert Kaplan, back in Toledo, as well.

I offer my thanks to you, Mr. Chairman, to the Ranking Member, Senator Grassley, as well, for allowing me to have this hearing, and all other members of the Committee.

Of course, my thanks to Senator Sherrod Brown for that very kind and humbling introduction. To Senator Rob Portman, who has also offered his support in this process. And, also, now retired Senator George Voinovich, as well. I had his support prior to his retirement, as well. And, of course, I thank the President for nominating me.

My thanks to all of you, and I look forward to answering your questions. I'll have nothing by way of a formal opening statement.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much, Mr. Helmick.

We now move to Mary Geiger Lewis.

- b. Supply four (4) copies of any reports, memoranda or policy statements you prepared or contributed in the preparation of on behalf of any bar association, committee, conference, or organization of which you were or are a member. If you do not have a copy of the speech or a transcript or recording of your remarks, give the name and address of the group before whom the speech was given, the date of the speech, and a summary of its subject matter. If you did not speak from a prepared text, furnish a copy of any outline or notes from which you spoke.

I have searched online resources, reviewed old calendars, and consulted with various individuals and groups to produce an answer to this question that is as complete as possible, but I still may have given other presentations that I have been unable to recall or identify.

On October 15, 2009, I participated in a small panel at the University of Toledo College of Law about plea negotiations. I have no notes, transcript, or recording. The address of the College of Law is 2801 West Bancroft, Toledo, Ohio 43606.

On November 7, 2008, I spoke at a conference entitled "A View from the Bench," a CLE program sponsored by the Toledo Bar Association. I was asked to present on the effective use of technology in the courtroom. Presentation slides supplied.

Between 2001 and 2004, I taught rowing courses for the Toledo Rowing Club's Summer Program. I may have prepared instructional materials, but I am unable to locate any copies.

In approximately the mid-1990s, I participated in a Judicial and Attorney Panel in the Toledo area with several local judges and lawyers. Questions were taken from a public audience about the courts and justice system generally. The session was not recorded and I had no prepared remarks, nor do I recall who sponsored the event. Any records I had were lost in an office fire on December 22, 1996.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator since my work as a mediator in the Columbus Night Prosecutor Mediation Program during law school.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

As an associate at Marshall & Melhorn (1988-1989), I was a civil litigator representing small and large businesses in several areas, including contracts, torts and labor law.

Between 1989 and 2001, I had a general practice, including plaintiff's personal injury cases and employment litigation on behalf of both small companies and individuals. During this time, I also began to take on defense of criminal and traffic offenses, eventually including capital cases.

Since 2001, my practice has expanded to include federal habeas corpus cases, post-conviction litigation and defense of more complex federal criminal charges. My civil practice gradually has declined as I have become busier in criminal courts, especially federal court.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

In my first two years of practice, I represented both small and large companies, including Libbey Owens Ford and Champion Spark Plugs. Since I was a general litigator, I had no specific area of expertise.

Since that time, I have represented civil clients including small businesses, persons injured in accidents, and those asserting claims of employment discrimination. I also have represented a wide variety of criminal defendants, including law enforcement officers, business persons, working-class men and women, and indigent individuals. I have worked as retained counsel and as appointed counsel, particularly as appointed counsel in death penalty cases and in some federal criminal prosecutions.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

Overall, litigation has been 100% of my practice. From 1988 to the present, my practice has been:

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 25% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 75% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 0% |

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 30% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 70% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried approximately 40 cases to verdict or judgment. I was sole counsel in 20 of those cases, chief counsel in 16 cases, and associate counsel in four cases.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 1. jury: | 58% |
| 2. non-jury: | 42% |

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

Eley v. Houk, Case No. 10-6499 (Petition for Writ of Certiorari filed Sept. 17, 2010). Copy supplied.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. United States v. Gray, Case No. 3:09-cr-00182-DAK (Hon. David A. Katz, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; 2009 – 2011).

After an investigation by the Department of Justice, four current or former employees of the Lucas County Sheriff's Department, including the county sheriff, were indicted for various charges surrounding the alleged assault and the death of an inmate held in pretrial detention at the Lucas County Corrections Center in Toledo, Ohio. All four were also charged with covering up those actions. I was appointed by the court to represent defendant Schmeltz, a retired deputy sheriff. The case involved review of voluminous medical records and other discovery, and consultations with and preparation of testimony by medical specialists and other experts. I drafted a questionnaire for use by the court and the parties to expedite the individual sequestered voir dire process used in selecting the jury. I participated in all facets of the case, including preparation and argument of pretrial motions, jury selection, direct and cross-examination of witnesses and closing argument. The jury acquitted two of the defendants of all charges. My client was convicted of one count of submission of a false report, and was acquitted of the other three counts, including assault, giving a false statement to the FBI and another count of submission of a false report. Schmeltz was sentenced to one year plus one day in federal custody. His case is currently on appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

2. United States v. Amawi, Case No. 3:06-cr-00719-JGC (Hon. James G. Carr, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; 2006 – 2009).

This was the first terrorism-related criminal case that the government brought in the Northern District of Ohio. Three defendants were charged with, among other crimes, conspiring to kill or maim persons outside of the United States and to provide material support to terrorists. I was court-appointed counsel for defendant Mazloun, and was active in every facet of pretrial, trial, and sentencing proceedings. This case was significant and challenging in many respects. Discovery in the case was voluminous and the government contended that some of the material that the defendants sought in discovery was classified information.

One problem was simply finding a way to get discovery to the defendants for their review so they could assist counsel in preparation of their defense. Because of the nature of the charges, all three defendants were held in a detention center 45 minutes away instead of at the local jail. Under normal practices of the Bureau of Prisons, the defendants could only review discovery during visits with counsel, which were restricted to only a few days a week and then only for limited daytime hours. These restrictions afforded the defendants insufficient time to review the evidence, and it would have been inordinately expensive for appointed counsel to make the daily drive only to sit with the defendants while they reviewed the discovery. I proposed that the court allow the defendants to use the iPod digital media players that had been purchased in United States v. Martinez (the sixth case listed in response to this question), with the discovery loaded onto the iPods. This had never been permitted before, but I negotiated an exception to Bureau practice for this case. This arrangement saved the government literally hundreds of thousands of dollars in attorneys' fees and expenses.

The trial lasted for several weeks. In addition to working extensively on the jury selection process, I also cross-examined government witnesses, conducted the examination of several defense witnesses, and argued questions regarding the admissibility of evidence, jury instructions, and other issues. I also gave closing argument for my client. The jury convicted all defendants of all charges. Appeal is currently pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

3. United States v. Galan, 3:06-cr-00730-JGC (Hon. James G. Carr, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; 2006 – 2008).

This was the first federal capital murder case indicted and eventually tried in the Northern District of Ohio. I was court-appointed counsel for defendant Galan, who was charged with involvement in a drug conspiracy and a double murder. The murders, which the government contended Galan committed to extinguish a drug debt, occurred ten years before he was indicted. Discovery consisted of witnesses' statements, ballistics evidence, and involved other scientific evidence, including blood spatter analysis. My court-appointed co-counsel and I filed numerous motions and drafted a jury questionnaire. We later conducted several days of individual, sequestered voir dire.

Trial included several lay witnesses, a deputy coroner, a ballistics expert, a crime-scene investigator, as well as other law enforcement officers. I delivered the closing argument in the case. The jury convicted the defendant of both murders and the drug conspiracy charge. At the time, the federal capital-sentencing law was relatively new. My co-counsel and I persuaded the court to bifurcate the sentencing proceeding: in the first phase, we argued the applicable aggravating factors; in the second phase we presented mitigation evidence. The jury determined that Galan should spend life in prison without possibility of parole.

4. Dickerson v. Bagley, 1:00-cv-02356-DKA (Hon. David A. Katz, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio); Dickerson v. Bagley, 453 F.3d 690 (6th Cir. 2006) (Circuit Judges Merritt, Martin and Siler); State of Ohio v. Dickerson, Case No.

CR85-5931 (Lucas County Common Pleas, Aug. 14, 2008) (Judges Richard W. Knepper, Charles J. Doneghy and George M. Glasser); 2000 – 2008.

In 1985, a three-judge panel convicted defendant Dickerson of a double murder and a related charge of aggravated burglary and sentenced him to death. After exhausting all direct appeal and post-conviction remedies available under Ohio law, Mr. Dickerson was eligible to file a federal petition for writ of habeas corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Judge David Katz appointed me and my co-counsel to represent Mr. Dickerson. He was the first of seven death-row petitioners I was appointed to represent in federal habeas corpus actions by various judges in the Northern District of Ohio.

The district court permitted discovery regarding the effectiveness of Mr. Dickerson's trial counsel, whom we deposed. Significantly, trial counsel related a conversation that took place between himself and the presiding judge of the panel concerning Mr. Dickerson's choice of a jury versus a three-judge panel. Trial counsel incorrectly believed that the presiding judge strongly implied he was unlikely to vote to sentence Mr. Dickerson to death, and therefore Mr. Dickerson may wish to waive a jury. The district court eventually dismissed the habeas corpus petition and Dickerson appealed. The Sixth Circuit reversed, finding that Mr. Dickerson was denied effective assistance of counsel because his counsel did not adequately investigate and prepare for the sentencing phase of his trial.

My co-counsel and I were appointed to represent Mr. Dickerson at the resentencing hearing in state court, which was conducted before the same three-judge panel that sentenced him to death twenty-three years earlier. Although the aggravating circumstances were the same, we presented mitigation evidence that should have been presented at his first trial. After considering the newly presented evidence, the panel imposed a life sentence.

5. Leu v. Telb, 2007 WL 1884602 (Ohio Ct. App. June 29, 2007) (Judges Singer, Handwork and Pietrykowski, Sixth District Court of Appeals; 2007).

Leu was charged with a misdemeanor count of domestic violence in the Toledo Municipal Court. After the alleged victim failed for the second time to appear on the scheduled date for trial, Mr. Leu's trial counsel moved to dismiss the case for want of prosecution, and the state requested more time. The trial judge denied the defense motion and granted the state more time. The judge also stated that he did not like the way Mr. Leu looked at him, and therefore summarily revoked his bond and ordered him into custody.

At the request of Mr. Leu and his trial counsel, I filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus in the state court of appeals. In a hearing on the petition, I argued that the court's conduct was improper and Mr. Leu's confinement unlawful. A unanimous court held that the trial judge had abused his discretion in revoking Mr. Leu's bond, reinstated the original bond, and ordered Mr. Leu's immediate release. I later challenged the trial judge's insistence on remaining as judge in Mr. Leu's case. The reviewing court ordered reassignment of the case to another judge.

6. United States v. Martinez, 3:05-cr-00781-DAK (Hon. David A. Katz, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; 2005 – 2006).

This was a large conspiracy case charging 21 defendants with conspiracy in trafficking in narcotics. I represented defendant Vargas. As with many of these cases, the government gathered nearly one hundred hours of audio recordings using wire taps and other means.

Due to budget constraints, the government provided all of the defendants with only one set of audio CDs, and the court received an estimate that it would cost $100,000 to reproduce CDs for all counsel and their clients. I suggested a less expensive alternative – I converted the first set of CDs to smaller digital files and transferred them to my iPod. I then demonstrated to the trial judge and magistrate how an iPod works and urged the court to purchase iPods as an alternative to ordering the expensive reproductions.

The court agreed and purchased six iPods, at a total cost of less than $2,000. I then transferred all of the discovery to the new iPods, which the court made available to defendants, including those in custody. The iPods proved easy to use, saved a great deal of money, and assured that the defendants could not tamper with the original digital files. My idea and the resultant cost savings were made the subject of an article and editorial in The Toledo Blade, listed in question 12(e), above. The digital players have since been made available for other cases, as well, including United States v. Amawi, listed above.

After discovery review and motion practice, my client eventually entered into a negotiated plea with the government and was sentenced accordingly.

7. United States v. Wheeler, 3:03-cr-00739-DAK (Hon. David A. Katz, United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio; 2003 – 2005).

This was a complex conspiracy case brought against 38 members of the Outlaw Motorcycle Club. In what was likely the largest conspiracy trial of its kind, 14 of the defendants were tried before a single jury. The allegations were varied and included drug conspiracy, firearms conspiracy, RICO violations, and RICO conspiracy charges. I was appointed by the court to represent lead defendant Wheeler, who was the International President of the Outlaw Motorcycle Club. The discovery consisted of nearly 400 audio CDs, plus photographs, thousands of pages of written discovery and numerous items seized from Outlaw club houses in various cities.

The trial lasted approximately three months, one of the lengthiest trials of its kind. The trial court looked to me, as counsel for the lead defendant, to help it preserve an orderly and efficient trial by coordinating the actions of seventeen defense counsel. My client was acquitted of the firearms conspiracy charge but convicted of drug conspiracy, RICO and RICO conspiracy charges. Because my client previously had been tried and convicted elsewhere on very similar federal charges, my co-counsel and I filed a double jeopardy challenge to those three charges. The trial court denied relief. I asked the court to appoint Dayton, Ohio attorney Gary Crim to represent Mr. Wheeler on appeal to the Sixth Circuit. The court of appeals reversed the trial court in part, dismissing both the RICO and RICO conspiracy charges, but affirmed his conviction on the drug conspiracy charge. United States v. Wheeler, 535 F.3d 446 (6th Cir. 2008).

8. State of Ohio v. Cook, CR98-1950; CR98-1336 (Hon. Charles Wittenberg (retired), Lucas County Common Pleas Court; 1998 – 2000).

Two brothers were charged with murder and attempted murder in one of the first cold-case prosecutions in Lucas County, Ohio. I was court-appointed counsel for one of them. Because any possible eyewitness identifications in the case were constitutionally tainted, the case turned primarily on DNA evidence. But because of the questionable reliability of the relatively new DNA testing used, I retained a nationally-known DNA expert to review the prosecution's DNA analysis. Eventually, I negotiated a plea for my client and his brother. Through the plea agreement, the State of Ohio was able to clear nine unsolved, long-cold murder cases which the state could not have likely pursued against the brothers due to lack of physical evidence. My client was already serving a life sentence for an unrelated homicide. He received additional life sentences.

9. Martin v. Walmart Stores, Inc., 95-CV-766 (Hon. Margaret Weaver (retired), Sandusky County Common Pleas Court; 1996 – 1998).

Plaintiff Martin was the personnel manager at a Walmart store in Fremont, Ohio. Over a period of months, the store manager belittled her and repeatedly made racially offensive remarks in her presence. Plaintiff finally complained to the district manager, who responded by auditing her personnel files and then demoting her. She was reassigned as a cashier, albeit at the same hourly pay rate. Eventually, the manager was fired for his misconduct. Plaintiff filed a civil action in state court, and later asked me to take over the case. I asked another attorney in my office to serve as co-counsel with me, and immediately became active in taking and defending depositions.

After completion of discovery, Walmart moved for summary judgment. The court found, as we urged, that genuine issues of fact required trial. The matter was heard by a jury, which returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. Although I was unable to participate in much of the trial itself due to an illness, I afterwards persuaded Walmart not to appeal.

10. State of Ohio v. Saunders, Case No. CR92-6976 (Hon. Ruth Ann Franks, Lucas County Common Pleas Court; 1992 – 1995).

Ms. Saunders was charged with murder in the stabbing death of her boyfriend, a former college and professional football player. Ms. Saunders did not deny stabbing the victim but argued the stabbing was in self defense. She turned herself in after the stabbing but, when police tried to question her, she invoked her right to remain silent and right to counsel. I was chief counsel at trial, having been appointed by the trial judge, and conducted much of the cross-examination and direct examination, as well as closing argument. During closing argument to the jury, the prosecutor twice attempted to impeach her credibility, arguing that she had not told the police her self-defense story after she turned herself in. The trial court sustained my objections to both attempts, finding that the prosecution's attack was an unconstitutional comment on her post-arrest silence. Nonetheless, the court denied the defendant's motion for a mistrial based on prosecutorial misconduct. Ms. Saunders was acquitted of the murder charge but was convicted of a lesser charge of manslaughter, the jury having found that she was seriously provoked before she stabbed the victim.

On appeal, I wrote the brief and argued the case. The appellate court reversed her conviction, holding that the trial court should have granted the motion for a mistrial. State v. Saunders, 98 Ohio App. 3d 355, 648 N.E.2d 587 (1994) (Judges Handwork, Resnick, and Sherck). On retrial, Ms. Saunders was again convicted of manslaughter, and was sentenced to 8 to 25 years.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

I co-founded the Maumee Valley Criminal Defense Lawyers Association in 1996 for purposes of organizing the criminal defense bar and increasing the level of professionalism in a notoriously fractious bar. This informal organization has persevered, and now has more than 80 members. We assist and support one another through occasional meetings and an email list server. We previously published a case update newsletter for defense lawyers and area judges.

Additionally, in 2002, attorney Jeff Gamso and I led an effort to encourage the Lucas County Commissioners to increase the fees for attorneys appointed to state capital murder cases. At that time, the two attorneys appointed to such cases were each paid only $50 per hour, with a total cap on fees for both lawyers of $25,000. We helped convince the Commissioners to raise fees to $90 out-of-court and $100 in-court, and raise the cap to $60,000. Lucas County went from being one of the lower paying counties in Ohio to one of the higher paying counties.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I anticipate no receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts, or other future benefits.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If I am confirmed, I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during my service with the Court. As appropriate, I hope to serve in bar association and law-related continuing education programs.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

It is possible that conflicts of interest could arise in cases involving my former clients, in particular the criminal defendants I have represented. In such a case, I would follow the federal recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If I were to be confirmed, I would follow the federal recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. If any issue of a potential conflict were to arise, I would seek advice from the Code of Conduct Committee of the Judicial Conference. In cases of uncertainty, I would err on the side of recusal.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I regularly volunteer my time to clients who cannot afford to hire counsel. I also work actively through the Maumee Valley Criminal Defense Lawyers Association to assist other lawyers with challenges in the trial and appellate courts. My volunteer work includes mentoring young lawyers by serving as co-counsel if needed, as well as offering suggestions on motions, briefs and other filings. I also often provide samples of work to other counsel. I would estimate I devote between one hundred and two hundred hours a year to such work.

Recently, I provided pro bono representation to a young man charged in federal court for multiple bank robberies in the Northern and Southern Districts of Ohio. I was able to resolve all of the cases here in the Northern District. Although I was initially appointed under the Criminal Justice Act, I chose not to submit a bill. I devoted approximately 30 to 40 hours to the case.

For twenty years, much of my practice has consisted of accepting appointments by judges in state and federal courts to represent indigent defendants at sub-market rates. For example, the hourly appointed rate for representation of defendants in Lucas County Common Pleas Court has been between $40 and $50 per hour. This was true even for capital murder cases until about 2002, when the rate was raised to $90 to $100 per hour.

I served as a trustee of the Pemberville Boys Ranch, which provided a comfortable environment for troubled young men who needed a home.

In addition, I served as a board member for approximately ten years, and as board president, of David's House Compassion, Inc., a Northwest Ohio organization dedicated to providing housing, medical treatment and social services support to men, women and children living with HIV/AIDS.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

I telephoned Senator Sherrod Brown's Cleveland office in April 2010, to inquire about the selection process for this seat and to express my interest in applying. In early May, I received notification by e-mail of the availability of the application for the position from Senator Brown's web site. I submitted my application to Senator Brown's Cincinnati office on June 4, 2010.

My jurisdiction has a 17-member bipartisan selection commission whose members were selected by Senator Brown and now-retired Senator Voinovich. Nancy Rogers, the chair of the commission, sent me a letter dated June 14, 2010, acknowledging receipt of my application, and another letter, dated June 28, 2010, asking whether I would like to be interviewed by the commission and suggesting a date and time.

On July 22, 2010, I interviewed with all 17 members of the Commission in Columbus, Ohio. On July 26, 2010, I received a telephone call from a staffer in Senator Brown's office informing me I had been selected by the Commission as one of three finalists for the Senators' recommendation and that I would have an interview with Senator Brown. I met with Senator Brown in his Cleveland office on August 17, 2010. The following week, I received a telephone call from Senator Brown informing me that he and Senator Voinovich were recommending me to the President for nomination.

Since late August 2010, I have been in contact with pre-nomination officials at the Department of Justice. On October 29, 2010, I met with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington. On May 11, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

STATEMENT OF MARY GEIGER LEWIS, NOMINEE TO BE U.S.
DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Ms. LEWIS. I'd like to thank you, Mr. Chairman and Ranking Member Grassley, for allowing me to appear here today.

I'd like, also, to thank President Obama for the great honor of my nomination, and to Congressman Clyburn for his words today and his recommendation of me to the President.

I would also like to thank, of course, Senator Graham for his very kind and generous words of introduction.

I have no opening statement, but I would like to introduce the friends and family that I have with me here today.

I have my husband, Cam. I have my law partner, Keith Babcock; my dear friend from Upstate New York, Cricket Scullin. And I'm sorry that Jean Toal, our chief justice, was not able to be here.

I'd also like to acknowledge our children, our son, Will, and our daughter, Wallis, who are watching, I hope, via Webcast; our daughter, Amy, and her family; my mother, Wallis, I know she's also watching.

Thank you again for this opportunity, and I look forward to answering your questions.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Ms. Lewis.

And last, we turn to Judge Hillman.

I was, however, a member of Young Democrats while I attended Clemson University from 1977 to 1980. My membership in that organization entailed completing errands and providing minor logistical support for events held in the area.

In November of 1998, I was appointed by South Carolina Governor-Elect James H. Hodges to serve as a member of his transition team. I worked on the team's Subcommittee on Law Enforcement and participated in the preparation of its report to the Governor-Elect, which is provided in response to Question 12b.

1985 – Present
1513 Hampton Street
Columbia, South Carolina 29201
Associate (1985 – 1987)
Partner (1987 – present)

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have never served as a mediator or an arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

After completing my judicial clerkship in 1985, I joined my current firm (which at that time was known as Lewis, Babcock, Gregory & Pleicones) as an associate and became a partner in 1987.

I have actively practiced law with Lewis & Babcock, L.L.P., as it is now known, for more than 25 years. The small size of our firm required me, even as a new associate, to become quickly involved in all aspects of the civil litigation process. As a young attorney, I drafted pleadings, deposed witnesses, prepared and responded to discovery requests, drafted motions and supporting memoranda, prepared cases for trial, tried cases, wrote appellate briefs, and presented oral arguments to appellate courts. One of the first matters I ever worked on went to the Supreme Court of the United States.

As I continued to gain knowledge and experience in litigation, I assumed responsibility for increasingly complex matters, such as product liability cases, class action cases, and healthcare litigation.

My experience is not only varied in the types of cases I have litigated, but also the clients I have represented. I represent plaintiffs and defendants. I have represented individuals in suits against large corporations and have defended multi-national corporations against such suits. In addition, although civil litigation is our focus, my firm is also frequently called upon to provide guidance to other lawyers and judges in a host of other matters, including attorney and judicial grievance procedures.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

My typical client includes individuals, victims of professional negligence, lawyers and others in need of defense against negligence claims, building owners, landowners, businesses with contractual disputes, qui tam defendants, class action plaintiffs, class action defendants, lawyers, and members of our state judiciary.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

The matters I have handled during my nearly 25 years of practice have been almost entirely litigation related, and virtually all required me to appear in court. Some matters required me to appear occasionally and others required me to appear frequently. Many of the matters I have handled included numerous motions, which required my appearance at their hearings. Also, the cases that have gone to trial have required my appearance for several days or weeks. Last year, my cases required me to appear in court approximately 30 days, which is fairly typical.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. federal courts: 40%
- 2. state courts of record: 50%
- 3. other courts: 10%
- 4. administrative agencies: 0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. civil proceedings: 100%
- 2. criminal proceedings: 0%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment, or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

My firm has handled three matters before the Supreme Court of the United States in which I had varying degrees of involvement. I did not present the oral argument in any of these appeals, but I was a member of the appellate team and did contribute to the briefs and preparations for oral argument.

1. City of Columbia v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc., 499 U.S. 365 (1991). I contributed to the Opposition to the City's Petition for Certiorari, the Appellee's brief on the merits, and the preparations for the oral argument. Copies of the briefs supplied.
2. Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003 (1992). I contributed to the Petition for Certiorari and the Petitioner's Brief and Reply Brief on the merits, and prepared my senior partner for the oral argument. Copies of the briefs supplied.
3. Hammond v. Butler, Means, Evins & Brown, 300 S.C. 458, 388 S.E.2d 796 (1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 952 (1990). I was the principal author of the brief opposing the Petition for Writ of Certiorari. I have been unable to locate a copy of this brief.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. Florida Evergreen Foliage v. E.I. duPont de Nemours & Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1345 (S.D. Fla. 2001).

This case was one of a group of cases litigated in federal courts in Florida and Hawaii in which I participated as a member of the litigation team on behalf of the plaintiffs. These cases centered on claims against DuPont alleging that it fraudulently withheld scientific data and information in discovery in order to induce the plaintiffs to sign settlement agreements. Certified questions to both the Delaware Supreme Court and the Hawaii Supreme Court were involved. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Florida Evergreen Foliage, 744 A.2d 457 (Del. 1999); Matsuura v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 73 P.3d 687 (Haw. 2003). Both State Supreme Courts allowed a cause of action for fraudulent concealment to proceed in spite of the existence of releases.

The Hawaii cases were allowed to proceed to a jury. Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 431 F.3d 353 (9th Cir. 2005); Matsuura v. Alston & Bird, 166 F.3d 1006 (9th Cir. 1999); Matsuura v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 330 F. Supp. 2d 1101 (D. Haw. 2004). These cases were settled satisfactorily on the eve of trial. The Florida cases were dismissed upon the pleadings based, inter alia, on a very broad grant of immunity in civil damage suits for the conduct of the parties, witnesses, and lawyers. Green Leaf Nursery v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 341 F.3d 1292 (11th Cir. 2003).

I participated in every facet of discovery, discovery motions, pretrial motions, and dispositive motions. Among other things, I addressed conflict of laws and was involved with the application of countless rules of federal procedure.

- a. My representation began in 2001 and ended in 2007.
- b. Florida Evergreen Foliage v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., 165 F. Supp. 2d 1345 (S.D. Fla. 2001); District Court Judge Alan S. Gold

E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. v. Florida Evergreen Foliage, 744 A.2d 457 (Del. 1999); Delaware Supreme Court Justices Randy J. Holland, Joseph T. Walsh, and Carolyn Berger

Matsuura v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 73 P.3d 687 (Haw. 2003); Hawaii Supreme Court Justices Ronald T. Moon, Steven H. Levinson, Paula A. Nakayama, Mario R. Ramil, and Siemon R. Acoba, Jr.

Matsuura v. Alston & Bird, 166 F.3d 1006 (9th Cir. 1999); Circuit Judges James R. Browning, Alfred Goodwin, and Mary M. Schroeder

Matsuura v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 330 F. Supp. 2d 1101 (D. Haw. 2004); District Judge Manuel L. Real

Living Designs, Inc. v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 431 F.3d 353 (9th Cir. 2005); Circuit Judges Sidney Runyan Thomas, Barry G. Silverman, and Richard R. Clifton

Green Leaf Nursery v. E.I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 341 F.3d 1292 (11th Cir. 2003); Circuit Judges Stanley F. Birch, Joel F. Dubina, and Phyllis A. Kravitch

2. Hammond v. Butler, Means, Evins & Brown, 300 S.C. 458, 388 S.E.2d 796 (1990), cert. denied, Kramer v. Hammond, 498 U.S. 952 (1990).

Our firm brought this malpractice action on behalf of the plaintiff, a urologist, against his former South Carolina law firm and a New York attorney (Kramer). The plaintiff controlled over 70% of the stock in a company he formed that owned the patent rights to a medical device known as a lithotripter. The Complaint essentially alleged that plaintiff's interest was diminished to less than 10% as a result of the improper actions of the defendant lawyers. It contained several causes of action, including fraud, negligence, conspiracy, and breach of fiduciary duty. Defendant Kramer moved to dismiss the Complaint for lack of personal jurisdiction. The trial judge denied the motion, holding there was jurisdiction over Kramer under the South Carolina long-arm statute. Kramer appealed, and the South Carolina Supreme Court affirmed. His Petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for a Writ of Certiorari was denied. I was the principal author of the brief opposing the Petition for Writ of Certiorari.

I personally handled the vast majority of the discovery involved in this case. Through the depositions of several of the defendant lawyers and the use of requests for documents and interrogatories, I developed the facts that ultimately allowed for a very satisfactory resolution of the case.

- a. My representation of the plaintiff began in 1986 and ended in approximately 1992.
 - b. The case was brought in South Carolina State Court in the Spartanburg County Court of Common Pleas. The Honorable William H. Ballenger denied the Motion to Dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction. The Honorable Thomas L. Hughston also heard motions in the case.

3. University of South Carolina v. U.S. Gypsum, Richland County, Court of Common Pleas, Civil Action No. 85-CP-40-3789.
- My firm served as co-counsel in this product liability action commenced by the University of South Carolina against several manufacturers of asbestos-containing construction materials. Recovery was sought for the cost of removing those materials from over 100 buildings on the University's campus. As formulas were available that allowed for the specific identification of the manufacturer and approximate date of application of the construction material, liability was not the focus of the discovery. Rather, the focus was on the amount of asbestos material that would be removed and the cost of its removal, as well as the primary defense raised by the manufacturers – the statute of limitations. I focused on the facts and law relating to this defense and personally handled the discovery, including the control and production of over two million documents, and the numerous depositions that developed the facts that allowed us to defeat the defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment and ultimately allowed for an extremely satisfactory settlement of the litigation.
- a. Our representation of the Plaintiff began in 1985 and ended in 1990.
 - b. This action was filed in South Carolina State Court in the Richland County Court of Common Pleas. The Honorable John Hamilton Smith, Sr. (now retired) presided over the litigation.

4. Kingdom of Lesotho v. Planning Research Corp., United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Case No. 1:86-cv-00839-TFH.

My firm was hired by the African Kingdom of Lesotho to bring a claim for cost overruns against Planning Research Corporation (an American engineering firm) and the construction firm involved in the construction of a road through the country's mountainous terrain. Before construction of the road, it was impossible to cross from one side of Lesotho to the other without entering South Africa. The road was finally completed, but because of the engineering firm's reliance on faulty topographical data, the cost overruns were enormous. As venue was appropriate in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, we associated local counsel in Washington, D.C. to assist us. I handled much of the discovery, pretrial matters, and trial preparation the case involved. The case was settled shortly before jury selection.

- 5. Johnson v. Collins Entm't, Inc., United States District Court for the District of South Carolina, Civil Action Nos. 98-2225, 99-1601, 99-1709; 204 F.3d 573 (4th Cir. 2000).

In this multi-party suit, plaintiffs sought certification of a plaintiff class on one side, comprising every person who had played video poker in South Carolina, and a defendant class on the other, comprising every person who had owned and operated video poker machines in the state. Plaintiffs' complaint, as amended, asserted civil RICO claims and claims for declaratory and injunctive relief, among others. My law firm and Nelson Mullins Riley & Scarborough, LLP, were co-counsel to a group of approximately 30 corporate and individual defendants named in the action. I worked on all aspects of this complex case, including discovery, legal strategy, and motions during the approximately five years in which our clients were involved in the litigation. Discovery was expansive and complex, including many parties' and experts' depositions as well as written and document discovery. Marked by a very active motions practice, the case produced over 150 orders and one reported decision from the federal district court, an appeal to the Fourth Circuit (including a petition for rehearing en banc), and two instances in which the district court certified questions to the South Carolina Supreme Court. Reported decisions in the case include: Johnson v. Collins Entm't Co., Inc., 88 F. Supp. 2d 499 (D.S.C. 1999) (granting partial summary judgment to plaintiffs on their claims for declaratory and injunctive relief); Johnson v. Collins Entm't Co., Inc., 199 F.3d 710 (4th Cir. 1999) (reversing district court order granting partial summary judgment to plaintiffs); Johnson v. Collins Entm't Co., Inc., 204 F.3d 573 (4th Cir. 2000) (denying petition for rehearing en banc); Johnson v. Collins Entm't Co., Inc., 333 S.C. 96, 508 S.E.2d 575 (1998) (answering in the negative certified questions related to whether video gaming machines fell within the definition of a lottery under state law); Johnson v. Collins Entm't Co., Inc., 349 S.C. 613, 564 S.E.2d 653 (2002) (answering seven certified questions of state law).

- a. Our representation of the Defendants began in 1997 and ended in 2002.

6. United States ex rel. Drakeford v. Tuomey Healthcare Sys., Inc., United States District Court for the District of South Carolina, Civil Action No. 3:05-cv-2858-MJP.

This qui tam action, in which the United States intervened, is significant in a number of respects. It is the first case where the Government proceeded against a hospital under the False Claims Act (“FCA”) based solely on the theory that employment contracts between the hospital’s subsidiaries and physicians on its medical staff violated the Ethics in Patient referrals law, 42 U.S.C. § 1395nn, also known as the “Stark Law.” It is also one of the few FCA cases against a hospital – and the only one based on the Stark Law – that was fully tried before a jury. After a nearly four-week trial, the jury reached a verdict that our client, Tuomey, did not violate the FCA, but the trial judge subsequently entered judgment in favor of the Government on its equitable claims. That judgment is currently on appeal to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, and presents a number of interesting procedural issues, such as the scope of the Stark Law and the extent to which the Government can pursue equitable claims when it has an adequate remedy at law under the FCA. My co-counsel and I were responsible for defending countless depositions; drafting numerous discovery requests and responses, dispositive and pretrial motions, responses and supporting memoranda; preparing for and arguing motions; participating in every strategy decision; and significantly participating in an elaborate, albeit unsuccessful, mediation process. I was also a member of the trial team that presented the witnesses and evidence in a nearly month-long trial that resulted in a defense verdict by the jury.

- a. My representation of Tuomey Healthcare Systems, Inc., began in 2007 and continues today.
- b. The case was brought in the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina. The Honorable Matthew J. Perry, Jr. presided over the litigation.

7. Norwest Fin. Res., Inc., v. Policy Fin. Co., Richland County Court of Common Pleas, Civil Action No. 97-CP-40-4111.

I was lead counsel for two of the defendants in this case, Policy Finance Company and Seibels Bruce & Company. The suit included claims for breach of an asset purchase agreement, rescission, restitution, and unjust enrichment. In addition to standard denials, my answer contained a counterclaim for breach of contract and a cross-claim for indemnification against the other defendants.

My clients had been in the insurance business in South Carolina for over a hundred years. The company has operated through various structures and through several wholly-owned subsidiaries, one being Premium Service Corporation (PSC), which offered premium financing for certain commercial policies and operated successfully for several years. PSC entered into an agreement to sell virtually all of its assets, including its accounts receivables, to the Plaintiff Norwest Financial Resources, Inc. (Norwest). Approximately three years after the purchase, Norwest employees discovered that an agent for Defendant Security of Hartford (with whom PSC had conducted business before the sale and with whom Norwest continued to conduct business for several years after the sale) had engaged in a fraudulent scheme in which he applied for and obtained premium financing from PSC/Norwest on behalf of insureds that either did not exist or who existed but had not been issued policies.

I personally handled the ensuing litigation for more than three years. The case involved numerous depositions and several motions over discovery issues. The parties agreed to mediate, and they reached a fair settlement of the case.

- a. My representation of Seibels Bruce & Company and Policy Finance Company in this matter began in 1997 and ended in 2000.

- 8. Constant v. Spartanburg Steel Prods., Inc., 316 S.C. 86, 447 S.E.2d 194 (1994).

I was asked by trial counsel for the plaintiff to handle the defendant's appeal of the plaintiff's jury verdict for defamation. My client was an employee of Spartanburg Steel who was accused of theft by his employer. He sued his employer for defamation after learning that a machine that he was accused of stealing was not missing. The jury awarded the plaintiff $400,000 in actual damages and $100,000 in punitive damages. The defendant appealed, raising the excessiveness of the verdict as well as several evidentiary errors, including the admission of statements it asserted were protected by a qualified privilege. I was the primary author of the respondent's brief. The verdict was affirmed by the South Carolina Supreme Court.

- a. My representation of the plaintiff/respondent began in 1993 and ended in 1994.
- b. The appeal was filed in the South Carolina Supreme Court. The Justices that heard the appeal were Chief Justice David Harwell, Justice Lee Chandler, Justice Ernest Finney, Justice Jean Toal, and Justice James Moore.

9. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. v. W.R. Grace & Co.-Conn., United States District Court for the District of South Carolina, Civil Action No. 3:91-1285-21.

I was principal counsel for the plaintiff, Southern Bell, in this product liability action. The case was brought against W. R. Grace & Co.-Conn., the manufacturer of the asbestos-containing fireproofing material that was used in the construction of the Southern Bell's headquarters in Columbia, South Carolina. The action sought recovery for the removal of this material.

It involved years of very extensive and aggressive discovery, which I personally handled. The case required control and production of an enormous amount of documents and included a long list of witnesses, virtually all of whom were deposed. At the close of discovery, the defendant moved for summary judgment. After the motion was denied, the case was settled.

- a. My representation of Southern Bell in this matter began in approximately 1990 and ended in 1992.

10. Collins Entertainment Corp. v. Drews Distributing, Inc., United States District Court for the District of South Carolina, Civil Action No. 6:96-3398-13.

I represented the defendant Drews Distributing, Inc., a distributor of video poker machines, in a breach of contract action against Collins Entertainment. The damages claimed were substantial, and there was an aggressive prosecution of claims for breach of contract and tortious interference with contract. Discovery was extensive, and it included the production of documents and deposition of witnesses, both lay and expert. I personally handled all of the discovery and tried the case with my senior partner. The court directed a verdict in favor of our client. That verdict was appealed to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, and we handled the appeal. The Fourth Circuit affirmed in an unpublished decision at 173 F.3d 849 (4th Cir. 1999).

We also tried a related case, Drews Distributing, Inc. v. Leisure Time Technologies, Inc., Civil Action No. 7:96-3307-13 (D.S.C. 1997), in which our client received an award of damages in excess of $3,000,000. We handled the appeal of that award, and I was the primary author of the appellee's brief. The Fourth Circuit affirmed the award. Drews Distrib., Inc. v. Leisure Time Techs., Inc., 175 F.3d 1014 (4th Cir. 1999) (unpublished).

- a. My representation of the Drews Distributing, Inc. began in approximately 1997 and ended in 1999.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Virtually all of my legal activities have been litigation related; however, most cases do not progress to actual trial. Some of the more significant matters that I have pursued that fall into this category include class actions on behalf of consumers and taxpayers, insurance coverage litigation, medical negligence litigation, legal and accounting negligence litigation, construction litigation, and commercial contract litigation. A considerable amount of my time is spent counseling clients about solutions to the problems they face and whether the facts and laws applicable to their situations make litigation appropriate. Often the decision is to forego litigation altogether. These decisions require the ability to identify the real matters at issue, provide solutions to those issues, and conduct the cost/benefit analysis associated with this process. For a period of several years I served as the initial evaluator of potential lawsuits that our firm was asked to consider handling. I reviewed the facts and performed a legal analysis upon which the firm's decision to accept or reject a case was based.

When the decision is made to proceed with litigation, or when defending a client in litigation, my objective evaluation of the merits of each side in a case more often than not allows the parties to reach a reasonable settlement of the case. Often with the assistance of a professional mediator, I have been able to resolve many very complex multi-party cases before trial.

I have also served as a commissioner of South Carolina Educational Television, as a member of the South Carolina Film Industry Task Force, and as a member of the Transition Team for newly-elected South Carolina Governor, James H. Hodges, where I served on the Subcommittee on Law Enforcement.

I have not participated in any lobbying activities.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I do not have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment with or without compensation during my service with the court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement..

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

The only potential conflict of interest that I anticipate at this point would be any matter involving one or more of my law partners. I will handle all matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest through the careful and diligent application of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges as well as other relevant canons and statutory provisions. Whenever necessary to ensure impartiality or to avoid the appearance of partiality, I would disclose ties to litigants and recuse myself as appropriate.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I will handle all matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest through the careful and diligent application of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges as well as other relevant canons and statutory provisions. Whenever necessary to ensure impartiality or to avoid the appearance of partiality, I would disclose ties to litigants and recuse myself as appropriate.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Throughout my more than 25 years of legal practice, I have devoted significant time and effort providing legal advice and representation to individuals who were unable to pay for my services.

Over the years, I have been appointed numerous times by our State Courts to represent parents, children, guardians ad litem, and others in actions brought by our State Department of Social Services. These actions included those for termination of parental rights, child support and custody. With only one exception, I have never sought compensation for my services and have willingly devoted countless hours counseling these clients, preparing for and making court appearances on their behalf.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

There is no selection commission in my jurisdiction. In December of 2008, I traveled to Washington, D.C. and met briefly with Congressmen James E. Clyburn and John M. Spratt, Jr. At the time there were several vacancies on our federal district court bench. I expressed my interest in the vacancies to each of them in separate meetings.

I received a letter dated June 8, 2009, from Representatives Clyburn and Spratt informing me that they had provided my name, along with others, to the White House for consideration.

Since November 8, 2010, I have been in contact with pre-nomination officials at the Department of Justice. On December 22, 2010, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On March 16, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

STATEMENT OF JUDGE TIMOTHY HILLMAN, NOMINEE TO BE
U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

Judge HILLMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Ranking Member Grassley, for the opportunity to appear before this Committee.

I, too, would like to thank President Obama and Senators Kerry and Brown for recommending and nominating me.

I am proud to be able to introduce my wife, Kay, who is attending with me. Kay is a high school Spanish teacher who has taken valuable time away from her students to be with me today, which I very much appreciate.

I would like to thank and say hello to my three adult children who I believe are watching on the Web, my son, Zack, our daughter, Molly, and our son, Patrick.

Also, I just want to give a special shout out to my dad, Buzz. He's a 90-year-old World War II Naval veteran of the Pacific theater, and he is, I think, either watching on the Web or cursing whoever invented computers.

[Laughter.]

Senator COONS. Did you have an opening statement?

Judge HILLMAN. I do not. Thank you, Senator.

[The biographical information follows.]

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

From 1991 to 1995, I was an Associate Justice of the Gardner District Court (appointed). As a District Court judge, I handled criminal misdemeanor and felony probable cause hearings. I also had a full civil docket.

From 1995 to 1997, I was the Presiding Justice of the Gardner District Court (appointed).

From 1997 to 1998, I was the Presiding Justice of the Worcester Central District Court (appointed). Upon my appointment, Worcester District Court handled 12,000 cases per year making this court the busiest of the state's 60 District Court divisions.

From 1998 to 2006, I was a Judge of the Massachusetts Superior Court (appointed). A Superior Court Judge has jurisdiction over criminal felony cases and all civil filings with a claim for damages over $25,000. As a Superior Court Justice, I tried 40 to 50 civil and criminal cases per year.

From 2006 to present, I have been a United States Magistrate Judge for the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Worcester Division (appointed). As a Magistrate Judge, I manage and try civil cases with the consent of the parties (jury and non-jury), and am responsible for the initiation and management of criminal felonies, not including trial, and all aspects of criminal misdemeanors.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

My best estimate is that I have tried between 1300 to 1500 cases in my years as a trial judge.

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	40%
bench trials:	60%
civil proceedings:	40%
criminal proceedings:	60%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

See attached list.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

1. Commonwealth v. Morgan, Docket No. 99-2506, Hampden Superior Court

This was a two week first degree murder trial that took place in November 2002. The victim was kidnapped and executed by the Defendant for allegedly robbing the Defendant's drug "stash." The Defendant made a series of inculpatory statements to third parties that were admitted at trial. I presided over the trial and heard and ruled on Defendant's Motion for a New Trial. The case was affirmed by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and reported at Commonwealth v. Morgan, 449 Mass. 343 (2007). Opinion supplied.

Counsel:

For the Commonwealth: Calvin Carr, Esq., Hamden County District Attorney's Office, 50 State Street, Springfield, MA 01102; 413-747-1000

For the Defendant: Linda Thompson, Esq., Thompson & Thompson, PCC, 1331 Main Street, Springfield, MA 01103; 413-739-2100

2. Commonwealth v. Laguer, Docket No. 83-103391, Worcester Superior Court

The Defendant was convicted in 1983 for brutally raping his next door neighbor. Her testimony at trial, the clothing that she was wearing, and a pair of socks were the only connections between the Defendant and the crime scene. Between 1983 and 2001 his conviction was affirmed by the Massachusetts Appeals Court and Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court. I presided over the Defendant's Motion for DNA Testing filed in 2001. It took over 15 months to establish a testing protocol and the resulting Order has become a template for a contested DNA testing. After the testing was completed, I ruled on the Defendant's Motion for a New Trial. The denial of that motion was affirmed by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and reported at Commonwealth v. Laguer, 448 Mass. 585 (2007). Opinion supplied.

Counsel:

For the Commonwealth: Sandra L. Hautanen, Esq., District Attorney's Office, 2 Main Street, Worcester, MA 01608; 508-755-8601

For the Defendant: David M. Siegel, Esq. (DNA Testing Only), New England School of Law, 154 Stuart Street, Boston, MA 02116; 617-422-7270

For the Defendant: James C. Rehnquist, Esq., (Motion for a New Trial only) Goodwin & Proctor LLP, Exchange Place, Boston, MA 02109; 617-570-1000

3. Gath v. M/A-COM, Inc., Docket No. 98-6221, Middlesex Superior Court

The Plaintiff was seriously injured when knocked off of his bicycle by an unsecured metal gate at the Defendant's premises. Shortly after the accident, the Defendants destroyed the gate. This was a two week civil trial with a jury verdict for the Plaintiff in the amount of $14,250,000. I was the trial judge and heard the Motion for New Trial, which I denied. The verdict was affirmed by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and reported at Gath v. M/A-Com, Inc., 440 Mass. 482 (2003). This is a leading Massachusetts case on spoliation of evidence and improper closing argument. Opinion supplied.

This was the "Worcester Fire Case" where six firefighters died fighting a fire in a cold-storage warehouse. The Defendants were two mentally challenged homeless adults who were charged with manslaughter for their role in starting, but not reporting the fire. I allowed the Defendants' Motion to Dismiss which was based upon the insufficiency of evidence before the Grand Jury. My decision was overturned by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and reported at Commonwealth v. Levesque, 436 Mass. 443 (2002). Thereafter, the case was continued without a plea or finding with the assent of the District Attorney's office. This case set the standard for establishing criminal liability for failing to report a dangerous condition. Opinion supplied.

This was a first degree murder trial that took place in September of 2005. The Defendant broke into his neighbors' apartment and bludgeoned her to death with a baseball bat. There was considerable forensic evidence and a contested confession. I presided over the trial and ruled on the Defendant's Motion to Suppress his confession, which I denied. I was the trial judge in this drug trafficking case. I also denied the Defendant's Motion to Suppress, which ruling was affirmed by the Massachusetts Appeals Court and reported at Commonwealth v. Feynard, 62 Mass. App. Ct. 200, and by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and reported at Commonwealth v. Feynard, 445 Mass. 72 (2004). The Defendant was stopped for a motor vehicle offense and the police officer became suspicious because of the Defendant's evasive answers. The Defendant was ordered to remain at roadside until a drug sniffing dog could be delivered to the scene. That dog detected the odor of drugs from the car and the police searched, and found, a large amount of drugs inside of the car. The issue on appeal was whether the police could detain the Defendant while the dog was brought to the scene and whether there is an expectation of privacy in the odors coming from a vehicle. Opinion supplied.

The 15-year-old Defendant stabbed the victim to death over gang related issues. The Defendant moved to suppress his confession and physical evidence. MacDonald v. Paton, 57 Mass. App. Ct. 290 (2003)

The Town of Athol Selectman had brought a defamation action against the operator of a web site, newspaper, and others alleging that the web site had characterized him as a nazi. The web site operator brought a Motion to Dismiss, which I denied. That denial was reversed by the Massachusetts Appeals Court.

Commonwealth v. Desrosier, 56 Mass. App. Ct. 348 (2002)

The Defendant pled guilty to second degree murder before another judge and moved to withdraw his plea. I granted the motion on the grounds that the record did not support that his plea was made freely and voluntarily. The granting of that motion was reversed.

