WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 2014

UNITED STATES SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 10:02 a.m., in Room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Patrick J. Leahy, Chairman of the Committee, presiding.

Present: Senators Leahy, Schumer, Durbin, Whitehouse, Franken, Coons, Blumenthal, Grassley, Sessions, Lee, and Flake.

Chairman LEAHY. It seems that somebody has an important phone call that they may want to—I do not want the hearing to interrupt their phone call, if they would like to step outside to take it. They may or may not be able to get back in. He said subtly.

We have the two Senators from Wisconsin who are here, and I know we have the nominee from Wisconsin, James Peterson. If the Ranking Member has no objection, why don't we let Senator Johnson and Senator Baldwin go first, because I know you have other committees you are supposed to be at, so I appreciate your being here, Senator Johnson. Go ahead.

PRESENTATION OF JAMES D. PETERSON, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN, BY HON. RON JOHNSON, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

before the Judiciary Committee to recommend Mr. James D. Peterson to be the United States District Judge for the Western District of Wisconsin.

Before going further, I would like to thank my colleague Senator Baldwin and the individuals that served on our bipartisan commission for all their hard work and cooperation that resulted in the selection of this well-qualified jurist to serve the Nation and the people of Wisconsin's Western District well.

As many of you know, the Western District is currently facing a judicial emergency. United States District Judge Barbara Crabb has continued to serve on the bench despite retiring 4 years ago, and I sincerely appreciate her dedication to the State of Wisconsin during this vacancy. I have full confidence that with Jim's expertise and experience he will now be able to fill that void.

Jim has deep roots in Wisconsin, having earned a bachelor's, master's, and a Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison before his first career as an associate professor of film studies at Notre Dame University. After a number of productive and successful years of academic life, his restlessness for intellectual challenge was piqued when his wife, Sue Collins, who is also here with Jim today, interested him in the law as she was teaching legal writing at Valparaiso University Law School. They both returned to the University of Wisconsin where they each obtained their law degrees.

Mr. Peterson is currently the leader of the law firm Godfrey and Kahn's intellectual property litigation working group and has handled a wide variety of commercial and constitutional disputes. He has also served as the local counsel in nearly two dozen patent disputes in the Western District of Wisconsin. In addition, he has appeared before the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, which hears appeals of patent cases from district courts across the country. This experience is important in the Western District of Wisconsin which oversees many complex intellectual property cases. Since 2007, the Western District of Wisconsin was ranked among the 25 most popular courts for patent litigation, largely due to the court's speed, commonly referred to as "the rocket docket."

Jim is also the author of numerous academic publications which proved helpful to everyone involved during his application process. Right after law school, he was firsthand the challenges and requirements associated with being a judge when he served as the law clerk to the Honorable David D. Deininger of the Wisconsin Court of Appeals.

Jim has had a challenging and successful career as a legal practitioner. I have no doubt he will as a Federal district court judge excel in yet another career for which he is well suited. Jim has my full support, and I am happy to recommend him to the Senate for swift confirmation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you very much, Senator Johnson. You and I have discussed the nominee before, and I appreciate your being here.

Senator Baldwin, I am so happy to have you here also. Please go ahead.

PRESENTATION OF JAMES D. PETERSON, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN, BY HON. TAMMY BALDWIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF WISCONSIN

Senator BALDWIN. Thank you. Good morning, Mr. Chairman and Ranking Member Grassley. It gives me great pleasure to appear before you this morning to introduce attorney James Peterson, the President's nominee for the United States District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin.

The filling of judicial vacancies has been a top priority for me since even before I was sworn in to the U.S. Senate a year ago. The people of Wisconsin deserve to have these vacancies filled with highly qualified public servants who will work hard for them in our judicial system. Jim Peterson will be such a jurist when he is confirmed by the Senate.

I am proud to have worked together with Senator Johnson to find common ground on this important issue for Wisconsin, and together we have put in place a Federal judicial nominating commission and a process for moving judicial nominations forward. James Peterson was among those recommended by the nonpartisan commission that we established last April.

In August, Senator Johnson and I submitted Jim's name to the White House as a candidate to fill the open U.S. Federal district judgeship for the Western District of Wisconsin. I applaud the President's nomination of James Peterson to serve. Mr. Peterson will make an outstanding Federal judge, and his nomination marks an important step forward in fulfilling a judgeship that has been vacant for nearly 6 years.

Jim's experience and expertise make him an outstanding choice for this position, and I am proud to join Senator Johnson in endorsing his nomination, and I am proud to come before you today to introduce Jim Peterson.

Jim is a member of the intellectual property and litigation practice groups in the Madison office of Godfrey and Kahn, and he is a leader of the firm's intellectual property litigation working group. For the last 14 years, his professional life has been substantially devoted to practice for the firm and its national clients in the United States District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin.

In addition to his work in the Western District of Wisconsin, he has appeared before the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, and the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, which hears appeals of patent cases from district courts across the country.

Jim is the president of the Western District Bar Association. The mission of the association is to work with attorneys, the court, and the public to facilitate the just, speedy, respectful, and efficient resolution of all matters before the court—qualities that have been the hallmarks of the Western District of Wisconsin.

As you heard, he earned his J.D. from the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1998, where he was an officer of the moot court and a member of the Wisconsin Law Review and the Order of the Coif. From 1998 to 1999, he served as a law clerk to my friend and former colleague, Honorable David Deininger, on the Wisconsin Court of Appeals. He is a member of the adjunct faculty of the University of Wisconsin Law School, having taught copyright law and public speaking workshops for law students. And as you also heard, he received his Ph.D. in communications from the University of Wisconsin in 1986.

Jim lives in my home town of Madison, Wisconsin, with his wife, Sue Collins, who is also an attorney. I am very pleased that she is here today, along with their two daughters, Lauren Collins Peterson and Anna Collins Peterson; Anna's fiance, Derek Behnke; and Jim's parents, James D. Peterson, Sr., and Patricia Peterson.

Senator Johnson and I agree on James Peterson's nomination to the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin, and I hope that our joint support sends a strong message to this Committee and the entire Senate that he is the right choice for this judgeship.

I urge the Committee and the full Senate to consider and confirm his nomination without undue delay.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman LEAHY. Well, thank you, Senator Baldwin, and I also appreciate the time you spent with me, as well as Senator Johnson, on this nominee, and thank you.

Senator Warren, Senator Durbin has suggested you go first. You have Indira Talwani to be U.S. district judge. Please go ahead.

PRESENTATION OF INDIRA TALWANI, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS, BY HON. ELIZABETH WARREN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE
STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator WARREN. Thank you very much. Thank you, Senator Durbin, thank you, Mr. Chairman, thank you, Ranking Member Grassley, and Members of the Committee.

Chairman LEAHY. Also, I should mention to Senator Baldwin, you do not have to stay. I am not trying to get rid of you, but—
[Laughter.]

Chairman LEAHY. I know, like all of us, you have got about 12 other things you are supposed to be at. I appreciate your support.

Senator WARREN. So thank you very much, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am very pleased to be here this morning to introduce Indira Talwani. She has been nominated to fill a judicial vacancy on the District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

Ms. Talwani's nomination came to me after she was recommended for this position by the Advisory Committee on Massachusetts Judicial Nominations. The advisory committee is comprised of distinguished members of the Massachusetts legal community, including prominent academics and prominent litigators and is chaired by the former Massachusetts District Court Judge Nancy Gertner. The advisory committee's recommendation reflects the strength of Ms. Talwani's resume, the exceptionally warm reviews that she received from those who have worked with her, and the firm conviction of the Massachusetts legal community that she will make an excellent district court judge.

Indira Talwani is the daughter of immigrants from India and Germany. She graduated with honors from Harvard University and was later named Order of the Coif at Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California-Berkeley. She is here today with her husband, Tod; her daughter Natasha, and her son, Nico; and her brother, Rajeev. I know they are all immensely proud to be able to attend this hearing and provide their love and support on this extraordinary day, as their son, Shelton, who was unable to be here.

Immediately after graduating, Ms. Talwani spent a year serving as a law clerk to Judge Stanley Weigel of the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, building practical experience that will serve her well as a district court judge. She subsequently worked for several years as an associate and later a partner at the firm of Altshuler, Berzon, Nussbaum and Rubin in San Francisco before moving in 1999 to join Segal Roitman LLP in Boston, where she is currently a partner.

Ms. Talwani has an impressive track record as a litigator, having represented clients in matters before the Massachusetts State trial courts and appeals courts, as well as the district court to which she has been nominated, the Federal courts of appeals, and the U.S. Supreme Court.

In addition to her broad credentials and wide litigation experience, Ms. Talwani has developed particular expertise in legal issues that relate to employment. She is the associate editor of a treatise on the Family and Medical Leave Act, compiled by the American Bar Association. Her work representing an investment advisor whistleblower who was allegedly retaliated against for reporting accounting irregularities to her supervisor earned her the distinction of being named one of Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly's top ten lawyers for 2010, and she is currently assisting in the argument of that case before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ms. Talwani is also committed to public service, providing pro bono representation to indigent clients. She has worked with the Greater Boston Legal Services to ensure that low-income clients have access to counsel.

Ms. Talwani's nomination is strongly supported by the Asian American Lawyers Association of Massachusetts. Asian Americans are a fast-growing segment of our State's population, and that growth is reflected in our State bench, which currently has ten Asian American judges. Remarkably, if she is confirmed, Ms. Talwani will be the first individual of Asian descent to serve on the Federal bench in Massachusetts.

Indira Talwani is a first-rate litigator with impressive credentials. Her unique professional and personal background will bring important perspective to the Federal bench in Massachusetts. I am proud to have recommended her to President Obama, and I look forward to her approval by this Committee and her swift confirmation by the full Senate. Thank you very much.

Chairman LEAHY. Well, thank you very much. I know that—I say this as President Pro Tem, which means, as the Senator from Massachusetts knows, I sometimes preside for about 1 minute at the opening of the session and then somebody else takes over. Senator Markey is currently presiding over the Senate so that I can be here, and I know he joins with you, too, in the support of this outstanding nominee. So thank you very, very much.

Senator WARREN. Yes, he does, and thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you.

Senator Durbin, you have also an extraordinary nominee for the Southern District of Illinois. Let me yield to you.

PRESENTATION OF NANCY J. ROSENSTENGEL, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS, BY HON. DICK DURBIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

Senator DURBIN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am pleased to introduce Nancy Rosenstengel to the Committee. She has been nominated to serve as district court judge in the Southern District of Illinois to fill the judgeship in East St. Louis left vacant by the retirement of Judge Patrick Murphy in December.

Ms. Rosenstengel knows the St. Louis courthouse very well, currently serves as clerk of the court for the Southern District, a position she has held since 2009. She is the chief administrative officer for the court responsible for the day-to-day management functions of the court, and she has received widespread praise for her handling of this responsibility.

Previously she served for 11 years as judicial law clerk to Judge Murphy, the judge she is nominated to replace. As Judge Murphy's career law clerk, she assisted him in hundreds of civil and criminal proceedings during all stages of litigation. It is hard to imagine a better training for judgeship.

Ms. Rosenstengel also worked for 5 years in private practice at the law firm Sandberg, Phoenix and von Gontard in St. Louis, where she handled a broad range of litigation matters.

Born in Alton, Illinois, currently lives in Belleville, Illinois, received her B.A. cum laude from the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign, her J.D. cum laude from Southern Illinois University School of Law, Ms. Rosenstengel's nomination is historic. No woman—no woman—has ever served as an Article III Federal judge in the Southern District of Illinois. Upon confirmation, Nancy Rosenstengel will be the first, and I am sure she will do an outstanding job.

I want to thank my colleague Senator Mark Kirk for his support of this nomination as well. In Illinois, we have a bipartisan process for recommending judicial candidates to the White House, and we have had a pretty good record of bringing forward some outstanding nominees for very timely confirmation, and I hope this will be no exception. I am sure it will not be.

Ms. Rosenstengel was recommended to me by a bipartisan screening committee which we established, and they were proud to recommend her name to me, and I was proud to recommend her with Senator Kirk to the President. I look forward to working with my colleagues to see that she moves through the confirmation process swiftly. I know she will have a chance to introduce her family with more specificity, but I want to thank her husband, Jon, and her three children, Katie, Anna, and Jack, for joining us. They are all welcome here today.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you, and I appreciate what you and Senator Kirk have done, and I think, Senator Grassley, you have a statement from Senator Kirk.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes, thank you, Mr. Chairman. This will be in support of the same nominee as Senator Durbin, so we will put that in the record.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you. And I appreciate the strong support of both Senator Durbin and Senator Kirk on this.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. PATRICK J. LEAHY, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF VERMONT

Chairman LEAHY. Now we mentioned the three judicial nominees. We are going to have five nominees before us. Let me speak about a couple of them.

Debo Patrick Adegbile—even though he works for me, I always have trouble with that, and I apologize—is nominated to be the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice. He currently serves as Senior Counsel on the Judiciary Committee, where he has done exceptional work and has provided me with prudent counsel on many, many issues.

Like other Members of the Committee who have had staff members nominated to positions in the administration or to the judiciary, the nominations come with mixed emotions. As I am sure Senators Hatch, Cornyn, Lee, and Schumer can attest, it is no surprise when members of our staffs on either side of the aisle are tapped by the administration for positions.

Anyone who knows this nominee appreciates that he is an excellent choice to lead the Civil Rights Division at the Department of Justice. He brings a wealth of experience. I remember when he testified before the Committee as an expert on voting rights in 2006. He has earned a reputation for his calm demeanor and for working to build consensus. He is a careful lawyer and a good listener. And these skills have made him one of the country's most prominent appellate advocates. Former Solicitor General Paul Clement under President George W. Bush said the following about Debo: "I have litigated both with and against Debo and have heard him argue in the Supreme Court. I have always found him to be a formidable advocate of the highest intellect, skills, and integrity."

Like Justice Thurgood Marshall, he served as Acting President and Director Counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund and also as Associate Director Counsel and Director of Litigation. He argued two significant cases on voting rights during that time before the U.S. Supreme Court. He also litigated in private practice at the well-known, highly respected law firm of Paul, Weiss for 7 years.

Let me just tell you a little bit about him. He was born in the Bronx to an Irish mother—thus the middle name, I expect—and a father from Nigeria. He grew up in poverty and experienced periods of homelessness. But through hard work and grit, he graduated from Connecticut College and then earned his law degree from the New York University School of Law. And I might say this to his two lovely daughters I had a chance to meet earlier. They may not appreciate it yet, but they will as they get older. But his journey from the Bronx to this nomination is a remarkable example of the American dream, one of the best. I know he has been shaped by these experiences.

Today the Committee also welcomes John Carlin, who has been nominated to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division at the Department of Justice, an increasingly significant position. And, of course, we have heard Senators refer to the three U.S. district judges.

I am going to yield to the Ranking Member for an opening statement, and then we will call the nominees up. And I know Senator Schumer at that point is going to introduce John Carlin.

Senator Grassley.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. CHUCK GRASSLEY,
A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF IOWA

Senator GRASSLEY. First, I, like my colleagues, congratulate the nominees and the families that are proud of their nomination who happen to be here with them today and probably a lot of people that are proud of their nomination who cannot be here today as well. We are considering three district court nominees and two important Department of Justice positions, one of these to the Civil Rights Division. That Division has had its share of controversy lately. I have reminded my colleagues of the predecessor's involvement of this office orchestrating the quid pro quo between the Department of Justice and the city of St. Paul where the Department of Justice went to great lengths to get a case withdrawn from the Supreme Court so that the legal theory known as "disparate impact" would evade a Supreme Court decision. And, of course, there have been very disturbing allegations of politicizing the hiring process at the Civil Rights Division. In fact, March last year, the Inspector General report criticized the Civil Rights Division for using hiring practices, noting that the primary criterion used by the hiring committee resulted in a pool of candidates that was "overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation" from the IG report. So I have some concerns with the way that the Civil Rights Division has been run.

Now, that has nothing to do with the nominee, but we do have some concern about the nominee's legal experience, and we have this letter from the Fraternal Order of Police, an organization that is very well respected by both sides of the aisle, submitting a letter strongly opposing the nominee for the Civil Rights Division. The Fraternal Order of Police represents 330,000 men and women who are on the front lines of law enforcement, putting their lives on the lines to protect us every day. So when they write to inform us of their "extreme disappointment, displeasure, and vehement opposition" to the nominee for the Civil Rights Division, I think that we should give their concerns thoughtful consideration, and I am sure that the nominee will be willing to address some of those concerns and give his point of view on them.

I look forward then to hearing from the nominee on these and other issues, and I would ask consent that that letter be placed in the record.

Chairman LEAHY. Without objection, so ordered.

Senator GRASSLEY. And then the rest of my statement is in regard to the work of the Committee. My colleagues have heard that, so I will summarize that by simply saying that over the course of the last 5 years we have been able to approve 217 of the President's lower court judges and at this point disapproved on the floor of only two, a 99-percent record.

The rest of my statement is in the record with more detail on that point.

[The prepared statement of Ranking Member Grassley appears as a submission for the record.]

Chairman LEAHY. And we will look forward to approving on the floor the whole bunch of them that are still sitting there.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes, and you will have to work that out with Reid and McConnell. That is a fact.

Chairman LEAHY. I am going to—my religion believes in miracles, but only to an extent. But, anyway, why don't I call Mr. Carlin, Mr. Adegbile, Mr. Peterson, Ms. Rosenstengel, and Ms. Talwani up here.

What I am going to do, before I yield to Senator Schumer, if I just might ask all the nominees—I should have done this before you sat down. Please stand and raise your right hand. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you will give in this matter will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. CARLIN. I do.

Mr. ADEGBILE. I do.

Mr. PETERSON. I do.

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. I do.

Ms. TALWANI. I do.

Chairman LEAHY. Let the record note that they all agreed to that.

Senator Schumer, you wished to introduce Mr. Carlin.

PRESENTATION OF JOHN P. CARLIN, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, AND DEBO P. ADEGBILE, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, BY HON. CHUCK SCHUMER, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW YORK

Senator SCHUMER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and I thank you, Senator Grassley, and other Members of the Committee. You know, it is not uncommon for me to go from Committee to Committee in the Senate introducing talented and public service-oriented New Yorkers to my colleagues. As I am sure some of my colleagues know, four of the five boroughs are represented—of New York City, of course, are represented on—

Chairman LEAHY. We do not have many boroughs in Vermont. [Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. Are represented on the Supreme Court: Justice Ginsburg from my home borough of Brooklyn; she went to P.S. 238 where my wife went; Justice Scalia from Queens; Justice Sotomayor from the Bronx; and Justice Kagan from Manhattan. So it is not surprising today that we have two New Yorkers poised to take important leadership positions at the Department of Justice.

I first want to introduce John Carlin. Mr. Carlin is a native of New York and nominated to be the Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division of DOJ. Mr. Carlin graduated high school from Dalton in Manhattan, where I am going this Friday to watch my niece in the eighth grade—she is on the varsity basketball team, I have been told only the second time that has been done. Who knows? The Dalton Tigers—and earned his undergraduate degree from Williams College, his law degree from Harvard Law School, and he was articles editor of the Harvard Journal on Legislation.

After graduating from law school, Mr. Carlin dedicated his entire career to the Department of Justice. He has served as trial attorney for the Tax Division, an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, a senior adviser and chief of staff to Robert Mueller, then Director of the FBI, and as the Acting head of the National Security Division.

In the course of his career, he has prosecuted everything from homicides to public corruption cases, and he has developed a special expertise in something we dearly need, and that is in cyber crime. It is probably the next redoubt for organized criminals—the cyber world is the next redoubt for organized criminals and terrorists. Mr. Carlin is recipient of the DOJ Award for Special Achievement and has also been awarded the prestigious Samuel J. Heyman fellowship for Federal Government service, so over the course of 14 years in his legal career, Carlin has quietly and capably served at the nexus of law enforcement and intelligence.

I have more to say about Mr. Carlin, but I will conclude by saying the most important thing. His wife, Sarah, and his cute little daughter who I saw, Sylvie, is here; and his parents, Patricia and Roy, who I hope, Mr. Carlin, are still residents of New York. Good, good.

I would like to say a word, with the Chairman's indulgence, on another New Yorker who he had the honor to introduce because he served well on this Committee and we recognize Debo Adegbile for the great work he did there. I just want to add my thoughts to what Senator Leahy said.

The Civil Rights Division is the crowning jewel of civil rights enforcement in this country. Under the capable leadership of now Secretary Tom Perez, it recovered from some of the dark days during the previous administration, and I know that Mr. Adegbile has committed his entire career not just to politics but to the enforcement of the very laws that his Division protects as its core function, and his primary goal as a lawyer has been to interpret and apply our country's long-held anti-discrimination principles. He did a great job under your leadership, Mr. Chairman. I am confident he will do a great job in the Civil Rights Division. And he came up the hard way. He even spent time in one of New York's most notorious residences for the underprivileged, the infamous Martinique Hotel. And he has come all the way from there to here, which is a testament to his hard work and a beacon for the precepts of equal opportunity that he will now enforce.

So I thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you very much.

I will put in the record from Senator Gillibrand the introductions for Mr. Carlin and Mr. Adegbile, and those will be placed in the record.

Chairman LEAHY. Let me start first with each one of you, and I will call on you if you have any comments, Mr. Carlin, but I would also like you to introduce—I know that Senator Schumer has, but introduce again whatever family members or anybody else here. It will someday be in the Carlin archives, and you will want to be able to refer to it.

STATEMENT OF JOHN P. CARLIN, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. CARLIN. Well, thank you, Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley and distinguished Members of this Committee. It is an honor to appear before you today, and I thank you for considering my nomination. And thank you, Senator Schumer, for your very kind introduction. Go, Tigers.

I would also like to thank the President for his confidence in nominating me and the Attorney General for his support.

And, Mr. Chairman, I would like to introduce the members of my family who are here today and thank them for their love and support over the years: my wife, Sarah, and our daughter, Sylvie; my parents, Roy and Patricia, who traveled here from New York City yesterday in the 8 degree weather; my sister, Jennifer, and my brother-in-law, Don; and my nephew, Daniel, and niece, Katie, who came in from northern New Jersey.

I also want to thank my wife for her countless sacrifices to allow me to pursue a career in public service, and thank my parents who have taught my sister and me the important lesson, both by example and by word, of dedication, discipline, and always trying to do what is right.

With the support of all of my family and their selflessness, I have been able to choose the path that has led me here today.

And I would like to thank the people from the National Security Division and the friends who have come here today to show their support.

It has really been a privilege to spend my entire legal career with the Department of Justice and to witness a time of enormous transformation after the terrible events of September 11th. As with so many Americans, I and my family recall vividly the events of that day, the horror of senseless murder and the dark cloud of ashes that hung over New York City for all too long. My brother-in-law was across the street, working at the time, from the Twin Towers, and my father was in the subway underneath. And I remember as our family called each other to determine that each one of us was safe. We were lucky.

Our mission at the National Security Division is clear: Prevent future terrorist attacks while preserving our civil liberties. It is a special honor and privilege to be considered for a position charged with leading the Division that this body, Congress, created to unite all the Department of Justice's national security elements, to bring to bear all tools in the fight against terrorism and other threats against national security.

Serving as the Acting Assistant Attorney General for National Security for approximately the last 10 months, I have been both humbled and driven by the responsibilities and mission that you have entrusted to the position. This mission builds upon the lessons we have learned through our evolving approach to national security over the past years, and my experience has taught me about the transformative power of lawyers in a government based on the rule of law and the sense of duty and mission that comes with it.

For more than a decade, I have learned from and worked alongside some legendary public servants as the United States undertook fundamental changes in our approach to combating the threat of terrorism and other emerging national security challenges and, in particular, working with FBI Director Bob Mueller as his counsel and later as his chief of staff to help the Bureau evolve from a law enforcement agency into a threat-based, intelligence-driven national security organization.

Here at the National Security Division, we must apply and are applying those lessons both to meet the growing national security cyber threat and to continue to evolve to meet other national security threats. And if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I look forward to continuing this important evolution.

Thank you again for the opportunity to appear before you today and for your consideration, and I look forward to answering your questions.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you very much.

Mr. Adegbile, would you please—I have already met your family, but there are other members of your family, too. Would you introduce everybody here from your family? And then I will yield to you for any statement you may wish to make. Press the button.

Mr. ADEGBILE. Excuse me.

Chairman LEAHY. There you go.

STATEMENT OF DEBO P. ADEGBILE, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. ADEGBILE. Thank you, Senator. I am joined today by my wife, Susan Haskell, whose love, kindness, and strength sustains me and helps make me a better person. We are joined also by our two lovely daughters, Sela and Devan. Sela and Devan are the joy of our lives, and Susan and I could not be more proud of them.

We are also joined by my mother-in-law, Carol Haskell, a person of tremendous grace and love for her family.

Chairman LEAHY. And I would note for the record that your wife is a graduate of the University of Vermont. I just thought I would throw that out.

[Laughter.]

Senator SCHUMER. Where was she raised?

Chairman LEAHY. Never mind.

[Laughter.]

Mr. ADEGBILE. Connecticut, for the record.

Chairman LEAHY. Senator Blumenthal sat up on that one.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I will await my turn, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. ADEGBILE. In addition, Senator, there are many friends here spanning from my years in grade school through law school. I am joined by former and present colleagues, and I thank them all for their attendance, whether or not that attendance was compelled.

Thank you, Chairman—

Chairman LEAHY. We will submit all their names for the record later on.

Mr. ADEGBILE. Thank you, Chairman Leahy, for your leadership of this Committee. Thank you, Ranking Member Grassley, for your long service to this Nation. And thank you to all the Members of the Committee.

I also would like to thank President Obama for the nomination and the President and Attorney General Holder for the opportunity, if confirmed, to serve our Nation as Assistant Attorney General.

I have a deep appreciation for the opportunities America provides. I know, too, that the road to opportunity can be long and difficult. I have faced the challenges and learned from them. I have learned that that which binds is stronger than that which threatens to divide us.

I have benefited from the transformative power of educational opportunity. I know firsthand that in our country, with the benefit of education, steadfastness, and a bit of good luck, the circumstances of one's birth need not limit one's aspirations or achievements.

I have an unshakable belief in the value that we assign to civil rights. At the very outset, our Constitution sets as its goal as building a "more perfect union," words that are both inspirational and aspirational.

The Civil Rights Division, through the laws it enforces, protects all of us. The commitment and expertise of the public servants in the Division have dramatically and demonstrably improved our country. We are a stronger Nation today for these efforts. And yet our past successes should not limit our future achievements. We can do more to protect civil rights, we must do more to protect civil rights, and the Division stands ready to protect the civil rights of all Americans.

I have seen the impact that enforcing civil rights can have on real people's lives. Improved employment options, greater access to educational opportunity, removal of unnecessary barriers for people with disabilities, and ensuring fuller access to the political process, among other efforts, make lives more fulfilling.

If confirmed, I will commit to lead the Division with fidelity to its mission and with the sensitivity, fairness, and integrity that civil rights work, effective civil rights work, requires.

It is my great privilege to appear before you this morning, and I look forward to your questions.

Chairman LEAHY. Well, thank you very much.

Mr. Peterson, please go ahead, and if you have family you would like to introduce, please feel free to.

STATEMENT OF JAMES D. PETERSON, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF WISCONSIN

Mr. PETERSON. Thank you, Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley and all the Members of the Committee, for considering my nomination. I want to thank the President for nominating me, and I want to particularly thank Senators Baldwin and Johnson for their kind remarks and especially for their work with the nominating commission to fill not only this vacancy but some others in Wisconsin and the Seventh Circuit.

I would like to introduce some members of my family. With me today is my closest adviser and outstanding attorney, my wife of 32 years, Susan Collins. I am also pleased that our daughters could be here. Our daughter Lauren traveled from the borough of Manhattan to be here today, Lauren Peterson. Our younger daughter, Anna Peterson, came with us from Madison, and with her also is the newest member of our family, her fiance, Derek Behnke.

I also want to acknowledge my sister, Lisa, and my brother, Wes, who cannot be here with us today, but I am sure they will watch the webcast.

The last important guests that I would like to introduce are my Mom and Dad, James D. Peterson, Sr., and Patricia Peterson. I know they are proud of me, but I wanted to take this opportunity to tell you how proud I am of them. They worked very hard to make sure that my brother and sister and I had the benefit of an education from the University of Wisconsin. They did not have the benefit of that education, but they were smart, they worked hard, and they both went on to outstanding professional careers, and they were able to retire early and are now enjoying a long and well-deserved retirement in the great State of North Carolina. I want to let you know that they have truly lived the American dream, and they have been an inspiration to me my entire life. Thank you, Mom and Dad.

And with that, Senators, I welcome your questions.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you very much.

And, Ms. Rosenstengel.

STATEMENT OF NANCY J. ROSENSTENGEL, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. Good morning. I would like to thank Senator Durbin for the introduction and Senator Kirk for his role in this process.

I thank President Obama for the nomination and Chairman Leahy, Senator Grassley, and the entire Committee for giving me the opportunity to appear here today and for considering my nomination.

With me today is my husband, Jon Rosenstengel. We have been married for 17 years, and he has always been very supportive of my career, and for that I am very grateful. Together we are raising three beautiful children while balancing our legal careers, which is some days an easier task than others.

I am blessed to have my children with me here today. My daughter Kate is 15 and a sophomore at Mascoutah High School in Mascoutah, Illinois. We strategically placed her between the other two to referee if necessary. My daughter Anna will turn 14 tomorrow, and I am excited that she will always remember celebrating her 14th birthday in our Nation's capital. And last but not least, my son, Jack, is 11 and he is in fifth grade at Mascoutah Elementary School.

Also, I would like to acknowledge those who could not be with me here today but I am sure are watching on the webcast: my mother, Joyce Neimayer, in Glen Carbon, Illinois; my mother-in-law, Janet Rosenstengel, in Belleville, Illinois; my brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law, Jeff and Lee Bonnefield, Jeremy and Cian Rosenstengel, and our nieces and nephews, Jim, Jerry, Julie, and Rachel; my aunt and uncle, Lolly and Ron Davies, who are watching from Casa Grande, Arizona; and Jon's cousins, who I grew up with, who are all lawyers, watching in Dallas, Denver, and Chicago; as well as Jon's aunt and uncle, Jerry and Kathy Bonnefield; and many other friends of ours in southern Illinois who I will not begin to try to mention; and likely the entire court family in the Southern District.

I thank you again for the opportunity to appear here today, and I look forward to answering your questions.

Chairman LEAHY. Well, thank you very much.

And, Ms. Talwani, please, if you have family members you wish to introduce here?

STATEMENT OF INDIRA TALWANI, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

Ms. TALWANI. Yes, thank you, Chairman Leahy, thank you, Ranking Member Grassley, and to this Committee for holding this hearing on such an early date in January. Senator Warren, I appreciate the very, very kind introduction and the recommendation, and to President Obama for this incredible honor.

I have with me a number of my family members: first and foremost, my husband, Tod Cochran. We have been married for almost 27 years. He is the love of my life. Our three children, two of whom are here: Natasha, Shelton, and Nico. Natasha is a master's student at Clark University, and she is student teaching right now—not this moment. She is sitting here behind me, but she is a student teacher at University Park Campus School, and her tenth grade high school class is watching today's hearing. My son Shelton is a biochemistry major at Amherst College and was unable to come, but is watching. And Nico, our 10-year-old, is sitting behind me.

My brother, Rajeev, traveled here from Los Angeles, and I really appreciate that, on incredibly short notice. My other brother, Sunjay, in Helena, Montana, was not able to come but is watching.

My uncle and aunt, Pradeep and Anita Talwani, from South Carolina, traveled up; my cousin, Rohit Talwani, from Maryland; and my niece, Bonnie Doyle, and I should mention was a clerk on the Vermont Supreme Court, so we are making our Vermont connections, but traveled down here—

Chairman LEAHY. It does not hurt.

[Laughter.]

Ms. TALWANI. She traveled down here from New York.

My biggest thanks and appreciation go to my parents. My father and mother taught me so much about hard work, integrity, the value of family. They celebrated their—

Chairman LEAHY. Take your time.

Ms. TALWANI. They celebrated their 55th anniversary last year before my mother passed away. And my father is the one person who is upset at this early hearing because he is attending the Indian Geophysical Union meeting in Hyderabad, India, as we speak, and was unable to make it here on this notice. But there, too, I believe the American delegation is watching us from Hyderabad.

Others who could not come I owe appreciation to: my parents-in-law, sisters-in-law, brothers-in-law, nephews, nieces, cousins around the country; and my friends and law partners and colleagues from Massachusetts for these past 15 years, and California, the 10 years of practice before I returned to Massachusetts.

Thank you very much for this opportunity.

Chairman LEAHY. I am glad we are webcasting so your husband can see it—I mean, your father can see it, and I also have to think how proud your mother would be, too.

Let me begin the questions with Mr. Adegbile. You have had this distinguished career at a top law firm, also at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. We have heard one—a noted Republican Solicitor General who has praised you. You have testified before this Committee. You have worked for this Committee on these issues. How do your personal and professional experiences prepare you to lead the Civil Rights Division at the Department of Justice?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Thank you, Senator. I think about the extent to which America has provided me with great opportunities, the extent to which people who have come before me removed barriers so that I could thrive and work hard and, given the chance, serve other people. My experiences have called me toward service in different contexts, and the thing that I think is so wonderful about the work of the Civil Rights Division is that in many ways it is about opportunity and fair play.

I would commit myself, if confirmed, to advancing those causes through the laws that the Civil Rights Division advances every single day.

Chairman LEAHY. You know, Senator Grassley has referenced a letter, which is part of the record now, and one I have received, too. I worked a great deal with law enforcement over the years, having served 8 years in law enforcement myself. And they raise the question of the 1981 murder of a Philadelphia police officer. I think we all agree that this was a horrific crime, and the slaying of Officer Daniel Faulkner caused immeasurable loss for Officer Faulkner's family and his fellow officers. Whenever a law enforcement officer is killed, it affects all of us who depend upon the police for protection and leadership in our communities. I find it particularly poignant, having spent 8 years working with police officers.

So I would like you to explain the role that LDF played in the case, and just for background, in 1982 Mumia Abu Jamal was convicted by a jury of murdering Officer Daniel Faulkner, and he was sentenced to death. In 2001, a Federal judge in Philadelphia overturned the death sentence—not the conviction but the death sentence—because the original trial court gave jury instructions on the requirements to issue a death sentence that violated what the Supreme Court had laid down in their precedents. And I understand that between 2008 and 2011, your name appeared on three appellate briefs that LDF filed in appeals in this case.

So can you clarify, one, whether the appellate briefs filed by LDF and signed by you in this case disparaged the fallen officer or argued any of the facts surrounding the murder?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Absolutely. Those briefs, Senator, made no negative comment about the tragic loss of Officer Faulkner. It is a tremendous loss to lose a civil servant, a public law enforcement officer serving the people. And I would never personally or professionally say anything negative about that horrific loss. My sympathy goes to his family, to the community in Philadelphia, and it would be completely contrary to my person to make any negative comment about that particular situation.

Our work when I was a lawyer—and this is when I was at LDF—the work involved a legal issue relating to jury issues. It was about the legal process, and it was years after the conviction had been entered by the lower court. It was on an issue of whether or not the jury had properly been instructed, and ultimately several Federal courts found that the jury had not been properly instructed, and there was, in fact, a constitutional violation. It was on that basis that the death sentence was thrown out and Mr. Abu Jamal was resentenced to life without parole.

But it is important, I think, to understand that in no way does that legal representation, zealously as an advocate, cast any aspersion or look past the grievous loss of Sergeant Faulkner.

Chairman LEAHY. Okay. You know, like many others on this panel, as a lawyer, I have defended cases and then subsequently as a prosecutor prosecuted cases. I think we all agree that in any issue you should have advocates on both sides. Is that correct?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Absolutely. That is what our system calls for.

Chairman LEAHY. And when you argued this case before the Supreme Court, you had advocates on the other side arguing the other way. Is that not correct?

Mr. ADEGBILE. That is correct. And in briefs. I did not actually argue the case.

Chairman LEAHY. I mean in the briefs.

Mr. ADEGBILE. That is correct.

Chairman LEAHY. But you had others on the other side. Thank you. So how do you respond to those who criticize your involvement in this case?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Senator, what I understand about these types of cases, death penalty cases, is that they are the most harrowing cases. In every circumstance somebody has been killed, and that sends ripples through families, through communities, and through societies. So these are the hardest cases.

But our commitment in the Constitution is to follow our procedural rules even in those hardest cases, perhaps especially in those hardest cases, so that all of our rights can be vindicated. But I completely understand how difficult these cases are, and I have experienced that difficulty as a lawyer, and I take nothing away from the people who come to these cases and wonder how can somebody stand in the shoes and represent somebody. But that is what we commit ourselves to under our Constitution.

Chairman LEAHY. Thank you. I have exceeded my time, and I will yield to Senator Grassley, and Senator Coons has offered to take over the Chair for me as I have to go to another hearing. But thank you very much, and I can assure you that I support your nomination. I support the nomination of all five of the nominees who are here before us. I think the country is fortunate to have people of the quality of the men and women before us ready to serve.

Senator GRASSLEY. I am going to start with Mr. Carlin and refer to the President's Review Group of Intelligence and Communication Technology and the report that was recently issued. Many of the group's recommendations would affect the way in which national security investigations are conducted. One example, the review group's recommendations would require a judge to approve all national security letters before they are sent. This would obviously be a dramatic change.

Number one question: What would the operational effect of this recommendation be on national security investigations?

Mr. CARLIN. Thank you, Ranking Member, for your question. The President's review group has submitted a series of recommendations. I know the administration is considering and the President is considering those recommendations and also hearing from a variety of others, including meeting with Members of the Senate and hearing from the intelligence community heads and hearing from other groups, such as the Privacy, Civil Liberties, and Oversight Board, as we try to wrestle with, in a time of changing technology, how do we ensure that we accomplish our core mission of keeping the American people safe while at the same time preserving our treasured values of civil rights and civil liberties. They made a whole slew of recommendations. There are a lot of different thoughts in one way or the other.

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, maybe you are telling me you do not know the effect that the recommendations have on the operation of our national security investigations. Is that what you are saying, you do not know what the impact of those recommendations would be?

Mr. CARLIN. I think they are still studying and coming to a conclusion as an administration. When I worked at—

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, you are saying they are coming to a conclusion about what the administration might recommend. My question is, in regard to the group's recommendations, if those were carried out, what would be that impact on the national security investigations?

Mr. CARLIN. Yes, sir. So I think they are still working out all of the ramifications, but I will say this in terms of the recommendation that you raise regarding national security letters, which is that during my time at the FBI and in my experience at the National Security Division, the type of information that you can obtain from those letters is often a critical building block in order to then obtain additional evidence to use more intrusive methods that have a higher standard, such as a probable cause standard. And so whatever changes we do make or contemplate, we should think carefully and make sure that we preserve the nimbleness and agility that we need to respond quickly to fast-moving national security threats while at the same time trying to preserve civil liberties.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think you can give a more definite response here, and I appreciate the last three or four sentences you gave. That is very important information.

Was the National Security Division given an opportunity to respond to this recommendation before the review group issued its report? And did you or anyone from the National Security Division ever meet with the review group? And if you did, how many times and for how long?

Mr. CARLIN. I would say—thank you for that question because I think it is important before adopting recommendations to ensure that there is a thorough process and we hear from all elements from the intelligence community and law enforcement and national security community as well as others. The—

Senator GRASSLEY. Hence my question. Did they seek your advice before they issued a report?

Mr. CARLIN. I personally did not meet with the review group. There were individuals from the National Security Division who met with the group. I do not have the exact time for you here, sir, in terms of how long they spent with the group. I do not recall a discussion with them about the particular issue that you raised, the national security letter issue.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. I am glad that—for you, Mr. Adegbile, I am glad that Senator Leahy asked the question he did; I was going to ask. In regard to lawsuits that are pending from your Division, which you are not head of yet, but in regard to voter ID, if confirmed, do you plan to allow States to require voters to identify themselves to prevent the fraud that we have seen?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Thank you for your question, Ranking Member Grassley. My understanding of the role of the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights is that the Assistant Attorney General works to evaluate laws where there are claims of civil rights violations. And so it is not, as I understand it, the role of the Assistant Attorney General to determine in the first instance how States run their voting systems. It is only in the context of a particular law that is passed that then occasionally becomes subject to review either because of the way in which it was passed or because of its impact.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

Senator COONS [presiding]. Thank you very much, Senator Grassley.

Senator Whitehouse.

Senator WHITEHOUSE. I believe others were here first, but I am happy to proceed if—are we going by seniority? If so, I will proceed. My questions are for Mr. Carlin. But before I ask my question of Mr. Carlin, Ms. Talwani, what time do you think it is in Hyderabad right now?

Ms. TALWANI. It is about 9½ hours, 10½ hours—

Senator WHITEHOUSE. In the evening, so not too bad. It is afternoon. They are not up at 2 in the morning. Well, our best wishes to the Hyderabad watchers.

Mr. Carlin, we have talked about cyber, and I would like to kind of reprise a little bit of that conversation. My first concern is that we have had a number of members of the Obama administration say that the attacks through our cyber system on private corporations for the purpose of stealing their intellectual property to distribute to competitor corporations in the home country of the attacker is a very, very significant drain on our economy and, indeed, it has been described as the “biggest illicit transfer of wealth in the history of mankind.”

Given the scope of that ongoing criminal activity, I am concerned that the Department of Justice has not yet brought a single case arising out of a pure cyber intrusion against an American company for the purpose of stealing the American company’s intellectual property. And there are clearly diplomatic concerns involved in taking such an action. There are clearly intelligence concerns that need to be addressed in terms of how the case is brought forward to protect sources and methods that may have supported the development of the case, and I get that. But I would like to hear your assurance that you will be more energetic about pursuing that kind of a case and working through the difficulties rather than allowing the Department to be defeated by those difficulties.

Mr. CARLIN. Thank you, Senator, for your question and for your leadership on issues having to do with the national security cyber threat. You have my absolute assurance and pledge that I will do all I can, if confirmed for this position, to ensure that we do confront that threat by using all tools in the toolbox, and that includes bringing, when we can, Article III criminal prosecutions. And since my time at the Division and building on my time as a prosecutor prosecuting cyber cases and my time at the Bureau working with Director Mueller to transform the Bureau to confront that threat, and subsequently at my time at the Division, my top priority for the Division as Acting Assistant Attorney General has been to transform the Division and to evolve the Division so we can meet the national security cyber threat by having dedicated national security cyber prosecutors working day in and day out to make sure that we can hold nation states or others accountable when they are stealing secrets from our corporations.

Senator WHITEHOUSE. Good. Well, I appreciate that, and it is just one Senator’s point of view, but I would rather have the State Department have to have the problem of cleaning up a little bit than to have the Department of Justice have the problem of doing nothing about this massive hemorrhage of American value and this massive criminal attack sponsored by a foreign nation. So thank you for that.

My second question is that I do not yet believe that our institutional structure for addressing this massive new threat is fully mature. I have been tracking this for months now, and there are constantly new initiatives and new programs that are emerging, and I understand that it is a continuing work in progress, and I want to make sure that part of your work is to try to look ahead, not just to the concerns of the moment but to what the cyber threat is going to look like in the years ahead and what sort of a structure in law enforcement is the appropriate structure to meet it. I do not believe we are there yet. I do not think you believe we are there yet. But I do want to hear you discuss what kind of energy you will put into that type of thinking and that topic, because I know it is going to be very easy to get into the cases and to get into the details and to forget the fact that at some point, as we are morphing our way toward a more robust and stable anti-cyber attack structure, we have got more work to do.

Mr. CARLIN. I do share your concern, Senator. The threat is here, and it is growing, and we can anticipate it will continue to grow over the years to come. I think the Government has taken significant steps to try to transform to meet that threat, but there is much more that we can and should do. And at the National Security Division, we just recently have tried to uncork the ingenuity and thoughts and talents of the U.S. Attorneys across the country, all 94 U.S. Attorney's Offices, by having special training and having people dedicated to handling, on the one hand, sensitive sources and methods that you need to be able to handle in national security threats and, on the other hand, the specific expertise on how to handle cyber intrusions while at the same time working with the FBI to try to ensure that matters that are being viewed as intelligence are shared with prosecutors so that, if there are Article III options, they can be preserved for later down the road—the same type of thinking that we have used in our transformation to face the terrorist threat. And I do believe that, in addition to working case by case, we need to continue to work as a Government and with this body on what the best approach, strategic approach is overall going forward.

Senator WHITEHOUSE. Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, thank you. Let me also just take this opportunity to thank you and Senator Blumenthal for the very strong effort that was put into trying to come up with a cyber bill that would help this work forward. And I know that you and Senator Blumenthal and other Members of this Committee are very, very committed to making sure that our cyber structure is the right structure in the long term to address this threat. And so I think Mr. Carlin can expect continued interest from this Committee in that subject, and I do want to thank Senator Blumenthal and Senator Coons for their leadership.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Whitehouse, and thank you for your tireless work on keeping us safe from the cyber threat.

Senator SESSIONS.

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. And I thank all of you and congratulations on being nominated to august Federal positions. I know your families are proud of you, and we all recognize the challenges you are facing, and I am sure you will be able to meet those, if confirmed.

Let me ask you, Mr. Carlin, just yesterday in The Washington Post, there was an article by Adam Goldman: "U.S. officials suspect that a former Guantanamo Bay detainee played a role in the attack on the American diplomatic compound in Benghazi, Libya, and are planning to designate the group he leads as a foreign terrorist organization, according to officials."

"Militiamen under the command of Abu Sufian bin Qumu, the leader of Ansar al-Sharia in the Libyan city of Darnah, participated in the attack that killed U.S. Ambassador Christopher Stevens and three other Americans, U.S. officials said."

“In 2007, Qumu was released from the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and sent to Libya, where he was detained. The ... government released him [a year later] in 2008.”

Do you recognize there is a need in a time of war to detain hostile combatants until the war is over?

Mr. CARLIN. Yes, sir. We are a Nation that is still at war, and pursuant to this body’s Authorized Use of Military Force, a war specifically against al Qaeda, the Taliban, and its associated forces. And at the National Security Division it is a threat and a responsibility we take seriously day in, day out. There is a determined enemy who wants to attack and bring harm to the United States both here and to our citizens abroad, and we need to use all of the tools that you grant us in our toolkit to deter and disrupt those who would try to cause us harm.

Senator SESSIONS. I absolutely agree that you should use, it is your duty to use the lawful tools you have been given to protect the people of the United States and our Ambassadors from attacks. And it is disappointing to see that this releasee was a leader actually in that attack, and we have had others that have been released also returning to the fight.

And so you have that responsibility, and I sense that you understand it. Is that correct? And you will be willing to speak out against those who do not understand those responsibilities and do not understand traditional rules of warfare?

Mr. CARLIN. Yes, sir, we certainly do understand that responsibility, and in my role, and if confirmed, I will provide my honest and frank guidance to any consideration on any national security threat.

Senator SESSIONS. And you will, when necessary, object or make known your objection if someone above you desires to do otherwise?

Mr. CARLIN. Sir, as a lifelong Government servant, I think we have a duty and we arrive at the best decisions when people who are asked for their opinion give a frank and honest opinion for those internal deliberations.

Senator SESSIONS. Thank you. I appreciate that, and I will expect that you will do that, protecting the people of the United States as the law allows you to do.

Mr. Adebile—is that correct?

Mr. ADEGBILE. That counts, Senator.

Senator SESSIONS. Close enough.

Senator SESSIONS. Close enough for Government work. You will answer when called that.

You have been a long-time counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, which has a historic record of advocacy and defense of civil rights and has achieved much respect in those efforts over the years. But it is a leading advocacy institution also. Civil rights can be stretched, it appears to me, to cover political agendas sometimes and go beyond what true civil rights are and can be used as a mechanism to advance a political agenda. I am sure you would essentially agree with that concern.

Recently Attorney General Holder, before the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said this: “Creating a pathway to earned citizenship for the 11 million unauthorized immigrants in this country is essential. The way we treat our friends and neighbors who are undocumented—by creating a mechanism for them to earn citizenship and move out of the shadows—transcends the issue of immigration status. This is a matter of civil and human rights.”

Do you believe that an individual who entered the country unlawfully has a civil right to citizenship in America?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Senator, my understanding is that the Congress sets the laws with respect to immigration, and only after those laws are set, if certain of the laws are designated for enforcement responsibility to the Civil Rights Division, would the Civil Rights Division act in that scenario.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, your boss-to-be, Attorney General Holder, has said plainly, it seems to me, that persons who violate the United States immigration laws and who enter the country have a civil right to even citizenship. Do you agree with that or not?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Well, I am just hearing this statement now, and I take it that what may be at the source of the Attorney General’s comment is that in certain circumstances people who are vulnerable or not properly documented can be preyed upon because of their status, and there are certain circumstances in which such people would need the protection of law enforcement and others to make sure that their rights are not violated as human beings and as persons under the Constitution.

Senator SESSIONS. Peter Kirsanow, who is a member of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, did a blog recently that said, “To equate amnesty for breaking the Nation’s immigration laws with civil rights betrays an incoherent and ahistorical understanding of the civil rights movement. Law-abiding black citizens in the United States were not seeking exemption from law. They were seeking the application of such laws in the manner that were applied to whites.” Would you agree with that statement?

Mr. ADEGBILE. I can commit to you that my understanding of our long history is that many groups have come to hold up the Constitution and try to narrow the space between the practice on the ground and our high goals that we set for ourselves. And if confirmed as Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, I assure you that I will give fidelity to the law and enforce the laws as they are given by this Senate and the House of Representatives and duly signed by the President.

Senator SESSIONS. Well, my time is up. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Sessions.

Senator Franken.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Adebile—

Mr. ADEGBILE. That is full credit, Senator.

Senator FRANKEN. As a Nation, we have made great strides on the road toward equality for LGBT citizens, and the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice has been instrumental in that progress. But there is still work to be done. Every day, students who are or are perceived to be lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgender are subjected to bullying and harassment in our schools. In fact, one out of every three LGBT students in our country reports having missed a day of school recently because he or she felt unsafe in school.

I have introduced legislation in the Senate, the Student Non-discrimination Act, to ensure that LGBT students have the same rights against discrimination as other students have.

If you are chosen to be head of the Civil Rights Division, how will you work with schools to address the discrimination that LGBT students so often face?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Thank you, Senator. This is a very important issue. I have sitting behind me my two daughters who are school-aged, and it is something that we talk about a fair amount. Bullying can really reduce the opportunity of children to learn and, as you have described, even lead kids not to want to go to school. I commit to you that, if confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, I will focus on the laws and enforce them vigorously in all areas. The educational area is something that is part of the soaring story of American justice and of civil rights, and as we learn it, as new statutes are passed, I think it is important to focus on them and enforce them where applicable on the facts and the law.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, I hope through this measure, which has the support of every Member of the majority of this Committee and on the HELP Committee, I hope we are able to do that, because through the Civil Rights Act in 1964 we protected people by virtue of their race or color, to the Americans With Disabilities Act we have given those kind of rights to people with disabilities. To me the LGBT community now deserves the same kind of rights.

Mr. Carlin, if you are confirmed to this position, you will hold one of the Nation's most important positions on national security. Senator Grassley talked about the President's review group on surveillance, and they made some recommendations. And I did speak to the group. I know that your Department has but you have not. They made some major recommendations about how our Nation's surveillance programs should be reformed, and I know that your answer to Senator Grassley was that you are kind of reviewing this and this is being reviewed in the Department.

But among other things, the group urged the passage of legislation to give the American people more information about the total number of Americans that, this information, are being caught up in these surveillance programs and to give the American people more information about that. I have a bipartisan transparency bill that would do just that.

Do you agree, Mr. Carlin, with the President's review group that the American people need to have more information about our Nation's surveillance programs?

Mr. CARLIN. Thank you for that question, Senator, and for your leadership on the issue of transparency in terms of our use of national security authorities. The law enforcement/national security community and our Government need the support and trust of the American people to do our jobs day in and day out, and so I think it is, as the President said, incumbent upon us to be as transparent as we can while preserving the sensitive sources and methods, to be as transparent as we can with the American people so that they have that trust and confidence.

And so as we discussed when we met, I think we need to work and, if confirmed, we would work within the National Security Division to try to ensure across the board that, when we can, we can share as much information as possible with the American people.

Senator FRANKEN. And do you think that possibly we have been erring on the overly conservative side in terms of transparency and that the recommendations of the President's review group are going in the right direction?

Mr. CARLIN. I will say this: I think there has been an unprecedented effort over the last several months or close to a year to declassify thousands of pages of previously classified documents in order to share information, and that as we look forward and try to hit the right balance between the steps that we need to take to protect us from national security threats, which are real and present, while at the same time both ensuring that we preserve our treasured values in terms of civil liberties and civil rights, and also that we maintain the confidence of the American public. We are at a stage right now where we need to take, it seems, additional steps to assure that the public on the tools that we are using, and I think we are rightly headed in that direction.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, thank you. My time has expired. Thank you for your answers.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Franken.

Senator Blumenthal.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you. Let me begin by thanking all of the nominees for your public service and your willingness to devote yourselves to continued public service, and my thanks also to your families who have shared and will continue to share that burden of long hours and sometimes little appreciation from the public for the work that you do.

I want to say to the judicial nominees that your work is so critical to the credibility and trust of the public in our justice system. You will be the voice and face of justice to countless individuals who come before your court and who will seek redress and justice from you. And as one who has been in the Federal courts for several decades, I appreciate the very hard work that you will devote to this immensely important task. And I look forward to supporting you and hope that I am not premature in congratulating you but thanking you for the great work that you are going to do.

To Mr. Adegbile, I congratulate you on your Connecticut connection through Connecticut College. I am not going to sing the fight song here, as Senator Schumer no doubt could for Dalton. But I want to first of all ask you about the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and other organizations like it that play such a critical role in our justice system, and most particularly during what Senator Schumer rightly referred to as "a dark period" when the Civil Rights Division was not as active as it has been under President Obama.

Could you tell me about the partnership that you foresee between the Civil Rights Division and those organizations if you are confirmed?

Mr. ADEGBILE. Certainly. Thanks for the question, Senator. So civil rights organizations play a vital function as private attorneys general to enforce many of the statutes in the civil rights pantheon that allow individuals or groups to bring cases to vindicate the principles of the law. The understanding has been that while the Justice Department is terrific and central to the effort, in certain circumstances more resources are needed, and we cannot have too much equality is part of the concept.

There needs to be a conversation between groups and the Justice Department. However, in my role, if confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, I am crystal clear that I will step over from being an advocate for a particular group and particular clients to enforcing the laws of the United States. And so what I would expect is that there will be open streams of communication within the bounds of ethical rules and considerations, but that the goal is to enforce the laws of the United States within our best judgment and with the advice of the long-serving, able public servants in the United States Department of Justice.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Mr. Carlin, I know you are familiar with the recommendations made by the President's Panel on Intelligence Reform, and in particular, as you may know, I have proposed that there be a constitutional advocate to protect privacy rights and civil liberties and that there be a more adversarial process before the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act Court as well as a different method of appointing that court to make it more transparent and accountable, to make sure that the court really functions as a court, hearing both sides not just one side, not just the Government's side but also an advocate to really represent the contrary side when there are questions, important questions, of law or fact to be decided.

I wonder if you could give me your views on that aspect of the President's panel.

Mr. CARLIN. Well, thank you, Senator. I think that in terms of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, there are certain cases that involve significant interpretations of the law where the court may decide that it would benefit from the view of another party, and that we have discussed and I think the Deputy Attorney General has testified before that it would be open to proposals along that line to both ensure a full briefing before the court and also to provide that sense of trust and accountability to the American people for the decisions that are ultimately made.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. And would you not agree that the advocate ought to be involved in deciding whether a particular request for a warrant or other surveillance or search raises that kind of significant issue? In other words, it should not be just the court that decides the advocate is involved but the advocate as well?

Mr. CARLIN. So I think that the President and the administration are still studying a variety of ideas and inputs from different groups on that issue, and what they are seeking to do in terms of an ultimate determination is to try to reach the right balance between the really unique and distinctly American system that we have set up that involves all three branches of Government for the conduct of our foreign intelligence activities. It was dating back to 1978 and the original passage of FISA. We have been searching in the current debate to look for other models or systems across the world, and we have not found one that—

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Well, we do have a distinctly American judicial system that involves, in fact, hearing both sides of the argument in open court, especially when there are searches and seizures. One of the reasons why that distinctly American system developed in rebellion against the English was secret courts doing general warrants. And so I would submit respectfully that that distinctly American system involves exactly what the President's panel recommended, namely, an advocate, an open system where possible, more transparency, as Senator Franken has suggested, and hope that you will consider supporting that kind of proposal.

I want to thank both Mr. Carlin and Mr. Adebile for your service, your extraordinary service over many years already, and the continued service that you will provide for our Nation. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal.

While I appreciate that we have had a broad and vigorous exchange of views with Mr. Carlin and Mr. Adebile, I am going to turn to our judicial nominees, if I might, for a few moments. But first I simply wanted to say that I strongly endorse Senator Blumenthal's leadership on suggesting that we would strengthen transparency in the performance of the FISA Courts by having a public advocate. I think that is a strong proposal, and I think both Senator Franken and Senator Whitehouse and Senator Blumenthal raised important points about transparency, accountability, and about the cyber threat and defending American innovations and inventions. And hopefully we will have a few minutes to explore some other areas of great interest to me, and I am grateful to all of you for your public service and to your families for supporting you through this hearing and through what I am sure have already been long and challenging careers in public service that will hopefully continue for quite some time.

So if I might, Ms. Talwani, Ms. Rosenstengel, and Mr. Peterson, if you would just in order describe your judicial philosophy for this Committee, please?

Ms. TALWANI. I am not used to labeling it as a "judicial philosophy," but I feel very strongly about the role of a district judge and a district court, which is to decide that case that is in front of the judge right then based on the applicable law. And that is what I intend to do.

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. Thank you. I would agree with Ms. Talwani and say that my judicial philosophy would be to follow the rule of law at all times and to decide cases and issues before me promptly without bias, sympathy, or prejudice.

Mr. PETERSON. I also agree that I do not have a judicial philosophy in the sense of the concept that I have some preconceived approach to deciding the results of any particular case. As a district court judge, if I were confirmed, I would do my best to comply with Rule 1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which suggests, indeed requires that we do all we can to secure the just, speedy, and in expensive resolution of matters. So I would have a philosophy as a district court judge that people would get early trial dates, the trial dates would be firm, I would work hard to decide motions promptly, and so people would get a decision that is thorough, well reasoned, understandable, and prompt.

Senator COONS. Admirable. It would be great if this institution was also thorough and prompt.

If I might, working backward, Mr. Peterson, Ms. Rosenstengel, and Ms. Talwani, what do you see as your role in ensuring fair and equal access to justice in this country for the litigants who might appear before you in your court?

Mr. PETERSON. I think one of the great virtues of our American justice system is that once you get into a court, particularly a Federal court, it does not matter if you are rich or poor or have resources. You get the same kind of decision regardless of your resources.

I think the district courts have an important role in ensuring that people who might not be able to afford lavish representation or even sometimes basic representation get a fair hearing despite that. So, for example, in the Western District of Wisconsin, we have very able pro se clerks that handle cases that are brought by unrepresented individuals, and those individuals, despite lack of counsel, get a very thorough and fair hearing.

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. I would like to echo Mr. Peterson's remarks. I would say that it is important as a judge, and I would if confirmed, give every case the same consideration and be available for the parties and the lawyers on the case. And as Mr. Peterson said, it is important to make sure that those who do not have the same resources as others may have access to justice.

One of the things I have done as the clerk of court is to develop a panel of lawyers to represent indigent people before the court so that we have a panel of people we can represent and to assist those so that they have an equal footing as any other litigant would in the court.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Ms. Rosenstengel.

Ms. Talwani.

Ms. TALWANI. I would just add that litigation is incredibly expensive, and I would be very conscious of the time that cases take and how that burdens both parties, and try to move cases expeditiously, have firm case management procedures, and just try to ensure that litigation is not more expensive than it needs to be.

Senator COONS. A last question, if I might, for our judicial nominees, and also for Mr. Adegbile. Our legal system relies fundamentally on active advocacy before the bench on parties who heighten the differences and, thus, zealous advocacy. You bring a variety of strengths and skills and backgrounds to your potential service on the bench. How would you distinguish between a period when you were before the bench as an advocate and the period you might soon enter where you are serving on the bench? Or how would you differentiate your experience and service as an effective advocate for LDF and now as someone charged with enforcing law for all the people of the United States? If we might, Ms. Talwani, and then move to our left.

Ms. TALWANI. Thank you. There is no question that the roles are very, very different. If confirmed, I would strive to ensure an absence of bias in decisionmaking, that decisions are based on the facts and the law best applicable. It differs from the role of an advocate where you can be open to different possible views but you do not have to sit and make the final decision which is necessarily the one that you would say will be right at the end. And I believe it is a very different role, and I would strive, if confirmed, to ensure the most objective decisionmaking possible.

Senator COONS. Thank you, Ms. Talwani.

Ms. Rosenstengel.

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. I agree that it is a very different role. As an advocate, you know your client's position and advocate that strongly and maybe anticipate the other side, but do not study it as well.

As a judge, it is the judge's responsibility to understand both sides of the argument, to research everything presented to the judge, and come to a fair resolution of the case. The bulk of my career has been approaching issues from an impartial standpoint and trying to understand both sides, and I think that is important and something that, if confirmed, I would respect and follow.

Mr. PETERSON. I have been an advocate. That has been an important part of my role as a lawyer. But I have also been a counselor, which I think in many cases an even more important role for my clients. And as a counselor, I help them not advance a particular position in a forum, but to help them deliberate about what really is the right thing to do. That I think is excellent preparation of the role of the judge. And so if I am confirmed, I think it is a transition from advocate to a more deliberative decider. I think it is a transition that I would be ready and well prepared to make.

Senator COONS. Thank you.

Mr. Adegbile.

Mr. ADEGBILE. I think it is fair to say that in both contexts, representing your clients zealously and ably is important. That is consistent in both contexts. What is different is that as a law enforcement officer for the United States of America, the portfolio is much broader; the range of statutes that you are called upon to enforce touch a wide array of aspects of life in our great Nation. And it is very important in both contexts, I guess, to make sure that the institutional integrity is there so that you can do your job effectively, and also to have an eye toward the people that you are trying to serve.

If lucky enough to be confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, the people that I will be serving are the people of the United States of America.

Senator COONS. Thank you.

Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. I am just going to question the judge nominees at this point, but I do have some followup questions that I am going to submit in writing for the Justice Department nominees.

Senator GRASSLEY. I am going to start with Mr. Peterson. You have done some pro bono work on behalf of the Freedom from Religion Foundation, filing a Supreme Court brief in two Establishment Clause cases, McCreary and Van Orden. You have argued against Ten Commandments display on Government properties. In one case, you argued that a particular display had the effect of "casting non-believers as outsiders to the political community." I am not here to question your belief in regard to that, but since you are going to be a judge and be impartial, I have a two-part question:

How does that statement affect your view? And what assurances could you give the Committee that you would be fair to all litigants who come before you and, in particular, those of religious faith who may be concerned about your advocacy on behalf of non-theism?

Mr. PETERSON. The first part of the answer is really very simple. My personal views would play no role whatsoever in my decision-making on constitutional issues involving any aspect of the First Amendment or any other constitutional provision.

My work on behalf of the Freedom from Religion Foundation was on behalf of a former and long-time client of the firm. It was not pro bono work. It was engaged work that we had done. My firm has a long history of advocating on behalf of the First Amendment interests of a wide variety of clients across the political spectrum. I consider it a great honor to have worked on matters that are of great importance on the First Amendment.

As I said, we have represented the whole political spectrum on those issues, and I would take every case as it comes and decide it according to the law. The position that we advocated on behalf of the Freedom from Religion Foundation was vindicated in one of the Supreme Court cases, rejected in another. Those decisions are by definition right. They are from the Supreme Court, and I would follow them to the letter, sir.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

I will now go to Ms. Rosenstengel. From your resume, there is some—it is quite obvious, and not to discriminate against you on this basis, but somewhat limited experience as a practicing attorney, appear to have no experience with criminal law, so a two-part question:

Describe how you would prepare yourself for the job of district court judge. And then as a law clerk, what qualities did you admire about the judge you worked for, and how would you be different from that person?

Ms. ROSENSTENGEL. Thank you, Senator, for the question.

First, how would I prepare myself? I would study the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and Criminal Procedure. Again, I was very familiar with them as a law clerk. During your time as clerk of court, I have stayed abreast of Seventh Circuit and Supreme Court jurisprudence, and I would continue to do that.

The quality I admired most about Judge Murphy, the judge for whom I clerked, was he was very decisive. He worked hard. He held hearings on all dispositive motions and had the parties and the lawyers before him, and that is something that I would hope to follow. I think there is a lot of value to having the lawyers in court. He was very firm about setting deadlines and expecting lawyers to meet them, and that is also a trait that I would hope to follow.

Senator GRASSLEY. And for you, Ms. Talwani, you have been an advocate throughout your career, including with some labor organizations. How will you make the transition from being an advocate in the way you were—and I do not disparage that—to being an impartial mediator?

Ms. TALWANI. Thank you for that question. I would start by saying that I very much understand how different the roles are, and

I also realize an importance in the practice, the advocacy that I did, that I was able to represent parties both as plaintiffs and as defendants. In representing unions, there have been cases where, for example, the union would not take an employee's case to a grievance because it was, in the union's view, without merit, and the employee will turn around and sue both the employer and the union. And so I have seen cases from both sides, despite our institutional clients being unions over many of these years.

That said, I am very aware of having represented particular clients, particular types of matters, and realized that I need to ensure that I do not make assumptions, that I am aware of any potential bias, and that I am very, very rigorous in being objective about the cases in front of me.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. Are there any characteristics of any Federal judges that you would seek to avoid if you were confirmed?

Ms. TALWANI. Yes.

Senator GRASSLEY. Maybe an example or two without naming the judge?

Ms. TALWANI. I think impatience from the bench is counter-productive. I think that a judge needs to enforce order and civility, but I do not think that judges should in any circumstance be overly—or should be disrespectful at all to the people who appear in front of them.

I guess the other thing I will be very careful of is interjecting reasonings and decisions that have not had an opportunity for exploration through the adversarial process, where a judge comes up with their own solution to the problem—which may be appropriate. There may be, for example, a jurisdiction issue that the parties did not consider. I will endeavor, if that comes up, to ensure that the parties have an opportunity through the adversarial process to address those issues.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Congratulations to all of you.

Senator COONS. Thank you very much, Senator Grassley. And to Mr. Carlin, to Mr. Adegbile, to Mr. Peterson, to Ms. Rosenstengel, to Ms. Talwani, and to your families and supporters, thank you so much for your appearance before this Committee today.

We will keep the record open for a week for those Members of the Committee who have questions they would like to submit in writing but who were not able to join us today.

With that, this hearing is hereby adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 11:47 a.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

Summer Legal Intern (June 1997-August 1997)

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From October 1999 to the present, I served primarily as a prosecutor and as an advisor and supervisor of national security, law enforcement and litigation matters at the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As a prosecutor, the cases I handled ranged from homicide and sexual offenses to cyber, intellectual property, fraud, and public corruption crimes.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

I have served one client throughout my career: the United States. The areas in which I have specialized are criminal prosecution, national security, and law enforcement.

From 1999 to the beginning of 2007 nearly 100% of my work was litigation.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 - 1. federal courts 65%;
 - 2. state courts of record 35%;
 - 3. other courts 0%;
 - 4. administrative agencies 0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

For the periods during which I litigated

- 1. civil proceedings, 0%;
- 2. criminal proceedings, 100%.

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I tried approximately 40 cases. In roughly 3/4 of the cases I was sole counsel and 1/4 joint counsel. I have not tried a case that went to verdict with more than one co-counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
1. jury 50%;
 2. non-jury 50%.

The non-jury trials occurred during my detail to the United States Attorney's office for the District of Columbia in the domestic violence section of that office. The majority of the misdemeanor trials were resolved by plea or bench trial. I believe I tried approximately twenty bench trials.

