The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (MRS. ELLMERS).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC, March 16, 2011.

I hereby appoint the Honorable RENEE ELLMERS to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

JOHN A. BOEHNER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING-HOUR DEBATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 3, 2011, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning-hour debate.

The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to 1 hour and each Member other than the majority and minority leaders and the minority whip limited to 5 minutes each, but in no event shall debate continue beyond 11:50 a.m.

"FEARLESS"—STAFF SERGEANT MARK C. WELLS, U.S. ARMY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. POE) for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE of Texas. Madam Speaker, most Americans are not personally affected by the two wars that America is engaged in the countries of Iraq and Afghanistan. We go about our daily routine. We are concerned about March Madness, the gasoline prices, but war does not really affect most Americans personally. The media doesn’t put those events on the front page. They are more concerned about the personal lives of celebrities than they are about the personal sacrifice of our warriors overseas.

But war is real. Real Americans are tenaciously fighting on two fronts for the rest of us. For them, it is personal; and for their families, it is very personal. We are engaged in the longest continuous combat in American history as our troops serve overseas.

Staff Sergeant Mark C. Wells was 31 years of age. He was a member of the United States Army, and he was killed on March 5, 2011, in the Helmand province of Afghanistan by an IED. That is an improvised explosive device. That is the way the cowards that we do battle with fight our troops. Of course, they wouldn't come out in the open because they would be overwhlemingly defeated.

Mark was born in San Jose, California, and his parents live in Spring, Texas, in my district. He joined the United States Army in 2003. Growing up he always said, "I want to be in the Army." He was a volunteer, Madam Speaker, as all of those that are serving in Iraq and Afghanistan are. They are volunteers. They have the motto, "Here am I, Send me." And Mark went. He went to Iraq for 14 months serving on active duty, and he has been in Afghanistan since August of last year. He was a member of the 303 EOD Battalion and, get this, Madam Speaker, an explosive ordinance disposal technician. And, yes, that means exactly what it says.

His dad, Burt, told me this week that his son was "fearless." What a great attribute for an American warrior. And he also wanted to be a soldier. Also, at the age of 12, he learned how to play the bagpipes. It goes back to his Irish heritage. He grew up eating corned beef and cabbage. And when he was in Iraq, one of his assignments was to play the bagpipes at funerals for other soldiers that had been killed in combat.

He would continually say, "I love the Army." His dad said of his son Mark, "He was my personal hero." His family said he was patriotic, he was a great dad, and he loved America. He leaves behind a wife, Danielle, who is 8 months pregnant, also a son named Finn that is 2 years of age.

His father would say that, "Mark understood the risk involved in being in the Army, but he loved what he was doing. And, what I miss most is I won't be able to talk to him anymore."

Madam Speaker, being in the Army affects people personally, like his father, Burt, and his mother, Sharon; his wife, Danielle; Finn, their son, and a baby yet to be born.

Mark Wells' memorial service will be on St. Patrick's Day. Yes, that Irish heritage comes into play.

Many of us in this House have been down the street at Arlington Cemetery to attend the funerals of our warriors that have been killed overseas. We all know about those bagpipers that stand on the hill and play "Amazing Grace." Where does America get such great men? They are the rare breed. They are the American breed. And our prayers go out for his family. But while we mourn the loss of Mark Wells, we should also thank the good Lord that such men as Mark Wells ever lived.

And that's just the way it is.

TAX EXPENDITURES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) for 5 minutes.
Mr. HOYER. Last week, as I have been doing for a number of weeks, I have been speaking about our budget and the crisis that confronts us and the challenge that confronts us.

Last week, former Republican Congressman Joe Scarborough said this about the United States’ debt: “The belief of some on the right that America can balance the budget by cutting education, infrastructure, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and home heating assistance to the poor is tantamount to budgetary witchcraft.” That was Joe Scarborough, a former conservative Republican Member of Congress from northern Florida.

Last week, Budget Committee Chair PAUL RYAN expressed a similar thought when he said this: “If you literally think you can just balance the budget by cutting waste, fraud, and abuse, foreign aid, and NPR, it doesn’t work like that,” said PAUL RYAN, chairman of the Budget Committee.

Both Congressman Scarborough and Congressman RYAN are exactly right. Last week I explained why Republicans’ spending plan, even as it cripples America’s competitiveness, barely makes a dent in our debt. That is because the spending targeted by Republicans, non-security discretionary spending, only amounts to 14 percent of the entire budget. Should we focus on that? Yes. Can we get to where we need to be from there? No.

If you want to meet an arbitrary goal of cutting $100 billion and you confine yourself to just 14 percent of the budget, you severely damage investments in education, in innovation, and in competitiveness without making our fiscal condition significantly healthier.

That is why, to really get our debt under control, we have to go beyond that 14 percent. We have to stop making the cuts that, while reckless, are politically easy. We have to start doing what is in the best interests of our country even though it is politically hard.

That means addressing the defense spending that takes in more than one quarter of our budget. It means making hard choices that can keep our entitlements strong for generations to come. But we also need to pass deficit-reducing tax reform.

Our Tax Code is a monumental collection of rules and regulations riddled with loopholes and preferences which are a drain on job creation and, frankly, exacerbate the deficit.

Many of those loopholes, or tax expenditures, as they are also called, are popular with all sorts of special interests. But they exact a high price from the rest of us: billions of dollars and more than 225 million collective hours spent on tax preparation, money and time that could be invested in more productive activity.

Just as importantly, when the Tax Code is full of loopholes, businesses and families start making decisions on maximizing tax breaks, not on their economic common sense. Closing those loopholes in return for lower tax rates frees us all to make more economically sensible choices; in other words, fewer preferences, lower rates.

Closing those loopholes can also reduce the deficit. In the spending bill on the floor this week, total discretionary spending for fiscal year 2011 adds up to $1.1 trillion, an awful lot of money. How much do our tax expenditures cost? Coincidentally, $1.1 trillion. This chart reflects that reality: $1.077 trillion in expenditures, $1.068 trillion, almost exactly the same sum, in tax expenditures. How much do our tax expenditures cost for the same fiscal year? Just as much as we spend on non-security discretionary spending and security spending.

Clearly, tax expenditures must be part of the answer. The two commissions that are trying to focus on getting our deficit under control, making sure that we are economically viable into the next century and making sure that our children are not left in a deep economic hole, that they will have the resources necessary to take the challenges of their time and will not look at our generation as the generation of debt, said as much.

It must be part of the answer, tax expenditures, because if we attempt to solve our debt without addressing defense, entitlements, and revenues, we are fighting with one hand and four fingers behind our back.

HONORING THE WORK OF THE PIEDMONT WOMEN’S CENTER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. DUNCAN) for 5 minutes.

Mr. DUNCAN of South Carolina, Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor life and the work of a ministry that is literally saving lives in the State of South Carolina. But before I begin, let us pause to recognize our friends in Japan and the tragic loss of life there.

The Piedmont Women’s Center is a Christian ministry in the Upstate, providing love and compassion to literally thousands of young women each year who face unplanned pregnancies. By offering critical services, they have saved thousands of lives.

The Piedmont Women’s Center is a Christian ministry in the Upstate, providing love and compassion to literally thousands of young women each year who face unplanned pregnancies. By offering critical services, they have saved thousands of lives.

The doors of this life-affirming ministry opened 20 years ago this day next door to the largest abortion clinic in South Carolina. In 1991, a group of Christians came together and decided to collectively start a ministry funded by individuals, churches, and businesses to offer real alternatives to those in crisis.

The volunteers and volunteers of the Piedmont Women’s Center can hold newborn babies who have been given the gift of life because of their ministry. They have countless stories of real people, like Liza and her boyfriend, Peter, who came into their center early one Saturday morning with the intent of ending their pregnancy at the abortion clinic next door, a story that I would like to submit and share with you today.

Minutes before this young couple came through the door, the four volunteers at the center joined hands and prayed that God would do a work of redemption in someone’s life that morning. God answered our prayers, and Liza’s baby was born babies who have been given the gift of life because of their ministry.

At the center they shared with us a story that has been spoken about over and over again, one that vividly illustrates the work of our Piedmont Women’s Center.

Liza Neill said that she was adopted and Peter said his family had offered to help financially so they could continue their college education. They walked out of the center teary-eyed and full of joy, their shining countenance giving evidence to the change that had taken place in their hearts.

Lenna Fox Neill, the CEO for the Piedmont Women’s Center, said she is continually encouraged as she sees more and more in her community who are giving of their time, energy, and resources to see that all life is protected and respected.

Piedmont Women’s Center helped establish the South Carolina Association of Pregnancy Care Centers 10 years ago for the purpose of providing a network across the State of compassionate ministries to care for women in need. The abortion rate through collaborative efforts of the Center has reduced the rate of abortions in my home State of South Carolina almost 50 percent in the last 20 years.
While Congress is fighting to defund Planned Parenthood and protect life at conception, the staff and volunteers at the Piedmont Women’s Center are on the front lines every day literally saving lives.

I would like to congratulate the Piedmont Women’s Center and their CEO, Lenna Neill, on reaching their 20th anniversary. I thank them for their commitment to protecting the most innocent among us and wish them God’s blessing as they continue to spread their ministry across the Palmetto State.

May God bless you, the unborn, and may God continue to bless America.

STOPPING THE ASSAULT ON PUBLIC BROADCASTING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Madam Speaker, the Republican assault on public broadcasting continues. We are told that tomorrow we will be considering H.R. 1076, which really goes further than anything that we have considered to date. It would prohibit the purchase of any content for public broadcasting resources using Federal money.

Now, I think we are going to see in the course of the debate some unfortunate, and I hope unintended, consequences.

It is ironic that my Republican friends who came to Congress this time with a pledge of regular order, that everybody would have 72 hours to review legislation online, that we are going to have the committee process working in a robust fashion, have again decided to violate their own rules by rushing this to the floor without extensive committee work and without being available for Americans to review this legislation for 72 hours.

I don’t understand why, but I can guess that if they really want to try to pass this, they would be far better off rushing it, not having it carefully examined.

First and foremost, the whole point of public broadcasting is the development and broadcast of content that doesn’t have commercial value, that doesn’t inspire the networks, the channels, radio and television, to be able to sell advertising for this particular type of program.

You will search in vain reviewing the thousands of commercial radio and television stations, cable channels and networks, to find the type of educational programming that we rely on PBS for; for example, to supply to our children. There is no content for our children on the vast commercial sea of broadcasting that doesn’t come from people who are trying to sell something to our kids, not educate them.

You are at a time when news is shrinking in the commercial arena. Newspapers are getting thinner. Broadcast networks are withdrawing correspondence from overseas at precisely the time that the American public needs to know what is happening in the Middle East, in Japan. At precisely the time that commercial coverage is shrinking, public radio is actually expanded coverage and, in fact, at times devotes a lot of time and attention to boring news—boring news which often we find is some of the most important for us to understand.

This proposal would prohibit not just purchase of NPR, which is the target. Ironically, National Public Radio has a miniscule level of support from the Federal Government. Most of this money flows to provide content and programming to smaller stations in rural and small-town America, where they don’t have the financial base to be able to provide robust public broadcasting.

We’re always going to have public broadcasting stations in New York and San Francisco, Los Angeles. Even Portland, Oregon, a medium-size city, will have that resource. It will be diminished if we don’t have the program support, but it will be there. In rural Burns, Oregon, where it costs 11 times as much to send a signal, that’s where it’s going to be hit.

Now, denying the ability to purchase content doesn’t mean just NPR. It’s “Car Talk.” It’s “Prairie Home Companion.” And most significantly, in my mind, it is some of the special programs that have been developed for the Pacific Northwest. Again, no commercial station would do it because no advertiser will pay for it. But it serves a market for important news that people need to have about their communities. It’s not just in the Pacific Northwest. It’s in the Rocky Mountain States, in the Upper Midwest. In fact, some of these stations are the sole source of programming. And so by prohibiting the use of this resource, it’s going to cut them off.

Well, that’s unfortunate because public broadcasting is the most trusted name in American media. It’s why Republicans and Democrats alike don’t want it cut. In fact, some would even increase it. I hope my colleagues will listen to what the American public wants and reject this legislation.

GENERAL PETRAEUS AND “THE CHARLIE SHEEN COUNTERINSURGENCY STRATEGY”

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Madam Speaker, the American people are rapidly losing confidence in the Nation’s Afghanistan policy. Public opposition has reached an all-time high. According to the new ABC News/Washington Post poll, nearly two-thirds believe it was a mistake to send 64 percent, say this war isn’t worth fighting. I wonder if any of the programs that my Republican colleagues want to cut have sunk to that level of nonsupport. And yet this charade goes on.

The July drawdown, the date we should be leaving Afghanistan, is rapidly approaching; and there are precious few signs of preparations for a meaningful military turnover. In fact, top officials have been “walking back” the July 2011 commitment from almost the moment the President made it.

General Petraeus has returned to Capitol Hill this week to tell us the same things he’s told us before. During testimony he gave last year, he offered up this—I call it a doozy—describing the July deadline as “the point at which a process begins to transition security tasks to Afghan forces at a rate to be determined by conditions at the time.” With all due respect to the general, Madam Speaker, that’s an awful lot of weasel words.

His testimony in the Senate yesterday didn’t inspire much confidence either. He continues to offer the same bland and tone-deaf talking points—a lot of vague reassurances about progress we’ve supposedly made, while being sure to say that challenges remain. He can continue to wave a substantial troop presence. He’s over here on the House side today. I hope my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee will hold his feet to the fire, demanding the clarity and candor that the American people deserve.

With everyone hanging on General Petraeus’ every word, even though he is the symbol of a discredited and unpopular policy, I thought some of us should speak for the overwhelming majority opinion—for that 64 percent. So yesterday, the Congressional Progressive Caucus Peace and Security Task Force held a briefing with a fascinating group of panelists. We heard from Robert Pape, the suicide terrorism scholar, who posed an interesting question—if suicide bombings are the lung cancer of terrorism, then foreign occupation is the smoking habit, the lethal but preventable addiction that’s feeding the illness.

Matthew Hoh, the former marine captain and State Department official, noted that we’re laying off police officers here at home while building up a corrupt and ineffective police force in Afghanistan. And Rolling Stone contributing editor Michael Hastings, who recently broke the story about the Army using psyops propaganda on U.S. Senators, was also there; and he made this observation. He said General Petraeus is giving us “the Charlie Sheen counterinsurgency strategy,” which is to give exclusive interviews to every major network and keep saying you’re winning and hope the public actually agrees with you.”

Madam Speaker, it was a compelling briefing. I hope all of us in this 112th Congress will listen to people like Professor Pape, Mr. Hoh, and Mr. Hastings.

But, of most all, I hope we’ll listen to the American people, who are angry, disillusioned, and pleading with us to bring our troops home. They want us to do that so there will be no more deaths like Staff Sergeant Mark Wells, the young man from Congressman Poe's district.

HONORING DALE EVERETT CRANE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. QUAYLE) for 5 minutes.

Mr. QUAYLE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor a man who lived a life that epitomized the American Dream—a man who put his family and country first, yet never asked for anything in return. We here in Washington talk a lot about the American Dream. Unfortunately, we often talk about this dream in abstract terms. Yet, every day there are people across this great land who are living this dream without any recognition.

And for many of them, that's exactly how they like it. They don't want accolades or praise. They simply want to live a happy life and be surrounded by the people they love. They believe that building a strong family and serving their country is nothing special. They believe it's ordinary. Madam Speaker, that mindset and that belief is what makes these people extraordinary, and that is what made Dale Everett Crane extraordinary.

Dale Crane came from humble beginnings in southern California. After he graduated from high school, Dale briefly attended college until he found another calling. Instead of furthering his education, Dale joined the marines and went on to fight for our country in Vietnam. After being honorably discharged from his beloved corps, he met the love of his life, Shawn, and married her. Dale went on to be a successful small businessman. He scraped and he saved; but in the end, he built up one of those small businesses that make our country strong.

Although Dale built a tremendous small business, this was not his greatest accomplishment. In Dale's mind, his greatest accomplishment was his family. His marriage to Shawn and his four children were far and away the most important thing in his life. I don't know this because I read a story about Dale in a newspaper. I know this because I felt it firsthand. Dale Crane was my father-in-law. The love he knew for his family knew no bounds—and if we all embraced this love of family and country, we would be in a better place.

Madam Speaker, on February 19 of this year, Dale Crane's family and friends mourned his death. But more importantly, we celebrated his life. We will never forget the sacrifices he made for his family and his country.

REPUBLICANS RESCHEDULE DEBATE ON HOME AFFORDABLE MODIFICATION PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT) for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Madam Speaker, I am here to report that the Republican follies continue today.

Today, we were scheduled to debate the Republicans' proposal to terminate the President's foreclosure prevention program called HAMP. But late last night, the Republican leadership decided to postpone debate until after returning from the recess.

As the country faces a number of problems, including a serious housing crisis, the House Republican leadership decided that today wasn't the best time to terminate a program that has helped more than half a million homeowners stay in their homes.

See, tomorrow, the House will close up shop until March 28, and Republicans recognize that killing a foreclosure prevention program today would be bad politics. It would force Republican Members to go home and defend this feeble move for 10 straight days—to defend ending a foreclosure prevention program face to face with the people they represent, many of whom are struggling right now to keep their mortgage and keep their home. But, after the 10-day recess, when House Republicans come back out of the sight of their constituents, they'll move forward with their plans to end the home loan modification program.

This kind of leadership is disgraceful. American homeowners are struggling. Nearly 7 million homeowners are facing foreclosure in this country. One in every four homes is now owned by people who owe more than the house is worth. Nearly half a million homeowners have been able to stay in their homes because of the Affordable Modification Program, or HAMP. Ending that program will undoubtedly kick families out of their homes. That's something the Republicans realized they didn't want to do before a 10-day recess.

I'll be the first to admit the Affordable Modification Program is not perfect. So let's fix it or replace it with something better. However, I have yet to see a legitimate alternative from House Republicans. They just want to cut, cut, cut. Cutting deficits is important, but the Republicans' policies and scheduling gimmicks indicate that they don't really care about the American people.

Every Republican Member should watch the "60 Minutes" special, entitled, "Hard Times Generation." It aired two Sundays ago, on March 6. The special focused on families that were homeowners in the middle class before the 2007 recession started. Now hundreds of thousands of those American people are homeless and hungry for the first time in their lives.

Is this the America that Republicans want our children to grow up in? Are Republicans really comfortable killing a program that has prevented 500,000 people from moving out of their house and living in their car? Clearly, my Republican colleagues need a wake-up call today, and I am here to help. Watch that "60 Minutes" special.

I've made it easier for you to watch the "60 Minutes" segment. All you have to do is go to my Web site, mcdermott.house.gov, then click on the very first slide in the slideshow that says, "60 Minutes Special: Poverty In America." If you see that, click on it and you can watch what's going on.

And when my colleagues, Madam Speaker, are back in their districts over the 10-day recess after they've watched this, then they should meet with some of these people and see what their thoughts are about ending the program and doing nothing to help American families. If they still believe that they should simply do away with the modification program, my belief is they have forgotten why they were elected and who they represent.

The housing program that we will debate after the 10-day recess has saved the homes of over half a million people, or 500,000 families. It's far from perfect, but we need to focus on improving it or replacing it with something better, not just killing it.

How many more kids have to take their morning bath in the Walmart bathroom or the Exxon gasoline bathroom before we begin to help the homeowners who were caught in the debacle from Wall Street from which not one person has gone to prison or served one single day?

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until noon today.

Accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 36 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until noon.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at noon.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:
Come and help us, Lord our God. Those wounded returning from war are not afraid to submit themselves to physicians. In this humility, they live patience and offer You alone the glory. By their being faithful to the course outlined for them, they learn that it takes many small steps to make full recovery.

In the same light, O Lord, grant this Nation patience. Give this representative government wise discernment and courageous action to excise whatever poisons the whole system while preserving each healthy member.

As we pray today, we ask You, Divine Physician, to bless, sustain and reward the Navy medical team that cares for Members, staff and guests here on Capitol Hill. With them, may we give full measure as we serve in Your holy name.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance?

Mr. PITTS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to 15 requests for 1-minute speeches on each side.

RECOGNIZING DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES AWARENESS MONTH

(Mr. MCKINLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MCKINLEY. Mr. Speaker, in 1987, President Ronald Reagan officially declared March as Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month. He called upon our Nation to provide understanding, encouragement and opportunities to help persons with developmental disabilities lead productive and fulfilling lives. There are currently over 7 million Americans who experience developmental disabilities. Disabilities have no boundaries. They cut across the lines of racial, ethnic, educational, social and economic backgrounds and can occur in any family.

As an individual with significant hearing disability and a grandfather of a child with special needs, I am very familiar with the hardships of overcoming the obstacles of disabilities. My grandson, Maxwell, has CHARGE syndrome and deals with intensive developmental and medical challenges every day of his life. He is a true inspiration to our family and our community.

During Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month, I encourage us all to learn more about the people in our community who have developmental disabilities and to recognize that all of us have talents and abilities that we can offer to make this a better Nation.

REPUBLICANS PUSH SPENDING CUTS THAT DESTROY JOBS

(Ms. BASS of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. BASS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the majority’s spending plan that would cost jobs and threaten our economic recovery. Republicans have held the majority for 11 weeks now, and we have yet to see a jobs plan. Instead of focusing on jobs, which is the number one priority of Americans, the majority is pushing spending cuts that destroy thousands of jobs.

Mr. Speaker, the majority is ignoring the warnings from economists that the sharp cuts they propose would guarantee major job losses in the public and private sectors. The Economic Policy Institute shows that the majority’s plan would destroy more than 800,000 jobs. Mark Zandi, JOHN McCAIN’S former economic adviser, puts the job loss figure at 700,000. No matter who is right, the number is far too high.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues on the other side of the aisle don’t particularly like public employees, but we do need to ask just who are these public employees. Just one example is the staff at the tsunami warning center. Under the majority’s plan, the National Weather Service, the agency that houses the tsunami center that issued alerts after Friday’s earthquake—and there was significant damage in California after the tsunami—would be cut by $126 million. These cuts would result in furloughs and office closures affecting the center’s ability to issue future warnings.

The type of cuts proposed by the majority does not create jobs; it destroys them. I urge the majority to work with us on a responsible spending plan that drives economic growth and job creation.

GAS PRICES

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, where do we get the gasoline to power our cars and jet fuel to power our airplanes? We all know that it comes from oil and that its price is dictated by supply and demand.

President Obama realizes this. In fact, his advisers have considered opening up the Strategic Petroleum Reserve in order to stabilize supply. But if we are willing to open up this emergency supply, then why are we not taking advantage of the natural reserves that we have throughout our Nation?

Following BP’s careless accident in the gulf, six deepwater drilling rigs left for foreign shores, some even moving to Egypt. Deepwater drilling will continue, but off foreign shores. America would continue to need oil and it will increasingly come from foreign nations. Rather than reducing our dependence on foreign fossil fuels, the actions of this administration are increasing them.

With instability in the Middle East, our gas prices naturally rise. Let’s open our natural reserves off our shores and throughout our country. Let’s create energy jobs here and stabilize the price of gasoline in the United States.

COMMEMORATING ST. JOSEPH’S DAY

(Mr. CICILLINE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and recognize the rich history of the Italian American community in the United States as we celebrate the Feast of St. Joseph—La Festa Di San Giuseppe—on March 19. St. Joseph was credited with preventing a famine in Sicily in the Middle Ages, and the Feast of St. Joseph is celebrated widely among Italian Americans—including my family and many others across my home State of Rhode Island—and is an opportunity to recall the many contributions of Italian Americans to our country and to honor the patron saint of the family.

Here in the United States, we recognize the powerful impact of the Italian American experience, which began five centuries ago with the explorations of Vespucci and Verrazano. Italian Americans represent some of this country’s, and indeed the world’s, foremost innovators—in health and science, business and industry, politics and government, arts and culture.

In celebrating the many milestones of the Italian American heritage on this Feast of St. Joseph, we honor the lives, work, and rich history of Italian Americans throughout our Nation.

Buona Festa Di San Giuseppe, Happy St. Joseph’s Day, to everyone.

HONORING WES LEONARD AND THE FENNVILLE BLACKHAWKS BASKETBALL TEAM

(Mr. HUIZENGA of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUIZENGA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a young man named Wes Leonard in Michigan, the Fennville Blackhaws, and the community that rallied around that family.

Wes was a star basketball player who, after winning a basketball game with the final shot of the game on March 3, collapsed and passed away a short while later. That was an undefeated season for the Blackhaws, and they went on 3 days later to start their first playoff game. They won four additional games.

At the visitation for Wes’s family, I was struck by the rival teams that showed up in their letter jackets to come and honor and pay respects to Wes, his family, and the team that he led. This team played admirably throughout all of their final games. On Monday, this run came to an end. But a true mark of character, as I said to these young players, is how they respond to adversity. These young men truly are of character.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that we rise today and honor Wes, the team, and the fans that supported them and that they accept condolences on my behalf and the behalf of so many others who have asked to be wearing this ribbon, to pass those condolences along to the community and to his family.

We thank Wes for his leadership and all that he has done for his community.

DEVASTATING EARTHQUAKE AND TSUNAMI IN NORTHERN JAPAN

(Ms. HIRONO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. HIRONO. Mr. Speaker, I grew up in Fukushima, Japan, where earthquake preparedness is part of life, but nothing could have prepared any nation for the natural disasters that occurred on Friday.

While my mother has successfully contacted our relatives in Japan, many families haven’t been able to find or contact their loved ones. Thousands of victims are in shelters. Many are still missing. The death toll continues to rise.

“Tsunami” is a Japanese word that the world understands. We have seen the 30-foot walls of water sweeping across farmlands, wiping out everything in its path.

“Gaman” is a Japanese word that describes strength and endurance. Gaman will help the Japanese people through this tragedy, but they do not stand alone. People from all over the world have sent messages of support, and donations continue. In the midst of tragedy, common humanity transcends geopolitical boundaries.

Hawaii’s ties to Japan are deep. Hawai’i’s banks are donation dropoff points. The Hawaii blood bank is coordinating a national drive. Fukushima and Miyagi Kenjin Kai and the Honolulu Japanese Chamber of Commerce are among many helping.

This tragedy reminds us of humanity transcends boundaries.

NO JOBS PLAN AND ASSAULT ON MIDDLE CLASS HOMEOWNERS

(Mr. SIRES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SIRES. Mr. Speaker, the Republicans have had control of this Chamber for 11 weeks now, and yet there’s still no plan or spur our economic recovery. Instead of tackling unemployment, my Republican colleagues are again targeting vital programs designed to keep families in their homes.

The Republicans are proposing to terminate the Home Affordable Modification Program, which provides critical mortgage modifications to deserving homeowners who are facing devastating foreclosures. To date, more than 600,000 homeowners have received a permanent mortgage modification, and tens of thousands of Americans are joining their ranks each month.

The Republicans also want to eliminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, which works to stabilize areas hard-hit by the housing crisis by helping States and cities purchase foreclosed homes and protect the value of our communities. My home State of New Jersey is slated to receive $11.5 million through this program.

Mr. Speaker, this is funding that my constituents need to help redevelop our communities, create jobs, and grow our local economies. I urge my colleagues to stop blindly cutting programs and focus on legislation to create jobs and bring the economy around.

NO MORE SHORT-TERM CONTINUING RESOLUTIONS

(Mrs. CHRISTENSEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

THE REPUBLICAN BUDGET

(Mr. MORAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, the Republicans’ budget would endanger American lives while it destroys American jobs. It will increase every American’s likelihood of getting sick from unsafe meat and poultry, contaminated drinking water, and foreign food additives. Fewer police will make our streets less safe. The chances of curing cancer, Parkinson’s, and Alzheimer’s disease are all seriously diminished. Most of the cuts target poor people, but the hundreds of program cuts will also endanger all of our lives.

We’ve thrown hundreds of programs into a dump truck Republicans call H.R. 1 bound for the trash compactor. Let’s reach in, though, and look at just one of those: meat inspection. The law requires a Federal inspector to be present at all 6,000 slaughterhouses and packing plants across the country, but this Republican budget’s 19 percent cut will require 8,600 such inspectors to be furloughed for 22 days, which means that packing plants like Hormel’s may have to lay off thousands of people for that period of time.

Mr. Speaker, this is the time when Federal inspectors stopped 9.5 million pounds of poisoned meat just last year alone in 71 recalls. Let’s derail this dump truck called H.R. 1.

GET AMERICA WORKING AGAIN

(Mr. WALZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)
Mr. WALZ. Mr. Speaker, we've all been here since January, dutifully collecting paychecks, and no budget for the American public, creating uncertainties in the businesses and keeping job growth stagnant. It's strangling our national security forces and making difficult choices for our Reserve commanders to plan ahead. It's putting political ideology above job creation and facts.

My Republican colleague friends have often told me what they thought last November's election meant and what the American people were saying. I will tell you what they weren't saying: We want you to go to Washington and put party above what's good for America; we want you to play chicken with America's economic future; we want you to protect millionaire CEO's and then blame the middle class and make sure you cut programs to their children; we want you to hold countless hearings on issues that do nothing except divide America and won't create a single job; oh, yeah, and we want you to point fingers at the other side and blame them, even though you run the House.

Here's what I think they might have been saying: Be leaders, compromise for the good of the country, and get America working again.

PROVIDE HOMEOWNERS TIME

(Mr. CLARKE of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CLARKE of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, our homeowners need help right now, and I'm asking this Congress to provide homeowners with something they don't have when they're facing foreclosure. It's time—time to find more income, time to find another buyer to pay off the mortgage, and most importantly, time to leverage with their lender and mortgage holder, who typically keeps losing the paperwork until the homeowner runs out of time.

So I'm asking this Congress to freeze all foreclosures for homeowners who deserve it, for homeowners who can afford to maintain their property, because that's the best way to stabilize our economy and to save family homes.

NATIONAL SECURITY FORCES

(Ms. EDWARDS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today because I am really concerned about the continuing resolution. We passed an update with over $1 billion in cuts to one of the most important Federal agencies, NOAA. That's right, our weather and natural disaster folks.

When some people think of NOAA, they think of an agency that only impacts the coastal States, so cuts to this agency wouldn't impact them or their families. But it's important to know that every time we get the day's weather so we can prepare and make sure we are ready, we are investing in technology. Every time we get alerts about tornadoes or earthquakes, it's NOAA's technology.

In the wake of the tsunami that devastated Japan, the House yesterday passed a measure that would hamstring our ability to detect tsunamis. Currently, seven of the 39 Deep-ocean Assessment and Reporting of Tsunamis, DART, stations are non-operational due to broken moorings and equipment failures. And the cuts that we made yesterday put us in jeopardy—that's right—in the Pacific Ocean, in the Atlantic, and in the gulf. We are all in jeopardy because of those cuts yesterday, and NOAA won't have an opportunity to repair them and to restore them, degrading the quality of our warnings.

Mr. Speaker, this is senseless, and it's time for the American people to speak up against this senseless policy.

THE REPUBLICAN WAR ON THE MIDDLE CLASS

(Ms. CLARKE of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. CLARKE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to the majority's aggressive war on the middle class and those who aspire to be in the middle class. Today we're debating two bills that, if passed, will leave millions of Americans who are struggling to make ends meet in the hole. Why are you cutting 800,000 jobs? Why are you cutting 16,000 law enforcement jobs? Why are you cutting 800 Border Patrol jobs? This is the wrong direction to go. We need a real budget. We need real leadership. Adults need to come to the table and work together and solve this budget crisis.

HAPPY 1007TH BIRTHDAY TO WESTMINSTER, COLORADO

(Mr. POLIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the 100th birthday of the city of Westminster, Colorado, one of the Colorado Front Range urban corridor's principal cities. Westminster is framed by the natural beauty of the nearby Rocky Mountains. Westminster's scenic and convenient setting is located between the economic hubs of Denver and Boulder, which has attracted many residents and businesses to the city. Settlers from the East first came to the area of Westminster in the 1870s. It used to be known as the Village of Harris and was formally founded as the town of Westminster on April 4, 1911.

Westminster is notable in the Front Range urban area for its long-term commitment to the preservation of open spaces. It has received numerous national rewards and recognition for sustainable development, technology integration, and high-quality of life. The miles of trails provide public access for outdoor recreational activities that are so important to Colorado residents. I congratulate the people of Westminster on 100 years of progress and prosperity and look eagerly forward to what the future holds for this forward-looking Colorado city.
Mr. HINCHLEY. The House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 839) to amend the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 to terminate the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to provide new assistance under the Home Affordable Modification Program for assistance to homeowners who were already extended an offer to participate in the Program, either on a trial or permanent basis. The first reading of the bill yielded for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. HINCHLEY. We have now gone 11 weeks and still there hasn't been any action in committee or on this House floor on anything resembling a jobs plan from our friends here in the minority. In fact, we've seen just the opposite. Economists are estimating that from the initial action here, an estimated 800,000 jobs will be lost under their first plan and many more over the course of the next year. Hundreds of New York Head Start teachers will be fired, and thousands more teachers will be fired all across America. Thousands of my constituents won't be able to find jobs because of cuts to the Workforce Investment Act that will close job centers throughout New York, as well as thousands of others that will be closed in other States all across America. And jobs in the Hudson Valley's growing solar energy industry will be hurt by cuts to investments in renewable energy. Just as it will be cut all across America. After 11 weeks, it's clear that the Republicans don't just have a no-jobs agenda, they have an anti-jobs agenda. And New Yorkers and millions of others across America will pay the price for their bad policies.

MAKING IN ORDER CONSIDERATION OF H. CON. RES. 28, AFGHANISTAN WAR POWERS RESOLUTION

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time to consider House Concurrent Resolution 28 in the House, if called up by the chair of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, that the concurrent resolution be considered as read; that the concurrent resolution be considered as read; that the previous question be considered as ordered on the concurrent resolution to final adoption without intervening motion except one motion to adjourn; 1 hour of debate controlled by Representative KUCINICH of Ohio or his designee; and, number two, 1 hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs; and that section 7 of the War Powers Resolution not apply to the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. YODER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? There was no objection.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 839, HAMP TERMINATION ACT OF 2011, AND PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 861, NSP TERMINATION ACT

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 170 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 170
Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House to be in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 839) to amend the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 to terminate the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to provide new assistance under the Home Affordable Modification Program for assistance to homeowners who were already extended an offer to participate in the Program, either on a trial or permanent basis. The first reading of the bill yielded for the purpose of debate only. All points of order against consideration of the bill are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Financial Services. After general debate the bill shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to adjourn; and, number two, 1 hour of debate equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on Financial Services; and that section 7 of the War Powers Resolution not apply to the concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only. I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. POLIS), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time is yielded for the purpose of debate only.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? There was no objection.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 170 provides for a structured rule designed and designated by the Rules Committee for consideration of H.R. 861 and H.R. 839. This rule allows the amendments submitted to the Rules Committee to be made in order as they were not subject to a point of order and were germane to the underlying text of H.R. 861 and H.R. 839.

This rule provides for debate and amendment opportunities for members of the minority and the majority to change the legislative text of the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this rule and the two underlying bills. The first piece of legislation, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act, was introduced by my friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY MILLER) on March 1, 2011, and went through committee
The Washington Times, which is a great newspaper here in Washington, published an article on this program on March 1 of this year. It stated that in, perhaps, hundreds of thousands of cases, homeowners are far worse off after HAMP than they were before being talked into and getting involved with the program. Borrowers are typically not told all the potential consequences of falling behind on their mortgage. They’re told that there’s a government plan out there to help you when, in fact, they do fall behind on their mortgages.

Services have repeatedly lost documentation and have provided false information to homeowners who were in need of assistance and good discussion about how to pay their bills—instead, trying to talk them into participating in a government program and, in some instances, even pushing individuals into default, individuals who could have continued making their payments.

In a report from the Inspector General of TARP to Secretary of the Treasury Geithner on March 25, 2010—that is 1 year ago—he notes: "Several aspects of the HAMP design make it particularly vulnerable to redefaults."

It is time to pull the plug. That is why Republicans are on the floor today to say straight up: We need to look at what is not working. We need to look at the $29 billion that has been spent on this program, and we need to be honest with ourselves, as has been noted in newspapers across the country, as to what the Democrats have done. What this administration and this House have done has been adversarial in helping people who needed assistance. Today, we can save the taxpayers $28 billion that has not been spent on this program.

I believe government intervention and the questionable use of taxpayer dollars only prolong our current economic crisis and ensure that the housing market will simply continue to struggle. The market needs to find its own footing free of government intervention and manipulation by this government so that we can get on with a full recovery. The deficit is expected to reach a record under President Obama: using his numbers, $1.65 trillion this year, while our national debt is well over $10 trillion. The U.S. and its citizens cannot afford to spend billions of taxpayer dollars that will not be repaid, and it ends up, in many instances, harming the people it was intended to help. Job creation is the most effective foreclosure prevention tool. Job losses rather than unsustainable mortgage terms are now the driving force behind foreclosures and mortgage defaults. Eliminating programs will not only save taxpayer dollars; it will encourage more responsible government spending by the Federal Government.

So, Mr. Speaker, as no surprise to you, I encourage a ‘yes’ vote on the rule and a ‘yes’ vote on the underlying legislation.

Mr. POLIS, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Here we are again. At a time when Americans are calling for more jobs to improve the economy, my Republican colleagues want to pass legislation that won’t create a single job and that will hurt the middle class by further destabilizing our housing markets and abandoning families who are working hard, struggling to stay in their homes, both of which show that my friends on the other side continue to put partisan politics ahead of creating jobs and growing the economy.

Yesterday, in the Rules Committee, when we had several Members there from both sides who were testifying, the question was asked: Are we in a housing crisis? Everybody there agreed—and I think most of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle and on my side of the aisle agreed as well—that we are in a housing crisis. So the answer is: What is and what should be the response?

Now, this response is what we have. My colleague from Dallas said that the current program, HAMP, lacks accountability. Well, it seems like the logical answer to that would be to create accountability for the program, not to eliminate the program. We are talking about repeal without replace. We are talking about ending rather than mending. If there is truly a housing crisis, as I believe Members across both sides of the aisle agree there is, it calls for a public policy response. Rather than talking about what we shouldn’t do, I think it would be more constructive to talk about what we should do.

We are working in this Congress to address this crisis. If this proposed repeal moves forward. At a time when our economy is finally beginning to show signs of strong, sustained growth, we need to do everything we can to put people back to work and create jobs. Instead, here we have legislation after legislation that will increase burdens on already struggling middle class families. Rather than improving and building upon or even replacing programs that keep families in their homes, the Republican colleagues want to eliminate four programs that keep families in their homes, and they have no plan to strengthen the housing market or to help the families who will, quite literally, be left on the street as a result.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 899 will eliminate one of the last lifelines available to many homeowners. According to Treasury Secretary Geithner, ending the HAMP program would cause a huge amount of damage to a very fragile housing market and would leave hundreds and hundreds of thousands, if not millions of Americans, without the chance to take advantage of mortgage modifications that would allow them to stay in homes that they can afford.

Now, we could go into how we got into this mess in the first place, and we all know, Mr. Speaker, that there is plenty of blame to go around. Yes, people who got in over their heads with mortgages they couldn’t afford deserve some of the blame. So do the brokers who shouldn’t have sold them on those mortgages. So do the banks that underwrote those mortgages. So does Wall Street for packaging those mortgages and creating derivative products—and yes, so does the government for being asleep at the regulatory switch. There is plenty of blame to go around.

When the bankers needed help, they came to the government, and the government helped them. When the regulators needed help, they came to the government, and we passed financial regulatory reform last year. Well, the people who are most affected, the people who literally had their heads tossed out on the street, rely on these programs to help them. How do well in good conscience can this Congress even consider bailing out Wall Street and bankers and not help mainstream America stay in their homes?

Yes, there is plenty of blame to go around. Believe me, many of these people facing this situation, who are barely able to make their mortgages, are not the ones who should have sold them on those mortgages. They would much rather spend half as much on homes and not be half as much in debt as they are today. Yet the least we can do as a country to help them is to acknowledge that, yes, personal responsibility and blame don’t just fall on their shoulders.

My Republican colleagues will argue that this is a failed government program. But what we are talking about today is to eliminate the tool that has kept one-half million American families in their homes, Mr. Speaker.

There is no doubt that many folks on the other side of the aisle are also calling for this program to be repealed to save taxpayer money. According to the CBO, the average cost per assisted homeowner in HAMP is $13,000. Now, that is a small price and actually a sound investment. It is far smaller than the $60,000 that it would cost to keep a Family, Fannie, and large banks to foreclose on a home. So $13,000 to prevent the banks from foreclosing on a home, keeping that family in a home, allowing them to go to work and make their payments and pay back what is due; or, $60,000 to foreclose on that home and leave that family on the streets. The money for this program is well spent.

If an individual shows they can’t stay current on their programs, they are removed from HAMP at no cost to taxpayers. In fact, of the homeowners that have had their trial modifications cancelled through the end of 2010, only 5.1 percent have been foreclosed on, and only 14.9 percent are at all in the foreclosure process.

Mr. Speaker, the program keeps families in their homes. Mortgages that have been modified under HAMP have a sustainability rate of 85 percent. Yes, we can do better. Yes, we would love to work with our help to keep 3 million to 4 million families in their home and stabilize housing prices. But what the bill before us does is repeal one of the only tools we have to help keep American families in their homes.

I understand the program hasn’t reached the initial projections that the Obama administration put forward. But there is no question, talking to some of the families that this program has benefited, that it does work for those who need our help. And the Treasury can continue to take steps to improve the effectiveness of this program and increase compliance from banks and borrowers.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 861 would rightly be titled the “Illegal Trade Commercial Real Estate Act.” The majority seeks to undermine the efforts of our Nation’s mayors, city councils, and real estate developers and ensure that areas which have suffered due to economic downturn remain safely in control of those who do damage to communities. This is a critical program to help reform our communities.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program, which I remind my colleagues was established and signed into law by President Bush, was designed to turn a crisis into an opportunity. In 2008, almost $4 billion was appropriated and helped 307 State and local agencies acquire, rehabilitate, and sell abandoned and foreclosed properties, exactly what we are trying to eliminate. It would have revitalized our blighted areas but to help prevent the housing crisis and commercial real estate crisis from getting worse. I remind my colleagues that every dime of this program that is not spent by the sunset of this program will already, under statute, be returned to the Treasury.

By creating a mechanism for communities to aggressively stabilize, and sell back to the private market abandoned and blighted properties, we give local governments a very powerful tool for economic growth and fighting crime and keeping our communities safe.

In our ongoing liquidity crisis, where many developers are having a tough time finding financing for many of their prime projects, it is a matter of public safety and critical economic importance that we continue this vehicle by which blighted properties are returned to being productive economic engines, particularly in our Nation’s most troubled neighborhoods.

I also want to point out that this program isn’t limited to commercial property. In my district in Adams County, Colorado, and other areas of the country was devastated by the wave of foreclosures, we have used this program to revitalize residential neighborhoods. The Neighborhood Stabilization Program allows local governments to build communities with home rehabilitation, down payment and closing cost assistance for low- and middle-income families. By using these Federal dollars to leverage local efforts, many struggling families have been able to find and keep a home, and a modest Federal investment has been magnified severalfold by private investment, city investment, and county investment.

Mr. Speaker, I think most people in this country agree, yes, there is a housing crisis and, yes, there is plenty of blame to go around and, yes, we need a public policy response. These programs aren’t perfect. We hope to work in a bipartisan way with our colleagues across the aisle on improving these programs and to get up with new market-oriented programs to help end the crisis in real estate. But the answer is not to simply repeal one of the only instruments that we have to keep families in their homes with only the vaguest of assurances that someday, somehow Congress might think up a better plan. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Sessions. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman’s comments about our being here today on the floor in a bipartisan way with a bill that went through regular order with an opportunity for any Member that would choose that has any ideas that are germane to the issue and that fall within the rules to be included. And you are going to see where there are a bunch of amendments to this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the conversation that the gentleman and I were having should further extend, and that is the common sense that is related to why we are on the floor today, the discussion on how we should make it better or simply repeal it. And I would quote from the IG of the TARP fund in his report to Secretary Geithner:

Although in the final analysis it is up to the policymakers in the administration and the Congress to determine whether it is worth spending tens of billions of taxpayer dollars on a program that is assumed at its outset to fail ultimately for 40 percent of the participants of HAMP’s design make it particularly vulnerable to redefaults.”

I think the IG has said it best. When any objective person looked at what the Democrat Congress passed, they concluded it was a failed program worth spending tens of billions of dollars on a program at the outset we should have known would fail for 40 percent of the participants. I think that is good reason to say, common sense should say, let’s stop the plan, not continue it.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield 4 minutes to the chairwoman of the Financial Services Committee, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. Biggert).

Mrs. Biggert. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I do rise in support of House Resolution 170, the rule for consideration of H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, NSF, Termination Act of 2011, the Home Affordable Program (HAMP) Termination Act. H.R. 861 would end NSF and rescind 1 billion taxpayer dollars that would otherwise be spent to continue this troubled program.

In total, Congress has already spent $7 billion for NSF. And instead of stabilizing neighborhoods or helping people whose mortgages are underwater, the program allows lenders and servicers to offload their bad investments onto taxpayers and delay market recovery. Even more disturbing is that critics warn that NSF creates incentives for banks and other lenders to foreclose on troubled borrowers, worsening the crisis and kicking families out of their homes.

This program is not about helping homeowners. They have already lost their house to foreclosure. They are not involved in this. This is help for lenders and banks that want to make and build more homes through the counties, through the States, through not-for-profits, and then to sell these homes and reap the benefits of the money. There is no place in this bill to tell us where that money goes. It probably is a private fund.

The GAO, the inspector general for HUD, and other auditors have noted the program is plagued with problems, including lax reporting requirements and poor accountability. There is little evidence to suggest that the funds spent through NSF are producing cost-effective results.

Finally, the program lacks any requirement that remaining NSF funds are returned to taxpayers when a sponsored property is sold. Instead, the money treated like a post-NSP fund, somewhere, never to be returned.

The other bill approved by our committee is H.R. 839. This bill would terminate HAMP, which has become the poster child for failed foreclosure mitigation programs. According to the CBO, this bill would save $1.4 billion over 10 years.

Announced by the Obama administration in February of 2009, the HAMP program is expected to cost $82 billion out of the $30 billion in TARP funds that were set aside for the program. For this extraordinary investment, the administration predicted that up to 4 million homeowners would receive help. Only 240,000 homeowners have received mortgage modifications.

Sadly, a failure to meet expectations is the least of the program’s troubles. Of those who were promised help, 740,000 homeowners have had their modifications cancelled. In many cases, these homeowners werestrung along on a false hope, only to end up in worse financial straits than if they had never heard of HAMP.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to share a statement from a March 2 subcommittee hearing during which Neil Barofsky, the Special Inspector General for the Troubled Asset Relief Program, or SIGTARP, exposed the most hazardous failings of the program. He said that there had been countless published reports on HAMP participants who wound up worse off, having engaged in a false attempt. Failed modifications often leave borrowers with more principal outstanding on their loans.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. Sessions. I would like to yield the gentleman an additional minute.

Mrs. Biggert. Numerous oversight bodies, including the GAO, have cited the Treasury for failing to respond to recommendations to increase the transparency, accountability, and consistency of the program. Americans for Tax Reform called the program “a costly failure.”

Out-of-control spending has left us with a $14.1 trillion national debt that is damaging our recovery and harming job growth. Economists agree that reducing government spending will create a more favorable environment for private sector jobs; and that is what Americans need, a job and a paycheck, not more failed experiments and taxpayer-funded housing.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule.

Mr. Polis. It is my honor to yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Ms. Edwards).

Ms. Edwards. I thank the gentlewoman from Colorado.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today really troubled because I am opposed to terminating the HAMP program and the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. But I am troubled because these programs have actually been very troubled. A lot of money is fun. They haven’t helped every homeowner that we want, but we shouldn’t be in a position of just destroying the programs.
The Neighborhood Stabilization Program in particular was established to help communities acquire, rehabilitate, and resell abandoned and foreclosed properties as a result of the growing foreclosure crisis. There are so many economists across this country who tell us every single day that until we get the housing market straight, we will not get this economy straight. So I believe in theory in these programs.

Declining home values in my community and the led to lower tax revenues for our local jurisdictions that are already suffering from the impacts of the economic downturn. The statewide foreclosure crisis has hit particularly hard in my district and the counties that I represent, in Caroline, George's and Montgomery Counties, in Maryland. They have the first and third highest number of foreclosures in our State and account for 40 percent of the foreclosure state-wide.

Through the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, Montgomery County received $2 million and Prince George's County nearly $12 million in funding. This has helped in these communities. I would urge the majority to look at the benefits, and let's try to fix the programs.

At the beginning of this crisis, sure, there were bad loans. There were bad actors all over the place. But we also know that people have lost their jobs and that has contributed to foreclosures, and these families should not be punished because we can't seem to get it straight. Neighborhood stabilization does stabilize communities. It doesn't do any good to have homes that are empty and in decline and neighborhoods that will never bring the market back.

So while I am concerned about some of these programs and would like to work to try to fix these, it is not right for us to simply throw them out and minimize the impact of helping 321,000 families to stay in their homes.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Cherryville, North Carolina (Mr. McHENRY), the author of one of the pieces of underlying legislation.

Mr. McHENRY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the bill that I am sponsoring is the HAMP Termination Act, and it is a bill that will protect at-risk homeowners across the country from a government program that has proven to be an abysmal failure.

The Home Affordable Modification Program, or HAMP, was originally supposed to help as many as 3 million to 4 million struggling homeowners avoid foreclosure by modifying loans to a level that is affordable to borrowers now and sustainable over the long term. That was the intention. However, nearly 800,000 of the 1.4 million homeowners who enrolled in this program have subsequently been rejected or terminated.

In his most recent testimony to Congress, the Special Inspector General for TARP, Neil Barofsky, stated: "It is just not working. The Home Affordable Modification Program has to date been a failure." "A failure," in the words of the independent individual to oversee this program. A failure.

Now, there is no doubt that people of good will put this program in place. There is no doubt about that. The intention was to help those that are facing foreclosure. That was the intention.

Unfortunately, the design of this program has harmed more people than it was designed to help because it strings them along with a so-called verbally modified change to their payments, and so it drains their savings. At the end of the day, the majority of the people enrolled in this program are kicked out, and they are left not only with their savings depleted, which is bad enough that a government program strings people along for that, but it also ruins their credit rating, because this government program only verbally modifies their loan terms.

In the end, you have folks that have depleted their savings, ruined their credit, and lost their homes. And this is a Federal Government program paid for by the American people's tax dollars. It is an abject failure. Worse than that, it is destroying people's lives.

I would ask my colleagues to vote for this rule. It allows for a number of amendments, some of which are wise, others that I think are very flawed from my colleagues along the aisle.

But this HAMP program, we have to come to a consensus on it. All the folks that oversee this, nonpartisan, bipartisan, have all looked at this and described it as a failure.

So if we can't eliminate this government program, then I ask my colleagues, What government programs are we going to change for the better; and, please, I ask my colleagues to vote for the HAMP Termination Act as well.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CLARKE).

Mr. CLARKE of Michigan. You are right, it is all about debt. Debt. Our homeowners, they are very concerned about debt. It may not be the Federal debt that their grandchildren may have to pay decades from now, but it is definitely the taxes that is due next month. That is the debt that our homeowners cannot afford to pay.

So here is what I am asking this Congress to do: hold off on cutting back on these foreclosure initiatives before we directly help our homeowners. And we can help them in a way that won't cost much more money.

As a matter of fact, let's give homeowners something that they typically don't have when they are facing foreclosure, and that is time. Time. Time to find a new buyer to pay off their mortgage; time to get more income to pay off their bills; and, most importantly, the time and the leverage to voluntarily negotiate with a mortgage servicer that typically will keep losing their loan modification papers until the homeowner runs out of time. Time.

I am asking this Congress to first do this: freeze all foreclosures to those homeowners who deserve the help and who are already facing a loss in their homes and maintain their homes. That is the best way to stop our property values from dropping, from providing the revenue that our police officers and firefighters and emergency medical providers, that defines locally, that is the best way to help save family homes, by providing time to our homeowners.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from Hawaii (Ms. HIRONO).

Ms. HIRONO. I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act, NSP.

We keep hearing from the other side about wasteful government spending. Nothing represents wasteful government spending more than the continuing billions and billions of dollars of taxpayer money that we give to Big Oil, which is making record profits. This continues the Republican assault on the middle class and the working people.

For the sake of our communities, we cannot afford to terminate NSP. By redeveloping foreclosed and abandoned properties, this program is stabilizing neighborhoods nationwide. This not only increases property values but also reduces the number of foreclosures. NSP provides a lifeline to struggling families who are trying to secure affordable housing or simply stay in their homes.

Like the rest of the country, Hawaii has a foreclosure crisis. We rank 10th in the Nation in the rate of foreclosures. The $19.6 million in NSP funding that Hawaii received is helping our communities in the greatest need throughout my State. The City and County of Honolulu will use these funds to redevelop vacant properties and build two affordable rental housing projects in Ewa and Waianae. In Hauula County, an affordable rental housing project will be built on vacant property in Kailua-Kona. In the counties of Maui and Kauai, NSP funds will be used to buy and rehabilitate abandoned or foreclosed homes and residential properties throughout both counties.

So you can see that this money is that is not represented as wasteful spending. Our communities need our help. Vote against this bill.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREW).
Mr. ANDREWS. I thank my friend for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as we began this week, there were 3 million Americans looking for work. Eleven million Americans are working full-time for jobs that don’t pay. Americans are struggling to keep their heads above water, to pay for their families, and to pay for their homes. And, in speaking recently with the mayor of the City of Birmingham, Mayor Bell, about the effectiveness of this program, he informed me that the program has benefited many distressed neighborhoods in Birmingham. I’ve also heard from families whose neighborhoods have been improved because of this funding.

My colleague across the aisle wants to terminate NSP, but I respectfully disagree. There’s still much work to be done for our families and our communities. Without a doubt, we must reduce our national budget and Congress must work together to make the tough cuts. However, such cuts cannot be made on the backs of our communities, families, and seniors.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. I thank my friend.

I want to agree with my friend from Texas that investing in transportation construction creates jobs. We agree with him. And I would ask the gentleman if he would support our Build America bill that offsets the deficit by cutting job outsources and creates more transportation construction jobs.

Would he agree to trust that on the floor?

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SESSIONS. As soon as it’s on the floor, I’ll consider that.

Mr. ANDREWS. Reclaiming my time, we’ll give the gentleman another chance on the previous question motion, perhaps tomorrow.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds.

I would point out that the one bill that the gentleman from Texas has pointed to as a jobs bill is one bill that contained many, many earmarks from previous sessions. Also included is continuing funding for a bridge to nowhere in Alaska. So if this is the best jobs bill that a Republican Congress can bring forward, I think the American people deserve better.

It is my honor to yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Alabama (Ms. SKEWELL).

Ms. SKEWELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 861, which would terminate all funding for the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. The program has really helped families and communities in Alabama’s Seventh Congressional District tremendously.

Our Nation is recovering from one of the worst recessions experienced in our lifetime, and in my district, the economic downturn happened long before the rest of the Nation began to experience it. The foreclosure rate in my district has reached 8 percent. These foreclosures have devastated homeowners. The foreclosures have had a debilitating effect on the neighborhoods, leading to blight, decay, and reduced property values.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program has not just financed demolition and stabilization of abandoned structures, and Neighborhood Stabilization funds have been used to demolish hundreds of abandoned homes in the neighborhood, to help protect existing home values, and prevented neighborhoods from falling apart.

But the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has not just financed demolition of abandoned structures. In Cuyahoga County alone, this program funded the creation of 287 units of affordable rental housing and 23 single-family home renovations and neighborhood green space improvements.

It has also been used to leverage non-Federal money to fund the innovative Land Bank, a public entity that buys vacant and abandoned land and puts ownership of that land back in the hands of the public so that it can be used again, often in conjunction with private development, to reinvigorate communities. Anyone who has ever spent any time in blighted communities knows that they cry out for... innovative solutions like the Land Bank. When NSP was first being developed, I held hearings to find out how specifically HUD planned to allocate the funds. I convinced them of the wisdom of using U.S. Postal Service and census tract data to reach potential homeowners. Because of that, they adopted a need-based formula for allocating the money to neighborhoods and communities that needed it most.

Vote against this bill

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. It is my honor to yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we are facing a CR of $61 billion in cuts causing the loss of 800,000 jobs. What is more precious to America than the opportunity to own a home?

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program has gone into inner city and urban areas and recaptured neighborhoods, giving them a boost of energy that they needed. There is always the opportunity for reform, Mr. Speaker, but I would simply raise the question: Let’s not end it and let’s not leave cities abandoned with broken down, ramshackle homes that would in fact create more blight, more gang opportunities, more dangerous conditions.

I yield, yes, HAMP needs reform. But what does it mean to eliminate a program? Of course the HAMP has a grandfather provision. But all America wants is to get these programs to work. Neighborhood stabilization works. HAMP can work. Now you’re letting banks off the hook, so that every day a homeowner calls, they can hear the sound “foreclosed.” At least the intervention allowed those hardworking Americans to keep their home and to provide for their family and to keep jobs will be lost if these bills are passed. Vote no.

Mr. SESSIONS. I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my honor to yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. CICILLINE).

Mr. CICILLINE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise in strong opposition to the bill to end the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. It is time for Americans to seriously question the Republican leadership’s dedication to job creation. After 11 weeks in Congress, they’ve lost focus. Trying to get rid of dilapidated housing is because of Federal investments in Youngstown. We’ve had chronic foreclosures for 30 years. The census just came out. The city of Youngstown went from 180,000 people down to about 50,000 people. The tax base has been eroded. And in the last few years, Youngstown has been cited as one of the top 10 best cities to start a business by Entrepreneur magazine. Site Selection magazine says it’s one of the top 10 places to start or grow a business.

In part, the renaissance of Youngstown is because of Federal investments like this that help us downsize and shrink our community. And I find it ironic that our friends who are trying to reduce government spending, we’re trying to get rid of dilapidated housing where it increases crime, prostitution, drug use. This all puts more pressure on the safety services within a town like Youngstown.

This bill to repeal this money is actually going to cost cities and rural areas more money because you’re not allowing us to reinvest into these places, downsize them, shrink them, make them more manageable and, over time, reduce the tax burden on the local taxpayer. These are critical investments that are needed in the United States of America. This should have been $5 billion, not just $1 billion.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, if it worked that way, we’d do it.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 seconds to the gentleman to respond.

Mr. Ryan of Ohio. I would invite the gentleman to Youngstown, Ohio. He can see it for himself.

Mr. POLIS. It is my honor to yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Colorado who serves on the Financial Services Committee, Mr. PERLMUTTER.

Mr. PERLMUTTER. I thank my friend from Colorado. People...
Stabilization Program, had tremendous successes. This country was on its back financially 2 years ago, 2½ years ago. We’re just now getting back on our feet, and my friends from the Republican side of the aisle want to just pull the rug right back out. You’ve got to get some people can do away with some of these programs.

So let’s talk about Aurora, Colorado. They got $4.7 million to go and buy homes that were vacant because there had been foreclosures which were causing blight and lots of property devaluation. They went in, fixed the homes, and sold them to good families. The neighborhood starts growing again. Aurora has seen these same, the benefits of these programs.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I will assure the gentleman I will be in Aurora, Colorado, and I’ll be pleased to be there this year and probably next year, also.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to get some items on the schedule for the gentleman from Colorado during his visit to Colorado as well.

I’m the last speaker for my side, and I would like to inquire if the gentleman has any further requests for time.

Mr. SESSIONS. I appreciate the gentleman’s asking. I have no further requests, and I appreciated the collegiality the gentleman has extended me.

Mr. POLIS. I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to share with you a few stories from constituents in my district that the HAMP program has helped. My office has helped a number of constituents with this program, and I’m not alone in doing that.

Last year, I had a local artist who ran his own small business contact my office asking for help with her mortgage. Her income had declined significantly and unexpectedly due to the tough economy. She tried to find a second job but it wasn’t enough. With the help of a HAMP loan modification, she’s still in her home today.

We also helped a truckdriver who had become ill and needed dialysis. Although he still receives Social Security, he couldn’t afford his mortgage payments without his old salary. He had not turned 62 years old but even with the HAMP modification, he was able to lower his interest rate by 2 percent and convert his loan from an adjustable rate to a 30-year fixed and stay in his home.

Mr. Speaker, stories don’t end there. HAMP has proven that it can save families on the brink of foreclosure and keep them there for the long haul. It’s a real idea program. It has helped nearly 3 million families that were initially projected, but you ask any of those 500,000 families that HAMP has helped keep in their home and they will agree that this program works for them.

Mr. Speaker, we should be focusing on jobs. Last month, I’m proud to say, our economy added over 150,000 private sector jobs, and instead of working to increase that number, we’ve been passing legislation that threatens to reverse the progress that has been made by creating additional uncertainty within the real estate sector and leaving more families at risk of losing their homes.

Republicans promised to promote job creation and economic growth with their new majority. Instead of delivering on these promises, they’ve already used their majority to raise taxes on middle class Americans, to attack the middle class, and promote their own social agenda. This is not the change that the American people asked for.

It is time to get our fiscal house in order. I’d like to make it clear that this is not the way to solve our budget problems, by repealing a program that helps keep middle class families in their home. Mr. Speaker, the best way to get our deficit under control is through creating jobs, not through cutting the safety net of hardworking Americans and preventing our cities and counties from revitalizing their blighted neighborhoods.

Most distressing, however, is that through these bills the promise of job creation is broken yet again. I ask my colleagues, if you join me and vote “no” on this rule and “no” on the underlying legislation so we can keep our promise to help all of our communities rebuild and succeed, and work in a bipartisan fashion to get the very best ideas on the table about what our proper public policy response should be with regard to the housing crisis and the jobs crisis that this Nation faces.

I ask for a “no” vote on the rule and the underlying bill.

I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Colorado for not only engaging in a spirited debate here on floor but also for his collegiality in that endeavor.

Mr. Speaker, this Nation is being over-run still by too high a taxation, borrowing, and spending, and just last month, we hit a record deficit, $223 billion in 1 month. That is simply unacceptable. With the debt looming at over $14 trillion and unemployment hovering at 9 percent, Americans want solutions, not handouts. And that is why we are here on the floor today, to protect the taxpayer and the integrity, I think, of the government, rather than creating more problems, at least trying to alleviate some of those and give the taxpayer back some money. The American people asked Congress to rein in spending and for efficiency, and that is what Republicans are here to do today.

We did this in an open process where every single Member of this body had a chance through regular order to prepare themselves and to come to the floor today. Since Republicans have gained the majority in January we have cut $1.2 trillion worth of spending, first of all, by repealing ObamaCare; secondly, by cutting $61 billion in H.R. 1, $8 billion last week in additional unnecessary government housing programs, and another $30 billion with this rule today. We’re getting our job done.

By gaining control of government spending and eliminating wasteful government handouts, the private sector can, again, gain confidence in our economy and the direction of the future of this country to begin investing in jobs and our economic future. After all, we finally decided last year that what we would do is extend tax cuts which will help save jobs and grow our economy.

I applaud my colleagues for introducing the bills we are discussing here today. In just a few minutes, you will see the chairman of the Financial Services Committee or his designee lead that discussion through lots of amendments, lots of ideas by Members.

I want to thank the young chairman of the Rules Committee, the gentleman from California, DAVID DREIER, for providing us such a great, open, and transparent process. I encourage a “yes” vote on the rule and perhaps, more importantly, on the resolution before us today.

I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. POLIS. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered. The vote was taken by electronic device and there were—yeas 241, nays 180, not voting 11, as follows: [Roll No. 181]
COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
WASHINGTON, D.C., March 16, 2011.
Hon. John A. Boehner, Speaker, U.S. Capitol, House of Representatives, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(b) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received the following message from the Secretary of the Senate on March 16, 2011 at 11:39 a.m.

That the Senate agreed to S.J. Res. 2.

That the Senate agreed to S.J. Res. 8.

With best wishes, I am
Sincerely,

Karen L. Haas,
Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act, and I commend my colleague Mr. MILLER for introducing this bill that would end NSP.

As I mentioned during the debate on the rule for this bill, in total, Congress has appropriated $7 billion for NSP. This bill could save taxpayers up to $1 billion. Instead of stabilizing neighborhoods, NSP allows lenders and servicers to off-load their bad investments and accounts. It is a perfect storm to the hazard of NSP, which actually may speed up foreclosures for families.

If the lenders and servicers know that they can quickly sell a property to a nonprofit or local government with NSP funds, why wouldn’t they do this? Why wouldn’t they simply evict the homeowner instead of doing a pro-prietary, private sector-funded modification of the mortgage that would allow the homeowner to keep his home?

This program does not help homeowners facing foreclosure; and the bottom line is that, if the lenders and servicers own a home due to foreclosure, the servicers buy the same lenders and servicers—they are responsible for the upkeep, security and eventual sale of that home. Why should the taxpayers pay for this responsibility which rightly belongs to the lenders and servicers? They shouldn’t.

The GAO, the HUD Inspector General and other auditors have noted that the program is plagued with problems, including lax reporting requirements and poor accountability. There is no evidence to suggest that funds spent through NSP have produced cost-effective results.

Finally, upon the sale of a property, NSP does not require these groups to return the profit to the taxpayer. Instead, the program is treated like a slush fund. This money is never returned to the taxpayer but will stay with the local governments and nonprofit entities that received it. Of course, any group would support keeping the profits of homes sold instead of returning it to the taxpayer. Who wouldn’t?

We need to break down barriers that have delayed recovery in the housing market, including expensive and ineffective government programs like NSP. We need to stop funding programs that don’t work with money we don’t have. NSP doesn’t stabilize neighborhoods. It simply spends billions of taxpayer dollars to allow a few homes, scattered across the country, to be sold to the highest bidder, including down payments and closing costs, above market-rate. It is failing. It does not follow through on its intent. That is not helping struggling homeowners. Is that really ends up being nothing more than another bailout. That’s the last thing that we need is another bailout.

It’s a double hit to the taxpayer. Why? Very simple. Because when the city or municipality owns this home, that means there are no taxes paid. The argument is, “well, there are no taxes being paid now because it’s abandoned,” but that’s not true. There is something called a “tax lien,” and the private sector at some point will buy that tax lien, and that municipality will get its incentive.

So for many, many reasons this bill is failing. It does not follow through on the intent. And we must stop the out-of-control reckless spending. And this is exactly where we need to start, this type of program, $1 billion of hard working taxpayer dollars, back the bailouts. Let’s stop and remember that the answer to everything is not the government. Often, it is the government that is the problem.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GRIMM), a member of the Financial Services Committee.

Mr. GRIMM. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman from New York (Mr. GRIMM), a member of the Financial Services Committee.

Mr. GRIMM. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to support this bill because it doesn’t do what it’s supposed to do.

This is exactly why I came to Congress.

This bill hurts struggling homeowners. It doesn’t help them, because it gives some type of perverse incentive for the banks to foreclose. That’s what this program actually does. It pursues these homes from the lenders, from those who are already foreclosed. That is not helping struggling homeowners. I don’t deny that the intent was very good, but it is not following through on that intent. It’s reckless; it’s being misused; and it’s wasting millions of taxpayer dollars. Let’s really end up being nothing more than another bailout. That’s the last thing that we need is another bailout.

It’s a double hit to the taxpayer. Why? Very simple. Because when the city or municipality owns this home, that means there are no taxes paid. The argument is, “well, there are no taxes being paid now because it’s abandoned,” but that’s not true. PROVISIONS AND POLICIES TO ENSURE THAT NSP FUNDS USED EFFECTIVELY

STATUTORY PROVISIONS

All purchasers of foreclosed properties must be below current market appraised value, taking condition into account.

Rehabilitation of foreclosed properties can only be to an extent necessary to comply with housing safety, quality and habitability codes, laws, regulations in order to sell, rent or redevelop.