Commonwealth v. Levesque, 436 Mass. 443 (2003)

The Defendants were two mentally challenged homeless adults who were charged with manslaughter for their role in starting, but not reporting a fatal fire. I allowed the Defendants' Motion to Dismiss, which was based upon the insufficiency of evidence before the Grand Jury. My decision (supplied in response to Question 13c) was overturned by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

Commonwealth v. Kwiatkowski, 418 Mass. 543 (1994)

After a trial before me, the Defendant was convicted of stalking and violation of a domestic restraining order. The Massachusetts Supreme Court reversed the conviction ruling that the statute was unconstitutionally vague.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

Most of my opinions are unpublished. During my time in the Massachusetts Trial Court, I wrote several hundred opinions. Only a very small percentage of those opinions were published. Since my appointment as a Magistrate Judge in 2006, I have written over 300 opinions; only a handful has been published. The unpublished opinions are docketed by the clerk's office and I have electronic copies.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Commonwealth v. Sliech-Brodeur, 457 Mass. 300 (2010). My opinion is found in Hampden County Superior Court docket 04-1164 and is supplied.

Commonwealth v. Boyarsky, 452 Mass. 700 (2008). My opinion is found in Worcester Superior Court docket 03-555 and is supplied in response to 13(c).

Commonwealth v. Laguer, 448 Mass. 585 (2007). My opinion is found in Worcester County Superior Court docket 83-103391 and is supplied in response to 13(c).

Commonwealth v. Feynard, 445 Mass. 72 (2005). My opinion is found in Worcester County Superior Court docket 00-0463 and is supplied in response to 13(c).

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

I assess recusal in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 455 (2006). The Massachusetts District Court does not have an automatic recusal system. We do have a Conflict Checking Feature in our CM/ECF (our case management system) which alerts me if I have a potential conflict with someone or some entity that is a party in a newly filed case assigned to me.

During my time in the Massachusetts Trial Court I assessed recusal in accordance with Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Rule 3:09 (The Code of Judicial Conduct).

I recused sua sponte in the following cases:

Mulvey v. Judge Timothy S. Hillman, et al., Civil Action No. 08-40022, United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Worcester Division. The Plaintiff was a criminal defendant who sued me seeking civil relief while the criminal case was still pending before me. The civil case was drawn to me randomly. The court clerk's office entered an Order of Recusal on my order and the civil case was redrawn to another judge.

Castillo v. O'Brien, Civil Action No. 05-40040, United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Worcester Division. This case was referred to me by District Judge Saylor for a Report and Recommendation on Mr. Castillo's petition for a Writ of Habeas Corpus. Mr. Castillo had been convicted in a state criminal proceeding. As I began researching the case, I discovered that I had ruled on a number of motions in the case during my tenure as a State Superior Court Judge. I entered an Order of Recusal setting forth the above grounds as reason for recusal and had that order docketed in the case.

Commonwealth v. Laguer, Docket No. 83-103391, Worcester Superior Court. I did not recuse myself in the case of Commonwealth v. Laguer. Early in the proceedings, the Government advised that the victim's daughter consulted my law firm, but did not hire us, to help probate her father's estate. I did not feel that a conflict existed but did conduct a thorough colloquy on the record with both the Assistant District Attorney in charge of the case and the Defendant.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I did not so serve while in private practice.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

My law practice was a general practice with a concentration on municipal law and civil and criminal trials. From 1975 to 1977, I was an Assistant District Attorney and was permitted to have a limited private practice. My law practice centered around drafting wills, representing clients in real estate transactions, and representing plaintiffs in motor torts. After I left the D.A.'s office in 1977 and until 1988 I represented criminal defendants and my private practice was expanded to include the representation of the municipalities listed above. As town counsel or city solicitor I represented the municipalities in court, gave legal advice to their boards and elected officials, and drafted and reviewed legal documents.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

While serving as an Assistant District Attorney, I prosecuted criminal cases in Worcester County. After leaving the D.A.'s office in 1977, I represented criminal defendants and plaintiffs in tort cases. In 1977, I became the City Solicitor for the City of Fitchburg. Thereafter, my practice slowly became more focused on municipal law, and eventually my typical clients were municipalities. Within the municipal law specialty, I developed an expertise in representing cities and towns on trial matters. In addition, I continued to represent criminal defendants and plaintiffs in tort cases.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My practice was primarily devoted to litigation. I was frequently in court.

i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 10% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 75% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 15% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 65% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 35% |

d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I estimate that I tried 300 to 400 cases to verdict, judgment or final decision. I was chief counsel in all cases.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 1. jury: | 35% |
| 2. non-jury: | 65% |

e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

I have tried to answer this question as accurately as possible, but because of the passage of time since I was in private practice, I have been unable to compile a complete list or to access the records of some of these cases.

1. Rushia v. Town of Ashburnham, Docket No. 82-1628, United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Honorable Walter J. Skinner (deceased); aff'd, 701 F.2d 7 (1st Cir. 1983)

I was trial and appellate counsel for the Town of Ashburnham in 1982. The town passed a by-law (the Public Display to Minors By-law) seeking to keep allegedly pornographic magazines off of the shelves of the towns stores, but still available for sale. The Plaintiff sued the town seeking declaratory and injunctive relief, alleging that by-law was unconstitutional. After trial, judgment for Defendant was affirmed by the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

For the Plaintiff: Darragh K. Kasakoff, Attorney at Law, 339 Main Street, Worcester, MA 01608; 508-757-7721

2. Commonwealth v. Thompson, Docket No. 88-1343, Gardner District Court/Fitchburg District Court, Honorable Martha Brennan

The Defendant drove a car that was involved in a fatal accident when he unsuccessfully tried to pass a car on a state highway. I defended Mr. Thompson at trial on charges of vehicular homicide in 1989-1990. He was found not guilty of vehicular homicide. There were significant forensic and engineering/accident reconstruction issues at trial.

3. Anderson, Administratrix v. Blanchette, et al., Docket No. 82-2647, United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Honorable Mark Wolf

I was trial counsel for the Defendant City of Fitchburg in this case. The Plaintiff's estate sued the city seeking damages for his death from a police shooting during a breaking and entering into the Fitchburg Art Museum. The case was tried for approximately seven days before being settled. The Plaintiff and another had broken into the Fitchburg Art Museum after hours and had tripped the alarm. The police responded, and during a search of the building surprised the Plaintiff who made a sudden movement. That movement caused the police to shoot him fatally.

Counsel:

For the Plaintiff: David Casey, Attorney at Law, One International Place, Boston, MA 02110; 617-921-8257

For the Defendant: Chief Francis Roddy, Austin Joyce, Attorney at Law, Reardon Joyce, & Ackerson, PC, 4 Lancaster Terrace, Worcester, MA 01609; 508-754-7285

4. Moss v. Wyman et al., Docket No. WOCV 1988-2630, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Worcester Superior Court, Honorable Daniel Ford

I was counsel for the Plaintiff who sued the Town of Barre's Zoning Board of Appeals after denial of his request for a variance/special permit under the town's Zoning By-law. The Plaintiff had lived in a trailer in the town of Barre, Massachusetts for over 25 years. The town felt that use was not permitted under the Zoning By-law and began enforcement proceedings. The Plaintiff sought a variance from the by-law which was denied by the Zoning Board of Appeals. I represented the Plaintiff before the Board and filed an appeal of the denial to the Worcester Superior Court. The denial was overturned by Superior Court Judge Daniel Ford. This case was tried in 1989.

Counsel:

For the Defendant: Town of Barre Zoning Board of Appeals, Honorable Charles B. Swartwood, c/o JAMS, One Beacon Street, Boston, MA 02108; 617-565-4662

5. United States v. Savolis, Docket No. 5:81CR49, United States District Court for the District of Vermont, Rutland Division, Honorable James Holden (deceased)

I was counsel for Defendant Savolis, who was charged with conspiracy to import and distribute marijuana into Vermont from Columbia, South America. He was alleged to have procured marijuana in Columbia and organized its importation via airplane into the United States. I represented Mr. Savolis during all phases of the case, including discovery, motions to suppress, and trial. The Defendant was acquitted after a five week trial. The trial took place in 1983 to the best of my recollection.

Counsel:

For the Government: Gerald O'Neill, District of Vermont, United States Attorney's Office, United States Courthouse and Federal Building, Post Office Box 10, Rutland, VT 05701; 902-773-0231

The only other counsel for whom I have contact information is counsel for Defendant Ames: Jeffrey Denner, Attorney at Law, 4 Longfellow Place, Boston, MA 02114; 617-227-2800

6. United States v. Peterson, Docket No. 8848 CR 1394, Commonwealth of Massachusetts-Ayer District Court/Lowell District Court, Honorable Neil Colicchio (deceased)

I was counsel for Defendant Peterson, who was charged with motor vehicle homicide. Ms. Petersen was a high school student who was driving friends home from a party. Her front tire blew out and two of her friends died. I represented her at all stages of the proceedings from arraignment to trial. After a four day trial the Defendant was acquitted. The trial took place in 1989.

Counsel:

For the Commonwealth of Massachusetts: Joseph Shields, Middlesex County District Attorney's Office, 615 Concord Street, Framingham, MA 01702; 508-820-2939

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Information Technology project

From 2002 to 2004, I was Project Executive for the Massachusetts Trial Court Information Technology project and was responsible for the procurement and implementation of the statewide, integrated case management and docketing system for all levels of the Massachusetts Trial Court system.

RESTART Reentry Court

In 2008, in partnership with the United States Probation Office, I established a federal Reentry Court program (RESTART) for high risk, ex-offenders who have recently been released from prison. The goal of RESTART is to reduce recidivism, and to successfully reintegrate ex-offenders into the community with an emphasis on employment skills. RESTART has been in operation for over two years and is becoming a national model for reentry courts.

Co-Chair of the Chambers Functional Requirements Group

In April of 2009, I was appointed as the national co-chair of a group of judges and courtroom support staff who are responsible for the design and implementation of the next generation of the federal courts' case management and electronic filing system. The project is expected to last for four years and as a co-chair I manage and direct over 40 judges, courtroom staff, and technical staff.

Pro se Mediation Panel

In March 2010, Chief Magistrate Judge Judith Dein and I, in collaboration with the Federal Bar Association, established a panel of volunteer attorneys to represent pro se parties in civil case mediations. Over 10% of the civil litigants in the Massachusetts federal court are pro se and this program provides court appointed legal counsel for pro se litigants for court-involved mediations.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

From 1999 through 2005, I taught a course on law and psychiatry at the Massachusetts School of Law in North Andover, Massachusetts. No syllabus is available. From 2002 through 2005, I taught a course on trial advocacy at Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts. No syllabus is available.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I am the beneficiary of a non-vested contributory retirement plan from my years in the Massachusetts State Court System.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no such plans.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If I am confirmed, I do not believe that any of my family members, other persons, parties, categories of litigation, or financial arrangements would likely present a potential conflict of interest. I have been a United States Magistrate Judge since 2006, and was a judge of the Massachusetts Trial Court before that. As a Magistrate Judge I am subject to the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and as a Massachusetts Trial Court judge I was subject to the Code of Judicial Conduct (Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court Rule 3:09).

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I have listed my wife, brother, children, nieces, and nephews, and their employers in the Judge Conflict/Exclusion List Report function in the court's case management and electronic filing system. That system sends me an alert if any of the listed are named as a party in any of my cases. To date, no one has been so named. I also review the notices of case assignment and referral to ensure that no conflict arises which is not flagged by the conflict database. If confirmed, I will continue to follow the federal recusal statute and Code of Conduct for Federal Judges. If necessary I will seek advice from the Code of Conduct Committee of the Judicial Conference. I have erred, and always will err, on the side of caution.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Our court sponsors legal mentoring programs for disadvantaged high school and college students. The students are assigned to a judge for the months of June and July, and are part of the chambers staff for that period of time.

Our court also sponsors a robust legal education program for inner city youths. This program relies on judicial involvement and coaching for mock trials and judicial lectures. I assist my wife, who is the coach of the Lunenburg High School Mock Trial team, with any technical questions which arise during her preparation for their competitions.

While in private practice I was responsible for the Northern Worcester County Bar Association's annual holiday public service program. We developed a program to distribute holiday packages to the working poor, i.e., those families that did not qualify for public assistance but that were having trouble making ends meet. The families were identified by social service agencies and we distributed toys, food, oil vouchers, and other winter necessities.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In January of 2011, Judge Nancy Gertner announced that she was taking Senior status, and her vacancy was announced in the early Spring of 2011. Senator John Kerry appointed a committee to screen candidates for that vacancy. On April 27, 2011, I submitted the Preliminary Screening Application and Questionnaire for Judicial Candidates to the Committee. On June 16, 2011, I was interviewed by the Committee. I was informed thereafter that the Screening Committee had recommended me for further consideration. On July 27, 2011, I was interviewed by Senators Kerry and Brown. On August 4, 2011, I was notified by the Senators that they were recommending me to the White House for appointment.

Since August 11, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 23, 2011, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 30, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much. If I might then begin our first round of questions.

I would be grateful if, in order, you would simply describe your judicial philosophy and your approach to the use of precedent in the making of decisions.

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you, Senator. I gather you would like me to begin.

Senator COONS. Yes, please.

Mr. HELMICK. Very good. I guess I'd indicate first that my view of what judges should do fundamentally is settle disputes about the party and they should settle them in a fashion that precedent predicts. So that every party, at the end of a decision that has been made by a district court judge, can look at the case and know that they were treated just like other parties who are similarly situated, without concern or bias or prejudice or emotion on the part of the judge.

And if a judge comes to a case fairly and openly, with patience and humility, then they are serving their role and their function, as well.

I mentioned precedent at the start of my answer, and I'd indicate that precedent is everything, particularly for a district court judge at that level. In that way can parties and future potential parties to litigation know what results they can expect given the facts in their case versus others who have been similarly situated in the past.

Thank you.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much.

Ms. LEWIS. I certainly agree with my fellow nominee. I believe the role of the judge is to determine what the applicable law is based upon the precedents and to apply those precedents fairly and impartially, without regard to any improper consideration, and to do that in a way that is respectful and courteous to everyone in the courtroom.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Ms. Lewis.

Judge Hillman.

Judge HILLMAN. Thank you, Senator. I would echo what my colleagues have said. In my over 20 years of experience on the bench, I hope that my philosophy has evolved to one of being fair and having my decisions rendered expeditiously. The litigants deserve nothing less than getting those decisions as quickly as we can get them done, provided that we take our time and do it correctly.

The only other thing I would like to add as part of my philosophy is respect, and that is not only respect for myself, but respect for the litigants, respect for the lawyers, and, most importantly, for the process.

As far as the stare decisis, I intend to obviously follow the law as it is enacted by Congress and the interpretations that are given by the appellate courts and the Supreme Court.

Senator COONS. That was a particularly articulate trio of responses.

And next, if you would, just turn to a question that you heard me ask previously of Judge Schwartz about the appropriate role of a court in interpreting the laws as written and enacted by an elected legislative body.

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you again, Mr. Chairman, for that question. I would say first that it's a limited role. It's a fixed role. As we all know, matters passed by the Congress are presumed to be constitutional.

With regard to any laws that come before the court, the court's scrutiny should be limited and strict, and interpretations should be based upon prior precedent, which would begin with the Supreme Court and then, for my State of Ohio, the sixth circuit, as well, and that that must be followed whenever a statute is reviewed or a determination is made regarding the propriety of a statute.

Thank you.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Mr. Helmick.

Ms. Lewis.

Ms. LEWIS.. And I certainly would agree with that, as well. I think when you're dealing with an act of Congress, it's presumed to be constitutional. If you need to—if you cannot tell from the text of the act or the statute what is meant in a way that you can resolve a dispute, then you do have to go and look to precedent to decide how to interpret that.

For me, that would be the United States Supreme Court and the fourth circuit court of appeals, and that's what I would do.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Ms. Lewis.

Judge Hillman and I believe you have had some experience with this.

Judge HILLMAN. Thank you, Senator. And, actually, I just have to echo what my colleagues said and I don't have a lot to add to it. The substantial deference, enormous deference that is due to the legislative acts is only tempered by any interpretative cases in the circuit courts or in the United States Supreme Court.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Judge Hillman.

I will now defer to Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you each for your willingness to serve. I am going to start with Mr. Helmick.

You have made some arguments in court, there representing terrorism. There is some concern that you may believe terrorism cases are less serious than other criminal cases, and that, in turn, causes some concern about how you would handle terrorism cases that may come before you.

A pretty simple question. Do you believe the U.S. is at war with terrorists?

Mr. HELMICK. Yes, Senator, I do.

Senator GRASSLEY. Do you believe terrorists pose a danger to Americans?

Mr. HELMICK. Yes, Senator, I do.

Senator GRASSLEY. When you were representing Wassim Mazloun—and you know he was convicted by a jury of conspiracy to kill U.S. troops overseas and providing material support for terrorists.

According to the sentencing guidelines, Mazloun deserved life in prison, but he received only an 8-year sentence.

Do you believe that that was an appropriate sentence?

Mr. HELMICK. Senator, I don't know that I have an opinion about what an appropriate sentence should be. You're exactly correct, the advisory guideline range was life. I did not ask for a sentence. I think, technically, Senator, it was 8 years and 4 months, 100 months. I did not ask for a specific sentence.

I merely advocated on behalf of my client in arguing that perhaps the life sentence that was called for in the advisory sentencing guidelines was too severe or too harsh.

It was the district court judge that chose that sentence. And I might add, Senator, that that sentence is on appeal now by cross-appeal by the government before the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and will be argued this spring.

So the government does have a remedy with their dissatisfaction as a result of that sentence, but I did not choose that sentence nor did I ask for it, sir.

Senator GRASSLEY. In reviewing the dockets where you defended terrorists on capital murders, it looks like you are frequently accusing the government of, "outrageous conduct."

It leads me to believe that you regularly employ a defense strategy—if you cannot win on facts, attack the government.

Do you believe you will be able to make the transition from defense attorney to impartial judge?

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you for that question, Senator. Yes. I am very confident that I can do that. I should add, Senator—this may not change your perspective—many of those motions are form motions that are produced in capital cases and the like and we feel compelled or have a duty to file those motions so that the record is preserved.

As you know, they are routinely denied. But in order to protect the record, in many of those cases, it's necessary to file those motions in the event that there might be some change in constitutional precedent or law at a later time.

Senator GRASSLEY. As a prospective judge, would a government prosecutor appearing before you feel that they would be treated fairly and impartially?

Mr. HELMICK. Senator, I don't mean to seem immodest, but I think that every prosecutor with whom I've ever worked on the State or Federal level feels that I was fair as an adversary and that I would be fair as a judge, as well.

Senator GRASSLEY. In the year 2000, you faced disciplinary action for failing to comply with a court-issued subpoena. You refused to turn over an incriminating letter signed by your former client in the same case and you refused to appear before a grand jury.

The trial found you in contempt of court. You appealed the decision. Ultimately, the Supreme Court of Ohio held that you must comply with the subpoena, although they lifted your contempt citation.

The Supreme Court of Ohio stated that your concerns regarding the attorney-client privilege were not enough to, "override the public interest and maintain public safety in promoting administration of justice,"

Would you please give a short and direct answer as to why you refused to appear before the grand jury as ordered to do so by the trial court after it denied your motion to quash the subpoena?

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you, Senator. The shortest response that I can give would be that this was a case of first impression. There was no precedent in Ohio about what to do in such a case with regard to such evidence; that I sought out the advice of a disciplinary counsel in Columbus, the Supreme Court of Ohio. He is the senior lawyer that is in charge.

He is the one that agreed that I should disclose the existence of a threat—excuse me—that I could disclose the existence of a threat and that I should. He agreed with my assessment. After I did that, I asked him, Senator Grassley, whether or not—what I should do with the letter and he told me “I don’t know” was the response I got from the chief disciplinary counsel.

In reviewing the disciplinary rules in Ohio, Senator, the way that document came to me—I don’t know how much you want me to go into this, sir. I don’t want to cut into your time.

But the way that it came to me, it was classified as a client secret in Ohio, which is afforded the same protection as attorney-client privileged information and discussion and, as a result of that, I felt I had no choice but to challenge the matter.

The State of Ohio was on board with me. They did not ask that I be jailed or anything else for contempt. There was a fine imposed. The judge put a stay on the fine and I was given leave to appeal the matter to the higher courts.

As you mentioned, Senator, the court of appeals voted 3–0 in my favor in vacating the contempt citation. They lauded me on the way I handled the case and commended me for doing everything right in the case, and that was also true of the unanimous seven members of the Ohio Supreme Court who did the same thing.

It was for them, Senator, to reach the balancing test about whether or not, under those new unprecedented facts, I should actually turn over the letter. They voted 4–3 that I should. I respect that decision and I complied with it, sir.

Senator GRASSLEY. Following up on that, in your view, under what circumstances is it appropriate for the court to override the attorney-client relationship?

Mr. HELMICK. Senator, I only have experience, I suppose, in the case that I had. There are much more classic examples where it would have been easy for me to have made the decision.

For example, had I received the instrumentality of the crime for which the defendant was charged, Senator, the classic example would be a gun that someone brings to you and says, “Here, I have this. This is what I used to shoot someone,” the law is clear that I have to turn over that evidence at that time.

This was somewhat different. The State only knew about the letter because I chose to disclose the threat in order to protect their witness. And I moved quickly, Senator, in calling the disciplinary counsel. It was only a matter of a few hours from the time I was given the letter until I spoke with the detective in the case.

He was able to get the man, David Morris, and his family and move them to a safe house.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you for your answers.

Do not feel bad, Mr. Hillman, if I do not ask you questions. I am going to ask Ms. Lewis questions.

Do you want me to go ahead?

Senator COONS. Yes. Then I may ask some.

Senator GRASSLEY. I want to ask you about the experience you have and give you a chance to respond to an article that was published anonymously on a Website called fitsnews.com. That article questioned your qualification to be a district court judge. And, again, I want to stress that this was published anonymously.

I think it is only fair to give you an opportunity to respond. The article concludes that your work at your firm has been, “mostly ceremonial, cosmetic, superficial.”

So I think it would be fair to let you address that.

Ms. LEWIS.. Thank you, Senator. I would like to address that. Obviously, we don’t know who wrote that or why they would write such a thing. But I can tell you that I have a wealth of experience in this justice system. I have practiced law in it for almost 30 years. I have represented all different kinds of clients in all different kinds of cases, and I’m not talking wreck cases. I mean very complicated civil matters.

So that person, whoever wrote that, was not very familiar with my legal experience.

Senator GRASSLEY. Since you just stressed that you have a great deal of experience in civil, let me ask you about lack of experience then with criminal cases.

According to your questionnaire, your private practice has not included any criminal cases. Is there anything more that you can share with us about your legal background to ease concerns about your lack of criminal law experience?

Ms. LEWIS.. Thank you for that question, Senator. It’s true. My practice has been exclusively civil. But I have moved, as I said in my last response, from one area of substantive law to another frequently.

So I’m a pretty quick learner and I have taken the opportunity since my nomination to actually attend criminal trials and other proceedings that I might be called upon to preside over, if I’m fortunate enough to be confirmed. And, of course, criminal trials are very much like the civil trials that I’ve tried. The rules of evidence are the same.

I’ve also attended many sentencing proceedings, pleas, just the kinds of things that I would face as a district court judge. And I’ve even attended some seminars on the sentencing guidelines and stuff.

I want to assure you and really all the members of the Committee that I will be completely prepared for whatever matter comes before me, be it civil or criminal.

Senator GRASSLEY. In your Senate questionnaire, you indicate that you were involved in three cases your firm handled before the Supreme Court. In two of those cases, you indicate that you contributed briefs and preparation of oral argument. However, your name does not appear on any of the briefs submitted in the case.

You did not provide the third brief and my staff was unable to locate a copy of it. Could you please clarify or perhaps expand upon the role that you played in those cases?

Ms. LEWIS.. The role that I played in those cases is exactly as I explained in my questionnaire. And I’m not sure why you didn’t get a copy of anything that I participated in, but I can check on that for you.

My role, I guess, as a young lawyer—and some of these cases did come across my desk as a young lawyer—I wasn’t particularly concerned about whether my name appeared on the brief. I think most people in the practice know that a lot of the work, a lot of the research, the writing, actually even framing the arguments, is done by some of the younger lawyers who may not share in the glory.

But I was asked to identify those in my questionnaire, and I did so.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you for that answer.

The next question—I do not want to imply that there is anything wrong with being politically involved, but I want to set that as a background for my next series of questions. And this will be the last questions I will have of you.

Both you and your husband have been active politically. You hosted a political fundraiser at your house for then Senator Biden, and you also have donated considerable sums to the Democratic candidates.

Moreover, you served as part of the transition team of Democratic Governor Jim Hodges, who also appointed you to various committees. And as I said, there is certainly nothing wrong with that, but political history may concern future litigants, should you be confirmed.

What is your view on the role of politics in the judicial decision-making process?

Ms. LEWIS.. Thank you, Senator. Politics has absolutely no role in what a judge does. If I'm fortunate enough to be confirmed, any political views of mine or anyone else's will have nothing to do with my decision-making.

I'm going to determine what the applicable law is according to the precedent and apply it to the facts that come before me, without regard to anything improper, including political views.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think you answered my next question with your last sentence. Well, I think you have answered the third question, as well. Thank you.

Ms. LEWIS.. Thank you.

Senator COONS. If I might, Ms. Lewis, just to follow-up on that sort of line of questioning. You have been a partner, if I am not mistaken, in Lewis & Babcock since 1987; is that correct?

Ms. LEWIS.. I believe that's correct, yes.

Senator COONS. And you have participated in the preparation and briefing of at least three cases that ultimately went to the Supreme Court. One of them is quite well known, I think, Lucas v. South Carolina Coastal Council.

Ms. LEWIS.. Yes.

Senator COONS. And it established that principled state land use law would constitute impermissible taking under the Fifth Amendment.

As someone who was very active in county government and land use law for a long time previously, that interested me.

What constraints, in your view, subject to that precedent, do localities face when seeking to impose conditions or extractions as a condition for approving development by a landowner? What are the constraints?

Ms. LEWIS.. Well, Senator, that's really—that's not a question that I really feel prepared to answer. The land regulation law that we've done in our law firm has primarily been handled by my other partners. But I do know that it's an active area.

And if I were called upon to answer any of those questions, I would have to consult the Supreme Court precedent and the fourth circuit precedent to decide what to do.

Senator COONS. Thank you.

Mr. Helmick, the situation that Senator Grassley asked you about was one that was quite interesting to me, as well. You confronted an extremely serious ethical dilemma, one where, if I understand correctly, your client presented you with a letter that detailed an assassination plot to kill the remaining chief witness.

Could you just describe in a little more detail the balance you struck, because, obviously, it resulted in a contempt citation? So some may argue that you did not pursue the perfect case.

I thought you laid out how you struck the balance between attorney-client and public safety, but tell me in a little bit more detail how you struck that balance and what you learned from it and what you would apply to your role as a district court judge.

Mr. HELMICK. Thank you for that question, Senator, and a chance to clarify and expound upon what I talked about earlier.

I guess I'd indicate, in the first instance, the letter came to me from my investigator, an agent for me. The letter was not given to me by the client, but was actually intercepted from his mother.

That triggered the protection of the client secret doctrine in Ohio. When I got it, I immediately called my co-counsel together. We reviewed the letter. We determined that the threat was real and that it was serious.

I consulted the disciplinary rules at once. Ohio rules say that you may disclose, not "shall." And so I thought I had the authority to do it, and I also knew that I wanted to do it if I did have that authority, and that's when I called the chief disciplinary counsel for his advice and, again, he agreed both that I had the discretion and he agreed with my decision to exercise it.

I then called the judge at home that evening and advised her of the threat. She put me in touch with the detective and I advised him of the threat, and he moved, as I said, David Morris and his family over there.

What to do with the letter was a separate matter. The disciplinary counsel told me, "You're off the case, counselor." That's the one thing I do know for sure. When I said, again, "What should I do with the letter," "I don't know, but you're off the case."

I hadn't even got that far in terms of thinking through the process, but he said, "You've just effectively ratted out your client, Jeff, and, therefore, you need to take action to get off the case," and I did.

I was lauded by the local county prosecutor for bringing the threat to their attention. Then the next day I was served with a grand jury subpoena to produce the letter.

Again, I sought out the advice of counsel. Fortunately, it was a family member, a lawyer that's very good that's married to my cousin, because, obviously, no one was going to pay for me to go through this process, through the court of appeals and the Ohio Supreme Court in terms of legal fees and so forth.

And in meeting with him and reading the rules, it really looked like it was a client secret under Ohio law. The court of appeals disagreed. And so I felt that I had no choice at that point. In order to trigger review, I had to withhold the letter. Otherwise, I couldn't get a determination past the trial court.

The prosecutor's office wanted me to appeal and they wanted me to turn over the letter, but they understood the dilemma that it presented. And for them, had they chosen to proceed forward because I had not done what I had done, he got subsequent counsel, they would have moved to suppress the letter from the trial court, and that would have created a problem for them in terms of an issue with the trial court in that trial.

That client received new counsel. He went forward to trial without the letter. He was convicted and sentenced to death.

But the issue about what I should do with the letter still remained. The Ohio Supreme Court is the authority on discipline in Ohio. They set the rules, they make the rules, they make the changes. And I needed to get it there or at least through the intermediate appellate court.

They disagreed with the intermediate appellate court and said, "It is a client secret. Helmick was right." But then they had to decide what should we do in this case of first impression, and that's when they decided, on balance, that I should turn over the letter in a 4-3 decision.

Senator COONS. Thank you. And do I remember correctly? Did Senator Brown, in his introduction, specifically refer to a process in which Senators Portman and, I think before him, Voinovich specifically consulted with opposing counsel in coming up with a recommendation for you? Because I thought Senator Grassley had a fair question about someone who has been an engaged advocate, whether prosecution and defense counsel could expect equal treatment before you.

Mr. HELMICK. My understanding is that—and I don't know firsthand—but that they contacted prosecutors at the municipal, State and Federal level.

Senator COONS. Judge Hillman, if I might, you expressed in an article some time ago, I think it was in 1992, your opposition to mandatory sentencing. I would just be interested if you would answer one final question about the proper role of mandatory sentences in our criminal justice system and when they are helpful or unhelpful.

Judge HILLMAN. Well, thank you for that question, Senator. That was in 1992, and I have evolved a great deal. Those were the—Senator COONS. I am familiar with having things taken out of context from one's previous writings.

Judge HILLMAN. Actually, it was not taken out of context. It was our first experience in Massachusetts with mandatory sentences, and all of the judges were being a little bit, I think, over-reactive, myself included.

I have since come around to the realization that the mandatory minimum sentences are a legitimate legislative function and I'm very comfortable dealing with them.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much, Your Honor.

I want to conclude today's hearing, if I might, simply by thanking each of the three of you for your long service in the bar, to the public in a variety of roles, both as volunteers, as court-appointed counsel, as leaders in your community, and to particularly thank your family, your friends, and your supporters who have been engaged in sustaining you through this process so far.

It is my hope we will be able to vote you out of Committee in advance, all of your nominations.

Thank you so much for appearing before this Committee today.

We will hold the record open for a week for those members of the Committee who were not able to join us today who may wish to submit further questions.

With that, this hearing is adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 4:04 p.m., the hearing was concluded.]

[Questions and answers and submissions follows.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Responses of Timothy S. Hillman
 Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of Massachusetts
 to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. A 2006 Worcester Telegram & Gazette article titled “Judge Hillman defends judiciary; Unpopular rulings protect rights,” covered a speech you gave to the County Bar Association. According to the article, you said lawyers and judges are “slow moving targets” for critics on both ends of the political fence who have little regard for the rights of others and little understanding of the American Legal System.

a. Can you please explain what you meant by this?

Response: As a trial judge for the past 22 years, I am sworn to dispense justice fairly and evenly without regard to the political, social, or philosophical leaning of the litigants. Because judges are bound to decide the cases before them according to the law, without regard to public opinion, they are naturally subject to discussion, speculation, and criticism.

2. You have a long career as a judge in the state and now federal court system. what is the most difficult decision you have made?

Response: The decision to dismiss the charges in the “Worcester Six” fire case mentioned in Question 3 below.

3. In a case that received significant media attention, you dismissed charges against two homeless individuals indicted in the “Worcester Six” incident, where a fire set by the defendants killed six firefighters. The Massachusetts Supreme Court later reversed your dismissal.

a. Can you explain your decision to dismiss the charges against these individuals?

Response: The Defendants, two homeless adults, each of whom suffered from a severe intellectual disability, accidentally started a fire in an abandoned warehouse and failed to report it. The issue of whether individuals in their situation were liable for involuntary manslaughter was an open question of law in Massachusetts. Based upon the facts, the arguments of the parties, and the law as it existed in Massachusetts at the time, I found their conduct did not meet the legal standard for involuntary manslaughter and dismissed the case.

b. In hindsight, what do you think of the Massachusetts Supreme Court’s logic in overruling your decision?

Response: As noted, this case presented a difficult and previously unresolved legal question. I made my decision based upon my best interpretation of the law at the time, but the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court resolved the question differently. Although it differed from my own, the court's logic was reasonable. More importantly, because the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court is the highest authority interpreting Massachusetts law, its decision settled the previously open question and became binding precedent for me and other lower court judges in the state.

4. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe that the most important attribute of a judge is respect. Respect for oneself, respect for the litigants and lawyers who appear before the court, and most importantly, respect for the laws as they are enacted by Congress and interpreted by the First Circuit and Supreme Court. I believe that I possess this attribute.

5. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: I believe that a judge should demonstrate patience, respect, and a willingness to learn. A judge must make every litigant feel that they have had a full and fair opportunity to have their case heard. Also, a judge should not be afraid to be educated by the parties about an issue in a case that is new or untested. I believe that I meet this standard.

6. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts, and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes, I am.

7. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If the case involved statutory interpretation, I would begin with the text of the statute. If the text were unclear or if no text were at issue, I would look to whether courts in other jurisdictions, both federal and state, had issued instructive opinions on the issue. I would also carefully research the legal principles involved to see if the First Circuit or Supreme Court had issued instructive opinions on similar issues, or if there were any parallels in other areas of the law. In addition, I would make sure that I had a command of the factual underpinnings that gave rise to the issue. I would also ask the litigants to brief discrete aspects of the issue if I thought they would be of assistance.

8. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: The decisions of the First Circuit and the Supreme Court are binding precedent and I would apply the decision and not substitute my own judgment. It is not my role to substitute my judgment for that of a higher court.

9. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: In my 22 years as a trial judge, I have never declared a state or federal law unconstitutional. An inquiry into the constitutionality of a federal statute should be undertaken with the understanding that all statutes are entitled to a strong presumption that they are constitutional and are, if possible, to be interpreted in a manner that renders them constitutional.

10. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I intend to actively manage my caseload. I have learned during my 22 years as a trial judge that getting involved early in the life of the case is critical. I intend to meet with the litigants soon after the case is entered in court so that a realistic, but firm schedule can be entered. I also will schedule follow-up sessions with the litigants to make sure that they remain on task. In addition, the District of Massachusetts has a robust mediation program which is intended to facilitate case settlement, while lowering the expense to both the litigants and the court. I intend to strongly urge parties to participate in the court's mediation program.

11. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: In addition to the measures outlined in my answer to Question 10 above, I intend to take advantage of our court's technology to conduct telephonic and video hearings and conferences. As a magistrate judge, I have had the privilege of conducting pretrial proceedings for the District Judges on a substantial number of criminal and civil cases. It is extremely important to stay involved in the case to make sure that the parties are meeting their scheduling obligations and to maximize the opportunity to explore a non-trial resolution. The use of video and telephonic conferences helps the court stay in contact with the litigants, control the case schedule and reduce expenses.

12. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions late in the day on February 22nd. I worked on them the evening of February 22nd and during the day on February 23rd. Late in the day of February 23rd, I forwarded my answers to the Department of Justice for review, together with a letter of transmittal to the Senate Judiciary Committee. On February 24th, I reviewed the draft with a Justice Department official before their submission.

13. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes they do.

Responses of Timothy S. Hillman
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of Massachusetts
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: My judicial philosophy is to decide my cases fairly and expeditiously. It is critical to promoting confidence in the judicial system that decisions be made promptly. In addition, my judicial philosophy is based upon respect. Respect for myself, respect for the litigants, and most importantly, respect for the law as enacted by Congress and as interpreted by the First Circuit and the Supreme Court.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: In my 22 years as a trial judge, I have strived to treat every litigant with respect and dignity. Judges must remember that what we do on a daily basis is oftentimes a monumental, life-changing event for the litigants. It is extremely important that all litigants who appear before me have been given an opportunity to fully present their position (and feel that they have had that opportunity), and that their cases be decided fairly and according to the law. These principles apply equally to all parties regardless of their beliefs, wealth, or other characteristics.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: District Judges are bound by their oath to follow the precedents established by the Circuit Courts and the Supreme Court. Any deviation from this standard is a violation of that oath.

Responses of Jeffrey J. Helmick
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Ohio
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. In your Senate Questionnaire, and in Senator Brown’s testimony, reference is made to former-Senator Voinovich’s participation in recommending your nomination. You were nominated in May 2011, approximately six months following the election of Senator Portman. Did you have any interviews or meetings with Senator Portman, since he was elected to the Senate, prior to your nomination? If so, please update your Senate Questionnaire, question 26.a, to reflect those meetings.

Response: I did not have any interviews or meetings with Senator Portman prior to my nomination.

2. During your hearing, I asked you about the terrorist you previously represented, Wassim Mazloun. You know that he was convicted by a jury of conspiracy to kill U.S. troops overseas and of providing material support to terrorists. Those are very serious crimes. According to the Sentencing Guidelines, Mazloun deserved life in prison. When asked if you believe that eight years was an appropriate sentence, you replied: “I don’t know that I have an opinion about what an appropriate sentence should be.” You represented this terrorist, should have known the facts of his case better than almost anyone—including the sentencing judge, sat through the sentencing hearing, and listened to the arguments made by the prosecutors.

- a. How is it the case that you do not have an opinion about what sentence is appropriate?

Response: I do not have an opinion because I do not feel it is my role as an advocate to opine about the appropriateness of the judge’s sentencing decision for my client. The decision of what is an appropriate sentence is for the sentencing judge alone. My role as Mazloun’s appointed counsel was that of an advocate. Since a sentence of life imprisonment is the most serious non-death sentence the law provides, it was my constitutional and ethical duty as his counsel to advocate for a lower sentence, provided it was supported under the law. The district court judge, James G. Carr, then a judge on the United States Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, made his sentencing decision after hearing evidence presented over the lengthy trial and chose the sentence he deemed appropriate.

- b. What evidence or assurances can you provide the Committee that you have sufficient experience or judgment to determine appropriate sentences, should you be confirmed?

Response: For more than twenty years, I have been before judges at every level of the criminal justice system and have had the benefit of observing the processes they undergo in determining an appropriate sentence. I believe I have learned much from that experience. Relatedly, many of my cases have been settled through negotiated pleas rather than trials. Accordingly, I have gained experience in what the government considers an appropriate sentence in a variety of cases.

In addition, if I were fortunate enough to be confirmed, I would have the federal sentencing guidelines to assist me in the determination of the appropriate sentence. Calculation of the correct guideline range is not only the first step in the sentencing process, but also provides the “starting point and initial benchmark” in determining an appropriate sentence. Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 49 (2007).

- c. If confirmed, when you have less information before you than you had in the Mazloun case, what factors will you apply to determine an appropriate sentence?

Response: If I were confirmed, my role in the sentencing process as a judge would be very different from my role as an advocate in the Mazloun case. As a judge, I would rely upon information contained in the Presentence Report, the information and advice provided by the U.S. Probation Officer who prepared the report, and the relevant evidence and argument brought forth for consideration by the parties. I would then determine the legally appropriate sentence by applying the sentencing guidelines and the relevant statutes to the facts above.

- 3. In your response to my questions on the Mazloun case, you also stated that you did not ask for a specific sentence, but that you argued “that perhaps the life sentence that was called for in the advisory sentencing guidelines was too severe or too harsh.”

- a. Do you normally refrain from recommending a sentence? If not, why did you refrain from doing so in this case?

Response: Yes, I normally refrain from recommending a sentence.

- b. What was the basis for arguing the life sentence that was called for in the advisory sentencing guidelines was too severe or too harsh?

Response: The basis for arguing that the life sentence was inappropriate in Mazloun’s case was due to the individualized and comparative nature of his conduct. Mazloun was the last of the three defendants sentenced in the case. All three had an advisory guideline range of life imprisonment. Defendant Amawi, arguably the most culpable, had already received a sentence of 20 years. Defendant El-Hindi had already received a sentence of 12 years. Defendant Mazloun, compared to these two co-defendants, was less culpable because his contacts with the government’s cooperating witness were fewer and shorter in duration, his actions were generally less egregious, and because he voluntarily ceased any continued participation or activity in furtherance of the conspiracy months before arrests were made in the case. Under the circumstances, I had an ethical obligation to my client to argue that his comparatively less culpable conduct justified a sentence of less than life in prison.

- c. Please clarify your use of the word “perhaps” in your hearing response. Was this word used in your argument to the court or did you make stronger arguments for leniency?

Response: While I do not recall any specific language I used at sentencing, I do recall making the argument that Mazloum was less culpable than the two co-defendants who had been previously sentenced due to his lesser contact with the government’s cooperating witness, actions that were generally less egregious, and his voluntarily ceasing participation or activity in the conspiracy well before termination of the investigation.

4. The information we learn from terrorists indicates that 100 months in jail has little deterrence value and represents a very low risk for terrorists, compared to the opportunity to kill Americans. Do you believe that a sentence of 100 months is sufficient punishment for a convicted terrorist who conspired to kill U.S. soldiers?

Response: The appropriate sentence for any offender who was convicted of very serious crimes, including terrorism, or any crime, must be determined based on consideration of the sentencing guidelines, information in the Presentence Report and through adherence to 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) and other relevant statutes. Section 3553(a) requires a judge to consider factors, including but not limited to, the nature and circumstances of the offense, the history and characteristics of the offender, and the need to punish the offender, protect the public and deter others from such conduct. As I explained in response to question 2a, I do not believe it would be appropriate for me to give my personal view about the sufficiency of the sentence given to Mazloum because my role and responsibility in that case was to serve as his court-appointed advocate.

5. If confirmed, how would you apply the Sentencing Guidelines, particularly in terrorism cases? What, in your view, would justify downward departures from the advisory guidelines?

Response: In every case, I would first determine the appropriate guideline sentencing range, which would serve as the starting point and initial benchmark for the sentence. I would then consider all other relevant information, including the Presentence Report, recommendations from the probation officer, evidence and argument from the parties and other factors mandated under 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) and other relevant statutes.

Downward departures within the guideline structure are limited to select instances and may only be granted sparingly as expressly authorized in the United States Sentencing Guidelines Manual, and relevant case law. Only when evidence and the law supported such a recognized downward departure would I allow such a departure. The Supreme Court has also held that the district court is required to consider the other factors set forth in Section 3553(a), including the “history and characteristics of the defendant,” the need to “afford adequate deterrence to criminal conduct,” and the need “to protect the public from further crimes of the defendant,” and should impose a sentence above or below the advisory guideline if those factors require it. Gall v. United States, 552 U.S. 38, 50 (2007).

6. During your hearing, when I asked you about your regular use of accusing the government of outrageous conduct—which is essentially accusing them of unethical behavior—you responded that you “feel compelled or have a duty to file those motions so that the record is preserved... to protect the record... in the event that there might be some change in constitutional precedent or law at a later time.”
 - a. While I appreciate your candor in describing your routine practice, do you feel it is appropriate conduct, as an officer of the court, to accuse another lawyer of unethical behavior or outrageous conduct without evidence of actual misconduct?

Response: I have never accused a government lawyer of unethical behavior. To be clear, the term “outrageous government conduct” is a legal term of art, used by the courts to connote a defense based upon a constitutional due process violation, akin to the defense of entrapment. See, e.g., United States v. Russell, 411 U.S. 423, 431 (1973) (suggesting the possibility that entrapping conduct by law enforcements agents could be “so outrageous that due process principles would absolutely bar the government from invoking judicial processes to obtain a conviction”). In Mazloum’s case, the defense did not challenge the government’s description of the acts he committed, but did challenge the circumstances surrounding his involvement in the offense, which was initiated by a paid government witness.

All three defendants argued that the offenses would not have occurred without government interaction. “Outrageous conduct” is the legal term used to characterize such circumstances. The defense did not create that term, and at no time did we accuse any prosecutor or other persons of unethical conduct.

The motion to dismiss was supported by a long-standing general entrapment doctrine that prohibits government officials from “implant[ing] in the mind of an innocent person the disposition to commit the alleged offense and induce its commission in order that they may prosecute.” Sorrells v. United States, 287 U.S. 435, 442 (1932).

As recently as 1999, the Sixth Circuit acknowledged the existence of this general constitutional principle, which permits a court to dismiss the charges when the government's involvement in creating the crime is so great "that a criminal prosecution violated the fundamental principles of due process." United States v. Warwick, 167 F.3d 965, 974 (6th Cir. 1999), quoting Russell, 411 U.S. at 430. In Warwick, the Sixth Circuit chose to continue its lack of recognition of this defense when the defense sounds squarely in inducement, despite some Supreme Court precedent and other Circuit Court cases to the contrary. We clearly stated in the motion that the Sixth Circuit precedent was against us, but filed the motion because we needed to preserve the issue for higher review. The government filed no memorandum in opposition. The issue is part of the pending appeal before the Sixth Circuit.

While I regularly file all legal motions necessary to protect a client's rights, I do not regularly file motions raising the outrageous government conduct defense because that issue is not presented in most cases.

b. Please explain how accusing the government of outrageous conduct or unethical behavior preserves the record for a potential, future constitutional change in the law.

Response: The motion to dismiss in Mazloum's case was filed in order to protect the defendants' due process rights under the United States Constitution in the event that the Sixth Circuit's decisions declining to recognize such a defense based on outrageous government conduct were later reversed by the court sitting en banc, or the Supreme Court. Failure to file such a motion would result in waiver of such a claim before appellate courts. Preserving such issues for appellate purposes is an essential responsibility for ethical and constitutionally-effective trial counsel.

7. Question 12A of the Senate Questionnaire requests nominees to provide "material you have written or edited, including material published only on the internet." In response to this question, you listed and attached a number of monthly and bi-monthly newsletters you produced on behalf of the Maumee Valley Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, an organization you also helped found.

In some of these publications, an informational side bar contains references to a website for members of the Association to access. These sidebars instruct members to "contact Jeff Helmick to obtain a username and password for the Members Only section." Other statements invite readers to visit the website because it contains "a wealth of useful information," especially the members' only section "since most of the goodies are protected there."

a. Why did you not include the web-only content as requested by the Senate?

Response: I have not written or edited any web-only content, on that site or any other. Further, I do not have any access to any of the web-only content. All content was lost in an off-site, third-party server failure several years ago. The site has not been functional for some time.

b. What type of information was available on the website?

Response: Information included only contact information, a few available case opinions of interest, membership information, a list of web sites as possible resources, a list of upcoming legal education seminars, plus a members' only section (discussed further below). The site contained no articles, analysis, opinions or advice written or edited by me or others.

c. Please describe the information available in the members' only section.

Response: The members' only section, as best as I can recall, contained only the judicial opinions of some cases of interest and back issues of the case summary newsletter. Since the newsletter was mailed to members and local judges, I was fortunate to have hard copies which I produced in response to the request in the Senate Questionnaire.

d. Please attach any and all online information you wrote, published, and/or edited as a part of this website, as well as any additional responsive material you may have omitted earlier.

Response: Again, I did not write, publish or edit anything other than that described in these responses and as contained in the newsletters, which I have provided. I also have not omitted any other material responsive to question 12A of the Senate Questionnaire.

- 8. In 2002, you and your law partner, Jeff Gamso, successfully lobbied Lucas County to raise the fee limit for court-appointed attorneys from $25,000 to $60,000 working each capital case. As a result of your efforts, the county also raised the $50/hour fee rate to $90/hour out-of-court and $100/hour in-court.

News articles about your efforts, which you included as attachments to your questionnaire, list the rates of similar, or larger counties, in Ohio. At the time, the highest rates appeared to be set at $50,000. Additionally, one article reports that only 22 attorneys were certified to handle these trials and only four were certified to handle appeals.

a. Why did you ask for a $60,000 fee limit, a 20% premium over the next highest counties?

Response: I did not ask for a $60,000 fee limit. I suggested when asked by the Chief of Staff of the Lucas County Board of Commissioners, which oversees and sets fee schedules for court-appointed counsel, that Lucas County's rates be raised to comparable rates in other large counties. I suggested a rate of $80 per hour out-of-court, and $100 per hour in-court, with a cap to be shared by both attorneys of $50,000, a rate well below the market rates for litigators in this corner of Ohio.