From 1999-2001 while serving as a trial attorney in the Tax Division's criminal section, in addition to my criminal caseload, I served on two details to United States Attorneys Offices -- the District of Arizona and the District of Columbia. In each I practiced criminal litigation: in the former, I appeared regularly in federal court and in the latter, in the Superior Court for the District of Columbia. I also worked briefly on detail on one oversight matter. When I permanently joined the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia as an Assistant United States Attorney in 2001, all of my work was in the criminal arena. Until 2007, I appeared in court, often on a daily basis, in the District of Columbia Superior Court and the United States District Court in the District of Columbia. In 2007, I was detailed to the Criminal Division to serve as the National Computer Hacking and Intellectual Property Program Coordinator. The detail involved coordinating complex federal criminal litigation matters. From the latter half of 2007 to 2011, while I was at the FBI, my work did not often involve litigation, and I did not have occasion to appear in court. In 2011, I moved to the National Security Division, first as Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff and now as Acting Assistant Attorney General. I currently oversee the lawyers in the National Security Division, including on litigation matters.

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not argued any cases before the Supreme Court, nor have I served as the primary author on any briefs submitted to the Court. However, in my capacity as Acting Assistant Attorney General of the National Security Division, and in accordance with Department procedure, my name appeared on briefs filed in the U.S. Supreme Court (including briefs filed at the certiorari stage and briefs filed at the merits stage).

I am listed on the following briefs filed in the Supreme Court, according to searches of electronic databases:

Merits Brief

Bond v. United States, No. 12-158

Briefs in Opposition to Certiorari

In re Electronic Privacy Information Center, No. 13-58

Stewart v. United States, No. 12-8891

15. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

From 1999-2001 while serving as a trial attorney in the Tax Division's criminal section, in addition to my criminal caseload, I served on two details to United States Attorney's Offices – the District of Arizona and the District of Columbia. In each I practiced criminal litigation as a federal prosecutor; in the former, I appeared regularly in federal court and in the latter, in the Superior Court for the District of Columbia.

In October 2001, I permanently joined the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia as an Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) and continued my work as a prosecutor. I served in the following sections in Superior Court: Felony Trial; Sex Offense and Domestic Violence; and Homicide/Major Crimes sections. I also served in the Fraud and Public Corruption Section. As an AUSA, I prosecuted cases ranging from homicide and sexual offenses to cyber, intellectual property, fraud, and public corruption cases.

In 2007, I was detailed to the Criminal Division's Computer Crime and Intellectual Property section to serve as the National Coordinator of the Computer Hacking and Intellectual Property (CHIP) Program Coordinator. In that position, I coordinated the federal prosecutors specially trained to prosecute cyber crime and intellectual property cases.

In July 2007, I began another detail as AUSA serving as Special Counsel to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As Special Counsel to the Director, I provided advice and guidance on a range of national security and law enforcement matters.

In February 2009, I became Deputy Chief of Staff and Counselor to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and then Chief of Staff and Senior Counselor to the Director. During this time I ran the day-to-day operations of the Director's office and provided advice and guidance on national security operations and investigations as well as on criminal and law enforcement matters. I also assisted in the management and oversight of the National Security Branch of the FBI (which is responsible for counterterrorism and counter intelligence investigations) and in the development of the intelligence capability of the FBI. I assisted the Director of the FBI and other senior executives in advancing the transformation of the FBI into a threat-based, intelligence-driven national security organization, including assessing the FBI's approach to national security cyber threats. In this capacity, I had regular interaction with representatives of the Intelligence Community, National Security Council Staff, and congressional staff.

In 2011, I moved to the National Security Division, first as Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff, and now as Acting Assistant Attorney General. In addition to providing strategic legal advice to senior Department of Justice leaders and coordinating national security initiatives across the government for the Department, I oversee and manage the full spectrum of the National Security Division's work including the investigation and prosecution of terrorism and counterintelligence investigations, NSD's export enforcement initiative, NSD's practice before the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, and the Department's participation in the inter-agency Committee for Foreign Investment in the United States (CFIUS).

In connection with the nomination process, I have consulted with the Office of Government Ethics and the Department of Justice's designated agency ethics official to identify potential conflicts of interest. I am not aware of any other conflicts.

In the event of a potential conflict of interest, I would consult the Department's designated agency ethics official.

- 23. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." If you are not an attorney, please use this opportunity to report significant charitable and volunteer work you may have done.

Since I joined the Department of Justice, I have not had the opportunity to represent anyone other than the United States. - e. List all interviews you have given to newspapers, magazines or other publications, or radio or television stations, providing the dates of these interviews and four (4) copies of the clips or transcripts of these interviews where they are available to you.

I have searched my records and electronic databases to refresh my memory and to produce a complete list of interviews, but it is possible there are some clips that I was unable to identify or locate. In connection with my work at the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF), I have done many radio interviews, and several of these radio spots are listed below. These radio interviews are, however, episodic and often conducted without much notice. Accordingly, it is likely that I have been unable to identify some radio clips and, except as indicated below, do not have records of the dates of their recording date or airing. Some of the newspaper articles or other media listed may feature quotations of mine from LDF press releases or public events, rather than from actual interviews.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have never served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I began my professional career in 1994 as an associate in the litigation department of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison (Paul, Weiss) in New York. At Paul, Weiss, I represented major corporate, not-for-profit, public official, and individual clients in contract, patent, antitrust, zoning, civil rights, matrimonial, and capital defense cases, among others. I litigated these cases in federal and state courts or before arbitral panels. The nature, size, stage of the litigation, and my role in it, differed in ways that provided a varied litigation experience.

In 2001, I left Paul, Weiss to become an Assistant Counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF). LDF's practice involves representations in complex civil rights actions in a wide range of substantive areas, and is primarily focused in federal courts at both the trial and appellate levels. My early work at LDF was focused on non-partisan voting rights litigation, an area in which I developed expertise. In 2004, I became Associate Director of Litigation, which required me to broaden my focus and to assume a role in overseeing LDF's litigation. I became LDF's Director of Litigation in 2007, and after assuming that role, oversaw LDF's litigation program. LDF's practice involves the substantive areas of Education, Economic Justice, Criminal Justice, and non-partisan Political Participation. As Director of Litigation, the scope of my general responsibilities, including review and editing of pleadings across substantive practice areas, increased dramatically; and in particular, I assumed the role of directing LDF's substantial appellate practice, including those frequent circumstances where LDF appeared as amicus curiae in major civil rights or criminal justice cases.

During my tenure as Director of Litigation, LDF argued appeals as amicus curiae and had its amicus briefs cited by the Supreme Court and noted by a federal appellate court. As Director of Litigation, I directly supervised approximately twenty attorneys and ten additional legal staff members. In 2010, I assumed the title Associate Director-Counsel/Director of Litigation. That title reflected the broader leadership and administrative responsibilities that I assumed in addition to my litigation and litigation oversight roles.

Additionally, following the death of my colleague, LDF's President and Director-Counsel, John Payton, I served as Acting President and Director-Counsel from 2012-2013. In that capacity, I had leadership responsibility for every aspect of LDF. Once Sherrilyn Ifill became President and Director-Counsel, I assumed the title of Special Counsel and argued Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. ___ (2013), in the United States Supreme Court shortly before leaving LDF.

After leaving LDF, I became Senior Counsel to the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary. As Senior Counsel to the Judiciary Committee my focus is now on legislative matters.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

At Paul, Weiss, my clients consisted of corporations, public officials, not-for-profit entities, and individuals in a wide range of substantive legal areas.

At LDF, I developed an early specialty in voting rights litigation, and later an expertise in civil rights litigation more broadly, including Supreme Court advocacy. For several years I led and directed LDF's comprehensive civil rights practice at both the trial and appellate levels. LDF's clients are typically African Americans or other persons of color seeking to vindicate their civil rights under state or federal, statutory or constitutional law.

I now serve as Senior Counsel to the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary with a focus on legislative matters.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
| 1. federal courts; | 89% |
| 2. state courts of record; | 7% |
| 3. other courts; | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies | 4% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |

I appeared in court occasionally.

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried 4 cases to verdict, judgment or final decision: 2 as chief counsel and 2 as associate counsel.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
| 2. non-jury. | 100% |

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have argued two cases before the Supreme Court of the United States:

Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, 129 S. Ct. 2504 (2010). Copies supplied of the oral argument transcript as well as the Brief for Intervenor-Appellees Rodney and Nicole Louis, et al., and Intervenor-Appellees' Motion to Affirm. And, Shelby County v. Holder et al., 570 U.S. __ (2013). Copies supplied of the oral argument transcript as well as the Brief for Intervenor-Respondents, Earl Cunningham et al., and Intervenor-Appellees' Opposition to Certiorari.

In addition to Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, and Shelby County v. Holder et al., I have drafted, edited, or assisted in the preparation of many United States Supreme Court briefs. I have worked on certiorari petitions, oppositions to certiorari, merits briefs, and amicus briefs – copies of which are supplied unless otherwise stated. I have searched my files, the Supreme Court's docket, and internet databases to refresh my memory in an effort to produce a complete list of cases in which I have been involved and listed as counsel on briefs, but it is possible that there are some that I was unable to identify. (1) Shelby County v. Holder et al. 570 U.S. ___ (2013).

United States Supreme Court: Roberts, C.J., and Scalia, Kennedy, Thomas, Ginsburg, Breyer, Alito, Sotomayor, and Kagan, JJ. Briefed and argued in 2013. Shelby County v. Holder et al., 679 F. 3d 848 (2012). United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, Tatel, Griffith and Williams, JJ. United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Bates, J. Litigated from 2010 to 2013.

Description: This case involved a facial constitutional challenge to Sections 4(b) and 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 brought by a county that was subject to the Act's preclearance requirement. The NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF) successfully moved to intervene to defend the statute on behalf of black voters living within Shelby County. The action was brought against the United States Attorney General. I served as lead counsel for LDF's clients (joined in that representation by other attorneys from LDF and Holland & Knight) and argued on behalf of Intervenor before the United States Supreme Court, Shelby County v. Holder et al. 570 U.S. ___ (2013). After the constitutional challenges were rejected by the district court and Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court granted certiorari, and after oral argument, held the geographic coverage provision of the Act unconstitutional and reversed and remanded. Throughout the representation I supervised LDF's representation of its clients, the Cunningham et al. Intervenor and argued the case in the United States Supreme Court.

(2) Lewis v. City of Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 2191 (2012).

Litigated from 1995-Present. I oversaw LDF's litigation of the case from 2008-2013 (est.).

Description: This case is a Title VII class action against the City of Chicago that alleged racial discrimination in the hiring of firefighters and challenged the use of a 1995 written examination and cut-off score that had a disparate impact on African-American firefighter applicants. LDF represented a class of African-American firefighter applicants together with Chicago co-counsel. The case was tried in 2004 by co-counsel, and in March 2005, Judge Gottschall entered a liability finding for the plaintiffs, concluding that the 1995 examination had an adverse impact against African-American applicants, was not-job related, and that the City had failed to implement less discriminatory alternatives. Lewis v. City of Chicago, 2005 WL 693618 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 22, 2005). The Court subsequently entered judgment for the plaintiffs and ordered injunctive relief including remedial hiring of 132 class members, retroactive seniority, back pay with pension adjustments, prejudgment interest, and attorneys’ fees and costs. See Lewis v. City of Chicago, 2007 WL 869559 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 20, 2007). On appeal to the Seventh Circuit, the City of Chicago argued only that the underlying EEOC charges were not timely filed. In June 2008, the Seventh Circuit agreed, and held that the plaintiffs’ charges were time-barred. The Seventh Circuit held that although the charges were filed within 300 days of the City’s use of the discriminatory civil service lists, they were not filed within 300 days of the notice of exam results, which the court considered to be the date on which the claim accrued. Lewis v. City of Chicago, 528 F.3d 488 (7th Cir. 2008). LDF and co-counsel filed a petition for certiorari with the United States Supreme Court in January 2009. The Court granted certiorari on September 30, 2009. The Supreme Court heard oral argument in February 2010. On May 24, 2010, the Supreme Court decided unanimously in favor of the plaintiffs. Lewis v. City of Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 2191 (2012). The Court held that the City’s exclusion of passing applicants who scored below 89 violated Title VII, and a new disparate-impact claim arose, each time the City used this exclusionary practice to hire firefighters. The Seventh Circuit issued its remand ruling on May 13, 2011. Lewis v. City of Chicago, 643 F.3d 201 (7th Cir. 2011). On remand to the district court, the court entered a modified injunctive order on August 17, 2011. Several remedy-related orders followed, as well as an attorneys’ fees order. In addition, the Seventh Circuit affirmed the district court’s denial of an intervention motion by several incumbent firefighters. Lewis v. City of Chicago, 702 F.3d 958 (7th Cir. 2012). I supervised the LDF team that briefed the case in the United States Supreme Court, assisted John Payton in his Supreme Court oral argument preparation and oversaw the LDF team that litigated the case on remand and through the initial remedy phases.

(3) Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, 129 S. Ct. 2504 (2010).

United States Supreme Court: Roberts, C.J., and Stevens, Scalia, Kennedy, Thomas, Souter, Ginsburg, Breyer, and Alito, JJ. Briefed and argued in 2009. Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District Number One v. Mukasey, No. 06-1384, slip op. (D.D.C. Sept. 11, 2008). United States District Court for the District of Columbia (three-judge panel); Friedman, Sullivan, and Tatel, JJ. Litigated from 2006 to 2010.

Description: This case involved two claims: a request by the Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District Number One, a small Texas water district, to be exempted from the requirement that it submit all of its voting changes for preclearance pursuant to Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, and a request that Section 5 be declared unconstitutional. The NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF) intervened to defend the statute on behalf of black voters living within the water district; other national and local civil rights organizations intervened as defendants on behalf of individual or institutional clients. The action was brought against the United States Attorney General. I served as lead counsel for LDF's clients (joined in that representation by other attorneys from LDF and Holland & Knight) and argued on behalf of Intervenor before a three-judge panel in the district court for the District of Columbia, Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District Number One v. Mukasey, No. 06-1384, slip op. (D.D.C. Sept. 11, 2008), and again before the United States Supreme Court, Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, 129 S. Ct. 2504 (2010). On direct appeal, the Supreme Court held that the water district was eligible to apply for exemption under the bailout provision of the Voting Rights Act, but it declined to reach the constitutional question. On remand, the water district sought to bailout from coverage under the Voting Rights Act, and the United States and the Defendant-Intervenors agreed that the water district had fulfilled the necessary conditions. The parties filed a joint motion for entry of a consent judgment and decree, which was granted by the three-judge court. Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, No. 06-1384 (D.D.C. Nov. 3, 2009).

United States District Court for the Southern District of New York; Hellerstein, J. Litigated from 1996 to 1999.

Description: African Grain Company sued Continental Grain Company in an attempt to obtain payment from the proceeds of political risk insurance that Continental secured to cover its risk exposure associated with complex international transactions. Representing Continental Grain Company, Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton, and Garrison LLP (Paul, Weiss) successfully compelled arbitration in this case, which was originally filed in the Southern District of New York. African Grain Co. v. Continental Grain Co., No. 96-03949 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 23, 1996). I researched and drafted the briefs and submissions, coordinated discovery, and prepared witnesses for the arbitration hearing. Following an arbitration before the American Arbitration Association pursuant to the Grain Arbitration Rules, African Grain Company's claims were substantially rejected and Continental Grain Company was awarded a substantial monetary judgment on its counter-claim. African Grain Co. v. Continental Grain Co., No. 96-03949 (June 17, 1999).

Description: This case involved the defense of Carl McCall, then New York State Comptroller, in a civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and § 1985, arising out of the dismissal of a senior employee in the Comptroller's office. Plaintiff alleged that political and retaliatory considerations motivated his dismissal in violation of his First Amendment and statutory rights. The case was settled. I participated in all phases of the litigation including oral argument on pretrial motions, discovery, witness preparation, client communications, legal research, drafting briefs, and motion practice. There were three reported decisions (one unpublished) prior to the settlement of the case without any admission of wrongdoing by the Comptroller. Roniger v. McCall, 119 F. Supp. 2d 407 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (motion on admissibility of newspaper articles granted in part, denied in part); Roniger v. McCall, No. 97-8009, 2000 WL 1191078 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 22, 2000) (motion for an order excluding expert testimony and to try the causation issue of Plaintiff's § 1983 claim before an advisory jury granted in part, denied in part); Roniger v. McCall, 72 F. Supp. 2d 433 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (denying motion for partial summary judgment dismissing Plaintiff's § 1985 conspiracy claim); Roniger v. McCall, 22 F. (9) Soho Alliance v. New York City Board of Standards and Appeals, 741 N.E.2d 106 (N.Y. 2000).

Court of Appeals of New York; Kaye, C.J., and Levine, Smith, Ciparick, Wesley, and Rosenblatt, JJ. Briefed and argued in 2000.

Description: This case involved a challenge by neighboring property owners to the decision by the New York City Board of Standards and Appeals to grant use variances permitting development of two properties. After the trial court upheld the variances, Paul, Weiss was retained to defend the housing developer on appeal. I was primarily responsible for drafting the brief on appeal, along with my Paul, Weiss colleague Gerald Harper who argued the case. The trial court's decision was upheld by the New York Court of Appeals. Soho Alliance v. New York City Board of Standards and Appeals, 741 N.E.2d 106 (N.Y. 2000).

(10) O'Dell v. Netherland, 521 U.S. 151 (1997).

United States Supreme Court; Rehnquist, C.J., and Stevens, O'Connor, Scalia, Kennedy, Souter, Thomas, Ginsburg, and Breyer, JJ. Briefed and argued in 1997.

Description: This United States Supreme Court case involved the capital representation of an individual sentenced to death in Virginia. The Defendant Joseph Roger O'Dell chose to represent himself at trial and was found guilty. In the course of the sentencing proceedings, he sought to rebut Virginia's evidence that his future dangerousness was an aggravating factor for the jury to consider, with evidence that he was ineligible for parole if sentenced to life in prison. The judge, applying Virginia law, barred the Defendant's rebuttal evidence, and sentenced him to death on the jury's recommendation. Subsequently, the United States Supreme Court ruled in Simmons v. South Carolina, 512 U.S. 154 (1994), that barring a defendant from presenting rebuttal evidence of his ineligibility for parole in such circumstances was unconstitutional under the Due Process Clause. Defendant O'Dell then sought resentencing based on retroactive application of Simmons. Paul, Weiss partner Robert S. Smith argued the case in the United States Supreme Court. The Court denied the Defendant's request for the requested retroactive application of Simmons by a 5-4 vote. O'Dell v. Netherland, 521 U.S. 151 (1997). The Defendant was subsequently denied clemency and executed. I assisted in the Supreme Court brief research and drafting, moot courts, and subsequent drafting and oral advocacy in support of the unsuccessful clemency petition.

I have litigated a number of significant voting related cases including Shelby County v. Holder et al., 570 U.S. ___ (2013); Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Mukasey, No. 06-1384 (D.D.C.), Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. One v. Holder, No. 08-322 (U.S.), Louisiana House of Representatives v. Ashcroft, No. 02-0062 (D.D.C.), and NAACP v. Smith, et al., No. 01-00120 (S.D. Fla.), among others. These cases were not tried but each represents an important application or defense of core civil rights protections. I was lead counsel for LDF's clients in the Shelby County, Northwest

Austin and Louisiana House of Representatives cases, and in the cases of Shelby and Northwest Austin. I argued the cases before the Supreme Court on behalf of LDF's clients and a larger group of intervenors.

On behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF), I worked extensively on the legislative effort to reauthorize the temporary provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 during 2005 and 2006. In connection with that effort, I testified before the House Judiciary Sub-Committee on the Constitution, and the Senate Judiciary Sub-Committee on the Constitution, Civil Rights, and Property Rights. I also spent a limited amount of time lobbying for LDF at the federal and state level on other voting and civil rights matters.

While I was an associate at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton and Garrison, I litigated cases for corporate clients involving substantial real or intellectual property interests, and defended a state public official against civil rights claims. Additionally, I represented a prisoner under sentence of death in his appeal to the Supreme Court and in connection with a clemency petition to the Governor in O'Dell v. Netherland.

I now serve as Senior Counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee in which capacity I work on the legislative response to Shelby County v. Holder et al.

17. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any formal courses since law school, though I have guest lectured periodically. During law school I co-taught one class entitled "Unlearning Stereotypes" at Thomas Jefferson High School, a New York City public school in East New York, Brooklyn as a part of an initiative organized by the New York Civil Rights Coalition. Syllabus not available.

18. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

My former employer the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF) has a defined benefit plan for which I am eligible. I also have a 403(b) established during my employment at LDF. As a federal employee, I also participate in the Thrift Savings Plan.

19. Outside Commitments During Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service? If so, explain.

None.

20. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See SF-278.

21. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached net worth statement.

22. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, affiliations, pending and categories of litigation, financial arrangements or other factors that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

In connection with the nomination process, I have consulted with the Office of Government Ethics and the Department of Justice's designated agency ethics official to identify potential conflicts of interest. Any potential conflicts of interest will be resolved in accordance with the terms of an ethics agreement that I have entered into with the Department's designated agency ethics official.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

In the event of a potential conflict of interest, I would consult the Department's designated agency ethics official.

23. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each. If you are not an attorney, please use this opportunity to report significant charitable and volunteer work you may have done.

As a not-for-profit, the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc. represents all of its clients without charge, and its founding charter places special emphasis on the mission of representing poor African Americans. L.D.F.'s legal staff also engages in extensive public education regarding civil rights and constitutional issues. I was actively engaged in L.D.F.'s representations and public education efforts during my years there.

At Paul, Weiss, Rifkind Wharton & Garrison LLP, as a summer associate and as an associate, I rendered pro bono service to clients in matters, involving a Supplemental Security Income disability benefit hearing, orders of protection and related divorce, visitation, and custody proceedings, and with respect to a capital sentence. I also coached moot court teams at various public high schools, and made presentations to high school students regarding higher education, law school, law firm practice, and the importance of the United States Constitution.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

My practice at Godfrey & Kahn (and its predecessors) has focused on litigation and intellectual property. In the first few years of my practice, I did a broad range of general litigation in both state and federal courts. In some of the more significant cases in the first years of my practice I represented firm clients on state and federal constitutional matters. By about 2005, my litigation work began to focus on intellectual property. My law practice is now predominantly civil litigation, mostly involving intellectual property and technology litigation. Throughout my career in private practice, I have also advised clients on intellectual property strategy outside the litigation context.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

My intellectual property clients are typically mid-sized Wisconsin-based businesses. I also advise individual authors, scholars, artists, and architects on the protection of their intellectual property. I represent large national or multi-national corporations as local counsel in patent litigation in this district.

My practice is approximately 90 percent litigation, exclusively civil, so I have appeared regularly in court throughout my career. Over time, my litigation work has focused more on intellectual property and technology matters, which now brings me almost exclusively into federal court. In the first six or seven years of practice, I litigated in state court approximately 50 percent of the time. My work also involves some matters in administrative tribunals, including the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board and the Patent Trial and Appeal Board, amounting to perhaps five percent of my matters. Although in the last few years, my work has tended to be in federal district court, I also have appellate experience, including oral argument in the Seventh Circuit, the Federal Circuit, and the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 - 1. federal courts: 85%
 - 2. state courts of record: 10%
 - 3. other courts: 0%
 - 4. administrative agencies: 5%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 - 1. civil proceedings: 100%
 - 2. criminal proceedings: 0%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have been lead counsel in at least 15 civil cases that have been litigated to judgment. I have actively participated in approximately nine jury trials. I have been lead counsel in three cases tried to juries and three cases tried to a court. I have been associate counsel in at least five additional cases decided by dispositive motion.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 85%
 - 2. non-jury: 15%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have written and filed two amicus briefs in the Supreme Court of the United States: McCreary County v. ACLU of Kentucky, 545 U.S. 844 (2005), Brief of Freedom From Religion Foundation As Amicus Curiae In Support of the Respondents; Van Orden v. Perry, 545 U.S. 677 (2005), Brief of Freedom From Religion Foundation As Amicus Curiae In Support of the Petitioner. Copies supplied.

- 17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;

- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and

1. Essociate, Inc. v. Azoogole.com, Inc., et al., Case No. 11-CV-727 (W.D. Wis.), Judge Barbara B. Crabb and Magistrate Judge Stephen L. Crocker; 2011 – 2013.

The plaintiff in this case held a patent on a method of operating an Internet affiliate program, a form of Internet advertising. I was lead counsel for the defendants, one of whom had operated the largest Internet affiliate program in the United States. The other defendant was an affiliated company, against which the plaintiff alleged various theories of successor or alter ego liability. The court granted summary judgment of non-infringement on May 17, 2013 (the court did not reach several other defenses, including invalidity and inequitable conduct). The case had generated significant interest because the plaintiff had sued approximately a dozen other affiliate systems. This was the first case involving this patent to be litigated to judgment, and the court's decision will have a significant impact on the several cases that are still pending.

This is a Wisconsin law right of publicity case that attracted a great deal of attention because of its potential impact on the operation of Internet search engines. I was lead counsel for the defendant Google, and I argued the appeal in the Seventh Circuit. The plaintiff, Stayart, had sued Yahoo! for associating her name with sexual dysfunction medications. The case was dismissed, but it garnered significant coverage from Internet bloggers, who closely monitor cases that might affect Internet commerce. Thus, when Stayart searched her own name on Google's search engine, Google returned suggested searches that linked Stayart to sexual dysfunction medications. Stayart sued Google, alleging that her Wisconsin law right of publicity had been violated. The district court dismissed the complaint, and the judgment was affirmed on appeal. The Seventh Circuit's reported decision provides useful guidance on the application of Wisconsin's right of publicity to matters of public interest.

This protracted patent infringement case involved computer network switches and routers. It was resolved by a partial summary judgment, a jury trial, an appeal, and finally a second jury trial. I represented the plaintiff, Extreme Networks, with a team from McDermott Will & Emery. Enterasys asserted counterclaims for infringement of its own patents against Extreme Networks. Enterasys dismissed the counterclaims based on one patent after the claim construction ruling, and its remaining counterclaims were dismissed on summary judgment. Extreme Networks' infringement case was tried to a jury, which returned a verdict for Extreme Networks on all counts. Enterasys secured a partial reversal on appeal, and a portion of its case was remanded to the district court and tried to a jury. Extreme Networks again secured a verdict in its favor in the second trial. My role began as local counsel for McDermott Will & Emery's Chicago office. I argued the half of the claim construction hearing devoted to the patents asserted against Extreme Networks. From then on I served with McDermott's partner-level litigators on the case. I briefed and argued the motion in limine that excluded Enterasys' technical expert from the case, which was a turning point in the first trial. I also briefed and argued a successful motion for sanctions against Enterasys for discovery abuse, which was a turning point in the second trial.

This was a patent infringement case on which I served as local counsel to the defendant, ATI Technologies. My firm also served as counsel to Robins, Kaplan, the law firm that was lead counsel for ATI. Plaintiff Silicon Graphics moved to disqualify Robins, Kaplan alleging that a conflict of interest arose when Robins, Kaplan hired an attorney who had performed work for the plaintiff at a previous firm. Robins, Kaplan hired Godfrey & Kahn to represent the firm in opposing the disqualification. The motion involved several novel issues concerning the Wisconsin Rules of Professional Conduct and the applicability of those rules in federal litigation. The court denied the motion for disqualification in a comprehensive opinion on attorney disqualification from Judge Crabb.

This case began as a patent and contractual dispute between two makers of automotive rear view mirrors, the type of outside rear view mirror that incorporates a turn signal that shines through the glass. Both Muth and Gentex held patents on aspects of the technology. Gentex sued Muth on patent, contract, and tort claims in the Eastern District of Michigan; Muth filed suit making similar allegations against Gentex in the Western District of Wisconsin.

After Muth filed for bankruptcy protection in the Eastern District of Wisconsin, the patent suits were transferred to the bankruptcy court, where they were consolidated and tried as an adversary proceeding. After the bankruptcy action was filed, Godfrey & Kahn was appointed special patent litigation counsel, and I served as lead counsel on the patent litigation. Gentex's patent infringement allegations against Muth were defeated on summary judgment; Muth's patent infringement allegations against Gentex were defeated at trial. Muth prevailed on a breach of contract claim against Gentex and won damages of approximately $2 million.

Lands' End brought this action to break up the "typosquatting" schemes operated by the defendants. Lands' End operated an affiliate program through which it paid a commission to operators of other web sites for referring Internet traffic to the Lands' End web site. The defendants joined the Lands' End affiliate program, but they did not refer traffic from legitimate web sites. Instead, they had registered many typosquatting domain names consisting of common mis-typings of landsend.com, such as landswnd.com. They directed traffic from these domain names to the Lands' Ends web site, thereby collecting commissions. Lands' End sued for breach of contract, fraud, and violation of the Anti-cybersquatting Consumer Protection Act (ACPA). The question of whether the defendants' typosquatting schemes constituted a breach of contract, fraud, and a violation of the ACPA was decided in favor of Lands' End on summary judgment, creating significant early precedent on the application of the ACPA to this form of Internet fraud.

7. St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co. v. Keltgen, 2003 WI App 53, 260 Wis. 2d 523, 659 N.W.2d 906, affirmed by 2004 WI 37, 270 Wis. 2d 315, 677 N.W.2d 297 (evenly divided Wisconsin Supreme Court); 2004 – 2005.

Keltgen is a developmentally disabled adult who was sexually assaulted by a co-worker in a sheltered workshop. Keltgen received worker's compensation benefits for his injuries, but he also brought numerous claims against the co-worker, the workshop, and the workshop's insurers. Robert Dreps of Godfrey & Kahn represented one of the workshop's insurers, Wausau Insurance Company. I became involved in the case on appeal, where the primary issue was whether Keltgen's claim for a violation of the state Mental Health Act was barred by the exclusive remedy provision of the Worker's Compensation Act. The Wisconsin Court of Appeals held that the Mental Health Act claims were barred. I argued the case in the Wisconsin Supreme Court, which upheld the Court of Appeals by a 3-3 decision.

(Dane County (Wisconsin) Circuit Court); Judge Robert DeChambeau; 2003 – 2005.

This was an action for negligence arising from an electrical fire in a commercial building, which occurred after the building had been remodeled for the tenant business. The building owner and the tenant accused the electrical contractor on the remodeling work of negligently installing the outlet in which the fire started. We represented the electrical contractor, Design Electric, and its insurer, Unitrin Property & Casualty Insurance Group.
We negotiated a settlement with the building owner and his insurer, and the claims of the tenant were tried to a jury, which deliberated only 20 minutes before returning a verdict exonerating the electrical contractor.

Godfrey & Kahn represented the plaintiffs, who challenged numerous provisions of Wisconsin's campaign finance reform law as violating the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution. Of particular note were provisions of the campaign finance reform act that required prior reporting of certain campaign-related communications and that imposed restrictions on "issue advocacy" in the 60 days before an election. I worked with Michael Wittenwyler and Brady Williamson of our office, and Mr. Wittenwyler and I took the lead in preparing the briefs and supporting materials for our motion for judgment on the pleadings. The court declared all but one of the challenged provisions void and unconstitutional, and it dismissed the remaining challenge to provisions relating to broadcast regulation as not yet ripe because it required administrative rulemaking, which had not yet occurred.

10. McCabe v. Kennedy, Case No. 04-CV-4022 (Dane County (Wisconsin) Circuit Court); Judge C. William Faust; 2004 – 2005.

Godfrey & Kahn represented the Wisconsin State Elections Board (SEB) and its executive director, Kevin Kennedy, in an action for mandamus challenging the state's granting of a contract to Accenture for the preparation of Wisconsin's state-wide voter registration database. The plaintiffs accused the SEB of violating state election law and open meetings law in granting the software development contract to Accenture, whose performance on similar contracts had been controversial. We secured dismissal of the case on a motion for judgment on the pleadings.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Most of my non-litigation work now involves advising clients on how to protect their intellectual property and avoid infringing the rights of others. I regularly screen potential trademarks and help my clients secure trademark registrations.

For example, I was part of the legal team advising a non-profit broadcaster of state government proceedings, in connection with the unauthorized use of the broadcaster's coverage of a state senate session by an Internet blogger. The infringement analysis was straightforward, but the matter quickly escalated into a political controversy when members of the state assembly asked the broadcaster to resist the use of the coverage by bloggers. As the senior intellectual property attorney for the broadcaster, I was called upon to explain our clients' copyright policies in a meeting with the legislative leadership.

I also represented a prominent scholar and author who had written a book on the impact of a major motion picture series on the contemporary film industry. The book was extensively researched, and the scholar had interviewed many of the participants in the production and marketing of the films. She hoped to use many illustrations that she had collected, but when the film producer heard about her work, it threatened to sue her publisher, a university press. The university press was unwilling to proceed with the book until I prepared an extensive memorandum demonstrating that the scholar's use of the material was an acceptable fair use. The book has been published and well received, and the producer did not seek any further action.

I have not performed any lobbying services for anyone.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

2001, 2005, 2011 – 2013, University of Wisconsin Law School:

Copyright Law (2001, 2005): This course provided a survey of the essential principles of copyright law. Syllabi are attached.

Public Speaking for Lawyers (2011 – 2013): This was a workshop to improve the speaking skills of students in non-litigation contexts. Syllabi are attached.

1994, University of Wisconsin–Madison, Department of Communication Arts:

Motion Picture Production: This course was an introduction to 16mm film production. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

1986 – 1993, University of Notre Dame:

During my appointment, I taught four to six courses per year. Generally this would include one or two introductory survey courses, one or two video production courses, and electives of my choosing subject to the approval of the department. I no longer have my teaching files and accordingly I cannot identify precisely which courses were taught in which year:

Introduction to Mass Communication: This course was a survey of the study of the mass media. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

Introduction to Film Studies: This course was an introduction to the basic principles of film production, history and analysis. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

Video Production: This course was an introduction to small format video and studio television production. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

Documentary Film and Television: This course covered the history and practice of non-fiction film and television. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

Avant-garde Film: This course surveyed the American avant-garde/experimental film genre. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

The Horror Film: This course covered the history of American horror film and its sub-genres. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

Upon termination of my employment with Godfrey & Kahn, S.C., the value of my stock (currently approximately $14,640) will be paid to me. As a shareholder of Godfrey & Kahn, I have loaned the firm $50,000, interest on which is paid quarterly with the principle to be repaid over five years beginning in 2019. Should I be confirmed, I anticipate that the firm would repay the loan upon termination of my employment with the firm.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no such plans or commitments if confirmed. However, if possible within the confines of my duties, I would consider continuing to teach at the University of Wisconsin Law School.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If confirmed, I anticipate that for an appropriate period, I will recuse myself from hearing any matter in which a party is represented by my current firm, Godfrey & Kahn, S.C. Generally, if any matter were to arise that involved an actual or potential conflict of interest, I would handle it by careful, diligent application of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and any other relevant ethical canon, regulation or statute.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I will carefully review any real or potential conflict of interest by reference to 28 U.S.C. 455, Canon 3 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, and all other laws, rules and practices governing judicial conflicts of interest.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

From July 2000 to July 2001, I served as court-appointed counsel with Todd G. Smith of Godfrey & Kahn in the Western District of Wisconsin representing a Wisconsin state prison inmate who challenged the denial of medical care while in a county jail. I served as second chair on the case. The jury found that the inmate suffered from a serious mental illness, but that the denial of care was not the result of deliberate indifference. In addition to this court-appointed case, my firm participates in the State Bar's Lawyer's Hotline, and I have volunteered to return Hotline calls one evening almost every quarter since I have been in private practice. I volunteered every year from 1999 to 2011.

I also participate in educational activities in the legal community. I serve regularly as a guest instructor in the General Practice Skills Program at the University of Wisconsin Law School. For each of the last 12 years, I have made one or two presentations on press law to student journalists and their advisers at conferences and meetings of KEMPA, an organization of high school journalism teachers in Wisconsin and northern Illinois.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

On April 29, 2013, the Federal Nominating Commission for Wisconsin announced via email from the State Bar of Wisconsin that it was accepting applications and reviewing candidates for the position of United States District Judge for the Western District of Wisconsin. On May 29, 2013, I submitted my application. On July 23, 2013, I interviewed with the Commission in Madison, Wisconsin. On July 29, 2013, the Commission informed me that Senators Ron Johnson and Tammy Baldwin had recommended me to the President for nomination to the position of district judge. Since August 2, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 5, 2013, Senator Johnson called me to offer congratulations. On September 12, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. I also met briefly with Senator Baldwin in her Washington, D.C. office later that day. On November 7, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1993 to 1998, I worked for the law firm of Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard as a litigation associate. I practiced in the areas of medical malpractice, products liability, employment discrimination, and maritime litigation. I handled the full range of litigation practice, including client contact, depositions, motion practice, court appearances, trial preparation, settlement negotiations, and trial. I appeared frequently in the City of St. Louis Circuit Court, state courts in Illinois and Missouri, and federal courts, including the Southern District of Illinois, Eastern District of Missouri, and Western District of Kentucky.

From 1998 to 2009, I served as a Career Law Clerk to District Judge G. Patrick Murphy. As such, I assisted Judge Murphy in every aspect of civil and criminal cases before the court, including, but not limited to, evaluation of the court's subject matter jurisdiction, pre-trial motions, motions to remand, motions to dismiss, motions for summary judgment, evidentiary rulings before and during trial, jury instructions, post-trial motions, criminal changes of plea and sentencing.

Since October 1, 2009, I have served as Clerk of Court in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois. In this position, I manage the operational and administrative duties of the court and ensure compliance with statutory requirements. This includes developing court policies, plans, and procedures, managing case processing, jury operations, and other administrative matters.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

At Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard, my typical clients included hospitals, insurance companies, automobile manufacturers, casinos, barge companies, retailers, and others in need of defense against negligence and products liability claims.

As a Career Law Clerk and as the Clerk of Court, I had no clients.

100% of my practice at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard was in litigation. During that time, I appeared in court frequently. As a Career Law Clerk, I handled or oversaw cases before the district court. The majority of the cases filed were resolved through settlement or summary judgment, but I participated in at least 40 jury trials and several bench trials. Below, I have provided estimates based on my practice at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard. As a Career Law Clerk, my experience was 100% federal and evenly divided between civil and criminal proceedings.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	50%
2. state courts of record:	50%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	100%
2. criminal proceedings:	0%

I tried two cases to verdict in a jury trial and had one bench trial as associate counsel at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard. I also arbitrated one case as solo counsel in front of a St. Clair County Arbitration Panel. In addition to this trial experience as an advocate, I assisted with more than 40 jury trials during my federal clerkship with District Judge G. Patrick Murphy. This experience included researching evidentiary issues, analyzing the evidence, and preparing the jury instructions for the court and parties in civil and criminal cases. The civil cases involved a variety of claims, some based on the court's federal question jurisdiction and others on the court's diversity of citizenship jurisdiction. In addition, I participated in approximately five bench trials during this same period and drafted the findings of fact and conclusions of law following the trial. Below, I have provided an estimate based on my trial experience at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 67%
 - 2. non-jury: 33%

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

- 1. Dodds v. Western Kentucky Navigation, Case No. 94-130 (Circuit Court in Madison County, Illinois; Judge P.J. O'Neill); Dodds v. Western Kentucky Navigation, 697 N.E.2d 452 (Ill. App. Ct. 5th Dist. 1998); 1994-1998.

I represented Western Kentucky Navigation in this Jones Act case brought by a first mate against his employer, Western Kentucky Navigation. The plaintiff, Dodds, alleged that he sustained injuries to his back and arm when a line seized on a timberhead and then "shot," throwing Dodds into the steel deck of a barge while the tow was entering a lock. I assisted with the defense of the case on behalf of Western Kentucky Navigation. My participation in the case included all aspects of written discovery and depositions, motion practice, client and witness preparation, and trial, including witness examinations and cross-examinations. I also drafted and filed a third-party complaint against Occidental Chemical Corporation, the owner of the barge on which the plaintiff was injured. The jury found Dodds to be 50% at fault and entitled to damages in the amount of $100,000. After the trial court granted a setoff for the plaintiff's prior settlement with Occidental, judgment was entered against Western Kentucky Navigation for $0. The plaintiff appealed, and the Fifth District reversed. The case ultimately settled.

I defended Dr. Parich in this medical malpractice case. The plaintiff alleged Dr. Parich negligently prescribed the antibiotic Erythromycin to her and that the medication caused a bowel obstruction. I assisted with the defense of Dr. Parich's case on behalf of the firm's client, Illinois State Medical Insurance Exchange. My participation included filing and responding to written discovery, conducting depositions, drafting, filing, and arguing motions, preparing the client and witnesses for trial, and trial, including direct and cross-examination of the parties, fact witnesses, and expert witnesses. Abbott Laboratories, the manufacturer of Erythromycin, was a co-defendant in the case, but was dismissed before trial on summary judgment. The jury returned a verdict in favor of Dr. Parich.

The plaintiff alleged she was injured by a Mazda vehicle in one accident and a Toyota vehicle in another. My involvement in the case included filing and responding to written discovery, conducting depositions, and attending discovery dispute conferences. In addition, I attended product inspections, conducted expert witness research, handled the discovery and disclosure of expert witnesses, and prepared witness outlines in anticipation of trial. I defended Western Kentucky Navigation in this Jones Act negligence case filed by Little against her employer, Western Kentucky Navigation. I had primary responsibility for all discovery, motions, depositions, and trial preparation, including client and witness preparation and outlines for all direct and cross examinations. This was a medical malpractice case brought by Neighbors against Dr. Eli Wolfson alleging negligence during the birth of her child. I represented Sears, Roebuck & Company in this case where the plaintiff alleged that she was subjected to false imprisonment after she was questioned by loss prevention personnel at a Sears store in Marion, Illinois. I had primary responsibility for all pretrial matters, including client contact, interviews of defense witnesses, written discovery, pretrial motions, and depositions. Following written discovery and depositions, it was determined that the plaintiff was perpetrating fraud on Sears. Specifically, the plaintiff was acquiring discounted apparel from another retailer and returning it to Sears for a refund. When confronted with this evidence obtained during investigation and discovery, the plaintiff's counsel immediately withdrew from the case. The case was later voluntarily dismissed.

I defended Hospice of Southern Illinois in this employment discrimination case brought by an employee of Hospice. My involvement included discovery conferences, propounding and responding to written discovery, conducting depositions of the parties and witnesses, and preparation of a motion for summary judgment. The case proceeded to trial after I left the firm. The jury returned verdicts in favor of Hospice on three counts and in favor of the plaintiff on one count. After post trial motions were filed, the court entered judgment in favor of plaintiff on one count and in favor of Hospice on three counts. Both parties appealed. Additional post trial motions were filed by Hospice and, while the case was on appeal to the Seventh Circuit, the district court entered an order indicating it was inclined to grant Hospice's post trial motions. The case was remanded to the district court and ultimately judgment was entered in favor of Hospice.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

In addition to the matters described above, my practice at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard involved preparation of numerous other civil matters for trial, including motion practice, written discovery, discovery disputes, depositions, research and retention of expert witnesses, and trial preparation. Typical cases included products liability actions involving forklifts and automobiles, medical malpractice claims, Jones Act cases, and employment discrimination suits.

In addition to my practice at Sandberg, Phoenix, and von Gontard, I assisted with numerous civil and criminal hearings and trials as a Career Law Clerk to District Judge G. Patrick Murphy. I assisted Judge Murphy in every aspect of cases before the court, from the initial filing to the disposition of each case. I drafted orders, memoranda, and jury instructions in civil and criminal cases. This involved extensive research of the law and required knowledge of the Federal Rules of Civil and Criminal Procedure, as well as the court's local rules, administrative orders, policies, and procedures. It was Judge Murphy's practice to hold a hearing on every dispositive motion filed (including motions to remand, motions to transfer venue, motions for temporary restraining order and/or preliminary injunction, motions to dismiss, and motions for summary judgment). Before each hearing, I would review the pleadings, research the law, brief Judge Murphy on the issues presented, and suggest areas of inquiry with the attorneys. After each hearing, Judge Murphy and I would review the arguments made by each party, and I would draft a Memorandum and Order for Judge Murphy's final approval and filing.

In addition, I assisted Judge Murphy throughout bench and jury trials, researching legal issues as needed and drafting findings of fact and conclusions of law following bench trials. I attended the entire trial, starting with pre-trial conferences and jury selection. During jury trials, I was actively involved in preparation of the jury instructions and verdict forms in both civil and criminal cases. Specifically, I received proposed jury instructions and verdict forms before trial from the parties, and from those proposed documents, I would compile a packet of jury instructions and verdict forms based on the evidence presented at trial. It was my duty to draft appropriate instructions for the court to issue in light of the rulings and evidence presented at trial. Judge Murphy would review the packet of instructions I compiled with the parties informally and then hold a formal jury instruction conference. From time to time, questions would arise during jury deliberations, and it was my responsibility to advise the judge as to the applicable law.

As a Career Law Clerk, I also helped manage the judge's caseload daily, including with rulings on dispositive and non-dispositive issues. My work required research on a variety of legal issues relating to federal subject matter jurisdiction, claims, and rules of procedure, as well as the federal sentencing guidelines. Additionally, I drafted orders on motions to certify class actions, bankruptcy appeals, social security appeals, appeals from rulings of magistrate judges, and habeas petitions. I also reviewed draft orders from the pro se law clerks, worked with them to finalize a draft for Judge Murphy's review and signature, and met with the pro se law clerks regularly to monitor prisoner cases on Judge Murphy's docket.

In criminal cases, I attended every hearing, including, but not limited to, change of plea hearings, pre-trial motion hearings, and sentencing hearings. During change of plea hearings, I would listen to the colloquy and ensure that all matters were properly covered with the defendant and the necessary elements stated on the record. Before a sentencing hearing, I would review the Presentence Investigation Report, research the objections, review the relevant case law, meet with the Probation Officer, and brief the judge on the issues before the hearing. During the hearing, I would ensure that all matters were addressed and research legal issues as they arose. This required extensive knowledge of the federal sentencing guidelines and the United States Supreme Court decisions interpreting them. In addition, when the Retroactive Crack Amendment to the Sentencing Guidelines was passed, I ensured that the cases where the amendment might apply were identified and counsel was appointed when appropriate. The judge was briefed on whether or not the defendant was eligible to receive a reduced sentence, and, where the defendant was deemed eligible, an order was entered granting the appropriate relief.

During the four years I have been Clerk of Court, I have also pursued various legal issues concerning procedural and administrative matters at the district court. Such issues include local rules, development of court plans, service of process, public access to court records, and federal appropriations law. My responsibilities also require frequent analysis regarding employment and jury selection matters as well as other general management duties concerning information technology, procurement, training, and financial operations for the district court (including judges and chambers staff). In addition, I have worked extensively to develop a panel of pro bono volunteers to represent indigent prisoner plaintiffs in civil rights litigation. As part of this effort, I have organized and facilitated numerous free continuing legal education seminars sponsored by the district court. Finally, I have implemented numerous changes related to the court's processing of civil prisoner cases, resulting in more efficient processing of the cases and reduced time from filing to disposition.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I taught Legal Research and Writing to paralegal students at Southwestern Illinois College, in Belleville, Illinois, for one semester during the Fall 2004 semester. I have been unable to locate a copy of the Syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

As an employee of the federal district court, I am a participant in the Federal Employees' Retirement System and have an interest in the federal Thrift Savings Plan. If confirmed, these funds will stay in the Plan. During my several months of employment by Southwestern Illinois College as a legal writing instructor, I also made contributions to the State Universities Retirement System of Illinois. If confirmed, the funds I contributed to the system will be withdrawn, and I will have no interest in the system. Other than these retirement funds, I do not expect to derive any deferred income or future benefits from any previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients, or customers.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during my service to the court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I will carefully review and address any real or potential conflicts in accordance with the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, as well as all applicable policies and procedures of the United States courts. I would recuse in cases involving my family, cases where my husband, Jon Rosenstengel, and/or his law partner, Jerald J. Bonifield, are counsel of record, and cases involving companies in which I have a financial interest or an ongoing business relationship.

If confirmed, I would handle any matter involving actual or potential conflicts of interest in conformity with the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and any other relevant statutes, ethical canons, and rules. I would use the district court's Case Management and Electronic Case Filing ("CM/ECF") program to identify conflicts by scheduling and reviewing daily reports. I would post a list of my financial conflicts on the court's website and personally review each case assigned to me immediately upon filing.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

My employment with the district court, both as a Career Law Clerk and Clerk of Court, prohibits me from practicing law, except in very limited circumstances (Code of Judicial Conduct for Judicial Employees, Canon 4).

As a court employee, however, I have been active in the Joint Community Outreach Committee, a committee comprised of employees from all local federal agencies. Specifically, I was instrumental in development of a courthouse cookbook, which raised a substantial amount of money for the committee in 2005 (and repeated in 2012). I also spearheaded the effort to add the St. Vincent DePaul Soup Bus to the committee's activities and have personally served on the Soup Bus. In addition, I helped to organize a Christmas party for underprivileged children at the Christian Activity Center in East St. Louis, Illinois, in December 2012, and my entire family participated in the event. I also assisted with a recent school supply/backpack campaign for local schools and a book drive for local charities. As a Court Unit Executive, I have strongly supported the committee's efforts in a variety of community events and fundraising efforts to promote the committee's programs.

Finally, I attend meetings of the Court Assisted Program, a group led by Magistrate Judge Donald J. Wilkerson, which works to integrate offenders on supervised release back into the community. We recently led a clothing drive to solicit donations for local charities, and we are currently holding a canned good and book drive as a joint activity with the Joint Community Outreach Committee. The canned goods will be donated to local food pantries, and the books will be delivered to local jails.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In April 2013, Senator Richard J. Durbin formed a bipartisan committee to evaluate and recommend applicants for this position. On May 10, 2013, I delivered my application to Senator Durbin's office in Springfield, Illinois. On June 5, 2013, I interviewed with the committee in East St. Louis, Illinois. On July 3, 2013, I interviewed with Senator Durbin in Springfield, Illinois. On or about July 10, 2013, I was informed by Senator Durbin's office that my name was being sent to the President for consideration. Since July 12, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 16, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On November 7, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

- b. The American Bar Association's Commentary to its Code of Judicial Conduct states that it is inappropriate for a judge to hold membership in any organization that invidiously discriminates on the basis of race, sex, or religion, or national origin. Indicate whether any of these organizations listed in response to 11a above currently discriminate or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies. If so, describe any action you have taken to change these policies and practices.

To the best of my knowledge, none of the organizations listed above currently discriminates or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

My law practice since 1989 has focused primarily on civil litigation in state and federal court.

From 1989 to 1999, I was with Altshuler, Berzon, Nussbaum, Berzon and Rubin (and its predecessor). My practice included litigation, grievance and interest arbitrations, and agency hearings on a range of workplace issues, including gender and race discrimination, sexual harassment, terminations without just cause, and occupational safety and health issues. I handled depositions and other discovery, and drafted motions and supporting memoranda. I also argued motions in the state trial court and in federal district court. As I became more senior, I took on primary responsibility for a number of these cases. I also participated in the drafting of appellate briefs, particularly during my first five years at the firm. After my first few years of practice, I also regularly handled numerous labor arbitrations, where I was the sole attorney representing our clients.

From 1999 to the present, my practice has been with Segal Roitman, LLP (and its predecessor). My practice has continued to focus on litigation, grievance arbitration, and agency hearings on a range of workplace issues. I have served as lead or sole attorney on most of my cases, and have represented our clients through discovery, pre-trial motions, trials (with co-counsel), appeals and remand. I have also continued to handle labor arbitrations.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

At Altshuler, Berzon, my typical clients were labor organizations, ranging from local unions to labor federations. I also represented individuals and groups of employees, and California Rural Legal Assistance. The primary focuses of my practice were labor and employment and environmental law.

At Segal, Roitman, I have continued to represent labor unions, handling complex litigation for my partners' private sector union clients (including in a major antitrust case), and I have also represented several public sector unions in negotiations, arbitrations and proceedings before the Commonwealth's Department of Labor Relations. A significant portion of my practice now includes representing individual employees and groups of workers in employment related matters.

I estimate that 80% of my practice has been in litigation. During my first ten years of practice, I was in court occasionally and, after the first two years of practice, I also had numerous arbitration cases. During the past fourteen years, I have been in court frequently (including trials), and have had one to three arbitration cases per year:

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
| 2. state courts of record: | 35% |
| 3. other courts: | 15% (arbitrations) |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 10% |
- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|--------------------------|------|
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 0% |

In addition to trying to final decision approximately 25 cases before neutral arbitrators, I have tried three cases in courts of record to verdict, final judgment or final decision. These cases included four trials because one case was tried twice. I tried two as chief counsel and two as co-counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
- | | |
| 2. non-jury: | 50% |

Local Union No. 7, Int'l Ass'n of Bridge, Structural, Ornamental & Reinforcing Iron Workers*, 2009 WL 1690941 (D. Mass. June 17, 2009) (Judge Richard G. Stearns); Am. Steel Erectors, Inc. v. Local Union No. 7, Int'l Ass'n of Bridge, Structural, Ornamental & Reinforcing Iron Workers, 480 F.Supp. 2d 471 (D. Mass. 2007) (Judge Richard G. Stearns), rev'd, 536 F.3d 68 (1st Cir. 2008) (Judge Norman H. Stahl, Judge Jeffrey R. Howard, and Judge Eugene Siler (of the Sixth Circuit)); 2004 – present.

Together with colleagues at my firm, I defended Local Union No. 7 of the International Association of Bridge, Structural, Ornamental & Reinforcing Iron Workers in a suit brought by five nonunion steel erectors who alleged that the union conspired with unionized employers to monopolize the structural steel erection industry in the greater Boston area in violation of both antitrust and labor laws. Plaintiffs sought damages in excess of $10,000,000, treble damages, and injunctive relief on the antitrust counts.

I participated in drafting the union's initial briefs on summary judgment, where we prevailed in the district court. I also participated in drafting our brief in the first appeal, but did not argue the appeal. After the district court was reversed by the First Circuit, I participated as co-counsel in a jury trial on the labor law count, where the court entered judgment as a matter of law in favor of the union as to three of the plaintiffs and judgment against the union as to two of the plaintiffs. I then drafted further summary judgment papers, with assistance from my co-counsel, and argued the final summary judgment motion on the antitrust counts. We prevailed on the motion, with the court concluding that the union's job targeting program did not violate the antitrust laws, and instead promoted competition. Plaintiffs' second appeal and defendant's cross-appeal are currently pending in the First Circuit. I have recently participated in drafting the defendant's brief in this appeal and cross-appeal.

I represent plaintiff Lawson, who contends that she was retaliated against for reporting violations of rules and regulations of the Securities and Exchange Commission or other federal laws concerning fraud against shareholders. The litigation has focused on the scope of the whistleblower protections under the Sarbanes Oxley Act (“SOX”). The District Court denied the defendants’ motion to dismiss the action, but on interlocutory appeal, a divided panel of the First Circuit concluded that employees of contractors of public companies are not protected by SOX. In May, our petition for writ of certiorari to the First Circuit was granted. I served as plaintiff’s sole counsel in the District Court and at the United States Court of Appeals, and am assisting counsel of record at the Supreme Court.

I served as lead counsel for plaintiffs Liu and Zhu and worked together throughout the litigation with Cynthia Mark of Greater Boston Legal Services. We filed this class action on behalf of over 200 former employees of the Super 88 grocery store chain, seeking minimum wage, overtime and holiday pay under Massachusetts law. We obtained injunctive relief in the state court to secure assets during the pendency of the suit, participated in the bankruptcy proceeding that resulted in the dismissal of the defendants' bankruptcy petitions as fraudulent, obtained class certification, were appointed class counsel, and negotiated the settlement approved by the Court. The wage case ultimately settled, with formal court approval, with a $950,000 judgment for the plaintiffs. The case is consolidated with cases brought by creditors and competing buyers, and although class members have now been paid and the sale of one store has been finalized, the claims of trade creditors remain pending and final judgment has not yet entered.

Lynch and Judge Kermit V. Lipez), on remand sub nom. Bohn v. Mukasey, United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts, Civil Action No. 04-10593 (Judge Edward F. Harrington); 2004 – 2008.

My client, a Deputy United States Marshal, sued the United States Attorney General, alleging that the U.S. Marshal for the District of Massachusetts had discriminated against her on the basis of gender and retaliated against her after she filed internal complaints with the U.S. Marshals Service’s Equal Employment Opportunity office. I served as lead or sole counsel throughout the litigation, including discovery, pre-trial motions, a bench trial, an appeal, and a subsequent jury trial.

On appeal following the bench trial and defense verdict, the First Circuit reversed the district court, determining as a matter of law that there was no “disloyalty” defense to a claim of retaliation in violation of Title VII, that it did not matter for retaliation whether the employer would have treated a male employee the same way it treated a female plaintiff who has filed a gender discrimination complaint, and that the district court erred in supplying a justification for the employer’s action not raised by either plaintiff or defendant. On remand, the jury found for my client on the retaliation claim, awarding her $150,000 in damages. Plaintiff was also awarded her attorneys’ fees for the bench trial, the appeal and the jury trial.

approximately 120 laid-off employees for violation of the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification (WARN) Act requirements of 'sixty days' notice of a planned certification, were appointed class counsel, defeated defendant's motion for summary judgment, and negotiated a favorable settlement approved by the Court. We obtained a class-wide settlement of approximately $300,000.

I was lead counsel on the case in the district court and on appeal. This case involved a petition by a telecommunications company to vacate an arbitral award concerning a work jurisdiction dispute, and a cross-petition by my client, a local union, for confirmation of award. The district court granted the union's motion for summary judgment, and on appeal, the Court of Appeals affirmed that decision, holding that: (1) the employer was not entitled to trial on the issue of whether a separate jurisdictional agreement governed the relationship between the parties; (2) the arbitrators did not exceed the scope of their authority when they considered the validity and effect of the jurisdictional agreement; and (3) the employer did not preserve any claim that industry arbitrators were biased because they worked for the employer's competitors.

I represented plaintiffs in this suit challenging the Boston Globe's actions towards its regular freelance contributors. Pursuant to oral agreements, these freelancers had provided articles and photographs for one-time publication in the print edition of the Boston Globe and had retained the copyright in their work. The Boston Globe sought to republish the work on-line on its website, Boston.com, and to transfer or sublicense the use of certain articles and photographs to other online media, such as Mead Data Central Corp.'s NEXIS database, where they would be republished under the Globe's name. To obtain the consent of its frequent freelance contributors, the Globe demanded that the contributors give the Globe a license to reuse and modify their past work, and set an ultimatum that if the freelancers rejected this demand for a license to use the past work, it would not accept further content from them. The lawsuit attempted to challenge this practice; the court denied the Globe's motion to dismiss, but following discovery, granted its motion for summary judgment. The court concluded that requiring the freelancers to give up part of their copyright was not akin to giving up earned compensation, and that there was no violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by doing so.

(8) Sims v. Alameda-Contra Costa Transit Dist., 2 F. Supp. 2d 1253 (N.D. Cal. 1998); Judge Charles A. Legge (ret.); 1996-1998.

I brought this action on behalf of the plaintiff against his former employer, alleging that it violated the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) by failing to provide him with notice of his rights and obligations under the FMLA, and by terminating him based in part on an absence due to a serious medical condition under the FMLA. I successfully opposed defendant's motion for summary judgment and obtained a partial summary judgment for plaintiff, establishing that: (1) where the employer did not seek a subsequent medical opinion within a reasonable time period after the employee submitted his initial sufficient certification of a serious health condition, the employer could not challenge the validity of the initial medical certification submitted by employee; and (2) the employer could not deny leave based on a minor deficiency in medical certification, where it did not meet its obligation under the statute to notify the employee of the perceived deficiency and provide him a reasonable opportunity to cure it. The case settled thereafter.

Together with colleagues from my firm, I represented intervenor International Ladies Garment Workers' Union in opposing this action brought by a staffing company and its subsidiary against the California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement. The plaintiffs asserted that the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) preempted California's mandating of workers' compensation insurance. I argued at the district court hearings and participated with colleagues at my firm in the drafting of briefs in support of motions for leave to intervene and to dismiss the complaint, in opposition to plaintiffs' request for a preliminary injunction, and on appeal. We prevailed in both the district court and on appeal, with the Ninth Circuit finding that ERISA preemption did not bar state workers' compensation requirement even though the employer provided coverage for work-related injuries as part of the multibenefit ERISA plan.

Together with colleagues in my firm, I represented petitioner-intervenor AFL-CIO. I played a lead role in the joint briefing challenging a decision by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on behalf of the petitioners and petitioner-intervenors Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., and Public Citizen. The EPA found that four pesticides that had previously been permitted for use as food additives were carcinogens. Despite the finding, the EPA refused to revoke regulations permitting the pesticides' approval as food additives, on the ground that the risk of cancer posed by these chemicals was "de minimus." The petitioners and petitioner-intervenors challenged the EPA's final order permitting the use of the four chemicals on the ground that the use violated the Delaney clause, 21 U.S.C. § 348(c)(3), which prohibited the use of any food additive that is found to induce cancer. The Ninth Circuit granted the petition for review, setting aside the EPA's order after finding that the language of the Delaney clause required the EPA to prohibit all additives that are carcinogens, regardless of the degree of risk involved.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s).

Much of my practice has involved law and motion and appellate practice in state and federal courts addressing disputed issues of law. I have described my participation in the most significant of these cases in response to the prior question. Generally, for at least the past ten years, I have determined the legal strategy in these cases, have drafted legal briefs (sometimes with the assistance of colleagues at my firm), and have argued many of the cases.

A significant part of my practice has included labor arbitrations. These private trials have involved discipline or discharge of union members, contract interpretation disputes, health and safety issues and similar matters. In these proceedings I typically gather information pre-hearing through information requests, witness interviews and review of documents. At the arbitration hearings, I give opening statements, engage in examination or cross-examination of all witnesses, make and oppose evidentiary objections, and give closing arguments, either orally or through post-hearing briefs. I estimate that I have tried more than 25 arbitration cases as lead or sole counsel.

I have also represented clients in other formal evidentiary hearings. For example, I represented a local union in an extensive hearing before the California Division of Occupational Safety (Cal OSHA) concerning ergonomic issues at an automobile plant. The case settled following the introduction of evidence. I also defended nine tenured faculty members facing threat of prosecution under the False Claims Act relating to the administration of government-funded grants. The matter proceeded first as a grievance before a university committee on privileges and tenure. Following the committee's fact-finding and decision in favor of my clients, I was able to negotiate a global resolution of the matter with no charges brought against my clients by the government or university.

I have also drafted, or assisted in drafting, amicus curiae briefs, including Coverall N. Am., Inc. v. Com'r of Div. of Unemployment Assistance, 447 Mass. 852 (2006) (brief filed on behalf of the Service Employees International Union and SEIU Local 615, defending the Massachusetts Division of Unemployment Assistance's determination that alleged "franchisees" were "employees" of janitorial company for purposes of unemployment assistance), Town of Bedford v. AFSCME Council 93, Local 1703, 69 Mass. App. Ct. 110, 866 N.E.2d 936, 937 (2007) (brief filed on behalf of Massachusetts AFL-CIO, in support of an appeal by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Council 93 arguing that the question of whether town timely received grievances from union was an issue for arbitration because the issue was procedural); and Combined Mgmt., Inc. v. Superintendent of Bureau of Ins. of State of Me., 22 F.3d 1, 2 (1st Cir. 1994) (brief filed on behalf of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, AFL-CIO, supporting appellee Superintendent of the Bureau of Insurance for the State of Maine on an appeal by a staffing company of the district court's dismissal of its action to enjoin the Superintendent from enforcing certain provisions of Maine's workers' compensation statute as preempted by ERISA).

I have also represented several public sector unions under state public employee bargaining laws. In San Francisco, I was counsel to the association of lawyers employed by the City and County of San Francisco (assistant city attorneys, assistant district attorneys and assistant public defenders), and engaged in negotiations, mediation and interest arbitration on the association's behalf. In Massachusetts, I have represented independent associations representing librarians and other library employees in contract negotiations and mediation, as well as in proceedings before the Massachusetts Department of Labor Relations.

I have not performed lobbying activities for any client or organization.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I taught at Northeastern Law School during the Winter Quarter, 2011 – 2012. The course, entitled "Employment Law – Compensation, Benefits, & Retirement," is regularly taught by Professor Karl Klare and I used his material in teaching the course. The course covered misclassification of employees, the Family and Medical Leave Act, Unemployment Insurance, Social Security and ERISA. Syllabus supplied.

I also taught in the Labor Studies Program at City College of San Francisco during the 1997 Fall Semester. I do not remember the name of the course, but it provided an overview of the legal framework governing labor-management relations. I do not have a copy of the syllabus for the course.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

Under my partnership agreement with Segal Roitman LLP, upon my resignation from the firm, I will receive my share of net income for the year I leave the firm (based on my percentage interest in the firm and the months with the firm during that year) and my share (based on my percentage interest in the firm) of the firm's capital account.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation if confirmed.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

My husband's ongoing law practice may present a conflict of interest. So long as he has an interest in that firm that could be affected by the outcome of proceedings, I would recuse myself from cases brought by his firm consistent with applicable rules.

There would also be a conflict of interest as to cases I handled or that were handled by my firm while I was associated with it. I would recuse myself from all such cases consistent with applicable rules.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I will handle all matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest through diligent and careful application of Canon 3 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, 28 U.S.C. § 455, and any and all other laws, rules and practices governing such circumstances. I will also consult with the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts for additional guidance.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I have viewed addressing “the need for legal services for those unable to pay reasonable fees” described under Canon 2 as an integral part of my practice over the past 24 years.

I have co-counseled two class actions with Greater Boston Legal Services on behalf of disadvantaged, non-English-speaking workers earning poverty-level wages seeking enforcement of statutory wage protections. In each case, the court-approved settlements we ultimately negotiated for the class included payment by the respective defendant of statutory fees to Greater Boston Legal Services and my firm, but in both cases, we sought only a substantially reduced rate in order to maximize the amounts available to the class members.

I have provided pro bono representation to a number of women who work alone at night cleaning office buildings and who have alleged sexual harassment by their supervisors. In one of these cases, my client ultimately sought no monetary resolution but a change in the employer’s procedures for addressing sexual harassment. I was able to negotiate changes to the company’s procedures and ensure the appropriate training of managers, supervisors and office personnel.

I have also handled several smaller matters on a pro bono basis, including representing claimants in several unemployment hearings and representing a consumer in a state district court suit for default on a car loan.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In March 2013, Senator Elizabeth Warren announced the appointment of an Advisory Committee on Massachusetts judicial nominations to solicit applications for federal District Court vacancies in Springfield and Boston. On April 15, 2013, I submitted my application to the Advisory Committee for the Boston vacancy. On May 8, 2013, I was interviewed by the Committee in Boston, Massachusetts. I was informed by the Chair of the Committee that the Committee recommended my nomination to Senator Warren. On June 17, 2013, I was interviewed by Senator Warren in Boston, Massachusetts, and she informed me that my name would be forwarded to the President. Since June 19, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On July 26, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel’s Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On September 24, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Statement of Senator Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.)
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee
On Executive and Judicial Nominations
January 8, 2014

Today, the Judiciary Committee welcomes two executive and three judicial nominees to testify before us. Debo Patrick Adegbile is nominated to be the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice. He currently serves as Senior Counsel on the Judiciary Committee, where he has done exceptional work and provided me with prudent counsel on numerous matters. Like other members of this Committee who have had staff members nominated to positions in the administration or to the judiciary, these nominations come with mixed emotions. As I am sure Senators Hatch, Cornyn, Lee, and Schumer can attest, it is no surprise to us when our staffers are tapped by the administration to serve as federal prosecutors but it is nonetheless difficult to part with their wise counsel.

Anyone who knows Debo appreciates that he is an excellent choice to lead the Civil Rights Division at the Department of Justice. He will bring a wealth of experience and good judgment to the office. Many of us on the Senate Judiciary Committee met Debo in 2006 when he testified before the Committee as an expert on voting rights. Debo has earned a reputation for his calm demeanor and for working to build consensus. He is a careful lawyer and a good listener. These skills have made him one of the country's most prominent appellate advocates. Former Solicitor General Paul Clement under President George W. Bush said the following about Debo: "I have litigated both with and against Debo and have heard him argue in the Supreme Court. I have always found him to be a formidable advocate of the highest intellect, skills and integrity."

Like Justice Thurgood Marshall, Debo served as Acting President and Director Counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund and also as Associate Director-Counsel and Director of Litigation. During his time at LDF, Debo argued two significant cases on voting rights before the United States Supreme Court. Before joining LDF, Debo also litigated in private practice at the esteemed law firm of Paul, Weiss for seven years.