No profit can be earned on the sale of an abandoned or foreclosed upon home or residential property to an individual as a primary residence—the sale must be in an amount not to exceed market value cost to acquire and redevelop or rehabilitate the home or property up to a decent, safe and habitable condition.

All grant funds must be used to assist individuals and families with incomes at or below 120% AMI.

At least 25% of funds must be used to purchase abandoned or foreclosed residential properties that will be used to house individuals or families with incomes at or below 50% of AMI.

Requires HUD to ensure that program income to be used in accordance with NSP rules. Program income is below $25,000.

Receives that program income to be used in accordance with NSP rules. Program income is below $25,000.

Establishes that program income to be used in accordance with NSP rules. Program income is below $25,000.

Receives that program income to be used in accordance with NSP rules. Program income is below $25,000.

Receives that program income to be used in accordance with NSP rules. Program income is below $25,000.

Establishes requirements for local governments to purchase, rehab, and sell foreclosed properties. Without these programs, houses would stay empty—and I say, would stay empty—and we would have to look at our neighborhoods and other areas, causing us to plow a lot of money.

Local neighborhoods would be forced to use their own funds for maintenance purposes and legal fees. Additionally, any empty properties would force communities to adjust and deal with the missing tax revenue—and I say, missing tax revenue—at a time that we need the additional revenue within our communities.

A lot has been made by my colleagues on the other side about one particular thing that the NSP funds, Chicanos por la Causa, What if it was another name? It doesn’t matter. But because it has the name of “Chicanos,” the stereotypes and the images are there. It is about programs that are doing good, not because of the name that Chicanos por la Causa.

Chicanos por la Causa has unmatched records of providing affordable housing, stabilizing neighborhoods, and serving the needs of low-income communities. They offer a broad range of programs in 16 States, such as housing over 10,000 clients each year, many of whom live below the Federal poverty, which in a family of four is only $22,000.

In 2009, the Chicanos led the application for a group of 13 members of the National Association of Latino Community Asset Builders. Together, this group received over $130 million in NSP funds and put this money to use in projects like in California, where we have 15 member communities across the country, and in Arizona, and 16 other States.

Instead of looking out for Wall Street, instead of looking out for Wall Street and protecting the banks that caused the crisis—NSP awards this funding to invest in Main Street.

This award represents one of the largest single Federal investments ever made that target Latinos and low-income communities, the same communities that have seen a higher rate of foreclosure and unemployment than the national average.

I would ask my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to write to their communities where Chicanos or Hispanics and their parents spend their money. Instead of using this tunnel vision—I say, this tunnel vision—solely looking at the numbers, I would ask my friends to look at the actual work that is done in the communities and how those communities have improved and have gotten a lot better.

It is time to stop letting partisan talking points set the agenda for our government. It is time that we start focusing on programs—I say, it is time that we start focusing on programs like NSP and the Chicanos por la Causa that help the Americans get back on their feet.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this.

Mrs. BIGGERT. I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California, the sponsor of this bill and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Financial Services on International Monetary Policy and Trade, Mr. MILLER.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I enjoyed the comments of my good friend, Mr. BACA, from San Bernardino County. I have some correspondence from San Bernardino County that might interest him.

According to the county offices, there is no one at the county that would support current NSP programs, period. The letters of support did not come from San Bernardino County, which is one of the hardest hit in the Nation. In fact, the county might have supported the current NSP, but this is before they fell victim to complete and total closure by HUD. And the evidence from San Bernardino County that might interest him.

As it applies to my bill, the county says, “We believe it is a means for Congress to get its money’s worth in order, just like the challenges we are facing at the local level.”

Mr. BACA made a very nice written speech, but his own county that he represents does not support the program. And I was disappointed that a group called Chicanos por la Causa was mentioned. Well, let me just talk about the numbers that I have a problem with.

The Neighborhood Stabilizing Program allows local governments to purchase, rehab, and sell foreclosed properties. Without these programs, houses would stay empty—and I say, would stay empty—and we would have to look at our neighborhoods and other areas, causing us to plow a lot of money.

Local neighborhoods would be forced to use their own funds for maintenance purposes and legal fees. This NSP allocation program was meant to be a one-time program. It ended up three times. Now, the allocations applied, the problems I had when you look at a county the size of Los Angeles County, they got $26.3 million; San Bernardino County, $23.2 million; Orange County, $4.3 million; and San Diego County got $5.1 million.

Now, all of these counties had to apply Davis-Bacon rules and wage standards to rehab these houses, which meant they spent more to do it than the private sector could have done it on a competitive bidding nature.

Now, my good friend Mr. BACA mentioned one group, as if I had something against Chicanos. The problem I have is that nongovernment agencies, such as Neighborhood Lending Partners, got $50 million—$50 million; the Community Builders, Inc. got $78.6 million; Los Angeles Neighborhood Housing Services, Inc. got $60 million; Neighborhood Lending Partners of West Florida, Incorporated got $50 million; Chicanos por la Causa got $137 million.

Understand, L.A. County got $26.3 million; San Bernardino County got $35.2 million; Orange County got $4.3 million; Los Angeles County got $4.5 million. The largest population base in California got less money than Chicanos por la Causa. Does that make anybody in America happy?

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman not want to mention that Chicanos por la Causa—

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I reclaim my time.

If it had been Germans for Affordable Housing, I would have opposed it. If it had been Italians for Affordable Housing, I would have opposed it. Had it been Irish Germans for Affordable Housing at $137 million, I would have opposed it.

Understand, these are taxpayer dollars from people who lost their houses, people who are behind in their payments, people who are facing foreclosure, and none of this money does one thing to help you. It was not an equitable application based on who got money and how they got it. In fact, a lot of these groups write off 17 percent off the top for overhead and costs—17 percent.

Now, we talked about banks. When we lent banks the money in TARP 1, they paid us interest. We paid money because we got our money back. Freddie and Fannie, the money we allocated to them, we are charging them 10 percent interest and they have to pay us back, and the American public is furious at that.

We just gave away $50 million to one private group, gave $78 million to another, $60 million to another, $50 million to another. And as my good friend Joe BACA says, Chicanos por la Causa, the poor group, got $137 million given to you. We are not charging you interest. We gave you the money.

Now, are we helping housing this country? No. Housing starts fell 22 percent in February, the lowest levels since 1959 for housing starts. Housing falling: 11.8 percent fall in single-family, 47 percent fall in multifamily. Tell me one thing this has done. It has not kept one person in their house.

Now, let’s assume this is supposed to be helping poor people buy houses. You just lost your house. In Hawaii, a person making $73,825 can buy a house through these organizations. A person in California making over $68,000 can buy a house through these organizations. A group in Virginia, $74,000; New Jersey, $78,000; Massachusetts, $72,000; Utah, $75,000; Alaska, $76,000; Colorado, $73,000; New Hampshire, $79,000.

So a group, an entity, a State, a county, a city can buy a house. They have to sell it for less than they have in it, and they can sell it to people making more than the person who may have lost the house.

Now, how in the world does that do one thing for poor people? It does not do one thing for poor people.

Now let’s talk about banks. If we had invested $1 billion in the construction industry to build houses, you would have gotten $2.8 billion in economic activities.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mrs. BIGGERT. I yield the gentleman an additional 2 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. If you would have invested $1 billion, you would have generated $2.8 billion in economic activities: $5.5 million in wages, $133 million in income for small businesses, $156 million in corporate profits, $1.98 billion in spending on goods and services from the above three lines. It is huge. So if we are talking about jobs, let’s create jobs.

Now, they say we have had no alternative to what they did. In 2008, I endorsed a bill and introduced it called the Public-Private Partnership Community Stabilization Act. It took government dollars and invested them with private groups to do the same thing, to buy houses that were foreclosed upon and rehab them in communities. And when the houses were sold, guess what? We would have been paid back to the Federal Government. We would have probably made a profit. We wouldn’t have given a dime away. We would have made money on doing the same thing.

Now, the other side talks about abandoned houses. Not a dime of this money can be used for eminent domain, so either the house is for sale or it can’t be bought. It can’t be foreclosed upon by the government through eminent domain. So to say that some private group would not have bought this house and rehabbed it themselves is ludicrous, because the house has to be for sale.

Now, this group can go out and buy the house, demolish it and end up with a vacant lot. They can go out and buy a house, rehab it and sell it for a dollar, 10, any amount they want to sell it for, to anybody they want to sell it to, as long as it is less than they have in it.

I had a bill passed out of this House that Mr. FRANK cosponsored—he thought it was a good bill—that allowed banks to take foreclosed properties and lease them. If you want to get rid of foreclosed properties, allow banks to take the property, rehab it, put it on the marketplace, or lease it out for 5 years. It would have done the same thing, and perhaps banks would have driven the marketplace down on resales because they were glutted with foreclosures.

We could have taken these houses, leased them, and in 5 years when the market turned around, they could have sold them. And guess what? They could have given a lease option to the person losing the house to stay in the house for 5 years and buy it back at the end of 5 years. It would have at least helped foreclosure projects.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself the 30 seconds the gentleman wouldn’t allow me to mention—Chicanos por la Causa, which he keeps invoking, in what I must say is an inflammatory way, yes, it has $137 million in eight States. It is a consortium of several groups. Comparing it to one county is quite misleading. It is $137 million to an organization that has eight States in which it works and which has produced affordable housing units. And as to his argument that it is not for the poor people, almost all of the groups in this country that advocate for housing for low-income groups have sent us a letter urging that this go forward, Habitat for Humanity and others. I take them as more credible on this than my friend.

I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. CARSON).

Mr. CARSON of Indiana. Thank you, Ranking Member FRANK. As our Nation’s economy moves forward, we must not forget about our neighborhoods, and we must continue to help those areas that are still struggling to come back. That is why I am appalled at the efforts to terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program.

In my own district of Indianapolis, the neighborhood of Mapleton Fall Creek has been renewed, NSP projects.

We could have given a lease option to the person losing the house to stay in the house for 5 years and buy it back at the end of 5 years. It would have at least helped foreclosure projects.

I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. CARSON).

Mr. CARSON of Indiana. Thank you, Ranking Member FRANK. As our Nation’s economy moves forward, we must not forget about our neighborhoods, and we must continue to help those areas that are still struggling to come back. That is why I am appalled at the efforts to terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program.

In my own district of Indianapolis, the neighborhood of Mapleton Fall Creek has been renewed, NSP projects. What were once eyesores and blight. New businesses have opened, and an area once in decline is actually blossoming again. This was all possible because of NSP funding.

We must continue this program for the neighborhoods in Indianapolis and across this great Nation.

I would like to express my support for the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) and to oppose the majority's plans to terminate the program.

All three rounds of NSP are critical because they provide emergency assistance to states, local governments, and nonprofits to acquire and redevelop foreclosed, vacant, and abandoned properties. Many of these properties have become blights on the community and are driving down neighboring property values. The first two rounds of the NSP program impacted an estimated 80,000 foreclosed, abandoned, or vacant properties, and it is estimated that NSP3 will impact tens of thousands more. The past three rounds have been plagued with problems. We have given almost $7 billion into a program that has yet to work. HUD was slow in getting the money out the door. Poor reporting has hampered our ability to even measure what has been happening on the program.

Further, the NSP simply acts as a taxpayer bailout for risky lenders, servicers and real estate speculators who bet on the housing market and now have no money. It has become an even bigger example of those people who believe that the government is the solution to the problem. Government is not the solution to the problem; government is the problem.

We are spending $3.5 trillion in our annual government spending, and we are bringing in $2.2 trillion. Next year we are going to have a deficit of $1.6 trillion; and it is composed of programs that do not work. That's not good, that don't really cause the market to cure itself, and instead taxpayers pay the bill for people who have been speculating and people who just want out.

I had a friend in the office today who talked about his situation with a house in Tucson where he got in at a higher price than it should have been. He was willing to settle for a lesser amount. He was willing to pay. But because the bank could not get the government to make up the difference, they did not have to negotiate with this individual homeowner. Instead, this program causes lenders to say, the taxpayer will make us whole and we are not going to take our losses.

The market will cure the problems we face if we allow the markets to work, but this government program does not allow the market to work. This Nation is dying for jobs, and it is government spending, government regulation and their present taxation that are causing the jobs to be killed and to be sent out of this country.

If we will get our focus correct on lowering taxes, lowering the regulatory environment, especially to lenders who own properties, and except they are afraid to because of the regulatory environment, we would begin to create jobs for the first time in a long time.

With 9 percent unemployment, it is time for us to cure the problems of the economy, to boil spending on wasteful programs, and to give this country a leg up on prosperity. That is the thing we are missing right now.

The hope of prosperity for the middle class is gone, and it is because of programs like this soaking the taxpayer and giving money to people who probably could do something different. It is not fixing up any neighborhood. I don't see the reports in any magazine or newspaper telling of the flock of people moving to these rehabilitated neighborhoods.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I rise to express support for H.R. 861.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself 15 seconds.

The gentleman from California says he is not singling out Chicanos Por La Causa, that there are other private organizations, but he never mentions them. And he says, well, they are not a government entity. That is right. We don't think it all has to go through the government. We think places like Habitat for Humanity and others have a role to play.

I yield 3 minutes to the former mayor of the city of Somerville, Massachusetts (Mr. CAPUANO).

Mr. CAPUANO. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, the most legitimate argument I have heard is we have a deficit, and we can't talk about any program that has been perfectly well spent. That would be crazy. I have no problem at all looking at this program or any program to come up with things we don't like; to change the rules as to who might be eligible tomorrow. And on and on and on. Those are fine and fair things to say. I am not going to defend one group or any formula. Those are legitimate things to argue about. But to say that the program doesn't work and this is where we should start addressing our deficit, I think, is to be shortsighted.

It also says to me, if you don't like the program, that's fine. Then I would strongly suggest that anybody who doesn’t like the program pick up the phone to their mayor; to their county administrator, to their Governor, and say, Send the money back. Every State in the country has gotten money. California has gotten over $886 million. If you don’t want it, send it back. Massachusetts, got almost as much money because they got hit hard. We think it’s doing pretty well, so we’re going to keep it. But if you don’t want it, send it back. Nevada, a much smaller State than Massachusetts, got almost as much money because they got hit hard. We think it’s doing pretty well, so we’re going to keep it.

To argue that a few problems that you have—and I’m not even going to suggest that I agree or don’t agree. The points are well made. If you don’t want one entity, any entity to get $137 million, fine. Let’s talk about it. Let’s say they don’t do it. That’s not a problem. If you want to say that we have to change about how this money is being used, fine. Let’s limit it. No problem.

But to pretend that a neighborhood, any neighborhood, is well served by ignoring boarded-up properties, by saying, Walk away from your home, walk away from your business, and the neighborhood will recover without you, is shortsighted and wrong. And to pretend that because we’re using this money away, that that is an inherent evil in and of itself, ignores all the grants that this government gives away, that other governments give away, not just in housing, but in research, number one.

Again, if you want to cut out all grants, fine. That is a reasonable and consistent argument. But you also then have to cut out tax credits, because we give out billions of dollars in Federal tax credit dollars that do the same thing in housing.

All I’m saying is if you want to fix the program, fix it. If you want to turn your back on neighborhoods, go ahead and do that. But not with my help.

Mr. Chair, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY G. MILLER).

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Chair, I appreciate my good friend admitting that we’re giving the money away, because we are. I struck a nerve for some reason when everybody keeps bringing up Chicanos Por La Causa for $137 million. The reason I think it’s egregious is we gave $1.3 billion away from your business, and the neighborhood is paying.

To pretend that somehow because we’re giving away $1.3 billion, we’re causing foreclosures is the biggest threat to our national security. Joint Chiefs of Staff, who says our debt is 10 percent of GDP, 9 percent of the budget is owed to China. Every day we write a check to China because we won’t face up to this exploding spending of $120 billion a day.

If we can be successful with programs like the Hardest Hit Fund Program, we will create an environment where people will not lose their homes because the value of their homes will not plummet. They will not end up underwater. And people will have somewhere that they can live and a neighborhood that they can be proud of.

But because the Republican conference is making itself abundantly clear, I think it needs to be clear to the American people whose side we’re on. The Democrats are on the side of the American people staying in their homes. The Republican conference is on the side of throwing people out and foreclosing on Americans. And it’s a sad, sad day in our Congress. We are in the middle of an enormous debate on the proper role of government. We believe the proper role of government is to have fair rules, to have real enforcement of our financial regulations, to have real consumer protection, and to intervene when neighborhoods are being destroyed by foreclosure.

The Republicans say, You’re on your own. The market has all the answers. The market answers every question. Well, it doesn’t answer every question, especially when the market doesn’t have any cops on the beat, and when you let the people engage in all sorts of nefarious practices that caused the economic conditions that we’re in today.

The Republican conference was in power when the regulations that led to this destruction were in place—and they did nothing. When the Democrats got in charge, we solved it. And now they’re trying to disassemble it.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Chairman, at this time I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS), the chairman of the Financial Services Committee.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to address two things that the minority has raised. One is they’ve talked about fairness. And I will tell you that there’s nothing fair about this program. In fact, it’s an unfair program.

It’s unfair for most Americans. The problem is with the justice thing. This is foreclosures. This program causes foreclosures. This program encourages foreclosures. This program promotes foreclosures.

Now let’s talk about the foreclosures first and then we’ll talk about fair. What does this program do? Does it prevent foreclosures? No. It encourages foreclosures. It allows nonprofits, community organizations, and cities and counties to buy foreclosed properties. In other words, to create a market for foreclosed properties, the minority has raised. One is they’ve talked about fairness. And I will tell you that there’s nothing fair about this program. In fact, it’s an unfair program.

It’s unfair for most Americans. The problem is with the justice thing. This is foreclosures. This program causes foreclosures. This program promotes foreclosures.

Now, just like all these properties, it’s not owned by a homeowner. There’s no homeowner there. It’s owned by a bank or a real estate speculator. It might have been somebody that put someone in this house with what we call an exploding loan. Put someone in that house that couldn’t afford it.

So, what do we do? We construct a program that says to this bank that owns this property, that’s paying taxes to the government on this property—we don’t say to tear this down, or we don’t say we’re going to condemn it and convert it, and we’re going to get it with no charge. No. We buy it. Now, is that right?

You said the banks caused this, the lenders. We ought to penalize those that are at fault. Well, how does penalizing a lender who made a loan on this property, how is writing them a check fair? No, it’s not. This is a bailout for lenders and speculators.

Now, is it fair? Well, is it fair to our grandchildren and our children, $4 billion every day that goes out of our Treasury, more than we bring in. Four billion dollars a day. In fact, the deficit for February was $290 something billion dollars.

Now, every day they talk about fairness, and I have quoted this with every one of these failed programs. I have quoted Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who says our debt is the biggest threat to our national security, the existence of our country. Well, let’s just talk about one thing we do every day. We owe China 9 percent interest. 9 percent interest. We owe China.

Every day we write a check to China because we won’t face up to this exploding spending of $120 billion a day.
They could buy a Joint Strike Force fighter every day and still put $20 million in their pocket. Every day. They could build an Air Force bigger than our Air Force in 5 years on money they earn from us and that our taxpayers pay because we don’t confer programs like this. Because “fair” to us is saying yes to everyone except the taxpayers.

And, oh, there are 4 million foreclosures in this country this year. That’s true. But I tell you, this program will do nothing but increase that number. And to think that it’s fair to our children and grandchildren to devise a program but not have the money to pay it and stick it on our children and grandchildren, it ought to infuriate any of us who are grandparents. It does me.

It’s time now to end this foolishness which threatens the very existence of our country.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself 2 minutes to say I am struck by the incongruity of Members who have voted for the war in Iraq, a trillion-dollar huge mistake, ongoing, who vote to continue what seems to me a futile effort to prop up Afghanistan.

The gentleman from Alabama, and we’ve talked about this before, he said that because the Obama administration told him he had to, he voted to send $150 million a year last year, next year, for years to the cotton farmers of Brazil. The gentleman opposed a $250,000 limit on subsidies to any individual farmer. In the budget, the gentleman voted, as did most on his side, to send $1.2 billion to beef up Iraqi security forces. What about American security forces? What about giving some money to the cities so when they have to deal with abandoned property, they don’t have to take out of the hides of their police departments and fire departments?

Yes, reduce the deficit. But to be for the enormous waste in the Pentagon—and, by the way, Members cite Mike Mullen. I wish, in addition to citing the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, they would make a simple commitment not to vote for the Pentagon money he doesn’t want. Because Members on that side cite his warning about the defense budget, about the deficit, and then force money on him that he thinks is useless.

So let’s talk about the disparity between people who vote enormous amounts of money; $400 million goes to Afghan infrastructure, we’re told. Well, let’s have it done efficiently. I cannot think that in any program in America we are going to be spending the money less efficiently than the $400 million my friends over there have voted to send to Afghanistan.

So let’s look at this in a reasonable way. And we also believe that this billion dollars helps our colleagues in Alabama.

And there’s one fundamental error they make: the assumption is that for every piece of property—by the way, it is not simply foreclosed property; it is abandoned property—for every piece of property that’s out there, there is a responsible financial institution whom you can sue and get the money from. That simply isn’t true.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself 30 more seconds.

For many of these pieces of property, the cities are left with no recourse. There is no one to do it. One of the Members said the other day in committee, Well, they can send out their bulldozer. Yeah, they can pull a fire-fighter off and hire a bulldozer operator.

The fact is that it is not simply for foreclosed property. It’s for foreclosed and abandoned property, and the notion that there are no buildings out there in the cities where there is no responsible financial entity is nonsense.

And so what we’re telling the cities is, It’s tough. You’ve had these foreclosure problems. You’ve had this abandonment problem. You could sell it to the private sector, and the private sector will buy some, but they won’t buy it all.

I now yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman and Members, I think that my colleague from Minnesota said it all: Whose side are you on? Are you on the side of the American taxpayers who trusted us to regulate this industry that had responsibility for these mortgages? Are you on the side of taxpayers who simply wanted to live the American Dream, who simply wanted to get into a mortgage so that they could own a home and do what it is the American Dream says we can do and we can accomplish? They trusted us to make sure that our regulators did their job. We all let them down. We allowed these mortgage firms, these loan initiators, these big banks to create these exotic products, products unheard of before.

Nobody questioned what was a no doc loan. Nobody asked what is this teaser loan. Nobody talked about what happens when these loans reset. And the American taxpayer was confronted with a mortgage with 30, 40 pieces of paper and they signed on the dotted line, because they wanted to live the American Dream. Little did they know that they would not be able to meet the reset amount, 6 months, 1 year; 2 years later, they got caught up in the scheme. It was a huge, fraudulent scheme perpetrated on the American people by major financial institutions.

Americans didn’t decide all of a sudden that they didn’t want to pay their bills, that they didn’t want to pay their mortgage. Something big happened. And what happened was this big fraud that was perpetrated on the American people came to reality and the devil came due the time to pay, and they couldn’t afford it.

Added to that, the recession that was caused by the subprime meltdown caused people to be in situations where they lost their jobs, or they were now in jobs that paid less than the jobs that they had when the economy was good. And so now we have people who have lost all these homes. They’re foreclosed on; they’re boarded up; they’re abandoned. And, guess what, they’re bringing down the neighborhoods. Those people who stay in the neighborhoods and keep up their homes, they’re losing value because of these boarded-up properties and because of these abandoned properties.

So the government said, and I said and BARNEY FRANK said, those of us who created this program said, we have a responsibility to help the American people, because, through no fault of their own, now their homes are underwater, their homes have lost value, and so we have the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. The Neighborhood Stabilization Program does give money to communities and cities and all to go in and rehab these properties, put them back on the market, upgrade the neighborhood, reduce the cost to fire and police and all of those city agencies that now have got to look for those boarded-up properties, where the animals are coming in and the weeds are growing up and neighbors are saying, My government, please help me.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield the gentlewoman 1 additional minute.

Ms. WATERS. That’s what the Neighborhood Stabilization Program is all about. And it creates jobs. It creates jobs, because now we’ve got the contractors, the subcontractors, the painters, the Realtors all involved in helping to rehab this neighborhood, helping to stabilize these communities, creating jobs, assisting the American taxpayers who got into these situations through no fault of their own.

Whose side are you on? Are you on the side of those who rip off our taxpayers? Or are you on the side of the taxpayers who sent you here to look after them and to be responsible?

Mrs. BIGGERT. May I inquire of the Chair how much time each side has remaining?

The CHAIR. The gentlewoman from Illinois has 9½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Massachusetts has 11½ minutes remaining.

Mrs. BIGGERT. At this time I would yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS), the chairman of the Financial Services Committee.

Mr. BACHUS. Well, there you go again. Instead of talking about this program, you want to talk about the cotton deal, or you want to talk about Afghanistan. And I’ll talk about those.

But before I do, I have a question for you, for my colleagues on the Democratic side who talk about investing in this property. I want you to get a good look at this.

Are you willing to put your money up to buy that?
Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BACHUS. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. No, I don’t think any private entity would—I’m not saying the answer is out there, but why?

That’s why we want to give money to the cities so they can tear it down, because otherwise they’ll be stuck with it. I don’t think any private investor would put money in that. There’s no other way to deal with it, and the way to deal with it is to give them the money so they can tear it down.

Mr. BACHUS. Let’s tear it down. I agree with you. And let’s make the person who owns it tear it down. And this idea that this person can’t be found, that this person—

I would ask for order.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIR

The CHAIR. The Chair will remind Members to address their comments to the Chair.

Mr. BACHUS. And I would say to the Chair—and I appreciate that—that if any of my colleagues want to buy this property, it’s a good investment. They can hire painters and Real- tors and put all these people to work, but the taxpayers, they’re having trouble paying their mortgages. They’re having trouble financing their own children’s education. And whose side are we on?

Listen, this program has benefited less than 2,000 pieces of property—banks—but we’ve got 12 million American families who are underwater on their mortgage. And do you think it’s even fair to pay off, as you all proposed, a half a million of those mortgages? How about the other 21 out of 22? You know, you can’t pay off all 12 million. You will break the country. So you say, well, we’re going to do the best we can. You’re going to pick winners and losers.

Let me tell you something. The taxpayers who are paying their mortgages or own their own homes or didn’t get into this problem—don’t you get the message from November? The American people don’t want us paying—they don’t want to pay for someone else’s obligations.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mrs. HALE. I yield the gentleman an additional 1 minute.

Mr. BACHUS. Now, let’s talk about this Brazilian cotton, and let me tell you, if I were you—I’d say to the Chair, if I were the ranking member, I would talk about anything but buying this property and fixing it up. I’d do anything to avoid that conversation. I’d avoid talking about that we’re paying the banks with taxpayer money.

But you mentioned Brazil and you said it was a stupid deal. You said it took a Flip Wilson to do this. Well, it was Ron Kirk, trade ambassador, that entered into the agreement. And who hired him? President Obama. So you ought to take it up with the Democratic administration who saddled us with this $150 million obligation.

I close with Afghanistan. I have a son who’s in the U.S. Marines. He was in Afghanistan for 10 years, and now, but let me tell you something. I will spend money to build up an Afghan force so we can bring our young men and women home.

U.S., BRAZIL AGREE ON FRAMEWORK REGARDING WTO COTTON DISPUTE

WASHINGTON, DC.—Today Brazil’s Ministers reached a decision in support of a Framework regarding the Cotton dispute, which would avert the imposition of countermeasures of more than $300 million this year. This includes more than $60 million in countermeasures against U.S. exports which were scheduled to go into effect on Monday, June 21, 2010, as well as possible countermeasures on intellectual property rights that could have taken effect later. We are pleased with this decision, and look forward to signing the Framework soon.

The findings in the Cotton dispute concern U.S. cotton exports under the marketing loan and countercyclical payment programs, and the GSM–102 Export Credit Guarantee Program. In line with these findings, the Framework has two major elements.

First, it would provide, as a basis for a discussion toward reaching a mutually agreed solution on the trade-distorting cotton subsidies and the operation of GSM–102. The Framework would not serve as a permanent solution to the Cotton dispute. However, it would provide specific interim steps and a process for continued discussions on the programs at issue with a view to reaching a solution to the dispute.

Second, the Framework would provide a process for changes to certain elements of the current GSM–102 program. In line with these findings, the Framework has two major elements.

First, it would provide, as a basis for a discussion toward reaching a mutually agreed solution on the trade-distorting cotton subsidies and the operation of GSM–102. The Framework would not serve as a permanent solution to the Cotton dispute. However, it would provide specific interim steps and a process for continued discussions on the programs at issue with a view to reaching a solution to the dispute.

I am pleased that we have been able to negotiate a Framework regarding the Cotton dispute that would avoid the imposition of countermeasures against U.S. trade, including goods and intellectual property. I commend Ambassador Sapiro and my Brazilian counterpart, Secretaries General of Brazil’s Ministry of External Relations to discuss possible resolution of the dispute. As a result of that dialogue, the Government of Brazil agreed not to impose any countermeasures on U.S. trade at that time.

On April 1, Deputy USTR Miriam Sapiro and USDA Undersecretary for Farm and Foreign Agricultural Services Jim Miller met with Ambassador Antonio Patriota, Secretary General of Brazil’s Ministry of External Relations to discuss possible resolution of the dispute. As a result of that dialogue, the Government of Brazil agreed not to impose any countermeasures on U.S. trade at that time.

On March 8, 2010 Brazil announced a final list of products that would be subject to additional tariffs beginning on April 7, 2010. Goods on the list include autos, pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, electronics, wheat, fruit and nuts, and cotton. Brazil had not made a final decision on which U.S. intellectual property rights might be affected by cross-sectoral countermeasures, but it had begun the process to make that decision. In exchange, the United States also agreed to make certain changes to its current Export Credit Guarantee Program.

On March 23, 2010 Brazil announced a final list of products that would be subject to additional tariffs beginning on April 7, 2010. Goods on the list include autos, pharmaceuticals, medical equipment, electronics, wheat, fruit and nuts, and cotton. Brazil had not made a final decision on which U.S. intellectual property rights might be affected by cross-sectoral countermeasures, but it had begun the process to make that decision.

As a result of that dialogue, the Government of Brazil agreed not to impose any countermeasures on U.S. trade at that time.

In exchange, the United States agreed to work with Brazil to establish a fund of approximately $173 million on a pro rata basis to provide technical assistance and capacity building to the cotton sector in Brazil, and for international cooperation related to cotton in certain other countries. Under the Memorandum of Understanding that the United States and Brazil signed on April 20, 2010, the fund would continue until passage of the next Farm Bill or a mutually agreed solution to the Cotton dispute is reached, whichever is sooner. The fund is subject to transparency and auditing requirements.

would provide a path forward for a negotiated solution to the Cotton dispute and allow both countries to avoid the impact of countermeasures. Negotiators from Brazil and the United States have been engaged intensively over the past several months, and successfully concluded this Framework. Brazil is the United States’ tenth largest trading partner with a total two-way goods trade of approximately $60 billion in 2009.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself 3 minutes.

First of all, the gentleman says why are you talking about other programs, why don’t you just talk about this program, but he talks about hundreds of billions of dollars of deficit, and this is a billion dollar program. So he hardly, Mr. Chairman, follows his own rules. He talks about hundreds of billions of dollars about a billion dollar program. I am joining him in saying, yes, we have a large deficit, of which this program is an infinitesimal part.

Secondly, I am puzzled that my Republican friends, who generally tell us that the President is not very good at his job, hide behind him when it’s politically convenient. Yes, this is an Obama deal. The President was wrong. And the gentleman from Alabama, if I think the President has made a foolish decision, I’m going to vote against it, not to send the money to Brazil. It wasn’t the President who told you to vote not to limit the subsidies to $250,000 per person.

And as to bringing people home from Afghanistan, we will have a chance tomorrow to bring people home from Afghanistan. I will vote for that. Sending $400 million for corrupt infrastructure expenses during a time of war is a great way to bring anybody home. Let’s bring them home. The gentleman will have a chance to do that tomorrow.

But then I want to go back to his things. What do you want to invest? No. He just ignored the facts. This is not just about foreclosed properties. It’s about abandoned properties. He says do I want to invest? He said do I want to buy it? Does he know who owns that? Could I get the address from him. And what the gentleman said, he said of course you can find out who owns it; it’s not hard.

We believe that there are properties where you can’t find the owner. Now, the gentleman got the picture. He must know about the property.

Would you give us the address and the name of the responsible owner so we can tell the city not to use public money?

I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BACHUS. Well, let me ask you this—Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. No. I will yield for the purpose of asking the gentleman a question.

He said it’s possible to find the address and the owner. I am asking him to live up to what he said. Can he tell us who the owner is? He’s got the picture of the property. He says, no, you don’t have to spend public money to tear it down. Go after the responsible owner.

I ask the gentleman, can he tell us who is the responsible owner? I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BACHUS. It was the person that you wrote the check to. You have to buy it, and you wrote the check out. So you know who the owner is. Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. The gentleman is wrong. I reclaim my time. Mr. BACHUS. You wrote the check to somebody.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Please instruct the gentleman as to the rules. He is blatantly wrong. It is not simply purchasing property. This gives the city money, and maybe that’s why they are so wrong on this. They don’t understand the program. It includes giving the city money to go in—

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself another minute, because these people take a lot of work to get them to explain it.

The fact is that it isn’t simply to buy it from a responsible owner. It includes money, as we have tried to explain to them, to demolish property. In fact, in the cities of Detroit and Cleveland, they specifically asked us—the gentlewoman from Los Angeles amended it—you can use city money to demolish property when there is no owner. So, no, there is no—you don’t write a check to someone who has abandoned the property.

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BACHUS. Well, let me ask you this: The IG said they couldn’t trace some of this money, and I think we’ve all figured that out. If we don’t know whom we’re paying—

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I reclaim my time to point out the evasion.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself another 30 seconds.

The gentleman made a big point of saying, buy the property from this person. He doesn’t know who owns the property. No one knows who owns the property because no one owns the property. They walked away from it.

And what we’re saying is part of this is not to pay off the bank. And I will say, last point, and as you know, the taxpayers shouldn’t do it. In the bill that passed the conference committee which authorized this billion dollars, we said that the money should come not from the taxpayers but from large financial institutions that have more than $50 billion in assets and hedge funds with more than $10 billion. Republican opposition killed it. I’m going to refile that bill today.

Now I invite my Republican colleagues to join me and we will sponsor this bill, and it’s in the committee that the gentleman chairs. Let’s pass a bill that says all the time to knock down property where they can’t find the owner will get it from the large banks and from the large hedge funds. And if the gentleman will agree with that, then this whole argument about the deficit will disappear.

But I will predict, Mr. Chairman, that they will find that that’s not so persuasive, and they will put up with the rhetoric which it means saving money for the large bank.

Mrs. BIGGERT. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY G. MILLER).

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Well, my good friend Mr. FRANK knows you can go to any company and they’ll tell you who owns the property: either the person lost it to a bank that had a loan on it or the bank owns it now; and if they didn’t have a loan on it, they still own the property. And if the property’s been abandoned, under rules of public safety, the city can go and demolish a property for public safety measures.

But the difference is—I’m glad that Mr. FRANK said he disagrees with the Obama administration because I think they’re wrong, too, but in this case I think you’re wrong.

This proposal does not make any sense. We believe we’re on the side of the people who are paying taxes in this country. Many are going through foreclosure. Many are out of work. We’ve taken your tax dollars and we’ve decided to give it to somebody else to buy property from the very banks that they take and say are so awful.

Now, there’s been a lot of predatory loans made in this country. Lenders should not have made loans to people. They took advantage of people, no doubt. But then they foreclosed on those very people and we give private groups and government entities the ability to go buy the property from those banks, take and refurbish it, and sell it to people.

Now I will state again, in California, you can earn over $68,000 and buy one of these homes. You can earn between $73,000 and $80,000 and live in Hawaii, Virginia, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Utah, Alaska, Colorado, New Hampshire, and qualify to pick up a very good deal. Sometimes it might be based on who you know that has the house currently. Are you affiliated with somebody at the city at a good level or the county? Or do you know one of these people at the non-government agencies on the board of directors, and you say, Hey, my cousin would like to buy one of these houses. And by the way, he’d like a good deal. There is nothing in the bill that precludes that. The bill says clearly that you have to sell it for less than you paid and reinvested in it. It does not say how much less you have to sell it for or how much you sell it for.

Now I will state again, Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.
Mr. Chairman from day one, the majority of this Congress promised the American people that we would focus like a laser on producing results. And over the past 2 months, we have already begun to deliver on that promise by upending the culture of spending that prevailed in Washington and rebuilding the trust of the American people.

This problem is one of the most important thing government can do right now is to create an environment that fosters opportunity for people. But if you talk to the small businesses and entrepreneurs who create the jobs, they feel if a explosion of government debt is threatening their ability to innovate and compete.

Unless we move swiftly to change course, our economy will be consumed by fears of future tax increases, inflations and borrowing costs.

That's why our majority is dedicated to our cut-and-grow agenda, cutting spending and job-destroying regulations and growing private sector jobs in the economy.

Yesterday I took another significant step toward returning spending to 2008 levels. Today we offer Members a chance through the YouCut program to cut an additional $1 billion in waste. This legislation, endorsed by millions of voters in your state, would terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, a pot of money, as the other side will tell you, that enables State and local governments to buy and foreclosed and abandoned property.

Instead of benefiting at-risk homeowners facing foreclosure, however, this program may instead create perverse incentives for banks and other lenders to foreclose on troubled borrowers.

Instead of benefiting at-risk homeowners facing foreclosure, however, this program may instead create perverse incentives for banks and other lenders to foreclose on troubled borrowers. The people's House is drawing a firm line in the sand against wasteful spending and inefficient government programs, and I urge my colleague the support this legislation.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. How much time remains on both sides, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIR. The gentleman from Massachusetts has 4 minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from Illinois has 3 minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from Ohio has 3 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Massachusetts, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. GARY G. MILLER).

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

My good friend Mr. FRANK brought up a good point. He said, Well, show me where any of these egregious things and illegal things have occurred where there's some sort of bad deal. Well, I can't show you any because there are no requirements. You could take one of these nonprofit, nongovernment entities out here that bought a house. They have $180,000 in the house. One of the board members' cousins could buy that house for $100,000, and it does not violate the requirements within the bill because it says you have to sell that house for less than the acquisition and rehabilitation prices. It does not say how much less. It says that you must not exceed an amount.

So my good friend is absolutely correct. I cannot show you an egregious act because there is no egregious act defined within the legislation. And that's the problem with the bill. I believe we are trying to say that the Republicans are on the side of the taxpayers. We believe that we need to do for the country to create jobs. And if we leave $7 billion in the economy based on the basic money multiplier of 10 percent, it creates $70 billion worth of economy and generation.

We believe in that. We do believe for our rules. And we believe property. A person who loses their home to go into foreclosure, and they live in California, and they have $180,000 and $68,000, and all that person can do that lost their home is wipe the tears away.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I yield myself the balance of my time.

I appreciate the gentleman's acknowledgement. With all of their efforts, there are cases of abandoned homes, they couldn't find one example of where that abuse took place. In fact, there are a set of rules and restrictions that HUD has that I will submit under general prints. But let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let's let
DEAR CHAIRMAN BACHUS: I am writing to express my strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) that has repeatedly refused to do the job correctly. Just two days ago, HSBC suspended all foreclosures after an investigation by federal regulators uncovered "problems in the company's lending, documentation, and signing off of affidavits and other documents supporting foreclosures, and in HSBC's management of third-party law firms retained to carry out foreclosures." Rather than eliminating the only lifelines that help people from losing their homes, we should be increasing that help. It is irresponsible to eliminate these programs at a time when our nation needs them most.

Thank you for your consideration.

March 7, 2011.

Hon. SPENCER BACHUS,
Chairman, Financial Services Committee, House of Representatives, 2129 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

I am writing to express my strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP)
Termination Act. NSP has helped cities across the country address and mitigate the deleterious effects that vacant and blighted properties have on neighborhoods and property values as a result of the foreclosure crisis, communities throughout the country, including Los Angeles, face significant challenges as foreclosed homes create a vicious cycle of foreclosed home values, and lower property values. NSP has been instrumental in helping to stem this downward spiral by addressing the negative effects of abandoned foreclosed properties.

In the City of Los Angeles, where, over the past four years, we have an estimated 39,000 foreclosed homes, NSP has played a critical role stabilizing our fragile housing market and helping to construct and rehabilitate a total of 1,200 housing units. Furthermore, at a time when employment in our construction industry is at an all-time high, NSP has created more than 900 jobs spurring Los Angeles’ economic recovery.

Given the economic challenges facing cities today, I urge the committee to continue funding for the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. Very truly yours,

ANTONIO R. VILLARAIGOSA, Mayor.

NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING PRESERVATION & DEVELOPMENT.

New York City, March 9, 2011.

Rep. Spencer Backus, Chairman,
Rep. Barney Frank, Ranking Member,
House Financial Services Committee, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

Re H.R. 859—’’The HAMP Termination Act of 2011’’; H.R. 861—’’NSP Termination Act’’.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: I am writing this letter to express the City of New York’s opposition to the above-referenced bills coming before the House Financial Services Committee. These measures would eliminate crucial foreclosure prevention and neighborhood stabilization support available to homeowners and communities grappling with the devastating effects of the foreclosure crisis here in New York City.

The Home Affordable Modification Program (HAMP) has been an invaluable tool for homeowners throughout the city who have unsustainable mortgages. Data shows us that permanent HAMP modifications have on average saved homeowners almost $900 more in monthly payments than the savings achieved by non-HAMP modifications ($1200 vs. $320). Of the permanent modifications reported by the Center for New York City Neighborhood’s extensive network of service providers, 46% are HAMP modifications (479 out of 1036), which represents 6% of all modifications nationwide.

Without HAMP foreclosure prevention efforts would be greatly diminished. HAMP has been critically important in moving the mortgage industry toward more affordable, sustainable modifications for homeowners who have the ability to stay in their homes. We know from counselors on the ground that the borrower-friendly modifications have become more affordable and “HAMP-like” since the full roll-out of the program, further demonstrating HAMP’s impact. However, HAMP must be preserved because even as the quality of non-HAMP modifications improves, they are not nearly as beneficial as HAMP modifications.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) provides states and municipalities with much-needed funds to stabilize neighborhoods hardest-hit-by the foreclosure crisis. In NYC, we have used NSP funds to acquire and rehabilitate foreclosed homes for resale as affordable housing. NSP funds are reducing the city’s stock of vacant, foreclosed homes that are a blight on communities. To date, we have acquired 65 homes in the Bronx, and Brooklyn, and on track to buy and restore 25 more. We are poised to launch a program that will offer NSP funds as downpayment assistance for homeowners to buy foreclosed homes. These programs accomplish dual goals of incentivizing homeownership while also improving the housing stock in neighborhoods devastated by the foreclosure crisis.

NSP funding has also been used to assist multifamily, rental buildings in distress, providing long-term affordability for income-eligible families. As a result of the economic downturn, New York City is witnessing an increase in the number of rental buildings with deteriorating physical conditions, with many of these buildings in default on their mortgages. Addressing the needs of these properties is putting a strain on our typical funding sources, making NSP a particularly valuable tool. We have expended over $3M of NSP funds on the acquisition of foreclosed multi-family buildings, creating over 80 rental units in the Bronx and Brooklyn. At least $10 million in future NSP funds will be targeted towards stabilizing some of the most distressed multi-family buildings here in New York City.

As outlined here, the aforementioned programs offer critical assistance to New York City families and neighborhoods suffering from the harmful effects of the foreclosure crisis. These programs’ positive impacts are extensive and they are compelling. To eliminate them now would be unwise. For these reasons, the City of New York opposes their termination.

Sincerely,

RAFAEL E. CESTERO, Commissioner.

Mrs. BIGGERT, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The gentleman might be interested to know that there was a HOPE VI bill that was an amendment to that, to H.R. 3524, made by Representative Sheila Jackson Lee. And it’s that right there. And we maintain HUD’s authority to issue demolition only grants, and that failed by a recorded vote of 186-221. Voting “no” on that was the gentleman, Mr. Frank and Ms. Waters, Mr. Ellison, Ms. Velázquez.

I have been listening to all of this, and I think that everybody knows, we all want to get the housing market back on track. We all want to be able to help those that are in trouble. But many of the people on the other side have said that if you end these programs there will be nothing, and that’s just not true. Of the 4.1 million mortgage modifications that were completed, 3.5 million were done by the private sector with no government program and not a dime from the taxpayers. So there is a market out there.

There is also the Home Affordable Refinance Program, HARP, for homeowners. And don’t forget the Hardest Hit Fund, which was established. And in 2008, $300 million in guarantees were committed for homeowners, a voluntary FHA program. $475 million had been appropriated to Neighbor Works for foreclosure counseling. And finally, there are countless local, State and private sector initiatives.

So let us not forget that this is being taken care of. And rather than have a program that really doesn’t affect those that have been foreclosed on, it really is a program for communities, not-for-profits, for States, and it can cause incentives for banks and other lenders to foreclose on troubled borrowers, worsening and prolonging the housing credit crisis.

Let us get back to what this bill really does, and it doesn’t help taxpayers.

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Chair, I rise today to urge my colleagues to vote no on H.R. 861 the “Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act.” Mr. Chair, the termination of a program designed and dedicated to the stabilization of neighborhoods suffering through the foreclosure crisis is simply the wrong approach.

NSP was created to help stabilize communities that have suffered from foreclosures and abandonment. The program will continue to work towards accomplishing these goals by purchasing and redeveloping foreclosed and abandoned homes in communities that were distressed by the economic downturn. NSP grants provide much needed assistance to state and local governments to acquire, demolish and rehabilitate blighted properties.

NSP funds also help to redevelop hard-hit communities, create jobs and grow local economies. HUD estimates that NSP alone will support 93,000 jobs nationwide once fully implemented. Mr. Chair, with unemployment at 9 percent and many communities still seriously suffering from slow job growth, it is imperative that we support programs like NSP that create jobs.

Mr. Chair, vacant and blighted properties have a serious effect on neighborhoods and property values. The U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National Community Development Association and many others have spoke out in opposition of NSP. I listen to the voices from the people on the ground in these communities. H.R. 861 does not address the urgent needs of these distressed communities. I urge a no vote on H.R. 861.

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act. The depth of our foreclosure crisis is astounding. According to Realty Trac we witnessed over one million foreclosures last year and we predict we are on track to break that unfortunate record once again this year.

Furthermore, the same group found that the nearly 7,000 foreclosures each of the last three years; there were more than 1100 foreclosures in just the first two months of this year. This is a three-fold increase from a decade ago.

This crisis hurts individuals, families, neighborhoods, and communities. In my area of Ohio, the foreclosures were not due to an irresponsible home buying "boom and bust" cycle with dramatic increases and failing home values—but rather due to high unemployment caused by the deep recession; sharp declines in population, along with families who were victimized by predatory lenders and the lack of loan modification standards.

The result has been an almost doubling of the vacancy rate made up mostly of abandoned foreclosed properties. The City of Dayton currently has 15,000 vacant excess units with some neighborhoods seeing half of their units vacant.

Foreclosed properties sit vacant for long periods of time, and not only become an eyesore, but a threat to public health and safety. In response, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program was created to help address this crisis with which our communities struggle.

The resources that this program has brought to bear are continuing to make a considerable difference. Not only have hundreds of vacant units been purchased and sold, but the structures with value were rehabilitated and sold. In addition, the program has allowed localities to partner with local builders, trade schools for at-risk youth, universities and nonprofits, to further leverage these funds.

I have sat on this floor and voted time and again to cut wasteful spending and terminate ineffective government programs, but I cannot vote to end the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. In Southeast Ohio NSP has proven its value and demonstrated its effectiveness at addressing one of the biggest problems to confront our communities.

In Southeast Ohio this program has moved long standing blight. It is positively affecting real estate values, training at risk youth and also creating jobs. For all of these reasons, I urge my colleagues to join me in voting against H.R. 861, The Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Chair, I rise today to oppose this spurious legislation to eliminate programs that have helped our towns and cities recover from the horrible housing crisis that has taken hold of these communities.

The intent of this program which I voted for was to stabilize neighborhoods. The legislation allowed hard-working American families in danger of losing their homes to refinance into lower-cost government-insured mortgages they can afford to repay.

I was able to hold foreclosure workshops in cities and towns throughout my district to help these families at risk of losing their homes. With my community’s help, many families were able to stay in their homes, keeping neighborhoods intact.

I believe that more money should be used to keep people in their homes. To the administration’s credit, they attempted to create other programs that would do that. The Republican majority has spent the last weeks attempting to eliminate those programs also.

The intent of the NSP legislation, begun more than three years ago, was to quickly and efficiently distribute funds to neighborhoods and communities that have a large number of foreclosed, vacant, or bank-owned properties. The local government’s goal should be to utilize the funds to secure communities and neighborhoods that have unique needs as a result of the foreclosure crisis.

The use of non-governmental agencies in the NSP program was innovative. HUD could have further been innovative and used rent to own to keep people in their homes. NSP also seeks to prevent future foreclosures by requiring housing counseling for families receiving homeowner assistance. HUD seeks to protect future homebuyers by requiring States and local governments to ensure that new homes purchased under NSP receive homeowner-ownership counseling and obtain a mortgage loan from a lender who agrees to comply with sound lending practices.

Defeat this legislation and vote to keep people in their homes and our communities living and vibrant.

I would like to submit this article from the Florida Times-Union into the RECORD about the amount of Jacksonville homes underwater. [From the Florida Times-Union, March 8, 2011]

NEARLY HALF OF JACKSONVILLE HOME MORTGAGES UNDERWATER AT END OF 2010

BY KEVIN TURNER

MARCH 8.—Nearly half of mortgages residences in Jacksonville were underwater at the end of 2010. Primarily it was because their values have sunk below the amount their owners owe on their mortgages.

The phenomenon is also known as "negative equity." According to real estate data aggregator CoreLogic, another 4.8 percent of all mortgaged Jacksonville mortgages were "near negative equity," or owed the same or nearly the same as much as their homes were worth.

Combined, 51.8 percent of Jacksonville homes are underwater or nearly so, according to a report released today by real estate data aggregator CoreLogic.

Although sinking values were thought to be the chief cause of homes in mortgage debt are also a factor, CoreLogic noted.

The local combined underwater percentage is significantly higher than the national average of 27.9 percent of mortgaged homes nationwide that are underwater or near underwater. Some 31.1 percent were fully underwater.

The difference in the statistic locally and nationally underscores the lingering effects of bursting of the real estate value bubble in hardest-hit Florida, Nevada, Arizona and California.

The Associated Press also reported:

Nationally, the number of Americans who owe more on their mortgages than their homes are worth rose at the end of last year, preventing many people from selling their homes in an already weak housing market.

The percentage of homes underwater at the end of the fourth quarter, at 23.1 percent, was up from 22.5 percent, or 10.8 million homes, in the same or nearly the same as much as their homes were worth.

Nationally, the number of underwater mortgages nation-wide had fallen in the previous three quarters, mostly because more homes had fallen into foreclosure.

Underwater mortgages typically rise when home prices fall. Home prices in December hit their lowest point since the housing bust in 11 of 20 major U.S. metro areas. In a healthy housing market, about 5 percent of homeowners are underwater.

About 2.4 million people have only 5 percent equity or less in their homes, putting them near the tipping point if prices in their area fall.

Roughly two-thirds of homeowners in Nevada with a negative home equity, the worst in the country. Arizona, Florida, Michigan and California were next, with nearly 50 percent of homeowners with mortgages in those states.

Okahoma had the smallest percentage of underwater homeowners in the October-december quarter, at 5.8 percent. Only nine states recorded percentages less than 10 percent.

When a mortgage is underwater, the homeowner often can’t qualify for mortgage refinancing and has little recourse but to continue making payments in hopes the property eventually regains its value.

Foreclosed properties also are bringing in prices below the amount owed on the mortgage.

That means homes purchased at the height of the real estate boom are unlikely to recoup lost value for years.

Underwater mortgages also dampen home sales. Homeowners who might otherwise sell their home refuse to take a loss or can’t get the bank to agree to a short sale—when a lender lets a borrower sell their property for less than the amount owed on the mortgage.

Home sales have been weaker in areas where there are a large number of homeowners with negative equity.

The total amount of negative equity increased to $751 billion nationwide, up from $74 billion in the previous quarter.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Chair, I rise today in opposition to the Neighborhood Stabilization Termination Act, or H.R. 861, a bill to eliminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP).

I would like to shed light on the positive impact the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has had on communities across the country and particularly in Chicago, Illinois, as well as dispel myths my Republican colleagues have been passing off as the truth.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program is one of several programs targeted for elimination by House Republicans. These are programs that are helping middle-class and working-class Americans avoid losing their homes through the calamity of foreclosure. While imperfect, these programs are literally keeping a roof over people’s heads, keeping families together, and preserving the fabric of American neighborhoods.

Let’s not forget, Congress bailed out financial institutions when they hit rock bottom and Congress acted to shore up the economy when it was on the brink of a deeper crisis.

But now Republicans are saying we can’t afford programs that lend a hand to American homeowners in their hour of greatest need? That’s not the America I know, that’s not the America that families need, and that is not the America we were sent to Washington to protect.

Let’s help our neighbors and our neighborhoods and not leave them to fend for themselves during these tough times.

Recently, several worthy and notable organizations, such as Chicanos Por la Causa (CPLC), have been specifically targeted by my Republican colleagues for the funds they’ve received under the Neighborhood Stabilization Program. Let me make this clear, Chicanos Por La Causa is the lead applicant for a national consortium of non-profit affordable housing developers that have received federal funding to revitalize neighborhoods in eight states and the District of Columbia that have been negatively impacted by foreclosures and abandoned properties. CPLC, which was awarded $137 million to address foreclosed and vacant properties, submitted one of the highest-scoring plans and CPLC increased the equitable allocation of NSP funds by providing the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) with important tools to help American communities. Specifically, it provided HUD with a method for investing through 13 consortium members in a mix of urban and rural communities that have been hardest hit by the foreclosure crisis, and in predominately Latino communities through organizations that provide culturally and linguistically competent services.

Currently, there are approximately 1.3 million Latinos who are in the process of foreclosure or have already lost their homes. There is no doubt the Latino community has been disproportionately affected by the foreclosure crisis. For this reason, Chicanos Por La Causa, together with the National Association for Latino Community Asset Builders, have helped blighted communities repair the devastation and distress that comes with abandoned properties. The Resurrection Project is one of the organizations under this consortium that is in my own backyard in Chicago. The Resurrection Project has served the Back of the Yards community in my district by investing $12 million in NSP funds to help stabilize the community. Back of the Yards is one of the poorest and most blighted communities in my district and one of the hardest hit by the foreclosure crisis. These funds will certainly assist with the recovery efforts and revitalize this historic neighborhood in the city of Chicago.

Mr. Chair, our nation is facing extraordinarily dire economic times. American homeowners, our neighborhoods, and our communities do not deserve to have Congress turn our backs on them in the hour of greatest need. I believe the Neighborhood Stabilization Program is vital to our cities, our communities, and to the neighborhoods that have been hardest hit by the largest housing crisis of our generation. This is why I am opposing the Neighborhood Stabilization Termination Act. Two weeks ago I submitted a letter for the record during the Insurance, Housing and Community Opportunity Subcommittee hearing on foreclosure mitigation programs targeted for elimination. The letter was submitted on behalf of the National Association of Counties, National League of Cities, U.S. Conference of Mayors, National Community Development Association, National Association of Counties, National Economic Development, Council of State Community Development Agencies, and the Enterprise Community Partners, Inc., all of whom support this very valuable neighborhood revitalization program. I ask my colleagues to stand with our neighborhoods and our communities and vote no on this bill.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Chair, I rise in opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act. The Neighborhood Stabilization Program was established in 2008 to help stabilize communities across America that has suffered from foreclosures and abandonment. Neighborhood Stabilization Program funds give states and local governments the tools needed to purchase and redevelop foreclosed and abandoned homes.

Without this funding whole neighborhoods suffer sliding real estate values, increases in crime, and decreases in the overall morale of its citizens.

From the total Neighborhood Stabilization Program appropriations of $7 billion, HUD estimates that 100,000 properties in the hardest-hit areas will be impacted.

In my district, Dallas, Texas, a little over 7.9 million dollars was awarded through Neighborhood Stabilization Program funding. At the beginning of the foreclosure crisis Dallas' housing market suffered from an average of 300 foreclosures a month. The City of Dallas identified 12 areas in the city that can benefit from this funding.

Without programs like the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, neighborhoods in my area would have nowhere else to turn. Neighborhood Stabilization Program funds help to redevelop hard-hit communities, creates jobs, and grows local economies.

With nearly 14 million Americans out of a job, Americans need a Republican Congress that works to create jobs and strengthen the economy.

In the last 11 weeks, the House Republicans have passed reckless spending proposals estimated to destroy 700,000 jobs and stall our economic growth.

I encourage my colleagues to stand by struggling neighborhoods and vote no on this measure.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Chair, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) Termination Act. This bill stops in its tracks the successful efforts to rebuild neighborhoods hardest hit by the foreclosure crisis. The Neighborhood Stabilization Program is making a difference by allowing cities and states to rehabilitate foreclosed and abandoned homes that are driving down home prices and destabilizing neighborhoods.

In Rhode Island, we were hit early and hard by the housing crisis. We currently have the fourth highest unemployment rate, and Rhode Islanders are struggling with mortgage payments due to the loss of jobs through no fault of their own. This program has provided the state with much needed resources to stabilize our housing market and create new low-income housing. Rhode Island housing agencies have warned me that ending this program would be detrimental to their efforts to build homes, save buildings, stabilize blighted neighborhoods, and most importantly, put Rhode Islanders to work.

In my district, 80 out of Rhode Island's NSP funds went to creating a new building that houses 12 homeless veterans, a police station, and commercial space. This funding also helped create two additional apartments for homeless veterans in a nearby building that also includes a social services office for the residents. This legislation would stop projects that are already planned to create jobs that would support 90 affordable homes and apartments in the most at-risk neighborhoods.

Mr. Chair, without the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, Rhode Island would not have been able to undertake this remarkable partnership, as well as numerous other successful examples around the State that have brought together Federal, State, business and community organization efforts.

I urge my colleagues to vote against this measure.

Mr. DINELLI. Mr. Chair, I rise in opposition to H.R. 861, which will terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP), a promising foreclosure prevention program directed toward responsible homeowners. Today, we are considering terminating a program that helps stabilize communities rocked by massive foreclosure and home abandonment. With about 13.7 million Americans struggling with unemployment, I urge the Republican leadership to stop eliminating programs that work to create jobs and grow local economies.

It is time to be constructive, not destructive.

Mr. Speaker, I am starkly opposed to H.R. 861, which would terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP). This important program provides grants to state and local governments and eligible entities to buy and restore abandoned and foreclosed properties. This funding allows the hardest hit communities, like those in my home state of Michigan, to start tearing down dilapidated properties with an eye toward shrinking struggling cities and rehabilitating healthy neighborhoods. This funding helps increase nearby property values and decrease the risk of foreclosure for remaining residents. It also enables communities to cut down on havens for criminal activity, reducing law enforcement costs.

Several communities in my Congressional District, like Dearborn, Taylor, and Inkster have benefited from this program, and its continued funding is crucial for local governments to respond to the mortgage crisis. If my Republican colleagues refuse to extend NSP as a wise public investment, I extend an invitation for them to visit my home state and witness the critical impact this program has on hard-hit communities.

Mr. Chair, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote no on this bill.

Mrs. BIGGERT. I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and shall be considered read.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 861
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the "NSP Termination Act".

SEC. 2. RESCISSION OF $1 BILLION FUNDING FOR THIRD ROUND OF NEIGHBORHOOD STABILIZATION PROGRAM.
Effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, there are rescinded and permanently canceled all unobligated balances remaining available as of such date of enactment of the amounts made available by section 1097(a) of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Pub. Law 111-203; 124 Stat. 2209; 42 U.S.C. 5301 note).

SEC. 3. TERMINATION OF NEIGHBORHOOD STABILIZATION PROGRAM.
(a) REPEAL.—Sections 2301 through 2303 of the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (Public Law 110-289; 122 Stat. 2650; 42 U.S.C. 5301 note) are hereby repealed and the provisions specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall continue to be governed by any provisions of

(b) TREATMENT OF REMAINING FUNDS.—
(1) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—Notwithstanding the repeal under subsection (a), any amounts available under the provisions specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall continue to be governed by any provisions of

H.R. 861
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the "NSP Termination Act".
The government can’t be there for them. And, on the other hand, the Democratic Caucus, we believe that, in the proper circumstances, the government has an important role and does need to be there for people, and when we see property values dropping, whole neighborhoods destroyed, that we should do something about it.

This motion to strike the enacting clause, according to Rule XVIII, clause 9, “if carried, shall constitute a rejection of the bill.”

And, Mr. Chair, I urge that we do reject this bill. This bill is an affront and an insult at a time when Americans have seen over 4 million foreclosures across this Nation, devastating whole communities, devastating communities and wiping out city and municipal budgets, so that cities, when they have abandoned properties in their neighborhoods, are left with tearing them down and demolishing the nickel of the taxpayer in that city when, in fact, this is a community-wide problem.

There’s no money in many cities to do the demolition. So what will happen is that city will sit there and sit there as neighbors look on and see the property values in their homes plummet. And what we’ll see, Mr. Chair, is people leaving dogs there.

Perhaps the house will be an attractive nuisance. Perhaps some crime will be committed there, drug dealing there, dead animals left there, and neighborhoods will fall deeper and deeper in despair.

I grew up in the city of Detroit. I’m honored to represent the Fifth District of Minneapolis today, but I grew up in the city of Detroit, and I saw how the foreclosures in that city ripped that town apart. And the good people of that city had to sit by and watch folks burn houses. They would put them on fire, and years later, no money to demolish them that the city had, and it just helped folks say that, You know what? I’m going to leave this city because I can’t stand to live here with that big hulk right next to my home.

Who’s going to help out?

Well, according to the Republican Caucus, that’s not the proper role of government. And this is really what this is all about.

Mr. Chairman, I’ve heard our friends in the Republican Caucus talk about jobs, yet they haven’t introduced one single jobs bill, and we’ve been here for 11 weeks.

They talk about the deficit and go on and on about nauseous about putting debt on our children and grandchildren. And yet, when they had the chance to raise revenue so that we could, in fact, pay the bills of this country, they were absolutely and adamantly opposed to it.

But now, when we see Americans have their neighborhoods slipping into oblivion, slipping into a situation where people can’t live in their neighborhoods and people can’t sell their homes so they’re just suffering, the Republican Caucus said, There’s nothing we can do for you either.

They don’t really demonstrate a commitment to jobs. They don’t really demonstrate a commitment to even dealing with the deficit, at least not through revenue raising. They have a commitment to set Americans adrift, on their own.

I make this motion to correct the record on this Neighborhood Stabilization Program. This isn’t a broken or ineffective program that should be eliminated. It is a vitally important program for local and State governments that need all the resources they can get to address those neighborhoods that are overrun by foreclosures.

According to HUD, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has supported close to 100,000 jobs nationwide. They will be eliminated if we pass this bill. That’s right. The Republicans, again, are cutting another 100,000 jobs for working Americans.

So, Mr. Chair, what does the Neighborhood Stabilization Program do?

It helps local and State governments renovate abandoned and foreclosed properties. It helps local governments revitalize communities instead of watching these neighborhoods deteriorate. It gives communities the ability to get back on their feet as quickly as possible.

In my district, the city of Minneapolis has put NSP funding to good use. Thomas Streitz is the director of Housing and Policy Development for the city of Minneapolis, and he explains: “The Neighborhood Stabilization Program has enabled the city of Minneapolis to stabilize neighborhoods throughout the city affected by foreclosure. Funding to date has impacted more than 530 properties, and with the additional funding sought, 56 more properties could be rehabilitated, bringing even more homeowners back into neighborhoods.”

I believe the NSP is a good investment.

The question is on the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes had appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chair, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 183, noes 240, not voting 9, as follows:

[Roll No. 182]

Aker...
MESSRS. BENISHEK, MANZULLO, ALTMIERE, HELLER and TERRY and MS. HERRERA BEUTLER changed their vote from "aye" to "no." Messrs. GENE GREEN of Texas and RUPPERSBERGER and Ms. LEE changed their vote from "no" to "aye." So the motion was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. ELLISON

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in part B of House Report 112–34.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

For Wyoming: $5,000,000.00.

The CHAIR, pursuant to House Resolution 170, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chair, I yield myself such time as the Chair may allow.

The middle class is shrinking and deficits are rising because the Republicans are giving a pass to special interests who cheated homeowners and wrecked our economy. Instead of working to keep middle class families in their homes, the Republican plan is to foreclose on the American middle class.

The American people sent us here to protect the American Dream, not to perpetuate a Wall Street nightmare. Democrats want to foreclose on the middle class to pay for their mistakes. The American Dream is not to perpetuate a Wall Street nightmare. Democrats want to foreclose on the middle class to pay for their mistakes.

The legislation on the floor today proposes cutting funding for the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, Republicans want to foreclose on the middle class, and my amendment forces Members to look at how this legislation will impact their State. So far, for each Member, if you read my amendment, you will see how much funding may be cut from your State. My feeling is that before Republicans vote to cut funding for a successful housing program and a foreclosure mitigation program, they should know how much funding is at risk for their State and what the people back home are going to think about their vote.

This legislation to cut housing funding makes it clear that the majority is not focused on creating jobs. The Neighborhood Stabilization Program helps local communities redevelop abandoned and foreclosed properties, and that funding helps to create jobs. It takes workers to demolish an abandoned building.

Overall, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has created about 99,000 jobs. This legislation to cut NSP funding is just another bill offered up by the majority that will actually cut jobs. The unemployment rate is currently 8.9 percent. This rate is far too high. It is wasting human capital. People's skills and talents are sitting on the sidelines instead of being put to good use and earning a good paycheck. Unemployed Americans are ready to get back to work, and we must use every tool at our disposal to create new jobs.

Instead of creating jobs, the Republican majority is launching an attack on American workers and foreclosing on the American Dream. The Republican plan to cut funding and cut jobs won't help our economy. It's going to do the opposite. It's going to hold back our economic recovery. The continuing resolution passed last month by the majority would cut $60 billion from programs and agencies that help the middle class and working families.

Economist Mark Zandi has estimated that, first of all, there's never been a 5 minutes.

I wish we would have taken the time to review those and say how was the money spent, but HUD did some work for us. So let’s see what HUD did. HUD and OIG audited the State of Kansas Neighborhood Stabilization Program, NSP1, and found that the State improperly obligated more than $12 million of its NSP1 funds. HUD and OIG audited the Sacramento Housing Redevelopment Agency of Sacramento, California, and found the agency didn’t administer its NSP funds in accordance with HUD rules and regulations. Specifically, it allowed ineligible properties to be rehabilitated; did not adequately monitor projects, which resulted in the permitting the developer to make unnecessary upgrades and overinflated construction budgets; did not ensure that it met the reporting requirements; and lacked management controls. I wish we would have audited this one in this amendment, too.

HUD and OIG audited the city and county of Denver, Colorado, NSP1, and found that the city improperly obligated more than $1.5 of its NSP funds by recording its funds as obligated. HUD and OIG reviewed the city of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and found that the city generally administered its program, however sometimes inconsistent with identifying obligations and was not ensuring that obligations were reported to HUD. On Louisville, Kentucky, again, very similar to the previous.

Augusta, Georgia. Did not have internal controls in place to perform continuous and routine monitoring of its obligations. Inadequate written procedures and developer agreements to ensure that properties to be sold to eligible buyers were not excluded by the necessary requirements, which means they probably were selling it at too much money.

So although I do support the amendment at hand, I wish it would have reviewed phase one and two.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Chair, I rise to claim time in opposition.

The CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I'm not opposed to this amendment. This amendment only deals with stage three of a project that should have only been one phase. Now, I wish they would have talked about phase two because I wish you would study where the money went on phase two. Because in phase two alone, we give away $1.3 billion to nongovernment entities, incorporated businesses that are nonprofit.