Local law requires that the County Commissioners solicit the opinion of local bar associations before making any determination. The Toledo Bar Association unanimously recommended to the Commissioners a rate of $125 per hour for both in-court and out-of-court work, with a joint cap of $90,000. The bar association also recommended a fee cap of $25,000 for appellate cases.

Ultimately, the Lucas County Commissioners chose the rates and caps, at a rate higher than the one I suggested, but lower than that recommended by the Toledo Bar Association. I was not a member of the Toledo Bar Association at the time.

- b. Prior to 2002, approximately how many death-penalty trials, for which you received compensation from the court, did you handle per year?

Response: In the years prior to 2002, I handled seven total death penalty cases, three of which went to trial, for which I received compensation from the court, an average of approximately three-quarters of one case per year.

- c. Prior to 2002, approximately how many death-penalty appeals, for which you received compensation from the court, did you handle per year?

Response: I handled no death-penalty appeals in the years prior to 2002.

- d. Beginning in 2003, once the fee hike was fully enacted, approximately how many death-penalty trials, for which you received compensation from the court, did you handle per year?

Response: Since the Lucas County fee increase in 2003, I have handled six death-penalty cases in Lucas County, two of which went to trial, for which I received compensation from the court. In addition, since 2003, I handled one death-penalty trial in a neighboring county at a much lower fee rate, and I handled one federal death-penalty trial that was unaffected by the rate change in Lucas County. The Lucas County cases after the fee hike average approximately two-thirds of one case per year.

- e. Beginning in 2003, once the fee hike was fully enacted, approximately how many death-penalty appeals, for which you received compensation from the court, did you handle per year?

Response: Since the fee increase in 2003, I have handled no death-penalty appeals for which I received compensation from the court.

- f. By how much did you see your practice's gross income increase as a result of the fee increase?

Response: As a result of the fee increase in Lucas County, my practice's gross income increased approximately $45,000 total over the nine years from 2003 through 2011, inclusive.

- g. By what percentage did you see your practice's gross income increase as a result of the fee increase?

Response: As a result of the fee increase in Lucas County, my practice's gross income increased approximately 3.3 percent over the nine years from 2003 through 2011, inclusive.

- 9. I understand you have served as defense counsel in several death penalty cases. If confirmed, will you uphold and enforce the federal death penalty statute?

Response: Yes.

- 10. Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment?

Response: With few exceptions, the death penalty has been held to be constitutional by the Supreme Court. If confirmed, I would adhere to this precedent and would uphold and enforce the federal death penalty statute.

- 11. In Roper v. Simmons, the Supreme Court relied on foreign law in holding that the execution of minors violated the Eighth Amendment. Do you think it is proper to look to foreign law to determine the meaning of the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution?

Response: No.

- a. Do you believe it is ever appropriate for a Judge to consult foreign law, when determining the meaning of the United States Constitution?

Response: No.

- 12. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is integrity, for integrity encompasses fairness, honesty, decency, ethics and adherence to the rule of law. I believe I possess this attribute.

- 13. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must be patient, open minded, respectful and courteous at all times. Relatedly, a judge must never be influenced by sympathy, emotion or prejudice, but decide cases under the rule of law. I believe I meet this standard.

14. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

15. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: I would always begin by reviewing the plain language and meaning of the words of the statute. If the plain language of the statute did not resolve the issue, I would also review any legislative history which might explain the meaning of the words used in the statute. Next, I would look for analogous cases from the Supreme Court and the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. If none of these steps resolved the issue, I would look for analogous cases from other federal circuits.

16. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: I would apply binding Supreme Court and Court of Appeals precedent without regard to my personal judgment.

17. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A court should first look for controlling precedent on the constitutionality of any statute. Assuming there were no binding precedent and the case were before the court with valid jurisdiction and proper standing, a court would look to see if the statute could be construed fairly without reaching the constitutionality of the statute. A federal court should only declare a statute unconstitutional where it is clear that it violates the Constitution or where it is clear that Congress has exceeded its constitutional boundaries.

18. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would work diligently to move cases forward with scheduling orders, the prompt resolution of pending motions or other issues brought before the court, and I would monitor the cases carefully to see that they were adjudicated promptly. I would also make extensive efforts at alternative dispute resolution, including the use of magistrate judges and mediators to facilitate settlement, in addition to my own efforts.

19. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, I believe judges have a vital role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation in their courtrooms. If confirmed, I would set timely scheduling orders in every case and frequently monitor the progress of the litigation to ensure there were no undue delays in discovery and dispositive motion practice. I would rule as quickly as possible on pending motions and other dispositive matters and make regular use of alternative dispute resolution.

20. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on February 22, 2012. I drafted my answers and forwarded them on February 23, 2012, to the Department of Justice for review. I spoke with representatives with the Justice Department and finalized my answers on February 27, 2012, for submission to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

21. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Jeffrey J. Helmick
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Ohio
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: A judge's role is to resolve disputes between and among the parties in the way the applicable statutes, precedents, and other legal authorities require. By such adherence to the rule of law, a judge will allow every litigant to know that their case was decided under the relevant facts and in a way that precedent mandates. By treating all parties with respect, open mindedness, patience and dignity, judges ensure that no party can ever reasonably conclude that their case was decided by emotion, personal feelings, or prejudice.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: My entire career has been as a litigator, largely at the trial level. I have represented individuals and businesses in a variety of civil matters, both in state and federal courts. I have also represented the criminally accused. As a result, I have a broad perspective on the experiences of many different types of litigants in a number of settings. I will remember those experiences should I be confirmed, and would always approach every litigant with patience, open mindedness, respect and dignity.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: I believe judges must strongly adhere and be committed to the doctrine of stare decisis. Judges are obliged to adhere to precedent whether they personally agree with such precedent or not. Adherence to precedent will ensure the integrity of the judicial system and assure every litigant that their case was decided on the relevant facts and applicable law, and not on prejudice or personal feelings.

Responses of Mary Geiger Lewis
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of South Carolina
to the Written Questions of Senator Tom Coburn, M.D.

1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: I do not agree with the reference to the Constitution as a “living” document that constantly evolves as society interprets it.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The Constitution establishes a structure of enduring principles that can be applied to a changing society, but the text is fixed, absent amendment through the process set out in Article V.

2. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: I would use an interpretation process based on an analysis of the text and history of the constitutional provision involved. I will also be bound to follow any precedent of the Supreme Court or the Fourth Circuit interpreting that provision. In the absence of such binding precedents, I would also look to decisions from other courts for guidance.

3. The U.S. Supreme Court held in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), that the Second Amendment of the United States Constitution “protects an individual right to possess a firearm unconnected to service in a militia, and to use that arm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense within the home.” As Justice Scalia’s opinion in Heller pointed out, Sir William Blackstone, the preeminent authority on English law for the Founders, cited the right to bear arms as one of the fundamental rights of Englishmen. Leaving aside the McDonald v. Chicago decision, do you personally believe the right to bear arms is a fundamental right?

Response: After thoroughly analyzing this issue, the Supreme Court held in McDonald v. Chicago that the right to bear arms recognized in Heller is a “fundamental” right and thus it “applies equally to the federal government and the states.” 130 S.Ct. 3020, 3050 (2010). As a prospective lower court judge I do not feel that it would be appropriate to give my personal opinion on a question that has been conclusively resolved by the Supreme Court.

If I were confirmed as a judge, I would faithfully apply Heller and McDonald, and my personal views would play no role in my decisions on this or any other issue.

- a. Do you believe that explicitly guaranteed substantive rights, such as those guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, are also fundamental rights? Please explain why or why not.

Response: According to Supreme Court precedent, not all rights guaranteed in the Bill of Rights are considered “fundamental rights.” For example, the Supreme Court has never ruled that the Third Amendment protection against quartering of soldiers, the Fifth Amendment grand jury indictment requirements, the Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial in civil cases and the Eighth Amendment’s prohibition on excessive fines are applicable to the states through the Fourteenth Amendment. See McDonald v. Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 3020, 3035 n.13 (2010).

- b. Is it your understanding of Supreme Court precedent that those provisions of the Bill of Rights that embody fundamental rights are deemed to apply against the States? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. According to the Supreme Court’s opinion in McDonald v. Chicago, the question of whether a particular right guaranteed in the Bill of Rights applies to the states through the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment turns on whether the right “is fundamental to our scheme of ordered liberty.” Id. at 3036.

- c. The Heller Court further stated that “it has always been widely understood that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right.” Do you believe that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right? Please explain why or why not.

Response: In both Heller and McDonald, 128 S.Ct. at 2066, the Supreme Court has made it clear that the Second Amendment codified a pre-existing right.

- d. What limitations remain on the individual, Second Amendment rights now that the amendment has been incorporated against the States?

Response: In Heller, the Court identified some limitations, stating “nothing in our opinion should be taken to cast doubt on longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms. We also recognize another important limitation on the right to keep and carry arms. Miller said, as we have explained, that the sorts of weapons protected were those ‘in common use at the time.’” Dist. of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 626-27 (2008)(footnote omitted).

- 4. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy relied in part on the “evolving standards of decency” to hold that capital punishment for any murderer under age 18 was unconstitutional. When determining what the “evolving standards of decency” are, justices have looked to different standards. Some justices have justified their decision by looking to the laws of various American states, in addition to foreign law, and in other cases have looked solely to the laws and traditions of foreign countries. Do you believe either standard has merit when interpreting the text of the Constitution?

Response: I do not believe that it is appropriate for foreign laws or traditions to be used in the interpretation of the Constitution. Supreme Court precedents do, however, permit reference to the laws of individual states in determining whether a punishment is “unusual” under the Eighth Amendment.

- a. If so, do you believe one standard more meritorious than the other? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Please see response immediately above.

- 5. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: No. It is not proper to rely on foreign or international law in determining the meaning of the Constitution.

- a. If so, under what circumstances would you consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution?

Response: Please see response immediately above.

- b. Do you believe foreign nations have ideas and solutions to legal problems that could contribute to the proper interpretation of our laws?

Response: No.

- 6. The Eleventh Amendment provides that “[t]he Judicial Power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.” That is a pretty clear textual command, but the Supreme Court, in Hans v. Louisiana, 134 U.S. 1 (1890), held that state sovereign immunity extends not only to suits by citizens from other states, but also to suits by citizens from the same state. Is Hans consistent with the plain terms of the Eleventh Amendment?

Response: As the Supreme Court has explained, Hans “recognized that the States’ sovereign immunity is not limited to the literal terms of the Eleventh Amendment. Although the text of the Amendment refers only to suits against a State by citizens of another State, we have repeatedly held that an unconsenting State also is immune from suits by its own citizens.” Tennessee Student Assistance Corp. v. Hood, 541 U.S. 440, 446 (2004) (internal citation omitted).

- a. If not, what justification is there for the decision?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the Hans decision was based not on the text of the Eleventh Amendment, but rather on a broader principle of state sovereign immunity that is protected by the Constitution. As the Court has explained:

Instead of explicitly memorializing the full breadth of the sovereign immunity retained by the States when the Constitution was ratified, Congress chose in the text of the Eleventh Amendment only to address the specific provisions of the Constitution that had raised concerns during the ratification debates and formed the basis of the Chisom [v. Georgia] decision [that citizens of one state could sue another state in federal court]. As a result, the Eleventh Amendment does not define the scope of the States' sovereign immunity; it is but one particular exemplification of that immunity.

Federal Maritime Safety Comm'n v. South Carolina State Ports Authority, 535 U.S. 743, 752-53 (2002) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

7. Have you handled any cases or do you have any experience involving discrimination law? If so, please describe the matter and your responsibilities.

Response: No, I do not have experience involving discrimination law.

8. Over the last ten years, the Supreme Court has issued a number of rulings clarifying citizens' rights under the Fourth Amendment. All of these decisions will affect the methods law enforcement use to combat crime and how the facts are developed during prosecutions and trials. Which decision(s) do you believe could have the biggest impact on federal district court judges and why?

Response: Federal district court judges are required to apply the Fourth Amendment as interpreted by the Supreme Court and the Circuit Courts of Appeals to police encounters with citizens.

During the last ten years, the Supreme Court has issued a number of decisions that clarify the scope of the Fourth Amendment as well as the application of the exclusionary rule to evidence obtained in violation of the Fourth Amendment. For example, in Georgia v. Randolph, 547 U.S. 103 (2006), the Court held that a warrantless search of a residence was improper where the officers obtained the consent to search from a co-occupant but another occupant was physically present and refused to consent. In Davis v. United States, 131 S. Ct. 2419 (2011), the Court clarified that the exclusionary rule does not apply when the police conduct a search in compliance with binding precedent that is later overruled. And in Hudson v. Michigan, 547 U.S. 586 (2006) the Court ruled that violations of the Fourth Amendment "knock and announce" rule do not warrant the exclusion of evidence seized in the execution of an otherwise valid search warrant.

Just last month, in United States v. Jones, 132 S. Ct. 945 (2012) the Supreme Court ruled that the attachment of a Global-Positioning-System (GPS) tracking device to a vehicle and subsequent use of that device to monitor a vehicle's movement on public streets was a search within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment. The Jones decision may have a significant influence on litigation in the lower courts because it provides guidance on the application of the Fourth Amendment in cases involving a use of GPS devices and other advances in technology.

9. How would you determine what level of scrutiny to apply in a case alleging a Due Process violation? Please be specific as to the cases on which you would rely.

Response: The Supreme Court has held that “the due process clause specifically protects those fundamental rights and liberties which are objectively deeply rooted in this nation’s history and tradition and implicit in the concepts of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (internal quotation marks omitted). In general, a law that burdens a fundamental right protected by the due process clause is subject to strict scrutiny – that is, it must be narrowly tailored to serve a compelling state interest. Where, however, a law does not infringe on this sort of “fundamental liberty interest,” then the due process clause requires only that it be “rationally related to legitimate government interests.” Glucksberg, 521 U.S. at 728.

10. How would you determine what level of scrutiny to apply in a case alleging an Equal Protection violation? Please be specific as to the cases on which you would rely.

Response: The Supreme Court has held that “equal protection analysis requires strict scrutiny of a legislative classification only when the classification impermissibly interferes with the exercise of a fundamental right or operates to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class.” Massachusetts Bd. of Retirement v. Murgia, 427 U.S. 307, 312 (1976) (footnote omitted). The Court has held that the suspect classifications that trigger strict scrutiny are classifications based on “race, alienage, or national origin.” City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, Inc., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985).

The Court has also held that a form of heightened scrutiny applies to “quasi-suspect” classifications, including laws that discriminate based on gender or against non-marital children. See Clark v. Jeter, 486 U.S. 456, 461 (1988); Cleburne Living Center, 473 at 440-441. Such a law “fails unless it is substantially related to a sufficiently important governmental interest.” Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. at 441.

All other classifications that do not fall within the previous categories are subject to the rational basis level of scrutiny, which requires that the challenged law be upheld so long as “there is a rational relationship between the disparity of treatment and some legitimate governmental purpose.” Heller v. Doe, 509 U.S. 312, 320 (1993).

11. In your questionnaire, you state you “presented oral arguments to appellate courts.” Please list the cases in which you presented oral arguments to appellate courts and the legal issues you personally handled in those cases.

Response: Paddock Equipment Co. v. University of South Carolina, 289 S.C. 219, 345 S.E.2d 749 (1986). I presented the oral argument before the South Carolina Court of Appeals. I personally handled all of the issues raised by the appeal, which concerned whether a state statutory limit of the remedies available in bid challenges applied to a bid protest related to the construction of a swimming pool.

Winfield Towles v. South Carolina Medical Malpractice Liability Insurance and Joint Underwriting Association, South Carolina Supreme Court Memorandum Opinion 88-MO-054. I was primary author of the brief and presented the oral argument on behalf of Dr. Towles in this appeal to the South Carolina Supreme Court. I handled all of the legal issues involved, which related to the limits of insurance coverage for medical malpractice.

Russo v. Sutton, 317 S.C. 441, 454 S.E.2d 895 (1995). I was primary author of the brief and presented the oral argument in this appeal to the South Carolina Supreme Court on behalf of the Respondent. I handled all of the issues involved in this appeal which related to the viability of a cause of action for alienation of affections and the retroactivity of a decision to eliminate that cause of action.

12. In your questionnaire, you estimated the number of cases you have tried to verdict, judgment or final decision to be 15. Can you please list these 15 cases and whether you were sole counsel, associate counsel, or something else for each case?

Response: Hutson S. Davis, Jr., v. Deborah S. Kelley, S. C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I was sole counsel in this trial.

Russo v. Sutton, S.C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I tried this case with my law partner. The trial responsibilities were divided by witness. The jury awarded my client a verdict, which was appealed. The case is reported at 422 S.E.2d 750, 310 SC 200 (1992).

Collins Entertainment Corp. v. Drews Distributing, Inc., Civil Action No. 6:96-3398-13 (D.S.C. 1996). I tried this case with my law partner. All of the trial responsibilities were divided.

Drews Distributing, Inc. v. Leisure Time Technologies, Inc., Civil Action No. 7:96-3307-13 (D.S.C. 1997). I tried this case with my law partner. All of the trial responsibilities were divided. Our clients received an award that was appealed and affirmed at 175 F.3d 849 (4th Cir. 1999).

Connie Walters v. Robert Bunch, S. C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I tried this case with my law partner. I handled the direct examinations of our witnesses, and he handled cross-examination of the opposing witnesses. The other trial responsibilities were also divided.

Maynard v. Ben Arnold Heritage Co., S. C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifteenth Judicial Circuit. S.C. Supreme Court Memorandum Opinion No 88-MO-054. I was sole counsel for the defendant in this trial.

Rogers and LeBan v. Montgomery, S.C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I was sole counsel for the plaintiff in this trial.

Lahicotte v. Moore, S.C. Court of Common Pleas, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I tried this case on behalf of the plaintiff with my law partner. My responsibility was direct examination of our witnesses and his was cross-examination of the opposing witnesses. The remaining trial responsibilities were equally divided. The first trial resulted in a hung jury. We then tried the case a second time, and at that trial the responsibilities were divided similarly. United States of America, ex rel, Michael K. Drakeford, M.D. vs. Tuomey Healthcare System, Inc., C/A No. 3:05-cv-2858-MJP. I tried this case with my law partner and co-counsel. Witnesses were divided by subject matter, with the remaining trial responsibilities being evenly divided.

Cunningham v. Home Health Care (S.C. Richland County Magistrate's Court). I was sole trial counsel in this case.

Dr. Winfield Towles v. South Carolina Medical Malpractice Liability Insurance and Joint Underwriting Association, S.C. Court of Common Pleas, Eighth Judicial Circuit. I tried this case on behalf of the plaintiff with my law partner. Responsibilities were divided by witness, with other trial responsibilities equally divided. The verdict was appealed, but the appellate decision is not reported.

Kaiser v. Estate of William N. Geiger, Jr., S.C. Probate Court, Fifth Judicial Circuit. I tried this case with co-counsel. We divided trial responsibilities equally.

American Amusement Co. v. Brigham, S. C. Court of Common Pleas, Second Judicial Circuit. I was sole counsel in this trial.

I have also served as associate counsel for defendants in at least two confidential attorney disciplinary trials.

a. Were any of the cases in which you were sole counsel reported?

Response: No.

13. At your hearing, Senator Coons asked you about Lucas v. South Carolina Costal Council, in which you contributed to the "Petition for Certiorari and the Petitioner's Brief and Reply Brief on the merits and prepared the senior partner for the oral argument." Which particular legal issues did you research and address when contributing to these two briefs?

Response: My research and contribution to these briefs were related to these issues:

- (1) Whether the Constitution's Fifth Amendment guarantee against government takings should be qualified by any exception for nuisances;
- (2) Whether any nuisance exception should be applicable when the regulation eliminates the worth of property;
- (3) Whether the fact that a regulation is within a state's police power means that compensation can be denied under the Fifth Amendment; and,
- (4) Whether the matter was ripe for adjudication.

a. Were you solely responsible for these issues?

Response: No. My work was part of a team effort.

14. One case you list in your questionnaire as one of the “ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled” is Johnson v. Collins Entm’t, Inc. For which specific legal issues were you solely responsible in this case?

Response: Neither I nor any one lawyer on our litigation team was solely responsible for any particular legal issue in this case. I was heavily involved in all aspects of the defense of claims for alleged civil RICO violations and claims for declaratory and injunctive relief. I was the primary lawyer responsible for fact discovery and development.

a. Please describe in detail what work you performed on these issues.

Response: I personally handled much of the discovery in this case, which included propounding and responding to numerous interrogatories and requests for production, taking and defending depositions and drafting numerous motions and oppositions to motions. I also argued summary judgment motions and contributed to the brief on an appeal to the Fourth Circuit. The decision appears at 199 F.3d 710 (4th Cir. 1999).

15. For all but one of the cases you list as your ten most significant, your representation terminated on or before 2002. Have you handled significant litigated matters in the last ten years?

Response: Yes, in addition to continuing to handle the litigation of Tuomey Healthcare Systems, Inc., I have handled many other cases, as indicated below.

a. Please list these significant cases and the issues litigated.

16. In the case of United States ex rel. Drakeford v. Tuomey Healthcare Sys., Inc., how many witnesses were called in the nearly month-long trial?

Response: Eighteen.

a. How many witnesses did you personally examine during the trial?

Response: Sixteen witnesses were called by the government, and two witnesses were called by Tuomey.

My responsibility at trial, in addition to jury selection, was to cross-examine the 22 contracting physicians the Government indicated it intended to call in its case-in-chief, many of whom were held under subpoena for the duration of the trial. After I cross-examined the government's first physician witness, it declined to call any of the other contracting physicians. I did not personally conduct any other examinations.

I also participated in every decision and every aspect of strategy during that trial. I prepared co-counsel to examine the witnesses assigned to them. I was also the primary author of the trial brief and its attachments which included the selection of exhibits and witnesses to be presented. I was the primary author of the closing argument.

b. For which specific legal issues were you solely responsible?

Response: With the exception of jury selection, for which I was solely responsible, the responsibilities relating to the legal issues were equally shared by me, my law partner and co-counsel.

17. Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." The Senate questionnaire you submitted asked you to describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities and to list specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each. You mentioned the services you have provided as a State court-appointed representative, but you did not list the amount of time you spent on these matters.

a. To how many cases were you appointed?

Response: I have been appointed by the courts to handle pro bono matters throughout my career. I do not have computer records before 2000, but I estimate that I was so appointed once per year from 1987 to 1999. Since that time I have been appointed at least four times.

b. Approximately, how many hours per year did you spend on these cases?

Response: These matters for which I have been appointed generally involved the state's efforts to terminate parental rights. These matters require a series of periodic hearings, at least two, and ending in a final merits hearing. Each matter required me to meet with the individual or individuals whom I was appointed to represent and often some or all of the other parties and witnesses. The hearings themselves generally require at least three to five hours of my time.

I did not record my time, as it is not billed, but I estimate that over the course of my career my time spent per year to be an average of approximately 25 hours on appointed cases and 25 hours on other pro bono matters.

c. Were any of these matters criminal matters?

Response: No.

i. If so, please describe in detail.

Response: Please see response immediately above.

d. Have you represented any clients pro bono without being court appointed? If so, please describe your representation.

Response: Yes. Throughout my 27 years in private practice I have represented many individuals who were in serious need of representation but were without the means to pay for that representation. My non-court-appointed pro bono cases have included serious attorney grievance matters, consumer contract disputes, employment issues, landlord-tenant issues and others.

18. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions late on February 22, 2012. I prepared my responses which were reviewed by representatives of the Department of Justice, and I subsequently finalized my responses and submitted them on February 27, 2012.

19. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Mary Geiger Lewis
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of South Carolina
to the Written Responses of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. In 1986, I authored amendments to the False Claims Act that empowered individual citizens to act on behalf of the federal government and recover taxpayer dollars lost to fraud and abuse of government programs. I also sponsored legislation to update the False Claims Act in 2009. Since the passage of the 1986 amendments, this important law has helped recover over $30 billion for American taxpayers from those who seek to defraud the federal government.

One of the cases of interest to me is your representation of a Hospital chain that was found to have violated the Stark law, which prohibits financial arrangements between hospitals and doctors that rely upon referrals of patients. This case also had a False Claims Act component. It appears that part of the defense strategy put forth was to attack the whistleblower who filed the qui tam case.

Specifically, one of the briefs for the defendants stated that the whistleblower who filed the case was “a malcontent physician with a long history of disruptive behavior and an economic motive to hurt [the Hospital chain]”. That same brief argued that the Government “made an ill-advised decision to intervene, apparently based on its view that its own crabbed and incorrect view of the law is more important than Tuomey’s health care mission.”

As an advocate of whistleblowers, I have long found the strategy of attacking a whistleblower as, to use the words in your brief, “ill-advised”. Ultimately, a jury found against the Hospital in this case and the judge awarded the federal government over $44 million.

a. What is your personal view of whistleblowers?

Response: Whistleblowers play a very powerful, important and successful role in deterring fraud and abuse in government programs. My law firm currently represents three whistleblowers in two separate qui tam actions.

b. Based upon your past involvement in a strategy to discredit a whistleblower, what assurance can you give the Committee that you will protect the rights of whistleblowers in the courtroom, should you be confirmed?

Response: An advocate has a responsibility to test the credibility of an opposing witness by pointing out the witness’s biases, prejudices and motives, even if that witness is a whistleblower. Should I be confirmed, my role would be to apply the law fairly and impartially to all of the parties who came before me. Federal law protects whistleblowers, and if confirmed, I would faithfully apply that law.

- c. Part of your defense of the Hospital included the argument that the Government's enforcement of the Stark statute was "contrary to the Express Provisions and Purpose of the Medicare Statute." The brief you filed supporting this argument claims that because the goal of Medicare is to ensure adequate medical care for the aged throughout the country, any attempt to enforce the Stark law would prohibit the hospital from carrying out that mission.

Response: Our brief on behalf of Tuomey Healthcare System did not argue that the government may never enforce the Stark law or that any attempt to enforce the law would prevent hospitals from providing adequate medical care. Rather, our position was that a particular interpretation of the Stark law advanced by the government in the Tuomey case should be rejected.

One of our arguments was that the government's interpretation of the Stark law was inconsistent with 42 U.S.C. § 1395, which provides that "nothing in this subchapter [which includes the Stark law] shall be construed to authorize any Federal officer or employee to exercise any supervision or control over . . . the manner in which medical services are provided, or over the selection, tenure, or compensation of any officer or employee of any institution, agency, or person providing health services...." We argued the government's interpretation of the Stark law in Tuomey was inconsistent with this provision because it would have allowed the government to exercise supervision or control over the operation of Tuomey and other hospitals and the compensation of their employees.

We also argued that the government's interpretation of the Stark law in Tuomey was inconsistent with implementing regulations of the Center for Medicare and Medical Services – the agency responsible for promulgating and interpreting the regulations. We argued that the government's interpretation should be rejected because the guidance provided by CMS is entitled to controlling weight under well-established precedents.

- d. The Stark law is an amendment to Medicare. This means that a condition of participation is that prohibited financial arrangements based upon self-referrals will not be reimbursed by the program. Based upon your argument, it appears you believe that the Government cannot enforce any condition that limits how a Medicare provider operates. Do you still believe that providers have a legal right to Medicare payments without any conditions set forth by Congress? How do you square this argument with the Supreme Court's decision in South Dakota v. Dole, where the Supreme Court held that Congress can attach conditions on the receipt of federal funds?

Response: Providers do not have a legal right to Medicare payments without complying with legal conditions set forth by Congress. Our argument in the Tuomey case was not that the government can never enforce the Stark law.

Rather, we argued that the government's interpretation of the Stark law was incorrect as applied to the facts of Tuomey, that our client had not violated the Stark law, and that even if it had done so, it did not act with the fraudulent intent required to violate the False Claims Act.

- e. Please explain your argument that the Government cannot enforce the Stark law “to prevent Tuomey from achieving this important goal” of providing Medicare services to the elderly.

Response: Please see my response to 1(c) above.

- f. Do you believe that Congress is prohibited from placing conditions on Medicare providers? If so, why?

Response: No. I do not believe that Congress is prohibited from placing conditions on Medicare providers.

- g. Many federal courts have found that a violation of the Stark law is a basis for False Claims Act liability. Do you continue to believe that the Stark law does not form the basis for False Claims Act liability?

Response: The particular Stark law violation alleged in Tuomey was not accompanied by the fraudulent intent required to establish liability under the False Claims Act. I have not previously expressed a view on whether the Stark law could form the basis for False Claims Act liability in other contexts, and do not believe it would be appropriate to give my personal view on an issue that could come before me as a judge.

2. In Littlejohn v. South Carolina, your law firm, along with Attorney Dick Harpootlian, who was the State Democratic Chairman, negotiated a settlement with the State Budget and Control Board. The Chair of the State Board at the time was Democrat Governor Jim Hodges. Given not only Mr. Harpootlian's relationship to Governor Hodges, but also your previous work on the Governor's transition team, can you understand why concerns were raised that the agreement may not have represented an arms-length negotiation?

Response: Particularly when public funds are involved, any settlement agreement in a class action case should be scrutinized for fairness and reasonableness. In federal court, for example, a district court may not approve a settlement that binds for the members of the class without first finding that it is “fair, reasonable and adequate.” FRCP 23(e)(2). In Littlejohn, the South Carolina Circuit Court found the settlement to be a reasonable and adequate result for the class.

- a. Canon 2 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges calls on a Judge to avoid even the appearance of impropriety. If a Judge had ties to attorneys similar to those between you, Mr. Harpootlian, and Governor Hodges in Littlejohn, do you believe Canon 2 would have been satisfied? Please explain.

Response: Canon 2 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges requires, without exception, that a judge “act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary.” It follows that there is no more basic principle pertaining to the judiciary than that judges should be free of personal interest or bias and free from predisposition in their decision-making.

Recusal is not required where the judge merely had a prior professional relationship with an attorney appearing before the judge. Such a relationship alone does not equate to bias when that attorney appears before the judge. Rather, the relationship between the judge and attorney must have occurred during the attorney’s involvement in a case now before the judge for recusal to be required.

A decision to recuse also depends upon whether the judge feels he or she can disregard the relationship and whether others can reasonably be expected to believe that the relationship is disregarded. The test for the appearance of impropriety is whether a judge’s “impartiality might reasonably be questioned.” 28 USC § 455. Specific disqualification circumstances are set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 455(b).

- b. If you are confirmed as a judge, how would you go about handling any potential or actual conflicts of interest or other recusal issues that might arise because of your prior activities?

Response: It is the obligation of the judge to disclose all facts that might be grounds for disqualification. I would disclose any potential disqualifying facts to the parties and their counsel. In appropriate circumstances I might ask the parties and their lawyers to consider, out of my presence, whether to waive disqualification. If all of the parties so agree, I would continue to participate in the proceeding. If all parties do not agree, I would respect their decision. It should be emphasized that the parties’ agreement to waive disqualification must be on the record; otherwise, it would not be considered effective. See 28 USC § 455(c).

Even if the parties genuinely waive their objections to disqualification, if I still feel that I cannot be impartial, or if the ground for disqualification was one of those enumerated in 28 USC § 455 (b), then I would be obligated to recuse myself. A judge not only has the discretion, but the duty, to recuse himself or herself if the judge feels that he or she cannot be truly impartial. If confirmed, I would strictly adhere to all of the statutes and other applicable standards governing recusal.

3. I am concerned about your lack of experience in criminal law matters. You mentioned in the hearing that you can quickly learn criminal law. You noted in your response that “criminal trials are very much like the civil trials that I’ve tried. The rules of evidence are the same.” Given that federal criminal trials are governed by a different set of procedures than are civil trials, could you please explain your statement?

Response: I did not mean to suggest that there were no differences between the procedural rules that apply to criminal trials and those that apply in civil trials. I was attempting to convey the important fact that the same evidentiary rules apply. The introduction or exclusion of testimony and exhibits under the Federal Rules of Evidence is at the heart of a criminal trial, and I have a great deal of experience with those rules. I have also taken the opportunity to become more familiar with the rules of criminal procedure, as well as some areas of substantive criminal law with the assistance of my law partner who is a former Assistant United States Attorney and continues to focus his practice in the area of criminal law.

4. You further responded: “I’ve also attended many sentencing proceedings, pleas, just the kinds of things that I would face as a district court judge. And I’ve even attended some seminars on the sentencing guidelines and stuff.”

- a. What role did you play in the criminal trials, other proceedings, sentencing proceedings and pleas you referenced in your response to my question at the hearing?

Response: I was referring to proceedings that I attended after my nomination to further inform myself about criminal law and procedure. My role was as an observer who was allowed to discuss with the presiding judge the manner in which the proceedings were conducted, the rulings that were made and the basis for those rulings.

- b. You further stated, “I will be completely prepared for whatever matter comes before me, be it civil or criminal.” Could you please further articulate what specific steps or actions you will take beyond mere attendance at seminars to ensure you are prepared?

Response: I have been fortunate to have had district court judges who have allowed me to shadow them. I have spent an entire day of criminal proceedings with one district court judge who provided me with the same materials he reviewed in order to prepare to sentence criminal defendants convicted of a wide range of offenses. I was able to see how a pre-sentence report is structured and used, to observe sentencing proceedings, and to discuss the proceedings with the judge afterwards.

I have also observed plea proceedings and had the benefit of one-on-one instruction from the presiding judge on the proper conduct of such proceedings.

I have also accepted an invitation from a well-respected district court judge to join him for an entire session of criminal proceedings where I will be allowed to join him in the courtroom and in chambers to see exactly how he approaches the criminal matters before him.

I plan to continue to take advantage of the generous offers from our district court judges to allow me to shadow them, and to study substantive criminal law, the Sentencing Guidelines and the materials I have been provided by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts so that, if confirmed, I will be fully prepared to assume my duties.

5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is integrity. He or she must be committed to the fair and impartial application of the law to the facts and must treat everyone in the courtroom with dignity and respect. I possess this attribute.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: In my view, the appropriate temperament of a judge is one of humility. The most important elements are patience, diligence and respect for everyone who comes before the court. I believe I meet this standard.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: When faced with a matter of first impression, I would start with an analysis of the text of the provision at issue. If the plain language of the text did not provide a clear answer, I would look to the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit for precedents interpreting a similar provision for guidance, as well as any persuasive authority from other federal courts.

- 9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own judgment of the merits, or your best judgment of the merits?

Response: I would be bound to apply that decision, as precedent from a higher court.

- 10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Statutes enacted by Congress are presumed to be constitutional. It is appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional only when Congress has clearly exceeded its Constitutional authority or infringed on a right protected by the Constitution.

- 11. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would manage my caseload by enforcing deadlines established by scheduling orders, by rendering prompt decisions, and by working as hard as is necessary to conduct the court's business.

- 12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, I believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. If confirmed, I would take the steps that I describe in response to Question 11 above.

- 13. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on February 22, 2012. I prepared my responses which were reviewed by representatives of the Department of Justice, and I subsequently finalized my responses and submitted them on February 27, 2012.

- 14. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Mary Geiger Lewis
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of South Carolina
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy? How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: I believe the role of the judge is to determine the applicable law based upon precedent, to apply that law fairly and impartially to the facts before him or her, and to do so in a respectful and courteous manner.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: Judges have an obligation to apply the law fairly and impartially in any case without regard to the political beliefs, economic status, gender, or ethnicity of those who appear before him or her. If confirmed I will do precisely that.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: The doctrine of stare decisis applies to all courts. If confirmed, I would strictly adhere to the doctrine.

Responses of Patty Shwartz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Tom Coburn, M.D.

- 1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: No.

a. If not, please explain.

Response: The Constitution does not change based upon the times. The Constitution is only changed through the amendment process.

- 2. Do you believe judicial doctrine rightly incorporates the evolving understandings of the Constitution forged through social movements, legislation, and historical practice?

Response: No, except in the rare circumstance in which binding precedent so dictates.

a. If not, please explain.

Response: A lower court confronted with a constitutional question must follow the binding precedent. In the context of the Eighth Amendment, the Supreme Court has considered the “evolving standards of decency.” Graham v. Florida, 130 S. Ct. 2011, 2021 (2010) (citations omitted). To identify these standards, the Supreme Court has observed that “community consensus” is “not itself determinative,” but it should be given weight. Id. at 2026. According to the Supreme Court, “the clearest and most reliable objective evidence of contemporary values is the legislation enacted by the country’s legislatures.” Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 312 (2002) (citations omitted). As a lower court judge, I am bound to follow this precedent.

- 3. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: A statute is presumed to be constitutional. If a case involved a claim that a statute infringed a constitutional right, I would first determine whether binding precedent resolves the specific claim. If it did not, then I would consider the statute, the provision of the Constitution embodying the right alleged to be infringed, the factors set forth in the binding precedent concerning the contours of the constitutional right, and the applicable level of scrutiny to determine if the statute unconstitutionally infringes such a right.

4. The U.S. Supreme Court held in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), that the Second Amendment of the United States Constitution “protects an individual right to possess a firearm unconnected to service in a militia, and to use that arm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense within the home.” As Justice Scalia’s opinion in Heller pointed out, Sir William Blackstone, the preeminent authority on English law for the Founders, cited the right to bear arms as one of the fundamental rights of Englishmen. Leaving aside the McDonald v. Chicago decision, do you personally believe the right to bear arms is a fundamental right?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that the Second Amendment confers an individual and fundamental right to bear arms, McDonald v. City of Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 3020, 3042 (2010), and I would follow that precedent.

- a. Do you believe that explicitly guaranteed substantive rights, such as those guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, are also fundamental rights? Please explain why or why not.

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that almost all of the rights set forth in the Bill of Rights are fundamental rights and I would follow that precedent.

- b. Is it your understanding of Supreme Court precedent that those provisions of the Bill of Rights that embody fundamental rights are deemed to apply against the States? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. The United States Supreme Court has held that many but not all of the provisions in the Bill of Rights are fundamental rights that apply against the States through selective incorporation under the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

- c. The Heller Court further stated that “it has always been widely understood that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right.” Do you believe that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right? Please explain why or why not.

Response: The United States Supreme Court reviewed the text and history of the Second Amendment and held that the Second Amendment embodies a pre-existing right, Heller, 554 U.S. at 592, and I would follow that precedent.

- d. What limitations remain on the individual, Second Amendment rights now that the amendment has been incorporated against the States?

Response: The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit have not fully resolved this question. In Heller, however, the Supreme Court identified a few such limits, explaining that “nothing in our opinion should be taken to cast doubt on longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms.” 554 U.S. at 626-27.

Responses of Patty Shwartz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

- 1. In your opening remarks at your hearing you indicated that members of the Department of Justice and the White House Counsel's Office had assisted you throughout the process. Other than what is contained in your response to Question 26.a. of your Senate Questionnaire, were there additional contacts with those entities? If so, please describe the nature of your contact, including dates of any meetings and summaries of communications or meetings.

Response: On several occasions after my nomination on October 5, 2011, I communicated with representatives of both the Department of Justice and White House Counsel's Office concerning the status of my nomination and the nomination hearing. In addition, I contacted representatives of the Department of Justice to obtain answers to procedural questions. In addition, I discussed arranging a second meeting with Senator Robert Menendez and met with a representative of the White House Counsel's Office on January 13, 2012, in connection with that second meeting. I also met with representatives of the Department of Justice and White House Counsel's Office on February 14, 2012, in connection with my February 15, 2012 hearing.

- 2. Your call, in your commencement speech, to disregard precedent or preexisting doctrine "to best accommodate the demands of a greater society" sounds a lot like those who advocate a "living" constitution that evolves over time.
 - a. Do you think judges should consider the current preferences of society when ruling on a constitutional challenge? Should current preferences of society be a basis for overruling longstanding Supreme Court or Circuit precedent?

Response: I gave the speech referred to in this question at my 1986 law school graduation and was not referring to constitutional interpretation or the role and responsibility of a judge. A judge must follow binding precedent and should not consider societal preferences in ruling on a case, except in the rare circumstance where binding precedent so dictates. In determining whether a particular punishment violates the Cruel and Unusual Punishment Clause of the Eighth Amendment, the United States Supreme Court considers societal preferences to identify "evolving standards of decency." Graham v. Florida, 130 S. Ct. 2011, 2021 (2010) (citations omitted). Although the Supreme Court has observed that "community consensus" is "not itself determinative," it should be given weight. Id. at 2026. According to the Supreme Court, "the clearest and most reliable objective evidence of contemporary values is the legislation enacted by the country's legislatures." Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 312 (2002) (citations omitted). As a lower court judge, I am bound to follow this precedent.

- b. On the living constitution theory, Justice Scalia has said, “the risk of assessing evolving standards is that it is all too easy to believe that evolution has culminated in one’s own views.” Do you agree with Justice Scalia?

Response: I am not familiar with the context in which Justice Scalia made this statement and I am not exactly sure what he was trying to convey and, therefore, I cannot say whether I agree with the statement or not. To the extent Justice Scalia was expressing a concern about the influence of a judge’s personal views on a case, I can say that a judge’s personal views should play no role in deciding a case. Rather, a judge should decide a case based only on the governing law and the facts embodied in the record.

3. In my question regarding your meeting with Senator Menendez you stated that you talked generally about your understanding of certain substantive areas of the law but that he didn’t ask you to reveal your views on “any of those cases.”

- a. What were the “substantive areas of the law” which you discussed and what did you tell him with regard to those?

Response: To the best of my recollection, between the two meetings I had with Senator Menendez, he asked me about my understanding of what constitutes settled law and my understanding of several areas of substantive law including the rights of corporations, executive power, executive privilege, the levels of scrutiny that apply to a law being challenged as violating either the Equal Protection Clause or Due Process Clause, federalism, and the Ninth Amendment. I do not recall if all of these subjects were discussed at both meetings. At no time did he ask for, nor did I offer, my personal views nor did I give any indication as to how I would rule on any issue that might come before me as a judge. His inquiry focused on my understanding of various areas of the law.

- b. What cases did you discuss?

Response: Senator Menendez mentioned two cases: Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, 130 S. Ct. 876 (2010) and Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113 (1973). He mentioned Citizens United in the context of our discussion of the rights of corporations, as indicated in my response below. With respect to Roe, he simply asked if it was settled law, which I understood to be his reference to binding precedent or stare decisis, and I said yes. Citizens United is also binding precedent. This was the extent of our discussion about these cases.

- c. You indicated, in a response to Senator Coburn, that you discussed, in a general way, your understanding of executive power. What is your general understanding of the scope and limits of executive power?

Response: Under Supreme Court precedent, “Justice Jackson’s familiar tripartite scheme provides the accepted framework,” Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524

(2008), for considering questions of executive power. First, when the President “acts pursuant to an expressed or implied authorization of Congress, his authority is at its maximum, for it includes all that he possesses in his own right plus all that Congress can delegate.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Second, when the President acts in the “absence of either a congressional grant or denial of authority, he can only rely upon his own independent powers, but there is a zone of twilight in which he and Congress may have concurrent authority, or in which its distribution is uncertain.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). Third, when the President takes actions that are “incompatible with the expressed or implied will of Congress, his power is at its lowest ebb and the Court can sustain his actions only by disabling the Congress from acting upon the subject.” Id. at 524-25 (internal quotation marks omitted).

4. Senator Menendez issued a statement where he said, in part, the following:

“In my opinion, Judge Shwartz did not adequately demonstrate the breadth of knowledge of constitutional law and pivotal Supreme Court decisions such as Citizens United that we should expect from a United States Circuit Court judge.”

a. In your first interview with him, did Senator Menendez ask you specifically about the Supreme Court’s holding in Citizens United? What, specifically, did he ask you?

Response: Senator Menendez asked me a general question about whether or not corporations have rights.

b. What did you tell him?

Response: I explained that it was my understanding of the law that corporations have the same First Amendment rights as people, in addition to certain rights under the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Amendments. I do not believe that I mentioned the Citizens United case by name, and he indicated that it is the Supreme Court precedent on this topic. If there was a misunderstanding about my knowledge of that case this may have been the reason.

5. Would you please update your Senate Questionnaire, question 26.a and 26.b. to fully describe all your interviews with Senator Menendez?

Response: In addition to the interview referenced in question 26.a, I met with Senator Menendez on January 13, 2012. As to question 26.b, my original response remains accurate. At no time has anyone, including Senator Menendez, discussed any case, issue, or question in a manner that could be interpreted as seeking any assurance about how I would rule on any case, issue, or question.

6. It appears that your legal and judicial experience is entirely at the trial court level. Please provide to the committee a description of your appellate experience including:

- a. The number of appellate briefs you have written, edited, or otherwise contributed to in a significant manner, and a description of each.

Response: I have not written any appellate briefs. During my time as an Assistant United States Attorney, I consulted with and provided support to the appellate lawyers who handled cases I prosecuted in the trial court, including providing the legal arguments (including in written briefs) made to the trial court and identifying portions of the trial record that were relevant to the issues on appeal.

- b. The number of appellate arguments you have participated in, and a description of each.

Response: None.

- c. The number of appellate opinions you have written, edited, or otherwise contributed to in a significant manner.

Response: I have authored hundreds of opinions at the trial level but have not authored any appellate opinions. Some of the cases that I have considered at the trial level have been akin to judicial review of an agency decision and thus similar to the type of situation an appellate court confronts. See, e.g., Solid Waste Services Inc. v. Morris County Municipal Utilities Authority, Civ. No. 08-327, 2008 WL 5046715 (D.N.J. Nov. 20, 2008).

- d. Any other particular experience related to the duties of an appellate court judge, beyond the response you gave to Senator Coons (legal research and writing, record development.)

Response: As an Assistant United States Attorney for more than thirteen years and a United States Magistrate Judge for almost nine years, I have been exposed to a variety of areas of civil and criminal law and procedure. As an Assistant United States Attorney, I briefed and argued significant questions of law and tried cases. As a judge, I have considered briefs and arguments in connection with complex motions and tried cases. Because of the variety of cases that have come before me and the daily requests for resolutions of disputes, I have experience in judicial decision-making in a wide range of substantive legal areas and types of proceedings. Such decision-making involves educating myself on the governing law, applying the law to the facts established in the record, reaching an impartial decision, and providing reasons for the decision. The skills needed to perform these tasks are the same skills needed to fulfill the duties of an appellate judge. The American Bar Association recognized the strength of this collection of experiences in its unanimous rating that I am well qualified for a circuit court judgeship.

Although the job of an appellate judge differs in some significant respects from my current duties, I am also accustomed to making transitions in the law. When I became a United States Magistrate Judge, for example, I went from focusing almost exclusively on criminal law and procedure to spending approximately eighty percent of my time handling civil cases. To ensure I was prepared for these duties, I educated myself on the federal and local rules of civil procedure and civil practice in our court and, for each case, educated myself on the governing substantive law. I would apply the same approach as an appellate judge if I am confirmed.

Moreover, as a Magistrate Judge, I have become well-versed in issues of jurisdiction and am familiar with standards of review, which are important concepts in appellate proceedings. For instance, in each matter I am asked to decide, I must ensure that the District Court has jurisdiction over the case and that I, as a Magistrate Judge, have the authority to decide the issue. Similarly, an appellate court must have jurisdiction over the case and appellate jurisdiction over the issue on appeal. Concerning standards of review, as a Magistrate Judge, I am aware that each of my decisions can be appealed and that those decisions are subject to a certain standard of review. To ensure that I develop a proper record for review, I must understand the standard that the reviewing court would apply to my decision. My understanding of the limits of a particular court's authority and familiarity with the standards of review would be transferable to an appellate judgeship if I am confirmed.

- 7. Interpretation of the Commerce Clause is a longstanding cause for debate and dissention among constitutional scholars. The Supreme Court recognized limits on Congress' Commerce Clause power in United States v. Lopez. Other Supreme Court precedent has taken a more expansive view, relying on Wickard v. Filburn, to find a broad congressional power to regulate commerce on even non-economic activity as long as it relates to a wider and proper federal scheme. Currently unanswered questions, such as whether Congress can mandate individual behavior and/or regulate economic inactivity, leave a lot of room for lower court interpretation.

- a. If assessing a commerce clause issue where Congress has mandated action from a group of previously inactive citizens, what case precedent would you apply? Assume that this is an economic activity that plainly affects interstate commerce.

Response: I have not comprehensively researched this area of the law but I am not presently aware of any precedent from the United States Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit that has addressed a situation in which a statute mandated economic activity from a group of previously inactive citizens. The United States Supreme Court may resolve this issue in connection with its review of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and such a decision would provide precedential guidance. In the absence of such guidance, a lower court considering a challenge to such a law would be guided by the Supreme Court's recent cases on the limits of Congress' power under the Commerce Clause, including Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1 (2005), United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000), and United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995).