In addition to his many professional successes, Debo's earlier experiences are also inspiring. Born in the Bronx to an Irish mother and a father from Nigeria, Debo grew up in poverty and experienced periods of homelessness. Through hard work and grit, Debo graduated from Connecticut College and then earned his law degree from the New York University School of Law. And although his two daughters who are here with us today may not appreciate it yet, his journey from the Bronx to this nomination is a remarkable example of the American Dream. I know he has been shaped by these experiences and will fight to uphold the rights of all Americans when he is confirmed to lead the Civil Rights Division at the Justice Department.

Today, the Committee also welcomes John Carlin, who has been nominated to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division at the Department of Justice, along with three judicial nominees: Indira Talwani for the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts; James Peterson for the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin; and Nancy Rosenstengel for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois. I welcome the families of the nominees who have joined us today and look forward to the nominees' testimony.

CES extended remarks on Debo Adebile nominee for Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division

Good morning Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member Grassley, and other members of this committee.

The Civil Rights Division of DOJ is the crowning jewel of civil rights enforcement in this country. Under the able leadership of now-Secretary of Labor Tom Perez, it recovered from some dark days during the previous Administration.

I am grateful that we are past the days of name-calling and politicization over something as basic and American as equal rights under the law.

Indeed, Mr. Adebile has committed his entire career not to politics, but to the enforcement of the very laws that this division protects as its core function. His primary goal as a lawyer has been to interpret and apply our country's long-held anti-discrimination principles. His life – including time spent in one of New York's most notorious residences for the underprivileged, the Martinique Hotel—is a testament to hard work and a beacon for equal opportunity.

Mr. Adebile brings a breadth of experience and deep understanding to this job that, frankly, should be a requirement for anyone who would aspire to assume the responsibility for enforcing our nation's civil rights laws.

Mr. Adebile has, as I'm sure he'd be the first to acknowledge, been no stranger to discrimination. He is a child of immigrants, born in the Bronx. His father was a student from Nigeria, and his mother was an Irish immigrant who came by boat to the United States, where she found a job as a domestic worker and raised her family by herself from the time Mr. Adebile was 10.

His family availed themselves of the safety net of public assistance while Mr. Adegbile sought the education that helped to lift them from their circumstances. (And, I might add, did a star turn on Sesame Street, which he filmed for nine seasons.)

In middle school, his family was even evicted from their home, and they lived briefly in the Martinique Hotel, a well-chronicled, decrepit “welfare” hotel that came to epitomize the neglect often suffered by the poor in New York City.

After high school, he took three years to work to support his mother and little brother, even working as a courier for a travel agency that served the law firm of Paul Weiss Rifkind Wharton & Garrison, where, years later, he was a law firm associate for 7 years.

Mr. Adegbile then, not surprisingly, excelled at Connecticut College. He was singled out for the Anna Lord Strauss Medal – the award given to one student for outstanding service to the college and community. In 1991, he accepted a Point of Light Honor from President George H.W. Bush on behalf of his college’s Office of Volunteers and Community Service.

He went on to New York University of School of Law, and worked at the prestigious law firm he had encountered earlier as a courier – Paul Weiss.

After seven years of training with some of the best litigators in the country, Mr. Adegbile joined the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, where he came to serve as Director of Litigation and Acting President and Director Counsel.

Mr. Adegbile is now one of the foremost experts in, among many other important areas of civil rights law, the prosecution of voting rights.

The right to vote, while not specifically enumerated in the Constitution, is at the core of our democracy. The Voting Rights Act remains as the fulcrum of the protections that we afford against the tyranny of an intemperate majority – a potential threat that even our very Founders discussed in the Federalist Papers.

The statements that Mr. Adebile has made in briefs, on behalf of clients, and in various public fora speak not to an ideologue who is on a mission, but to someone who is deeply committed to the right of every single qualified American to vote without undue impediment.

Now, at this time when the attack on the federal protection of voting rights is at a crossroads, and the increasing use of voter identification has overtones of discrimination, we need someone in this job with a thorough understanding of the law and a commitment to its underpinnings.

We need someone in this job with a firm grasp of other areas of civil rights law as well – facilities discrimination, discrimination in public hiring – all manner of “access” issues that Mr. Adebile himself has not only litigated, but embodies: Without fundamental access to the levers of education and employment, all the hard work in the world would not have amounted to anything for Mr. Adebile and his family.

Mr. Adebile, I offer a warm welcome to you and your family (wife Susan, children Sela and Devan), and thank you for being here, and for your service.

Statement of Senator Charles Grassley Ranking Member
Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate

Before the Committee on the Judiciary regarding the Nominations of:

*John P. Carlin, to be Assistant Attorney General, National Security Division
Debo P. Adegbile, to be an Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division
James D. Peterson, to be United States District Judge for the Western District of Wisconsin
Nancy J. Rosenstengel, to be United States District Judge for the Southern District of Illinois

January 8, 2013

Mr. Chairman,

First, I'd like to congratulate and welcome today's nominees and their families.

Today we are considering three District Court nominees and two important Department of Justice positions, including the nominee to be the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. This division has not been without its share of controversy.

For instance, the last individual to lead this office orchestrated the Quid Pro Quo between the Department of Justice and the city of St. Paul, where the Department of Justice went to great lengths to get a case withdrawn from the Supreme Court so that the legal theory known as "disparate impact" would evade Supreme Court review.

And of course, there have been very disturbing allegations of politicizing the hiring process at the Civil Rights Division. In fact, a March 2013 Inspector General report criticized the Civil Rights Division for its hiring practices, noting that the primary criterion used by the hiring committee resulted in a pool of candidates that was “overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation.”

So I have some concerns with the way the Civil Rights Division has been run. And I also have some concerns with the nominee’s record.

I would note that the Fraternal Order of Police, an organization that is very well respected by both sides of the aisle, has submitted a letter strongly opposing the nominee for the Civil Rights Division. Of course, the Fraternal Order of Police represents 330,000 men and women who are on the front lines of law enforcement, putting their lives on the line to protect us every day. So, when they write to inform us of their “extreme disappointment, displeasure and vehement opposition” to the nominee for the Civil Rights Division, I think that we should give their concerns thoughtful consideration. I look forward to hearing from the nominee regarding this – as well as other – issues of concern. And I ask consent that the letter from the Fraternal Order of Police be made part of the record.

I note that today is the first Nominations hearing of 2014. I’d like to briefly review the good work the Committee accomplished with regard to judicial nominations last year. Last month, we held the 18th judicial nominations hearing of 2013, during which we considered a total of 62 judicial nominees.

This is a significant improvement over how this Committee treated judicial nominees during the last President’s fifth year of office. In 2005, the Committee held only six nominations hearings, and considered only 15 district and circuit nominees. So in 2013, this committee held three times the number of nominations hearings and considered over four times the number of judicial nominees.

Additionally, last year the Senate confirmed 45 lower court Article 3 judicial nominees. That is more than twice the number confirmed at a similar stage in President Bush’s second term, when only 21 district and circuit nominees had been confirmed.

All told, the Senate has confirmed 217 of this President's lower court Article 3 judges. That is a record that any President should be proud of.

So I'll conclude by saying that I applaud the Chairman for his work. He continues to keep us busy as he makes sure that the Committee moves at a brisk pace, and I hope he would recognize the cooperation and accommodation I have shown as Ranking Member of this Committee.

Again, I welcome the nominees and their families today and look forward to their testimony.

Statement for the Record of John P. Carlin
Before the Senate Judiciary Committee
January 8, 2014

Thank you, Chairman Leahy, Ranking Member Grassley, and distinguished Members of this Committee.

It is an honor to appear before you today, and I thank you for considering my nomination. Thank you also for your leadership on the pressing national security issues that we face. I sincerely appreciate the opportunity I have had to meet with several of you to discuss some of those important issues in advance of this hearing.

I want to start by thanking the President for his confidence in nominating me, and the Attorney General for his support. It is a true honor to be considered for this position, and an opportunity for which I am very grateful.

In addition, I would like to recognize my family, for their love and support over the years. My wife, Sarah, who has made countless sacrifices to allow me to pursue a career in public service, and our daughter, Sylvie, for her tolerance for the many evenings I have missed at home. My parents, Patricia and Roy, for teaching my sister and me by lesson and by example, the importance of dedication, discipline, and always doing what's right. I also want to thank my sister Jennifer, my brother-in-law Don, and their children, Daniel and Katie, for their support. Because of all of them, and their selflessness, I have been able to choose the path that has led me here today.

I am grateful to have had the opportunity to spend my entire legal career with the Department of Justice, and privileged to have served in several different roles – first, representing the United States of America as a federal prosecutor, and then, in a series of positions focused directly on protecting the nation's security. For more than a decade, I have learned from, and worked alongside, legendary public servants as the United States undertook fundamental changes in our approach to combating the threat of terrorism and other emerging national security challenges. While serving as FBI Director Bob Mueller's Special Counsel and, later, as his Chief of Staff, I worked with the lawyers, policymakers, and leaders that helped the Bureau evolve from a law enforcement agency into a threat-based, intelligence-driven national security organization. As Principal Deputy and Chief of Staff to Lisa Monaco, now Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism, when she was Assistant Attorney General, I had the chance to help lead another evolution – one in which the Justice Department's National Security Division continued to adapt to meet the growing and evolving cyber threat, and further developed its all-tools approach to disrupting a growing range of national security challenges.

These experiences have taught me about the transformative power of lawyers in our government—and the sense of duty and mission that comes with it. Serving as the Acting Assistant Attorney General for National Security for approximately the last 10 months, I have been both humbled and driven by the responsibilities and mission entrusted to the position.

First, this position is charged with leading the Department's National Security Division – which Congress created to unite the Department of Justice's national security elements to bring all tools to bear in the fight against terrorism and other threats to national security. Legal decision-making is an integral part of operational planning, with lawyers at the table to ensure adherence to new and changing legal requirements and to facilitate consideration and use of all legally available options to detect and disrupt threats to our nation's security. If confirmed, I will remain committed to this all-tools approach, and to adapting it as the threats to our country continue to evolve.

Second, the Division serves as a bridge between the Intelligence Community and the Department of Justice, to support the approach Congress embraced when it removed legal and structural barriers to information-sharing among intelligence and law enforcement professionals. This bridge has allowed us to maximize our disruption options and offers our best chance to prevent the next attack before it happens. If confirmed, I will build on the relationships that I have made during my time in the national security community, to ensure that the bridge we have worked so hard to build remains strong and grows stronger.

Finally, I am committed to ensuring that as we adapt our intelligence practices to stay ahead of our adversaries, our critical operations are conducted within the bounds of the law and consistent with our nation's values. I recognize that these values include protecting vital civil liberties, privacy, and the rule of law.

Thank you again for the opportunity to appear before you today, and for your consideration. I look forward to answering your questions.

Opening Statement of Debo P. Adegbile
January 8, 2014

Thank you Chairman Leahy for your leadership of this Committee, Ranking Member Grassley for your years of service to the nation, and thank you to all members of the Committee for your commitment to the important work of the Judiciary Committee. It is a great pleasure to serve as an attorney for the Judiciary Committee, and to do so alongside such talented and committed staff colleagues. I am deeply honored to appear before you today.

I am both grateful for and humbled by the President's nomination. I thank President Obama and Attorney General Holder for the opportunity, if confirmed, to serve the nation as Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights.

I am joined today by my wife, Susan Haskell, whose love, kindness, strength and patience both sustain me and encourage me to become a better person. I am joined as well by our two wonderful daughters, Sela and Devan. They brighten every single day for us, and Susan and I could not be any prouder of them.

I am also joined today by friends from grade school, high school, college, and law school, as well as by former LDF colleagues, and, of necessity, present colleagues. I thank them all for their attendance whether it was compelled or not. In addition, I thank all of those family and friends who could not be present today but have supported me throughout my life and career.

As the child of immigrants who came to the United States with dreams for themselves and later their family, I have a deep appreciation of the opportunities that America can provide. I know too that the road of opportunity can be long, winding, and challenging. At various points, in my life I have lived on different rungs of the socio-economic ladder. I have learned a great deal along the way and taken something positive with me from all of those experiences, and from the people whom I met along the way. I know from experience that that which binds is stronger than that which threatens to divide us.

In particular, I have benefitted from the transformative power of educational opportunity. I know firsthand that in our country, with the benefit of educational opportunity, steadfastness and a bit of good luck, the circumstances of birth or childhood need not limit your aspirations or achievements. If we keep our promises in America, where you start need not determine where you finish.

Because of my personal experiences, I have an unshakable belief in the value that we assign as a nation to protecting civil rights. At the outset, our Constitution sets as its goal building a "more perfect union", words that are both inspirational and aspirational. These words summon us to work to improve the conditions of liberty and equality within the framework of our system of government. Over time the United States Congress has taken this goal very, very seriously, and it specifically created the United States Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division, and a wide range of laws to advance this cause. Other branches of our government, state and federal, many, many brave individuals, known and unknown, and public interest entities have advanced the cause of equality too.

The Civil Rights Division, through the statutes it enforces, is called upon to protect the liberty and equality of all us. And, over many decades, the commitment and expertise of the public servants in the Division have dramatically and demonstrably improved our country. With hard work and persistence, we have made tremendous strides together. We are a stronger nation today for these efforts. If we are true to the aspirational goal that the Constitution sets for us, however, our past successes should not limit our future achievements. We can do more to protect civil rights, we must do more to protect civil rights, and the Civil Rights Division stands ready to protect the civil rights of all Americans. It would be a great honor, if confirmed, to contribute to the Justice Department's efforts.

Although I have had the opportunity to work as an attorney in a law firm, not-for-profit, and governmental settings, I have spent the better part of the last twenty years engaged in the work of civil rights. I have seen the impact that enforcing civil rights can have on real peoples' lives. Improved employment options, greater access to educational opportunity, removal of unnecessary barriers for people with disabilities, and ensuring fuller access to the political process, among other important efforts, makes lives more fulfilling. The work has been challenging, engaging and inspiring. Indeed, through the years I have learned that our civil rights laws have a common denominator – regardless of the specific subject matter, these laws guard the dignity of all of us.

If confirmed, I will commit to lead the Division with dedication to its mission, respect for those dedicated public servants who faithfully discharge its work, and with the sensitivity, fairness and integrity that successful civil rights work requires.

It is my great privilege to appear before you this morning and I look forward to your questions.

Thank you.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Debo P. Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

1. Is it appropriate for employees of the Civil Rights Division to consult with groups such as the NAACP, La Raza, MALDEF, and the ACLU when making legal determinations?
2. According to a 2013 Inspector General report, the hiring procedures under former Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, Thomas Perez, resulted in a pool of candidates that was “overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation.” The report made the following recommendations to address the deficiencies in hiring practices. Please answer each subpart individually.
 - a. “That the Voting Section use hiring criteria that are based on the specific skills, duties, and experience that are required or preferred for vacant positions and that appear in the Section’s vacancy announcement.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?
 - b. “That the Voting Section refrain from relying on the ‘general civil rights/public interest’ criterion in the future.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?
 - c. “That the Voting Section adopt hiring criteria that better account for the significant contributions that applicants with limited or no civil rights backgrounds can make to the Section, including those with defensive litigation experience.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?
 - d. “That the Civil Rights Division not place primary emphasis on ‘demonstrated interest in the enforcement of civil rights laws’ as a hiring criterion.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?
3. During your predecessor’s tenure as Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division there were no “hires” made who had ties to a conservative organization. What steps do you plan to take in order to ensure an ideologically diverse applicant pool for future hires in the Civil Rights Division?
4. After the NAACP’s LDF had filed two amicus briefs on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal, but before LDF became lead counsel for Mr. Abu-Jamal during your tenure as Director of Litigation, Mr. Abu-Jamal’s former lead counsel, Robert R. Bryan, circulated a petition addressed to President Obama that demanded a new trial for Mr. Abu-Jamal and advocated “global abolition of the death penalty.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Did you sign the petition?
 - b. To your knowledge, did any of your LDF colleagues sign the petition?
5. If you are confirmed as AAG for Civil Rights and the Department of Justice decides to review any aspect of Mr. Abu-Jamal’s post-sentencing appeals or collateral attacks on his conviction, would you consider it proper to participate in any such review?
6. In a 2009 amicus brief you submitted to the United States Supreme Court in support of Mr. Abu-Jamal, the LDF noted its “long-standing concern with the influence of racial discrimination” in the criminal justice system and, specifically, in the jury-selection process. Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Do you believe that racial discrimination remains – as you characterized it in a quotation cited in your brief – a “common and flagrant” practice during jury selection in the United States? If so, what aspects of Batson and its progeny, in your view, require revision by the federal courts?
 - b. What types of litigation do you intend to pursue as AAG to affect change in civil-rights law regarding jury selection?
 - c. Do you consider that the jury-selection procedure prior to Mr. Abu-Jamal’s trial was characterized by “flagrant[ly]” racially discriminatory conduct by the prosecutor?
7. In the same 2009 LDF amicus brief, you argued that the Third Circuit improperly failed to consider “evidence of a culture of discrimination” and testimony from “Philadelphia defense attorneys indicating that the Philadelphia District Attorney’s Office used its peremptory strikes to exclude African American prospective jurors.” Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. In your view, under what circumstances is it proper for a trial court to take into account such extrinsic evidence?
 - b. In your view, would a bare allegation of “a culture of discrimination” or the anecdotal testimony of a local defense attorney be sufficient to make out a prima facie case under Batson’s step one?
8. In 2006, during your tenure as LDF’s Associate Director for Litigation, LDF filed an amicus brief on Mr. Abu-Jamal’s behalf in which LDF argued that Mr. Abu-Jamal’s trial was tainted by a climate of race prejudice and discrimination in “the historical conduct of the Philadelphia County District Attorney’s Office.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. What involvement, whether in a supervisory, authorial, editorial, or other role, did you have in the 2006 amicus brief?
 - b. In a 2009 amicus brief LDF filed on Mr. Abu-Jamal's behalf, which you signed as counsel of record, LDF refers to "evidence of a culture of discrimination, including that the Philadelphia District Attorney's Office trained its young prosecutors on how to exclude prospective jurors of color." Does the "culture of discrimination" you allege in the 2009 amicus brief refer to "the historical conduct of the Philadelphia County District Attorney's Office" that LDF cited in the 2006 amicus brief?
9. On January 28, 2011, your colleague Christina A. Swarns, who appears with you on two LDF Supreme Court briefs on which you are counsel of record, stated at a rally for Mr. Abu-Jamal that "there is no question in the mind of anyone at the Legal Defense Fund that the justice system has completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal and in our view, that has everything to do with race and that is why the legal defense fund is in this case."
- a. Does Ms. Swarns's claim that the "justice system...completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal in [LDF's] view" refer to LDF's prior allegations of a culture of racial discrimination in the Philadelphia County District Attorney's Office?
10. Explain why, during your tenure as the LDF's Director of Litigation in 2011, you decided to cease advocating on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal as amicus curiae and became his lead counsel in Supreme Court litigation, see, e.g., Wetzel v. Abu-Jamal, and subsequent litigation.
11. Have you made any public statements – with the exception of statements made in a court or in court filings – regarding Mr. Abu-Jamal? Please provide a transcript or detailed record of any such statement and specify the date on which the statement was made.
12. List all LDF court filings related to Mumia Abu-Jamal with which you had any involvement, whether in a supervisory, authorial, editorial, or other role. Please provide a copy of each filing.
13. Under what circumstances do you consider racial preferences to be unconstitutional?
14. Under what circumstances do racial preferences violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act?
15. Should the college admissions process consider both racial and economic status when determining whether to give applicants special consideration?
16. Do you believe ethnic profiling in the context of the War on Terrorism is unconstitutional?

17. Will you defend the use of racial preferences in the federal government's contracting and employment policies?
18. In Rothe Development Corp. v. Department of Defense, the Federal Circuit struck down the Department of Defense's racially preferential contracting program. Will you urge the federal government to end the use of preferences based on race, ethnicity, and sex in its contracting practices?
19. Is it constitutional for a university to have racially exclusive internships, scholarships, or summer programs?
20. Do you agree with your predecessors' decision to challenge racially exclusive fellowship programs at Southern Illinois University?
21. You have been critical of Supreme Court decisions regarding race issues, saying that the Court has "in recent years drastically undermined efforts to redeem the Fourteenth Amendment's promise of equal citizenship for all." If confirmed, what will be your priorities in regard to righting these, in your view, wrongly decided cases?
22. Will you embrace the theory of disparate impact in litigation initiated by the Civil Rights Division?
23. If a case is appealed to the Supreme Court questioning the use of disparate-impact theory will you allow that case to be heard or will you work to settle the case to avoid Supreme Court review of the theory?
24. The Supreme Court has warned that the use of disparate-impact theory in litigation can have two negative consequences: (1) forcing employers and others to adopt surreptitious quotas to avoid being sued; and (2) forcing employers to abandon other legitimate selection criteria. Do you agree with this warning?
25. In Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, you argued on behalf of the intervenors-appellees that the District Court's decision that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act precluded the utility district from receiving a Section 4 bailout because the district was not a "political subdivision." The Supreme Court unanimously reversed the District Court's decision and held that the utility district was a political subdivision and therefore eligible for bailout. Please answer each subpart individually.
 - a. Do you still agree with the arguments you made in this case?
 - b. What steps will you take, if confirmed, at the Department of Justice to further the arguments you made in this case?

26. In Shelby County v. Holder, you argued on behalf of the respondent-intervenors that the Court should uphold Sections 4(b) and 5 of the Voting Rights Act. You argued that Section 5 “remains essential to safeguard our democracy from racial discrimination;” that Section 2 litigation is an “inadequate response to the persistent and adaptive problem of racial discrimination in voting in certain parts of our country;” and that “racial discrimination in voting remains concentrated in the jurisdictions that have historically been covered by Section 5.” The Supreme Court struck down Section 4(b). Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Do you still agree with the arguments you made in this case?
 - b. Do you accept the Supreme Court’s decision as final?
 - c. What steps will you take, if confirmed, to further the arguments you made in this case?
 - d. In the brief, you argued that “racial discrimination in voting poses a unique threat to our democracy.” What steps will you take, if confirmed, to stem this “unique threat?”
 - e. In light of the Supreme Court’s decision in Shelby County v. Holder, how will you use Section 2 litigation to protect rights of voters?
27. The Pew Center on the States recently found that more than 1.8 million dead people are registered to vote, that 24 million registrations are either invalid or inaccurate, and that approximately 2.75 million people have registrations in more than one state. The report went on to say that “our democratic process requires an effective system for maintaining accurate voter registration information. Voter registration lists are used to assign precincts, send sample ballots, provide polling place information, identify and verify voters at polling places, and determine how resources, such as paper ballots and voting machines, are deployed on Election Day. However, these systems are plagued with errors and inefficiencies that waste taxpayer dollars, undermine voter confidence, and fuel partisan disputes over the integrity of our elections.” The Civil Rights Division is responsible for the federal law that requires the states to maintain clean voter rolls. Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Would you agree with the Pew Foundation on the States that inaccurate state voter lists where dead voters, ineligible voters, and voters who remain on the voting rolls of multiple states is a national problem?
 - b. As the Civil Rights Division is responsible for enforcing the federal voting law in this area, what do you intend to do to resolve this national problem if you were to be confirmed by the Senate?

- c. Will you fully enforce Section 8 of the NVRA that requires states to conduct list maintenance and properly remove deceased and other ineligible voters from state voter rolls if confirmed by the Senate?
28. In the Federal Voting Assistance Program's 18th Report to the President and Congress a few years ago, the absentee ballot return rate for active duty military overseas was only 67% as compared to a 91% success rate for domestic absentee ballot voters. Studies show that participation rates of overseas military voters is much lower than civilian voters due to difficulties they encounter in voting from remote areas. Military voters are more likely to be disenfranchised than any other group of voters and the Report noted that the majority of voting failure was the untimely ballot transmission when state and counties do not send ballots to voters on time, required 45 days before any federal election. The Civil Rights Division is responsible for the enforcement of military voting laws, particularly the MOVE Act which governs this area. Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Will the enforcement of the MOVE Act be a priority for you, if you are confirmed?
- b. There has been some criticism that in the past the Voting Rights Section has waited too long before bringing suit to protect military members. How do you plan to closely monitor counties and quickly enforce the law to protect voters before the election, not after the election?
29. Do you believe that legally requiring voters to have identification is the equivalent of a poll tax?
30. Do you believe that individuals who have broken this nation's laws by entering the country illegally should be allowed to gain citizenship?
31. Last July, Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Shaun Donovan unveiled a new rule to allow the federal government to track so-called "diversity" in American neighborhoods and to create policies to change the makeup of neighborhoods it deems to be discriminatory. The policy is called, "Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing," and will require HUD to gather data on segregation and discrimination in every single neighborhood and to try to remedy it. What will the Civil Rights Division's role be in enforcing that policy?
32. In your opinion, when is it appropriate to decline to defend the constitutionality of a federal statute?
33. Under what circumstances do you believe the death penalty to be constitutional?
34. In 2012, following issuance of guidelines by the EEOC that instructed employers to consider only relevant details related to a potential employee's criminal history, you stated that “[n]o one should be penalized for the rest of their life for mistakes that they made in the past.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Do you oppose an employer’s ability to perform criminal background checks on potential employees?
 - b. Will you, if confirmed, take action to abridge or eliminate an employer’s ability to perform criminal background checks on potential employees?
35. You did not provide many notes from the speeches and talks you gave during this past year. Why did you not save these?
36. To your knowledge, were you considered for a position on the D.C. Circuit?
- a. If so, why did your nomination not proceed?
37. Do you agree with the following statement, the “minimum coverage provision [of the ACA] enhances the ability of individuals to participate in the economic, social, and civil life of our nation, thereby advancing equal opportunity and personal liberty?”
- a. If so, how will you, if confirmed, work as head of the Civil Rights Division to ensure that it advances equal opportunity and personal liberty?
38. While at LDF, you contributed to a brief in the case of the District of Columbia v. Heller. Do you still agree with the following statements? Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. “Indeed, the text of the Second Amendment itself does not provide for [a right for an individual to possess or use firearms outside the context of a lawfully organized militia], and for the Court to recognize an individual right to “keep and bear Arms” would represent a radical departure from the consistent and long-established understanding of the Second Amendment.”
 - b. “Although these statements do not carry the weight of precedent, they illustrate how radical the position taken by the D.C. Circuit truly is. A robust Second Amendment right to ‘keep and bear Arms’ for purely private purposes has never been taken seriously by any majority of the members of the Court. Nor has the court ever invalidated a restriction on firearms under the Second Amendment. To do so now would represent a radical and unwarranted departure from the Court’s Second Amendment jurisprudence.”
 - c. “A recognition by this Court of an individual right to ‘keep and bear Arms’ for purely private purposes would represent more than a mere doctrinal shift; as a practical matter, it would appear to require a massive change in the way firearms have been regulated for centuries.”

39. Do you believe that defendants under age 18 should ever be subjected to adult punishments in the criminal justice system? If you believe adult treatment for juvenile offenders is appropriate, please specify under what circumstances.
40. In an amicus brief submitted by the LDF in Miller v. Alabama, you allege that “racial overtones and stereotyping tainted the widespread enactment of laws that exposed youth to life without parole,” and that such laws had a disproportionate impact on African-American and Latino youth. Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Do you believe that life-without-parole sentencing laws and juvenile-court reforms enacted in the 1980s and 90s were designed with the intent, implicit or otherwise, to incarcerate larger numbers of youth of color?
 - b. If yes, how do you account for the advocacy of such laws by prominent African-American political leaders, like former New York City Mayor David Dinkins and Rep. Carol Moseley Braun?
41. You contributed to an amicus brief in Miller v. Alabama. In this brief you argued that racism has stymied the proper evaluation with respect to ethnic minorities charged with criminal offenses. Do you still agree with the following statement from the brief: “Because it is clear that race critically and inappropriately informs the assessment of blameworthiness in the context of juvenile life without parole sentencing, such sentences are unconstitutional. ...The perceived negative personality traits of African-American and other youth of color led officials to assess them as more culpable and dangerous than white youth and, therefore, to recommend more severe sentences for youth of color....In light of the preceding arguments, the possibility that race may play any role in the administration of justice is especially disturbing in the context of life without parole sentences for youth....At bottom, the gross racial disparities that pervade life without parole sentencing for children demonstrate that negative perceptions of youth of color have stymied the proper evaluation of their culpability.”
- a. Do you believe this is an issue that is pervasive within the justice system in this country?
 - b. If so, what role will the Civil Rights Division play in remedying this?
42. In the LDF amicus brief you submitted in Miller v. Alabama, your claim that “it is clear that race critically and inappropriately influences the assessment of blameworthiness in the context of juvenile life without parole sentencing” is supported primarily by non-empirical social science – the brief even suggests that life-without-parole sentencing laws “appeal to cultural archetypes in the collective unconscious about the ‘alien other’ who poses a fearful and menacing threat to society.” To what extent will your decisionmaking as Assistant Attorney General be guided by social-science concepts such as “cultural archetypes” and “the collective unconscious”?

43. Given your argument in the LDF's Miller amicus brief that "[r]acial disparities in juvenile life without parole sentences are not surprising given that these disparities exist at all levels of children's contact with the criminal justice system," what, if any, steps do you plan to take as Assistant Attorney General to ameliorate racial disparities in federal sentencing?
44. In the context of juvenile defendants, you wrote in an amicus brief the LDF submitted in Graham v. Florida that "dynamics of race, class and the nature of indigent defense" may "disadvantage" a defendant's "relationship with counsel and contribute to a significant risk of an unreliable sentencing outcome that fails to reflect actual culpability." Please answer each subpart individually.
- Do you believe this assertion to be true in the context of adult defendants?
 - If so, what if any measures do you intend to undertake as Assistant Attorney General to lessen the disadvantages you previously argued that defendants who belong to disadvantaged groups face?
45. In Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & School v. EEOC, the Supreme Court stated that the First Amendment prohibits governmental "interference with an internal church decision that affects the faith and mission of the church itself," and unanimously rejected the argument advanced in an LDF amicus brief that you signed that application of anti-retaliation provisions of civil rights laws to parochial school teachers comports with the First Amendment. Given the Supreme Court's unanimous rejection of LDF's position in Hosanna-Tabor, what provisions of civil-rights laws, in your view, may employees who qualify under the "ministerial exception" exercise without violating the First Amendment rights of their employer?
46. You contributed to an amicus brief in Hosanna Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & School v. EEOC. In this brief, you argue that "[a]ny burden on parochial schools' First Amendment interests in retaliating against their teachers is more than outweighed by the countervailing needs of law enforcement." The Supreme Court ruled 9-0 against your arguments. Please answer each subpart individually.
- Do you still believe this statement, and the rest of the arguments you made in the brief, are good and valid legal arguments?
 - Do you still believe that "[a]pplying a ministerial exception to parochial school teachers would be devastating to states' undeniably compelling interest in protecting children from abuse?"
 - Do you still agree with the following statement, "[e]ven if civil rights laws pervasively imposed significant burdens on religious practice that would not justify a categorical exemption for parochial schools?"

47. In your view, does Hosanna-Tabor's holding prevent an individual (1) who is employed by a religious institution; (2) and falls within the "ministerial exception," from suing under the anti-discrimination and anti-retaliation provisions of civil-rights statutes like Title VII or the Rehabilitation Act? Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Would a suit by such an individual be permitted under the FMLA or the Equal Pay Act?
 - b. In your view, does Hosanna-Tabor's holding prevent such an individual from suing his or her employer alleging discrimination based on the individual's sexual orientation or gender identity?
48. Please identify what, if any, civil-rights provisions you consider to be neutral laws of general applicability – see Employment Division v. Smith – that may still be lawfully asserted against religious organizations by employees who fall with the ministerial exception, notwithstanding the Court's holding in Hosanna-Tabor.
49. Following the Supreme Court's decision in Ricci v. DeStefano, do you believe that employers which have engaged in race-conscious employment actions or other conduct covered by Title VII can evade disparate-treatment liability based merely on a good-faith belief that the employment action may otherwise have caused racial disparities in jobs that have historically excluded racial minorities?
50. In a 2010 amicus brief LDF filed in Wal-Mart v. Dukes, you wrote that "[c]ivil rights cases are paradigmatic cases for Rule 23(b)(2) certification." Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. Given the Supreme Court's holding in that case that claims for monetary relief sought by putative class members cannot be certified under Rule 23(b)(2) where monetary relief is not incidental to injunctive or declaratory relief, please explain whether you believe that civil-rights lawsuits in which putative class members seek money damages may still be brought pursuant to Rule 23(b)(2).
 - b. If so, what circumstances in your view would permit a (b)(2) class in which members seek monetary relief?
 - c. Further, do you consider monetary relief in the form of backpay to be declaratory or injunctive relief as those terms are used in Rule 23(b)(2)?
 - d. Do you still maintain, as you did in the LDF brief, that "[r]estricting the reach of 23(b)(2) class actions—by, inter alia, limiting their certification to instances where monetary relief is not requested—contravenes the structure and purpose of disparate impact theory, as first conceived by [the Supreme Court]?"

51. Following the Supreme Court's decision in Berghuis v. Smith, please explain your view on the circumstances under which various methods of proof of systematic exclusion – absolute disparity, comparative disparity, and standard deviation – are appropriate tools in establishing fair-cross-section claims. Please answer each subpart individually.
- a. In cases involving an allegedly excluded minority group that comprises less than 10 percent of the total population, please explain the circumstances under which you would employ a comparative-disparity theory and the circumstances under which you would employ a standard-deviation theory.
52. In a 2008 amicus brief which you signed, LDF (and others) argued that Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act permits minority voters to satisfy the first Gingles precondition – i.e., whether a minority group “is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in a single-member district” – even though the minority group does not comprise a numerical majority of voters in a given district. The Supreme Court rejected this so-called “functional majority test” in its plurality opinion in Bartlett v. Stickland. In light of that holding, please explain under what circumstances, in your view, a minority group can satisfy Section 2's majority-minority requirement if that group does not comprise a numerical majority in the voting district.
53. In its plurality opinion in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, the Supreme Court rejected a challenge that you, as LDF counsel of record, raised against the Indiana Voter I.D. law, and held that the Indiana law was “unquestionably relevant to the State's interest in protecting the integrity and reliability of the electoral process.” The Court also held that the law – which allowed potential voters to obtain free identification cards by going to their local DMV office with appropriate documents – did not impose a substantial burden on an individual's right to vote, and that whatever additional burden the requirement may put on certain groups, i.e., the elderly, was mitigated by the ability of the voter to cast a provisional ballot.
- a. Please specify the circumstances under which you believe that a state law that imposes a voter I.D. requirement and provides a procedure for voters to obtain free, state-issued identification, would impose a substantial burden on voters or infringe the right to vote.
54. What would be the considerations that you would apply if confirmed in deciding whether to challenge under the Voting Rights Act a state's enactment of a particular law requiring that voters display photo identification before casting their vote?
55. Can you give guidance to any state contemplating enactment of such a law with respect to its content so that it could be certain that the Civil Rights Division would not bring a challenge? Or is it the case that the Civil Rights Division would challenge any such law under the Voting Rights Act?

56. In my state of Iowa, state officials have learned that not only are non-citizens on the voter rolls, but that a number of non-citizens have voted. The state has brought a number of successful prosecutions for voter fraud. Do you agree that voter fraud exists, that states have an important interest in preventing such fraud, and that a legitimate voter's fundamental right to vote is diluted equally if an ineligible person is allowed to vote as if an eligible voter is denied the right to vote?

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

John Carlin
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for National Security

1. A recent article about your nomination in Foreign Policy magazine raised concerns about whether, given your close relationships with some officials in the White House, as a Department of Justice appointee you can be appropriately independent from them. The article also suggested that you had asked your colleagues not to copy you on email about sensitive policy issues in advance of your hearing. Did you ask colleagues not to email you about sensitive policy issues in advance of your hearing? If so, why?
2. The National Security Division made a significant policy change last year with respect to material collected under Section 702 of FISA. Before last summer, defendants were not notified if material collected under FISA Section 702 was used as the basis to obtain a traditional FISA warrant against them. If these defendants were not notified, they could not challenge the use of the 702 provision in any way.

In February, however, the Solicitor General represented to the Supreme Court in a case challenging the statute that defendants were being notified, which turned out not to be true. A debate within the Department of Justice ensued.

According to the New York Times, the debate stretched through the summer, with “dueling memorandums by lawyers in the solicitor generals office and in the national security division.” Eventually, the Department adopted the Solicitor General’s view. According to news reports, the Department has begun providing additional notice to certain defendants.

- a. Do you know how many defendants are going to be affected by this change of policy, and when do you expect all the additional notices to be provided?
 - b. Do you believe that under your leadership the National Security Division was complying with its legal and ethical obligations when it didn’t provide these notices? If so, why was the policy changed?
3. If confirmed one of the matters you would be supervising is the investigation and possible prosecution of Edward Snowden. There have been calls for leniency or clemency for Snowden, perhaps in exchange for returning documents that he took from the government. Do you believe it is appropriate for the United States to consider some degree of leniency for Snowden?

4. Are you aware of a 2010 EEOC complaint regarding a DOJ attorney in the National Security Division, Joshua Nesbitt, who alleged that he was the victim of race-based discrimination?
5. This matter, Nesbitt v. Holder, is currently being litigated in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. What role, if any, have you played in the litigation of this matter?
6. The plaintiff in Nesbitt v. Holder alleged that he was denied promotion to the position of Deputy Chief of Litigation in the National Security Division's Office of Intelligence because of his race. He points to the selectee's "failure to comply with the application requirements contained in the vacancy announcement, and that the application process was corrupted in order to avoid promoting the African-American applicant." What measures have you put in place, or will you put in place, in order to ensure that the application and review processes in hiring decisions will be clear to all involved?
7. Does the Department of Justice and the National Security Division still believe that export licenses and documents are useful to the Department's investigations and enforcement of the export control statutes and to creating incentives on sellers and exporters to conduct due diligence on their buyers and other parties to exports of arms, munitions, and dual use goods?
8. Have recent decontrols over military aircraft, naval vessels, and other military technology once controlled under the Arms Export Control Act (AECA) and International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR) of the Department of State and now controlled under the Export Administration Regulations (EAR) of the Department of Commerce weakened the ability of the Department of Justice to obtain international assistance against the unlawful proliferation, diversion, and transfer of military items and military technology?
9. The technical and manufacturing specifications for many parts of the F-4, F-5, F-14 and F-16 are no longer AECA/ITAR controlled according to the recent revisions of the ITAR. Does that adversely affect in any manner the Justice Department's ability to investigate and prosecute AECA violations or sanctions involving Iran and efforts to obtain military aviation parts? In light of public reports of Chinese assistance to the radar and other avionics of Iranian fighter jets including the F-4, will efforts to investigate and disrupt schemes by Chinese actors to obtain such military aviation technology be impeded given that such aviation parts, components and their associated technical specifications will no longer subject to the Chinese arms embargo under Public Law 101-246, § 902(a)(3)?

10. Is it more difficult to secure international cooperation, email search warrants, extradition of indicted defendants, or other steps in investigating AECA violations resulting from any Iranian efforts to obtain U.S. military parts through initial shipments through a third country as a result of the ongoing transfer of military parts and components from ITAR control to EAR control?
11. If the definition of “specially designed” now adopted for the ITAR and EAR had been in place at the time of the prosecution of United States v. Lachman, 387 F.3d 42 (1st Cir. 2004), could the defendant have been charged with a violation of the EAR as charged in that case?
12. Does the Department of Justice or National Security Division support the narrowing of the scope of firearms and ammunition covered by Categories I, II, and III of the U.S. Munitions List (USML) and the transfer of firearms, semi-automatic rifles, and associated ammunition to the EAR and regulation by the Commerce Department?
13. If firearms, semi-automatic rifles, and associated ammunition were no longer considered “defense articles” by the Department of State under the AECA, is it your opinion that the AECA would allow the ATF and the Attorney General to continue to treat firearms, semi-automatic weapons, and associated ammunition as “defense articles” to control their import under the AECA?
14. Is there a provision in the EAR which requires the mandatory reporting to the Commerce Department of cyber intrusions involving the unlawful export of military “technical data” or technology to China as required by the mandatory reporting provision of the ITAR, 22 C.F.R. § 126.1(e) to the State Department?
15. Will the Department of States’ proposed narrowing of the definition of “defense services” under the ITAR potentially adversely affect the FBI’s ability to obtain FISA orders against U.S. persons providing assistance providing technical assistance to the Chinese military, intelligence services, or military-research/industrial companies?
16. Do you support the letter to the U.S. Sentencing Commission of the former Assistant Attorney General, Lisa Monaco, advocating a limited and measured mandatory minimum sentence for some criminal offenses relating to certain Iranian sanctions violations or violations involving transactions with certain Specially Designated Nations or nations under arms embargo depending upon the nature of the goods or services involved or the foreign parties involved?

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

James D. Peterson
Nominee: U.S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin

1. You wrote in the February 2010 newsletter for the Western District of Wisconsin Bar Association that, "For nearly every plaintiff that is drawn to the Western District of Wisconsin, there is a defendant who would prefer to litigate somewhere else." Please explain what you meant by this statement.
2. During your hearing I asked you about your work with the Freedom From Religion Foundation. You said your law firm has worked on both sides of religious liberty issues. Have you personally worked on any cases that defended the religious side of religious liberty? If so, please describe your involvement in them.
3. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?
4. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?
5. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?
6. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?
7. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?
8. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?
9. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community", in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.
10. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

11. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?
12. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?
13. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?
14. You have spent your entire legal career as an advocate for your clients. As a judge, you will have a very different role. Please describe how you will reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you will look for guidance. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?
15. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

Nancy Jo Rosenstengel
Nominee: U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois

1. What characteristics have you seen in federal judges that you will seek to avoid, if confirmed?
2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?
3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?
4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?
5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?
6. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?
7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?
8. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.
9. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?
10. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Senator Chuck Grassley
Follow-up Questions for the Record

Debo P. Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

1. You provided identical, non-responses answers to Questions 2(a)-(d). Instead of stating whether, if confirmed, you will implement the recommendations made in the 2013 Inspector General's Report, you state that you will assess "current hiring practices" in the Civil Rights Division. Please indicate whether you intend, if confirmed, to implement the recommendations made in the 2013 Inspector General's Report. If you will not commit to implementing them, explain why with respect to each recommendation enumerated in Questions 2(a)-(d).
2. In each of your responses to Questions 2(a)-(d) you repeat your intention to "ensure a strong and broad pool of candidates." What does the term "broad" mean in the context in which you used it?
3. Will you commit to ensuring that the Civil Rights Division hires a strong and ideologically diverse pool of candidates and work to eliminate hiring practices in the Division that the Inspector General found "resulted in a pool of select candidates that was overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation?"
4. In your response to Question 6a, you cite a passage from Miller-El in which Justice Breyer describes "Justice Marshall's concerns" that Batson's burden-shifting framework was insufficiently effective at eliminating race discrimination in jury selection. As the passage indicates, Justice Marshall advocated abolition of peremptory strikes altogether. Considering that you cite to the passage that explains Justice Marshall's position in your answer, do you agree that Batson's burden-shifting framework is insufficient at preventing discriminatory strikes against racial minorities?
5. Do you agree with Justice Marshall's position that peremptory strikes should be eliminated?
6. In your response to Question 6c, you state that your former client, Mumia Abu-Jamal, presented "probative" Batson evidence that was rejected by the courts. Please indicate whether you still believe that the jury-selection process in Mr. Abu-Jamal's trial was characterized by "flagrant[ly]" racially discriminatory conduct by the prosecutor.

7. You did not answer Question 7(b). Instead, your answer summarizes Batson's burden-shifting framework but fails to address the sufficiency issue. Please state whether you consider a bare allegation of a "culture of discrimination" to be sufficient to support a prima facie showing under Batson's first step.
8. Your response to Question 13 cites only the single example of applying strict scrutiny to governmental decisions that confer benefits to individuals based on race. Please specifically state under what circumstances – in addition to government decisions to confer race-based benefits – you believe that governmental use of racial preferences would fall short of the strict-scrutiny standard of review.
9. Your response to Question 14 cites a single example from Ricci v. DeStefano. Please identify under what circumstances – in addition to the case you cite – you believe that race preferences violate Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.
10. Your response to Question 15 summarizes the holding of Grutter v. Bollinger, but fails to answer the question. Is it your view that consideration of racial membership and economic status are valid criteria in determining whether to give college applicants special consideration?
11. Do you agree with Justice O'Connor's statement that "25 years from now" – i.e., by 2028 – "the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary?" Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).
12. In your response to Question 16, you state your belief "that stereotyping is unfair and counterproductive," but you fail to answer the question. Under what circumstances do you believe ethnic profiling in the context of the War on Terrorism is unconstitutional?
13. You respond to Question 18 by indicating that you "do not read Rothe as a blanket prohibition on such programs if there is sufficient, methodologically valid evidence set before Congress," but you do not answer the question. Will you urge the federal government to end the use of preferences based on race, ethnicity, and sex in its contracting practices?
14. Do you share the Federal Circuit's view, enumerated in Rothe, that a preferential contracting program is unconstitutional if Congress lacked a strong basis in evidence that previous discrimination justified the program?
15. Do you believe that any remedial program for which Congress lacks a strong basis in evidence for the necessity of remedial action can be constitutional?

16. Your response to Question 19 addresses the selection of individuals based on race, but does not address the constitutionality of maintaining race-based scholarships and other benefits. Do you believe that the Constitution permits public universities to maintain racially exclusive internships, scholarships, or summer programs?
17. In your answer to Question 20, you state that you are unaware of the “details of this litigation.” The litigation referenced in Question 20 refers to a complaint the Department of Justice filed on February 8, 2006, in the District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, Benton Division, in which the Department alleged that Southern Illinois University maintained paid fellowships that established quotas on the basis of race, national origin, or sex. Will you continue to pursue litigation against public universities that maintain such fellowships, irrespective of the race of the beneficiaries of the fellowships?
18. Your response to Question 23 says that you “would act in the best interests of the United States.” Do you regard the continued application of the disparate-impact theory by the federal courts to be “in the best interests of the United States”?
19. Your response to Question 26(a) states that the “congressional record...supports [your] quotes.” Given your belief that Congress had a sufficient evidentiary basis to justify the 2006 reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, do you believe that the Supreme Court wrongly decided Shelby County v. Holder when it held that “[t]here is no valid reason to insulate the coverage formula from review merely because it was previously enacted 40 years ago. If Congress had started from scratch in 2006, it plainly could not have enacted the present coverage formula. It would have been irrational for Congress to distinguish between States in such a fundamental way based on 40-year-old data, when today’s statistics tell an entirely different story. And it would have been irrational to base coverage on the use of voting tests 40 years ago, when such tests have been illegal since that time. But that is exactly what Congress has done.” Shelby County, Ala. v. Holder, 133 S.Ct. 2612, 2630-31 (2013).
20. Your answer to Question 26(d) is not responsive. You previously stated that racial discrimination in voting poses a “unique threat to our democracy.” What steps will you take, if confirmed, to combat the “unique threat” you identify?
21. In your view, does the “unique[ness]” of the “threat to democracy” that you previously identified depend on the race of the victim of racial discrimination?

22. Your answer to Question 29 is not responsive and does not indicate whether you believe that a voter ID requirement is the equivalent of a poll tax. Please indicate whether this is your view.
23. Do you share the opinion of Deputy Assistant Attorney General for Voting Rights, Pamela S. Karlan, that poll-tax cases “parallel voter identification cases in that, as a technical matter, voters were being required to present a government-issued document – namely, a poll tax receipt – in order to vote?”
24. Do you share Attorney General Holder’s view, expressed at a 2012 NAACP Convention in Houston, that Texas’s voter ID requirement is the modern-day equivalent of a poll tax?
25. Your answer to Question 33 is not responsive. Please enumerate the specific “substantive or procedural protections” that in your view, if violated, would render imposition of the death penalty unconstitutional.
26. Your response to Question 34 states that you “would not oppose the ability for employers to perform reasonable criminal background checks on potential employees.” What, in your view, constitutes a “reasonable” criminal background check?
27. Do you believe that the Civil Rights Division has jurisdiction to challenge or abridge the ability of a private employer to conduct a criminal background check on potential employees? If so, please state the basis of such jurisdiction.
28. With respect to your response to Question 36, why did you withdraw your nomination for a seat on the D.C. Circuit?
29. With respect to your response to Question 37, if you are confirmed, what role do you envision for the Civil Rights Division in the enforcement of Affordable Care Act’s minimum coverage provision?
30. Given your response to Question 38a that Heller is binding law, do you still believe that recognition of an individual right to “keep and bear [a]rms” under the Second Amendment is a “radical departure” from precedent?
31. Your response to Question 39 indicates your belief that juvenile defendants may be subjected to adult punishments “[t]o the extent adult treatment of juveniles falls within the boundaries of the Constitution.” Please specify the circumstances under which such “adult treatment” would not fall within the boundaries of the Constitution.

32. With respect to your response to Question 41a, please state the basis for your contention that “race continues to have an impact on sentencing outcomes” and explain how your citation to a joint Department of Justice/Department of Education study on school discipline supports your contention.
33. Your answer to Question 45 is not responsive. Please identify which specific civil-rights provisions, in your view, can be applied post-Hosanna-Tabor to religious institutions if the employee of the institution in question falls within the ministerial exception.
34. Your answer to Question 47a is not responsive. Assuming that an employee of a religious institution falls within the ministerial exception, in your view would the First Amendment permit a suit against the institution under either the FMLA or the Equal Pay Act?
35. Your answer to Question 47b is not responsive. Assuming that an employee of a religious institution falls within the ministerial exception, in your view would the First Amendment permit a lawsuit against the institution alleging discrimination based on the employee’s sexual orientation or gender identity? If so, please state the basis for such a lawsuit under federal law.
36. With respect to your answer to Question 53a, given Supreme Court’s holding in Marion County, do you believe that a state-law that requires a voter to display photo identification prior to voting violates Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act if the state promulgating the law provides photo identification to citizens of the state free of charge?

Senator Jeff Sessions
Debo Adebile

1. There is absolutely no doubt that voter fraud occurs in our federal elections through voter registration fraud, absentee ballot fraud, and ineligible voters casting ballots, to name just a few. Do you agree that when people who are ineligible to vote, do so, or when people vote multiple times it dilutes the votes cast by legal voters, thereby denying them their right to vote?
2. According to sworn testimony from Christopher Coates, former Voting Section Chief at the Department of Justice, Kristen Clarke, a lawyer at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, pressured Justice Department officials to dismiss a lawsuit against the New Black Panther Party for voter intimidation in the November 2008 Presidential election in Philadelphia.
 - a. Did you supervise or work with her during your time there?
 - b. Were you aware of her efforts or did you instruct her to do so?
3. If you are confirmed, your deputy assistant attorney general in charge of overseeing the Voting Section will be Stanford Law Professor Pam Karlan. In the past, she has made numerous partisan attacks on the Justice Department under President George W. Bush, some of which were demonstrably false. For example, in an article published in the Duke Journal of Constitutional Law, she wrote that “for five of the eight years of the Bush Administration, [the Civil Rights Division] brought no Voting Rights Act cases of its own except for one case protecting white voters.” However, the record shows that cases were brought under the Voting Rights Act to protect non-white racial minorities in each of the eight years of the Bush administration. If confirmed, will you instruct her to correct her academic record so your enforcement of voting laws is not supervised by someone with the perception of partisanship and will you disavow her false scholarship?
4. There has been some criticism from our military that the Justice Department, and specifically the Voting Section, waits too long before bringing a lawsuit to protect military voters and that when they finally do act, it is on the eve of an election and too late to provide any real remedy for overseas voters.
 - a. If confirmed, will you commit to closely monitor counties and quickly enforce the law to protect military voters before an election and not wait until afterward?
 - b. If confirmed, how do you intend to monitor each state to ensure full compliance?
 - c. State election officials have criticized the Voting Section for inappropriately bringing enforcement actions against States rather than counties. States often have little power or control over local jurisdictions, which are responsible for the procedures that result in the failure to send ballots on time. To fully protect our military voters, if confirmed, will you take appropriate legal action against counties that fail to comply with the law in this regard?

5. A March 2013 report by the Justice Department Inspector General on the Voting Section revealed that the leadership of the Civil Rights Division, including former Assistant Attorney General Thomas Perez, interpreted the “preclearance” requirement of the Voting Rights Act, embodied in Sections 4 and 5, to be “race-conscious,” in that it does not cover white voters even when they are clearly a minority in the jurisdiction.
 - a. Do you interpret the preclearance requirement of the Voting Rights Act in that way?
 - b. It is my understanding that you have been working on legislation to amend the Voting Rights Act in response to the Supreme Court’s holding that states cannot be subject to the preclearance requirement based solely on past discrimination. If Congress chooses to adopt a new trigger for Section 5 coverage, do you believe it should be “race-conscious,” or do you believe it should apply equally to citizens of any race who happen to be a minority in a particular jurisdiction?

6. In League of United Latin American Citizens v. Perry, a redistricting case, Chief Justice Roberts disagreed with the majority’s holding that it was the Court’s role “to make judgments about which mixes of minority voters should count for purposes of forming a majority in an electoral district, in the face of factual findings that the district is an effective majority-minority district.”
 - a. Do you agree with Chief Justice Roberts’ statement?
 - b. If confirmed, how will you ensure that Section 2 cases do not violate the Supreme Court’s warnings against, as the Court put it, “racial gerrymandering”?

7. With the Supreme Court’s June 2013 ruling in Shelby County v. Holder, and the lack of Section 5 submissions to the Voting Section, there are now, according to reports, seven senior attorneys with salaries of over $150,000 each with no Section 5 work. Taken together, those salaries equal over a million dollars a year in personnel costs. The salaries of perhaps a dozen Section 5 analysts together equal at least another million dollars in personnel and overhead costs. If confirmed, will you eliminate these positions or find other productive work for them?

8. A recent report by the Inspector General on the operations of the Voting Section found that members of the Voting Section who were viewed as Republican or conservative were severely harassed on that account. For example, the report detailed how: “at least three career Voting Section employees posted comments on widely read liberal websites concerning Voting Section work and personnel. . . . The three employees who we were able to identify with certainty included three non-attorney employees [and] included a wide array of inappropriate remarks, ranging from petty and juvenile personal attacks to highly offensive and potentially threatening statements. The comments were directed at fellow career Voting Section employees because of their conservative political views, their willingness to carry out the policies of the [Civil Rights Division] division leadership, or their views on the Voting Rights Act. The highly offensive comments included suggestions that the parents of one former career Section attorney were Nazis, disparaging a career manager's physical appearance and guessing how he/she would look without clothing, speculation that another career manager was watching pornography in her office, and references to 'Yellow Fever,' in connection with allusions to marital infidelity involving two career Voting Section employees, one of whom was described as 'look[ing] Asian.'"

- a. One of the individuals responsible for making these demeaning statements initially lied to the Inspector General and later admitted that she perjured herself, but added that she had no regrets other than the fact that she was caught. It is my understanding that this individual is still employed by the Justice Department in the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division. If confirmed, will you terminate her employment?
- b. If confirmed, how will you ensure that such partisan political hostility towards certain employees does not continue under your leadership, as it did under the previous leadership of the Civil Rights Division?

be Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights
January 15, 2014

1. In an interview with an NYU Law School alumni publication, you stated: "Not every wrong finds a remedy in the law, as it turns out. It takes a good bit of creative lawyering and tenacity on the part of litigators to formulate a winning theory . . ." Please describe, in detail, what you meant by "creative lawyering." As Assistant Attorney General, how would you use "creative lawyering," and will you pledge to pursue only remedies expressly provided for under current law?
2. As Assistant Attorney General, would you commit to only pursue legal theories that find strong support in the statutes passed by Congress and the interpretations given to them by the Supreme Court?
3. Are there differences between the role of Assistant Attorney General and the role of Director-Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund? How, specifically, would you approach these positions differently?
4. A recent Inspector General's report found "deep ideological polarization" and "bitter controversy" within the Voting Rights Section of the Civil Rights Division. What specific measures will you take to address the problems cited by the Inspector General?
5. In the Supreme Court's opinion in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, 557 U.S. 193 (2009), Chief Justice Roberts' opinion described the "substantial federalism costs" that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 imposes on some states. Do you agree that Section 5 imposes such costs?
6. In Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. ____ (2013), the Supreme Court ruled that Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was unconstitutional because it utilized decades-old evidence to require certain states, including Texas, to seek federal approval before changing their voting laws. In congressional testimony in 2006, you stated: "The evidence in the record does not indicate that the existing Section 4 coverage formula, or 'trigger,' needs to be revised or updated."
 - a. Do you accept the Supreme Court's decision, and will respect that decision while serving as Assistant Attorney General?
 - b. Do you believe that that an imbalanced treatment of states similar to Section 4 is still appropriate post Shelby County?
 - c. Do you agree with the Court's that: "There is no denying . . . that the conditions that originally justified" the preclearance process under Section

- 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 “no longer characterize voting in the covered jurisdictions”?
- d. Do you agree with the Court’s statement that the coverage formula under Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was “based on 40-year-old facts having no logical relation to the present day”?
 - e. Had the same voter turn-out and registration thresholds set by Section 4 been applied in 2000 as required by statute, rather than 1964, 9 of the 14 counties in Massachusetts would have been subject to preclearance, while only 2 of Texas’s 254 counties would have been covered. Yet, under Section 4, all of Texas was subject to preclearance, while none of Massachusetts was. In light of this evidence, do you believe that your congressional testimony in 2006 was accurate?
 - f. Absent the Supreme Court’s ruling in this case, what would you consider to be sufficient evidence that the Section 4 coverage formula should be updated?
 - g. Do you believe a coverage formula for preclearance, as provided in Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, is the only way to properly protect minority voting rights? Why or why not?
 - h. What, if anything, might be an appropriate alternative to preclearance in protecting minority voting rights?
7. What were your duties and responsibilities while serving as Senior Counsel to Senator Leahy? Were you involved in efforts to draft legislation remedying the constitutional defects of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, or otherwise amending it? Please describe those efforts. What outside organizations, if any, did you work with on these efforts?
8. Do you accept the Supreme Court’s decision in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, 553 U.S. 181 (2008), in which the court upheld the constitutionality of Indiana’s voter ID statute?
- a. Do you agree with Justice Stevens’ statement that voter ID “is amply justified by the valid interest in protecting the integrity and reliability of the electoral process”?
 - b. Do you accept the Supreme Court’s distinction in Crawford between Indiana’s voter ID law and a poll tax?
 - c. In the past, you have been a strong opponent of Voter ID laws. Will you use your position as Assistant Attorney General to continue to oppose state voter ID laws? If so, how will you select which of the growing number of state voter ID laws you will challenge?

- d. Is there any form of state voter ID law that you find acceptable? If so, please describe the characteristics of an acceptable state voter ID law.
9. In November, I introduced S. 1728, a bipartisan bill called the SENTRI Act (Safeguarding Elections for our Nation's Troops through Reforms and Improvements Act), together with Sen. Schumer and four other senators. It is awaiting consideration in the Senate Rules Committee. It is my understanding that the Civil Rights Division supports this bill. Do you support our effort to better protect the voting rights of our troops both at home and overseas?
10. Is it appropriate for the Civil Rights Division to take a position in the national debate over same-sex marriage?
11. In a guidance memo published in May 2012, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission argued that: "An employer's use of an individual's criminal history in making employment decisions may, in some instances, violate the prohibition against employment discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965, as amended." As Acting President and Director Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, you praised this guidance memo—stating that: "No one should be penalized for the rest of their life for mistakes that they made in the past."
- a. Do you agree with the May 2012 guidance memo that ". . . an exclusion based on an arrest, in itself, is not job related and consistent with business necessity?"
- b. Do you believe that a private employer's decision categorically to exclude all persons convicted of a child pornography offense from the hiring pool may, in some instances, violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965?
- c. Do you believe that any person who has been convicted of a felony or crime of violence should be categorically excluded from working for the Department of Justice? If not, what classes of felons or violent offenders should be allowed to work for the Department of Justice?
- d. If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division, would you commit to performing a criminal background check on all prospective employees, and to prohibiting the hiring of any person who has been convicted of a felony or crime of violence? If not, please describe a particular situation in which you might, as Assistant Attorney General, recommend the hiring of a felon or violent offender.

Questions for the Recordfor Debo Adegbile (DOJ AAG for Civil Rights)*Senator Mike Lee*January 8, 2014

1. In 2011, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund (LDF) took on the case of convicted cop killer Mumia Abu-Jamal. Abu-Jamal was sentenced to death for the 1981 murder of a 25-year-old Philadelphia police officer who had engaged Abu-Jamal's brother in a routine traffic stop. LDF took on Abu-Jamal's appeal while you were the director of litigation and you signed several briefs on his behalf, leading to the commutation of his death sentence to life in prison. Abu-Jamal has been and remains an iconic figure among activists.
 - a. What part did you play in LDF's decision to take on the case?
 - b. Did you elect to play a role in representing Abu-Jamal? What was your motivation for that decision?
 - c. At a New York Free Mumia Coalition event in 2011, Christina Swarms, your colleague at LDF at the time, included you when she stated, "There is no question in the mind of anyone at the Legal Defense Fund that the justice system has completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal and, in our view, that has everything to do with race and that is why the legal defense fund is in this case."
 - i. Do you believe that the justice system had at that time "completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal"? If so, in what ways?
 - ii. Do you believe that such a failure had "everything to do with race"? If so, please explain your reasoning.
 - iii. If you do not agree with Ms. Swarms statement, why do you believe LDF took on this case?
 - d. In a January 2014 letter to the President opposing your nomination for your involvement in the Abu-Jamal case, the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) expressed the need for law enforcement and minority communities to "build even greater bonds of trust and mutual respect," while decrying the work of the Civil Rights Division and its "aggressive and punitive approach towards local law enforcement agencies."
 - i. Under your direction, if confirmed, would the Civil Rights Division continue the methods, patterns, and practices established under the leadership of Thomas Perez and Roy Austin, Jr.?
 - ii. If confirmed, in what ways will you work to tear down the "obstacles" to trust and mutual respect that the FOP refers to in its letter?

- e. How will your experience advocating for Abu-Jamal inform your work in the DOJ if you are confirmed?
2. You have made a number of statements expressing strong views regarding the Voting Rights Act and voting rights more generally. Late in 2012, some members of this administration made troubling comments suggesting that they believe the executive branch should itself reform voter registration and even move to nationalize voter registration.
 - a. Do you believe that the executive branch currently has statutory authority to make significant national changes to state voter registration systems and if so which statutes do you believe provide that authority?
3. You have appeared on a number of amicus briefs on controversial issues before the Supreme Court. These briefs evidence an extreme view of the Constitution that in many cases has not been accepted by even a single member of the court. For example, with respect to religious liberty, in a brief you helped write in the Hosanna Tabor case, you argued strenuously against a ministerial exception, a position the Court rejected 9-0. With respect to the Second Amendment, you helped write a brief in the Heller case that argued the Second Amendment does not provide for the right of an individual to possess or use firearms outside the context of a lawfully organized militia. This position was rejected by the Court. In Ricci v. DeStefano, you likewise helped write an amicus brief arguing for a position the Court rejected.
 - a. Do you believe religious organizations are not entitled to a ministerial exception?
 - b. Do you believe the Second Amendment does not guarantee an individual's right to bear arms?
 - c. It appears that in many instances your views of the Constitution are at odds with those of the Court. What assurances can you give the Committee that you will respect and follow Supreme Court precedent?

Senator Ted Cruz

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

The Honorable Jeff Flake
Written Questions for Debo Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney, General Civil Rights Division
Senate Judiciary Committee

1. You signed a brief on behalf of the NAACP in Hosanna-Tabor v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, 132 S. Ct. 694 (2012), in support of the teacher dismissed by her employer, Hosanna-Tabor. The Court, in a unanimous opinion, upheld the ministerial exception. The unanimous opinion stated, “the Establishment Clause prevents the Government from appointing ministers, and the Free Exercise Clause prevents it from interfering with the freedom of religious groups to select their own.”
 - a. Do you personally believe the position you took in Hosanna-Tabor was correct at the time you filed the brief?
 - b. Notwithstanding the Supreme Court’s opinion to the contrary, do you still believe your brief is a correct analysis of the Constitution and precedent?
 - c. In your brief, you stated: “Even if civil rights laws pervasively imposed significant burdens on religious practice, that would not justify a categorical exemption for parochial schools.” How do you square this statement asserting the federal government may impose “significant burdens on religious practice,” with the First Amendment protections, stating: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof ...”?
2. In Crawford v. Marion County, 553 U.S. 181, you were the counsel of record on an amicus brief filed on behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund urging the court to find Indiana’s requirement that voters present government-issued photo identification to be unconstitutional. In a 6-3 plurality decision written by Justice Stevens, the Supreme Court upheld Indiana’s voter photo identification law. Do you still believe the position you took in the brief was correct?
3. You signed a brief on behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund in the case of D.C. v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, urging the Supreme Court to overturn the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit’s decision that the District of Columbia’s gun laws were unconstitutional. Your brief asserted, “The type of radical departure from this Court’s Second Amendment jurisprudence that is reflected in the opinion of the D.C. Circuit is not warranted.” Your brief continued, “for the Court to recognize an individual right to ‘keep and bear Arms’ would represent a radical departure from the consistent and long-established understanding of the Second Amendment.” The Supreme Court upheld the D.C. Circuit’s opinion in D.C. v. Heller.
 - a. Do you believe the Supreme Court’s decision in Heller was a “radical departure” from the Supreme Court’s prior jurisprudence?

- b. Do you believe Heller, decided almost six years ago, has resulted in a “substantial upheaval in the manner in which firearms are regulated nationwide?”
4. As you likely know, the federal government is currently in a budget crisis where it is spending more than it brings in. As a result, all government departments, agencies, and even the legislative branch are being asked to tighten their belts and cut costs. If confirmed as the head of the Civil Rights Division, what actions would you take to cut costs, especially waste and abuse, at the Department?

Questions for the Record

John Carlin
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for National Security

1. A recent article about your nomination in Foreign Policy magazine raised concerns about whether, given your close relationships with some officials in the White House, as a Department of Justice appointee you can be appropriately independent from them. The article also suggested that you had asked your colleagues not to copy you on email about sensitive policy issues in advance of your hearing. Did you ask colleagues not to email you about sensitive policy issues in advance of your hearing? If so, why?

Answer

I did not ask my colleagues to withhold from me, in advance of my hearing or at any other time, any information, communicated by email or otherwise, that I would need to fulfill the responsibilities of Acting Assistant Attorney General (AAG) for National Security. As part of those responsibilities, I am an active participant in discussions and decisions about many sensitive national security policy matters. In addition, as a career public servant with the Department of Justice, and in my time spent as Chief of Staff of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under Robert S. Mueller, III, I understand the critical importance of appropriate independence in matters under the supervision of the AAG for National Security.

2. The National Security Division made a significant policy change last year with respect to material collected under Section 702 of FISA. Before last summer, defendants were not notified if material collected under FISA Section 702 was used as the basis to obtain a traditional FISA warrant against them. If these defendants were not notified, they could not challenge the use of the 702 provision in any way.

In February, however, the Solicitor General represented to the Supreme Court in a case challenging the statute that defendants were being notified, which turned out not to be true. A debate within the Department of Justice ensued.

According to the New York Times, the debate stretched through the summer, with “dueling memorandums by lawyers in the Solicitor General’s office and in the National Security Division.” Eventually, the Department adopted the Solicitor General’s view. According to news reports, the Department has begun providing additional notice to certain defendants.

- a. Do you know how many defendants are going to be affected by this change of policy, and when do you expect all the additional notices to be provided?

The Department has publicly stated that it is conducting a review of criminal cases in a variety of stages. To date, pursuant to that review, the government has provided notice concerning Section 702-derived information in two criminal cases. The defendants in those cases will thus have the opportunity to challenge the constitutionality of Section 702 and the lawfulness of the acquisitions.

The Department also anticipates that notice will be provided to additional defendants; however, because determinations regarding whether a defendant should be provided notice of Section 702-derived information are fact-dependent, and the cases reviewed are at varying stages of pendency, I am unable to specify the number of cases in which notice may be provided at this time.

- b. Do you believe that under your leadership the National Security Division was complying with its legal and ethical obligations when it didn't provide these notices? If so, why was the policy changed?