But the point here is that we did not stop a foreclosure. We just gave away in NSP2 $1.3 billion. Of that, Neighborhood Lending Partners received $50 million. They do not have to pay it back. Now, they can take that $50 million—I'm sure they're a very reputable company. I'm not accusing anybody of anything. But they can sell those houses for any amount to whomever they want as long as it's below the purchase price. And they can demolish the house. Community Builders, Inc., $78.6 million; Los Angeles Neighborhood Housing, Services, Inc., $60 million; Neighborhood Lending Partners of West Florida, Inc., $30 million; Chicanos Por la Causa, Inc., I wish we would have taken the time to review those and say how was the money spent, but HUD did some work for us. So let’s see what HUD did. HUD and OIG audited the State of Kansas Neighborhood Stabilization Program, NSP1, and found that the State improperly obligated more than $12 million of its NSP1 funds. HUD and OIG audited the Sacramento Housing Redevelopment Agency of Sacramento, California, and found the agency didn’t administer its NSP funds in accordance with HUD rules and regulations. So although I do support the amendment at hand, I wish it would have reviewed phase one and two.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ELLISON. I yield myself the balance of my time.

So we can say let's amend and pretend, but let's just end.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.
Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota will be postponed.

Mr. HURT. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk made in order under the rule.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 5, line 10, after the period add the following: "All such unobligated balances so rescinded and permanently canceled should be retained in the General Fund of the Treasury for reducing the budget deficit of the Federal Government."

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 170, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. HURT) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. HURT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my colleagues, Mr. MILLER, Chairman BACHUS and Chairman BIGGERT, for their leadership on this very important issue.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program is another misdirected, multibillion-dollar bailout that hurts struggling homeowners by incentivizing lenders to foreclose properties rather than continue to work with those who are facing tough economic challenges.

At a time when our Nation faces over $14 trillion in debt, $1.6 trillion in deficit spending, and we are borrowing over every dollar we spend, we cannot continue to have taxpayers foot the bill for these unaccountable government programs that do nothing to solve the problems for which they were originally intended and harm our economic recovery. That is why I am offering an amendment to H.R. 861 which would direct all unobligated funds to be returned to the Treasury to reduce the deficit of the Federal Government once the program is terminated.

The people of Virginia’s Fifth District called for serious and bold change last November. By working to reduce the right thing. It is saying, we’re going to take a billion dollars back of your money, the taxpayers, and we’re going to pay off the deficit that we’ve created for you.

It’s about time we start paying down the debt. We cannot continue to spend dollars we don’t have. Forty percent of every dollar we spend today is financed not from the taxpayer and the hedge funds join us.

Mr. HURT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Thank you for yielding.

I totally support the gentleman from Virginia’s amendment. This is doing the right thing. It is saying, we’re going to take a billion dollars back of your money, the taxpayers, and we’re going to pay off the deficit that we’ve created for you.

It’s about time we start paying down the debt. We cannot continue to spend dollars we don’t have. Forty percent of every dollar we spend today is financed through the Treasury because we don’t have the money. We’re spending deficit dollars and it has to stop.

But I want to return to the argument that my good friend makes. And I respect my good friend. He knows that.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I don’t think there’s any-body exactly in opposition to the amendment because it doesn’t do anything, but there is some opposition to the rhetoric; so I will claim the time in opposition to the gentleman’s speech.

The CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. In the first place, there is a consistent misunderstanding on the Republican side manifested by their talking about this as a program that was foreclosed for that, of course, allows them conveniently to pretend that, for every piece of property that a city is stuck with, there is an entity that stood behind it that foreclosed and can be sued. But that’s not true.

This is not only about foreclosed property. It is about foreclosed and abandoned property, and there is property that has been abandoned. It has been abandoned by the owner who’s walked away. It has been abandoned by some financial institutions that did not have their money back. There is demonstrably property in the cities which cannot be traced.

The chairman of the committee displayed a picture before of a beat-up piece of property and said, Look at this piece of property. It’s so far gone, who would want to buy it? We said, No one would. It should be demolished. Tell us who owns it.

He said, You can always find out who owns it—except for that piece of property.

So it’s not just about foreclosed property. Somebody has to demolish property where there is no owner. Somebody has to demolish property where there is no responsible party standing behind it.

I left the Chamber to meet with three firefighters from the city of Fall River in my district. They were appalled at the notion that they would be left in the city of Fall River to deal with abandoned property, which is a set of fires. They did not have any help. So for that reason, I believe that we ought to be clear that this is not about only foreclosed property. And some property, by the way, has been foreclosed upon by entities that are bankrupt, by entities that have no funds.

The other point I would make, though, is this. I do agree with my colleagues that we should do something about the deficit. Now, I wish that they listened to that when we subsidized agriculture or when we sent money to Afghanistan and Iraq for their social purposes. But I have an alternative. I will repeat again, and they’ll ignore it all day, I know. In the bill that originally authorized this billion dollars, we required that it be funded not by the general revenues but by a special assessment on financial institutions that have $50 billion or more in assets and hedge funds at $10 billion.

Now, let me say this. Mr. Chairman. Members on the other side know this bill is unlikely to become law. Indeed, some have even said they understand the money will be spent before it can move. So the billion dollars is almost certainly going to be spent. My colleagues now have a choice. They can allow it to be spent by the taxpayers, or they can reconsider their opposition to our proposal of last summer and assert that on the large financial institutions and hedge funds, some of it, it is true, was caused by banks and some of it will go to banks.

But here’s the answer. Instead of complaining that some of this will go to banks, join us and have it all come from banks and hedge funds.

But please, Mr. Chairman, let’s not perpetuate the myth that, for every piece of property with which our poorer cities and rural areas are burdened, there is somebody they can go and sue and get it down. In fact, the gentleman from California himself has said, well, they can get a bulldozer and tear it down.

Those bulldozers cost money. The people driving the bulldozers cost money.

So we believe that the approach should be to take the money from the large financial institutions and from the hedge funds and take the billion dollars from them and provide it to municipalities and groups like Habitat for Humanity and others who will use it either to tear down the property, in some cases, or rehabilitate the property and make it affordable housing.

That, Mr. Chairman, is the choice between us. Again, I want to stress, this is the fact that much of the property existing in the cities is abandoned and will only be dealt with by the city spending its own money or, by our preferred mode, having the large financial institutions and the hedge funds join us.

So I hope at some point today, one member of the majority will tell us whether or not they agree, Mr. Chairman, that if this program survives, we should get it not from the taxpayer and not from the property taxpayers of our cities or rural areas but from the large financial institutions. That’s what I hope will happen.

The CHAIR. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HURT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER).

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Thank you for yielding.

I totally support the gentleman from Virginia’s amendment. This is doing the right thing. It is saying, we’re going to take a billion dollars back of your money, the taxpayers, and we’re going to pay off the deficit that we’ve created for you.

It’s about time we start paying down the debt. We cannot continue to spend dollars we don’t have. Forty percent of every dollar we spend today is financed through the Treasury because we don’t have the money. We’re spending deficit dollars and it has to stop.

But I want to return to the argument that my good friend makes. And I respect my good friend. He knows that.
Somebody owned a home sometime, someplace, somewhere. Now, the individual who owned it, because it wasn’t created by a miracle. Somebody built the house, somebody sold it to somebody, the individual might have gotten a loan out from the bank. If the individual could not pay that loan, the bank might have taken the house back. But the Federal Government and the local agencies look at taxes. We look at income taxes. The local governments, the city, the county, looks at property taxes. Somebody, some institution, is listed on the property tax bill.

Now, at some point in time, they’re going to continue to notice the owner, whoever it might be. If it’s an heir, you’re going to get a notice, and it’s going to say you did not pay your property taxes. At some point in time, that piece of property, home, vacated, abandoned, whatever it may be, is going up for a sale for property taxes.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. What if it is abandoned and it is of not much value and has to be torn down, so people buy it and tear it down?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I reclaim the balance of my time.

If it’s a public safety issue, a local government has a right to demolish property based on public safety. That assessment could be placed against the tax bill. At some point in time, the local government, if they so choose, if nobody wants to pay a dollar for that property, can buy it based on the tax basis for a dollar. The problem with that is, once the government entity buys the property, it’s taken off the tax rolls.

Some of my colleagues have talked about police and fire and the benefit to them. The worst thing you can do is eliminate funding through taxation to police and fire.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I would be happy to.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. We were told, for instance, by Detroit and Cleveland, they have abandoned property. There is no owner they can find. Who’s going to pay to knock it down?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I reclaim the balance of my time.

If you go to any title company, it will list who the owner of record is. Regardless, if you can find that entity or individual, it will list it. Regardless of who it is, at some point in time, it goes to a tax sale.

At that point in time, the local government or an investor can buy it at a much reduced price for just the tax lien against it. So if it’s abandoned and demolished and not worth anything, the tax bill is going to be very low. So somebody can pick up a very good deal on a piece of property by waiting for a tax sale. But if they choose not to and they want to go out and just buy it as a city or a county, they can do that and get a very good deal on it. So to assume that because nobody can find an owner of there, somebody is listed, and the government has a right to foreclose based on taxes.

I ask for an “aye” vote on the tax sale.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. FRANK).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. ELLISON

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the voice vote by which amendment No. 1 was rejected be vacated to the end that the Chair put the question de novo.

The CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The CHAIR. The earlier voice vote is vacated.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. ELLISON

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in part B of House Report 112–34.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has assisted local governments across the United States in alleviating many of the impacts of abandoned and foreclosed properties, including abandoned or foreclosed property, vacant properties, currently foreclosed and scheduled to be foreclosed, and in the process will be foreclosed; and

(2) the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has assisted local governments across the United States in alleviating many of the impacts of abandoned and foreclosed properties, including increased property tax revenues due to unpaid property taxes on abandoned and/or foreclosed properties;

(3) the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has supported the transition of abandoned and foreclosed properties back into the hands of property owners and helped bring about the recovery of local economies; and

(4) the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has increased housing choice and affordability, including public and assisted housing, by providing for State and local governments to redevelop abandoned and foreclosed homes; and

(5) by voting to terminate the Neighborhood Stabilization Program under this Act without a substitution, the Congress is eliminating an effective program that has been used to provide affordable housing, create jobs, leverage private investment, and improve communities.

the 100,000 properties that we’ve already helped, and the more that we could help.
I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIR. Mr. G. MILLER of California. If you want to talk about attractive nuisances, let’s talk about next April when people have to pay their taxes. You’re going to find out that government has become an incredible attractive nuisance to most people.

We’re talking about middle class is shrinking, yeah, we’re taxing them to death, and we’re not only taxing them to death, but we’re spending money on programs like this that is not an investment but is just a giveaway of tax dollars. Now we say we can’t find the data to support that we bought 100,000 properties, but let’s say we bought 100,000. Somebody has the money, the $6 billion going on $7 billion, that we’ve given them. That’s about 20,000 homes per State. Now you break that down to high-impact counties, compared to the millions of homes out there that are in foreclosure, these 100,000 properties have already been abandoned or foreclosed. I will say abandoned because the other side of the aisle wants to talk about abandoned homes, but they’re homes that somebody does not live in anymore, and the people who lost them, yes, they lost them.

And how many jobs were created? Nobody can definitively give me a number because nobody knows for sure how much money was spent on jobs. Now, we can say we spent $6 billion, but understand clearly, we bought properties with the bulk of that money. Now, how much money did we spend after the local groups, the nonprofits took 17 percent off the top for overhead and expenses, how much did we spend for jobs? Now, if we had taken that $6 billion, going on $7 billion, and invested it in residential construction, just $1 billion, as I said, in residential construction creates $5.5 million in wages. It creates $1.98 billion in spending on goods and services as a result of the new earnings and profits that were created through that.

Now, those goods and services, those companies employ workers. The wages are paid to workers. So you can definitively come up with a number based on a $1 billion investment that we would generate in the economy. Now, we spent $6 billion, and if we were able to create what $1 billion would have created in private residential construction, we’re probably lucky, but the problem with that is investing in residential construction is different than giving $6 billion away of the taxpayers’ money.

Now, the people listening to this debate understand, when you write your check to the Federal Government next month, we just gave away $6 billion of it, we’re going to give away another billion. Now, that infuriates me. I would assume it infuriates you. You tell me, middle class America, what does this do to help you? I told you the amounts earlier of how much you can earn to buy a house or how little you might have to pay for the house, depending on how much you bought the house what they want to charge and who they want to sell it to.

So the basis I would argue here is the amendment does nothing. I oppose it.

I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. ELLISON. May I inquire as to the remaining time?

The CHAIR. The gentleman from Minnesota has 2 ½ minutes remaining.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, let me only add this: that this language, which should be put in the bill and this amendment calls for, sets forth in the record the positive impacts of the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, which should be memorialized in the bill, things like job creation, saving homes, saving local governments, exciting costs. The Republican caucus has not created a single job, and now they’re even eliminating jobs.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield myself the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. The facts speak for themselves. When you can say $1.13 billion was given away to nongovernmental agencies—and I have listed the groups, and I have told the facts—these people are going to keep these moneys, and there is a wide array of things they can use them for. This was a bad investment. In fact, it was not an investment. It was a bad giveaway.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON).

The question was taken; and the Chair announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XIX, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota will be postponed.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MS. LORETTA SANCHEZ OF CALIFORNIA

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 4, printed in part B of House Report 112–34, Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that, if the amounts that are rescinded and canceled under section 2 of this Act were instead made available under the Neighborhood Stabilization Program authorized under the provisions of law specified in subsections (a) and (b)(2) of section 3 of this Act, the Congress could have helped to rebuild neighborhoods throughout the United States where foreclosures on home mortgage loans are common.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 170, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of my amendment.

Mr. Chairman, let me state simply that the Congress acknowledges that we could have helped to rebuild neighborhoods where foreclosures are common through the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, or as we know it, NSP.

You see, my Republican colleagues are offering today a bill that would terminate NSP. This program, I believe, has been particularly successful in helping to rebuild neighborhoods in my district and throughout the County of Orange, California. The city of Anaheim, which I represent, acquired and rehabilitated 17 single-family homes and sold them to low- to moderate-income families.

It also acquired and rehabilitated a four-unit multifamily complex for lease to persons with developmental disabilities. This project was crucial because it is very difficult to find properties for people who have developmental disabilities.

In Anaheim, one in 303 homes is in foreclosure. Not only does this have an emotional impact, as you can imagine, when you lose your home—it is the instability, especially for your kids; parents are worried, and children can see that—but it also has economic impacts on our neighborhoods. With the help of this program, the city of Anaheim improved neighborhoods and provided the families with homes.

I know that the colleague on the Republican side also represents Anaheim. And if he would have spoken to some of the staff from Anaheim, he would have realized that they really believe that this program was important to keep blight from happening in neighborhoods and to attempt to keep the prices of the homes level for those families that were struggling to make their payments and to stay in their homes and to keep up their neighborhoods.

The city of Garden Grove, where one in 348 homes is in foreclosure, also acquired and rehabilitated property. They acquired and rehabilitated five homes and sold them to first-time home buyers. And, of course, the city of Santa Ana, where one in 252 homes is in foreclosure, they acquired and rehabs 40 single-family homes and 12 condos, and sold them to first-time home buyers. They acquired and removed 116 of the 118-unit Wilshire complex and have leased them now to low-income families. They assisted five families with down payment assistance, and they are also in the process of acquiring 16 single-family homes that will be sold to first-time home buyers.

Now, I know that my colleague on the other side mentioned that some of this money went to nongovernmental agencies, to private companies; but I would like him to really take a look at the fact that cities really stepped up to work very hard to keep families in their homes, to keep neighborhoods afloat as we work through this very difficult period of the financial meltdown and the housing crisis.

In Orange County, the Neighborhood Housing Services, with the assistance of what we call NSP Round One monies, acquired and rehabilitated 11 single-family homes and 35 condos. And with Round Two moneys, the Neighborhood Housing Services acquired and rehabilitated 17 single-family homes and condos and sold them to first-time home buyers.

This program has helped to rebuild our neighborhoods, to stabilize our neighborhoods, and have given families the opportunity to become homeowners. So it is my hope that my colleagues who are on the other side reconsider eliminating what I believe has been a successful program in Orange County, California, that one that has benefited not just those who got to buy their first home but those neighborhoods and those cities that desperately needed to keep up the neighborhood and get people in their homes.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

Mr. Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My good friend, she mentioned the Neighborhood Housing Services of Orange County. They got $7.5 million for 17 houses. Orange County, overall in the whole county, got $43 million for the whole county. You have to say, is that a good investment? We have spent $6 billion on this program, and we're saying, let's not spend the last billion. And Congress could have rebuilt neighborhoods. There was only $1 billion left.

Now I don't see that the U.S. neighbors have been rebuilt for $6 billion. I see $6 billion that has been given away of taxpayers' moneys. And Orange County itself, which is a huge area, is not necessarily one of the few examples that were given by my good friend, only got $43 million. That's not equitable.

San Bernardino County, one of the hardest hit counties in this country, got a mere $332 million. One of the hardest hit. That's the county. That had to go to all these cities that did not receive any distribution in NSP1 or NSP2, nothing. And they're having to take the families in Orange County, with $43 million—take that and distribute it to all these cities that did not receive a dime. That's not fair.

And to say that we spent $6 billion— and all the counties and cities haven't been rehabilitated and to say we're going to spend $1 billion more, and that's going to solve the problem? No, it's not. It's just going to take it and put us another $1 billion in debt that our children and our grandchildren are going to have to pay for.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Chairman, I would remind the gentleman from California that some cities, it's true, did not receive any moneys and would not go through the process of buying up homes, et cetera, and trying to get neighborhoods back. One of the reasons they did not is it's a really a competitive situation. You have to want to do it. And some cities simply did not have the need or did not want to do it. I mean, I would assume that in some places in Orange County, you could probably do as the gentleman said, and that is to sell at a fire sale some of those homes on Newport Beach or other places.

But with respect to the central portion of Orange County where you really have households that are working families, this program was very, very important; and the city stepped up. The city of Anaheim, the city of Garden Grove, the city of Santa Ana stepped up to do the right thing to work through and to ensure that their neighborhoods again were stabilized and to get new people into those homes. Again, I do believe that it worked for those cities. I would encourage a "yes" vote on this amendment, Mr. Chairman.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The problem I have with the program—I have just mentioned San Bernardino County; and according to the county, there is no one at the county level that would support the current way it's set up. I have been very specifically the county might have supported the concept of NSP, but this is before they fell victim to a complete lack of direction from HUD, mixed messages from HUD, and gross misallocations of the awards that were released. I state, in support of my bill, said, We believe it is a means for Congress to get its financial house in order, just like the challenges we are facing at the local government level.

And not only is government facing challenges, the American people are facing challenges. They're working hard. They're trying to support their families. They're trying to make their house payments. Nothing in this last billion dollars will stop one foreclosure from occurring.

I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SCHWEIKERT).

Mr. SCHWEIKERT. Mr. Chairman, look, I've been a Member now of this august body for 75-some days. And I'm starting to learn much of what we do seems to be more based in theater than reality.

If I read this amendment correctly, what we're trying to do here is add language that basically says, well, we could repair neighborhoods with the last billion dollars. Of course it didn't happen with the previous money.

But think about it, if we take a step back. What's the money been used ultimately for? It's been used to bail out lenders. In many ways this is another back-door bailout to the very folks that my constituents are furious with, and handing them more government dollars in the name that, well, this time we passed the cash to those lend-ers. And, of course, this is what we did it through local governments.

The CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ).

The amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MS. RICHARDSON

The CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 5 printed in part B of House Report 112-34.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

The CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, this Act shall take effect on, and an enforcement of this Act to the date of the enactment of this Act shall be construed to refer to, the earlier of the following dates:

(1) The date of the expiration of the 5-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The first date occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act on which both of the following conditions exist:

(A) The percentage of existing mortgages on 1- to 4-family residential properties located in the United States and under which the outstanding principal balance exceeds the value of the property subject to the mortgage is 10 percent or less.

(B) The percentage of existing mortgages on 1- to 4-family residential properties located in the State and under which the outstanding principal balance exceeds the value of the property subject to the mortgage is 15 percent or less.

The CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 170, the gentleman from California (Mr. RIXON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.
I will insert into the RECORD a chart indicating the underwater mortgage percentages for each State in the Nation.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Mr. Chairman, the Richardson amendment to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program Termination Act which we've been talking about this afternoon, is a vehicle to discuss a program that was really urgently needed when it was established, when it was funded in the Recovery Act, and why it's still needed today.

The Richardson amendment is simple. It's straightforward, and it's necessary. It takes the politics out of it. It says that the programs should be terminated based upon whether they're needed or not, based not using fancy numbers.

Now, let's talk about this particular bill. I'm suggesting, with the Richardson amendment, that we could consider two things: One, that it would be based upon a termination of 5 years after the initial date of enactment. Two, that the date would be triggered when the national average of underwater mortgages would be at a point that it's 10 percent or less, or in the highest State that happens to have high mortgages, that it would be at least 15 percent, and if it didn't meet that test then it would be terminated.

Now, the most current data available in the third quarter of 2010 reported by CoreLogic, a leading provider of mortgage information, indicates that of the Nation's 78.8 million residential mortgages, approximately 10.8 million, that's 22.5 percent, are underwater.

In Nevada the percentage is 45 percent. In Florida it's 45.5 percent. And in Mr. MILLER's and mine, our great State, California, it's 31.6 percent.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, on the Richardson amendment, that we could consider two things: One, that it would be based upon a termination of 5 years after the initial date of enactment. Two, that the date would be triggered when the national average of underwater mortgages would be at a point that it's 10 percent or less, or in the highest State that happens to have high mortgages, that it would be at least 15 percent, and if it didn't meet that test then it would be terminated.

And then finally, when we look at some of the groups that are supporting these programs, it's not about who's on this side of the aisle and who's on the other one. It's the National Association of Counties, the National League of Cities, the U.S. Conference of Mayors. That's what the housing officials in my district are talking about—having a way to be able to solve the problem.

Hon. SPENCER BACHUS, Chairman, Financial Services Committee, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN BACHUS: I am writing to express my strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) Termination Act. NSP has helped cities across the country address and mitigate the deleterious effects that vacant and blighted properties have on neighborhoods and property values. As a result of the foreclosure crisis, communities throughout the country, including Los Angeles, face significant challenges as foreclosed homes create a vicious cycle of blight, neighborhood decay, and lower property values. NSP has been instrumental in helping to stem this downward spiral by addressing the negative effects of abandoned and foreclosed housing.

In the City of Los Angeles, where, over the past four years, we have an estimated 39,000 foreclosed properties, NSP has played a critical role stabilizing our fragile housing market and helping to construct affordable homes across the country. Further, at a time when unemployment in our construction industry is at an all-time high, NSP has created more than 900 jobs spurring Angelenos' economic recovery.

Given the economic challenges facing cities today, I urge the committee to continue funding for the Neighborhood Stabilization Program.

Very truly yours,

ANTONIO R. VILARROIGA, Mayor.
I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR (Mrs. EMERSON). The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I guess the question should be how long do we need to wait? How many more billions of dollars needs to be given away? We’ve already spent $6 billion. I guess we could spend more if somebody wanted to? And when we talk about phasing out a program, it speaks to the argument that we need to spend more money on a program and continue the program. I think we’ve already spent too much money.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Mr. MILLER, the question that was asked is how long we should wait. In my amendment that’s my exact point. It’s not how long we should wait; it’s whether it’s needed or not. So if we find that the mortgages are above 10 or 15 percent, then the program should exist.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I reclaim my time. On this issue, how long we wait is predicated on how much we are going to spend. And my colleagues on this side of the aisle believe the American people, the taxpayers have given too much of their money away, and they are saying we want it stopped, and we want you to be responsible for this money.

If this were our dollars, and we’re getting in your purse and your wallet and handing the money out, that’s a prerogative we have. That’s not what’s occurring, other than we are taxpayers too.

We’ve just got our hands in your pocket and your purse and spent your money on a giveaway program.

I ask for a “no” vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCHWEIKERT. Mr. MILLER, the other point that is significant and that needs to be dealt with here is the $6 billion that has already been given away. That money continues to recycle with those groups. It should. As to the cities, the counties, the non-profits, when they buy, they refurbish it and sell it and when the money comes back at whatever level, they could take that money and buy another piece of property.

Nothing in my bill does anything with the $6 billion that’s out there. It just says: We’re not going to give you another $1 billion. We’re going to try to give that back to the taxpayers. If we could get the $6 billion back and could find a way to do it, I believe we’d be trying to attack that vein, too, but that will not occur and cannot occur as the money has already been given away. They’re going to continue to recycle it, hopefully to some benefit—hopefully somebody will benefit from this—but that’s $6 billion given away. My colleague was exactly correct in his statements. As for the $1 billion that we have not given away, we’re saying it is time to stop giving away taxpayer dollars.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Chair, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim my remaining time.
The Acting CHAIR. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from California has 30 seconds remaining.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Thank you, Madam Chairwoman.

Just to summarize again what my amendment is talking about, it is the ability of State and local governments to rehab and to help the neighborhoods so that those property values can go up and so we can improve the economy. I would venture to say it’s not giving away the money. It’s actually helping to revitalize and stimulate our economy.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. RICHARDSON).

The amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MS. WATERS

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider Amendment No. 6 printed in part B of House Report 112–34.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 5. NOTIFICATION TO NSP GRANTEES REGARDING FUNDING TERMINATION

(a) In general.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall inform each covered entity (as such term is defined in subsection (b)) in writing—

(1) that the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has been terminated;

(2) of the name and contact information of such entity’s Member of Congress that represents its district; and

(3) of such entity’s role and how it should contact such Member of Congress directly for assistance in mitigating foreclosed properties.

(b) Covered entity defined.—For purposes of this section, the term “covered entity” means any nonprofit, government, or other organization that—

(1) received or was scheduled to receive funding pursuant to section 209 of the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (Public Law 110–289; 122 Stat. 2850) or title XII of division A of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (Public Law 111–5; 123 Stat. 218) through the Neighborhood Stabilization Program; and

(2) as a result of the rescission of funding under section 2 and termination of the Neighborhood Stabilization Program under section 3, will have funding for the entity made available under the provision of law specified in paragraph (1) rescinded and canceled.

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to House Resolution 170, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chair, my amendment would simply require the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development to send a notice to all of the NSP grantees who would have received funding under the third round of NSP that the program has been terminated. Further, the notice would provide the name and contact information for the Member of Congress representing that grantee’s district, along with a notice saying that the grantee can contact that Member directly for assistance in mitigating foreclosed properties.

As you know, we passed such an amendment off the floor when we took up the FHA bill, which would have basically allowed the homeowners to refinance their properties. So we have one such amendment with the elimination of that program.

The CBO has scored this amendment at zero cost. Since the passage of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act of 2010, which provided the NSP funds that are now subject to this repeal, my office has received many calls from potential grantees about the status of the program and what funding they could expect.

Because this act would rescind those funds nearly 8 months after the passage of Dodd-Frank, I think that a simple letter from HUD, sent to States, counties, and cities, would simply notify them of this change, in order. Moreover, a note to these States, counties, and cities saying that their Members of Congress are available to assist them in mitigating foreclosed properties can help these grantees find alternative solutions.

I’ve discovered there are any number of Members starting to do this kind of thing. They are getting calls from their constituents who are asking for help with foreclosed properties, and the Members are able to, not get involved with the particular problem, but to help guide them and send them to the proper servicers to get their loan modifications. This is similar to that. Simply, our office has called, yes, the program is no longer in existence, but this is what you can do if there is an alternative.

Now, I would prefer not to rehash the back-and-forth we saw in the Financial Services Committee about the termination of this program. Members on my side of the aisle showed pictures, talked about the problems caused by abandoned properties, and even showed letters which talked about the good work NSP was doing. Yet the debate, it seems, will not sway my colleagues on the other side of the aisle. Instead, I think it’s best to focus on my amendment.

I believe this is a commonsense provision that can be accepted by both sides of the aisle regardless of whether they agree with the underlying bill. Grantees should be made aware of this funding recision, and Members of Congress should stand ready to help communities mitigate the effects of blighted properties.

I would ask for the support of my colleagues.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

Madam Chair, the Congresswoman’s amendment does nothing to help at-risk borrowers, and the notification the Congresswoman proposes would apply only to community groups, leaders, and speculators currently participating in the program. It is not a serious attempt to address the underlying problem homeowners are facing today.

If we are going to have a notification requirement, it makes more sense to have the recipients of these funds to date notify taxpayers how much, in what way they have spent taxpayer dollars and what return taxpayers can expect from their investments.

Unfortunately, the answer is: none. Many have questioned HUD’s ability to properly monitor the use of such extraordinary amounts of money being spent at the State level and in various ways. The Inspector General of HUD has already identified as causes of NSP money at the State level. The GAO has questioned the information system in place at HUD, and has questioned its ability to track the NSP funds.

I wish the amendment had said: Please continue using the $6 billion in an appropriate way, and in some way, do everything you can to create jobs for the American workers with the $6 billion we’ve given you.

It does not say that, and I cannot support the amendment the way it is drafted.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chair, I have heard so many convoluted arguments today about this legislation from the opposite side of the aisle.

My colleague from California, my friend and someone I highly respect, knows that he does not have to wish what an amendment would say. If he is interested in an amendment, he can offer it. My colleague from California did not offer the amendment that he has just alluded to, and he did not suggest when we were in committee that somehow he would like to have an alternative. So I am, very curious that he would come to the floor and start wishing what my amendment would say.

Secondly, I want to straighten out something. My colleague from California keeps talking about how this bill does not stop any foreclosures. The NSP legislation was not intended to stop foreclosures. It was intended to do exactly what the name implies, which is to stabilize communities by taking these decruded up and abandoned properties, revitalize them, put them down so that they discontinue the devaluing of the properties of those homeowners who are trying to keep their properties up and stay in the community.

If he, in fact, was concerned about helping homeowners, he would have supported the FHA refi programs. That program, he voted against. The FHA refi program was basically a program for middle class people who paid their bills on time, but who simply knew that their homes were underwater. They were not worth what they thought they should be worth when they got into the market, and they want to refinance them. He voted against that.

So I am not so sure, when he talks about this NSP program not helping anybody stay in their homes, whether or not he really, really wants to help people stay in their homes when he is voting against something like the FHA refi.

As for jobs, this bill creates jobs; and I think my colleague knows that.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Well, I did not introduce an amendment because I introduced the bill. I think that bill speaks for itself.

But I am glad that my good friend admitted that this was not meant to mitigate the foreclosure process for people struggling through. I am glad you admitted that, because that is not what your amendment says. It says that: such entities should contact such Members of Congress directly for assistance in mitigating foreclosed properties. You can’t mitigate a foreclosure when you don’t help anybody with the foreclosure.

I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SCHWEIKERT).

Mr. SCHWEIKERT. Madam Chair, first, this is one of those few moments I get to speak to the marble throne and I say, having met the good woman from California, she has actually been very gentle to me as a freshman, so far.

But one of my concerns here is very, very simple: there is $6 billion out there. And I won’t call it a slush fund. Back in my days as Maricopa County Treasurer, we would call it a revolving fund. There is $6 billion out there already that goes out, and if the property is sold, comes back; and that I believe operates for 5 years from the enactment of the bill.

Well, a letter like this goes out and says, Oh, well, the last $1 billion isn’t going to be there for you, but please keep using the $6 billion you already have to give more good works in the neighborhood.

My great fear is something like this doesn’t really accomplish much good.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California.

I yield myself the balance of my time.

As much as I respect my good friend, I know—we have worked together on a lot of issues, and I don’t believe anything between us has ever been personal in all the years we have known each other. And nothing in this debate is personal. We both are well intended. We both really want to help the American people. And I say that from the heart, and you know that. And I know your efforts are for the right purposes. But good people can disagree in a good way. And on this amendment, I have to respectfully disagree, and I would ask for a “no” vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 7 printed in part B of House Report 112-34.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chair, I have an amendment at the desk.

The Acting CHAIR. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

SEC. 5. STUDY ON IMPACTS REQUIRED.

(a) In general.—The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development shall conduct a study to determine the approximate number of foreclosed and abandoned properties that will not be purchased or rehabilitated with amounts appropriated or otherwise made available under section 2301 of the Housing and Economic Recovery Act of 2008 (Public Law 110-289; 122 Stat. 2650; 42 U.S.C. 5301 note) in the district of each Member of Congress as a result of the rescission and termination of funding under sections 2 and 3 of this Act.

(b) Report.—Not later than the expiration of the 60-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report setting forth the results of the study under subsection (a).

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chair, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My amendment would direct the Secretary of HUD to conduct a study to determine the approximate number of foreclosed and abandoned properties that will not be purchased or rehabilitated in the district of each Member of Congress as a result of the rescission and termination of funding under this act.

The Secretary would then report these findings to Congress. CBO has scored this at $3 billion. They are important details, like the condemnation order and the requirements for lifting the condemnation and getting a new certificate of NSP creates jobs. So far, about 72,000 housing units are projected to be impacted by round one of NSP. HUD projects that an additional 24,000 housing units are projected to be impacted by NSP2.

Each of these projects requires the work of contractors, such as roofers and painters and landscapers and painters and roofers and painters and landscapers and painters and roofers and painters and landscapers and landscapers. This NSP program really does create jobs, and this is a program that creates jobs by doing important work in the community.

Contrary to what some say, the problem of homes abandoned by banks is common, and it is difficult for municipalities to mitigate their effects. As GAO has noted in a report from November 2010, servicers sometimes charge off properties or fail to formally foreclose on borrowers because the costs of maintaining post-foreclosure exceed the costs of just writing the property off. These charge-offs typically occur after the foreclosure proceedings were initiated. However, borrowers aren’t aware that the servicers are stopping short of taking their title.

Because borrowers think that their servicer has finalized the foreclosure process, they may move away and become unreachable by the municipal agency now dealing with the upkeep of the property.

Additionally, it may become logistically difficult or cost prohibitive to track down thousands of borrowers now responsible for property maintenance, taxes, and code violations because of servicers’ failure to formally foreclose.

Additionally, NSP provides an alternative to speculative investors purchasing foreclosed properties. Unlike homeowners and some speculative investors often purchase properties for cash and in bulk, sometimes sight unseen, buying them up before others have a chance to bid. Some of these investors may not resell properties to owner-occupants, but let them sit on the market without any improvements while the investor waits for housing prices to rebound.

Alternatively, anecdotal evidence suggests that investor-owners sometimes rent properties out to tenants with little or no rehabilitation or maintenance of the property.

We had a field hearing in Minneapolis in January 2010. At that field hearing, State Senator Linda Higgins said, ‘‘Homes are being snapped up by investors and some speculative investors often purchase properties for cash and in bulk, sometimes sight unseen, buying them up before others have a chance to bid. Some of these investors may not resell properties to owner-occupants, but let them sit on the market without any improvements while the investor waits for housing prices to rebound.”

counterweight to some of these bad prac-

Mrs. MALONEY. Madam Chair, I rise in opposition to the amendment. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of my amendment.

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.
Utah, $75,044; in Alaska, $76,786; in Colorado, $73,131; and in New Hampshire, $79,411.

So the concept of this program is just helping people at the lower rungs who are really struggling. I am not saying people aren't struggling in those income brackets; that is not what I mean. But I don't want the American people to have the perception we are just trying to pick up deals and sell them to the lowest of income levels.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. The gentleman is listing those numbers. Would the gentleman tell us what the maximum number is he thinks people should be eligible to get a house through the FHA and Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Reclaiming my time, I was in the building industry from my early twenties, and the most excitement you could ever see on a person's face was when they bought a home and they were moving into that home and they thought about raising their family.

I would love a country that every person in this country has the ability and the opportunity at some point in their life to buy a home. But, in some fashion, lenders have put people in positions to put them in homes that they could not afford, and those homes, in many cases the individuals lost those homes through foreclosures. And those people, who were well-intentioned, moved into homes that they could not afford because the lender perhaps did not describe it exactly or they thought the way the economy is going, in 3 or 4 or 5 years the house is going to be worth 40 percent more than I paid and I am going to make a lot of money. The problem is the market went the other way, as it did in 1974–1975, 1981–1983, 1990–1996, and recently in 2007 to current the market slid.

And then we're saying we're going to go out and we're going to ask to do a survey and we're going to list any home throughout the United States in separate paragraphs that have been vacant for 90 days or more that could be eligible. Well, all of them would be eligible.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. From my recollection, I was struck by the gentleman talking about those figures, that they were too high, because the last I heard, the gentleman and I were together in trying to establish.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Reclaiming my time, Mr. FRANK, what specifically has been said throughout this debate, as if we're trying to help people at the lower rungs, which I have no problem with, but I'm saying that there was not a restriction on the amount that could be paid for the house and there was not a requirement of how much it should be sold for.

I ask for a “no” vote.

I yield back the balance of my time.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentlewoman from New York has 30 seconds remaining.

Mrs. MALONEY. The problem is the other side of the aisle wants to abolish four programs that help people stay in their homes and enable housing. They have no idea or no program to be helpful. They say it will be taxpayers' money. But if they supported the Democratic plan, it would have come out of an assessment on the banks.

I understand the chairman will be introducing a bill, and I would like to co-sponsor that.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Will the gentlewoman yield?

Mrs. MALONEY. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. I just would say that the gentleman from California previously had agreed with some of us that you could be able to get a house in the FHA for up to $729,000.

Mrs. MALONEY Reclaiming my time, I urge a “yes” vote on the amendment.

STATEMENT OF ADMINISTRATION POLICY
H.R. 861—NSP TERMINATION ACT
(Rep. Miller, R–CA, and 4 cosponsors)

The Administration strongly opposes House passage of H.R. 861, which would eliminate the Department of Housing and Urban Development’s Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) and rescind $1 billion of funding from the program’s current efforts. This program allows States and local governments to stabilize neighborhoods by redeveloping foreclosed and abandoned properties, leading to increased property values and lowered risk of foreclosure from remaining residents. The Administration is committed to helping struggling homeowners prevent foreclosures by ensuring that vacant homes do not reimpact the neighborhoods and has taken many steps over the last two years to last stabilize what was a rapidly-declining housing market. With many communities still struggling with the impact of the severe decline in the housing market, the Administration believes that continued funding of the NSP grants is important to the Nation's economic recovery.

If the President is presented with H.R. 861, his senior advisors would recommend that he veto the bill.

CITY OF LOS ANGELES,

March 7, 2011.

Hon. SPENCER BACHUS,
Chairman, Financial Services Committee, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN BACHUS: I am writing to express my strong opposition to H.R. 861, the Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) Termination Act. NSP has helped cities across the country address and mitigate the deleterious effects that vacant and blighted properties have on neighborhoods and property values. As a result of the foreclosure crisis, communities throughout the country, including Los Angeles, face significant challenges and need ongoing assistance to maintain their stability and growth. Every vacant property that is rehabbed moves us closer to stabilizing those neighborhoods.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,

RICHARD M. DALEY, Mayor.
MEMBER GUTIERREZ: The undersigned organizations representing local elected officials, State and local program practitioners, and community-based organizations write in support of the Neighborhood Stabilization Program—NSP3. The collapse of the housing market in 2008 exacerbated neighborhood decline. Foreclosures were rampant and abandoned homes dotted both urban and rural landscapes. This national crisis threatened to bring down local economies. Congress stepped in to provide funding for NSP1—the first round of funding under the Neighborhood Stabilization Program—to abate the crisis. This funding was quickly followed by NSP2 and NSP3 to further aid local neighborhoods. While more funding is needed, the contributions these programs have made have been important to abating the foreclosure crisis and arresting neighborhood decline. NSP3 is needed to continue the reverberating effect of the activities started under NSP1 and NSP2.

According to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), NSP1 and NSP2 combined, have assisted approximately 100,000 properties. The programs have assisted a wide mix of income levels, from very low-income persons at or below 50% of area median income to middle-income people with incomes up to 120% of area median income. NSP funds are efficiently allocated and managed. Although NSP funds are highly targeted to communities with the most severe neighborhood problems associated with the foreclosure crisis. Grantees are under tight deadlines to obligate and expend the funds, ensuring that funds are spent quickly. The programs have strict reporting requirements that allows HUD to see that the funds are being used as directed by statute and regulation and in a timely fashion.

The programs could not have been implemented in such an efficient and quick manner without the rigorous performance and technical assistance that has been provided by HUD. HUD staff have devoted a lot of time and resources to NSP grantees to ensure they have the capacity of the locals to allocate funds quickly and implement program activities to arrest neighborhood decline.

We urge you and the other Subcommittee members to support these valuable neighborhood revitalization programs.

Sincerely,

NYC Department of Housing Preservation & Development.

Sincerely,

Natasha McPherson,
Chairman, New York City Neighborhood Stabilization Program.

Dear Representatives: I am writing this letter to express the City of New York’s opposition to the above-referenced bills coming before the House Financial Services Committee. These measures would eliminate crucial foreclosure prevention and neighborhood stabilization support available to homeowners and communities grappling with the devastating effects of the foreclosure crisis here in New York City.

The Home Affordable Modification Program (HAMP) has been an invaluable tool for homeowners throughout the city who have unsustainable mortgages. Data shows us that permanent HAMP modifications have on average saved homeowners almost $400 more in monthly payments than the savings achieved by non-HAMP modifications ($1200 vs. $828).

Of the permanent modifications reported by the Center for New York City Neighborhoods’ extensive network of service providers, 46% are HAMP modifications (479 out of 1036), which is in part with the national average of 41%, as reported by the OCC (http://tinyurl.com/4ajkkv).

HAMP has had a tremendous impact in New York. In the NYC MSA, there have been 41,785 HAMP modifications (32,785 permanent and 9,000 active trials), which represents 6% of all HAMP activity nationwide.

Without HAMP Foreclosure prevention efforts would be greatly diminished. HAMP has been critically important in moving the mortgage industry to make more affordable, sustainable modifications for homeowners who have the ability to stay in their homes. We know from counselors on the ground that the banks’ own proprietary modifications have become more affordable and “HAMP-like”, since the full roll-out of the program, further illustrating HAMP’s impact. However, HAMP must be preserved because even as the quality of non-HAMP modifications improves, they are not nearly as beneficial as HAMP modifications.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Program (NSP) provides states and municipalities with much-needed funds to stabilize neighborhoods hardest-hit by the foreclosure crisis. In NYC, we have used NSP funds to acquire and rehabilitate foreclosed homes for resale as affordable housing.

NSP funds are reducing the city’s stock of vacant, foreclosed homes that are a blight on communities. To date, we have acquired 65 properties that are in various stages of rehab and on track to buy and restore 25 more. We are poised to launch a program that will offer NSP funds as downpayment assistance when the city is at the point to purchase foreclosed homes. These programs accomplish dual goals of incentivizing homeownership while also improving the housing stock in neighborhoods devastated by foreclosure.

NSP funding has also been used to assist multifamily rental buildings in distress, providing long-term affordability for income-eligible families. As a result of the economic downturn, New York City is witnessing an increase in the number of rental buildings with deteriorating physical conditions, with many of these buildings in default on their mortgages. Addressing the needs of these properties is putting a strain on our typical funding sources, making NSP a particularly valuable tool. We have expended over $3M of NSP funds on the acquisition of foreclosed multi-family buildings, creating over 200 affordable rental units in The Bronx and Brooklyn. At least $10 million in future NSP funds will be targeted towards stabilizing some of the most distressed multi-family rental housing in the City.

As outlined here, the aforementioned programs offer critical assistance to New York City families and neighborhoods suffering from the harmful effects of the foreclosure crisis. These programs’ positive impacts are extensive and they are compelling. To elimi-

SEC. 5. GAO STUDY OF ECONOMIC IMPACTS OF NEIGHBORHOOD STABILIZATION FUNDING.

The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to determine the economic impacts that providing assistance under the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, using the funding identified in section 2, would have on States and communities in the United States, if such funding were rescinded and canceled under such section, but remained available and was used in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such amounts as in effect immediately prior to the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Congress a report setting forth the results and conclusions of the study under this section.

AMENDMENT NO. 9

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. 5. GAO STUDY OF ECONOMIC IMPACTS OF ROUNDS 1 AND 2 NSP FUNDING.

The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study to determine the economic impacts that providing assistance under the Neighborhood Stabilization Program has had on States and communities in the United States. The study shall identify such impacts resulting from the funding under each of the provisions of law specified in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 3(b)(2). Not later than the expiration of the 90-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Congress a report setting forth the results and conclusions of the study under this section.

AMENDMENT NO. 10

At the end of the bill, add the following new section:

Neighborhood Stabilization has turned some of the worst abandoned and foreclosed homes that were causing blight all across our community into rehabilitated properties. And here are just a few examples of what Neighborhood Stabilization has done in Tampa and in Hillsborough County.

First, with the help of our local non-profit partners, in East Tampa we have taken an abandoned, dilapidated residential property and with Neighborhood Stabilization, this property will be turned over to a family that met eligibility standards of this bill, we will commence a ground on the first residential piece of this new community. The first residential piece will provide affordable apartments to seniors. Neighborhood Stabilization did that. We did not have the funds and our local partners did not have the funds to continue on that mixed use public-private partnership. And it gets even better, because that will continue to be translated to create 4,000 construction jobs in an area that really needs them and 1,000 permanent jobs once the new redevelopment is finished.

Third, through our community, we have targeted those ugly, abandoned, dilapidated houses and duplexes on the street or boarded-up apartment complexes. We put people to work cleaning up. We've sold them or rented them. We've breathed new life into a new downtown neighborhood. And we've also received $20 million in federal and local funding to work in that area. And those funds were turned over to developers and our local government to create 4,000 construction jobs in an area that really needed them and 1,000 permanent jobs once the new redevelopment is finished.

banks money and forget it, go home. It was to stop a major run on the banks and to stop this economy from plummeting. And Bernanke and Paulson and the administration, everybody on both sides of the aisle agreed it had to be done. And the money was paid back, and we made money on it. Shock.

This money was given away and we will not be getting it back.

I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SCHWEIKERT).

Mr. SCHWEIKERT. Madam Chairman, I am pleased that we’re actually accepting this amendment, because if we get an honest study from it, it could be some very interesting numbers. But I hope it’s an honest study that also looks from top to bottom. Such as in the Neighborhood Stabilization Program in the previous $6 billion that has been spent, what crowding out has it done? What first-time homebuyers, what investors, found themselves competing with government? It would be interesting to know.

Also, we keep hearing the numbers of saying, well, our government money was created this many jobs, how many jobs were being created if they were private investors or first-time homebuyers or other families that were acquiring the same sort of properties and fixing them up? If we’re going to get like for like, it will be fascinating.

Then we also have to deal with the reality of it as we saw in the previous amendment. In that amendment, it was claiming there were about 1,061,000, we’ll call them vacant units in the country. Okay, if we start doing the math with the remaining billion dollars of additional money, how much impact does that have? And will the study also step up and say, with the $6 billion that’s out there that’s supposed to be acting like a revolving fund, 5 years from the beginning of this program, which was last summer? How is that money being used? How much velocity is it getting? Is it now sitting in houses that are competing with other neighbors who are trying to sell theirs?

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I would be happy to yield to the gentlelady. I was not meaning to be rude or forget about you.

Ms. CASTOR of Florida. I thank my colleague very much for agreeing to accept my amendment.

My point on comparing neighborhood stabilization to the Wall Street bailout was just to point out—and I know both sides of the aisle were involved in the Wall Street bailout. It was the Bush administration, but a number of Democrats worked to do that, and I’m not here to criticize that. It’s just to compare the scale. There was $700 billion provided to Wall Street banks, just to compare, and 1 percent of that to communities under neighborhood stabilization.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Madam Chairman, I reclaim my time.

I was going to allow for adequate time on that, but it was not a give-away. It was a loan. You’re comparing $350 billion in the first half that was lent to lenders to stabilize the economy versus $700 billion that was a give-away.

It’s my time, Madam Chairman.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman has 15 seconds remaining.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Regular order, Madam Chairman.

The Acting CHAIR. The gentleman from Massachusetts will allow the gentleman from California to continue.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. I think we’re comparing things that have nothing to do with the bill before us. So we can talk about Wall Street. We can talk about banks. If anything, this has helped banks because it’s taken foreclosed properties that they’ve had and it’s bought them. So we can hold all these men to the debate that we want to. The thing is, should we give away taxpayer dollars? I say no and I ask for an “aye” on the gentlemale’s amendment.

The Acting CHAIR. The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CASTOR).

The en bloc amendments were agreed to.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE ACTING CHAIR

The Acting CHAIR. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments printed in part B of House Report 112–34 on which further proceedings were postponed, in the following order: Amendment No. 3 by Mr. ELLISON of Minnesota.

Amendment No. 6 by Ms. WATERS of California.

Amendment No. 7 by Ms. WATERS of California.

Amendment No. 8 by Mrs. MALONEY of New York.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first vote in this series.

February 2011
The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMEND
Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. I am in its current form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Braley of Iowa moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 861, to the Committee on Financial Services with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

In section 3(b)(1), before "shall continue" insert the following:

"and all amounts made available for use pursuant to subsection (d)",

In section 3(c), before

"and outlays" insert

"or under subsection (d):"

At the end of section 3, add the following new subsection:

(d) CONTINUATION OF STATE PROGRAM; PRIO-

RITY FOR RURAL AREAS.—There is authorized to be appropriated an amount equal to the portion of the unobligated balances described in section 2 that, pursuant to the provi-

dion of law specified in section 2, was allocated to States. Any amounts made available pursuant to the authorization under this subsection shall be used for assistance under the same provisions of law applicable to the amounts made available by the provision of law specified in section 2, except that assistance made available pursuant to the authorization under this subsection shall be allocated only to States and any State that receives an allocation from such amounts shall, in distributing such allocated amounts, give priority emphasis and consideration to rural areas (within the meaning given such term for purposes of the provision of law specified in section 2).

In section 4, after "(NSP)" insert the following:

"for assistance for units of general local government"

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading.

There was no objection.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I reserve a point of order against the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A point of order is reserved.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 5 minutes.

Most small towns are lucky to have a single convenience store, and they are even luckier if it's an convenience store that sells gasoline. This is a Main Street in my State of Iowa, and there are far too many of these in communities in my State and in my district. And I guarantee you, there are far too many of these in rural communities in your States. Because while Wall Street and big corporations are doing fine, our rural communities and small towns are facing a real crisis, and the Neighborhood Stabilization Program is making a real difference in rural America.

I want to tell you about a woman from Oelwein, a small town in my district. She is 23 years old. She only makes $22,000 a year working at a day care. She grew up in Oelwein and she wants to raise her children in Oelwein, and the national Neighborhood Stabilization Program is helping her become a first-time homeowner.

Now, our amendment would simply take the money that has already been allocated for this program and prioritize it for our rural communities so we can change the way that streets like this look, and so we can make sure that more moms can raise their kids in the towns where they grew up. This amendment doesn't cost any money. It allows a mom to raise a child in her home community. And our amendment will not kill this bill. It would simply give our rural communities the ability to weather the worst crisis they have faced in a generation.

Now, maybe our small towns or this young mom should incorporate as a bank. Maybe then they would get the same kind of attention that we have given to Wall Street. Because, folks, Wall Street is not Main Street. Big Oil and corporate CEOs, or are we going to stand up for small towns all across America that need our help now more than ever?

At this time, I yield to my good friend from the State of Iowa, Congresswoman BOSWELL.

Mr. BOSWELL. I appreciate the opportunity to speak on this. And, again, I want to say this amendment does not kill the bill.

Republicans have put forth a bill that again forces our middle class and our working families to sacrifice, sacrifice, and sacrifice so they can continue the giveaways for Big Oil, billionaires, and corporations that outsource American jobs.

As a former professional soldier, I approach our economy with a military eye. I take the bill that our economy going again, and we need all of our troops behind us. In this case, our troops are our workers, the middle class Americans who must be healthy and armed with the tools to rebuild the economy. Our camps are the communities that must have the resources to do just that. So why are our troops and communities in rural America being left behind?

Rural Main Streets in Iowa have been devastated as Republicans have re-wound our economy. Manufacturing plants in my district, like Maytag—all of you know who Maytag is—in Newton, Iowa, they have packed up and moved their jobs to Mexico. Many of you have similar situations.

Rural workers have lost jobs in ethanol, biodiesel, and wind turbine plants because we have given tax breaks to Big Oil while cutting investments in renewable energy. These communities have been in crisis after crisis, and as Republicans defend Wall Street speculators tinkering with the markets that they depend on.

I urge my colleagues to say “yes” to rural America and the middle class by supporting this amendment to H.R. 861. Rural America is not blue or red. Rural America and the middle class by that they depend on.

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, to many people, rural America is a pol-mobile. Some of us believe in them.

I cannot thank the Hebrew Academy enough for its leadership in both the general and spiritual education of our south Florida community.

YUCCA MOUNTAIN

(Ms. BERKLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my sympathy for the people of Japan as they battle a nuclear disaster that threatens lives and their environment, and I rise to reject calls for more wasteful spending. $100 billion more of wasteful spending, on the Yucca Mountain project in response to Japan’s nuclear tragedy.

Dumping radioactive waste on top of an earthquake fault located inside a volcanic zone 90 miles outside of Las Vegas will only increase the danger to Americans from radioactive waste produced at nuclear power plants. Nuclear industry plans call for decades of waste shipments to be unleashed on communities across the United States that are unprepared to deal with the death and destruction that this radioactive garbage can cause.

Whether it’s a tragic accident involving a train or a truck carrying nuclear waste or a deliberate 9/11 style terrorist attack on even one shipment, the risk to human lives and the potential for billions of dollars in economic damage is staggering.

Let us stop pushing Yucca Mountain and start focusing on securing waste at existing plant sites, stored in hardened bunkers engineered to keep this material isolated from our fellow citizens. With what we are witnessing in Japan, these pro-dump forces should put concern for safeguarding lives above concerns about profits.

REMEMBERING DERRY BROWNFIELD

(Mr. CRAWFORDB asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CRAWFORDB. Mr. Speaker, it is with a heavy heart that I come to the floor today to mourn the passing of Derry Brownfield, a pioneer in the farm broadcasting industry. As the only agri-reporter and farm broadcaster in Congress, I feel compelled to honor him today.

Derry’s influence across the farm broadcasting industry was far-reaching, and it will be felt for years to come. While many overlook the importance of agri-reporting, Derry understood the necessity. He prided himself on “speaking as a farmer, to the farmer, for the farmer, from the farm.”

His vision and passion for informing and educating rural America was unparalleled and an inspiration to the farmers and farm broadcasters he influenced. There is now a noticeable hole in the agriculture community, but we can take what Derry taught us and honor his legacy by continuing the tradition of quality agricultural reporting.
And that’s just the way it is.

EXPRESSING SUPPORT FOR JAPAN
(Ms. KAPTOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. KAPTOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to rise this evening on behalf of the people of the State of Ohio to offer our great heartfelt support to our brothers and sisters in the nation of Japan. Every person in the world really is bound with compassion and with hope that we can find a way to help heal the great damage that is occurring there and has occurred. I know that we have over 12 national vessels that have moved across the Pacific to offer assistance, and nations around the world will try to help the people of Japan.

My message this evening is one of hope to the Japanese people, so many that I have met in my own career, certainly their national leaders in the Diet, in their executives, so many educational leaders, and just the people of Japan who have been so kind to us on our visits there. I hope they know that Japanese Americans living in our country, certainly in Ohio’s Ninth District, are bound with them in an attitude of rebuilding and healing.

As the State of Ohio’s name means “hello,” we offer tonight a very special hello to the valiant people of Japan.

OUR NATURAL RESOURCES
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LONG). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 5, 2011, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHNER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. GOHNER. Mr. Speaker, I do echo the comments of my friend from Ohio (Ms. KAPTOR). Our hearts do go out, our prayers do go out for the people in Japan, but I want to have a few words for the House.

At the same time, there are so many people struggling in this country. There are so many people out of work; and although in the last week gas prices have come down some, sadly in the wake of the Japanese tragedy, there is no doubt speculation will eventually go back up unless this administration stops, ceases, desists in putting our natural resources off limits for our use to help our economy to create jobs for our citizens. You know, certainly other countries welcome the pigheadedness of those in charge of this administration who are determined to keep us from using our own resources.

We had a hearing today in the Natural Resources Committee, and the chairman of the Railroad Commission, the regulating body in Texas, Ms. Elizabeth Jones, had indicated—and I was not aware of what exactly she had said—but, apparently, this administration is making a big deal of reopening and putting in charge a permit that actually was not a new permit. This is something that had been pending that was a re-release and was not a new permit.

And how ironic, the ultimate irony, that this administration’s first supposed new permit would be to a drilling project in which British Petroleum, BP, would be the major investor. How about that? This administration simply cannot get away from trying to help their buddies at BP.

It was interesting to hear our friend across the aisle from Massachusetts in our hearing today indicate that in the European waters, off their coasts, they have the same driller, the same international company, the same safety records over there are much better than they are in the Gulf of Mexico. Quite interesting because the only difference is, in this country, the administration is run by those who help out President Obama, and they have sadly looked the other way while BP racked up safety violation after safety violation, after dozens of safety violations.

In the meantime, the other major drillers had one, two violations over the same period and hundreds of violations and then hundreds of violations until they had reached around 800 safety violations. But did this administration rein them in? No.

And then we later read that actually when this administration came into BP, they bring itself to really come down on BP after the disastrous blowout of the Deepwater Horizon, that BP executives were negotiating and working out the day, the time, the place that they would come in support of President Obama’s and our Democratic colleagues’ great pride and joy called the cap-and-trade bill. I don’t want to offend people by calling it the crap-and-trade bill, so we will call it the cap-and-trade bill instead of what I really think it is.

But they were negotiating to come out and be the administration’s one big international energy company that embraced this whole cap-and-trade bill. Why? Because they had special perks they would get in regard to carbon sales, and so they were coming onboard.

We had a hearing today in the Natural Resources Committee, and the chairman of the Railroad Commission, the regulating body in Texas, Ms. Elizabeth Jones, had indicated—and I was not aware of what exactly she had said—but, apparently, this administration is making a big deal of reopening and putting in charge a permit that actually was not a new permit. This is something that had been pending that was a re-release and was not a new permit.

Well, of course this administration did not want to come down on BP when they were going to be the big energy company that came out saying, Yes, we’re for this cap-and-trade bill. Yes, we think it’s good. Why? Because we’re going to get rich off of it even though Americans are going to be paying out the nose for energy once this thing kicks in. Americans will be losing their jobs right and left; but, boy, we will make a lot of money because we’re crowding the top with BP, the administration. So they were going to come out in support.

The administration didn’t want to shut them down. They were hoping that what BP was telling them about it not really being that big of a deal would be true. So of course the President went down there immediately, like he had said about President Bush that he should have after Katrina. This President waited and waited, really didn’t want to come down on BP because these were his buddies that were going to help him get across the finish line the cap-and-trade bill. They were the guys that had safety violation after safety violation. So it gets a little difficult to hear people across the aisle talk about croynism when we know that when you really examine the facts where the croynism lies.

We have heard people talk about how oil prices are going to come down. It was that the off-shore leases that had language removed from the pricing from which royalties were paid that cost the United States Treasury billions of dollars in royalties that rightfully would have been the U.S. Treasury’s, except that our hearings indicated that there was actually at least one or two people in the Clinton administration who had it pointed out. Hey, we need this language in here that allows us to get the amount of royalties we should. But they were instructed, We are leaving it out here.

When we had a hearing with a friend of the Clinton administration, a former appointee of the Clinton administration who had done his research, I asked him why he had not put the friend of those people who had ordered that that language be kept out. He said, Well, they left the administration, so we really can’t question them. They are in the private sector now.

Well, you do a little further research, and you find out that the private sector, these people that cost the United States Government billions of dollars and made billions of dollars for the cronies of the Democrats in the Big Oil, they actually had gone to work for British Petroleum. How about that. So to have heard the former Clinton appointee who did the investigations say, Well, I couldn’t possibly question these people because they left, and they were in the private sector. It was superfluous because if someone intentionally and knowingly defrauds the government, it’s a crime. And the FBI doesn’t have any trouble normally going after folks, subpoenaing records. They know how to do it. They do it quite well. But they didn’t go after these individuals because—well, they had left government service, and this one in particular had gone to work for British Petroleum. How about that.

Well, we were surprised in 2009 when we find out that the person who was most knowledgeable about the language being taken out that cost us billions of dollars and had gone to work for British Petroleum had now been brought on to the Obama administration to supervise these offshore leases. How about that. Or to quote our friends from Saturday Night Live: “What’s up with that?” It cost the country billions of dollars, went to work for British Petroleum, and then you bring them back on and put them in charge of the off-shore leases?

Then we find out that those who worked for the Interior Department, the offshore rig inspectors who stand between this country and disastrous problems off the coast that are man-made, were the ones within the Bureau of Land Management that were allowed to unionize. We often hear that off the record that, you know, union negotiations—normally, if you go back to the inception of unions, it was to overcome issues of corporate greed. It didn’t seem to fit here because here were people that were supposed to stand between our Nation and man-made disasters off our coast. And they were allowed to unionize because we knew unions, they’ll negotiate—oops, these folks can’t work too many hours, can’t work too many hours in succession. You have got to do this. You can’t—you know, there are all kinds of things negotiated. It would be like negotiating a union contract on behalf of the military soldiers. You can’t overwork them. You can’t expect them to work too late into the evening, travel too much.

When people are standing between us and disaster, it just is not appropriate to have contracts negotiated in a union manner, because they stand between us and danger. It is not appropriate for people in the military, and it’s not appropriate for our offshore rig inspectors. If they have to work extra hours, if they have to travel extra, if they have to do some task to ensure that our offshore rig inspectors do not get devastated because of man-made negligence, a disaster off our coast, they will have to do that job; and if you don’t like it, go to work for the private sector.

That is the way it was supposed to be, not to have unions organize people who stand between us and disaster. Because if you go back to the founding, the Founders anticipated—and some of them wrote in their letters, in their diaries that we had within our grasp, they indicated, the chance to do what philosophers had only dreamed about, to govern ourselves.

We can understand the need for union collective bargaining, to overcome corporate greed in cases where it’s occurred; but to need unions to extort things from the government that is supposed to be “We, the people,” in a democratic Republic? Offshore inspectors standing between us and disaster, and they get to have a bargaining session where they don’t want to work too many hours even if it meant saving America, saving thousands of jobs.

Well, in the hearing where we heard from the director of the Bureau of Land Management who was over that whole system, when I asked, What are the checks and balances? Since you have these offshore inspectors unionized, what are the checks and balances that protect us from disaster? It should be these offshore inspectors. So how do you verify allegations that have been read and have been hearing that some of the administration’s offshore inspectors had been bribed, have been given perks to look the other way with safety violations, and they had done so—we’ve read allegations of that kind of thing. So what is it that protects us and ensures there are checks and balances to make sure offshore inspectors are not bribed, are not given things to make them look the other way?

And the director indicated they do have a solid system of checks and balances for such offshore inspectors. They send them out in teams of two people at a time. That way, we can rest assured that those who were subjected to some type of bribe or perk, something to look the other way, the other inspector would report them, would refuse to accept the bribe or the perk to look the other way, so that we could rest assured that we were protected.

Apparently, she was not aware that I was aware that the last two-person team of inspectors that went out, sent by this administration out to the Deepwater Horizon before the disastrous blowout, was a father and son unionized inspection team. That’s who was sent to look at that disaster.

Now, there are some disasters, like earthquakes, like tsunamis, that insurance companies call acts of God. I still do, too. I don’t believe that God causes those things to happen to punish people. I think He’s got a plan to do so.

But we do have the power to build and to inspect and to prepare for disasters so that we can mitigate and minimize damages after such things occur. But you can’t very well mitigate and minimize when you’re allowing the kind of abuses that have gone on from this administration with the cronies in Big Oil like British Petroleum.

And it’s interesting to have heard, today, friends across the aisle trying to wrap British Petroleum around Republicans’ necks as an albatross when, actually, the group that has protected British Petroleum over and over has allowed them to continue to drill, and when this administration finally got around to granting a new permit that really wasn’t new after all, it happens to be to their cronies, their buddies—good old crony capitalism—where BP is the major investor. How about that? Another “and what’s up with that?”

BP gets the latest right to drill in the gulf when others have lost thousands of jobs, families have been left destitute. And that means not just that the workers who work on those oil rigs have been hurt, their families have been hurt, and then all the places where they sold businesses have been hurt. The restaurants, clothing stores, everybody who did business with those have been suffering because this administration did not punish the company responsible for nearly 800 safety violations. It punished all those who were not involved.

And how ironic that the biggest financial supporter of this administration and Democratic politics, in George Soros, had as his biggest individual investment in Brazilian drilling, oil and gas.

How ironic that when this administration granted a $2 billion loan from the United States of money—we don’t have over 40 cents on the dollar of that $2 billion that we have to borrow and pay interest on—we loaned it to Brazil to do offshore drilling that we won’t allow here, but by the way, that helps the Democrats’ biggest supporter financially, George Soros, with his biggest individual investment; so, therefore, it’s okay to drill off the coast of Brazil with money borrowed from America at low interest rates that we have to borrow from other countries at a different interest rate. That’s just astounding.

And then we have calls to eliminate the method that has produced over 100 years, perhaps 200 years, of natural gas as our energy. We’ve heard information that indicates that if all of the 18-wheelers in America started utilizing natural gas instead of gasoline or diesel, then we would cut our dependency on those who hate us by 50 percent. But now we’re not going for the reality, for the science, the engineers.

In fact, there are measures being pushed by this administration and the EPA to eliminate our ability to utilize over 100, 200 years of natural gas that could help provide our energy security, in cutting the need for more nuclear power plants. It could be of tremendous assistance in cutting our reliance on foreign oil. And this administration wants to eliminate that ability. It makes no sense.

Our hearts still go out to Japan for the decimation that’s occurred, for the loss of life and the livelihoods, and this administration has expressed that so eloquently. But not so for this administration’s actual activities to help the lives and livelihoods in the gulf coast area of those who who this administration didn’t save their job. They cost them their job. They cost them their livelihood. They caused gasoline prices to go up because we will not use ourselves.

We were told when gasoline reached $4 a gallon that probably 25 percent or more of that was speculation. Well, when speculators see that we’re doing nothing to help ourselves with our own energy needs and, in fact, we’re making it more and more difficult to produce our own oil, gas, natural resources to take care of ourselves and instead are going deeper and deeper in debt to countries that don’t like us—that goodness we’re friends with Canada, and they’re helpful in our energy needs. But we’re funding some of the very terrorism we’re concerned about in the Middle East because we refuse to use our own natural resources.

I was told by a Chinese gentleman that he thought he had figured out what our energy policy was, because often the Chinese, they look farsighted. They look down the road. They try to examine issues and policies in a far-sighted manner generations down the road, when we here in America sometimes have a hard time looking at what we’re going to do tonight. Certainly, tomorrow is a stretch.

But, anyway, this Chinese gentleman had said, I think we figured out what you are doing. You continue constantly to put your own natural resources off limits, and that forces the rest of the world and their natural resources. And then eventually everyone will have used their natural resources but you, and then you’ll be the only one with natural resources. You’ll still be the superpower, and you’ll still be the superdominant country in the world because everyone else lost their resources. They’re used up, and you still have yours.

And I told him, I wish I could take credit and say you caught us; that’s our plan. Everybody else used up their natural resources. But we haven’t been that strategic in our thinking. No, we’re just having people say it may devastate the economy. Obviously, it is. It does when you put your natural resources off limits.

But they claim that will save the environment, not understanding that when you devastate an economy and people are losing their jobs and they can’t pay their bills, they’re not concerned about the environment. They’re concerned about getting by and just living. And it’s only when you have a vibrant economy, like we did have, that you have a country where we’re concerned about pollution of air and water, and we rein it in.

Instead of policies of this administration are sending more and more jobs overseas where they pollute four to ten times more than we do doing the same job, and yet that pollution goes into the same atmosphere and often floats over into our country. Mercury, toxic materials come floating up because we ran those manufacturers off in thinking we were doing some good for the economy and for the environment, and we were hurting both.