- b. Are there any scenarios you can think of where Congress may mandate private citizens to purchase certain goods or services under penalty of fine and/or jail time?

Response: Congress enacted the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, which mandated private citizens to purchase services or pay a penalty. The United States Supreme Court is currently reviewing this statute and may provide precedential guidance as to whether Congress has the authority to enact such a law. I am not aware of any prior decision of the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit addressing this question.

- c. Under current Court precedent, the Court aggregates intrastate economic activity to determine whether it substantially affects interstate commerce. This has allowed the Court to find that a farmer growing wheat for his own personal consumption substantially affected interstate commerce. Under this theory of the Commerce Clause, are you able to give me an example of purely intrastate economic activity that Congress could not regulate?

Response: I do not think it would be appropriate for me to attempt to answer this question outside the context of a specific statute that is aimed at regulating particular conduct. If called upon to examine such a statute, I would consider the statutory text and the authority on which Congress relied to enact it. To determine if the statute falls outside Congress' Commerce Clause authority, I would consider the binding precedent of the United States Supreme Court, including Raich, Morrison, and Lopez, as well as the factual record before the court to determine whether the activity had no substantial effect on interstate commerce.

- d. Is there any justiciable limit to Congress' power to regulate purely intrastate economic activity?

Response: The federal government is one of limited and enumerated powers. Under Article 1, Section 8, and Supreme Court precedent, Congress has the authority to regulate instrumentalities of interstate commerce, channels of interstate commerce, and activities that substantially impact interstate commerce. If the activity that Congress is regulating does not fall within one of these categories or if the statute at issue violates some other provision of the Constitution, then it is beyond Congress' power to regulate such activity.

- 8. What role do you think a judge's opinions of the evolving norms and traditions of our society have in interpreting the written Constitution?

Response: A judge's personal opinion should play no role in deciding any case or in interpreting the Constitution.

- 9. What would be your definition of an "activist judge"?

Response: As the United States District Judge for whom I clerked stated, “judges have cases, not causes.” Thus, an activist judge would be one who seeks to further causes, policies, or personal preferences through his or her decisions rather than deciding the cases before the court based upon the law and the facts.

10. What is your understanding of the current state of the law with regard to the interplay between the establishment and free exercise clause of the First Amendment?

Response: I have not researched this issue comprehensively but, as a general matter, the Establishment Clause prohibits the government from establishing a religion and the Free Exercise Clause protects an individual’s freedom to believe and worship. With respect to the interplay between these two provisions, the Supreme Court has “recognize[d] that there is room for play in the joints between the Clauses, some space for legislative action neither compelled by the Free Exercise Clause nor prohibited by the Establishment Clause.” Cutter v. Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709, 719 (2005) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

11. Do you believe there is a right to privacy in the U.S. Constitution?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that there is a constitutional right to privacy. See, e.g., Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965).

a. Where is it located?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has stated that the right to privacy or personal autonomy is a liberty interest that the Due Process Clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments protect. See, e.g., Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 567 (2003); Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 719-20, 726 & n.19 (1997); Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 846-51 (1992).

b. From what does it derive?

Response: Please see my response to Question 11a.

c. What is your understanding, in general terms, of the contours of that right?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has described the right to privacy or personal autonomy as protecting “the right to marry, to have children, to direct the education and upbringing of one’s children, to marital privacy, to use contraception, to bodily integrity, and to abortion.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1998) (citations omitted).

12. In Griswold, Justice Douglas stated that, although the Bill of Rights did not explicitly mention the right to privacy, it could be found in the “penumbras” and “emanations” of the Constitution.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Douglas that there are certain rights that are not explicitly stated in our Constitution that can be found by “reading between the lines”?

Response: Constitutional rights are not identified by “reading between the lines.” Rather, the Supreme Court has interpreted the Constitution to include certain fundamental rights even though the rights are not literally expressed in the text. Relying on the Due Process Clause, the United States Supreme Court has made clear that the “Due Process Clause specially protects those fundamental rights and liberties which are, objectively, ‘deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition,’ and ‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty,’ such that ‘neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.’” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997) (citations omitted).

- b. Is it appropriate for a judge to go searching for “penumbras” and “emanations” in the Constitution?

Response: Judges should not be searching for “penumbras” and “emanations.” Indeed, the United States Supreme Court has stated that it is “reluctant to expand the content of substantive due process” and directed courts “to exercise the utmost care whenever [they] are asked to break new ground in this field.” Glucksberg, 521 U.S. at 720.

- 13. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is to impartially decide only the case before the court based upon an application of the governing law to the facts established in the record, regardless of the judge’s personal views. I believe my conduct as a United States Magistrate Judge shows that I possess this attribute.

- 14. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: As the United States District Judge for whom I clerked succinctly expressed it, appropriate judicial temperament is characterized by “courtesy to all, partiality to none.” I believe that I have comported myself in accordance with this standard as a United States Magistrate Judge by being courteous, patient, impartial, diligent, and respectful of the litigants, the lawyers, and the process.

- 15. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

- 16. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If presented with a case of first impression that involves a federal statute, I would review the statutory text and if the language is clear, apply it to the facts of the case. If the language were ambiguous, I would examine the statutory scheme of which the particular text is a part, the legislative history, and analogous cases from the United States Supreme Court and Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to see how those courts construed similar text and to identify the analytical framework those courts employed. If there were no such precedent, then I would research cases from other federal courts to determine if other courts considered similar issues and if so, examine the reasoning of those cases for possible guidance.

- 17. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your own best judgment of the merits?

Response: I would be bound by and would apply the precedent of the United States Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, regardless of my personal views about its correctness.

- 18. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A statute is presumed constitutional and a court may deem it unconstitutional “only upon a plain showing that Congress has exceeded its constitutional bounds,” United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 607 (2000), or if it unlawfully infringes a right that the Constitution protects.

- 19. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? What factors would you consider in reaching this decision?

Response: According to Internal Operating Procedure 9.1 of the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, a prior precedential decision of one panel is binding on all subsequent panels. Thus, one panel cannot overrule a precedential decision of another panel. Only a circuit court sitting en banc may overturn the circuit’s precedent. Pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 35, such a sitting should only occur when the panel’s decision conflicts with United States Supreme Court precedent, the case involves “a question of exceptional importance,” or it is “necessary to maintain uniformity of the court’s decisions.” The factors that dictate when an en banc sitting should occur are among the factors appellate judges sitting en banc would consider in deciding whether to overturn circuit precedent.

20. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the questions during the evening of February 22, 2012, prepared answers to the questions, reviewed my responses with a representative of the Department of Justice on February 26, 2012, and requested that my responses be submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

21. Do these answers reflect your own views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Patty Shwartz
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy? How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: Under Article III of the Constitution, a judge decides cases and controversies. Consistent with this obligation, my judicial philosophy is to impartially decide only the case in front of me based upon the governing law and the facts established in the record, to give the parties an opportunity to be heard, to render fair and prompt decisions, and to provide reasons for the decisions for the benefit of the litigants, the public, and any higher court that may be asked to review the decision.

2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: As a United States Magistrate Judge, I have acted in accordance with my oath by handling every case impartially and treating all litigants fairly, courteously, and respectfully, regardless of their station, beliefs, or legal position. I would continue to do so as an appellate judge if I am confirmed.

3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: Stare decisis is a foundation of our legal system and all judges, regardless of the court on which they sit, must be committed to it. It provides notice as to what the law is, predictability as to how a court would treat a particular set of facts, and stability to our nation of laws. That said, a court has the authority to overrule its incorrect prior decisions if the law or facts require such a result, as the United States Supreme Court has done, for example, in Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483 (1954), when it overruled Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537 (1896).

Dear Senator Leahy,

As a former United States Attorney (D.SC) serving in the Administration of President George H.W. Bush, I am proud to write this letter of support for the nomination of Mary G. Lewis for a District Court Judgeship. I have known Mary Lewis for more than 20 years and worked closely with her over the past five, defending a difficult enforcement action with criminal implications. Simply put, Mary Lewis is one of the finest attorneys I know. Her outstanding reputation is well deserved.

By way of background, I served as a federal prosecutor during the Reagan Administration for four years before serving three years in private practice prior to being nominated for U. S. Attorney. In all, I have been practicing 32 years, mostly defending criminal investigations and related enforcement actions. During my time working with Ms. Lewis, she has demonstrated an uncanny ability to detect and resolve complex legal issues with criminal overtones. She has the intellect, analytical skills and temperament to be an outstanding District Judge.

I am proud to support the nomination of Mary Lewis and will make myself available should you have any questions.

Very truly yours,

E. Bart Daniel

Statement of Senator Chuck Grassley

Before the Committee on the Judiciary

On the Nominations of:

Patty Shwartz, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit

Jeffrey J. Helmick, to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Ohio

Mary Geiger Lewis, to be United States District Judge for the District of South Carolina

Timothy S. Hillman, to be United States District Judge for the District of Massachusetts

February 15, 2012

Mr. Chairman:

Today we continue to make real progress on President Obama's judicial nominees. Earlier this afternoon we confirmed the 127th Article III judge nominated by President Obama. With today's confirmation we have confirmed over 62% of the President's circuit judge nominees. This is the same confirmation percentage for President Bush's circuit nominees at the comparable point in his first term.

Today marks the 21st nominations hearing held in this committee during this Congress, and we will have heard from 80 judicial nominees. All in all, nearly 85% of President Obama's judicial nominees have received a hearing.

We continue to hear concerns about the judicial vacancy rate. I would note we are making progress as we continue to confirm judicial nominees. But let me emphasize again, that for more than half of the vacancies, including those designated as "judicial emergencies," the President has failed to submit a nomination. So critics need to look at the beginning of the process when commenting on vacancies.

Even as we go forward with the hearing today, there remains an underlying concern about the President's abuse of the appointment power. I will not elaborate on that again today, but note that we are operating in a different environment. It is the President who has put a cloud over the confirmation process,

I welcome the nominees who are appearing before us today, their friends and families. I look forward to the testimony and will have questions for the nominees.

Judge Schwartz received a B.A from Rutgers in 1983 and a J.D. from the University of Pennsylvania Law School in 1986. Upon graduation, Judge Schwartz worked for a year as an associate with the law firm of Pepper, Hamilton & Scheetz. In 1987, Judge Schwartz began a two-year clerkship with Judge Harold A. Ackerman of the U.S. District Court of the District of New Jersey.

Immediately after her clerkship, she began a fourteen-year career as a criminal prosecutor with the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey. During her time as an Assistant U.S. Attorney, she prosecuted individuals for violent crime, drug trafficking, and white collar cases. After several years, she was assigned to the Special Prosecutions Division, handling public corruption cases. A short time later, Judge Schwartz was promoted to Deputy Chief of the Criminal Division. In February of 1999, she was promoted to Chief of the Criminal Division, which she held until 2001. In 2001, she began a brief stint as Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney, supervising the Criminal, Civil, and Fraud Divisions. In 2002, she returned to serve as Chief of the Criminal Division, overseeing the expansion and reorganization of the division.

In 2003, Judge Schwartz was appointed to be U.S. Magistrate Judge for the District of New Jersey.

Mr. Helmick graduated with his B.A. in 1983 from the University of Michigan, and with his J.D. in 1988 from the Ohio State University Moritz College of Law. Following law school, Mr. Helmick worked as an Associate at Marshall & Melhorn in Toledo, Ohio. Between 1989 and 2001, he managed a small general practice firm. He litigated plaintiff's personal injury cases and employment issues on behalf of small companies and individuals. Mr. Helmick has worked as a retained counsel and appointed counsel in death penalty cases and in some federal criminal prosecutions.

Mrs. Lewis began her legal career clerking for the Honorable Owens Taylor Cobb, Jr. of the South Carolina State Court. After completing her clerkship, she joined the firm Lewis & Babcock in 1985 as an associate and became a partner in 1987. Her firm has handled three matters before the Supreme Court. She was a member of the appellate team in these matters and contributed to the briefs and preparations for oral argument.

Judge Hillman received his B.A. from Coe College in 1970 and his J.D. from Suffolk Law School in 1973. Judge Hillman began his legal career in 1974 as a staff attorney at Murphy and Pusateri. In 1975, he became an Assistant District Attorney where he prosecuted criminal cases for Worcester County. He left the D.A.'s office in 1978 and represented criminal defendants in private practice until 1988. He also represented multiple municipalities in this stretch of time as either city solicitor or town counsel.

Judge Hillman began his judicial career in 1995 when he was appointed to be associate judge of the Gardner District Court. He became the Presiding Justice in 1997 and served there until 1998, when he was appointed to be Presiding Justice of the Worcester Central District Court. From 1998 to 2006, Judge Hillman was a judge of the Massachusetts Superior Court.

Judge Hillman is currently a United States Magistrate Judge for the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Worcester Division.

Again, I welcome the nominees and their families. I look forward to reviewing the testimony.

Dear Senator Leahy:

On Thursday, January 5, 2012, I read an article in The New York Times concerning the nomination of Magistrate Judge Patty Shwartz to The Third Circuit Court of Appeals. As a result of that article, I am writing to you to support the nominee.

I am a resident of New Jersey, but a lover of Vermont. For more than twenty-five years, my wife, Joan, and I have owned a wonderful old farmhouse in Pawlet and the times we have spent there have moulded and shaped our lives, as well as the lives of our children and grandchildren. In the words of the author Wallace Stegner, Vermont has been, to our family, "a place where friendship has its home and happiness its headquarters."

As a Trustee of Vermont Law School and The Nature Conservancy, I have attempted, in some small measure, to contribute my time to sustain and perpetuate the good works of those institutions. In the process, I have observed, in so many ways, your assiduous dedication to the intellectual and economic well-being of your state and the needs of its constituents-as well as your devotion to the Rule of Law and the excellence of our judicial system. In that sense, I urge you and the members of the Judiciary Committee to support and endorse the nomination of Patty Shwartz. I have known Patty for more than thirty years. We clerked, at different times, for the same federal Judge, the late Honorable Harold A. Ackerman, who instilled in all of us the qualities of decency, fairness, and integrity which have marked the professional and private life of Judge Shwartz.

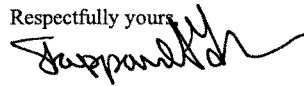

Patty Shwartz is incredibly bright, thoughtful, serious, diligent, good natured, self-effacingwith a wisdom borne of curiosity and aptitude. In everything she has done-as an attorney, a prosecutor, a magistrate Judge-she has excelled. The Third Circuit will be well-served by this very unusual person and, hopefully, her excellence and absolute integrity will be recognized and appreciated without the intervention of factors unrelated to her merit.

Thank you for your consideration. I am now off to Vermont and another magnificent drive through the Mettowee Valley to our home.

Respectfully yours,

Re: Mary G. Lewis

Dear Chairman Leahy and Senator Grassley:

As a member of the South Carolina Bar who has had the opportunity to know Mary Lewis professionally and personally for more than twenty years, I write this letter to offer my wholehearted support for President Obama's nomination of Ms. Lewis to the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina. I am privileged to be able to speak to Ms. Lewis's professional and personal traits that qualify her to serve as a District Court Judge.

First, Ms. Lewis is a woman of sound character and integrity. She enjoys in our legal community a well-earned reputation for honesty and fairness in dealing with counsel and with the court. I have had the opportunity to serve as counsel in several cases with Ms. Lewis, and she conducts herself with integrity and honor at all times. When she makes a representation to you as opposing counsel, you can take it to the bank. She does not play loose with the facts or the law. When Ms. Lewis makes oral argument to the court, you can be assured that she has done her homework and will construe case law and statutes accurately and fairly. She does what a lawyer should do by educating and informing the court while zealously advocating for her client's interests. And when Ms. Lewis is your co-counsel or represents an opposing party, you better be prepared because she certainly will be. In short, Mary Lewis is a woman of character and integrity who will bring respect and honor to the United States District Court.

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
The Honorable Charles E. Grassley

Second, Mary Lewis is a fine legal talent. From the beginning of her legal career, she has shown tremendous intellectual capacity. She graduated from the University of South Carolina as a member of Order of the Coif, and, in the years since, she has continued to demonstrate keen analytical ability and effective written and oral advocacy skills. Ms. Lewis has a broad and comprehensive knowledge of the law and a breadth of practical experience that qualifies her to be an effective judge immediately. She has prepared and tried cases involving a wide range of legal theories in the state and federal courts, and her substantial experience qualifies her to serve on the bench. She commands the respect of the Bar for her intellectual ability, and she will continue to do so as a District Court Judge.

Third, Mary Lewis portrays that thing called "judicial temperament" that is so hard to define. To me, judicial temperament encompasses many qualities -- courtesy, patience, fairness and compassion, to name a few. I have known Ms. Lewis as a lawyer and as a friend, and I can tell you without equivocation that she is a compassionate soul. I have seen her and her family extend many kindnesses to people in need in our community, at all times respecting the recipient's inherent dignity and worth. Ms. Lewis is patient, and she is fair. She strives to treat people with respect and courtesy, regardless of the situation. In a hotly contested case in which we both were involved, tempers flared at times between lawyers for the various parties. Despite the pressure and the personalities involved, Ms. Lewis was at all times courteous and professional in her conduct. She does not rattle under pressure, and she does not lose her temper. Ms. Lewis also has a wonderful sense of humor that serves her very, very well.

Mary Lewis is a talented lawyer and an extraordinary woman. Her experience, integrity and intellect will make her an outstanding District Court Judge. I completely and unconditionally support her nomination, and I urge you to confirm her to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

Sincerely,

Kevin A. Hall

Jeffrey Helmick

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

I write to support the confirmation of Jeff Helmick for appointment to the current judicial vacancy for the United States District Court for the Northern District of Ohio, Western Division. I have been a member of the Toledo Bar practicing for about 15 years. In addition, I also serve as the State Senator for the 2nd Senate District in northwest Ohio, which includes much of the Western Division of the Court. In the Ohio Senate, I chair the Ohio Senate Judiciary Committee. Through my experience in the courts and in government, I have certainly learned of Jeff Helmick's outstanding reputation. He is someone who has stood for principles, litigated honestly, and ably defended our constitutional system of government.

These types of traits would make Mr. Helmick an outstanding federal judge. He is held in very high esteem by the local bar, and his support crosses partisan lines.

Dear Chairman Leahy:

I write to strongly support the nomination of Mary G. Lewis for the position of United States District Judge for the District of South Carolina.

I am very familiar with the many outstanding qualities possessed by Ms. Lewis. I observed her not only while I was serving as a federal judge, but also since retiring from the bench and returning to the private practice of law. Indeed, we are presently working together on major litigation involving STARK and related Medicare issues. She is not only a joy to work with but brings so much to the table because of her exceptionally bright minded, keen intellect and knowledge of the law. She is without a doubt one of the best lawyers in South Carolina.

Jeffrey Helmick

Dear Senators:

I have been a district judge for the Northern District of Ohio since 2006. I write to enthusiastically support the confirmation of Jeff Helmick to the district court vacancy in Toledo.

I am currently the sole active judge on our court in the Western Division and therefore will be the one working most closely with whomever is appointed. Fortunately, the two senior judges in our Division continue to assist with the case load, but for which, to borrow a phrase, "I would be in a world of hurt." That assistance will not last, and Jeff's prompt confirmation is important so we may continue to deliver to the public, the lawyers and the clients they serve, our promise of securing "the just, speedy and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding."

Perhaps more importantly, you will find no better candidate than Jeff. He possesses the intelligence, the passion for our justice system, the necessary temperament and the people skills to be an outstanding district court judge. In the private practice, lawyers are able to choose their partners. Federal judges do not have such a luxury; we must work with whomever you confirm. I would be thrilled to have Jeff as my "partner" on the Bench.

Best regards.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 1:34 p.m., Room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Al Franken, presiding.
Present: Senators Grassley and Lee.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. AL FRANKEN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Senator FRANKEN. This hearing will come to order.

I would like to welcome each of you to this hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee. We will hear from three nominees to the Federal bench: Richard Gary Taranto; Robin Rosenbaum, and Gershwin Drain. These nominees are accomplished lawyers and jurists. They unanimously have received positive reviews from the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, and have strong support. I am looking forward to hearing from each of them.

Ranking Member Grassley, would you like to give any opening remarks before we turn to our esteemed colleagues, Senator Levin and Senator Nelson, to introduce their nominees?

Senator GRASSLEY. I will say about 2 minutes and then put the rest of the statement in the record.

Senator FRANKEN. Very well.

STATEMENT OF HON. CHARLES E. GRASSLEY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF IOWA

Senator GRASSLEY. I think we ought to realize that we are making real progress on President Obama's judicial nominees. Since convening a couple months ago this second session of the 112th Congress, the Senate has been in session only 18 days, including today. During that time we've held three nomination hearings, receiving testimony from 12 judicial nominees. All in all, more than 85 percent of President Obama's judicial nominees have received a hearing.

We've confirmed 5 nominees in those 18 days. In total, we have confirmed 131 of President Obama's judicial nominees, and that's about 71 percent. We continue to hear concern about judicial vacancy, but I want to emphasize that for more than half of the vacancies, including those designated as judicial emergencies, the president has yet to submit nominations for those positions. So critics need to look at the beginning of the process when commenting on vacancies.

So I welcome all of our nominees today and I'll put the balance of my statement in the record.

Senator FRANKEN. And we will do that, without objection.

[The prepared statement of Senator Grassley appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator FRANKEN. Well, now I'd like to introduce my colleague from Michigan, Carl Levin, who will talk about Judge Drain.

PRESENTATION OF JUDGE GERSHWIN A. DRAIN, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN BY HON. CARL LEVIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MICHIGAN

Senator LEVIN. First, thank you very much, Chairman Franken and Ranking Member Grassley. Thank you for holding this hearing, for the progress that you are making on these nominees. I am delighted to be here today to introduce Judge Gershwin Drain, whom the President has nominated to the Federal bench for the District Court in the Eastern District of Michigan. He is here today with his wife Meredith; his mother Vera; his daughters Shelly and Shannon, and Shannon's husband; his sister Cassandra; his aunt Winona; and his cousin.

Senator Stabenow wanted very much to be here today but she's not feeling well and she asked me if I would ask you to insert her statement in the record, so I would make that request.

Senator FRANKEN. Absolutely. Without objection.

[The prepared statement of Senator Stabenow appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator LEVIN. The American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary was unanimous in its decision that Judge Drain is qualified for this position on the Federal bench, as you have mentioned, Mr. Chairman. Judge Drain has had an impressive legal career. He graduated from the University of Michigan Law School and went on to earn a Master's of Judicial Studies degree in 1991.

Since 1997, he has served at the Wayne County Circuit Court as a judge. This is our highest trial court in Michigan. Prior to that service, Judge Drain served on both the District and Recorder's courts in Michigan, so he's had a great deal of trial experience which well prepares him for service on the Eastern District Court. He has also served as faculty and faculty advisor for the National Judicial College.

Judge Drain has served on the Detroit-Wayne County Criminal Advocacy Board, Criminal Jury Instruction Committee, Association of Black Judges of the Michigan Mock Trial Program and Mentor Program. He served on his civic association, where he lives in the neighborhood in Detroit. His legal qualifications are indeed impressive, but in addition he's demonstrated a career-long dedication to helping people that our legal system serves to understand how it works.

He's been a long-time columnist for a newspaper in Michigan called The Michigan Chronicle. He has explained often complex legal issues in language that is accessible to his lay readers, broadening understanding of and appreciation for our courts.

Beyond his writing, Judge Drain has been active in the community as a member of the Education Committee of the Southfield Christian School Board. He has also helped guide prison inmates to rehabilitation. So, I very much support his nomination, as does Senator Stabenow, and again want to very much thank this committee for holding a hearing and hopefully moving forward on this very important nomination.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Levin, for taking this time. I know you've got a busy schedule, so certainly feel free to take off.

Senator Nelson, I know you're going to introduce Judge Rosenbaum.

PRESENTATION OF JUDGE ROBIN S. ROSENBAUM, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA BY HON. BILL NELSON, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF FLORIDA

Senator NELSON. Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Senator Grassley. You know, we are fortunate, Senator Rubio and I in Florida, that we don't have a lot of vacancies, fortunately because you all are so prompt in considering them. But you recognize that Senator Rubio and I bring to you nominees that are selected not because of politics, because that's the way we select them.

We have a Judicial Nomination Commission composed of prominent people in the communities and they do all of the applications, the interviewing, and they send at least three applicants to us for each judicial vacancy and then we interview them and tell the White House if we have an objection. The two Senators interview them together. That's what we've done with the panel that came forth, and the President then selected the judge that I'm going to introduce to you.

Now, Robin Rosenbaum, who has been nominated—she's a magistrate judge and she has been nominated to the Southern District—United States District Court in the Southern District of Florida. She is here with her husband Phil, who is right behind me; her two children, Evan and Rosie; her parents, and her two sisters. They're all here.

Senator FRANKEN. Welcome to all of you. You should be very proud.

Senator NELSON. And it is because of the bipartisanship that we come to the table as you examine this judge that we are offering for your consideration.

She had an undergraduate degree from Cornell, a law degree from the University of Miami. She started her legal career in the Attorney General's Honors Program, where she worked as a trial attorney in the Federal programs branch of the Civil Division of DOJ.

She's been in private practice with one of our prominent law firms, Holland & Knight. She's been a law clerk for the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, and she has been an Assistant USA. So she has had all of that experience before she was chosen by the judges to go to the magistrate court and has been there since 2007.

So we have an especially qualified applicant here. If you all give the green light after you've done all of your examination, you will find that Senator Rubio and I will try to process this as quickly as we can, working with you and the entire Judiciary Committee to get her on up and confirmed.

The Southern District, needless to say, is one of the busiest districts in the country and so any vacancy left for any period of time is something that we are quite concerned about. That is why we've had a pretty good record thus far.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Nelson. You're certainly free to continue with your busy day.

Right now, again, I want to thank both Senators for their introductions.

Right now I'd like to introduce the first panel. Our first witness is Mr. Richard Gary Taranto. I'll introduce you once you're seated. I think, why don't you stand up and be sworn, if that's all right. So, stay standing.

[Whereupon, the witness was duly sworn.]

Senator FRANKEN. Great. Please have a seat, and thank you. Congratulations.

Mr. Richard Gary Taranto is nominated to serve on the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Court. Mr. Taranto is a partner at the law firm of Farr & Taranto. A graduate of Pomona College and Yale Law School, Mr. Taranto has served as a law clerk to Justice Sandra Day O'Connor and as assistant to the Solicitor General.

Mr. Taranto has extensive experience as an appellate practitioner and has received numerous awards for his advocacy. The American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Judiciary unanimously gave Mr. Taranto its highest possible rating. Mr. Taranto, congratulations on your nomination. Please feel free to make a statement and to introduce anyone who is with you today. Hit the mike.

Mr. TARANTO. Sorry.

Senator FRANKEN. That's all right.

STATEMENT OF RICHARD GARY TARANTO, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT

Mr. TARANTO. Well, thank you again, both Senators Franken and Grassley, for having me here today. I want to thank, of course, President Obama for reposing his trust in me for the Federal Circuit, whose work I know well and value highly, and look forward to contributing to, if confirmed.

I do want to introduce a few people who are here with me today: my wife, Vicki Plau and my daughter Nora.

Senator FRANKEN. Welcome.

Mr. TARANTO. Both of them are here. Our other two children are in California and watching, as are my parents also watching, and my sister and brother, and maybe one or both of my two 100-year-old grandmothers.

Senator FRANKEN. Whoa!

Mr. TARANTO. Whoa is right, yes.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. Well, all I can say is, just eat right.

[Laughter.]

Mr. TARANTO. I will follow that advice, thank you. Also here today is my long-time partner, Bartow Farr, and our long-time assistant, Julie Mixell, as well as several friends and colleagues.

With that, I would be happy to answer any questions you have.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, first of all, congratulations to your family and to all your friends and colleagues. They must be very proud. Congratulations again to you on your nomination.

You have extensive experience as an appellate advocate. You have argued in most of the Federal Circuit Courts and in the Supreme Court. How will that experience as an advocate assist you as a judge?

Mr. TARANTO. Well, I think it gives me a sense, based on considerable experience, about what the appellate judging process is at its best and where it can go wrong. The mix of careful attention to facts, what parties expect in the way of scrupulous regard for the record, the desirability of clear and workable reasoning, both to explain to the parties why the winner has won and the loser has lost, and as important, to provide guidance to litigants and private practitioners for what the law is going to be as it applies to them.

Senator FRANKEN. Okay. I saw in your bio that you clerked for Sandra Day O'Connor.

Mr. TARANTO. I did.

Senator FRANKEN. What years was that?

Mr. TARANTO. It was her third term on the court, 1983–1984 term.

Senator FRANKEN. Uh-huh. Now, at that point was she as central to sort of the, you know—to where the court was as she turned out to be toward the end of her career there?

Mr. TARANTO. You know, from a law clerk's perspective she was central to our lives. This was, as I say, her third term on the court, so she had two terms under her belt and there were, therefore, many issues that were familiar to her, some that were new, as with any justice developing a long career on the court.

I must say I did not—I think we did not pay kind of attention to something that might be called a swing vote, or as you say being central in the votes. We discussed the cases with her and she decided them, and we assisted her in the reasoning explaining her position.

Senator FRANKEN. Now, was that based on—this is you as a clerk. Was that based on a philosophy of how you should be a clerk or was that just your being oblivious to what was going on historically?

[Laughter.]

Mr. TARANTO. I think it was more the philosophy of being a clerk.

Senator FRANKEN. Oh, good. I'm glad you said that.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. Now I'm going to vote for you.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. What did you learn from her? I'd really be curious. What did you learn from that experience from her? I mean, here is one of the iconic justices in the history of the Supreme Court. What did you learn from clerking from her that will inform your performance as a judge?

Mr. TARANTO. Well, I learned, I think, many things but one of them was the energy and concentration she brought to what was then an extraordinarily demanding docket on the Supreme Court. Some 140 cases were being decided each year—each term at that time in the Supreme Court's history.

I learned a lot about the ability to pierce through what can be mountains of paper to identify what is central to the disposition of the case. I learned a lot about the value of writing narrowly in a way that is tied to the facts of the case and not getting ahead of one's self as an institution, leaving different matters that are not then before the court to future cases. All of those were central virtues in my experience to clerking with Justice O'Connor.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, it sounds like that was an enormous privilege to clerk for her. I'm done with my questioning, Senator Grassley, of the witness.

Senator GRASSLEY. I have just two areas that I want to discuss with you, but I have several questions in each area. One of them I hope you've been alerted to that I want to ask you about, the Circuit you're going on and whistleblower protection.

But before I get to whistleblower protection, for several years you were amicus counsel for the American Psychiatric Association. What was your relationship with the association and what role did you play in crafting arguments on behalf of the association?

Mr. TARANTO. Since 1994, until about a year and a half ago, I was counsel to the committee within the APA that reviews potential opportunities for amicus participation, so I did that for quite a long time. I more or less inherited that position from Joel Klein, who had been the long-term amicus counsel, and indeed general counsel, to the APA.

So my job was to discuss with the committee year in and year out a fairly small number of matters each year that would present issues in the Supreme Court, occasionally in other courts, but almost entirely in the Supreme Court, issues bearing on the interests of psychiatric patients and psychiatrists.

The APA itself, of course, has a governing body which adopts formal position statements and policies, and my job was to help the committee decide whether those policies were affected, or might be affected, by what the court case was about and then to present the APA's position to the Supreme Court, with a very heavy emphasis on accurately representing what the psychiatric and psychological literature said about particular issues.

Senator GRASSLEY. I don't have any problems with the advocacy position that you filled, but I have some questions that I want to know whether it has any impact upon your potential of being on the Federal Circuit.

So I would ask you about being an amicus counsel in the briefs that you would have helped on with Romer and with Lawrence, and I ask you this because there are several challenges to the Defense of Marriage Act and other Federal restrictions on same-sex couples.

Given the Federal Circuit's appellate jurisdiction, such issues may come before you. So considering your past advocacy, do you have any doubts about your ability to be a fair and neutral arbiter should one of these cases come before you?

Mr. TARANTO. I have no doubt whatsoever the role that I played in the matters you mentioned was the role of an advocate representing a client and its formal positions on the matter.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. I'd like to ask you if you have any views on the standard of review that should be applied in due process and equal protection challenges to laws making distinctions based on sexual orientation.

Mr. TARANTO. Senator, I don't have a view about that, that it feels appropriate for me to discuss here. My sense has always been that it's very dangerous for a nominee to discuss a legal issue in advance of the adversarial process of adjudicating that issue in the concrete case.

It's unfair to the litigants who might suspect a kind of confirmation or commitment. It risks speaking more broadly than a narrow, case-specific ruling that the court should adopt, and it risks really an ill-considered kind of broad pronouncement when that adversarial process followed by careful study and collaboration are bypassed.

Senator CARPER. Let me move on then, still in the same area. The administration has announced a policy that it would not defend the Defense of Marriage Act. In justifying its refusal to defend the suit, if there is a suit, the administration has asserted—and I guess there is a suit. The administration has asserted that “classifications based on sexual orientation should be subject to a heightened standard of constitutional scrutiny”.

So I think it's fair for me to ask you if you're aware of any Supreme Court precedent that would support the administration's position that “classification based on sexual orientation are the subject of heightened scrutiny”.

Mr. TARANTO. Senator, I have not studied that question, so sitting right here I can't say that I'm aware of a precedent one way or the other on that question.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. I would like to have you answer, if there is anything further to say, in writing. Since you said you haven't had a chance to think about it, I guess you'll have some weeks to think about it.

Mr. TARANTO. I'm happy to answer that, yes.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. Do you agree that it would be improper for a District or Circuit Court to apply a level of scrutiny other than the rational basis standard, absent further guidance from the Supreme Court?

Mr. TARANTO. Again——

Senator GRASSLEY. And I think it's important for me to emphasize, absent further guidance from the Supreme Court.

Mr. TARANTO. Again, I think, as I understood the question, the answer to that question depends on knowing what the current Supreme Court precedents are. That's the question that I think I don't really know the answer to.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. But you would know whether or not Supreme Court precedent is important in this area.

Mr. TARANTO. Oh, absolutely. Indeed, Supreme Court precedent is not only important in that area, but for a lower Federal court judge is binding as to standards of review, as well as particular substantive rulings, and every lower court judge is bound to follow those standards until the Supreme Court has said otherwise.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes. I'm going to quote Justices Scalia and Lawrence, "Countless judicial decisions and legislative enactments have relied on the ancient proposition that our governing majority's belief that certain sexual behavior is immoral and unacceptable constitutes a rational basis for regulation". So, whether or not you would agree with Justice Scalia that moral disapproval may serve as a rational basis for regulation, and why or why not?

Mr. TARANTO. I do think, Senator, that that's a question that I feel uncomfortable answering precisely to the extent it might come before me as a judge.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. I'll stop there then. Maybe I'll followup with an answer in writing.

In your view, does the Federal Government have authority to determine the eligibility requirement for Federal benefits as it did by defining marriage as between one man and woman in the Defense of Marriage Act? That's the last question I have in this area.

Mr. TARANTO. I think I need to give the same answer.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay.

Mr. TARANTO. To the extent it would be possible to come before me as a judge, I don't think I should—

Senator GRASSLEY. I'll followup, then.

Mr. TARANTO. Okay. Thank you.

Senator GRASSLEY. On whistleblower protection—and I've been actively involved in whistleblower protection, going to parts of the False Claims Act that I helped write, or the Whistleblower Protection Act that I wrote with Senator Levin, who was here a little while ago, and that was in 1989.

I've always pushed for strong whistleblower protections for Federal employees. Considering that the Federal Circuit has exclusive jurisdiction over these cases, can you describe what experience, if any, you have had with the Whistleblower Protection Act? Before you answer that, I don't have the statistics with me that I used for a former nominee that's going on the same court you are, but there's been very few times—maybe a handful times out of a few hundred cases—where it seems to me like the court you're going on has read our statute.

Well, here it is. Up until February 2011, only 3 out of 219 cases that whistleblowers brought for appeal have whistleblowers won. In 2010, the court was 0 for 9 against whistleblowers. Maybe the whistleblowers weren't right, I don't know, because I don't know what cases. But it just seemed to me like one segment of people just can't lose that many times. There's got to be something wrong.

Anyway, let me repeat the question: can you describe what experiences, if any, you have with the Whistleblower Protection Act?

Mr. TARANTO. I have not had any experience under that particular act.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. The Federal—well, I guess I'm kind of repeating myself here, but let me do it for the purposes of the question. The Federal Circuit has issued a number of decisions that have substantially limited the types of disclosures that are protected under the Whistleblower Protection Act. Perhaps the most egregious example of the Federal Circuit placing hurdles in front of Federal Government whistleblowers is the 1999 decision in LaChance v. White.

In that case the Federal Circuit held that a whistleblower had to present irrefragable proof that wrongdoing actually occurred in order to prove a claim. Have you ever heard of the irrefragable proof standard, and what's your understanding of that standard?

Mr. TARANTO. Well, you know, Senator, I did not hear of it until I did my homework for this hearing and then of course I—

Senator GRASSLEY. Oh, somebody told you I might ask you about this?

Mr. TARANTO. Somebody suggested it was a matter of some concern to you, yes. My brief study of the matter since then has indicated two things. One, that in a 2002 case, subsequent to the LaChance case, not in the Whistleblower Protection Act context, the Federal Circuit said really that means clear and convincing evidence, a much more familiar standard in the law that “irrefragable proof”.

I think I also saw a 2004 Whistleblower Protection Act case in which the Federal Circuit said—called White v. Department of the Air Force, in which the Federal Circuit said there is no requirement of proving government misconduct by irrefragable proof.

As far as I could tell from my own Westlaw search, that's the last pronouncement under the Whistleblower Protection Act that uses the term “irrefragable”, only to reject it. So that's my understanding of where the law is, but as I say that's a fairly casual bit of research.

Senator GRASSLEY. So you think it's more like clear and convincing than anything else at this point? Is that what you're saying?

Mr. TARANTO. The Ampro case is explicit in saying the terminology we have used, sometimes irrefragable proof, sometimes something else, really ought to be treated as the same as clear and convincing evidence.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, do you happen to believe that whatever that standard is now, irrefragable proof, or a substantial evidence standard should apply to whistleblower cases?

Mr. TARANTO. You know, I—

Senator GRASSLEY. I don't think we require that in the law we wrote.

Mr. TARANTO. No. At this point my understanding of any complexities within the precedents has run out, so I don't know beyond having looked at those two cases I mentioned, which suggests to me that irrefragable proof is not currently being applied under the Whistleblower Protection Act.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, then I'll ask my staff, but I don't think I should bother to answer—ask these last two questions—should I, in regard to that standard of proof? No. We're OK on that.

I think I'll submit the rest of my questions, including what I've already said I might submit in writing. I have some other questions on judicial philosophy I will submit to you for answer in writing.

Mr. TARANTO. Thank you, Senator.

Senator FRANKEN. And we will hold the record open for a week for questions and answers.

[The questions appear under questions and answers.]

Senator FRANKEN. I'm on the Energy Committee. Irrefragable, I believe, is natural gas deposits that you can't exploit.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. Right? Senator Lee is on Energy. I believe we know that.

Senator Lee.

Senator LEE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

It's good to see you, Mr. Taranto. Thanks for joining us today.

Mr. TARANTO. Good to see you, Senator.

Senator LEE. I noticed that among your many other impressive qualifications is one that really stands out, that of substitute teacher. I have to know, what did you substitute teach?

Mr. TARANTO. I briefly substitute taught high school mathematics.

Senator LEE. You're a brave man. How did it go?

[Laughter.]

Mr. TARANTO. They didn't ask me to do much, so what they asked me to do, I was able to do.

Senator LEE. Yes. I suppose that's a good thing, given that you're going onto the Federal Circuit. A lot of mathematical issues dealing with claims against the government and patents, so there's a connection there somewhere.

You're someone who has clerked for one Supreme Court justice, Sandra Day O'Connor, and you clerked for another judge who almost became a Supreme Court justice, Judge Robert Bork. So that leads me to ask, is there any justice that has served over the last 100 years or so who you would say is sort of your judicial mentor, someone that you might pattern your judicial philosophy after?

Mr. TARANTO. If you will allow me to exclude living justices, both for reasons of judiciousness and to——

Senator LEE. That's a good idea, actually. Let's exclude the living.

Mr. TARANTO. And to filter out, of course, my unique relationship with Justice O'Connor. If there was a single justice that I would pick out as having more of the desirable characteristics that I value, it would—than anybody else, though of course these characteristics are widespread, it would probably be the second Justice Harlan, who sat on the court from the mid-1950's until 1970 or 1971, and that's because his opinions reflect just great respect for reason and tradition and precedent, recognition of the dangers, the need to guard against injecting personal preference into legal analysis, the great value of clarity and narrowness of ruling. It seems to me, though I haven't made a systematic study, that he did that at a very high level of consistency for his career.

Senator LEE. Some have commented that John Marshall Harlan, II, was something of a prototextualist or an early modern-day textualist. Would you agree with that assessment, and is that part of why you admire him?

Mr. TARANTO. I always have a little bit of trouble with attaching a label like textualist because most judges, even those who are disagree—or justices, even those who are disagreeing with each other on particular cases, would claim that mantle but give different interpretations to the text.

What I tried to identify in Justice Harlan was the caution and intense focus on giving reasons for everything in interpreting a text and relying very heavily on precedents and reading them with nuance and with great care, great attention to the particular facts that were at issue in the case, and then writing narrowly so as never to rule more broadly than the case demanded.

Senator LEE. Yes. One of the things that I've always admired about that justice was his commitment to the text and his commitment to the notion that the law supplies an answer, and that more often than not the overwhelming majority of the cases you find the answer in the text. There is a competing school of thought that focuses more on intentionalism than textualism. Do you gravitate toward either end of the spectrum when you're dealing with the matter of statutory construction?

Mr. TARANTO. You know, in my role as advocate, which is the role that I have had for my entire practice, as you will understand, what I have gravitated toward was attending to the different perspectives that the justices have had and trying to take account of all of them, to the maximum extent possible, to advance the interests of the particular client.

But I do understand the distinction that you are making between what the text says and how the legal community would have understood that text at the time as opposed to what some individual legislator or framer may have intended to put in the text and didn't.

Senator LEE. And your reaction to that sort of dichotomy is what?

Mr. TARANTO. Well, again, as a lawyer representing a client, the reaction has been if there's a justice on the case who cares one way or the other, one needs to pay careful attention to what one can say to try to persuade that justice. Sometimes, of course, the framer's intent, as reflected in the papers of the Constitutional Convention or the ratification debates, will in fact have a legitimate bearing on what the text was widely understood at the time to mean.

Beyond that I don't think that I could tell you that I have a particular settled judicial philosophy, and in any event, as relevant to the job that I'm being considered for, my task would be to follow the Supreme Court's precedent, not only substantive rulings but indeed what the Supreme Court says about methodology.

Senator LEE. Sure. Sure. Although certainly you would agree that the text is the guiding—is the principle guidepost. The text normally is the beginning and the end of the analysis when you are interpreting something, and very often you are interpreting something. If you're sitting on the Federal Circuit, for example, there may not be an established precedent telling you what the official interpretation—what the precedential interpretation is.

Mr. TARANTO. I agree with that completely, particularly for complicated statutes. Congress has written texts that are often complicated, and complicated for very good reasons, to try to do certain things narrowly and not go too far and the text is the authoritative guide to the proper resolution of the case.

Everything else is a matter of trying to understand that text properly, including, of course, precedents that may have already addressed the issue because no judge ought to view a matter as never having been considered by jurists before.

Senator LEE. Well said. I see my time's expired. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Mr. Taranto.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator. Well, sir, you'll be excused now. Thank you so much. Congratulations once again.

Mr. TARANTO. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. The record will be open for a week, so if any Senators have questions for you we'll get those to you and this will be open for a week.

Mr. TARANTO. Thank you, Senator. And thank you, Senator Grassley.

I have never served as an arbitrator or mediator in alternative-dispute-resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

My practice throughout my career has focused overwhelmingly on appellate litigation.

In my first two years of practice, as an associate at Onek, Klein & Farr from 1984 to 1986, I mostly wrote appellate briefs but did some non-appellate work, including assisting in representing the State of Missouri in district court proceedings involving the desegregation of the Kansas City, Missouri, schools. Through my firm, I also served, for a few months in the spring of 1986, as a legal consultant to the Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on South Africa, co-chaired by former Transportation Secretary William Coleman and former IBM Chairman Frank Cary.

I joined the Solicitor General's office in the summer of 1986 and served there until September 1989. Mostly I wrote briefs and argued cases in the Supreme Court, involving a wide spectrum of issues. That job also involved the review of requests by government offices for permission to appeal from losses in the district courts or to seek en banc review of appeals court losses.

From 1989 until the late 1990s, my work in private practice was heavily focused on the Supreme Court. I wrote briefs and argued cases on a wide variety of topics in the Court, including constitutional, bankruptcy, patent, trademark, federal procedure, antitrust, and copyright issues. I did some work in courts of appeals during those years as well. I also devoted time to assisting my partner in representing the National Cable Television Association (as it was then called), often in conjunction with other parties, in district court proceedings: proceedings involving the enforcement or modification of the Bell System breakup decree, and proceedings before a three-judge district court on the First Amendment validity of the "must carry" statute (imposing certain requirements that cable operators carry broadcast television stations). Finally, as an outside attorney, I assisted the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice on a couple of occasions, chiefly on some of the legal briefing in its litigated case against Microsoft in the late 1990s.

Starting in 1996, I began doing a substantial amount of work for what was then Bell Atlantic. In particular, I devoted considerable time in 1996 and 1997 to the antitrust and Communications Act analysis of Bell Atlantic's merger with Nynex. I have continued to represent and to advise the company, now Verizon, in a wide range of matters – patent, antitrust, and communications – including its 2000 merger with GTE and its 2006 acquisition of MCI.

Starting in 1997, after I handled the Warner-Jenkinson patent case in the Supreme Court, I began to handle appeals in patent cases in the Federal Circuit. That work grew steadily and eventually came to dominate my work life. In the past dozen years, I have presented 20 arguments in the Federal Circuit – for patent holders and for patent defendants, across a variety of technology areas. Clients have included Honeywell Inc.; Housey Pharmaceuticals; Lemelson Medical, Education & Research Foundation; Monsanto Co.; Rambus Inc.; Verizon Communications; and W.L. Gore & Associates. Amidst this work, I have done the occasional non-patent appeal in a court of appeals other than the Federal Circuit.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

In my two years as an associate at Onek, Klein & Farr (1984 – 1986), I did mostly appellate work in assisting the partners; there was no regular client, or type of client, except for the American Psychiatric Association, for which Joel Klein served as General Counsel. I also spent some time assisting the partners at the trial court level representing the State of Missouri in one of the remedy phases of the Kansas City school-desegregation case, and toward the end of that period I spent some time as a legal consultant to the Secretary of State's Advisory Committee on South Africa.

From 1986 to 1989, I served in the Solicitor General's office doing appellate work on behalf of the United States.

From 1989 to the mid-2000s, upon returning as a partner to what soon became Farr & Taranto, I mostly did Supreme Court work, on behalf of an assortment of clients, most of them one-time clients who happened to have Supreme Court cases. During that period, I also helped my partner Bartow Farr on several appellate or appellate-type projects for the National Cable Television Association. I began to do work for Bell Atlantic (now Verizon) in the early 1990s, and that work, including assisting on merger approvals and other antitrust and communications-law matters as well as patent matters, became a regular part of my practice starting in 1996.

Starting in the late 1990s, after handling the Warner-Jenkinson patent-law case in the Supreme Court, I began to work on appeals in patent cases in the Federal Circuit, and that work came largely to crowd out my Supreme Court work by 2005. My clients in patent matters have included both patent owners and accused infringers, and the cases have involved a variety of technology areas, including communications, biotechnology, and avionics, and disputes about a variety of patent issues, including validity and infringement and unenforceability. Clients have included Honeywell Inc.; Housey Pharmaceuticals; Lemelson Medical, Education & Research Foundation; Monsanto Co.; Rambus Inc.; Verizon Communications; and W.L. Gore & Associates.