Answer

The employees of the National Security Division take their legal and ethical obligations seriously and have sought in good faith to comply with them. Under my leadership, and if I am confirmed, the Division will continue to do so. My understanding is that DOJ's practice has always been to provide notice to aggrieved parties when the government intends to use at trial evidence that it understands to be obtained or derived from FISA surveillance.

The focus of our review of existing practice was whether and under what circumstances information obtained through surveillance under Title I of FISA or physical search under Title III of FISA could also be considered derived from other surveillance under Title VII of FISA (the FISA Amendments Act). The Department has determined that, consistent with practice under Title III of the Wiretap Act, information obtained or derived from Title I FISA collection may, in particular cases, also be derived from prior Title VII FISA collection, such that notice concerning both Title I and Title VII should be given in appropriate cases with respect to the same information. The Department will continue to comply with its legal obligations to notify aggrieved persons of the use of information obtained or derived from an acquisition under Section 702 in judicial or administrative proceedings against such person.

3. If confirmed one of the matters you would be supervising is the investigation and possible prosecution of Edward Snowden. There have been calls for leniency or clemency for Snowden, perhaps in exchange for returning documents that he took from the government. Do you believe it is appropriate for the United States to consider some degree of leniency for Snowden?

Answer

Mr. Snowden is charged by criminal complaint with the unauthorized disclosure of national defense information, the unauthorized communication of classified communication intelligence information, and theft of government property. The Department of Justice takes unauthorized disclosures of classified information seriously, and is committed to vigorously prosecuting those disclosures when they occur. Because this is a pending criminal investigation, I cannot comment further on the matter.

4. Are you aware of a 2010 EEOC complaint regarding a DOJ attorney in the National Security Division, Joshua Nesbitt, who alleged that he was the victim of race-based discrimination?

Answer

Yes.

5. This matter, Nesbitt v. Holder, is currently being litigated in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. What role, if any, have you played in the litigation of this matter?

Answer

This case is being handled by the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia, and is in active litigation. As the acting head of a component of the Department of Justice, however, I have been briefed on the status of the case.

6. The plaintiff in Nesbitt v. Holder alleged that he was denied promotion to the position of Deputy Chief of Litigation in the National Security Division's Office of Intelligence because of his race. He points to the selectee's "failure to comply with the application requirements contained in the vacancy announcement, and that the application process was corrupted in order to avoid promoting the African-American applicant." What measures have you put in place, or will you put in place, in order to ensure that the application and review processes in hiring decisions will be clear to all involved?

Answer

Setting aside Mr. Nesbitt's specific case, which the Department is actively litigating, it is critically important to me that the application and review process in NSD's hiring decisions be clear to all involved. To that end, I have directed NSD's newly hired Director of Training and Workforce Development and NSD's Human Resources Chief to develop a management training curriculum that covers, in detail, standards for ensuring fair and transparent hiring. The full curriculum is still under development, but as a start, this past fall, we held NSD's first Division-wide mandatory training for individuals involved in the hiring process, covering fairness in interviewing, diversity, disability outreach, veterans' preference, reference checking, and other fair employment issues. I am also meeting with our Diversity Hiring Committee this month to review hiring practices.

In addition, I have directed our Executive Office to develop other resources for our hiring teams, capturing comprehensive hiring policies and best practices, which will be incorporated into our annual management training upon completion.

7. Does the Department of Justice and the National Security Division still believe that export licenses and documents are useful to the Department's investigations and enforcement of the export control statutes and to creating incentives on sellers and exporters to conduct due diligence on their buyers and other parties to exports of arms, munitions, and dual use goods?

Answer:

Yes. Export control documents, including license applications and attachments, export licenses, Automated Export System records, bills of lading, and other documents are important evidence for prosecutors to prove criminal violations of the export control laws.

In the course of our investigations, we routinely see that the requirements imposed under current licensing processes encourage sellers and manufacturers to conduct due diligence on their buyers and to seek information about the nature of a particular transaction in order to ensure that the transaction is consistent with U.S. export control laws and regulations. In many cases, sellers and manufacturers who identify suspicious buyers or exporters will refuse to sell export controlled items to these individuals, preventing those items from being obtained from illegal procurement networks and other actors.

8. Have recent decontrols over military aircraft, naval vessels, and other military technology once controlled under the Arms Export Control Act (AECA) and International Traffic in Arms Regulations (ITAR) of the Department of State and now controlled under the Export Administration Regulations (EAR) of the Department of Commerce weakened the ability of the Department of Justice to obtain international assistance against the unlawful proliferation, diversion, and transfer of military items and military technology?

Answer:

The Department vigorously investigates and prosecutes unlawful proliferation, diversion and transfer of military items and technology. The transfer of previously ITAR-controlled commodities to the EAR may further complicate the ability to obtain extradition to the United States of defendants located overseas in certain cases. For example, most extradition treaties require the defendant's conduct to be unlawful in both countries in order to extradite individuals to the United States (i.e., dual criminality). While most countries around the world regulate the export and import of munitions, fewer countries also control them as dual use items and technology. By moving certain items to the EAR that were formerly designated as defense articles in the ITAR, we could face challenges in obtaining the extradition of defendants in those countries that do not maintain export controls on such items.

9. The technical and manufacturing specifications for many parts of the F-4, F-5, F-14 and F-16 are no longer AECA/ITAR controlled according to the recent revisions of the ITAR. Does that adversely affect in any manner the Justice Department's ability to investigate and prosecute AECA violations or sanctions involving Iran and efforts to obtain military aviation parts? In light of public reports of Chinese assistance to the radar and other avionics of Iranian fighter jets including the F-4, will efforts to investigate and disrupt schemes by Chinese actors to obtain such military aviation technology be impeded given that such aviation parts, components and their associated technical specifications will no longer subject to the Chinese arms embargo under Public Law 101-246, § 902(a)(3)?

Answer:

The Department will continue aggressively to investigate and prosecute violations of the AECA or sanctions provisions involving Iran and China. Without addressing the specific controls and sanctions referenced, if prohibitions were lifted, the Department would not be in a position to investigate or disrupt conduct that is no longer unlawful. The scope of such controls and sanctions is determined by other agencies.

10. Is it more difficult to secure international cooperation, email search warrants, extradition of indicted defendants, or other steps in investigating AECA violations resulting from any Iranian efforts to obtain U.S. military parts through initial shipments through a third country as a result of the ongoing transfer of military parts and components from ITAR control to EAR control?

Answer:

See answer to #8 above.

11. If the definition of “specially designed” now adopted for the ITAR and EAR had been in place at the time of the prosecution of United States v. Lachman, 387 F.3d 42 (1st Cir. 2004), could the defendant have been charged with a violation of the EAR as charged in that case?

Answer:

The definition of “specially designed” now adopted for the ITAR and EAR contains certain specific exceptions and requirements for meeting those exceptions that were not present in the definition adopted by the court in Lachman. Whether the item at issue in Lachman falls within the new definition depends on facts not set forth in the opinion.

12. Does the Department of Justice or National Security Division support the narrowing of the scope of firearms and ammunition covered by Categories I, II, and III of the U.S. Munitions List (USML) and the transfer of firearms, semi-automatic rifles, and associated ammunition to the EAR and regulation by the Commerce Department?

Answer:

The Department believes that any transfer of those items from the ITAR to the Commerce Control List (CCL) must be subject to appropriate safeguards, comparable to the safeguards that apply under the ITAR.

13. If firearms, semi-automatic rifles, and associated ammunition were no longer considered “defense articles” by the Department of State under the AECA, is it your opinion that the AECA would allow the ATF and the Attorney General to continue to treat firearms, semi-automatic weapons, and associated ammunition as “defense articles” to control their import under the AECA?

Answer:

Yes. The President confirmed this authority as part of Executive Order 13637 of March 8, 2013, which updates the administration of U.S. export and import controls under the AECA. The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives of the Department of Justice issued an implementing regulation last year confirming that the Attorney General has the authority to designate defense articles and defense services for purposes of permanent import controls, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense and with notice to the Secretary of Commerce, regardless of whether the Secretary of State controls such defense articles or defense services for purposes of export and temporary import. See Importation of Defense Articles and Defense Services—U.S. Munitions Import List, 78 Fed. Reg. 23675 (Apr. 22, 2013) (codified at 27 C.F.R. pt. 447).

14. Is there a provision in the EAR which requires the mandatory reporting to the Commerce Department of cyber intrusions involving the unlawful export of military “technical data” or technology to China as required by the mandatory reporting provision of the ITAR, 22 C.F.R. § 126.1(e) to the State Department?

Answer:

I am not aware of a reporting requirement in the EAR analogous to 22 C.F.R. § 126.1(e)(1).

15. Will the Department of State’s proposed narrowing of the definition of “defense services” under the ITAR potentially adversely affect the FBI’s ability to obtain FISA orders against U.S. persons providing technical assistance to the Chinese military, intelligence services, or military-research/industrial companies?

Answer:

In the context of clandestine intelligence activities, the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) requires a showing of probable cause that the relevant activities “involve,” “may involve,” or “are about to involve” “a violation of the criminal statutes of the United States.” 50 U.S.C. § 1801(b)(2)(A) & (B). My understanding is that the proposed action, with certain limited exceptions, would make it lawful to provide a defense service without a license if the service is based solely on public information. The proposed definition would accordingly limit the types of conduct that would support obtaining a FISA order pursuant to § 1801 in the context of clandestine intelligence activities.

16. Do you support the letter to the U.S. Sentencing Commission of the former Assistant Attorney General, Lisa Monaco, advocating a limited and measured mandatory minimum sentence for some criminal offenses relating to certain Iranian sanctions violations or violations involving transactions with certain Specially Designated Nations or nations under arms embargo depending upon the nature of the goods or services involved or the foreign parties involved?

Answer:

Yes, I support the limited and measured approach set forth in the letter, which appropriately addresses the seriousness of such offenses.

Questions for the Record

Debo P. Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

1. Is it appropriate for employees of the Civil Rights Division to consult with groups such as the NAACP, La Raza, MALDEF, and the ACLU when making legal determinations?

ANSWER: It is my understanding that the Civil Rights Division (the Division) has long been willing to meet with and hear the views of a range of outside groups. If confirmed, I would expect to continue that practice. This said, legal determinations are the Division's to make, based on the facts and the law.

2. According to a 2013 Inspector General report, the hiring procedures under former Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, Thomas Perez, resulted in a pool of candidates that was "overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation." The report made the following recommendations to address the deficiencies in hiring practices. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. "That the Voting Section use hiring criteria that are based on the specific skills, duties, and experience that are required or preferred for vacant positions and that appear in the Section's vacancy announcement." If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps to improve the hiring process in response to both the 2008 Inspector General report on the Division and in response to the Inspector General's recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division's current hiring policies and practices and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions.

- b. "That the Voting Section refrain from relying on the 'general civil rights/public interest' criterion in the future." If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps to improve the hiring process in response to both the 2008 Inspector General report on the Division and in response to the Inspector General's recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division's current hiring policies and practices and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions.

- c. "That the Voting Section adopt hiring criteria that better account for the significant contributions that applicants with limited or no civil rights backgrounds can make to the Section, including those with defensive litigation experience.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps to improve the hiring process in response to both the 2008 Inspector General report on the Division and in response to the Inspector General’s recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division’s current hiring policies and practices, and consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions.

- d. “That the Civil Rights Division not place primary emphasis on ‘demonstrated interest in the enforcement of civil rights laws’ as a hiring criterion.” If confirmed, will you commit to implementing this procedure in your hiring practices?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps to improve the hiring process in response to both the 2008 Inspector General report on the Division and in response to the Inspector General’s recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division’s current hiring policies and practices and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions.

- 3. During your predecessor’s tenure as Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division there were no “hires” made who had ties to a conservative organization. What steps do you plan to take in order to ensure an ideologically diverse applicant pool for future hires in the Civil Rights Division?

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the claim that the Division hired no one with ties to a conservative organization during Mr. Perez’s tenure, but if confirmed, I will assess the Division’s current hiring policies and practices, and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions.

- 4. After the NAACP’s LDF had filed two amicus briefs on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal, but before LDF became lead counsel for Mr. Abu-Jamal during your tenure as Director of Litigation, Mr. Abu-Jamal’s former lead counsel, Robert R. Bryan, circulated a petition addressed to President Obama that demanded a new trial for Mr. Abu-Jamal and advocated “global abolition of the death penalty.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Did you sign the petition?

ANSWER: No.

- b. To your knowledge, did any of your LDF colleagues sign the petition?

ANSWER: Not to my knowledge.

5. If you are confirmed as AAG for Civil Rights and the Department of Justice decides to review any aspect of Mr. Abu-Jamal's post-sentencing appeals or collateral attacks on his conviction, would you consider it proper to participate in any such review?

ANSWER: No.

6. In a 2009 amicus brief you submitted to the United States Supreme Court in support of Mr. Abu-Jamal, the LDF noted its "long-standing concern with the influence of racial discrimination" in the criminal justice system and, specifically, in the jury-selection process. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Do you believe that racial discrimination remains—as you characterized it in a quotation cited in your brief—a "common and flagrant" practice during jury selection in the United States? If so, what aspects of Batson and its progeny, in your view, require revision by the federal courts?

ANSWER: The "common and flagrant" phrase was quoted from a concurring opinion in Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), where it described the nature of the problem in the wake of Swain v. Alabama, 380 U.S. 202 (1965). Unfortunately, Batson violations persist. See e.g. Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 2313, 266-273 (2005) (Breyer, J., concurring) (discussing the problem of jury discrimination and collecting sources).

I have not had the opportunity to adequately examine the complex legal question of what, if anything, a court might do to more effectively police or deter Batson violations in an appropriate case.

- b. What types of litigation do you intend to pursue as AAG to affect change in civil-rights law regarding jury selection?

ANSWER: Cases referred to the Civil Rights Division are evaluated on the merits. I have no current plans to pursue such litigation.

- c. Do you consider that the jury-selection procedure prior to Mr. Abu-Jamal's trial was characterized by "flagrant[ly]" racially discriminatory conduct by the prosecutor?

ANSWER: I was involved in two LDF amicus briefs supporting Mr. Abu-Jamal's Batson claim in habeas proceedings which identified probative Batson evidence. The Batson claim, however, was rejected by the courts. In contrast, the sentence was held unconstitutional under Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. 367 (1986).

7. In the same 2009 LDF amicus brief, you argued that the Third Circuit improperly failed to consider “evidence of a culture of discrimination” and testimony from “Philadelphia defense attorneys indicating that the Philadelphia District Attorney’s Office used its peremptory strikes to exclude African American prospective jurors.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. In your view, under what circumstances is it proper for a trial court to take into account such extrinsic evidence?

ANSWER: Under the Supreme Court’s Batson precedents “a defendant may rely on all relevant circumstances to raise an inference of purposeful discrimination.” Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231, 239 (2005) (internal quotations omitted); see also id. at 263 (where the Court considered the fact that “for decades leading up to the time th[e] case was tried prosecutors in the Dallas County office had followed a specific policy of systematically excluding blacks from juries.”).

- b. In your view, would a bare allegation of “a culture of discrimination” or the anecdotal testimony of a local defense attorney be sufficient to make out a prima facie case under Batson’s step one?

ANSWER: Under Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), a court must follow a three-part test to determine whether there is discrimination based on race. In Batson’s step one, the party raising the Batson challenge must first make a prima facie showing that the striking party employed a peremptory challenge on the basis of race. Id. The court should consider “all relevant circumstances” supporting the challenging party’s assertion of discrimination. Id. at 96-97. These circumstances can include a “pattern” of striking venire members of a particular race, or posing questions or making statements during voir dire to members of a particular race that support the inference of a discriminatory purpose. Id.

8. In 2006, during your tenure as LDF’s Associate Director for Litigation, LDF filed an amicus brief on Mr. Abu-Jamal’s behalf in which LDF argued that Mr. Abu-Jamal’s trial was tainted by a climate of race prejudice and discrimination in “the historical conduct of the Philadelphia County District Attorney’s Office.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. What involvement, whether in a supervisory, authorial, editorial, or other role, did you have in the 2006 amicus brief?

ANSWER: I did not participate in the drafting, review or filing of the aforementioned LDF amicus brief nor does my name appear on the brief.

- b. In a 2009 amicus brief LDF filed on Mr. Abu-Jamal’s behalf, which you signed as counsel of record, LDF refers to “evidence of a culture of discrimination, including that the Philadelphia District Attorney’s Office trained its young prosecutors on how to exclude prospective jurors of color.” Does the “culture of discrimination” you allege in the 2009 amicus brief refer to “the historical conduct of the Philadelphia County District Attorney’s Office” that LDF cited in the 2006 amicus brief?

ANSWER: I did not sign the 2009 amicus brief as counsel of record, though I was one of the listed counsel on the brief. Moreover, as I mentioned above, I did not participate in the drafting or filing of LDF’s 2006 amicus brief. It appears that there is some overlap in the Batson-related evidence identified in the two briefs.

9. On January 28, 2011, your colleague Christina A. Swarns, who appears with you on two LDF Supreme Court briefs on which you are counsel of record, stated at a rally for Mr. Abu-Jamal that “there is no question in the mind of anyone at the Legal Defense Fund that the justice system has completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal and in our view, that has everything to do with race and that is why the legal defense fund is in this case.”
- a. Does Ms. Swarns’s claim that the “justice system...completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal in [LDF’s] view” refer to LDF’s prior allegations of a culture of racial discrimination in the Philadelphia County District Attorney’s Office?

ANSWER: Ms. Swarns was counsel of record on the aforementioned briefs; I was not. I am not familiar with Ms. Swarns’ comments and am not aware of the context in which they were offered. I do not know what Ms. Swarns had in mind when she made the comment.

10. Explain why, during your tenure as the LDF’s Director of Litigation in 2011, you decided to cease advocating on behalf of Mumia Abu-Jamal as amicus curiae and became his lead counsel in Supreme Court litigation, see, e.g., Wetzel v. Abu-Jamal, and subsequent litigation.

ANSWER: Mr. John Payton, LDF’s late President and Director-Counsel, made the decision that LDF would represent Mr. Abu-Jamal. My understanding is that he made the decision based upon an assessment of the constitutional claim.

11. Have you made any public statements—with the exception of statements made in a court or in court filings—regarding Mr. Abu-Jamal? Please provide a transcript or detailed record of any such statement and specify the date on which the statement was made.

ANSWER: I do not believe I have made any such statements.

12. List all LDF court filings related to Mumia Abu-Jamal with which you had any involvement, whether in a supervisory, authorial, editorial, or other role. Please provide a copy of each filing.

ANSWER: Listed below are the only briefs I have identified in which I had any involvement.

U.S. Supreme Court

Wetzel v. Mumia Abu-Jamal, Brief in Opposition On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit: September 9, 2011

Mumia Abu-Jamal v. Beard, Brief of Amicus Curiae NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. In Support of Petitioner: March 5, 2009

U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit

Mumia Abu-Jamal v. Horn, Brief of Amicus Curiae NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. In Support of Appellee/Cross-Appellant's Petition for Rehearing and Suggestion of Rehearing En Banc: June 27, 2008

13. Under what circumstances do you consider racial preferences to be unconstitutional?

ANSWER: As a general matter, the Supreme Court has applied strict scrutiny to governmental decisions that provide a benefit to individuals based on race. Under this standard, decision-making that does not serve a compelling governmental interest and/or is not narrowly tailored is unconstitutional.

14. Under what circumstances do racial preferences violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act?

ANSWER: One recent instance in which the Supreme Court found that the actions of an employer violated Title VII was in Ricci v. DeStefano where the Court explained: "Nor do we question an employer's affirmative efforts to ensure that all groups have a fair opportunity to apply for promotions and to participate in the process by which promotions will be made. But once that process has been established and employers have made clear their selection criteria, they may not then invalidate the test results, thus upsetting an employee's legitimate expectation not to be judged on the basis of race. Doing so, absent a strong basis in evidence of an impermissible disparate impact, amounts to the sort of racial preference that Congress has disclaimed, [under Title VII], and is antithetical to the notion of a workplace where individuals are guaranteed equal opportunity regardless of race." 557 U.S. 557, 585 (2009).

15. Should the college admissions process consider both racial and economic status when determining whether to give applicants special consideration?

ANSWER: Within the limits established by the Supreme Court and any applicable state and federal laws, it is for colleges to determine the best approach to admissions. In Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306 (2003), the Supreme Court determined that the educational benefits of diversity constitute a compelling governmental interest sufficient to justify a narrowly tailored race conscious college admissions policy. The Court left this principle intact in Fisher v. University of Texas, 133 S.Ct. 2311 (2013). Accordingly, within established limits, colleges may consider race but are not required to do so under the Supreme Court's 14th Amendment jurisprudence. Colleges are free to consider economic status in admissions decisions when that is rationally related to a legitimate government purpose.

16. Do you believe ethnic profiling in the context of the War on Terrorism is unconstitutional?

ANSWER: We must do everything possible to ensure our nation's security consistent with the Constitution and our values. I believe that stereotyping is unfair and counterproductive, fostering distrust between law enforcement and the communities with whom we need to build strong relationships in the fight against terrorism. I understand that the Department is reviewing its racial profiling guidance and if confirmed, I look forward to being a part of that process.

17. Will you defend the use of racial preferences in the federal government's contracting and employment policies?

ANSWER: In defending the government's policies, I will apply the Constitution and applicable precedent, including but not limited to Adarand Constructors, Inc. v. Peña, 515 U.S. 200 (1995).

18. In Rothe Development Corp. v. Department of Defense, the Federal Circuit struck down the Department of Defense's racially preferential contracting program. Will you urge the federal government to end the use of preferences based on race, ethnicity, and sex in its contracting practices?

ANSWER: Rothe Dev. Corp. v. Dep't of Def., 545 F.3d 1023 (Fed. Cir. 2008), concerned a provision of 10 U.S.C. § 2323 (known as Section 1207), which permitted the Department of Defense, in certain circumstances, give an award preference of up to 10% to small businesses owned and controlled by "socially and economically disadvantaged individuals." At the time of the decision, the price preference program had already been suspended. The Federal Circuit held Section 1207 unconstitutional on its face, finding that "Congress did not have before it, at the time of the 2006 reenactment of Section 1207, a 'strong basis in evidence' for the proposition that DOD was a passive participant in racial discrimination in relevant markets across the country and that therefore race-conscious remedial measures were necessary." Id. at 1049 (internal citation omitted). But the Federal Circuit "stress[ed] that [its] holding is grounded in the particular items of evidence offered by DOD and relied on by the district court in this case." Id. And it never reached the question whether the program, which had been "amended over time, [with] amendments [that] have tended to limit, rather than broaden, the application of preferences based on racial classifications," id., was narrowly tailored. Accordingly, I do not read Rothe as a blanket prohibition on such programs if there is sufficient, methodologically valid evidence set before Congress. Of course, if confirmed, I would follow all binding court precedent.

19. Is it constitutional for a university to have racially exclusive internships, scholarships, or summer programs?

ANSWER: The Supreme Court has made clear that strict scrutiny applies to governmental decisions that select applicants based on race. If confirmed, I will apply the applicable law to the facts of any such case.

20. Do you agree with your predecessors' decision to challenge racially exclusive fellowship programs at Southern Illinois University?

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the details of this litigation. The Supreme Court has made clear, however, that strict scrutiny applies to governmental decisions that select applicants based on race. If confirmed, I will apply the applicable law to the facts of any such case.

21. You have been critical of Supreme Court decisions regarding race issues, saying that the Court has "in recent years drastically undermined efforts to redeem the Fourteenth Amendment's promise of equal citizenship for all." If confirmed, what will be your priorities in regard to righting these, in your view, wrongly decided cases?

ANSWER: The Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights enforces the Constitution and the law in a manner that is consistent with Supreme Court holdings. The Supreme Court's rulings on matters of constitutional interpretation are binding. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the law as interpreted by the Court and give effect to its holdings.

22. Will you embrace the theory of disparate impact in litigation initiated by the Civil Rights Division?

ANSWER: Certain federal laws enforced by the Civil Rights Division, as passed by Congress and/or as interpreted by courts, employ a disparate impact framework. If confirmed, I would enforce applicable law.

23. If a case is appealed to the Supreme Court questioning the use of disparate-impact theory will you allow that case to be heard or will you work to settle the case to avoid Supreme Court review of the theory?

ANSWER: In my experience, settlements are explored and achieved on a case-by-case basis following a careful evaluation of the facts, law, claims and an overall assessment of litigation risk. If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, I would act in the best interests of the United States.

24. The Supreme Court has warned that the use of disparate-impact theory in litigation can have two negative consequences: (1) forcing employers and others to adopt surreptitious quotas to avoid being sued; and (2) forcing employers to abandon other legitimate selection criteria. Do you agree with this warning?

ANSWER: The law, founded in the Supreme Court's decision in Griggs v. Duke Power Co., 401 U.S. 424 (1971), provides that the disparate impact framework protects those policies and practices that are job-related and consistent with business necessity, to achieve non-discriminatory objectives, unless the challenger shows that other policies with a lesser adverse effect would also serve the employer's legitimate interests. If confirmed, I will follow applicable law.

25. In Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, you argued on behalf of the intervenors-appellees that the District Court's decision that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act precluded the utility district from receiving a Section 4 bailout because the district was not a "political subdivision." The Supreme Court unanimously reversed the District Court's decision and held that the utility district was a political subdivision and therefore eligible for bailout. Please answer each subpart individually.

a. Do you still agree with the arguments you made in this case?

ANSWER: The Supreme Court did not adopt my client's argument with respect to the bailout eligibility issue in that case and I accept the Court's interpretation as binding.

b. What steps will you take, if confirmed, at the Department of Justice to further the arguments you made in this case?

ANSWER: In Shelby County v. Holder, the Supreme Court struck down the Section 4(b) geographic coverage provision of the Voting Rights Act as unconstitutional as a basis for Section 5 preclearance. I will follow the Supreme Court's holding in Shelby County.

26. In Shelby County v. Holder, you argued on behalf of the respondent-intervenors that the Court should uphold Sections 4(b) and 5 of the Voting Rights Act. You argued that Section 5 "remains essential to safeguard our democracy from racial discrimination;" that Section 2 litigation is an "inadequate response to the persistent and adaptive problem of racial discrimination in voting in certain parts of our country;" and that "racial discrimination in voting remains concentrated in the jurisdictions that have historically been covered by Section 5." The Supreme Court struck down Section 4(b). Please answer each subpart individually.

a. Do you still agree with the arguments you made in this case?

ANSWER: The congressional record in support of the 2006 reauthorization of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act supports the above quotes; in Shelby County v. Holder, the Supreme Court struck down the Section 4(b) geographic coverage provision of the Voting Rights Act as unconstitutional as a basis for Section 5 preclearance. I will follow the Supreme Court's holding in Shelby County.

- b. Do you accept the Supreme Court’s decision as final?

ANSWER: Yes.

- c. What steps will you take, if confirmed, to further the arguments you made in this case?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will follow the Supreme Court’s holding in Shelby County.

- d. In the brief, you argued that “racial discrimination in voting poses a unique threat to our democracy.” What steps will you take, if confirmed, to stem this “unique threat?”

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will enforce the laws within the Civil Rights Division’s authority that protect voters against discrimination.

- e. In light of the Supreme Court’s decision in Shelby County v. Holder, how will you use Section 2 litigation to protect rights of voters?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will evaluate the facts, apply the law, and file Section 2 cases where appropriate.

27. The Pew Center on the States recently found that more than 1.8 million dead people are registered to vote, that 24 million registrations are either invalid or inaccurate, and that approximately 2.75 million people have registrations in more than one state. The report went on to say that “our democratic process requires an effective system for maintaining accurate voter registration information. Voter registration lists are used to assign precincts, send sample ballots, provide polling place information, identify and verify voters at polling places, and determine how resources, such as paper ballots and voting machines, are deployed on Election Day. However, these systems are plagued with errors and inefficiencies that waste taxpayer dollars, undermine voter confidence, and fuel partisan disputes over the integrity of our elections.” The Civil Rights Division is responsible for the federal law that requires the states to maintain clean voter rolls. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Would you agree with the Pew Foundation on the States that inaccurate state voter lists where dead voters, ineligible voters, and voters who remain on the voting rolls of multiple states is a national problem?

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the referenced Pew study. I agree that accurate voter registration lists are important for the proper functioning of elections. Registrations can be invalid for many different reasons, including death of a voter, residence relocation, marital name change, among others, as well as for some reasons that are technical or attributed to government error. Modernization of election systems could improve the accuracy of registration lists.

- b. As the Civil Rights Division is responsible for enforcing the federal voting law in this area, what do you intend to do to resolve this national problem if you were to be confirmed by the Senate?

ANSWER: My understanding is that many different reasons contribute to voter registration list inaccuracy and, while the Civil Rights Division can take steps to address aspects of the problem, including federal list maintenance law enforcement, as I described above, the issue is multidimensional and manifests itself differently in different states. If confirmed, I will enforce applicable laws in the jurisdiction of the Civil Rights Division.

- c. Will you fully enforce Section 8 of the NVRA that requires states to conduct list maintenance and properly remove deceased and other ineligible voters from state voter rolls if confirmed by the Senate?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I would enforce applicable provisions of the NVRA, including its list maintenance provisions, consistent with a careful assessment of the facts and the law.

28. In the Federal Voting Assistance Program's 18th Report to the President and Congress a few years ago, the absentee ballot return rate for active duty military overseas was only 67% as compared to a 91% success rate for domestic absentee ballot voters. Studies show that participation rates of overseas military voters is much lower than civilian voters due to difficulties they encounter in voting from remote areas. Military voters are more likely to be disenfranchised than any other group of voters and the Report noted that the majority of voting failure was the untimely ballot transmission when state and counties do not send ballots to voters on time, required 45 days before any federal election. The Civil Rights Division is responsible for the enforcement of military voting laws, particularly the MOVE Act which governs this area. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Will the enforcement of the MOVE Act be a priority for you, if you are confirmed?

ANSWER: I respect the primacy of the right to vote in the United States and support efforts to expand voter access, including for our servicemembers who make substantial sacrifices for the nation. I understand that MOVE Act enforcement has been a priority of the Civil Rights Division and, if confirmed, I would continue those efforts.

- b. There has been some criticism that in the past the Voting Rights Section has waited too long before bringing suit to protect military members. How do you plan to closely monitor counties and quickly enforce the law to protect voters before the election, not after the election?

ANSWER: I understand that enforcing the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act has been a priority of the Division, and if confirmed, I would continue those efforts to protect before the election servicemembers' ability to vote. I also understand that Senators Cornyn and Schumer have introduced a bill—the Safeguarding Elections for our Nation's Troops through Reforms and Improvements Act—that includes some provisions proposed by the Administration to strengthen MOVE Act enforcement, including a requirement that states report in advance of the election on the status of ballot transmission to military and overseas voters. Such a requirement would enhance the Division's ability to protect servicemembers' ability to vote, and I commend them for their work on this important issue.

29. Do you believe that legally requiring voters to have identification is the equivalent of a poll tax?

ANSWER: The legality of voting requirements must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis, looking at particular features of the state law in question, the particular allegations presented, and the case law that has developed on the question.

30. Do you believe that individuals who have broken this nation's laws by entering the country illegally should be allowed to gain citizenship?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I would enforce the laws delegated to the Division. I understand that the Senate has passed a bipartisan measure that provides what is known as a pathway to earned citizenship, and that the Administration supports the bill.

31. Last July, Department of Housing and Urban Development Secretary Shaun Donovan unveiled a new rule to allow the federal government to track so-called "diversity" in American neighborhoods and to create policies to change the makeup of neighborhoods it deems to be discriminatory. The policy is called, "Affirmatively Furthering Fair Housing," and will require HUD to gather data on segregation and discrimination in every single neighborhood and to try to remedy it. What will the Civil Rights Division's role be in enforcing that policy?

ANSWER: It is my understanding that HUD is still working on a final rule. The proposed rule does not alter DOJ's current authority to enforce the Fair Housing Act, the Housing and Community Development Act, or Title VI.

32. In your opinion, when is it appropriate to decline to defend the constitutionality of a federal statute?

ANSWER: The Department of Justice has a longstanding practice of defending federal statutes so long as reasonable arguments can be made in support of their constitutionality. If confirmed, I will discharge my responsibility to defend federal statutes in a manner that is consistent with the law and the Department's established practice.

33. Under what circumstances do you believe the death penalty to be constitutional?

ANSWER: Various state and federal statutes establish capital crimes. The Supreme Court has determined that capital punishment is constitutional. The Supreme Court also has determined in various rulings that a death sentence cannot be enforced if it was imposed in violation of certain substantive or procedural protections afforded by the Constitution.

34. In 2012, following issuance of guidelines by the EEOC that instructed employers to consider only relevant details related to a potential employee's criminal history, you stated that "[n]o one should be penalized for the rest of their life for mistakes that they made in the past." Please answer each subpart individually.

a. Do you oppose an employer's ability to perform criminal background checks on potential employees?

ANSWER: I would not oppose the ability for employers to perform reasonable criminal background checks on potential employees. If employers do perform background checks, the EEOC has released guidance on the subject. As I understand it, the guidance does not embrace a categorical bar on using information gleaned from such employment screens but rather requires some reasonable inquiry into the nexus between the conviction and the job responsibilities involved in the particular position.

b. Will you, if confirmed, take action to abridge or eliminate an employer's ability to perform criminal background checks on potential employees?

ANSWER: The EEOC has released guidance on the subject of employer background checks. As I read it, the guidance does not embrace a categorical bar on using information gleaned from such employment screens but rather requires some reasonable inquiry into the nexus between the conviction and the job responsibilities involved in the particular position.

35. You did not provide many notes from the speeches and talks you gave during this past year. Why did you not save these?

ANSWER: I did not provide notes for all of my speeches and talks because I often do not speak from notes or make any formal notations prior to my speaking engagements.

36. To your knowledge, were you considered for a position on the D.C. Circuit?

a. If so, why did your nomination not proceed?

ANSWER: Yes, I was considered for a nomination to the D.C. Circuit, but I withdrew myself from consideration.

37. Do you agree with the following statement, the “minimum coverage provision [of the ACA] enhances the ability of individuals to participate in the economic, social, and civil life of our nation, thereby advancing equal opportunity and personal liberty?”

- a. If so, how will you, if confirmed, work as head of the Civil Rights Division to ensure that it advances equal opportunity and personal liberty?

ANSWER: Yes, I agree with that statement. The Supreme Court upheld the ACA’s minimum coverage provision in Dept. of Health and Human Services v. Fla. If the Civil Rights Division has a role with respect to that provision, if confirmed, I will enforce it.

38. While at LDF, you contributed to a brief in the case of the District of Columbia v. Heller. Do you still agree with the following statements? Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. “Indeed, the text of the Second Amendment itself does not provide for [a right for an individual to possess or use firearms outside the context of a lawfully organized militia], and for the Court to recognized an individual right to “keep and bear Arms” would represent a radical departure from the consistent and long-established understanding of the Second Amendment.”

ANSWER: Prior to its decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the Supreme Court had previously interpreted the Second Amendment in United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174, (1939), in which the Court observed that the Second Amendment’s “purpose [was] to assure the continuation and render possible the effectiveness of [organized militias],” and that the “guarantee of the Second Amendment . . . must be interpreted and applied with that end in view.” 307 U.S. at 178. In Heller, however, the Court stated that the Second Amendment protects “an individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation.” Id. at 592. The Court’s holding in Heller is binding.

- b. “Although these statements do not carry the weight of precedent, they illustrate how radical the position taken by the D.C. Circuit truly is. A robust Second Amendment right to ‘keep and bear Arms’ for purely private purposes has never been taken seriously by any majority of the members of the Court. Nor has the court ever invalidated a restriction on firearms under the Second Amendment. To do so now would represent a radical and unwarranted departure from the Court’s Second Amendment jurisprudence.”

ANSWER: After the Supreme Court’s opinion in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), this statement is no longer accurate.

- c. “A recognition by this Court of an individual right to ‘keep and bear Arms’ for purely private purposes would represent more than a mere doctrinal shift; as a practical matter, it would appear to require a massive change in the way firearms have been regulated for centuries.”

ANSWER: Any time the Supreme Court strikes down a law as an unconstitutional infringement upon individual rights, it invariably affects what governments can and cannot do. The Heller opinion, however, expressly acknowledges that some degree of regulation is permissible. 554 U.S. at 626. Thus, the full implications of Heller and McDonald have yet to be determined, as courts throughout the country continue to grapple with these complex constitutional questions, and I have not had the opportunity to carefully study the question.

39. Do you believe that defendants under age 18 should ever be subjected to adult punishments in the criminal justice system? If you believe adult treatment for juvenile offenders is appropriate, please specify under what circumstances.

ANSWER: Many criminal justice statutes set forth considerations including, but not limited to, the nature of the offense at issue and a juvenile’s prior record in order to determine whether adult treatment of a particular juvenile offender is proper. To the extent adult treatment of juveniles falls within the boundaries of the Constitution, as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court, such treatment is an available penalogical policy decision for legislators who grapple with the most effective approaches to sentencing and deterrence.

40. In an amicus brief submitted by the LDF in Miller v. Alabama, you allege that “racial overtones and stereotyping tainted the widespread enactment of laws that exposed youth to life without parole,” and that such laws had a disproportionate impact on African-American and Latino youth. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Do you believe that life-without-parole sentencing laws and juvenile-court reforms enacted in the 1980s and 90s were designed with the intent, implicit or otherwise, to incarcerate larger numbers of youth of color?

ANSWER: LDF’s amicus brief in Miller v. Alabama explained the way in which exaggerations shaped perceptions that young people of color are criminals and affected the broader policy debate. The ensuing debates often culminated in more punitive measures for all youthful offenders, including life without parole.

- b. If yes, how do you account for the advocacy of such laws by prominent African-American political leaders, like former New York City Mayor David Dinkins and Rep. Carol Moseley Braun?

ANSWER: Many leading voices in that period made public comments that embraced what had become a dominant narrative in the context of juvenile justice with respect to the scope of the problem associated with youthful offenders.

41. You contributed to an amicus brief in Miller v. Alabama. In this brief you argued that racism has stymied the proper evaluation with respect to ethnic minorities charged with criminal offenses. Do you still agree with the following statement from the brief: “Because it is clear that race critically and inappropriately informs the assessment of blameworthiness in the context of juvenile life without parole sentencing, such sentences are unconstitutional. ...The perceived negative personality traits of African-American and other youth of color led officials to assess them as more culpable and dangerous than white youth and, therefore, to recommend more severe sentences for youth of color....In light of the preceding arguments, the possibility that race may play any role in the administration of justice is especially disturbing in the context of life without parole sentences for youth....At bottom, the gross racial disparities that pervade life without parole sentencing for children demonstrate that negative perceptions of youth of color have stymied the proper evaluation of their culpability.”

- a. Do you believe this is an issue that is pervasive within the justice system in this country?

ANSWER: Unfortunately, race continues to have an impact on sentencing outcomes and the treatment of youth in the criminal justice system. Recent data detailing disparities in student discipline for example, released by the U.S. Department of Justice and U.S. Department of Education on the topic of nondiscriminatory administration of school discipline, is instructive guidance. These data show that youth of color—particularly African-American and Latino youth—are more often referred to law enforcement and disciplined at higher rates than their white counterparts. Moreover, these disparities are not explained by the frequency or seriousness of misbehavior by youth of color.

- b. If so, what role will the Civil Rights Division play in remedying this?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will enforce the law, within its jurisdiction, to ensure that the justice system is administered in a fair and appropriate manner.

42. In the LDF amicus brief you submitted in Miller v. Alabama, your claim that “it is clear that race critically and inappropriately influences the assessment of blameworthiness in the context of juvenile life without parole sentencing” is supported primarily by non-empirical social science – the brief even suggests that life-without-parole sentencing laws “appeal to cultural archetypes in the collective unconscious about the ‘alien other’ who poses a fearful and menacing threat to society.” To what extent will your decisionmaking as Assistant Attorney General be guided by social-science concepts such as “cultural archetypes” and “the collective unconscious”?

ANSWER: If confirmed, my decision-making would be guided by the law and the facts.

43. Given your argument in the LDF’s Miller amicus brief that “[r]acial disparities in juvenile life without parole sentences are not surprising given that these disparities exist at all levels of children’s contact with the criminal justice system,” what, if any, steps do you plan to take as Assistant Attorney General to ameliorate racial disparities in federal sentencing?

ANSWER: Although I am not currently at the Department of Justice, I understand that the Department is reviewing sentencing as a Department-wide issue. To the extent that the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights plays a role in such a process, if confirmed, I look forward to contributing to the extent appropriate.

44. In the context of juvenile defendants, you wrote in an amicus brief the LDF submitted in Graham v. Florida that “dynamics of race, class and the nature of indigent defense” may “disadvantage” a defendant’s “relationship with counsel and contribute to a significant risk of an unreliable sentencing outcome that fails to reflect actual culpability.” Please answer each subpart individually.

a. Do you believe this assertion to be true in the context of adult defendants?

ANSWER: I believe that the Supreme Court cited LDF’s amicus brief favorably for the proposition that the characteristics of youth can hamper the attorney-client relationship. Those dynamics can undermine the nature of a defendant’s relationship with defense counsel.

b. If so, what if any measures do you intend to undertake as Assistant Attorney General to lessen the disadvantages you previously argued that defendants who belong to disadvantaged groups face?

ANSWER: Although I am not currently at the Department of Justice, I understand that the Department is reviewing sentencing as a Department-wide issue. I also understand that the Office of Justice Programs recently provided significant grant-based funding to improve the delivery of indigent defense services across the country. To the extent that the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights plays a role in these efforts, if confirmed, I look forward to contributing to the extent appropriate.

45. In Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & School v. EEOC, the Supreme Court stated that the First Amendment prohibits governmental “interference with an internal church decision that affects the faith and mission of the church itself,” and unanimously rejected the argument advanced in an LDF amicus brief that you signed that application of anti-retaliation provisions of civil rights laws to parochial school teachers comports with the First Amendment. Given the Supreme Court’s unanimous rejection of LDF’s position in Hosanna-Tabor, what provisions of civil-rights laws, in your view, may employees who qualify under the “ministerial exception” exercise without violating the First Amendment rights of their employer?

ANSWER: In its amicus brief, LDF argued against a categorical exception to federal anti-discrimination laws based on the central importance of these laws to protecting opportunities for all Americans. As I understand the decision, the Court in Hosanna-Tabor did not categorically preclude the application of employment discrimination laws to religious institutions—and, in this respect, the decision is consistent with LDF’s position. Rather, it said that federal discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution’s employment of a minister. Under the Court’s ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. In this way, the Court safeguards the important constitutional rights implicated in the case.

46. You contributed to an amicus brief in Hosanna Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & School v. EEOC. In this brief, you argue that “[a]ny burden on parochial schools’ First Amendment interests in retaliating against their teachers is more than outweighed by the countervailing needs of law enforcement.” The Supreme Court ruled 9-0 against your arguments. Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Do you still believe this statement, and the rest of the arguments you made in the brief, are good and valid legal arguments?

ANSWER: In its amicus brief, LDF argued against a categorical exception to federal anti-discrimination law based on the central importance of these laws to protecting opportunities for all Americans. As I understand the decision, the Court in Hosanna-Tabor did not categorically preclude the application of employment discrimination laws to religious institutions, and, in this respect, the decision is consistent with LDF’s position. Rather, it said that discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institutions employment of a minister. Under the Court’s ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. In this way, the Court safeguards the important constitutional rights implicated in the case.

- b. Do you still believe that “[a]pplying a ministerial exception to parochial school teachers would be devastating to states’ undeniably compelling interest in protecting children from abuse?”

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights related claims. If confirmed to lead the Civil Rights Division, I would enforce the laws enacted by Congress as interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court.

- c. Do you still agree with the following statement, “[e]ven if civil rights laws pervasively imposed significant burdens on religious practice that would not justify a categorical exemption for parochial schools?”

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights related claims. If confirmed to lead the Civil Rights Division, I would enforce the law as set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court.

47. In your view, does Hosanna-Tabor's holding prevent an individual (1) who is employed by a religious institution; (2) and falls within the "ministerial exception," from suing under the anti-discrimination and anti-retaliation provisions of civil-rights statutes like Title VII or the Rehabilitation Act? Please answer each subpart individually.

a. Would a suit by such an individual be permitted under the FMLA or the Equal Pay Act?

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights claims. If confirmed, I would apply the First Amendment principles articulated by the Court in evaluating claims under the FMLA and the Equal Pay Act.

b. In your view, does Hosanna-Tabor's holding prevent such an individual from suing his or her employer alleging discrimination based on the individual's sexual orientation or gender identity?

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights claims. If confirmed, I would apply the First Amendment principles articulated by the Court in evaluating claims alleging discrimination based on an individual's sexual orientation or gender identity.

48. Please identify what, if any, civil-rights provisions you consider to be neutral laws of general applicability—see Employment Division v. Smith—that may still be lawfully asserted against religious organizations by employees who fall with the ministerial exception, notwithstanding the Court's holding in Hosanna-Tabor.

ANSWER: I am not currently at the Department of Justice nor have I had the opportunity to specifically study the full scope of each law that the Civil Rights Division enforces.

49. Following the Supreme Court's decision in Ricci v. DeStefano, do you believe that employers which have engaged in race-conscious employment actions or other conduct covered by Title VII can evade disparate-treatment liability based merely on a good-faith belief that the employment action may otherwise have caused racial disparities in jobs that have historically excluded racial minorities?

ANSWER: On the facts presented in Ricci v. DeStefano, the Supreme Court held that there must be a strong basis in evidence of disparate impact liability before an employer could disregard the results of a civil service exam based on the racial makeup of the relevant pool of employees.

50. In a 2010 amicus brief LDF filed in Wal-Mart v. Dukes, you wrote that “[c]ivil rights cases are paradigmatic cases for Rule 23(b)(2) certification.” Please answer each subpart individually.

- a. Given the Supreme Court’s holding in that case that claims for monetary relief sought by putative class members cannot be certified under Rule 23(b)(2) where monetary relief is not incidental to injunctive or declaratory relief, please explain whether you believe that civil-rights lawsuits in which putative class members seek money damages may still be brought pursuant to Rule 23(b)(2).

ANSWER: In Dukes v. Walmart, the Court stated that claims that would require “individualized assessments” for specific plaintiffs are not appropriate for (b)(2) certification, but instead must be litigated under (b)(3).

- b. If so, what circumstances in your view would permit a (b)(2) class in which members seek monetary relief?

ANSWER: The Court in Dukes v. Walmart did not expressly decide this issue and I have not studied this issue.

- c. Further, do you consider monetary relief in the form of backpay to be declaratory or injunctive relief as those terms are used in Rule 23(b)(2)?

ANSWER: Back pay is neither declaratory nor injunctive relief.

- d. Do you still maintain, as you did in the LDF brief, that “[r]estricting the reach of 23(b)(2) class actions—by, inter alia, limiting their certification to instances where monetary relief is not requested—contravenes the structure and purpose of disparate impact theory, as first conceived by [the Supreme Court]?”

ANSWER: As argued in the amicus brief on behalf of LDF and other parties, use of Rule 23(b)(2) class actions to bring disparate impact claims has been essential to efforts at combatting institutional discrimination. If confirmed, I will ensure that the Division’s enforcement focuses on those tools to combat actionable discrimination that are within the Civil Rights Division’s jurisdiction.

51. Following the Supreme Court’s decision in Berghuis v. Smith, please explain your view on the circumstances under which various methods of proof of systematic exclusion—absolute disparity, comparative disparity, and standard deviation—are appropriate tools in establishing fair-cross-section claims. Please answer each subpart individually.

ANSWER: The Supreme Court, in Berghuis v. Smith, declined to adopt a particular method of proof of systematic exclusion, but instead noted that all three methods suffered from shortcomings. 559 U.S. 314, 329 (2010). Given the Supreme Court’s decision not to adopt a specific statistical test, it may be appropriate to consider the results of all three methods in each case to determine whether a group is fairly and reasonably represented in jury venires.

- a. In cases involving an allegedly excluded minority group that comprises less than 10 percent of the total population, please explain the circumstances under which you would employ a comparative-disparity theory and the circumstances under which you would employ a standard-deviation theory.

ANSWER: The current state of the law, as explained by the Supreme Court in Berghuis v. Smith, is such that “no court has accepted a standard deviation analysis alone as determinative in Sixth Amendment” fair cross section challenges. 559 U.S. at 330 (quoting United States v. Rioux, 97 F.3d 648, 655 (2d. Cir. 1996)). Thus, given the Supreme Court’s declaration, it would seem advisable to mount multiple theories to resolve such cases.

52. In a 2008 amicus brief which you signed, LDF (and others) argued that Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act permits minority voters to satisfy the first Gingles precondition—i.e., whether a minority group “is sufficiently large and geographically compact to constitute a majority in a single-member district”—even though the minority group does not comprise a numerical majority of voters in a given district. The Supreme Court rejected this so-called “functional majority test” in its plurality opinion in Bartlett v. Stickland. In light of that holding, please explain under what circumstances, in your view, a minority group can satisfy Section 2’s majority-minority requirement if that group does not comprise a numerical majority in the voting district.

ANSWER: Under Bartlett v. Stickland, my understanding is that a single minority group below 50% cannot satisfy the first Gingles prerequisite.

53. In its plurality opinion in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, the Supreme Court rejected a challenge that you, as LDF counsel of record, raised against the Indiana Voter I.D. law, and held that the Indiana law was “unquestionably relevant to the State’s interest in protecting the integrity and reliability of the electoral process.” The Court also held that the law—which allowed potential voters to obtain free identification cards by going to their local DMV office with appropriate documents—did not impose a substantial burden on an individual’s right to vote, and that whatever additional burden the requirement may put on certain groups, i.e., the elderly, was mitigated by the ability of the voter to cast a provisional ballot.

- a. Please specify the circumstances under which you believe that a state law that imposes a voter I.D. requirement and provides a procedure for voters to obtain free, state-issued identification, would impose a substantial burden on voters or infringe the right to vote.

ANSWER: LDF did not raise the challenge in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, but rather participated as amicus curiae. Under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1973, courts ask whether “based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by [the Act] . . . in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” Thus, it is difficult to provide categorical guidance regarding the content of a particular law without examining how the law would operate in a particular jurisdiction. Accordingly, I am not in a position to offer specific guidance on this point.

54. What would be the considerations that you would apply if confirmed in deciding whether to challenge under the Voting Rights Act a state’s enactment of a particular law requiring that voters display photo identification before casting their vote?

ANSWER: Any such decision would require an assessment of the facts and context of the state’s particular law and its expected impact on voters.

55. Can you give guidance to any state contemplating enactment of such a law with respect to its content so that it could be certain that the Civil Rights Division would not bring a challenge? Or is it the case that the Civil Rights Division would challenge any such law under the Voting Rights Act?

ANSWER: I believe that the Civil Rights Division has precleared voter identification laws in the past. Under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1973, courts ask whether “based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by [the Act] . . . in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” Thus, it is difficult to provide categorical guidance regarding the content of a particular law without examining how the law would operate in a particular jurisdiction.

56. In my state of Iowa, state officials have learned that not only are non-citizens on the voter rolls, but that a number of non-citizens have voted. The state has brought a number of successful prosecutions for voter fraud. Do you agree that voter fraud exists, that states have an important interest in preventing such fraud, and that a legitimate voter’s fundamental right to vote is diluted equally if an ineligible person is allowed to vote as if an eligible voter is denied the right to vote?

ANSWER: Voting fraud occurs in some circumstances and there is no foolproof approach to combatting voting fraud. It is important to protect the legitimacy of the voting process so that eligible voters have their votes counted and do not have their votes diluted. Voter fraud protections are most effective when appropriately calibrated to the nature and scale of the problem.

The Honorable Jeff Flake
Written Questions for Debo Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General Civil Rights Division

1. You signed a brief on behalf of the NAACP in Hosanna-Tabor v. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, 132 S. Ct. 694 (2012), in support of the teacher dismissed by her employer, Hosanna-Tabor. The Court, in a unanimous opinion, upheld the ministerial exception. The unanimous opinion stated, “the Establishment Clause prevents the Government from appointing ministers, and the Free Exercise Clause prevents it from interfering with the freedom of religious groups to select their own.”

- a. Do you personally believe the position you took in Hosanna-Tabor was correct at the time you filed the brief?

ANSWER: In its amicus brief, LDF argued against a categorical exception to federal anti-discrimination law based on the central importance of these laws to protecting opportunities for all Americans. As I understand the decision, the Court in Hosanna-Tabor did not categorically preclude the application of employment discrimination laws to houses of worship, and, in this respect, the decision is consistent with LDF’s position. Rather, it said that federal discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution’s employment of a minister. Under the Court’s ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. In this way, the opinion in this case safeguards the important constitutional rights implicated in the case.

- b. Notwithstanding the Supreme Court’s opinion to the contrary, do you still believe your brief is a correct analysis of the Constitution and precedent?

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights related claims. If confirmed to lead the Civil Rights Division, I would enforce the law as set forth by the Supreme Court.

- c. In your brief, you stated: “Even if civil rights laws pervasively imposed significant burdens on religious practice, that would not justify a categorical exemption for parochial schools.” How do you square this statement asserting the federal government may impose “significant burdens on religious practice,” with the First Amendment protections, stating: “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof ...”?

ANSWER: I recognize the balance that the Supreme Court struck in Hosanna-Tabor to guard constitutionally protected rights in the context of civil rights related claims. If confirmed to lead the Civil Rights Division, I would enforce the law as set forth by the Supreme Court.

2. In Crawford v. Marion County, 553 U.S. 181, you were the counsel of record on an amicus brief filed on behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund urging the court to find Indiana's requirement that voters present government-issued photo identification to be unconstitutional. In a 6-3 plurality decision written by Justice Stevens, the Supreme Court upheld Indiana's voter photo identification law. Do you still believe the position you took in the brief was correct?

ANSWER: The Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights is entrusted with enforcing the Constitution and the law in a manner that is consistent with Supreme Court holdings. The Supreme Court's rulings on matters of constitutional interpretation are binding. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court and give effect to its holdings.

3. You signed a brief on behalf of the NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund in the case of D.C. v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, urging the Supreme Court to overturn the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit's decision that the District of Columbia's gun laws were unconstitutional. Your brief asserted, "The type of radical departure from this Court's Second Amendment jurisprudence that is reflected in the opinion of the D.C. Circuit is not warranted." Your brief continued, "for the Court to recognize an individual right to 'keep and bear Arms' would represent a radical departure from the consistent and long-established understanding of the Second Amendment." The Supreme Court upheld the D.C. Circuit's opinion in D.C. v. Heller.
 - a. Do you believe the Supreme Court's decision in Heller was a "radical departure" from the Supreme Court's prior jurisprudence?

ANSWER: Prior to its decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the Supreme Court had previously interpreted the Second Amendment in United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174, (1939), in which the Court observed that the Second Amendment's "purpose [was] to assure the continuation and render possible the effectiveness of [organized militias]," and that the "guarantee of the Second Amendment . . . must be interpreted and applied with that end in view." 307 U.S. at 178. In Heller, however, the Court stated that the Second Amendment protects "an individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation." Id. at 592. The Court's holding in Heller is binding.

- b. Do you believe Heller, decided almost six years ago, has resulted in a "substantial upheaval in the manner in which firearms are regulated nationwide?"

ANSWER: Any time the Supreme Court strikes down a law as an unconstitutional infringement upon individual rights, it invariably affects what governments can and cannot do. The Heller opinion, however, expressly acknowledges that some degree of regulation is permissible. 554 U.S. at 626. Thus, the full implications of Heller and McDonald have yet to be determined, and I have not studied the issue.

5. As you likely know, the federal government is currently in a budget crisis where it is spending more than it brings in. As a result, all government departments, agencies, and even the legislative branch are being asked to tighten their belts and cut costs. If confirmed as the head of the Civil Rights Division, what actions would you take to cut costs, especially waste and abuse, at the Department?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I would be a responsible steward of the resources that fund the Civil Rights Division and would seek to make effective use of those resources while avoiding waste.

Senator Jeff Sessions
Debo Adegbile

1. There is absolutely no doubt that voter fraud occurs in our federal elections through voter registration fraud, absentee ballot fraud, and ineligible voters casting ballots, to name just a few. Do you agree that when people who are ineligible to vote, do so, or when people vote multiple times it dilutes the votes cast by legal voters, thereby denying them their right to vote?

ANSWER: Voting fraud occurs in some circumstances and there is no foolproof approach to combating voting fraud. It is important to protect the legitimacy of the voting process so that eligible voters have their votes counted and do not have their votes diluted. Voter fraud protections are most effective when appropriately calibrated to the nature and scale of the problem.

2. According to sworn testimony from Christopher Coates, former Voting Section Chief at the Department of Justice, Kristen Clarke, a lawyer at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, pressured Justice Department officials to dismiss a lawsuit against the New Black Panther Party for voter intimidation in the November 2008 Presidential election in Philadelphia.

- a. Did you supervise or work with her during your time there?

ANSWER: Yes. In my role as Director of Litigation, I supervised Ms. Clarke and the entire legal staff at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

- b. Were you aware of her efforts or did you instruct her to do so?

ANSWER: No.

3. If you are confirmed, your deputy assistant attorney general in charge of overseeing the Voting Section will be Stanford Law Professor Pam Karlan. In the past, she has made numerous partisan attacks on the Justice Department under President George W. Bush, some of which were demonstrably false. For example, in an article published in the Duke Journal of Constitutional Law, she wrote that “for five of the eight years of the Bush Administration, [the Civil Rights Division] brought no Voting Rights Act cases of its own except for one case protecting white voters.” However, the record shows that cases were brought under the Voting Rights Act to protect non-white racial minorities in each of the eight years of the Bush administration. If confirmed, will you instruct her to correct her academic record so your enforcement of voting laws is not supervised by someone with the perception of partisanship and will you disavow her false scholarship?

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the details of the article or excerpt in the question above. If confirmed, I look forward to working with Deputy Assistant Attorney General Karlan to enforce the laws entrusted to the Civil Rights Division.

4. There has been some criticism from our military that the Justice Department, and specifically the Voting Section, waits too long before bringing a lawsuit to protect military voters and that when they finally do act, it is on the eve of an election and too late to provide any real remedy for overseas voters.
 - a. If confirmed, will you commit to closely monitor counties and quickly enforce the law to protect military voters before an election and not wait until afterward?

ANSWER: It is my understanding that Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act enforcement has been a priority of the Civil Rights Division, and if confirmed, I would continue those efforts.

- b. If confirmed, how do you intend to monitor each state to ensure full compliance?

ANSWER: I understand that enforcing the Military and Overseas Voter Empowerment Act has been a priority of the Division, and if confirmed, I would continue those efforts to protect before the election servicemembers’ ability to vote. I also understand that Senators Cornyn and Schumer have introduced a bill—the Safeguarding Elections for our Nation’s Troops through Reforms and Improvements Act—that includes some provisions proposed by the Administration to strengthen MOVE Act enforcement, including a requirement that states report in advance of the election on the status of ballot transmission to military and overseas voters. Such a requirement would enhance the Division’s ability to protect servicemembers’ ability to vote, and I commend them for their work on this important issue.

- c. State election officials have criticized the Voting Section for inappropriately bringing enforcement actions against States rather than counties. States often have little power or control over local jurisdictions, which are responsible for the procedures that result in the failure to send ballots on time. To fully protect our military voters, if confirmed, will you take appropriate legal action against counties that fail to comply with the law in this regard?

ANSWER: My understanding is that courts have found repeatedly that states are responsible for ensuring UOCAVA compliance.

5. A March 2013 report by the Justice Department Inspector General on the Voting Section revealed that the leadership of the Civil Rights Division, including former Assistant Attorney General Thomas Perez, interpreted the “preclearance” requirement of the Voting Rights Act, embodied in Sections 4 and 5, to be “race-conscious,” in that it does not cover white voters even when they are clearly a minority in the jurisdiction.

- a. Do you interpret the preclearance requirement of the Voting Rights Act in that way?

ANSWER: Although as a result of Shelby County v. Holder, Section 4 no longer justifies the preclearance requirements of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, it is not my understanding that Section 5 protected only racial minorities.

- b. It is my understanding that you have been working on legislation to amend the Voting Rights Act in response to the Supreme Court’s holding that states cannot be subject to the preclearance requirement based solely on past discrimination. If Congress chooses to adopt a new trigger for Section 5 coverage, do you believe it should be “race-conscious,” or do you believe it should apply equally to citizens of any race who happen to be a minority in a particular jurisdiction?

ANSWER: I advised Chairman Leahy on potential legislative responses to the Shelby County v. Holder decision prior to my nomination. Since then, I have worked on other issues. I understand that a bicameral, bipartisan Voting Rights Act bill has been introduced.

6. In League of United Latin American Citizens v. Perry, a redistricting case, Chief Justice Roberts disagreed with the majority’s holding that it was the Court’s role “to make judgments about which mixes of minority voters should count for purposes of forming a majority in an electoral district, in the face of factual findings that the district is an effective majority-minority district.”

- a. Do you agree with Chief Justice Roberts’ statement?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will enforce the law as articulated by the Supreme Court. Through cases like League of United Latin American Citizens v. Perry, the Court has held that cohesive voting blocs that constitute a majority and are adversely affected by racially polarized voting patterns can state a claim under Section 2.

- b. If confirmed, how will you ensure that Section 2 cases do not violate the Supreme Court’s warnings against, as the Court put it, “racial gerrymandering”?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will enforce the law consistent with Supreme Court precedents.

7. With the Supreme Court's June 2013 ruling in Shelby County v. Holder, and the lack of Section 5 submissions to the Voting Section, there are now, according to reports, seven senior attorneys with salaries of over $150,000 each with no Section 5 work. Taken together, those salaries equal over a million dollars a year in personnel costs. The salaries of perhaps a dozen Section 5 analysts together equal at least another million dollars in personnel and overhead costs. If confirmed, will you eliminate these positions or find other productive work for them?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will ensure that resources within the Division are effectively allocated, and, with respect to the Voting Section, will endeavor to ensure that resources are deployed in a manner that strengthens access to the ballot and otherwise supports compliance with the law.

8. A recent report by the Inspector General on the operations of the Voting Section found that members of the Voting Section who were viewed as Republican or conservative were severely harassed on that account. For example, the report detailed how: "at least three career Voting Section employees posted comments on widely read liberal websites concerning Voting Section work and personnel. . . . The three employees who we were able to identify with certainty included three non-attorney employees [and] included a wide array of inappropriate remarks, ranging from petty and juvenile personal attacks to highly offensive and potentially threatening statements. The comments were directed at fellow career Voting Section employees because of their conservative political views, their willingness to carry out the policies of the [Civil Rights Division] division leadership, or their views on the Voting Rights Act. The highly offensive comments included suggestions that the parents of one former career Section attorney were Nazis, disparaging a career manager's physical appearance and guessing how he/she would look without clothing, speculation that another career manager was watching pornography in her office, and references to 'Yellow Fever,' in connection with allusions to marital infidelity involving two career Voting Section employees, one of whom was described as 'look[ing] Asian.'"
- a. One of the individuals responsible for making these demeaning statements initially lied to the Inspector General and later admitted that she perjured herself, but added that she had no regrets other than the fact that she was caught. It is my understanding that this individual is still employed by the Justice Department in the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division. If confirmed, will you terminate her employment?

ANSWER: Because I am not currently at DOJ, I do not know the details of the matter described above and am not in a position to make a commitment about personnel actions I would take if confirmed. I will handle personnel matters in accordance with all applicable legal and ethical standards and rules, however.

- b. If confirmed, how will you ensure that such partisan political hostility towards certain employees does not continue under your leadership, as it did under the previous leadership of the Civil Rights Division?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps to improve professionalism within the Division both before and in response to the Inspector General's recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division's policies and practices and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate

for Debo Adegbile (DOJ AAG for Civil Rights)
Senator Mike Lee
January 8, 2014

1. In 2011, the NAACP Legal Defense Fund (LDF) took on the case of convicted cop killer Mumia Abu-Jamal. Abu-Jamal was sentenced to death for the 1981 murder of a 25-year-old Philadelphia police officer who had engaged Abu-Jamal's brother in a routine traffic stop. LDF took on Abu-Jamal's appeal while you were the director of litigation and you signed several briefs on his behalf, leading to the commutation of his death sentence to life in prison. Abu-Jamal has been and remains an iconic figure among activists.

- a. What part did you play in LDF's decision to take on the case?

ANSWER: As the Litigation Director, I was aware of the request to represent Mr. Abu-Jamal, however, the late John Payton, NAACP LDF's former President and Director-Counsel, made the decision to take the case.

- b. Did you elect to play a role in representing Abu-Jamal? What was your motivation for that decision?

ANSWER: I reviewed certain briefs filed in the matter by virtue of my role as the Litigation Director and my associated supervisory responsibilities at LDF

- c. At a New York Free Mumia Coalition event in 2011, Christina Swarms, your colleague at LDF at the time, included you when she stated, "There is no question in the mind of anyone at the Legal Defense Fund that the justice system has completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal and, in our view, that has everything to do with race and that is why the legal defense fund is in this case."

- i. Do you believe that the justice system had at that time "completely and utterly failed Mumia Abu-Jamal"? If so, in what ways?

ANSWER: I do not know what Ms. Swarns had in mind when she made this comment. I know that the court found that there was a constitutional infirmity in the sentencing phase of Mr. Abu Jamal's case and accordingly vacated his death sentence and he was resentenced to life without the possibility of parole.

- ii. Do you believe that such a failure had "everything to do with race"? If so, please explain your reasoning.

ANSWER: I do not know what Ms. Swarns meant by this comment.

- iii. If you do not agree with Ms. Swarns statement, why do you believe LDF took on this case?

ANSWER: John Payton, LDF's late President and Director-Counsel, made the decision that LDF would represent Mr. Abu Jamal based upon an assessment of the constitutional claim.

- d. In a January 2014 letter to the President opposing your nomination for your involvement in the Abu-Jamal case, the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) expressed the need for law enforcement and minority communities to "build even greater bonds of trust and mutual respect," while decrying the work of the Civil Rights Division and its "aggressive and punitive approach towards local law enforcement agencies."

- i. Under your direction, if confirmed, would the Civil Rights Division continue the methods, patterns, and practices established under the leadership of Thomas Perez and Roy Austin, Jr.?

ANSWER: Our communities rightly place a great deal of trust in law enforcement officers, the overwhelming majority of whom deserve our highest praise as dedicated public servants who keep our neighborhoods safe, our families secure, and dangerous criminals behind bars. If confirmed, I will enforce the applicable laws in a fair and even-handed manner.

- ii. If confirmed, in what ways will you work to tear down the "obstacles" to trust and mutual respect that the FOP refers to in its letter?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will work to further build a relationship of trust and mutual respect with the law enforcement community.

- e. How will your experience advocating for Abu-Jamal inform your work in the DOJ if you are confirmed?

ANSWER: As I stated in my confirmation hearing, the LDF's representation of Mr. Abu Jamal is an example of our commitment, as a nation and through the Constitution, to follow our procedural rules even in the hardest of cases. If confirmed, I will uphold the Constitution and enforce the law in a fair and even-handed manner.

2. You have made a number of statements expressing strong views regarding the Voting Rights Act and voting rights more generally. Late in 2012, some members of this administration made troubling comments suggesting that they believe the executive branch should itself reform voter registration and even move to nationalize voter registration.
 - a. Do you believe that the executive branch currently has statutory authority to make significant national changes to state voter registration systems and if so which statutes do you believe provide that authority?

ANSWER: I am unaware of the comments to which the question refers. State voter registration systems are under the direct control of states, but are subject to a range of federal requirements, including both statutory and constitutional requirements, particularly with respect to elections for federal office. Those requirements have in the past required states to make significant changes, but the executive branch itself did not "make" those changes.

3. You have appeared on a number of amicus briefs on controversial issues before the Supreme Court. These briefs evidence an extreme view of the Constitution that in many cases has not been accepted by even a single member of the court. For example, with respect to religious liberty, in a brief you helped write in the Hosanna Tabor case, you argued strenuously against a ministerial exception, a position the Court rejected 9-0. With respect to the Second Amendment, you helped write a brief in the Heller case that argued the Second Amendment does not provide for the right of an individual to possess or use firearms outside the context of a lawfully organized militia. This position was rejected by the Court. In Ricci v. DeStefano, you likewise helped write an amicus brief arguing for a position the Court rejected.
 - a. Do you believe religious organizations are not entitled to a ministerial exception?