I hope of anyone coming to our rescue when people come after us. You’re our hope in this world. Please tell your friends in Congress and in the administration, Don’t keep weakening your country. You’re hurting those who hope and want peace around the world.

We owe it to all those who want peace around the world and who count on us to act responsibly.

I know the Obama administration and those in the Interior Department have said, Gee, we’re not going to be allowing these risky ventures out in the Gulf of Mexico. Yet they turn around and let the most unconscionable violator of safety regulations be the major investor in the permit they just released.

And what about these major oil companies that keep being demonized? A moratorium in the gulf has caused many of them to move rigs to other countries. They won’t be back for a long time because it’s costing ourselves thousands of jobs, and we’re forcing ourselves to send more money to countries that hate our guts.

And what about those who are unable to just move because they’re international companies—those independent oil companies—of which we have numerous in Texas and in Louisiana and in other Gulf States? Well, they can’t just take off and go to Brazil or go to other countries. They can’t get out of business.

It makes no sense to keep shooting ourselves in the foot and hurting those who rely on us.

Now, we’ve had a temporary cessation in the explosion in gas prices. There is a chance here that the administration will take advantage of it and will quit running off more jobs with more regulations and continuing an actual moratorium, in fact, on offshore drilling. There is a chance that the administration will take advantage of this time-out to say, You know what? We’ve seen the light. We’ve heard the human cry from across America about expensive gas prices. We’ve heard the human cry about 100-plus years of natural gas, so we’re going to encourage cars or 18-wheelers to start utilizing natural gas for their fuel. They do not produce carbon monoxide, which truly is poisonous and dangerous to human life.

So it’s a good idea. My friend across the aisle, Dan Boren, has a great bill. I’m hoping that the House will move it, that the Senate will take it up and that the President will sign it, and we can help ourselves get off such an incredible reliance on foreign oil.

It’s time to start helping ourselves. It’s time for people to stop helping those who simply want them to help them get elected. It’s time for people here in Washington to follow our oath, to protect our country, and that includes helping to create a strong economy. That means, like doctors who have taken the oath to do no harm, we should take the same oath:

First, do no harm. Quit trying to force people out of business because you don’t like them.

Once we do that, we’ll be on the road to a greater economy than this Nation has ever experienced.

Now I want to finish up. I was given a book of an historical nature. It’s called, “Mr. Jones, Meet the Master.” It has sermons and prayers of Peter Marshall during his time as Chaplain of the United States Senate during the 1940s. It has got some wonderful material in here, and I would just like to finish my time by reading a prayer by the Chaplain of the U.S. Senate as he prayed it in the U.S. Senate. Senate Chaplain Peter Marshall prayed these words in the U.S. Senate:

“Our Father in Heaven, give us the long view of our work and our world.

“Help us to see that it is better to fail in a cause that will ultimately succeed than to succeed in a cause that will ultimately fail.

“May Thy will be done here, and may Thy program be carried out, above and beyond time and circumstance, for the good of America and the peace of the world. Through Jesus Christ Our Lord, amen.”

That was the prayer of Chaplain Peter Marshall during his time as Chaplain of the United States Senate.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

THE PROGRESSIVE CAUCUS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 5, 2011, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. ELLISON) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. ELLISON. Mr. Speaker, my name is KETH ELLISON. I claim the time on behalf of the Progressive Caucus. I want to thank you, Mr. Speaker, for providing the time so that we can share our views and opinions about the world we live in and about the importance of Congress’ being responsive to the American people.

Tonight, I am here on behalf of the Progressive Caucus. The Congressional Progressive Caucus is a caucus in the United States Congress, a 93-member strong, who can be counted on to stand up for peace as opposed to war, who can be counted on to stand up for working and middle class people and economic justice and a fair distribution of our Nation’s resources, who can be counted on to stand up for civil and human rights, who believe that color, culture, sexual orientation, and things like this are not important as they relate to the worth or merit of a human being, and we can be counted on to stand up for the ideas that make our country great.

In fact, for every great movement in our country, whether it has been the civil rights movement, the women’s rights movement, whether it has been the right to expand the vote to 18-year-olds, whether it has been the fight to end slavery or to support the rights of working people on the job, including our public employees, how imperiled today it has become. Progressives have made these struggles. It has been conservatives who have always fought progress. They fought against ending slavery. They fought against integration. They fought against women’s right to vote. That’s what we want to talk about tonight, protecting the American Dream.

What is the American Dream? The American Dream is the dream, not the fantasy, but the dream that if you work hard and you live by the rules, that you will be able to be successful in America; that you will be able to get a job, go to school; that if you live long enough and are blessed to do so, that you will be able to retire with Social Security and Medicare; that and your grandchildren will be able to get a quality education at a public school if they want to; and that, no matter what color they are or what culture they are or what religion they are, they are welcomed, because Americans are Americans are Americans. That’s the American Dream.

This is a dream shared by people who go back 14 generations in America, like my family does, or people who are brand-new arrivals in America, the newest person who just got their green card or just got their citizenship, sworn in and just got naturalized yesterday. The American Dream. This is the dream we are talking about.

Now, I believe that the conservatives in this country have another kind of dream. Their dream, based on the policies that they pursue, is to get the rights of workers away from them. They are all applauding what happened in Wisconsin so that in the workplace and workplace you have got no democracy, you have no say-so on what happens to you. They want to have us working for China wages. They want us competing with the people in the Third World, and they want to drive wages down so that we can be price competitive with people who basically don’t make anything.

They want to have a Tax Code that allows the richest of the richest to keep their money and not contribute to society, and push the expenses of society onto the working and middle class people. They envision a society where you have a tiny elite and a vast number of Americans who are desperate and will work for anything, because when you don’t have the social safety net that we as a society come together and put in place. They want to get rid of LIHEAP, which is home heating oil; get rid of Pell Grants, which help our students from moderate and low incomes have a chance to get ahead; get rid of foreclosure mitigation programs so that Americans could try to keep their homes; get rid of all this stuff that helps people and just say, Yeah, you can work, but you had better work for the big business pays you, and you can’t have an union. And if you are lucky enough to be among the top 1 percent, then life is going to be good.

This is the Progressive message. That is what we are here to talk about today, the American Dream. But the dream I am talking about is rooted in the Progressives.

I have got to confess to you, Mr. Speaker, I love coming here to say the Pledge of Allegiance. Whenever I am privileged enough to be on the House Floor at 10 a.m. or 12, whenever we open, I always feel good about saying the Pledge of Allegiance. I teach it to my children, the Pledge of Allegiance. And my favorite part of it—and of course I love the whole thing. But my favorite part of it is when we say, “liberty and justice for all.” I love that part of it. “For all.”

Now, see, the conservatives in this body—they like to talk about liberty. And then when they are talking about liberty, they are not talking about a woman’s right to choose, because that is liberty. They are not talking about the freedom of worship to be Muslim, Christian, Jewish, Baha’i. No religion at all. They don’t believe in that. They believe only one way to seek the Divine, and they get more radical with it every single day. They don’t believe in liberties like that. They don’t believe you should be able to say whatever you want to say, and they don’t believe in the liberties that I am talking about.

They believe in property rights. That’s the liberty they are talking about. They mean that you ought to be able to own as much as you want. And if you can buy the whole State of Texas, Oklahoma or Minnesota and you have got the money for it, you ought to be able to do it. That is what they are talking about. They are talking about property.

Now, I believe in property rights, too. I am a very firm believer that you ought to own your home, you ought to own your business. You ought to be able to have some things that are yours, and they are not for the government to control. I share that belief with them, not to the extreme they believe it, but I do believe there is an important role for property rights. I believe it, but I do believe that for personal liberties, too, and they are not so hot about that.

But it seems like they end the whole discussion after “and justice for all.” They are okay with the liberty part as long as it is property, but they are against the “and justice for all” because it is the “and justice,” not “or justice.” “And justice.”

Justice has to do with treating people equally—all colors, all cultures, all faiths. Justice means that you marry who you want to marry in America. It is not the government’s business. Justice means treating people with fairness. That is what it means. Justice in the economic sphere means that all of us pay our fair share of the expense of this great country of ours and that none of us can reap all the goodies of being in America but don’t have to pay anything when it comes to footing the bill. That is justice.

Now, this last part, in some ways, is the best part, “for all.” For everyone. Last week, we had some hearings in the Homeland Security Committee where one particular religious group was pointed out for persecution, actually, for its own beliefs. This was the Immigration and Naturalization Service. I am an immigrant, and America is about for all. For everybody. All Americans of whatever faith group, of whatever color, of whatever, rural or urban, straight, gay. All of us. Liberty and justice for all. It ought to make you feel good.

And when you think about liberty, this means you can do what you want to do. My conservative friends think it only means property, but it really means property or personal liberty. They don’t believe in what was pointed out for persecution, actually, for its own beliefs. This was the Immigration and Naturalization Service. I am an immigrant, and America is about for all. For everybody. All Americans of whatever faith group, of whatever color, of whatever, rural or urban, straight, gay. All of us. Liberty and justice for all. It ought to make you feel good.

say, the fact is that Democrats aren’t afraid to stand up for the middle class. We are not afraid to say that Americans, if you want, if you are ready to work hard, ought to be able to get a piece of that American Dream. If you are ready to work hard, we ought to do something to make sure that you can go to school and get a quality education. And the government, the American Government has a role, a certain responsibility to make sure that is there for you.

One of the big debates we are having in Congress now, Mr. Speaker, is simply this: On the one side, we have people on this side of the aisle, and they are under the impression that the government can’t do anything for you, shouldn’t do anything to help you out.

On the other side, we believe in mixed government. Yes, the government should be there for you, but you should be able to do—I mean, of course you have liberty and you have the private sector and the mixture with the public sector we have been irresponsible. They say the private sector. We say private and public sector. This is the debate going on in Congress right now.

When I think about the things that we worked on today, they wanted to get rid of the foreclosure mitigation programs. In America, 4 million foreclosures, and perhaps 7 million before it is all done, and we literally voted on the House floor today that all those people can just go to the market deal with their problem. That is it.

Now, we didn’t let the market deal with its problems when they came here and asked for $700 billion for Wall Street. We didn’t let the market deal with them. They get some socialism when they are in a jam.

But really, when that bailout happened to those banks and Republicans voted for it, Democrats too—I voted for it, full disclosure—what happened is we said, let’s put in place programs that say the private sector we have been irresponsible. You have done the wrong thing. You are like a person who has been smoking cigarettes in bed. You are like a person who has been drinking and got busted, and you are in jail.

And like that person who smoked in bed, your house burned down. But I can’t run out and lecture you about how smoking in bed is wrong. I have got to go get some water and put the fire out, because the fire you started has to be put out. That is it.

Now, I will never forget that, at a big fundraiser that George Bush was having, he was talking to a body of people where there was an $800 a plate dinner, and the President said, “Some people call you the elite. I call you my base.” You know what? America is not broke. America is the biggest economy in the world. As a matter of fact, this economy is three times bigger than the Chinese economy. You wouldn’t know that listening to them, because they are always running around like Chickens with their heads cut off. Oh, my god, the sky is falling. The sky falling. America has got dooms and gloom.

Well, I don’t believe America is dooms and gloom. I believe the best days of this country are yet to come. And I think we have got to stop all this crying, and we have to understand that we have to grow ourselves out of this deficit, not just cut everything so that we get rid of the social safety net that people rely on in order to climb up the ladder to the middle class. That is right, Mr. Speaker. We can’t allow that to happen.

We have got to say that there are two things that Republicans say but are wrong. They are, one, not about jobs, because if they were, they would have introduced at least one. They are not about cutting the deficit, because if they were, they wouldn’t have forced President Obama into this bargain where they basically extended tax cuts for the richest, extended all of the tax cuts that are going to cut jobs.

Anyway, there are two things that should be pointed out about the Republican caucus. They say two things, two things that don’t make much sense. Well, they say a lot of things that don’t make much sense, but they say two things in particular. One is that they are fighting for jobs. They are not fighting for jobs, because if they were fighting for jobs, you would see them introduce at least one jobs bill. We have been here for 11 weeks. They have introduced exactly zero job bills. None.

I know people listening, Mr. Speaker, might think, well, maybe. I am sure they introduced at least one or two. No. Check it. None. They have introduced exactly zero job bills. They have introduced no bills for jobs. In fact, they introduced these spending cuts that are going to cut jobs.

We showed today the Neighborhood Stabilization Program, which they cut and voted to eliminate today, offered 100,000 jobs across America. One of those people was looking forward to that job so they could put groceries on the table, pay their rent, take care of business. But we cut that program out, and they are all fine with that.

The budget they introduced, H.R. 1— that bill—experts, even conservative economists, say, will cut 700,000 jobs. They are not even embarrassed about it. It is amazing.

Then they also say we’ve got to cut it. We’ve got to cut it because—you know what?—We have got this enormous debt, and we don’t want to put this debt—and they always say this, they always say this—on our children and grandchildren. They always say it. You don’t have to say it. If we don’t say it, once they start saying it. We are broke. We can’t put this debt on our children and grandchildren.

You know what? America is not broke. America is the biggest economy in the world. As a matter of fact, this economy is three times bigger than the Chinese economy. You wouldn’t know that listening to them, because they are always running around like Chickens with their heads cut off. Oh, my god, the sky is falling. The sky falling. America has got dooms and gloom.

Well, I don’t believe America is dooms and gloom. I believe the best days of this country are yet to come. And I think we have got to stop all this crying, and we have to understand that we have to grow ourselves out of this deficit, not just cut everything so that we get rid of the social safety net that people rely on in order to climb up the ladder to the middle class. They are not about cutting the deficit, because if they were, they wouldn’t have forced President Obama into this bargain where they basically extended tax cuts for the richest, extended all of the tax cuts that are going to cut jobs.

This is the reality. They say they are about the deficit. When we try to do anything to get some more revenue in, they are against it. They want to extend tax cuts for the richest Americans, and they are letting $858 billion go right out the door. If we had just let those tax cuts expire, it would have gone down to the rates when Bill Clinton was in office. And, do you know what? We had a booming economy then. The Republicans are just better at managing money than the Republicans are.

During the Bush years, we had slow job growth. We had very abysmal job growth. Middle class people had flat pay. We didn’t have any increases. Of course, rich people had huge growth. They had precipitous growth in their income. It is amazing how much income the rich got during the Bush administration.

I will never forget that, at a big fundraiser that George Bush was having, he was talking to a body of people where there was an $800 a plate dinner, and the President said, “Some people call you the elite. I call you my base.” You know what? He wasn’t lying when he said that, and he went into office and he took care of those people too.

So, they are not really about deficits, because if we didn’t extend any of the tax cuts, we would eliminate the deficit in 4 years. I am for that. I will sign up for that. If we did not extend any of the tax cuts and if we let them all expire, the deficit would be wiped out in 4 years. But you know the Republicans aren't serious about deficit reduction, so they would never do that. So they are not serious about jobs. They are not serious about deficit reduction. I will tell you what they are serious about. They are absolutely serious about giving the richest Americans as much as they can, and they are serious about taking and depriving lower income and working class Americans of a social safety net. They are serious about those two things, but they are not serious about jobs or deficit reduction.

But in the Progressive Caucus are serious about liberty and justice for all. I really like this board, so I hate to take it down, but I will put it back up.

Now, I just said that the Republicans, conservatives, are absolutely not really about deficit reduction. They are really about cutting out the social safety net, cutting out aid for students, cutting out aid for poor people who need heat in our northern climates. They are for that kind of stuff. And they are for cutting out Head Start.

What they do is extend these Bush tax cuts then what is stated, Oh, we don't have any money. And then they say the way we can solve the deficit is through cuts. So you, grandma, you sonny boy who is in school, you little kid who is in Head Start, all of you guys are out of luck.

But that doesn't happen to some people.

Now here's a board, Mr. Speaker. And this board is what I call an interesting board. This board has in it Bank of America, General Electric, Citigroup, ExxonMobil, Wells Fargo. Mr. Speaker, in my pocket right now, I have $25. That's all I've got in my pocket. I went to the ATM today because I need a little bit of money. That's all I got.

Mr. Speaker, I got more money in my pocket than all of these companies paid in taxes. Mr. Speaker, I got $25 in my pocket, and it's $25 more than Bank of America, General Electric, Citigroup, ExxonMobil, and Wells Fargo altogether paid in taxes. I need you to look this up, Mr. Speaker. I need you to investigate this. You might think, Oh, that's just a politician talking. I'm telling you. And I will back this up. They didn't pay any taxes.

And guess what? The Republican caucus is telling us that the students can't have any Pell Grants, that we can't afford a foreclosure mitigation program. They're telling us that we've got to cut Head Start, and we've got to cut home heating assistance. They're telling us that we've got to cut the basics that people rely on. We've got to cut research programs. We've got to cut programs that create and nurture new scientific breakthroughs. But these guys don't want to pay. You don't want to pay anything?

Wait a minute. Bank of America. Wait a minute, GE. Aren't you guys proud to be American companies? Didn't you guys benefit from being here in the United States? Don't you feel good about being here in the United States of America, the greatest country on earth? We're free to pursue profit all you want? All we want to do is ask you to do a little something for people who are still trying to climb the ladder. And, apparently, the Republicans say, Don't have to have to. They've got $25 or $50 million that they don't want to pay anything. Oh, my goodness. This is really quite amazing.

Mr. Speaker, this board here is a challenge to all these companies and any other ones—the big ones that didn't pay any taxes. It's a challenge. It's a challenge to support tax policy to help America. It's a challenge to support the policy of "and liberty and justice for all." They benefit from being here. They're protected by our Nation's military. They're protected by local police. If any one of their members gets injured or hurt or sick on the job, the emergency medical services come to their rescue.

They've got their big trucks and probably put more wear and tear on our roads than the regular citizens do. They use as much water as anybody else, sometimes even pollute it. In their cafeterias, they rely on the meat that's going to be inspected. It's going to be served to be inspected by our government agencies.

Yet they don't want to pay nothing. And the sad thing about it is they probably wouldn't mind paying, but the Republican caucus insists that they pay nothing. Look at it, Mr. Speaker. They didn't pay. But on April 15, me and you are going to pay. We're going to pay big time. But guess what? Those companies didn't pay.

Also, it's not just corporations. It's individuals, too. I'm talking with Mr. Trump. I'm sure he's a nice person. Doesn't really seem like it on television, but he probably is. That's probably just an act. And I'm sure Miss Hilton is a nice person, too. I've got nothing against them personally at all. Nothing had to say about them. But I don't think they need a tax break. I don't think they need a tax break. I think they should pay their fair shares. I think the billionaires should pay their fair shares.

As we are in the middle of a mighty budget battle, Mr. Speaker, I think patriotic Americans should say, We need a progressive Tax Code that asks the most privileged of all of us to pony it up, too. If you're going to ask Mildred, who bops it out nine hours a day at a diner on $9 an hour for money for taxes; if you're going to ask teachers and cops, firefighters, and EM Ts to bang it out and pay up on April 15, I think Donald Trump and Paris Hilton should do the same.

Now, I don't have any problem with these people. I hope nobody thinks that this is a personal attack on them. It's not. It's just the statement that in all your houses that you own—both of them probably have many—somebody has got to heat them houses, somebody has got to protect those houses if somebody breaks in them. Somebody has got to come put the fire out should, heaven forbid, it should ever happen. The road has got to be maintained and put out there.

That's the government. That's our American Government at the expense. I just think these good folks here ought to feel good about writing a check so that the cops and the teachers can stay on the job; so that the kids who need a Pell Grant can get it; so that the kids who are in Head Start can have a program; so that there can be home heating assistance for our seniors, I would just think that they would do that. And I hope that they do. Again, nothing personal.

Mr. Speaker, I've looked at the Republican program, and I've looked at it carefully. I ask myself about their program, and I say to myself, Mr. Speaker, you know what? I don't want to just say their program is this or that; I want to look at what their program is. And then after we can see what is there, then we can determine what actually their program is.

We can't go by what they just say, because they say, Oh, we just want to take this debt off the backs of the lower income and working class Americans. Oh, we just want to get rid of this debt, or we don't have any money. None of that is true. But what is true? I think it's important to really dig into what's actually true, and I think it's important for us to really try to figure out what their program is based on their behavior.

So what I have come up with is the plan for a Republican recession. This is their plan. They want a permanent tax break for two billionaires out of every working families. I'm sure these billionaires are nice people. In fact, you don't see too many billionaires down here saying, Hey, I need more money, Keith. We hear the Republicans saying that, who are supposed to be elected by the people, Which people?

The second thing is put BP, British Petroleum, in charge of our energy policy because the last speaker got up, going on and on about BP. I would check the facts. But here's the facts that you don't need to check, but you should. Leaders in their caucus—leaders on the Energy and Commerce Committee and their caucus—accuse President Obama of doing a shakedown of BP when you have to clean up the oil spill in the gulf, and now we have Members attacking him. That's an interesting fact right there. I found that quite remarkable.

Anyway, put Goldman Sachs in charge of our economic policy. Put insurance companies in between you and your doctor. They always are saying, Oh, government takeover. They want to repeal health care, the Affordable Care Act, which will put you back at the whim of an insurance company bureaucrat. At least the government you can vote on. You can’t vote on the insurance company. That’s a privately held company.

Bonuses for CEOs who ship American jobs overseas. Privatize Social Security. Oh, yes, they did. Raise the retirement age. Gut Medicare. And some of them have even stood for repeal of the 14th Amendment and the 17th Amendment.

This is a Republican plan. This is what they stand for. This is what they’re about. This is what they believe in. I think that they should be proud and come down here and claim it and say, Yeah, we are for the very rich. We’re not for you working class people. Because that’s their program. That’s what they stand for.

The conservative position is to call for tax cuts and deregulation because they believe that will unleash the competitive economy. Tax cuts and deregulation resulted in the worst financial disaster since the Great Depression. But even though we’ve seen massive drops in home values, we’ve seen 8.9 percent unemployment, the longest unemployment since the Great Depression, even though we’ve seen so much economic devastation, they’re back here right now calling for the same old thing. It’s crazy, it’s amazing, and it’s actually quite scary.

But we stand for the American Dream. We stand for liberty and justice for all. Folks, unless you actually live by it, it’s just words. You’ve got to put meaning into these words in order for them to really make a difference. Liberty and justice for all. Shared prosperity. Shared costs. Not just one or them to really make a difference. Liberty and justice for all. Shared prosperity. Shared costs. Not just one or another.

Bank of America, as I said, didn’t pay a single penny in Federal income tax in 2009.

Citigroup, deferred income taxes for the third quarter in 2010, amounted to a grand total of zero. At the same time, Citigroup has continued to pay its staff lavishly. A gentleman by the name of John Havens, head of Citigroup’s investment bank, is expected to be the bank’s executive officer for the second year in a row. He got $9.5 million. Citigroup is a big TARP recipient, by the way.

ExxonMobil, Big Oil tax dodgers, used offshore subsidiaries in the Caribbean to pay their fair share. Although ExxonMobil paid $15 billion in taxes in 2009, not a single penny of it went to the American Treasury. This is the same year that the company overtook Wal-Mart in the Fortune 500. Meanwhile, Toyota compensation of ExxonMobil’s CEO was $29 million.

General Electric, 2009, the world’s largest corporation, filed more than 7,000 tax returns and still didn’t pay anything to America’s government. GE managed to do this with the aid of a rigged Tax Code that essentially subsidizes companies for losing money. With the aid of Republicans in Congress whose campaigns they financed, they exploit the Tax Code to avoid paying their fair share.

And who do Republicans blame? The middle class. Republicans blame public employees, who are really America’s everyday heroes. Public employees are America’s everyday heroes. Think about it. If somebody breaks into your house, who are you going to call? A public employee, who’s going to help apprehend the people who stole your stuff, known as a police officer. If your house starts burning, who are you going to call? A public employee, also known as a firefighter. If your kid wants to go to school, public school, who’s staying after working on that algebra, working on that geometry, making sure your kid is going to make that college. Who in this country believes in that child’s ability to learn. Who’s doing that? Teachers. Heaven forbid, you get a heart attack or a stroke and you need an emergency medical technician. Who’s that? A public employee. Who has been viciously slandered in Wisconsin and in other places, they don’t deserve that. They’re hard-working people and they help us every single day. When we are running out of burning buildings, they are running into them, and I think they deserve better than what they’ve been getting. That goes for Federal employees, too. These are the people who inspect our water, who take care of our national forests and our parks. These are people who make our government run. I think they do a pretty good job.

In order for them to have a decent life, in order for them to do well, in order for them to be able to prosper, to hear the talk, you’d think that being a government employee, a public employee, a person who’s an American hero, who takes care of us every single day, you’d think that they’re just the ones living lavishly and getting too much. They’ve got nothing to say about these bonuses. You ever hear anything on the Republican side of the aisle talk about how it’s ridiculous for the CEO of ExxonMobil to be making $29 million a year? You don’t hear that. You don’t hear that.

But I think that it’s time for those folks, those millionaires and billionaires, to start ponying up. That’s why today I was happy to join JAN SCHAKOWSKY and several other Progressive Caucus members to introduce the Fairness in Taxation Act. During these times, millionaires and billionaires should be giving in charity, not getting charity. They should be giving in charity, not getting charity. The middle class up to the millionaires and billionaires to pay their fair share. It’s time for that money in the hands of people who work for a living. The Fairness in Taxation Act is part of a plan to level the playing field.

According to the NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll of March 2, 2011, with 81 percent of support, the most popular way to reduce the deficit is by placing a surtax on Federal income taxes for those who make more than a million a year. And if you don’t think there’s plenty of people who make more than a million a year, you’d be surprised to know that if you taxed them, it would raise about $78 billion.

It’s time for millionaires and billionaires to pay their fair share. The middle class is disappearing, and it’s no accident. Over the last 30 years, there has been the most dramatic and deliberate redistribution of wealth from the middle class up to the millionaires and billionaires. Not since 1928, right before the Great Depression, has income inequality in this country been this ridiculous. Wages for the middle and lower income families, despite enormous gains in productivity, meaning that we’re making more within the same amount of time, because they’re working us harder and we’re just doing more. We’ve got technology and we’re just pretty good at what we do.

Where did the money go? Where did the extra money go? The money went to the richest 1 percent which owns 34 percent of the Nation’s wealth, more than the entire bottom 90 percent who owns just 29 percent of the country’s wealth. The top one-tenth of 1 percent, I’m talking about the richest of the rich, now makes an average of $27 million per household. The average income for the bottom 90 percent of Americans is $31,000 a year.

Mr. Speaker, a lot of people who tune into C-SPAN make $31,000 a year. They have relatives and friends who make $31,000 a year. You might be a brand new cop making $31,000 a year. You might be a brand new teacher making $31,000 a year. But the top one-hundredth of 1 percent makes $27 million a year on average. They can’t pay anything. They don’t want to pay to help Pell Grants. It’s a shame. I would think that they would pony up and want to do the right thing.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I want to say that it is always a pleasure to come before the House for the Special Order for the Progressive Caucus, but tonight I just want to leave one thought, and that one thought is liberty and justice for all. No exceptions. Everybody.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

H.R. 979: Mr. Clay.
The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Kirsten E. Gillibrand, a Senator from the State of New York.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:
Let us pray.
Creator God, alert our senses to Your world. Let sight and sound, taste and touch remind us that You are sovereign and in control of the unfolding events of our planet.
Give our lawmakers the desire to do Your will. Equip them with deeper insight and loftier courage, enabling them to act not only for today but for the coming hour of Your Kingdom. Keep their idealism and dreams of a better world from being crushed by disappointment, doubts, and despair. Show them the way of servanthood, which sanctifies every task done for Your glory. We pray in Your sacred Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The Honorable Kirsten E. Gillibrand led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:
I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. Inouye).
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, March 16, 2011.

To the Senate:
Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Kirsten E. Gillibrand, a Senator from the State of New York, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Daniel K. Inouye, President pro tempore.

Mrs. GILLIBRAND thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE
Mr. REID. Madam President, following any leader remarks, the Senate will proceed to a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with the majority controlling the first half and the Republicans controlling the second half.

Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of S. 493, the Small Business jobs bill.

Senators should expect two rollover votes at about 10:30 this morning. Those votes will be in relation to the following amendments: Nelson of Nebraska, regarding a sense-of-the-Senate resolution to reduce the Senate’s budget by 5 percent, and a Snowe-Landrieu-Coburn amendment striking the Federal authorization of the National Veterans Business Development Program.

Additional rollover votes in relation to amendments to the Small Business bill are expected during today’s session of the Senate. At 12 noon, Senator Blumenthal, from Connecticut, will deliver his maiden speech and will speak for up to 20 minutes.

Yesterday, we received a 3-week continuing resolution from the House. I hope we will be able to reach an agreement to consider that before the end of the week.

MEASURE PLACED ON CALENDAR—H.J. RES. 48
Mr. REID. Madam President, I am told that H.J. Res. 48 is at the desk and due for its second reading.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the bill by title for the second time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 48) making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 2011, and for other purposes.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I object to any further proceedings with respect to the joint resolution.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection having been heard, the joint resolution will be placed on the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE COOPERATION
Mr. REID. Madam President, no one can count the number of times this Chamber has heard calls for compromise. That call has come from Senators of good faith, from Senators on both sides. Indeed, it is the very essence of the legislative branch, which was purposefully designed to run on consensus by our Founding Fathers.

As Senators we search for the right arguments, and the right incentives that will help us strike the right balance—a balance that will let the Senate and the country move forward. But there has been no stronger argument for bipartisanship than the series of budget votes over the past few days.

Last week, the Senate voted on two proposals—one written by Republicans and one written by Democrats. Some Republicans voted against the Republican bill and some Democrats voted against the Democratic bill. In the end, neither passed.

Yesterday, the House voted on another Republican proposal. Again, some Republicans voted against the Republican bill and some Democrats voted against the Democratic bill. In the end neither passed.

Yesterday, the House voted on another Republican proposal. Again, some Republicans voted against their own party’s plan—a lot of them did—and some Democrats voted for the other party’s plan. This time, it passed—but only because it had bipartisan support. We don’t know what will happen when that same question comes before the Senate this week, but we know we won’t see a strictly party-line vote.

The lesson is obvious: Neither party can pass a bill without the other party, and neither Chamber can send that bill to the President without the other Chamber. Therefore, if you’re looking for a case study on why cooperation is necessary, that is as clear as it comes. It is just as obvious that we cannot meet in the middle if one side refuses to give any ground. Both parties and both Houses must be willing to work together. We cannot negotiate without a partner on the other side of the table. We will not find a solution in stubbornness.

I will repeat the request I have made since the beginning of the budget debate. It is a request for reasonableness. It is the same call for compromise and consensus that always kept this diverse Nation moving forward. It is the same appeal made by one of the great Senators in the history of this country—a Senator whose seat the Republican leader now holds. Kentucky’s Henry Clay said:

All legislation is founded upon the principle of mutual concession.

If the Senate and House cannot pass a long-term budget that keeps the country open for business, another reality will be made very plain for the American people to see. It will be crystal clear which party was willing to work toward a common goal and which party lacked the courage to compromise.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each, with the time equally divided and controlled between the two leaders, or their designees, with the majority controlling the first half of the time, and the Republicans controlling the final half.

The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

AFFORDABLE CARE ACT

Mr. CARDIN. Madam President, I take this time to reflect with my colleagues and say that we celebrate today the 3-year anniversary of the passage of the Affordable Care Act, and to reflect on how much happened to improve health care in America since the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

We have reason to celebrate. If you are a senior in the Medicare Program, and you now know that you can see your primary care doctor every year for an annual wellness exam, and that wellness exam will now be covered, and you have an opportunity to meet with your doctor and take charge of your own health, you have a reason to celebrate passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you are a senior who happens to fall within the coverage gap under the prescription drug benefits in Medicare, the so-called doughnut hole, and you have been forced at times to leave prescriptions on the counter of a drugstore because you could not afford to pay the cost of the prescription, and you now know that there is coverage in Medicare if you fall within that gap—for last year, 3.2 million seniors who fell within the gap received a $250 check. This year, the seniors who fall within this coverage gap will receive a $400 one-time payment to purchase generic drugs. Next year, their benefit will be worth as much as $2,400 and, by 2020, we will close the gap entirely, all as a result of the passage of the Affordable Care Act. So you have reason to celebrate that Congress finally got the job done.

If you are an American family, like many, and you celebrate your child’s graduation from college, only to find that your child could no longer be covered under your health insurance policy because of the age restriction, and now you learn that Congress has changed that age to 26, so you can keep your youngster under your family insurance program, and that child now has health insurance, and you are one of 1.2 million people who benefit from this provision that was in the Affordable Care Act, you have reason to celebrate the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you are a small business owner who can now afford to cover your employees because of the small business tax credit that was included in the Affordable Care Act—4 million eligible institutions will be eligible for that tax credit, and soon you will be able to get competitive rates. Small businesses today pay 20 percent more for the same coverage large companies have. Congress took action last year to eliminate that disparity. If you are one of those small businesses or the millions who benefit from that tax credit or who will benefit from more competitive rates and better choice, you have reason to celebrate the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you happen to be a consumer of health insurance, as almost all of us are, and you want value for your premium dollar, you now know that with passage of the Affordable Care Act, the lion’s share of your health premiums must go for health benefits, reining in the excessive administrative costs of private insurance companies, and you know now that Congress has taken action to prevent the abusive practices of private insurance companies, you have reason to celebrate the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you happen to be the woman in Maryland, who was hiking in the mountains of West Virginia and fell off a cliff, and was unconscious and flown to the closest emergency room to receive care and was denied coverage because she did not call ahead for preauthorization, you have a reason to celebrate the enactment of the Affordable Care Act.

Your insurance companies have denied coverage for emergency care because of requirements for preauthorization or have denied coverage because the ultimate diagnosis did not meet their standard for reimbursement, even though your symptoms indicated you should seek emergency care. I started working on that issue in 1995, known as the prudent layperson’s standards for requiring insurance companies to reimburse their policyholders for services in emergency rooms, where their symptoms indicated they should go to the emergency room.

In 1997, Medicare and Medicaid were changed in order to provide for the prudent layperson’s standard for reimbursement. Now all insurance companies must comply with that standard because of the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you are a parent who has a child who has asthma or you have been told that the insurance company won’t provide full coverage because of your child’s preexisting condition, and now you can get full coverage for your child, you too have a reason to celebrate the passage of the Affordable Care Act.

If you are an adult and have been told you cannot get insurance because of a preexisting condition, such as high blood pressure, or you happen to be like a couple from Montgomery County, MD who had to visit two emergency rooms, where their symptoms indicated they should go to the closest emergency room to receive care and was denied coverage because she did not call ahead for preauthorization, you have a reason to celebrate the enactment of the Affordable Care Act, because the Affordable Care Act extended the solvency of the Medicare system by 12 years, putting it on a safer basis, making it less vulnerable for our budget.

The enactment of the Affordable Care Act reduced the Federal budget deficit by over $100 billion during the first 10 years, and over $1.5 trillion during the first 20 years. This is because, quite frankly, this bill manages illness much more cost effectively. It uses health information technology more effectively and it invests in wellness, and it brings down the cost. That is not what this Senator is saying has been established: it is what the CBO has told us will bring in savings on our budget deficit. Taxpayers have a reason to celebrate the enactment of the Affordable Care Act.

There is one other reason to celebrate the year’s anniversary of the enactment of this legislation. Let me give one more example. A couple of weeks ago I was at the Greater Baden Health Center located about 7 or 8 miles from where we are today. They are doing something about the infant mortality rate in our community. We have too high of an infant mortality rate because of low birth weight babies. Some do not survive and become part of our infant mortality numbers in America where we are much higher than we should be. Others survive and have complications that need to be addressed by our health care system, making it challenging for the infant and expensive for our society.

At the Baden Health Center, they are doing something about that situation. They are expanding their qualified health center to include prenatal care so pregnant women can get the type of attention they need to have healthy babies. That money comes from the Affordable Care Act because of the expansion of our qualified health centers.

We all celebrate what we are able to accomplish. It will keep our children healthier and save us money and have less use of the emergency rooms by expanding care at our qualified centers.

Madam President, if you are concerned about health disparities in America—and you have reason to be—minorities are two times more likely to suffer from diabetes and 33 percent more likely to die from heart disease. In the African-American community, the infant mortality rate is 2.3 times higher than the White community. When you look at the number of people who have access to health care and health insurance, the minority population represents one-third. Yet they are one-half of the people who do not have health insurance.

I think we all agree that we need to do something about that situation. That is not right in our sense of fairness. But let me give one more reason it will save us money.

A study done at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland points out that we can save $250 billion in excess direct medical care costs if we can deal with the minority health disparities. We had done something about that in the Affordable Care Act. An amendment that I was proud to offer established the Institute for Minority Health and Health Disparities within the National Institutes of Health. We have developed minority health and disparity offices in each of our agencies that deal with health care to deal with health care disparities in America. We can all celebrate that we are able to move that forward in the Affordable Care Act.

We should all take pride that America at long last, after decades of unsuccessful attempts, has acted. Health care is a right, not a privilege. As our dear friend, the late Senator Kennedy, said: We no longer have a sick care system. We have taken action to include all under health care in America.

I understand the Republicans in the House want to repeal each and every one of these improvements and accomplishments. They offer no hope of taking us in a serious manner during this Congress. Speaking on behalf of our seniors, speaking on behalf of our small business owners, speaking on behalf of the consumers of health insurance in America, speaking on behalf of what is right, as far as covering and making sure everyone has access to affordable care, we do not want to see that happen. We do not want to move backwards. We have reason to celebrate the accomplishments of moving forward with health care. We want to move forward, not back, and continue to build on an American health care system that provides affordable quality care to all Americans.

Madam President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The acting president pro tempore, the clerk, will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The acting president pro tempore, without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The acting president pro tempore. The minority leader is recognized.

GAS PRICES ON THE RISE

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, the rising cost of gasoline has become a major source of concern for most Americans. With prices in most States moving closer and closer to $4 a gallon, and already higher in some areas, America has a right to know where the President and Democrats in Congress stand on the issue.

Let me begin this morning with a simple observation that it is no accident that the rising cost of gas prices is taking place at a time when Democrats control two-thirds of official Washington. It is no secret that Democratic leaders in Washington do not particularly care for this issue. Ask them about gas prices and chances are they will tell you about the car they plan to build and have ready for production about 25 years down the road. Suggest we tap some of our domestic sources of oil and they will give you 101 reasons we cannot and should not do it.

We have been having that particular argument for decades now—literally for decades. Then they have the audacity to step in front of the cameras and tell us they are all for reducing our dependence on foreign sources of oil.

With what—windmills?

It is time to be serious about a serious problem. The fact is, there is no reason in the world we cannot invest in future technologies at the same time we are tapping into the resources we already have right here at home and creating jobs while we do it. But Democrats do not seem to like that idea.

They would rather force a change in behavior now than giving struggling American families the relief they need from the rising gas prices.

Do not listen to what they say on the issue, watch what they do. Here is what they have done.

Over the past 2 years, the Obama administration has delayed, revoked, suspended, or canceled an enormous range of development opportunities.

One month after the President took office, his administration canceled 77 oil and gas leases in Utah. Once the review was complete, the administration refused to reinstate one.

A month after that, the administration shortened lease terms for offshore oil and gas production and raised fees for permit applications.

Last January, it announced new restrictions for onshore oil and gas exploration in the mountain West.

Last February, it denied a permit to build a bridge needed to access an oil-producing field in Alaska, after the Environmental Protection Agency designated a nearby river an aquatic resource of national importance.

Last April, the administration suspended 61 oil and gas leases in Montana that were issued in 2008 and then announced that all oil and gas leases in Montana, North Dakota, and South Dakota would be delayed indefinitely.

Last May, the President announced a 6-month moratorium on deepwater drilling—a moratorium that has been repeatedly struck down by the courts.

The list of actions such as these goes on and on, and that is to say nothing of the proposed new Environmental Protection Agency regulations on energy that would either cause oil refineries to pass along their resulting new production costs to consumers at the pump or drive them and their jobs overseas.

Let there be no doubt, the efforts of the White House are costing jobs and putting even more pressure on gas prices. Paying lipservice to the public’s concerns will not solve the problem. Unlocking our own sources of energy at home would help immensely.

Just to give an idea of the kind of results we have the power to achieve at home, consider that just one 2,000-acre section of the non-wilderness sections of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, along with the Chukchi and Beaufort Seas, have enough recoverable oil to provide 20 years of oil for roughly 5 years.

The problem is not that we need to look elsewhere for energy. The problem... is that Democrats in Washington will not let us use it. The problem is that even with gas prices on the rise, they want to tax it even more.

Let's make this simple. I am going to propose just two concrete practical things we can do in Washington to give the American people some relief, create jobs, and help us be less dependent on foreign sources of oil, two ideas that would have wide bipartisan support. Let's increase American energy production, and let's block any new regulations that will drive up the production costs for energy. These are two ideas that will create jobs and alleviate the increasing pressure on gas prices.

Let's leave the ideology aside and do some practical good for Americans who are struggling out there. Let's increase American production of energy with American jobs and stop the job-stifling regulations.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore, The chair will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore, Without objection, it is so ordered.

ENERGY POLICY

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, we are all facing the challenge of gasoline prices adding a new burden to family budgets as well as small businesses and large businesses alike. It couldn't come at a worse time in light of our recession and unemployment. But it is important for us to put into perspective where we are and how we should resolve this issue.

When we look at the entire known reserves of oil and gas in the world—in the entire world—the United States has 3 percent—3 percent—and each year the United States consumes 25 percent of the energy that is used in the world. So when I hear my colleagues on the other side come to the floor and say we can drill our way out of this, I say to them: That is unrealistic and doesn't reflect the reality of what we face today.

Yes, we should have responsible drilling for oil and gas. We should be sensitive to the environment to avoid the kind of hazards and accidents we saw in the Gulf of Mexico, to protect that part of America and part of the world we believe should be preserved for future generations. But the notion if we could start drilling more our problems would go away is not only naive, it is wrong—flatout wrong.

We heard the chants of “drill, baby, drill” a year and a half ago in the course of a Presidential campaign. It is not the answer to America's energy policy. We still import $1 million worth of oil a day into the United States. It is an indication of our dependence on foreign oil that any interruption in the Middle East or from other sources is going to raise our prices.

What should we do about it? Several things. First, on the immediate agenda, we should look at the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The President has to decide—and said Friday he was considering—on releasing oil we have stored in this reserve to bring down prices and keep the economy moving forward. I support that. I hope the President will do that.

Secondly, we have to look at ways that the current oil pricing is being gamed by some financiers and speculators. From my point of view, this is something that needs to be not only examined but stopped. This speculation in oil prices runs up prices way too high, way too fast.

Third, take a look at the oil companies themselves. The top five oil companies are extremely profitable and, in the midst of crises, they make even more money. That is the reality.

Then, we need to step back and look at our national energy policy. How do we encourage the use of more efficient cars and trucks and why? How do we pay for that? I'm entertaining the amendment by the Republican leader in the Senate. He says the Environmental Protection Agency should step back from even encouraging the kind of fuel efficiency in cars and trucks which would reduce our dependence on foreign oil and reduce pollution in the atmosphere. That is a step backward to the past. It is a rejection of basic science.

So when the Republican leader comes to the floor and gives his prescription for today's energy challenge in America, I would say to him: The patient is not going to get well, Senator, with your prescription. We have to have a coordinated energy policy moving toward fuel efficiency, reducing the use of energy, and still fueling our economy with sustainable sources of energy that don't pollute the atmosphere.

The Senator from Kentucky, who was giving us a speech this morning about energy, actually has an amendment he is preparing for the floor which removes the right of the Environmental Protection Agency to even deal with greenhouse gas emissions as they affect climate change and the world we live in. That is a stick-your-head-in-the-sand approach to an issue which future generations will look back on and say: What were they thinking? that they would ignore the reality of climate change in the world and the reality of what pollution is doing to our lungs, our health, our future. It is a reality that is being rejected by the Republican side of the aisle.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask how much time is remaining in morning business?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Four minutes on the majority side.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

ANNIVERSARY OF HEALTH CARE REFORM

Mr. DURBIN. Madam President, this is the 1-year anniversary of the President's signing of health care reform, and I am happy to stand and say it represents one of the most important pieces of legislation in decades. For too long we let our Nation's health care crisis grow and ignored it. People who said let the market work its will, have to be honest about what the market did. The market started excluding people who had pre-existing conditions—and who among us doesn't? The market started charging higher and higher prices for health insurance. The market, unfortunately, was uncontrollable.

We tried to deal with it, to bring pricing under control and deal with the realities families face across America. When I was in the most heated debate about the health care bill with tea party devotees in front of my office in Springfield, I told them to tell you about some of the people in Illinois I have met. At some point, the tea party people said: Stop telling stories, DURBIN. We don't want to hear any more stories. Of course, they don't believe us. But they know we did this. Those stories represent real lives.

Let me tell one of those stories, representing a family who comes from Peoria, IL. This is Jill and Ric Lathrop. They have two sons, Sam and Nat. One of them has a Superman t-shirt on. They are 12 and 14 years old and they have severe hemophilia. It is a rare and costly medical condition.

Thanks to the twice-weekly injections of blood clotting replacement factor they receive, the boys are able to live happy and healthy lives—and they look pretty darn good in that picture. That lifesaving medication costs roughly $250,000 per child, per year.

For years, the family has lived in fear they would reach the lifetime limit of their insurance plan. That was a reality. Many of these plans had a ceiling that paid no more beyond a certain amount. Well, it happened to them in 2005. The hospital where Ric works as an MRI technician instituted a $2 million lifetime cap on benefits. For most families, that wouldn't even be an issue, but for the Lathrops, who know their annual medical expenses will always total hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep their boys alive, that was devastating.

Rather than waiting for their benefits to run out, the Lathrops moved to Peoria, where Ric found a job that provided insurance without lifetime limits. He moved his family and found a job to get an insurance policy that would keep their family taken in the open enrollment period for their health insurance plan rolled around, they waited on edge to see if their insurance would, once again, institute an annual or lifetime limit on care that would force them to move again to ensure adequate coverage for their sons.

Thanks to the bill we passed last year, insurance companies can no
Mr. BARRASSO. Madam President, we are, I believe, 1 year to the day from the day the President signed into law the health care law that is going to have an impact on all the people of this country. Here we are, 1 year later and we know a lot more about this law and people all around the country know a lot more about this law.

I spent part of the weekend visiting folks in Buffalo, WY, attending the Buffalo health fair. A health fair is a place in the community where people get together and get their blood tested ahead of time—a very inexpensive way to do that. It is based on prevention and early detection—issues this health care law was supposed to address but has failed miserably at. At the health fair, I talked to people who were getting their blood tested—checking their cholesterol, checking their blood sugars to see about diabetes, checking their thyroid levels, and as these people were getting their blood tested—and many people, probably half the population of Buffalo, turned out to have their blood tested and carried down a mountain by “Senator Moses.” Everybody else has been trying and hasn’t quite hit that standard. So let’s be humble about this and be open to change. But let’s not repeal this, as the Republicans have called for time and again. Let’s not say to the Lathrop family: Sorry. You are on your own if another lifetime limit comes along that may literally endanger the lives of these two beautiful little blue-eyed boys.

The debate is the entire story. It is a story about a real family. That is why the other side hates to hear these stories, because the stories literally explain why stepping backward in time and repealing health care is exactly the wrong course for America.

The President promised there would be no lifetime limits on care. Will it truly get the cost of care down?

Regrettably, this health care law, now 1 year since it has been signed, turns out to actually be bad for patients, for nurses, for doctors, and the doctors who take care of those patients—and bad for the taxpayers, the people left footing the bill because we know a lot more now, 1 year after the law was passed, than we did when it was passed.

People remember this as the law that was crammed through the Senate in the dead of night, written behind closed doors, and all the unseemly bargains that we are trying to convince Senators to vote for it, getting by on the barest number of votes. There were things such as the cornhusker kickback, the Louisiana purchase—the sort of things that offended people all over the country. As soon as people were going to be upset with this health care law, No. 1, in the way it was passed: In spite of the fact the President promised it would be seen on C-SPAN, all the discussions were held behind closed doors and despite the fact that many Americans never had a chance to read this 2,700-page law.

When the President made his initial speech about what he was aiming to accomplish in health care reform, I said that would be great. I am an orthopedic surgeon, practiced medicine for 25 years, and I think we need to do the sorts of things the President initially addressed. Unfortunately, the health care law went in the opposite direction.

When people worked their way through the 2,700-page bill, they found that instead of lowering the cost of care, the cost of their care was going to go up; instead of allowing people to keep the doctor they wanted, they were going to, unfortunately, have to change that situation. That is why I have been coming to the floor week after week with a doctor’s second opinion about this health care law.

So here we are a year later. We know the cost of health care is going up.

The President said health care premiums would be lower for families by $2,500. No family has seen that—or none that I have talked to in Wyoming, pro or con. Instead, people have seen the cost of their health insurance going up, not down.

The President said he was never going to raise taxes. It turns out, in fact, the cost increases as part of this health care law. Even the 1999 form Senator JOHANNES has championed on the part of small businesses around the country, the efforts to remove these onerous obligations on our small businesses is going to do nothing with health care. That got crammed into this bill in the dead of night so those who support the bill can claim it was going to lower the cost. Even the Congressional Budget Office admits costs are going up, not down, and this is absolutely impacting jobs.

The President promised there would be efforts for small businesses to have some advantages and some tax credits and some help, but what we found out is that if you have a small business with 10 employees and that number climbs to 11, you are going to lose some of those benefits. If you are paying your employees an average wage over $25,000 a year and you want to give them a raise, you start losing some of the benefits. So in spite of the fact the President had 4 million postcards sent out to small business owners, very few of them have been able to take advantage of what was promised to them.

Now here we are where additional waivers are being given. We are at a point where over 2.5 million Americans have been given waivers from participating in the health care law. Interestingly enough, these are the very people, for the most part—a significant number—who lobbied for the bill. Once they found out what was in it, they said no, I don’t want this to apply to me. Now we see that the State of Maine, the entire State of Maine, has been given a waiver.

I come to the floor today, a year after this has passed into law, and I say everybody in the country ought to be able to get a waiver and opt out of this health care law, completely. These are decisions that should be made at the State level, at the local level. Washington’s “one size fits all” has hardly ever worked for anything and it surely does not work for health care.

In Wyoming, at the Wyoming Health Fair in Buffalo, as I visited with people and talked to them, do you know what they are worried about? They are worried about losing their freedoms, losing their choice, losing their doctor, losing the healthcare plan they like. In spite of the President’s promises, we know that about 80 percent of people who get their health insurance through small businesses are not going to be able to keep their health plan. Why? Because of government mandates. Government has said we know what is best for you. You do not, we do. The government says: We know what is best for your family. Government doesn’t know what is best. These ought to be local decisions. That is why Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM and I and a number of other cosponsors have introduced legislation to allow States to opt out of this health care law, opt out of the individual mandate, the requirement that forces Americans to buy government-approved insurance.

Let States make that decision if people in their own State need to live under those laws. Let States decide if the employers, the people who are the job creators in our communities, if they have to supply government-approved insurance to the people who live there. Let people make decisions at the local level.

You can lift any newspaper and look at what the Medicaid mandates are doing to our States and the budgets of the States. States such as Wyoming, where we balance our budgets every... year and live within our means, are being crushed by these Medicaid mandates. But it is not just small States such as Wyoming, in terms of population—California, New York, States all across the country are saying to this body: Let us out, let us opt out. We cannot live under these mandates.

The President’s solution is to cram more people onto Medicaid, a program that doesn’t work, where many doctors will not see these patients, where the reimbursements are so low hospitals say they cannot afford to see these patients because of the impact it will have. Even the actuaries, the people who look at this in the fair and appropriate way to look at the numbers, say 15 percent of the hospitals in this country 10 years from now may not be able to be open because of the way this health care law is going. That is not going to provide more access. It is providing less access.

Why have seniors rejected this so overwhelmingly? Seniors have looked at this and they see $500 billion in Medicare cuts, in things such as Medicare Advantage. There is an advantage to being in that program. That is why one out of four seniors has set up that program and chosen that program. It is because they want choice.

This health care law is one that is taking choice out of the hands of the American families, taking freedom out of the hands of the American families. Something I continue to hear from the people in Wyoming and across the country: We need to repeal and replace with commonsense solutions to allow people to buy insurance across State lines, make it legal to do that; to allow small businesses to pool their resources; to give incentives to individuals who go to something like the Wyoming Health Fair; and work on prevention and early detection of problems. Give those people the opportunity to make individual choices. Expand health insurance.

The Medicaid expansion is like giving someone a free bus ticket, and then taking the bus away. It is wonderland accounting and even the administration’s own Medicare actuary seems to agree. He said the Medicare reductions in the law “cannot be simultaneously used to finance other Federal outlays (such as the coverage expansions . . .) and extend the trust fund.”

Double-counting this money is completely illogical and the American people can see through the smoke-screen long ago. But the fiscal problems with this legislation are not even the half of it. As a former Governor, I shared my concern that putting 16 million people into the broken Medicaid Program is a fatal flaw of this law. Medicaid beneficiaries already have a huge problem finding doctors to treat them. Nation-wide, 40 percent of doctors will not see a Medicaid patient.

The Medicaid expansion is like giving someone a free bus ticket, and then taking the bus away. But instead of addressing this problem, the law exacerbates the problem by doubling the number of people on the broken system—Medicaid. If you have an airplane that is already over weight, you wouldn’t decide to double the number of passengers to solve the problem, yet that is exactly what the law prescribes.

But even if you overlook the access nightmares created by this expansion, our States simply cannot afford it. States are already struggling to pay their bills and now we are heaping more obligations on them. As a former Governor it breaks my heart we are making those problems even greater.

That is why cash-strapped States are begging us for relief from the crushing Medicaid mandate headed their way. One didn’t have to be a fortune teller to predict the budgetary panic spreading from State capital to State capital. And for what benefit? One year later, many of the promises that were used to sell this law have been debunked. For example, remember, the President was left to wonder why “If you like your plan, you can keep it?” Turns out, that’s not exactly true. Again, the administration’s own Medicare actuary concluded that the President’s promise is “not true in all cases.” One is left to wonder why the President signed this law since his own actuaries estimated it would increase Federal health care spending by $310 million.

Earlier this year, the Medicare actuary provided a moment of sad truth. He testified that President Obama’s promise that the health care law would lower costs was “false, more so than true.” That is so astonishing that I will repeat it again—the administration’s own experts said the President’s promise was false, more so than true. That is astonishing.

Remember how the President promised that the health care law would bring down the cost of insurance premiums? As a presidential candidate, President Obama promised no fewer than 20 times that he would cut premiums by $2,500 for the average family by the end of the first term. Yet the average employee’s insurance premium has risen by nearly $1,100 per family since President Obama took office. A recent New York Times article highlighted this missed opportunity: Groups of 20 or more workers have been experiencing premium increases of around 20 percent, insurance agents say, while smaller groups are seeing increases of 40 percent to 60 percent or more.

Finally, the first year of implementing this law provides clear evidence that the administration does not think this health care bill is good for everyone. The administration has now granted over one thousand waivers to certain States, employers, unions, and insurance companies, allowing them to be exempt from several of the law’s new mandates.

The plans approved for waivers cover nearly 3 million individuals. If the law is so popular and so beneficial, why are exempting almost 3 million people while the other 300 million have to live with its higher premiums and mandates? This and many other questions have yet to be answered by the administration.

However, the President’s recent budget request does outline his game plan to advance this flawed policy. The current strategy seems to be spending more taxpayer dollars to continue to try to persuade a skeptical public that the health care law is good policy; and if they don’t agree, use an enforcement hammer to ensure compliance.

Buried within the President’s budget is a request for a 315 percent increase for the public affairs office at the Department of Health and Human Services. One of the primary tasks of the Public Affairs Office is to sell the health care reform law to the American people. Furthermore, they also requested a whopping 1,270 new Internal Revenue Service agents to implement the law and to enforce its individual mandate and other related provisions.

While Speaker Pelosi may have advocated passing the bill so that we could learn what is in it, many Americans were not so naive. They understand that you can’t spend the same dollar twice. They understand that if something sounds too good to be true, it probably is. They know when someone shows up from the government offering a carrot, there is probably a stick not far behind.

Last year, a real opportunity to craft health care policy on a bipartisan basis was squandered. That missed opportunity will continue to haunt us. Unfortunately, I worry that the second year under the oppressive provisions of this law will be no better than the last. It is regrettable that we have reached this point, having known so many of these problems existed before this law passed. But of course we were warned.

So, I will use the occasion of the solemn first anniversary to redouble my efforts to right the wrong.

We will work to wipe this misguided legislation that seeks to protect the rights of Americans to choose their doctor, select their insurance, and trust in their own good judgment. Many are committed to the cause. I believe it will happen.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore.

Mr. WICKER. Madam President, I rise to agree with my colleague from Nebraska, to support his amendment, and to congratulate him on his newfound enthusiasm for this idea.

Actually, on January 10, the House of Representatives passed a rule to reduce its spending by 5 percent. This measure was passed on a rollover vote of 410 to 13. Soon thereafter, I was the first Senator to call on my colleagues in the Senate to cut their office expenditures by 5 percent. This small but symbolic step could save the taxpayers over $20 million.

On February 4, some 6 weeks ago, I requested unanimous consent to take up a sense-of-the-Senate resolution by unanimous consent later in the day so as to expedite and refine enactment of the provisions of the Nelson amendment. Based on that understanding——

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. WICKER. I commend the Senator from Nebraska for coming to this idea somewhat late. But I support his amendment nonetheless.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment (No. 182) was agreed to.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to reconsider is considered made and laid on the table.

AMENDMENT NO. 193

Under the previous order, there is now 2 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 193 offered by the Senator from Maine, Ms. SNOWE.

The Senator from Maine is recognized.

Ms. SNOWE. Madam President, this bipartisan amendment is supported by me; Chair LANDRIEU; Senator KERRY, the former chair of the committee; Senator COBURN; and Senator WEBB.

This amendment is based on a report that was conducted by the Small Business Committee back in 2008, when Senator KERRY was chair of the committee, and we both requested an investigation into the National Veterans Business Development Corporation, also known as TVC, and found egregious mismanagement. TVC was engaged in mismanagement, misuse of taxpayer money, and did not abide by its statutory obligations.

Our committee issued a very detailed report explaining how they misused hundreds of thousands if not millions of dollars. In light of our investigation and subsequent efforts, they do not receive any federal appropriations now. But we want to remove them from statute so they do not have any Federal linkage, any Federal charter, or any ability to use the auspices of the Federal Government for any activities in the future.

So I urge support of this amendment and note that both the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion supported discontinuing the funding for this organization, after our report was prepared.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, I will speak for just a moment, if I could.

I know that people in Washington and people in America do not believe we can actually eliminate a program. We are getting ready to eliminate one now in a bipartisan fashion to cut funding and to cut a program that has not worked. I just want to underline that we most certainly can do that in a bipartisan way. That is what this vote is about.

I do not believe there is any opposition, so I yield back the remaining time.

Ms. SNOWE. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion by Senator Casey is considered made and laid on the table.

The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to engage in a colloquy with the distinguished Republican leader for 5 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DEFENSE APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I say to my friend and leader and to all my colleagues, it is deep concern of the Secretary of Defense and to this Member, and I am sure many other Members, that we are defending this Nation on a 2-week-to-2-week basis, and it is harming our ability to defend this Nation’s national security. I know we are probably now going to go into another 3-week continuing resolution.

Is it the intention of the Republican leader, along with myself and others, that we will not do another continuing resolution and that we will cut a Defense appropriations bill for the year? We can’t do this to the men and women who are serving—deprive them of the equipment, the training, and where-withal—when we are in two wars. It is vital, in my view, that we not allow another continuing resolution without addressing the Defense appropriations bill for, hopefully, what should be the remainder of the year.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I would say to my friend, I believe his position is shared by the leadership of our party in the House, and I think there is no chance we will not complete work on the Defense appropriations bill in the next few weeks.

Mr. MCCAIN. I thank the Senator. The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, before I get into the business before us, which is SBIR and STTR reauthorization, a very important small business program, let me just add a few thoughts to the colloquy of the Senator from Arizona and the minority leader. I would most certainly support that view, and there may be others on the Democratic side who feel that way as well. As chair of the Homeland Security Appropriations Committee, let me be very clear that I don’t think we should go to another short-term CR without a full-year appropriation of Homeland Security. Not only is the Department of Homeland Security appropriations bill absolutely essential to the well-being of this Nation, but so is the Homeland Security budget. They have complete jurisdiction over Customs and Immigration, over safety and security at our ports and our airports and train stations. We most certainly can’t let our guard down as it pertains to our overseas operations, but we absolutely cannot let our guard down as it pertains to our safety here at home.

I hope both Republican and Democratic leadership, as we find our way through this complicated and difficult appropriations process, will remember Defense and Homeland Security.

I see Senator CORNYN on the floor. I know he is going to call up, with no objection from me, his amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 216

Before that, I ask unanimous consent to call up Casey amendment No. 216 to be the only pending amendment. Senator CASEY will be here shortly to discuss his amendment, and then we will go in just a minute to Senator CORNYN.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU), for Mr. CASEY, proposes an amendment numbered 216.
March 16, 2011

Ms. LANDRIEU. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To require contractors to notify small business concerns that have been included in offers relating to contracts let by Federal agencies)

At the end of title III, add the following:

SEC. 3. SUBCONTRACTOR NOTIFICATIONS.

Section 8(d) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(d)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) notify the small business concern that the offeror intends to identify the small business concern as a potential subcontractor in the offer relating to the contract;"

"(d) REPORTING BY SUBCONTRACTORS.—The Administrator shall establish a reporting mechanism that allows a subcontractor to report fraudulent activity by a contractor with whom the subcontractor subcontracts a subcontracting plan submitted to a procurement authority under paragraph (4)(B)."

Ms. LANDRIEU. Our intention is for Senator CASEY to have an opportunity when he comes to the floor.

Before Senator CORNYN speaks, for just one moment I wish to add a few comments about what happened this morning. We did get two amendment votes on the bill. Those were the first two amendments, the Nelson of Nebraska amendment, and then Senator SNOKE and I offered an amendment. We have approximately six other amendments pending not yet scheduled for a vote. Most of them were discussed at some length yesterday on the floor, the most notable Senator MCCONNELL's amendment, which Senator BOXER and others strongly opposed.

I wish to say one thing, as respectfully as I can, in response to a comment Senator WICKER made regarding the Nelson amendment. He said something along the lines that Senator NELson had found something new—how did he say it—new-found enthusiasm for cutting the budget. In defense of Senator NELSON, I wish to say his enthusiasm is most certainly not new found. He has been an integral part of this debate for a long time. He is an integral part of the group of senators who cut spending in 1995. Senator WICKER, if you will search through any issue of the National Journal, you will find that Senator NELSON has been an integral part of all of the cuts that have been made in other years.

I yield the floor. The Acting President pro tempore. The Senator from Texas.

(Ms. LANDRIEU. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with."

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The Assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mr. CORNYN] proposes an amendment numbered 186.

Mr. CORNYN. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The Acting President pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is printed in the RECORD of Tuesday, March 15, 2010, under the following:

Mr. CORNYN. This is what the President's own fiscal commission has said about this concept: "the closest thing to eternal life here on earth is a temporary government program." We all know what happens once a program is created. A constituency is created, and they come in and ask for a cost of living or other increase, and they grow and grow, and there is no end. I am not criticizing the standing committees, but there is not adequate time or opportunity given to looking at these programs to see whether they are still needed or whether their budgets are justified. So you see these programs growing and Federal spending growing and no real time and effort given to cutting wasteful spending and eliminating programs that have not been authorized or which are duplicative or redundant, as pointed out by the GAO. My hope is when we have the chance to vote on this amendment, we can all answer this important call. I think in the process we can ask the single most important question Congress can ask when it comes to spending and programs, which is: Is this program still needed?

A sunset commission would help us do our job of oversight and accountability. It would help rein in runaway Federal spending and, hopefully, along with growth in the private sector and investment by the private sector and entrepreneurs, help us get past where we are now, where we have not only runaway spending but unsustainable debt, and a private sector sitting on the sidelines not creating new jobs the way we need them to create.

I yield the floor and thank the manager.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Will the Senator yield for a question on his amendment? Mr. CORNYN. Yes, Ms. LANDRIEU. Most of the programs I am familiar with at the Federal level have built-in sunsets, because they have limited authorization.
How does the Senator's amendment either override that or undercut that? Why is his amendment necessary?

Mr. CORNYN. Madam President, I am glad to respond to the question. As the Senator knows, many programs that are currently up and running are operating on the basis of an appropriation without an authorization by the committee of jurisdiction, and that is part of what the sunset commission would look at because, frankly, it hasn't been authorized, the kind of oversight that is needed in order to scrub the numbers and make sure the program is still necessary and the spending is appropriate doesn't happen.

This also is designed specifically to deal with what the GAO pointed out in the last 7 to 10 days, where we have dozens of programs designed to do exactly the same thing. In other words, rather than making sure that existing programs are funded and operating on the basis of an appropriation without an authorization by the committee of jurisdiction, and that is part of what the sunset commission would look at because, frankly, it hasn't been authorized, the kind of oversight that is needed in order to scrub the numbers and make sure the program is still necessary and the spending is appropriate doesn't happen.

am not sure we will get to final passage of the bill this week, but we want to do as much work on the bill as we can so when we get back, it will hopefully be the first order of business. We will see. Maybe there will be a breakthrough in the next 2 or 3 days and we can get it done because of that. That would send a positive signal. We are working with the leadership to see if that can be done. If not, we will continue to work this week to get as many amendments offered and pending and some votes today and tomorrow.

I see the ranking member on the floor. I wish to turn the time over to her now.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. SNOWE. Madam President, I certainly concur in the comments that have been made by the Chair of the Small Business Committee, Senator LANDRIEU, who has exhibited tremendous leadership in bringing these initiatives together for reauthorization. It has been a long journey for these programs, reaching the point of reauthorizing them for the first time since 2008. In the intervening years, the programs have had to rely on multiple extensions to operate.

These programs are of indisputable value to the growth in America when it comes to innovation and invention on the part of small businesses. They undeniably have been critically effective. When they have had access to venture capital and research and development dollars that are available in more than 11 agencies across the government, including the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, to name a few, they have provided invaluable support to the entrepreneurial spirit that is so critical to this country.

As the Chair indicated, it is the small businesses in America, the one segment of the economy that undeniably creates the kinds of jobs that are so important to this country. In fact, they create two-thirds of all the new jobs. We have to do everything we can to make sure that they are getting access to the kind of capital and support and the research and development dollars that are available at the national level.

These two programs, were created back in 1982. As the Chair indicated, I was an original cosponsor of that legislation when I was serving in the House of Representatives because we knew it could ultimately be a great catalyst for innovative and technological ideas in America. It has provided it, without question.

The National Academy of Sciences study of the SBIR Program—which is a landmark study—called the program sound in concept and effective in practice. Just over 20 percent of companies they surveyed were founded partly or entirely because of the SBIR program. Over two-thirds of the respondents said that the SBIR projects would not have taken place without the funding. Each year, over one-third of firms awarded SBIR funds participate in the program for the first time.

Again, it is encouraging innovation across a broad spectrum of businesses and creating additional competition for the Government’s procurement agencies. We see that it produces over and over again the benefits, the jobs, the creativity.

The Chair spoke about Qualcomm. That is true. We saw the Sonicare toothbrush. In May, we had a company called Tex Tech that developed armor for our troops in Iraq and Afghanistan. If we can give the infusion of these dollars—dollars already being expended by Federal agencies but redirected to small businesses and making sure that they are getting a fair share of the Federal pie—then they can put that money to good use in creating the kind of jobs, and the inventions that are so important to moving this country forward in the 21st century.