Throughout my years of practice after 1989, I have handled a few cases in courts of appeals other than the Federal Circuit, mostly for Verizon. And until 2010, I was amicus counsel for the American Psychiatric Association, in which capacity I filed a number of amicus briefs (almost all in the Supreme Court) and reviewed requests from other organizations that the APA join their amicus briefs.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

Almost all of my work has involved litigation, almost all of it in the federal courts of appeals or the Supreme Court. I have frequently presented arguments in the Supreme Court and in federal appellate courts, chiefly in the Federal Circuit. I have argued 19 cases in the Supreme Court – eight while in the Solicitor General's office, and 11 cases in private practice. I have presented approximately 20 arguments in the Federal Circuit and appeared on briefs in still other cases. I have also argued cases in the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, and D.C. Circuits.

With three exceptions (I believe), I have not appeared in federal district courts. Two of the exceptions were for arguing legal motions – a motion to dismiss in an antitrust case for Verizon in 1997 (then Bell Atlantic) and a summary-judgment motion in a patent case for Honeywell in 1999 or 2000. And in my first two years of practice, as an associate at Onek, Klein & Farr from 1984 to 1986, I assisted in representing the State of Missouri in district court proceedings involving the desegregation of the Kansas City, Missouri, schools. I have worked extensively on additional district court matters – chiefly patent cases – without appearing in court.

A small percentage of my work, such as assisting Verizon on merger approvals, has not involved work in the courts.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	94%
2. state courts of record:	1%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	5%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	95%
2. criminal proceedings:	5%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have not played an in-court role in any trial except for my role as an associate in helping to represent the State of Missouri in the Kansas City school desegregation case in 1985. (My other two district court appearances were for legal arguments on motions, before any trial.) But I have worked extensively on several patent cases at the trial level – on claim construction filings, expert reports, witness preparation, summary judgment papers, opening and closing arguments, jury instructions, and post-trial motions. In three of those cases, I attended the jury trials in full and worked on all phases during the trial itself from behind the bar (as well as in the pretrial phases of the matters). I also attended, and worked from behind the bar on, an antitrust trial for Verizon (then Bell Atlantic) in Portland, Maine, in 1999.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 90%
 - 2. non-jury: 10%

Transcripts of the oral arguments I gave in all Supreme Court cases are supplied.

I have written, or participated in the writing of, briefs in many other cases argued by other attorneys. In some of those cases, the briefs have been for parties to the case, and in others they have been for amici. The briefs have included petitions for certiorari, briefs in opposition to certiorari, briefs on the merits of cases in which certiorari has been granted, and amicus briefs at the petition or merits stages. Since 1989, first as co-counsel, then as lead counsel (starting in 1994), I have submitted amicus briefs for the American Psychiatric Association in a substantial number of Supreme Court cases.

To the best of my knowledge, the following is a complete list of the Supreme Court cases in which my name appears on at least one brief. All of the briefs I was able to identify are supplied.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

Each of the following ten cases was particularly significant for me, whether because of the general significance of the issues or because of the significance of the case to my client or because it took a particularly significant amount of time and effort on my part.

1. Warner-Jenkinson Co. v. Hilton Davis Chem. Co., 520 U.S. 17 (1997).

This case addressed the doctrine of equivalents for patent infringement. I represented Warner-Jenkinson, which had been held liable for infringement under the doctrine of equivalents. After the Federal Circuit had split en banc over the principles governing that doctrine, Warner-Jenkinson retained me and my firm in 1995 to seek certiorari. The Supreme Court took the case. I was the lead attorney in briefing and arguing the case. The Court narrowed the doctrine of equivalents in ways that gave Warner-Jenkinson a remand, leading to ultimate settlement of the particular case, and, more generally, to a tightening of the doctrine in patent law.

Co-counsel was Robert Chambers, Wood, Herron & Evans, 2700 Carew Tower, 441 Vine Street, Cincinnati, OH 45202 (513.241.2324). Opposing counsel was David Schmit, Frost, Brown, Todd LLC, 2200 PNC Center, 201 East Fifth Street, Cincinnati, OH 45202 (513.651.6985). The United States as amicus curiae was represented by Deputy Solicitor General Lawrence Wallace, now retired, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530 (202.514.2203); Cornelia (Nina) Pillard, now of Georgetown University Law Center, 600 New Jersey Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20001 (202.662.9401).

2. Great-West Life Ins. Co. v. Knudson, 534 U.S. 204 (2002).

This case involved a question about the scope of one of ERISA's right-to-sue provisions. Janette Knudson, a victim of a severely disabling car accident, had medical care paid for by her ERISA health plan, which then sued her for reimbursement under ERISA after she obtained a tort settlement from the car manufacturer. After the Ninth Circuit held that the ERISA provision did not permit such a suit, the health plan petitioned for certiorari, and Knudson's counsel declined to defend that legal conclusion. The Supreme Court took the case and in spring 2001 appointed me as amicus to defend the Ninth Circuit's ruling. I filed a brief and argued the case and prevailed 5 to 4.

As appointed amicus, my sole co-counsel was my partner Bartow Farr, of Farr & Taranto, 1150 18th Street, NW, Suite 1030, Washington, DC 20036 (202.775.0184). Counsel for the health plan was James Jorden of Jorden Burt LLP, 1025 Thomas Jefferson Street, NW, Suite 400 East, Washington, DC 20007 (202.965.8135). Counsel for the United States was then-Assistant to the Solicitor General Paul Wolfson, who is now at WilmerHale, 1875 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20006 (202.663.6390).

3. Verizon Communications v. Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko, 540 U.S. 398 (2004).

This case addressed the scope of the monopolization provision of the Sherman Act as it applied to a local telephone company accused of deficiencies in cooperating with new competitors in the wake of the Telecommunications Act of 1996. Verizon retained me in 2000 to assist other attorneys in the district court seeking dismissal of a case making a monopolization claim (among others) on that ground. After the district court dismissed the case, I played a leading role in the briefing in the Second Circuit, though Verizon Deputy General Counsel John Thorne argued the case. When the Second Circuit reinstated the monopolization claim, we obtained Supreme Court review and, ultimately, reversal. I had the lead role in briefing and argued the case in the Supreme Court.

My principal co-counsel were John Thorne, Deputy General Counsel, Verizon, 1320 North Courthouse Road, Arlington, VA 22201 (703.351.3900), and Aaron Panner and Michael Kellogg of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, Evans & Figel, 1615 Street, NW, Suite 400, Washington, DC 20036 (202.326.7900). In the Supreme Court, my principal opposing counsel was Donald Verrilli, then of Jenner & Block, now Solicitor General of the United States, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530 (202.514.2203).

4. MGM Studios v. Grokster, 545 U.S. 913 (2005).

This case addressed the copyright liability of distributors of software for sharing of electronic files, particularly music, through peer-to-peer networks, where some but not all of the users are directly infringing in sharing copyrighted works without authorization. After the Supreme Court granted the copyright owners' petition for certiorari, the two defendants – Grokster and StreamCast Networks – retained me and my firm in late 2004 to represent them. I had the lead in briefing the case and I argued it. The Supreme Court rejected the broader asserted grounds for such distributor liability but approved an inducement basis for potential liability.

Besides my partner Bartow Farr, my main co-counsel were Fred Von Lohmann, then of the Electronic Frontier Foundation and now Senior Copyright Counsel at Google, 1600 Amphitheatre Parkway, Mountain View, CA 94043 (415.488.6087); Michael Page, Durie Tangri, 217 Leidesdorff Street, San Francisco, CA 94111 (415.362.6666); and Charles Baker, Fulbright & Jaworski, 1301 McKinney Suite 5100, Houston, TX 77010 (713.651.5151). Principal opposing counsel were Donald Verrilli, then of Jenner & Block, now Solicitor General of the United States, United States Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530 (202.514.2203); and then-Solicitor General Paul Clement, now with Bancroft, 1919 M Street, NW, Suite 470, Washington, DC 20036 (202.234.0090).

5. United States v. Prigmore, 243 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2001) (before Judges Stahl, Selya, and Coffin).

This case involved a criminal prosecution charging three employees of a medical-device company with certain violations relating to the FDA's role in medical-device regulation. I was retained by the employees in 1997 after they were convicted on one count, with the other counts not having been tried. An initial appeal produced, at our urging, a remand to dispose of the remaining counts before there could be a final judgment for appeal. United States v. Leichter, 160 F.3d 33 (1st Cir. 1998) (before Judges Torruella, Campbell, and Boudin). I played a central role in the briefing and argued that appeal. Then, after proceedings on remand, the case returned to the First Circuit on appeal, where again I played a central role in the briefing and argued the case. That appeal produced a vacating of the conviction and a remand. I believe that, on remand, a plea requiring no prison time was agreed on.

My main co-counsel were Robert Keefe of what is now WilmerHale, 60 State Street, Boston, MA 02109 (617.526.6334) and Andrew Good of what is now Good & Cormier, 83 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, MA 02110 (617.523.5933). Opposing counsel in the first appeal was then-Assistant United States Attorney Stephen Higginson, now a Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, 600 South Maestri Place, New Orleans, LA 70130 (504.310.7700). Opposing counsel in the second appeal was David Kris, then of the Department of Justice Criminal Division, now General Counsel of Intellectual Ventures, 3150 139th Avenue SE, Building 4, Bellevue, WA 98005 (425.467.2300).

6. Litton v. Honeywell, 140 F.3d 1449 (Fed. Cir. 1998) (before Judges Rader, Newman, and Bryson), and 238 F.3d 1376 (Fed. Cir. 2001) (before Judges Rader, Mayer, and Bryson).

This case involved an appeal of a verdict of patent infringement under the doctrine of equivalents, and under state-law torts, against Honeywell. After Honeywell lost on appeal in 1996, it retained me and my firm to seek certiorari. The Supreme Court vacated the decision in light of Warner-Jenkinson and remanded to the Federal Circuit, where I played the lead role in briefing and where I argued the case, which the Federal Circuit ruled (in the 1998 ruling) should be remanded for further consideration of Honeywell's liability. In the district court, I played a lead role in the briefing, and I argued the matter, leading to a summary judgment of non-liability. On plaintiff Litton's appeal to the Federal Circuit, I played the lead role in the briefing and argued the case, producing (in the 2001 ruling) a holding of non-infringement by Honeywell, plus a remand for further proceedings on the state-law claims. The matter was settled before further proceedings.

My main co-counsel were Honeywell's then-General Counsel Ed Grayson, now retired, 210 Chapoquoit Road, Falmouth MA 02540 (508.548.5948), John Donofrio, now General Counsel of the Shaw Group, 4171 Essen Lane, Baton Rouge, LA 70809 (225.932.2500), Greg Long of Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, 333 South Hope Street, 43rd Floor, Los Angeles, CA 90071 (213.617.5443), Kent Raygor of Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton, 1901 Avenue of the Stars, Suite 1600, Los Angeles, CA 90067 (310.228.3730), and George Quillin of Foley & Lardner, 3000 K Street, NW, Suite 600, Washington, DC 20007 (202.672.5413). My principal opposing counsel in the first appeal was the late Leslie Misrock of Pennie & Edmonds, joined by Frederick Lorig, now of Quinn Emanuel, 865 South Figueroa Street, 10th Floor, Los Angeles, CA 90017 (213.443.3000). My principal opposing counsel in the second appeal was now-Chief Justice John Roberts, Supreme Court of the United States, 1st Street NE, Washington, DC 20543 (202.479.3000).

7. Rambus Inc. v. Infineon Technologies, 318 F.3d 1081 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (before Judges Rader, Bryson, and Prost).

This was the first of a series of cases in which I have represented Rambus in the Federal Circuit. In a suit brought by Rambus alleging infringement of several patents by Infineon, the district court in 2001 construed the claims narrowly and rejected infringement and also upheld in part a jury verdict that Rambus committed fraud through its participation in a standard-setting organization. Rambus retained me just after the jury verdict. I played a leading role in the briefing and I argued the case on appeal. In this 2003 ruling, the Federal Circuit reversed the claim constructions, remanding for further proceedings on infringement, and also reversed the judgment of fraud. On remand in the district court, where I did not participate, the case settled before judgment after proceedings on Infineon's charge that Rambus had improperly destroyed documents.

I represented Rambus in further appeals in related cases, arguing for Rambus on three additional occasions – the last of them a re-argument before a five-judge panel of the Federal Circuit. Samsung Electronics v. Rambus, 523 F.3d 1374 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (before Judges Rader, Schall, and Farnan, DJ); Hynix Semiconductor v. Rambus, 2011 WL 1815978 (Fed. Cir.) (initially before Chief Judge Michel and Judge Linn; on re-argument before Judges Newman, Lourie, Bryson, Gajarsa, and Linn). The latter has been remanded for further proceedings.

In the 2003 appeal, my principal co-counsel were William West, now of Pillsbury, 2300 N Street, NW, Washington, DC 20037 (202.663.8875); Michael Schaengold, of Patton Boggs, 2550 M Street, NW, Washington, DC 20037 (202.457.6523); Greg Stone and Paul Watford of Munger Tolles & Olson, 355 South Grand Avenue, 35th Floor, Los Angeles, CA 90071 (213.683.9255 and 213.683.9172). In the later appeals, co-counsel have included Carter Phillips and Eric Shumsky of Sidley Austin, 1501 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20005 (202.736.8270 and 202.736.8496).

My principal opposing counsel in the 2003 appeal was former-Judge and -Solicitor General Kenneth Starr, who is currently the President of Baylor University, One Bear Place #97096, Waco, TX 76798 (254.710.3555), joined by John Desmarais, then of Kirkland & Ellis, now of Round Rock Research, P.O. Box 1042, Mt. Kisco, NY 10549 (888.651.0028). In the 2008 appeal, opposing counsel included David Healey, now of Fish & Richardson, 1 Houston Center, 1221 McKinney Street, Houston, TX 77010

(713.654.5310), and Brian Riopelle, McGuire Woods LLP, 901 East Cary Street, Richmond, VA 23219 (804.775.1084). In the 2011 case, my principal opposing counsel was Sri Srinivasan, now Principal Deputy Solicitor General, Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20530 (202.514.2203).

8. Housey Pharmaceuticals v. Bayer, 2005 WL 752364 (Fed. Cir.) (before Judges Rader, Cleverger, and Bryson) and 2006 WL 2233214 (Fed. Cir.) (before Judges Rader, Schall, and Bryson).

This case involved a claim of unenforceability of a patent owned by Housey Pharmaceuticals, which hired me in January 2004, just after the district court found the patent unenforceable. I played the leading role in the briefing, and I argued the case, in the Federal Circuit, which held in 2005 that the district court had clearly erred but remanded to permit the district court's further consideration of the issue. The district court found unenforceability again on remand, and I played the leading role in the briefing and I argued the case in the Federal Circuit in the subsequent appeal. In 2006, the Federal Circuit affirmed the remand ruling. (I also represented Housey Pharmaceuticals in unsuccessfully seeking Supreme Court review in Housey Pharmaceuticals, Inc. v. Astrazeneca, 366 F.3d 1348 (Fed. Cir. 2004).)

My co-counsel was Terrance Rader, of Rader, Fishman & Grauer, 39533 Woodward Avenue, Suite 140, Bloomfield Hills, MI 48304 (248.594.0600). My opposing counsel was Jeffrey Bove, of Connolly Bove Lodge, & Hutz, 1007 North Orange Street, Suite 900, P.O. Box 2207, Wilmington, DE 19899 (302.658.9141).

9. Verizon Services Corp. v. Vonage Holdings Corp., 503 F.3d 1295 (Fed. Cir. 2007) (before Chief Judge Michel and Judges Gajarsa and Dyk).

This case involved my client Verizon's assertion of several patents against Vonage. Verizon enlisted me in 2006 to aid in the district court work, though not to have an in-court role, and I did so, assisting in all phases of the trial-level litigation, before and during the jury trial. Verizon won a jury verdict, which was followed by stay briefing and argument in the Federal Circuit, as well as merits briefing and argument, all within a couple of months. I played a leading role in the briefing and I did both arguments in the Federal Circuit, which affirmed in substantial part. The case was thereafter settled.

Co-counsel were John Thorne, Deputy General Counsel, Verizon, 1320 North Courthouse Road, Arlington, VA 22201 (703.351.3900), and several lawyers from Winston & Strawn, including Geoffrey Eaton, 1700 K Street, NW, Washington, DC 20006 (202.282.5705), and Peter McCabe and Dan Webb, 35 West Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60601 (312.558.5954 and 312.558.5856). My opposing counsel was Roger Warin, Steptoe & Johnson, 1330 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036 (202.429.6280), joined by Scott Doyle, now of Shearman & Sterling, 801 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW, Suite 900, Washington, DC 20004 (202.508.8170).

10. Bard Peripheral Vascular v. W.L. Gore & Associates, No. 2010-1510, Federal Circuit, argued May 3, 2011 (before Judges Newman, Gajarsa, and Linn).

This case involves a suit for patent infringement by Bard against Gore, based on a patent issued in 2002 after an interference involving competing applications from 1974 that twice went to the Federal Circuit. After a jury verdict in late 2007, and denials of post-trial relief in 2009, Gore retained me to assist on the eventual appeal. There were many issues litigated in the trial court, including several validity issues and unenforceability. I played a central role in the selection of appeal issues and in the briefing, and I argued the case, in the Federal Circuit. The Federal Circuit has not yet decided the case.

My co-counsel include recently retired senior counsel at Gore, Iain Campbell, 551 Paper Mill Road, Newark, DE 19711; William Maledon, Osborn Maledon, 2929 North Central Avenue # 2100, Phoenix, AZ 85012 (602.640.9000); and David Pfeffer and Harry Marcus, of Locke Lord Bissell & Liddell, 3 World Financial Center, New York, NY 10281 (212.415.8600). My principal opposing counsel is Steven Cherny, Kirkland & Ellis, 601 Lexington Avenue, New York, NY 10022 (212.446.4800), joined by, among others, Gregory Garre of Latham & Watkins, 555 Eleventh Street, NW, Washington, DC 20004 (202.637.2200).

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

My law practice has been overwhelmingly a litigation practice. I include in such litigation those occasions on which I participated in discussions with attorneys for the United States about what positions, if any, the United States would take as an amicus in cases that I was working on for clients, whether the client had already participated in the litigation or was planning for such participation. I have done very little work that was not part of litigation.

One area of activity that is somewhat different from ordinary litigation consists of work on several mergers involving the company that is now Verizon: the 1997 merger of Bell Atlantic and Nynex; the 2000 merger of Bell Atlantic with GTE (which formed "Verizon"); and the 2006 merger of Verizon with MCI. In each situation, my client was Bell Atlantic/Verizon, and I participated in preparation of papers for submission, and occasionally in in-person presentations, to either the Justice Department's Antitrust Division or the Federal Communications Commission as those offices were reviewing the mergers before they were completed.

In recent years, I also have spent time advising Verizon on various issues that may affect its overall involvement in litigation. That advisory work has chiefly concerned patent law. As part of that advisory work, on approximately half a dozen occasions in 2008 and 2009 (perhaps into 2010), I accompanied at least one representative of Verizon to meet with staff of Senators or Representatives to discuss some of the issues relating to damages in patent cases when Congress was considering potential amendments to the patent statute. I also accompanied at least one representative of Verizon to meet with congressional staff on a couple of occasions when Congress was considering altering the pleading standard the Supreme Court had articulated in Bell Atlantic v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544 (2007), and Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 7 (2009). I believe that that is the sole legislative lobbying activity in which I have engaged.

I also did several projects for the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. For several months in 1998, I was retained as an outside consultant to aid in the Division's consideration of possible antitrust issues raised by certain practices of Visa and MasterCard. My role came to an end before the Division completed its investigation and made a decision to take action. Earlier, in late 1994 to early 1995, I was retained by the Antitrust Division to assist in some of the briefing in a case involving a consent decree against Microsoft. Later, from fall 1999 to early 2001, I was retained by the Division to assist in some of the briefing for the government in its litigated antitrust case against Microsoft.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In spring 1992, I taught a seminar on "Supreme Court Practice" at Georgetown University Law Center. The course involved study of the components of practicing in the Supreme Court: petitions for certiorari; briefs in opposition to certiorari; merits briefs; amicus briefs; and oral arguments. I no longer have a syllabus for the course.

In fall 1995, I taught "Federal Courts and the Federal System" at Georgetown University Law Center. The course involved study of the topics that are traditionally part of a "federal jurisdiction" class: standing and related doctrines; non-Article III courts; congressional control of courts' jurisdiction; federal question jurisdiction; federal common law; implied rights of action; appellate review; habeas corpus; Eleventh Amendment issues; the scope of Section 1983; and abstention doctrines. A syllabus is supplied.

In fall 2002, I taught "Patent Law" at Harvard Law School. The course involved study of a broad range of issues in patent law: eligible subject matter; utility; disclosure and claiming requirements; novelty and other priority issues; obviousness; infringement; and some other issues. A syllabus is supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I do not have any arrangements for deferred income or future benefits from previous business relationships.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment during service with a court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I am unaware of any individuals, family or otherwise, that are likely to present potential conflicts of interest. Such conflicts as are likely to arise seem likely to come from my representation of clients. It is possible that potential conflicts of interest may be presented with regard to current or former clients. Specifically, I am aware of several particular matters in which I have participated that either are pending in the Federal Circuit or have a potential to be in the Federal Circuit. I would not participate in those matters as a judge. My present or former clients in those matters are Fiserv, Inc.; Honeywell Inc.; Gilbert Hyatt; Rambus Inc.; Timken Co.; Verizon Communications; US Bank N.A.; and W.L. Gore & Associates.

It is unlikely that, after I left, my firm would handle matters before the Federal Circuit, but if it did, I would recuse myself for at least a period of time. I would apply the standards of 28 U.S.C. § 455 and the Code of Judicial Conduct, as well as any other pertinent principles of judicial ethics, to determine whether to recuse in other matters, including in matters that involve former clients of my firm but that are themselves unrelated to any matters that I or my firm handled.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would consult rules and decisions that address what constitutes a conflict of interest, including 28 U.S.C. § 455 and the Code of Judicial Conduct, and based on that consultation I would compile a comprehensive list of matters and/or clients (or other persons) for easy flagging of potential conflicts of interest. In close cases I would consult other judges and any persons designated by the court or judicial organizations to provide advice on such questions as they arise.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I have done essentially two kinds of legal work that are relevant to this question. First, without undertaking a representation of a client, I have given many hours in freely helping lawyers to clarify their appellate arguments, sometimes in briefing, more often in moot courts held in preparation for oral arguments. Much of this work has been through the Supreme Court Institute of the Georgetown University Law Center, which holds moot courts in most cases argued in the Supreme Court, and for which I have long done a handful of moot courts each year. Some of this work has been through the National Association of Attorneys General, for which I have done many moot courts over the years. Some of it has been for lawyers from the Public Defender Service: for example, I devoted many hours to assisting on United States v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688 (1993). Some of it has been for lawyers who are representing persons suffering physical injury and suing for torts: for example, I helped the plaintiffs' attorneys prepare in Wyeth v. Levine, 555 U.S. 555 (2009), and Norfolk & Western Ry. Co. v. Ayers, 538 U.S. 135 (2003). I performed a similar role for an attorney for a discharged postal employee in United States Postal Service v. Gregory, 534 U.S. 1 (2001), and for various environmental plaintiffs (who may not be so uniformly disadvantaged) in cases such as Suitum v. Tahoe Regional Planning Agency, 520 U.S. 725 (1997), Entergy Corp. v. Riverkeeper, Inc., 556 U.S. 208 (2009), Massachusetts v. EPA, 549 U.S. 497 (2007), Monsanto Co. v. Geertson Seed Farms, 130 S. Ct. 2743 (2010), and American Electric Power Co. v. Connecticut, 131 S. Ct. 2527 (2011). Although I have not maintained records, I have invested a substantial number of hours in this work over the years.

Second, I have undertaken representations in several cases in the Supreme Court that involved disadvantaged clients and/or were without pay or for much reduced rates. Examples include: Touby v. United States, 500 U.S. 160 (1991) (criminal defendants in drug case); Dewsnup v. Timm, 502 U.S. 410 (1992) (bankruptcy matter); Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools, 503 U.S. 60 (1992) (damages remedy for sexual harassment of high school student); Great-West Life & Annuity Insurance Co. v. Knudson, 534 U.S. 204 (2002) (victim of tort accident seeking to keep recovery against ERISA claim of insurer); and Holder v. Humanitarian Law Project, 130 S. Ct. 2705 (2010) (First Amendment challenge to application of “material support” statute to certain speech and association involving designated foreign terrorist organizations). I also drafted an amicus brief, pro bono, for the State and Local Legal Center in Seminole Tribe of Florida v. Florida, 517 U.S. 44 (1996). When undertaken, these and other matters have each consumed large amounts of time in a given year – sometimes a couple of months of full-time work.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

On January 25th or 26th, 2011, I spoke to an official in the White House Counsel's Office, who asked me whether I was interested in the possibility of serving on the Federal Circuit, and I confirmed that I would be interested. On July 6, 2011, I spoke with that official again, and was told that I was still under consideration. Since August 10, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice. On September 12, 2011, I interviewed with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 10, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you so much.

Okay. Let's have our second panel up here, which is Judge Drain and Judge Rosenbaum, both of whom were introduced by their respective Senators. Welcome to both.

I am going to have you both stand and take this oath.

[Whereupon, the witnesses were duly sworn.]

Senator FRANKEN. Please be seated.

I'll start with Judge Drain, since you're to my left there, the first. Would you—I'd love for you to be able to introduce your family.

STATEMENT OF GERSHWIN A. DRAIN, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN

Judge DRAIN. I would, thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. And any friends who are here as well.

Judge DRAIN. Okay. Thank you, Senator Franken. Before I introduce family, I do want to thank President Obama for the nomination. I am deeply honored and humbled by it.

And I want to thank Senator Leahy for scheduling this hearing. I want to thank you, Senator Franken, for presiding here, and you also, Senator Grassley. I want to thank you for serving as the Ranking Member. I also want to thank Senator Carl Levin for that very generous and kind introduction.

I do have a fair amount of family here that I'd like to introduce, with your permission. I want to first introduce my wife, Meredith Drain, who has been an incredible partner for 43 years. We got married when we were young college students.

Senator FRANKEN. Welcome.

Judge DRAIN. And I have my oldest daughter here, Shelley Drain. She's a lawyer and she works for the Prosecutor's Office in Wayne County. Her husband, Keith Strange, was not able to be here this afternoon. My youngest daughter is also here, Shannon Salinas, and she's also a lawyer. She works for the American Council of Life Insurers. Her husband, Norberto Salinas, my son-in-law, he works for the House Judiciary Committee.

And then my mom is here, and yesterday she became 88 years young.

Senator FRANKEN. Happy birthday.

Judge DRAIN. So I am happy that she was able to make it here.

And my sister—my older sister Cassandra Rutledge is here. She's a retired school teacher. My younger sister, Vernie Drain, is not here. She's an M.D. and she works for the VA Hospital in Cincinnati, Ohio.

My cousin is here, Johnna Cheek; my aunt Winona Thomas; my nephew Caleb Rutledge, and I have a number of other relatives and friends watching on the webcast. So, thank you, Senator Franken, for allowing me to make these introductions.

Senator FRANKEN. Absolutely. So your mom had a doctor and a lawyer.

Judge DRAIN. Yes. Yes.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, congratulations.

Judge DRAIN. To her real tribute. To her real tribute. She really taught us the value of a good education and the importance of hard work.

Senator FRANKEN. Fabulous.

Judge DRAIN. So, we're grateful to her for that.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, happy birthday, again. This is a pretty good birthday present, I would think, to have your son being nominated for a Federal judgeship.

Judge Rosenbaum, would you care to introduce your family and friends who are here?

My trial court opinions were never published. In the vast majority of the decisions I made, I ruled from the bench. I never kept a separate file of the opinions I did write. They are scattered throughout the thousands of case files for matters before me over the last 25 years. Sitting by assignment on the Michigan Court of Appeals, I wrote the following published opinions:

Michigan v. Morton, 175 Mich. App. 1 (1989) (Drain, J., dissenting)

1. Johnston v. Royal American Mortgage, Docket No. 08-113688-CZ; Hartzler v. Royal American Mortgage, Docket No. 09-013768-CZ, Wayne County Circuit Court, Civil Division. Opinion supplied.

These two cases involved approximately 50 plaintiffs. There were originally about 10 defendants in the case, all employees, managers or owners of Royal American Mortgage. Six of the ten defendants either settled their claims before trial or were dismissed. Essentially, this was a mortgage fraud case that had elements of a ponzi scheme to it. The manager and his wife ran the company. The manager filed for bankruptcy the day before trial and his wife filed for bankruptcy the day of trial. The owner of the company and his wife went to trial on the case and most of the 50 plaintiffs testified as to their losses on the mortgages that they financed. The jury found the owner (but not his wife) liable and assessed damages of approximately $9 million. The trial lasted about two weeks.

2. Michigan v. Magana, Docket No. 90-11712, Records Court for the City of Detroit

Magana was convicted in my courtroom of being in possession of over 650 grams of a powder containing cocaine. Michigan law at the time required that I give him a natural life sentence without the possibility of parole, which I did. The Michigan Supreme Court subsequently struck down the portion of the statute disallowing the possibility of parole in Michigan v. Bullock, 440 Mich. 15 (1992). Following that decision, I resented Magana to a life sentence with the possibility of parole. In May of 2000 he had a hearing and was given parole after serving about 10 years in prison.

3. Wilcoxson-Bey v. Providence Hosp. & Med. Ctrs., Inc., Docket No. 05-524008-NH, Michigan Third Circuit Court, Civil Division

Plaintiff was diagnosed with a monoamniotic-monochorionic twin pregnancy, a rare, high-risk pregnancy in which both fetuses share a single amniotic sac. A monoamniotic twin pregnancy involves increased risk of complication. In this case, one twin died and the other was born with a severe brain injury and is extremely mentally disabled. The plaintiff brought a medical malpractice suit against the hospital and doctors who provided her care. At issue was whether the defendants provided an adequate standard of care in prescribing twice-weekly rather than daily monitoring of the fetuses. In a bench trial, I awarded the plaintiff $3 million.

The defendants appealed my decision to the Michigan Court of Appeals, which ruled that I should have granted summary judgment in defendants' favor. The plaintiff then appealed to the Michigan Supreme Court, which reversed and remanded for consideration of issues that had not been decided in the initial decision. Wilcoxson-Bey v. Providence Hosp. & Med. Ctrs., Inc., 483 Mich. 1023 (2009). The Court of Appeals then affirmed.

4. Michigan v. Cato-Riggs, Docket No. 95-014094, Records Court for the City of Detroit. Opinion supplied.

In this case, a jury convicted Cato-Riggs of the first degree premeditated murder of her husband. The case drew national attention because he was shot to death in front of his house just 10 days after his return from the Persian Gulf War, where he had served as a Patriot Missile crewman. The prosecutor on the case showed that Cato-Riggs decided to arrange her husband's death after he survived the war in order to collect $150,000 in life insurance money. I sentenced Cato-Riggs to a natural life sentence without the possibility of parole.

On appeal, the defendant raised two issues relating to the admission of evidence against her and the Sixth Amendment right to counsel. The Court of Appeals affirmed the conviction. Michigan v. Riggs, 223 Mich. App. 662 (1997). The Michigan Supreme Court denied a delayed application for leave to appeal.

5. Diamond v. Witherspoon, Docket No. 01-133307-NO; Moody v. Witherspoon, Docket No. 01-118433-CZ, Michigan Third Circuit Court, Civil Division

Three plaintiffs brought tort suits against former Detroit Police Sergeant Witherspoon and the City of Detroit. The action arose out of the criminal sexual conduct committed against the plaintiffs by Witherspoon during traffic stops in 1999 and 2000.

At the civil trial, it was undisputed that Witherspoon had pleaded guilty to three counts of extortion and three counts of criminal sexual conduct in connection with the plaintiffs' assaults. The City of Detroit was also a defendant in the case because of evidence that Witherspoon's superiors were on notice that he was breaking the law but nevertheless continued to allow him to work and patrol the streets. A jury found Witherspoon and Detroit both liable, with the city 35% at fault and Witherspoon 65% at fault. The total judgment in the case for all three plaintiffs was $7.5 million. The City appealed the judgment and the case was affirmed on appeal in Diamond v. Witherspoon, 265 Mich. App. 673 (2005). The trial lasted about a week.

6. Detroit Medical Center (DMC) v. Karmanos Cancer Institute, Docket No. 07-712136-CK, Michigan Third Circuit Court, Civil Division

The DMC brought suit against the Karmanos Cancer Institute seeking injunctive relief to permanently prohibit the Center from moving out of the DMC to a new location in Detroit based on the terms of their contract. The DMC is a complex of hospitals situated in midtown Detroit that serves much of Detroit's indigent population, yet has a national reputation for the services that it provides. The Karmanos Cancer Institute was on the campus of the DMC and consisted of several floors in one of the hospitals on campus. At the time Karmanos was one of 39 National Cancer Institute-designated comprehensive cancer centers in the United States and among the nation's best cancer centers.

After several days of testimony and site visits to the involved facilities, I applied the test for injunctive relief and ordered the Karmanos Cancer Institute to stay on the campus of the DMC. Karmanos did not appeal my decision.

7. Gen. Motors Corp. v. Alumi-Bunk, Inc., Docket No. 04-422587-CB, Michigan Third Circuit Court, Civil Division

Defendants, Alumi-Bunk, Inc. and an individual defendant, had a contract with General Motors Corporation, plaintiff, to purchase a fleet of cars. General Motors alleged that Alumi-Bunk, Inc. promised to "upfit" (modify) the vehicles it purchased from General Motors in exchange for a significant discount on the price of the vehicles. General Motors claimed that Alumi made this promise during contract negotiations, but it was never made a part of the contract. General Motors argued that Alumi breached its promise to "upfit" the vehicles it purchased and that Alumi never intended to fulfill its promise to do so. The promise was thus the basis for breach of contract claim and fraudulent inducement claims. I granted summary disposition in favor of defendants on both claims and dismissed General Motors' case.

The Court of Appeals reversed my decision on the fraudulent inducement claim, holding that there was adequate evidence to support such a claim. Defendants appealed that decision to the Michigan Supreme Court, and it reversed the Court of Appeals decision and affirmed my ruling in all respects. *Gen. Motors Corp. v. 8. Michigan v. Djordjevic, Docket No. 96-003784, Recorder's Court for the City of Detroit

The defendants, Djordjevic and Savich, owned a bar in Detroit, which was insured against fire loss. In December, 1995, the defendants offered to pay another man, Lowery, to burn down the bar. During the early morning hours of December 31, 1995, Lowery did so. During the fire he had set, Lowery died from soot and smoke inhalation.

The defendants were charged with arson, conspiracy to commit arson, and second degree murder. This case presented an issue of first impression in Michigan regarding the murder charge. I researched the issue and found a split of authority across the country. I followed the decisions holding that a defendant lacked the requisite malice in this type of situation and dismissed the murder charge. The Court of Appeals found the opposing line of authority more persuasive and reversed my decision. Michigan v. Djordjevic, 230 Mich. App. 459 (1998), application for leave to appeal denied, 459 Mich. 956 (1999). The murder charge was reinstated and defendants pled guilty to a lesser charge.

9. Mackie v. Bollore, S.A., Docket No. 07-704897-CZ, Michigan Third Circuit Court, Civil Division

This case arose from a dispute between Ali Mackie and the trademark holders of Zig-Zag cigarette papers – Bollore, North Atlantic Trading Company (NATC), and North Atlantic Operating Company (NAOC). In March of 1999, Bollore, NATC, and NAOC obtained an $11 million contempt judgment in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas for violations of copyright and trademark laws. Seeking to collect on the contempt judgment, Bollore, NATC, and NAOC obtained orders from the Texas court declaring plaintiffs in this case – Mackie’s mother and the Freetown Mini Mart – to be alter egos of Mackie. That court added those parties as co-judgment debtors to the contempt judgment, pierced the corporate veil of Freetown, appointed a receiver, and ordered them to turn over all non-exempt property to the receiver for satisfaction of the contempt judgment debt. Mackie and Freetown appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, but while the case was pending there, Bollore, NATC and NAOC seized and sold their personal property. After the seizure and sale, the Fifth Circuit reversed the District Court findings and orders.

Mackie and Freetown filed a complaint in the Michigan Third Circuit Court in 2007 against Bollore, NATC and NAOC alleging, among other things, malicious prosecution, abuse of process, intentional infliction of emotional distress, conversion, negligence, and unjust enrichment. Defendants moved for summary judgment based on the fact that at the time of the seizures, the Texas District Court orders were in effect and the conduct was not tortious. I granted summary judgment for the defendants on all the claims except the unjust enrichment claim, which was effectively settled. Plaintiffs appealed my dismissal of the other counts, and my decision was affirmed on appeal.

10. Michigan v. Williams, Docket No. 92-008593-FC, Recorder's Court for the City of Detroit

This was a first degree murder case. The deceased was a middle school teacher who was gunned down outside the school where she taught. She was killed in a plot participated in by three people. The shooter was hired by the victim's husband's girlfriend, and they were assisted by a third defendant. When arrested, all three defendants made statements implicating one or both of their co-defendants. Because none of the three planned to testify and could not be cross-examined by co-defendants' counsel, each was entitled to a separate jury for their individual case. I had the option of conducting three separate back-to-back jury trials, one for each defendant, or seating three separate juries and having all three hear all of the common testimony together and having separate opening statements, closing arguments and testimony about their statements. I chose the latter. All three defendants were convicted and their convictions were affirmed on appeal.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

Michigan v. Moore, Michigan Court of Appeals, Docket No. 130516 (1988), granted, vacated, and remanded, 496 U.S. 933 (1990).

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Bullington v. Corbell, 2011 Mich. App. LEXIS 1481, No. 297665 (Aug. 16, 2011). I allowed the plaintiff to serve the defendants by alternate service, and I later entered a default judgment as to all defendants. The Court of Appeals held that the service was inadequate to provide notice to all defendants and the default judgments should not have been entered, so it reversed.

AFSCME Council 25 v. County of Wayne, 290 Mich. App. 348 (2010). I ruled that the defendant County of Wayne was required to arbitrate a dispute over retiree health benefits even though the Collective Bargaining Agreement had expired. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that defendants did not have to arbitrate the dispute under the terms of the agreement itself.

Truel v. City of Dearborn, 291 Mich. App. 125 (2010). I ordered the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office to turn over most of its investigative file regarding alleged police misconduct, including a final report, in a civil suit filed by a plaintiff who had participated in the investigation. The Court of Appeals found that I erred in finding that the defendants demonstrated a sufficient showing of need to overcome the deliberative-process privilege, and reversed.

Shaw v. City of Ecorse, 283 Mich. App. 1 (2009). This appeal involved two consolidated cases. I was affirmed in Shaw and reversed in Bedo. In Bedo, I granted summary disposition to the defendant, ruling that he had not established a prima facie case under MCL 15.362. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that a prima facie case had been established and that material questions of fact required further proceedings.

Special Property VI LLC v. Woodruff, 273 Mich. App. 586 (2007). This was a quiet title action brought by the plaintiff against a number of defendants to clear the title to property. I granted summary disposition for the plaintiff and the Court of Appeals reversed, holding that plaintiff failed to meet its burden to establish its title in the subject property by admissible evidence.

Bennett v. Detroit Police Chief, 274 Mich. App. 307 (2006). The plaintiff was a City of Detroit police officer who brought a wrongful discharge action against the City of Detroit, the Mayor, and the Police Chief. The plaintiff had been discharged for maintaining a website that contained criticism of the Police Chief. All three defendants moved for summary disposition on governmental immunity grounds. I granted the motion as to the Mayor and that was affirmed on appeal. I denied it as to the City and Police Chief and that was reversed.

City of Detroit v. State of Michigan, 262 Mich. App. 542 (2004). The State owned approximately 36 acres of land adjacent to the state fairgrounds. The State was in the process of leasing and/or selling this adjacent property to a private entity for the building and development of a race track and amphitheater. I denied the State's motion for summary disposition, holding that in the context of this case, the State had to comply with the City's zoning ordinances. The Court of Appeals held that the State did not have to comply.

Hayley v. Allstate Ins. Co., 262 Mich. App. 571 (2004). The plaintiffs filed suit regarding toxic mold they discovered in their home a year after an ice dam caused water damage. I denied the defendant's motion for summary disposition. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that plaintiffs' coverage excluded loss caused by mold, even when the mold grew out of a covered event.

Hojeije v. Dep't of Treasury, 263 Mich. App. 295 (2004). This involved two consolidated cases bringing tort claims against the Department of Treasury and its agents, arising from their execution of search warrants. The defendants filed a motion for summary judgment based on governmental immunity. I denied the motion. The Court of Appeals reversed the denials of summary judgment.

Jenkins v. Patel, 256 Mich. App. 111 (2003). Judge Marianne Battani presided over a medical malpractice/wrongful death case where the plaintiff died from the malpractice and was awarded $10 million. After taking over her docket in 2000, I denied two post-trial motions filed by the defendant. One sought to apply the medical malpractice cap to the wrongful death and one sought remittitur. The Court of Appeals affirmed my decision holding that the medical malpractice caps did not apply to this wrongful death case, but it reversed my ruling on the remittitur issue. The Michigan Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals, holding that the medical malpractice caps applied to wrongful death cases where the underlying cause of death was medical malpractice. Jenkins v. Patel, 471 Mich. 158 (2004).

Michigan v. Chavis, 246 Mich. App. 741 (2001). The Court of Appeals reversed the defendant's bench trial conviction for making a false robbery police report. I found that defendant lied about the location and other details of the robbery and thus made a false robbery report. The Court of Appeals held that the offense required the defendant to lie about whether he was in fact robbed. In Michigan v. Chavis, 468 Mich. 84 (2003), the Michigan Supreme Court agreed with me, reversed the Court of Appeals, and reinstated the defendant's conviction.

Michigan v. Adams, 233 Mich. App. 652 (1999). I dismissed criminal charges against the defendant because the complainant failed to appear for trial. The prosecution argued that she was unavailable and that I should allow them to use the transcript of her preliminary examination. I found that the prosecution had not adequately demonstrated her unavailability; the Court of Appeals disagreed and reversed.

Michigan v. Djordjevic, 230 Mich. App. 459 (1998). The defendants were charged with arson, conspiracy to commit arson, and second-degree murder. The defendants hired an individual to commit the arson, and in the course of setting the fire, the house blew up, killing that individual. Finding a split of authority across the country, I dismissed the murder charge, finding that the defendants lacked the requisite malice to support the charge. The Court of Appeals found contrary authority more persuasive and reversed the murder dismissal. After the murder charge was reinstated the defendants pled guilty to manslaughter and received prison sentences.

Michigan v. Brown, 220 Mich. App. 680 (1996). The Court of Appeals reversed a sentence that I imposed based on an issue that was not raised before me at the trial court level. The defendant was convicted of felonious assault and use of a firearm during the commission of a felony. I sentenced him to two years on the gun conviction and a five year consecutive probationary sentence on the assault conviction. The Court of Appeals held that the probationary sentence ran concurrently with the prison sentence for the felony-firearm conviction.

Michigan v. Vann, 448 Mich. 47 (1995). The Court of Appeals decided that I had received evidence in violation of the spousal privilege statute. The Michigan Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals, agreeing with me that the evidence was admissible in this case pursuant to an exception to that privilege.

Michigan v. Thomas, 201 Mich. App. 111 (1993). I granted a motion to suppress evidence because the searching officers were acting pursuant to a defective search warrant. The prosecution conceded that the warrant was defective, but argued that the officers had independent authority to search the premises under the State Liquor Control Act, MCL 436.1 et. seq. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that under the “pervasively regulated industry doctrine,” a balance must be struck between enforcement needs and privacy rights and here the enforcement needs trumped.

Michigan v. Spearman, 195 Mich. App. 434 (1992). Two defendants were on trial – one had a bench trial and the other a jury trial. Both defendants were convicted of second degree murder. In my findings of fact in the trial of Spearman (who had the bench trial), I erroneously used some statements from Rush’s confession that were only to be used against her. The Court of Appeals found that this error was not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt and reversed the Spearman conviction.

Michigan v. Brooks, 184 Mich. App. 793 (1990). This case dealt with the new juvenile automatic waiver statute. Defendant Brooks, age sixteen, was charged in Recorder’s Court as an adult waived juvenile. Following a motion to suppress his confession, I dismissed the case because he was not immediately taken upon arrest to the juvenile division of the probate court as required by MCL 764.27. The Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the new juvenile waiver statute made compliance with MCL 764.27 unnecessary.

Dep’t of Social Services v. American Commercial Liability Ins. Co., 435 Mich. 508 (1990). Although it did not directly consider an opinion I wrote in this case, the Michigan Supreme Court reversed an opinion of the Court of Appeals that directly relied on my opinion in Auto-Owners Ins. Co. v. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 171 Mich. App. 46 (1988).

There are other cases in which I ruled from the bench and the Michigan Court of Appeals reversed, reversed in part, or remanded the case in an unpublished opinion available only in hard copy in the clerk’s office of the Michigan Court of Appeals. While there is no comprehensive way to collect all of these cases, I obtained a partial list of such cases from the clerk’s office, which represents all of the unpublished reversals I could find from the 25 years I have been a judge. See attached list.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

In the large majority of cases before me, I ruled from the bench without writing. I wrote an opinion in approximately 2% of my cases. These opinions can be found at the clerks' offices in the files for cases I have handled.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Michigan v. Cancel, Docket No. 88-010682.

Michigan v. Cato-Riggs, Docket No. 95-014094. Opinion supplied in response to 13(c).

Michigan v. Thomas, 201 Mich. App. 111 (1993).

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have never sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

On each court in which I have served, when a party seeks my recusal I would consider the merits of it with reference to Michigan Court Rule 2.003 regarding disqualification of judges. Where such a motion is denied, the party seeking recusal has an automatic appeal of the decision to the Chief Judge of the court.

The following two cases are the only ones that I can recall in which my recusal was requested. There may have been others, but I did not keep a record of requests for recusal and there is no way to determine other cases in which my recusal was requested without doing a manual search through thousands of files I have handled over the last 25 years.

In Bogert v. Sibley Limestone Quarry, No. 07-716657, the plaintiffs sought my recusal by motion because I handled a prior matter involving Sibley Limestone Quarry. Because I had prior knowledge of the defendant, the plaintiffs felt I should be recused. I conducted a hearing on the motion to recuse and denied it. Plaintiffs appealed my denial to Chief Judge William Giovan, who affirmed my denial, and I continued to handle the case.

In Tedders v. Tedders, No. 01-130788, later consolidated with Tedders v. Tedders, 02-202503, Tedders (an attorney) was suing a number of her relatives and a bank in regard to some family financial matters. She initially sought my recusal by motion because I did not grant the requested continuance she wanted. I denied the request and was upheld by then-Chief Judge Mary Beth Kelly. I later recused myself after Tedders named me and many other judges as defendants in a lawsuit alleging that the courthouse was not in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I have never held any public office other than judicial offices. In 1984, I ran unsuccessfully for Judge of the 36th District Court for the City of Detroit.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

I have not held office in or rendered services to any political party or election committee. I have not held a position or played a role in a political campaign, except that I have occasionally lent my name for use by other judicial candidates solely as an endorser and supporter. I estimate that I may have done this a dozen times in the 25 years I have been on the bench. The only specific instance I can recall is that I endorsed Judge Edward Nykiel in 2010, when he was the incumbent candidate for the 33rd District Court.

16. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

- a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

I served as a law clerk in a pool of seven law clerks who did research and writing for all 28 Michigan Third Circuit Court Judges from 1972 to 1973.

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I never practiced law alone.

- iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I served as an arbitrator with the American Arbitration Association only a couple of times during the early 1990's. The records of these arbitrations are no longer available because of the American Arbitration Association's ten year retention policy.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1973 to 1974, at the Detroit Department of Transportation, I handled property damage and minor personal injury cases regarding the city's buses. From 1974 to 1986, at the Federal Defender Office, I represented indigent defendants who were charged with criminal felonies.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

During my one year with the City of Detroit Department of Transportation, I represented the City of Detroit when it was sued for incidents arising from its provision of public transportation.