ANSWER: In its amicus brief, LDF argued against a categorical exception to federal anti-discrimination law based on the central importance of these laws to protecting opportunities for all Americans. As I understand the decision, the Court in Hosanna-Tabor did not categorically preclude the application of employment discrimination laws to religious institutions – and, in this respect, the decision is consistent with LDF's position. Rather, it said that discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution's employment of a "minister". Under the Court's ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a "minister," a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. In this way, the Court safeguards the important constitutional rights implicated in the case.

- b. Do you believe the Second Amendment does not guarantee an individual's right to bear arms?

ANSWER: Prior to its decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the Supreme Court had previously interpreted the Second Amendment in United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174, (1939), in which the Court observed that the Second Amendment's "purpose [was] to assure the continuation and render possible the effectiveness of [organized militias]," and that the "guarantee of the Second Amendment . . . must be interpreted and applied with that end in view." 307 U.S. at 178. In Heller, however, the Court stated that the Second Amendment protects "an individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation." Id. at 592. The Court's holding in Heller is binding.

- c. It appears that in many instances your views of the Constitution are at odds with those of the Court. What assurances can you give the Committee that you will respect and follow Supreme Court precedent?

ANSWER: I filed a number of briefs as an attorney at NAACP LDF on behalf of various clients or on behalf of my former employer. In some of those cases my client or employer's side prevailed; in some the opposing party prevailed. However, the positions articulated in each of these briefs should not be reflexively equated with statements of the personal views of the filing counsel. Moreover, the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights enforces the Constitution and the law in a manner that is consistent with Supreme Court holdings. The Supreme Court's rulings on matters of constitutional interpretation are binding. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the law as interpreted by the Court and give effect to its holdings.

Questions for the record of Senator John Cornyn for Debo Adegbile, nominee to be Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

1. In an interview with an NYU Law School alumni publication, you stated: "Not every wrong finds a remedy in the law, as it turns out. It takes a good bit of creative lawyering and tenacity on the part of litigators to formulate a winning theory . . ." Please describe, in detail, what you meant by "creative lawyering." As Assistant Attorney General, how would you use "creative lawyering," and will you pledge to pursue only remedies expressly provided for under current law?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will ensure that the Civil Rights Division enforces the law as enacted by Congress and as interpreted by the Supreme Court or other federal courts as applicable, based on an assessment of the facts presented and in consideration of the best interests of the United States.

2. As Assistant Attorney General, would you commit to only pursue legal theories that find strong support in the statutes passed by Congress and the interpretations given to them by the Supreme Court?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I will ensure that the Civil Rights Division enforces the law as enacted by Congress and as interpreted by the Supreme Court or other federal courts as applicable, based on an assessment of the facts presented and in consideration of the best interests of the United States.

3. Are there differences between the role of Assistant Attorney General and the role of Director-Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund? How, specifically, would you approach these positions differently?

ANSWER: The Civil Rights Division is a federal law enforcement agency created by Congress. If confirmed, I would be cognizant of my obligation to enforce the law in a fair and evenhanded manner and to lead the Civil Rights Division with a commitment to its duties, traditions and practices in collaboration with the able public servants who dedicate themselves to the work of the Division.

4. A recent Inspector General's report found "deep ideological polarization" and "bitter controversy" within the Voting Rights Section of the Civil Rights Division. What specific measures will you take to address the problems cited by the Inspector General?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division took steps in response to both the 2008 Inspector General report on the Division and in response to the Inspector General's recent report. If confirmed, I will assess the Division's current policies and practices and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate.

5. In the Supreme Court's opinion in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, 557 U.S. 193 (2009), Chief Justice Roberts' opinion described the "substantial federalism costs" that Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 imposes on some states. Do you agree that Section 5 imposes such costs?

ANSWER: Yes. In light of the anti-discrimination principle expressly embraced in the text of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, however, as well as the history and purposes of their enactment, the federalism costs, while relevant to the analysis, do not end the inquiry.

6. In Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. ____ (2013), the Supreme Court ruled that Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was unconstitutional because it utilized decades-old evidence to require certain states, including Texas, to seek federal approval before changing their voting laws. In congressional testimony in 2006, you stated: "The evidence in the record does not indicate that the existing Section 4 coverage formula, or ‘trigger,’ needs to be revised or updated.”

- a. Do you accept the Supreme Court’s decision, and will respect that decision while serving as Assistant Attorney General?

ANSWER: Yes. The Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights is entrusted with enforcing the Constitution and the law in a manner that is consistent with Supreme Court holdings. The Supreme Court’s rulings on matters of constitutional interpretation are binding. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court and give effect to its holdings.

- b. Do you believe that that an imbalanced treatment of states similar to Section 4 is still appropriate post Shelby County?

ANSWER: Congress must determine whether targeted remedial protections are necessary in particular jurisdictions.

- c. Do you agree with the Court’s that: “There is no denying . . . that the conditions that originally justified” the preclearance process under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 “no longer characterize voting in the covered jurisdictions”?

ANSWER: As a general matter, there has been very substantial progress in voting in the formerly Section 5 covered jurisdictions—progress that both Congress acknowledged during the 2006 Reauthorization, and the Supreme Court acknowledged in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder. I understand that a bipartisan, bicameral Voting Rights Act bill has been introduced that would provide for a new form of coverage formula.

- d. Do you agree with the Court’s statement that the coverage formula under Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 was “based on 40-year-old facts having no logical relation to the present day”?

ANSWER: While the coverage provision retained its references to earlier elections, the substantial focus of the Congressional legislative record supporting the 2006 Reauthorization was based upon voting discrimination primarily within the covered jurisdictions between 1982 and 2006.

- e. Had the same voter turn-out and registration thresholds set by Section 4 been applied in 2000 as required by statute, rather than 1964, 9 of the 14 counties in Massachusetts would have been subject to preclearance, while only 2 of Texas’s 254 counties would have been covered. Yet, under Section 4, all of Texas was subject to preclearance, while none of Massachusetts was. In light of this evidence, do you believe that your congressional testimony in 2006 was accurate?

ANSWER: I believe my testimony was accurate. The goal and purpose of Section 5 was never limited to voter turnout and registration. The coverage provision also included jurisdictions that employed a “test or device” which were understood to have a discriminatory purpose and effect. Congress looked to continued discrimination to justify the 2006 reauthorization.

- f. Absent the Supreme Court’s ruling in this case, what would you consider to be sufficient evidence that the Section 4 coverage formula should be updated?

ANSWER: I am not able to answer this question in the abstract, but I understand that Congress is exploring ways to update the Section 4 coverage formula, and that a bipartisan, bicameral bill has been introduced to accomplish this goal.

- g. Do you believe a coverage formula for preclearance, as provided in Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, is the only way to properly protect minority voting rights? Why or why not?

ANSWER: No. While preclearance—and the use of the coverage formula to determine which jurisdictions are subject to preclearance—is a particularly effective way to protect minority voting rights, there are other mechanisms as well, including among other things both private and public enforcement of existing prohibitions on discrimination related to voting. And with respect to preclearance itself, there may be other ways to establish the reach of preclearance if Congress determines that preclearance remains essential. As stated above, I understand that a bipartisan, bicameral bill has been introduced that proposes a new form of coverage formula.

- h. What, if anything, might be an appropriate alternative to preclearance in protecting minority voting rights?

ANSWER: In the decades since the passage of the Voting Rights Act, preclearance has been a demonstrably effective tool in rooting out voting discrimination. I understand that a bipartisan, bicameral Voting Rights Act bill has been introduced that would provide a new coverage formula.

7. What were your duties and responsibilities while serving as Senior Counsel to Senator Leahy? Were you involved in efforts to draft legislation remedying the constitutional defects of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, or otherwise amending it? Please describe those efforts. What outside organizations, if any, did you work with on these efforts?

ANSWER: Prior to the time of my nomination, I advised Senator Leahy on possible legislative responses to Shelby County. Since the time of my nomination, I have advised Senator Leahy on various other legislative and constitutional matters.

8. Do you accept the Supreme Court's decision in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, 553 U.S. 181 (2008), in which the court upheld the constitutionality of Indiana's voter ID statute?

ANSWER: Yes, the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights is entrusted with enforcing the Constitution and the law in a manner that is consistent with Supreme Court holdings. The Supreme Court's rulings on matters of constitutional interpretation are binding. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court and give effect to its holdings.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Stevens' statement that voter ID "is amply justified by the valid interest in protecting the integrity and reliability of the electoral process"?

ANSWER: I accept as binding the decision of the Supreme Court in Crawford v. Marion County Election Board, 553 U.S. 181 (2008), in which the Court rejected a facial challenge to Indiana's photo identification law.

- b. Do you accept the Supreme Court's distinction in Crawford between Indiana's voter ID law and a poll tax?

ANSWER: I do not read Justice Stevens' opinion to draw a categorical distinction between voter ID laws and poll taxes. A poll tax claim was not at issue in Crawford.

- c. In the past, you have been a strong opponent of Voter ID laws. Will you use your position as Assistant Attorney General to continue to oppose state voter ID laws? If so, how will you select which of the growing number of state voter ID laws you will challenge?

ANSWER: I understand that the Division has precleared such laws in the past. Congress has directed courts addressing claims under section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. 1973, to ask whether "based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by [the Act] . . . in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice."

- d. Is there any form of state voter ID law that you find acceptable? If so, please describe the characteristics of an acceptable state voter ID law.

ANSWER: I believe that the Civil Rights Division has precleared voter identification laws in the past. Under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1973, courts ask whether "based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by [the Act] . . . in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” Thus, it is difficult to provide categorical guidance regarding the content of a particular law without examining how the law would operate in a particular jurisdiction.

9. In November, I introduced S. 1728, a bipartisan bill called the SENTRI Act (Safeguarding Elections for our Nation’s Troops through Reforms and Improvements Act), together with Sen. Schumer and four other senators. It is awaiting consideration in the Senate Rules Committee. It is my understanding that the Civil Rights Division supports this bill. Do you support our effort to better protect the voting rights of our troops both at home and overseas?

ANSWER: I commend you on your efforts to ensure the voting rights of servicemembers who sacrifice for our country. Expanding the reach of voter access, including affirmative efforts to facilitate the access of our service members and overseas voters is an essential part of our national commitment to democracy. I understand that the SENTRI Act includes provisions adopting Administration proposals to enhance the Civil Rights Division’s ability to protect these voters’ access to this fundamental right, and if confirmed, I look forward to working with you on this important issue.

10. Is it appropriate for the Civil Rights Division to take a position in the national debate over same-sex marriage?

ANSWER: The Division takes positions in litigation that falls within its jurisdiction.

11. In a guidance memo published in May 2012, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission argued that: “An employer’s use of an individual’s criminal history in making employment decisions may, in some instances, violate the prohibition against employment discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965, as amended.” As Acting President and Director Counsel of the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, you praised this guidance memo—stating that: “No one should be penalized for the rest of their life for mistakes that they made in the past.”

- a. Do you agree with the May 2012 guidance memo that “. . . an exclusion based on an arrest, in itself, is not job related and consistent with business necessity?”

ANSWER: The EEOC has released guidance on the subject of employer background checks. As I read it, the guidance does not embrace a categorical bar on using information gleaned from such employment screens but rather requires some reasonable inquiry into the nexus between the conviction and the job responsibilities involved in the particular position.

- b. Do you believe that a private employer’s decision categorically to exclude all persons convicted of a child pornography offense from the hiring pool may, in some instances, violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1965?

ANSWER: It is my understanding that the Civil Rights Division has jurisdiction to enforce Title VII with respect to state and local government employers, while the EEOC has jurisdiction to enforce that statute with respect to employers in the private sector, among others.

- c. Do you believe that any person who has been convicted of a felony or crime of violence should be categorically excluded from working for the Department of Justice? If not, what classes of felons or violent offenders should be allowed to work for the Department of Justice?

ANSWER: If confirmed, I commit to following the Department's applicable personnel laws and guidance.

- d. If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division, would you commit to performing a criminal background check on all prospective employees, and to prohibiting the hiring of any person who has been convicted of a felony or crime of violence? If not, please describe a particular situation in which you might, as Assistant Attorney General, recommend the hiring of a felon or violent offender.

ANSWER: If confirmed, I commit to following the applicable personnel laws and guidance.

I SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Wetzel v. Abu-Jamal, 2011 WL 4048834 (2011)

In Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. 367 (1988), this Court declared that instructions indicating that a juror cannot “find a particular circumstance to be mitigating unless all 12 jurors agree[] that the mitigating circumstance ha [s] been prove[n] to exist,” are unconstitutional. Smith v. Spisak, 130 S. Ct. 676, 682 (2010) (citing Mills, 486 U.S. at 380-381). In this case, the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, on remand from this Court, properly found that the verdict form and oral instructions given to Respondent’s sentencing jury violated Mills. Specifically, after appropriately applying the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (“AEDPA”), 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), the appellate court found that the form and instructions, taken together, required unanimity in the finding of mitigation, that the instructions at issue are materially different from those found to be acceptable in Spisak, and that the state court’s decision was objectively unreasonable. Because the Circuit Court’s decision is appropriately deferential and amply supported by the record, certiorari review is inappropriate.

ARGUMENT

This Court should deny certiorari because the Third Circuit’s decision on remand is correct; the Circuit applied properly stated rules of law to the facts of this case; and the Circuit Court’s grant of Mills relief is unlikely to affect future cases.

*2 1. The Third Circuit’s Decision on Remand Is Correct.

The Third Circuit’s conclusion that the Abu-Jamal jury instructions and verdict form were significantly different from - and worse than - those in Spisak and that the state court’s rejection of Respondent’s Mills claim was objectively unreasonable, is well supported by the record. Petitioners mischaracterize the Circuit’s reasoning, fail to acknowledge substantial differences between this case and Spisak and incorrectly describe the state of the law at the time of the state court’s decision.¹

A. Procedural History

The procedural history of Respondent’s Mills claim demonstrates that the Circuit Court has consistently and appropriately conducted the deferential review required by § 2254(d).

1. State Court.

2. District Court.

On federal habeas review, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania (the “District Court”) addressed the Mills claim at length. Abu-Jamal v. Horn, No. CIV. A. 99-5089, 2001 WL 1609690, *1, *114-*127 (E.D. Pa. Dec. 18, 2001) (“Abu-Jamal-3”).

The District Court emphasized that it was applying the deferential standards set forth by the AEDPA, 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d), as required by this Court’s ruling in Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362 (2000). Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *10-*11 (Williams “cautioned federal habeas courts against insufficiently deferential review of state court decisions”) (citing Williams, 529 U.S. at 409); id. at *107 (same) (citing Williams, 529 U.S. at 409); id. at *116 n.82 (“important to reiterate” in addressing a Mills claim that “a significant degree of deference is due the state supreme court’s application of federal law”).

Applying AEDPA, the District Court found that the jury instructions and verdict sheet violated Mills and that the state court's decision on the Mills claim was objectively unreasonable under § 2254(d)(1), Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at 130. Accordingly, the District Court vacated the death sentence. Id.

4 3. Court of Appeals.

The Third Circuit unanimously affirmed the District Court's finding of Mills error. Abu-Jamal v. Horn, 520 F.3d 272 (3d Cir. 2008) ("Abu-Jamal-4").

It explained that it was applying the deferential standards of § 2254(d). Id. at 292 & n.21 (describing AEDPA's "deferential standard" of review); id. at 278-79 (collateral review requires deference unless "unreasonable application" threshold under § 2254(d)(1) is met); id. at 279, 287-88 (Mr. Abu-Jamal's habeas petition was "subject to AEDPA"); id. at 300 ("Our review is limited to whether the Pennsylvania Supreme Court unreasonably applied Mills." (citing § 2254(d)(1) and Williams, 529 U.S. at 405)).

After applying Mills and § 2254(d), and considering the verdict form, the oral instructions, and the state court's ruling, the Circuit affirmed the grant of habeas relief. Id. at 301-304.

4. This Court.

In 2008, Petitioners filed a certiorari petition, seeking this Court's review of the Third Circuit's ruling. Petition for Writ of Certiorari, Beard v. Abu-Jamal, No. 08-652, 2008 WL 4933629 (U.S. Nov. 14, 1008).

On February 23, 2009, while Petitioners' certiorari petition was pending, this Court granted certiorari in Smith v. Spisak, 129 S. Ct. 1319 (2009), to review, inter alia, the Sixth Circuit's grant of relief under Mills. On January 12, 2010, this Court reversed the Sixth Circuit. Spisak, 130 S. Ct. 676.

*5 On January 19, 2010, this Court issued a "GVR" order in the instant case: "Petition for writ of certiorari granted. Judgment vacated, and case remanded to the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit for further consideration in light of Smith v. Spisak." Beard v. Abu-Jamal, 130 S. Ct. 1134 (2010) ("Abu-Jamal-5").²

5. Court of Appeals on Remand.

After new briefing and oral argument, the Third Circuit again unanimously found that the jury instructions and verdict form violated Mills, that the state court unreasonably applied clearly established federal law, and that habeas relief was required under § 2254(d)(1). Abu-Jamal v. Secretary, 643 F.3d 370, 372 (3d Cir. 2011) ("Abu-Jamal-6").

The Third Circuit again emphasized that it was applying the deferential standards of AEDPA's § 2254(d): Our review on remand is limited to whether the Pennsylvania Supreme Court unreasonably applied United States Supreme Court precedent in finding no constitutional defect in the jury instructions and verdict form employed in the sentencing phase of Abu-Jamal's trial. See *6 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1); Williams [, 529 U.S. [at] 405-06 Pursuant to the Supreme Court's order, we consider this question in light of Spisak

Under [§ 2254(d)], a state prisoner's application for a writ of habeas corpus will be denied unless the adjudication of a claim in state court proceedings "(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court proceeding." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1)-(2).

Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 373. The Circuit explained that because the state court properly identified and applied Mills to Respondent's claim, its decision was not "contrary to" clearly established law. Id. at 374 (citing Williams, 529 U.S. at 405). The Circuit therefore considered whether the state court's decision involved an "unreasonable application" of federal law under § 2254(d)(1), and noted that:

"a federal habeas court may not issue the writ simply because that court concludes in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court decision applied clearly established federal law erroneously or incorrectly. Rather, that *7 application must also be unreasonable." Williams, 529 U.S. at 411; see Schiro v. Landrigan, 550 U.S. 465, 473 [] (2007).

Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 374. Thus:

in making this inquiry, we "should ask whether the state court's application of clearly established federal law was objectively unreasonable." Williams, 529 U.S. at 409.

Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 374.

The Circuit then observed that its specific task on remand was to reconsider its earlier ruling in light of Spisak. Because this Court found no Mills violation in Spisak, the Circuit first "evaluate[d] whether a Mills violation has occurred, and then proceed[ed] to examine whether the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's application of Mills was objectively unreasonable under the second clause of § 2254(d)(1)." Id. at 374.

After carefully comparing the Mills and Abu-Jamal verdict sheets and jury instructions, id. at 374-77, the Circuit concluded that "the [Abu-Jamal] verdict form together with the jury instructions" indicated that the jury could only consider the mitigating circumstances that it found unanimously. Id. at 377.

It then compared the Abu-Jamal and Spisak instructions and verdict forms, id. at 377-81, and found that the "verdict form and judge's instructions used in the sentencing phase of Abu-Jamal's trial are materially different and easily distinguished from those at issue in Spisak" id. at 379. Thus, the *8 Circuit concluded that its finding of a Mills violation was "consistent with Spisak." Id. at 380-81.

Finally, the Third Circuit applied AEDPA's deferential standards to the state court's decision on the Mills claim and concluded that it was objectively unreasonable. Id. at 374, 381. Thus, the Third Circuit again affirmed the District Court's grant of habeas relief as to Mr. Abu-Jamal's death sentence. Id. at 383.

B. The Third Circuit's Mills Analysis Was Correct and Supported By the Record.

The Circuit unanimously found that the "verdict form together with the jury instructions read that unanimity was required in the consideration of mitigating circumstances and that there is a substantial probability³ the jurors believed they were precluded from independent consideration of mitigating circumstances in violation of Mills." Id. at 377.

*9 Petitioners assert that requiring unanimity for the weighing result does not violate Mills. Petition at 12. Respondent agrees. Read in isolation from the rest of the instructions and verdict form, the weighing instruction correctly stated the law.

Petitioners erroneously contend, however, that the Third Circuit found a Mills violation based solely on this weighing language. Id. at 11; see id. at 10, 12, 24. Contrary to Petitioners' claims, the opinion makes clear that it was the rest of the verdict form along with the oral instructions that created a substantial probability that the jury would believe it could only consider and weigh unanimously found mitigating circumstances against the aggravating circumstances. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 375-76. The Circuit's finding that the state court was objectively unreasonable in "conduct [ing] an incomplete analysis of only a portion of the verdict form, rather than the entire form," id. at 381, offers further proof that it did not rely solely on the weighing instruction as the basis for granting Mills relief. As in Mills, Mr. Abu-Jamal's jury was misled regarding the task that preceded the ultimate weighing - the process of identifying and considering mitigation.

1. The verdict form's opening statement required unanimous findings by the jury of mitigating circumstance(s).

*10 We, the jury, having heretofore determined that the above-named defendant is guilty of murder of the first degree, do hereby further find that:

App. 131. That language is followed by:

(1) We, the jury, unanimously sentence the defendant to

(2) (To be used only if the aforesaid sentence is death)

We, the jury, have found unanimously

at least one aggravating circumstance and no mitigating circumstance. The aggravating circumstance(s) is/are one or more aggravating circumstances which outweigh any mitigating circumstances. The aggravating circumstance(s) is/are A.

*11 By opening with "[w]e, the jury, having heretofore determined that the defendant is guilty of murder of the first degree, do hereby further find that:", id. at 131 (emphasis added), the verdict form required that everything marked on it be found by the same jury that found Mr. Abu-Jamal guilty - i.e., the unanimous jury. The form did not allow an individual juror to find anything on his own, including a mitigating circumstance.

Page One of the verdict form required the jury to specify the sentence; what "[t]he aggravating circumstance (s) is/are ___"; and what "[t]he mitigating circumstance(s) is/are ___." Id. at 131-32. (emphasis added). Because the opening statement required all verdict form findings to be unanimous, the form mandated that the sentence, the aggravating circumstances and the mitigating circumstances be unanimously found. While the first two requirements are proper, the third violates Mills.

2. The verdict form provided space for only one check next to each mitigating circumstance.

Pages Two and Three of the verdict form read as follows:

.AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES

AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE(S):

(a) The victim was a fireman, peace officer or public servant concerned in official detention *12 who was killed in the performance of his duties. (#)

[nine more statutory aggravating circumstances, labeled (b)-(j) and followed by a (), not checked by the jury]

MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCE(S):

(a) The defendant has no significant history of prior criminal convictions (#)

[seven more statutory mitigating circumstances, labeled (b)-(h) and followed by a (), not checked by the jury]

App. 132-35.

Thus, the jury was presented with a list of ten possible aggravating circumstances, and a list of eight possible mitigating circumstances, with a “()” next to each aggravating and mitigating circumstance to be checked, if found. The space provided next to each mitigating circumstance is too small for any marking beyond a single checkmark. Also, the form did not provide a mechanism for any individual juror to find, or indicate that s/he has found, independent of other jurors, a mitigating circumstance. These factors reinforce the notion that only unanimously found mitigating *13 circumstances were to be considered. Read together with the opening statement that directed the jury to record only those items that are were unanimously found, the verdict form led the jury to believe that it could only consider an aggravating or mitigating circumstance that was unanimously found.

3. Additional language in the verdict form required unanimous finding of mitigating circumstances.

at least one aggravating circumstance and no mitigating circumstance. The aggravating circumstance(s) is/are _____.

one or more aggravating circumstances which outweigh any mitigating circumstances. The aggravating circumstance(s) is/are A.

App. 131-32 (emphasis added).

This portion of the form also requires the jury to find and consider only the aggravating and *14 mitigating circumstances that it has “found unanimously.” Id. at 131 (emphasis added). Because this language was read in conjunction with the verdict form's opening statement requiring the jury to note only those findings that “we, the jury, have found unanimously,” and the list of choices, each with one corresponding box that could be checked, directly underneath the opening statement, the only plausible interpretation is that the specifications of aggravators and mitigators on the lines provided required unanimous findings.

4. The verdict form required the signatures of all twelve jurors below the list of mitigating circumstances.

The end of the verdict form, just below the list of mitigating circumstances on Page Three, requires the signatures of all twelve jurors. Id. at 135. This also ensured that only unanimously found mitigating circumstances are considered. If fewer than twelve jurors found a mitigating circumstance, checked it on the checklist on Page Three (although the form opens with a requirement that only findings of the unanimous jury be recorded), and wrote it on Page One (although Page One states “We the jury have found unanimously ... [t]he mitigating circumstance(s) is/are _____”, id. at 131-32), then the jurors who disagreed could not sign the verdict form without violating their oaths. The presence of all twelve signatures confirms the form’s direction to unanimously consider and find mitigating circumstances.

15 5. Aggravating and mitigating circumstances are treated identically on the verdict form.

The unanimous finding of mitigating circumstances was also required by the verdict form’s consistently identical treatment of aggravating and mitigating circumstances. To comply with Mills, the jury would have had to ignore this and believe, contrary to the form’s plain language and without any rational basis, that aggravation and mitigation should be treated differently. The court must “presume that, unless instructed to the contrary, the jury would read similar language throughout the form consistently.” Mills, 486 U.S. at 378.

6. Mr. Abu-Jamal’s verdict form was more problematic than the Mills verdict form.

In finding constitutional error, the Third Circuit relied upon the similarities between the Mills and Abu-Jamal verdict forms. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 375-77. However, for several reasons, the Abu-Jamal form was more likely than the Mills form to be understood to require a unanimous mitigation finding.

The Mills form allowed the jury to mark “yes” or “no” for each listed mitigating circumstance, and the list was prefaced with: “[W]e unanimously find that each of the following mitigating circumstances which is marked ‘yes’ has been proven to exist ... and each mitigating circumstance marked ‘no’ has not been proven ...” Id. at 375. Maryland’s high court interpreted the jury’s “no” entries as showing that *16 the jury unanimously rejected the “no”-marked mitigating circumstance. See id. at 372. So interpreted, the death sentence was constitutional - if the jury unanimously rejected each mitigating circumstance, no individual juror found a mitigating circumstance and no juror was prevented from giving effect to mitigation that s/he believed to exist.

This Court found the Maryland court’s interpretation of the form “plausible” in light of the form’s language. It was nevertheless declared unconstitutional because it was unclear that the jury interpreted the form the same way as the Maryland court. See id. at 375-76.

The Abu-Jamal form is not even susceptible to the “plausible” interpretation that the Maryland court gave the Mills form. Unlike in Mills, Mr. Abu-Jamal’s jury’s only options were to check a mitigating circumstance if it was found, or leave it blank. The failure to check plainly signifies the jury’s failure to unanimously find a mitigating circumstance. Thus, the Mills violation is clearer in Abu-Jamal than it was in Mills itself.

7. The trial court’s oral instructions compounded the Mills error.

As the Third Circuit recognized, “the instructions throughout and repeatedly emphasized unanimity.” Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 377. The judge told the jury: “You will be given a verdict slip upon which to record your verdict and findings.” App. 127. Here, and throughout, the judge made no distinction between “findings” of aggravating circumstances and “findings” of mitigating circumstances, except for *17 different burdens of proof. See infra, Section I. B. 7. Thus, the jury had no reason to believe that there were any differences (other than burdens of proof) between the processes for finding aggravating and mitigating circumstances - the instructions required both to be found unanimously.

The judge also instructed the jury on how to use the checklist of aggravating circumstances on Page Two and how to identify aggravating circumstances on Page One:

[W]hat you do, you go to Page 2. Page 2 lists all the aggravating circumstances. They go from small letter (a) to small letter (j). Whichever one of these that you find, you put an “X” or check mark there and then, put it in the front. Don't spell it out, the whole thing, just what letter you might have found.

App. 128.

The judge then used materially identical language to explain how to use Page Three's checklist of mitigating circumstances and how to complete Page One's identification of the mitigating circumstances:

[T]hose mitigating circumstances appear on the third page here, they run from a little (a) to a little letter (h). And whichever ones you find there, you will put an “X” mark or check mark and then, put it on the front here at the bottom, which says mitigating circumstances. And you will notice that *18 on the third or last page, it has a spot for each and every one of you to sign his or her name on here as jurors

These instructions, like the verdict form itself, treat aggravating and mitigating circumstances identically - both were to be “found” and recorded by a unanimous jury. As the Third Circuit found, “in light of the language and parallel structure of the form and instructions in relation to aggravating and mitigating circumstances, it is notable that neither the verdict form nor the judge's charge said or in any way suggested that the jury should apply the unanimity requirement to its findings of aggravating but not mitigating circumstances.” Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 377. The instructions do not even hint that the jury must unanimously find an aggravating circumstance, but not a mitigating one. Instead, the last instruction on finding mitigating circumstances and signing the form “places in the closest temporal proximity the task of finding the existence of mitigating circumstances and the requirement that each juror indicate his or her agreement with the findings of the jury” by signing the form. Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *125. The judge's instructions on how to use the verdict form thus exacerbated the form's Mills error.

Other oral instructions also led the jury to treat aggravating and mitigating circumstances in the same manner: Members of the jury, you must now decide whether the defendant is to be *19 sentenced to death or life imprisonment. The sentence will depend upon your findings concerning aggravating and mitigating circumstances. The Crimes Code provides that the verdict must be a sentence of death if the jury unanimously finds at least one aggravating circumstance and no mitigating circumstance, or if the jury unanimously finds one or more aggravating circumstances which outweigh any mitigating circumstances.

The verdict must be a sentence of life imprisonment in all other cases.

Remember, that your verdict must be a sentence of death if you unanimously find at least one aggravating circumstance and no mitigating circumstance. Or, if you unanimously find one or more aggravating circumstances which outweigh any mitigating circumstances. In all other cases, your verdict must be a sentence of life imprisonment.

App. 124-25; 126-27. In these instructions, like all of the instructions, aggravating and mitigating circumstances are treated identically as matters to be “found” by the unanimous jury or not considered at all. Nothing in the instructions would allow the jury to reasonably conclude that mitigating and *20 aggravating circumstances should be treated differently.

The Third Circuit also found that the failure to distinguish between the process of finding aggravators and mitigators was “notable because the trial court distinguished between the two with respect to the proper burden of proof the jury should apply.” Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 377. In this regard, the court instructed the jury that:

Whether you sentence the defendant to death or to life imprisonment will depend upon what, if any, aggravating or mitigating circumstances you find are present in this case. ... [A]ggravating circumstances must be proved by the Commonwealth beyond a reasonable doubt, while mitigating circumstances must be proved by the defendant by a preponderance of the evidence.

The Commonwealth has the burden of proving aggravating circumstances beyond a reasonable doubt. The defendant has the burden of proving mitigating circumstances, but only by a preponderance of the evidence. This is a lesser burden of proof than beyond a reasonable doubt.

App. 126.

*21 Since the instructions stressed the different burdens for proving aggravating and mitigating circumstances, but were silent as to any differences in the manner of proof, jurors would naturally conclude that both “aggravating and mitigating circumstances must be discussed and unanimously agreed to, as is typically the case when considering whether a burden of proof has been met.” See Frey v. Filcofer, 132 F.3d 916, 924 (3d Cir. 1997) (emphasis in original). Thus, the burden of proof instructions “likely cemented the jury’s mistaken impression that it was obligated not to consider a mitigating circumstance that was found to exist by anything other than the entire panel.” Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *119 (emphasis in original).

The jury instructions were also problematic because the judge repeatedly used the pronoun “you” to refer without distinction to the entity that “finds” the defendant guilty, “finds” a sentence, “finds” aggravating circumstances, and “finds” mitigating circumstances.⁴ To satisfy Mills, the jury would have to have know that “you” meant the “unanimous jury” for the first three matters, but meant “each individual juror” for the last. However, the “natural interpretation,” Mills, 486 U.S. at 381, of the instructions was that the same “you” - the unanimous jury - must make all of these findings.

Just as this Court did in Mills, the Third Circuit noted that Pennsylvania adopted a new uniform sentencing verdict form for capital cases after Mills was decided. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 382 (citing Pa. R. Crim. P. 358 A). “[T]he new form ... makes explicit that unanimity is not required in determining the existence of mitigating circumstances.” Id.

The Pennsylvania Suggested Standard Criminal Jury Instructions were likewise amended in response to Mills and now make clear that the jury needs to be unanimous before finding an aggravating circumstance, but need not be unanimous to consider or find a mitigating circumstance. See id. “[T]hese clarifications highlight the ambiguity at issue in this case.” Id. at 383.

C. The Third Circuit Correctly Found That This Case Is Very Different Than Spisak.

This Court found that the Spisak jury instructions and verdict form did not violate Mills. Mr. Spisak's trial was in Ohio where capital juries find the presence or absence of aggravating factors at the guilt phase. Spisak, 130 S. Ct. at 680, 683.⁵ Thus, after the penalty phase evidence was presented, the legal instructions and form given to *23 the jury were brief. They can be summarized as follows:

1. Oral Instructions:

a. Explanation and examples of mitigating factors;

b. Weighing instruction - aggravating circumstances against mitigating circumstances.

2. Verdict Form:

a. Two forms for each murder count - both solely addressed weighing;

b. One form read, in its entirety: "We the jury in this case ... do find beyond a reasonable doubt that the aggravating circumstances which the defendant ... was found guilty of committing were sufficient to outweigh the mitigating factors present in this case. We the jury recommend that the sentence of death be imposed."

c. The other form read, in its entirety: "We the jury in this case ... do find beyond a reasonable doubt that the aggravating circumstance which the defendant ... was found guilty of committing are not sufficient to outweigh the mitigating factors present in this case. We the jury *24 recommend that the defendant ... be sentenced to life imprisonment."

Id. at 683-84.

Petitioners argue that the weighing instructions in Spisak (2b and 2c above) are virtually identical to the weighing instruction given here⁶ therefore there was no Mills violation in Mr. Abu-Jamal's trial. See Petition at 9. However, this argument completely ignores the additional instructions and language in Mr. Abu-Jamal's verdict form, none of which were present in Spisak. As the Third Circuit recognized, "[b]y contrast with Spisak, the identified language of unanimity here indisputably addresses more than the final balancing of aggravating and mitigating factors." Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 379.

The most significant difference between Abu-Jamal and Spisak is that the Abu-Jamal verdict form contains express unanimity requirements for finding mitigating circumstances, and demands that the jury specify which mitigating circumstances it has unanimously found. See App. 131-32, 134-35. The Spisak form, on the other hand, did not require the jury to make any findings about mitigating circumstances, and certainly did not require the jury to specify what mitigating circumstances were found. See 130 S. Ct. at 684. Instead, the only finding the Spisak form required the jury to make was the ultimate sentence. *Id.*⁷

*25 Petitioners argue that there "is no distinction" between the fact that Mr. Abu-Jamal's jury had to find and report on found mitigating circumstances and the Spisak jury did not because the Spisak jury still had to decide on mitigation. See Petition at 15. This entirely misses the point. The Mills and Abu-Jamal juries (but not the Spisak jury) were required to specify the mitigating circumstances that were found. The Abu-Jamal jury instructions and verdict form that purported to explain how to find, and specify in writing, the proven mitigating circumstances ultimately produced the Mills violation. See supra Section 1, B. Indeed, the format of the Abu-Jamal verdict form made it virtually impossible for the jury to record or communicate mitigation not found unanimously. The Spisak verdict form had no such problem even though the jury in that case considered the question of mitigation.

Abu-Jamal's requirement that the jury specify the found aggravators and mitigators created additional Mills problems. A pervasive feature of the Abu-Jamal verdict form and jury instructions, which contributed to the Third Circuit's conclusion that they violate Mills, is their identical treatment (aside from burden of proof) of aggravating and mitigating circumstances to be found by the jury. The natural conclusion is that, apart from burdens of proof, aggravating and mitigating circumstances should be found in the same way - unanimously. See Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 377.

*26 The Spisak verdict form and jury instructions lacked this similar treatment of aggravating and mitigating factors, mainly because the structure of the Ohio capital sentencing scheme in Spisak rendered any similarities between proof of aggravating and mitigating factors highly unlikely. As explained above, in Spisak - as in every Ohio capital case - the aggravating factors were introduced to and found by the jury at the guilt phase; at capital sentencing, the judge then "instructed the jury that the aggravating factors they would consider were the specifications that the jury had found proved beyond a reasonable doubt at the guilt phase." Spisak, 130 S. Ct. at 683. Because the aggravating factors were found at the guilt phase, the jury had no reason to believe that consideration of mitigating circumstances, which were first introduced at the sentencing phase, had anything in common with the manner in which aggravating factors were proved. The contrast with Abu-Jamal - where aggravating and mitigating circumstances were introduced together at sentencing and treated identically, apart from burden of proof - is profound.

Another important distinction between Spisak and Abu-Jamal is that Mr. Abu-Jamal's verdict form required the signatures of all twelve jurors just below the checklist on which the jury must record its findings of mitigating circumstances. The natural reading of this is that all twelve jurors must agree that a mitigating factor exists, just as all twelve must agree as to the existence of each aggravating factor and the ultimate sentence. See supra Section I. B. 4. This natural reading of the signatures *27 requirement was reinforced by the judge's oral instructions on how to use the form, which expressly connected the signatures requirement with finding mitigating circumstances. See supra Section I. B. 7. Although the Spisak form required the signatures of all twelve jurors, this fact was wholly insignificant because the verdict form did not require the jury to specify what mitigating circumstances were found and the oral instructions did not connect the signatures requirement to finding mitigating circumstances. 130 S. Ct. at 684. As a consequence, signing the Spisak form signified nothing about an individual juror's finding or consideration of mitigation.

Thus, upon remand for consideration of Spisak's impact on its earlier ruling, the Third Circuit correctly noted the many differences between Abu-Jamal and Spisak and properly determined that these differences were crucial to Mr. Abu-Jamal's right to have his sentencing jury consider mitigation.

D. The Third Circuit Correctly Found That the State Court's Ruling Unreasonably Applied Mills.

On remand from this Court, the Third Circuit again found that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court unreasonably applied Mills.⁸ *28 Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 372. This conclusion rested upon two primary factors: (1) the state court failed to evaluate the combined effect of the verdict form and the oral instructions and (2) the state court "conducted an incomplete analysis of only a portion of the verdict form, rather than the entire form." Id. at 381.⁹

1. The state court's exclusive focus on the verdict form was objectively unreasonable.

The Third Circuit recognized that by the time Mr. Abu-Jamal's jury reached the final weighing and verdict stages of its deliberations, the court's oral instructions combined with the verdict form to create a substantial probability that the jury would only weigh mitigating circumstances that were found *29 unanimously. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 381-82. Even if the verdict form's language on weighing, taken in isolation, was proper, by ignoring the impact of the misleading oral instructions and other parts of the form, the state court failed to account for the "effect on the jury of being instructed identically and contemporaneously with respect to the making of individual determinations regarding mitigating and aggravating circumstances." Id. at 381. See supra Section I. B. 7.

Petitioners contend that the Circuit's criticism of the state court's failure to consider the oral jury instructions is unfair because Mr. Abu-Jamal's state post-conviction appeal relied only on the verdict form. Petition at 20. This is untrue. Indeed, the Third Circuit rejected this exact argument and found that Mr. Abu-Jamal's state court pleadings "raised a Mills claim based on both the verdict form and the jury instructions." Abu-Jamal-1, 520 F.3d at 299-300.

2. The state court's Mills analysis was limited to one portion of the verdict form.

The Circuit found the state court's conclusions about the verdict form to be objectively unreasonable because the state court only considered one portion of that form. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 381-82. In Section I. B above, Mr. Abu-Jamal has presented in significant detail the Mills-related problems presented by the verdict form in his trial. Almost none of these problems were addressed by the state court because it did not address the entire the form. For example, the Third Circuit found it objectively *30 unreasonable that the state court failed to "address the likely effect on the jury of having to choose aggravating and mitigating circumstances from visually identical lists and represent its findings as to each in an identical manner." Id. at 382.

Instead, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's decision merely noted that the verdict form "consisted of three pages" and reached a series of conclusions that unreasonably focused on language viewed in isolation from the complete form and the oral instructions. Abu-Jamal-2, 720 A.2d at 119. By ignoring the ways in which the verdict form imposed a "requirement of unanimity," the state court unreasonably applied Mills. See Williams, 529 U.S. at 397-98 (state court decision "unreasonable insofar as it failed to evaluate the totality of" relevant facts).

(a) The state court inaccurately found that the "requirement of unanimity is found only at Page One in the section wherein the jury is to indicate its sentence." Id. In addition to stating "We, the jury unanimously sentence the defendant to death," Page One also states, "We, the jury, have found unanimously ... The aggravating circumstance(s) is/are A. The mitigating circumstance(s) is are A." App. 131-32. Thus, Page One's "requirement of unanimity" expressly applied to the finding of both aggravating and mitigating circumstances.

In addition to the express use of the word "unanimously," the verdict form opens with the requirement that everything on the form be the "find[ings]" of "the jury" that found Mr. Abu-Jamal guilty - i.e., the unanimous jury. This applies to *31 Page One's findings of "mitigating circumstance(s)" and to Page Three's checklist of mitigating circumstances, just as clearly as it applies to Page One's findings of "aggravating circumstance(s)" and Page Two's checklist of aggravating circumstances. Moreover, the verdict form closes with the required signatures of all twelve jurors, reinforcing the opening statement that all findings - including mitigation - must be made unanimously. The state court, however, "never addressed the effect of the lead-in language." Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *126 n.91.

Furthermore, the state court itself observed that Page Three is the "section where the jury is to checkmark those mitigating circumstances found." Abu-Jamal-2, 720 A.2d at 119 (emphasis added). There is a "reasonable likelihood" that the jury understood Page Three in exactly that way - that only mitigating circumstances "found" by "the jury" - not individual jurors - should be checked and considered. In order to read Page Three consistent with Mills, the jury would have to know that each individual juror should check those mitigating circumstances s/he found, even if the other jurors disagreed. To say the least, that is an odd reading of the verdict form. Moreover, since the jury was to turn in one verdict form, not twelve, it would have no way of knowing how to communicate the lack of unanimity for any mitigating factor. In addition, the jury would have had to give this treatment to mitigating circumstances but not aggravating circumstances, despite the fact that aggravating and mitigating circumstances are treated identically on the form.

(d) The state court noted that Pages Two and Three, containing the lists of aggravating and mitigating circumstances, include no printed *33 instructions, Abu-Jamal-2, 720 A.2d at 119, but unreasonably failed to recognize that this contributes to the Mills error. Without instructions accompanying the lists of aggravating and mitigating circumstances, the jury had to look to other parts of the verdict form, the overall structure of the form, and the judge's instructions to understand how to use those lists. As set forth herein, those factors indicated that aggravating and mitigating factors must be unanimously found.

To the extent the signatures "have no explicit correlation to the checklist of mitigating circumstances," exactly the same is true for the checklist of aggravating circumstances and the sentence. To satisfy Mills, the jurors would have to know that signing the form signaled agreement to the sentence entered on Page One and agreement to the findings of aggravating circumstances entered on Page Two, but was meaningless with respect to mitigating circumstances on Page Three - the very page upon which they were to enter their signatures. *34 Nothing in the verdict form or instructions conveyed that illogical concept.

Even if the state court's "reasoning" about the signatures made any sense in isolation, it unreasonably failed to consider the trial judge's oral "explanation of th[e] form". Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *125. As stated above, the oral instructions on how to use Page Three made an "explicit correlation" between the signatures and the mitigating circumstances and, thereby, cemented the Mills-violation that is apparent on the face of the verdict form. The state court unreasonably failed to consider the effect of the oral instructions on the jury's understanding of the form.

(f) The state court's previous approval, in Commonwealth v. Murphy, 657 A.2d 927 (Pa. 1995), of a "verdict slip[] similar to" Mr. Abu-Jamal's does not make its decision reasonable. Abu-Jamal-2, 720 A.2d at 119. The entire discussion of the verdict slip in Murphy is that "the portion of the verdict slip where the jury is to list mitigating circumstances is set apart from sections A and B of the verdict slip which do require a finding of unanimity." 657 A.2d at 936. There is no description of what the Murphy verdict slip actually said.

Petitioners argue that the Circuit's conclusion that the state court unreasonably applied Mills is erroneous because the state court correctly applied Zettlemyer, the Circuit's then-governing Mills precedent. See Petition at 20-26. This is false. Abu-Jamal is as different from Zettlemyer as it is from Spisak.

More significantly, there are vast differences between the verdict forms in Zettlemyer and Abu-Jamal. See Abu-Jamal-3, 2001 WL 1609690, at *126 n.92. Although Petitioners declare that "the most cursory" comparison of the forms show they were "saying exactly the same thing." Petition at 23 (emphasis added), there are substantial differences between the verdict forms in Abu-Jamal and Zettlemyer.

In finding the Zettlemyer verdict form constitutional, the Third Circuit stressed two factors which materially distinguish it from Abu-Jamal.

First, the Zettlemyer form said "We the jury have found unanimously ... The aggravating circumstance is ___," but there was no such language for mitigating circumstances. 923 F.2d at 308. "The absence of a similar instruction for mitigating circumstances indicates that unanimity is not required." Id. In sharp contrast, the Abu-Jamal form contains identical language for aggravating and mitigating circumstances. App. 131-32. Thus, the presence on the Abu-Jamal form of "a similar instruction for mitigating circumstances indicates that unanimity" is required.

*36 Second, on the Zettlemyer verdict form, "the jury was obliged to specify the aggravating circumstance it found," but "it had no such duty with respect to mitigating circumstances, thus suggesting that consideration of mitigating circumstances was broad and unrestricted." 923 F.2d at 308. Again, the Abu-Jamal form is very different - it required the jury to specify both the aggravating and mitigating circumstances it found, with no distinction made between the two. Thus, the Abu-Jamal verdict form required both aggravating and mitigating circumstances be unanimously found.

In short, the Abu-Jamal form suffers from the exact Mills-violating features that the Third Circuit found absent from the Zettlemyer form. Moreover, the Abu-Jamal form requires a unanimous mitigation finding for the additional reasons, see supra Section I. B that also were absent from the Zettlemyer form.

The state court's Mills decision was objectively unreasonable.¹⁰

37 II. This Court Should Deny Certiorari Because Petitioners' Quarrel Is with the Third Circuit's Application of Properly Stated Rules of Law to the Facts of this Case.

Certiorari "is rarely granted when the asserted error consists of ... the misapplication of a properly stated rule of law." Supreme Court Rule 10. Here, the Third Circuit applied "properly stated rule[s] of law" to the facts of this case for both the constitutional merits of the Mills claim and the deference due state court decisions under AEDPA.

It is undisputed that the applicable rule of federal constitutional law is derived from Mills v. Maryland. "in light of Smith v. Spisak." Abu-Jamal-5, 130 S. Ct. at 1134. The Third Circuit expressly recognized that Mills and Spisak set forth the applicable constitutional rule; applied Mills and Spisak to the facts of Mr. Abu-Jamal's case; and applied no other substantive law or lower court interpretations of Mills or Spisak. See supra Section I. A.

It is also undisputed that the applicable rule of deference under AEDPA is 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1), as interpreted by this Court. The Third Circuit expressly recognized that § 2254(d)(1) sets forth the applicable rule of deference; acknowledged this Court's interpretations of § 2254(d)(1) in cases such as Williams, 529 U.S. 362 and Landrigan, 550 U.S. 465; and applied these deferential standards to this case. See supra Section I. A.

Because the Circuit clearly identified and applied the correct rules of constitutional law and § 2254(d) deference, Petitioners' request for certiorari review should be denied.

Wetzel v. Abu-Jamal, 2011 WL 4048834 (2011)

This Court grants certiorari in order to review “question[s] of national importance.” Gruiter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 322 (2003). This is not such a case because the error is unlikely to affect future cases.

For several reasons, very few Pennsylvania capital cases are eligible for Mills relief under Respondent's circumstances:

First, over 22 years ago - in February 1989 - Pennsylvania's courts stopped using the verdict forms and jury instructions now at issue. And, in response to Mills, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court promulgated a new standard verdict form and jury instructions that are Mills-compliant. See Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 382-83.

Second, the applicability of Mills is limited by the anti-retroactivity rule of Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989). Because Mills announced a “new rule,” it is only available to habeas petitioners whose convictions became final after this Court decided Mills on June 6, 1988. Beard v. Banks, 542 U.S. 406 (2004).

Thus, in order for another prisoner to benefit from the Circuit's decision, the case cannot be “too new” - it had to be tried before Mills, or at least before the official change in the verdict form on February 1, 1989. This eliminates every case tried in the last 22 years. At the same time, the case cannot be “too old” - it had to be final after Mills. This also eliminates a significant body of cases.

*39 Third, to benefit from the Circuit's decision a Mills claim must survive all other habeas-related barriers, such as the exhaustion requirement and procedural default rules. Very few cases could survive this filtering and properly present the issues on which Petitioners seek review. Few if any are likely to present themselves to the Third Circuit in the future.

Finally, the limited relevance of Mills error in Pennsylvania is reflected by the decisions of the Third Circuit. Apart from Respondent's case, the Third Circuit has addressed Mills claims in only eight other Pennsylvania capital cases: Zettlemyer, 923 F.2d at 306-08; Frey, 132 F.3d at 920-25; Szuchon v. Lehman, 273 F.3d 299, 320-24 (3d Cir. 2001); Hackett, 381 F.3d 281 (3d Cir. 2004); Albrecht v. Horn, 485 F.3d 103, 116-20 (3d Cir. 2007); Fahy v. Horn, 516 F.3d 169, 175-76 (3d Cir. 2008); Banks v. Horn, No. 99-9005 (3d Cir. Aug. 25, 2004); and Kindler v. Horn, 542 F.3d 70, 80-83 (3d Cir. 2008), vacated and remanded on other grounds, 130 S. Ct. 612 (2009).

In six of these cases - Zettlemyer, Szuchon, Hackett, Albrecht, Fahy, and Banks - the Third Circuit denied relief on the Mills claim. In three of these cases - Banks, Albrecht, and Fahy - the Circuit found that the Mills claim was barred by Teague. In one - Szuchon - the Circuit held that the Mills claim was procedurally defaulted. In two, the Circuit denied the Mills claim on the merits - under pre-AEDPA de novo review in Zettlemyer and under AEDPA's § 2254(d) in Hackett.

*40 In just two of the eight cases, Frey and Kindler, did the Third Circuit grant relief under Mills. In both cases, habeas review was de novo, not under AEDPA's § 2254(d). In Frey, the claim would have been denied under Teague had Petitioners not waived their Teague defense, 132 F.3d at 920 n.4.

Thus, the Third Circuit's Mills decisions highlight the limited availability of Mills relief in Pennsylvania due to the above-described combination of non-retroactivity under Teague, post-Mills changes to Pennsylvania's verdict forms and jury instructions, and other procedural issues. The rulings also show that even when the rare Mills claim survives those obstacles, the Third Circuit takes a nuanced approach that has led to habeas relief in some cases and denial of relief in others. Mr. Abu-Jamal's meritorious Mills claim is, therefore, a rarity even in Pennsylvania, and Mills claims will scarcely ever be presented in future cases. Accordingly, this Court should not waste its rarely granted certiorari jurisdiction on this case.

For the reasons stated herein, certiorari should be denied.

- 1 As detailed in the Procedural History, supra at pp. 2-8, both the District Court and the Third Circuit properly recognized and applied the deferential standard of review set forth by § 2254(d).
- 2 This Court's "GVR" order was what Justice Scalia has suggested "might be called [a] 'no-fault V & R': vacation of a judgment and remand without any determination of error in the judgment below." Stinson v. United States, 516 U.S. 163, 178 (1996) (Scalia, J., dissenting) (emphasis in original); see Gonzalez v. Justices of Man. Ct. of Boston, 420 F.3d 5, 7 (1st Cir. 2005).
- 3 The Third Circuit noted that in Spisak, this Court described the relevant standard to be a "substantial possibility" but concluded that since Mills termed the standard to be "substantial probability," this Court's use of the word, "possibility" was likely inadvertent. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 374 n.3. In Boyle v. California, 494 U.S. 370 (1990), this Court clarified that the relevant legal standard was "whether there is a reasonable likelihood that the jury has applied the challenged instruction in a way that prevents consideration of constitutionally relevant evidence." Id. at 378. The Third Circuit found that a "'substantial probability', is neither more nor less than [the Boyle standard of] a 'reasonable likelihood' " and that it would utilize the "substantial probability" standard to be consistent with Spisak. Abu-Jamal-6, 643 F.3d at 375 n.4.

- 6 This is not entirely true. The word, "unanimous" does not appear on the verdict forms in Spisak.
- 7 While the Spisak form is radically different from the Abu-Jamal form, it is similar to the form in Zettkemoyer v. Fulcomer, 923 F.2d 284 (3d Cir. 1991), which the Third Circuit held did not violate Mills. Id. at 308. See also infra Section I, D, 2.
- 8 Petitioners contend that the Third Circuit's review of the state court's decision should have been "doubly deferential." Petition at 13 (citing Cullen v. Pinholster, 131 S. Ct. 1388, 1403 (2011); Harrington v. Richter, 131 S. Ct. at 770, 788 (2011)). Petitioners are mistaken - the "double deference" requirement governs only claims of ineffective assistance of counsel under Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). See Harrington, 131 S. Ct. at 788; Pinholster at 1410-11. Furthermore, as detailed in the Procedural History and elsewhere above, the Third Circuit, in finding the state court's decision objectively unreasonable, properly identified and applied the deferential standard of review required by § 2254. Thus, Petitioners' assertion that the Circuit failed to accord appropriate deference to the state court decision, Petition at 13-14, 18, 19, 25, 29, is false. In order to accept Petitioners' arguments this Court would have to believe that the deference language repeatedly cited by the Circuit was a smokescreen to hide its bad faith decisionmaking.
- 9 It was also objectively unreasonable and contrary to this Court's precedent for the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to fault Mr. Abu-Jamal for offering "absolutely no evidence in support of this claim at the PCRA hearing." Abu-Jamal-2, 720 A.2d at 119. See Mills, 486 U.S. at 381 ("There is, of course, no extrinsic evidence of what the jury in this case actually thought. We have before us only the verdict form and the judge's instructions."); Kelly v. South Carolina, 534 U.S. 246, 256 (2002). Here, as in Mills and most cases challenging jury instructions, the claim is based upon "the verdict form and the judge's instructions." Mills, 486 U.S. at 381.
- 10 Petitioners contend that Noland v. French, 134 F.3d 208, 213-214 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 851 (1998), supports the state court's decision because it finds that a general unanimity instruction did not cause the jury to believe it had to be unanimous in finding mitigation. Petition at 26. Petitioners are wrong. In Noland, the instructions included an express unanimity requirement for aggravating circumstances (and the sentence), but the word "unanimously" was not used on the verdict form question regarding mitigating circumstances. Thus, Noland does not undermine the Third Circuit's finding here because in Abu-Jamal, no distinction was made between findings of aggravating and mitigating circumstances, and the verdict form required that both be unanimously found.

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF) is a non-profit corporation chartered by the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court as a legal aid society, formed to assist African Americans in securing their rights through the prosecution of lawsuits. The Legal Defense Fund's first Director-Counsel was Thurgood Marshall. LDF has a long-standing concern with the influence of racial discrimination on the criminal justice system in general, and on jury selection in particular. LDF has represented defendants in numerous jury selection cases before this Court including, inter alia, Swain v. Alabama, 380 U.S. 202 (1965), Alexander v. Louisiana 405 U.S. 625 (1972) and Ham v. South Carolina, 409 U.S. 524 (1973); pioneered the affirmative use of civil actions to end jury discrimination in, Carter v. Jury Comm'n of Greene County, 396 U.S. 320 (1970), and Turner v. Fouche, 396 U.S. 346 (1970); and appeared as amicus curiae in Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231 (2005), Johnson v. California, 545 U.S. 162 (2005), Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S.322 (2003), Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986), Edmonson v. Leesville Concrete Co., 500 U.S. 614 (1991), and Georgia v. McCollum, 505 U.S. 42 (1992). In addition to its jury discrimination work in this Court, LDF submitted an amicus brief and presented oral argument in the court below in the instant matter.

¹ Letters of consent by the parties to the filing of this brief have been lodged with the Clerk of this Court. No counsel for any party authored this brief in whole or in part, and no person or entity, other than amicus, made any monetary contribution to its preparation or submission.

Because of its long-standing commitment to the elimination of racial discrimination in the criminal justice system and its experience litigating claims of discrimination in the jury selection process, LDF has an interest in Mr. Abu-Jamal's petition, which presents important issues regarding the application of Batson and its progeny, and believes its perspective would be helpful to this Court in evaluating the claim presented in this case.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Since 1986, this Court has consistently recognized and reinforced the principle that courts must promptly examine and eradicate all founded allegations of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges in order to ensure a fair trial for the accused, to protect prospective jurors from discrimination, and to protect the integrity of the criminal justice system. Specifically, in Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986) and its progeny, this Court has declared that a petitioner claiming discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges should only be subject to a modest initial burden of proof, and that courts evaluating such a claim should consider "all relevant circumstances" suggestive of discrimination. Id. at 96-97. By rigorously enforcing these two core dictates, this Court seeks to ensure that no relevant evidence of discrimination is ignored and that public confidence in the integrity of the criminal justice system is assured. See id. at 86-87; 103.

Amicus respectfully requests that this Court grant review of the decision below affirming the denial of Mumia Abu-Jamal's Batson claim. The Court of Appeals declared that Mr. Abu-Jamal failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination under Batson because he did not offer evidence “comparing the percentage of exercised challenges used against black potential jurors with the percentage of black potential jurors known to be in the venire.” Abu-Jamal v. Horn, 520 F.3d 272, 290 (3d Cir. 2008). In reaching this conclusion, the panel majority rendered irrelevant substantial evidence strongly indicative of discriminatory jury selection presented by Mr. Abu-Jamal.

Consequently, the lower court ruling – which conflicts with decisions of the Courts of Appeals of the Second, Ninth and Eleventh circuits – undermines Batson by elevating the burden of proof to be met by litigants advancing Batson claims, and ignores numerous indicators of discrimination, thereby insulating credible allegations of racial discrimination in jury selection from constitutional scrutiny.

This Court should grant review and reaffirm Batson’s authority as a powerful tool for the eradication of racial discrimination in jury selection.

I. Experience Teaches, and this Court has Held, that a Light Initial Burden of Proof is Necessary to Assure that Jury Selection is not Infected by Racial Discrimination in the Exercise of Peremptory Challenges.

This Court’s rulings appropriately recognize that American juries operate to “safeguard[] a person accused of crime against the arbitrary exercise of power by [a] prosecutor or judge.” Batson, 476 U.S. at 86 (citing Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145, 156 (1968)). Racial discrimination in jury selection diminishes the jury's power to perform this critical function by subjecting a criminal defendant to trial before a biased tribunal and "undermin[ing] public confidence in the fairness of our system of justice." Batson, 476 U.S. at 86-87 (citations omitted); see also Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 238 ("When the government's choice of jurors is tainted with racial bias, that 'overt wrong . . . casts doubt over the obligation of the parties, the jury, and indeed the court to adhere to the law throughout the trial,' . . . 'invites cynicism respecting the jury's neutrality,' and undermines public confidence in adjudication.") (quoting Powers v. Ohio, 499 U.S. 400, 412 (1991)). Discriminatory jury selection also unfairly exposes qualified citizens of color to public exclusion and a "brand" of inferiority. Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U.S. 303, 308 (1880) (explaining that exclusion from jury service "is practically a brand upon [the potential juror], affixed by the law, an assertion of their inferiority, and a stimulant to that race prejudice which is an impediment to securing to individuals of the race that equal justice which the law aims to secure to all others."). For each of these reasons, a prosecutor's exercise of race-based peremptory challenges is pernicious, shameful and repugnant to the very underpinnings of the Constitution in general and the Equal Protection Clause in particular. See Batson, 476 U.S. at 102 (Marshall, J., concurring).

In order to ensure that the criminal justice system is not corrupted by such discrimination, this Court in Batson declared that the use of peremptory challenges to exclude prospective jurors from an individual case because of race is unconstitutional. Specifically, Batson lowered the “crippling,” Batson, 476 U.S. at 92, and “unworkable,” Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 239, threshold burden of proof that had been imposed by this Court’s earlier decision in Swain, supra.² See also Georgia v. McCollum, 505 U.S. 42, 47 (1992) (noting that Batson “discarded Swain’s evidentiary formulation.”). This Court was compelled to act because petitioners claiming discrimination under Swain were overwhelmingly unable to meet its extremely high initial burden and, as a result, the “misuse of the peremptory challenge to exclude black jurors” became “common and flagrant.” Batson, 476 U.S. at 103 (Marshall, J., concurring).

In response, Batson declared “inadequa[te]” “any burden of proof for racially discriminatory use of peremptories that requires that ‘justice . . . sit supinely by’ and be flouted in case after case before a remedy is available.” Id. at 102 (Marshall, J. concurring) (quoting Commonwealth v. Martin, 461 Pa. 289, 299, 336 A.2d 290, 295 (1975) (Nix, J., dissenting)). It rejected the Swain formulation and directed courts confronted with claims of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges to “undertake ‘a sensitive inquiry into such circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be available,” Id. at 93 (quoting Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing Development Corp. 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)) and established the now familiar three-part test:

[f]irst, a defendant must make a prima facie showing that a peremptory challenge has been exercised on the basis of race. Second, if that showing has been made, the prosecution must offer a race-neutral basis for striking the juror in question. Third, in light of the parties’ submissions, the...court must determine whether the defendant has shown purposeful discrimination.

Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 328-29 (citations omitted).

In recognition of the fact that Swain’s insurmountable first step burden had the effect of insulating unlawful discrimination from constitutional scrutiny, the Batson court declared that a petitioner seeking to establish a prima facie case of discrimination need only show that he is a member of a cognizable racial group, [] and that the prosecutor has exercised peremptory challenges to remove from the venire members of the defendant’s race. [T]he defendant is entitled to rely on the fact, as to which there can be no dispute, that peremptory challenges constitute a jury selection practice that permits “those to discriminate who are of a mind to discriminate.” [T]he defendant must show that these facts and any other relevant circumstances raise an inference that the prosecutor used that practice to exclude the veniremen from the petit jury on account of their race.

This Court also made clear that there was no specific formula for establishing a prima facie case:

[i]n deciding whether the defendant has made the requisite showing, the trial court should consider all relevant circumstances. For example, a ‘pattern’ of strikes against black jurors included in the particular venire might give rise to an inference of discrimination. Similarly, the prosecutor’s questions and statements during voir dire examination and in exercising his challenges may support or refute an inference of discriminatory purpose. These examples are merely illustrative.

Batson, at 96-97 (emphasis added).

To make absolutely certain that evidence of discrimination was no longer ignored, the Batson Court repeatedly directed judges evaluating claims of intentional discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges to consider all “circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be available,” Id. at 93 (quoting Arlington Heights, 429 U.S. at 266), and explained that “any ... relevant circumstances [can] raise an inference that the prosecutor used that practice to exclude the veniremen from the petit jury on account of their race.” Batson, 476 U.S. at 96. See also Johnson, 545 U.S. at 172 (“The Batson framework is designed to produce actual answers to suspicions and inferences that discrimination may have infected the jury selection process.”); Abu-Jamal, 520 F.3d at 314 n.44 (Ambro, J., dissenting) (“were we to summarize Batson in layperson’s terms, a defendant needs to raise, based on whatever evidence exists, a reasonable possibility that the prosecutor intended to exclude from the jury but one person because of race.”).

Thus, in order to ensure that unlawful discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges is exposed and eliminated, “all of the circumstances that bear upon the issue of racial animosity must be consulted.” Snyder v. Louisiana, 552 U.S. ___, 128 S.Ct. 1203, 1208 (2008).

II. The Decision Below Inexplicably Departs from This Court’s Teachings and Conflicts with Rulings of Other Courts of Appeal Respecting the Elements of a Prima Facie Case under Batson.

This Court has repeatedly addressed this subject and provided detailed guidance to lower courts about how Batson claims should be analyzed and decided. See, e.g., Snyder, supra; Johnson, supra; Miller-El v. Dretke, supra; Miller-El v. Cockrell, supra. It is ironic, then, that in the ruling below, the panel majority’s opinion retreats from this Court’s directive to undertake a broad review of all circumstances when assessing claims of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges and instead improperly heightens the evidentiary burden on defendants raising such claims. This departure from controlling precedent warrants plenary review by this Court, in order to assure that Batson remains an effective vehicle for uncovering and eradicating racial discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges.

In affirming the District Court's conclusion that Mr. Abu-Jamal failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination under Batson, the panel majority failed to conduct the constitutionally required broad review of all relevant evidence of discrimination. Instead, the Court concluded that Mr. Abu-Jamal's purported failure to proffer "evidence from which to determine the racial composition or total number of the entire venire – facts that would permit the computation of the exclusion rate³ and would provide important contextual markers to evaluate the strike rate"⁴ was, in and of itself, fatal to his effort to set forth a prima facie case of discrimination under Batson. Abu-Jamal, 520 F.3d at 291-292. The panel majority conceded that "[t]here may be instances where a prima facie case can be made without evidence of the strike rate and exclusion rate," but offered no insight into how a petitioner might do so and summarily declared that Mr. Abu-Jamal did not meet this heightened and ambiguous standard. Id. at 292. Indeed, the majority acknowledged only in passing the non-statistical evidence of discriminatory intent that was presented by Mr. Abu-Jamal. Id. at 291 n.17.⁵ By focusing solely on the exclusion rate and by giving Mr. Abu-Jamal's abundant evidence of discriminatory intent only " cursory consideration," the Court "misapplie[d] Batson, ... [by] fail[ing] to 'consider all relevant circumstances' of [the] case" and elevating Batson's Step One burden. Abu-Jamal, 520 F.3d at 319 (Ambro, J., dissenting).

The Third Circuit's declaration that exclusion rate evidence is a necessary component of Batson's prima facie case requirement reveals a fatal misunderstanding of the history and purpose of the Batson Step One burden. Batson recognized that Swain's flawed and singular focus on systemic statistical evidence impeded the identification and eradication of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges and contributed to public mistrust in the administration of justice. It therefore required courts to conduct a complete assessment of evidence of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges and acknowledged that a single strike, accompanied by such evidence, can sustain the prima facie case threshold. Batson, 476 U.S. at 99 n.22.

The decision below directly contradicts Batson and threatens to dramatically reduce the pool of cases eligible for judicial review from those that raise an inference of discrimination based on any and all relevant circumstances to those that do so based on "exclusion rate" evidence. By leaving those cases that present credible and compelling non-statistical evidence of discrimination beyond the reach of the courts, the Third Circuit leaves serious questions about the fairness of the criminal justice system unanswered. In so doing, that court "invites cynicism respecting the jury's neutrality," and undermines public confidence in adjudication." Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 238 (quoting Powers, 499 U.S. at 412).

This elevation of statistical analysis above any other evidence of discrimination not only conflicts with Batson's goals, it also contradicts its express terms. Batson clearly indicates that a pattern of strikes and the prosecutor's questions and statements may establish a prima facie case of discrimination. Batson, 476 U.S. at 96-97. The ruling below that “exclusion rate” evidence is an indispensable component of a prima facie case fails to give effect to this guidance. Additionally, Batson expressly suggested that a finding of intentional discrimination would be proper even if based on the exclusion of a single prospective juror. Batson, 476 U.S. at 99 n.22. It is entirely unclear how one discriminatory peremptory challenge could be exposed and corrected under the logic of the panel majority in this case.

It is for these reasons that several other Courts of Appeals have rejected the suggestion that statistical evidence such as “exclusion rate” is a necessary component of a Batson prima facie case. See Tankleff v. Senkowski, 135 F.3d 235, 249 (2d Cir. 1998); Turner v. Marshall, 63 F.3d 807, 812 (9th Cir. 1995); United States v. Horsley, 864 F.2d 1543, 1546 (11th Cir. 1989) (per curiam).

This Court should grant review to resolve this conflict among the Circuits and to insure the integrity of its consistent jurisprudence applying the bedrock ruling in Batson.