I am very pleased we are at this point. Hopefully, we will be able to get this legislation signed into law because it is critical to venture capital investments. It is a prominent source of investment in biotechnology research and development. As we know, it takes 10 to 15 years of work and hundreds of millions of dollars to bring a drug to market and to complete the testing of the drug process along the way costs millions of dollars. The biotechnology companies are able to commercialize their technologies with this backing from these programs and money that is being expended at the Federal level in these key agencies, such as the National Institutes of Health. Such investments in biotechnology and medical device industries totaled more than $1 billion in 2007.

Again, it is a demonstration of the kind of value and results we achieve through this program without providing additional appropriations. It is not as if we are spending more money on a new program. We are not. What we are saying is that with the research and development dollars that are already being appropriated within the Federal agencies, we are asking that they set aside more than $2.5 billion in Federal research and development to fund our Nation’s smallest firms because they are the ones that are most likely to create the jobs and to commercialize their products. They have demonstrated time and again, year after year, at an all-time high, that the innovations coming out of small businesses are directly through these two programs. Their inventions reach the marketplace. They commercialize them.

Qualcomm, 25 years ago started with a $1.5 million grant from the SBIR Program. They had less than a dozen employees. Currently, they have more than 7,000 employees and they have 1,000 suppliers in the United States of America.

The Information Technology Innovation Foundation indicated in its report recently that 25 percent of the top 100 innovations came from small businesses funded through the SBIR Program, and stated further that it is a powerful indication that this program has been a key force in the innovation economy of the United States.

If there were ever a time that we should be supporting these programs and promptly and expeditiously, it is here and now. We saw last month we created 200,000 jobs. But the month prior was 36,000 jobs. In order to reach prerecession levels of unemployment, it would take eight consecutive years of creating jobs at a rate of 200,000 a month in order to achieve the prerecession levels of unemployment of 5 percent.

That is an indication of how far we need to go to create jobs in this economy, and it is creating the anxiety, the apprehension, the fear all across this country because people are struggling to find jobs or to keep the ones they have. This would go a long way to benefitting the sector of the economy that does create the jobs, and that is, of course, small businesses.

I hope that we can move quickly to get this legislation enacted and signed into law and create the kinds of jobs people in this country undeniably deserve.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, at this time, Senator CASEY, whose amendment is pending, wishes to speak for up to 20 minutes as in morning work for the purpose of giving his maiden speech.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CASEY. Madam President, first, I thank Senator LANDRIEU for her leadership on these many issues and especially on this critically important legislation to small businesses and for allowing me for a few minutes to talk about the amendment I have submitted. It is amendment No. 216. It addresses a crucial issue that affects subcontractors, particularly subcontractors who are minority owned or women-owned firms in the United States of America.

When I was the auditor general of Pennsylvania, we audited a similar program at the State level and found all kinds of problems, all kinds of abuses when prime contractors do not do what they are supposed to do. In many instances, prime contractors will routinely list a minority-owned firm or women-owned firm to make their application in a competitive process without informing the named subcontractor. It puts that subcontractor at a disadvantage. Once the contract is awarded, the business is not given to the named subcontractor.

The purpose of this amendment is very simple and very clear. The subcontractors are aware of their inclusion in Federal procurement bids by prime contractors and establish a system in which those subcontractors can report any fraudulent activity. It is a simple but critically important remedy to do this problem. We have more work to do on this issue, but it will give subcontractors the ability to more fairly and more fully participate in contracting. That is the least we should be doing at a time when so many small businesses are struggling to survive and to thrive.

I am grateful Senator LANDRIEU gave me this opportunity. I yield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania. I do intend to support this amendment. It is an excellent one. Hopefully, we can get a vote on it sometime today or tomorrow.

At this time, pursuant to a unanimous consent agreement, we will hear a speech from the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FRANKEN). The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BLUMENTHAL. Mr. President, the petition sent me here to fight for their interests and today I rise to amplify their voices and share their concerns in my first remarks from the floor of the United States Senate.

I know these voices firsthand from listening day after day, year after year, traveling the State to be with people and to see people where they live and work, and recently on a 2-week listening tour as one of my first actions as a Member of the Senate.

What I am hearing is people are still hurting, still struggling, trying to stay in their homes, make ends meet, find jobs, and keep their families together. They feel rightly that Washington is not listening. Washington is not heeding their voices or responding with the right action or results.

The people of Connecticut are clear about their priorities. They want to be back at work with good jobs and a growing economy and responsible, simple but critically important remedies that can give subcontractors the ability to more fairly and more fully participate in contracting. That is the least we should be doing at a time when so many small businesses are struggling to survive and to thrive.

That is the kind of listener and leader they sent me here to be.

In the northeast corner of my State, known as the ‘Quiet Corner,’ the president of Nutting Container Corporation, Charlie Pious, tells me he is hoping to hire more workers, but he has difficulty finding people with the skills he needs.

In Bridgeport, unemployed, older workers are crowding the WorkPlace, a highly successful job training center. There and all around the state, people simply want work.

In Torrington, R. Daniel Brdar, the president of the Fuel Cell Energy Corporation, tells me he is hoping to hire more workers, but he needs to know that he can continue to count on the renewal of the repayment tax credit and workers with the right skills.

In Waterbury, at a meeting hosted by Joe Vrabley, president of Atlantic Steel, small business manufacturers described again and again how they are facing unfair competition from companies in countries breaking the rules.

At Crescent Manufacturing in Burlington, Steve Wilson demonstrates the destructive consequences of Chinese currency manipulation, when they effectively devalue their money and subsidize the exports so the prices of their products undercut Connecticut-made goods and jobs.

The people of Connecticut don’t need Washington to tell them what is wrong; they need help making it right. They want job creation to be the priority in Washington, just as it is in Connecticut. They are frustrated because Washington seems beholden not to the wellbeing of the American people, but to the selfish enrichment of the financiers who made the economy their personal casino and put millions of Americans out of work and out of their homes.

On Main Street, small businesses struggle to get started and ongoing businesses face roadblocks when they try to grow. They can’t get capital, credit, or loans. They can’t find workers with the skills they need. They face unfair trade practices from foreign governments promoting the products of their manufacturers.

Taxpayers are angry for good reason, not just for themselves but for their children and the growing danger to the American dream. And great fear they will be the first generation to leave the next a lesser America and trillions in unpaid bills.

A new report from the Government Accountability Office documents what we instinctively have known: Waste and duplication in government costs taxpayers billions of dollars every year—early estimates say between $100 billion and $200 billion. And experts say we could save tens of billions of dollars by a comprehensive approach with care and waste and abuse, just as we saved millions of dollars going after health care fraud when I was attorney general.

The people of Connecticut—indeed, of America—will not tolerate and should not tolerate billions in waste and duplication. It must be cut. That is where we should focus, not on the thoughtless slashing of essential services that provide safety net to most vulnerable citizens. When we cut, let’s be smart about it.

The people of Connecticut are sick of the special breaks and tax loopholes that have been put in for too long—tax breaks to companies that send jobs overseas; subsidies to huge oil and gas interests, some of them the most profitable companies in the history of the planet; and giveaways to agribusinesses, miles to given tax dollars not to grow anything.

Shutting down those loopholes and special breaks and sweetheart deals will take a fight, but the people of Connecticut and the country are ready for that. And I am I. And we must fight. That fight will require support for the prosecutors and enforcers who prevent and go after waste, abuse, and lawbreaking. Cutting enforcement funds may make appealing political sound bites until we realize that real-world lawlessness has real-world consequences. Consistent, vigorous enforcement is critical. Good cops on the beat make a difference.

These steps—responsible cuts in spending, clear rules, and consistent, rigorous enforcement—are absolutely necessary to help our economy grow again, but they alone are not enough to create jobs. Washington must provide hope and move out of the way to people and small businesses that are the real job creators. We have to make ‘Made in Connecticut’ and ‘Made in America’ mean something again. We must invest more, we must make more, and it must be made right here in the United States.

Step No. 1, we must invest more. We must invest in infrastructure and education—in roads, transmission lines, and airports, in everything from our great schools to college campuses and job-training programs. In New Haven, as just one example, cutting-edge biotechnologies are taking root and growing thanks to the Downtown Crossing project, where a new building and road rebuilding are necessary for dynamic growth. Instead of thoughtless threats to slash Downtown Crossing transportation grants, we should be encouraging this promising downtown development.

In the coming weeks, I will introduce new legislation that will help small businesses to set aside money to invest and reinvest in their business.

Step 2, making more, which means manufacturing, fair trade, and strengthening ‘Buy American’ requirements to ensure that our tax dollars are creating jobs here not abroad. Chinese currency manipulation is costing us jobs and undermining our businesses, and it must be stopped. And we need stronger enforcement of laws to prevent foreign export subsidies and intellectual property theft.
Third, we must invent more. The renewable energy tax credits and other incentives which encourage businesses to create and produce green energy solutions should be made permanent. The R&D tax credit, which creates incentives for businesses to invest in research, should be extended indefinitely and expanded.

The people of Connecticut want bipartisan efforts to achieve job creation and economic growth. They want partnerships among business, labor, and education. They want bipartisan efforts to help our veterans so that after those veterans serve our country, they return to a paycheck instead of an unemployment line. That is why, in coming weeks, I will introduce a bill to help secure job opportunities for our veterans and provide training, health care, higher education, and more.

As I travel across the State of Connecticut, I listen to people like the Squaritos of Carla’s Pasta. Their business recipe included a immigrant from Italy, Carla Squarrito started making pasta in her kitchen and grew it into a successful small business. This year, thanks to smart, targeted tax incentives, Carla’s financial tailwinds and allowing her to expand.

The people of Connecticut sent me here to fight for them—to fight for jobs and justice, to fight against a Capitol that caters to powerful special interests. The best moments of my career have been when we fought and won battles for ordinary people—for Skylar Austin and others when their health insurance companies wrongly denied them medically necessary, sometimes lifesaving treatment; for small businesses that have proven themselves; for a marine, like many veterans, who returned from Iraq or other military service only to be denied proper treatment from our own government. I am here because the people of Connecticut know me as a fighter, and in the challenging time, again, I will fulfill that trust by listening to them and working with them to hire more workers and create more Connecticut jobs.

The Small Business Technology Council says:

Not only does this program spur technological innovation and entrepreneurship, it helps create high-tech jobs, and does so without increasing the deficit. For instance, the SBIR program serves as an important avenue by which agencies harness the creativity and ingenuity of small businesses to meet specific research and development needs of the Federal Government. Might I say, they may be the today needs of the Federal Government; such as we need a way to cool our tanks in Afghanistan and Iraq because our tanks are operating in temperatures that are excessive. That was a real need of the National Security Council.

If we would spend a little less hot air around here and a little more on illuminating discussion, the benefits of programs such as this would be clear. It is actually a Federal program, but it is a Federal program that can make the difference between the private sector that is exciting and that works and that helps to create jobs.

The Biodistrict in New Orleans, which was newly formed after Katrina, sent a document to the office that said, in reference to the temporary extensions of this program:

These repeated, temporary extensions have wreaked havoc on agencies’ ability to make strategic decisions in regard to the programs.

The National Small Business Association, another strong supporter, said:

The uncertain future of the program has deterred potential participants and investors.

We do not want to deter anyone. We do not want to discourage anyone from making that investment or taking that step to create the next business that could create not just a handful of jobs but dozens, hundreds, and potentially thousands. That is why President Obama took that—and I support his efforts—the need to outinnovate and outcompete, to fight our way out of this recession.

This bill of Senator SNowe and mine might be a relatively small bill from a small agency, but it packs a lot of power and potential to create the jobs that people—in your home State of Minnesota, in my home State of Louisiana, in Maine, and other places—want to see us creating, with virtually no additional cost to the Federal Government. They set aside a slightly larger portion of research and development money already budgeted for cutting-edge research and development and targeting those to small businesses that have proven themselves to produce excellent innovations, technology, and in fact have a disproportionate share of high-impact patents.

The National Venture Capital Association says:

At a time when our country needs to build new businesses, the venture capital industry believes the best use of government dollars is to support public-private partnerships.

That is what this does. I know there are a few people around this place who do not think the Federal Government can do anything right. I am not one of them. I actually think the Federal Government can do lots of things right. You just have to make mistakes; yes, there is money wasted; yes, there is duplication; and, yes, sometimes there is even fraud. But programs such as this need to be reauthorized. We have been debating now for 6 years whether this program should be reauthorized. It takes us 6 years to reauthorize one of the best programs in the Federal Government, I wonder how long it is going to take us to reauthorize some of those that are not as well run and to give us the opportunity to make them run better. It is not just something that is for cutting-edge research and development moneys already budgeted in the Department of Defense. But as you know, these technologies do not stay in the Department of Defense. We are simply setting aside a portion of the Federal Government. We are simply setting aside a portion of the Federal Government dollars to be reauthorized.

According to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce:

The SBIR program serves as an important avenue by which agencies harness the creativity and ingenuity of small businesses to meet specific research and development needs of the Federal Government.

Might I say, they may be the today needs of the Federal Government; such as we need a way to cool our tanks in Afghanistan and Iraq because our tanks are operating in temperatures that are excessive. That was a real need of the National Security Council. They sent out, basically, an SOS: Can anybody come up with a better way? Not only did we come up with a better way in a radiator out of technology we actually developed in Louisiana, but as you know, these technologies do not stay in the Department of Defense. Once they go out to be used in our tanks, helping keep our war fighters safe and helping win the wars we send them to fight, this technology can now be deployed, potentially, in the racing car industry or in Detroit or some of our other car manufacturing. While it is launched by Federal scientists and inventors and people who are good employees and good, solid Americans who are looking for a better way, it finds its way out into the general public for all of our benefit.

Let me give two more quotes. I see the Senator from Kentucky. The Bio-Technology Industry Organization says:

This bill represents a balanced approach to ensure that America’s most innovative small businesses can access federal money to grow jobs by commercializing new discoveries.
Finally, from the University of California, the CONNECT group says:

Because acquiring funding through traditional lending sources continues to prove difficult in today’s tight credit market, SBIR/STTR grants provide tech start-up companies another viable chance to compete for early-stage funding.

Yes, there are many venture capitalists out there. There are always very savvy inventors looking for the next best thing. But before the next best things are invented, there has to be somebody betting on the human capital in our Federal agencies, the human capital in our academic institutions, and the human capital in small businesses that take the risks and believe they can invent that next best thing.

This financing is early. It is high risk. Not every SBIR grant works. But according to the man who gave us the review of this program, if every one of these inventions works, we are not running the program correctly. This program is early, before it is clear whether it is going to work, a chance to get it to work. But the upside is so great when one or more does work, and we have hundreds of companies that have sort of broken even.

I see the Senator from Kentucky. I will rest my discussion. I do want to put some other things in the RECORD, but to keep the debate moving forward, this would be a good time for him to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Amendment No. 199

Mr. PAUL. I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up my amendment, No. 199.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky (Mr. PAUL) proposes an amendment numbered 199.

Mr. PAUL. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment follows:

Purpose: To cut $300,000,000,000 in spending in fiscal year 2011

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

Title—CUT FEDERAL SPENDING ACT OF 2011

Sec. 01. Short Title and Definition

(a) Short Title.—This title may be cited as the "Cut Federal Spending Act of 2011".

(b) Defund.—In this Act, the term "defund" with respect to an agency or program means—

(1) all unobligated balances of the discretionary appropriations, including any appropriations under this Act, made available to the agency or program are rescinded; and

(2) any statute authorizing the funding or activities of the agency or program is deemed to be repealed.

Sec. 02. Legislative Branch

Amounts made available for fiscal year 2011 for the legislative branch are reduced by $534,000,000.

Sec. 03. Judicial Branch

Amounts made available to the judicial branch for fiscal year 2011 are reduced on a pro rata basis by the amount required to bring total reduction to $155,000,000.

Sec. 04. Agriculture

Amounts made available to the Department of Agriculture for fiscal year 2011 are reduced on a pro rata basis by the amount required to bring total reduction to $1,327,000,000.

Sec. 05. Commerce

Amounts made available to the Department of Commerce for fiscal year 2011 are reduced on a pro rata basis by the amount required to bring total reduction to $700,000,000.

Sec. 06. Defense

(7) State Justice Institute.

Mr. PAUL. This amendment would save $200 billion in spending. Earlier this morning we voted, nearly unanimously in this body, to cut 5 percent from our legislative budget. Similar to so much in Washington, it sounds good. I voted for it. But 5 percent of our legislative budget will be 12 million dollars. We have a deficit this year of $1.65 trillion. We are awash in debt. It is America’s No. 1 problem. Even the administration has said our national debt is our No. 1 threat to our national security at this point. We have to get our fiscal house in order.

Voting to cut our own budget by 5 percent is wonderful. It is a first step. It is about $1 million—a couple million dollars. It will not put a dent in the overall problem.

If we were truly concerned as a body about our deficit, we could cut the entire budget by 5 percent. It has gone up by 25 percent in the last couple years.
If we were to cut our entire budget by 5 percent, it would be about $200 billion. That is what I am proposing, a $200 billion cut in spending.

Are we bold enough? Will we do it? If we do not do it, what happens? My fear is, if we do not have significant cuts in Federal spending, that ultimately in the next few years we could have a debt crisis. This amendment will give us a chance, will give the Members of this body a chance to say: Are we serious? Are we serious about addressing the debt, or do we only want to do token things such as cutting our legislative budget 5 percent?

It is a good start, but it is not enough. This was actually only a sense-of-the-Senate resolution, so we didn’t cut our budget by 5 percent. We said we might be in favor of that. This would be a real cut, $200 billion. I hope the Senate will support it. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I ask the Senate set aside the pending amendment so I can call up amendment No. 207.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. AMENDMENT NO. 207

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 207.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Vermont (Mr. Sanders), for himself, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Ms. BOXER, Ms. STabenow, Mr. Whitehouse, and Mr. LAUTENBERG, proposes an amendment numbered 207.

Mr. SANDERS. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To establish a point of order against any provision to reduce benefits paid to Social Security recipients, raise the retirement age, or create private retirement accounts under title II of the Social Security Act.)

At the end, add the following:

TITLE VI—SOCIAL SECURITY PROTECTION ACT

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ‘‘Social Security Protection Act of 2011’’.

SEC. 602. FINDING.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Social Security is the most successful and reliable social program in our Nation’s history.

(2) For 75 years, through good times and bad, Social Security has reliably kept millions of senior citizens, individuals with disabilities, and children out of poverty.

(3) Before President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law on August 14, 1935, approximately half of the senior citizens in the United States lived in poverty; less than 10 percent of seniors live in poverty today.

(4) Social Security has succeeded in protecting our seniors and their families from devastating drops in household income due to lost wages resulting from retirement, disability, or the death of a spouse or parent.

(5) More than 53,000,000 Americans receive Social Security benefits, including 36,500,000 retirees and their spouses, 8,200,000 disabled individuals and their spouses, 4,500,000 surviving spouses of deceased workers, and 4,300,000 dependent children.

(6) Social Security has never contributed to the Federal budget deficit or the national debt, and benefit cuts should not be proposed as a solution to reducing the Federal budget deficit.

(7) Social Security is not in a crisis or going bankrupt, as the Social Security Trust Funds have been running surpluses for the last quarter of a century.

(8) According to the Social Security Administration, the Social Security Trust Funds currently maintain a $2,600,000,000,000 surplus that is projected to grow to $4,200,000,000,000 by 2023.

(9) According to the Social Security Administration, even if no changes are made to the Social Security program, full benefits will be available to every recipient until 2037, with enough funding remaining after that date to pay about 70 percent of promised benefits.

(10) According to the Social Security Administration, ‘‘money flowing into the Social Security trust funds is invested in U.S. Government securities . . . the investments held by the trust funds are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. The Government has always repaid Social Security, with interest.’’

(11) All workers who contribute into Social Security through the 12.4 percent payroll tax, which is divided equally between employers and employees on income up to $106,800, deserve to have a dignified and secure retirement.

(12) Social Security provides the majority of income for two-thirds of the elderly population in the United States, with approximately one-third of elderly individuals receiving nearly all of their income from Social Security.

(13) Overall, Social Security benefits for retirees currently average a modest $14,000 a year, with the average for women receiving benefits being less than $12,000 per year.

(14) Nearly 1 out of every 4 adult Social Security beneficiaries has served in the United States military.

(15) Social Security is not solely a retirement program, as it also serves as a disability insurance program for American workers who become permanently disabled and unable to work.

(16) The Social Security Disability Insurance program is a critical lifeline for millions of American workers, as a 20-year-old worker faces a 30 percent chance of becoming disabled before reaching retirement age.

(17) Proposals to privatize the Social Security system would jeopardize the security of millions of Americans by subjecting them to the ups-and-downs of the volatile stock market as the source of their retirement benefits.

(18) Raising the retirement age would jeopardize the retirement future of millions of American workers, particularly those in physically demanding jobs as well as lower-income women, African-Americans, and Latinos, all of whom have a much lower life expectancy than wealthier Americans.

(19) Social Security benefits have already been cut by 13 percent, as the Normal Retirement Age was raised in 1983 from 65 years of age to 67 years of age by 2022.

(20) Accountability at the Social Security Administration, raising the retirement age for future retirees would reduce benefits by 6 to 7 percent for each year that the Normal Retirement Age is raised.

(21) Reducing cost-of-living adjustments for current or future Social Security beneficiaries would force those of such individuals to choose between heating their homes, putting food on the table, or paying for their prescription drugs.

Social Security is a promise that this Nation cannot afford to break.

SEC. 603. LIMITATION ON CHANGES TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY PROGRAM FOR CURRENT AND FUTURE BENEFICIARIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, it shall not be in order for the Senate Representatives to consider, for purposes of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits program established under title II of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), any legislation that—

(1) increases the retirement age (as defined in section 216(i)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 416(i)(1))) or the early retirement age (as defined in section 216(i)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 416(i)(2))) for individuals receiving benefits under title II of the Social Security Act on or after the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) reduces cost-of-living increases for individuals receiving benefits under title II of the Social Security Act on or after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(b) WAIVER OR SUSPENSION.—It shall not be in order for the Speaker to entertain a motion to suspend the application of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this section.

(c) POINT OF ORDER PROTECTION.—In the House of Representatives only by a rule or order proposing only to waive such provisions by an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the Members, present and voting.

(d) MOTION TO SUSPEND.—It shall not be in order for the Speaker to entertain a motion to suspend the application of this section under clause 1 of rule XV of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, this amendment is identical to the Social Security Protection Act I introduced yesterday with Senators MIKULSKI, BOXER, SHERROD BROWN, BLUMENTHAL, AKAKA, WHITEHOUSE, BINGH, and LAUTENBERG.

This legislation has the strong support of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare, the American Federation of Federal Employees, the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, the U.S. Military, the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Military Order of the Purple Heart, and the Jewish Veterans of America, among others.

Social Security is the most successful and reliable Federal program in our Nation’s history. For 75 years, through good times and bad, when the economy was strong and when the economy was weak, Social Security has paid out every nickel owed to every eligible American. While we take that for granted, that, in fact, is an extraordinary accomplishment. It is all done at very modest administrative costs.

Social Security has been enormously successful, surpassing by far what its founders hoped to accomplish. Before President Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law in August of 1935, approximately half our senior citizens lived in poverty. Before Social Security, half of our seniors lived in poverty. Today, fewer than 10 percent of seniors live in poverty. That number is too great, but it is a significant improvement over what occurred before the establishment of Social Security.

What we should be very clear about, given the volatility of today’s economy—there is a great deal of anxiety among the American people about whether they are going to be able to retire with dignity. At a time when millions of Americans have seen the value of their private retirement plans plummet, at a time when major corporations have significantly cut back on the benefits they provide, it is no surprise that so many Americans feel that this country is in a crisis. This country is in a crisis.

This is what they say:

Infants, and Children. There are low-income women now, who are trying to make sure they do not give birth to low-weight babies—cut back on their program. But when we say, well, maybe billionaires—who are doing phenomenally well—might be asked to pay a little bit more, oh, my word. We will have none of that at all.

So the issue is shared sacrifice. Do not balance the budget on the backs of the weak and the vulnerable.

Mr. SANDERS. I thank the Senator from Vermont for that eloquent and very accurate description of the situation we are in. I see the Senator from Oklahoma here for an amendment. We want to keep these amendments being discussed. So I thank the Senator from Oklahoma for joining us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, so the chairman knows, my planned time to introduce these amendments is 3:30. That is what they have given me time on. I did want to engage in some of the comments of the Senator from Vermont.

As someone who was on the deficit commission and looking at that, the first thing he was making Social Security solvent was our goal, making it solvent for 75 years. The flaw in the argument given by my colleague from Vermont is the assumption that the IOU at the Treasury for Social Security is sound.

It is good as long as people will loan us money. It is not any good if they will not. So when people say, why fix Social Security? We can fix Social Security by taking the very haircut from the people the Senator from Vermont just described and markedly lessening the benefits, even though they continue to pay into Social Security, that they will receive, the billionaires and the millionaires. We can do that. But if, in doing that, we do not send a signal to the international financial community that on the largest expenditure we have, that we are going to make it solvent, then we will not be in the market and available and have the ability to borrow the $2.3 trillion.

Now, one other thing on which I would disagree: The Social Security trust fund trustees say Social Security is running a net deficit this last year and will run one this year and for every year in the future and what comes versus what goes out. There is no question I want to keep our commitments. Nobody is talking about eliminating benefits except to the very rich in this country in terms of Social Security. As a matter of fact, the deficit commission raised the benefits in Social Security for the poorest in this country. So we actually did the opposite of what the Senator claims that Republicans might want to do.

What we have to do is to make sure Social Security is viable for the future. And having looked at every aspect of Social Security, I can tell you if we are not able to borrow the $2.6 trillion, the benefits will not be there. The money has been stolen. There is no trust fund. There is no money there. If you read what the head of the OMB said in 1999, he said it is not there.

So what is really happening in Social Security? Under both Republican and Democratic control, both Republican and Democratic Presidential administrations, have stolen money from Social Security and spent it. The money is gone. It has been used for another purpose.

So there are two ways of solving this: One is to make Social Security the priority and not fund anything but that until we get it paid back or we can actually refund that $2.6 trillion by going to the debt market, to which we will go every year from now forward under the present plan on Social Security. The rate of taxes between now and 2035 that will be taxed will rise from $106,000 or, I think, $107,000 to $168,000 between now and then. That is a 60 percent increase in the rate of taxes that the tax authority that is planned and programmed right now.

Even with that, Social Security will run a deficit every year, every year forward. Even with the $2.6 trillion, it still is in a negative cashflow. So to deny the fact, if we do not want to fix Social Security, then what we are saying is we do not want to fix it for our children's children or our children.

Mr. SANDERS. Will my friend yield?

Mr. COBURN. I would like to finish my point. It is not about taking something away, except from the very wealthy, the fix from the deficit commission. That is what it did. We also added back. When you reach 80—and a lot of people may be running out of their combination of what their retirement was plus their Social Security—we give another little lump.

So what the deficit commission did was significantly increase the viability of Social Security for the next 75 years. The Social Security trustees know we have to do this. Everybody knows we have to do this. The question is, Does this Congress owe that $2.8 trillion back to Social Security? Yes. But where do we get the money to repay it?

Unless we can calm down the international financial markets, where we make major changes not just in Social Security but in discretionary spending—$50 billion out of the defense and modifying Medicare, where we get the fraud waste and abuse out of Medicare—unless we do those things, we are not going to be able to borrow the money.

One final fact and then I will yield back to my chairman because I have a meeting to go to. So far, in the last 5 months, who do you think has bought our bonds to finance the deficit? We ran a $223 billion deficit in the month of February. Who bought them? Was it the Chinese? Who was the biggest buyer? The Federal Reserve bought 70 percent of the bonds we put on the market. What are they doing? They are debase our currency and creating future inflation which will hurt the very people who are going to be on Social Security because the cost of living index will never truly keep up with the real cost of living.

All of us have received letters from constituents wondering why there was no COLA. We know why there was no COLA. When we look at food and transportation costs and what they have done in the last 3 years, that is what is important to seniors—their health care costs, housing costs, food costs. Yet we have a COLA system that does not recognize that we may get into a period of hyperinflation because the Federal Reserve is buying the bonds because nobody else will buy them. Right now, 30 percent are bought in the market.

Final point. The largest bond trader in the world, PIMCO, last week sold every U.S. Government bond they had. They expect the price of the bonds to go down because they expect the interest rates to go up. What happens to us if we do not fix Social Security? If the interest rates are going to be a lot higher on our debt, if we let a lot happen and we owe $14 trillion every 1 percent increase in the cost of borrowing that we have, it adds to our deficit $140 billion.

I am honored Senator SANDERS is adamant about making sure we keep our commitments. But in terms of cashflow, it is there. We have to address that. That is the only way we can create confidence for the international financial community to say: You have a solvable problem buying the bonds the largest segment of our expenditures—and we are going to loan you money. If we do not do that, interest costs are going to be higher, and we are going to pay for it anyway. Right now, we are alone. The point we are making—this road that will affect people 30, 40, 50 years from now. It makes sense to do that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, let me make a few points, if I may.

Is the Senator leaving?

Mr. COBURN. I have a meeting.

Mr. SANDERS. Did I wish to make a few points.

No. 1, the Senator from Oklahoma gave his understanding about what the debt commission would do to Social Security. I do not agree with his characterization. In point of fact, what the debt commission does do is cut retirement benefits by more than 35 percent for young workers entering the workforce today. Young workers who retire at age 65 would see their benefits cut by 17 percent if their wages average $43,000 over their working lives, by 30 percent if their wages average $43,000 over their working lives.
average $69,000 over their working lives, and by 36 percent if their wages average $107,000 over their working lives, according to the Social Security Chief Actuary. The proposed cuts would apply to retirees, disabled workers and their families, children of deceased workers, and surviving widows and widowers. It is not accurate to say that the debt commission left unscathed workers—quite the contrary. There are devastating cuts to young workers.

If the Senator from Oklahoma wants to make sure Social Security is officially solvent for the next 75 years—and I want to see that as well—there is an easy and fair way to do it. It is a way that doesn’t require slashing benefits for younger workers. When Barack Obama ran for President, he had a pretty good idea. I hope he still has that idea. What he said is that it is important to understand that right now somebody making $1 million a year pays the same amount of money into the Social Security trust fund as somebody who makes $100,000. If we lift that cap, start at $250,000, ask those people to contribute into the Social Security trust fund, we will go a very long way to solving the financial solvency of Social Security. I think we should do that. That is certainly not what the deficit reduction commission recommended.

We keep hearing that the Social Security trust fund has a pile of worthless IOUs. The fact is, Social Security invests the surplus money it receives from workers, from the payroll tax, into U.S. Government bonds, the same bonds China or anybody else purchases. These bonds are backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. And in our entire history—and many of us want to make sure this continues—the U.S. Government has never defaulted on its debt obligations.

The point is, to say these are worthless IOUs is not dissimilar to saying: Guess what? We got a budget deficit and a deep national debt, we don’t have any money to fund equipment for soldiers who are in the field in Afghanistan or Iraq. They are just worthless IOUs, and we can’t fund them.

That is, of course, nonsense. Do we have to address the deficit crisis? Yes, we do. But my friend from Oklahoma did not respond to the issue of why, if he and his friends are so concerned about the deficit crisis, they vote year after year for hundreds of billions of dollars in tax breaks for the wealthiest people or why they want to repeal the estate tax, which will provide $1 trillion dollars in tax breaks to the top three-tenths of 1 percent. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

AMENDMENT NO. 183

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I believe there is a pending amendment, which hopefully we will vote on, called the Connell amendment, which basically takes away from the Environmental Protection Agency the authority to regulate greenhouse gases. The Environmental Protection Agency gets this power from a Supreme Court decision that said they had the authority to do so. That decision was about 2 or 3 years ago. It came about 16 or 17 years after the 1990 Clean Air Act was passed. Those of us who were around here and debated and worked on the Clean Air Act in 1990 don’t remember the discussion about EPA under that legislation having the authority to regulate greenhouse gases, but obviously the Supreme Court read the law differently than we intended.

The Environmental Protection Agency was told it could regulate greenhouse gases. The Environmental Protection Agency did not have to do that, but I suppose they are like regulators, general. Some ask, why do cows moo? Why do pigs squeal? And why do regulators regulate? Because regulators know how to regulate, and that is all they know how to do. So they are going to issue a regulation if they think they should, the way any agency should.

The situation is this: If we don’t take away the authority—and in a sense overturn the Supreme Court case—EPA is going to put us in a position of being economically uncompetitive with the rest of the world, particularly in manufacturing.

When you increase the cost of energy by anywhere from $1,800, under one study, to $3,000, under another study, per household, you are very dramatically increasing the cost of manufacturing. If we are worried about too many manufacturing jobs going overseas—and we if would let the EPA follow through with what they want to do, increase cost of energy—we will lose all our manufacturing overseas.

I have not checked the record, but my guess is a lot of my colleagues who are fighting the McConnell amendment and think it is not the right thing to do are the very same people who are very chagrined because jobs are going overseas and are blaming American industry.

Well, if we are going to pass a law that increases the cost of energy in this country, we are not going to have a level playing field with our competitors overseas. That is why I have always said, if we want to regulate CO$_2$, we need to do it by international agreement. As it is not the same level playing field as we are, then we are going to lose our manufacturing to China and other countries.

It happens that China puts more CO$_2$ in the air than we do. Take China and Brazil and India and Indonesia, and they put a lot more CO$_2$ into the air than the United States does. Yet somehow EPA is of the view that the United States acting alone can solve the global warming problem? Well, even the EPA Director has testified before committees of Congress that if the rest of the world does not do it, we are not going to make a dent in CO$_2$ just by the United States doing it.

But the argument goes that the United States ought to show political leadership in this global economy we have, and if the United States would do something about CO$_2$, the rest of the world would follow along. But China has already said they are not going to follow along. In fact, they are leaving the Kyoto treaty, said they would not be involved in extending the Kyoto treaty beyond 2012.

If the United States did it by itself, under the guise of being a world leader and setting an example, and the rest of the world did not do it, Uncle Sam would soon become “Uncle Sucker,” and we would find our manufacturing fleeing the United States to places where they do not have regulation on CO$_2$. Energy expenses are not as high, and we would lose the jobs accordingly. In a sense, then, those people who have complained for decades about American manufacturing moving overseas would destine the United States to lose most of it.

I do not understand how people who are concerned about losing jobs overseas could be fighting the McConnell amendment. Because if we want to preserve jobs in America, our industry has to be competitive with the rest of the world. This is the McConnell amendment will be adopted, and I hope there will be some consistency in the reasoning of people who are concerned about the movement of jobs overseas, that it is intellectually dishonest to support EPA adopting regulations that are going to make America uncompetitive.

There is nothing wrong with seeking a solution to the problem. There is nothing wrong with working on the issue of global warming. But it ought to be a level playing field for American industry so we can be competitive with the rest of the world and not lose our industry, not lose our manufacturing overseas, and not lose the jobs that are connected with it.

But it often is the case that when either the courts or the Congress delegates broad powers to the executive branch agencies, it seems like we give them an inch and they take a mile. There are plenty of other examples as well—and I will go into some of them in just a moment—of EPA having some authority and moving very dramatically beyond what Congress intended in a way that does not meet the common-sense test.

The work of EPA on CO$_2$ is a perfect example of this kind of overreach. First of all, they did not have to do it just because the Supreme Court said they could. It is not regulators, they want to regulate, and they are moving ahead.

I suppose they are moving ahead also because, in 2009, the House of Representatives passed a bill regulating CO$_2$ that would have made the United States very uncompetitive, as I have stated the EPA will—but the Senate declined to take it up. I think this administration is intent upon getting the job done, and so they go to EPA to issue a rule because Congress will not pass the legislation it wants.

It is so typical of so many things this administration is doing; that because Congress will not pass a law they want, they see what they can do by regulation. So they are setting out to accomplish a lot of change in public policy that Congress declines to endorse, but they are going to act anyway. If they claim the authority to do it, they will probably get away with it and avoid the will of the people, the will of the people expressed through the Congress of the United States. So if Congress decides to not do something, can the administration ignore the will of the people? Yes, they can, if they want to, but they should not, in my judgment.

It brings to mind the McConnell amendment but a lot of other things we should be doing around here to prevent this outrageous overreach by not only the Environmental Protection Agency but by a lot of other agencies as well.

Because when the EPA and other agencies promulgate rules that go beyond the intent of Congress—and never could have passed Congress—it under-mines our system of checks and balances. That American people can hold their member of Congress accountable for passing laws they do not like. However, when unelected bureaucrats implement policies with the force of law that they would not have been able to get through the Congress—and that is without direct accountability when a regulator acts instead of Congress acting—something is very wrong, and it is again.

I think it is time for Congress to re-assert its constitutional role. We try to do this from time to time in a process called the Congressional Review Act. I recall last June the Senator from Alas- ka, Mr. MUKOWSKI, proposed doing that on these very rules affecting CO$_2$. We did not get a majority vote, so it did not happen. Maybe in the new Congress such an attempt would get a majority vote.

We cannot apply that Congressional Review Act again to some those same rules, so that brings about the McConnell amendment I am speaking about—to take away the authority of EPA to do it. But perhaps we can use the congres- sional review Act to other issues yet that regulators are regulat- ing maybe against the will of the people, and I hope we will.

But there is one measure Senator PAUL has suggested and I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cospon- sor to amendment No. 231.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. He uses the acro- nym REINS, but it is called the Regu- lations From the Executive in Need of Scrutiny Act. Basically, what it does—and I applaud Senator PAUL for his amendment, and I will surely vote for it—is that if that is, when we delegate au- thority to agencies in the executive branch of government to write regulations, and if those regulations are considered “major rules,” then they would have to be submitted to the Congress for our approval before they can go into effect and then would also have to be signed by the President before they would go into effect.

It seems to me that is a natural ex- tension of Congress proper under the Constitution to legislate and to be the only branch of government that can legislate. It seems to me to be a very adequate check on out-of-control bureaucracy, that they can only do those things Congress intended they do in the legislation they pass.

I would extend my remarks on some- thing a little bit unrelated to the McConnell amendment but still to the overreach of the Environmental Protec- tion Agency; this is, in regard to the Constitution to legislate and to be the only branch of government that can legislate. It seems to me to be a very adequate check on out-of-control bureaucracy, that they can only do those things Congress intended they do in the legislation they pass.

It brings to mind the McConnell amendment but a lot of other things we should be doing around here to prevent this outrageous overreach by not only the Environmental Protection Agency but by a lot of other agencies as well.

Because when the EPA and other agencies promulgate rules that go beyond the intent of Congress—and never could have passed Congress—it under-mines our system of checks and balances. That American people can hold their member of Congress accountable for passing laws they do not like. However, when unelected bureaucrats im-year or two ago, when one of their subdivision heads testified before Congress—and the issue was agriculture, and she said she had never been on a family farm, in the 20-some years they had been working in the EPA and yet dealing with agriculture issues—I invited them to come and show a great deal of interest. We had a very thorough tour of some facilities in research, agriculture, and biofuels industries within our State. They were very thankful we did it. I think it helped them understand the actuality of the impact of some of their regulation writing has on agriculture.

But, still, I am not totally convinced. So I would use one or two examples of regulation that is out of control. One of them would deal with what I call the fugitive dust issue.

“Fugitive dust” is a term EPA uses to regulate what they call particulate matter. The theory behind fugitive dust is that you are supposed to keep the dust that is harmful, then you have to keep it within your property line. So let’s see the reality of that.

You are farming. The wind is blowing hard, and you have to work in the fields. The wind is so hard that you cannot keep the dust, when you are tilling the fields, within your property line.

Well, are you supposed to not farm? Are you not raise food? Are you supposed to not be concerned about the production of food that is so necessary to our national defense and the social cohesion of our society? Because we are only nine meals away from a revolution. If we are nine meals away from a revolution, if you spill oil with respect to the social cohesion of our society? Because we are only nine meals away from a revolution. If you go nine meals, if you are a dairy farmer and you happen to spill a little milk, milk has fat in it. So now they are saying if dairy farmers have above-the-ground tanks to store their milk, they are the same as above-the-ground oil tanks and they are going to have to follow the same regulation applied to them as applied to petroleum. The compliance requirements on this have been delayed pending action on an exemption, so maybe this won’t go through. But there are people at the Environmental Protection Agency are saying if you are a dairy farmer and you have to spill a little milk, you have to follow the same environmental requirements as an oil company if they spill oil with respect to the cleanup. But that is where we are on these sorts of rules.

I have other examples such as Atrazine, and the potential application of Chesapeake Bay requirements to the rest of the country. But I hope we will take a look at this McConnell amendment that speaks to carbon dioxide plus the examples I have given of the harm EPA regulations will do to family farming and stop to think about it. We have to find ways to stop EPA from doing things that don’t make common sense. I think a start would be to vote for the McConnell amendment, and I am going to vote for it.

confrontation that must come. I say, let it come now. It’s time to take a stand.” That is what Congressman Pence said. Michelle Bachmann said, “If a Member votes for the continuing resolution, that vote effectively says, ‘I am with the right.'”

Outside forces on the far right are also cheering a shutdown. Tea Party Nation, for example, has called on Republicans to oppose any more budget measures unless they repeal health care and do away with family planning.

The tea party element in the House is digging in its heels. That is putting the Speaker in a real bind. His need to avoid a shutdown is in conflict with his political desire to keep his tea party base happy.

I don’t envy the position the Speaker is in, but he is going to have to make a choice one way or the other. There are two choices but only one of them is responsible. Republican leaders can cater to the tea party element and, as Mike Pence has suggested, “pick a fight” that will inevitably cause a shutdown on April 8 or the leadership can abandon the tea party in these negotiations and forge a consensus among more moderate Republicans and a group of Democrats. I think we all know what the right answer is. Speaker Boehner wouldn’t have been able to pass this short-term measure without Democratic votes, and he won’t be able to pass anything without Democratic votes either. It is clear that there is no path to compromise that goes through the tea party. We urge Speaker Boehner to push ahead without us. They are ready to work with him if he is willing to buck the extreme elements in his party.

Throughout this debate, Democrats have repeatedly shown a willingness to negotiate, a willingness to meet Republicans somewhere in the middle. Yet the right-flank of the HouseGOP has been utterly unrelenting. They have wrapped their arms around the discredited, reckless approach advanced by H.R. 1, and they won’t let go. Worse, the last few days have taught us that spending cuts alone will not bring a compromise.

The new demand from the far right is that we go along with all their extra- neous riders. They do not belong on a must-pass budget bill, but they were shoehorned in last few days have taught us that spending cuts alone will not bring a compromise.

The tea party lawmakers are putting a drag on the progress of these budget talks. Many Republicans in the House recognize the unreasonableness of the hardliners. Kevin McCarthy was reported to have gotten into a “tense exchange” with Mr. Pence, one of the lead defectors. Republican Mike Simpson acknowledged it was “unexpected” to have so many defections yesterday. Steve LaTourette of Ohio said passing the 3-week stopgap was “exactly what people expect us to do—find cuts and continue to talk.” And Michael Grimm, a freshman Rep from Staten Island, N.Y., said the tea party lawmakers were “a big mistake.” This shows there are enough commonsense conservatives in the House to go along with reasonable Democrats that Speaker Boehner can find a way around the tea party. In order to avoid a dead end on these budget talks, he should abandon the tea party and work to find a bipartisan consensus. It is the only way out of this bind.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. SANDERS). The Senator from Texas.

AMENDMENT NO. 197

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that thepending amendment be set aside, and I call up amendment No. 197.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Ms. LANDRIEU. No objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. The amendment to delay the implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Public Law 111–148) and the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–152), including the amendments made by such Acts, that are not in effect on the date of enactment of this Act shall not be in effect until the date on which final judgment is entered in all cases challenging the constitutionality of the requirement to maintain minimum essential coverage under section 5000A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that are pending before a Federal court on the date of enactment of this Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Texas so modify her request to allow the others to speak after her?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I do, Mr. President. I would like to have my amendment called up, then speak, and then I am happy to have the unanimous consent so that they know the order following me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To delay the implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Public Law 111–148) and the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–152), including the amendments made by such Acts, that are not in effect on the date of enactment of this Act shall not be in effect until the date on which final judgment is entered in all cases challenging the constitutionality of the requirement to maintain minimum essential coverage under section 5000A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that are pending before a Federal court on the date of enactment of this Act.)

SEC. 504. EFFECTIVE DATE OF PPACA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Federal Government shall not implement any provision of law, the provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Public Law 111–148) or the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–152), including the amendments made by such Acts, or otherwise provide for the implementation of the health reform law in the United States, in any case in which final judgment is entered in one or more lawsuits in all cases challenging the constitutionality of the requirement to maintain minimum essential coverage under section 5000A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that are pending before a Federal court on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) PROMULGATION OF REGULATIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Federal Government shall not either promulgate regulations under the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (Public Law 111–148) or the Health Care and Education Reconciliation Act of 2010 (Public Law 111–152), or otherwise provide for the implementation of such Acts (or amendments made by such Acts), until the date on which final judgment is entered in all cases challenging the constitutionality of the requirement to maintain minimum essential coverage under section 5000A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that are pending before a Federal court on the date of enactment of this Act.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I do wish to thank the Senator from Louisiana, who is managing the bill for her side, for allowing us to go forward with amendments. I think that is very important, and I do have an amendment that I think will help our small businesses and our States throughout the country. The cosponsors to amendment No. 197 are Senators HATCH, KYL, BARRASSO, BURR, JOHANNS, MURkowski, COCHRAN, MORAN, and ENsIN.

We are approaching the 1-year anniversary of health care reform becoming law, and it is important to highlight the reality of what this bill has done to every American family, every patient, every doctor, health care provider, and every small business in this country.

One year later, the skyrocketing cost of health care is still the No. 1 concern among our Nation’s job creators. Just today, my office heard from a small business in Corpus Christi, TX, that has 34 employees. This company has now gotten the bids for renewal of the policies they had before, and the cheapest option for their health insurance represents a 44-percent increase from last year’s cost. They have until April 1 to decide whether to continue to offer their employees health insurance and to try to figure out how they are going to compensate for that increase in cost. But this isn’t the first small business I have heard from that is telling me the same thing—that their premiums are coming up for renewal, they are getting bids, they are trying to get the best bid they possibly can, and the costs are skyrocketing.

These price increases have not happened in a vacuum. They are the result of the 2,000-page, $2.6 trillion health care law passed 1 year ago. One year after that bill was signed, small businesses are facing unprecedented premium increases. Their policies are being canceled as insurers close up shop because of new Federal regulations and mandates.

The reality of the small business tax credits touted by the administration are really just an empty promise that a majority of small businesses will never see. In fact, the Obama administration estimated that by 2013 as many as 80 percent of small businesses will not even be offering their current health care plan anymore due to the new Federal regulations and mandates and the increasing costs, leaving the promise our President made—if you like what you have, you can keep it—as a distant memory.

A former Director of the Congressional Budget Office has warned that health reform includes strong incentives for employers and employees to drop employer-sponsored health insurance for as many as 35 million Americans.

A recent employer survey conducted by the National Business Group on Health reports that 81 percent of employers indicated increased administrative burdens because of health reform. This same survey also reported that because of the increased cost from health reform, 68 percent of employers are increasing the contributions required for dependent insurance coverage. The Congressional Budget Office agrees and has reported that these increased burdens and mandates on employers will result in fewer jobs, as well as a shift from full-time to part-time jobs in our country. The Congressional Research Service adds that lower wages will also become a reality because of the new employer mandates.

The only good news our small businesses have gotten recently on this health care reform bill is from the courts. Two Federal courts have found the law unconstitutional—one in Virginia and one in Florida. In January, the Florida judge voided the entire law because the Constitution doesn’t allow Congress to regulate individuals, small businesses, or families to purchase anything just because you live in this country. That is why I am offering an amendment to S. 493, the small business innovation bill, that would delay any further implementation of health reform until the Supreme Court rules whether the law is actually a valid law.

Included within the 2,000 pages of the law are provisions that harm small businesses, their employees, and families. The health reform law contains $500 billion in new taxes, cuts nearly $500 billion from Medicare to fund the new government entitlement, and puts the Federal Government between patients and their doctors. Health reform requires individuals and businesses to buy government-approved health care or have IRS agents knocking at their door. If business owners want to grow their business and hire new employees, health reform says: If you have over 50 employees, you will be costly new Federal regulations with which you have to comply. Small businesses across the country that now have 48 or 49 employees are facing a Federal mandate that discourages them from hiring more people, increasing wages and creating one of the highest unemployment rates in our country’s history.

We need to get government off the backs of small businesses, our job creators, and stop putting up miles of red tape that restrict innovation. This bill is the perfect place to do it.

My amendment would pause further implementation of this law so that we don’t spend millions of our taxpayer dollars and our small business dollars implementing a bill that ultimately could be struck down by the highest Court in the land in a case that has already said the law is unconstitutional. It is making its way to the Supreme Court as we speak.

In addition to the effects on the individuals and small businesses of our country, State legislators and Governors across our country are also making very tough decisions needed to close nearly $25 billion in budget shortfalls this year. One of the ways they are doing this is to meet the Federal mandates of health care reform. Their Medicaid systems are being drastically impacted.

Some States are saying, because of the Florida judge’s ruling, they are not going to go further in implementing the law. They do not want to spend the millions if the law is going to be declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. On the other hand, we are putting them in the position of taking a chance. If they fines if they do not implement the law in a timely way, according to the law that was passed. If they do not implement it, while the court has said the law is unconstitutional, they could pay, on the other end, by having fines because they did not implement it.

My home State of Texas is going forward with implementation, but they are facing a $27 billion shortfall in their budget. Yet they are spending millions that may be money down a rat hole to implement a law that may or may not be a valid law.

Today we could take one Federal mandate off the list. Today we can make it easier for job creators to create jobs. The least we can do for the businesses and States and families in our country is to delay the burden, the mandates, the regulations and taxes until the highest Court in the land rules on whether it is a valid law.

This amendment would not affect any of the laws that have already been implemented. We are not doing something that is retroactive at all. But when this bill passes, everything going forward would be halted until the Supreme Court has ruled on whether, in fact, the health care law that was passed last year is a valid law. I ask my colleagues to join me in taking this heavy burden from our employers and our States.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, let me thank the Senator from Louisiana, Ms. Landrieu, for her tremendous work on the bill in front of us today, the small business bill. It is so important that we keep focusing on what is most important right now for families and small business owners across the country; that is, to continue working to create jobs and boost the economy. That is exactly what this bill is all about.

Last month our economy added over 200,000 private sector jobs, and the unemployment rate fell to the lowest in 2 years. We have a lot to be proud of, but I am confident we have turned the corner and we are now beginning to move in the right direction. But we have to continue to make progress. That is exactly why I strongly support this long-term reauthorization of the Small Business Innovation Research Program, which supports research and development efforts by small businesses that will help them grow and create jobs.

That is why I will continue working with all of our colleagues to make sure we pass a budget for this year that cuts spending responsibly while continuing to invest in programs that create jobs and boost our economy.

The Small Business Innovation Research Program, or SBIR, is a bipartisan bill that has been successfully creating jobs since it was signed into law by President Reagan in 1982. The resources this program has provided to small businesses over the years have led to new products, new processes, and new innovations. In fact, small business tech firms that receive SBIR grants produce 38 percent of our country’s taxes, they employ 40 percent of America’s scientists and engineers, and they have produced many of the most important innovations that have driven our economy forward.

This program has been especially important in my home State of Washington, for over 200,000 grants have been awarded to small businesses totaling close to $700 million. One company that received the support of the Small Business Innovation Research Program is Infinia, in the Tri-Cities area of my State. Infinia was founded in 1985 as an R&D firm, but they have been able now to successfully translate their commercial production and have emerged as a leader in our State’s clean-tech industry.

With support from SBIR’s other programs, Infinia, Inc., has been able to develop their products and grow from 30 employees to over 150. These are good family-wage jobs in that community. This is such a great example of what small businesses can do with just a little bit of support.

There are thousands of companies across the country with similar stories that have received a critical boost from SBIR. Unfortunately, the Small Business Research Program has been operating now under a short-term authorization over the last several years, and that creates uncertainty and makes planning very difficult for companies that do want to participate in this program.

I think this long-term legislation that will help our innovative small businesses develop their products and expand and create jobs and we do not continue to see all these extra neous measures added onto it that will stop us from getting it passed in the Senate and moving to a place that can help create jobs and grow our economy.

I also want to mention another issue we are going to be discussing on the floor because it is directly connected to Senate Democrats’ efforts to get workers back on the job; that is, the need to pass a long-term budget bill to keep the government open through the end of this fiscal year.

I am disappointed that the same Republicans who walked into office saying they were going to focus on the economy have now put forward a very damaging and short-sighted budget proposal that would literally destroy hundreds of thousands of jobs and devastate the workers and small businesses and undermine our fragile economic recovery.

I am disappointed that at a time when our middle-class families still need some support to get back on their feet, Republicans have proposed this very highly politicized slash-and-burn budget that is going to pull the rug out from under these families at a critical time.

I am disappointed that while on this side, Senate Democrats have put forward some ideas to make responsible and prudent budget cuts that will allow us to continue to out-innovate, out-educate, and out-build our competitors, that we need to do, we are seeing a Republican budget proposal that is going to hack away at the investments that strengthen our ability to compete right now and improve the quality of life for all of our families in this country.

The proposal they put forward would slash programs such as Head Start, that would decimate housing and economic development. It would eliminate community health centers that the President’s Budgeting Office has worked so hard to put in place. It would cut off critical investments for our workers and our infrastructure.

Independent analysts have said their plan would destroy up to 700,000 American jobs. That includes 15,000 in my home State. That is a hit we cannot take right now. It would be devastating.

Senate Democrats are trying to put forward a proposal that goes in a very different direction. We will cut spend-energy through battery policy and electric vehicles—has been aided by the small business program in front of us today.

As an example, A123 Systems is a company that has received SBIR support. I was very pleased in September of last year to join with them when they opened the largest lithium ion battery manufacturing plant in North America, in Livonia, MI, and they are now creating 400 jobs.

I could go on and on. I will not in the interest of time. But focusing on small business, focusing on innovation, new technologies, will create jobs, allow us to out-compete in a global economy, and allow us to grow our economy. We in Michigan are very proud to be helping to lead the way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I know Senator PORTMAN is here on the floor, and under a previous order will be recognized in a few minutes. But before that, for clarification purposes on the previous agreement, I want to state that the next first-degree amendment in order after Senator HUTCHISON, who spoke a minute ago, will be from the Democratic side.

As a recap, there are, I think, seven amendments pending. We are hoping to get some votes on those amendments that are pending later this afternoon, potentially in the morning. If there are any other pending orders, they will be recognized in a few minutes. But before that, for clarification purposes on the previous agreement, I want to state that the next first-degree amendment in order after Senator HUTCHISON, who spoke a minute ago, will be from the Democratic side.

And in the midst of all this, I saw a new national health care bill working its way through the system that would substantially increase the Federal Government role and lock in place the consumption of small business and families' ability to get health care, making health care even more expensive for families and small businesses and making it harder to deal with the exploding costs of health care in the Federal budget.

And along with all this, we are in a situation building up to dangerous levels of debt that further threatened our economy.

These issues, these deep concerns over jobs and the direction of our economy and fiscal crisis we face as a nation are my focus now in the Senate. And I am not alone. Whether Republican, Democrat, or Independent, I believe Ohioans understand that our State and our country are in trouble, and it is going to take real change and bold action across party lines to set things right.

I believe the twin challenges of our time are how to revive the American economic miracle, and how to stop the reckless overspending by government that threatens to extinguish the American dream. And one affects the other. Without a growing economy and more jobs we cannot hope to reverse the dangerous trend of record deficits and deepening debt.

And with getting our spending under control, we can get our economy moving. It is not one or the other.

These two goals are not inconsistent; in fact, they are reinforcing. With the fiscal time bomb on our doorstep and all the uncertainty it creates, we will never see the kind of strong recovery we hope for. We have to do both.

In addition to taking steps to get our fiscal house in order, we revive the American economic miracle by moving aggressively to create the climate for job growth, for innovation, invention, and entrepreneurship. We need an environment that encourages risk-taking and private investment, which economists will tell you is the biggest challenge we face in this weak recovery. The current economic climate encouraged by Washington is one of uncertainty and apprehension. I have seen it all over Ohio.

Lately, I have visited an independent trucking company, Wooster Trucking, based in Wayne County, OH. Paul Williams, the owner, pulled together a dozen or so local small business owners from the area for a roundtable discussion of the many job losses in the automotive industry in the last couple years. Struggling in a tough economy, these small businesses all wondered the same thing: why has Washington made it harder on them to grow and create jobs, not easier? They talked about the threat of new EPA regulations that will drive up energy costs. Depending on their business, they were worried about other specific Federal regulations or mandates in trucking, manufacturing and banking that would drive up their compliance costs.

They talked about the threat of higher income taxes coming, which creates uncertainty at a time when the opposite is needed to incentivize businesses to invest and grow. Like the vast majority of Ohioans, Paul Williams believes that businesses should have as few hurdles as possible in order to thrive and grow and create jobs. I have seen this firsthand in the past couple years. Struggling in a tough economy, these small business owners are doing their best to keep their businesses afloat. But they need our help to succeed.

Every single small business owner around the table talked about health care. All of them said the same thing. They said, since the health care bill passed, their health care costs are going up more, not less, and that was increasing their cost of doing business and hurting their ability to create jobs. They talked about premium increases of 10 to 25 percent, eating away any profit and chance to expand even after cutting other expenses.

At one of the 80 factory visits I have made in the past 2 years, Bruce Beeghley, an impressive small business entrepreneur in northeast Ohio, told me his orders were picking up but he was not hiring. He was paying overtime instead of hiring permanent workers for the long-term because of the embedded and increasing cost of health care.

And our education system and Federal worker retraining system is failing us in Ohio: Around the State, high-tech companies have told me they cannot find the skilled workers they need. This is wrong: At a time of soaring unemployment, there is a skills gap in America. There are high-skilled, high-wage jobs available but our schools are not producing a sufficient supply of well-trained American workers.

You cannot be out there talking to workers and management without seeing these issues. But I have heard it closer to home. In fact, I am the product of small family business. My dad,
Bill Portman, who we lost at age 88 last year, was one of those small business risk takers. He took a big risk when I was a kid. At age 40, he left a job. He had a good job with a big company as a salesman. He had health care coverage and retirement benefits. He gave up what was a very good job to start his own business—Portman Equipment Company, with five other guys and my mom as bookkeeper. He could not get a loan and his family did not have the money and the bank would not lend him money, so he borrowed money from my mom’s uncle. The company lost money over the first few years, but they kept it alive through hard work, ingenuity, and sacrifice. My brother took the reins later and took it to a new level. By the time my dad retired the company employed almost 300 people, 300 families.

We all worked there, and when I was growing up, the discussion around the kitchen table was often about how government policies—affected Portman Equipment and other Ohio small businesses. My dad is among my heroes because of his hard work and sacrifice. Because with my mom they built something of value. I have learned from them and I know the government can play and should not play in helping to create jobs and opportunities.

About a year ago, I asked my dad if he would take the same risk today. He said, “I don’t know, there’s a lot of uncertainty out there there...That is a word I hear a lot from small business owners all over Ohio. That is why a lot of job creators, or potential job creators are staying on the sidelines, and keeping their cash on the sidelines, and keeping their cash on the sidelines rather than investing in plant, equipment, and people.

Leadership is needed to create a positive climate which spurs job growth, drives our nation toward a stronger economy, and helps the American dream. Leadership is needed to get a handle on our serious fiscal issues. Instead, we are debating at the margins. You will see it play out on the floor of the Senate this week. We are locked in a fierce partisan debate about less than 1 percent of Federal outlays, actual federal spending, for this fiscal year. And we are not even addressing the biggest and fastest growing part of the budget, which is the important, but, unsustainable, entitlement programs.

In fact, as American families have tightened their belts over the past couple of years and businesses have had to do more with less, the Federal Government has taken the opposite path, spending more, growing bigger, and becoming more involved in our private economy and our lives.

Over the past 2 years, Paul Williams at that trucking company in Wooster I told you about, had to cut expenses, or stay afloat. They had to sell some of their trucks and let folks go. Here in Washington during that same time, the U.S. Government, though going deeper into debt, borrowing more money, brought on more government employees, and grew in size. During these same 2 years, Washington spent 27 percent more in its so-called domestic discretionary spending that is being debated this week. And that does not count the cost of our one-time spending, which gave us staggering 80 percent increase in this type of spending in 2 short years.

This historic failure to control spending, directly affects all of us because it undermines our ability to create jobs. It pushes up interest rates, affecting car loans, mortgages, and student loans, and crowds out private investment, and leaves us with three bad choices, far higher taxes, even more borrowing, or both.

This will surprise no one, but recently, a group of 47 respected business economists agreed that the greatest threat to our economy was our debt and deficits.

Restoring fiscal restraint is critical to creating the certainty that employers and entrepreneurs need to create jobs across Ohio and our country. It is truly dangerous because left unchecked, these mounting debts are likely to lead to the kind of economic crisis we have seen in Greece and other countries.

The government spending more than it takes in hurts our economy today and mortgages the future for our children and grandchildren. Think about this: every child born in America today automatically, through no fault of their own, inherits $45,000 in U.S. debt. People are looking for a better way.

People are looking for leadership from Washington that takes on those challenges that Ohio’s businesses and workers face. The status quo is not working. There is an urgency about this that the American people get, even while many in Washington seem to be in denial. We must emerge as the beacon of hope and opportunity for the rest of the world.

There is a long line of distinguished Senators from Ohio who were part of the greatest economic crises of our time—Warren G. Harding and William Henry Harrison.

One famous predecessor is John Glenn, an American hero who, along with his wife, Annie, I have been honored to ask to serve on the Senate Select Committee, on which I serve, a Great Depression, and a Cold War to emerge as the beacon of hope and opportunity for the rest of the world.

There is a long line of distinguished Senators from Ohio who were part of the greatest economic crises of our time—Warren G. Harding and William Henry Harrison.

One famous predecessor is John Glenn, an American hero who, along with his wife, Annie, I have been honored to ask to serve on the Senate Select Committee, on which I serve, a Great Depression, and a Cold War to emerge as the beacon of hope and opportunity for the rest of the world. And immediately follow Senator George Voinovich—one of the very finest public servants our State has ever known. Jane and I are grateful to George and Janet for their support and friendship, and for the extraordinary legacy they leave.

And there is another former Ohio Senator whose desk I requested and speak from today: Robert A. Taft, a fellow Cincinnati, who actually worked at the law firm where I was a partner before being elected to Congress. Like me, he also served in the executive branch. Unlike me, he was first in his class in high school, college and law school and was said to have had “the best mind in Washington.” Democrats joked that “he had the best mind in Washington until he made it up.” He was a principled and effective Republican leader. In fact, when his peers commissioned a review of the top five U.S. Senators, he was selected to be among them. That is why he is one of only five Senators to have a portrait in the President’s Room on the Senate floor. He was a featured “Profile in Courage” in John Kennedy’s book; on his memorial across Constitution Avenue it is written that it “stands as a tribute to the honesty, indomitable courage and high principles of free governments symbolized by his life.”

It is always dangerous to predict how a former Senator would react to today’s predicaments. But I am confident that those were Robert A. Taft among us today, he would rise in full-throated... support of addressing the twin challenges we have talked about today. His honesty would force him to admit that our economic systems are not up to the global competition of the 21st century, his courage would force him to insist we address our budget woes, including entitlements, and the love of this country would compel him to fight for solutions to our economic challenges that promote free markets and the power and dignity of the individual over the heavy hand of government.

As he has described, there is a lot of hard work to do. In my role, I hope to be worthy of this great and temporary privilege. I will rely on my faith, my family, and the good people of Ohio. I will work constructively with my colleagues to achieve results, including working with the senior Senator from Ohio, SHERROD BROWN, and others across the aisle. I will work every day to try to earn the confidence and trust the people of Ohio have placed in me. As we work together, we will work to bless Ohio and this great Nation and help guide us in our shared commitment to a better future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader, the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Ohio, I have listened with great interest to his first speech in the Senate. I was particularly interested in his reference to Robert A. Taft, whose portrait is in the Republican leader’s office and has been there for some time. In fact, the place that is currently the office of the Republican leader became the office of the Republican leader about the time Senator Taft, in that all-too-brief period, was majority leader. He was actually only in that position for about 8 months before he passed away, but he left an incredible impression in this town, which the junior Senator from Ohio, SHERROD BROWN, will work constructively with my colleagues to achieve results, including working with the senior Senator from Ohio, SHERROD BROWN, and others across the aisle. I will work every day to try to earn the confidence and trust the people of Ohio have placed in me. As we work together, we will work to bless Ohio and this great Nation and help guide us in our shared commitment to a better future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I join the Republican leader in congratulating Senator PORTMAN on his first speech on the Senate floor. I remember those days some 4 years ago when I had the honor of doing that. I know how close Ron and Jane are and their children. I have seen them often over the last year, and I know the sacrifice and difficulty of leaving home, as he points out. I know he feels that way about his family. As is clear to this chamber, I look forward to what we have been working to do, especially on manufacturing, on jobs. Senator PORTMAN has visited some 80 manufacturing plants in the last 3 years. He sees what I see on the shop floors. If we keep those jobs in the United States—much of the innovation is done on the shop floor—we will continue to lead the world in innovation and continue to lead economically. That is not only the importance of working with small- and medium-size and large manufacturing companies.

I also would add that Senator PORTMAN already understands Ohio is part of the changing institutional landscape. NASA Glenn in Cleveland and, in the part of the State I live in, Wright Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton. In the part of the State Senator PORTMAN lives in, there is the Battelle Memorial Institute, in Columbus, which, while not a Federal agency per se, serves much of the Federal Government by running the country’s energy labs. There is synergyism among those three, coupled with Ohio State University and the University of Cincinnati, Senator PORTMAN’s hometown. The kind of synergism that comes out of this and innovation and high-end manufacturing and all the kinds of things that he and Senator PORTMAN and I will do together in job creation, whether it is USEC in southern Ohio or the solar industry in Toledo or the auto industry in the north or the aerospace industry in the southwest and throughout the State, this kind of work is absolutely necessary to help to put people back to work and create the kinds of good-paying industrial jobs and good-paying other jobs Ohioans aspire to, to create a strong, vibrant middle class. I congratulate Senator PORTMAN.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MERKLEY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I wish to thank all of my colleagues for really helping us to focus on this debate yesterday and today. We started discussing the reauthorization of the SBIR and STTR Programs within the Small Business Administration. Senator SNOWE has been on the floor most of the day yesterday and part of the day today as we have managed this bill.

As I have said many times, this particular program is the Federal Government’s largest research program for small business. It was started in 1982 by a bipartisan group of Senators and House Members who believed small businesses in America had something to contribute to the technological and scientific advances in this country, and they were right. They said the Federal Government spends billions of dollars every year on research and development, and yet some of our most promising small businesses—maybe independent scientists or researchers or engineers or inventors of all different backgrounds and persuasions—would not get the benefit of the Department of Defense or NIH. In those days, people only wanted to see people from big companies.

Well, not only was that not allowing small business an opportunity, but it was not allowing them to succeed because what taxpayers want is the best technology. It does not matter to them whether it comes from a small shop down the street operating on the second floor above a doughnut shop—like my father got started many years ago—or whether it comes from the back office of IBM. They just want the best, and they deserve it. This program delivers it. So this is about innovation and jobs.

As I have said, I want to stress again: Several people have come down to the floor and said, why aren’t we—I guess meaning Democrats—focused like a laser on closing the budget gap?

Let me say that this is an effort to close that budget gap and to reduce the debt and to close the annual deficit because that can be done by cutting discretionary spending, cutting defense spending, where it is wasteful and not effective, raising revenues where it is appropriate—particularly for those making over $1 million a year would be a good place to start—and most importantly or equally important to all of the above is creating an atmosphere so the private sector can get about the business of creating jobs. That is what this program does. That is why Senator SNOWE and I are on the floor. That is why our committee voted this bill out by a 18 to 1. We know it is important. Innovation creates jobs.