During my 12 years with the Federal Defender Office, I represented indigent criminal defendants in federal court who were charged with a variety of crimes such as drug violations, bank robberies, counterfeiting, mail theft, interstate transportation of stolen property, and gun charges.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My practice was exclusively in litigation. When I worked at the Federal Defender Office from 1974 to 1986, I was in court daily and tried numerous cases in federal court.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. federal courts: 95%
- 2. state courts of record: 5%
- 3. other courts: 0%
- 4. administrative agencies: 0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. civil proceedings: 5%
- 2. criminal proceedings: 95%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

From 1974 to 1986, while at the Federal Defender Office, I tried, as sole counsel, approximately one case a month on average. Over 12 years, that is approximately 144 cases. While working for the City of Detroit Department of Transportation from 1973 to 1974, I tried three or four cases as sole counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 98%
 - 2. non-jury: 2%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have never practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
 - b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
 - c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.
1. U.S. v. Louzon, 392 F. Supp. 1220 (E.D. Mich. 1975). When Louzon violated his probation by committing a new crime, the probation department waited until he had finished serving all of his prison time for the new crime before taking any action on the probation violation charge. I moved for dismissal of the probation violation charge on speedy trial grounds. Judge Charles Joiner held that Louzon had a constitutional right to a speedy disposition on the probation violation and that the probation department should have taken some action as soon as they learned of the new offense. Because of the lengthy delay, Judge Joiner dismissed the violation on Sixth Amendment, speedy trial grounds.

I was the sole attorney representing Louzon.

2. U.S. v. Chamblis, 425 F. Supp. 1330 (E.D. Mich. 1977). In this case, I represented a defendant charged with possession of heroin. Upon disembarking from a plane at the Detroit airport, the defendant was stopped by a Drug Enforcement Administration agent, who then took the defendant downstairs, searched him, and found heroin. I moved to suppress the heroin. Judge James P. Churchill granted my motion to suppress because the agent lacked probable cause to search the defendant. After suppressing the evidence, the Judge dismissed the case.

I was the sole attorney representing Chamblis.

3. U.S. v. Mendenhall, 596 F.2d 706 (6th Cir. 1979), rev'd, 446 U.S. 544 (1980). In this case, I represented at trial a defendant who was profiled, stopped, and then searched by federal agents at an airport, who found drugs upon the defendant. I moved to suppress the drugs, asserting that the agents lacked probable cause and that the defendant had not consented to the search. Judge Robert DeMascio denied the motion to suppress the evidence, but the Sixth Circuit reversed. The Supreme Court granted certiorari and reversed the Court of Appeals, though the majority was divided in its reasoning.

In addition to handling the case at trial, I assisted in the preparation of the case for appeal to the Sixth Circuit. I was not involved at the Supreme Court.

In this case the defendant was charged with interstate transportation of stolen property, and I challenged the sufficiency of the indictment, asserting that it did not sufficiently plead the intent requirement for the offense. Judge Robert DeMascio denied my motion, and the Sixth Circuit affirmed. Emler was convicted and sentenced.

At the trial, I handled this case alone. I assisted in the preparation of the case for appeal to the Sixth Circuit.

5. U.S. v. McGraw, 420 F. Supp. 443 (E.D. Mich. 1976). Defendant McGraw was convicted of possession of heroin, and the court imposed a suspended sentence and placed him on probation. When McGraw later violated his probation, he was sentenced to a term of imprisonment. At that point, I filed a motion under Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure to reduce McGraw's sentence. Judge Cornelia Kennedy denied the motion, holding that a Rule 35 motion can only be used to challenge the original sentence, not to challenge resentencing following a violation of probation.

I handled this case alone.

6. U.S. v. Cooper, 682 F.2d 114 (6th Cir. 1982). The issue in this case was whether there was sufficient probable cause in a warrant affidavit filed by the FBI to place a beeper in a package that the defendant, a UPS driver, then stole. I filed a motion to suppress the evidence before Judge Charles Joiner, who held that there was adequate probable cause to place the beeper. The Sixth Circuit affirmed, and Cooper was convicted and sentenced.

In this case I handled the trial and appeal alone.

Assistant United States Attorney John N. Thompson (Deceased) (Prosecutor)

7. U.S. v. Ayotte, 741 F.2d 865 (6th Cir. 1984). In this case I represented a defendant, Ayotte, who was on trial with two other defendants in a drug conspiracy case before Judge Horace Gilmore. During the trial, Judge Gilmore limited my cross-examination of an informant about things that he had written in a report and said before the grand jury. The Sixth Circuit held that it was reversible error to limit my cross-examination, and it reversed the defendant's conviction and remanded her case alone for a new trial.

I handled this case alone at trial and assisted in the appeal.

8. U.S. v. Cox, 593 F.2d 46 (6th Cir. 1979). In this case I represented a defendant who was charged with making a false statement in an application for a passport. The defendant executed the application for a passport under a name he had assumed in accordance with Michigan common law. At the conclusion of all of the evidence, I moved for a judgment of acquittal based on the fact that the defendant had not made a material false statement because he had in fact assumed a new name. Judge Ralph Guy denied the motion and the jury convicted the defendant, but the Sixth Circuit reversed, holding that the motion for judgment of acquittal should have been granted. The case was remanded with direction to dismiss the indictment.

I handled this case alone at trial and assisted on the appeal.

In my cross-examination of the government's informant, Judge Charles Joiner would not permit me to ask how much the informant was paid for his work on cases other than the one that was being tried. The Sixth Circuit reversed the conviction because the cross-examination was limited and what the informant was paid in other matters went to his bias and motive to fabricate and distort his testimony.

I handled the trial alone at trial and assisted on the appeal.

10. U.S. v. Touchstone, 726 F.2d 1116 (6th Cir. 1984). In this case I represented Touchstone, who was a defendant in a large drug conspiracy case. Twenty-five people were indicted, and, when the trial started, there were approximately twelve defendants. By the end of the six-week trial, only about six defendants' cases went to the jury, with the other defendants having accepted plea bargains. My client, Touchstone, and one of his co-defendants, Godwin (represented by now-District Judge David Lawson), failed to appear for trial after the third day. Lawson and I asked Judge Philip Pratt to sever our clients from the trial. Touchstone was convicted in his absence and was later sentenced to four years imprisonment after his arrest. I also raised a Fourth Amendment objection to a government search, objected to both the evidence of and the district court's jury instructions on flight, and challenged the district court's limitation of cross-examination. The Sixth Circuit affirmed the convictions.

I represented Touchstone at trial alone and assisted with the appeal.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Throughout my career, I have been actively involved in the Association of Black Judges of Michigan. Over the years, I have participated in the mock trial program (as both a judge and a coach) as well as various mentoring programs involving local students. I have been involved in the Adopt-a-School program and hosted students for visits to the courthouse. I was also active in the National Judicial College. I taught courses for the college for about ten years, including courses on criminal law and one titled "Great Issues of Law as Reflected in Literature." I also served as a liaison between the administration and the volunteer judges who taught for the college.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

Criminal Law (Undergraduate Course); Wayne State University; Fall 1989. I taught the steps in the criminal process, from arraignments to sentencing. I have been unable to locate the syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I will receive payments upon retirement from the Wayne County (Michigan) Retirement System.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans to pursue outside employment if appointed as a District Judge other than to serve on appropriate non-profit boards and to remain active with my neighborhood and church.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

Other than my wife and two daughters, I cannot think of any family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present any conflicts-of-interest if I am confirmed. If, by chance, my wife and two daughters appeared in a case before me I would recuse myself. I would review each case assigned to me to determine whether any potential conflict existed, and handle any potential conflicts in accordance with the recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would follow the recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I have been involved in a prison ministry with Rosedale Park Baptist Church since 1997. Through this ministry, for several years, I led the Sunday morning worship service at the Mound Road Correctional Facility twice a month and then, more recently, once a month. For the last three or four years I have been leading a monthly Bible study. This amounted to 15 to 30 hours a month (including preparation time). I also spoke on occasion at the prison on issues such as parole.

From 2000 to 2006 I was on the Board of Directors of New Creations Community Outreach, formerly called Transition of Prisoners (TOP). This organization was involved in helping men coming out of prison with issues such as education, employment, social skills, and family issues. I devoted approximately four hours a month to this project.

I am annually involved with my church in a program called "Angel Tree." The program arranges for the purchase and delivery of Christmas gifts to the children of inmates. I have devoted approximately eight hours a year to this project.

I have also gone on mission trips to Texas (one week), Uganda (ten days), and Jamaica (one week), working with youth and/or inmates.

From 1993 to 1998 I was involved with the Association of Black Judges adopt-a-school and mentoring program, working with at-risk youths. When I was involved in this program, I spent five hours a month on it.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In December 2010, an announcement was made that applications were being accepted by the Judicial Advisory Committee for the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, which is appointed by U.S. Senators Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow, for two open federal judgeships in the Eastern District of Michigan. I submitted my application in late January 2011. On March 14, 2011, I received a letter from Senators Levin and Stabenow indicating that my name, along with four others, was sent to the White House for possible nomination for the two vacancies. Since May 31, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On June 28, 2011, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On November 17, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

STATEMENT OF ROBIN S. ROSENBAUM, NOMINEE TO BE U.S. DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you, Senator Franken. I want to first thank the Committee for scheduling this hearing, and thank you, Senator Franken, for presiding over it. Thank you to the Ranking Member, Senator Grassley. Thank you, Senator Lee, for being here as well.

I also want to thank Senator Nelson for his remarks, and Senator Nelson and Senator Rubio for forwarding my name to President Obama. I'd like to thank President Obama for the nomination. I'd also like to thank the Judicial Nominating Commission for sending my name in the first place to Senators Rubio and Nelson.

I'd like to introduce my family, very quickly. This is my husband, Phil.

Senator FRANKEN. Welcome.

Judge ROSENBAUM. My daughter, Rosie. She's 10.

Senator FRANKEN. Hi, Rosie.

Judge ROSENBAUM. My mom, Hedy; my daughter, Evin, who's 12; my father, Jerry; my sister Marci; and my other sister, Jodi.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, congratulations to you all. You must be very proud.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. Okay. Well, I guess we should just—I'll start the questions.

Senator GRASSLEY. I'm going to let Senator Lee go ahead of me because he's got to go at 3:30. So when you're done, go to him.

Senator FRANKEN. Okay. I will do that.

Let's see. Obviously you were both introduced by your respective Senators. Each of you are a judge and have experience. Judge Rosenbaum, you've been a magistrate judge since 2007. Judge Drain, you have been a State court judge for more than 25 years. How will each of your previous experiences help you in the transition to the Federal bench, and what challenges do you anticipate in making that transition?

Judge DRAIN. Senator Franken, I do have a pretty long history and I spent 12 years at the Federal Defender's Office. During that time I handled a whole host of Federal criminal matters. I handled a lot of trials. I even handled some cases in the Sixth Circuit, some of the appeals that—from cases that I handle.

So I had that experience for 12 years in Federal court. And then as a State court judge, I handled criminal cases and civil cases. I handled criminal cases for about 13 years in the Recorder's Court and Wayne Circuit Court, and during that time I handled all manner of crimes: murder, rape, robbery, assaults, drugs, weapons violations, the whole gamut. I did that for, again, 13 years.

And then in 2000 I moved to the Civil Division, and there I started handling civil cases, the personal injury cases, malpractice, legal and medical, contracts, employment cases, discrimination cases, just the whole gamut of civil matters.

And the challenge I see in moving to a Federal position, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, would be to start looking at Federal statutes and the Federal Constitution, the U.S. Constitution, whereas in the past I've been dealing with State statutes and the Michigan constitution.

They also have e-filing in Federal court. In our State court we really haven't gotten that advanced yet, so that would be a challenge also. But I would look forward to being confirmed with great excitement, and look forward to any other challenges that may surface.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you.

Judge Rosenbaum.

Judge ROSENBAUM. As a Magistrate Judge I have been fortunate to have had the experience to handle exactly the same types of cases as District Judges handle on a daily basis, and I've been fortunate to be able to handle all different kinds of motions that get filed in Federal District Court. So I would be prepared to hit the ground running as a District Court judge, having worked on the same types of matters as a Magistrate Judge, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed.

As far as challenges go, the one area in which a Magistrate Judge does not have authority to preside, by law, is over felony criminal trials and so that would be a new challenge for me. But I would feel confident that I would be able to address that accordingly because, first of all, I have presided over both Federal jury—Federal civil jury and Federal civil bench trials, and I spent 9 years as a Federal prosecutor. Five of those years I served as the Chief of the Economic Crimes Division. So, I would feel well prepared to preside over criminal trials as well.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

United States Magistrate Judge, United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida from September 4, 2007, to the present. In addition, I handle criminal duty, including issuing criminal complaints, search warrants, and arrest warrants and presiding over criminal duty court.

1. SEC v. Huff, Case No. 08-60315-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

This matter involved a United States Securities and Exchange Commission enforcement action against a defendant (Huff) and three relief defendants. The defendant was alleged to have used his companies to drain a publicly-traded company of approximately $130 million. After a seven-day bench trial, I entered judgment for the SEC and against Huff and two of the three relief defendants and judgment for one of the three relief defendants and against the SEC. Under the judgment, Huff was required to disgorge approximately $10 million and was barred from serving as an officer and director of a publicly traded company. Huff has appealed my judgment to the Eleventh Circuit, where the case is currently pending. Citations of opinions that I filed in this case include the following: SEC v. Huff, 758 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (S.D. Fla. 2010) (Amended Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law); SEC v. Huff, 2011 WL 1102777 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 23, 2011); SEC v. Huff, 2010 WL 5287423 (S.D. Fla. 2. Lawson v. Plantation Gen. Hosp., L.P., Case No. 08-61826-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

I presided over a jury trial in this employment discrimination case brought by a former hospital employee against the hospital that terminated her employment. The plaintiff, an executive secretary formerly employed by the defendant hospital, alleged discrimination based on her race, age, handicap, national origin, and gender under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The defendant hospital argued that it had ended the plaintiff's employment as the result of a reduction in force that resulted in the layoff of numerous employees. Following a six-day trial, the jury returned a verdict for the hospital. Citations of opinions that I filed in this case include the following: Lawson v. Plantation Gen. Hosp., L.P., 2010 WL 1258058 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 30, 2010); Lawson v. Plantation Gen. Hosp., L.P., 2009 WL 3367369 (S.D. Fla. Oct. 15, 2009).

3. Peters v. Peake, Case No. 08-81162-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

I presided over a jury trial in this case brought by a doctor against the Veterans Administration. The plaintiff, who worked as a physician in the Veterans Administration hospital, alleged that after she complained about a sexually hostile work environment, the Veterans Administration retaliated against her by placing her in an administrative position. The Veterans Administration denied that it had done so and instead argued that it had transferred her to another position to compensate for the fact that three other physicians had been called to active duty, and the plaintiff had requested the hours that they worked. Upon transferring to the new position, however, the Veterans Administration contended that the plaintiff had acted in an unprofessional manner and had failed to attend work shifts without excuse. After a five-day trial, the jury returned a verdict for the Veterans Administration. My only opinion that has a citation in this case is the following: Peters v. Peake, 2009 WL 5214997 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 30, 2009).

Sabatier v. Suntrust Bank, Case No. 06-20418-CIV-ZLOCH/Rosenbaum

These were four employment cases brought by the same plaintiff's attorney. In all four cases, the plaintiff's attorney moved for the district judge to recuse himself. The presiding district judge directed me to hold an evidentiary hearing on the allegations contained in the plaintiff's motions seeking recusal. I held a two-day evidentiary hearing and determined that plaintiffs' attorney's allegations lacked a basis in fact and in law. The district judge adopted my report and recommendation and imposed sanctions on the plaintiffs' attorney. The citation for my report and recommendation, as adopted by the district court, is as follows: Bettis v. Toys R Us, 646 F. Supp. 2d 1273 (S.D. Fla. 2009). Other opinions that I wrote in this matter include the following: Bettis v. Toys R Us, 2009 WL 1812439 (S.D. Fla. June 23, 2009); Bettis v. Toys R Us, 2009 WL 1758731 (S.D. Fla. June 22, 2009).

5. FTC v. First Universal Lending, LLC, Case No. 09-82322-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.)

In this Federal Trade Commission (“FTC”) enforcement action, the FTC sought to enjoin the defendants from operating their loan-modification and foreclosure-relief business. The district judge referred the defendants’ motion to dismiss to me for an evidentiary hearing regarding the FTC’s alleged destruction of records. Following a four-day hearing, I filed a report and recommendation recommending that the district judge deny the defendants’ motion to dismiss. The district judge adopted my report and recommendation. The parties subsequently settled, with the defendants agreeing to an injunction permanently banning them from participating in the mortgage-loan-modification and foreclosure-relief business and to a monetary judgment against them for approximately $18.8 million. The citations to opinions that I filed in this case include the following: FTC v. First Universal Lending, LLC, 2011 WL 673879 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 17, 2011) (Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law); FTC v. First Universal Lending, LLC, 2011 WL 688744 (S.D. Fla. Feb. 18, 2011); FTC v. First Universal Lending, LLC, 2011 WL 666149 (S.D. 6. Jeld-Wen, Inc. v. Nebula Glasslam Int’l, Inc., Case No. 07-22326-CIV-DIMITROULEAS/Rosenbaum (S.D. Fla.)

This was the fourth case in a series of litigation regarding allegedly defective storm windows. The defendant had sold the plaintiff certain resin and other glass products and licensed to the plaintiff its patented process of producing impact-resistant (hurricane) glass. After the plaintiff had manufactured and sold windows produced using the defendant's products and process, a number of the windows yellowed and delaminated, so the plaintiff sued. The defendant alleged that the windows had failed as a result of something that the plaintiff had done or used in the process. The matter, which involved millions of dollars in potential damages, was hotly contested, and I presided over several discovery motions in the case. Ultimately, the parties settled the matter. Citations for opinions that I filed in this case include the following: Jeld-Wen, Inc. v. Nebula Glasslam Int'l, Inc., 2008 WL 756455 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 11, 2008); *Jeld-Wen, Inc. v. 7. United States v. Wilson, Case No. 10-60102-CR-ZLOCH/Rosenbaum (S.D. Fla.)

In this criminal case, the defendants were alleged to have run an underage prostitution ring. One of the defendants filed three pretrial motions, including a motion to dismiss, that the district judge referred to me. I held hearings on the motions and filed reports and recommendations on each motion. I recommended against dismissal, finding the charging statute to be constitutional, and I likewise recommended against severing the trial against the defendant into two trials, based on the charges against him. In addition, I recommended against granting the defendant's motion in limine seeking to preclude admission of recorded telephone calls of his. The district judge adopted my reports and recommendations, and subsequently, the defendant pled guilty and was sentenced to 102 months' imprisonment. Citations for the opinions that I filed in this case include the following: United States v. Wilson, 2010 WL 2991561 (S.D. Fla. July 27, 2010); United States v. Wilson, 2010 WL 2949642 (S.D. Fla. 8. United States v. Perraud, Case No. 09-60129-CR-ZLOCH/Rosenbaum (S.D. Fla.)

The defendants in this criminal case were charged with, among other crimes, obstruction of a proceeding of the Securities and Exchange Commission. They filed pre-trial motions, including, among others, two motions to dismiss. The district judge referred three motions to me for report and recommendation. I presided over hearings on the motions and issued reports and recommendations recommending (1) the granting in part and denying in part of the motion to dismiss the indictment for insufficiency; (2) the denial of the motion to dismiss the indictment for alleged prosecutorial misconduct; and (3) the granting in part and denying in part of a motion to compel. The district judge adopted all of the reports and recommendations. At trial, the trial judge granted the defendants' Rule 29, Fed. R. Crim. P., motion and dismissed the case against both of the defendants. The citations for my reports and recommendations in this case are as follows: United States v. Perraud, 672 F. Supp. 2d 1328 (S.D. Fla. 2009); United States v. Perraud, 2010 WL 228013 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 14, 2010); United States v. Perraud, 2010 WL 298601 (S.D. Fla. Jan. 20, 2010).

9. Christ Covenant Church v. Town of S.W. Ranches, Case No. 07-60516-CIV-DIMITROULEAS/Rosenbaum (S.D. Fla.)

In this matter, the plaintiff church sued the defendant town under the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act because the town declined to grant the plaintiff church's application for a building permit to expand its facilities. The district judge referred all discovery in this case to me. The parties actively litigated the discovery, and I held several hearings on discovery matters. The citation for one discovery order is as follows: Christ Covenant Church v. Town of S.W. Ranches, 2008 WL 2686860 (S.D. Fla. June 29, 2008).

In this matter, the plaintiff, Howard K. Stern, sued the defendants, John O'Quinn and his law firm, for defamation. Mr. O'Quinn had represented Anna Nicole Smith's mother in previous litigation and had commented publicly in a derogatory manner on Mr. Stern's alleged involvement in Ms. Smith's death. The district judge referred all discovery to me. I held hearings, reviewed documents in camera, and issued discovery orders. The citation for one such order is as follows: Stern v. O'Quinn, 253 F.R.D. 663 (S.D. Fla. 2008).

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

I am aware of no cases in which I ruled where certiorari was requested or granted.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

I am aware of no reversals or affirmances with significant criticism of any of my opinions.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

In nearly all cases, I have issued unpublished opinions (I have submitted fewer than ten opinions for publication). Nevertheless, a number of my opinions have been published by Westlaw and LEXIS, even though I have not submitted them for publication. I have listed all opinions published by Westlaw and LEXIS in response to Section b of this question. Besides these opinions, I have issued a number of opinions that do not appear on Westlaw or LEXIS. They are stored on the Court's CM/ECF electronic filing system under each case number in which they are docketed. I have not kept track of and do not know the percentage of my opinions that appear on Westlaw or LEXIS versus my opinions that do not.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

(opinion supplied)

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on any federal courts of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

All of my recusals have been sua sponte, and I do not believe that I have ever been asked to recuse myself. The judges on our court can give the Clerk's Office a list of individuals and entities in whose case we would recuse. I have provided such a list to the Clerk's Office, which provides automated conflict/recusal checks by email to ensure that no cases are missed. As a general matter, I recuse in cases where an objective, disinterested, and fully informed lay observer would entertain a significant doubt about my impartiality. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 145, 455.

I have recused sua sponte from the following cases:

- (1) Cases involving the University of Miami, where I teach as an adjunct professor:
Edmond v. Univ. of Miami, Case No. 09-60946-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.)
- (2) United States Attorney's Office cases that I worked on, discussed with management in my role as a supervisor, or supervised while at the Office; for cases within one year of my resignation from the Office, those where an Assistant

Isler v. Adelusola, Case No. 08-60257-CIV-SELTZER (S.D. Fla.)

- (3) Cases where I had a strong, personal relationship with an attorney; someone related to me or my husband, or an individual with whom I had a strong, personal relationship, was a party or an important witness; or a party was the parent of one of my children's close friends. For the most part, the individuals in whose cases I recuse for any of the reasons in this category appear on a list that I have provided to the Clerk's Office for use with the CM/ECF conflict check system:

Dorvil v. Republic Servs. of Fla., L.P., Case No. 07-60395-CIV-DIMITROULEAS (S.D. Fla.)

Heilbrunn v. Toyota Motor Corp., Case No. 10-80208-CIV-ZLOCH (S.D. Fla.): The plaintiff in this case was bringing a class action against Toyota for claims relating to alleged sudden acceleration problems of certain Toyota models. The plaintiff is a defendant who appeared before me in magistrate court on a criminal indictment against her. The United States Department of Justice represented me on the basis that all alleged acts were undertaken within the scope of my duties as a United States magistrate judge. The case was dismissed with prejudice on November 7, 2011.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or an arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I have spent nearly all of my twenty years as an attorney practicing almost exclusively in federal court. From September 1991 to August 1995, I served as a Trial Attorney at the Department of Justice. My practice was civil in nature, and I defended the constitutionality of numerous and varied federal statutes and the policies and procedures of the agencies that administered those statutes.

From September 1995 to the beginning of July 1996, I served as staff counsel to the Independent Counsel's Office on the investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ronald Brown. This was a criminal investigation. As staff counsel, I participated in the criminal investigation and provided legal guidance to the other team members when they requested it.

In my capacity as an associate in private practice with Holland & Knight LLP, from July 1996 to December 1997, I engaged exclusively in civil practice. My cases had subject matter ranging from a simple replevin issue to contractual issues to a case involving charges of false and fraudulent advertising. While at Holland & Knight LLP, I also worked on several matters involving federal employment law.

At the United States Attorney's Office from October 1998 to August 2007, I served as a criminal prosecutor and specialized in matters involving complex frauds, becoming the chief of the Economic Crimes Section for the Central Division (Fort Lauderdale). As the chief, at various times, I supervised between eight and ten other Assistant United States Attorneys. Additionally, I continued to perform the functions of every other Assistant United States Attorney in the Economic Crimes Section, handling my own full caseload. As an Assistant United States Attorney, I investigated, developed, indicted, litigated, and tried criminal cases involving allegations of all types of economic crimes, such as securities fraud, bank fraud, identity theft, tax fraud, telemarketing fraud, health care fraud, Internet fraud, computer crimes, and general mail and wire fraud. In this capacity, I practiced before the grand jury, prepared and filed numerous legal memoranda in support of the positions of the United States, argued various motions before the district court, and tried several cases.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

As a Trial Attorney at the Department of Justice, my client was the United States. I specialized in federal motions practice, often involving matters of constitutional and administrative law.

As a member of the Independent Counsel's Office, my client was the United States.

My clients at Holland & Knight LLP included individuals, small companies, and large companies. I specialized in employment law.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, my client was the United States. I specialized in prosecuting complex economic crimes.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

At the Civil Division of the Department of Justice, 100% of my practice involved federal litigation. I regularly argued motions in federal district courts, conducted two trials in federal district courts and one in a federal administrative court, and handled three appeals in federal circuit courts.

Before we could determine whether charges should be brought, the Independent Counsel's investigation of former United States Secretary Ronald Brown came to a premature end with the tragic death of Secretary Brown. Thus, other than grand jury work, which is noted in the public report of the Independent Counsel, I did not have any court appearances during this time.

At Holland & Knight LLP, 100% of my practice involved litigation. While there, I served as associate counsel on a week-long trial in state court. Other than that, my appearances in court during that period were few.

As an Assistant United States Attorney for nine years, 100% of my practice involved litigation. I regularly and frequently appeared in federal district court, handling duty court, grand jury, motions hearings, and trials.

i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-------|
| 1. federal courts: | 94.9% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 5% |
| 3. other courts: | |
| 4. administrative agencies: | .1% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 40% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 60% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

To the best of my recollection, I have tried at least fourteen cases (defendants have entered guilty pleas following the beginning of trial and prior to verdict in other cases not included in this number). At the Department of Justice, I participated in two trials as an associate member of a litigation team, handling several of my own witnesses. Additionally, I tried one case as sole counsel. While at Holland & Knight LLP, I acted as associate counsel on a two-attorney team in trying a case to verdict. In my capacity as an Assistant United States Attorney, I tried at least twelve cases, with at least ten of those going to verdict.

In all but two of these cases, I served as sole counsel. With respect to these two cases, in a thirty trial-day (over nine weeks) securities fraud trial, I served as lead counsel, and in the other, I served as associate counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 80%
 - 2. non-jury: 20%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
 - b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
 - c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

Coors sued the United States Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms ("ATF"), challenging the constitutionality of provisions of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act that precluded malt beverage producers from making numerical statements of alcohol content on the labels of and in the advertisements for malt beverages. As the junior member of a two-attorney team, I conducted extensive discovery, deposing numerous marketing executives at various malt beverage makers around the country, and finding and working with our expert. At trial, I presented and cross-examined some of the witnesses. The district court upheld the advertisement provision but declared the labeling aspect of the statute to be unconstitutional. Coors did not appeal, but ATF did. In a 9-0 decision (including one opinion concurring in the judgment), the United States Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Tenth Circuit affirming the decision of the district court; I was not actively involved in the appeals. Trial in this matter lasted for three days, in approximately November 1992, before the Honorable Zita L. Weinshienk.

2. United States v. Livdahl, Case No. 05-60021-CR-COHN (S.D. Fla.) (criminal case); United States v. Livdahl, 356 F. Supp. 2d 1289 (S.D. Fla. 2005) (parallel civil case).

I litigated these related civil and criminal cases in tandem. The cases arose out of an incident at a local clinic where a doctor who attempted to create his own form of Botox using improperly diluted full-strength Botulinum Toxin Type A wound up giving botulism to himself and three others to whom he administered his concoction. Early in the investigation, we discovered that the doctor had apparently developed the idea of creating his own “Botox” when he appeared as a presenter at a seminar sponsored by two of the co-defendants, who owned a business that also created its own form of Botox. I spearheaded the investigation and the criminal litigation team. Shortly after initiating the investigation, I requested the assistance of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney’s Office to help us to file a civil action seeking an injunction against the co-defendants precluding them from continuing to sell their non-FDA-approved fake “Botox” while we conducted the criminal investigation. In order to obtain the injunction, we participated in a lengthy preliminary injunction hearing where, among others, the co-defendants testified. I cross-examined the lead defendant and made closing argument to the court. Upon hearing the evidence in the case, the court entered a preliminary injunction. See United States v. Livdahl, et al., 356 F. Supp. 2d 1289 (S.D. Fla. 2005).

In the meantime, we indicted four defendants in the criminal case, which was vigorously defended, resulting in extensive motion practice. See, e.g., United States v. Livdahl, 459 F. Supp. 2d 1255 (S.D. Fla. 2005). I served as lead counsel in this matter. Along with co-counsel, we thoroughly prepared for trial, but on the eve of trial we learned that the two remaining defendants wished to enter guilty pleas. The sentencing of the first doctor was hotly contested in an evidentiary hearing and spanned approximately nine hours. Co-counsel and I presented several witnesses, multiple exhibits, and argument before the Court imposed the maximum sentence on the doctor. The co-defendants were sentenced to terms of imprisonment of nine years and approximately six years, respectively. Additionally, as a result of this investigation, the FDA obtained the names of approximately 200 physicians throughout the United States who had purchased the fake "Botox" from the co-defendants. Numerous United States Attorney's Offices around the country consulted with our trial team and used the indictment I had prepared as a model to conduct prosecutions against those physicians who knowingly used fake "Botox" on their patients without the patients' knowledge. I handled this matter before the Honorable James I. Cohn and the Honorable Lurana S. Snow in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

In this securities fraud case, the lead defendant was alleged to have started a package delivery business, solicited approximately $20 million from investors, and caused the company to implode by systematically draining millions from the company for his own personal use and benefit. I served as lead counsel over thirty days of trial during a nine-week period in 2003 before the Honorable Donald M. Middlebrooks. I presented opening statement and closing argument, as well as numerous witnesses in this matter. Mr. Johnson was convicted of every count in the indictment. A co-defendant was acquitted. On appeal, the Eleventh Circuit reversed a few of the money-laundering counts against Mr. Johnson, and he was ultimately sentenced on remand to sixteen years' imprisonment.

4. United States v. Thurman, Case No. 01-6084-CR-FERGUSON (S.D. Fla.), aff'd, 54 F. App'x 491 (11th Cir. 2002).

This was one of a trio of cases brought against Defendant Thurman. The other two cases involved tax fraud and mail and wire fraud. The cases had to be brought separately because the subject matter of the violations alleged in each of the indictments was not interrelated. Consequently, in the interests of judicial economy, we proceeded by trying the two smaller cases before the largest of the three matters, which involved a massive Internet affinity fraud scheme.

In this particular case, Mr. Thurman was charged with being a convicted felon in possession of firearms. While executing a search warrant that I had obtained in the fraud case, law enforcement found the firearms in a safe in Mr. Thurman's closet. During the course of the investigation, law enforcement discovered evidence that Mr. Thurman had, on occasion, threatened to use one of the firearms to commit suicide, including one incident where he had threatened to do so in a bank. As sole counsel assigned to the matter, I indicted and tried the case, making opening statement and closing argument, as well as presenting all witnesses. Mr. Thurman was convicted and, as a result of this conviction, as well as the convictions in the two related cases I handled against him, he was sentenced to eight-and-one-half years in prison. This matter was tried over approximately three trial days in October 2001 before the Honorable Wilkie D. Ferguson.

5. United States v. Thurman, Case No. 01-06040-CR-HURLEY (S.D. Fla.).

This was another in the trio of Thurman cases brought by the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida. In this particular case, Mr. Thurman was charged with filing false tax returns for himself and six other individuals who sought and, in several cases, received fraudulent tax refunds. As sole counsel, I indicted and tried this case. Following the trial, the jury convicted Mr. Thurman. As noted above, as a result of Mr. Thurman's convictions in this case and the other two cases I prosecuted against him, Mr. Thurman was sentenced to eight-and-one-half years' imprisonment. This matter was tried over approximately seven trial days, I believe in October and November 2001, before the Honorable Daniel T.K. Hurley.

6. United States v. Miller, Case No. 99-06115-CR-FERGUSON (S.D. Fla. 2000).

Defendant Miller had been convicted of multiple armed robberies. During the execution of an arrest warrant for Mr. Miller for yet another armed robbery, law enforcement found a stolen UZI sub-machine gun, along with a magazine and cartridges for the weapon. We charged Mr. Miller federally with being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm. As sole counsel for the United States,

I handled all aspects of the prosecution, including the trial. Following a three-day trial in December 1999 before the Honorable Wilkie D. Ferguson, Jr., the jury returned a guilty verdict on both counts of the indictment. Judge Ferguson sentenced Mr. Miller to fifteen years' imprisonment.

7. United States v. Vanmoor, Case No. 06-60064-CR-COOKE/BROWN (S.D. Fla.).

The defendant in this case was charged with a conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. He ran websites offering a purported guaranteed cure for cancer that would work within a six-week period. The websites discouraged customers who purchased the product from continuing their doctor-prescribed treatment courses, such as chemotherapy. During the course of the investigation, we obtained and executed search warrants on multiple locations.

Additionally, I enlisted the assistance of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office to obtain an injunction shutting down the websites while we conducted the criminal investigation. During the course of the investigation, we obtained multiple search warrants for Mr. Vanmoor's e-mail and other electronic accounts and interviewed the family and friends of victims of Mr. Vanmoor's scheme.

After indicting the lead defendant, I obtained his extradition from the Netherlands, his native country. He arrived back in the United States shortly before I left the United States Attorney's Office to become a United States magistrate judge, and another Assistant United States Attorney tried the case in a two-week trial before the Honorable Jose Gonzalez, resulting in the defendant's conviction (other defendants pled guilty). I served as lead counsel in the matter before leaving the office.

Plaintiff Barnes was a staff attorney at the Houston Branch Office of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"). She filed suit against the SEC alleging violations of Title VII and the Equal Pay Act. I was a member of the trial team and presented and cross-examined witnesses at trial. Although the district court (the Honorable Kenneth Hoyt) ruled for the plaintiff following a month-long bench trial, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, granting summary judgment for the defense and finding that Ms. Barnes had failed to exhaust her administrative remedies by refusing to participate in good faith in the administrative process for resolving her claims.

9. Knobel v. Knobel, Eleventh Circuit Court in and for Miami-Dade County.

In this case a wife sued her husband regarding administration and ownership of their vocational school, the National School of Technology. The husband counter-claimed. Approximately two weeks before the trial, I was asked to assist the newly-assigned lead attorney in this matter because the previously-assigned lead counsel had a conflict during the trial period and, therefore, could not try the case. During the ensuing two weeks, we simultaneously conducted discovery and prepared for trial. Following a week-long trial in May 1997 before the Honorable David L. Tobin, the jury returned a verdict in favor of our client and awarded him in excess of $800,000, as I recall.

Defendant Garrahan obtained building contracts for schools in Broward and Dade Counties after fraudulently procuring bonds making him eligible to receive the contracts. He failed to complete the school buildings and defaulted on the bonds. He was charged with mail and wire fraud and, following an eight-day trial before the Honorable Norman Roettger, the jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts. Defendant Garrahan was sentenced to just over five years' imprisonment. The judgment was affirmed on appeal. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). I have not performed lobbying activities on behalf of any client(s) or organization(s).

While at the United States Department of Justice Civil Division, I handled the matter captioned, Sarao v. NASA (D.D.C. 1993). In this case, the plaintiff sued NASA, seeking disclosure of certain photographs of the shuttle debris recovered in the Atlantic Ocean from the Challenger accident, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act. The National Air and Space Administration, which had already released several photographs of the recovered debris, opposed the plaintiff's complaint, concerned about the privacy interests of the astronauts' families. I represented NASA and conducted negotiations with the plaintiff. After ascertaining precisely the types of images for which he was searching, we were able to settle the case in a manner that was acceptable to both parties.

After leaving the Department of Justice, I worked on the Independent Counsel's Investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ronald Brown and Nolanda Hill. Independent Counsel Dan Pearson was appointed by the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to conduct an investigation into certain matters related to former Secretary Brown's finances. The order conferring jurisdiction on Judge Pearson also authorized him to investigate the finances and operations of an associate of Secretary Brown's, Nolanda Hill, and her "organizations." Judge Pearson put together a team consisting of six attorneys to assist him in conducting the investigation. I served in one of two staff-counsel positions. My duties included conducting research and preparing legal memoranda in furtherance of the investigation, as well as participating in the investigation itself. More specifically, I provided the other attorneys on the team with legal opinions concerning issues arising during the investigation. On April 3, 1996, Secretary Brown perished in an airplane crash while on a trade mission to Croatia. As a result, Judge Pearson referred to the Department of Justice the responsibility for continuing the investigation as it pertained to allegations involving Nolanda Hill and others who were not members of the administration. Additionally, Judge Pearson submitted a final report to the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The report concluded ultimately, "The unfinished state of the investigation and considerations of fairness preclude our office from drawing conclusions about the allegations regarding possible criminal conduct by the Secretary. . . ." Final Report at 19.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I occasionally acted as counsel to the United States Attorney's Office. For example, on one occasion I researched a group of federal regulations that appeared to be insufficient to address certain serious dangers that they were meant to prevent. At the request of the United States Attorney, I prepared a memorandum containing suggestions for improvements to the regulations, which was forwarded for consideration to the secretary of the agency in question. On another occasion, I was asked to research and prepare a proposed position memorandum regarding the advisability of the Office's prosecution of a group of cases, in view of the fact that prosecution of the cases (as opposed to dismissal of the federal employees allegedly involved) might conflict with a function of one of the federal agencies. Similarly, when the Office sought to prosecute crimes under relatively new statutes or under new theories of older statutes, I prepared model indictments. In at least two such matters, I drafted either the first or one of the first such indictments in the country.

As the chief of the Economic Crimes Section for the Central Division (Fort Lauderdale) of the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida, I supervised between eight and ten other Assistant United States Attorneys. The position involved reviewing and editing indictments and other legal documents for clarity and correctness; consulting with and advising the Assistant United States Attorneys in my section; meeting with representatives of various law enforcement agencies regarding the intake, development, and progress of the respective law enforcement agencies' cases; and consulting with the management of the United States Attorney's Office regarding cases pending in my section. Additionally, I continued to perform the functions of every other Assistant United States Attorney in the Economic Crimes Section, handling my own full caseload. Each year while I served in this position, the Fort Lauderdale office significantly increased the number of indictments returned, as compared with the prior year – particularly within the Economic Crimes Section, even though the number of Assistant United States Attorneys in Fort Lauderdale had decreased.

As a practicing attorney, I was significantly involved in the Broward Chapter of the Federal Bar Association from approximately 2002 to 2007, having served on its board of directors and as the vice president, president-elect, and president. As the president, I presided over the chapter, which presented monthly speaker luncheons, brown-bag luncheons with federal judges, and other events designed to encourage a high level of practice among federal practitioners and to facilitate communications between the federal bar and bench in Broward County. As a magistrate judge, I continue to support the activities of the Federal Bar Association heavily, attending nearly all of the Broward Chapter's functions and speaking regularly when asked.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Miami School of Law since 2009. In the fall of 2009 through the spring of 2010, I taught the full-year, first-year course called "Legal Research and Writing." The course sought to teach first-year law students the basics of conducting legal research and preparing legal written work product. Students prepared two drafts each of a case brief, two internal memoranda regarding a case, and an appellate brief. In addition, they presented oral argument on the appellate brief.

In the summer and fall of 2010 and the spring and fall of 2011, I also taught an upper-level legal writing class. The students learn about the federal court system and motions to dismiss. They prepare two drafts each of a memorandum in support of a motion to dismiss and an opposition to a motion to dismiss. Copies of the syllabi for all courses described in answer to this question are supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I currently serve as an adjunct professor and teach a legal writing course at the University of Miami School of Law, and I have committed to teaching that course again in the spring of 2012.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If I am confirmed, I will recuse in all cases involving any of my family members. I will also recuse in any cases involving the University of Miami (where I teach), in cases involving Florida International University Law School (where my sister is employed as the director of legal research and writing), in cases involving Miami-Dade County (my brother-in-law is employed as an attorney with the County Attorney's Office), in cases where my former law clerks are listed as counsel of record and have primary responsibility for litigating the matter, and in cases involving close friends as parties or witnesses. I would also recuse in any cases where a close friend served as counsel, and I would use the Southern District of Florida's electronic conflict system primarily to identify such cases.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If I am confirmed, I will apply the standards set forth in 28 U.S.C. §§ 144 and 455 to any scenario involving a potential conflict of interest or appearance of partiality.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

As a judge, I am not allowed to practice law on behalf of others, so I have not engaged in any pro bono legal work since my confirmation in September of 2007. During most of my legal career, I have also been subject to limitations on my ability to engage in legal activities outside of my job because I have worked in government service for the vast majority of my legal career. Consequently, although I participated briefly in a program where attorneys assist victims of domestic abuse in court, I have mostly chosen to give back to the community in other ways. Among others, I participate in the Florida Bar's Justice Teaching program. The program aims to help educate every elementary, middle, and high school student about basic principles underlying our system of justice and our Constitution. I am paired with North Fork Elementary School.

Likewise, in the recent past, I have volunteered my time to assist with the Children's Ballet Theatre of Fort Lauderdale. The program allows children to put on a ballet such as Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, or Coppelia at the Broward Center for the Performing Arts, under the directorship and leadership of dance teachers who volunteer their time for the program. In addition to directing children in the production of a professional-type production, the program aspires to foster an appreciation of dance in the community, particularly among children, by making tickets available at an affordable price and by providing inexpensive or free tickets to certain financially eligible children. My volunteer activities on behalf of the program have included assisting with costuming, addressing marketing materials, and backstage supervision of some of the younger participants during dress rehearsal and the show.

In addition, I volunteer from time to time at my children's school, and year-round, I regularly provide internship opportunities for law school students in my chambers.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In Florida, the senators use a nominating commission. The Florida Federal Nominating Commission was appointed by Senators Bill Nelson and Marco Rubio. The Commission is comprised of members selected by both Senator Nelson (approximately 2/3 of the members) and Senator Rubio (approximately 1/3 of the members).

I submitted an application to the Florida Federal Judicial Nominating Commission in June 2011 and was interviewed by the Commission on July 25, 2011. I was selected by the Commission, along with three others, on that same date. The Commission does not recommend one candidate and does not rank the candidates. On August 3, 2011, I interviewed with Senators Nelson and Rubio in Washington, DC.

Since August 17, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 21, 2011, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 30, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator FRANKEN. Okay. Well, you both sound tremendously qualified. I still have about 50 seconds left, but I'm going to reserve that time in case I feel I need it. I know that Senator Lee has impending responsibilities, so, Senator?

Senator LEE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I've got just a couple of questions for Judge Drain, if that's okay. The first thing I'd like to ask you about is an article you wrote in March 1994 that appeared in The Michigan Chronicle. In that article, or that column I should say, you wrote that you "look forward to the time when a person with a gun will be viewed as a coward or a chicken with an unfair advantage, a cheater in a fight". Does that, and if so how does that, reflect in any way of your view of the Second Amendment?

Judge DRAIN. You know, I handled a lot of cases in the Criminal Division and I have looked at the Second Amendment and it does ensure that persons have the right to own, possess, and carry firearms, and the Supreme Court has made that clear in the Heller case and in McDonald. I have no problems with abiding by and following those precedents because the second amendment, the right to keep and bear firearms is an important constitutional right, and so I am prepared to follow that precedent.

Senator LEE. Okay. Thank you.

In an article that you authored in the Detroit News you wrote that the death penalty is "primitive punishment that is brutal and barbaric". Would that statement affect—having made that statement, would that or the sentiments underlying it affect your ability to apply the law as an Article 3 judge?

Judge DRAIN. It would not, Senator Lee. That was an article I wrote about 27 years ago and I no longer hold to that position. My views about the death penalty have been evolving and changing and I no longer believe that. I was a pretty young, zealous defense lawyer back in those days and I feel a lot older and more mature now, and I again don't subscribe to that position anymore.

Senator LEE. Your views on that issue have evolved, you could say?

Judge DRAIN. Pardon me?

Senator LEE. They have evolved? Your views have evolved?

Judge DRAIN. Yes, they have. Yes, sir.

Senator LEE. Then in 1998, you wrote a Michigan Chronicle article honoring a former Michigan State judge, a Judge Damon Keith. In that you wrote that Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, who you should know I regard as one of the greatest jurists of our era and one of the greatest legal minds ever in the United States, had taken positions "diametrically opposed to those of Judge Keith and other legal giants" and that "Thomas has opposed almost every civil rights issue involving poor people, minorities, voting rights, the criminal justice system, and affirmative action".

Is it appropriate for a sitting judge to criticize a sitting member of the U.S. Supreme Court using such terms?

Judge DRAIN. I think that was probably inappropriate for me to say and to write about Judge Thomas, because I do have a lot of respect for him. I personally met him some time after that. In fact, he was a justice who came to Detroit and he actually presented Judge Keith with the David Award.

I don't know how familiar you are with the David Award, but that's an award that is given annually to an outstanding Federal jurist, the most outstanding Federal jurist in the country. So I went to that and I met him and it was a very pleasant meeting, and I guess ultimately I don't think it was appropriate for me to be that critical of him.

Senator LEE. Okay. Okay. Thank you very much. I appreciate that.

Judge DRAIN. All right. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Lee.

Judge Thomas hadn't read the article, I assume?

Judge DRAIN. Oh, I guess not.

[Laughter.]

Judge DRAIN. I don't know.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, it was a pleasant meeting. That says a lot for him if he had.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you, Senator Lee, by the way.

Senator GRASSLEY. Before I go to questions, Judge Drain, I want to ask Judge Rosenbaum some questions. By the way, he covered several areas I was going to cover with you, so it won't take as long as I thought.

Judge DRAIN. Okay. That's Okay.

Senator GRASSLEY. For you in Christ Covenant Church v. Town of Southwest Ranches, you ordered the church to disclose its membership information to the town, even though doing so would place a potentially significant burden on the First Amendment rights of the church and its members. I have three subquestions here: do you feel that churches should be treated as any other organization for purposes of discovery disputes?

Judge ROSENBAUM. No. Churches actually have—and as I believe I wrote in the Christ Covenant case, churches have special considerations that the court must consider. For example, we have to be concerned about the First Amendment rights as far as freedom of religion, the free exercise clause, and as far as the associational rights go.

And that's why, when I wrote the Christ Covenant case, I drafted it as narrowly as I think I possibly could have. In that particular case, what happened was, the church was suing the city to allow for an expansion of its church facilities, and the church was alleging in its complaint that it did not have enough room to be able to conduct weddings, for example, funerals, other life cycle activities, classes, things of that nature.

And under RLUIPA, the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act, they were suing in order to be able to go forward with their expansion plans. But in order to win on that there was a factual issue, and the factual issue was whether in fact they were having their religious events, their life cycle events, their community classes, interfered with. It was a purely factual issue.

And so with respect to that one specific and narrow question, I authorized the defendant to go ahead and depose the individuals who were not able to have life cycle events, such as a wedding, if their wedding was not able to go forward, that type of thing, to have those depositions only to the extent that they could be asked questions about not being able to have the event.

They were not allowed to go into anyone's individual religious beliefs or anything beyond the actual factual issue there. I also required it to be disclosed only to the attorneys for the city. There was no disclosure allowed beyond the attorneys for the city, and I subjected it to a Protective Act. So I think that—or Protective Order, I guess I should say.

I think that that was the best way to accommodate both the concerns for allowing the defendant city to be able to test the allegations which were at the heart of the issue and the lawsuit, while still protecting the associational and free exercise rights of the individual members of the church.

Senator GRASSLEY. Recently this administration—I should say President Obama's administration, in my view, has shown a disregard for the rights of religious liberties and exercise of conscience protected by the First Amendment.

What is your understanding of the current state of law with regard to the interplay between establishment and free exercise clause of the First Amendment, and how would you approach a case where the First Amendment religious rights were an issue?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, with respect to—again, I'll go back to the Christ Covenant case. I think the law is actually pretty clear, what the Supreme Court has said in that. Those are fundamental rights under the First Amendment. Those are rights that are entitled to protection, obviously, and those are rights that there's a heightened standard for disclosure, for example, in those types of cases. There has to be a heightened showing of need.