CONCLUSION

Amicus respectfully urges this Court to affirm Batson’s dictate that petitioners seeking to prove racial discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges must face a modest threshold burden of proof, and that courts considering such challenges must consider “all relevant evidence” of discrimination.

STATEMENT OF COUNSEL UNDER FRAP 35(b)(1) AND LAR 35.1

I express my belief, based upon reasoned and studied professional judgment, that the Panel Majority's ruling conflicts with Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986) and its progeny, by contradicting Batson's dictate that courts reviewing claims of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges consider "all relevant circumstances," by undermining Batson's conclusion that one discriminatory strike violates the Constitution, by failing to offer any recourse for compelling evidence of discrimination, and by improperly elevating Batson's prima facie case burden. I also express my belief, based upon reasoned and studied professional judgment, that this case involves questions of exceptional importance, and that consideration by the full Court is necessary to secure uniformity of this Circuit's decisions.

Brief of Amicus Curiae The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., In Support of Appellant Seeking Reversal, In Part, of the District Court's Order 4

A divided panel of this Circuit has affirmed the District Court's partial denial of habeas relief in this capital case. Abu-Jamal v. Horn, 520 F.3d 272 (3d Cir. 2008). Amicus Curiae respectfully submits this brief in support of Mr. Abu-Jamal's Petition for Panel Rehearing and Suggestion for Rehearing En Banc. For the reasons stated in Mr. Abu-Jamal's submission and herein, rehearing should be allowed.¹

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF) is a non-profit corporation formed to assist African Americans in securing their rights through in-court litigation. LDF has a long-standing concern with the influence of racial discrimination on the criminal justice system in general, and on jury selection in particular. We therefore represented the defendants in, inter alia, Swain v. Alabama, 380 U.S. 202 (1965), Alexander v. Louisiana, 405 U.S. 625 (1972) and *Ham v. In addition to our jury discrimination work in the United States Supreme Court, LDF was counsel of record in Wilson v. Beard, 426 F.3d 653 (3d Cir. 2005) and submitted an amicus brief and presented oral argument before the three-judge Panel in the instant matter. Given its expertise, LDF believes its perspective would be helpful to this Circuit in resolving the issues presented in this case.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In 1982, Mumia Abu-Jamal was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to death by a jury for the shooting death of a police officer in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Mr. Abu-Jamal is entitled to an evidentiary hearing on his claim of discriminatory jury selection because he has “produc[ed] evidence sufficient to permit the [court] to draw an inference” that the trial prosecutor intentionally used his peremptory challenges to exclude prospective jurors of color. Johnson, 545 U.S. at 170. See Panel Dissent Op. at 318. In rejecting Mr. Abu-Jamal’s claim, the Panel Majority undermined the purpose and intent of Batson v. Kentucky by marginalizing relevant and credible evidence of discrimination and thereby allowing apparent discrimination to go unchecked.

Mr. Abu-Jamal has presented substantial evidence indicating that his trial prosecutor intentionally used his peremptory challenges to exclude prospective jurors of color. Specifically, Mr. Abu-Jamal has asserted that he “is black, and therefore ‘a member of a cognizable racial group;’” “that the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges against black prospective jurors;” and that “‘peremptory challenges constitute a jury selection practice that permits those to discriminate who are of a mind to discriminate.’” Panel Dissent Op. at 315-316 (quoting Batson, 476 U.S. at 96).

Mr. Abu-Jamal has also established that “the prosecutor exercised 15 peremptory strikes, 10 of which were used to remove black venirepersons. That means that the ‘strike rate’ for blacks was 66.67%. As the Supreme Court has noted, ‘[h]appenance is unlikely to produce this disparity.’” Panel Dissent at 316 (citing Commonwealth v. Abu-Jamal, No. 1357, 1995 WL 1315980, at *103 (C.P.Ct.Phila.Cty. Sept. 15, 1995); quoting Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 342)).

Mr. Abu-Jamal has additionally demonstrated that “this was a racially charged case,² involving a black defendant and a white victim;” that “[Mr.] Abu-Jamal was a member of the Black Panther Party;" that "he was charged with killing a police officer;" and that "this is a capital case." Panel Dissent Op. at 318-319.

Finally, Mr. Abu-Jamal has shown that the trial prosecutor's pattern of striking prospective jurors of color was consistent with that of prosecutors around the country before Batson,³ was reflective of the common practices of the Philadelphia County outlets and/or focused on African-American issues; Mr. Abu-Jamal wore his hair in dreadlocks; Mr. Abu-Jamal demonstrated interest in and/or involvement with the Rastafarian religious-cultural movement; Mr. Abu-Jamal was born Wesley Cook but changed his name; prior to his arrest, Mr. Abu-Jamal made public statements regarding the rights and experiences of African Americans; African-American organizations established and/or supported a defense fund for Mr. Abu-Jamal; and members of the Philadelphia-based, African-American organization, MOVE, attended the court proceedings and supported Mr. Abu-Jamal's defense. See Brief of Amicus Curiae The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., In Support of Appellant Seeking Reversal, In Part, of the District Court's Order at 12-16 (citations omitted).

District Attorney's Office,⁴ and was expressly authorized by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. See Commonwealth v. Henderson, 438 A.2d 951, 953 (Pa. 1981).

Although this combination of evidence amply "clear[s] the low prima facie hurdle of the Batson analysis," Panel Dissent Op. at 317, the Panel Majority concluded that Mr. Abu-Jamal could not set forth a prima facie case of discrimination absent documentation of the "exclusion rate" – a "compari[son of] the percentage of exercised challenges used against black potential jurors with the percentage of black potential jurors known to be in the venire." Panel Majority Op. at 290. The Panel Majority reached this conclusion despite the fact that that Batson's prima facie case burden is low, that Batson directs courts confronted with claims of discriminatory exercise of peremptory challenges to consider "all relevant circumstances,” Batson, 476 U.S. at 96, that this Circuit has previously declared that “Batson does not place the burden on the petitioner to develop a full statistical accounting” at the prima facie case stage, and that this Circuit “ha[s] relied on the strike rate alone despite the absence of other contextual markers” in finding Batson error. Panel Dissent Op. at 317, 318.

The Panel Majority summarily dismissed Mr. Abu-Jamal’s substantial evidence of intentional discrimination with a conclusory footnote declaring that “Abu-Jamal has not demonstrated that these allegations make the Pennsylvania Supreme Court’s decision objectively unreasonable.” Panel Majority at 291 n.17. By focusing solely on exclusion rate and by giving Mr. Abu-Jamal’s abundant evidence of discriminatory intent only “cursory consideration,” the Panel Majority “misapplie[d] Batson, ... [by] fail[ing] to ‘consider all relevant circumstances’ of [the] case.” Panel Dissent Op. at 319.

Amicus believes that rehearing is warranted because the Panel Majority’s decision undermines and contradicts Batson.

Batson's Low Prima Facie Case Burden Can Be Met By Relying on "All Relevant Circumstances"

As detailed in LDF's prior amicus brief in this matter, the Supreme Court developed the Batson test to lower the "crippling," Batson, 476 U.S. at 92, and "unworkable," Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 239, burden of proof that was imposed by Swain v. Alabama.⁵ Because defendants alleging discrimination in jury selection were overwhelmingly unable to meet Swain's extremely high threshold burden of proof, the "misuse of the peremptory challenge to exclude black jurors" became "common and flagrant." Batson, 476 U.S. at 103 (Marshall, J. concurring).

In order to curb these abuses, the Batson Court declared "inadequa[te]" "any burden of proof for racially discriminatory use of peremptories that requires that 'justice ... sit supinely by' and be flouted in case after case before a remedy is available." Id., 476 U.S. at 102 (Marshall, J. concurring) (quoting Commonwealth v. Martin, 461 Pa. 289, 299 (1975) (Nix, J., dissenting)). Instead, Batson declared that courts confronted with claims of discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges, “must undertake ‘a sensitive inquiry into such circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be available.’” Id., 476 U.S. at 93 (quoting Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., 429 U.S. 252, 266 (1977)). It therefore announced the now familiar three-part test: first a defendant must set forth a prima facie case of discrimination; second, if the defendant meets his burden, the prosecutor must offer race-neutral reason(s) for the challenged strike(s); third, the court must determine whether the defendant has proven intentional discrimination. See Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 328-29 (citations omitted).

In order to ensure that its test did not suffer from the infirmities of Swain, the Batson Court made clear that petitioners claiming discrimination could not be saddled with a heavy evidentiary burden. See, e.g., Johnson, 545 U.S. at 170. Thus, the Court declared that to set forth a prima facie case of discrimination, a petitioner need only show that he is a member of a cognizable racial group, and that the prosecutor has exercised peremptory challenges to remove from the venire members of the defendant’s race. Second, the defendant is entitled to rely on the fact, as to which there can be no dispute, that peremptory challenges constitute a jury selection practice that permits “those to discriminate who are of a mind to discriminate.” Finally, the defendant must show that these facts and any other relevant circumstances raise an inference that the prosecutor used that practice to exclude the veniremen from the petit jury on account of their race.

Batson, 476 U.S. at 96 (quoting Avery v. Georgia, 345 U.S. 559, 562 (1953) (internal citations omitted)). The Court also made clear that there is no specific formula required for establishing a prima facie case:

[i]n deciding whether the defendant has made the requisite showing, the trial court should consider all relevant circumstances. For example, a 'pattern' of strikes against black jurors included in the particular venire might give rise to an inference of discrimination. Similarly, the prosecutor's questions and statements during voir dire examination and in exercising his challenges may support or refute an inference of discriminatory purpose. These examples are merely illustrative.

Batson, 476 U.S. at 96-97. See also Panel Dissent at 314 n.44. Thus, "in considering a Batson objection, or in reviewing a ruling claimed to be Batson error, all of the circumstances that bear upon the issue of racial animosity must be consulted." Snyder v. Louisiana, 128 S.Ct. 1203, 1208 (2008) (citing Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 239).

Consistent with this clear dictate, this Circuit has repeatedly rejected interpretations of Batson that place an undue burden on petitioners claiming discrimination in the exercise of peremptory challenges and has found that a variety of factors can satisfy Batson's prima facie case burden. This Circuit has stated that "the question whether a prima facie case has been established must be judged based on all relevant circumstances; no rigid test need be satisfied; and in some cases, a prima facie case may be made out based on a single factor." Brinson v. Vaughn, 398 F.3d 225, 235 (3d Cir. 2005) (granting Batson relief and finding that a "stark pattern" of peremptory challenges against black potential jurors was, in and of itself, “more than sufficient” to satisfy the prima facie case burden).⁶

This Circuit has also recognized that “there is no ‘magic number or percentage [necessary] to trigger a Batson inquiry,’ and that ‘Batson does not require that the government adhere to a specific mathematical formula in the exercise of peremptory challenges.” Panel Dissent at 314-315 (quoting Clemons, 843 F.2d at 746). More specifically, this Circuit has declared that “[n]otably absent from the... prima facie case is any call for trial judges to seek ... [a] statistical accounting [of the race of the jury venire]” and that “requiring the presentation of such a record simply to move past the first stage in the Batson analysis places an undue burden upon the defendant.” Holloway v. Horn, 355 F.3d 707, 728 (3d Cir. 2004) (finding a prima facie case based solely on a pattern of strikes and noting that “a defendant’s Batson objection ... can be based, for example, on a single strike accompanied by a showing that the prosecutor’s statements . . . support an inference of discrimination.”).

Thus, both the Supreme Court and this Circuit have made clear that Batson’s prima facie case burden is (and must be) low and can be satisfied through the presentation of “all relevant circumstances.” Batson, 476 U.S. at 96.

The Panel Majority’s Determination that a Prima Facie Case Requires “Exclusion Rate” Evidence Conflicts with Batson and Improperly Elevates the Step One Burden

The Panel Majority’s pronouncement that “exclusion rate” evidence is a necessary component of a prima facie case contradicts Batson’s dictate to consider “all relevant circumstances” and its conclusion that one discriminatory strike violates the Constitution. It also undermines the intent of Batson by offering no recourse for cases presenting compelling evidence of discrimination. Because the Panel Majority has established a “burden of proof for racially discriminatory use of peremptories that requires that ‘justice ... sit supinely by’ and be flouted ... before a remedy is available,” Batson, 476 U.S. at 102 (Marshall, J. concurring), this Court should grant rehearing and reverse.

First, the Panel Majority’s declaration that Mr. Abu-Jamal cannot set forth a prima facie case of discrimination absent “exclusion rate” evidence flies in the face of Batson's express direction that courts should consider "any ... relevant circumstances" that raise an inference of discrimination, Batson, 476 U.S. at 96, and that "a 'pattern' of strikes against black jurors" as well as "the prosecutors questions and statements during voir dire examination and in exercising his challenges" can support a prima facie case of discrimination. Batson, 476 U.S. at 97. See also Snyder, 128 S.Ct. at 1208.

It also ignores the fact that both the Supreme Court and this Circuit have relied on a variety of factors – including the tracking of race by the trial prosecutor, a history of discrimination by the individual prosecutor and/or the prosecutor's office, jury shuffling, and comparative juror analysis – in evaluating Batson claims (and finding Batson violations) and the fact that neither court has suggested that any one particular category of evidence is required to successfully establish a prima facie case of discrimination. See, e.g., Snyder, 128 S.Ct. at 1211; Miller-El, 545 U.S. at 253-254, 263-264; Wilson 426 F.3d at 653; Brinson 398 F.3d at 225.

Thus, the Panel Majority's declaration that "exclusion rate" evidence is a necessary component of a prima facie case simply lacks constitutional support or circuit authority. With this decision, the Panel Majority subverts Batson by marginalizing evidence that the Supreme Court and this Circuit have expressly deemed to be relevant to the prima facie case assessment.

Second, by singling-out “exclusion rate” evidence and devaluing all other evidence of discrimination, the Panel Majority allows powerful indicators of racial discrimination to go unchecked and improperly raises Batson’s prima facie case burden. See, e.g., Johnson, 545 U.S. at 172 (“The Batson framework is designed to produce actual answers to suspicions and inferences that discrimination may have infected the jury selection process. The inherent uncertainty present in inquiries of discriminatory purpose counsels against engaging in needless and imperfect speculation when a direct answer can be obtained by asking a simple question.”).

As noted above, Batson’s initial burden of proof was intentionally set low because the imposition of a high standard allowed racial discrimination in jury selection to proliferate. Batson, 476 U.S. at 92-93. The Panel Majority’s finding that without the “exclusion rate,” the evidence upon which Mr. Abu-Jamal relied in order to establish an inference of discrimination – his own race (African-American), the race of the victim (white), the pattern of strikes against prospective jurors of color (10/15), Mr. Abu-Jamal’s membership in the Black Panther Party, the fact that the decedent was a police officer, the fact that Mr. Abu-Jamal faced the death penalty, the fact that the trial prosecutor’s pattern of striking prospective jurors of color was consistent with that of prosecutors around the country before Batson, the fact that the trial prosecutor’s pattern of striking prospective jurors of color was reflective of the common practices of the Philadelphia County District Attorney's Office, and the fact that the Pennsylvania Supreme Court expressly authorized the use of race-based peremptory challenges – was insufficient to meet the prima facie case threshold unquestionably elevates Batson's Step One burden because this Circuit has previously found error in cases presenting substantially less evidence of discrimination. See, e.g., Simmons, supra. By raising the bar in this way, the Panel Majority improperly insulates suspicious peremptory challenges from constitutional scrutiny.

Although the Panel Majority suggests that “there may be instances where a prima facie case can be made without evidence of the strike rate and exclusion rate,” Panel Majority at 292, its failure to articulate a method for determining which cases or combinations of facts overcome this vague hurdle renders the existence of this supposed gateway meaningless. The fact that Mr. Abu-Jamal's case – which, as previously noted, is replete with serious indicators of discriminatory intent – apparently fails to meet this unknown standard makes clear the extent to which the Panel Majority has raised the prima facie case bar and demonstrates that few cases will meet it.

Finally, the Panel Majority's single-minded focus on “exclusion rate” ignores the fact that Batson can be violated with a single strike. Batson, 476 U.S. at 99 n.22.

See also Snyder, 128 S.Ct. at 1208 (citing, inter alia, United States v. Vasquez-Lopez, 22 F.3d 900, 902 (9th Cir. 1994); Clemons, 843 F.2d at 747). Under the Panel Majority's interpretation, there can be no meaningful recourse for a single discriminatory peremptory challenge.

CONCLUSION

En banc and panel rehearing are appropriate for the reasons stated herein and in Mr. Abu-Jamal's submission to this Circuit.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Follow-up Questions for the Record
Debo P. Adegbile
Nominee, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

1. You provided identical, non-responses answers to Questions 2(a)-(d). Instead of stating whether, if confirmed, you will implement the recommendations made in the 2013 Inspector General's Report, you state that you will assess "current hiring practices" in the Civil Rights Division. Please indicate whether you intend, if confirmed, to implement the recommendations made in the 2013 Inspector General's Report. If you will not commit to implementing them, explain why with respect to each recommendation enumerated in Questions 2(a)-(d).

ANSWER: In further response, if confirmed, I would expect position announcements to focus on skills, experience and duties, consistent with federal civil service laws, and I would commit to undertake a review of the Division's hiring practices, and to carefully consider the 2013 Inspector General's Report together with all other relevant internal DOJ considerations. I note that because I am not currently at the Department, I do not have a comprehensive understanding of the Division's current hiring practices and the extent to which the recommendations made in the 2013 Inspector General's Report already may have been implemented or considered. I believe it would be appropriate, if confirmed, for me to first make a careful assessment of existing hiring practices and procedures before making decisions or commitments about how job announcements will be drafted in the future.

2. In each of your responses to Questions 2(a)-(d) you repeat your intention to "ensure a strong and broad pool of candidates." What does the term "broad" mean in the context in which you used it?

ANSWER: I understand "broad" in this context to embrace efforts to cast the net widely so as to reach and encourage applications from qualified potential candidates with a range of backgrounds, skills, and prior work experience relevant to a particular position.

3. Will you commit to ensuring that the Civil Rights Division hires a strong and ideologically diverse pool of candidates and work to eliminate hiring practices in the Division that the Inspector General found "resulted in a pool of select candidates that was overwhelmingly Democratic/liberal in affiliation?"

ANSWER: As I have stated previously, if confirmed, I will assess the Division's current hiring policies and practices, and, consistent with applicable laws and policies, determine if any additional modifications are appropriate to ensure a broad and strong pool of candidates for any open positions. It is my understanding, however, that federal civil service laws require that hiring be based on merit and prohibit the consideration of political affiliation in making hiring decisions for career positions.

4. In your response to Question 6a, you cite a passage from Miller-El in which Justice Breyer describes “Justice Marshall’s concerns” that Batson’s burden-shifting framework was insufficiently effective at eliminating race discrimination in jury selection. As the passage indicates, Justice Marshall advocated abolition of peremptory strikes altogether. Considering that you cite to the passage that explains Justice Marshall’s position in your answer, do you agree that Batson’s burden-shifting framework is insufficient at preventing discriminatory strikes against racial minorities?

ANSWER: The Batson burden-shifting standard is binding precedent. I have not had the opportunity to make a detailed study of the complex criminal procedure question about whether the Batson burden-shifting framework is sufficient beyond the applicable precedents.

5. Do you agree with Justice Marshall’s position that peremptory strikes should be eliminated?

ANSWER: Justice Marshall’s view in Batson did not prevail. Peremptory strikes remain permissible provided that they are exercised within constitutional limits. I have not had the opportunity to make a detailed study of this complex criminal procedure question beyond the applicable precedents.

6. In your response to Question 6c, you state that your former client, Mumia Abu-Jamal, presented “probative” Batson evidence that was rejected by the courts. Please indicate whether you still believe that the jury-selection process in Mr. Abu-Jamal’s trial was characterized by “flagrant[ly]” racially discriminatory conduct by the prosecutor.

ANSWER: I filed a number of briefs as an attorney at NAACP LDF on behalf of various clients or on behalf of my former employer. In some of those cases my client or employer’s side prevailed; in some the opposing party prevailed. However, the positions articulated in each of these briefs should not be reflexively equated with statements of the personal views of the filing counsel. That said, the probative evidence of Batson violations offered in LDF’s filings speaks for itself. As I have noted, however, the courts rejected the Batson claim in the case.

7. You did not answer Question 7(b). Instead, your answer summarizes Batson’s burden-shifting framework but fails to address the sufficiency issue. Please state whether you consider a bare allegation of a “culture of discrimination” to be sufficient to support a prima facie showing under Batson’s first step.

ANSWER: In further response to this question as posed: No, a bare allegation would be insufficient under Supreme Court precedent.

8. Your response to Question 13 cites only the single example of applying strict scrutiny to governmental decisions that confer benefits to individuals based on race. Please specifically state under what circumstances – in addition to government decisions to confer race-based benefits – you believe that governmental use of racial preferences would fall short of the strict-scrutiny standard of review.

ANSWER: Although this does not purport to be an exhaustive list, the Supreme Court has held that race conscious decision-making or racial classifications failed strict scrutiny in the following circumstances: Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1 (1967) (interracial marriage); Regents of University of California v. Bakke, 482 U.S. 265 (1978) (medical school admissions); Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79 (1986) (juror strikes); Richmond v. J.A. Croson Co., 488 U.S. 469 (1989) (municipal contracting); Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900 (1995) (redistricting); Gratz v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 244 (2003) (college admissions); Parents Involved in Seattle School District v. Seattle School District No. 1, 551 U.S. 701 (2007) (K-12 school assignments).

9. Your response to Question 14 cites a single example from Ricci v. DeStefano. Please identify under what circumstances – in addition to the case you cite – you believe that race preferences violate Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

ANSWER: Employers' affirmative action programs that consider race or sex for the purposes of remedying the underrepresentation of minorities or women in traditionally segregated job categories violate Title VII if they do not meet the standard set forth in Johnson v. Transportation Agency, Santa Clara County, 480 U.S. 616 (1987).

10. Your response to Question 15 summarizes the holding of Grutter v. Bollinger, but fails to answer the question. Is it your view that consideration of racial membership and economic status are valid criteria in determining whether to give college applicants special consideration?

ANSWER: In further response to this question, the Supreme Court has determined that the educational benefits of diversity constitute a compelling governmental interest sufficient to justify a narrowly tailored race conscious college admissions policy, and many higher educational institutions and scholars have determined that efforts to encourage diversity are pedagogically valid. I am not aware of a Supreme Court case on the issue of economic status in context of higher education but believe that many higher education institutions and scholars recognize the value of socio-economic diversity and access to colleges and universities as a positive contributor to employability and upward mobility.

ANSWER: Time and the real world circumstances within higher educational institutions will be the best determinants of Justice O'Connor's prediction. I do not believe that the answer is knowable at present, which is perhaps why Justice O'Connor reflected upon her statement from Grutter in this way in a subsequent essay: "That 25-year expectation is, of course, far from binding on any justices who may be responsible for entertaining a challenge to an affirmative-action program in 2028.” The Justice further recognized that a future Court will be called upon to “apply[] abstract constitutional principles to concrete educational endeavors.”

12. In your response to Question 16, you state your belief “that stereotyping is unfair and counterproductive,” but you fail to answer the question. Under what circumstances do you believe ethnic profiling in the context of the War on Terrorism is unconstitutional?

ANSWER: As I have explained, it is vital that we ensure our nation’s security consistent with the Constitution. Because I am not at the Department, however, and have not worked in the area of national security, I am not familiar with the details of applicable federal policies or the various circumstances in which those policies are applied. As a general matter, stereotypes used in place of indicia of reasonable suspicion do not aid law enforcement efforts, but instead tend to erode trust between the law enforcement officials and the communities they work tirelessly to protect.

13. You respond to Question 18 by indicating that you “do not read Rothe as a blanket prohibition on such programs if there is sufficient, methodologically valid evidence set before Congress,” but you do not answer the question. Will you urge the federal government to end the use of preferences based on race, ethnicity, and sex in its contracting practices?

ANSWER: These programs are contemplated by federal statutes, duly passed by Congress. Accordingly, I will follow the applicable precedents, including Adarand, with respect to such programs.

14. Do you share the Federal Circuit’s view, enumerated in Rothe, that a preferential contracting program is unconstitutional if Congress lacked a strong basis in evidence that previous discrimination justified the program?

ANSWER: I accept the Federal Circuit’s ruling in Rothe where it concluded that a contracting program that assists minority-owned small businesses requires Congress to have a strong basis in evidence “to conclude that remedial action is necessary.” 545 F.3d 1023 at 1036 (quoting Croson). One of the ways this may be shown is through evidence that the entity was a passive participant in racial discrimination. I accept the Federal Circuit’s ruling in Rothe where it concluded that a contracting program that assists minority-owned small businesses requires Congress to have a strong basis in evidence “to conclude that remedial action is necessary.” Rothe at 1036 (quoting Croson). Under the decision, one must have a strong basis either in previous discrimination or passive participation in discrimination. In Rothe, the Federal Circuit held that neither of these criteria had been met.

15. Do you believe that any remedial program for which Congress lacks a strong basis in evidence for the necessity of remedial action can be constitutional?

ANSWER: To the extent that this question relates, like the prior two questions, to the contracting context, “the strong basis” in evidence standard controls.

16. Your response to Question 19 addresses the selection of individuals based on race, but does not address the constitutionality of maintaining race-based scholarships and other benefits. Do you believe that the Constitution permits public universities to maintain racially exclusive internships, scholarships, or summer programs?

ANSWER: The Supreme Court has made clear that strict scrutiny applies to governmental decisions that select applicants based on race. This standard would apply to admissions as well as to the maintenance of internships, scholarships, or summer programs that are race conscious as well.

17. In your answer to Question 20, you state that you are unaware of the “details of this litigation.” The litigation referenced in Question 20 refers to a complaint the Department of Justice filed on February 8, 2006, in the District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, Benton Division, in which the Department alleged that Southern Illinois University maintained paid fellowships that established quotas on the basis of race, national origin, or sex. Will you continue to pursue litigation against public universities that maintain such fellowships, irrespective of the race of the beneficiaries of the fellowships?

ANSWER: Determinations about future litigation by the Department would be made based upon an assessment of the facts and the law in specific circumstances. If confirmed, I will apply the facts to the applicable law in evaluating such fellowship programs without regard to the race of the beneficiaries.

18. Your response to Question 23 says that you “would act in the best interests of the United States.” Do you regard the continued application of the disparate-impact theory by the federal courts to be “in the best interests of the United States”?

ANSWER: Congress has determined that the disparate impact framework was in the best interests of the United States in enacting Title VII, as amended, for example.

19. Your response to Question 26(a) states that the “congressional record... supports [your] quotes.” Given your belief that Congress had a sufficient evidentiary basis to justify the 2006 reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act, do you believe that the Supreme Court wrongly decided Shelby County v. Holder when it held that “[t]here is no valid reason to insulate the coverage formula from review merely because it was previously enacted 40 years ago. If Congress had started from scratch in 2006, it plainly could not have enacted the present coverage formula. It would have been irrational for Congress to distinguish between States in such a fundamental way based on 40-year-old data, when today’s statistics tell an entirely different story. And it would have been irrational to base coverage on the use of voting tests 40 years ago, when such tests have been illegal since that time. But that is exactly what Congress has done.” Shelby County, Ala. v. Holder, 133 S.Ct. 2612, 2630-31 (2013).

ANSWER: The Supreme Court held that Section 4(b) of the Voting Rights Act was invalid as a coverage formula for the preclearance regime, and that ruling is binding. I will accord the ruling the respect due to every constitutional ruling of the Supreme Court.

20. Your answer to Question 26(d) is not responsive. You previously stated that racial discrimination in voting poses a “unique threat to our democracy.” What steps will you take, if confirmed, to combat the “unique threat” you identify?

ANSWER: In further response, I note that more than one hundred years ago the Supreme Court recognized that voting is a “fundamental political right, because preservative of all rights.” Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356 (1886). Similarly, in Wesberry v. Sanders, 376 U.S. 1, 14 (1964), the Court explained: “No right is more precious in a free country than that of having a voice in the election of those who make the laws under which, as good citizens, we must live. Other rights, even the most basic, are illusory if the right to vote is undermined. Our Constitution leaves no room for classification of people in a way that unnecessarily abridges this right.” In Reynolds v. Sims, the Court stated: “the right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil and political rights, any alleged infringement of the right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.” 377 U.S. 533 (1964). And in South Carolina v. Katzenbach, 383 U.S. 301 (1966), the Court declared that “[t]he Voting Rights Act was designed by Congress to banish the blight of racial discrimination in voting, which has infected the electoral process in parts of our country for nearly a century.” The Court noted further that “[a]fter enduring nearly a century of systematic resistance to the 15th Amendment, Congress might well decide to shift the advantage of time and inertia from the perpetrators of the evil to its victims.” Separately and together, these words from Supreme Court opinions illustrate that abridgements or denials of the right to vote pose a unique threat. In the face of this threat where it exists, the Division must use its enforcement authority. Accordingly, if confirmed, I will enforce the laws within the Civil Rights Division’s authority that protect voters against discrimination.

21. In your view, does the “unique[ness]” of the “threat to democracy” that you previously identified depend on the race of the victim of racial discrimination?

ANSWER: Although voting discrimination historically has been targeted largely against particular groups, the unique injury associated with voting-related violations is not limited to racial discrimination claims or to claims by members of any particular race or ethnicity.

22. Your answer to Question 29 is not responsive and does not indicate whether you believe that a voter ID requirement is the equivalent of a poll tax. Please indicate whether this is your view.

ANSWER: I note that it is certainly true that not all voter ID requirements could properly be characterized as the equivalent of a poll tax. As I previously explained, under Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1973, courts ask whether “based on the totality of circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a class of citizens protected by [the Act] . . . in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” Thus, it is difficult to provide categorical guidance regarding the content of a particular law without examining how the law would operate in a particular jurisdiction.

23. Do you share the opinion of Deputy Assistant Attorney General for Voting Rights, Pamela S. Karlan, that poll-tax cases “parallel voter identification cases in that, as a technical matter, voters were being required to present a government-issued document – namely, a poll tax receipt – in order to vote?”

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the context of Ms. Karlan’s quote excerpted above. My understanding is that the thrust of poll tax claims is that a fee has been required in order to vote.

24. Do you share Attorney General Holder’s view, expressed at a 2012 NAACP Convention in Houston, that Texas’s voter ID requirement is the modern-day equivalent of a poll tax?

ANSWER: It would not be appropriate for me to comment on ongoing litigation in Texas. More generally, some have drawn a parallel because various voter ID requirements impose direct or indirect costs associated with compliance that exceed, in today’s dollars, the amount of the poll tax invalidated in Harper v. Virginia State Board of Elections, 383 U.S. 663 (1966) (invalidating $1.50 poll tax and concluding: “Wealth, like race, creed, or color, is not germane to one’s ability to participate intelligently in the electoral process... To introduce wealth or payment of a fee as a measure of one’s voter qualifications is to introduce a capricious or irrelevant factor. In this context—that is, as a condition of obtaining a ballot—the requirement of fee paying causes an ‘invidious’ discrimination that runs afoul of the Equal Protection Clause.”)

25. Your answer to Question 33 is not responsive. Please enumerate the specific “substantive or procedural protections” that in your view, if violated, would render imposition of the death penalty unconstitutional.

ANSWER: In further response I note that the Supreme Court has invalidated death sentences in the following, non-exhaustive list of cases based upon certain substantive or procedural protections: Woodson v. North Carolina, 428 U.S. 280 (1976); Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 585 (1977); Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586 (1978); Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782 (1982); Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399 (1986); Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. 367 (1988); Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304 (2002); Kennedy v. Louisiana, 554 U.S. 307 (2008); Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005); Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231 (2005); Snyder v. Louisiana, 552 U.S. 472 (2008).

26. Your response to Question 34 states that you “would not oppose the ability for employers to perform reasonable criminal background checks on potential employees.” What, in your view, constitutes a “reasonable” criminal background check?

ANSWER: As I understand the EEOC’s guidance on this subject, it requires some reasonable inquiry into the nexus between the conviction and the job responsibilities involved in the particular position.

27. Do you believe that the Civil Rights Division has jurisdiction to challenge or abridge the ability of a private employer to conduct a criminal background check on potential employees? If so, please state the basis of such jurisdiction.

ANSWER: No, it is my understanding that the EEOC, rather than the Civil Rights Division, has jurisdiction to enforce federal anti-discrimination statutes with respect to potential employees in the private sector.

28. With respect to your response to Question 36, why did you withdraw your nomination for a seat on the D.C. Circuit?

ANSWER: I was never nominated for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. I withdrew myself from consideration for a nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit based upon my personal, professional and practical assessment that my family’s best interests were served by my decision to remain in my position at the NAACP LDF in New York at that time.

29. With respect to your response to Question 37, if you are confirmed, what role do you envision for the Civil Rights Division in the enforcement of Affordable Care Act’s minimum coverage provision?

ANSWER: I do not envision a role. Cases referred to the Civil Rights Division are evaluated on the merits.

30. Given your response to Question 38a that Heller is binding law, do you still believe that recognition of an individual right to “keep and bear [a]rms” under the Second Amendment is a “radical departure” from precedent?

ANSWER: Prior to its decision in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the Supreme Court had previously interpreted the Second Amendment in United States v. Miller, 307 U.S. 174 (1939), in which the Court observed that the Second Amendment’s “purpose [was] to assure the continuation and render possible the effectiveness of [organized militias],” and that the “guarantee of the Second Amendment . . . must be interpreted and applied with that end in view.” 307 U.S. at 178. In Heller, however, the Court stated that the Second Amendment protects “an individual right to possess and carry weapons in case of confrontation.” Id. at 592. The Court’s holding in Heller is binding and extended its previous Second Amendment ruling.

31. Your response to Question 39 indicates your belief that juvenile defendants may be subjected to adult punishments “[t]o the extent adult treatment of juveniles falls within the boundaries of the Constitution.” Please specify the circumstances under which such “adult treatment” would not fall within the boundaries of the Constitution.

ANSWER: To the extent adult treatment of juveniles falls within the boundaries of the Constitution, as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court, such treatment is an available penological policy decision for legislators who grapple with the most effective approaches to sentencing and deterrence. Among other protections, the boundaries of the Constitution require that the right to counsel, the right against self-incrimination, the right to confront witnesses, the right to a jury empaneled in a way that comports with the Constitution, the right to constitutionally acceptable jury instructions, the right to a voluntary, intelligent and knowing waiver of rights, the right against coerced confession, the right against cruel and unusual punishment, among others, must be observed. Additionally, those under 18 may not be executed, sentenced to life without parole for non-homicide offenses, or sentenced to mandatory life without parole, consistent with the Constitution. See Roper v Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005); Graham v. Florida, 560 U.S. 48 (2010); Miller v. Alabama, 132 S.Ct. 2455 (2012).

32. With respect to your response to Question 41a, please state the basis for your contention that “race continues to have an impact on sentencing outcomes” and explain how your citation to a joint Department of Justice/Department of Education study on school discipline supports your contention.

ANSWER: As Senator Rand Paul recently testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee, the war on drugs has had a dramatic impact on minority incarceration rates: “The majority of illegal drug users and dealers nationwide are white, but three-fourths of all people in prison for drug offenses are African American or Latino... at virtually every stage of pretrial negotiation, whites are more successful than non-whites.” Similarly, the above-referenced Department of Justice/Department of Education document states that “[t]he Civil Rights Data Collection (CRDC), conducted by OCR, has demonstrated that students of certain racial and ethnic groups tend to be disciplined more than their peers. For example, African-American students without disabilities are more than three times as likely as their white peers without disabilities to be expelled or suspended.” The document notes that “research suggests that the substantial racial disparities of the kind reflected in the CRDC data are not explained by more frequent or more serious misbehavior by students of color.” See Dear Colleague Letter: Nondiscriminatory Administration of School Discipline, January 8, 2014, 3-4, fn 7 (listing studies).

33. Your answer to Question 45 is not responsive. Please identify which specific civil-rights provisions, in your view, can be applied post-Hosanna-Tabor to religious institutions if the employee of the institution in question falls within the ministerial exception.

ANSWER: The Court in Hosanna-Tabor held that anti-discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution’s employment of a minister. Under this ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. If I am confirmed, I will ensure that the Civil Rights Division assesses cases on the facts and the applicable law, including the Court’s holding in Hosanna-Tabor, but I am not in a position to predict every circumstance in which the ministerial exception may be at issue.

34. Your answer to Question 47a is not responsive. Assuming that an employee of a religious institution falls within the ministerial exception, in your view would the First Amendment permit a suit against the institution under either the FMLA or the Equal Pay Act?

ANSWER: The Court in Hosanna-Tabor held that anti-discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution’s employment of a minister. Under this ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. If I am confirmed, I will ensure that the Civil Rights Division assesses cases on the facts and the applicable law, including the Court’s holding in Hosanna-Tabor, but it is my understanding that the Department of Justice does not enforce the FMLA or the Equal Pay Act.

35. Your answer to Question 47b is not responsive. Assuming that an employee of a religious institution falls within the ministerial exception, in your view would the First Amendment permit a lawsuit against the institution alleging discrimination based on the employee’s sexual orientation or gender identity? If so, please state the basis for such a lawsuit under federal law.

ANSWER: The Court in Hosanna-Tabor held that anti-discrimination laws cannot be applied to regulate a religious institution’s employment of a minister. Under this ruling, once such an institution has shown that a claimant is a “minister,” a lawsuit for employment discrimination would be barred. Hosanna-Tabor’s analysis applies regardless of the protected category of discrimination alleged by the individual.

36. With respect to your answer to Question 53a, given Supreme Court’s holding in Marion County, do you believe that a state-law that requires a voter to display photo identification prior to voting violates Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act if the state promulgating the law provides photo identification to citizens of the state free of charge?

ANSWER: It is my understanding that the Division is currently litigating related issues. Accordingly, I am not in a position to offer legal conclusions on this topic.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

James D. Peterson

- 1. You wrote in the February 2010 newsletter for the Western District of Wisconsin Bar Association that, "For nearly every plaintiff that is drawn to the Western District of Wisconsin, there is a defendant who would prefer to litigate somewhere else." Please explain what you meant by this statement.

Response: I wrote that statement in an article to provide guidance to litigants on motions to transfer venue filed in the Western District of Wisconsin. The statement reflects that the plaintiff's choice of venue is often perceived as providing a tactical advantage. Thus, many defendants, when possible, try to challenge the plaintiff's choice by filing a motion to transfer the case to a venue of the defendant's choosing. I was not suggesting that the Western District of Wisconsin had any pro-plaintiff bias, and I have observed no such bias in my experience with the court.

- 2. During your hearing I asked you about your work with the Freedom From Religion Foundation. You said your law firm has worked on both sides of religious liberty issues. Have you personally worked on any cases that defended the religious side of religious liberty? If so, please describe your involvement in them.

Response: At the hearing, I testified that my firm has a long history of advocating the First Amendment interests of clients across the political spectrum. To cite one recent and notable example of my firm's defense of the free exercise of religious liberty, my colleagues represent Archbishop Jerome E. Listecki, as Trustee of the Archdiocese of Milwaukee Catholic Cemetery Perpetual Care Trust, in an appeal of a bankruptcy court decision. Our firm successfully argued that the bankruptcy decision infringed the Trust's rights under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act and the Free Exercise Clause of the First Amendment. Although I have not been counsel of record in Free Exercise Clause cases, I have advised my colleagues on litigation strategy in such cases.

Religious liberty is a fundamental right of every citizen. If confirmed, I will treat the religious convictions of anyone who appears before me with respect, and faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding First Amendment cases.

- 3. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: A good judge must have many qualities. But the single most important attribute of a judge is to be fair, setting aside any personal interest or bias, to decide cases strictly on the admissible evidence and the governing law. I have this attribute.

- 4. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge should be even-tempered, patient, thoughtful, and decisive. The temperament of the judge should be one that leaves even the losing party with the conviction that he or she has been fully and fairly heard. I have demonstrated this temperament both in my personal life and in my career.

5. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: If confirmed, I will be absolutely committed to following binding precedent regardless of any personal opinion.

6. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If faced with a matter of first impression, I would apply established principles of legal analysis. If the matter involved statutory interpretation, I would begin with the text of the law, which in most cases is decisive as the best expression of legislative intent. I would turn next to judicial constructions of related laws, then to other recognized sources of authority, aiming at all times to effectuate the legislative purpose.

Response: I would always follow Supreme Court and Court of Appeals precedent regardless of any personal opinion.

8. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: All validly enacted statutes carry a presumption of constitutionality. A federal court should declare a statute unconstitutional only when that decision is necessary to decide the case and it is clear that the statute exceeds Congress' constitutional authority or that it violates a constitutional right.

9. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community", in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. In matters of constitutional interpretation, a district judge should consider only those sources authorized by Supreme Court or Circuit Court precedent.

10. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: In my practice, I have represented clients with diverse interests and political perspectives and I have never declined to undertake a representation because of the client's political ideology or motivation. If confirmed, I will decide cases based on precedent and the law, and never to serve some political ideology or motivation.

11. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: If confirmed, I pledge to put aside my personal views, treat every party as equal under the law, and decide cases impartially on the law and the evidence, as reflected in the oath of office, which I will take without reservation.

12. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I expect to follow many of the case-management practices of my predecessor, the late Honorable John C. Shabaz. I will set early and firm trial dates, see that discovery disputes are decided expeditiously, and I will give full consideration to dispositive motions and decide them promptly.

13. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes. In consultation with counsel for the litigants, I would set the quickest reasonable litigation schedule and a firm trial date. This approach requires diligence from both counsel and the court, but I believe that it is the best way to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of matters.

14. You have spent your entire legal career as an advocate for your clients. As a judge, you will have a very different role. Please describe how you will reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you will look for guidance. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?

Response: I began my law career as a judicial clerk to a judge that I admire, an experience that prepared me well for a career as a litigator. If confirmed, I will draw on that experience again as I make the transition to the bench. In deciding cases, I will begin with a careful review of the submissions of counsel, and a careful evaluation of the evidence submitted. I will test the arguments of counsel by verifying the authorities they cite, and I will conduct my own review of the primary law and legal research. The role of judge will present many new challenges, but I expect that developing expertise in criminal law and procedure to be the most challenging aspect of the transition. I am confident that I can handle this challenge through hard work, careful study, and with the mentoring and assistance of my future colleagues at the court.

15. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: “To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator’s judicial selection committees”.

a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

16. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received a copy of the questions from an attorney in the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice. I drafted responses, submitted them to the same attorney for review, and submitted them in final form.

17. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

James D. Peterson

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: I am not sufficiently familiar with the philosophies of the individual justices to identify any one of them as similar to my own. Moreover, I do not have any philosophy that would predict my approach to deciding a particular case, except that I would decide each case impartially on the basis of the admissible evidence and the law. As a district court judge, my judicial philosophy would focus on efficient case management. If confirmed, I would set reasonably fast case schedules with firm dates, give full consideration to dispositive motions, and decide all motions promptly.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: Pursuant to District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 605 (2008), the contemporaneous public understanding of a legal text is a critical tool of constitutional interpretation. If confirmed, I will follow this and all other Supreme Court precedent concerning constitutional interpretation.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: None. As a district judge, it would not be within my authority to overrule precedent, and I would not attempt to do so.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: The statement from Garcia reflects the Supreme Court's determination that state interests are protected in Congress through the political process, whereas its own interpretation of the Commerce Clause in National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. 833 (1976), had proved unworkable and produced inconsistent results. If confirmed, I would follow Garcia and subsequent decisions in which the Supreme Court identified constitutional limitations on congressional power. See, e.g., United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995); United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000).

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: Congress may regulate non-economic activity that has a substantial relation to interstate commerce, or when a "regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce." Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005) (Scalia, J., concurring). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: When executive action is challenged in a judicial proceeding, the reviewing court must determine first whether jurisdictional and standing requirements are satisfied. If so, and if necessary to resolve the question presented, the court may be called upon determine whether the President's order or action is authorized by the Constitution or an act of Congress. See Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding any challenge to executive action.

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: A right is fundamental when it is expressly stated in the Constitution or when it is "objectively, 'deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition,' and 'implicit in the concept of ordered liberty,' such that 'neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.'" See Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning fundamental rights.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court requires strict scrutiny of governmental classifications that burden a fundamental right, or those based on race, religion, or national origin. Intermediate scrutiny is required of governmental classifications based on gender or illegitimacy. See, e.g., Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., Inc., 473 U.S. 432, 439-41 (1985). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding Equal Protection Clause issues.

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not have personal expectations about the status of educational diversity in 15 years, and my personal expectations would play no role in judicial decisions. The statement from Grutter reflects Supreme Court precedent that racial preferences should be truly rare and used only in cases of compelling need. If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent in deciding any case involving racial preferences.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Nancy Jo Rosenstengel
Nominee: U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois

- 1. What characteristics have you seen in federal judges that you will seek to avoid, if confirmed?

Response: If confirmed, I would avoid being a federal judge who displays impatience, makes hasty decisions, speaks improvidently, or is unavailable to the lawyers and litigants when needed.

- 2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is integrity. A judge must have the ability to apply the law without bias, sympathy, or prejudice. Integrity requires keeping an open mind, listening to all sides, and fairly deciding the legal issues. I possess this attribute.

- 3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must be patient and humble. The judge also must be an attentive listener and set the standard for courtroom decorum. I meet this standard.

- 4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: If confirmed, I would follow the precedent of higher courts without regard to my personal opinions. Our legal system depends on this approach to resolving disputes.

- 5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: When analyzing an issue, I would start first with the text of the legal provision. If the text was clear, my analysis would end there. If the text was ambiguous and there was no binding legal authority, I would research analogous cases from the Supreme Court, the Seventh Circuit, and other federal appellate courts for persuasive authority.

Response: If confirmed, I would faithfully apply the precedent of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court without regard to my personal opinion.

7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: It is presumed that statutes enacted by Congress are constitutional, and a court must start its analysis of a challenge to a statute with that premise. A statute should be declared unconstitutional only when it is established that Congress exceeded its authority when it enacted the statute. Additionally, analysis of the constitutionality of a statute should be guided by the “principle that ‘where a statute is susceptible of two constructions, by one of which grave and doubtful constitutional questions arise and by the other of which such questions are avoided, [the court’s] duty is to adopt the latter.’” Jones v. United States, 529 U.S. 848, 857 (2000) (quoting United States ex rel. Attorney General v. Delaware & Hudson Co., 213 U.S. 366, 408 (1909), and citing Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227, 239 (1999)). See also Edward J. DeBartolo Corp. v. Florida Gulf Coast Bldg. and Constr. Trades Council, 485 U.S. 568, 575 (1988) (reiterating cardinal rule of statutory construction that a court should construe a statute to avoid serious constitutional problems unless such construction is plainly contrary to the intent of Congress).

8. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. I cannot envision a case in which I, if confirmed as a district court judge, properly could or would rely on foreign law to decide the meaning of a provision of the United States Constitution.

9. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I give my utmost assurance. The stability of our legal system depends on the predictability that results from adherence to precedent. My legal career has trained me to approach issues from a neutral perspective and to research the law and apply it to the facts. If confirmed, I would approach legal issues in cases before me in this way. I would have no other motivation.

- 10. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: A judge must put aside personal views and decide motions and cases based on the record before her and the applicable law. Litigants are entitled to an impartial tribunal to resolve disputes. If confirmed, I would be wholly committed to fairly deciding the matters before me.

- 11. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would be proactive in managing my docket. I would personally review daily reports from the court's Case Management/Electronic Case Filing ("CM/ECF") system to monitor the progress of cases and the status of pending motions. I would hold hearings on dispositive matters, be available for the lawyers as needed, and always be well-prepared. In civil cases, I would work with the magistrate judges to ensure discovery is completed in a timely fashion, and I would endeavor to narrow the issues and promptly resolve every case before me. In criminal cases, I would schedule and conduct trials to honor defendants' statutory and constitutional rights to a speedy trial.

- 12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 1 directs that the rules should be "construed and administered to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding." FED. R. CIV. P. 1. If confirmed, I would set firm but reasonable deadlines and expect the lawyers to meet them. I would likewise promptly rule on motions and regularly monitor the status of cases before me, with the help of reports generated by the CM/ECF system.

- 13. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on January 15, 2014. I drafted my answers on January 15-16, 2014. A draft was submitted to the Department of Justice Office of Legal Policy, and then I finalized my answers on January 23, 2014.

15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Nancy J. Rosenstengel
Nominee, United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois Responses to Questions for the Record from Senator Ted Cruz

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: If confirmed, my judicial philosophy would be to follow the rule of law and decide the case before me by applying binding precedent. I would decide matters promptly without bias, sympathy, or prejudice and treat all parties fairly. I have not carefully studied the judicial philosophies of specific Supreme Court Justices, but I suspect that many Justices shared this approach.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The meaning of words as understood at the time of the ratification of a constitutional provision must be considered when interpreting the Constitution, as the Supreme Court noted in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 576-77 (2008). Specifically, the Supreme Court explained in Heller, “[t]he Constitution was written to be understood by the voters; its words and phrases were used in their normal and ordinary as distinguished from technical meaning” Id. (quoting United States v. Sprague, 282 U.S. 716, 731 (1931)). “Normal meaning may of course include an idiomatic meaning, but it excludes secret or technical meanings that would not have been known to ordinary citizens in the founding generation.” Heller, 554 U.S. at 576-77. If confirmed, I will follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent regarding interpreting the Constitution.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed as a district court judge, I would be bound by the precedent of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court. I would not be empowered or authorized to overrule precedent from superior courts. I would follow binding precedent at all times.

Response: In Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528 (1985), the Supreme Court overruled National League of Cities v. Usery, 426 U.S. 833 (1976), holding that the Court's judicially created limitation on the Commerce Clause power was unworkable. In this particular case, the Court held that the Commerce Clause empowers Congress to enforce provisions of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act against states. See Alexander v. City of Evansville, Indiana, 120 F.3d 723, 725 (7th Cir. 1997); Rhinebarger v. Orr, 839 F.2d 387 (7th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 824 (1988). If confirmed as a district court judge, I would be bound by the Court's decision in Garcia, and I would apply it without regard to any personal thoughts or beliefs I may have.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: If presented with a question under the Commerce Clause and the Necessary and Proper Clause, I would research the issue and rely on authoritative precedent. The United States Supreme Court has held that Congress may regulate (1) "the use of the channels of interstate commerce," (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce, even though the threat may come only from intrastate activities," and (3) "those activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-59 (1995); United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-09 (2000). Moreover, in Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1 (2005), the Supreme Court held that this power extends to the regulation of intrastate, non-commercial activity (i.e., possession and manufacture of medical marijuana). As Justice Scalia stated in Gonzales, "Congress may regulate even noneconomic local activity if that regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce." Id. at 37 (Scalia, J., concurring). But see United States v. Comstock, 560 U.S. 126, 164 (2010) ("Under the court's precedents, Congress may not regulate noneconomic activity . . . based solely on the effect such activity may have . . . on interstate commerce.") If confirmed, I would follow these cases and all binding precedent.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The President's authority to act "must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself." Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 525 (2008) (quoting Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952)). These limitations on Presidential authority are judicially enforceable when presented in a justiciable case or controversy by a litigant with proper standing. A court would analyze whether the President acted (1) pursuant to an express or implied authorization of Congress; (2) in absence of either a congressional grant or denial of authority but with support from congressional inertia, indifference or quiescence; (3) in a manner incompatible with the expressed or implied will of Congress. Id. at 524-25. The judiciary is most likely to sustain executive action under the first scenario and less likely to defer to the President under the third scenario.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has established a method for analyzing substantive due process claims. Under the Court’s precedent, fundamental rights are those that objectively are “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition” and “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty,” such that “neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997) (citations omitted). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Seventh Circuit precedent with respect to determining whether a right is “fundamental” for purposes of substantive due process.

Response: “[E]qual protection analysis requires strict scrutiny of a legislative classification only when the classification impermissibly interferes with the exercise of a fundamental right or operates to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class.” Massachusetts Bd. of Ret. v. Murgia, 427 U.S. 307, 312 (1976). Strict scrutiny applies when a statute classifies by “race, alienage, or national origin.” City of Cleburne, Texas v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985). As the Supreme Court has explained, “[t]hese factors are so seldom relevant to the achievement of any legitimate state interest that laws grounded in such considerations are deemed to reflect prejudice and antipathy – a view that those in the burdened class are not as worthy or deserving as others.” Id. Moreover, legislative classifications based on gender also call for heightened scrutiny. “Rather than resting on meaningful considerations, statutes distributing benefits and burdens between the sexes in different ways very likely reflect outmoded notions of the relative capabilities of men and women.” Id. at 441.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: If confirmed, I would apply the holding of Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306 (2003) and any other legal precedent on this issue, regardless of any personal belief or expectation concerning the specific termination point appropriate for any admissions policy.

Questions for the Record

Indira Talwani
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Massachusetts

1. As a judge, what will your approach to legislative history be? When will you consult it and which types of legislative history will you consider?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would apply binding Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent in interpreting statutes. Under these precedents, if the meaning of a statutory text is unambiguous, I would apply the statute according to its terms. See e.g. Carciery v. Salazar, 555 U.S. 379, 129 S. Ct. 1058, 1063-64 (2009). In examining the statutory text, I would look to the plain meaning of the words in the broader context of the statute as a whole, and I would consider the surrounding language and statute's structure. United States v. Godin, 534 F.3d 51, 56, 58 (1st Cir. 2008). After such inquiries, a statute may still be ambiguous in that it admits of more than one reasonable interpretation. In that limited circumstance, First Circuit case law supports analyzing legislative history in order to determine congressional intent. See, e.g. Recovery Group, Inc. v. Commissioner of Internal Revenue, 652 F.3d 122, 127-28, 131 (1st Cir. 2011). Even in that limited circumstance, if the legislative history does not clearly evince congressional intent, the First Circuit will not rely on legislative history to resolve the ambiguity. See, e.g., United States v. Godin, 534 F.3d 51, 60 (1st Cir. 2008).

2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe the most important attribute of a judge is a deep and sincere commitment to ensuring the fairness of the court's proceedings and the integrity of the court's decisions and actions. I believe I possess this attribute.

3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: I believe that a judge should be respectful to all parties, open-minded, and diligent. I believe that each of these elements is essential to ensuring that proceedings are fair and unbiased, and I believe I meet that standard.

4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: I am committed to following the binding precedents of the United States Supreme Court and the First Circuit faithfully and to giving them full force and effect if confirmed as a district judge whether or not I personally agree with such precedents.

5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In a matter of first impression, I would begin with the plain language of a statute in question. If the language was unclear, I would use other tools of statutory construction to determine its meaning, and review for persuasive authority the case law from the Supreme Court and First Circuit addressing analogous issues, and case law from other circuits addressing the same issue. If these sources did not resolve the issue, I would also consider legislative history.

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would apply binding precedent of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit whether or not I agreed with their decision.

7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: “[R]espect for the decisions of a coordinate branch of Government demands [that federal courts] invalidate a congressional enactment only upon a plain showing that Congress has exceeded its constitutional bounds.” United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 607 (2000). Moreover, if there are two plausible constructions of a statute, and one would raise constitutional problems, the other should prevail. Clark v. Martinez, 543 U.S. 371, 380-81 (2005). If confirmed as a district judge, I would apply these and other applicable precedents of the Supreme Court and First Circuit in considering whether a statute enacted by Congress is unconstitutional.

8. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. If confirmed as a district judge, in determining the meaning of the Constitution, I would not rely on foreign law or the views of the “world community.”

9. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I am fully committed to ensuring that, if confirmed as a district judge, my decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation.

- 10. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: I truly understand the different roles of an advocate and a judge, and if confirmed as a district judge, I would set aside any personal views, treat all parties fairly regardless of their background or circumstances, and decide cases solely based on the relevant law and facts.

- 11. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would take an active role in managing my caseload through the case management system as described in response to question 12. I would also endeavor to resolve all motions promptly, and would monitor cases closely to ensure that they are not unnecessarily delayed.

- 12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: I believe that district judges have an important role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. If confirmed, I would use the court's case management system and case management conferences to ensure that each case assigned to me had an efficient schedule in place, including identification of the principal issues in contention, a reasonable discovery plan including phased discovery where appropriate, time lines for pre-trial motions, a determination of whether phased resolution or bifurcation of issues for trial is appropriate, and consideration of alternative dispute resolution.

- 13. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on January 15, 2014. I drafted responses to the questions and provided them to the U.S. Department of Justice on January 21, 2014. After discussing my responses with a representative of the Department of Justice, I finalized my responses on January 23, 2014 and authorized the Department to transmit them to the Committee.

15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Indira Talwani

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: I have not studied the writings of the Supreme Court Justices to allow me to identify the judicial philosophies of the individual Justices. If confirmed as a district judge, my approach would be to decide each case before me based on the facts of that case and the applicable law.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: If confirmed, I would follow binding Supreme Court and First Circuit precedents interpreting the United States Constitution, including precedent considering the public understanding of text in the time of enactment. See, e.g., District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008).

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would be bound by precedent of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit. I would not overrule that precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: The Supreme Court's decision in Garcia v. San Antonio Metropolitan Transit Authority, 469 U.S. 528 (1985), is binding precedent. If confirmed as a district judge, I would follow and apply the holdings in Garcia as I would all other binding precedent.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has identified three categories of activity that Congress may regulate under its commerce power. First, Congress "may regulate the use of channels of interstate commerce." Second, Congress "may regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce, even though the threat may come only from intrastate activities." Finally, Congress may "regulate those activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-09 (2000); United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-59 (1995). If confirmed as a district judge, I would follow and apply the holdings in Morrison and Lopez as I would all other binding precedent.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the President's authority to act "must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself." Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008), citing Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952) and Dames & Moore v. Regan, 453 U.S. 654, 668 (1981). The Supreme Court has identified the "accepted framework for evaluating executive action" as set forth in Justice Jackson's concurrence in Youngstown. 552 U.S. at 524-25, citing Youngstown, 343 U.S. at 635-38 (Jackson, J., concurring).

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has stated that a right is fundamental for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine only if it "is fundamental to our scheme of ordered liberty and system of justice." McDonald v. City of Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 3020, 3034 (2010). Only fundamental rights and liberties "which are 'deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition' and 'implicit in the concept of ordered liberty'" qualify for such protections. Chavez v. Martinez, 538 U.S. 760, 775 (2003), quoting Washington v. Gluckberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997). If confirmed as a district judge, I would follow this and all other binding precedent from the Supreme Court and the First Circuit concerning the substantive due process doctrine.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause is appropriate when a classification burdens a fundamental right or when it operates to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class. See, e.g., City of Cleburne, Texas v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440-41 (1985). Legislative classifications based on race, alienage and national origin are subject to strict scrutiny. Id. Legislative classifications based on gender and illegitimacy are subject to intermediate scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515, 531-33 (1996); City of Cleburne, 473 U.S. at 441. If confirmed as a district judge, I would follow this and all other binding precedent from the Supreme Court and the First Circuit on what classifications are subject to heightened scrutiny and how to apply such scrutiny.

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would apply the holdings in Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003), Fisher v. University of Texas, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013) and other binding precedent of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit regardless of any personal expectations I might have.

Statement of Support for the Nomination of John Carlin as Assistant Attorney General for National Security, Department of Justice

I am writing in support of the nomination of John Carlin as the Assistant Attorney General for National Security. I first met Mr. Carlin in 2011, when he became the Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General for National Security and while I was serving in my first year as Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Over the next two-and-a-half years, until I retired from CIA in September 2013, I had numerous interactions with Mr. Carlin. The vast majority of those interactions were at Deputies Meetings of the National Security Council. I was a sitting member of the group, with Mr. Carlin either attending as a backbencher to then Assistant Attorney General for National Security, Lisa Monaco, or attending as the DOJ principal when Ms. Monaco could not make a meeting.

Throughout our time together in Deputies, I found Mr. Carlin to be the consummate professional. He was always prepared, he was articulate and persuasive when he spoke, and he asked excellent questions of the other participants. I also found Mr. Carlin to be respectful of the views of others as well as open-minded, ready to change his position when faced with new data.

In addition to his performance, Mr. Carlin certainly has the experience required to do the job. He was a successful federal prosecutor, he served as a senior aide to FBI Director Mueller, and he served, of course, as Ms. Monaco's principal deputy. An undergraduate degree from Williams and a law degree from Harvard are also of significance.

Despite his pedigree, I never found Mr. Carlin to be arrogant. Quite the contrary, I found him to be personable and approachable. I think he will do well leading the men and women of the National Security Division.

It is for all these reasons that I am pleased to add my name to those government officials and former government officials who believe Mr. Carlin would make an outstanding Assistant Attorney General.

Sincerely

Michael Morell

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We write this letter in strong support of John Carlin's nomination to be the next Assistant Attorney General of the National Security Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. We are former colleagues of Mr. Carlin who worked with him when he served as a career prosecutor and as Deputy Chief of Staff and Chief of Staff to FBI Director Robert Mueller.

Mr. Carlin has the necessary experience, both substantively and in management, that the role of Assistant Attorney General of the National Security Division demands. He began his career with the U.S. Department of Justice fourteen years ago as a career prosecutor and has since served in a number of distinguished positions, including most recently as the Acting Assistant Attorney General of the National Security Division and as Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff. In his leadership positions both at the FBI and the National Security Division, he has supervised prosecutors and agents on some of the most sensitive national security issues and cases. In every capacity, Mr. Carlin has worked with great distinction, integrity, intelligence, and professionalism.

Since 2007, Mr. Carlin has been focused on national security. He understands national security writ large. Of critical importance to this position is the ability to collaborate with others - both in the U.S. and abroad - on intelligence matters. Mr. Carlin has worked with and is a well-respected leader within the national security and intelligence communities. He understands the importance of building consensus, while at the same time pursuing the objectives that he believes are right and in our national interest. In doing so, he exercises tremendous judgment.

Dear members,

I am writing to strongly urge your support for John Carlin as Assistant Attorney General for National Security at the Department of Justice. I have known John since he was a first year student at Harvard Law School and have worked with him through his period at the FBI and in DOJ. I have asked him to teach classes for me at the Law School. In all these capacities, he shows a maturity of judgment and ability to carefully consider the application of the law to challenging new situations. I think he will be a first-rate head of the National Security Division. He will certainly inspire my confidence at a time when confidence in the intelligence agencies needs to be built.

I recommend him to you with great enthusiasm.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write to unconditionally support the nomination of John Carlin for the position of Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division of the Department of Justice.

I have had the pleasure of working with Mr. Carlin for a number of years when he was assigned to the FBI as Special Counsel to former FBI Director Mueller, when he was Chief of staff for Director Mueller and during his current assignment in the National Security Division of the Department of Justice. During my tenure in the FBI as Special Assistant to Director Mueller, the Associate Deputy Director and finally as the Deputy Director of the FBI, I worked with Mr. Carlin on a day-to-day basis for a number of years. Mr. Carlin clearly demonstrated the complex skills and leadership required to not only succeed in this position but also to thrive. Mr. Carlin has been involved in nearly every major National Security decision over the last few years during his tenure at the FBI and DOJ. His years of experience of participating in the daily morning intelligence briefs for the Director of the FBI and the Attorney General of the United States has prepared him for any National Security issue that may arise. He has shown the competence, character, collaboration and communication skills required for this position. Mr. Carlin was very effective at not allowing "politics" to play a role in National Security operations. He skillfully interacted with other agencies in the U.S. Intelligence Community as well as with our international partners to resolve terrorism threats facing our country. I found him to be an intelligent and dedicated professional working daily to protect our national security interests.

Mr. Carlin's Department of Justice experience as a prosecutor and his understanding of the National Security Division of the Department of Justice, the FBI National Security Branch mission and operations, and the Intelligence community, make him exceptionally well qualified to lead the National Security Division. I don't believe there is anyone with a better background or more relevant experience for this position and I highly recommend him.

Sincerely,

Timothy Murphy

Re: Nomination of John P. Carlin to be Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write to express my unstinting support of John P. Carlin to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division of the Department of Justice, and to recommend his confirmation at the earliest possible opportunity.

By way of background, I am a professor of law and the Associate Dean for Scholarship at American University Washington College of Law, with special expertise in national security and counterterrorism law—expertise upon which your Committee, along with a host of other congressional bodies, has often called. In that capacity, I am both deeply familiar with, and often critical of, the work of the National Security Division, especially in my writings for the Lawfare blog (to which I am a contributing editor) and for Just Security (of which I am a co-editor-in-chief).

My views on specific NSD policies and activities notwithstanding, there is little question that NSD serves a critical institutional role in providing strategic legal advice to senior DOJ leaders and in coordinating national security initiatives across the government. If anything, NSD's significance has only increased in recent years, as this Administration has increasingly resorted to and relied upon law enforcement tools as the principal means through which the United States responds to threats posed to our national security by foreign and domestic terrorist organizations and others. To that end, it is crucial not only that NSD have a Senate-confirmed AAG to lead it, but that the confirmed AAG have both (1) the range of law enforcement-oriented experiences and expertise that John has to offer; and (2) the deep and abiding commitment to protecting the rights of U.S. persons that comes across from even a cursory perusal of John's record.

For instance, John is a career public servant who has been trained by the likes of FBI Director Mueller (for whom he was Chief of Staff), and Lisa Monaco, his predecessor as AAG. This training and understanding is manifested in his objective and data-driven approach to the challenging issues currently facing us in the national security arena, and in his speeches, in which, among other things, he has emphasized his deep commitment to the "transformative power of lawyers in our government—and the sense of duty and mission that comes with it." With that basic principle as his guidepost, John has repeatedly highlighted the serious and important responsibility that government lawyers bear in ensuring that the government safeguards privacy and civil liberties even as it collects essential intelligence information. Especially after and in light of the NSA reform debate prompted by the Edward Snowden disclosures, such a mentality should be a prerequisite for any individual seeking confirmation as a senior government national security lawyer.

But while there are certainly others with comparable commitments, John also brings special expertise to bear on the emerging and evolving threats posed to our national security in the cyber realm, as publicly evidenced by, among other things, a July 2012 Washington Post article. In that regard, John is perhaps uniquely situated to lead the National Security Division in the coming years, and to help ensure that the government pursue a holistic and integrated approach to all national security threats—one that prioritizes a coordinated look at all of the tools available to disrupt the threat, and picks the combination that most effectively safeguards both our national security and our individual rights.

Simply put, John and I don't—and won't—always see eye-to-eye. But I have come to develop a deep and abiding respect for him and his work, and have no doubt that his expertise and values make him a natural choice to be the next Senate-confirmed Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Senator Grassley:

I am writing to express my strong support for John Carlin's nomination to become Assistant Attorney General (AAG) for National Security.

I held the same position during 2008-2009, and know well the challenges that it entails. I am confident that John will meet those challenges and provide excellent leadership to the National Security Division (NSD).

John's talents and experience are an ideal combination for the position for which he is nominated. I worked with John when I served in the NSD and he was the Chief of Staff for FBI Director Robert Mueller. At NSD we routinely called upon John for assistance in resolving difficult national security issues involving the FBI. John always came through. He was smart, nimble, low-key and, as a result of those traits, very effective. He solved problems quickly and in a manner that was respectful of our legal and ethical obligations as attorneys for the government.

As the Director's Chief of Staff, John had the opportunity to work closely with Director Mueller. During this time, John received an invaluable daily lesson in leadership and public service from the Director, and I am confident that John will continue to draw upon Director Mueller's example at NSD. Moreover, given the close working relationship between NSD and the FBI on national security matters, John's deep understanding of the FBI, including its strengths and weaknesses, will be of great advantage in working through issues.

As you know, one element of the AAG's job is reviewing and approving (or declining) proposed national security prosecutions. John's distinguished career at the Department of Justice (DOJ) includes years of investigating and trying cases in the U.S. Attorney's Office for D.C. Through his work there, John learned important practical lessons that will serve him well as he assesses investigative strategies and the viability of cases involving terrorism, espionage and export controls.

In the course of his time at DOJ, John has also acquired invaluable knowledge and experience in electronic surveillance. Both at the FBI and at DOJ, he has been heavily involved in the use of electronic surveillance as a criminal investigative tool and as an intelligence-gathering tool. His understanding of the legal and privacy issues will be important as the three branches of government wrestle with the questions recently raised about the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act and the activities of the National Security Agency.