I want to show you just three examples, as we are waiting for Senators to come to the floor to talk about their amendments. I want to share one story. This is from Connecticut.

Might I say that over the 20-plus years of this program, there have been small businesses in every State that have benefited either through grants or through contracts. The Department of Defense has about $1 billion of their research and development set aside for this purpose. Other departments call them grants. The Department of Defense actually enters into contracts with small businesses.

I am not sure if this example came out of the Department of Defense. It is not noted on the chart. But one of our agencies thought it might be important to create a device to safely transport toxic chemicals.

I am from Louisiana. We have a tremendous and are proud of our industrial base in petrochemicals. Some of those products are toxic. Some things we produce are quite dangerous but necessary to undergird our economy. So the transport of these toxic
So there is another way to cut spending besides just slashing and burning some of the best programs in the world, literally. Some of the best programs in the world have been left on the chopping block—not just in America, in the world. They have been left on the chopping block—on the House of Representatives floor.

I might suggest that they think outside the box and they think of other ways to reduce spending, which is important because we are producing streamlining operations, that create efficiencies and save taxpayers money and create jobs at the same time; thus, companies can pay in more taxes at the local, State, and Federal levels, and we continue to get spending under control and reduce our deficit.

So that is Cybernet's Automated Tactical Ammunition Classification System. Leave it to the Department of Defense to make up such a name.

As shown in this is Beacon Interactive Systems' TurboWork out of Cambridge, MA. This company created technology to help sailors keep the fleet safe through streamlined and uniformed maintenance. It will be going now into all 250 ships in the Navy. And 460 sailors will use this technology developed out of the SBIR Program every day to protect and preserve our warships. In its first full year of implementation, the software should give a 300-percent return on the initial SBIR investment.

The Presiding Officer knows this because he has been a very strong advocate nationally—not just in the State of Oregon—for small business. The Presiding Officer knows that with a little investment at the right time, there can be a tremendous upside, and that is what we are seeing here with this program.

Our initial grants are only $150,000. People might say, geez, what can you do with $150,000? Well, 150 companies were winners too, not just the companies who were winners. We have had a lot of winners. They paid in taxes. They paid in taxes in 1 year half of the cost of this entire program.

As the doctor who researched this program said to us in our hearing—we have five new members of our committee from the Republican side and Senator Snowe and I and I wanted to give them a chance to understand this bill. I am proud to say all but one supported it coming out of committee when they understood—of course you know, he had served in the House before and was familiar with this. But when they understood that this has been one of the most successful programs, and when it was reviewed by—I think it was Dr. Wessner who gave us a review of the program, he said, Let me tell you, Senator: If every single grant produces a company, you are running the wrong kind of program. Because this is a risk effort, it is not that over time has paid off tremendously to the taxpayer and will continue if it continues to run in that fashion.

We have tightened up fraud and abuse statutes in this bill. We have put in more oversight, which Senator Snowe and I thought was important, not to heavily burden the program but to make sure the people in our Department, whether it is in Defense or NIH or the NASA program, are utilizing the program to the fullest extent of the spirit Congress intends. So we have made some adjustments, some perfections through some adjustments and modifications, and we think we have made this program hopefully even stronger.

Not every grant that is given will result in jobs, and it will be funded. But when it works, it works, and we are so benefited as a nation. In fact, there was an advisory committee that countries all over the world are trying to model some of their programs after this one. They keep asking: How is it in America you have such an innovative spirit? How is it you start so many small businesses, and many of them—not all—succeed? What is it?

It is a number of things. It is our own nature and spirit. It is also because people have traditionally had a variety of businesses to call their own—equity in their homes or a savings account or a banking system that is for the most part very honest and transparent. We have had some difficulties in the past few years with some of the abuses of Wall Street. The people get to catch their breath. Generally, compared to many other countries in the world, our people have access to those things—private property they own. In many countries people can’t even own private property. They can’t even get a clear title to property, so how can they borrow against it to start a business? They don’t.
There are many things that go into this miracle which is the American economy, and this is a big part of it. The Federal Government doesn’t do it all. But I am hoping, as people consider this debate, every State in the Union will create similar programs. Some of them, already having done so, will try to provide to all the Members here a list of what their individual States have done. Because if we think about it, the large cities, whether it be New York or San Francisco, Chicago or Cleveland, if every city government would think about setting aside a small portion of some of their research and development money to push out the small businesses that aren’t obvious sometimes to Wall Street and New York or they are not obvious to Pennsylvania Avenue and Washington or they are not exactly located in the Silicon Valley in California, but there are budding entrepreneurs and Americans with great ideas and great drive and great determination, any city government can be smarter. I would like the Federal Government to be as smart as it can possibly be, and I am hoping our State governments will look at this program as a model and, potentially, cities need to.

I can tell my colleagues one thing I am very excited about. I haven’t talked with them about it specifically, but I have spoken at some length to the Goldman Sachs executives, and I wish to speak a little more about a program I am very impressed with. It is not something we are doing. It is something they are doing, but I think it is worth mentioning here.

Goldman Sachs has decided to try to create 10,000 new small businesses in America—not new small businesses. They are trying to grow 10,000 small businesses in America. They have a very strategic plan and one I am watching very closely for a number of reasons. The model is scalable, and other companies could potentially do it and maybe we could model some of this Federal, if theirs is successful.

Secondly, I am watching it closely because one of the cities they chose for their pilot is the City of New Orleans, the city I represent. My brother serves as mayor there now. He is very engaged with the leadership there, because New Orleans has become a hotbed of innovation. President Obama is talking about out-competing and out-innovating, that is not going to happen on Pennsylvania Avenue or right down on the intersection of M and Wisconsin in Georgetown. It is going to happen on Canal Street and in the lower ninth ward of New Orleans, in Gentilly, and places all over the world.

Goldman Sachs is saying, All right, Mr. Mayor, you get the city leadership and one of the community colleges to get the training. We jointly choose these entrepreneurs that have promise—they are already established and they have proven they can run a business and they can turn a profit, but they are staggering. They are smaller. They have the potential to be larger, but they are not. What is it that is causing this? Maybe lack of knowledge, lack of capital. Our Delgado Community College—and I am very proud of our Delgado Community College in the country. Delgado stepped up and said, Let us put them through the training. When they succeed and successfully exit the training—and I believe it is a 6-month to 9-month program—at the other end, they give them a check for X amount of money. I am not sure if it is $25,000 or $100,000 or $200,000. I will get that into the Record so we can be clear. But they give them a check so they have the capital and know-how and then they have the support of some of the nonprofits in the area to help them grow.

Think about that. If that is something only one company is doing, think about what companies such as Chevron, Procter & Gammon—what they are doing to help small business. I think about other companies. American Express with their Plum card, if I am correct, talks about what they are doing. I am not promoting these companies, but they are examples of programs that are out there supporting small businesses. The Federal Government can do its part as well, and we have an obligation. We can’t do everything, but we most certainly can do our part. Many large companies around the country and the world are also thinking about what they can do to help grow small businesses in their area. That is just one example.

We are going to watch the success of some of these programs in the private sector, and then we will get some of their best ideas and potentially even strengthen our partnership. But this is a partnership between the Federal Government and private small businesses throughout our country.

Let me switch for a minute to mention a couple of the organizations that are supporting this program. I don’t see anyone on the floor at this time to speak, so let me read into the Record again some of the comments we have received from very strong organizations.

The Small Business Technology Council says:

Not only does this SBIR program spur technological innovation and entrepreneurship, it helps create high-tech jobs and does so without increasing the Federal deficit.

The National Small Business Association says:

The uncertain future of this program—and as I said, for 6 years it has been operating on short-term arrangements: 3 months here, 2 months there. For 6 years, nobody has had any idea, either from the private sector, from some of the best labs, from our agencies, whether this program would be there. That is unacceptable. That is why Senator Snowe and I have fought so hard to get this program authorized.

I see Senator COBURN on the floor. The Senator from Oklahoma, and I wish to thank him, because as a result of his good compromising efforts with us last Congress we will be able to authorize this program for 8 years, as the Senator will know, because he has been a strong advocate for streamlining and shortening. Programs such as this need certainty. The labs, our agencies need to know. We are looking out 2 years or 3 years for this new technology, but if there is a company out there we think could be successful, we need to know. So this 8-year authorization is important. I thank the Senator from Oklahoma, because some programs are only authorized for 4 years or 5 years. But we feel because we have been in limbo for 6 years, it would be a good idea to get an 8-year authorization.

One more comment for 30 seconds and I will yield the floor. I wish to read into the Record the letters of support from a short list of companies, and as additional ones come in, I will read into the Record their support.

The Bay Area Innovation Alliance has sent their support. The Bio District of New Orleans, the Biotechnology Industry Organization, Connect of California, the National Defense Industrial Association, the New England Innovation Alliance, the National Small Business Association, the National Venture Capital Association, the Small Business Association of New England—and I wish to thank Senator SHAHEEN particularly for her support—Small Businesses of California, Small Business Technology Council, V-Labs, Inc./American Chemical Society, and the United States Chamber of Commerce, to name a few.

Let’s keep this debate moving forward. We have had a number of amendments today. I see Senator COBURN on the floor.

I yield the floor at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. I thank the chairwoman for her kind words. It is necessary that we move this bill, I agree. I am thankful to Senator LANDRIEU and the ranking member for the movement on some of the commitments they made to me on programs that don’t work within the small business area.

I have multiple amendments, but in due deference to the chairwoman, I will not call those up. I am going to call up two. I wish to explain both of them.

Amendment No. 184. Everybody was excited about the GAO report that looked at the first third of the Federal Government in terms of all the duplication. We don’t know the extent of that duplication, and we are going to have to do some hard work to winnow out a lot of savings, but there are a lot of savings. People don’t agree with me, but I wish to explain these programs better than I do. I have been studying them for 6 years. There is at least $100 billion where we can save the American taxpayers and actually do a better job through redesigning the programs and eliminating the bureaucracies that make them less than effective.

So one of the things we need to do to help GAO is have the agencies report to OMB on a yearly basis on their programs. There are at least 2,100 programs that we know of in the Federal Government. When GAO looks at this, it is very difficult for them to ferret it all out. We only have one agency that publishes a list of their programs every year, and that is the Department of Education. The book is very thick, and it lists all their programs. That will make it much easier for GAO to do the next third.

This is a simple amendment that requires every department of the Cabinet to fulfill to OMB, within a short period of time, all their programs and also report to us. When that happens that will make GAO much more effective in how it brings to us this next group of duplications. So it is a straightforward amendment. I hope it can be accepted.

AMENDMENT NO. 184

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to call up amendment No. 184 and make it pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Ms. LANDRIEU. There is no objection. But before we do that, I ask the Senator a question. I actually like this amendment, No. 184. The Senator spoke with me about this previously. It has some merit. I thank the Senator for being cooperative.

If he could identify his other number, I would like to suggest that if we can get a Democratic amendment slid in between these, we might call up his two and the Democratic one.

Mr. COBURN. The other amendment is No. 220.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Would the Senator mind explaining that amendment, and I will make sure it is cleared on our side. If the Senator will explain it, we can get back to him in short order.

Mr. COBURN. Amendment No. 220 is about making sure we don't send good money after bad. When you go to the pump today to buy gasoline that is blended with ethanol, you pay, as a taxpayer, $1.78. As a taxpayer, you pay that before the $0.51 we are paying per gallon, through incentives, tax credits, and rebates for ethanol and blending.

This doesn't take away incentives on corn-based ethanol. It says that because we already mandate that says 15 billion gallons of ethanol must be available and put through the system this year, no longer is there a necessity to have a blender's credit to the tune of $6 billion a year. So what this does is two things: One, it takes away an incentive that is no longer needed because we have already mandated the ethanol will be there. But it saves us $6 billion that we are paying to firms that are going to do the business whether we pay it or not.

So it is silly to continue to spend $6 billion of American taxpayer money of which almost $3 billion of it will be borrowed money from either the Federal Reserve or from the Chinese to incentivize something that is already mandated to happen.

If we look at ethanol, it is two-thirds as efficient when blended as gasoline. It gets poorer mileage, and there is no savings in terms of carbon output or pollution. So we are incentivizing the use of a fuel that goes against what most people would like to do environmentally. It causes us to markedly increase the cost of food, which we are seeing in our country and around the world today, and we are incentivizing something that is going to happen anyway.

So it is a straightforward amendment. It says on the blender's tax credit we are no longer going to give a credit for something on which we already have a mandate—already have a mandate that is a tax increase. But when we send $6 billion to a small segment of American industry, and it is not going to impact their sales at all, what is the purpose for having tax credits? If we use tax credits or expenditures to expand the economy and it is not doing that, why would we continue to do it?

As part of the President's deficit reduction, we look at that as said it is a no-brainer. There is no reason we would incent something that is already mandated by law and has to happen. I know it is a controversial subject for a lot of my colleagues from farm States. But the fact is, worldwide subsidization of ethanol has markedly increased. This is creating an enormous pressure in taking food stocks out of the human food chain and putting it into the energy chain. So we are not stopping that. There are still all the other credits available, incentives and mandates. But we are saying we should not spend $6 billion of American taxpayer money that we don't have—by the way, we do not have—it for something they are going to do anyway.

The other point I make is that we are now a net exporter of ethanol. A lot of people don't recognize that. Through November 2010, we exported 397 million gallons of ethanol. That is almost 1 billion gallons since containing the blender's credit but all the other credits, we are supporting that to the tune of $1.20 a gallon.

Now we are subsidizing the consumption of ethanol in Europe to the tune of $3.20 a gallon. That makes no sense when, in fact, we have significant energy needs ourselves.

My hope is that we will consider this amendment and that we will vote on it. I recognize it is going to be a close vote. My count is still 55, and I know we have to get 60. I want the other 45 Members of our body to go and explain to their constituents why we are sending $6 billion to something that is going to happen anyway. It is a gift.

My hope is that we will do it or don't have $6 billion to spend that way.

The other point I will make is that with the trouble we are in, we are not going to get out of it by cutting $200 billion at a time. We are going to get out of it $5 billion at a time. Senator Baucus and I found $1 billion in the FAA bill from earmarks that are tied up. So if we do it $1 billion, $2 billion, $3 billion, $4 billion, $5 billion, $6 billion at a time, pretty soon it will add up and we will take pressure off our country in terms of funding our debt.

The ultimate course has to be to convince the world that we get it, that we can't continue to borrow 40 percent of our expenditures in the world financial market and expect them to continue to loan us money. It is very straightforward.

My corn farmers in Oklahoma don't like it, and I understand that. It is about doing the right thing for our country. Now is the time to do it.

I yield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I appreciate the cooperation of the Senator from Oklahoma. We have been able to debt to Senator LANDRIEU and Ranking Member SNOWE for their leadership of the Small Business Committee and in bringing forward this legislation before us, the small business innovation research program.

The bill passed very hard in the last session of Congress to get this bill through the Senate, and it would have passed then except the House adjourned before taking it up. I am thrilled that we are getting back to it this early in this session. I think most of us recognize that our future economic prosperity depends on whether this country continues to be a leader in science and innovation. We can’t compete with India, China, and other Third World countries for low-wage, low-skill jobs. That is not our future. America’s future is to be the global leader in science and technology. America makes the best, most innovative products and services. That ingenuity and excellence is our chief economic strength as a nation.

As a former small business owner, I understand it is the private sector and business, and not government, that is responsible for most of the job creation in this country. But I also understand that government has a critical role to play in fostering the positive business climate that we need in this country to remain competitive. I believe there are a few things we can do through policy to unleash the innovative spirit that is so alive and well throughout this country, and particularly in my State of New Hampshire.

One of those policy initiatives that we can do that is essential in maintaining the creative dominance that has allowed us to lead the world in innovation is to enact a long-term reauthorization of the Small Business Innovation Research Program or the SBIR Program.

SBIR is not just a typical grant program. Under the SBIR Program, a small business is able to compete for research that Federal agencies need to accomplish their mission—agencies such as the Department of Defense. Small businesses employ about one-third of America’s scientists and engineers and produce more patents than large businesses and universities. Yet small business receives only about 4 percent of Federal research and development dollars. SBIR ensures that small business gets a tiny fraction of the existing Federal research dollars. Just in the last few weeks, I visited three New Hampshire companies that are doing cutting-edge research because of the SBIR Program. Those three are Airex in Somersworth, Spire Semiconductor in Hudson, and Active Shock in Manchester. The research they have done under the SBIR Program has allowed them to develop new products, to add customers, and, in other words, create jobs. All three have done essential research for the Department of Defense.

Airex, for example, has developed a state-of-the-art program to manufacture critical components for our Nation’s strategic missiles. This SBIR award positioned them perfectly to compete and win a contract to manufacture motors for use in military programs and to commercialize their research. They have expanded from a workforce of 10 to, currently, 25 workers since they got that SBIR award, and they are continuing to grow.

In Hanover, we have a company called Creare that is a poster child for the economic benefit that can be reaped through the SBIR Program. Senator LANDRIEU has talked on the floor about Qualcomm in San Diego. We should put Creare in Hanover, NH, in the same category as Qualcomm. Creare can use more than $670 million of revenues they have earned because of the SBIR Program, its spinoffs, and technology licensees for the commercialization of its SBIR projects.

Many New Hampshire small businesses have successfully competed for SBIR funding in the 28 years since the program has been in existence. All across New Hampshire, small businesses that otherwise would not be able to compete for Federal R&D funding have won competitive SBIR grants that advance technology and science and create good jobs—what we all want to happen right now in this economy.

In just the last 2 years, New Hampshire firms have won 80 SBIR awards, and, in fact, despite its small size, New Hampshire is ranked 22nd in the country for the total grants awarded through the Department of Defense under the SBIR Program.

As a Senator from New Hampshire, I take particular pride in the SBIR Program because it was New Hampshire Senator Warren Rudman who, back in 1982, sponsored the Small Business Innovation Development Act which established the SBIR Program. SBIR has a proven track record and its cost, as Chair LANDRIEU has said so often on the floor, is minimal. CBO estimates that implementing this bill would cost only $150 million over the next 5 years, and most of that minimal cost would have zero impact on the budget. That is because what this bill does is establish a 5-year pilot program that authorizes participating agencies to use the same dollars they set aside anyway for SBIR research to pay for administrative costs. That means we will not be using general operating funds to pay for administrative costs, something we should be focusing on the deficit alone makes no sense at all because the jobs created by the SBIR Program will lower the deficit. Just like stopgap budgeting is bad for business, so are stopgap extensions of the SBIR Program. Unfortunately, SBIR has been operating under short-term extensions—10 of them—since 2006. Short-term extensions are a problem because, as I hear and I know we all hear regularly from businesses—they need certainty in planning. This bill reauthorizes the SBIR Program for 8 years. It is a reasonable period of time, and it will allow small businesses and Federal agencies to effectively plan their research.

I know we have heard from some quarters and it has become fashionable on the part of some people to say that this country’s best days are behind us. But I do not believe that for one moment. As I have traveled around New Hampshire, I see cutting-edge innovators who are creating jobs. We in the Senate know what needs to be done. We just need the will to do it.

I urge all our colleagues to join Senator LANDRIEU, Ranking Member SNOWE, and the Small Business Committee in voting to reauthorize and strengthen the SBIR Program.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK BUCKLES

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, we are waiting 10 or 15 minutes for Senators to come to the floor to speak. about the bill. Senator SNOWE, myself, and others have fairly described it for hours today and yesterday. I thought I would take a minute to pay honor to a gentleman, the last U.S. veteran of World War I, who was laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery just yesterday. It led me to put into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article, I would like to read as much of it as I am able before the other Members come because it struck me as something important. It is a beautifully written article in the Post this morning. I hope many people got to see it. I am hoping many of our Members are able to read it. I learned some things I had actually no idea about, which will become apparent as I read this short article. It was beautifully written by Paul Duggan.

I thought I would take a minute to read it into the RECORD. This is the last U.S. veteran of World War I so, of course, it was not just any ordinary funeral. It was not the funeral of a soldier, not the funeral of a congressman. It was extremely special to our country and to the world. President Obama was in attendance. Vice President Joe BIDEN was in attendance. I would like to read as much of it as I can:

A lowly corporal of long ago was buried Tuesday at Arlington National Cemetery, ushered to his grave with all the Army's Old Guard solemn pomp.

Frank Woodruff Buckles lived to be 110, the last of nearly 5 million U.S. veterans of a dimly remembered war—a generation now laid to rest.

In a late-day chill, after hundreds of strangers had paid their respects in public viewing hours before the service, old soldiers carried the former doughboy's flag-draped coffin partway up a knoll and set it on polished rails above his plot, a stone's toss from the grave of his old supreme commander, Gen. John J. "Blackjack" Pershing.

A chaplain commended his soul to God; rifle volleys cracked; a bugler sounded taps before the day's last funeral. The heroes of a half-century were laid to rest.

After the prayer and the echoes of the bugle and the rifles had faded, the Army's vice-chief of staff, Gen. Peter W. Chiarelli, knelt before Buckles's daughter, seated by the grave, and handed her a tri-folded American flag. He whispered words of comfort, then stood and walked away. No more doughboys now. So it goes. Rest in peace.

Madam President, I thought this was an article worth entering into the RECORD. I am pleased I had the time today, before Senators came to the floor, to actually read it into the RECORD. What it could produce to me this week the burial of the last veteran of World War I and what an obligation we have to our veterans today and the kind of determination that we must continue to foster to honor them for the sacrifices they make, whether it was this generation, which we in large measure failed to do, the veterans of World War II, the veterans of Vietnam and Korea, of course, Desert Storm, our veterans from Iraq and from Afghanistan who are currently fighting. It helps us to remember that the important work we do here—the bills passing, particularly those relating to the Department of Defense, may provide for the best care, and disposition of the remains of the individual under paragraph (1) or (2) of section 1481(a) of title 10, United States Code; and (ii) does not include a veteran who was discharged or released from the active military, naval, or air service under dishonorable conditions.

"(ii) LOAN GUARANTEES.—The Administrator shall establish a Patriot Express Loan Program, under which the Administrator may guarantee loans under this paragraph made by eligible members of the military community.

"(III) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—The Administrator may guarantee a loan under this subparagraph of not more than $1,000,000.

"(IV) GUARANTEE RATE.—The guarantee rate for a loan under this subparagraph shall be the greater of—

"(aa) the rate otherwise applicable under paragraph (2)(A);

"(bb) 85 percent for a loan of not more than $500,000; and

"(cc) 75 percent of the fee otherwise applicable to a loan guaranteed under this subparagraph may be used for any business purpose, including start-up or expansion costs, purchasing equipment, working capital, purchasing inventory, or purchasing business-occupied real estate.

"(a) PROGRAM.—The Administrator shall make loans under this subsection, except as provided in this clause, a loan under this subparagraph shall be made on the same terms as other loans under the Express Loan Program.

"(b) USE OF FUNDS.—A loan guaranteed under this subparagraph may be used for any business purpose, including start-up or expansion costs, purchasing equipment, working capital, purchasing inventory, or purchasing business-occupied real estate.

"(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) by striking paragraph (33), as redesignated by section 504(c) of the SBIR/STTR Reauthorization Act of 2011, and

"(2) CONSIDERATIONS.—(A) by striking paragraph (33); and

"(B) by redesignating paragraphs (34) and (35) as paragraphs (33) and (34), respectively.

"(3) by redesignating paragraphs (34), as redesignated by section 504(c) of the SBIR/STTR Reauthorization Act of 2011, as paragraph (33).

"(d) REDUCTION OF GOVERNMENT PRINTING COSTS.—

"(1) STRATEGY AND GUIDELINES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall ensure that printed versions of documents that the Director determines are essential to individuals entitled to or enrolled for benefits under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.), and other individuals with limited ability to use or access the Internet have access to printed versions of documents that the Director determines are essential to individuals entitled to or enrolled for benefits under part B of such title, individuals who receive old-age survivors' or disability insurance payments under title II of such Act (42 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), and other individuals with limited ability to use or access the Internet have access to printed versions of documents that the Director determines are essential to individuals entitled to or enrolled for benefits under part B of such title, individuals who receive old-age survivors' or disability insurance payments under title II of such Act (42 U.S.C. 401 et seq.).
amendments, and to show the leadership we need to try to really focus on and emphasize small business.

I am convinced that if we are going to get the full economic recovery we all want to see, the private sector—and especially small businesses—is going to drive that recovery. That brings me to the amendment that I have filed today and that I have called up.

In 2007, there were roughly 25,000 veteran-owned small businesses in my State. You can do the math on that. There are probably 2 million around the country or more—maybe 3 million veteran-owned small businesses around the country.

In 2007, the SBA created the Patriot Express Pilot Loan Initiative for members of the military community. That is part of the 7(a) program. My amendment would move that Patriot Express loan program from a pilot program to a fully authorized program. My amendment would make sure that veterans and members of the military community continue to have the ability to access capital when starting a new business or even when operating an existing one.

The Patriot Express pilot program has been a very successful program, issuing close to 7,000 loans valued at $500 million and increasing veteran participation in the SBA programs. The amendment would make the Patriot Express loan program available to all members of the military community, including Active and non-Active members, veterans, spouses and children, widows and widowers of service-members. It would increase the maximum loan amount from $500,000 to $1 million. It would also reduce the fees imposed by the SBA for all veterans to 75 percent of the fees otherwise applicable under the 7(a) and express programs.

This is a way we can really help our men and women in uniform. And one of the reasons I think this particular pilot program has been a success is because obviously these folks are hard-working, they are disciplined, they are well trained, and they are serious because of what they have been through for our country. But also one of the reasons I think this is compelling is that they are back and forth doing the training and fulfilling the requirements the country has required of them. So it is a very disruptive time during what otherwise would be potentially strong earning years where they could be really building their businesses.

So this pilot program has been very effective and successful in providing access to capital, speeding the process along for our men and women in uniform, and we want to encourage small business ownership, we want to encourage that innovation, and I think this is a great way to do it. Again, this is a program that has been on the books, has proven to be successful, and we certainly hope we can move it from a pilot program to a fully authorized program.

With that, Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LANDRIEU. Madam President, I really appreciate the Senator coming to the floor, and I thank him for his help in advancing this bill and supporting many of the proposals.

The ranking member is not on the floor, so until we run this through the other side for review, I am not sure we will be able to support it. But we are looking at it now, and I thank the Senator for offering it.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for the order of the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, we are currently, it is my understanding, on my amendment No. 183 to S. 493, is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is not the pending amendment at this time. Amendment No. 183

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent to set the pending amendment aside for the purpose of considering amendment No. 183.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Madam President, I notice we did not have any speakers here so I thought I would come down. We do have a bill in consideration right now, in process for a vote. It is my understanding there will be a vote on amendment No. 183 in the next perhaps hour or so, maybe in a few minutes.

Let me give a little background on what happened on this, where we are today. Back in the early 1990s we had the Kyoto treaty that was up for consideration. That was during the Clinton administration. The Kyoto treaty was looked at and studied here in this Senate. One of the concerns about it was it was assuming we have catastrophic global warming that was due to manmade gases, anthropogenic gases—methane. That assumption everybody thought probably was right, because it was said it was—until such time as we thought what the cost would be if at that time we would have ratified the Kyoto treaty and lived by its emissions restrictions. The cost would be somewhere between $300 and $400 billion, and it actually came from the Wharton School.

We looked at that and thought we better look at that pretty closely. Over some debate we decided, if this treaty came back—which President Clinton signed but had to come to the Senate for ratification—if it came to the Senate for ratification we would not ratify any treaty that had either one of two things—No. 1, would be devastating to our economy. No. 2, we would not treat developing countries the same as developed countries.

As it turned out, it did both. It is one that only affected the developed countries and, of course, with the reports work on the cost, very expensive. But that was back in the 1990s.

Starting around the year 2000 and specifically 2003, this was called to our attention at that time. I say to you, Madam President, I was the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee that had jurisdiction. We looked at this and evaluated the science that was behind it as well as we could. The science on which this is predicated came from the United Nations. Actually, about the IPCC, the International Panel on Climate Change, was formed. This came in the United Nations and the science behind it was pretty much confined to recommendations from the IPCC.

We started getting phone calls from well-respected scientists all over the country and these scientists would say to us that the IPCC is a closed society. They would not let anyone in to offer their judgment unless they agreed that humans were the cause of catastrophic global warming. These scientists started piling up until, I believe it was around 2003, we had a couple of hundred of them. I remember standing at this podium and talking on the floor about all the scientists who disagreed with the science of the IPCC. At that time I made a statement that became quite an irritating to a lot of people when I said: The notion that we are having catastrophic climate change due to anthropogenic gases could be the greatest hoax ever perpetrated on the American people.

I remember going to one of the meetings. Every year the United Nations throws a big party. We just had our 15th. I would add. Everyone remembers a year ago it was Copenhagen. This year it was Cancun. Back then, in 2003, it happened to be in Milan, Italy. I was kind of detested by everyone there because everyone else there was saying we have to do something about this catastrophic warming that was catastrophic.

As the years went by we had bills. We had the bill in 2003, the bill in 2005, the bill in 2007, in 2009, the last one was the Markey-Waxman—Waxman-Markey bill. Each time those who were behind this, seeking to pass some kind of cap-and-trade bill, were fewer every time we voted. The last count there were a total of 30 Members of the Senate who would say they would vote for the last cap-and-trade bill.

The interesting thing about the bill coming up now is that they were unable to pass it legislatively, which is what we should be doing. We should be handling this through legislation. We tried. We considered it and it went through the process and it failed. Now they are trying to do it through regulations. It has been speculated that the cost to the American people would be even greater if done through the Environmental Protection Agency than if it were done legislatively.

It was not long ago we had a hearing. I have a great deal of respect for President Obama’s Director of the Environmental Protection Agency, Lisa Jackson. Some time before our committee live on TV, and I asked the question. I said if we were to pass this—it might have been the Waxman-Markey bill—it doesn’t matter, they are all the same. Cap-and-trade is cap-and-trade—it would have cost between $300 and $400 billion if we ratified Kyoto and the same would be true of any of the five or six cap-and-trade bills we have defeated since then.

But I said let’s say we pass this and it has signed into law. Would this reduce CO₂ emissions? That is the whole idea. CO₂ emissions were supposed to be causing all this. I was very proud of her, because it took a lot of courage to give the response she did. She said in response: No, it wouldn’t, because it would only affect the United States of America.

Then I would take it one step further. What would happen if we have cap-and-trade—whether it is by legislation or by regulation, it doesn’t matter—what they are going to do is regulate everything that is out there in our society. As I say, the cost would be between $300 and $400 billion.

What I do, since I am not as smart as the rest of them around here, when I hear the billions and trillions of dollars, I try to see what does this cost my people in Oklahoma. I did the math, and in Oklahoma, if we take the total number of people who have filed tax returns, I put the amount of taxes this would cost, it would be about $3,100 per family in my State of Oklahoma.

What do you get if you get it? You get something even the EPA Director said is not going to lower worldwide CO₂ emissions, so you don’t get anything for it.

The big vote coming up in a few minutes is on a bill I have introduced, and we have now introduced this as an amendment to this small business bill, and the cost of it. I went up there. Quite frankly, there is a lot of talk about the Clean Air Act. I was a very strong supporter of the Clean Air Act. Several people who take a different position from me on the vote that is coming up talk about the Clean Air Act and all the wonderful things it has done—and I agree with them. So I feel strongly about it. We have cleaner air now than we have had in a long period of time. The thing is, it was designed to take care of six known pollutants. CO₂ was not one, it was not a pollutant. The Court said you do not have to count it as a pollutant but if you want to you can do it. So it was optional to the Environmental Protection Agency and to the government of our country.

The way to solve the problem, and I think many of my Democratic friends—many of them said they agree this should be a matter of the legislature and not a matter of the EPA making these decisions. This morning I quoted some of them. I have it right here.

Senator BAUCUS, a Democratic Senator, said:

I mentioned I do not want the EPA writing these regulations. I think it is too much power to be given one agency, but rather climate change should be a matter essentially left to Congress.

I agree with that and it was left to Congress. We considered five or six bills on this.

Senator BEN NELSON, another Democrat from Nebraska, said:

Controlling the levels of carbon emissions is the job of Congress. We don’t need EPA looking over Congress’ shoulder telling us we are not moving fast enough. I agree with him. In addition to that, we have eight other Democratic Senators who said essentially the same thing, so I think that is pretty well understood.

One reason I wanted to mention this before the vote takes place, my wife thinks the greatest problem facing America is the price of gas at the pump. My wife is not the only wife around here believing that, I know. She was saying for a long period of time, what causes these things? And it is very simple.

Even my grandkids understand supply and demand. That is taught in elementary schools nowadays. So supply and demand is at work here. We have supply in the United States of America. We have—and I am going to show you in just a minute—in fact, I will go ahead and do that now because I want everyone who votes on this to understand. Everyone who votes on this against an amendment that is voting to increase dramatically the price of gas at the pumps.

The next time we hear someone say we have—is something you keep hearing, that we have 3 percent of the oil in this country. I think that is interesting because they say 3 percent of the proven reserves. Well, proven reserves cannot take place until such time as you drill to prove it.

We have Members of the majority, along with the White House, the majority of the Members of the Senate have disallowed us to go out and drill. So if you cannot drill—something like 83 percent of our public lands where we could be drilling for oil, we cannot do it because they will not let us do it. So if they will not let us do it, then there cannot be proven reserves.

But they do have recoverable reserves. Our recoverable reserves right now in America are 135 billion barrels. All we have to do, in order to do that, is go out and take advantage of that and use these recoverable reserves.

With the CRS report that came out—the CRS is something that is recognized as an impartial, bipartisan or nonpartisan study group. They study these things. They said that, as of 1 year ago, the United States of America now this is very important because the United States of America has the largest recoverable reserves in coal, gas, and oil of any of the nations. There they are right there. These are the reserves of coal—this is all three, isn’t it? Fossil fuels. Yes, coal, gas, and oil. There it is. This is the United States of America.

If you add this up, we have more than Saudi Arabia, China, Canada, and Iraq combined. That is what we have. But the problem is, politically, they will not let us drill for it.

I know—and I regret to say this because I was just challenged, but it was true because I was there—21 years ago we had the Exxon Valdez. It was a disaster. It took place up in Prince William Sound. Most people here remember that now. It was an accident where you had a deficient ship that had leaked in that beautiful, pristine water up there.

I went up there. Quite frankly, there are a bunch of the far left who were celebrating that it happened. Why would they celebrate a disaster such as that? They celebrated because they said We are going to say this into stopping oil production on ANWR or on the North Slopes of Alaska.

Well, that is kind of interesting that they are going to parlay that into that. I said: How do you figure that? Because Prince William Sound, the Exxon Valdez, that was a transportation accident. That hit something causing it to break.
Then, I said: If you do away with drilling in America, that means we are going to have to transport it in from foreign countries, and the likelihood of it happening again is far greater. Nonetheless, they said: We are going to use that.

I hate to say this also, but when we had our spill in the gulf not too long ago, a lot of people were saying: Aha, now we are going to stop all drilling, deepwater drilling in the Gulf.

We have reserves down there in the gulf. While the moratorium was lifted, the administration has only issued one deepwater drilling permit since that happened.

What I am saying is, we have all these reserves out there, and we can do it. I am talking about gas and oil and coal. It is not just the oil and gas, but we have another opportunity out there.

We have talked about oil. We have talked about gas. In oil, if we would just explore our resources, that is what we know is there, the reserves that we have in oil and gas, it would run this country, in oil and gas, for 90 years. That is our own stuff. That is not from Saudi Arabia. It is not from the Middle East. It is not even from Mexico.

The same is true with the coal reserves. There is the United States, 28 percent of all the coal reserves. Right now, 50 percent of the power generated in the United States is generated with coal. But we are trying to do away with that. So that is a target.

But again, we have these tremendous reserves in the United States—let’s not forget—so we can run this country for 100 years on just what we have, except the politicians will not let us go in and recover our own reserves.

Let’s not forget about oil shale. Right now oil shale is something—yes, there are several pilot projects to prove the shale’s commercial viability. The Green River Formation, located in Colorado, Wyoming, and Utah, contains the equivalent of 6 trillion barrels of oil. Let me say that again, 6 trillion barrels of oil. The Department of Energy estimates that of the 6 trillion, approximately 1.38 trillion barrels are potentially recoverable. That is the equivalent of more than five times the oil reserves in Saudi Arabia.

When I made this statement about having all these reserves, more than any other country, I was not counting shale because that is not quite here yet—almost but not quite. Another domestic energy source that could lessen our dependence is methane hydrates. I think everybody knows that. But I did not count that either.

So all these things that we could have counted are not there. But the point is this: We have enough reserves to take care of all the problems we have in this country for the years to come, provided some people will come in, and they are well-meaning people, they will say: Well, we have to go to green energy. I am for green energy. But if you have something that is under development, and it might be 1 year, it might be 20 years or 30 years before it comes, you have to continue to run this machine called America in the meantime. What do we know works and what is available? It is oil, gas, and coal.

Just for a minute, I am going to deviate over there to what has happened in Japan. We just came from a hearing. I am very proud that not just our administration, the President and the Secretary of Energy, have been working closely with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has said that should not affect what we are doing right now. We currently have 12 applications pending. Two of them are pending for almost immediate consideration for nuclear reactors, so that we will get into nuclear. Right now, we only develop about 20 percent of our energy from nuclear. France, for example, does 80 percent. So that is something that is out there.

I would say, in my opinion, as one Member of the Senate, in order to stop, not reduce but stop, our dependence upon the Middle East altogether, all we have to do is keep working on all of the above. I want wind, I want solar; I want mainly what I call in, my terminology, everything that is developed and available today—coal, gas, and oil.

You may wonder what I am getting around to with these charts. It is the fact that we have a—everyone admits that if you do that, you will create—in other words, if you do that, you are looking for it right now—is to get prices so high, oil and gas so high that we will have to be dependent upon other things.

President Obama said, not long ago: Under this cap and trade—we are talking about it could either be legislative or it could be regulations—“electricity prices would necessarily skyrocket.” Notice he said, “necessarily skyrocket.” His administrator, or the Secretary of Energy to have an idea of what is behind this, the high price of gas at the pumps, said—now this is Steven Chu, Secretary of Energy for the Obama administration. He said: “Somehow we have to figure out a way to boost the price of gasoline to the levels in Europe.”

Let me repeat that. “Somehow we have to figure out a way to boost the price of gasoline to the levels in Europe.”

That is the motivation out there to do this. I think we have many others whom we could quote from the administration, but I do not want this to turn into something that gives the appearance that we are just criticizing the administration.

The fact is, we have to do something about developing our own resources. If we do that, that is just going to be able to bring down the price—do two things. First of all, for our national security, quit worrying about depending upon the Middle East for our oil. We can stop that just by developing our own resources. Secondly, go right back to elementary supply and demand. If we can supply the oil and gas and coal, then we will lower the price and lower it dramatically.

Everybody knows that. That is why this vote that is coming up is so important. Because the vote is not just to try to keep us from having between a $300 and $400 billion tax increase on the American people that will not accomplish anything. Remember what I said the Administration of the EPA said—not only that we would stop that kind of a tax increase but also that we can stop the rise of gas at the pump.

So if somebody votes against this amendment, all it does is say that the—which many Democrats, all Republicans and many Democrats agree—we are going to find out how many—the Congress should be the one to address these issues, not the Environmental Protection Agency. So that is the amendment. Anyone who is going to be voting against the amendment is saying we do not want to develop our own resources. That is one of the most serious problems we are dealing with right now.

I am going to deviate a little bit more to do with the EPA right now with all the regulations. They have this minimum achievable technology on emissions, on other things such as boilers and other things that would end up increasing the cost to do business. Ultimately, it is the consumer who pays. I actually have a quote I cannot seem to find right now, since I am not using notes, that says we do have the technology to do all these things. Yet we are going to allow this to happen, even though it is not necessary. So we have a big vote coming up. That vote is: Do you think the EPA should regulate the emissions of CO2 in America or do you think Congress should do it?

If you think the EPA should do it, get ready for a tax increase, because I can assure you, the President is just waiting to sign something that will allow them to continue down the road of overregulating. There is a cost to regulation. I think we all know that. It is one that is huge.

If you look at the regulations we have, I have already mentioned the $300 to $400 billion and how that relates to everybody in my State of Oklahoma waiting to sign something that will cost us $300 billion, $400 billion, or $500 billion to $1 trillion. And the EPA just had a news conference on coal. The utility MACT—that is something the Director of the EPA just had a news conference on today. The minimum achievable technology is something that would affect us, I believe, about $100 billion. The ozone and the PM would be about $90 billion.

As I say, we would be talking about a pretty big jobs bill but only on this, I wish to make sure everyone understands. My very good friend, John Barrasso, a Senator from Wyoming, has a bill that is going to go a lot further than this. I am a strong supporter of his legislation. It will go into the—keeping the EPA from using CO₂ to change the Clean Air Act, the Clean Water Act, the Endangered Species Act. That is very good. That is not what this is.

I had something this morning that I want to make sure to clarify because it is important because there are all kinds of things out there people are saying will happen if we pass this amendment.

They are saying that is going to somehow affect—in fact, they said I respect fully asked the members of the committee to keep in mind that EPA’s implementation of the Clean Air Act saves millions of American adults and children from debilitating and expensive illnesses that occur when smokestacks and tailpipes release unrestricted amounts of pollution. Yes, I agree with that. But let’s keep in mind, I was a strong supporter when the Clean Air Act came out and when the amendments came out.

It was designed for the six criteria pollutants at the heart of the Clean Air Act: lead, ozone, nitrogen oxide, sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, and particulate matter. These are real pollutants not imaginary pollutants such as CO₂. But that is what was targeted by the Clean Air Act.

Of course, it has nothing to do with anything else. So those things are still going to be restricted. We have had some time and I have had several times today—this amendment would block the administration’s announced plan to follow up with the Clean Air Act standards for cars and light trucks. This is not at all true. That is all done by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. That is not within the jurisdiction of the EPA. That is NHTSA, they call it.

It has nothing do with mileage on cars, nothing do with the whole effort to increase mileage.

EPA is contributing practically nothing to the administration’s global warming car deal—about 4 percent of the joint EPA-NHTSA program’s emissions reductions. Dropping EPA would, therefore, have a meaningless effect on oil consumption. According to the EPA, its greenhouse gas car standards would mean that “global mean temperature” is reduced by “0.006 to 0.015 [Celsius] by 2100.”

That is not even measurable. Don’t let anybody say the argument that this has anything to do with CAFE standards. It doesn’t affect anything that is harmful for people to breathe.

The amendment will be coming up soon. We are going to find out who wants to keep us and who is going to try to save our own resources. It should be a very interesting vote.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUYE. Madam President, the amendment from the Senator from Kentucky seeks to reduce discretionary spending by $200 billion. The actual amendment would cut in excess of $155 billion from domestic discretionary spending programs and the balance from security-related programs. While I am sure the Senator is serious in his desire to cut spending, I would point out to my colleagues that for the first 6 months of the fiscal year, with the passage of the next short-term continuing resolution, the Federal Government will have less than $200 billion in fiscal year 11 funds remaining for domestic discretionary spending.

My colleagues need to be advised that the CR that has passed the House will set a ceiling on domestic discretionary funding for the whole year at $400 billion. Since we are half way through the fiscal year, we have already allocated approximately half of these resources. Moreover, during the first 6 months of the fiscal year the government was funded at a higher rate, approximately $455 billion. Therefore, there is approximately $195 billion remaining for the balance of the year to spend on all discretionary domestic programs. While there are examples where unobligated balances remain in some agencies, in general it is fair to say the Senator’s amendment would cut this year’s remaining domestic spending by 80 percent.

The amendment stipulates that the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the Endangered Species Act, the Office of Personnel Management, the Corporation for National and Community Service, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Corporation for National and Community Service, the American Museum of Natural History, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the Endangered Species Act, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Corporation for National and Community Service.

The amendment stipulates that the Consumer Product Safety Commission, the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and the Endangered Species Act, the Office of Personnel Management, the Corporation for National and Community Service, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, the Endangered Species Act, the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Corporation for National and Community Service.

Some domestic agencies would have sufficient resources to survive this cut, but none without dire consequences. A cut of 35 percent to the EPA would seriously curtail funding for sewer and drinking water infrastructure, while leaving the agency with little funding to pay its personnel for the balance of the fiscal year. It would cut more than remains available for the Department of Housing and Urban Development and from the Office of Personnel Management.

Some domestic agencies would have sufficient resources to survive this cut, but none without dire consequences. A cut of 35 percent to the EPA would seriously curtail funding for sewer and drinking water infrastructure, while leaving the agency with little funding to pay its personnel for the balance of the fiscal year.

For the Department of the Interior, the Paul amendment would almost certainly necessitate the closure of our national parks and Indian schools.

One security funding, the bill would slash the State Department’s budget 75 percent below last year’s level, effectively eliminating funding for most State Department functions worldwide with devastating consequences for ongoing operations in Iraq, Afghanistan, and Pakistan.

The $30 billion cut to the Department of Defense would likely delay or terminate procurement programs supported by the Congress as the Department uses its authority to target cuts away from readiness programs toward investment programs.

The Energy Department’s nuclear weapons program would be cut by $2.5 billion. This would put the safety, security and reliability of our nuclear weapons at risk.

The only thing that many agencies would be able to do if they were faced with cuts of this magnitude would be to put their shut down operations. At a single Member of this Chamber can responsibly vote for this amendment.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 216

Mr. CASEY. Madam President, I rise to speak about an amendment I have offered and we will vote on in a little while. It is amendment No. 216, and it is a basic, very simple amendment, but it will rectify or remedy a problem we have in our contracting.

We have all kinds of businesses across the country that are part of the process that often when we have prime contractors who will have the opportunity to bid on Federal work, they will list subcontractors in their application. In some cases those subcontractors happen to be minority-owned, women-owned firms, known of course, by the acronyms MBE and WBE. So the prime contractors will list them to make their applications more competitive, without informing—the problem comes in—with or without informing the subcontractor.

This amendment does two basic things, and it is an amendment all of about 13 lines when we get to the heart of it. Basically, what it requires in those instances is the prime contractor notify the subcontractor. That is part one. Part two is, in those instances where there may be an allegation of fraud or other problems the subcontractor wants to report, the Administrator in this case, will establish a reporting mechanism that allows that subcontractor to report fraudulent activity by the contractor.

So two very basic elements: a notification provision, so if you are a firm listed on paperwork a prime contractor files, you be notified of that—that is No. 1—and, in addition to the notification of the subcontractor, that the Administrator set up a program, a method where you can report fraudulent activity by the contractor.

It is that simple. At a time when we are trying to create jobs and support small businesses across the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and across the country, I think it is a very basic change that need do in making the work Chairman LANDRIEU has done on this bill and her leadership but in particular her support for this amendment.
I yield to Senator LANDRIEU.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITEHOUSE). The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator from Pennsylvania for his so supportive and helpful. I think this is an amendment we can support. I am hoping to get clarification to actually go to a vote on this amendment sometime in the next 20 minutes or so. We do not have that clarity now, but we are hoping to be able to vote on this amendment.

I would like to ask the Presiding Officer, though, to read the pending amendments just by number and name because I think we have seven or eight pending amendments. Could the Presiding Officer clarify what amendments are currently pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendments are No. 183, a McConnell amendment; No. 178, a Vitter amendment; No. 161, an Inhofe for Johanns amendment; No. 216, a Landrieu for Casey amendment; No. 186, a Cornyn amendment; No. 199, a Paul amendment; No. 207, a Sanders amendment; No. 197, a Hutchison amendment; No. 184, a Coburn amendment; and finally, No. 229, a Pryor amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Thank you, Mr. President. That is what our records show.

I appreciate all these Members being very patient. We have their amendments pending. We are going to try to line up votes for them, hopefully, sometime either later tonight or tomorrow.

We also have a few other Members who have said they would like to have their amendments considered. I would simply ask if they can come down to the floor. Tonight would be a good time because we have had a very good, open, encompassing debate on a variety of different issues. Of course, the underlying bill before us is the reauthorization of the SBIR and STTR Programs that have been operating on a very short term with very inequitable authorizations that do not allow these programs to have the benefit for tax-payers they deserve. So we have struggled now for 6 years, three Congresses. It is time to get this done.

While we have many, many amendments that have been filed, I am happy to say there are just a few more Members who want to actually come and speak on their amendments. Some have said: We will take up our amendments on a later day. Many of the Members who have filed five and six amendments have said: I am only going to go with one. Senator LANDRIEU and Senator SNOWE.

We are very grateful for everyone’s cooperation.

So, hopefully, we can vote on the Casey amendment tonight and then when we have a venue of other amendments potentially in this order or some revision of this order. But all those pending will be, of course, provided an opportunity for a vote. We do have some outstanding questions about one of the Coburn amendments we have not cleared on either side.

So I am hoping we can have that vote tonight, and we will know something in a few minutes. I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we resume consideration of the Casey amendment No. 216; that there be 2 minutes equally divided before we proceed to a vote in relation to the amendment; that there be no amendments in order to the Casey amendment prior to the vote; that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table, with no intervening action or debate, and that the vote occur at 5:25.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, as we are waiting for Senator CASEY, I don’t know there is any opposition to this amendment. Mr. Cornyn, the ranking member on the floor and I am wondering if she has anything she wishes to add at this point.

I said earlier Members have been very cooperative in trying to minimize—still have an open debate but nevertheless minimize—the issues and the amendments so we can pass this important bill and get it over to the House and onto the President’s desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I thank the Chair as well. I wish to speak to the amendment offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania. I think it is a critical amendment for the contracting process. As the Chair well understands, because I know the Chair has called many meetings on contracts and processes, and over the years we have attempted to rectify and mitigate many of the problems that have arisen during the course of a contract to make sure there is access for small business within the Federal agencies, I have heard, as I know the Chair has as well, from countless small businesses who feel abused by large prime contractors.

During the procurement process when preparing for government bids, oftentimes large prime contractors do not fulfill their obligations to use small businesses as outlined in the subcontracting plan. They identify the small businesses in their own plan that they submit to the Government. They win the contract, and then they turn around and don’t use the small businesses they have identified in their bid that they have submitted to the Federal Government. So I wish to congratulate the Senator from Pennsylvania for identifying an important way to make sure small businesses are not left out of this process, because they are required once they are identified in an open, large prime contractor’s plan, they are required to use that small business. But, unfortunately, if a small business is not notified that the large prime contractor has won that contract, the Federal Government have no way of pursuing a process by which they make sure they are part of that overall bid.

I think it is very important that small businesses have access to the procurement process, and when large contractors are including small businesses, we have to make sure they notify the small businesses about their intent to use them in the bid process, and to business protectors will benefit small contracting firms without adding an undue burden to the government’s acquisition workforce. I think it is an amendment that is not only practical but critical in making sure small businesses have fair access to contracts for procurement within the Federal agencies, and more to curb the abuses that have occurred with large prime contractors that either disguise themselves as small businesses and go through the contracting process or use small businesses in their bid but never notify the small businesses of their intent to use them and, therefore, small businesses have no opportunity to pursue the legal process, due process to make sure they can report these abuses.

I urge support of the Casey amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I already spoke earlier on the amendment—actually, twice today, so I won’t reiterate those points. I wish to thank and commend the work done by Senator LANDRIEU and Senator SNOWE and the way they have worked together in a bipartisan manner to move this bill forward but in particular to help us pass this amendment. We are looking forward to the vote, and I want to thank them for their help.

I yield the floor.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, how much time remains before the vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 45 seconds remaining.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I wish to join Senator SNowe in supporting this amendment. We have received actually many complaints from small businesses at any number of the roundtables we have held in our committee about the old bait and switch that is going on, where their names are used by large contractors to actually succeed in receiving the bid or winning the bid, and then, as Senator Snowe stated, their companies are switched out and they don’t even know it. This amendment puts an enforcement mechanism in place and actually mandates the SBA to come up with an enforcement mechanism so we can have more honesty and transparency.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 216. The clerk will call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BEnNETT). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKETT) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What objection, it is so ordered.

Senator SNOWE stated, their companies did that last time around and they were terrific. I learned so much by having these listening sessions all across our State. I will be starting Monday in the eastern part of Montana—in towns such as Forsyth and Miles City—and over the next year I will work my way across the State collecting ideas and information from Montana’s farmers and ranchers to make sure the next farm bill works for them.

I am lucky to represent so many ranchers and farmers in our State who have dedicated their life to the land. It is so important, and it roots us in our country put food on the tables of families around the world, and they help create good-paying jobs here at home. Every year, the average American farmer feeds 155 people worldwide.

While agriculture stands in the spotlight this week, it is critical to remember the words of President Eisenhower and recognize the needs of our ranchers and farmers every day throughout the year.

The amendment (No. 216) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL AGRICULTURE WEEK

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to highlight the importance of agriculture and celebrate National Agriculture Week.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower once said:

"Farming looks mighty easy when your plow is a pencil and you’re a thousand miles away from a cornfield."

This week reminds us that it is our job to bridge the gap between plowing fields and crafting laws and make sure our ranchers and farmers have the tools they need.

In my home State of Montana, agriculture is the heart and soul of our economy. It is an essential part of who we are. Montana agriculture is not simply a livelihood, it is our way of life. Growing up on a ranch outside of Helena taught me firsthand the values of hard work, faith, family, and doing what is right—values I try to bring with me to work every day.

Fifty percent of Montana’s economy is tied to ranching and farming, and one in five Montana jobs is tied in some way to agriculture. It is our No. 1 industry. Each year, Montana ranchers and farmers produce nearly $3 billion of the highest quality agricultural goods produced anywhere in the world.

As a nation, we are blessed with a safe, affordable, and abundant food supply. Our farmers and ranchers in our country put food on the tables of families around the world, and they help create good-paying jobs here at home. Every year, the average American farmer feeds 155 people worldwide.

While agriculture stands in the spotlight this week, it is critical to remember the words of President Eisenhower and recognize the needs of our ranchers and farmers every day throughout the year.

Next week, I will be holding a series of listening sessions across Montana to discuss the next farm bill. I did that last time around and they were terrific. I learned so much by having these listening sessions all across our State. Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is proceeding to consider legislation to reauthorize the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Program and the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, SBIR/STTR. Our Nation’s small businesses and start-ups are crucial to maintaining America’s position as the world leader in technology and innovation. The SBIR/STTR programs improve the ability of small businesses and start-up enterprises to take part in federally funded research.

Last week, the Senate voted 95 to 5 to pass another bill to help small businesses and our economic recovery, the America Invents Act. This legislation will provide our small businesses and start-ups the legal landscape that they need to protect and commercialize their inventions to create jobs and boost our economy.

Small Business and Entrepreneurship Council, in strongly endorsing the America Invents Act, wrote that “[p]atent reform is needed to clarify and simplify the system; to properly protect legitimate patents; and to reduce costs in the system, including costs to small businesses and start-ups who are trying to compete in today’s global marketplace.”

Similarly, Louis Foreman, an inventor and advocate for other independent inventors wrote that the legislation “will make independent inventors, such as myself, more competitive in today’s global marketplace.”

Both the council and Mr. Foreman specifically noted the importance of transitioning to “first-inventor-to-file” and ending fee diversion at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

The America Invents Act will benefit small businesses and start-ups in several specific ways. First, the legislation will make it more difficult for large infringers to harass a patent owner through strategic challenges of the patent or challenges that have no likelihood of success. Large corporations often use these challenges to avoid license fees or discourage an infringement suit. For small businesses, patent owners and independent inventors, the expense of countering these tactics can make enforcement of their patents difficult to impossible. The improvements that this legislation makes to the inter partes system will limit harassment.

Second, the America Invents Act requires discounts for small businesses at the Patent and Trademark Office, PTO. Specifically, the bill mandates that the PTO provide a 50-percent reduction in fees for small businesses, and a 75-per- cent reduction in fees for businesses that receive a new “micro-entity” designation as truly small and independent inventors. Together, these provisions ensure that the PTO’s need to collect fees for services is offset by the benefits of small businesses. Small businesses will, therefore, be able to afford patent protection better than today.
Third, as part of the transition to first-inventor-to-file, the America Invents Act eliminates costly interference proceedings as the method for determining the right to a patent between competing inventors in favor of a derivation proceeding. Under current law, before commencement of the America Invents Act, when more than one application claiming the same invention is filed, the patent is given to the applicant who has the resources to prove their claim to the invention. This derivation proceeding is almost always won by larger corporations. A derivation proceeding is far simpler and does not require meticulous notes by the inventor, which gives large corporations an advantage, because the key date is the date of application.

Finally, the legislation will improve patent quality overall. Roughly half of all patents in litigation have claims invalidated. When there are too many patents out there that are not able to withstand court scrutiny, it leads to a more difficult climate for small businesses to license their inventions and raise capital from investors. By improving our patent system, we can provide a strong incentive for research and development. If we want to protect the small inventor, the America Invents Act is a smart reform.” Indeed, the legislation is crucial to fulfilling the promise that we make to small businesses and independent inventors that, if they put in the hard work, the United States is the place where a great invention will be rewarded. I thank the 95 Senators who voted in favor of Senate passage of the America Invents Act and look forward to continuing our work with Chairman Saxby Chambliss to get the legislation to the President’s desk without unnecessary delay. We tried to make sure that patent reform in the America Invents Act helps small businesses and increases their ability to secure funding for economic growth and good jobs here in America.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

DEBIT CARD SWIPE FEES

Mr. DURBIN. This week, we are considering legislation on the Senate floor that affects small businesses. I want to talk about another issue very important to small businesses; that is, the topic of interchange fees, also known as swipe fees.

Last week, nearly 200 small businesses came to Washington, DC, from Illinois and from all across America. They came to stand up in support of the reform of interchange fees, swipe fees, that Congress passed last year. They are customers of my major credit card companies, Visa and MasterCard, and the $13 trillion banking industry that is doing everything in its power to reverse this reform.

We all know small businesses are the key to our economy and its future. We need for them to be able to grow, to hire more workers, and serve their customers well. But debit card swipe fees set by Visa and MasterCard on behalf of their big bank allies are crushing many small businesses.

Back in 2009, the banks made over $16 billion per year in debit swipe fees, about $1.3 billion per month. Now, $16 billion may not sound like a lot of money when you compare it to the $20.8 billion that the New York State comptroller said was paid out in Wall Street bonuses to major financial institutions just last year, but it is a huge amount when it affects small business.

For most Americans on Main Street, $16 billion in swipe fees is quite a lot. This money comes out of the pockets of small business owners across America and out of the pockets of their customers, who pay higher prices for gas and groceries as a result.

According to data from the Federal Reserve and the Nilson Report, over half of all debit interchange fees—more than $8 billion per year—goes to just 10 giant banks.

What it boils down to is this: Some who are pushing for a delay in this reform are literally offering a handout of $16 billion mainly to the biggest banks in America.

The swipe fee system does not have transparency and has no competition. The bottom line is that the current debit card system in this country is a broken one. The current system is tilted in favor of large or small, hotel owner, restaurant owner, convenience store owner, gas station, ask them what bargaining power they have when it comes to the amount they are charged for the use of a debit card, and the answer is, none. Ask them how much is being paid in each transaction. And the answer is, it is secret. Now, is that how you would build an economy, with no competition and no transparency? That’s exactly what is going on with the duopoly of Visa and MasterCard imposing these fees on small businesses. The banks and card companies are sending an army of lobbyists to Congress to undo the reform Congress passed last year. There are hundreds of bankers swarming over Capitol Hill this week. Several Members who have never supported an interchange reform in the first place have introduced legislation to delay that reform that we passed. I am sorry to say that this plays right into the banking industry’s effort to avoid accountability.

I want my colleagues to know that small businesses are going to tell their side of the story too.

Todd McCracken is the president of the National Small Business Association. He came to Capitol Hill last week, and this is what he said:

Small businesses aren’t trying to do away with credit and debit cards, we just want them to play by the rules. Small businesses have been at the mercy of these large banks for years, and the swipe fee reforms merely inject fairness and transparency into a market that has been dictated by a handful of companies for years.

Hundreds of small businesses also submitted formal comments to the Federal Reserve in support of reform. Those comments are posted on the Federal Reserve’s Web site. I would like to read a few of those from my home State of Illinois.

Nolan Williamson owns a flower shop. It is called Jerry’s Flower Shoppe in Carbondale, IL. Carbondale, IL, in southern Illinois, is the home of Southern Illinois University. Here is what Nolan wrote to the Federal Reserve:

In 1964, Jerry’s Flower Shoppe opened, and for 45 years I have been a partner in the business. We are located in a university town, and our business depends greatly on the university. Since the university budget is down and they are not spending, our business is suffering.

We have streamlined our business as much as possible. We were forced to lay off one employee for a while, then brought her back at reduced pay and reduced hours. As a retail business, we have no choice but to accept interchange fees. We had to increase credit and debit card fees. Even with a price increase, these high card fees are eating away our profits.

Nolan concluded by saying:

Help our struggling business and other small businesses around the country. Reduce our swipe fees to 12 cents as proposed.

He alludes to the fact that when the Federal Reserve took a look at the actual interchange fee being charged for the use of a debit card, they estimated the average to be over 1 cents per transaction, which is more than 1.1 percent of the value of each transaction. The actual cost? Less than 10 cents. So what the credit and debit card companies are doing is imposing a fee that there is no bargaining over, no competition, no disclosure, and forcing retailers to pay it. Jerry’s Flower Shoppe does not have a fighting chance against Visa and MasterCard. They have to pay it. Else. That is, of course, transferred to a customer and reduced profit to the owners.

Here is another comment from Bob Stork. He owns Stork’s Catering in Springfield. I know Bob. Here is what he says:

My business has been in operation for about 35 years. We are just a small enterprise with five employees. The economic situation has taken a toll not only on my business, but also on companies all across the country. Personally, I believe that swipe fees are hindering these struggling businesses even further. If these fees keep rising, they will eventually place such a strain on us that we may be forced to close our doors. Please continue your efforts to regulate the debit swipe fees.

Here is a comment from Norman Flynn. He has a business, Culligan Water Conditioning, in Macomb, had it for over 70 years in his family. He said:

We really cannot afford to keep getting hit with unnecessary fees. Please seek to get the proposed rule implemented quickly so that debit swipe fees will be lowered and small businesses will get some breathing room.

I hope my colleagues understand that these small businesses need relief right now. They need to understand that delaying this reform will force them to raise fees on everyday transactions. If these fees keep rising, they will eventually place such a strain on us that we may be forced to close our doors. Please continue your efforts to regulate the debit swipe fees.

Here is a comment from a small business. The company, Water Conditioning, is located in Macomb, and it has been in operation for over 70 years in the family. He said:

As the big banks and card companies make their pitch, I hope my colleagues will make their choice to stand with the small businesses and consumers of America on this issue. I stand with the small businesses and consumers with the interchange fees. A lot of people don’t know it because they just introduced this week would do, would give Visa and MasterCard and the banks a multibillion-dollar handout and would leave small businesses and consumers footing the bill.

We have heard a lot about the bailout of Wall Street. This is the bailout to Wall Street. To think that they would turn around and give to these companies $32 billion in handouts, most of it going to the largest banks in America, by delaying this rule at the expense of small businesses and consumers all across America.

As the big banks and card companies make their pitch, I hope my colleagues will make their choice to stand with Main Street instead of Wall Street. I hope they choose to stand on the side of hard-working small business owners. Most Americans understand—and I sure do—that good jobs are created by small businesses all over this country. We have heard a lot about this struggle and not on the side of the biggest banks and Wall Street.

I wish to respond to another argument that was raised recently against interchange reform. Banks such as JPMorgan Chase have started threatening that interchange reform will force them to limit debit card transactions to $100 per transaction. This threat is so hollow. I am amazed they are saying it publicly. It is a threat that defies basic logic. Remember, it does not cost a bank any more money to conduct a $100 debit transaction than it does a $1 transaction. In both cases, the cardholder must already have the money in his account. The costs to transfer that money through the network’s wires are the same no matter the dollar amount. The only logical reason why banks such as Chase would make this threat is to scare opposition to interchange reform.

Once reform takes effect, big banks such as Chase would be crazy to to fight through on this threat of imposing dollar limits on debit transactions. If they did, consumers will start moving in droves to small banks because they are not regulated by this bill and will not impose unnecessary restrictions.

Chase also has no business to argue that they have to limit large-dollar debit transactions because they are afraid about fraud. Remember, this is the same Chase bank that last April told all of its debit card holders not to use PIN numbers even though PIN has one-sixth as much fraud loss as signature debit cards. Chase did this because Visa and MasterCard give higher interchange fees than for PIN debit. Chase is the poster child for banks that have brought increased fraud risks upon themselves by not using PIN numbers.

I also want to respond to my colleagues who say they are hearing from banks and card companies that consumers might be hurt by interchange reform. First of all, these banks and card companies have no credibility when it comes to speaking on behalf of consumers. In fact, interchange reform will force them to raise fees on consumers, but they will not even admit that they were already raising consumer fees to record levels before interchange change reform passed.

I think that when I would go home to Springfield, my wife would say to me: Guess what, here is another notice from the credit card company raising the interest rate you have to pay on late charges. I thought you passed credit card reform.

I said: It doesn’t take effect for a few more months. They are running as fast as they can to run up the fees in the meantime.

That is what is happening to businesses with the interchange fees. A lot of people don’t know it because they don’t get a notice in the mail about the interchange fee. That has been their game plan in the past, and it is their game plan again.

I am sick of the big banks and card companies squeezing American consumers and small businesses with tricks and traps and unfair fees. I will stand with the small businesses and consumers of America on this issue. I will fight the big banks and the big companies with every effort to kill or delay swipe fee reform.

I urge my colleagues to join me in standing up for Main Street and against the abusive fees and practices of Wall Street.

JAPAN TRAGEDY

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my deepest condolences to the people of Japan, and to reaffirm that the United States stands ready to assist the country and its people in this time of tremendous need.

On March 11, the world watched in horror as a devastating 9.0-magnitude earthquake struck off the northeastern coast of Japan, triggering a devastating tsunami that sent a 30-foot high wall of water hurtling into coastal towns and leaving complete destruction in its wake.

As a Senator from California, which has far too often experienced the devastation of earthquakes, I was horrified by the magnitude of this event.

In the days following development, scientists are now saying that the quake caused the island of Japan to shift by 8 feet and the Earth’s axis to move by 4 inches.

In Japanese cities such as Sendai and Minami Sanriku, entire communities and countless lives vanished in an instant. In Minami Sanriku alone, 10,000 members of a population of 17,000 remain unaccounted for.

The force of the tsunami generated by the quake was so great that waves traveled across the Pacific Ocean at more than 500 miles per hour, slamming into Hawaii and cities along the California and Oregon coasts.

Today, we know that an estimated 4,277 lives have been confirmed lost—a figure that will undoubtedly rise—and that hundreds of thousands have been displaced. In this time of extraordinary grief, our thoughts and prayers go out to those whose family and friends remain missing.

What we also know is that without Japan’s strict building codes and well-developed early warning systems, this terrible tragedy would have been much worse.

I praise the work of all the first responders who are working around the clock in Japan. Tens of thousands of Japanese rescue workers have been joined by teams from around the world, including from the United States and China.

I know that this includes a search and rescue team from Los Angeles County.

The team, which left for Japan on Saturday, is made up of 74 rescue personnel including firefighters and paramedics as well as six teams of search dogs who are trained to look for survivors where debris is left by the earthquake and tsunami.

There are also approximately 600 servicemembers from Naval Air Station Lemoore in California aboard the U.S.S. Ronald Reagan aircraft carrier, who are assisting relief efforts off the Japanese coast.

Our deepest gratitude goes out to all of those who are working tirelessly to save lives and bring comfort to communities in need.

We also know that the earthquake and tsunami have caused tremendous difficulty at a number of nuclear energy facilities within Japan.

The damage and subsequent failure of systems at these nuclear reactors are a clear warning that we must step up efforts to ensure that every precaution is taken to safeguard all of our people from a similar disaster.