There is a balancing test, which includes five different factors. All of them need to be examined very carefully, and in order to evaluate any particular claim the court would have to evaluate the balancing tests, whatever was appropriate for the particular issue in that case and apply them as the Supreme Court has required.

Senator GRASSLEY. My next question would be, kind of, how you approach deciding a statute. My research shows that you give some weight to legislative history. I guess that makes me feel good. You can't write the statute as perfectly as you want to. What's your approach to determining the meaning of a statute?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, first, I would start—and I do start—with the words of the statute. And if the words of the statute are clear and unambiguous, then we not only start there but we should end there as well. In addition, I think it's important to look at the framework of the statute.

It's important to avoid interpreting a law so that other parts of the statute would become either redundant or would have to be ignored. So we take all of those things into consideration, and if it's still not clear what the answer is, only then do we look to the legislative purpose or intent.

Senator GRASSLEY. Does the category of congressional findings carry much weight with you?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Congressional findings?

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes. You know, like a preamble to a statute or a bill that Congress is passing.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, I would certainly take that into consideration.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. This would be the last question along that line, and I guess my last question for you. Is it very easy for a judge or advocate to select only those statements—no, I'd better say—I want to make a statement. It is very easy for a judge or advocate to select only those statements in a report or legislative remarks that support a particular judge's position. How will you avoid the appearance of selectivity when using legislative history?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, I think that's a very important thing to avoid, obviously. One of the things about legislative intent and legislative purposes that really doesn't—where the court doesn't have to pick through particular statements is, for example, if the Supreme Court has decided an issue a particular way, and in response to a decision the Supreme Court has issued the Congress then enacts a new statute.

In that case it can be very clear what legislative intent is. I think that in order to avoid the type of problem that you have identified, it's very important for a judge who does go ahead and consider legislative purpose or legislative intent to stick only with the legislative intent that is readily discernible.

And as I said, we would get to the legislative intent only if first we went through the language of the statute, found it to be ambiguous, then we went through the statutory framework, found that still to be ambiguous, and then only as a last resort would we turn to the legislative intent or purpose.

Senator GRASSLEY. I notice you have a friend of mine, a lawyer in Des Moines, Iowa, by the name of Jeff Goodman who is—

Judge ROSENBAUM. Yes. He appeared before me in a case a few years back. A great lawyer.

Senator GRASSLEY. He seems to think you're qualified for the job.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you. I appreciate that.

Senator GRASSLEY. Now I'll go to you, Mr. Drain. You've written "one of my unpleasant tasks on occasion is to impose mandatory sentences." You've been critical of so-called three strike legislation, advocating for the passage of bills by the legislature in your home State that would eliminate mandatory sentencing. So, a very simple question: why do you oppose mandatory sentences?

Judge DRAIN. Senator Grassley, having handled just hundreds of criminal cases, they vary in scope and involvement. And when you look at some of the principles that come into play, like aiding and abetting and, you know, some conspiracy cases, people who do very little toward the commission of a crime are treated just as though they were the major offender or the shooter, so to speak.

So, you know, when you start to see the big variety of cases that come, to have mandatory sentences is difficult to deal with and to handle cases in an equitable fashion. They just present some, like I said, very difficult situations. Really, judges who actually see cases and see people and situations need a little more discretion in the area of sentencing.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, since the Booker case and the guidelines at the Federal level have been advisory rather than mandatory, if confirmed, how much deference would you afford the guidelines under the advisory-rather-than-mandatory approach?

And maybe I should ask this simultaneous with that question: what circumstances would you be willing to depart from the guidelines if you—I guess, how much deference do you give to guidelines, and then if you gave some deference to them what would be your point of departure or reasons for departure?

Judge DRAIN. Senator Grassley, when I became a State court judge the guidelines were extremely helpful to me because I really didn't know what sentence to impose on what kind of conduct. So, guidelines are very helpful. In the State system that I was functioning in, when you decided to go outside of the guidelines you had to give reasons that were not already factored into the guidelines and you could depart either upward or downward.

I left the Federal Defender's Office before the guidelines came into existence, and in spite of Booker I would really give great deference to the sentencing guidelines as a starting point because, again, I've never sat as a judge in Federal court. And again, if I was fortunate enough to become a Federal judge, I would give the guidelines a lot of deference and sentence in that fashion.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. A little bit along the same line, but do you agree that the sentence a defendant receives for a particular crime should not depend on the judge he or she happens to draw?

Judge DRAIN. I agree totally with that, 100 percent. In fact, that's one of the whole purposes of the guidelines. I think that's extremely important.

Senator GRASSLEY. Are you willing to sentence an elderly person to the same amount of time as a young person for a similar crime?

Judge DRAIN. Probably. And I would—you know, there's a lot of factors to look at when you impose sentence. But the guidelines, at least the State guidelines, were not—age wasn't a factor. And I'm not sure how much of a difference I'd make in sentencing an elderly person versus a younger person.

Senator GRASSLEY. My question would be—I think it's the last one on this point—would be this: you've written articles that indicate that you believe that when an individual is no longer a threat to society they should be released from prison, even if they have not served the whole sentence mandated by law. Just a simple explanation of why you—what you mean by that.

Judge DRAIN. Senator Grassley, in my experience and in some of the things that I've read, crime—I should say age is a big factor in crime. The crime-committing years are usually between 17 and 25. As people get older, in their 30's, 40's, 50's, then that crime-committing period usually has passed. People become more mature, they become more settled, less violent, and those kind of things. I just—I think that's really what I was talking about. The older a person gets, I think the less likely they are to commit crime.

Senator GRASSLEY. Before I ask the next question, I want to preface it with the fact that there's nothing wrong with you being politically active, but I'd like to ask you some questions because, you know, the public records show your contributions. Well, I guess, just leave it at that.

What is your view of the role of politics in the judicial decision-making process?

Judge DRAIN. Senator Grassley, I don't think that politics should have any role in the decision-making process. Cases should be decided solely on the facts and the evidence and the testimony and the law that applies in the case. I don't think politics should play any part. I would commit to not treating anyone differently, whether they're Republican or Democrat, labor, management, individual versus corporation. None of those things really would make a difference in decision-making.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think you've answered my second and third subparts of that issue.

Let's go to criminal law. I would like to have some understanding of your view on constitutional criminal law. In People v. Thomas, you granted the defendant's motion to suppress evidence of cocaine possession because of a defective search warrant. Your decision was overturned, as a higher court found that there was an obvious exception to the search warrant requirement in the case.

In People v. Adams, you dismissed charges against a defendant for assault with intent to commit murder because a witness who testified in the preliminary hearing did not testify at trial. The Court of Appeals held that the rules of evidence for your State clearly say that when a witness is unavailable, testimony from another hearing is inadmissible. Considering these reversals and some others that I didn't go into, do you consider yourself, or would others characterize you, as a pro-defendant judge?

Judge DRAIN. I don't think so, Senator Grassley. Even though I practiced criminal defense work when I was a lawyer and practicing law, once you become a judge you become pretty neutral, or you learn to become neutral pretty quickly. So I have every intention of being objective and impartial with both defendants and the prosecution and I don't think I would be labeled a pro-defense judge.

Senator GRASSLEY. I believe you've answered the second subpart of that question, so let's go on to deal with the authority that a judge has. These are the last two questions.

In one article you wrote about a time where you had to apply a sentence that you thought was inappropriate. You said, "I imposed the sentence and it was very, very unfair. But as a new judge in the Recorder's Court, I'd been there for not even 4 years yet, I felt that it was my obligation to follow the law and I went ahead and imposed the sentences in cases where I just knew in my heart that they were unfair and unjust". Do you mean by this statement that judges who have been on the bench longer would have had the authority to not impose the sentences?

Judge DRAIN. Senator, in dealing with mandatory sentences sometimes I do say that, you know, I would rather do something different. But the law says that you impose the sentence. A lot of times when I imposed a mandatory sentence I didn't do it with any type of joy or happiness. It was something that was hard to do.

But I believe that the commitment of following the law and imposing the appropriate sentence that's been given by the legislature, I believe that that's my obligation, to follow the law and so that's what I did. The fact that I wrote some side comments about it, about my personal feelings, which really, really shouldn't have anything to do with my decision-making, is really kind of irrelevant or unimportant to me.

Senator GRASSLEY. We have people that argue that a judge should have empathy for those who appear before them. My concern is that when someone suggests that a judge should have empathy they're really suggesting that the judge should place their thumb on the scales of justice to tilt in favor of the proverbial little guy, or some other noun you might want to use there. In your personal opinion, is it ever the role of a judge to favor, for instance, the little guy over the big guy?

Judge DRAIN. No, Senator Grassley. I think the little guy shouldn't be given any more fairness than the big guy. They need to be treated equally and impartially. I am committed to doing that.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you very much.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

I did retain a little bit of time so I'm really interested in this issue of sentencing and what the Ranking Member said about, should someone get different sentences for the same crime depending on what judge they're before. And it seems to me that either you have mandatory sentences or you have guidelines, and if you have guidelines there's going to be a difference between what judge you're before.

The question is, how—you know, how each judge sees the sentencing process. And obviously you have written about this. You believe that the sentencing law should be flexible enough to account for a wide range of circumstances presented in different cases, and that seems to make a tremendous amount of sense to me.

So how do you—how do you negotiate that difference, the difference of being able to—for a judge to use his or her discretion? And I'll ask you this, too, Judge Rosenbaum. Being able to use his or her discretion when there are a wide range of circumstances in any different case, and at the same time, you know, hold up the principle that a prisoner before one judge shouldn't get a wildly different sentence than he or she gets before another judge.

Why don't we go with Judge Rosenbaum, because Doctor—Doctor—Judge Drain has been—give him a break for a second.

Judge ROSENBAUM. No problem. What I would say is we, of course, start with the guidelines. Under Booker, that's the starting point. The guidelines have a number of considerations that we take into account, and then of course we also have to look at the factors under 18 USC 3553.

The reason that there are these factors laid out is to allow for the court to look at each case individually while still applying and remembering that we're trying to achieve sentencing parity. So I think what I would do, if I were fortunate enough to be confirmed of course, is to start, as I said, with the guidelines and then look to the 3553 factors and apply them to each case before me individually, while of course still keeping in mind that it's important to apply the guidelines as much as possible. That's basically what the Supreme Court has said.

The Eleventh Circuit has also—in cases where judges have not done that and have not been true to the guidelines, have sent those cases back to be resentenced in accordance with the guidelines and the 3553 factors. So, that's how I would do that.

Senator FRANKEN. Judge Drain, from that description it sounds as if they're—within the law there is enough guidance and that it's almost slightly mechanical, but it feels to me that when you're dealing with a human life and you're dealing with a crime and you're dealing with all sorts of different factors, that—and you've been involved in a lot, that it just isn't quite that easy.

Judge DRAIN. No. Let me just say, first, that I would much rather deal with guidelines than mandatory sentences. Frankly speaking, I actually really liked the guidelines in Michigan. That's primarily because the guidelines, as they were formed in Michigan, were the result of taking all of the sentences all across the State and finding out what the averages were. And the guidelines in Michigan had a graph, and part of the graph dealt with the offender's criminal history, the other part dealt with the severity of the offense, and then you plot the guidelines and you figure out what they are.

Then, after you've done that, if there are some factors kind of unique to the case that aren't already figured into the guidelines, you can use those factors to go up or down, and I've done both in the past. There have been situations where there were some very aggregated facts—aggravating facts, I should say, where I went above the guidelines for one reason or another, and then there were some mitigating circumstances where I went below the guidelines. That really gave us, in Michigan, the flexibility to impose a fair sentence.

So I—I thought the guidelines were pretty effective because no matter where you are in the State of Michigan, whether you're in some very rural county or you're in an urban area, you're going to be treated pretty much the same based on the guidelines. If anybody wants to be harder or softer, they've got to give some good reasons. If you don't give those good reasons then the Court of Appeals will reverse. So, I felt pretty comfortable with them and I've never really dealt with the Federal guidelines so I really, really can't speak to them.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, thank you both. Thank you, your Honor—both your Honors. I want to again congratulate all of the nominees, including Mr. Taranto. Thanks to each of you for your testimony today.

We will hold the record open for 1 week for submission of questions for the witnesses and other materials.

This hearing is adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 3:50 p.m. the hearing was adjourned.]

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Responses of Gershwin A. Drain

Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan
to the Written Questions of Senator Tom Coburn, M.D.

1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: No.

a. If not, please explain.

Response: The Constitution changes only through the amendment process that is set forth within the Constitution itself.

2. Do you believe judicial doctrine rightly incorporates the evolving understandings of the Constitution forged through social movements, legislation, and historical practice?

Response: No.

a. If not, please explain.

Response: The Constitution does not change through social movements, historical practice or legislation. Again, it changes only through the amendment process that is set forth within the Constitution itself.

3. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: In analyzing whether any particular statute infringes upon a Constitutional right, I would look to United States Supreme Court precedent to resolve the question. If there was no controlling precedent from the Supreme Court, I would then look to case law from the Sixth Circuit.

4. In a column entitled “I have a dream of nonviolence,” you said you look “forward to a time when a person with a gun will be viewed as a coward or chicken.” Senator Lee asked you about this article and your views on Second Amendment rights, but I would like to ask you some additional questions.

Response: My statement in that 1994 column was meant to cover a very limited situation. I had no intent to discuss the Second Amendment or the Constitutional right to bear arms. As a trial judge in the City of Detroit I saw so many situations where arguments erupted on the street and in other public places or at some other place than at home. Instead of a fist fight young people would go for a gun and there would be a senseless shooting. When I referenced “a coward or chicken” I was thinking about situations where instead of using fists young people in my city unnecessarily resorted to guns. That was the context of my statement.

- a. In your opinion, why do you think our founders included this right as the second in its list of amendments?

Response: I believe that the founders included this right as the second in its list of amendments because of its significance and importance.

- b. The U.S. Supreme Court held in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), that the Second Amendment of the United States Constitution “protects an individual right to possess a firearm unconnected to service in a militia, and to use that arm for traditionally lawful purposes, such as self-defense within the home.” As Justice Scalia’s opinion in Heller pointed out, Sir William Blackstone, the preeminent authority on English law for the Founders, cited the right to bear arms as one of the fundamental rights of Englishmen. Leaving aside the McDonald v. Chicago decision, do you personally believe the right to bear arms is a fundamental right?

Response: Yes. Heller and McDonald make clear that the Second Amendment protects a fundamental right.

- c. Do you believe that explicitly guaranteed substantive rights, such as those guaranteed in the Bill of Rights, are also fundamental rights? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. With a few exceptions, the Supreme Court has held that the rights enumerated in the Bill of Rights are fundamental rights that apply against the states under the 14th Amendment.

- d. Is it your understanding of Supreme Court precedent that those provisions of the Bill of Rights that embody fundamental rights are deemed to apply against the States? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. The United States Supreme Court has held that most of the provisions of the Bill of Rights protect fundamental rights and are therefore applicable to the states through the 14th Amendment.

- e. The Heller Court further stated that “it has always been widely understood that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right.” Do you believe that the Second Amendment, like the First and Fourth Amendments, codified a pre-existing right? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Yes. The Supreme Court has said that the Second Amendment codified a pre-existing right.

- f. What limitations remain on the individual Second Amendment rights now that the amendment has been incorporated against the States?

Response: The Supreme Court in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 at 626 (2008) said “nothing in our opinion should be taken to cast doubt on longstanding prohibitions on the possession of firearms by felons and the mentally ill, or laws forbidding the carrying of firearms in sensitive places such as schools and government buildings, or laws imposing conditions and qualifications on the commercial sale of arms.”

5. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy relied in part on the “evolving standards of decency” to hold that capital punishment for any murderer under age 18 was unconstitutional. I understand that the Supreme Court has ruled on this matter and you are obliged to follow it, but do you agree with Justice Kennedy’s analysis?

Response: I do not believe I can give an opinion on that question except to say that the Roper case is Supreme Court precedent and I, as a lower court judge, would be obligated to follow it.

- a. When determining what the “evolving standards of decency” are, justices have looked to different standards. Some justices have justified their decision by looking to the laws of various American states, in addition to foreign law, and in other cases have looked solely to the laws and traditions of foreign countries. Do you believe either standard has merit when interpreting the text of the Constitution?

Response: If confirmed as District Court Judge I would not look at either of those standards and would be bound by decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the decisions of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

- i. If so, do you believe one standard more meritorious than the other? Please explain why or why not.

Response: I do not feel it is my position to evaluate standards used by the United States Supreme Court. Whatever measure they use in evaluating and deciding a case, I must abide by it.

6. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: As a District Court Judge it would not be appropriate for me to rely on foreign or international law in determining the meaning of the United States Constitution.

- a. If so, under what circumstances would you consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution?

Response: As a District Court Judge I would never use foreign law when interpreting the Constitution.

- b. Do you believe foreign nations have ideas and solutions to legal problems that could contribute to the proper interpretation of our laws?

Response: Foreign nations may or may not have ideas or solutions that might be helpful to legislators, but as a judge I would not look to those sources in interpreting U.S. law.

- 7. As a judge, have you ever presided over a death penalty case? If so, please provide a summary of and citations for these cases.

Response: I have never presided over a death penalty case because we do not have the death penalty in the State of Michigan. In fact, there is a Michigan Constitutional provision that specifically prohibits the legislature from enacting any law that would impose the death penalty.

- a. As an attorney, did you ever represent a defendant who could receive the death penalty as a sentence? If so, please provide a summary of and citations for these cases.

Response: When I practiced law for 12 years at the Federal Defender's Office I never represented a defendant who could have received the death penalty.

- 8. You wrote, "One of my unpleasant tasks on occasion is to impose mandatory sentences." When asked about this statement at your hearing, you stated: "A lot of times when I imposed a mandatory sentence I didn't do it with any type of joy or happiness. It was something that was hard to do." And, you said, "in dealing with mandatory sentences sometimes ... I would rather do something different." You also testified, "to have mandatory sentences is difficult to deal with and to handle cases in an equitable fashion. They just present some, like I said, very difficult situations." You also have written, "[w]e need to trust our judiciary and give judges discretion to impose the sentence they feel is appropriate." Given the dozens if not hundreds of mandatory minimums in federal law and your obvious aversion to imposing those sentences, why do you want to be a federal judge?

Response: In the 25 years of my judicial career, 13 of which were in criminal court, I have handled several thousand cases. In Michigan there are many mandatory minimum sentences and it was only in a small percentage of the cases that I heard where I felt the mandatory minimum sentence was too harsh. Most of the time I felt the mandatory sentence was appropriate. I believe that personal feelings should not be considered when sentencing and I am committed to following the mandatory sentences in federal court if I am confirmed. I enjoy serving as a judge and am deeply honored to be considered to serve on the federal bench.

- a. You specifically noted in your testimony that, in certain cases such as "aiding and abetting" and "conspiracy" cases, "people who do very little toward the commission of a crime are treated just as though they were the major offender or the shooter." 18 U.S.C. §2 states: "Whoever commits an offence against the United States or aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces or procures its commission, is punishable as a principal." Do you believe Congress was wrong when it enacted this statute?

Response: No. I believe that Congress was very wise in enacting that statute. Many times “drug kingpins” do very little in a major drug operation and insulate themselves from direct contact with narcotics and aiding and abetting and conspiracy are sometimes the only way that the “kingpins” can be reached.

- i. Do you believe it is the role of a judge to question the law the legislature makes?

Response: No.

- ii. Do you believe a judge who issues a mandatory sentence as directed by the legislature is not handling a case in an “equitable fashion?”

Response: No.

- iii. Given that you made many of the statements about your aversion to mandatory minimums as a sitting judge and your statement in one case that you were “looking for any reason to be lenient,” do you believe a victim could perceive your statements as showing empathy towards defendants?

Response: No. My sentences are based on the law and the circumstances of each case, in that sometimes there are reasons consistent with the law to impose a lesser sentence, and in other cases I have not hesitated to impose a harsh sentence. It is important for a judge to understand the impact of crime on crime victims.

- iv. If, based on your statements, a victim might believe you were empathetic towards defendants in some cases, do you believe it was appropriate to make these statements?

Response: My statements do not reflect inappropriate empathy for defendants.

- 9. When asked what you meant when you stated, “it does not make sense to keep people in prison during their later years when the crime-committing period is over,” you stated, “the older a person gets, I think the less likely they are to commit crime.” And, when asked whether you are willing to sentence an older person to the same amount of time as a younger person for a similar crime, you were uncertain and merely answered “probably.” How much weight would you give to the age of the defendant when determining the sentence?

Response: It would be an extremely rare situation where I would give any weight to a person’s age in sentencing. There might be some cases in which the defendant’s age would be relevant to the appropriate sentence under the applicable statutes and sentencing guidelines.

- a. You have also stated: “Advanced, mature societies should engage in punishment and not vengeance as a way of dealing with crime.” Are the victims of crimes and their family and loved ones not entitled to see the person who committed a crime against them or their loved one punished if the perpetrator is older?

Response: All crime victims and their families are entitled to see the perpetrators punished in accordance with the law.

10. You were asked about sentencing under the guidelines in Michigan and you stated: “there were some mitigating circumstances where I went below the guidelines.” Recently, a few federal judges have expressed concerns about mandatory minimums in child pornography laws.¹ Do you have any concerns about mandatory minimums in child pornography laws?

Response: No.

- a. Do you believe mandatory minimums in child pornography laws allow judges to be equitable to the defendant?

Response: Yes.

- b. Have you ever handled a child pornography case either as a judge or a lawyer?

Response: No.

- i. If so, please provide a summary of and citations for all the cases in which you participated.

Response: Not applicable.

- ii. If you handled these cases as a judge, please include the sentencing range called for under the Michigan guidelines, if applicable, and the sentence you issued.

Response: Not applicable.

Responses of Gershwin A. Drain

Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan
to the Written Responses of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. During the hearing I asked you if you agreed that the sentence a defendant receives for a particular crime should not depend on the judge he or she happens to draw. You whole heartedly agreed with this statement. I then asked if you were willing to sentence an elderly person and a young person to the same amount of time and you paused and said “probably.” I would like you to clarify your position on this issue.

- a. All other factors being equal, would you sentence an elderly individual differently than a young individual, if each committed the same offense? Why or why not?

Response: As a general matter, no. Age is an extremely rare sentencing consideration, but there might be some cases in which the defendant’s age would be relevant to the appropriate sentence under the applicable statutes and sentencing guidelines.

2. Do you believe the fact that taxpayers pay for a defendant’s incarceration is a relevant factor when deciding on an appropriate sentence?

Response: No.

3. Senator Lee asked you about some of the articles you have written regarding the death penalty. You said that you have changed your positions on the death penalty over the years.

- a. Is there any doubt in your mind that the death penalty is constitutional?

Response: No. The Supreme Court has made clear that the death penalty is constitutional.

- b. Would you be able to apply the death penalty, if confirmed?

Response: Yes.

4. You told Senator Lee that you would be able to follow the precedent established in Heller and McDonald regarding Second Amendment and the rights it affords.

- a. You wrote that you “envision a day when the National Rifle Association with its lobby will not be feared, and that legislators and congressmen will stand up strong against them instead of bowing to them.” Do you still hold this view?

Response: No. My statement almost 20 years ago was based on an erroneous perception of the NRA's influence. In addition, I was using an exaggerated metaphor to make a rhetorical point, but on reflection I should have chosen my words more carefully.

- b. Considering you have made statements like these, do you believe you will be able to impartially handle any case that comes before you where the NRA or any of its supporters are involved?

Response: Yes. My personal beliefs, both past and present, have no bearing on the decisions I make in court.

- 5. I asked you a question about applying a sentence required by law even when you did not personally agree with it. You responded, "The fact that I wrote some side comments about it, about my personal feelings, which really, really shouldn't have anything to do with my decision-making, is really kind of irrelevant or unimportant to me." Can you please explain what you meant by this statement?

Response: My personal feelings about sentencing in a particular case should have no bearing on the sentence to be imposed. I am committed to following the law that governs sentencing whether there is a mandatory sentence, a mandatory minimum, or a guidelines system.

- 6. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe that impartiality is the most important attribute of a judge. A judge must apply the law impartially and treat everyone equally regardless of their status and situation in life. When people see a judge acting impartially they feel that the system is fair and they have confidence in the process and in having their day in court.

- 7. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: Having a good judicial temperament is essential to being a good judge. A judge must be calm, patient and exercise self-control. The judge must be a good listener. A judge should be humble, respectful, courteous, diligent, decisive and prepared. A judge should always operate with integrity and impartiality. Essentially, judges should treat people the way they want to be treated. Judges should not lose their temper in the courtroom and they should not make fun of the parties or lawyers, nor demean or denigrate people. I believe that I meet the standard and I always try to maintain good courtroom demeanor.

8. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

9. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If I was faced with a case of first impression and there were neither Supreme Court precedent nor Sixth Circuit precedent, I would first look to the other Circuits to see if there was a decision on point. If I still found none, I would look at the other District Courts to see if any had encountered the issue. If nothing could be found on point in a published opinion, I would look for federal unpublished cases. If I found nothing on point I would look for cases addressing analogous situations, starting with the Supreme Court. If faced with a question of first impression of statutory interpretation, I would begin with the plain meaning of the text, the structure of the statute as a whole and the applicable canons of statutory construction.

10. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply all prior decisions made by the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals even if I thought they had eroded.

11. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Courts are to give great deference to laws enacted by legislators. It should be an extremely rare occasion for a court to declare a law unconstitutional. In addition to that, if there is any binding precedent on the issue it must be followed.

12. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: I currently have a docket of over 900 civil cases. Shortly after a case is filed, I have a status conference where the case is put on one of three tracks, depending on its complexity. Each track has a deadline for filing a witness list, for concluding discovery and for setting a month for case evaluation. Case evaluation is a stage where three lawyers evaluate a case and put a value on the case. Roughly six weeks after that I hold a settlement conference. If the case does not settle after exhaustive discussions I set a trial date on the case. If I were to become a District Judge I would seek to use a similar procedure, as adopted for the federal system. I would also consult with my colleagues and with other federal judges to identify ways to further improve my case management. One of the most important elements in docket management is having firm trial dates and sticking to those dates.

- 13. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Judges play the most important part in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. Judges must meet with the parties early and often to keep cases moving forward toward resolution. I would employ the procedure mentioned in response to question 12 in addition to fully utilizing the resources available to federal judges, like the law clerks and magistrates.

- 14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I prepared my own answers and discussed them with the Department of Justice staff and then submitted them.

- 15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Gershwin A. Drain
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy? How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: As a trial judge my judicial philosophy is to closely follow and apply the law that is set forth in statutes, and to follow the case law found in precedents pronounced by higher courts. The judicial branch, along with the executive and legislative branches form the three equal branches of government. The judicial branch interprets and applies the law in cases and controversies, whereas the executive enforces the law and the legislature creates or modifies the law.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: I am totally committed to treating all those who would come before me impartially and fairly and I have endeavored to do that for the 25 years I have been a judge. I believe that all political and personal beliefs must be checked at the courthouse door and that when coming onto the bench a judge must be neutral and unbiased in all matters.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: All judges should be thoroughly committed to the principle of stare decisis. A judge must completely adhere to and abide by controlling precedent from higher courts. Stare decisis creates stability and predictability in the law for the litigants.

Responses of Gershwin A. Drain
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan
To the Written Questions of Senator Mike Lee

1. During the hearing, in response to my question regarding your published statement that “the death penalty is primitive punishment that is brutal and barbaric,” you said that your “views about the death penalty have been evolving and changing.” Could you please articulate what your current views on the death penalty are?

Response: My current views on the death penalty are that it is acceptable and appropriate and the United States Supreme Court has so held. If confirmed, I will apply the death penalty in appropriate cases consistent with this precedent.

2. During the hearing, I asked about some negative statements you made about Justice Clarence Thomas in a 1998 Michigan Chronicle article. In response, you suggested that you met Justice Thomas “some time” after writing the article, when he came to present the Devitt Award to Judge Keith, and that this meeting helped you gain a good deal of respect for him. In the Michigan Chronicle article, however, you specifically mention that meeting between Judge Keith and Justice Thomas, suggesting that the article was actually written after you had met Justice Thomas.

- a. Did the personal meeting you mentioned in your testimony occur before you wrote the article in the Michigan Chronicle?

Response: Yes. After looking back, I realized that the meeting did take place before I wrote the article. These events took place 14 years ago and were not fresh in my mind at the time of the hearing. I apologize for this mistake, and my intention was not to misconstrue the events.

- b. If so, would you please explain why, after a meeting in which you claim to have gained such respect for the Justice, you would then write inappropriate remarks about him in a public forum?

Response: I regret my poor choice of words and I apologize for comments made about Justice Thomas. In hindsight, they were inappropriate. In meeting Justice Thomas I did gain tremendous respect for him personally. Justice Thomas is truly an American success story. He pulled himself up from very humble beginnings to become a United States Supreme Court Justice, which is an inspiration to anyone. At the time I wrote the article, my thoughts about some of his civil rights views clouded my judgment which led to those inappropriate comments. Notwithstanding any view I might have about any Supreme Court Justices, I would faithfully apply all Supreme Court precedent if I were confirmed to be a District Court Judge.

3. How would you describe your judicial philosophy?

Response: As a trial judge my judicial philosophy is to closely follow and apply the law that is set forth in statutes, and to follow the case law found in precedents pronounced by higher courts. My role is not to try to enforce the law or create, modify or change it. Those are things that are reserved for the executive and legislative branches.

a. To what sources would you look in deciding a case that turned on interpretation of a federal statute?

Response: In deciding a case that turned on the interpretation of a federal statute, I would first do a thorough review of the statute and try to decide what the language of the statute says and means. I would then look at cases that had previously dealt with the statute both at the Supreme Court level and the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. If I needed to, I would then look to see if another Circuit Court of Appeals or District Court had interpreted the statute. If there was nothing on point then I would look for analogous cases.

b. To what sources would you look in deciding a case that turned on interpretation of a constitutional provision?

Response: In deciding a case that turned on the interpretation of a constitutional provision, I would first do a thorough review of the constitutional provision and try to decide what the language of the provision meant. I would then follow the procedure outlined in question 3a.

4. In your view, what are the constitutional requirements for standing and how robustly should those requirements be applied to novel assertions of standing?

Response: The Constitutional requirements for standing are injury, causation and redressability, Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737 (1984). The Supreme Court has made clear that these requirements should be robustly applied in all cases.

5. What role do the text and original meaning of a constitutional provision play in interpreting the Constitution?

Response: The text and original meaning of a Constitutional provision play perhaps the most important role in interpreting the Constitution. They are the starting point for any analysis of a Constitutional issue.

6. Do you believe that Congress has implied powers beyond those enumerated in the Constitution?

Response: No, although the Constitution grants Congress powers to pass unspecified laws that are “necessary and proper” for the exercise of its expressed powers, Article I, Section 8, Clause 18.

- a. If so, which ones? And which provisions of the Constitution account for these implicit rights?

Response: Please see previous answer.

- b. If not, how would you approach the multitude of legislation that Congress has enacted without reference to an appropriate authorizing provision of the Constitution?

Response: In any case in which Congress's power to enact a law was challenged, I would carefully review the relevant provisions of the Constitution and the applicable precedents from the Supreme Court and the Sixth Circuit to determine whether the law was within an appropriate authorizing provision of the Constitution.

- i. Would you strike down laws not properly authorized by the Constitution?

Response: Yes.

7. Do you believe that the Constitution protects rights not specified in the Constitution?

Response: No.

- a. Do you believe that the Constitution provides for a right of privacy?

Response: The Supreme Court has so held in a line of cases, including Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965). The Supreme Court has also held that the Fourth Amendment protects certain privacy interests in cases including Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967).

- b. If so, which provision of the Constitution provides for that right?

Response: In Katz the Supreme Court held that the Fourth Amendment protects certain privacy interests. In Griswold and other cases the Court held that the right of privacy is in one of the liberty interests protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments.

8. Do you believe there the Constitution provides for substantive due process—that is to say, that the Constitution does not allow the government to infringe certain fundamental rights regardless of the procedural guarantees that might be afforded?

Response: Yes. The Supreme Court has so held and I would be bound to apply that precedent.

- a. Which do you believe are protected under substantive due process?

Response: I have not analyzed this area of constitutional law so as to form an opinion or belief as to the extent of substantive rights that are protected under the Due Process Clause.

- b. If you believe such rights are protected, is it also your belief that Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905) was correctly decided and should be the state of the law? Lochner, to paraphrase, was a case in which the Court held unconstitutional a New York statute that prohibited employment of bakery employees for more than 10 hours a day or 60 hours a week.

Response: I do not feel it is my position to decide whether or not Lochner v. New York was correctly decided. If confirmed as a District Court Judge it would be my obligation to follow and apply current Supreme Court precedent.

- c. If you believe substantive due process protects some personal rights such as a right to abortion, but not economic rights such as those at stake in Lochner, on what basis do you distinguish these types of rights for constitutional purposes?

Response: I have not analyzed this area of constitutional law to be able to distinguish the differences between personal rights and economic rights for constitutional purposes.

- 9. In the case of the Commerce Clause, apart from circumstances present in Lopez and Morrison, what are the limits on Congress's Commerce Clause power?

Response: One of the limits on Congress's Commerce Clause power is the Tenth Amendment, which provides for state sovereignty.

- a. Do you believe that Congress has at any time overstepped its authority under that provision since Wickard, other than in Lopez and Morrison?

Response: I have not researched nor analyzed the law since Wickard as to whether Congress has overstepped its authority under the Commerce Clause.

- 10. How would you go about determining whether a group of persons is a "suspect class," such that laws affecting that group should receive strict scrutiny?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that race, alienage, and national origin are suspect classifications and that laws that discriminate based on those characteristics deserve strict scrutiny. Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1 (1967); City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, Inc., 473 U.S. 432 (1985). The Court has also held that laws that discriminate based on gender or against non-marital children are subject to heightened scrutiny.

11. Under what circumstances do you think it proper for a court to conclude that Congress has delegated legislative power to the executive branch in violation of the Article I of the Constitution?

Response: I have not analyzed or researched this area of constitutional law to determine when it's proper for a court to conclude that Congress has delegated legislative power to the executive branch in violation of Article I of the Constitution.

12. How would you describe the role that checks and balances and separation of powers play in the Constitution's structure?

Response: The Constitution established three separate branches of government, the Legislative branch, the Executive branch and the Judicial branch. The Constitution ensures that each branch serves to check the power of the other two branches of government.

a. How would you go about deciding a case in which one branch assumed an authority not granted it by the text of the Constitution?

Response: I would closely scrutinize the constitutional language and would also apply any relevant precedent from the Supreme Court and the Sixth Circuit.

b. What is your understanding of the Recess Appointments Clause?

Response: The Recess Appointments Clause of the Constitution allows the President to make temporary appointments to fill "vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate."

i. To what sources would you look in interpreting that clause?

Response: I would look to the same sources that I would consider in deciding any other constitutional issue, including the text of the Constitution and the applicable precedents of the Supreme Court and Sixth Circuit.

ii. Which branch should determine whether the Senate is in recess?

Response: Because there is litigation currently pending on this issue, I believe it would be inappropriate for me to express a view.

- iii. In the event of a dispute, how you would you determine whether the Senate is in recess? Would you employ a functionalist approach, and if so, why?

Response: Because there is litigation currently pending on this issue, I believe it would be inappropriate for me to express a view.

- 13. What legal experience do you think is necessary for a person to make a good federal judge and what have you done to gain this experience?

Response: The legal experience necessary for a person to be a good United States District Court Judge is to have extensive judicial experience in both criminal and civil cases, because that's the lion's share of the work of a District Court Judge. To gain that type of experience I spent 12 years (1974-1986) at the Federal Defender's Office, where I handled probably 8-10 jury trials a year. One of those trials was a drug conspiracy trial that lasted six weeks. While in that office I also argued a number of my cases before the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. As a state court judge I handled criminal matters for 13 years (1987-2000) that consisted of murder, robbery, rape, drugs, assaults, thefts, weapons violations, breaking and entering, essentially the whole gamut of state crimes. In 2000 I moved from the criminal division to the civil division and have handled solely civil matters to the present. The monetary limit is $25,000 and above. In this division I have handled personal injury cases, contract cases, cases involving property disputes, malpractice (legal and medical), civil rights cases, employment cases, and a host of other types of cases that involved money or property. Over the 25 years I have conducted hundreds of jury trials and hundreds of non-jury trials and dealt with all the issues and motions that accompany them.

- 14. What role should empathy play in a judge's consideration of a case?

Response: A case must be decided based on the facts and the law that applies to the case. For the last 25 years as I have handled jury trials, one of the standard jury instructions that I give is to tell the jury that they are not to decide the case based on sympathy for any of the parties. The same standard applies to judges.

Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan
to the Written Questions of Senator Jeff Sessions

1. In a 1985 Letter to the Editor of the Detroit News entitled "Death Penalty Brands Society," you wrote: "The death penalty is primitive punishment that is brutal and barbaric. Advanced, mature societies should engage in punishment and not vengeance as a way of dealing with crime." When asked about these statements at your hearing, you testified: "It would not affect my being a judge. The article was written over 30 years ago. I no longer hold to that position. My views about the death penalty have been evolving and changing. I no longer believe that. I was a pretty young zealous defense lawyer in those days and am now older and more mature and no longer subscribe to that." Senator Lee then asked, "So, your views have evolved?", and you answered "Yes." What are your views of the death penalty today?

Response: I believe that the death penalty is an acceptable and appropriate form of punishment. The United States Supreme Court has so held and I would faithfully apply that precedent.

2. Do you believe that the death penalty constitutes cruel and unusual punishment under the Constitution? Please explain your answer.

Response: No. Again the United States Supreme Court has held that it is not and I have no problem following and abiding by that law.

3. Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment? Please explain your answer.

Response: Yes. The federal government and most of the states have decided through their legislatures and constitutions that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment, and the Supreme Court has agreed that it is constitutional.

4. Do you believe that the death penalty is a deterrent? Please explain your answer.

Response: Yes. I believe it is a deterrent. When people see the severity of the punishment inflicted and know of its existence it will serve to deter and prevent conduct that would bring the death penalty.

5. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I first prepared my answers, then discussed them with an attorney with the Department of Justice and then submitted them.

6. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The principles embodied in our Constitution remain constant.

2. Do you believe judicial doctrine rightly incorporates the evolving understandings of the Constitution forged through social movements, legislation, and historical practice?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The principles embodied in our Constitution remain constant.

3. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: First, I would consider any applicable Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent. If none existed, I would look to the language of the statute and any applicable constitutional provisions to determine whether the question could be resolved by the plain language. If a question continued to exist, I would consider persuasive, non-binding precedent from other courts, as well as opinions involving analogous issues. In conducting this analysis, I would take care to avoid unnecessarily determining any constitutional questions and would ensure that any constitutional analysis required be limited to resolving the narrowest possible question.

4. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy relied in part on the “evolving standards of decency” to hold that capital punishment for any murderer under age 18 was unconstitutional. I understand that the Supreme Court has ruled on this matter and you are obliged to follow it, but do you agree with Justice Kennedy’s legal analysis?

Response: As a sitting United States magistrate judge, I am bound to follow Supreme Court precedent and would certainly do so in all cases, including in cases involving capital punishment. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy wrote for the majority of the Supreme Court. Consequently, his decision is binding, and I could not consider any personal opinion I might have of his analysis in determining a case involving the same legal issue.

- a. When determining what the “evolving standards of decency” are, justices have looked to different standards. Some justices have justified their decision by looking to the laws of various American states, in addition to foreign law, and in other cases have looked solely to the laws and traditions of foreign countries. Do you believe either standard has merit when interpreting the text of the Constitution?

Response: I believe that the United States Constitution should be interpreted in accordance with American law.

- i. If so, do you believe one standard more meritorious than the other? Please explain why or why not.

Response: When construing the United States Constitution, I consider American law and standards, as the United States Constitution is a uniquely American document.

- 5. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: No, it is not proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution, unless binding Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent requires it.

- a. If so, under what circumstances would you consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution?

Response: I would consider foreign law only if binding Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent required me to do so.

- b. Do you believe foreign nations have ideas and solutions to legal problems that could contribute to the proper interpretation of our laws?

Response: I believe that American laws should be interpreted by looking to American precedent and the United States Constitution.

Responses of Robin S. Rosenbaum
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the Southern District of Florida
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe that the most important attribute of a judge is integrity. Integrity includes fairness, intellectual honesty, and diligence. I believe that I have integrity.

2. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge should be fair, even-tempered, and patient, treating with dignity and respect all who come before the judge. I consider all of these aspects of the appropriate judicial temperament of a judge to be essential. I believe that I meet this standard.

3. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: I am entirely committed to following faithfully the precedents of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals and giving them full force and effect, even if I personally disagree with such precedents.

4. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In a case of first impression involving a statute, I would first examine the language of the provision. If the language were clear, my analysis would begin and end with the language. If an ambiguity in the language existed, however, I would look to the structure and framework of the statute as a whole to interpret the provision at issue. In so doing, I would be careful to avoid a construction that would result in the redundancy or meaninglessness of any portion of the statute. If the answer were still not clear, I would consider whether precedents involving any analogous statutes were instructive. Finally, if ambiguity continued to exist, I would consider plainly ascertainable legislative intent.

5. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: My opinion about the correctness of Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent would be irrelevant to my rendering of decisions. Regardless of my personal views, I would faithfully follow the precedents of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, giving them full force and effect --- even if I personally disagreed with them.

6. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A statute should be declared unconstitutional only in rare circumstances where no possible fair constitutional interpretation can be discerned. Constitutional questions should be determined only if absolutely necessary and then, only in the narrowest possible way.

7. As you know, the federal courts are facing enormous pressures as their caseload mounts. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would manage my caseload as efficiently as possible while still ensuring that each case receives the attention it deserves. As a sitting United States magistrate judge, I have developed a familiarity with the federal caseload in my district and have learned efficient ways to handle different types of matters while still giving each matter appropriate attention. If confirmed, I would continue to make these goals a priority. More specifically, I would hold conferences early in each case to schedule firm and realistic deadlines, and I would continue to meet with the parties as necessary to ensure that the deadlines are met. To further facilitate the expeditious resolution of cases, I would continue to make use of technology, particularly telephone and video-conference capabilities for non-substantive hearings.

8. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Judges absolutely have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. As noted above, if confirmed as a district judge, I would hold conferences early in each case to schedule firm and realistic deadlines, and I would continue to meet with the parties as necessary to ensure that the deadlines are met. To further facilitate the expeditious resolution of cases, I would continue to make use of technology, particularly telephone and video-conference capabilities for non-substantive hearings.

9. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on Wednesday, March 7, 2012. After reviewing and considering them, I prepared answers to the questions and forwarded them to the Department of Justice for review, along with a letter of transmittal to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

10. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: I believe that in determining cases, judges should diligently ascertain the applicable law and apply it faithfully to the facts of the case. In so doing, judges should be fair and impartial, treating with respect and dignity all who come before the court. In addition, in order to promote the legitimacy and fairness of the system, judges should fully explain the reasons for their decisions. Finally, judges should preside over their dockets in an efficient manner.

I see the role of the judge in our constitutional system as a limited one. Judges do not make the law; instead, the role of judges is to apply the law as it is written, impartially and fairly, ensuring compliance with our Constitution.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: I can give my complete and unqualified assurances that litigants entering my courtroom will be treated fairly, regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff. I hope and certainly believe that my time on the bench as a United States magistrate judge demonstrates the sincerity and completeness of my commitment in this regard.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: Stare decisis is an important and essential doctrine in our judicial system. Adherence to binding precedent creates predictability in and lends legitimacy to our system of justice. District courts are bound by their circuit court and the United States Supreme Court. Circuit courts are bound by the United States Supreme Court and the prior rulings of the circuit court unless the en banc circuit overrules its own precedent. If confirmed as a United States district judge, I would faithfully apply the binding precedent of the United States Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, as I have as a United States magistrate judge.

1. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The Constitution grants only the powers and protects only the rights that have been included and remain in it through its original adoption or the duly authorized processes of amendment. A court’s job is to interpret and apply the Constitution’s provisions, not to add new powers or rights evolved outside the constitutionally prescribed processes of constitutional creation and amendment.

2. Do you believe judicial doctrine rightly incorporates the evolving understandings of the Constitution forged through social movements, legislation, and historical practice?

Response: No.

- a. If not, please explain.

Response: The principles of the Constitution do not change unless the Constitution has been changed.

3. What principles of constitutional interpretation would you look to in analyzing whether a particular statute infringes upon some individual right?

Response: As an appellate judge, I would look to those sources that governing Supreme Court precedent deems relevant as a methodological matter to resolution of a constitutional issue. I would follow any on-point and still-good precedent on the particular issue, whether from the Supreme Court or from my own court. To the extent that precedent is not controlling on the particular point, I would examine the text of the constitutional provision at issue, what the language means by itself and in the context of the Constitution as a whole, what binding precedent prescribes about the general method of applying that provision and says about other issues bearing on the particular question, and what light is authoritatively shed on the meaning of the provision by Framers-era sources and other relevant history. I would examine what courts have said on the matter in decisions that do not serve as binding precedent for my court. And I would follow the canon favoring adoption of reasonable interpretations of statutes to avoid unconstitutionality.

4. In Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), Justice Kennedy relied in part on the “evolving standards of decency” to hold that capital punishment for any murderer under age 18 was unconstitutional. You filed an amicus brief in this case on behalf of the American Psychiatric Association. I understand that the Supreme Court has ruled on this matter and you are obliged to follow it, but do you agree with Justice Kennedy's legal analysis?

Response: As a judicial nominee, I believe that it would not be appropriate for me to express agreement or disagreement with a binding Supreme Court decision or its rationale. The amicus brief by the American Medical Association in Roper—a brief that was joined by my long-time client, the APA (but on which my name does not appear)—made no legal arguments about “evolving standards of decency,” or foreign or state laws, but instead was focused on presenting empirical literature about adolescence. 2004 WL 1633549. The same is true of the amicus brief of the American Psychological Association in Graham v. Florida, 130 S. Ct. 2011 (2010) (invalidating “imposition of a life without parole sentence on a juvenile offender who did not commit homicide”)—a brief that was joined by my client, the APA (and on which my name does appear). 2009 WL 2236778. Moreover, the briefs stated the positions only of my client; and my job in any case in which I represented or advised the APA, as with any client, was to advance the client's positions, not mine. If confirmed, I would follow Roper, Graham, and any other binding Supreme Court precedent under the doctrine of stare decisis.

- a. When determining what the “evolving standards of decency” are, justices have looked to different standards. Some justices have justified their decision by looking to the laws of various American states, in addition to foreign law, and in other cases have looked solely to the laws and traditions of foreign countries. Do you believe either standard has merit when interpreting the text of the Constitution?

Response: The decisions of the American people, not those of foreign countries, determine the content of our Constitution, and it is not a judge's proper function to seek to bring our constitutional law into alignment with the laws or practices of other countries. The Supreme Court has held that the States' laws may be examined in determining whether a punishment is “unusual” under the Eighth Amendment. It also has cited certain foreign and international law as “confirmation” of a determination under the Eighth Amendment. Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 575, 578 (2005). As a judge, I would be bound by that and all other Supreme Court precedent.

- i. If so, do you believe one standard more meritorious than the other? Please explain why or why not.

Response: Beyond what I have just stated, I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to comment on the merits of binding Supreme Court precedents, which I would follow as a lower court judge.

- 5. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign or international laws or decisions in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: The decisions of the American people, not those of foreign countries, determine the content of our Constitution, and it is not a judge's proper function to seek to bring our constitutional law into alignment with foreign or international laws or decisions. The Supreme Court has held, however, that the Framers' understanding of English common law may be relevant to the meaning of certain constitutional provisions. United States v. Jones, 132 S. Ct. 945 (2012). And it has cited certain foreign and international law as "confirmation" of a determination under the Eighth Amendment. Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 575, 578 (2005). Those decisions are binding on a lower court.

a. If so, under what circumstances would you consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution?

Response: I would not consider foreign law when interpreting the Constitution except to the extent that Supreme Court precedent so required.

b. Do you believe foreign nations have ideas and solutions to legal problems that could contribute to the proper interpretation of our laws?