Finally, John has a longstanding interest in cybersecurity, an area in which the government continues to struggle over the most effective set of responses. He has worked on cybersecurity matters for many years, as a DOJ prosecutor, an FBI official and during his time at NSD. Indeed, he recently directed the launch and implementation of a national review to determine how DOJ can most effectively support U.S. efforts to combat cyber threats to national security. John will be a valuable voice in the ongoing discussion over the proper mix of offensive and defensive weapons and the role of our law enforcement and intelligence agencies.

From my discussions with him, I know that John has great affection for the men and women of the National Security Division, and deep respect for the work they do. He has all the tools and experience to lead them with distinction. I urge his confirmation.

Sincerely,

J. Patrick Rowan

Re: Nomination of John P. Carlin

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write in strong support of the nomination of John Carlin to serve as Assistant Attorney General for National Security.

I got to know John in early 2009, when I began serving as National Security Council Legal Adviser and Deputy White House Counsel. At that time John was Chief of Staff and Senior Counsel for Director Mueller at the FBI. We worked together regularly on significant national security matters and I always found John to be very skillful, knowledgeable, and insightful about national security law and policy.

As you know well, the Justice Department's National Security Division serves vital law enforcement and intelligence functions. I developed a deep appreciation for the Division's role when I had the pleasure of working for Chairman Leahy on the Judiciary Committee staff in NSD's early days. John's background – as a prosecutor, at the FBI, and as a senior leader at NSD for the past two years – prepare him exceptionally well for the challenges of that office. In addition to his broad experience in law enforcement and intelligence, John has shown a particular interest in the cyber threat to national security, which is a key challenge for the National Security Division. Through his work on cyber issues at NSD, John has demonstrated that he has the expertise and creativity that is needed to address this difficult issue.

For all of these reasons, I urge the Senate to confirm John Carlin as Assistant Attorney General for National Security.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy:

As a former Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice and Solicitor General, I write to express my strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

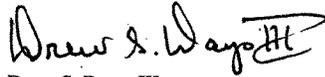

Mr. Adegbile's legal experience has been wide and varied. He began his career as an associate at the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, where he litigated complex commercial and other cases. After moving to LDF, he rose through the organization, serving in several leadership roles including as Acting President and Director-Counsel, and now, with a legislative focus, he serves as Senior Counsel to your Judiciary Committee.

I came to know Mr. Adegbile through his work at LDF and consistently have been impressed by his advocacy, commitment, judgment and ability to speak effectively about civil rights issues in different contexts. Throughout, his balance and fundamental fairness in all he does are most impressive qualities. Indeed, I, myself, served as an LDF staff attorney before joining the Carter Administration Justice Department. Over the intervening years, I have followed closely its activities, including the outstanding work of talented lawyers like Mr. Adegbile. I have participated in meetings on legal issues with Mr. Adegbile, served as a judge in a moot court as he prepared himself for a recent Supreme Court argument, known him to give remarks at Yale Law School attended by me or my students, and to mentor several of my students during their work as LDF interns and beyond. Mr. Adegbile's abilities and integrity shine through in each context.

Through my experiences with and observations of Mr. Adegbile, I know that he blends superb judgment and pragmatism with effective litigation skills, and that he has garnered a reputation as a leading civil rights attorney and advocate in his nearly twenty years of legal practice. At LDF Mr. Adegbile acquired substantial legal management experience as well as experience in United States Supreme Court litigation. He defended the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act's preclearance provisions before the Supreme Court in Shelby County v. Holder, and in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, two of the most important civil rights cases of his generation.

Mr. Adegbile's strong leadership, intelligence, dedication, and broad legal experience involving legal matters of government, private, and not-for-profit sectors prove that he has the skills to lead the Civil Rights Division effectively. Therefore, I hope that the Senate will promptly confirm Mr. Adegbile to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, an office of such importance to our country and in which I was privileged to have served.

Sincerely,

RE: Nomination of Debo P. Adegbile

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

I understand that Debo P. Adegbile has been nominated for the position of Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. I am writing to express my strong support for the nomination.

During the years that Mr. Adegbile was at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, I had periodic contact with him. I recall in particular that I participated together with him in a "moot court" presentation of a lawyer for an argument in the U.S. Supreme Court. I was very impressed by Mr. Adegbile's command of the law in the area, the piercing questions he asked during the moot court, and the sophistication of his analysis in the post-argument debriefing with the lawyer.

Based on what I know of Mr. Adegbile's credentials and what I have seen of his outstanding lawyering abilities, I believe that he is an excellent choice for the position.

Re: Nomination of Debo Adegbile to Be Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I have known, and admired the work of, Debo Adegbile for many years, and we have worked together on a number of important cases. In my view, he is exceptionally well qualified to lead the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division.

Mr. Adegbile is of course a skilled litigator, with a long commitment to civil rights enforcement. He is also a creative thinker and compassionate human being who is inclined to find win-win solutions in circumstances that may appear to present only zero-sum options. That skill will be of paramount benefit to the Civil Rights Division, which is charged with enforcing some of the most precious rights in our society, but which also must operate within a system of government, and of laws, that often have competing imperatives.

During my tenure in government, and in private practice, I have worked with a number of Assistant Attorneys General for Civil Rights. In my judgment, if confirmed, Debo would bring great credit not only to that distinguished cohort and to the dedicated career attorneys in the Division, but also to our national government as a whole. I recommend him without reservation.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I am a retired Senior Managing Director of the Blackstone Group LP., and the President of the Connecticut College Board of Trustees. I write to support the nomination of my fellow Connecticut College Trustee, Debo P. Adegbile, as the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice. As someone with first-hand knowledge of his deep commitment to service, compelling leadership voice, and his personal leadership qualities that inspire our students, faculty and colleagues, I offer my endorsement without reservation.

I have known Mr. Adegbile since he joined the Connecticut College Board in 2011. Since that time, I have had the opportunity to work with Debo on a range of Board business.

My high regard for Debo, a regard that is widely shared by the different constituencies at the college, and his ability to communicate with clarity the importance of higher education and power of his own experience at Connecticut College, led me to recruit him to serve alongside me on the Presidential Search Committee that I Chaired last summer. As a measure of his dedication, he agreed to serve on this crucial college committee even as he prepared for his most recent Supreme Court argument. Debo was a valuable contributor to the search committee, and his leadership voice, sound judgment, focus on the path to consensus, and knowledge of the trends, challenges and opportunities that colleges face enriched our successful search process. In light of his demonstrated abilities as a Board member, I asked Debo to Chair the Faculty-Trustee Liaison committee during a pivotal period of the college's curriculum reform, and he also serves on the Board's Executive Committee.

Finally, as a former Wall Street executive and current college Board of Trustees Chair who has recruited, hired, trained and assessed scores of exceptionally bright colleagues over many years, I must note that Debo's effectiveness derives not simply from his keen intellect and analytical abilities, but also from his respect for peers, personal integrity, and engaging personality. Although I am not a lawyer nor a person who has served in government, I am certain that Debo's track record of accomplishment, commitment to civil rights, and his strong, natural leadership characteristics would serve him and the Nation very well in his role as Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the largest Arab American grassroots organization committed to protecting civil rights, promoting mutual understanding, and preserving Arab American cultural heritage, the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee (ADC) would like to express its strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice. The Department of Justice plays an important role in protecting the civil rights of all minorities, including Arab-Americans. Mr. Adegbile is a tireless advocate, a skilled litigator, and a well-respected member of the legal community, and one of the preeminent civil rights lawyers of his generation.

The son of Irish and Nigerian immigrants who worked his way from poverty to the top of the legal profession, Debo Adegbile is a tireless voice for equality and opportunity for all Americans. He represented Hurricane Katrina evacuees in the first post-storm municipal election in New Orleans, public housing residents in action involving illegal police stops in New York, as well as pro bono clients in private practice in disability and domestic violence actions. Mr. Adegbile is also a bipartisan consensus builder. He worked on bipartisan reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act in 2006 which passed by a unanimous 98-0 vote in the U.S. Senate. Throughout his career, Mr. Adegbile has distinguished himself as a highly effective and respected advocate who has achieved successes both inside and outside the courtroom.

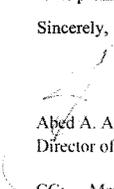

Mr. Adegbile has served as a leading attorney at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc for more than ten years, where he oversaw cases in both the trial and appellate courts, while managing the legal staff. In 2010, Mr. Adegbile supervised the LDF team that litigated Lewis v. City of Chicago, an employment discrimination action brought on behalf of a class of African- American firefighter applicants. Along with co-counsel, the LDF team successfully litigated the case and achieved a rare unanimous ruling in a civil rights case before the United States Supreme Court. As a result of that victory, more than 100 of LDF's clients were hired as Chicago firefighters.

Mr. Adegbile is exceptionally qualified to lead the Civil Rights Division at this time in history. As the nation's chief law enforcement officer on civil rights issues, he would bring a depth and breadth of understanding of federal civil rights laws, and their enforcement and application. He has litigated cases across civil rights subject areas, from voting rights to fair housing to employment discrimination to equal educational opportunity. He has practiced law at all levels, from the trial court to the Supreme Court, and has appeared in courts throughout the country.

Mr. Adegbile is highly regarded for his leadership, judgment, and integrity. And Mr. Adegbile is involved with his community -- he presently serves on the Boards of Trustees of his college and middle school, and frequently speaks to students ranging in age from elementary school to law school about the importance of the Constitution, civil rights and educational and professional opportunity. With his stellar career of more than a decade at the nation's leading civil rights law firm, and his work in the private and public sectors, it is clear that Mr. Adegbile's skill set, talents, and experience make him the perfect choice to head the Civil Rights Division.

Mr. Adegbile would lead the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division with professionalism and a deep commitment to its important and historic mission of ensuring that our nation lives up to its promise of equality and justice for all. Please support his swift confirmation.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the current and former presidents of Connecticut College, we write together today in full support of President Barack Obama's nomination of Debo P. Adebile as Assistant Attorney for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice. Mr. Adebile is an alumnus of Connecticut College who currently serves with distinction as a member of the College's Board of Trustees. As a trustee, Mr. Adebile chairs the Trustee-Faculty Liaison Committee and is a member of both the Committee on Student Life & Enrollment Design and the Executive Committee. In these committee settings, Mr. Adebile is relied upon for his long-time knowledge of the College culture, his legal expertise, and his dedication to promoting and upholding the long-term value of a Connecticut College education.

Mr. Adebile's leadership at Connecticut College stems from his undergraduate years when he was a member of the men's soccer team, volunteered in the local community through the Office of Volunteers for Community Service, and was involved in student government and athletics advisory boards. As a student, he also worked as an intern at New London High School and the New London Public Defender's office. At his Commencement ceremony in 1991, Mr. Adebile was awarded the Anna Lord Strauss Medal in recognition of his outstanding work for the College and for the local community.

Since his graduation from Connecticut College in 1991, and his subsequent graduation from the New York University School of Law in 1994, Mr. Adebile has served Connecticut College as a distinguished speaker and panelist, as a member of the pre-law advisory committee and young alumni committee and as a class agent. He has generously provided advice and mentoring to students who are interested in law careers, and has encouraged students to ardently pursue their goals. Most recently, he served as a member of the College's Presidential Search Committee that selected Katherine Bergeron to succeed Leo I. Higdon as president of Connecticut College.

In every interaction he has with the greater Connecticut College community—trustees, alumni, parents, students, faculty, staff—Debo Adebile has proven to be a man of honor, of principle and of great personal integrity. With his brilliant legal mind and his broad experience with the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., the nation's leading civil rights legal organization, he will be an outstanding leader in the Department of Justice who will uphold the nation's commitment to the civil and constitutional rights for all Americans. We support without hesitancy the nomination of Debo P. Adebile as Assistant Attorney for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice.

Re: Nomination of Debo Adebile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

On behalf of the National Women's Law Center (the "Center"), an organization that has worked since 1972 to advance and protect women's legal rights, we write in strong support of the nomination of Debo Adebile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division.

The Civil Rights Division enforces legal protections of critical importance to women, including Title VII, Title IX, the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances (FACE) Act, the Fair Housing Act, the Voting Rights Act (VRA), and protections against hate crimes and crimes of human trafficking. The Division also enforces protections against discrimination on the grounds of disability and immigration status.

Recently, for example, the Civil Rights Division reinvigorated enforcement of federal laws against discrimination. Among other things, it litigated groundbreaking Title IX sexual harassment complaints against public schools, colleges, and universities; challenged discriminatory barriers for women working in nontraditional fields in state and local government, investigated gender discrimination by law enforcement agencies; brought numerous cases to enforce the Fair Housing Act's prohibition of gender discrimination; and protected women's ability to obtain reproductive health care without harassment or intimidation under the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act. The next head of the Civil Rights Division will have the opportunity to continue the important progress toward robust enforcement of these important antidiscrimination laws.

Mr. Adebile's stellar background makes him well prepared to continue the important work of the Civil Rights Division. Mr. Adebile earned his J.D. from New York University School of Law. For seven years following law school, Mr. Adebile was a litigation associate at the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison.

While at the firm, Mr. Adegbile represented clients in the corporate, governmental, and nonprofit sectors in a variety of complex commercial, criminal and civil rights cases.

Following his time at Paul, Weiss, Mr. Adegbile litigated for more than a decade at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. (LDF). He served in various leadership positions at LDF, including Director of Litigation, and most recently as LDF's Acting President and Director-Counsel. In his time at LDF, he led the work on groundbreaking cases dealing with core civil rights protections, including cases that go to the heart of discriminatory barriers that limit opportunities for women and girls in education and at work. For example, in 2010, Mr. Adegbile supervised the LDF team that litigated Lewis v. City of Chicago, an employment discrimination action brought on behalf of a class of African-American firefighter applicants, in which the Center filed an amicus brief. Other critical cases of particular import to women on which Mr. Adegbile worked during his tenure at LDF included Fisher v. University of Texas, 570 U.S. ____ (2013), Parents Involved in Community Schools v. Seattle Sch. Dist. No. 1, 551 U.S. 701 (2007), Ricci v. DeStefano, 557 U.S. 557 (2009), and Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, 564 U.S. ____ (2011). Mr. Adegbile also defended the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act's (VRA) preclearance provisions before the Supreme Court in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. ____ (2013), and in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, 55 U.S. 193 (2009).

Mr. Adegbile is the consummate civil rights lawyer. He is highly regarded for his leadership, judgment, integrity, and knowledge of and commitment to civil rights. What is more, he would bring compelling life experience, ranging from homelessness in his youth to community service to arguing before the United States Supreme Court, to the leadership of this important office. Accordingly, the Center offers its strong support of Debo Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, and urges the Committee to approve his nomination quickly. If you have questions or if we can be of assistance, please contact us at (202) 588-5180.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the nonprofit membership organization for the federally mandated Protection and Advocacy System and Client Assistance Programs for people with disabilities, the National Disability Rights Network (NDRN) would like to express its strong support for the confirmation of Debo Adegbile as the next Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. The Department of Justice Civil Rights Division plays a critical role in protecting the rights of people with disabilities and effectuating the promise of integration and access in the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Mr. Adegbile's history of skillful representation and bipartisan consensus-building makes him an ideal leader to enforce and advance the rights of people with disabilities in the Civil Rights Division.

Mr. Adegbile is an exceptional candidate to carry on the recent ground-breaking work of the Civil Rights Division in advancing the employment and community integration of people with disabilities. As the lead agency responsible for enforcing the mandate in Olmstead v. L.C., 527 U.S. 581 (1999) that people with disabilities receive services in the least restrictive setting to the person's liberty. The Olmstead decision has improved the lives of thousands of people with disabilities by providing them the opportunity for full community integration in their homes, their jobs, and their daily lives.

Recent work by the Civil Rights Division has demonstrated the ways in which effective leadership can help people with disabilities. In the past few years, the Division reached landmark settlement agreements with the states of Virginia, Delaware, and Georgia allowing these states to transition from a heavy reliance on institutional settings to a system focused on individualized and cost-effective community-based services promoting full participation by people with disabilities in community life. Last year, the Division also filed a Motion to Intervene in Lane v. Kitzhaber supporting the right for people with disabilities to pursue employment in integrated settings. When applied in the employment setting, the Olmstead decision will advance economic opportunities and independence for people with disabilities.

Debo Adebile is the leader that the Civil Rights Division needs to carry on this work. He has respect and support across the political spectrum, including from former Solicitors General Paul Clement and Drew Days, because of his principled and measured approach to issues. He has demonstrated skill inside and outside of the courtroom in a variety of settings, including as a litigator for a large corporate law firm and for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, and twice arguing cases before the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Adebile has the experience and understanding of civil rights laws that would enable him to effectively enforce the rights of all Americans, including people with disabilities.

Debo Adebile has the qualifications and experience to make an outstanding Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. Please support his swift confirmation.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write this letter to express support for the nomination of Debo Adebile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. As the Attorney General for the State of New York, I am confident that Debo will provide the leadership necessary to defend the civil rights of Americans living in my state and across the nation.

Born in New York, Mr. Adebile's life embodies the American Dream. He has shown incredible perseverance in overcoming adversity, and ultimately embarked on a career in public service that has been characterized by distinction. His professional record demonstrates that he has the expertise necessary to effectively and successfully lead the Civil Rights Division. In his previous roles at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, he maintained a reputation of providing strong leadership and exercising sound judgment.

Strong civil rights enforcement remains necessary in New York and across our nation. We need a capable and effective advocate like Debo Adebile to head the Division tasked with addressing those challenges. Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

On behalf of the National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA), its Board of Directors, and its member organizations around the country, I write in strong support of the nomination of Debo P. Adebile to the position of Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice. Mr. Adebile is a nationally renowned civil rights litigator and bipartisan consensus builder whose talents and commitment to justice make him an extraordinarily qualified candidate for the nation's top civil rights post.

Founded in 1988, NFHA is a consortium of more than 220 private, non-profit fair housing organizations, state and local civil rights agencies, and individuals from throughout the United States. Headquartered in Washington, D.C., the National Fair Housing Alliance, through comprehensive education, advocacy and enforcement programs, provides equal access to apartments, houses, mortgage loans and insurance policies for all residents in the nation.

Mr. Adebile embodies the American Dream. From humble beginnings as the son of European and African immigrants, even living through periods of homelessness as a child, Adebile worked his way through law school and eventually reached the highest court of the land to defend a key tenet of democracy at the Supreme Court.

Mr. Adebile's legal career has been both impressive and varied, including positions of leadership at every stop along the way. Following law school, Mr. Adebile was a litigation associate at the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, where he was elected to serve as Chairperson of the firm's Associates Committee. As an associate, Mr. Adebile represented clients including corporations in cases involving real estate developer interests, international transactions, antitrust claims, and patent violations, and a New York State Comptroller in a case involving employment-related First Amendment claims. During his decade-long tenure at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund (LDF), Mr. Adebile served as Director of Litigation, Associate Director-Counsel/Director of Litigation, and Acting President and Director-Counsel. At LDF, Mr. Adebile was responsible for supervising legal staff and maintained principal responsibility for oversight of the Fund's litigation before trial and appellate courts in many civil rights cases. Today, Mr. Adegbile is Senior Counsel to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

While at LDF, Mr. Adegbile was involved in a wide range of complex civil and criminal litigation in voting rights, education, economic justice, criminal justice, and housing matters. Most notably, Mr. Adegbile has argued two of the most important civil rights cases in a generation before the Supreme Court, defending the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act's pre-clearance provisions in Shelby County v. Holder, 570 U.S. ____ (2013), and in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder, 55 U.S. 193 (2009). As one of the nation's pre-eminent civil rights litigators, Mr. Adegbile brings with him unparalleled and broad-ranging expertise in civil rights law, making him an exceptional choice to be the nation's top civil rights law enforcement officer. Few candidates have such qualifying experience as Mr. Adegbile's to effectively uphold the civil and constitutional rights of all Americans.

It is with great enthusiasm that I urge you to support the confirmation of Debo Adegbile as the next Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice. *NOT ADMITTED TO THE NEW YORK BAR

The Honorable Patrick Leahy
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary

226 Dirksen Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

The Honorable Chuck Grassley
Ranking Member, Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
226 Dirksen Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I am the Co-Chair of the Litigation Department at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison LLP. From 2000-2011, I served on the board of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund ("LDF"), including a five-year period as Co-Chair of the LDF board. I write to express my strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

I have known Debo for over 14 years. He began his legal career as an associate at Paul, Weiss, and he worked under my supervision on many matters. While at Paul, Weiss, Debo represented various corporate clients, including Revlon, the Continental Grain Company, and Helena Chemical Company, in a variety of cases involving real estate developer interests, complex international transactions, and antitrust and patent claims. He also represented clients in the governmental and not-for-profit sectors, including various pro bono projects involving civil rights issues. Debo went on to join the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, where he litigated and supervised cases in both the trial and appellate courts, directed legal staff, and later undertook the role of Acting President and Director-Counsel during 2012-2013.

Debo is highly intelligent and an excellent writer. He also has excellent judgment, outstanding management skills, and an impeccable work ethic. His legal skills are stellar, and he is best described as a “lawyer’s lawyer.”

Debo takes a measured, pragmatic approach to every case and has an unwavering respect for the rule of law. Paul Clement, Solicitor General under President George W. Bush, has declared, “I have always found him [Debo] to be a formidable advocate of the highest intellect, skills and integrity.” I too am continually impressed by Debo’s legal and leadership skills, intelligence, and dedication. He has twice defended the Voting Rights Act—an Act that President Ronald Reagan once called “the crown jewel of American liberties”—before the U.S. Supreme Court, in Shelby County v. Holder and in Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder. He has earned my respect and admiration.

A son of immigrants from Ireland and Nigeria, Debo worked his way up from humble beginnings—and even a period of homelessness—to a prominent legal career defending American democracy. Debo understands the complexities of civil rights litigation. He also has the legal and leadership skills, judgment, and integrity required to lead the Civil Rights Division, an agency tasked with upholding the civil and constitutional rights of all Americans, particularly some of the most vulnerable members of our society.

For these reasons, I support the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile for the position of Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice, and I urge the Senate to confirm him promptly.

Respectfully,

Theodore V. Wells, Jr.

United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator:

On behalf of People For the American Way's hundreds of thousands of members, we write to strongly support the nomination of Debo Adegbile to be the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

Because of its importance in enforcing laws eliminating barriers to equality and opportunity, the Civil Rights Division is a critical means by which Americans protect the promises and values of the United States Constitution. Among many other things, the Civil Rights Division is charged with helping to eliminate discrimination in employment, housing, and education. The Division also has the responsibility to protect the right to vote, which Thomas Paine rightly observed over 200 years ago is "the primary right by which other rights are protected."

It is fitting, therefore, given the enormity of the Civil Rights Division's responsibilities, that President Obama has nominated one of this generation's preeminent civil rights litigators, the supremely qualified Debo Adegbile, to lead the Division. Adegbile's career exemplifies a dedication to advancing the civil rights of all Americans. Before becoming senior counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee, he spent more than a decade in various leadership positions at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, overseeing civil rights litigation at both the trial and appellate level. As director of litigation, then as acting president, Adegbile not only developed expertise in the areas of education, economic justice, criminal justice, and nonpartisan political participation, he also exercised the type of significant administrative and leadership responsibilities that will serve the Civil Rights Division well. Firefighters, school custodians, public parks employees, and Katrina evacuees are just some of the ordinary people all across the nation whom Adegbile has helped.

Adegbile has special expertise in voting rights, and he has twice defended the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act before the United States Supreme Court. He also worked extensively on the 2005-2006 legislative effort to reauthorize the Voting Rights Act, which led to overwhelming bipartisan majorities voting to renew the law in 2006.

Before his work with LDF, Adegbile spent seven years at the New York firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, where he represented major corporations, not-for-profit entities, and individuals. While there, he found time to offer pro bono service, coach public high school moot court teams, and make presentations to high school students regarding higher education, law school, and the importance of the United States Constitution.

Adegbile would bring to the Civil Rights Division his formidable litigation skills, his unquestioned integrity, a commitment to equality, his dedication to helping ordinary Americans, and a demonstrated ability to bridge partisan differences. It is no surprise that he has earned the admiration of leading attorneys spanning the ideological spectrum. Paul Clement, Solicitor

General under President George W. Bush, has said, "I have litigated both with and against Debo and have heard him argue in the Supreme Court. I have always found him to be a formidable advocate of the highest intellect, skills and integrity." Drew Days, Solicitor General and head of the Civil Rights Division under President Clinton, has cited "Adegbile's strong leadership, intelligence, dedication, and broad legal experience involving legal matters of government, private, and not-for-profit sectors [as proof] that he has the skills to lead the Civil Rights Division effectively."

Debo Adegbile is an excellent choice for the critically important position of leading the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division. We urge you to support the nomination.

Sincerely,

Dear Senator Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the oldest national organization advocating for the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) people and their families, the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force would like to express our strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to be the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice. The Civil Rights Division plays a critical role in protecting the rights of LGBT people, and Mr. Adegbile's skills as an advocate, litigator, and consensus-builder make him an ideal candidate to lead a division committed to the advancement of justice.

The Civil Rights Division protects the LGBT community in schools and at work, in public housing and public accommodations, in jails and on the streets. Strong leadership in the division has translated directly into strong protections for our community. Debo Adegbile is the leader the Civil Rights Division needs to carry on this work.

Mr. Adegbile's work at the nation's first civil rights firm, a large corporate law firm, and at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc. firmly established his reputation as one of the preeminent civil rights litigators of his generation. At the same time, his principled and measured approach to his work has earned him bipartisan support from colleagues, lawyers, and leaders, including former Solicitors General Paul Clement and Drew Days.

Alongside his professional career, Mr. Adegbile has maintained his commitment to the success of his community. He presently sits on the boards of his college and middle school, and frequently takes time to speak to students about the importance of the law, civil rights, and educational and professional opportunity.

Mr. Adegbile has the experience and understanding of civil rights laws that would enable him to effectively enforce the rights of all Americans, including members of the LGBT community, as the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. We urge the Senate to swiftly vote to confirm his nomination.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

I write to express my strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

I have watched Adegbile build an outstanding legal career in the private, not-for-profit and public sectors. At the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rikind, Wharton & Garrison, he participated in a variety of cases and represented major corporations in patent, antitrust and contract matters including clients such as Revlon, the Continental Grain Company, and Helena Chemical Company. He then joined the NAACP Legal Defense Fund where he oversaw cases in both the trial and appellate courts, managed legal staff and later served as Acting President and Director-Counsel during 2012-2013. Adegbile is uniquely hard working and dedicated, and he possesses the extensive litigation experience and strong leadership skills necessary to effectively lead the Civil Rights Division.

Adegbile demonstrates an ability to apply a measured approach to all of the cases and issues on which he works. For example, he was instrumental in the 2013 Supreme Court case Fisher v. Texas, addressing diversity and educational opportunity in the University of Texas system. In that case, Adegbile coordinated Fortune-100 and other leading American businesses, including American Express Co., in the filing of an amicus brief in support of the respondents. I am continually impressed by Adegbile's skills and professionalism – along with his steadfast commitment to upholding civil rights.

Debo Adebile's leadership skills, coupled with his deep understanding of the application and enforcement of complex civil rights issues, make him an ideal candidate to lead the Civil Rights Division into the future. For these reasons, I urge the Senate to promptly confirm Debo P. Adebile for the position of Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley,

I am writing this letter in support of the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile for Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice.

I have known Debo for well-over 30 years. We attended high school together at The Fieldston School in Bronx, New York. I can state unequivocally that I know of no finer individual and no one more qualified for the position to which he has been nominated.

I am a graduate of Cornell Law School (1992) and then served as a prosecutor in the Bronx District Attorney's Office. Assigned to both the Narcotics Bureau as well as the Felony Trial Bureau, I personally handled prosecutions against the most violent criminals in New York City in the mid-1990's. I interacted and worked with police officers from the Street Crime Unit and Narcotics Divisions, including undercover officers, on a daily basis.

After the District Attorney's Office, I worked in a civil practice for 12 years before I was appointed by Mayor Michael Bloomberg to serve as a Judge in the Criminal Court of Kings County (Brooklyn, New York). I was twice appointed by the Mayor (2009, 2010) before returning to a law practice with my family.

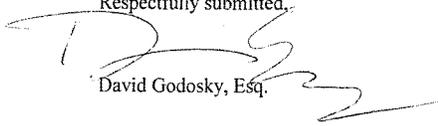

My experience as both a prosecutor and a judge makes me keenly aware of the necessary qualities in an individual to whom the power and responsibility over a division of the Department of Justice may be given. There is no question Debo possesses such qualities. He is scrupulously honest, has the highest integrity and is a fierce defender of the rule of law. Debo's life is not about seeking out the positions that are popular but, rather, seeking out and defending the positions that are just - under our laws and our Constitution.

The position Debo held at the Legal Defense Fund undoubtedly required him to pursue cases that would, by their very nature, antagonize persons and parties opposed to his clients. Such is the nature of advocacy. But defending the core principles of the United States Constitution sometimes requires a strong stomach as well as a thick skin. It requires someone who understands that these principles that we so cherish exist for the adulated as well as the despised. Debo has always understood that if these so-called "core values" are available only for some, then, in reality, they exist for none.

Quite simply, Debo is the person I would want as the prosecutor of a case if I was the victim or if I was the perpetrator. He will secure the rights of the victimized and defend the rights of the accused. He is the person I would most readily trust to make the right decisions in matters of life and death.

We, as a People, can certainly trust him to be an outstanding, honest and effective Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the Department of Justice. We would be fortunate to have him in that position.

Respectfully submitted,

David Godosky, Esq.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write to express my strong support of the nomination of Debo P. Adebile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

The Civil Rights Division has a long and distinguished history of combating discrimination in all shapes and forms. It works to uphold and defend the civil and constitutional rights of all Americans, particularly some of the most vulnerable members of our society. Debo P. Adebile is uniquely qualified to lead the Division.

Throughout his career, Mr. Adebile has worked diligently to protect the civil rights of people across the country. The son of immigrants from Ireland and Nigeria who came to the U.S. as a domestic worker and a student respectively, Mr. Adebile exemplifies the American Dream. He financed his entire college and law school education with scholarships, loans and work-study employment.

Mr. Adebile possesses the intellect, skill, integrity and deep commitment to the Constitution necessary to lead the Civil Rights Division. He will serve our country well. For the aforementioned reasons, I strongly urge the Senate to promptly confirm him.

Support the Nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice

Dear Senator:

On behalf of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights and the 75 undersigned organizations, we are writing to indicate our strongest possible support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice. Mr. Adegbile is a tireless advocate, a skilled litigator, and a well-respected member of the legal community who is extraordinarily qualified for and suited to this position.

Mr. Adegbile is one of the preeminent civil rights litigators of his generation. He is also a consensus builder. Mr. Adegbile has earned respect and admiration from a bipartisan set of colleagues, lawyers, and leaders, including former Solicitors General Paul Clement and Drew Days, because of his principled and measured approach to issues.

Throughout his career, Mr. Adegbile has distinguished himself as a highly effective and respected advocate who achieved successes both inside and outside the courtroom. The son of immigrants who worked his way from poverty to the top of the legal profession, Mr. Adegbile is a steadfast voice for equality and opportunity for all Americans.

Mr. Adegbile's professional experiences are varied and his accomplishments are myriad. He has worked as a litigator for a large corporate law firm, where he handled a variety of cases for corporate, governmental, individual, and not-for-profit clients; has argued before the Supreme Court twice; and has served for a decade in various leadership positions at the nation's first civil rights law firm, the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., where he oversaw cases in both the trial and appellate courts, while managing the legal staff. He currently serves as Senior Counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Adegbile is exceptionally qualified to lead the Civil Rights Division at this time in history. As the nation's chief law enforcement officer on civil rights issues, he would bring a depth and breadth of understanding of federal civil rights laws, and their enforcement and application. He has litigated cases across civil rights subject areas, from voting rights to fair housing to employment discrimination to equal educational opportunity. He has practiced law at all levels, from the trial court to the Supreme Court, and has appeared in courts throughout the country. He twice defended the Voting Rights Act before the U.S. Supreme Court. The Act, which President Ronald Reagan called "the crown jewel of American liberties," was unanimously reauthorized by the U.S. Senate in 2006.

Mr. Adegbile is highly regarded for his leadership, judgment, and integrity. And Mr. Adegbile is involved with his community -- he presently serves on the Boards of Trustees of his college and middle school, and frequently speaks to students ranging in age from elementary school to law school about the importance of the Constitution, civil rights, and educational and professional opportunity. With his stellar career of more than a decade at one of the nation's leading civil rights law firms, and his work in the private and public

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We write in strong support of the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice, and in response to the letter from Chuck Canterbury of the National Fraternal Order of Police dated January 6, 2014.

We graduated from the New York University School of Law with Mr. Adegbile in 1994, and were law school roommates with him from approximately 1992-1994. During law school, we quickly developed a mutual admiration and friendship for one another. Born and raised in New York City and as children of immigrant parents, we all shared mutual experiences and aspirations. We have remained in close personal contact with Mr. Adegbile since our graduation from law school and have been friends with him for over 20 years. Debo attended and spoke at both of our weddings. We have celebrated the birth of our respective children, attended the funeral services of his mother and our father, and celebrated professional accomplishments with one another. We cannot think of a finer person than Mr. Adegbile to fulfill the position of Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. He is an attorney of the highest character, and a man with the utmost integrity. As his career demonstrates, he is skilled litigator and a tireless advocate. Mr. Adegbile has a deep respect for the rule of law, has always been respectful of multiple points of view (even those different from his own), and is above all else, fair.

We also are the sons of Nicholas J. Panarella, Sr., a retired first-grade detective from the New York City Police Department, whom Debo knew very well prior to our father's death in 2008. Indeed, Debo attended our father's burial services, and his friendship and words of support were a source of strength during that very difficult time.

Throughout our relationship with Mr. Adebile he has never expressed any animosity whatsoever towards the law enforcement community. To the contrary, he has always expressed strong admiration for police officers, for our father's career as a detective, and of the vital role that the many men and women who carry the shield play in protecting our communities. We remember with fondness the many discussions between our father, Debo and us about important issues facing police officers and the law enforcement community. In all of these discussions, Mr. Adebile demonstrated a deep respect and appreciation for police officers and the challenges that they face every day.

Thus, we were very disappointed to read Mr. Canterbury's letter and in particular his unfounded accusation that Mr. Adebile lacks "ethics" and applies a "race-baiting" approach to our legal system. Those statements are patently untrue, and unfairly attempt to sully Mr. Adebile's fine reputation. Based on our 20 year relationship with him, we know Mr. Adebile to have the highest ethical compass, and a deep respect for the rule of law. We are confident that he will bring professionalism and honor to the Department of Justice.

We hope that our views will assist the Senate Judiciary Committee in supporting Mr. Adebile's nomination to become Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice.

Respectfully submitted,

Nicholas J. Panarella

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

I write respectfully to express my unqualified endorsement of Debo Adegbile to serve as Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the United States Department of Justice. Mr. Adegbile, whom I have known since childhood, is an ideal choice to lead the Department's civil rights mission and I see no reason for the Committee on the Judiciary to hesitate in reporting his nomination to the full Senate for consideration and confirmation.

I was for more than 12 years an Assistant United States Attorney in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. I served as a chief of that office's terrorism unit and prosecuted Zacarias Moussaoui, who remains the only member of al Qaeda held criminally responsible for the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. I regularly worked with Department leadership, often at its highest levels.

I have had the pleasure of knowing Mr. Adegbile for more than 30 years, since we were high school classmates. He is a person of flawless character whose commitment to excellence has always featured clear judgment, sharp intellect and even temperament. His professional accomplishments, of which there are many, rightly place him among the preeminent civil rights litigators of his generation. I can say without equivocation that Mr. Adegbile has the right moral bearing, experience and skill to be one of the Department's finest leaders and I am confident he would make an excellent Assistant Attorney General. You would be hard pressed to find a more suitable and deserving candidate.

For these reasons, and without reservation, I encourage the Committee to report Mr. Adcgbile's nomination to the full Senate.

RE: NAACP STRONG SUPPORT FOR DEBO P. ADEGBILE TO SERVE AS ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR CIVIL RIGHTS

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

On behalf of the NAACP, our nation's oldest, largest and most widely-recognized grassroots-based civil rights organization, I strongly urge you to support the nomination of Debo P. Adebile to serve as Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights, and to do everything possible to move his confirmation as quickly as possible through the U.S. Senate. Mr. Adebile is not only intimately familiar with the civil rights problems and challenges of racial and ethnic minorities throughout the United States, but he also has a proven track record in taking a proactive approach to implementing long term, permanent solutions to these problems. Mr. Adebile is an inspired choice to lead the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division, and will add a much-needed energy and expertise to the vital work of the Division.

Debo Adebile is no stranger to the legal and civil and human rights communities, or to the NAACP specifically. For more than a decade, Mr. Adebile has been a leading voice in the civil rights community on issues as varied as voting rights, equal opportunity programs, disability rights, civil rights, the rights of victims of domestic violence, human rights, and housing rights. Mr. Adebile has also argued numerous civil rights cases before the U.S. Supreme Court, including twice defending the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act. Mr. Adebile's intelligence, his judicial temperament, as well as his willingness to work with all involved parties and his broad legal experience focusing on civil rights is well known to and respected by many in the U.S. Senate, given his current position as Senior Counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Thank you in advance for your attention to the NAACP position. I strongly urge you once again to support Debo Adebile's swift and non-contentious confirmation to serve as Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. Should you have any questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me at my office at (202) 463-2940.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We write as members of an ad hoc group of African American AmLaw partners and Fortune 500 general counsel to strongly support the nomination of Debo P. Adebile to become the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the United States Department of Justice.

Mr. Adebile's public advocacy on behalf of ethnic and racial minorities in the areas of voting rights, education, and access to courts, exemplifies a strong commitment to participatory democracy by all United States citizens. Through his many speaking engagements—to audiences at every stage of the educational spectrum, from law, college, high, middle, and primary school students—we can readily discern his commitment to educating the next generation about the need for civil rights advocacy and protecting voting rights in particular. He is a thought leader among civil rights lawyers and someone who has demonstrated through both words and deeds a true commitment to equality in America. In short, he is highly qualified to lead the Department of Justice's esteemed Civil Rights Division.

Although we do not all personally know Mr. Adebile, a review of his responses to the Committee's questionnaire for non-judicial nominees evidences a breathtaking array of unparalleled civil rights litigation experience for a contemporary attorney who has practiced less than twenty years. While we have not encountered Mr. Adebile in our representative matters, as members of the Judiciary Committee you have. By all accounts, he has admirably served on Chairman Leahy's staff since last year. The weekly Committee markups and hearings provide all members of this Committee ample opportunity to observe Mr. Adebile in action and we have no doubt that he has demonstrated the dignity and professionalism that are his hallmarks.

Finally, we understand that the Fraternal Order of Police recently announced its opposition to Mr. Adebile's nomination. We deeply admire the men and women first-responders who populate the FOP but contend that the opposition is misguided. Prior to joining the Committee staff, Mr. Adebile was principally a civil litigator dedicating some eighty percent (80%) of his practice to civil proceedings. Mr. Adebile's advocacy on behalf of a single individual on death row while serving at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund should not serve to disqualify him from the position to which he has been nominated. Indeed, as he noted in his questionnaire, LDF's "founding charter places special emphasis on the mission of representing poor African Americans." In our view, lawyers serve as detached professionals and should not be cloaked with the misdeeds of their clients.

For all of the foregoing reasons, we urge the Committee to advance Mr. Adegbile's nomination to the full Senate so that he may be promptly confirmed.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

As the President and Director of the Vera Institute of Justice, I write to express my strong support for the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile to become the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice. The Vera Institute, a 52 year old non-profit that works with federal, state and local law enforcement and public safety agencies to improve administration of justice, views the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice as paramount to achieving that goal.

I first met Debo years ago when he and I began our careers together at the law firm of Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison. As a colleague, he exemplified the type of professionalism that is integral to any successful organization. He was open and honest, fair-minded, and most importantly, committed to careful and thorough execution of the tasks at hand. Paul Weiss provided us both the opportunity to gain first class experience in complex civil and commercial litigation. Debo has always exhibited a willingness to work hard and has strived to achieve the best possible outcome in all cases. Because of these qualities, he not only gained widespread respect by principals both in- and outside of the firm but was seen as a mentor by many lawyers junior to him.

After our time at Paul Weiss, Debo continued to build on his litigation experience at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund (LDF). While there, he served for a decade in various leadership positions oversaw cases in both the trial and appellate courts, and during 2012-2013 he served as its Acting President and Director-Counsel. Debo is an experienced and accomplished litigator and a proven leader on a broad array of civil rights issues, and it is my belief that he is a stellar candidate to serve as AAG of the Civil Rights Division. I can say this with the confidence of Vera having observed and worked with many of his predecessors through Democratic and Republican administrations.

It was an honor to have worked with Debo, and I am positive that his extensive experience, both at Paul Weiss and beyond, makes him overwhelmingly qualified to serve as leader of the Civil Rights Division. He has always shown a willingness to represent any and all of his clients with zeal and a passion that matches his intellectual abilities. He has the temperament to manage the office, staff and its docket fairly and responsibly. For all of the above reasons, I urge the Senate to promptly confirm Debo P. Adegbile for the position of Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley,

I am currently a partner in the Litigation Department of Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr in New York. Before joining the firm, I worked for 13 years as a federal prosecutor in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. During my tenure as a federal prosecutor, I worked with law enforcement officers on a daily basis to investigate and prosecute narcotics trafficking, public corruption, terrorism, and other crimes. During 2009-2011, I served as the Deputy United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, supervising more than 180 federal prosecutors and all criminal and civil matters filed by the United States in the District. I write to provide my enthusiastic support of the nomination of Debo P. Adegbile for Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

I have known Debo for more than 20 years. Over this time, I have come to know him not only as a brilliant, hard-working lawyer, but also as a honest and caring person with the utmost integrity. While Debo is a fierce defender of the United States Constitution, he also is fair-minded and has tremendous judgment, two qualities that would serve him well as the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. I am confident that Debo will bring a principled and measured approach to this important position.

In sum, I can think of no better person to head the Civil Rights Division than Debo. Please do not hesitate to contact me if I can provide any further information in support of his nomination.

Very truly yours,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I write to express my strong and unreserved support for Debo Patrick Adegbile, Esq., to be confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice. I have known and admired Debo, a fellow graduate of New York University School of Law, for well over 10 years, and I cannot think of a more effective, respected, accomplished, and passionate advocate to lead the Division.

The Department of Justice, and the Civil Rights Division more particularly, plays an important and unique role in combating unlawful discrimination and upholding and defending the civil and constitutional rights of all Americans, with a special charge to protect the most vulnerable among us. I know this well, having had the privilege, earlier in my professional career as a federal prosecutor, to investigate and prosecute important cases to vindicate the rights of individuals whose civil rights had been violated. In addition, some years ago in private practice, I worked collaboratively with Senator Charles Schumer and Brooklyn's Congressional delegation to get the Department of Justice to reopen the investigation of the horrific 1955 murder of 14-year-old Emmitt Till, the young African American boy from Chicago, whose body was thrown into Mississippi's Tallahatchie River by a group of white men, after they had beaten him brutally and gouged out one of his eyes -- all because the young boy had purportedly whistled at a white woman. Emmitt Till's murder was one of the most pivotal events in our nation's struggle to create a more perfect union during the era of the Civil Rights movement.

In this connection, the Division would be well-served by a leader whose resolute belief in the rule of law and the enduring principles that make our nation great drives its mission to do critically important work. Without doubt, as one of the preeminent civil rights attorneys and advocates of his generation, Debo has the integrity, perspective, and capacity to be an exceptional leader of the Division.

During his decade at the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, the nation's first civil rights law firm, Debo worked on significant and complex impact litigation in trial and appellate courts. Over time, through his hard work and penchant for strong results, he steadily rose in the organization's ranks to serve in various leadership positions, including director of litigation and Acting President and Director-Counsel. Notably, he twice defended the constitutionality of the Voting Rights Act in oral argument before the U.S. Supreme Court -- a victory that, undoubtedly, has helped to preserve a law President Reagan once called "the crown jewel of American liberties." In 2006, the U.S. Senate unanimously reauthorized this important law.

District Attorney

The Honorable Charles E. Grassley

Additionally, Debo's impressive legal acumen and success as an advocate are not too surprising, given that he follows in the large footsteps of his two mentors at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison, namely the late A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr., a civil rights giant who was one of our nation's most passionate and unyielding voices for equality, and Ted Wells, who is one of the best trial lawyers in the country. At Paul Weiss, a prominent corporate law firm, Debo gained his footing as an excellent litigator and trial attorney. He capably represented the interests of major corporations and government officials in complex patent, antitrust, employment, and contract matters. As important, he demonstrated equally remarkable skill working on several high profile pro bono matters.

Debo's best-in-class professional skill, integrity, considered judgment and perspective, and tremendous work ethic stand as the hallmarks that have helped to distinguish him throughout an impressive career. What is equally as important to consider is how Debo embodies the very essence of the American Dream. He is the son of immigrants from Ireland and Nigeria, whose family once suffered through a period of homelessness and, at one time, lived in one of New York City's most notorious welfare hotels. Poverty served as a mere impediment for Debo, as he has made the most of his opportunities and talents, ultimately carving out a professional career as an advocate par excellence, including his current role as Senior Counsel to this very Committee.

Debo Patrick Adegbile exemplifies the greatest aspiration of our nation: that when you give a talented child an opportunity to develop intellectual firepower, he or she can develop the courage and capacity to promote the greater good for everyone. He has the experience, intellect, leadership ability, integrity, and deep commitment to civil rights, to serve our country well as the Division's chief architect and leader. Additionally, his rise from humble beginnings and demonstrated commitment to public service, no doubt, will serve as an inspiration to his colleagues and to the children of our nation.

For all of the reasons set forth in this letter, I hope that the Senate will promptly confirm Debo as the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice.

Re: Nomination of Debo Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

As the Senate Judiciary Committee prepares to deliberate over the nomination of Debo Adegbile to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division, I write to address the criticism this nominee has received regarding the legal representation he provided to a death-sentenced prisoner.

A fundamental tenet of our justice system and our Constitution is that anyone who faces loss of liberty has a right to legal counsel. Lawyers have an ethical obligation to uphold that principle and provide zealous representation to people who otherwise would stand alone against the power and resources of the government – even to those accused or convicted of terrible crimes. The American people understand this obligation, and the corollary principle stated in rule 1.2(b) of the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct that “[a] lawyer’s representation of a client does not constitute an endorsement of the client’s political, economic, social or moral views or activities.”

I was alarmed to learn that there is some opposition to Mr. Adegbile’s nomination based solely on his efforts to protect the fundamental rights of an unpopular client while working at the Legal Defense Fund. His work, like the work of ABA members who provide thousands of hours of pro bono legal services every year, is consistent with the finest tradition of this country’s legal profession and should be commended, not condemned.

Sincerely,

James R. Silkenat

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing on behalf of the more than 330,000 members of the Fraternal Order of Police to express our extreme disappointment, displeasure and vehement opposition to the nomination of Debo Adebile to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division at the U.S. Department of Justice.

As word of this nomination spreads through the law enforcement community, reactions range from anger to incredulity. Under this nominee's leadership, the Legal Defense Fund (LDF) of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People volunteered their services to represent Wesley Cook, better known to the world as Mumia Abu-Jamal—our country's most notorious cop-killer. There is no disputing that Philadelphia Police Officer Daniel Faulkner was murdered by this thug. His just sentence—death—was undone by your nominee and others like him who turned the justice system on its head with unfounded and unproven allegations of racism.

We are aware of the tried and true shield behind which activists of Adebile's ilk are wont to hide—that everyone is entitled to a defense; but surely you would agree that a defense should not be based on falsely disparaging and savaging the good name and reputation of a lifeless police officer. Certainly any legal scholar can see the injustice and absence of ethics in this cynical race-baiting approach to our legal system.

The Administration did not consult the FOP during the decision-making process for this nomination. In fact, to our knowledge, none of our nation's law enforcement organizations were consulted despite a recent pledge by your Attorney General to be more open and transparent with the men and women we rely on to keep us safe. This nomination can be interpreted in only one way: it is a thumb in the eye of our nation's law enforcement officers. It demonstrates a total lack of regard or empathy for those who strive to keep you and everyone else in our nation safe in your homes and neighborhoods—sometimes giving their lives in the effort.

—BUILDING ON A PROUD TRADITION—

We believe that law enforcement and minority communities need to build even greater bonds of trust and mutual respect. Yet, your Civil Rights Division, under the direction of Thomas E. Perez and Roy L. Austin, Jr., has increasingly built obstacles to this goal with its aggressive and punitive approach towards local law enforcement agencies. Your nominee will certainly exacerbate that growing division and distrust.

Standing up and fighting against racism wherever and whenever you find it is a brave and admirable endeavor; sometimes standing up against racism entails opposing and exposing cynical opportunism disguised in the name of justice. We will make every effort to point this out in our opposition to this nomination and will do everything we can to defeat it in the Senate.

It is our hope that, in the future, you and your Administration will consider candidates with records of fairness and respect to all Americans when selecting nominees for leadership positions at the Justice Department or anywhere else in your administration.

Sincerely,

Chuck Canterbury

Re: Letter of Support for Indira Talwani, Nominee for the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

On behalf of the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association (NAPABA), we proudly endorse and urge the prompt confirmation of Indira Talwani to the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. Ms. Talwani possesses the necessary qualities—intellectual capacity, integrity, experience, and judicial temperament—to serve on the federal judiciary with distinction.

NAPABA is a national bar association representing the interests of Asian Pacific American attorneys, judges, law professors, and law students. Now in its 25th year, NAPABA represents the interests of over 60 affiliate organizations and over 40,000 Asian Pacific American attorneys. NAPABA is deeply committed to supporting the appointment of qualified Asian Pacific Americans to the federal bench, where Asian Pacific Americans are significantly underrepresented. Of the approximately 875 active Article III judges, only 21 are Asian Pacific American. If the number of Asian Pacific American Article III judges reflected the number of Asian Pacific Americans in the United States, that number would be over 50.

There has never been an Asian Pacific American federal district court judge in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Likewise, there has never been an Asian Pacific American federal judge in any of the courts covered by the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

Ms. Talwani has had a distinguished career in the law. For over 10 years, she has served as a partner with the Boston law firm of Segal Roitman LLP, where she has practiced employment and labor law. In addition, she also has been an adjunct professor at Northeastern University School of Law. Prior to relocating to Boston, Ms. Talwani was a partner with Altshuler, Berzon LLP in San Francisco. She began her legal career by serving as a law clerk to the Honorable Stanley A. Weigel for the United States District Court of the Northern District of California.

Ms. Talwani has garnered recognition for her work. She has been selected for inclusion in Best Lawyers of America and Massachusetts Super Lawyer. Notably, in 2010, Ms. Talwani was named "Lawyer of the Year" by Massachusetts Law Weekly.

In addition to using her legal skills on behalf of her clients, Ms. Talwani has continued to give back to the community through countless pro bono projects. This work typically has been on behalf of disadvantaged individuals or those who are unable to afford legal services. Based on this work, the Chinese Progressive Association presented Ms. Talwani with the Workers Justice Award in 2010.

Ms. Talwani's commitment to public service and equal justice stems in part from her background. Her parents are first-generation immigrants who worked hard to integrate into the fabric of American society. Accordingly, Ms. Talwani grew up with a rich appreciation for the strengths and opportunities offered by this country, along with an awareness of the importance of differing viewpoints and perspectives and how that strengthens our society. Ms. Talwani's interest in becoming a federal judge is a reflection of her strong commitment to serving the country and making sure that our nation continues to serve as an example for all cultures worldwide.

Based on her qualifications, intellect, integrity, and commitment to service, the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association proudly supports Ms. Indira Talwani to serve as a District Judge for the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

Statement for the Record
Hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Nomination of John P. Carlin

While I am unable to appear at today's hearing, I am pleased to offer my strong support for the confirmation of a highly qualified and accomplished New Yorker, John P. Carlin, who has been nominated by President Obama to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for National Security at the Department of Justice. I ask that my remarks be included in the Committee's record of this hearing.

I am proud to support Mr. Carlin because his career as a public servant and federal prosecutor make him an exceptionally well-qualified nominee who will continue to serve the Department of Justice and our country with distinction. Mr. Carlin is currently the Acting Assistant Attorney General for National Security at the Department of Justice. He most recent served as Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff of the National Security Division. Previously, Mr. Carlin served as Chief of Staff and Senior Counsel to Robert S. Mueller, III, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. As a career federal prosecutor since 1999, Mr. Carlin also served as National Coordinator of the Justice Department's Computer Hacking and Intellectual Property Program. His experience as an Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia includes prosecuting cases ranging from homicide and sexual offenses, to cyber, fraud, and public corruption matters.

Mr. Carlin grew up in New York, where his parents still reside. He graduated from Williams College, and earned his Juris Doctor degree from Harvard Law School. He was admitted to the New York State Bar in 2000.

I believe that, if confirmed, he will be an outstanding Assistant Attorney General.

Statement for the Record
Hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Nomination of Debo P. Adebile
January 8, 2014

While I am unable to appear at today's hearing, I am pleased to offer my strong support for the confirmation of a highly qualified and accomplished New Yorker, Debo P. Adebile, who has been nominated by President Obama to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division at the Department of Justice. I ask that my remarks be included in the Committee's record of this hearing.

Debo P. Adebile is Senior Counsel to the United States Senate Judiciary Committee, a position he has held since July 2013. Previously, from 2001 to 2013, Mr. Adebile held a number of roles at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., including Special Counsel, Acting President and Director-Counsel, Associate Director-Counsel and Director of Litigation, Associate Director of Litigation, and Assistant Counsel. Prior to joining the NAACP, he was an associate at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison in New York from 1994 to 2001. Mr. Adebile has strong ties to New York and still lives there. He was born in Manhattan in 1966, and was raised by a single mother in the Bronx. After receiving his B.A. from Connecticut College and a J.D. from New York University School of Law, Mr. Adebile joined the New York Bar Association. He is admitted to several New York courts, the United States Supreme Court, and the United States Court of Appeals in all 12 regional circuits.

I am proud to support Mr. Adebile because his career as a civil rights litigator, including several U.S. Supreme Court matters, makes him an exceptionally well-qualified nominee who will serve well the Department of Justice and our country.

I believe that, if confirmed, he will be an outstanding Assistant Attorney General.

SENATOR MARK KIRK'S STATEMENT REGARDING NANCY ROSENSTENGEL, NOMINEE FOR DISTRICT COURT JUDGE, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS

Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley, thank you for giving me any opportunity provide a statement for the record and comment on Nancy Rosenstengel, President Obama's nominee for the bench in the Southern District of Illinois. I am honored.

Currently, Ms. Rosenstengel is a resident of Belleville, Illinois and serves as the Clerk of Court for the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Illinois, a position she has held since 2009. Previously Ms. Rosenstengel served for eleven (11) years as a law clerk to Judge Patrick Murphy, also of the Southern District of Illinois.

In addition, Ms. Rosenstengel worked for five years in private practice at Sandberg, Phoenix & von Gontard in St. Louis. In reviewing Ms. Rosenstengel cumulative vitae, I was pleased to see her varied experience in private law practice and within the court system of the Southern District of Illinois.

Ms. Rosenstengel is a graduate of two of my home state's excellent universities, the University of Illinois and Southern Illinois University School of Law. These universities stand for academic rigor and harbor a strong work ethic, traits that Ms. Rosenstengel will certainly need when addressing the varied factual and legal questions of the court.

I support the nomination of Ms. Rosenstengel. I am certain Ms. Rosenstengel will make a fine addition to the bench in the Southern District of Illinois. I look forward to watching her career progress.

I cannot help but take this opportunity to comment on the nomination process as it is conducted in Illinois between the office of Sen. Richard Durbin, Illinois' senior Senator, and my office.

I know of no other pair of U.S. Senators who work more closely and in such a bipartisan manner than Sen. Durbin and our staffs. In discussing judicial nominees, my communications with Senator Durbin have been excellent. Since the day I was sworn in as a U.S. Senator representing Illinois, Senator Durbin has been endlessly gracious and courteous. He is a professional and a gentleman. I am proud to call him my friend.

Lastly, it is also true that I cannot let this opportunity pass without praising Senator Chuck Grassley, Iowa's senior Senator, and his excellent work on the Senate Judiciary Committee. Senator Grassley is a loyal and dedicated steadfast anchor on the Judiciary Committee. He is man of family, faith, and public service, and has been a tireless representative for the people of Iowa for decades.

Senator Grassley has obtained advanced academic degrees and done the work of men with sturdy, upright backs and strong hands – a farmer and a sheet metal and assembly line worker. This is the kind of background and valued work experience that roots a man in the things that matter and create first-rate legislators and public servants, a job Senator Grassley has filled on behalf of Iowans in the Iowa Legislature, U.S. House of Representatives, and since 1980 in the U.S. Senate. He has been a great asset in my career in Washington, D.C. For this I thank him and am grateful for his friendship and counsel.

Again, I appreciate the opportunity to address the Senate Judiciary Committee and the time the committee has afforded me.

Thank you.

Justice's Civil Rights nominee has resume that includes 'Sesame Street' and voting rights
Washington Post
By Timothy Phelps

Debo Adebile, President Obama's nominee to lead the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, attributes much of his success as an attorney to a nine-year stint as a child actor on "Sesame Street" in the 1970s.

The unusual resume item brought him a kind of mini-celebrity and was a surprisingly frequent focus of job interviews, Adebile has said, even as he climbed the legal ranks to join a big New York corporate law firm.

But as he faces Senate confirmation hearings this month, Adebile, 46, is drawing a different kind of attention from conservative activists. They are less interested in stories about the time he explained the letter "S" to Grover the Muppet and more curious about his record as an unapologetically liberal voting-rights lawyer, his representation of a convicted killer of a police officer and his leadership tenure at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

"When he ran the unit at the Legal Defense Fund, they took positions far outside of the mainstream of the law, far outside existing jurisprudence as it relates to race, and really advanced a fringe agenda," said J. Christian Adams, a former Justice Department civil rights lawyer who has written a book attacking the Justice Department under Obama. "If he attempts to do the same at the Justice Department, it will be a catastrophe."

Adebile's nomination, along with the recent news that prominent Stanford University law professor Pamela S. Karlan will be appointed his voting-rights deputy, has been seen by many as a sign that the Obama administration is moving to reinvigorate the Justice Department's voting section, particularly after a Supreme Court ruling last year voided important parts of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Adebile defended the act's constitutionality on behalf of the Legal Defense Fund during the Supreme Court argument. But the justices ruled that a federal requirement forcing some states to seek Justice Department "pre-clearance" before changing their election laws violated the states' sovereignty.

Turning to Adebile to be the top civil rights official, Attorney General Eric H. Holder Jr. signaled that he intended to fight back hard to safeguard what remains of the landmark Voting Rights Act and to prevent Southern states from imposing new restrictions or identification requirements at polling stations that Holder argues could effectively disenfranchise minorities.

Republicans on the Senate Judiciary Committee, where Adebile has worked for several months as senior counsel to Chairman Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), have not yet taken a stand on him. But given the Senate battle over nominations and criticism by Republicans of the Civil Rights Division under Adebile's predecessor, fireworks are expected.

"He is just so incredibly suited for this position," said Leslie M. Proll, director of the Washington office of the Legal Defense Fund, which was founded in 1940 by former Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. Among civil rights lawyers, "Debo stands alone in terms of his depth and the breadth of issues (he has worked on) across the board."

Ryan Haygood, a defense fund colleague from the New York office, said Adebile was raised by a single mother, an Irish immigrant who struggled with poverty and even occasional homelessness when he was a child.

Despite her circumstances and the absence of her son's Nigerian father, Adebile's mother fought to get her son into top private schools in Manhattan, where he usually received scholarships because of his good grades, Haygood said.

When he was 4 or 5, a friend noticed an ad seeking children to audition for "Sesame Street." Adebile landed the job and played the part of Debo, a child of the "Sesame Street" neighborhood, until high school. Haygood said his friend had "fond memories of Grover and Cookie Monster" and of meeting Ray Charles during a guest appearance by the singer.

After high school, Adebile attended Connecticut College and the New York University School of Law.

"His life's trajectory went from humble circumstances in New York City to standing at the podium at the Supreme Court," said Nina Perales, director of litigation at the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund. "It was a special moment to watch him argue and argue well."

But Adebile's career has suffered some notable disappointments. In 2012, he was passed over for the top job at the Legal Defense Fund after serving as its acting president for eight months. He was asked to stay on as special counsel.

In 2011, Obama asked the American Bar Association to evaluate Adebile for possible appointment to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, normally a precursor to nomination. But the White House later withdrew his name.

Conservative bloggers say the bar association found Adebile unqualified. But Florida lawyer Ben Hill, who was chairman of the bar association evaluation committee, said in an interview that Adebile's name was withdrawn before he was rated by the group.

An administration official said Adebile's name was withdrawn after Caitlin Halligan, a lawyer in the Manhattan district attorney's office with a moderate record, failed to win Senate approval for the D.C. Circuit, casting doubt on Adebile's chances.

The White House would not comment on the record or allow Adebile to be interviewed for this article, as is common practice for nominees.

Adebile's representation of Mumia Abu-Jamal, a radical Philadelphia journalist who was convicted of killing a police officer in 1981, was another potential liability in judicial confirmation hearings. The issue is already being raised by conservatives in advance of his confirmation hearing for the Justice Department post.

Abu-Jamal was convicted and sentenced to death with what state and federal judges said was overwhelming evidence, including three eyewitnesses to the shooting and two more who said he bragged of the killing when taken to a hospital afterward. But the charismatic Abu-Jamal became an international cause celebre in leftist circles.

Adebile and other fund lawyers filed a friend-of-the-court brief with the Supreme Court in 2009 asserting that the conviction was invalid because of racial discrimination in jury selection. They directly represented Abu-Jamal when prosecutors asked the Supreme Court to reinstate his death sentence, which had been thrown out because of problems with jury instructions. He is serving life in prison without parole.

Adebile's supporters say he is well-suited to the civil rights post, not only because of his professional experience in combating discrimination but also, Haygood said, "because of his own life story, empowering people to pursue their dreams and not to be constrained by race, gender or disability."

Content: (NNPA)—President Obama’s Nov. 14 nomination of an African-American man to become the government’s top civil rights lawyer has been applauded by many in the Black and civil rights communities.

Debo P. Adebile, who has served as senior counsel to the United States Senate Judiciary Committee since July, is the nominee for the Department of Justice’s assistant attorney general for civil rights.

Adebile is one of the premier civil rights attorneys and would serve admirably in the role if his nomination is approved by the U.S. Senate, said his former colleagues at the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, where he worked since 2001.

“Debo has precisely the type of broad civil rights experience that is required at this pivotal moment in our country,” said Sherrilyn Ifill, president and director-counsel of the Legal Defense Fund, a separate entity from the NAACP, in a statement.

“Our country needs someone like Debo with significant experience in voting rights to protect the deeply held American value that each person has the right to a voice in our democracy. Debo has worked tirelessly to ensure that our nation lives up to its promise of equality for all Americans,” Ifill continued.

In his years-long tenure at the Legal Defense Fund, Adebile served in various roles including as special counsel, acting president and director-counsel, associate director-counsel and director of litigation, associate director of litigation, and assistant counsel.

While there, he also made two appearances before the U.S. Supreme Court to defend the Voting Rights Act in Shelby County v. Holder and Northwest Austin Municipal Utility District No. 1 v. Holder. He also represented evacuees from Hurricane Katrina in the first post-Katrina federal voting rights lawsuit.

Prior to joining the NAACP, he was an associate at Paul, Weiss, Rifkind, Wharton & Garrison from 1994 to 2001. This is the same law firm that Jeh Johnson, recently appointed secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, was a partner.

“As we navigate the new Civil Rights-era, Debo offers precisely the type of leadership necessary,” Congressional Black Caucus Chairwoman Rep. Marcia Fudge (D-Ohio) said in a statement Nov. 15. “From reforming America’s criminal justice system to expanding equality for all Americans, Debo has the civil rights experience and expertise needed to head the Division. Debo’s integrity, professionalism and respectable reputation as a legal practitioner and litigator are evidence that he is the right person for this incredibly important role.”

“Members of the Congressional Black Caucus strongly support President Obama’s nomination of Debo Adebile and encourage our colleagues in the Senate to confirm him for this position without delay,” Fudge said.

The son of immigrants from Ireland and Nigeria, Adebile’s success came after growing up in abject poverty, including periods of homelessness, in New York City. Through scholarships, loans, and the sweat of his brow, Adebile worked his way through college and law school, eventually obtaining a bachelor’s degree from Connecticut College and a law degree from New York University School of Law.

Peers say his upbringing has informed his commitment to defending and upholding the rights of the most vulnerable in our society.

Wade Henderson, president and CEO of The Leadership Conference on Civil and Human Rights said Adebile is in “a class of his own when it comes to understanding the application and enforcement of complex civil rights issues.”

“Millions of Americans rely on the Civil Rights Division to enforce housing, education, and employment discrimination laws, hate crime laws, the Violence Against Women Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the core civil rights statutes that allow all of us to take part in the fullness of American life,” Henderson said in a statement.

“Adebile’s skill set, talents, and experience make him the perfect choice to head the Civil Rights Division,” he added. “We call on the Senate to swiftly confirm him.”

HUMETEWA, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA; ROSEMARY MARQUEZ, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA; HON. DOUGLAS L. RAYES, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA; AND HON. JAMES ALAN SOTO, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA, BY HON. JOHN McCAIN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARIZONA

Senator McCAIN. Well, thank you, Madam Chairman, and thank you for your kind words. I would like to thank Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley for their hard work in bringing these well-qualified nominees to the Committee for its consideration. I am proud to have a partnership with Senator Flake in this process, and I believe that today is a great day for Arizona.

You will be hearing today from six nominees to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. As the Committee well knows, this is a court that has been under great strain recently. While it has been consistently ranked as one of the top ten busiest courts in the country, it has been strained by a series of recent vacancies. Of the 13 authorized judgeships in this court, 6 are currently vacant. For that reason, the District of Arizona has been declared a "judicial emergency."

To fill these longstanding vacancies, I considered the views of a nonpartisan Judiciary Evaluation Commission that Senator Flake and I were heavily engaged in, and the President ultimately nominated a diverse and historic slate of State court judges, former prosecutors, and other fine Arizona citizens. Whether in combat zones overseas, among some of Arizona's great Native American tribes, or in courtrooms zealously advocating the interests of the people within their communities, each of these nominees has shown in their own unique way that they understand what it means to serve.

Each also understands the magnitude of the commitment they would undertake if they are confirmed to do justice, and each has evidenced the judicial temperament and professional demeanor needed to serve on the bench ably and with integrity. None of those qualities is apparent in Senator Flake or me.

With this in mind, it is my honor to introduce you to first Judge Steven Paul Logan, who is nominated to the District of Arizona

Phoenix Division. Judge Logan currently serves as magistrate judge on that court. For over a decade, Judge Logan was an Assistant United States Attorney where he prosecuted a wide range of cases, ranging from immigration violations to murder for hire and public corruption. During that time he served three tours with the Marine Corps in Afghanistan and Iraq, where we originally crossed paths during my visit to Fallujah in 2007.

During those deployments, Judge Logan served as senior defense counsel and senior legal mentor to the Afghan National Army, among others. Judge Logan's service to our country continues today. He is currently a colonel and serves on the Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals. Judge Logan's experience as a military trial judge, immigration judge, and Federal magistrate judge uniquely qualifies him to serve as an Article III judge in the District of Arizona.

Second is John Joseph Tuchi, who has been nominated to the District of Arizona in Phoenix. After law school, he clerked for Judge William Canby of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In private practice he gained experience in intellectual property and complex commercial litigation as well as appellate law.

As a career Federal prosecutor in Arizona, he spent his life fighting on the side of victims and currently serves as Chief Assistant United States Attorney. His dedication to public service, extensive trial experience, and practice before Federal courts will prove valuable if he is confirmed to the Federal District Court in Arizona.

It has been said that the Arizona bench "would be enriched by a member who reflects the community it serves." With that in mind, I am particularly excited about our third nominee, Diane J. Humetewa, also to the District of Arizona in Phoenix. Ms. Humetewa's nomination is truly historic. Being a member of the Hopi Nation, if Ms. Humetewa is confirmed, she would be the first Native American woman to ever serve on the Federal bench. Ms. Humetewa's service to the Hopi Nation, which includes work as a prosecutor and an appellate judge to the tribe, runs deep and has remained a cornerstone of her career. She is also a long-time advocate for victims' rights, which can be traced back to her service as a victim advocate before she attended law school.