Special and immediate attention should be given to those nuclear reactors that share similar conditions as the failing reactors in Japan—those located near a coastline or fault line, or those with a similar design.

We must all reexamine our assumptions about what constitutes a credible threat to those reactors and ensure we learn the lessons shown to us by the recent events in Japan.

As chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, which has jurisdiction over domestic nuclear regulatory activities, I will ensure that our members have full briefings on all of these issues and a hearing on the safety of the Nation’s nuclear facilities and what lessons can be learned from the dangerous situation at the failing reactors in Japan. I am also calling on the NRC to conduct a comprehensive investigation of these issues, with a focus on areas that are especially vulnerable to seismic activity like California.

I would also like to spend a few moments talking about the approximately 300,000 Japanese-Americans who call California home.

I am particularly proud that the Japanese American community in my State has quickly stepped up to assist with relief efforts in the aftermath of this horrible tragedy. This includes the Japan America Society of Southern California—a nonprofit organization founded in 1909 to build relationships between the United States and Japan. This also includes the Japanese Cultural and Community Center of Northern California. These are just a couple of examples of how Californians are pulling together to help the hundreds who have been devastated by the earthquake and tsunami.

I thank all those in California, and those across the country and the world, who have responded to this tragedy with an outpouring of support for the people of Japan.

I would also like to take just a brief moment to thank the Federal, State, and local officials in Hawaii, California and along the west coast for their quick response in warning residents of the tsunami threat and assisting those communities affected by severe waves.

Coastal areas in northern California, particularly Crescent City and Santa Cruz, were impacted by these waves, resulting in damages to port and harbor infrastructure. I am pleased that I have observed the chain of command in California Monday and are working with State and local officials to assess the situation.

And finally, I thank Senators REED, MCCONNELL, KERRY, and LUGAR for drafting a resolution on the tragedy which passed the Senate Monday evening. I am proud to be a cosponsor.

The resolution expresses the Senate’s deepest condolences to all of those affected by this tragedy, including the families of the victims. It also urges the U.S. Government and the international community to provide any additional assistance the Japanese government may need as it moves toward healing, rebuilding, and recovery.

Experts tell us that events of this magnitude are rare—in fact, this was the largest recorded earthquake in Japan’s history.

While we hope and pray that we never see such a horrific event again, this tragedy serves as a stark reminder of nature’s extraordinary power and how precious and fragile life is.

Let us also use this as an opportunity to redouble our commitment here in America to do the hard work of preparing for the unthinkable.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

CORPORAL LOREN M. BUFFALO

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, I rise to honor the life of one of America’s bravest killed in action in Afghanistan—CPL Loren M. Buffalo—a fallen hero who served our Nation in support of Operation Enduring Freedom.

Corporal Buffalo, 20, of Mountain Pine, AR, was by all accounts, driven to serve his country and strong sense of civic duty.

The son of an Arkansas National Guardsman and the grandson of a World War II veteran, Corporal Buffalo joined the Army in 2009, just after graduating from Mountain Pine High School. His father, Cecil Buffalo, told The Sentinel-Record, that he knew his son wanted to serve his country all the way back in junior high. Mr. Buffalo said his son was a “strong-hearted all-American boy” who loved his country and wanted to serve it.”

In Mountain Pine, Corporal Buffalo is remembered as a young man who would make the best out of any situation.

One of his mentors said that Corporal Buffalo “was 100 percent about community.” During his teenage years, Corporal Buffalo undertook a number of projects honoring and supporting our Nation’s veterans.

Beyond a life of service, Corporal Buffalo enjoyed making music. A multitalented musician, Mr. Buffalo said his son could play the guitar, drums, bass and “just about anything you put in his hand.”

Corporal Buffalo was assigned to B Troop, 1st Squadron, 75th Cavalry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division based out of Fort Campbell, KY. According to initial reports, he died from injuries sustained when an improvised explosive device detonated near his digger patrol. He received multiple medals for service, including a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star.
CORPORAL BUFFALO MADE THE ULTIMATE SACRIFICE FOR OUR FREEDOMS. I ASK MY COLLEAGUES IN THE SENATE TO JOIN ME IN HONORING HIS LIFE AND LEGACY. I ASK THAT WE ALL KEEP HIS FAMILY, FRIENDS AND COMRADES IN OUR THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS DURING THIS DIFFICULT TIME. HE IS A TRUE AMERICAN HERO.

RECOGNIZING POLAND SPRINGS

MS. COLLINS. Mr. President, in these challenging economic times, it is a pleasure to recognize a business that is growing and creating new jobs as it demonstrates environmental stewardship and community citizenship. The Poland Spring Water Company of Maine is such a business.

The pure, natural spring water found in Maine’s Western Mountains has been prized by residents and travelers since the earliest days of our Nation. In 1845, Hiram Ricker began bottling this water and a company was born. By 1904, the water had gained international praise earning medals of excellence at the Columbian Exposition and the World’s Fair. The Ricker Inn, which opened a decade later, hosted such illustrious guests as Presidents Cleveland and Taft.

Today, Poland Spring is one of the best-selling bottled spring water brands in North America. Its bottling plants in three Maine communities provide some 800 good-paying, skilled jobs. Its annual payroll of $40 million and $65 million in purchases of goods and services from other Maine companies make it a mainstay of our State’s rural economy. Its generous support for schools, fire and rescue, conservation, and many other causes strengthens our communities.

Three years ago, Poland Spring opened its newest plant in the small town of Kingfield with 40 workers. This year, employment stands at 70 and the Kingfield operation was recently named “The Best Plant in North America” by Poland Springs’ parent company, Nestle Waters. That is an outstanding record of growth and accomplishment in such a short time, but it doesn’t surprise me to see a Maine facility achieve this distinction.

Poland Spring does not just bottle water—it is a diligent guardian of Maine’s groundwater resources. The company’s extensive monitoring efforts to protect water quality and the local watershed set a standard for the industry worldwide. From its ultra-light plastic bottle and energy-efficient building design to its operation of the largest biodiesel trucking fleet in Maine, Poland Spring’s commitment to the environment is seen at every step of the process.

I congratulate the Poland Spring Water Company for more than 160 years of operations to the State of Maine and the Kingfield facility for its recognition as the best in North America.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO KATIE HURLEY

Mr. BEGICH. Mr. President, today I recognize a great Alaskan as she celebrates her 90th birthday at the end of this month. Katie Hurley was born and raised in Juneau, AK, and embodies so much of what makes Alaska great. She is a living history of the State of Alaska.

Katie was there at the very beginning of the push for Alaska Statehood, serving Governor Ernest Gruening in Alaska’s territorial days. Katie served as chief clerk to the Alaska Constitutional Convention in Fairbanks during the very cold winter of 1955-1956. With a manual typewriter and mimeograph machine, she had minutes and amendments ready every morning for the delegates. It is Katie’s voice you can hear in the audio recordings of the final roll call vote of the Constitutional Convention.

Katie’s public service to Alaska transcends every level of government. Governor Bill Egan appointed Katie to the Matanuska Telephone and Matanuska Electric association boards. She embodies completely what it means to be a public servant and community member.

It is appropriate Katie’s birthday falls during Women’s History Month. Katie is a role model for so many Alaskan women. She was the first woman in Alaska to win her party’s nomination for statewide office. Katie was the first executive director of the Alaska Commission on the Status of Women and was appointed by Governor Steve Cowper to the Human Rights Commission in 1987, serving twice as chair.

She is still active in the Alaska chapter of the National Organization of Women. In the past, she would grab her knitting—baby blankets for her grandchildren—to attend legislative hearings on women’s reproductive health rights. She has been a tenacious advocate for title IX funding and education equity. Katie is a breast cancer survivor of 21 years and still participates in the annual Alaska Run for Women to raise money for breast cancer research. Last year—at age 89—she finished the 5-mile course with her team.

Anyone who knows Katie understands she is never one to slow down. Her enthusiasm is infectious, and she still spends time imparting Alaska’s history to young Alaskans and reminding all Alaskans of the common goals which we shared at statehood and the spirit in which our State constitution was drafted.

I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Katie and her decades of service to Alaska on her 90th birthday.

S. RES. 99

At the request of Mr. DeMint, the name of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Cochran) was added as a cosponsor of S. Res. 99, a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that the primary safeguard for the well-being and protection of children is the family, and that the primary safeguards for the legal rights of children in the United States are the Constitutions of the United States and the several States, and that, because the use of international treaties to govern policy in the United States on families and children is contrary to principles of self-government and federalism, and that the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child undermines traditional principles of law in the United States regarding parents and children, the President should not transmit the Convention to the Senate for its advice and consent.

S. RES. 102

At the request of Mr. McCain, the names of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Lieberman), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Graham), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Blunt) and the Senator from Florida (Mr. Rubio) were added as cosponsors of S. Res. 102, a resolution calling for a no-fly zone and the recognition of the Transitional National Council in Libya.

AMENDMENT NO. 182

At the request of Mr. Nelson of Nebraska, the names of the Senator from Michigan (Ms. Stabenow) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 182 proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 183

At the request of Mr. McConnell, the names of the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. Manchin), the Senator from Utah (Mr. Hatch), the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mrs. Pryor) and the Senator from Texas (Mr. Cornyn) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 183 proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 186

At the request of Mr. Cornyn, the names of the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Vitter), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Enzi), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. DeMint), the Senator from Florida (Mr. Rubio), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Paul), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. Ensign), the Senator from New Hampshire (Ms. Ayotte) and the Senator from Idaho (Mr. Risch) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 186 proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 188

At the request of Ms. Collins, the name of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Barrasso) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 188 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 189

At the request of Ms. Collins, the name of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Barrasso) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 189 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 190

At the request of Ms. Collins, the name of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Barrasso) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 190 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 194

At the request of Ms. Collins, the name of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Barrasso) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 194 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 195

At the request of Ms. Collins, the name of the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Barrasso) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 195 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 197

At the request of Mrs. Hutchison, the names of the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. Burr), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. Ensign) and the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. Johanns) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 197 proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 209

At the request of Mr. Brown of Massachusetts, the names of the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Toomey) and the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Udall) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 210 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 211

At the request of Mr. Rockefeler, the names of the Senator from Virginia (Mr. Webb), the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. Manchin), the Senator from Missouri (Mrs. McCaskill) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. Johnson) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 211 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 215

At the request of Mr. Reid, the name of the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. Conrad) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 215 intended to be proposed to S. 493, supra.

AMENDMENT NO. 216

At the request of Mr. Casey, the name of the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Bennett) was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 216 proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 221

At the request of Ms. Landrieu, her name was added as a cosponsor of amendment No. 216 proposed to S. 493, supra.

AMENDMENT NO. 223

At the request of Mr. Coburn, the names of the Senator from Montana (Mr. Tester) and the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Udall) were added as cosponsors of amendment No. 223 intended to be proposed to S. 493, a bill to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes.

STANDARTES ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. Wyden (for himself and Mr. Cornyn):

S. 596. A bill to establish a grant program to benefit victims of sex trafficking, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Wyden. Mr. President, I am pleased to join today with my partner, Senator Cornyn, to introduce the Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking Deterrence and Victims Support Act. This bi-partisan legislation, which was approved unanimously by the Senate in the 111th Congress, just a few months ago, as S.2925, is the first comprehensive approach to combating the terrible and fast-growing criminal enterprise of trafficking of children for sex right here in the U.S.

Many people don’t have any idea how many children in the U.S. are forced into sexual slavery. It is truly a moral abomination that an estimated 100,000 minors are trafficked for sex in the U.S. each year. The reason that this crime has reached epidemic proportions is simple: the resources are not in place to help innocent victims escape from trafficking, nor to punish the violent, ruthless pimps who are trafficking them.

In talking to law enforcement officials in Oregon, I learned that gang members, pimps, and traffickers have figured out that trafficking a person is a lot less risky, and just as profitable, as trafficking drugs. A pimp can make $200,000 a year on one trafficking victim. They can create a virtual island for vulnerable minors and not get caught because law enforcement lacks the training and resources to stop this crime. The Domestic Minor Sex Trafficking Deterrence and Victims Support Act will change that.

This bill would, for the first time, provide a comprehensive solution for addressing this problem. The bill would establish a pilot project of six block grants in locations in different regions of the country with significant sex trafficking activity. The block grants would be awarded by the Department of Justice to state or local government applicants that have developed a workable, comprehensive plan to combat sex trafficking. The grants would require a multi-disciplinary approach to addressing trafficking problems. Applicants for the grants would have to demonstrate they can work together with local, state, and Federal law enforcement, social services, prosecutors, and social service providers to achieve the goals of the bill.

Government agencies that get the grants would be required to create shelters where trafficking victims would be safe from their pimps, and where they could start getting treatment for the trauma they have suffered. The shelters would provide counseling, legal services, and mental and physical health services, including treatment for abuse, alcohol, and drug problems. The shelters would also provide food, clothing, and other necessities, as well as education and training to help victims get their lives on track.

The bill would also provide training for law enforcement officers. I worked with some of the pioneering officers out there like Doug Justus in Portland and Byron Fassett in Dallas who really understand this issue. But, unfortunately, what Doug and Byron have told me is most police officers don’t have the training to recognize a sex trafficking victim and don’t know how to handle those victims in a way that will allow them to feel like they can turn away from their pimp. Without this training—and without shelters—there’s no way to begin building criminal cases against the pimps, and no way to get these victims to come to court to testify in criminal trials.

That is why we are going to take a comprehensive plan to finally turn the tables on pimps. Without trained officers and service providers, and available shelters, there is no support and safe place for children who have been trafficked. Right now there are only between 50 and 70 shelter beds in the entire country for minor victims of sex trafficking. That is unacceptable. This bill will change that, and begin to provide hope for trafficking victims.

Another serious aspect of this problem is that this bill would address is the issue of repeat runaways. Evidence shows that the children at greatest risk of becoming involved in sex trafficking are kids who have run away from home. Many of them are children who have been in the foster care system. The problem is that there is often no report made when a child runs away, and thus no way to know when a child is a repeat runaway and at greatest risk.

This bill would strengthen reporting requirements for runaway or missing children, and encourage the FBI to enhance the National Crime Information Center, NCIC, database, which is where missing children are logged. Doing so would give law enforcement officers better information on the children at greatest risk by flagging repeat runaways.

Before I conclude, I want to express that this is a very personal issue with very personal consequences. I had a chance to feel this personal heartbeat last year when I accompanied police officers along 82nd Avenue in my hometown of Portland. I will never forget a 15-year-old girl who was there with the tools of the trade. She had a cell phone to stay in constant contact with her pimp and report how much money she had made. She had a 15-inch butcher knife because she knew she needed to protect herself. She had a purse full of condoms, because she knew she couldn’t stop until she had more customers during the course of the evening.

The fact that there are thousands of young girls like her out on the streets, across the entire country, every single day, is nothing short of a national emergency. This bill sends a clear and powerful message to the victims of this abuse, that somebody cares about her health and wellbeing. That is why I hope Congress will act quickly to provide help for young girls like the one I met by passing this bill.

Last year, this legislation passed the Senate by unanimous consent and the House by voice vote. Unfortunately, the bill passed the House shortly before the Congress adjourned, and there was no time to resolve the minor differences between the two chambers’ bills. But I will do everything I can to see that this bill moves forward promptly so that sex trafficking victims can begin to receive the care they need and deserve.

Finally, I want to acknowledge the efforts of the non-profit and faith-based organizations in working on this issue. There are a lot of deeply committed groups and individuals working to help victims of sex trafficking. Their good work has laid the foundation for our efforts here in the Congress.

I want to acknowledge the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, the FBI’s Innocence Lost Project, Polaris Project, Shared Hope International, ECPAT-USA, Rebecca Project for Human Rights, Soroptimists, and the YWCA; and there are many other fine groups that deserve thanks.

I also want to recognize the work of champions—like Ambassador Luís CeDeBaca, filmmaker Libby Spears, and local officials like Multnomah County Commissioner Diane McKeel, who have raised awareness and made it their priority to fight this horrific crime. The effort to save children from sex trafficking would not be possible without the involvement of all of these groups and individuals.

Again, I want to thank Senator CORNYN for his dedication and cooperation in combating sex trafficking. I am also indebted also to the members of the Judiciary Committee who played a constructive role in shaping the bill; and I particularly thank Chairman LEAHY, Senator SESSIONS, Senator DURBIN, Senator FRANKEN, and Senator COBURN for their input and work to move this legislation forward in the last Congress. Finally, I want to acknowledge our House partners, Representatives CAROLYN MALONEY and CHRIS SMITH, who introduced companion legislation in the House. I look forward to working with them again to quickly move this legislation forward to passage.

By Mrs. FEINSTEIN (for herself, Mr. LAFAY, Mrs. GILLIBRAND, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. COONS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. FRANKEN, Mrs. INOuye, Mr. KERRY, Mr. LUTENBERG, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. MERKLEY, Mr. SCHUMER, Mrs. SHAFFER, Mr. UDALL, of Colorado, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, and Mrs. WYDEN):

S. 598. A bill to repeal the Defense of Marriage Act and ensure respect for State regulation of marriage; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President. I am very pleased to introduce today a bill to strike the known as DOMA, the Defense of Marriage Act.

I want to thank my cosponsors—Senators LEAHY, GILLIBRAND, KERRY, BOXER, COONS, WYDEN, LUTENBERG, BLUMENTHAL, MERKLEY, DURBIN, UDALL, of Colorado, INOuye, and AKAKA for working with me on this important bill.
Today, there are between tens of thousands of legally married same-sex couples in the United States, and more than 18,000 in my State of California alone.

These couples live their lives like all married people. They share financial expenses, they raise children together, and they care for each other in good times and bad, in sickness and in health, until death do they part.

But there is the rub. Right now, because of DOMA, these couples cannot take advantage of federal protections available to every other married couple in this country.

For example, because of DOMA, these couples cannot file joint Federal income taxes and claim certain deductions; receive spousal benefits under Social Security; take unpaid leave under the Family and Medical Leave Act when a loved one falls seriously ill; obtain the protections of the estate tax when one spouse passes and wants to leave his or her possessions to another.

This has a very real impact. Let me tell you, for example, the stories of a married couple in California.

Jeanne and Fall Cooper of Tiburon, CA, have been in a committed relationship for more than two decades. In 2008, they were married in California before their family and friends.

They have lived in the same house, shared expenses, and raised their son, Christopher, together. The Defense of Marriage Act, however, means that they cannot enjoy the simple conveniences of filing joint tax returns in a married couple or obtaining continuing health coverage under COBRA.

They have also told me the story of re-entering the United States at the end of their honeymoon in 2008. They approached a customs agent together but were told that they could not go through the line as a family. When they said that they were legally married, a customs agent reportedly responded with a curt phrase to the effect “Not to the United States you’re not.”

Put simply, under DOMA, the Federal government does not treat people equally or fairly.

Last year, a Federal District Court declared the law unconstitutional; the Obama Administration has concluded that the law violates fundamental constitutional guarantees of equal protection; and even former President Clinton, when he signed the law in 1996, now supports its repeal.

The Respect for Marriage Act would right DOMA’s wrong.

It would strike DOMA in its entirety. It would ensure that the Federal protections that married people enjoy remain stable and predictable no matter where a couple lives, works, or travels.

In my lifetime, I have seen the happiness, stability, and comfort that marriage brings. When two people love each other and decide to enter this solemn commitment, I believe that is a very positive thing.

I urge my colleagues to support the Respect for Marriage Act to repeal DOMA and call on our Federal Government to honor the legal, valid marriages of all Americans.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today I join the senior Senator from California and others to introduce the Respect for Marriage Act of 2011. This legislation would repeal the Defense of Marriage Act, DOMA, so that same-sex marriages of opposite-sex. Unfortunately, under current Federal law, these families are not treated fairly. That is why today’s action is needed.

As Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, I often find myself confronted by those who think the issue of civil rights is merely one for the history books. This is not true. There is still work to be done. The march toward equality will continue until all individuals and all families are both protected and respected. Today, Congress will begin to help bring fairness to all our Nation’s families.

The issue of marriage is one that has long been left for the states to determine, and they have. Today, five States, including my home State of Vermont, plus the District of Columbia, have granted same-sex couples the right to get married. With DOMA as a constitutional amendment, however, Vermont has led the Nation in this regard.

In 2000, Vermont took a crucial step when it became the first State in the Nation to allow civil unions for same-sex couples. In 2009, Vermont took another important step to help sustain the relationships that fulfill our lives by becoming the first state to adopt same-sex marriage through the legislative process. I am proud of the progressive example set by my constituents, and I do not want any of them harmed by the continuing effect of DOMA.

The time has now come for the Federal Government to recognize that these families deserve all of the legal protections afforded to opposite-sex married couples recognized under state law. The Government Accountability Office issued a report in 2004 that stated that $3.3 billion in Federal taxes have been denied to more than one thousand Federal beneficiaries. Right now, couples in states that authorize same-sex marriage laws cannot file joint Federal tax returns and are not entitled to the same Social Security and retirement benefits as opposite-sex married couples under Federal law. This goes against American values and it must end.

This is a question of basic civil rights, and how the constitutional principles of the Equal Protection and Due Process Clause protect all of us from discrimination. The President and the Attorney General recognized this when they announced that the Department of Justice will no longer defend two court cases that have challenged the constitutionality of the DOMA. I applaud President Obama and Attorney General Holder for making the right decision. However, I note that the Constitution is still enforcing DOMA elsewhere, because it is the law of the land. It is now time for leaders in Congress to change that law. The Respect for Marriage Act of 2011 would allow same-sex couples who are married under state law to be eligible for Federal benefits. Nothing in this bill would obligate any person, religious organization, state, or locality to celebrate or perform a marriage between two persons of the same sex. This is a legislative amendment. What would change, however, and what must change, is the Federal Government’s treatment of State-sanctioned marriage.

I believe this legislation is overdue, and it is a step in the right direction toward fostering equal treatment under law. I urge my fellow Senators to come together to support this important bill.

By Mr. UDALL of New Mexico (for himself, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. BLUMENTHAL):
S. 601. A bill to encourage and ensure the use of safe football helmets for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. President, football fans today are wondering if there will be a National Football League season this fall. Many fans could find that their Sundays are not the same if team owners and players do not reach an agreement. Business owners, who depend on those fans will also be affected. That is an issue that members of Congress have weighed in on already.

But today I want to discuss a more important issue for the future of football. Football is facing a concussion crisis—a brain injury crisis—that affects up to 4.5 million football players who are still too young to play in the NFL but may aspire to make it to the pros some day. This fall, those kids and young adults will put on their uniforms and pads and take to the gridiron. It is a time-honored tradition that will continue regardless of what happens to the upcoming NFL season. For many rural communities, high school football means Friday night lights excitement and civic pride in the school team. This year, about 8,000 New Mexican high school players will continue this American tradition.

But football is a contact sport, and thousands of student athletes are injured every year. Many of those injuries are concussions. In fact, one study... estimates that as many as one in five football players suffers head injuries in any given football season. For young people between 15 and 24 years old, playing sports is the second-leading cause of traumatic brain injury, behind only motor vehicle crashes. Every year, there are approximately 3.6 million sports-related concussions, many of which go undiagnosed and unreported.

Those alarming statistics highlight the need for more awareness about sports concussion. As we know, it is appropriate to discuss the importance of public health and children’s safety issue today, which is “Brain Injury Awareness Day.”

Retired NFL great Nick Lowery—the all time leading scorer for the Kansas City Chiefs and one of the greatest kickers to play the game—exemplified for me:

“When I played football in high school, in college, and in the National Football League, suffering a concussion was often shrugged off as merely having your ‘bell rung.’ My teammates had no shortage of toughness and wanted to build the mentality to ‘out tough’ our opponents. We now know that multiple concussions can lead to lasting brain damage and should be treated as a serious matter. Today’s NFL players want to set a good example for the next generation.”

There have been alarming news stories about what has happened to several retired NFL players who were famous for that toughness Lowery described. Long after their careers ended, some former NFL greats suffered from chronic traumatic encephalopathy, CTE, caused by repeated head trauma. Last month, retired NFL player Dave Duerson took his own life with a gunshot to the chest. According to news reports, he left instructions to his family that his brain be given to the NFL Brain Bank, presumably to be examined for evidence of CTE.

Yet, what is even more alarming is that researchers have already found CTE in the brains of a deceased 18-year-old high school football player with a history of concussions. Researchers do not yet know how early an athlete might develop CTE.

TBI can also be an “invisible” injury. Without the kind of brain injury awareness that families and health care providers are trying to raise today, an athlete who suffers a mild TBI may not link that injury to common symptoms later such as headaches, nausea, and cognitive changes.

One spoilsport, Alexis Ball, is a bright college student and star soccer player at the University of New Mexico. She told my office how she struggled for months with post-concussive symptoms. Concussions forced her to sit out from play and miss classes. Thankfully, she’s recovered today and now volunteers to raise concussion awareness among young athletes in Albuquerque.

But there are other cases that are much more unfortunate. The parents of one high school student athlete from Oregon named Max Conradt wrote me to explain how Max, their 17-year-old son, returned to play quarterback too soon after suffering a concussion. Max was wearing a 20-year-old helmet when he suffered another concussion that led to brain damage. Max’s parents wrote me to ask, “How is it possible that our son was suited in a helmet three years older than he was?”

Unfortunately, there are an estimated 100,000 helmets out there that are more than a decade old. These helmets will be worn by high school and younger football players this fall. Clearly some students are suffering a concussion while wearing helmets that are too old for them. And yet one helmet safety expert has stated that even the best new football helmets would need to be four times better—in terms of attenuating direct, linear forces—to protect against concussion.

These facts drive my serious concerns about the current voluntary safety standards for new and reconditioned football helmets, which have not been significantly updated in three decades.

On this Brain Injury Awareness Day 2011, I am pleased to introduce bipartisan legislation, the Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act, to require improvements to the voluntary football helmet standards, including clearly visible warning and date of manufacture labels, concussion resistance, if feasible, reconditioned helmets and youth helmets.

I am pleased to be joined in this effort by colleagues Senator FRANK LAUTENBERG and Senator BLUMENTHAL. We are joined by Representatives BILL PASCRELL and TODD PLATTS, who lead the Congressional TBI Task Force, and Representative ANTHONY WINTER—all of whom are original sponsors of the companion bill in the House of Representatives.

The Children’s Sports Equipment Safety Act takes a “light touch” approach to improving safety. This legislation would give industry groups time to test safety first and improve their voluntary helmet standards before any mandatory federal safety rules replace them. But if those improvements are not made, then the Consumer Product Safety Commission must issue product safety rules for football helmets to protect kids.

I want to emphasize that the Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act isn’t just about football helmets. We would also increase the potential penalties for making false injury prevention claims for other types of sports and athletic gear.

Tackling false advertising with more severe penalties may be an increasingly important tool if companies continue to sell new headbands, helmets, and mouth guards with potentially deceptive and misleading safety claims. Young athletes could put themselves at great risk if they think a new “anti-concussion” football helmet, soccer headband, or mouth guard makes them invulnerable to brain injury. The costs of such injuries in financial terms alone are staggering. The direct medical costs and indirect costs of traumatic brain injuries totaled an estimated $50 billion in the United States in the year 2000. That figure of course does not account for the pain and suffering of victims and their families.

I am pleased that the Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act enjoys support from a broad range of organizations and individuals. DeMaurice Smith, the Executive Director of the NFL Players Association, NFLPA, states in a letter that:

“We at the NFLPA committed to the safety of professional football players, but to all who play the sport. We recognize a significant portion of those players are youth and high school athletes who are currently at risk for traumatic brain injury due to the absence of helmet safety standards. We support the Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act and congratulate your continued efforts to address this critical issue.”

Other supporters include: Brain Injury Association of America; Brain Trauma Foundation; Cleveland Clinic; Consumer Federation of America; Consumers Union; National Research Center for Women & Families; and Safe Kids USA.

Nick Lowery, who played 18 years as a professional football player and is a member of the Kansas City Chiefs Hall of Fame, notes that:

“Improving sports safety for kids and discouraging sports equipment companies from making false injury prevention claims are two straightforward ways to reduce brain injuries. You can count on my enthusiastic support for this important children’s safety and consumer protection legislation.”

Sports and exercise should be encouraged for everyone—especially children. We must do more to ensure that kids participate in sports and exercise for all the health benefits they bring. While there will always be some risk of injury, we must make sure that athletes, coaches and parents know about the dangers and signs of concussion. We must make sure that they are using safe equipment. We must take a stand against false advertising of safety gear out of the game.

I ask all my colleagues for their support of the Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act as part of this vital effort.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 601

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS. (a) Short Title.—This Act may be cited as the “Children’s Sports Athletic Equipment Safety Act.”

(b) Table of Contents.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.
Sec. 2. Findings.
Sec. 3. Football helmet safety standards.
Sec. 4. Application of testing and certification requirements to youth football helmets.
The Congress finds the following:

(1) Participation in sports and athletic activities provides many benefits to children and should be encouraged.

(2) Participation in sports and athletic activities has some inherent risks, including the risk of injury that no protective gear or safety device can fully eliminate.

(3) Sports-related concussion is a form of traumatic brain injury that can lead to lasting negative health consequences.

(4) Direct medical costs and indirect costs of traumatic brain injuries totaled an estimated $44,000,000,000 in the United States in the year 2000.

(5) Sports are the second leading cause of traumatic brain injury for Americans who are 15 to 24 years old, behind only motor vehicle crashes.

(6) Every year, American athletes suffer up to an estimated 3,800,000 sports-related concussions.

(7) The potential for catastrophic injury resulting from multiple concussions makes sports-related concussion a significant concern for young athletes, coaches, and parents.

(8) Football has the highest incidence of concussions, which occur in many other sports such as baseball, basketball, ice hockey, lacrosse, soccer, and softball.

(9) An estimated 4,500,000 children play football in organized youth and school sports leagues, including approximately 1,500,000 high school players.

(10) According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, more than 900,000 athletes under the age of 18 were treated in emergency rooms, doctors' offices, and clinics for football-related injuries in the year 2007.

(11) In any given football season, 20 percent of all high school football players sustain brain injuries.

(12) One study that included a post-season survey of football players found that 47 percent experienced at least one concussion and almost 35 percent experienced multiple concussions.

(13) Medical experts at Boston University School of Medicine found that a deceased 18 year old athlete, who had experienced multiple high school football injuries, suffered from chronic traumatic encephalopathy, a degenerative brain disease caused by head trauma.

(14) Football player's ability to protect players from injury by attenuating acceleration forces can decline over time as the helmet experiences thousands of hits from use during successive football seasons after its original date of manufacture.

(15) According to industry estimates, 100,000 football helmets more than ten years old, and those that are almost twenty years old, were worn by players in the 2009 season.

(16) A high school football player who suffered brain damage from being hit in the head with a ball after suffering a previous concussion was wearing a twenty year old football helmet when he was injured.

(17) Children as young as 5 years old rely on football helmets to protect against head injury.

(18) The widespread adoption of a voluntary industry standard for football helmet safety, including one that mandates reduction in life-threatening subdural hematoma injuries.

(19) The voluntary industry safety standard for football helmets does not specifically address concussion.

(20) There is no voluntary industry safety standard specifically for youth football helmets worn by children, who have different physiological characteristics from adults in terms of head size and neck strength, especially those who are younger than 12-years old.

(21) Some football helmet manufacturers and resellers have used misleading concussion safety claims to sell children's football helmets.

(22) Some used helmet reconditioners have falsely certified that reconditioned helmets provided to schools and youth football teams meet voluntary industry standards.

(23) Used helmet reconditioners do not independently test reconditioned helmets before certifying that they meet voluntary industry standards.

(24) The industry organization that sets voluntary football helmet safety standards does not conduct independent testing nor market surveillance to ensure compliance with such voluntary safety standards by manufacturers and reconditioners that certify new and used helmets to such standards.

(25) Football helmet manufacturers and reconditioners place product warning labels underneath padding where the warning labels are obscured from view and not clearly legible.

(27) The Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) empowers the Federal Trade Commission to prevent unfair or deceptive acts or practices, and prohibits the dissemination of misleading claims for devices or services.

SEC. 3. FOOTBALL HELMET SAFETY STANDARDS.—

(a) Voluntary standard determination.—Within 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Consumer Product Safety Commission shall determine, with respect to a standard or standards submitted by a voluntary standards-setting organization or a voluntary standards-setting organization, whether—

(1) compliance with the standard or standards is likely to eliminate or adequately reduce the risk of injury in connection with the use of football helmets;

(2) it is likely that there will be substantial compliance with the standard or standards; and

(3) the standard or standards are maintained by a standards-setting organization that meets the requirements of the document 'ANSI Essential Requirements: Due Process Requirements for American National Standards' published in January 2010 by the American National Standards Institute (or any successor document).

(b) Consumer product safety standard.—Unless the Consumer Product Safety Commission determines that a voluntary standard or standards under subsection (a) that address the risks of concussions resulting from impacts to the head are necessary, the Commission shall initiate a rulemaking proceeding for the development of a consumer product safety rule with respect to the following:

(1) YOUTH FOOTBALL HELMETS.—A standard for youth football helmets which is informed by children's different physiological characteristics and different football helmet impacts in terms of head size and neck strength.

(2) RECONDITIONED FOOTBALL HELMETS.—A standard for all reconditioned football helmets.

(3) NEW FOOTBALL HELMET CONCussion RESistance.—A standard for all new football helmets that addresses concussion risk, if the Commission determines that such a standard is feasible given current understanding of concussion risk and how helmets can prevent concussion.

(4) FOOTBALL HELMET WARNING LABELS.—A standard for warning labels on all football helmets that, at a minimum, requires clearly legible and fully visible warning consumers of the limits of protection afforded by the helmet. This standard may include requirements for pictograms, instructions, guidelines, or other enforcements to consumers about injury risk and the proper use of football helmets.

(5) DATE OF MANUFACTURE LABEL FOR NEW FOOTBALL HELMETS.—A standard for a clearly legible and fully visible label on all new football helmets stating the football helmet's original date of manufacture and warning consumers that a football helmet's ability to protect the wearer can decline over time.

(6) DATE OF RECONDITIONING LABEL FOR RECONDITIONED HELMETS.—A standard for a clearly legible and fully visible label on all reconditioned football helmets stating the helmet's last date of reconditioning, its original date of manufacture, and warning consumers that a football helmet's ability to protect the wearer can decline over time, despite being properly and regularly reconditioned.

(7) SAFETY STANDARDS.—

(a) In general.—The Commission shall—

(A) in consultation with representatives of consumer product safety groups, medical experts, school sports directors, scientists, and sports equipment standard-setting organizations, and assess the effectiveness of any voluntary football helmet product safety standards for youth football helmets, reconditioned football helmets, and new football helmet concussion resistance prescribed by a voluntary standards-setting organization; and

(B) in accordance with section 553 of title 5, United States Code, promulgate consumer product safety standards that—

(i) are substantially the same as such voluntary standards; or

(ii) are more stringent than such voluntary standards, if the Commission determines that such stringent standards would further reduce the risk of injury associated with football helmets.

(b) Timetable for rulemaking.—If the Commission does not make an affirmative determination under subsection (a) within the 9-month period, the Commission shall cease the rulemaking proceeding under subsection (b) within 30 days after the end of that 9-month period. The Commission shall periodically review and revise the standards set forth in the consumer product safety rule prescribed pursuant to that proceeding to ensure that such standards provide the highest level of safety for football helmets that is feasible.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION OF THIRD PARTY TESTING AND CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS TO YOUTH FOOTBALL HELMETS.—

(a) In general.—The third party testing and certification requirements of section 14(a)(2) of the Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2066(a)(2)) shall apply to any youth football helmet (including a reconditioned youth football helmet) to which any consumer product safety rule under section 205(b) of this Act applies as if the helmet were a children's product and subject to that rule without regard to the age of the individual for whom it is primarily designed or intended.

(b) Special application of definition of children's product for purposes of testing and certification of football helmets.—For the exclusive purpose of applying the definition of the term "children’s product" in section 3(a)(2) of the Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2052(aa)(2)) to the requirements of subsection (a) of this section. "18 years" shall be substituted for "12 years" each place it appears.

(c) For the purposes of this section, third party testing and certification shall be conducted by a testing laboratory that has an accreditation—

(1) that meets International Organization for Standardization/International Electrotechnical Commission standard 17025:2005 ent-titled General Requirements for the Competence of Testing and Calibration Laboratories (or any successor standard that is from an accreditation body that is signatory to the International Laboratory Accreditation Cooperation for testing accreditation);

(2) that meets International Organization for Standardization/International Electrotechnical Commission Guide 65:1996 entitled General Requirements for Bodies Operating Product Certification Systems (or any successor standard that is from an accreditation body that is signatory to the International Accreditation Forum for product certification accreditation) and

(3) that includes all appropriate football helmet standards and test methods within the scope of the accreditation.

SEC. 5. false advertising claims with respect to athletic sporting acttivity goods.

(a) In General.—It is unlawful for any per-sion to sell, or offer for sale, in interstate commerce, or commerce into the United States for the purpose of selling or offering for sale, any item of equipment, intended, designed, or offered for use by an individual engaged in any athletic sporting activity, whether professional or amateur, for which the seller or importer acting on behalf of the seller or importer, makes any false or misleading claim with respect to the safety benefits of such item.

(b) Enforcement by Federal Trade Commission.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Violation of subsection (a), or any regulation prescribed under this section, shall be treated as a violation of a rule under section 18 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a) regarding unfair or deceptive acts or practices. The Federal Trade Commission may enforce that rule in the same manner, by the same means, and with the same jurisdiction, powers, and duties as though all applicable terms and provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) were incorporated into and made part of this Act.

(2) REGULATIONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commission may promulgate such regulations as it finds neccessary or appropriate under this Act under section 16 of the United States Code.

(3) PENALTIES.—Any person who violates subsection (a) or any regulation prescribed under that section, shall be subject to the penalties to the privileges and immunities provided in the Federal Trade Commission Act as though all applicable terms and provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act were incorporated in and made part of this Act.

(4) AUTHORITY PRESERVED.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit the authority of the Commission under any other provision of law.

(c) Enforcement by State Attorneys General.

(1) RIGHT OF ACTION.—Except as provided in paragraph (5), the attorney general of a State, or other authorized State officer, alleging a violation of subsection (a) or any regulation under that section that affected or may affect such State or its residents may bring an action on behalf of the residents of the State in any United States district court for the district in which the defendant is found, resides, or transacts business, or wherever venue is proper under section 1391 of United States Code, to obtain appropriate injunctive relief.

(2) INITIATION OF CIVIL ACTION.—A State shall provide prior written notice to the Federal Trade Commission of any civil action under paragraph (1) together with a copy of its complaint, except that if it is not feasible for the State to provide such prior notice, the State shall not immediately upon instituting such action.

(3) INTERVENTION BY THE COMMISSION.—The Commission may intervene in such civil action and upon serving—

(A) be heard on all matters arising in such civil action; and

(B) file petitions for appeal of a decision in such civil action.

(4) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed—

(A) to prevent the attorney general of a State, or other authorized State officer, from exercising the powers conferred on the attorney general, or other authorized State officer, by the laws of such State; or

(B) to prohibit the attorney general of a State, or other authorized State officer, from proceeding in State or Federal court on the basis of an alleged violation of any civil or criminal statute of the State.

(5) LIMITATION.—No separate suit shall be brought under this subsection if, at the time the suit is brought, the same alleged violation is the subject of a pending action by the Federal Trade Commission or the United States under this section.

By Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. ROBERTS, and Mr. BARRASSO):

S. 602. A bill to require regulatory reform; to the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, yesterday I offered three amendments to the SBIR/STTR Reauthorization Bill to make commonsense reforms to our regulatory system. Today, Senators ROBerts and BARRASSO join me in offering the CURB Act.—which stands for “Clearing Up Regulatory Burdens.” This legislation combines the provisions of those three amendments to close this loophole by imposing “Good Guidance Practices” on Federal agencies, which requires them to provide public notice and comment for significant guidance documents. Our bill would essentially codify this provision of President Bush’s Executive Order.

Third, the CURB Act helps out the “little guy” trying to navigate our incredibly complex and burdensome regulatorv environment. So many small businesses don’t have a lot of capital on hand. When a small business inadvertently runs afoul of a Federal regulation for the first time, that first penalty could sink the business and all the jobs it supports. Our bill would provide access to SBA assistance to small businesses in a situation where they face a first-time, non-harmful paperwork violation. It simply doesn’t make sense to me to punish small businesses the first time they accidently fail to comply with paperwork requirements, so long as no harm comes from that failure.

Each of these provisions has been endorsed by the National Federation of Independent Business, NFIB, and the Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council. I urge my colleagues to support the CURB Act, which contains these important reforms to our regular system.

(1) in paragraph (3), by striking “critical technologies” and all that follows and inserting the following: “nationally important research topics or critical technologies, including nationally important research topics or critical technologies identified by the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee’’; and
(2) by adding after paragraph (12), as added by section 501 of the Act:

(13) authorize encouragement under the STTR program (to the extent that the projects relate to the mission of the Federal agency)—

(A) from small business concerns in geographic areas underrepresented in the STTR program or located in rural areas (as defined in section 139(b)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986);

(B) small business concerns owned and controlled by women;

(C) small business concerns owned and controlled by veterans;

(D) small business concerns owned and controlled by Native Americans; and

(E) small business concerns located in a geographic area with an unemployment rate that exceeds the national unemployment rate, based on the most recently available monthly publication of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor.

(c) NATIONALLY IMPORTANT RESEARCH TOPICS AND CRITICAL TECHNOLOGIES.—

(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than October 1, 2012, and every 2 years thereafter, the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee shall submit to the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship of the Senate and the Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives a report that identifies nationally important research topics and critical technologies. For purposes of this subsection, a nationally important research topic or critical technology may include a research topic or technology that relates to nanotechnology, rare diseases, security, energy, transportation, improving the efficiency of water delivery systems, or the efficiency of water supply of the United States, or the efficiency of water delivery systems.

(B) CONTENTS.—Each report required under subparagraph (A) shall include, for each research topic or critical technology identified in the report—

(i) the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee selected the research topic or technology;

(ii) the state of the development of the research topic or technology in the United States and in other countries; and

(iii) an estimate of the current and anticipated level of research and development efforts in the United States concerning the research topic or technology.

(C) MAXIMUM NUMBER OF NATIONALLY IMPORTANT RESEARCH TOPICS AND CRITICAL TECHNOLOGIES.—A report submitted under subparagraph (A) may not identify more than 30 research topics and technologies as nationally important research topics or critical technologies.

(2) DETERMINATION OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE.—

(A) DETERMINATION.—The Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee may identify a research topic or technology as a nationally important research topic or critical technology if the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee determines it is essential for the United States to develop the research topic or technology to further the long-term national security or economic prosperity of the United States.

(B) CONSIDERATIONS.—In making a determination under subparagraph (A), the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee shall consider—

(i) reports by the National Academies of Science and the National Academies of Engineering and Medicine;

(ii) other nationally recognized strategic plans, strategies, and principles;

(iii) the reasons the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee selected the research topic or technology;

(iv) the reasons the SBIR and STTR programs are needed for the United States for the laws imposed upon them.

(3) CHANGE IN NUMBER.—The House of Representatives and the Senate shall submit to the President and the Comptroller General a report containing the following:

(i) the reasons the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee identified nationally important research topics or critical technologies identified by the Interagency SBIR/STTR Policy Committee’’; and

(ii) the proposed effective date of the rule.

Before a rule may take effect, the Federal agency promulgating such rule shall submit to each House of the Congress and to the Comptroller General a report containing—

(i) a copy of the rule;

(ii) a concise general statement relating to the rule;

(iii) a classification of the rule as a major or nonmajor rule, including an explanation of the classification specifically addressing the applicable criteria for a major rule contained within sections 804(2)(A), 804(2)(B), and 804(2)(C).

(iv) a list of any other related regulatory actions intended to implement the same statutory provision or regulatory objective as well as the individual and aggregate economic effects of those actions; and

(v) the proposed effective date of the rule.

On the date of the submission of the report under paragraph (A), the Federal agency promulgating the rule shall submit to the Comptroller General and make available to each House of Congress—

(i) a complete copy of the cost-benefit analysis of the rule, if any; and

(ii) a copy of the agency’s analysis under title 5 of the United States Code, sections 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, and 609.
“(iii) the agency’s actions under sections 202, 203, 204, and 205 of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act of 1995 (2 U.S.C. 1532, 1533, 1534, and 1535); and

(iv) any other relevant information or requirements under any other Act and any relevant Executive orders.

(C) Upon receipt of a report submitted under paragraph (A), each House shall provide copies of the report to the chairman and ranking member of each standing committee with jurisdiction under the rules of the House of Representatives or the Senate to report a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(2) The Comptroller General shall provide a report on each major rule to the committees of jurisdiction by the end of 15 calendar days after the submission or publication date as provided in section 802(b)(2). The report of the Comptroller General shall include an assessment of the agency’s compliance with procedural steps required by paragraph (1)(B).

(3) A major rule relating to a report submitted under paragraph (1) shall take effect upon publication of the joint resolution of approval described in section 802 as provided for in the rule following enactment of a joint resolution of approval described in section 802, unless described in subparagraph (A).

(4) A nonmajor rule shall take effect as provided by section 803 after submission to Congress of the report described in paragraph (1).

(5) If a joint resolution of approval relating to a major rule is not enacted within the period provided in subsection (b)(2), then a joint resolution of approval shall be deemed not to be considered under this chapter in the same Congress by either the House of Representatives or the Senate.

(b)(1) A major rule shall not take effect unless the Congress enacts a joint resolution of approval described under section 802.

(2) If a joint resolution described in subsection (a) is not enacted into law by the end of 70 session days or legislative days, as applicable, beginning on the date on which the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A) is received by Congress (excluding days either House of Congress is adjourned for more than 3 days during a session of Congress), then the rule described in that resolution shall be deemed not to be approved and such rule shall not take effect.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section (except subject to paragraph (3)), a major rule may take effect for in the rule following enactment of a joint resolution of approval described in subsection (a) if—

(A) in the case of the Senate, 60 session days, or

(B) in the case of the House of Representatives, 60 legislative days, before the date the Congress is scheduled to adjourn a session of Congress through the adjournment date for the respective Congress, the Congress considers and approves the joint resolution described in that resolution and the joint resolution was not referred, or after such committee or committees have been discharged from further consideration of the resolution, or

(C) in the Senate, 60 session days, or

(D) in the case of the House of Representatives, 60 legislative days, before the date Congress receives the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A) if—

(i) the congressional record is published in the Federal Register on—

(1) in the case of the Senate, the 15th session day of the succeeding Congress after Congress convenes;

(2) in the case of the House of Representatives, the 15th legislative day after the succeeding session of Congress first convenes; and

(ii) a joint resolution of approval were not reported by the committee or committees to which a joint resolution described in subsection (a) was referred before the date the Congress receives the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A)

(e)(1) In the House of Representatives, if the majority leader of the House or the minority leader of the House so directs, or if the House so determines by a majority vote, the chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the House of Representatives, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(2) For purposes of this section, the term ‘joint resolution’ means only a joint resolution introduced on or after the date on which the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A) is received by Congress (excluding days either House of Congress is adjourned for more than 3 days during a session of Congress), the matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: ‘That Congress approves the rule described in that resolution (The blank spaces being appropriately filled in).

(1) In the House, the majority leader of the House of Representatives (or his designee) shall introduce such joint resolution described in subsection (a) (by request), within 3 legislative days after Congress receives the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A).

(2) In the Senate, the majority leader of the Senate (or his designee) and the minority leader of the Senate (or his designee) shall introduce such joint resolution described in subsection (a) (by request), within 3 legislative days after Congress receives the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A).

(b)(1) A joint resolution described in subsection (a) shall be referred to the committees in each House of Congress with jurisdiction under the rules of the House of Representatives or the Senate to report a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(2) For purposes of this section, the term ‘submission date’ means the date on which the Congress receives the report submitted under section 801(a)(1)(A) after having been referred but not reported it at the end of 15 session days after its introduction, such committee or committees shall be automatically discharged from further consideration of the resolution and it shall be placed on the appropriate calendar. A vote on final passage or a motion to rescind or revoke a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution described in subsection (a) shall be decided without debate.

(c) In the Senate, if the committee or committees to which a joint resolution described in subsection (a) has been referred have not reported it at the end of 15 legislative days after its introduction, such committee or committees shall be automatically discharged from further consideration of the resolution and it shall be placed on the appropriate calendar. A vote on final passage or a motion to rescind or revoke a motion to proceed to the consideration of the resolution described in subsection (a) shall be decided without debate.

(d)(1) In the Senate, when the committee or committees to which a joint resolution is referred have reported, or when a committee or committees are discharged (under subsection (c)) from further consideration of a joint resolution described in subsection (a), it is at any time thereafter in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for a motion to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution (and against consideration of the joint resolution) to be made by the President by Executive order, or for a joint resolution to be introduced in the Senate (or his designee) and the minority leader of the Senate (or his designee) shall introduce such joint resolution described in subsection (a) (by request), within 3 legislative days after Congress receives the report referred to in section 801(a)(1)(A).

(e)(1) In the Senate, during the period beginning on the date on which the Congress convenes its next session, sections 802 and 803 shall apply to such rule in the succeeding session of Congress.

(2) In the Senate, if the Congress convenes its next session before the date the Congress is scheduled to adjourn a session of Congress through the adjournment date for the respective Congress, the Congress considers and approves the joint resolution described in that resolution and the joint resolution was not referred, or after such committee or committees have been discharged from further consideration of the resolution, or

(3) In the Senate, immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a joint resolution described in subsection (a), the Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the House of Representatives, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(4) Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate to the procedure relating to a joint resolution described in subsection (a) shall be decided without debate.

(5) In the House of Representatives, if the majority leader or the minority leader of the House so directs, or if the House so determines by a majority vote, the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the House of Representatives to a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(6) Debate in the House of Representatives on a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall be limited to no more than two hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the joint resolution. A motion to further limit debate is not in order and is not debatable. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(7) The Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the House of Representatives, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(8) Debate in the House of Representatives on a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(9) Motion to proceed to the consideration of a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(10) Motion to proceed to the consideration of a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall be in order and shall be decided without debate. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(11) The Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the Senate, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(12) Debate in the Senate on a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall be limited to no more than two hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the joint resolution. A motion to further limit debate is not in order and is not debatable. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(13) The Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the Senate, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(14) Debate in the Senate on a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall not be in order, nor shall it be in order to move to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to.

(15) Motion to proceed to the consideration of a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall be in order and shall be decided without debate. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(16) The Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the House of Representatives, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.

(17) Debate in the House of Representatives on a joint resolution of approval for a major rule referred to in subsection (a), shall be limited to no more than two hours, which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the joint resolution. A motion to further limit debate is not in order and is not debatable. An amendment to, or a motion to postpone, or a motion to proceed to the consideration of other business, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to, shall be in order.

(18) The Chair may order such joint resolution to be considered under the rules of the Senate, or the Senate shall refer such joint resolution to a bill to amend the provision of law under which the rule is issued.
subsection (a), that House receives from the other House a joint resolution described in subsection (a), then the following procedures shall apply with respect to a joint resolution described in subsection (a) of the House receiving the joint resolution—

‘‘(1) the procedure in that House shall be the same as if no joint resolution had been received from the other House; but

‘‘(2) the vote on final passage shall be on the joint resolution of the other House.

‘‘(g) The enactment of a resolution of approval, disapproval, or reconsideration of a joint resolution (or an identical joint resolution) in subsection (a) has not reported such joint resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the Senate until disposed of.

‘‘(2) In the Senate, debate on the joint resolution, consideration of the joint resolution, shall not be extended on consideration of the joint resolution upon a motion to reconsider the vote by which the motion is agreed to or disagreed to shall not be in order. If a motion to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution is made, the joint resolution shall remain the unfinished business of the Senate until disposed of.

‘‘(3) In the Senate, immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a joint resolution described in subsection (a), and a single quorum call at the conclusion of the debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the Senate, the vote on final passage of the joint resolution shall occur.

‘‘(4) Appeals from the decisions of the Chair relating to a joint resolution described in subsection (a) shall be decided without debate.

‘‘(e) In the Senate, immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a joint resolution described in subsection (a), and a single quorum call at the conclusion of the debate if requested in accordance with the rules of the Senate, the vote on final passage of the joint resolution shall occur.

‘‘(f) If, before the passage by one House of a joint resolution of that House described in subsection (a), that House receives from the other House a joint resolution described in subsection (a), then the following procedures shall apply:

‘‘(1) the joint resolution of the other House shall not be referred to a committee.

‘‘(2) With respect to a joint resolution described in subsection (a) of the House receiving the joint resolution—

‘‘(A) the procedure in that House shall be the same as if no joint resolution had been received from the other House; but

‘‘(B) the vote on final passage shall be on the joint resolution of the other House.

§ § 803. Congressional disapproval procedure for nonmajor rules

‘‘(a) For purposes of this section, the term ‘joint resolution’ means only a joint resolution introduced in the period beginning on the date on which the report referred to in section 801(a)(1) of the Act is received by Congress and ending 60 days thereafter (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and Federal holidays) and it supersedes other rules only to the extent that it is inconsistent with such rules; and

‘‘(2) with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as relating to the procedure of that House) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

§ § 804. Definitions

‘‘(c) The term ‘Federal agency’ means any agency as that term is defined in section 551.

‘‘(d) The term ‘major rule’ means any rule, including an interim final rule, that the Administrator of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs of the Office of Management and Budget finds has resulted in, or is likely to result in—

‘‘(A) an annual effect on the economy of $100,000,000,000 or more;

‘‘(B) a major increase in costs or prices for consumers, individual industries, Federal, State, or local government agencies, or geographic regions; or

‘‘(C) significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, innovation, or the ability of United States-based enterprises to compete with foreign-based enterprises in domestic and export markets;

Effective 6 months after the date of enactment of this title, section 107A(c)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757a(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

“(a) LIMITATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), an insured credit union may not make any member business loan that would result in the total amount of such loans outstanding at that credit union at any one time to be equal to more than the lesser of—

(A) 1.75 times the actual net worth of the credit union; or

(B) 12.25 percent of the total assets of the credit union.

“(2) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—The Board may approve an application by an insured credit union upon a finding that the credit union meets the criteria under this paragraph to make a 1 or more member business loans that would result in a total amount of such loans outstanding at that credit union at any one time of not more than 27.5 percent of the total assets of the credit union, if the credit union—

(A) has member business loans outstanding at the end of the 4 consecutive quarters immediately preceding the date of the application, in a total amount of not less than 80 percent of the applicable limitation under paragraph (1); and

(B) is well capitalized, as defined in section 216(c)(1)(A).

“(2) LIMITATION.—If, after the date described in paragraph (1), a small system lacks funds necessary to comply with the regulations promulgated under the Safe Drinking Water Act (42 U.S.C. 300f et seq.), until such date as the Administrator—

(A) implements policies to provide small systems subject to those regulations, using the authority available to the Administrator under that Act, financial and technical assistance for use in complying with those regulations; and

(B) ensures that sufficient funds have been made available under this section to assist each small system in meeting requirements under those regulations.

(2) CONTINUED SUSPENSION.—If, after the date described in paragraph (1), a small system certifies to the Administrator that the small system lacks funds necessary to comply with the regulations referred to in paragraph (1) for a fiscal year, the Administrator shall suspend enforcement of the regulations (including any action to assess or collect a fine under the regulations) with respect to the small system for the fiscal year.

At the end, add the following:

TITLE VI—SMALL BUSINESS LENDING ENHANCEMENT

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE; DEFINITIONS.

This title may be cited as the “Small Business Lending Enhancement Act of 2011”.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—In this title—

(1) the term “Board” means the National Credit Union Administration Board; and

(2) the term “insured credit union” has the same meaning as in title 101 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757a(c)(1));

(3) the term “member business loan” has the same meaning as in section 107A(c)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757a(c)(2)); and

(4) the term “net worth” has the same meaning as in section 107A(c)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757a(c)(2)).

SEC. 602. LIMITS ON MEMBER BUSINESS LOANS.

Effective 6 months after the date of enactment of this title, section 107A(c)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1757a(c)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

“(a) LIMITATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), an insured credit union may not make any member business loan that would result in the total amount of such loans outstanding at that credit union at any one time to be equal to more than the lesser of—

(A) 1.75 times the actual net worth of the credit union; or

(B) 12.25 percent of the total assets of the credit union.

“(2) ADDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—The Board may approve an application by an insured credit union upon a finding that the credit union meets the criteria under this paragraph to make 1 or more member business loans that would result in a total amount of such loans outstanding at that credit union at any one time of not more than 27.5 percent of the total assets of the credit union, if the credit union—

(A) has member business loans outstanding at the end of the 4 consecutive quarters immediately preceding the date of the application, in a total amount of not less than 80 percent of the applicable limitation under paragraph (1); and

(B) is well capitalized, as defined in section 216(c)(1)(A).

“(C) can demonstrate at least 5 years of experience of sound underwriting and servicing of member business loans;

(D) has the requisite policies and experience in managing member business loans; and

(E) has satisfied other standards that the Board determines are necessary to maintain the safety and soundness of the insured credit union.

“(3) EFFECT OF NOT BEING WELL CAPITALIZED.—An insured credit union that has made member business loans under an authorization under paragraph (2) and that is, as of its most recent quarterly call report, well capitalized, may not make any member business loans, until such time as the credit union becomes well capitalized (as defined in section 216(c)(1)(A)), as reflected in a subsequent quarterly call report, and obtains the approval of the Board.

SEC. 603. IMPLEMENTATION.

(a) TIERED APPROVAL PROCESS.—The National Credit Union Administration Board shall develop a tiered approval process, under which an insured credit union gradually increases the amount of member business lending in a manner that is consistent with its mission and approved operations, subject to the limits established under section 107A(a)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (as amended by this title). The rate of increase under this subsection shall be not less than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, to establish the tiered approval process required under subsection (a). The tiered approval processes shall establish standards designed to ensure that the new business lending capacity authorized under the amendment made by section 2 is being used only by insured credit unions that are well-managed and well capitalized, as required by the amendments made under section 2, and as defined by the rules issued by the Board under this subsection.

(c) Considerations.—In issuing rules required under this section, the Board shall consider—

(1) the experience level of the institutions, including a demonstrated history of sound member business lending;

(2) the criteria under section 107A(a)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title; and

(3) such other factors as the Board determines necessary or appropriate.

SEC. 604. REPORTS TO CONGRESS ON MEMBER BUSINESS LENDING.

(a) Report of the Board.—

(I) In general.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Board shall submit a report to Congress on member business lending by insured credit unions.

(2) Report.—The report required under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) the types and asset size of insured credit unions making member business loans and the member business loan limitations applicable to the insured credit unions;

(B) the overall amount and average size of member business loans by each insured credit union;

(C) the ratio of member business loans by insured credit unions to total assets and net worth;

(D) the performance of the member business loans, including delinquencies and net charge-offs;

(E) the effect of this title and the amendments made by this title on the number of insured credit unions engaged in member business lending, any change in the amount of member business lending, and the extent to which any increase is attributed to the change in the limitation in section 107A(a) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title;

(F) the number, types, and asset size of insured credit unions that were denied or approved by the Board for increased member business loans under section 107A(a)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title, including denials and approvals under the tiered approval process;

(G) the types and sizes of businesses that receive member business loans, the duration of the credit union membership of the businesses at the time of the loan, the types of collateral used to secure member business loans, and the reassessment of member business loans; and

(H) the effect of any increases in member business loans on the risk to the Federal Credit Union Fund and the assessments on insured credit unions.

(b) GAO Study and Report.—

(1) Study.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study on the status of member business lending by insured credit unions, including—

(A) trends in such lending;

(B) types and amounts of member business loans;

(C) the effectiveness of this section in enhancing small business lending; and

(D) recommendations for legislative action, if any, with respect to such lending; and

(E) any other information that the Comptroller General considers relevant with respect to such lending.

(2) Report.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to Congress on the study required by paragraph (1).

SA 243. Ms. KLOBUCHAR (for herself and Mr. Brown of Massachusetts) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill S. 493, to reauthorize and improve the SBIR and STTR programs, and for other purposes; which amendment ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. 209. INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT LOAN GUARANTEE PROGRAM.

(a) Definition. In this section—

(1) CLEAN TECHNOLOGY.—The term ‘clean technology’ means—

(A) technology that improves energy efficiency, including—

(i) technologies to reduce energy consumption;

(ii) energy-efficient building technologies and applications; and

(iii) efficient electricity transmission, distribution, and electrical grid-based storage;

(B) technology relating to energy storage; and

(C) fuel cells and batteries; and

(D) component technologies for electric vehicles.

(2) RENEWABLE ENERGY.—The term ‘renewable energy’ means energy generated from any of the following:

(A) Solar, wind, geothermal, or ocean based sources.

(B) Biomass, biofuels, or feedstock.

(C) Landfill gas.

(D) Municipal solid waste.

(E) Incremental hydropower.

(F) Hydropower that has been certified by the Low Impact Hydropower Institute.

(3) SMALL- OR MEDIUM-SIZE HIGH GROWTH TECHNOLOGY COMPANY.—The term ‘small- or medium-sized high growth technology company’ means a small business concern that primarily engages in commerce in 1 or more of the following industries:

(A) Life sciences.

(B) Medical devices.

(C) Computer hardware.

(D) Computer software.

(E) Clean technologies.

(F) Renewable energy generation and manufacturing.

(G) Such other industries as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(4) SECRETARY.—Except as otherwise provided, the term ‘Secretary’ means the Secretary of Commerce.

(b) Establishment of Innovative Technology Development Loan Guarantee Program.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a loan guarantee program to help small businesses cover the cost of innovative technology companies who the Secretary determines—

(A) are operating in a phase of the business life cycle in which technological, market, or regulatory uncertainty constrains the amount of capital available from lenders and substantially reduces the ability of investors to such companies during such phase; and

(B) are unable to progress to the next phase of the business life cycle because of such constraints on the availability of capital.

(2) DESIGNATION.—The loan guarantee program established under paragraph (1) shall be known as the ‘Innovative Technology Development Loan Guarantee Program’.

(c) General Authority.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may, under the program established pursuant to subsection (b)(1), guarantee the full or partial repayment of a loan that meets the requirements of this section.

(2) GUARANTEE PERCENTAGE.—For a loan guaranteed under the program established pursuant to subsection (b)(1), the Secretary may guarantee such percentage of such loan as the Secretary considers appropriate, except that such percentage shall not be less than 50 percent and not more than 90 percent.

(d) Loan Requirements.—A loan referred to in subsection (c) meets the requirements of this section if each of the following requirements is met:

(1) PURPOSE.—The loan is for—

(A) fixed assets relating to reequipping, expanding, or establishing STTR programs, and for other purposes; which the Secretary determines necessary or appropriate.

(B) the criteria under section 107A(a)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title, including a demonstrated history of sound member business lending;

(C) the overall amount and average size of member business loans by insured credit unions;

(D) the performance of the member business loans, including delinquencies and net charge-offs;

(E) the effect of this title and the amendments made by this title on the number of insured credit unions engaged in member business lending, any change in the amount of member business lending, and the extent to which any increase is attributed to the change in the limitation in section 107A(a) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title;

(F) the number, types, and asset size of insured credit unions that were denied or approved by the Board for increased member business loans under section 107A(a)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act, as amended by this title, including denials and approvals under the tiered approval process;

(G) the types and sizes of businesses that receive member business loans, the duration of the credit union membership of the businesses at the time of the loan, the types of collateral used to secure member business loans, and the reassessment of member business loans; and

(H) the effect of any increases in member business loans on the risk to the Federal Credit Union Fund and the assessments on insured credit unions.

(b) GAO STUDY AND REPORT.—
INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT FUND.

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States a revolving fund known as the "Innovative Technology Development Fund" (in this subsection referred to as the "Fund").

(2) ELEMENTS.—There shall be deposited in the Fund:

(A) Amounts paid into the Fund under any provision of law or regulation established by the Secretary imposing fees under subsection (h).

(B) All other amounts received by the Secretary incident to operations relating to the loan guarantee program established under subsection (b)(1).

(C) USE OF FUNDS.—The Fund shall be available to the Secretary, without fiscal year limitations, to carry out the provisions of this section.

(3) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out this section $200,000,000 for fiscal year 2011.

SEC. 210. INTERNET WEBSITE PROMOTING COMMERCIALIZATION OF TECHNOLOGY IDEAS INVENTED BY FEDERALLY FUNDED RESEARCHERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Commerce shall, acting through the Director of the National Institute for Standards and Technology, establish and maintain an Internet website that connects Federally funded researchers who have ideas for technologies that they believe could be commercialized with persons who express interest in working with Federally-funded researchers on the commercialization of their technologies.

(b) PARTICIPATION OPTIONAL.—Participation of a Federally-funded researcher in the Internet website required by subsection (a) shall be optional.

(c) Removal.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 2 years after the establishment of the Internet website required by subsection (a), the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on such Internet website.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The report required by paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) The status of the Internet website required by subsection (a).

(B) An assessment of such Internet website.

(C) Such recommendations as the Secretary may have for improvements to the Internet website and any additional funding or legislative action as the Secretary considers necessary to implement such improvements.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce to carry out this section $1,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2011 through 2015. Amounts appropriated under this subsection shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 211. LIMITATION ON GOVERNMENT PRINTING COSTS.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall coordinate with the heads of Federal departments and independent agencies to:

(1) determine which Government publications could be available on Government Internet websites and no longer printed and to develop programs to reduce overall Government printing costs over the 10-year period beginning with fiscal year 2011, except that the Director shall ensure that essential publications in support of Federal security recipients, medicare beneficiaries, and other populations in areas with limited Internet access or use continue to remain available;

(2) establish government-wide Federal guidelines on employee printing; and

(3) issue the Office of Management and Budget's public Internet website the results of a cost-benefit analysis on implementing a digital signature system and on establishing an employee personal identification system such as the use of individual employee cards or codes, to monitor the amount of printing done by Federal employees, except that the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall ensure that Federal employee printing costs unrelated to national defense, homeland security, border security, national disaster or to the emergencies do not exceed $800,000,000 annually.

NOTICE OF HEARING

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public that a hearing has been scheduled before the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. The hearing will be held on Thursday, April 14, 2011, at 10 a.m., in room SD–366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

The purpose of this hearing is to review S. 343 a bill to amend Title I of PL 99–658 regarding the Compact of Free Association between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Palau, to approve the results of the 15-year review of the Compact, including the Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Palau following the Compact of Free Association Section 432 Review, to appropriate funds for the purposes of the amended PL 99–658 for fiscal years ending on or before September 30, 2024, and to carry out the agreements resulting from that review.

Because of the limited time available for the hearing, witnesses may testify by invitation only. However, those wishing to submit written testimony for the hearing may do so by sending it to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, United States Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510–6150, or by e-mail to Abigail Campbell @energy.senate.gov.

For further information, please contact Al Stayman or Abigail Campbell.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 94) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

Whereas, the current level Federal spending is unsustainable and action to reverse this course should not be delayed;

Whereas, in 2010, Federal spending was nearly 24 percent of the value of all the goods and services produced in the United States;

Whereas, the Federal deficit was over $1 trillion in fiscal year 2010;

Whereas, Federal spending is at its highest percentage since World War II;

Whereas, the Congressional Budget Office estimates if the United States maintains its current track of Federal spending, the Federal debt would reach 90 percent of the value of all the goods and services produced in the United States by 2020;

Whereas, the national debt exceeds $13.9 trillion dollars;

Whereas, the United States borrows $44,000 for every person in the country;

Whereas, the unemployment rate was 9.8 percent in December;

Whereas, the American people have responded to the economic downturn by making hard choices and trimming their family budgets;

Whereas, spending in the legislative branch rose nearly 50 percent over the last 10 years; and

Whereas, in order to address the Nation’s fiscal crisis, the Senate should lead by example and reduce its own legislative budget: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that it should lead by example and reduce the budget of the Senate by at least 5 percent.