Response: The proper interpretation of our laws is that which gives effect to the ideas and solutions that our lawmakers enacted, not any ideas foreign nations have. Beyond that fundamental principle, there also are vital practical reasons for courts, in interpreting our laws, to resist looking at foreign ideas and solutions: inviting such inquiries can multiply costs, produce unreliable and inaccurate pictures of foreign systems that are not easily understood by outsiders, and harmfully divert attention from arrival at the proper domestic result, which is already a difficult enough task.

Responses of Richard Gary Taranto
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

1. At your confirmation hearing, I asked you about the level of scrutiny the Supreme Court has applied in due process and equal protection challenges to laws making distinctions based on sexual orientation. You responded in part by saying it would be inappropriate for you to discuss “a legal issue in advance of the adversarial process of adjudicating that issue in the concrete case.” Perhaps we had a miscommunication at the hearing, but I was not asking you how you would rule in a hypothetical case. My question was regarding the current status of the law under Supreme Court precedent. You participated by way of amicus briefs in the two seminal Supreme Court cases addressing this issue in Romer v. Evans and Lawrence v. Texas. I would expect that you would be familiar with these cases and the standard the Supreme Court applied. If you need to refresh your memory, please reread these cases and any other relevant precedent and address the following questions:
 - a. Based on current Supreme Court precedent, what is the standard of review to be applied in Due Process and Equal Protection challenges to laws making distinctions based on sexual orientation?

Response: The Supreme Court has not articulated a general standard of review to be applied in Due Process and Equal Protection challenges to laws making distinctions based on sexual orientation.

In Romer v. Evans, 517 U.S. 620 (1996), the Court invalidated an amendment to the Colorado Constitution that, the Court concluded, “withdraws from homosexuals, but no others, specific legal protection from the injuries caused by discrimination, and it forbids reinstatement of these laws and policies.” Id. at 627. Without addressing other kinds of laws or stating a general standard of review, the Court invalidated the amendment under the Equal Protection Clause on two grounds. First, the Court concluded that it was an “exceptional” type of law, describing it as “[a] law declaring that in general it shall be more difficult for one group of citizens than for all others to seek aid from the government,” which the Court said “is itself a denial of equal protection of the laws in the most literal sense.” Id. at 632, 634. Second, the Court applied rational-basis review and held that the amendment failed under that standard, stating that the amendment’s “sheer breadth is so discontinuous with the reasons offered for it that the amendment seems inexplicable by anything but animus toward the class it affects; it lacks a rational relationship to legitimate state interests.” Id. at 632.

In Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558 (2003), the Court ruled under the Fourteenth Amendment’s Due Process Clause, invalidating a Texas “statute making it a crime for two persons of the same sex to engage in certain intimate sexual conduct.” Id. at 562. The Court held that this conduct “is within the liberty of persons to choose without being punished as criminals.” Id. at 567; id. (“The liberty protected by the Constitution allows homosexual persons the right to make this choice.”). Most of the opinion is a lengthy criticism of the reasoning of Bowers v. Hardwick, concluding with the overruling of Bowers. 539 U.S. at 566-78. The Court stated expressly that it was not addressing various kinds of laws involving sexual orientation other than the criminal bar before it (id. at 578), and it did not declare a particular standard of review. The Court stated its conclusion in these terms: “The Texas statute furthers no legitimate state interest which can justify its intrusion into the personal and private life of the individual.” 539 U.S. at 578.

In Baker v. Nelson, 409 U.S. 810 (1972), the Court dismissed for want of a substantial federal question an appeal from a Minnesota Supreme Court judgment, 191 N.W. 2d 185 (1971), that rejected a challenge to Minnesota’s statute allowing issuance of a marriage license only to opposite-sex couples. The U.S. Supreme Court’s order, issued without any opinion at all, does not address the question of the standard of review. The Court has said that the precedential effect of one its summary orders is limited: such an order binds a lower court in deciding a subsequent case that presents “the precise issues presented and necessarily decided by” the summary order, unless subsequent Supreme Court decisions “instruct otherwise.” Mandel v. Bradley, 432 U.S. 173, 176 (1977); Hicks v. Miranda, 422 U.S. 332, 344 (1975).

With the Supreme Court not having declared a general standard of review for challenges to laws based on sexual orientation, individual cases presenting such challenges in contexts different from Romer, Lawrence, and Baker necessarily involve arguments by the parties about what the proper standard of review should be. That is the kind of unsettled issue that I do not believe it would be appropriate for me to address in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed. I also note that the amicus briefs of the American Psychological Association in Romer and Lawrence, which were joined by my client, the American Psychiatric Association, made no legal argument for a heightened standard of review, but focused on presenting empirical literature relevant to each case. See 1995 WL 17008445 (Romer brief); 2003 WL 152338 (Lawrence brief). Moreover, the briefs stated the positions only of my client; and my job in any case in which I represented or advised the APA, as with any client, was to advance the client’s positions, not mine. If I am confirmed, I would follow Romer, Lawrence, Baker, and any other Supreme Court precedent.

- b. The Administration has an announced policy that it will not defend the Defense of Marriage Act or similar laws in the context of suits brought by veterans or government employees. In justifying its refusal to defend against these suits, the Administration has asserted that “classifications based on sexual orientation should be subject to a heightened standard of constitutional scrutiny.”

- i. Are you aware of any Supreme Court precedent that would support the Administration's position that classifications based on sexual orientation are subject to heightened scrutiny? Please review any applicable precedent in addressing this question.

Response: Having reviewed the Administration's written submissions on the issue for purposes of answering this question, I am aware that the Administration has pointed to a number of Supreme Court precedents that consider whether certain classifications not involving sexual orientation warrant heightened scrutiny (e.g., Bowen v. Gilliard, 483 U.S. 587, 602-03 (1987); City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 441-47 (1985)) and argued that the reasoning of those precedents should lead to heightened scrutiny of classifications based on sexual orientation. That is the kind of argument about the application and extension of precedents from different contexts that I do not believe it would be appropriate for me to address in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed.

- ii. Do you agree that it would be improper for a district or circuit court to apply any level of scrutiny other than a rational basis standard, absent further guidance from the Supreme Court?

Response: I am not aware of any Supreme Court case that establishes what level of scrutiny should generally apply to classifications based on sexual orientation. In the absence of such a precedent, a lower court should consider the specifics of the case before it, and if it had to decide on a particular level of scrutiny for the classification at issue, it should fully consider all arguments about the most faithful reading and application of the indirectly relevant precedents of the Supreme Court about how to settle on a level of scrutiny, recognizing that any heightened scrutiny must be affirmatively justified against the background of "[t]he general rule ... that legislation is presumed to be valid and will be sustained if the classification drawn by the statute is rationally related to a legitimate state interest." Cleburne, 473 U.S. at 440.

2. At your confirmation hearing I asked several questions pertaining to the Whistleblower Protection Act (WPA). I appreciated your taking the time to familiarize yourself with some of these issues prior to the hearing. As you mentioned, the Federal Circuit appears to have backed off of the "irrefragable proof" standard annunciated in LeChance v. White, 174 F.3d 1378 (1999), in its opinion in White v. Department of Air Force, 391 F.3d 1377 (2004). However, I have concerns that the irrefragable proof standard has not been completely extinguished.

- a. In White, the Federal Circuit used a formulation of gross mismanagement that could cause confusion. The Court held that "for a lawful agency policy to constitute 'gross mismanagement,' an employee must disclose such serious errors by the agency that a conclusion the agency erred is not debatable among reasonable people.”¹ In your understanding of White, are disclosures of “gross mismanagement” subject to a higher standard than the reasonable belief standard applied to other disclosures? Please review any applicable precedent in addressing this question.

Response: The WPA, 5 U.S.C. § 2302(b)(8), prohibits certain employment action against an employee or applicant because of disclosure of information that the employee or applicant “reasonably believes evidences” certain kinds of wrongdoing, namely, a violation of law, rule, or regulation or “gross mismanagement, a gross waste of funds, an abuse of authority, or a substantial and specific danger to public health or safety” (with exceptions for certain disclosures). See also 5 U.S.C. § 1221(e) (corrective action required if prohibited action “was a contributing factor” unless the agency “demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence that it would have taken the same personnel action in the absence of [the] disclosure”). Section 2302(b)(8) thus has a two-part structure—first, a “reasonable belief” requirement and, second, a requirement of certain statutorily identified wrongdoing that is the subject of the protected disclosure. In my understanding, the first requirement is common to all the types of wrongdoing, but each such type of wrongdoing has its own meaning.

The White cases involved an employee’s disclosure of what he alleged he “reasonably believed” was “gross mismanagement” (not “a gross waste of funds, an abuse of authority, or a violation of law,” 391 F.3d at 1382 n.1). Stating that the statute “does not require that whistleblowers establish gross mismanagement by irrefragable proof,” the Court reiterated that “the proper test” was whether “a disinterested observer with knowledge of the essential facts known to and readily ascertainable by the employee [could] reasonably conclude that the actions of the government evidence gross mismanagement.” Id. at 1381. And “gross mismanagement” meant “such serious errors by the agency that a conclusion the agency erred is not debatable among reasonable people.” Id. at 1382.

White elaborated on what the “gross mismanagement” standard does and does not require. It requires agency errors that were not reasonably debatable “on the information ‘known to and readily ascertainable by the employee.’” Id. at 1382, 1383. But gross mismanagement need not be “blatant” and can include “policy disputes,” policies that some actually thought were a good idea (but unreasonably), and errors in “adoption or continuation” of a policy. Id. at 1381, 1382, 1383. See id. at 1382 (“Many government policies, desirable or at least debatable at their inception, remain in place as the result of inertia or because those responsible do not wish to admit that the policy is no longer useful. The WPA is designed to protect those employees who call attention to such instances through a disclosure. There is again no requirement that there be a unanimous view that the continuation of the policy is a mistake.”).

On the other hand, while the “reasonable belief” component remains the same across the different types of wrongdoing, the specific definition of “gross mismanagement” does not apply across the board to all the listed types of wrongdoing. White itself said that “[t]his non-debatable requirement does not, of course, apply to alleged violations of statutes or regulations.” Id. at 1382 n.2 (employee must simply show a reasonable belief as to legal violation). Elsewhere, the Federal Circuit has explained that “substantial and specific danger to public health or safety” contains no concept of non-debatable errors. Chambers v. Department of the Interior, 515 F.3d 1362, 1369 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (discussing factors of likelihood, timing, and nature of harm). As to the other two listed types of wrongdoing, see, e.g., id. at 1366 (noting Board “standard that a gross waste of funds requires ‘more than debatable expenditure that is significantly out of proportion to the benefit reasonably expected to accrue to the government’”); Doyle v. Department of Veterans Affairs, 273 Fed. Appx. 961, 964 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (non-precedential) (“The Board has defined an ‘abuse of authority’ as ‘an arbitrary or capricious exercise of power by a Federal official or employee that adversely affects the rights of any person or that results in personal gain or advantage to himself or to preferred other persons.’”).

- b. In your understanding of Federal Circuit precedent, is there any context where a whistleblower would be required to rebut by “irrefragable proof” the “presumption that public officers perform their duties correctly, fairly, in good faith, and in accordance with the law and governing regulations”?²

Response: I am not aware of such a context. According to my computer search for “irrefragable,” the word has not appeared in a Federal Circuit WPA case since 1999.

- i. Do you believe “substantial evidence” would be a more appropriate standard in this context for whistleblower cases?

Response: I do not have a basis for assessing the appropriateness of such a standard. If confirmed, I would follow precedent on the governing standards, and I would give effect to the WPA’s provisions in accordance with its evident function of serving the high value our democratic system places on transparency in government, including revelation of misconduct involving the government. Respecting burdens of proof, I note that the Federal Circuit has stated: “To prevail on the merits of a WPA claim, an employee must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that she made a protected disclosure,” Chambers v. Department of the Interior, 602 F.3d 1370, 1376-77 (Fed. Cir. 2010), and, “by a preponderance of the evidence, that a protected disclosure was a contributing factor in an adverse personnel action,” Johnston v. MSPB, 518 F.3d 905, 909 (Fed. Cir. 2008).

3. At your hearing, I asked you about your understanding of the “irrefragable proof” standard. You responded saying that based on your brief research you believed this standard was comparable to a “clear and convincing evidence” standard, though the case in which the Federal Circuit states this was not in the whistleblower context. Indeed, the Federal Circuit has sometimes equated “irrefragable proof” with “clear and convincing evidence”³ although at times it appears irrefragable proof requires something more.⁴ Could you please elaborate on the answer provided at the hearing? In addressing this question, please also articulate whether you believe any formulation of the “irrefragable proof standard” has any role in the context of cases brought under Whistleblower Protection Act.

Response: In using the “irrefragable proof” language, the 1999 Lachance opinion was quoting a decision from outside the context of the 1989 WPA, Alaska Airlines v. Johnson, 8 F.3d 791 (Fed. Cir.1993), which itself reached back to pre-WPA cases, some of which found the requisite “almost [or well-nigh] irrefragable proof” of government bad faith. Subsequent to Lachance, the Federal Circuit in a 2002 decision in Am-Pro Protective Agency v. United States, 281 F.3d 1234, a non-WPA case, acknowledged “some confusion” about the “irrefragable proof” phrase and ruled that the phrase meant “clear and convincing evidence.” Also, in the non-WPA context, the Federal Circuit has said: “In the cases where the courts has considered allegations of [governmental] bad faith, the necessary ‘irrefragable proof’ has been equated with evidence of some specific intent to injure the plaintiff.” Galen Med. Assocs., Inc. v. United States, 369 F.3d 1324, 1330 (Fed. Cir. 2004), quoted in Savantage Financial Services, Inc. v. United States, 595 F.3d 1282, 1288 (Fed. Cir. 2010). Those decisions reflect my understanding of the meaning of the standard where it applies.

As noted, the Federal Circuit has not used “irrefragable” in a WPA case since 1999, despite deciding many WPA cases. I am not aware of any WPA context where the “irrefragable proof” standard currently has a role to play. Moreover, the Federal Circuit has stated: “To prevail on the merits of a WPA claim, an employee must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that she made a protected disclosure,” Chambers v. Department of the Interior, 602 F.3d 1370, 1376-77 (Fed. Cir. 2010), and “by a preponderance of the evidence, that a protected disclosure was a contributing factor in an adverse personnel action,” Johnston v. MSPB, 518 F.3d 905, 909 (Fed. Cir. 2008).

4. You have served as a law clerk at each level of the federal judicial system. This includes clerking for District Judge Abraham Sofaer, Circuit Judge Bork, and Justice O'Connor at the Supreme Court. Could you share with the Committee what you learned about being a judge from these three well respected judges?

³ Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, Whistleblower Protection Enhancement Act of 2009, Senate Committee Report 111-101, December 3, 2009.

⁴ Galen Medical Associates, Inc. v. U.S., 369 F.3d 1324, 1330 (2004) (“In order to overcome the presumption of good faith [on behalf of the government], the proof must be almost irrefragable. Almost irrefragable proof amounts to “clear and convincing evidence.”) (internal quotations and citations omitted) See also, Long Lane Ltd. V. Bibb, 159 Fed.Appx. 189, 192 (2005) (“well-nigh irrefragable proof is high, as it refers to evidence that cannot be refuted or disproved” (internal quotations and citations omitted))

Response: I prized and learned a great deal from all three of my clerkships. Judges Sofaer and Bork, and Justice O'Connor, each exemplified the core required commitments of judges: to hard work to meet the demands of parties and colleagues; to neutral, incisive, faithful application of the law to the facts attentively discerned from the record; and to civil, good-humored, and collegial discourse and interactions, with parties, colleagues, and staff. And because they are uniquely themselves, in personality and overall outlook and background, and got along well with other judges with other characters and approaches, I saw first-hand how first-class judging can readily encompass a range of differences and disagreements. Collectively, they showed me the challenges and satisfactions of a life engaged with the law through the judicial process.

- a. At your hearing, you discussed attributes of Justice O'Connor you admired, and lessons you learned during your Supreme Court clerkship. Would you please provide a similar response regarding the lessons learned during your other clerkships?

Response: Judge Sofaer showed me how a busy district court could function at its best. He taught me the need in that forum for quick study to enable non-stop management of a large docket, patient and concentrated listening to evidence and careful, record-based finding of facts, efficient and civil interaction with lawyers and witnesses, dealing with jurors to inspire them to fulfill their vital roles, and filtering out from the welter of matters that demand quick decisions those matters which warrant fuller dress opinions. Judge Sofaer showed how all these needs could be met at the highest level. He brought exceptional intellectual talents, knowledge, and practical skills, reflecting his background as prosecutor and scholar, and his personality traits, including vigor, warmth, and life-loving humor and realism, inspired his law clerks, and all in his court, to function at their best.

Judge Bork showed me one ideal for appellate judging. The D.C. Circuit as a forum required dispassionate, collegial review at a remove from the heat of battle at trial, or (as often in that court) from the great complexity of agency proceedings, to ensure compliance with governing law. This required wide learning about numerous areas of government, as well as scrupulous respect for the standards of proper judicial review (its limits, its necessity) and an incisive mind to sift through the mountain of material and argument to separate facts, policies, and law. Judge Bork, with his background as Solicitor General and scholar, was a model of how to do this, bringing to bear his deep learning, piercing mind, great curiosity, and talent for clear and elegant writing. He also was a model of the collegiality necessary in an appellate court, through his wit, civility, love of debate, valuing of consensus when possible, and respect for disagreement when not.

I hope, and believe, that I learned many valuable lessons about judging, law, and life from Judges Sofaer and Bork, as well as from Justice O'Connor.

5. In 1993, you wrote an editorial in support of the nomination of Ruth Bader Ginsburg to the Supreme Court saying, “Ruth Ginsburg is a judge’s judge, like Henry Friendly and Learned Hand: She believes in the rule of law. She should be supported by liberals and conservatives alike.” Do you believe Justice Ginsburg has lived up to your expectations as a Supreme Court Justice?

Response: As indicated by the title and the comparison to Judges Henry Friendly and Learned Hand—both of whom were renowned as epitomes of appellate judging according to neutral professional standards—the op-ed piece celebrated then-Judge Ginsburg for her similar commitment to sober reasoning and other aspects of legal craft. This assessment was based on the experience of my co-author as a clerk for then-Judge Ginsburg and on my simultaneous experience clerking for Judge Bork next door. I remain a great admirer of Justice Ginsburg’s, but I do not think that it would be appropriate for me to comment further on her work as a Supreme Court Justice.

6. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: A commitment to treating the parties with respect and complete impartiality in applying the law to the facts. My career in the law rests on prizing that bedrock commitment in judges.

7. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge, in temperament, should embody the ideal of neutrality in adjudication while conveying full appreciation for the real-world interests of the litigants. That means treating all parties with respect, striving to understand their positions thoroughly, paying scrupulous attention to the record, faithfully understanding and applying the relevant precedents and sources of law, and explaining decisions clearly. For a court of appeals judge, it also means being collegial and efficient in working with fellow judges. I believe that I meet these standards.

8. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

9. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: When no precedent is controlling on a specific issue, my task would be to examine the governing law—whether it is a constitutional provision, a statutory provision, a regulation, or otherwise—and, with the assistance of the parties’ analyses and arguments, to give that source the interpretation that most faithfully captures its meaning. In that process, I would carefully consider what other courts, in decisions not binding on the Federal Circuit, have said about the issue. I also would carefully consider precedents on closely related issues to determine what those precedents may fairly imply about the best answer to the new, first-impression issue. And I would apply approaches to interpretation prescribed by the Supreme Court, including a central focus on text, canons of constitutional avoidance, and the like.

- 10. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would be bound by a Supreme Court precedent even if I believed it to be seriously in error.

- 11. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: It is appropriate for a federal court to declare a federal statute unconstitutional only when it must—when a case or controversy requires the constitutionality to be decided and the statute cannot fairly be read to avoid inconsistency with the Constitution.

- 12. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community,” in determining the meaning of the Constitution?

Response: The decisions of the American people, not those of foreign countries, determine the content of our Constitution, and it is not a judge’s proper function to seek to bring our constitutional law into alignment with the laws or practices of other countries or of the world community. The Supreme Court has held, however, that the Framers’ understanding of English common law may be relevant to the meaning of certain constitutional provisions. United States v. Jones, 132 S. Ct. 945 (2012). And it has cited certain foreign and international law as “confirmation” of a determination under the Eighth Amendment. Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 575, 578 (2005). Those decisions are binding on a lower court.

- 13. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? What factors would you consider in reaching this decision?

Response: A Federal Circuit precedent governs future panels unless it has been superseded by contrary precedents of the Supreme Court or of the en banc Federal Circuit. En banc consideration to overturn a prior precedent is justified only in exceptional circumstances, such as when panel decisions conflict with one another, there is seriously harmful confusion or lack of clarity on the issue, or a panel decision has become prohibitively unworkable.

14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I thought about each question, did research where necessary, and drafted answers. I reviewed my draft answers with attorneys from the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice, made some revisions, and then submitted my answers.

15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Richard Gary Taranto
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Amy Klobuchar

- 1. If you had to describe it, how would you characterize your judicial philosophy?
How do you see the role of the judge in our constitutional system?

Response: I would characterize my judicial philosophy as a thorough commitment to the rule of law. The role of the judge, as I see it, is to respect record facts and, within the limits of jurisdiction that authorize adjudication, to interpret and to apply all governing law, whether constitutional, statutory, regulatory, or otherwise, with impartiality, neutrality, fidelity, reason, appreciation for complexities, clarity of explanation, and all possible expedition.

- 2. What assurances can you give that litigants coming into your courtroom will be treated fairly regardless of their political beliefs or whether they are rich or poor, defendant or plaintiff?

Response: Such fairness, entailing impartiality and neutrality in adherence to law and respect for the record, is the bedrock of the rule of law to which I am committed. I take the oath of office as a solemn, unwavering commitment to such fairness. In addition, my career has been apolitical—spent in the judicial system, representing a broad spectrum of clients. I have not served in political positions in government or in any political organization or engaged in political campaigning or advocacy.

- 3. In your opinion, how strongly should judges bind themselves to the doctrine of stare decisis? How does the commitment to stare decisis vary depending on the court?

Response: The doctrine of stare decisis is essential to maximizing stability, consistency, and predictability in our system of law. All judges should adhere completely to that doctrine, which treats precedent as controlling in all but limited, exceptional circumstances. One particular aspect of the doctrine is that a lower court must strictly follow a superior court's precedents until the superior court has instructed otherwise. Thus, a circuit court is bound to apply a Supreme Court precedent that is on point and has not been overturned and, more generally, to resolve all cases by giving all pertinent Supreme Court precedents a faithful reading.

Responses of Richard Gary Taranto
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit
to the Written Questions of Senator Mike Lee

1. How would you describe your judicial philosophy?

Response: I would characterize my judicial philosophy as a thorough commitment to the rule of law. This requires scrupulous attention to record facts, respect for jurisdictional limits and the role of the particular court within the judicial system as a whole and within the overall constitutional system, and adherence to the duty to apply and interpret all governing law, whether constitutional, statutory, regulatory, or otherwise, with impartiality, neutrality, fidelity, reason, appreciation for complexities, clarity of explanation, and all possible expedition.

a. To what sources would you look in deciding a case that turned on interpretation of a federal statute?

Response: As an appellate judge, I would look to those sources that governing Supreme Court precedent deems relevant as a methodological matter to resolution of a statutory issue. I would follow any on-point and still-good precedent on the particular issue, whether from the Supreme Court or from my own court. To the extent that precedent is not controlling, I would look first and foremost to the text of the statute—starting with the words of the particular provision at issue and then widening the inquiry to understand how that particular language fits within the enacted law as a whole, bearing in mind that broad invocations of policy are no substitute for close adherence to the text. Under Supreme Court decisions, legislative history, carefully and cautiously understood, may provide insight into the proper understanding of the text. In examining text and context, I would examine what controlling precedent says about issues or language related to those directly involved in the case. And I would examine any pertinent non-binding judicial decisions (e.g., from other circuits).

b. To what sources would you look in deciding a case that turned on interpretation of a constitutional provision?

Response: As an appellate judge, I would look to those sources that governing Supreme Court precedent deems relevant as a methodological matter to resolution of a constitutional issue. I would follow any on-point and still-good precedent on the particular issue, whether from the Supreme Court or from my own court. To the extent that precedent is not controlling on the particular point, I would examine the text of the particular constitutional provision at issue, what the language means by itself and in the context of the Constitution as a whole, what binding precedent prescribes about the general method of applying that provision and says about other issues bearing on the particular question, and what light is authoritatively shed on the meaning of the provision by Framers-era sources and other relevant history. I would examine what courts have said on the matter in decisions that do not serve as binding precedent for my court. And I would follow the canon favoring adoption of reasonable interpretations of statutes to avoid unconstitutionality.

2. In your view, what are the constitutional requirements for standing and how robustly should those requirements be applied to novel assertions of standing?

Response: Under Supreme Court precedent, Article III requires that, to have standing, a plaintiff must have a concrete and particular injury in fact, traceable to the alleged wrong, and redressable by a judgment in the case. E.g., Bond v. United States, 131 S. Ct. 2355, 2366 (2011); Arizona Christian School Tuition Org. v. Winn, 131 S. Ct. 1436, 1442 (2011). Such standing requirements should be enforced robustly to ensure, as the Court has said, that federal courts do not overstep the limits on their role in the constitutional system. E.g., DaimlerChrysler Corp. v. Cuno, 547 U.S. 332, 341 (2006).

3. What role do the text and original meaning of a constitutional provision play in interpreting the Constitution?

Response: The text and original meaning of a constitutional provision supply the proper standard for interpreting the Constitution.

4. Do you believe that Congress has implied powers beyond those enumerated in the Constitution?

Response: Congress has only such powers as are enumerated in the Constitution, including under the Necessary and Proper Clause's authorization of laws that are "necessary and proper for carrying into execution" more specifically enumerated powers.

a. If so, which ones? And which provisions of the Constitution account for these implicit rights?

Response: The Necessary and Proper Clause is an express authorization of powers, but if one viewed it as authorizing "implicit" powers, it does so by reference to the more specifically enumerated powers under a standard of being "necessary and proper for carrying [them] into execution." How to elaborate on that standard more specifically has been the subject of differing opinions within the Supreme Court, see United States v. Comstock, 130 S. Ct. 1949 (2010) (several opinions), and is the subject of pending litigation, including in the cases involving the Affordable Care Act. I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed. In such a case I would faithfully follow Supreme Court precedent on the subject.

b. If not, how would you approach the multitude of legislation that Congress has enacted without reference to an appropriate authorizing provision of the Constitution?

Response: The Supreme Court has said: "The question of the constitutionality of action taken by Congress does not depend on recitals of the power which it undertakes to exercise." Woods v. Lloyd W. Miller Co., 333 U.S. 138, 144 (1948). I am not aware of Supreme Court precedent holding that legislation that in fact comes within a power the Constitution grants to Congress is invalid just because Congress has not referred to the authorizing power. If there is such precedent, I would follow it.

i. Would you strike down laws not properly authorized by the Constitution?

Response: In a case where the issue had to be reached, I would strike down laws that are not properly authorized by the Constitution.

5. Do you believe that the Constitution protects rights not specified in the Constitution?

Response: The Constitution does not protect rights that it does not specify.

a. Do you believe that the Constitution provides for a right of privacy?

Response: The Constitution does not use the term "privacy" and does not guarantee a "right of privacy." The Fourth Amendment protects certain privacy interests through its guarantee regarding "searches and seizures." And the Supreme Court has found in other provisions, such as the First Amendment and the Due Process Clauses, protection for certain interests that it has sometimes described as privacy interests. E.g., NAACP v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449, 462 (1958) ("privacy in group association" sometimes protected by First Amendment); Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997) (due process decision describing Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965), as protecting "marital privacy").

b. If so, which provision of the Constitution provides for that right?

Response: As noted, the Constitution does not provide for a "right of privacy," but other provisions protect certain interests that are "privacy" interests.

6. Do you believe there the Constitution provides for substantive due process—that is to say, that the Constitution does not allow the government to infringe certain fundamental rights regardless of the procedural guarantees that might be afforded?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the Due Process Clauses, in addition to implicitly incorporating certain Bill of Rights protections (in the case of the Fourteenth Amendment) and equal-protection principles (in the case of the Fifth Amendment), “protect[] individual liberty against ‘certain government actions regardless of the fairness of the procedures used to implement them.’” Collins v. Harker Heights, 503 U.S. 115, 125 (1992). It has held, too, that this principle “provides heightened protection against government interference with certain fundamental rights and liberty interests.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 719-21 (1997).

- a. Which do you believe are protected under substantive due process?

Response: The Supreme Court has recited a number of “fundamental rights and liberty interests” subject to protection under substantive due process. Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 719-20 (1997) (“rights to marry; to have children; to direct the education and upbringing of one’s children; to marital privacy; to use contraception; to bodily integrity; and to abortion”; Court has “also assumed, and strongly suggested,” protection for “the traditional right to refuse unwanted life saving medical treatment”) (citations omitted). More recently, the Supreme Court applied a substantive due process rationale to invalidate a “statute making it a crime for two persons of the same sex to engage in certain intimate sexual conduct.” Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 562 (2003).

- b. If you believe such rights are protected, is it also your belief that Lochner v. New York, 198 U.S. 45 (1905) was correctly decided and should be the state of the law? Lochner, to paraphrase, was a case in which the Court held unconstitutional a New York statute that prohibited employment of bakery employees for more than 10 hours a day or 60 hours a week.

Response: As a judicial nominee, I believe that it would not be appropriate for me to opine on the correctness of Lochner or of other Supreme Court decisions. I do note that, as to Lochner, the Court has referred to “the discredited substantive-due-process case of Lochner” (College Savings Bank v. Florida Prepaid Postsecondary Ed. Expense Fund, 527 U.S. 666, 690 (1999)) and said that “[t]he doctrine that prevailed in Lochner ... and like cases—that due process authorizes courts to hold laws unconstitutional when they believe the legislature has acted unwisely—has long since been discarded.” Ferguson v. Skrupa, 372 U.S. 726, 730 (1963); see also Day-Brite Lighting Inc. v. Missouri, 342 U.S. 421, 423 (1952); Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania v. Casey, 505

U.S. 833, 861 (1992) (“West Coast Hotel Co. v. Parrish, 300 U.S. 379 (1937), signaled the demise of Lochner by overruling Adkins [v. Children’s Hospital of District of Columbia], 261 U.S. 525 (1923)].”).

- c. If you believe substantive due process protects some personal rights such as a right to abortion, but not economic rights such as those at stake in Lochner, on what basis do you distinguish these types of rights for constitutional purposes?

Response: My role as a judge would be to follow Supreme Court precedents on substantive due process as well as other matters.

- 7. In the case of the Commerce Clause, apart from circumstances present in Lopez and Morrison, what are the limits on Congress’s Commerce Clause power?

Response: The Supreme Court has repeatedly declared that the federal government is a government of limited powers, see New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 155 (1992), quoted Madison’s statement that the powers are “‘few and defined,’” United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 552 (1995) (quoting Federalist No. 45), and stated that the powers do not include “a plenary police power,” id. at 566; United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 618 (2000). As to the Commerce Clause in particular, the Court found an overstepping of the bounds of that authority in Lopez and Morrison. The Supreme Court may speak further to explain those bounds in the pending cases involving the Affordable Care Act. I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed. In such a case I would faithfully follow Supreme Court precedent on the subject, giving effect to the Court’s explanations as they apply to the particular issue presented.

- a. Do you believe that Congress has at any time overstepped its authority under that provision since Wickard, other than in Lopez and Morrison?

Response: I am unaware of such Supreme Court decisions other than Lopez and Morrison, but if there is such a decision, I would follow it. As for other congressional enactments that have not been the subject of a Supreme Court decision, I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed. In such a case I would faithfully follow Supreme Court precedent on the subject.

- 8. How would you go about determining whether a group of persons is a “suspect class,” such that laws affecting that group should receive strict scrutiny?

Response: I would examine Supreme Court precedents for whether they answer the question for the particular class and, more generally, for what they teach about the proper method of analysis for a court to use in deciding in the first instance whether a particular class is “suspect,” recognizing that any such determination must be affirmatively justified against the background of “[t]he general rule ... that legislation is presumed to be valid and will be sustained if the classification drawn by the statute is rationally related to a legitimate state interest.” City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985).

9. Under what circumstances do you think it proper for a court to conclude that Congress has delegated legislative power to the executive branch in violation of the Article I of the Constitution?

Response: The Supreme Court has stated that there is no such delegation of legislative power when, “according to common sense and the inherent necessities of the governmental co-ordination,” Congress has laid down an “intelligible principle to which the person or body authorized to [exercise the delegated authority] is directed to conform.” J.W. Hampton, Jr., & Co. v. United States, 276 U.S. 394, 406 (1928); see Mistretta v. United States, 488 U.S. 361, 372 (1989); id. at 415-16 (Scalia, J., dissenting). That precedent, and any that might elaborate on or modify it, would govern how to answer the improper-delegation question in any particular case.

10. How would you describe the role that checks and balances and separation of powers play in the Constitution’s structure?

Response: The Supreme Court has often enforced the system of separation of powers and checks and balances that the Framers built into the Constitution (before the addition of the Bill of Rights), recognizing that the provisions that define that system provide “structural protections against abuse of power [that are] critical to preserving liberty.” Bowsher v. Synar, 478 U.S. 714, 730 (1986); see Free Enterprise Fund v. Public Company Account Oversight Bd., 130 S. Ct. 3138, 3157 (2010); Stern v. Marshall, 131 S. Ct. 2594, 2608-09 (2011).

a. How would you go about deciding a case in which one branch assumed an authority not granted it by the text of the Constitution?

Response: I would determine whether there was a proper case or controversy that required decision of whether a branch assumed an ungranted authority and then apply the precedents of the Supreme Court to determine whether such an impermissible assumption had occurred.

b. What is your understanding of the Recess Appointments Clause?

Response: The scope of authority under the Recess Appointments Clause is a matter currently in litigation. I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed.

i. To what sources would you look in interpreting that clause?

Response: Focusing on the specific question presented in a case, I would examine precedents from the Supreme Court and other courts for what they teach about whether a court can and should adjudicate the question and for what they teach about the sources for answering the question, including about the meaning of the constitutional text—both the Clause itself and its role within the Constitution as a whole—and the weight to be accorded to the history of practices and pronouncements of the Article I and II Branches.

ii. Which branch should determine whether the Senate is in recess?

Response: This is an aspect of disputes currently in litigation. I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed.

iii. In the event of a dispute, how you would you determine whether the Senate is in recess? Would you employ a functionalist approach, and if so, why?

Response: This is an aspect of disputes currently in litigation. Beyond what I have said above about how I would go about approaching such a question in a case, I do not believe that it would be appropriate for me to address the matter in advance of a case that could come before me as a judge if I am confirmed.

11. What legal experience do you think is necessary for a person to make a good federal judge and what have you done to gain this experience?

Response: Many kinds of legal experience can prepare a person to be a good federal judge. My own experience has been a quarter century of litigating cases in the federal courts, overwhelmingly at the appellate level, and centrally for the last decade in the Federal Circuit. That experience, together with having clerked at three levels of the federal courts, served in the Solicitor General's office, and taught patent law, has prepared me to serve on the Federal Circuit.

12. What role should empathy play in a judge's consideration of a case?

Response: If "empathy" means a personal, emotional, political, or similar sympathy for a party, it should play no role in the judge's decision, which must be a faithful application of the law to the facts, with the judge taking constant care to avoid influence of any personal views. If “empathy” means simply a full and respectful appreciation for the real-world interests of all of the parties before the court, the attitude is an appropriate part of the fairness and thoroughness of the judicial process.

Re: Nomination of Richard Gary Taranto as Circuit Judge, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I am writing to support the nomination of Richard G. Taranto to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. He is an extraordinarily fine lawyer and person, and, if confirmed, will be an excellent judge.

I have worked with Richard closely for nearly 30 years, the majority of them in a two-person firm. During that time I have developed great respect for his intelligence, his judgment, and his intellectual and personal fairness. He is able to consider other views without rancor, and he has the kind of courteous manner that, as a judge, would serve him well with his colleagues and with the attorneys that appear before him. I have been fortunate to practice with him, and I think that he would be a wonderful addition to the Federal Circuit.

I urge the Senate to confirm him to be a Circuit Judge.

Sincerely,

H. Bartow Farr, III

Statement of Senator Chuck Grassley
Before the Committee on the Judiciary
On the Nominations of:

Richard Gary Taranto, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit

Gershwin A. Drain, to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan

Robin S. Rosenbaum, to be United States District Judge for the Southern District of Florida

February 29, 2012

Mr. Chairman:

Today we continue to make real progress on President Obama's judicial nominees. Since convening the 2nd Session of the 112th Congress last month, the Senate has been in Session about 18 days, including today. During that time we have held three nominations hearings, receiving testimony from 12 judicial nominees. All in all, more than 85% of President Obama's judicial nominees have received a hearing.

We have confirmed five nominees in those 18 days. In total, we have confirmed 131 of President Obama's judicial nominees, over 71 percent.

We continue to hear concerns about the judicial vacancy rate. But let me emphasize again, that for more than half of the vacancies, including those designated as "judicial emergencies," the President has failed to submit a nomination. So critics need to look at the beginning of the process when commenting on vacancies.

I welcome the nominees who are appearing before us today, their friends and families. I look forward to the testimony and will have questions for the nominees.

Statement Of Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.),
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee,
Hearing On Judicial Nominations
February 29, 2012

Today we welcome three of President Obama's superbly qualified judicial nominees to the Committee. I thank Senator Franken for chairing this important hearing and I thank our Ranking Member, Senator Grassley, for continuing to work with me to schedule these hearings.

However, as I noted in my statement for the first confirmation hearing of the year, the Committee is now proceeding less efficiently than I would like. I have accommodated Senator Grassley's preferred schedule now for several months, holding a hearing for only one nominee in all of December and moving our last hearing back a week at his request. Regrettably today's hearing is another with less than a full slate of nominees. This is true of both of our February hearings because the minority did not review background paperwork of the nominees I wanted to include. With vacancies on Federal courts across the country remaining extremely high, as they have throughout the term of the Obama administration, we cannot afford to slow down our consideration of nominations in this manner.

We remain well behind the pace set by the Senate during President Bush's first term. By the end of President Bush's first term, the Senate had confirmed 205 district and circuit nominees. To date now in the fourth year of President Obama's first term, the Senate has confirmed only 129 district and circuit nominees. By this date in 2004, the Senate had confirmed 170 district and circuit nominees. Today the total is more than 40 confirmations shy of the mark. During President Bush's first term the Senate confirmed the 130th nominee to our circuit and district courts in early June of his third year in office. Here we are approaching the spring of President Obama's fourth year, nearly nine months later, and we still have not reached that milestone. That is why the judicial vacancy rate remains nearly double what it was at this point in the Bush administration.

Senate Republicans continue to use a strategy of across-the-board delays that has led to a shamefully high number of judicial vacancies. In 2009, the Senate was able to confirm only 12 Federal circuit and district court judges, the lowest total in 50 years. In 2010, the Senate was able to confirm 48 Federal circuit and district judges. That has led to the lowest confirmation total for the first two years of a new presidency in 35 years. As a result, judicial vacancies rose again over 110 and stayed near 90 for the longest period of historically high vacancies in 35 years.

Still today, nearly one out of every 10 Federal judgeships is vacant. Judicial emergency vacancies remain unfilled because of Republicans' refusal to consider and confirm consensus nominations that were on the calendar to fill those vacancies at the end of last year. Fourteen of the 19 nominees currently ready for final Senate action have been stalled since last year despite significant bipartisan support. There has been no explanation. There is no excuse.

I had hoped that the New Year would bring greater cooperation from Republican Senators. That has not been the case. Instead, we have lost opportunities with hearings that have not had a full slate of nominees and Republican refusal to consent to Senate votes on nominees this Committee reviewed and reported with the support of every member of the Committee.

In January I urged that the Committee expedite consideration of Arizona Supreme Court Justice Andrew Hurwitz to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Despite the strong support of this home state Senators, Senator Kyl and Senator McCain, that has not happened. Instead, Justice Hurwitz, who had been nominated to fill one of four judicial emergency vacancies on the Ninth Circuit, is yet to be reported by the Committee. The Ninth Circuit serves more than 61 million Americans, and handles double the caseload of the other Federal circuit courts. The Chief Judge of the Ninth Circuit, Judge Alex Kozinski, a Reagan appointee, along with the members of the Judicial Council of the Ninth Circuit, have written to the Senate emphasizing the Ninth Circuit's "desperate need for judges," urging the Senate to "act on judicial nominees without delay," and concluding that they "fear that the public will suffer unless our vacancies are filled very promptly." Their pleas have been for naught, as well.

The Committee needs to pick up the pace. We have been able to report only four of the nine nominees considered at previous hearings. The Senate has an even worse backlog. Fourteen judicial nominees remain pending from last year creating a bottleneck and delay for the nominees we need to consider this year to make real progress.

I thank Senators Durbin, Schumer, Feinstein, Klobuchar, Franken and Coons for their powerful statements on judicial nominations to the Senate and the American people last Tuesday. I know that the Majority Leader is working hard to make real progress. With cooperation from the minority, the Senate should be able to vote to confirm all of the judicial nominees being delayed and fill longstanding judicial vacancies affecting 130 million Americans.

Re: Nomination of Richard Gary Taranto as Circuit Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We write in enthusiastic support of the nomination of Richard Taranto to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and urge his prompt hearing and confirmation. We are lawyers who are familiar both with the docket of the Federal Circuit and with Richard's own work and character. We know Richard, as a lawyer and a person, in different ways: he has been co-counsel to some of us, opposing counsel to others, a colleague to still others, but an asset to all. We come from diverse backgrounds and varying affiliations, but we are united in our admiration for Richard's skills as a lawyer and our respect for his integrity, his civility, his judgment, and his sense of fair play.

We believe that Richard is ideally suited to carry out the tasks assigned to the Federal Circuit, which include deciding cases involving international trade, government contracts, patents, trademarks, certain money claims against the United States government, federal personnel, veterans' benefits, and public safety officers' benefits claims. Richard's intelligence, independence, judgment, and temperament would make him a welcome addition to any court. But Richard is especially experienced in appellate work and the particular legal issues that dominate the docket of the Federal Circuit. He clerked on the U.S. Supreme Court for Associate Justice Sandra Day O'Connor. He served the United States for several years as an Assistant to the Solicitor General. In private practice, he has represented a wide range of clients before the U.S. Supreme Court and in the U.S. Courts of Appeals, including arguing 20 times in the Federal Circuit. He has served, since 2009, as a member of the Appellate Rules Advisory Committee for the United States Judicial Conference.

Richard also has deep substantive knowledge of patent law. As anyone can attest who has engaged Richard on a question of patent law – whether in conversation or in court – Richard has devoted extraordinary attention to understanding the manner in which our patent laws function. That is why Harvard Law School invited him to teach a course there in patent law,

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
 The Honorable Chuck Grassley
 United States Senate
 Committee on the Judiciary
 February 16, 2012

which he did with distinction. Such expertise in patent law would be important for any nominee to the court of appeals exclusively charged with superintending patent litigation, but all the more so now, when patent law is receiving heightened attention from both the Supreme Court and from the political branches. Richard's combination of substantive knowledge and intellect suits him perfectly to the position for which he has been nominated.

These qualifications themselves make Richard rare, but it is his other attributes that make Richard a superlative choice for the Federal Circuit. He is judicious in temperament, analyzing issues with the greatest care and thoughtfulness. He is precise, both in his written advocacy and in his oral presentation, avoiding hyperbole and ensuring accuracy. He is also a complete master of the issues he confronts. His 25 years of appellate practice have made him highly accomplished in the kind of writing required of appellate judges. He knows the importance of fidelity to law, clarity, candor, vigor, and responsiveness.

Richard is, moreover – and notwithstanding his experience and talents – exceptionally modest with a deeply ingrained habit of civility; he solicits the views of others, and hears them out with patience and respect before offering his own views. Not only in court, but in private interactions, with co-counsel, colleagues, and lawyers who are adverse to his clients, Richard maintains his equanimity and politeness and engages in calm, reason-based discussion. As an illustration, for many years Richard has participated in scores of moot court sessions at the Georgetown University Law Center Supreme Court Institute. This is a forum where advocates practice their arguments prior to a Supreme Court oral argument before a panel of lawyers who volunteer their time for the sole purpose of serving the Court by improving the quality of advocacy before it. Because Richard is held in such high regard by members of the Supreme Court Bar, no one is more frequently requested to serve on a Supreme Court Institute moot court panel than Richard. His ability to identify vulnerabilities in legal arguments and his willingness to offer constructive advice to counsel are legend and the Supreme Court Institute has repeatedly singled him out for his extraordinary service. His appointment will serve the collegiality of the Federal Circuit bench and add to the quality of the oral arguments before that Court.

We expect that the Senate, after full inquiry, will see the virtues we know from first-hand experience. Richard Taranto has exceptional legal ability and personal character, and we urge the Senate to confirm him promptly to be a Circuit Judge.*

THE PREPARED STATEMENT OF HON. MARCO RUBIO, A U.S.
SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF FLORIDA

PREPARED REMARKS BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Thank you for allowing me to testify today.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak for a few minutes in support of the nomination of Magistrate Judge Robin Rosenbaum, to serve as a judge on the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

Joining us here today, in support of Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum, are members of her family; her husband, Phil Rothschild; her daughters, Evin Rothschild and Rosie Rothschild; her father, Jerry Rosenbaum; her mother, Hedy Rosenbaum; and her sisters, Jodi Fiedler and Marci Rosenthal. Her 12-year-old daughter, Evin, is especially excited to attend because she is taking American Government in school; her class may be watching this hearing via the webcast.

Mr. Chairman, the Judiciary Committee plays the critical role of diligently evaluating each nominee. I know this committee will thoroughly examine the record and career of Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum. This committee is tasked with examining the record of each nominee to ensure that they have been properly vetted, that they respect the rule of law and the constitution.

I know each of you will have questions for Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum and will give her nomination to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida the attention and consideration it deserves. Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum certainly has extensive experience as an attorney and a magistrate judge in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida, so she is well versed in the issues she will likely face should she be confirmed.

Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum's educational background speaks for itself. She obtained her undergraduate degree from Cornell University and her law degree from the University of Miami College of Law, where she graduated magna cum laude and Order of the Coif.

Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum has served as a United States magistrate judge in Fort Lauderdale, in the Southern District of Florida, since her appointment on September 4, 2007. Since her appointment to the bench, she has garnered a solid reputation with attorneys in the community for her intellect and abiding sense of fairness.

Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum also remains an active and involved member of the Florida legal community. Since 2009, she has taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Miami School of Law. In addition, she served as the president of the Broward County Chapter of the Federal Bar Association.

Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum's knowledge of the law is demonstrated, in part, by her extensive legal experience.

Immediately prior to becoming a magistrate judge, Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum served nine years as an Assistant United States Attorney in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida. During that period, from September 2002 through May 2007, she was the Chief of the Economic Crimes Section of the Fort Lauderdale branch of the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida. Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum has also clerked for the Honorable Stanley Marcus, United States Circuit Judge for the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals; worked in private practice for Holland & Knight LLP; and served as staff counsel for Independent Counsel Daniel Pearson on the investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ronald Brown. Magistrate Judge Rosenbaum began her legal career in the Attorney General's Honors Program, where she served for four years as a Trial Attorney at the Federal Programs Branch of the Civil Division of the United States Department of Justice.

I am honored to introduce Magistrate Judge Robin Rosenbaum today. Mr. Chairman, thank you for giving this nomination full consideration.

THE PREPARED STATEMENT OF HON. DEBBIE STABENOW, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MICHIGAN

Judge Gershwin Drain

Thank you, Chairman Leahy, and Ranking Member Grassley, for holding this hearing today.

I, too, am honored to introduced Judge Gershwin Drain today. I have known Judge Drain for many years, and I can tell you he is an impressive individual with a long record of excellent public service.

As Senator Levin mentioned, he's served in the District Court, Detroit Recorder's Court, and the Wayne County Circuit Court. He's active in the community – I see him all the time at events and meetings back home. And he's dedicated to his family, who are here to support him today.

But don't take my word for it. The American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary unanimously rated Judge Drain qualified to serve on the District Court.

He was named a "Man of Excellence" by the Michigan Chronicle, and the Detroit News named him "Michiganian of the Year."

This is an important judgeship that has been vacant for more than two years now. Judge Drain has the qualifications, the experience, and the temperament for this position.

Once again, I thank the Judiciary Committee for holding this hearing, and I urge you to move forward on Judge Drain's nomination.