PROVIDING FOR MEMBERS OF JOINT COMMITTEES

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Res. 103, submitted earlier today.

CONGRATULATING RUTH BEAVERS

HON. RODNEY ALEXANDER OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise today to congratulate Ruth Beavers for being selected as a recipient of the Daily Point of Light Award. This award is a testament that Ruth is a true leader for her volunteer service to St. Francis Medical Center in Monroe, LA.

Ruth joined the St. Francis Medical Center volunteer program in 2000. As of September 30, 2010, she has devoted 7,764 hours of service to St. Francis Medical Center. Ruth has continually demonstrated the mission of St. Francis Medical Center by her commitment to reaching out to others in their time of need. She has brought comfort and hope to patients and their families with her sincere concern for their welfare.

During this past decade, Ruth has dedicated her time, talent and energy to helping others. Her commitment to service is a true example of citizenship. She is truly an unsung hero to St. Francis Medical Center and the St. Francis Volunteer program. Her compassion and faithful service to St. Francis Medical Center’s patients, families, and staff exemplifies the best in volunteerism.

She is an example of how one person can change the lives of many, and I commend Ruth for her hard work and dedication to making a positive difference in the community. I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Mrs. Ruth Beavers for this significant achievement.

HONORING MRS. MARGARET ANN RUSSELL ON HER EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY

HON. VICKY HARTZLER
OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. HARTZLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the eightieth birthday of a distinguished member of Missouri’s 4th Congressional District, Mrs. Margaret Ann Russell. Mrs. Russell, of Lebanon, Missouri, will celebrate her birthday March 22nd surrounded by family and friends; I join them in commending her role as a faithful family servant and community pillar.

Born on March 22, 1931 to George T. and Vesta Carr, Margaret grew up rooted in the values of rural America. She graduated from Lebanon High School in Lebanon, Missouri, and went on to attend the historic Stephens College in Columbia, Missouri, an institution dedicated since 1833 to the education and cultivation of female leaders.

Mrs. Russell married John T. Russell, also of Lebanon, Missouri, who served in the Missouri House of Representatives and the Missouri Senate for almost forty years. She labored diligently to raise their three children Doug, Jeannette, and Melissa. John, Jason, Jordan, Jimmy, Nicole, Makenzie, and Audrey have been blessed to know her as their grandmother; now, Harper and Drew have the special privilege of knowing her as their great grandmother.

While prioritizing her family, Mrs. Russell has long been involved in public service as well. She is an active part of the First Baptist Church of Lebanon. She also has encouraged local candidates to pursue public office, has given insight to community leaders, and has worked to strengthen her hometown. Recognizing the key role private citizens can play in protecting children, she consistently supports the Missouri Baptist Children’s Home.

I applaud Mrs. Russell for her quiet service in support of family and a vibrant local community. The diligent attention she has given to civil society should inspire us all. It is with sincere admiration that I wish her a very happy birthday on this milestone occasion.

CONGRATULATING JIM REED OF PHILADELPHIA FOR A LIFE OF ACCOMPLISHMENT

HON. CHAFA FATTAH
OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Jim Reed, a respected and beloved member of the greater Philadelphia business and civic community, who will be celebrated for his career on April 14, 2011, at The Enterprise Center, 4548 Market Street, in West Philadelphia.

Mr. Reed is Director of External Affairs for Verizon Pennsylvania. His service to his community both includes and extends far beyond the workplace. An active and passionate leader, Jim Reed is committed to the well-being of children, youth and adults alike. From board participation to teaching, mentoring, community service and advocating for change, he has proven his commitment to the community.

Mr. Reed is a native of Savannah, Georgia, and was educated in Savannah and the School District of Clayton, Missouri. He is a graduate of The Pennsylvania Institute of Technology and Spring Garden College. He was a math instructor at Dobbins and Edison High Schools in Philadelphia, the Opportunities Industrial Center, founded by Leon Sullivan, and Temple University. Jim Reed has more than 45 years experience in all facets of telecommunications. He began his career with AT&T and then transferred to Bell of Pennsylvania where he moved to the Urban Affairs Department as Community Relations Director, and assumed his current position in 1993.

Mr. Reed’s community involvement includes a wide range of interests and activities. He has chaired the Mayor's Commission on Services to the Aging. He is an active board member of the Urban Affairs Coalition, West Philadelphia Partnership, Korean Community Center, Citizens Crime Commission, The Men of the 644th Engineer Battalion "C," and many other organizations.

WEST POINT FOUNDERS DAY 2011

HON. NANCY A. HAYWORTH
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, the 19th District of New York is home to the United States Military Academy and today I join the cadets and alumni of West Point in celebrating Founders Day. On March 16, 1802, President Thomas Jefferson signed into law the Military Peace Establishment Act that founded the United States Military Academy at West Point. Since then, over 50,000 men and women have joined the Long Gray Line and served in the United States Army in times of war and peace. This year, approximately 1,000 cadets will be commissioned as Second lieutenants and continue a great Army tradition dedicated to Duty, Honor, Country. Their dedication and enduring patriotism; their tenacity, talent, and sacrifice, make the United States Army the greatest in the world. May God continue to protect them in their mission to preserve our peace and freedom every day.

HONORING MEMBERS OF 3RD BATTALION, 135TH THEATER AVIATION BATTALION OF LEBANON, MISSOURI

HON. VICKY HARTZLER
OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. HARTZLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the safe return of an 11-member
HON. TAMMY BALDWIN
OF WISCONSIN

Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, March 10 marked the 52nd anniversary of the Tibetan uprising against the People’s Republic of China, during which His Holiness the Dalai Lama fled into exile. On that day, there was a small commemorative ceremony in Madison, Wisconsin, with Wisconsin’s Tibetan-American community, which my staff was honored to attend. While the commemoration serves as a painful but important reminder of China’s prolonged efforts to outlaw dissent, restrict free expression, and violently occupy Tibet, it also serves as a symbol of our sustained vigilance, continued determination, and enduring hope that Tibetans everywhere will soon be free to live in peace with their land and culture intact.

On this anniversary, I offer support and conviction to the thousands of Tibetans living in exile and the thousands more who have chosen to stand beside them in the struggle for freedom. I support the Middle-Way Approach proposed by His Holiness the Dalai Lama to honor the dignity of both Tibetan and Chinese people and to promote a respectful solution. I strongly believe that the United States has a responsibility to stand up for human rights and the rule of law, and I support efforts to address the plight of Tibetans.

The Dalai Lama issued a statement on March 10, as he does every year, which represents a “state of the union” speech for Tibetans. This year’s statement was newsworthy, in that the Dalai Lama announced that he intends to hand over the last vestiges of his governmental responsibilities to the elected leadership of the Tibetan Government in exile, while remaining a committed advocate for the Tibetan cause. At a time when despots around the world cling to power as their people yearn for democracy, the Dalai Lama’s willful ceding of power is a tribute to his vision to fulfill the aspirations of the Tibetan people and should inspire others around the world.

I insert the following statement into the Record.

STATEMENT OF HIS HOLINESS THE DALAI LAMA ON THE 52ND ANNIVERSARY OF THE TIBETAN NATIONAL UPRISING DAY, MARCH 9, 2011

Today marks the 52nd anniversary of the Tibetan people’s peaceful uprising of 1959 against Communist China’s repression in the Tibetan capital Lhasa, and the third anniversary of the non-violent demonstrations that took place across Tibet in 2008. On this occasion, I would like to pay tribute to and pray for those brave men and women who sacrificed their lives for the just cause of Tibet. I express my solidarity with those who continue to suffer repression and pray for the well-being of all sentient beings.

For more than sixty years, Tibetans, despite being deprived of freedom and living in fear and insecurity, have been able to maintain their unique Tibetan identity and cultural values. More consequentially, successive new generations, who have the experience of free Tibet, have courageously taken responsibility in advancing the cause of Tibet. This is admirable, for they exemplify the strength and resilience of this Earth. This Earth belongs to humanity and the People’s Republic of China (PRC) belongs to its 1.3 billion citizens, who have the right to know the truth about the state of affairs in their country and the world at large. If citizens are fully informed, they have the ability to distinguish right from wrong. And if they are able to do that, China must earn the international community’s respect and trust. In order to earn such respect China’s leaders must develop transparent actions corresponding to their words. To ensure this, freedom of expression and freedom of the press are essential. Similarly, transparency in governance can help check corruption. In recent years, China has seen an increasing number of intellectuals calling for political reform and greater openness. Premier Wen has also expressed his concern about these issues. These are significant indications and I welcome them.

The PRC is a country comprising many nationalities, enriched by a diversity of languages and cultures. Protection of the language and culture of each nationality is a core principle of the PRC, which is set out in its constitution. Tibetan is the only language to preserve the entire range of the Buddha’s teachings, including the texts on logic and theories of knowledge (epistemology), which we inherited from India’s Nalanda University. This is a system of knowledge governed by reason and logic that has the potential to contribute to the peace and happiness of all beings. Therefore, the policy of undermining such a culture, instead of protecting and developing it, will in the long run amount to the destruction of humanity’s common heritage.

The Chinese government frequently states that stability and development in Tibet is the foundation for its long-term well-being. However, the authorities still station large numbers of troops across Tibet, increasing restrictions on the Tibetan people. Tibetans live in constant fear and anxiety. More recently, many Tibetan intellectuals, public figures and environmentalists have been punished for articulating the Tibetan people’s perception that they have been imprisoned allegedly for “subverting state power” when actually they have been giving voice to the Tibetan identity and cultural heritage. Such repressive measures undermine unity and stability. Likewise, in China, lawyers defending people’s rights, independent writers and human rights activists have been arrested. I urge the Chinese leaders to review these developments and release these prisoners of conscience forthwith.

The Chinese government claims there is no problem in Tibet other than the personal privileges and status of the Dalai Lama. The reality is that the ongoing oppression of the Tibetan people has provoked widespread, deep resentment against current official policies. People from all walks of life frequently express their discontentment. That there is a problem in Tibet is reflected in the Chinese authorities’ failure to trust Tibetans or win their loyalty. Instead, the Tibetan people are under constant surveillance. Chinese and foreign visitors to Tibet corroborate this grim reality.

Therefore, just as we were able to send further delegations to Tibet in the late 1970s and early 1980s from among Tibetans in exile, we propose similar visits again. At the same time we would encourage the sending of representatives of independent international bodies, including parliamentarians. If they were to find that Tibetans in Tibet are hardly accepted.

The spirit of realism that prevailed under Mao’s leadership in the early 1950s led China to sign the 17-point agreement with Tibet. A similar spirit prevailed once again during Hu Yaobang’s time in the early 1980s. If there had been a continuation of such realism the Tibetan issue, as well as several other issues, would have been solved. Unfortunately, conservative views delayed these policies. The result is that after nearly six decades, the problem has become more intractable.

The Tibetan Plateau is the source of the major rivers of Asia. Because it has the largest glaciers apart from the two Poles, it is considered to be the Third Pole. Environmental degradation in Tibet will have a detrimental impact on large parts of Asia, particularly on China and the Indian subcontinent. Both the central and local governments, as well as the Chinese public, should realize the degradation of the Tibetan environment and develop sustainable measures to safeguard it. I appeal to China to take into account the survival of people affected by what happens environmental changes on the Tibetan Plateau.

In our efforts to solve the issue of Tibet, we have consistently pursued the mutually beneficial Middle-Way Approach, which seeks genuine autonomy for the Tibetan people within the PRC. In our talks with officials of the Chinese government’s United Front Work Department we have clearly explained the Tibetan people’s hopes and aspirations. The lack of any positive response to our reasonable proposals makes us wonder whether these were fully and accurately conveyed to the higher authorities.

Since ancient times, Tibetans and Chinese peoples have lived as neighbours. It would be a mistake if our unresolved differences were to affect this age-old friendship. Special efforts are being made to promote good relations between Tibetans and Chinese living abroad and I am happy that this has contributed to better understanding and friendship between us. Tibetans inside Tibet should also cultivate good relations with our Chinese brothers and sisters.

In recent weeks we have witnessed remarkable non-violent struggles for freedom and democracy in various parts of North Africa and elsewhere. People’s firm belief in non-violence and people-power and these events have shown once again that determined non-violent action can indeed bring about positive change. We must all hope that these inspiring changes lead to genuine freedom, happiness and prosperity for the peoples in those countries.

One of the aspirations I have cherished since childhood is the reform of Tibet’s political and social structure, and in the few years to come, we can be firm believers in non-violence and people-power and these events have shown once again that determined non-violent action can indeed bring about positive change. We must all hope that these inspiring changes lead to genuine freedom, happiness and prosperity for the peoples in those countries.

As early as the 1960s, I have repeatedly stressed that Tibetans need a leader, elected freely by the Tibetan people, to whom I can devote power. Now, we have clearly reached the time when such a leader can be elected. The forthcoming eleventh session of the fourteenth Tibetan Parliament in Exile, which begins on 14th March, I will formally propose that the necessary amendments be made to the Charter for Tibetans in Exile, reflecting my decision to devote my formal authority to the election.

Since I made my intention clear I have received repeated and earnest requests both from within Tibet and outside, to continue to provide leadership. My desire is to see the devolve authority has nothing to do with a wish to shirk responsibility. It is to benefit Tibetans in the long run. It is not because I feel disheartened. Tibetans have placed such faith and trust in me that as one among them I am committed to playing my part in the just cause of Tibet. I trust that gradually people will come to understand my intention, will support my decision and accordingly let it take effect.

I would like to take this opportunity to reiterate the kindness of the leaders of various nations that cherish justice, members of parliaments, intellectuals and Tibet Support Groups, who have been steadfast in their support for the Tibetan people. In particular, we will always remember the kindness and consistent support of the people and Government of India and State Governments for generously helping Tibetans preserve and promote their religion and culture and ensuring the welfare of Tibetans in exile. To all of them I offer my heartfelt gratitude.

With my prayer for peace, welfare and happiness of all sentient beings.

TAIWAN’S EXCLUSION FROM THE UNITED NATIONS FRAMEWORK CONVENTION ON CLIMATE CHANGE

HON. SHELLY BERKLEY
OF NEVADA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call my colleagues’ attention to the continued exclusion of the Republic of China (Taiwan) from the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC).

As we have repeatedly stated, Taiwan is vulnerable to the impacts of climate change, having the natural environment of a sub-tropical island. In 2009, Taiwan was devastated by Typhoon Morakot. In just two days, a total of 2,500 mm of rain fell in Central and Southern Taiwan, the heaviest rain in over 50 years. Floods and landslides caused severe loss of life and property. Extreme weather events such as these, coupled with rising sea levels caused by global warming, are endangering Taiwan’s environment and survival.

The effects of climate change are already being felt in Taiwan. The Environmental Protection Agency has implemented measures to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and has invited international agencies every year since 1993 to verify the volumes of Taiwan’s production, import and export of ozone-depleting substances. Taiwan is at the forefront of developing solar power, alternative fuels, and wind power, reducing vehicular emissions, improving air quality and managing solid waste. Taiwan needs to be included in the UNFCCC and the world needs to include Taiwan, and my colleagues, in its consideration of Taiwan’s inclusion in the UNFCCC and I yield back the balance of my time.

A TRIBUTE TO WISCONSIN’S FABULOUS 14: “THEY STOOD UP”

HON. GWEN MOORE
OF WISCONSIN

Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to proudly recognize Wisconsin’s Fabulous 14. These 14 Wisconsin State senators took a stand on behalf of the people in order to prevent legislation that would have strip public workers of most of their collective bargaining rights and sell off government power plants without bids. This legislation would also grant extraordinary powers to an unelected government official appointed by the Governor, who has been a staunch opponent of medical assistance his entire political career, to make drastic changes to Wisconsin’s successful Badger Care, Family Planning programs, and Senior Care Programs.

These 14 courageous men and women, at great sacrifice to themselves and their families, fled to Illinois, to the land of Lincoln. In fact, these 14 Wisconsin Democratic Senators now share something in common with former Republican President, Abraham Lincoln. The then State Senator Lincoln left the Illinois Statehouse to prevent a quorum from being seated so that the Governor, who had earlier held a crucial vote in 1840, would have a majority. In 1840, Lincoln reportedly opened a window and escaped from the second floor of the building. One newspaper joked that Lincoln’s “long legs” prevented him from being injured as he left.

During the senators’ absence, the people of Wisconsin were given an opportunity to review the Budget Repair Bill and the Budget Bill and thoroughly scrutinize its contents of the Governor’s proposals. The bill will affect every citizen in Wisconsin, and for many middle class and vulnerable Wisconsinites; it will be devastating.

Governor Walker and Republicans in the State Legislature worked around the 14 senators’ protest to prevent a quorum and the bill was signed into law on Friday, March 11, 2011. During the past 3 weeks, I have been in Madison on several occasions standing in solidarity with the people.

On Saturday, March 12, 2011, along with an estimated 100,000 people, I was on hand to Welcome Back “the Fabulous 14” who returned to the State after weeks. I could feel the energy, the intensity of the people of Wisconsin, teachers, nurses, police officers, fire-fighters, prison guards and dozens of farmers with their tractors gathered around the Capitol square. Mr. Speaker, Wisconsin has undergone an historic change; it was evident in the faces of Wisconsinites that visibly displayed their resolve and in their shouts of thank you. While this battle may be over, the war continues. I rise to give a hearty thank you to Wisconsin’s Fabulous 14.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
HON. BILL HUIZENGA
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. HUIZENGA of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I was absent from the House floor during roll call vote No. 177 taken on Tuesday, March 15. Had I been present, I would have voted “aye.”

NATIONAL AHEC WEEK
HON. CATHY MC MORRIS RODGERS
OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. McMorris Rodgers. Mr. Speaker, March 14–18 marks National AHEC week. The Area Health Education Centers (AHEC) program was developed by Congress in 1971 to recruit, train and retain a health professions workforce. Today, 56 AHEC programs with more than 235 centers operate in almost every state and the District of Columbia. The AHEC program addresses the imbalances in our healthcare system and inequities in access to and quality of healthcare. Nearly 8,000 AHEC community based training sites are located in underserved areas including 3,500 in designated health professions shortage areas, training a workforce committed to serving underserved populations. This is accomplished by forming academic and community partnerships that link the resources of academic health centers with the needs of the communities. This unique program has continually exceeded HRSA’s performance measure targets in terms of the percentage of program participants who are underrepresented minorities and from disadvantaged backgrounds; the proportion of participants that train in medically underserved communities; and the percentage of health professionals entering practice in underserved areas.

On this week, we celebrate the goals and ideals of the AHEC program as well as its innumerable contributions to the advancement of health care in our most underserved communities.

INTRODUCTION OF THE STARTUP VISA ACT OF 2011
HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a new version of the StartUp Visa Act, a bill that would encourage innovation and economic growth by permitting immigrant entrepreneurs greater access to temporary U.S. visas. The bill matches legislation introduced this week by Senators John Kerry, Richard Lugar, and Mark Udall in the Senate.

What do American household names such as Google, eBay and Proctor & Gamble have in common? They are all former start-ups founded by immigrants.

Our current visa laws have made it unnecessarily difficult for immigrants to launch new companies in the United States. I am reintroducing the StartUp Visa Act because the economic dynamism of foreign-born talent has always been a crucial factor in our country’s growth, and we must take steps to enable it to continue. By allowing immigrants to gain greater access to American visas, we truly can drive American job creation and channel the power of innovation.

This legislation would be an expansion of the bill from last Congress, extending the pool of eligible immigrants to include holders of H-1B visas and entrepreneurs living outside the United States with a market presence in the country.

The entrepreneurial spirit is ingrained in our country’s history and success. I believe that this legislation is a vital component of promoting our global competitiveness. We must ensure a strong foundation for foreign-born, highly-skilled talent to create American jobs and promote economic prosperity and this bill works toward that end.

HONORING TEXAS SOCIETY, SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION
HON. KENNY MARCHANT
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. MARCHANT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution for their patriotism and preservation of our country’s rich history. Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution members can trace their family heritage to the men and women who fought for our nation’s independence. For 115 years, Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution has worked to advance our nation’s Founding Fathers.

On February 8, 1896, charter members from around Texas formed the Bernardo de Galvez Chapter of Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution. The founding members selected The Honorable Ira H. Evans as the first state president. In 1897, the first annual meeting was held with fifteen members. Today the organization has grown to incorporate sixty-six chapters across Texas and approximately ten thousand members.

Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution is actively involved in communities around Texas by sponsoring and hosting many charitable events such as essay, art, and oration contests for high school students. Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution recognizes ROTC, JROTC, Eagle Scouts, and others for hard work in the community.

Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution also works closely with disabled veterans in homes and hospitals around Texas. The organization honors the importance of the American Revolution through civic events where full color guard and revolutionary war uniforms are worn to commemorate our nation’s founding.

Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to recognize Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution. I ask all of my distinguished colleagues to join me in commending the Texas Society, Sons of the American Revolution on its faithful service to our communities in Texas.

H.R. 1, FULL-YEAR CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2011
HON. BETTY MCCOLLUM OF MINNESOTA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, over the past few weeks, hundreds of Minnesotans, as well as citizens from across the country, have contacted my office about the military’s multi-million dollar taxpayer sponsorship of NASCAR race cars. Frankly, many of my constituents and citizens of all political persuasions—Democrats, Republicans, Tea Party activists—are dumbfounded when race car drivers receive millions of dollars from the Department of Defense while the Speaker of the House of Representatives tells the American people our country is “broke.”

Last month the House of Representatives voted to eliminate funding for homeless veterans, slash community health centers serving low income families, and pass a fiscal year 2011 budget that would force 800,000 Americans to lose their jobs. Yet, taxpayer funded sponsorship of NASCAR racing teams was protected. I find this absurd.

One of my constituents, a twelve-year-old young man named Nickolas of South Saint Paul, Minnesota, provided an eloquent rebuttal to these appalling priorities. Nickolas wrote my office saying:

Congresswomen Betty McCollum,

My name is Nickolas, and I am a Boy Scout working on my Citizenship in the Nation Merit Badge.

I read online that you wrote a bill to stop the Pentagon from sponsoring NASCAR race teams as a way to advertise. I agree that it is absurd that the Pentagon is funding NASCAR. We should put the money into NASA and jobs for people. NASA is more important than NASCAR.

If the government is going to pay to support a race, how about a race to Mars? America has already sent people to the moon, why not Mars? Instead of paying for people to go in circles, why not pay for people to go for Mars? Humans are explorers. We should go to answer questions about the Red Planet and the Solar System. In addition, the studies done to get to Mars will give us better technology here on earth.

Nickolas understands that scarce taxpayer dollars need to be invested in innovation, education, and exploration that will create new opportunities to expand our knowledge of space and our economy. I strongly encourage my colleagues to take Nickolas’ advice and focus on cutting unnecessary government spending, like government sponsorship of NASCAR race cars while making sound investments in America’s future.
HONORING MEMBERS OF THE 417TH CID

HON. VICKY HARTZLER
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. HARTZLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the safe return of 10 Missouri National Guardsmen from the 417th Military Police Detachment Criminal Investigation Division.

The soldiers are returning from a nearly year-long deployment to Iraq and Afghanistan. They were responsible for conducting criminal investigations for the Army. The group consists of Soldiers from Jefferson City, Columbia, O’Fallon, High Ridge, Hannibal, and St. Charles. The unit commander is Chief Warrant Officer 2 Timothy Forney, of Hannibal, MO.

Without Soldiers like those in the 417th CID, we would not enjoy the freedoms we have today, and I am eternally grateful for their service. It is only fitting that they return home safely to their families and loved ones.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I ask all my colleagues to join me in welcoming home the members of the 417th CID, and thanking them for their continued sacrifice as members of the Armed Forces.

HONORING THE DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS CHAPTER 91 OF DECATUR

HON. HENRY C. “HANK” JOHNSON, JR.
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following:

Whereas, DeKalb County serves as home for many Veterans who have served honorably in the United States Military; and

Whereas, the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 91 of Decatur is an organization that continues to serve those who have represented our nation in times of peace and war; and

Whereas, our beloved county, continues to rely on the wisdom, leadership and service from the Disabled American Veterans to assist and build our community; and

Whereas, this unique organization has given of themselves tirelessly and unconditionally to preserve integrity and advocate strongly for our disabled veterans and their families; and

Whereas, the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 91 continues to serve our county by being the sword and shield of those who served our country in the United States military; and

Whereas, the U.S. Representative of the Fourth District of Georgia has set aside this day to honor and recognize the Disabled American Veterans Chapter 91 of Decatur, Georgia for their outstanding service to our District;

Now, Therefore, I, Henry C. “Hank” Johnson, Jr. do hereby proclaim March 20, 2011 as Disabled American Veterans Chapter 91 Day in the 4th Congressional District.

Proclaimed, this 20th day of March, 2011.

HONORING THE DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS CHAPTER 91 OF DECATUR

HON. JOE WILSON OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to congratulate my good friend Thomas Gordy and his wife Theresa on the birth of their son, Trenton Talmadge Gordy.

Trenton was born on Tuesday, February 15, 2011, in Manassas, Virginia. He is welcomed home by his sister Sarah Gordy.

Trenton Talmadge Gordy is seven pounds and one ounce of pride and joy to his loving grandparents, Timmy and Kay Gordy of Monroe, Louisiana, Toni and Michael LeBlanc of Shreveport, Louisiana, and Canoy and Lynn Mayo of West Monroe, Louisiana.

I am so excited for this new blessing to the Gordy family and wish them all the best.

HONORING GEOFFREY BREITKOPF

HON. TIMOTHY H. BISHOP
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. BISHOP of New York. Mr. Speaker, it is with tremendous pride, but overwhelming grief, that I take to the floor today to honor one of my constituents who was taken from us far before his time, Officer Geoffrey Breitkopf.

When there is danger, there are two types of people. There are the majority of people who run from it, and then there are those brave few who run towards it. Officer Breitkopf was one of those brave few.

He served as a Nassau County Police Officer for more than 12 years, the majority of that time was spent serving in the elite Bureau of Special Operations. Always hard working, Officer Breitkopf earned a spot in the BSO in approximately half the time it normally takes. He was highly decorated for his various acts of bravery, including five Command Recognition Awards, four Meritorious Police Service Awards and one Medal of Commendation.

Despite having a family and an incredibly demanding job, Officer Breitkopf also found time to serve his community. He was a member of the Selden Fire Department for the past 15 years and served in the heavy rescue company, which handles search and rescue, house fires and extricating people from cars.

Tragically, Officer Breitkopf died in the line of duty, doing the job he loved so much and excelled at so well. My thoughts and prayers are with his fellow officers and his family, especially his wife, Paula, and their two sons Connor and Owen.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to represent a true hero like Officer Geoffrey Breitkopf and ask that we take a moment to reflect on his service to Long Island.

2011 BRAIN AWARENESS WEEK

HON. TIM RYAN
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to commemorate Brain Awareness Week (BAW) and the benefits of this informative week in educating students and the general public on brain science in my congressional district and across the country. Brain Awareness Week, launched in 1996, brings together the Society for Neuroscience, the Dana Alliance for Brain Initiatives and 2400 other organizations in 76 countries who share a common goal of improving public awareness of brain and nervous system research. During Brain Awareness Week, which is being held March 14–20, neuroscientists around the globe educate K–12 students, senior citizens and the public at large on the wonders of the human brain. These activities include tours of neuroscience laboratories, museum exhibitions, and classroom discussions on elements of the human brain. This year, in my congressional district, high school students will have an opportunity to learn about brain physiology by working with Kent State University’s graduate students to dissect a sheep’s brain. This event will get these kids excited about the mysteries of the mind and the nature of scientific discovery.

Today, in recognition of Brain Awareness Week, I would like to highlight a serious neurological disorder that affects millions of Americans—impacting their livelihoods and families: Addiction. In fact, 9 percent of Americans—more than 22 million people—abuse drugs on a regular basis.

As co-chair of the Congressional Addiction, Treatment and Recovery Caucus, I understand the urgency of treating addiction and the burden this neurological disorder has on lives, loved ones, and our economy. According to the U.S. Office of National Drug Control Policy, for each year, more than half a trillion dollars is lost to substance abuse in the United States alone. These losses are realized across the board—in health, criminal, and productivity-related areas. That impact totals about $181 billion for illicit drugs, $168 billion for tobacco, and $185 billion for alcohol. Even more worrisome are the statistics on drug-induced mortality. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported that more than 38,000 people in the United States died of legal or illegal substances in 2006. That figure doesn’t even include the 300,000 to 450,000 deaths each year attributed to nicotine addiction. As disturbing as these numbers are, they don’t reflect the unquantifiable impact of drug abuse. Drug abuse dissipates families, sheds the social fabric in neighborhoods, leads to loss of jobs and income, contributes to poor school and job performance, and is often a causal factor in domestic violence and auto accidents.

Mr. Speaker, the consequences of substance abuse for children in society are especially tragic. Drug-addicted parents don’t properly care for their children, neglecting medical and educational needs, and failing to provide basic food and shelter. When parents fail, the government must step in. These deficits are ultimately made up for by the tax-deductible expenses of the government. In 2010, more than 75 percent of illicit drug users are employed, these adults are more likely to frequently change jobs, be involved in accidents, be absent, and be less productive even when at work. Notably, heavy drinkers are absent from work four to eight times more often than non-addicts. According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), drug use changes brain chemistry and physiology beyond just the brain’s reward system and includes regions involved in memory, learning, impulse control, stress reactivity, and more. Repeated drug exposure “resets” these circuits toward compulsive behavior so that a person’s control over the desire to seek and use drugs is compromised, despite devastating consequences.

Over the course of the last three decades, the scientific and medical communities have made amazing strides in the understanding and treatment of drug abuse and addiction. Combined biological, epidemiological, and social science discoveries have given us a detailed understanding of the risks, mechanisms, and consequences of drug abuse and addiction. Today, the rate of cigarette smoking in youth is at its lowest recorded point since tracking of teen drug use and attitudes began in 1975.

Marijuana use has shown a consistent decline since the mid-1990s, although that trend has flattened in recent years; a study released last month by NIDA found that daily use of marijuana among America’s youth is making a bold comeback—surpassing tobacco use.

Recent scientific advances have revolutionized our understanding of addiction as a chronic, relapsing, disease and not a moral failure. According to the NIDA scientists who have identified the specific sites of action in the brain where every major drug of abuse has its initial effects, including opiates, methamphetamine, nicotine, marijuana, and alcohol. Brain imaging technology has demonstrated that addiction is a brain disease by delineating profound disruptions in the specific brain circuits affected by addiction. In-depth, NIH-supported studies of chronic drug exposure demonstrate the long-lasting alteration of key brain receptor systems, addictive drugs modify the strength of connections between neurons. The scientific knowledge we have accumulated will be used to transform the way we treat addiction and how we prevent drug abuse and its escalation to addiction.

Neuroscientists are working to identify the genetic and environmental factors that put people at risk. For instance, genes account for about 50 percent of a person’s risk of becoming addicted, and environmental factors influence the effect of these genes. Progress in genetics research will lead to more refined prevention and treatment interventions targeted to individual risk or to modifiable environmental influences.

Now, it’s time for our policies to catch up with the research findings. We have to understand that addiction is a treatable disease requiring continuing care and multifaceted approaches, like diabetes, or heart and respiratory disease. We have to continue to support the research advancements by investing in a strong, sustainable research funding platform for the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the National Science Foundation (NSF) that will bring us further in understanding and treating drug abuse and addiction. Failure to properly address this growing problem will only lead to more lives ruined or extinguished by drugs, more families broken by abuse, and more taxpayer money squandered on ineffective programs.

Mr. Speaker, today I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Brain Awareness Week, which exposes our constituents to the wonders and mysteries of the brain. I also ask that you join me in continuing to support basic research funded through the NIH and NSF that provides a foundation for new addiction treatment and drug abuse prevention methods that have an enormous impact on the lives of millions of Americans.

ROTA CULTURAL AND NATURAL RESOURCES STUDY ACT

HON. GREGORIO KILILI CAMACHO SABLAN

OF THE NORTHERN MARIANA ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. SABLAN. Mr. Speaker, today I am re-introducing the Rota Cultural and Natural Resources Study Act. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability and feasibility of designating certain areas of prehistoric, historic, and natural significance on the island of Rota in the Northern Mariana Islands as a unit of the National Park System.

Rota is truly a “jewel,” as the gentlewoman from California, Ms. NAPOLITANO, called the island at last year’s hearing on this same bill. National Park Service representatives who conducted a reconnaissance survey there in 2004 reported that Rota has the best-preserved village sites of the ancient Chamorro people and that Rota’s native limestone forests provide habitat to locally and federally protected rare bird species.

The House of Representatives approved the Rota Park study under suspension of the rules in July last year. There was no objection or controversy. But, unfortunately, the other body did not have time on its agenda to act before the end of the 111th Congress.

Now, I ask that we quickly restart the process of having the Park Service study the suitability and feasibility of designating parts of Rota for a national park.

There are time pressures involved. Rota is at a crossroads. Major land use changes are possible resulting from development by the U.S. military on the neighboring island of Guam. We have to know which areas on Rota can be and need to be protected, so that the people of Rota can maintain the important cultural and natural resources on the island while at the same time taking advantage of opportunities for economic development.

For these reasons the leaders of Rota support the study. The Honorable Teresita Santos, Rota’s representative in the Northern Mariana Islands House of Representatives, flew to Washington, DC to speak in support of the bill at the hearing by Natural Resources Subcommittee on Oceans, Wildlife and Insular Affairs last year.

The Mayor of Rota, the Honorable Melchor Meno, Jr., wrote this letter for the record during last year’s consideration of the bill in the House. He, too, supported passage.

Today, I am including another letter of support for the study bill. This letter is from the Honorable Paul S. Manglona, President of the Northern Mariana Islands Senate, who represents Rota in Congress.

And, of course, the National Park Service reconnaissance survey also recommended that the cultural and natural resources are truly of national significance and that the appropriate next step is a suitability and feasibility study.

The people of Rota have done a tremendous job over the millennia in protecting the treasures of their remarkable island. Let us support their efforts. Let us determine whether this “jewel” should be considered by Congress for inclusion in the National Park System.

I ask that my colleagues support the Rota Cultural and Natural Resources Study Act.

The Speaker. The gentlewoman from Washington.

THE SENATE, NORTHERN MARIANA COMMONWEALTH LEGISLATURE, Saipan, MP, March 15, 2011.

HON. GREGORIO KILILI CAMACHO SABLAN, Delegate, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Cannon House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman, I am writing to support the Rota Cultural and Natural Resources Study Act (Act). The Act authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability of designating prehistoric, historic, and limestone forest sites on Rota as a unit of the National Park System.

As testified to by Commonwealth Legislature Representative Teresita Santos for the Subcommittee on Fisheries, Wildlife, Oceans, and Insular Affairs, the Island of Rota is unique in the Marianas as the only primarily inhabited island spared fighting during World War II. Consequently, plant and animal life was spared the near total destruction similar on Saipan and Tinian.

Archaeologists describe Rota as having the most intact and numerous historic sites on any island in the Marianas Archipelago. Rota has the best examples in the Marianas of Latte houses, the ancient stone houses of the Chamorro culture. Four prehistoric sites on Rota are included in the Register of Historic Places, Monchon Archeological District, Taga Latte Stone Quarry, Dugii Archeological Site, and the Chugai Pictograph Cave containing examples of ancient Chamorro rock art. In addition to prehistoric sites, historic resources from the Japanese period, the Historic Register of Historic Places—includes Kohatsu Kabushiki Kaisha Sugar Mill, Japanese Coastal Defense Gun and the Japanese Hospital.

Natural resources are prevalent on Rota primarily due to its native limestone forests that provide habitat for federally endangered species including the Mariana crow and the Rota bridled white-eye birds, in addition to two (2) plant species endemic to Rota.

The National Park Service completed a preliminary resource assessment regarding Rota in 2005, concluding designating Rota as part of the national park system appeared to be the best way to ensure comprehensive protection of Rota’s pre-historic and historic natural and man-made habitat and structures. I strongly encourage you, along with the Rota Legislative Delegation, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to study the suitability of designating prehistoric, historic and limestone forest sites on Rota as a unit of the National Park System.

Sincerely,

PAUL A. MANGLONA, Senate President.
history and special education teacher at Molokai High School in my district. Mr. Omellas’s students are in Washington this week for the Close Up Washington Civic Education Program. The Close Up Foundation is presenting Mr. Omellas with an award for his dedication over many years.

I visited Molokai High School in 2008 for a discussion on teacher effectiveness. The group’s participants shared their views that an effective teacher is one who is experienced, “helps you understand,” and “makes it fun.” Mr. Omellas helps his Close Up students to raise funds for the trip by writing fundraising letters and selling plate lunches and food at the Molokai Hoe race. His students have even been blogging about their trip on the school website! For getting his students so excited to learn about our nation’s history first-hand, I would definitely call Mr. Omellas an effective teacher.

Mr. Omellas is a strong supporter of this program, which gives students a first-hand experience with democracy in our nation’s capital. Using the Close Up curriculum—tied to state history standards—Mr. Omellas helps his students understand how our democracy works and inspires them to become more active in their school and community.

Over 95 percent of the program’s 500,000 participants have reported that the program helped them better understand their roles as citizens.

I salute Mr. Omellas for his dedication to providing a well-rounded civic education for his students. I am presenting him with a flag that flew over the U.S. Capitol in his honor.

Congratulations to Mr. Omellas and the many students he has helped influence over the years.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF MT. MORIAH BAPTIST CHURCH

Mr. ROGERS of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to a very special occasion today—the 150th anniversary of the Mt. Moriah Baptist Church in Delta, Alabama.

The first mention of Mt. Moriah Baptist Church was on October 21, 1853. Mt. Moriah along with eight other churches met and organized what was then called the Boiling Springs Association.

According to Baptist Archives, Mt. Moriah Baptist Church was established by 1860. The First pastor was Hiram J. Hickey, First Deacon ordained was John Garrett and First Clerk was Eli Frost.

On May 3, 1890, church minutes state the previous conference minutes were destroyed by fire and could not be read. On September 1, 1890, membership consisted of 67 men and 65 women. Total funds were $2.85, but Amazing Grace could still be heard through the church doors despite the hardships endured.

The church has been in three associations; and the percentage of health professionals for a job well done.

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the late Major Robert Camina for his dedication and contributions to the United States Army and the Army Texas National Guard.

Major Camina started his military career on November 10, 1939 in San Antonio, Texas. He joined the Mechanized Group Troop of the 124th Cavalry of the 56th Cavalry Brigade. Major Camina originally joined to ride horses, but when WWII broke he was given overseas orders and his unit became the last Cavalry Regiment to be dismounted. During his tour in the China-Burma-India Theatre, Major Camina served a M.G. Squad Leader and fought alongside 1st Lieutenant Jack L. Knight, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor. For his service in the tour, Major Camina received the Bronze Star Medal and the Combat Infantry Badge.

After the war, Major Camina was discharged from military service, but rejoined in the Army Texas National Guard for 1 year. After Major Camina’s military term, the U.S. Department of Agriculture hired him for the next 5 years to aid in their campaign to eradicate Hoof and Mouth Disease from Mexico. Later, Major Camina returned to Brownsville, Texas and joined the A/112th Armored Cavalry Regiment. He served in the 112th until the 49th Armored Division was activated into Federal Service by President Kennedy due to the Berlin Crisis. In 1966, Major Camina served as a Mess Steward for the next 15 years. In 1981, Major Camina retired from the Army Texas National Guard and was commissioned as a Captain in the Texas State Guard. He served as Company Commander, S–3 and S–4 in the 304th Military Police Battalion in Brownsville, Texas. He retired on October 29, 1989—almost 50 years to the date of his enlistment of the Texas National Guard.

During his time in military service, Major Camina was a highly decorated soldier. The Major received the Bronze Star, Combat Infantry Badge, Army Commendation Medal, Texas Outstanding Medal, Meritorious Service Medal, Texas Faithful Service Medal and the Texas State Guard Service Medal. He also received many awards as a Mess Steward and helped his company win the Eisenhower Trophy twice.

Military service runs in his family, as four of his brothers also served in military branches. Armando Camina served in the United States Army, was considered for up to six Congressional Medals of Honor, and received a silver medal. Tino Camina served in the United States Army and Enrinn Camino served in the Air Force. Major Camina and his brothers fought for the United States and served to protect this great nation.
Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have had the time to recognize the dedication, accomplishments, and commitment of the late Major Robert Camina.

RECOGNIZING THE 19TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE KOJALY TRAGEDY

HON. TIM HOLDEN
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. HOLDEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Khojaly tragedy that occurred 19 years ago in Azerbaijan. Over the night from February 25th to February 26th, an unprecedented massacre was committed against the Azerbaijani people in the town of Khojaly.

Azerbaijan has been a longtime ally and friend of the United States. On Christmas Day in 1991, President George H.W. Bush announced the recognition of Azerbaijan independence along with other former Soviet Republics. Azerbaijan has been involved in NATO’s Partnership for Peace program and has participated in U.S.-led military missions in Kosovo, Afghanistan, and Iraq. During this time of unrest in the Middle East, the peaceful alliance with Azerbaijan is more important than ever.

Mr. Speaker, the tragedy of Khojaly was a grim and horrific event and I ask my colleagues to join me in remembering the people of Azerbaijan on this tragic anniversary.

HONORING NEW LIFE CHURCH

HON. HENRY C. "HANK" JOHNSON, JR.
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following:

Whereas, New Life Church has been and continues to be a beacon of light to our county for well over fifteen (15) years; and

Whereas, Pastor Marlin D. Harris and the members of the New Life Church family today continue to uplift and inspire those in our county and beyond; and

Whereas, New Life Church has been and continues to be a place where citizens are touched spiritually, mentally and physically through outreach ministries and community partnership to aid in building up the community; and

Whereas, this remarkable and tenacious Church of God has given hope to the hopeless, fed the needy and empowered our community by preaching the gospel, singing the gospel and living the gospel; and

Whereas, New Life Church has produced many spiritual warriors, people of compassion, people of great courage, fearless leaders and servants to all, but most of all visionaries who have shared not only with their Church, but with DeKalb County and the world their passion to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ; and

Whereas, the U.S. Representative of the Fourth District of Georgia has spent this day traveling with members of the U.S. military, recognizing the New Life Church family as they dedicate their new Church Sanctuary and for continued leadership and service to our District;

Now therefore, I, HENRY C. “HANK” JOHN- son, Jr. do hereby proclaim March 13, 2011 as New Life Church Day in the 4th Congressional District.

Proclaimed, this 13th day of March, 2011.

TRIBUTE TO ADRIENNE THOMAS

HON. STENY H. HOYER
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Adrienne Thomas, the Deputy Archivist of the United States who is retiring after 41 years of distinguished service with the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). Ms. Thomas began her career of federal service straight out of Iowa State University as an archivist trainee in the Office of Presidential Libraries. Since then, she has held a number of important policy and administrative positions. Early in her career, she was instrumental in transforming the Archives into an institution at the forefront of a revolution in public access to records, following the enactment of the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act. During the 1980s, she served as the Director of Planning and Analysis and, in 1985, she was instrumental in putting in place the structure that allowed the Archives to operate as a newly created independent agency, no longer under the direction of the General Services Administration.

Perhaps her most celebrated contributions to this nation are the magnificent public spaces where she was intimately involved in overseeing construction and renovation during her time as NARA’s head of Administration and Chief Financial Officer. Her vision has shown the world that archives don’t have to be dark dusty repositories. This year alone, one million people will see her attention to detail and love of history when they visit the historic National Archives Building in Washington, DC to view the Charters of Freedom and other American milestone documents, respectfully and accessibly displayed following a building renovation in 2003. Another place where her dedication to excellence for the American people can be seen is just up the road in College Park, Maryland, home to NARA’s state-of-the-art facility known as “Archives II,” which opened in 1994. Ms. Thomas oversaw Archives II from concept to ribbon cutting. It stands today as the premier archival research center in the world—the gold standard—and a great source of pride in my congressional district.

From archivist trainee to Deputy Archivist of the United States, Ms. Thomas has mentored hundreds of employees and inspired millions of people who visit our National Archives buildings across the country. It is truly my honor to pay tribute today to Ms. Adrienne Thomas, a real “National Treasure” who worked for the American people for 41 years.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY REGIONAL AIRPORT AUTHORITY AND AIRPORT WORKERS: SOL PRICE SPIRIT OF COOPERATION OF THE YEAR AWARD

HON. BOB FILNER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to proclaim that organized labor is often the sole force fighting for the rights of not just union members, but all workers.

This was seen this past fall when union workers at the airport stood up for the rights of all concession, parking and restaurant workers by bringing forward a worker retention policy at the San Diego Regional Airport Authority.

Up until then, workers had no job protections in the event of new contractors taking over business at the airport. If a shop or restaurant lost its lease, every employee working there could lose their job.

Led by Airport Authority chairman Robert Gleason, the agency brought workers into the search for a solution. Workers were not only given a voice in the process, but their opinions and concerns were valued as expert testimony on the importance of the Airport Authority providing a sense of job security for workers with as many as 35 years of experience.

Even when delays in the process occurred, it was due to Airport Authority commissioners believing that they could accomplish even more through their policy. By a final vote of 7-to-1, the Airport Authority eventually passed a worker retention policy that will protect airport workers. The vote proved that all parties can win when the voices of workers are taken into consideration.

It gives me a great honor Mr. Speaker, that in light of their passage of a worker retention policy, I join with the Executive Board of the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council in honoring the San Diego Regional Airport Authority and Airport Workers with the 2010–2011, “Sol Price Spirit of Cooperation Award.”

A TRIBUTE TO YOLANDE NICOLSON

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of Yolande Nicholson.

Ms. Nicholson has been a member of the New York State Bar for more than 20 years. She earned her J.D. from Columbia University School of Law in 1989. She began her legal career practicing as a corporate finance attorney in the capital markets group at Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen & Hamilton, the preeminent international law firm.

As a young lawyer, Ms. Nicholson had the opportunity to work with multinational corporations, international financial institutions, sovereign governments, and their agencies, as well as domestic corporations and financial institutions. At Cleary, she developed her craft as a securities lawyer. From 1997 to 2003,
Ms. Nicholson served as Vice President and Assistant General Counsel at The Chase Manhattan Bank. In 2003, as an Executive on Loan from JPMorgan, she began working with Bedford Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation (BSRC) in Brooklyn to restructure and reposition the corporation's anchor commercial real estate and public housing assets. She subsequently served in the position of Executive Vice President and General Counsel at Bedford Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation. In 2006, Ms. Nicholson returned to Wall Street practice and corporate finance as a senior attorney in the financial products group at Clifford Chance, the leading international financial law firm.

Ms. Nicholson was born in Grenada, W.I., into an extended family of ever-aspiring parents, grandparents, aunts and uncles that included notable school principals, teachers, nurses and entrepreneurs. She credits her father for teaching her and her siblings the value of community activism; her mother for teaching them the value of community service; and both for serving as daily exales of grace and dignity. She aims to continue applying her law license, experience and knowledge and voice to the proposals aimed at precluding foreclosure sales against homeowners who are hardest hit by high unemployment, predatory lending and mortgage fraud.

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011
Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend Skyline High School for 40 years of outstanding service to the Dallas community. Skyline first opened on March 1st, 1971 as our nation’s first magnet school. Since then, thousands of students have graced the halls of Skyline, and many have gone on to make immense contributions to the Dallas Metroplex. Skyline’s diverse student body has excelled academically with our community as a nearly $25 million in scholarships last year. Under the leadership of Principal Harold Wright, Skyline earned a “higher performing school” rating from the National Center for Education Accountability. The motto of “Unity in Ef-fort...Pride in Result” exemplifies the drive and achievement of Skyline’s students, teachers and administrators.

Skyline has had many illustrious alumni, including: Dallas City Counsel Member, Pauline Medrano; Olympian, Michael Johnson; and Bryan Trubey, Temple Design and architect of the new Dallas Cowboys stadium. These individuals continue to utilize their education at Skyline to give back to the community. Skyline High School was the first of many outstanding magnet schools in the Dallas area, and helped revolutionize the way we approach education. They have shown with the proper resources and motivation students can and will succeed. I am proud to represent Skyline High School, and look forward to its success in the years ahead.

HON. NAN A.S. HAYWORTH
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011
Ms. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Firefighter Howard Carpenter of Kent, New York for his steadfast commitment and dedication to our community as a forty-year active member of the Kent Volunteer Fire Department. Firefighter Carpenter is a founding member of the Kent Fire Department and has remained active for the entirety of its existence. Firefighters like Mr. Carpenter have a crucial role in protecting our homes and families. It is because of committed volunteer firefighters like Mr. Carpenter that our communities have active emergency responders that come to our rescue in education of from. Mr. Carpenter has a long-standing history of commitment to his community and our fellow firefighters. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to recognize Firefighter Howard Carpenter for his 40 years of outstanding fire service.

A TRIBUTE TO SHELLA A. DURANT
HON. EDDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011
Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of Shella A. Durant. Early on, Shella Durant discovered her life’s passion: educating children. She carried this passion for over 30 years and continues to do so. Shella was born and raised in New York City, as one of five children. At an early age, her parents instilled the value of discipline, determination, and hard work. She knew her calling was to be an educator. Shella’s own education began in the New York City’s public school system, a diverse and multicultural learning environment. She went on to enter the CUNY system and earned a Master’s degree in special education and from Hunter College. Shella later received an Administrative Diploma in School Administration from the City College of New York.

When Shella Durant became Assistant Principal at P.S. 69, in 2003, the State of New York designated the school, “a School in Need of Improvement.” Fortunately, she worked with a principal who was an outstanding educational leader, mentor and collaborative partner. Together, they sought to build a “learning” community, dedicated to a climate of open communication, sharing, collaboration, and respect. They began reform at P.S. 69 by implementing conflict resolution platforms for teachers, students, and parents. The school is now constantly improving. Since 2003, Advocates for Children recognized P.S. 69 as both a school of choice and one of the “top 100 schools” in New York City. Today, Shella is the Principal of P.S. 69. Her journey from Assistant Principal to Principal gave her invaluable insight into making P.S. 69 a successful child-centered educational environment.

Growing as a leader and a continual learner, Ms. Durant is involved in a number of other organizations. She is a member of the Greater Central Baptist Church, New York Academy of Public Education, New York Elementary School Principal Association, Schools That Can, Harvard’s W21x World, CEI–PEA, North American Reggio Emilia Alliance, and Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development. She is also the Executive Board member for Council School Consortium and serves as a board member of 500 men.

in honoring Bert Randolph Sugar for his contributions to the boxing profession, as well as for his support of youth in the District of Columbia at Kids In Trouble, Inc. By serving as a member on the Board of Directors of Kids In Trouble, Inc., Mr. Sugar, a native Washingtonian, a graduate of District of Columbia Public Schools, and a boxing historian, has provided our youth with special inspiration by his achievements. His induction into the International Boxing Hall of Fame in 2005 speaks to his special talents, and makes all D.C. residents, particularly our children at Kids In Trouble, Inc., proud.

Throughout his career, Bert Randolph Sugar has honed his skills as a boxing analyst, making frequent appearances on HBO’s pay-per-view boxing broadcasts and ESPN. He has published dozens of books and articles, and has served as an editor of Boxing Illustrated and of Ring Magazine.

Over the years, Kids In Trouble, Inc. has grown to serve thousands of D.C. youth, especially in the Brightwood neighborhood in Northwest D.C. Bert Randolph Sugar has contributed to our youth at Kids In Trouble, Inc. over several decades, and was honored with the Kids In Trouble, Inc. 2005 Lifetime Achievement Award at the 40th Anniversary Toy Drive for needy children in D.C.

I applaud the contributions Bert Randolph Sugar has made to Kids In Trouble, Inc. to help improve the lives of minority and underrepresented youth residing in the District of Columbia. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in honoring Bert Randolph Sugar for his contributions to Kids In Trouble, Inc., his commitment to youth in the District of Columbia, and particularly for a lifetime of achievements.

A TRIBUTE TO SALEMA DAWSON-MARBURY

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of Salema Dawson-Marbury. Salema grew up in the Hollis neighborhood of Queens, New York. She attended Jamaica High School and went on to attain several educational degrees: a Bachelor of Science degree in Applied Mathematics, from Stony Brook University; a Master of Science degree in Secondary School Math Education, from Lehman College; and a Master of Arts degree in Educational Administration, from City College. Salema is married to Done E. Marbury, Jr.; has two step-sons, Duwan A. Marbury and O’mari M. Marbury.

Salema is the Principal of the P.S. 329 in Coney Island, Brooklyn. She began her educational career in 1988, as an intermediate school teacher at two schools: I.S. 1116, in the South Bronx; and the Mark Twain Intermediate School for the Gifted and Talented, in Coney Island, Brooklyn. Although her first passion is teaching math, she became known for developing programs to improve student self-esteem, academic prowess and leadership.

Early in her career, Salema realized that most children dream of becoming rich and famous in the same manner as their favorite sports, television and movie stars. She knew this dream would not be a reality for most students. Salema felt that what children really desired was acknowledgement for their accomplishments and the opportunity to achieve economic power in the process. She became determined to provide students with the direction they needed to achieve economic success. Salema began her tenure at P.S. 329 in 1995, as a teacher in charge of attendance improvement. She was later appointed to Assistant Principal in 1998 and, in 2008, she became the Principal. She is heavily involved in the school community. She established several of the school’s seminal programs, including the school’s Young Entrepreneurship Program and the school’s Performing Arts Program. She also writes, co-produces and co-directs the school’s annual drama and dance productions.

Salema believes that all children possess a unique talent. She encourages her students to, “never surrender their dreams,” and strives to ensure they acquire the needed confidence for achieving their maximum potential. Salema is proud of her and her staff’s work. Today, P.S. 139 is commonly referred to as, “Coney Island’s Best Kept Secret.”

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing Salema Dawson-Marbury.

THE TAX FREE TIPS ACT

HON. RON PAUL
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to help millions of working Americans by introducing the Tax Free Tip Act. As the title suggests, this legislation exempts tips from federal income and payroll taxes. Tips often compose a substantial portion of the earnings of waiters, waitresses, and other service-sector employees. However, unlike regular wages, a service-sector employee usually has no guarantee of, or legal right to, a tip. Instead, the amount of a tip usually depends on how well an employee satisfies a client. Since the amount of taxes one pays increases along with the size of the tip, taxing tips punishes workers for doing a superior job!

Many service-sector employers are young people trying to make money to pay for their education, or single parents struggling to provide for their children. Oftentimes, these workers work two jobs in hopes of making a better life for themselves and their families. The Tax Free Tips Act gives these hard-working Americans an immediate pay raise. People may use this pay raise to devote more resources to their children’s, or their own, education, or to save for a home, retirement, or to start their own businesses.

Helping Americans improve themselves by reducing their taxes will make our country stronger. I therefore hope all my colleagues will join me in cosponsoring the Tax Free Tips Act.
HONORING STATE REPRESENTATIVE JOHN CAREY

A TRIBUTE TO MS. VERA WINN

HON. DAN BOREN
OF OKLAHOMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. BOREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a man of determination, conviction and integrity—State Representative John Carey of Durant, Ok.

Carey, a former member of the Oklahoma House of Representatives, served his district and state with distinction during the years of 2002 to 2010.

John’s legislative work has been devoted to improving education, making the state government more efficient and helping the brave men and women who have served our nation in the military.

His personal career has also been focused on improving the lives of hard-working Oklahomans through economic development, business growth and community outreach.

Representative Carey has been active in civic affairs for several years, serving as a Gear-Up mentor, a Crisis Control board member, a board member of the Oklahoma State University Consumer & Family Services Advisory Committee, past chairman of the Bryan County Junior Livestock Show and as a member of the Southeastern Oklahoma State University Homecoming Committee.

It is with great pleasure that I take this opportunity to acknowledge not only his successes in the Oklahoma legislature, but also his work as a devoted father and a steadfast friend.

John Carey is the husband of Pam Carey and father of G.W., Emma, and Anna Carey. The 21st House District of Oklahoma is a better place because of the service of my friend and colleague, John Carey.

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Ms. Vera Winn.

Vera received a Bachelors of Science degree in Nutritional Management from SUNY Empire State College. She is a New York State certified Dietitian-Nutritionist and, for 29 years, was employed by Nassau County as a dietitian.

Vera is an active member of the Brooklyn community. Since 1968, she participated in organizations such as the Stuyvesant Heights Lions Club and the Brooklyn Club of the National Association of Negro Business and Professional Women’s Clubs (“NANBPWC”). Inc. Vera is widely recognized for her commitments. Among her list of accolades, she received the Lion Foundation’s highest honor, the Melvin Jones Fellow Award; and the NANBPWC’s highest honor, the Sojourner Truth Award.

Vera is extremely dedicated to the NANBPWC and Lions Club, serving both organizations in several capacities over the years. Vera’s list of positions with the NANBPWC includes Third Vice President in charge of Youth and Young Adult Clubs, Chairperson of Public Relations, and Chairperson of the Bylaws Committee. Her list of positions with the Lions Club includes Fundraising Chairperson, Chairperson for Membership and Retention, and Chairperson for the Afternoon of Elegance.

From 1993 to 2003, Vera served as Public Board Member of the University of the State of New York’s Education Department. She was later reappointed to serve on the peer panel as an extended member until September 2013. Vera received an award of achievement and appreciation from the University of the State of New York’s Education Department for this dedication. The award was signed by President Mills and the Commissioner of Education.

Vera is a member of the American College of Counselors and a member of the World Changers Church of New York. Vera is the wife of the late Franger Winn, Jr.; mother to two daughters, Frangshone Winn-Amelema, Esq., and Gale Winn Inlaw, Library Media Specialist; and mother-in-law to Edward Amelema, M.D. She is also grandmother of Win Inlaw and David Franger Amelema.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing the life of Ms. Vera Winn.

UNITED FOOD & COMMERCIAL WORKERS LOCAL 135, LABOR UNION OF THE YEAR:

HON. BOB FILNER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a very dedicated Labor organization that has distinguished itself in San Diego County. In Labor, we realize that hard-fought victories can only be accomplished if we stand together to reach a common goal.

This is especially true when unions come together to stand up for issues that don’t directly affect their membership. The United Food and Commercial Workers Local 135 is an example of how all unions can contribute to Labor’s victories.

The blue and yellow of UFCW Local 135 can be seen at nearly every Labor Council event. From precinct walks to rallies and job actions, UFCW Local 135 understands that Labor must stand up for each other in order for it to achieve success.

In the weeks leading up to June’s primary election, at least a dozen UFCW Local 135 members volunteered for each precinct walk and weekly phone banks to protect union jobs in construction, an industry in which they have no members.

This was repeated in the fall as UFCW Local 135 strongly supported the election of Jerry Brown for governor.

This leadership by example was rewarded throughout 2010 as members from other unions supported UFCW Local 135’s priority issue of requiring large big box retailers to prove they don’t have a negative economic impact on neighborhoods.

The desire to write letters to voters, make phone calls and attend community planning meetings was a result of the respect won by UFCW Local 135 for the solidarity they’ve shown other unions.

For their exemplary display of leadership and volunteerism, I join with the San Diego and Imperial Counties Labor Council in honoring United Food and Commercial Workers Local 135 as 2011—San Diego and Imperial Counties Labor Council’s Union of the Year.

HON. CANDICE S. MILLER
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remember and honor notable women in America’s history, like Alice Paul and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who fought to extend American rights and freedoms to every American citizen. These women, who played an integral role in extending the right for women to vote, held American ideals and standards in the highest regard. One of the principles that they contended is the sanctity of life. Not only did America’s founding women fight to ensure each and every citizen was vested with the unalienable rights granted by our Constitution, they also fought to preserve the life of every American, including the unborn.

Today, I firmly believe that the right to life needs to continue to be protected. As a pro-life Member of Congress, I have made it a priority of mine to fight for the most vulnerable members of our society. I have been proud to uphold the sanctity of life by supporting legislation that affirms that life begins at the moment of conception, defunds Planned Parenthood and prohibits any federal funding from ever being used for abortions. I joined with my colleagues to repeal the government takeover of healthcare, which would overturn a 30 year bipartisan effort banning all federal dollars from being used for abortions.

I will continue to fight to preserve the America that these women fought for so hard, and this includes protecting the right to life for the unborn.

HONORING FIREFIGHTER DOUGLAS CASEY

HON. NAN A.S. HAYWORTH
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Ms. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Firefighter Douglas Casey of Kent, New York for his steadfast commitment to public safety and dedication to our community as a forty year active member of the Kent Volunteer Fire Department. Firefighter Casey is a founding member of the Kent Fire Department and has remained active for the entirety of its existence. Firefighters like Mr. Casey have a crucial role in protecting our homes and families. It is because of committed volunteer firefighters like Mr. Casey that our communities have active emergency responders that come to our rescue in our times of need.

Mr. Casey has a longstanding history of commitment to his community and his fellow firefighters. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to recognize Firefighter Douglas Casey for his 40 years of outstanding fire service.
Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the achievements of Ana Walker-Goldson.

Ana was born and raised in the Canal Zone of the Republic of Panama. She was exposed to business at an early age; her grandparents, Claude and Louise Walker, were proprietors of the McGrath Walker Business School and Publishers of the Panama Tribune. Ana holds two degrees from Long Island University: a B.A. in Business Administration and a M.A. in Communication. Over the years, she worked in an administrative capacity for several companies, including Beecher, Peck & Lewis and Borden, Inc.

Ana is a founding member, and former Senior Vice President, of the Caribbean American Chamber of Commerce & Industry, Inc (CACCI). She presently serves as the Director of Operations for the Flatbush Caton Market on behalf of CACCI. Flatbush Caton Market, located in the East Flatbush section of Brooklyn, houses over 45 vendors of diverse ethnic backgrounds and specialities and offers offices. The market was envisioned and initiated by former New York City Councilmember Una Clarke to remove vendors from the streets. It was officially opened in January 2002. Under Ana’s leadership, the market received the distinguished Village Voice “NYC 2009 Best Ethnic Market Award” and is recognized and showcased by numerous media outlets.

Ana is a mentor to many, including Aduke Aremu, with whom she partnered to create the International Arts Business School. Ana is widely recognized for her community dedication and youth advocacy. She received numerous awards from community leaders, including Congresswoman YVETTE CLARK and Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz.

Ana is married to a retired military officer, Fernando Goldson. They are proud parents of their daughter, Sonja, and equally proud of their grandchildren. Ana is truly a people person. She lives her life by being a blessing to those she serves. Ana’s greatest accomplishment is her daughter, a soft cleft baby and a breast cancer survivor. She thanks her mother, Iona Walker, for the gift of life and gives God Almighty all the glory for the things He has done and will continue to do in her life.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing Ana Walker-Goldson.

RECOGNIZING THE 125TH ANNIVERSARY OF TENSION ENVELOPE COMPANY

HON. EMANUEL CLEAVER
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. CLEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I proudly rise today in recognition of the 125th Anniversary of Tension Envelope Corporation, a prestigious family-owned business in Missouri’s Fifth Congressional District, which I am honored to represent. In 1886, the forerunner of Tension Envelope opened in Kansas City, Missouri, as Berkowitz and Company. Named after its founder, William Berkowitz, the company specialized in popular advertising novelties and business stationery. In 1894, the company put into operation the first envelope machine west of the Mississippi River.

By 1901, the company began to fully concentrate on envelopes, which were in great demand by businesses and organizations. William Berkowitz’s two sons joined the firm in 1907, and the company’s first envelope patent was issued in 1909. Sons Walter and E.B. Berkowitz assumed management of the company as the 1920s approached. Walter soon discovered new high-speed envelope folding machinery that had been developed in Germany. The company purchased the North American patent and distribution rights and brought the equipment into the United States, revolutionizing the American envelope industry.

In 1937, the company acquired another pioneer in the U.S. envelope industry, the Tension Envelope Company of Brooklyn, New York. In 1944, all of the Berkowitz Envelope manufacturing and sales operations were consolidated under the widely recognized name of Tension Envelope Corporation. In 1962, Bert Berkley, grandson of the company’s founder, became President and CEO of Tension. In 1988, Bill Berkley, great grandson of the founder, became President and CEO.

Today, Tension Envelope Corporation is one of the nation’s leading manufacturers of envelope products, selling directly to companies and organizations across the United States. Tension manufactures many of the envelopes you see and handle every day. With its headquarters in Kansas City, Missouri, the heart of Missouri’s Fifth Congressional District, Tension produces over eleven billion envelopes a year with plants, distribution, and service offices stretching from coast to coast.

Not only have Tension’s leaders revolutionized an industry with their ingenuity, they are also dedicated family philanthropists. Bert Berkley, Chairman of Tension, has a long history of participation in local, regional, and national civic and advisory councils. He even co-authored a book, Giving Back, on the subject of volunteering, sharing with the community, and involvement with charitable endeavors. My good friend, Richard Berkley, served as Mayor of Kansas City, Missouri, for three terms prior to my election to that post in 1991. He currently serves as Tension’s Secretary and Treasurer as well as several area civic advisory boards. Current President and CEO, Bill Berkley, has served on the boards of several area nonprofits, businesses, and education organizations.

Considering the tremendous contributions of Tension Envelope Corporation to Missouri’s Fifth Congressional District and surrounding areas, it is an honor and a privilege to recognize the leaders and employees for their one hundred and twenty-five years of excellent service to the Kansas City area and beyond. Mr. Speaker, please join me in celebrating the Berkley Family and expressing our gratitude to Tension Envelope Corporation for their incredible dedication to both their industry and community.

JIM MAHLER, LABOR LEADER OF THE YEAR

HON. BOB FILNER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a very dedicated committed leader of the labor movement who deserves to be recognized for his many achievements and contributions to organized labor.

The past year was an important one in the history of California’s Labor Movement, with workers campaigning to restore a pro-labor governor for California. Tens of thousands of California’s union members dedicated 2010 to ensuring that our next governor would stand up for the fundamental right of workers to organize.

In San Diego, American Federation of Teachers Local 1931 President Jim Mahler answered nearly every call in ensuring that collective bargaining rights and worker protections remained a priority at both state and local levels.

As workers prepared for the March for California’s Future, which featured union members marching from Bakersfield to Sacramento in a call to solve the state’s budget crisis, Mahler committed his union to driving its success. Several busloads of AFT Local 1931 members and their students left San Diego City College at dawn on March 5, bound for Los Angeles and Bakersfield, to kick off the historic march.

When the Labor Council proposed an aggressive approach to courting voters’ support for Jerry Brown for governor, Mahler and AFT Local 1931 committed $100,000 to fund the program. He also realized money alone could not win the governor’s race, so he organized nightly phone banks to support Brown and Proposition 25, the simple majority budget bill. His organizing yielded phone bank nights and Saturday precinct walks that overflowed with student and teacher volunteers.

For his dedication to keeping California worker-friendly, I join with the Executive Board of the Labor Council in congratulating Jim Mahler as the 2011 Labor Leader of the Year. company resulted in a promotion to Specialty Clinics Supervisor. Denise enrolled in the Nurse’s Aide Program at Medgar Evers College shortly thereafter.

Upon graduating Medgar Evers College Nurse’s Aide Program, and successfully passing the Boards, Denise continued her education: She became a Patient Care Associate, after attending Woodhull Hospital’s Patient Care Associate Program; and received her Licensed Practical Nurse certification from the Brooklyn Adult Learning Center. Today, Denise works as a Licensed Practical Nurse in the Adult Medicine Clinic.

Denise’s passion for delivering health care extends to community service. She participated in numerous programs and organized events over the years, including Arlington Terrace & 154th Street Stop the Violence; and Weekend “Safe Place,” where she mentored students and created educational, social and sports activities. In addition, she consistently participates in the annual Breast Cancer Walk with her children, brothers, sisters, nephews and nieces. Denise believes that everyone has a contribution to make in caring and encouraging family and the community. Denise, with her selfless ways, is an example of commitment, giving so much of her time for a better community.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing the life of Ms. Denise Sullivan.
SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, March 17, 2011 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.