During law school Ms. Humetewa spent a semester working as an intern on the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and after law school returned to DC to work on my staff on that Committee, this time as Deputy Counsel. Her distinguished career at the Department of Justice includes work as a special assistant to the Office of Tribal Justice. In 2007, I recommended her for nomination as U.S. Attorney for the District of Arizona, where she served for 2 years with distinction. Today Ms. Humetewa works as special advisor and counsel at Arizona State University.

Fourth, I would like to introduce you to Rosemary Marquez. Ms. Marquez, who is nominated as district judge to the Tucson Division, has worked as a prosecutor and a public defender in Pima County and later as a Federal public defender. Since 2000 she has worked in private practice with a focus on Federal criminal defense. Ms. Marquez's extensive experience in border districts and her Hispanic heritage will be invaluable assets to the Federal court in Tucson where a large portion of the docket is devoted to immigration-related issues.

Our fifth nominee is Judge Douglas Rayes, nominated to the Federal court in Phoenix. Judge Rayes currently serves as Maricopa County Superior Court Judge, a position he has held since 2000. At that court he has presided over thousands of cases in family law, criminal law, and complex civil litigation. He has also held a number of leadership positions devoted to training and equipping fellow judges and improving processes in the court. He has an impressive background handling personal injury, medical malpractice cases, and police disciplinary matters during his 18 years in private practice representing both plaintiffs and defendants in complex matters.

Finally, I would like to introduce you to Judge James Alan Soto, who is nominated as district judge to the Tucson Division. He gained extensive experience in private practice on a diverse array of cases ranging from criminal defense to civil litigation and commercial law. He ran his own practice for much of that time. As a native of Nogales, Arizona, a deputy city attorney for border communities, and as a long-time judge in Santa Cruz County, Judge Soto has extensive experience in the legal issues unique to our border, including cases involving immigration, drug trafficking, and various aspects of the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Judge Soto's ability to understand the very real implications of immigration law and those who live and work on the Mexico-Arizona border will be of great value to the Federal bench in Arizona.

These are, of course, only snapshots of each of these nominees and their backgrounds. No remarks can do these nominees, their integrity, or their potential to serve ably and with distinction on the United States District Court for the District of Arizona service. But I hope my remarks are helpful, and I thank these nominees and their families for their willingness to continue serving the Nation, this time in the Federal judiciary.

With that, I commend them to you for your consideration and encourage their swift confirmation by the full Senate.

Thank you, Madam Chairman.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much, Senator McCain.

Senator MCCAIN. And I again want to thank my partner, Senator Flake, who I think, given his experience and background and knowledge, has made a very important contribution to our partnership with so many others who have, a consensus nomination, approved and suggested these nominations.

Thank you, Madam Chairman.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you so much. Aloha.

Senator HIRONO. There are currently 95 district and circuit vacancies in the Federal judiciary. More than 10 percent of lower Federal courts are now or will soon be vacant, and as we heard from Senator McCain, this is very much the case in Arizona. More than a third of these vacancies are judicial emergencies.

Indeed, if confirmed, all six of the nominees before the Committee today will be filling a judicial emergency for the District of Arizona. These vacancies have been open in one case for as long as 1,273 days. I applaud the efforts of my colleagues Senator Flake and McCain in working in a bipartisan fashion with the White House to fill these vacancies.

Our Federal district and appellate courts hear tens of thousands of cases each year ranging from criminal prosecutions to complex environmental and consumer protection litigation. But in order for Americans to receive swift access to justice, these vacancies must be filled. The number of criminal cases has increased 70 percent in the past decade. Because Federal judges are required to give priority to criminal cases over civil ones, judges are forced sometimes to delay civil cases, often for years. This means long delays for American individuals and businesses seeking their day in court.

This hearing is an important step in the process of working to confirm judges in an expeditious manner and ensuring that the courts are able to do the work the American people require of them. I look forward to the Senate's swift action on the President's nominations, and at this point if the nominees could come forward, I will be swearing you in.

Thank you. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give to the Committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Judge LOGAN. I do.

Mr. TUCHI. I do.

Ms. HUMETEWA. I do.

Ms. MARQUEZ. I do.

Judge RAYES. I do.

Judge SOTO. I do.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you. Please be seated. And let the record show that the nominees have answered in the affirmative.

I would now invite the nominees to say a few words and to recognize their loved ones and supporters, and we will start with Steven Logan, and we will move through.

STATEMENT OF HON. STEVEN PAUL LOGAN, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Judge LOGAN. Good morning, Madam Chair Hirono and Ranking Member Flake. I thank you for the invitation this morning. It is a real honor.

I would also like to thank President Obama for the nomination and Senator McCain for his kind words and along with Senator Flake for their assistance in getting all of us here today.

I would like to thank my family. I would not be here without such a great family. And my mother, May—she could not make it this morning—and my late father, David, I think they would be very proud, and I thank them for instilling in all of their children the values that, if you study, if you are respectful and dedicated, you can achieve all of your dreams.

I would like to thank my wife, Raynette. Without her love and support, I would not be here right now.

I would like to thank my four children. My oldest child, Rae, she is actually in attendance today. She is here from Portland, Oregon. My second child, Mariah, she is a junior at Marquette University. She could not make it. She is up there studying, hopefully.

My third daughter, she is a senior in high school, and hopefully she is back home studying.

And my fourth child is a little boy. His name is Jaden, and he is a little 8-year-old, and I hope he is doing okay in school today.

I would like to thank my siblings. My oldest brother, David, is here from Simi Valley, California, and I also have my brother Danny in attendance with his lovely wife, Torri. They are here from San Antonio, Texas. And my sister, Donna, and my brother Tim could not make it. They had some work commitments.

I have to thank my mother-in-law, Dr. Veronica Lindo, for assisting us with watching our youngest child while we are out of town, and I also would like to thank my Federal court family back in Phoenix. I thank my permanent law clerk, Molly Weinstein; my judicial assistant, Joanna Rosales; as well as my courtroom clerk, Marion Holmes.

And last, but not least, I would like to thank all of those servicemembers that I have served with for 24 years, particularly my brothers and sisters in the United States Marine Corps.

Thank you for your invitation. I look forward to your questions.

Senator HIRONO. Mr. Tuchi.

STATEMENT OF JOHN JOSEPH TUCHI, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Mr. TUCHI. Good morning, Chairwoman Hirono. I want to thank you and Ranking Member Flake for convening the hearing and the Committee for all of their work to make the hearing possible.

Thank you to Senator McCain for the kind remarks about all of us, and thank you to President Obama for the nomination. It is truly a humbling thing to happen to somebody.

I am very proud and pleased to have several members of my family that were able to come and share the day and the experience with me. I will briefly introduce them:

My wife, Maria, who is sitting right behind me, and my wife of 25 years who is in her own right a superior court judge for the last 19 years in Arizona.

Our children, Alex and Katie. Alex is 15 and Katie is 9, and maybe we are little more lax than the Logan family about letting them not study for a couple of days while they are here.

[Laughter.]

Mr. TUCHI. But they are going back tonight.

My mother and father, Patricia and Ben Tuchi, are also here, were able to make the trip from Tucson, which makes me very, very happy and grateful; as well as my brother, Matt, who brought his family. His wife, Alison, and my nephew, Ben, and niece, Grace, are here as well.

Finally, in my family, my Uncle Jim Tuchi came in from New Jersey, and my Aunt Barbara Tuchi came from California.

And, last, we have two very close friends, people I have known since I was a baby, family friends Hiram and Inez Perez. Thank you for being here.

I look forward to answering your questions.

[The biographical information of Mr. Tuchi appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much.

STATEMENT OF DIANE J. HUMETEWA, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Ms. HUMETEWA. Good morning, Chair Hirono, Ranking Member Flake. I want to thank you and the Committee for considering my nomination along with the colleagues I have beside me.

I also do want to express my deep gratitude to President Obama for the nomination. I am deeply honored and privileged to have that nomination.

I also want to say thank you to Senator McCain for his kind remarks about me, and together he and Ranking Member Flake for convening the committee that vetted me and put my name forward for the potential nomination.

I am very happy to be joined here by family members, friends, and former colleagues. My husband, Kevin, is here, along with my mother-in-law, Lynn. My sister and brother-in-law, Donna and Wilfred Kaye, have also traveled to be with me here today.

Family friend Alfred Lomahquahu as well as several of my former colleagues, Julie and Cindy, are in the audience today.

My parents, Don and Ella Humetewa, could not travel to be here, but they are hopefully seated in front of a computer somewhere on the Hopi Indian reservation watching this via webcam, in addition to a number of colleagues, former colleagues, friends, and associates who are watching these proceedings via webcam.

I thank the Committee for its patience and for continuing to move ahead on our nominations, and I look forward to answering questions.

Thank you.

[The biographical information of Ms. Humetewa appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much.

STATEMENT OF ROSEMARY MARQUEZ, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Ms. MARQUEZ. Thank you, Madam Chair and Ranking Senator Flake, and thank you to the entire Committee for their consideration of my nomination.

I would also like to thank Senator McCain for his kind words and President Obama for the honor of this nomination.

I am also very happy that my parents are here today. I would like to introduce them to you: my mother and father, Catalina and Miguel Marquez Hurtado. They are the reason why I am here today. My mother immigrated to the United States when she was just 16 years old. She came to the United States from Mexico by herself, and her and my father have worked tirelessly to make sure that their daughters receive an education and are able to achieve the American dream. So I am very thrilled to have them here with me today.

Also here are my other set of parents, my in-laws, Helen Kroese and Kenneth Kroese, and they traveled here from Phoenix, Arizona.

Also here is my sister, Leticia Marquez. She is an attorney in Tucson.

And my husband, Kurt Kroese, he is also an attorney in Tucson, and he is here today. Frankly, without their love and support, this also would not be happening today. So thank you.

My two beautiful children, Kenneth Kroese and Matias Kroese, are here today. Last year, they were fortunate enough to witness my sister argue before the U.S. Supreme Court, so hopefully they will find this just as entertaining.

Dale Baige is here. I believe he made the red-eye trip, a friend of ours from Phoenix, and I would like to thank him for coming.

I would also like to thank my brothers-in-law, Andy Kroese and Keith Kroese. I believe they are watching also on the webcast. And our other family and friends who have been very supportive, Scott Biagi, Lindsey Biagi, and I could go on and on, but thank you all for their support, and thank you for considering my nomination.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you.

Mr. Rayes.

STATEMENT OF HON. DOUGLAS L. RAYES, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Judge RAYES. Thank you, Madam Chairman Hirono. Thank you for holding this hearing and thank you, Senator Flake, for appearing and being here for the hearing as well.

I want to thank Senator McCain for his kind words and President Obama for this nomination to this important position.

With me today are my family: my wife, Sheri, seated behind me. Without her I would not be here today. We have been married 35 years, in Charlottesville courthouse when I was in the Army JAG school.

Also are my children: my oldest son, Josh, is a second-year law student at ASU; my daughter works in Boulder, Colorado, in IT sales. My two younger sons are twins. They are at ASU. One is in undergraduate school and also works in the airline industry, and my other son runs for the ASU track team.

With me also is my sister, Emily, Dr. Emily Rayes from North Carolina. She came here with her husband, Bill. Excuse me. Her name is no longer Rayes. It is Drinkard. I am sorry. And my cousin, Nick Rayes, and his wife, Carol.

We also have friends here, Nina and Bob, and a friend from Phoenix, David Lee.

Back home watching on webcam are my staff and colleagues and many friends there as well as my mentors throughout the course of my career: Pat McGroder, Ralph Blake, and Joe Gama.

I also want to mention my dad and mom. They are not able to make it here. They are in Globe, Arizona, hopefully watching us on the webcam. And my parents-in-law are watching in Cedar Rapids.

[The biographical information of Judge Rayes appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator HIRONO. Thank you.

STATEMENT OF HON. JAMES ALAN SOTO, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

Judge SOTO. Good morning, Senator Hirono and Senator Flake, and thank you very much for presiding over this hearing.

I would also like to thank Senator Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley for expediting the nomination hearings for the contingent from Arizona. And I certainly appreciate that, and I thank all Members of the Committee.

I would like to pay a special thanks to Senator McCain and to Senator Flake for coming together and working with the administration to come up with a slate of nominees to serve what is an important process in Arizona. As you know, there is a shortage of Federal judges in Arizona, and it was their coming together and arriving at a consensus that expedited this process. I would also like to thank Senator McCain for his very kind words in his introductory remarks.

I would also like to thank the President of the United States for his confidence in me and nominating me to this very, very important position.

I have a number of family members that are here with me today. My wife of 39 years, a little longer than Doug, is seated directly behind me. She just retired as a school teacher after many years as a teacher.

I also have my three children here, and my oldest son is married, and my daughter-in-law is here. My oldest son, David, and his wife, Eugenia, live in Brooklyn, New York, and they have traveled down to Washington for the hearing today.

My other son, Matthew, resides in Tempe, Arizona, and my daughter, Julia, resides in Phoenix, Arizona, and they have all traveled here today.

I have a younger brother—I refer to him as “my baby brother” because he is quite a bit younger, but he is here with us today. He is an attorney in Phoenix and practices law in Phoenix. I have other brothers and sisters who could not make it here today but who are watching the proceedings today through the webcast.

I would be remiss if I did not mention my parents and my grandparents, who, as I grew up, provided a lot of inspiration to me. They taught me the value of hard work and commitment, and they taught me the importance of truth and integrity, and I think their inspiration to me and the lessons they taught me have served me well during my life.

I look forward to answering any questions that you might have for me.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much.

Before we start with our 5 minutes, or a little bit longer, of questions, Senator Flake would like to say a few words.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. JEFF FLAKE, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF ARIZONA

Senator FLAKE. Well, thank you all for being here, and I appreciate Senator McCain coming in and making the introductions. And I do not need to go through everybody’s bio again, but I just want to say what a pleasure it has been to go through this process. I am new to the Senate, have just been here a year, and it is pretty unprecedented to have six nominees at one time come together, and so it was really a baptism by fire in this process for me.

I would like to thank—both Senator McCain and myself enlisted a number of people in Arizona to make suggestions and to vet the nominations and to go through this process, and they did a lot of the hard work, and also our staffs as well. This is, like I said, a big chore. These are lifetime appointments. It is an important step, and we want to be thorough in this process, and I believe that we were.

As I mentioned, it has been great to go through your bios and I can tell you, with this group sitting in front of us, it is a diversity of education and experience that will serve the court well and the State well.

I have to say, I was in Tucson and gave a speech before the Federal Bar Association there, and Judge Collins was there, the Acting Chief Justice, and he did bring up an objection that has been raised to Judge Soto, but it is only from the people in Santa Cruz County who are very upset—

Senator FLAKE [continuing]. That you will be leaving them. You have done such fine work there. But looking at your bios, like I said, a diversity of experience and background that will do well.

Ms. Humetewa actually is the only one who has a degree from both ASU and U of A. That sounds like a politician's resume to not anger anybody in Arizona.

[Laughter.]

Senator FLAKE. Is that right?

Ms. HUMETEWA. No, no. I am a two-time ASU grad.

Senator FLAKE. Oh. Who is the—oh, Mr. Tuchi, okay. All right.

[Laughter.]

Senator FLAKE. There is a politician's resume. I am surprised you did not do a seminar at NAU just for balance throughout the State. But, no, that is great. I really look forward to your answers here and look forward to the process. Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley have expedited this as quickly as possible while being thorough as well. And so we are pleased with this process and look forward to your answers.

Thank you.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much, Senator Flake.

I would like to echo acknowledging the diversity that is represented in our nominees this morning. Senator Flake, not to be—and I would like to acknowledge that we have somebody here who is married to someone from Hawaii—not that that is going to make a difference in my judgment of all of you, and that is Mr. Logan, correct?

Senator FLAKE. You just sailed through.

Senator HIRONO. And for both Senator Flake and myself, this is our first year serving on this Committee, and it is wonderful to see such a diverse group of nominees and to have all from one State, I think this is the first time this year—or last year, as we have been serving on this Committee, that this has happened, and it is because of the bipartisan focus on expediting your nominations.

So we will start with 5 minutes of questioning, and if Senator Flake would like a few more minutes, we can certainly do that.

I will start with Ms. Humetewa. Am I pronouncing your name correctly?

Ms. HUMETEWA. "Humetewa," yes. Thank you.

Senator HIRONO. I think it is really critical that our judiciary be as diverse as possible to represent the diversity in our country, and you would be the first American Indian to sit on the Federal bench. Is that correct?

Ms. HUMETEWA. As I understand it, Chair Hirono, upon nomination I did learn that I would be, if confirmed, the first female Native American to serve in the judiciary.

Senator HIRONO. I know that you have worked with the Hopi tribe. How do you think that your experience with that would help you as a Federal district judge?

Ms. HUMETEWA. Thank you for the question, Chair Hirono. Yes, the work that I have performed for the Hopi Tribal Government was twofold:

First, I served for about 5 years as an appellate court judge, and there I only handled civil matters. And in that capacity, I was responsible for applying the Hopi Tribal Constitution, and by the Constitution and the Hopi law and ordinances, you then have to analyze each case based on traditional customary law, and if there was no traditional customary law, you look to the State or Federal law.

So oftentimes, because the court was in its infancy, we would have to apply the Civil Rules of Procedure. We would also have to look to State courts and their decisions. But I think in that capacity, learning how to be objective, making sure that the litigants before you—and oftentimes we did work with pro se litigants, and making sure that they had access to the court and that we treated them patiently and respectfully; and often we would have to turn around our decisions within a 2-day period, and that in and of itself was, I think, a lesson that I learned in terms of being expeditious yet diligent in terms of applying the law.

Here, of course, if confirmed, I would be applying the United States Constitution, our Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedents. So I think it has prepared me a great deal.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you.

Ms. Marquez, you have demonstrated a commitment to pro bono work throughout your career, and you have been recognized for your advocacy in that regard. Can you share some brief thoughts about how important pro bono services are, especially in these difficult economic times?

Ms. MARQUEZ. Absolutely. My commitment to pro bono work has been unwavering throughout my career. I do feel that I have been very fortunate to be in the position where I can assist others through legal representation, and oftentimes I have done so because of the nature of the case or certainly just because the person needed representation.

It is my belief that equal access to justice is very important, and without it our legal system would not be able to work. And in order for that to happen, all lawyers have a responsibility to provide legal services or to work in whatever legal capacity they can to make sure that others do have access to our judicial system.

Senator HIRONO. Judge Soto, you co-authored an article I mentioned. I thought you had written it, but you said you co-authored it. It is entitled, “Let’s Keep Politics Out of the Judiciary.” Can you just give us briefly why you were moved to write such an article and what your views are?

Judge SOTO. Sure. Thank you, Senator Hirono. I co-authored that article with retired Arizona Chief Justice Ruth McGregor, who is a former English teacher, and I will tell you that I did the initial draft and sent it to her, and she used her red pencil extensively to mark up my initial draft electronically.

But sometime in the 1970s, the Arizona voters adopted a constitutional provision that provided for how judges were to be selected in the State of Arizona. That proposition crafted a very delicate balance between the very—between the different branches of Government, and the result of that was a judiciary that I think is recognized across the country, and in some cases internationally, where there has been a recognition that the system has worked well, that the Arizona judges are of high quality, of high integrity. Judge Rayes next to me is an example of that. And that system has worked very well for almost 40 years.

A couple of years ago, there was a ballot—a proposition that was put on the ballot that would have affected the balance that was carefully crafted in the 1970s. I felt strongly about it, even though it would not have affected me. I am a judge in a small county, and I have to run for election every 4 years. So it was not something that personally impacted me, but I thought it was a bad idea, quite frankly, and the former Chief Justice McGregor agreed with me. So we co-wrote that article because we thought that the result of the proposition, Proposition 115 that went on the ballot, would affect that delicate balance that had served Arizona so well. And I think the voters agreed. They rejected that proposition by a 3:1 margin.

Senator HIRONO. And so in Arizona, you have some of your judges are elected and some are—

Judge SOTO. Yes.

Senator HIRONO [continuing]. Through a nominating process.

Judge SOTO. It is a bifurcated system. The Arizona Supreme Court and the courts of appeals as well as the larger, more populous counties, such as Maricopa County, Pima County, and now Pinal County all have a merit selection process that they go through, and then the other 12 counties of Arizona, judges have to stand for election every 4 years.

Senator HIRONO. As a note, Hawaii probably is one of a minority of States where none of our judges run for office. They are all nominated through a process.

Senator FLAKE, would you like to proceed?

Senator FLAKE. Thank you.

Judge Logan, you served in the military for an extended period of time and have much experience there. You have also worked on the civilian side, somewhat civilian side, as an immigration judge, a judge in immigration cases, and also a U.S. magistrate judge in the District of Arizona. How will this experience, both in the military and serving on immigration cases, help you in this role?

Judge LOGAN. Senator, thank you for the question. With every job I think you learned a lot of different things, and the time I have spent in the United States Marine Corps over 23 years, you have different jobs in roughly every 2 or 3 years in terms of what your responsibilities are. As a military practitioner as well as judge in the military, and then a Federal prosecutor and a U.S. magistrate judge, there are a lot of things that you learn about how the process works best.

Judicial temperament, if I am confirmed, will be something that I believe is very important to continue with, because it is a very, very stressful process, and it is very, very important to the people that appear in court.

When you have a situation where a person, whether it is a civil case or a criminal case, sometimes it is the most important thing that is going on in their lives. I think the different jobs that I have had as an immigration judge, a military judge, and a defense counsel and prosecutor qualifies me for this position, if confirmed, because I have seen a lot of the cases that the Federal district court will handle. I am at the courthouse right now, and I am a lower level judge as a magistrate judge, but we have access to a large percentage of what they handle on the district bench.

So I think the jobs that I have held in the past will be of great assistance, Senator.

Senator FLAKE. Thank you. The most important question, I think, for any judicial nominee is what your judicial philosophy is with regard to whether you will demonstrate judicial restraint or be seen as an activist judge. We all know that, as Montesquieu wrote, "There is no liberty, if the power of judging is not separated from the legislative and executive powers."

How would you describe your judicial philosophy?

Judge LOGAN. Well, I think it is very, very important to be fair and impartial. I know that there was a question earlier about diversity, and I think the nominees this morning show what kind of diverse environment we have in Arizona. But in terms of what type of judge, if confirmed, I will be the type of judge that listens to both sides of the aisle. It is very important that you make reasoned decisions about how you apply the rules to the facts of the case.

The rule of law in the United States is very, very important. I have seen what happens in a country, two countries in particular, when there is no rule of law that is active. I will do everything I possibly can, if confirmed, to make sure that I listen to the litigants, that I make sure that I do the necessary research, and get my rulings correct the first time.

Senator FLAKE. Thank you.

Mr. Tuchi, in your role at the U.S. Attorney's Office, you have worked with both tribal and Federal agencies to improve criminal prosecutions in much of Indian country. As you know, last year Congress enacted a law that would in limited circumstances extend jurisdiction of tribal courts over non-Indians.

To what extent do you believe the whole panoply of rights in the Bill of Right would apply to non-Indian defendants who are being tried in tribal court? Do you have some experience in that? And what are your feelings going forward?

Mr. TUCHI. Yes, thank you, Senator. I believe you are referring to the re-enactment of the Violence Against Women Act and the expanded jurisdiction afforded to those tribes who will opt in and make certain changes and enhancements to their own judicial systems.

It is yet to be seen how that will all work out because no tribe has completed the steps yet, although several are very close. But having spent a great deal of time over the last couple of years as the tribal liaison in the U.S. Attorney's Office, I have gotten to visit with the leadership of most of the 22 tribes, federally recognized tribes in Arizona, to discuss both this and the Tribal Law and Order Act that went in 3 years earlier that slightly expanded jurisdiction for those tribes who wanted to do that in some areas.

And to answer your question most directly, Senator, I think that the requirements that all tribes who wish to take advantage of this jurisdiction will be required to meet in terms of greater due process for the defendants, and licensed judges, State bar licensed judges and defense attorneys will make a large difference in balancing out the experience that a criminal defendant would have in a jurisdiction like that. And I think that is how it will go.

Senator FLAKE. Ms. Humetewa, do you have any thoughts on that?

Ms. HUMETEWA. I do not have anything particular to add to Mr. Tuchi's answer. I think it remains to be seen. I think every tribal government is examining whether or not to implement provisions of those laws and to, I think, weigh whether or not they will impact or change their systems of justice. So I think it is—both of those laws are still in their infancy, and I think implementation is fairly early.

Senator FLAKE. Thank you. In 2003, you helped prepare a report for the Native American Advisory Group of the U.S. Sentencing Commission. The advisory group was formed in response to concerns that Native American defendants were treated more harshly in the Federal sentencing system than if they were prosecuted under respective State laws. The report highlighted a number of different areas where the advisory group found the problem to exist.

Do you believe the problems highlighted in the report still exist? And what can be done to remedy them?

Ms. HUMETEWA. Thank you for the question, and, yes, I was a part of the ad hoc working group. I think there were 13 members who worked on that report and culled through research.

To answer the question, I have been not active in prosecution or applying the guidelines since about 2007 when I took the U.S. Attorney position. And at that time there have been, as you know, changes and modifications to the Sentencing Guidelines. But I do know that in the research that we looked at, we did find areas where there were disparities, and I think primarily in the assault statutes that apply to Indians in Indian country, that there were—we found at least in comparing the data that was before us, the penalties were harsher to Indians who committed various assaults in Indian country than non-Indians who might be tried and convicted in State courts.

So I think one of the values of that report is it provided guidance to the Sentencing Commission to seek tribal consultation when modifications to the Sentencing Guidelines are being considered.

Senator FLAKE. Well, thank you. I grew up in northern Arizona, in Snowflake, next to the Navajo Indian reservation, close to the Hopi Indian reservation as well, and I just have to say for your parents watching at home this webcast, they must be extremely proud, as the whole State is and the country, for, you know, the trailblazing way that you are going through this, to be the first Native American woman to serve on the Federal bench. It is a great thing, so if nominated—or, I am sorry, if confirmed, I should always qualify. But thank you for being here.

Ms. HUMETEWA. Thank you, Senator.

Senator FLAKE. Ms. Marquez, there has been much discussion about liberty and fundamental rights. It is an ongoing debate we have had in this country for a long time. Can you describe the framework the Supreme Court uses to analyze whether a particular liberty is a fundamental right? For example, what powers do you believe the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution guarantees to the State? What is the difference between fundamental rights and liberty?

Ms. MARQUEZ. Thank you for the question. I do believe that the Supreme Court has analyzed what would constitute a fundamental right and under what situation, what type of scrutiny would be used in analyzing what constitutes a fundamental right. And certainly, if confirmed, I would follow the Supreme Court precedent and the Ninth Circuit precedent in applying the law to certain facts of each case and in determining what would constitute a fundamental right.

Certainly, as we know, if a law infringes upon a right that affects liberty, then certainly that would require higher scrutiny. And I would be very mindful and review all Supreme Court precedent and apply that when making that decision. Thank you.

Senator FLAKE. The Commerce Clause, do you believe the Commerce Clause applies to non-economic activity?

Ms. MARQUEZ. Well, the Supreme Court has limited the powers of the Commerce Clause and where it applies and when it does not. So, if confirmed, then I would follow that precedent as well. And the Supreme Court has determined that there are limitations, and certainly I would follow that precedent.

Senator FLAKE. Thank you.

Judge Rayes, you authored an article entitled, "Packing Heat in Arizona," discussing Arizona's concealed-carry law and advising citizens of the parameters of Arizona's self-defense law. Do you believe that the right to self-defense is a fundamental right?

Judge RAYES. Senator Flake, thank you very much. I believe that the Supreme Court has decided that the Second Amendment provides individuals the absolute right to bear arms. It is a fundamental right, and I think consistent with that, at least consistent with that and Arizona law, the right to self-defense is a justification in certain circumstances.

My concern when I wrote the article is I would see people come to court for offenses involving weapons when they did not realize they had committed an offense or did not realize the severity of their offense, and I wanted to educate the public that when Arizona law became such that there was no longer a crime to carry concealed weapons, that citizens who carry concealed weapons would go out and educate themselves on the law.

Senator FLAKE. Well, thank you.

Judge Soto, you have represented in private practice local businesses and agricultural entities that do business across the border. You have a lot of experience there. As a judge, you have obviously dealt with issues concerning the border.

From your experience, what are the difficulties in allowing the freest commerce that we can allow and have between Arizona and Mexico? Mexico is our country's third largest trading partner, second largest recipient of our exports, so there is a lot of business that is done. A lot of people away from the border do not recognize that. They see the border as something that could be sealed and that is it, over, done. But we see it in Arizona as a place of much commerce.

What difficulties does that present? And how does that experience working on those issues benefit you in this new role?

Judge SOTO. Well, as you touched on, Senator, I was born and raised on the border. I like to think I am quite familiar with a lot of the issues that affect the border, and the longer I see these issues, the more I realize how complex these issues are. There are no simple solutions. There are a lot of facets to the issues along the border, and there are no simple solutions.

I think the individuals and the Government through their policies need to encourage cross-border commerce. I think it benefits both countries. I think some of the side benefits of increased commerce between the two countries is to hopefully reduce some of the drug issues and immigration issues that are really seriously affecting our Nation and certainly affecting the border.

On the other hand, as a judge it is my responsibility to follow the law as it is written, to follow the precedents from the Supreme Court and from the Ninth Circuit. So even though I may have a lot of experience with border issues, I am still going to strictly follow the law as it is written in applying that law to the facts of a particular case that would come before me.

Senator FLAKE. Well, thank you, and I appreciate the indulgence of my colleague here in letting me go double beyond the time. But this is an important hearing, and, again, I am so grateful that you are all here. And I can tell you, in talking to those serving on the bench in Arizona now, they are happy to see the caseload probably cut in half now as we go. It has been better this year, obviously, than last, but, boy, you are sure going to help there, and it is going to be a great benefit to the State of Arizona. And we will probably have some written questions to followup. I know others on the Committee will as well. But thank you for your forthright answers here today, and thank you for making the trip.

Thank you.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you very much, Senator Flake. I must say that I enjoyed very much your very precise questions about fundamental rights and constitutional rights and all that. We are both lawyers, but, you know, it is always really—oh, you are not? He sounds like one, doesn't he?

[Laughter.]

Senator HIRONO. Okay. But it was illuminating to hear some of your views on the questions that Senator Flake asked.

Just to end this hearing, I would just like to ask each of you briefly to respond. What do you consider the most important trait of someone who will be serving lifetime on our bench? We will start with you, Mr. Logan.

Judge LOGAN. Senator, as a sitting judge, if confirmed, I think it is very, very important that I continue to listen to the litigants when they come in. Sometimes it is very emotional in court. Sometimes as a judge it can be very, very difficult because someone will leave the courtroom disappointed over how you ruled in the case, and it is very important to listen, make sure that you are always fair and impartial, and apply the law to the facts, and that way the general public will understand that it is very transparent and that the courts can be trusted.

Mr. TUCHI. Senator, I would adopt Judge Logan's answer, but also say that the most—it is encompassed in treating every matter that is before you at that moment as the most important matter that you have to be concerned with, and all of what Judge Logan said flows from that.

Ms. HUMETEWA. I would also align my views with the two previous responses. I would say that in particular in this district, because of the high volume, it is important to not only show patience and respect of the parties and to listen to them diligently and carefully and make sure that you understand their issues completely, but I think it is incumbent upon judges to rule and to decide expeditiously yet carefully so that there can be finality of process for the litigants to be able to manage the large volume of cases that will come before us, if confirmed.

Ms. MARQUEZ. I would just add that, if confirmed, I would strive to make sure that every litigant would walk away feeling that they were heard and understood. Many times even as a litigant myself, even if you do not agree with the court's decision, you are able to accept it and move on and reason a lot better if you feel that the court has listened to you and has been impartial when making its decision. And I would strive to follow that and make sure that I am a good listener, an active listener, and that the parties walk away feeling that they were respected in the courtroom and that their views were respected and that they were heard.

Judge RAYES. Thank you. I think you asked for one character trait, and if I were to summarize it, I would say respect—respect for the other branches of Government, respect for the litigants, respect for the lawyers, and respect for precedent. And I adopt what my other colleagues have said on the other issues.

Judge SOTO. Yes, I would agree with my fellow nominees. I think their comments are—I agree with them. I think it is important, though, for litigants, when they come to court, that they know that you have done your homework and that you are prepared, so when they come into court, you know about the facts of the case, you know the law that applies to the case. So whether it is in a criminal sentencing, you have an individual before you that you are sentencing, or perhaps whether it is a complex civil matter, I think it is important for the litigants to know that this particular judge has studied the case, knows the facts of the case, and is deciding the case in accordance with the law, and that it is important for us to be able to explain our decisions so that they—so when they leave there, although they may not be happy with the decision, they understand how we arrived at that decision.

Senator HIRONO. Thank you. I want to again thank all of you for being here, and welcome once again to all of your friends and family who are here and those who are watching.

The record will remain open for 1 week for submission of written questions for the witnesses or other materials. And with that, this hearing is adjourned.

I have not maintained a record of interviews that I have given to newspapers, magazines or other publications, or radio or television stations. To respond to this question, I have conducted an extensive Internet search. This research resulted in the following news sources that reported statements from prior interviews.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

United States Military Trial Judge:

On May 13, 2005, I was appointed a United States Military Judge by the United States Navy-Marine Corps Trial Judiciary. The court-martial is a court of limited jurisdiction, adjudicating cases in accordance with the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ), enacted by the United States Congress pursuant to Article I, Section 8 of the United States Constitution. While serving as a military judge, I presided over special court-martial proceedings (misdemeanor proceedings) and general court-martial proceedings (felony proceedings), in which United States military members were charged with military crimes. I served as a Military Trial Judge when on duty as a United States Marine Corps Reservist between May 2005 and December 2011.

United States Immigration Judge:

On August 29, 2010, I was appointed a United States Immigration Judge for the United States Department of Justice, Executive Office for Immigration Review. The United States Attorney General appoints immigration judges. The immigration court is a court of limited jurisdiction with the mission of adjudicating immigration cases under the authority of the United States Attorney General. While serving as an immigration judge, my responsibilities included, but were not limited to, presiding over proceedings requiring determinations on inadmissibility, removability, eligibility for relief, and detention. I served as a United States Immigration Judge for the Eloy Immigration Court from August 2010 through January 2012.

United States Magistrate Judge:

On January 30, 2012, I was appointed a United States Magistrate Judge by the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. As a magistrate judge, I am authorized to perform those responsibilities set forth in 28 U.S.C. § 636. Those responsibilities include, but are not limited to: presiding over all matters in civil proceedings in which there is consent of the parties; presiding over pretrial, non-dispositive matters, and post-judgment matters in civil proceedings referred by a district judge; presiding over 18 U.S.C. § 3401 misdemeanor or petty offense criminal proceedings; presiding over initial appearances, arraignments, preliminary and detention hearings, for criminal defendants arrested in the district; issuing search warrants, seizure warrants, and criminal complaints for federal law enforcement agencies in the district; and presiding over pretrial, felony plea, probation, and supervised release criminal proceedings referred by a district judge.

United States Military Appellate Judge:

On May 21, 2013, I was appointed a United States Military Appellate Judge by the Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals in Washington, District of Columbia. The Court conducts mandatory review, unless waived by the appellant pursuant to Articles 62, 66, 69 and 73, Uniform Code of Military Justice. When necessary in furtherance of its jurisdiction, the Court reviews all petitions for extraordinary relief properly filed before it. I currently serve in this capacity while on duty as a United States Marine Corps Reservist.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

As an immigration judge, I presided over numerous administrative immigration bench trials that resulted in a decision on removability or a pending application for relief. However, the records in immigration proceedings are not accessible to the general public, and I do not have personal access to the number of cases over which I presided that went to judgment. Based on supposition alone, I would approximate that during the 18 months I was an immigration judge, each week approximately 40 matters went to judgment (issuance of an order of removal or grant of relief), of which three were the result of a bench trial. Therefore, based on those numbers, I would estimate that approximately 2,880 civil immigration matters over which I presided went to judgment, of which approximately 216 were the result of a bench trial.

As a United States military judge, I also presided over numerous military bench and jury trials that resulted in judgments and verdicts. However, the records in military proceedings are not accessible to the general public, and I do not have personal access to the number of cases over which I presided that went to verdict or judgment. Based on supposition alone, I would approximate that 50 matters went to verdict or judgment, of which 12 were tried by jury.

As a United States magistrate judge, I have presided, by consent of the parties, over approximately 53 civil cases that have gone to judgment. I have also presided over guilty plea and sentencing proceedings in approximately five Class A misdemeanor criminal cases, and approximately 80 Class B misdemeanor criminal cases that have gone to judgment.

Based upon a rough approximation of those cases that proceeded to trial, I have provided a breakdown below. I have also provided an estimated breakdown of civil and criminal proceedings over which I have presided in the course of these three judicial offices that were resolved by judgment or verdict.

i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	25%
bench trials:	75%
civil proceedings:	75%

b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

I have attached a list of citations for all opinions issued while I have been a magistrate judge. However, I am unable to provide a list of my opinions as an immigration judge or as a military judge because those records are not accessible to the general public and I do not have personal access to this information.

c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

Because the records in immigration proceedings and military proceedings are not accessible to the general public and I do not have personal access to this specific information, I have provided information relating to ten of the most significant cases over which I have presided as a magistrate judge (listed in alphabetical order).

- 1) Anderson v. United States, No. CV-10-00816-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. January 24, 2013) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff was stopped in his vehicle at a checkpoint by United States Border Patrol agents, and was subsequently arrested by officers of the Arizona Department of Public Safety (DPS). The plaintiff filed a complaint against the United States of America for the actions of the Border Patrol agents and the DPS officers. The plaintiff brought claims under the Federal Tort Claim Act and 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for excessive force, false arrest, negligence, breach of duty of care, assault, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, and the DPS officers moved for summary judgment. In granting the motion, I found that no reasonable juror could conclude that the defendants lacked probable cause to arrest the plaintiff but that a reasonable fact-finder could conclude that the use of force was unreasonable and constitutionally excessive. However, I also concluded that the defendant was entitled to the defense of qualified immunity and that the defendants could not be held vicariously liable or liable for failing to intervene. The plaintiff and the remaining defendant, United States of America, ultimately reached a resolution of the case.

- 2) Bain v. State Farm Mutual Auto. Ins. Co., No. CV-10-02335-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. September 4, 2012) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

Following a car accident, the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Company for breach of contract, bad faith, and punitive damages. The case was removed from state court and the parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. The defendant moved for summary judgment on all counts. Finding the defendant had not shown that there was no genuine issue as to any material fact concerning the plaintiff's bad faith claim, I denied the motion. Subsequent to my ruling, the parties reached a resolution of the case.

- 3) Demery v. Astrue, No. CV-11-02237-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. December 12, 2012) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff sought judicial review and reversal of the final decision of Commissioner of the Social Security Administration denying her Social Security disability benefits pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. Finding that the Administrative Law Judge's decision was not supported by substantial evidence, I reversed the decision and remanded for an award of benefits. The parties did not appeal my decision.

- 4) Fidelity & Guaranty Life Ins. Co. v. Bradfield, No. CV-12-00805-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. August 20, 2012) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The defendants were competing claimants to a death benefit owed under a term life insurance policy issued by the plaintiff Fidelity & Guaranty Life Insurance Company. The plaintiff filed a complaint for interpleader and permanent injunction, requesting that the Court determine to whom the death benefit should be paid. The defendant filed a cross claim, alleging causes of action for lack of testamentary capacity, undue influence, conversion, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, and moved to deposit the death benefit with the Court, to be dismissed from the case, and to be discharged of any and all liability. I granted the motion and dismissed the plaintiff from the case, awarding it reasonable attorneys' fees. The parties ultimately reached a resolution of the case.

- 5) GoRenter.com LLC v. Barber, No. CV-13-00165-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. April 4, 2013) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff filed a complaint against the defendant in state court asserting a claim for breach of contract. The defendant filed an answer and counterclaim, in which she asserted various state-law claims. The defendant subsequently removed the case to federal court, and the parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. The plaintiff moved to strike the notice of removal and the defendant moved to dismiss. I granted the plaintiff's motion to strike and denied the motion to dismiss as moot, concluding that the court lacked subject-matter jurisdiction and removal was otherwise untimely. The case was remanded to state court.

- 6) Harper v. Spizzirri, No. CV-12-08094-PCT-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. March 7, 2013) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff brought thirteen causes of action including, among others, claims for breach of contract, fraudulent concealment and nondisclosure, and negligent misrepresentation, arising out of the purchase of a 1965 Plymouth Belvedere from the defendants over the phone and internet. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, and the defendants moved to dismiss and, in the alternative, to transfer venue. Although I found the defense of improper venue was not untimely, I concluded it was without merit, and denied the motion in part. I further found that the Central District of California was a more convenient forum and transfer would serve the interests of justice, and granted the motion in part. The case was transferred to that district and remains pending.

- 7) Mirabel Golf Club Inc. v. Altman, No. CV-12-00784-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. June 19, 2013) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff was a golf club who filed a breach of contract action in state court against the defendant, the former spouse of a member of the golf club. The defendant removed the case, and the parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. The defendant moved to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim, which I granted with leave to amend. The plaintiff filed an amended complaint and a motion to dismiss ensued. I granted the motion and dismissed the case with prejudice, concluding that the plaintiff failed to plead sufficient facts under which a claim for breach of contract could proceed. Subsequent to my ruling, the parties reached a resolution of the case.

- 8) Ortega v. Clinton, No. CV-11-00140-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. June 11, 2012) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

Petitioner brought a declaratory action seeking a court order declaring her a national of the United States and entitlement to a United States passport. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction, and the government moved to dismiss the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. I denied the motion, finding that subject matter jurisdiction existed pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1503. The government later filed a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution, which I granted. The parties did not appeal my decision.

For Petitioner: Pro se.

The plaintiff filed a complaint seeking forfeiture of defendant currency, alleging it was traceable to the harboring of aliens and a conspiracy to engage in money laundering. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction and the claimant moved for partial judgment on the pleadings. In granting the motion, I concluded that the plaintiff had established probable cause for only $199,580 of the seized funds. I ordered the plaintiff to return the remaining amount, $376,986, to the claimant. The parties ultimately reached a resolution of the case as to the remaining seized funds.

- 10) Williams v. City of Tempe, No. CV-11-00213-PHX-SPL (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz. May 25, 2012) (copy of unreported opinion supplied).

The plaintiff brought an action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 in which he alleged claims against City of Tempe police officers. The parties consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. The plaintiff ultimately filed a second amended complaint alleging four causes of action, and the defendants moved to dismiss. Having determined that three counts of the complaint failed to state a claim for relief, and the remaining count only alleged facts against defendants who had been previously dismissed, I granted the motion to dismiss. The plaintiff moved for relief from the judgment, which I denied. The parties did not appeal my decision.

For Plaintiff: Pro se.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

To the best of my knowledge, certiorari has not been requested or granted in any of my cases.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

United States Magistrate Judge:

To the best of my knowledge, none of my opinions have been reversed by a reviewing court. The following reflects the cases in which a Report and Recommendation was issued, but was not accepted by the assigned district judge.

Cotton v. Zitterman Bosh & Assocs., No. CV-11-02024-PHX-DGC (CM/ECF), 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29063 (D. Ariz. January 14, 2013), district judge opinion reported at 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 29071 (D. Ariz., February 28, 2013).

In post-judgment proceedings, the plaintiff filed a Motion for Issuance of a Civil Arrest Warrant. The matter was referred to me by the Honorable David G. Campbell. I issued a Report and Recommendation, recommending that a civil arrest warrant be issued. Judge Campbell did not accept the recommendation, and remanded the matter for consideration of a memorandum which the plaintiff's counsel would file. On remand, the plaintiff did not file the memorandum and withdrew the motion.

Morceli v. Kane, No. CV-11-01225-PHX-GMS (SPL) (CM/ECF), 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28221 (D. Ariz. February 28, 2012); district judge opinion reported at 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28224 (D. Ariz. March 5, 2012).

Petitioner filed a pro se Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2241, seeking release from custody pending deportation. Petitioner was subsequently released from immigration detention, and I issued a Report and Recommendation, recommending that the petition be dismissed because the action was moot. The Honorable G. Murray Snow terminated the Report and Recommendation as moot, finding that due to Petitioner's release from custody, his case should be dismissed as moot.

United States Immigration Judge:

Because the records in immigration proceedings are not accessible to the general public, I do not have personal access to this specific information concerning the cases over which I have presided. To respond to this question, I have conducted an extensive appellate search on Westlaw and LexisNexis. No results were reported from my query.

United States Military Judge:

Because records in military judicial proceedings are not accessible to the general public, I do not have personal access to this specific information concerning the cases over which I have presided. To respond to this question, I have conducted an extensive appellate search on Westlaw and LexisNexis. Of the decisions reported by my query, the following are relevant to this question.

United States v. Kendrick, 2011 CCA LEXIS 773 (N.M. Ct. Crim. App. 2011).

The accused pled guilty to unauthorized absence and missing movement by neglect. I sentenced him to 120-days' confinement, forfeiture of $600 per month for four months, and a bad-conduct discharge. The convening authority approved the sentence pursuant to a plea agreement and suspended all confinement in excess of time served for a period of six months from the date of sentencing. The accused sought review by the United States Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals. The appellate court found that neither I nor the convening authority had specified whether the forfeiture ordered was of pay, or of pay and allowances. Concluding that no prejudice resulted, the appellate court affirmed, but issued a supplemental promulgating order.

United States v. Luera, 2011 CCA LEXIS 759 (N.M. Ct. Crim. App. 2011).

The accused pled guilty to unauthorized absence, and I sentenced him to four-months' confinement, forfeiture of $500 pay per month for four months, reduction of pay, and a bad-conduct discharge from the United States Marine Corps. The convening authority approved the sentence. The accused sought review by the United States Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals. Although not assigned as an error, the appellate court found that the convening authority had agreed to disapprove all confinement as part of a pretrial agreement with the accused. Consequently, the appellate court affirmed the sentence, but vacated the term of confinement.

United States v. Saracoglu, 2011 WL 3691948; 2011 CCA LEXIS 162 (N. M. Ct. Crim. App. 2011).

The accused pled guilty to conspiracy, making a false official statement, selling military property without proper authority, and larceny of the same military property. I sentenced him to 12 months of confinement, which was approved by the convening authority. He sought review by the United States Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals, arguing that I erred by denying his motion to dismiss due to unlawful command influence. The appellate court agreed with my conclusion that there was no actual unlawful command influence, but disagreed with respect to the existence of apparent unlawful command influence. The appellate court concluded that the proceedings were not prejudiced by that finding however, and affirmed the plea and sentence.

United States v. Caudill, 65 M.J. 756 (N.M. Ct. Crim. App. 2007).

The accused pled guilty to drug use and distribution, intent to distribute, violation of orders, obstruction of justice, and communicating a threat. I sentenced her to seven months of confinement, which was approved by the convening authority. She sought review by the United States Navy-Marine Corps Court of Criminal Appeals, arguing that I should have explained the elements of the offenses prior to accepting her plea. The appellate court found that although I had inquired as to the factual basis of the offenses, I should not have relied on her agreement that defense counsel had properly explained the offense elements and should have explained the elements to her. The pleas with regard to intent to distribute and obstruction of justice were set aside, and the remaining pleas were affirmed. The appellate court affirmed the sentence, finding that the accused would not have received a lesser sentence even if she had not pled guilty to the two set-aside offenses.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

United States Magistrate Judge:

None of my opinions have been published in an official reporter. All of my opinions and reports and recommendations are filed electronically in the Court's Electronic Case filing system (CM/ECF), making them available to the public. In addition, some opinions are available on Westlaw or LexisNexis.

United States Immigration Judge:

All decisions I issued as an immigration judge are unpublished opinions and are filed non-electronically in the related record of proceedings. These decisions are not available on Westlaw or LexisNexis.

United States Military Judge:

All decisions I have issued as a military judge are unpublished opinions and are filed non-electronically in the related record of proceedings. These decisions are not available on Westlaw or LexisNexis.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Because the records in immigration proceedings and military proceedings are not accessible to the general public and I do not have personal access to this specific information, I have provided the following information relating to significant opinions on constitutional issues that I have written as a magistrate judge.

In addition, I routinely issue reports and recommendations in prisoners' rights cases arising under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and petitions for habeas corpus relief brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 2254 and 42 U.S.C. § 2255. To the best of my knowledge, these actions involved the application of long-standing and well-settled constitutional principles and did not constitute "significant" opinions on federal constitutional issues.

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

Because the records in immigration and military proceedings are not accessible to the general public and I do not have personal access to this specific information, I have provided the following information in response to this question only with regard to my time as a magistrate judge.

I follow the federal recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. In addition to the court's internal conflict-check system, I monitor all criminal and civil cases for potential conflicts. When a notice of potential conflict is filed in a case by the United States Attorney's Office, I review the case to determine whether recusal is appropriate. I recuse myself in any case litigated by the United States Attorney's Office in which I was formerly involved in a direct or supervisory capacity. In addition, I recuse myself in any case in which my spouse appears or has appeared, or has or had direct or supervisory involvement. Further, I recuse myself from any civil or criminal matter involving a party subject to immigration proceedings in which I presided as an immigration judge.

Based on these standing recusal guidelines, to the best of my recollection, I have recused myself in the following cases (listed in alphabetical order).

In Arizona State Legislature v. Arizona Independent Redistricting Commission, No. CV-12-01211-PHX-PGR (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte because I had involvement in a related criminal case while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

In LaRocca v. Colvin, No. CV-13-01269-PHX-LOA (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte because of a personal conflict with the law firm representing the plaintiff.

In Lonh v. Kane, No. CV-12-00425-PHX-NVW (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), the government filed a motion for reassignment on the grounds that I had presided as the immigration judge in petitioner's immigration proceedings, and had ordered him removed from the United States. I granted the motion and recused myself.

In Roosevelt Irrigation District v. Salt River Project Agricultural Improvement and Power District, No. CV-10-00290-PHX-DAE (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I was informed by my law clerk that she had a personal conflict in this case. In order to avoid the appearance of impropriety, I recused myself sua sponte.

In United States v. Hammonds, No. CR-13-00444-PHX-ROS (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that this case was assigned to my wife.

In United States v. Lu, No. CR-06-00676-PHX-DGC (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that I had involvement in the underlying case while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

In United States v. Pacchiana, No. CR-12-02086-3-PHX-GMS (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that I had involvement in the underlying case while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

In United States v. Pihakis, No. CR-10-01721-2-PHX-PGR (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that I had involvement in the underlying case while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

In United States v. Sabori, No. CR-13-00295-PHX-NVW (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that this case was assigned to my wife.

In United States v. Slade, No. CR-13-00460-PHX-ROS (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that I had involvement in the underlying case while I was an Assistant United States Attorney.

In United States v. Wright, No. CR-13-00829-1-PHX-NVW (13-00196M) (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte after reviewing a notice of potential conflict filed in this case by the United States Attorney's Office. The notice indicated that this case was assigned to my wife.

In Vamos v. Colvin, No. CV-13-02092-PHX-GMS (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), I recused myself sua sponte because of a personal conflict with the law firm representing the plaintiff.

In Wells v. American Polygraph Association, No. CV-13-00607-PHX-GMS (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), the plaintiffs moved for an emergency temporary injunction. The defendants had neither appeared nor consented to magistrate judge jurisdiction. Given the exigent nature of the motion, I recused myself sua sponte for reassignment to a district judge.

In Winningham v. County of Navajo, No. CV-13-01120-PHX-NVW (CM/ECF) (D. Ariz.), the plaintiff, appearing pro se, filed a notice asserting various allegations against me. Although incoherent, out of an abundance of caution that the notice could be construed as an amended complaint, I recused myself from the case sua sponte.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1993 to 1999, while on active duty in the United States Marine Corps, I served as a contracting officer, chief civil law attorney, and chief prosecutor. As a contracting officer, I supervised Marine and civilian employees who provided contracting services; I examined and adjusted government defense contracts; and I provided advice to the Commanding General concerning contract disputes and accounting. As chief civil law attorney, I supervised staff in providing legal counsel in matters involving consumer affairs, family law, wills and estates, taxation, accidents, torts, real property, personal finances, landlord-tenant, contracts, FOIA, and various civilian court issues. As chief prosecutor, I prosecuted military criminal cases involving rape, forcible sodomy, theft of government property, selling government property, receiving stolen property, wrongful use, sale, possession of controlled substances, theft, adultery, assault, battery, obstruction of justice, kidnapping and driving under the influence. I assisted in coordinating criminal investigations with the Military Police, Criminal Investigation Division and the Naval Criminal Investigative Service.

From 1999 to 2010, I served as an Assistant United States Attorney in the District of Minnesota and District of Arizona. I prosecuted cases which included, but were not limited to: murder for hire; possession of a firearm with an obliterated serial number; felon in possession of a firearm; possession or use of a firearm in a crime of violence with a silencer; continuing criminal enterprise; conspiracy to import narcotics, manage or control an establishment for storing a controlled substance; conspiracy to possess with the intent to distribute narcotics and importation of narcotics; introduction of narcotics into a prison facility; possession with the intent to distribute narcotics; immigration violations; bank robbery; counterfeiting operations; mail fraud; bank fraud; interstate child sex trafficking; interstate prostitution and several other federal offenses. I litigated numerous motions hearings, including those which involved orders of electronic surveillance, statutory post-authorization duties, suppression, grand jury witnesses, pen register and trap and trace devices, as well as electronic surveillance exempted from Title III, such as intercepted oral communications, and visual, non-verbal conduct.

While serving as an Assistant United States Attorney in the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force Section in the District of Arizona from 2001 to 2007 and 2009 to 2010, I worked with the FBI, DEA, ATF, as well as other federal and local agencies, and assisted in drafting complex affidavits for electronic surveillance, seeking T-III wiretap interceptions. Based on wiretaps and proactive investigations, I frequently handled complex litigation involving various jurisdictions, states and countries, multiple defendants, large quantities of narcotics, as well as significant funds and other assets seized.

While serving as the Chief of the White Collar/Public Corruption Section (now, Financial Crimes and Public Integrity Section) in the District of Arizona from 2008 to 2009, I supervised a staff of attorneys, financial analysts, and legal assistants assigned to cases involving mortgage fraud, corporate fraud, intellectual property fraud, public corruption, postal theft, health care fraud, identity theft, internet telemarketing fraud, and federal tax crimes.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

100% of my law practice was in litigation. I appeared in court frequently. As an attorney with the United States Marine Corps, I appeared in federal court on average four to ten times per month for guilty pleas, motions, and sentencing hearings. Approximately five percent of those proceedings were civil in nature, and the remaining were criminal. As an attorney with the United States Attorney's Office, I appeared in federal court on average 16 times per month. My practice only involved criminal proceedings.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	100%
2. state courts of record:	0%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	2%
2. criminal proceedings:	98%

than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

As an attorney with the United States Marine Corps, I had approximately 40 federal criminal cases tried to verdict as lead counsel. Of those, five percent were bench trials and the remaining were jury trials. As an attorney with the United States Attorney's Office, I had approximately 16 federal criminal cases tried to verdict. 13 of those cases I litigated as sole counsel, and three I litigated as lead or co-counsel. All cases were tried before a jury.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 98%
 - 2. non-jury: 2%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Assistant United States Attorney:

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I participated in numerous cases which were resolved by plea agreement and did not progress to trial. As the White Collar/Public Corruption Chief, my legal responsibilities included oversight of cases and development of policies regarding criminal prosecutions, case dispositions, and case management.

Afghanistan Deployment:

During my deployment to Afghanistan, I served as the Senior Legal Mentor to the Afghan National Army from September 2008 through April 2009. I oversaw the legal mentoring of Afghan National Army attorneys. I mentored the Afghanistan Judge Advocate General (Brigadier General), the Chief Judge of the Court of Military Appeals (Brigadier General), the Chief of ANA Ethics (Brigadier General), the Chief of ANA Legal Services (Colonel), and the Chief of ANA Personnel Law Department (Colonel). I assisted the senior Afghan Ministry of Defense and Staff (GS) legal department members in understanding and prosecuting corruption crimes in Afghanistan. I conducted site inspections at the Kabul Military Training Camp, 201st Corps, 203rd Corps-Gardez, 205th Corps-Kandahar, 207th Corps-Heart, and Pul-e-Charkhi. I also worked to ensure the reallocation of manpower assets to resolve critical personnel shortages.

Iraq Deployment:

During my deployment to Iraq, I served as the Liaison Officer to the Al Anbar, Iraq Provincial Chief Judge from June 2007 through March 2008. I mentored the Provincial Chief Judge and assisted the Anbari Judiciary in reestablishing the Rule of Law in Al Anbar. I led a team which established the Anbar Major Crimes Court #18, which was designed to try terrorism suspects in the Al Anbar Province. I convened the first Terrorism Court in Iraq using local judges. I facilitated the development plan for a Rule of Law Judicial Complex in Al Anbar Province (Ramadi), which led to the obligation of $16,000,000 for the Rule of Law Complex in Ramadi, Iraq. I also facilitated tours of the complex for senior experts, political appointees, and principal staff members from the U.S. Department of Defense, the U.S. Department of Justice, Multi-National Force Iraq, the U.S. Department of State, Joint Contracting Command Iraq, and the Multi-National Corps Iraq.

Iraq Deployment:

During my deployment to Iraq, I served as Senior Defense Counsel from February 2004 through October 2004. I supervised a team of attorneys who were responsible for providing defense services to Marines, Sailors, and Soldiers, in 56 felony and misdemeanor prosecutions in Fallujah, Al Taqaddum, Al Asad, Korea Village, Zaidon, Hurricane Point, Najaf, Kut, Az Zubayr, and Abu Ghurayb. I represented personnel against charges including: conspiracy, disrespect to a superior commissioned officer, assault on a superior commissioned officer, insubordinate conduct towards a warrant officer, failure to obey orders, misbehavior before the enemy, false official statement, wrongful destruction of military property, drunk on duty, misbehavior of a lookout, provoking speeches, larceny, assault, conduct unbecoming an officer, and fraternization. I also provided civil legal assistance to approximately 300 service members.

I have not performed any lobbying activities on behalf of any client or organization.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during my service with the Court, other than my continued service in the United States Marine Corps Reserves.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

My wife is an Assistant United States Attorney. Consistent with my current practice, I would recuse myself in any case in which she is involved or has had any involvement. I would follow the Judicial Code of Conduct and federal recusal statutes in recusing myself in any matter involving litigants I know personally. I am not aware of any category of litigation or financial arrangement that is likely to present potential conflicts of interest.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I will handle all matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest through the careful and diligent application of 28 U.S.C. § 455, Canon 3 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, and any and all other such relevant canons, statutes and rules governing such circumstances.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

In September of 2005, 2006, and 2009, I volunteered with the "Kids to Court" program, which was organized by the Honorable Mary H. Murguia, in conjunction with Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law. This program is designed to introduce local eighth grade students to the judicial system. Students participate in mock trials and serve as witnesses and court staff. Local attorneys provide feedback and mentor the students.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In March 2013, I submitted my application to Senator John McCain's Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee (FJEC) and provided a copy of my resume and letter of interest to the offices of Senator Jeff Flake and Congressman Ed Pastor. On June 8, 2013, I appeared for an interview with the FJEC in Phoenix, Arizona. On June 28, 2013, I was notified by the FJEC Chairman that I had been selected as a potential nominee to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. Since June 30, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 7, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On September 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolutions.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1995 to 1998, as a private civil attorney in a large firm, I practiced in intellectual property litigation, complex commercial litigation and appellate law. I also focused on government and election law. During my time in private civil practice I tried matters to a jury, the bench and an arbitrator, both as sole counsel and as co-counsel.

From 1998 until 2001, as a new prosecutor, I handled immigration, firearms and drug trafficking cases involving the litigation of Title III electronic surveillance, the use of cooperating defendants, professional confidential informants and expert testimony on the modus operandi of drug trafficking organizations. Trial matters ranged from single-defendant drug courier cases to organizational conspiracy charges.

From 2001 through 2005, I prosecuted in the office's White Collar Bureau, specializing in complex investment fraud and computer crime, investigating several offenses with an overseas nexus. I developed experience obtaining evidence and testimony in foreign jurisdictions, and became the District's Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) Coordinator, as well as our Computer and Telecommunications Crime Coordinator. In these capacities I advised all AUSAs on law, policy, methods and protocol for obtaining electronic evidence and evidence from foreign jurisdictions. My trial experience in this assignment ranged from low-level federal employee corruption cases that took a few days to try to bankruptcy fraud and offshore investment fraud matters that lasted several weeks to more than a month.

From mid-2005 through 2006, I served as the Appellate Deputy Chief, supervising the Phoenix Appellate Section and editing the appellate work product of all line AUSAs in the Civil and Criminal Divisions for the Phoenix, Yuma and Flagstaff offices. I also wrote appellate briefs and handled oral arguments before the Ninth Circuit. During this time I became the District's Professional Responsibility Officer, responsible for training all AUSAs on their ethical obligations and advising them on issues as they arose.

From late 2006 to 2009, I was Chief of the Criminal Division, responsible for the supervision of every AUSA in the Criminal Division and every criminal case filed in the Phoenix, Flagstaff and Yuma offices. I developed standards of practice, ran our attorney training program, drafted district policies and procedures consistent with broad Department-wide procedures, reviewed and approved all charging and non-guideline plea decisions, and staffed cases. For six months of this time in late 2008 and early 2009, I also served as Acting First Assistant United States Attorney, supervising all aspects of the office's operations and personnel issues in all our locations. I did not maintain a caseload during this time.

On July 31, 2009, I was appointed by the Attorney General to serve as United States Attorney for the interim period between presidential appointees. I managed and represented the District in that capacity until the Senate confirmation of the President's nominee for United States Attorney in mid-September 2009.

From November 2009 through December 2012, I served as Senior Litigation Counsel and Tribal Liaison for the District. As Senior Litigation Counsel, I was responsible for the development of all District-wide Criminal Division policies, and the training of all AUSAs on those policies, including the Department's and the District's new criminal discovery and disclosure policies. I also was tasked with training every federal agent in the district who might act as case agent or witness in federal cases on the government's disclosure obligations under the law and Department policy. As Tribal Liaison I formulated and delivered programs to improve the success of criminal investigations and prosecutions in Indian Country. I trained tribal and federal law enforcement on substantive law, procedure, evidentiary requirements and investigative practices that would meet federal prosecution standards, and I evaluated and revised federal practices that limited our effectiveness. I also was responsible for developing and maintaining working relationships with the elected leaders, police chiefs, judges and prosecutors of the 22 tribes in Arizona.

In January 2013 I became Chief Assistant United States Attorney, where I presently manage the civil and criminal personnel and operations in our Phoenix, Flagstaff and Yuma offices and represent the United States Attorney in dealings with our partner agencies, the federal judges and the public. I continue to serve as the Professional Responsibility Officer for all Assistant United States Attorneys in the District and in that capacity I provide legal ethics advice and counseling on a daily basis.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

From 1995 to 1998, my typical clients included large technology firms and smaller entrepreneurs and I specialized in patent and commercial litigation, as well as some securities transactional law. The firm also assigned me work on election law matters for individual and organizational clients.

Since 1998, my client has been the United States Government and the people it serves. During that time, I have specialized in the substantive criminal law areas of fraud and computer crime, in federal Indian law, in professional responsibility and the law of lawyering, and in criminal discovery.

From 1995 through early 2007, almost one hundred percent of my practice was in litigation, and I would appear daily in magistrate court and district court from the time I joined the United States Attorney's Office in 1998 until I began managing the office's Appellate Section. Since 2007 my court appearances have been less frequent, as I have spent the great majority of my time managing office operations or training and mentoring other prosecutors.

i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 95% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 5% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 0% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 95% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried approximately twelve matters to conclusion. I was associate counsel on two of those matters and chief counsel or sole counsel on the remainder.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 2. non-jury: | 8% |

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- the date of representation;
- the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. United States v. Taylor, Docket Number 04-CR-00809-PHX-NVW (District of Arizona 2004 – 2008), Honorable Neil V. Wake presiding; 2007 WL 2087149 (9th Cir. July 19, 2007).

This case involved a bankruptcy fraud scheme by a businessman. Defendant repeatedly filed for Chapter 7 protection to discharge his debts and those of his sole proprietorship, repeatedly altering the name under which he filed and never acknowledging his prior petitions. Defendant also concealed several hundred thousand dollars in assets from creditors and the bankruptcy court. I represented the United States in this matter, substituting on along with co-counsel in early 2005. Co-counsel and I prepared and tried the matter to a jury during the first two weeks of May 2005, after which defendant was found guilty of nine counts of bankruptcy fraud. I briefed the appeal, after which the Circuit Court affirmed six counts of conviction and reversed on three counts, under Ninth Circuit Docket Number CA 05-10822. I remained on the case until finality in 2008.

2. United States v. Hankins, 04-CR-00372-PHX-SRB (District of Arizona 2004 – 2006), Honorable Susan R. Bolton presiding.

This case involved the theft and subsequent sale of over one million rounds of ammunition by associates of a nationwide criminal gang. I charged the defendant with possessing stolen ammunition in April 2004, and prepared and tried the case to a jury over three days in January 2005 with co-counsel. After the jury deadlocked and the key cooperating witness passed away, the defendant entered a felony plea to being a drug addict in possession of firearms and ammunition. I represented the United States in this matter from 2004 to October 2006.

3. United States v. Rainey, 04-CR-00227-PHX-NVW (District of Arizona 2004 – 2005), Honorable Neil V. Wake presiding.

This matter involved the theft from a secured United States Department of Interior facility of sensitive electronic equipment that was on loan from the Department of Defense and whose loss raised national security implications. Within a day of learning of the theft, federal agents had identified one of the unique stolen components being offered for sale on eBay. I came into the matter with the task of tracking the stolen equipment from an eBay listing to a physical location as fast as possible. Within 18 hours, through a combination of court orders for electronically stored records and working with counsel for internet service providers, the investigation traced the item from a fictitious eBay seller account to a fictitious Hotmail account to a concrete Cox Communications internet service subscriber to a residential address. I then obtained a search warrant for the house, where all of the stolen sensitive items were recovered. Defendant was charged with theft of government property and conspiracy and entered a guilty plea. I represented the United States on this matter from its inception in January 2004 to finality in 2005.

4. United States v. Coleman, 02-CR-00487-PHX-EHC (District of Arizona 2002 – 2005), Honorable Earl H. Carroll presiding.

This matter involved the systematic defrauding of the Combined Federal Campaign for Arizona—the vehicle through which federal employees make their contributions to recognized charitable organizations—by its executive director. Defendant provided false reports to the campaign board and falsified co-signatures on campaign accounts and lines of credit to divert to his own use nearly $130,000 in federal employee charitable contributions. While investigating the defendant's accounting, the prosecution team discovered that the defendant had at the same time defrauded the United States Small Business Administration into issuing him a $460,000 loan for a business he did not have. Defendant pleaded guilty to theft of government property and false statements and was sentenced to thirty-three months in prison. I represented the United States in this matter from charging in May of 2002 through finality in May of 2005.

5. United States v. Sanabria, Docket Number 01-CR-01135-PHX-FJM (District of Arizona 2001 – 2003), Honorable Frederick J. Martone presiding; 2003 WL 21949805 (9th Cir. August 12, 2003).

This matter involved theft by a United States Postal Service facility manager of tens of thousands of dollars from the facility under her management. The defendant scheduled other employees to work in other parts of the facility so she could be alone with the registered items, and then falsified shipping and inventory records to lay blame on other employees. I substituted into the matter along with co-counsel in May 2002, several days before trial, when assigned counsel took ill. Co-counsel and I prepared the matter and executed a four-day trial, after which the jury convicted defendant on the sole count of the indictment. I helped draft the appellate brief. On appeal, the Circuit Court affirmed the conviction in a memorandum disposition under Docket Number CA 02-10548. I remained on the matter until finality in late 2003.

Defendant was represented by James Sun Park, Park Law Office PLC, 2702 North Third Street, Suite 4005, Phoenix, AZ 85004; (602) 462-5700.

6. United States v. Hernandez, et al., 01-CR-00981-PHX-SRB (District of Arizona 2001 – 2004), Honorable Susan R. Bolton presiding.

This case involved a scheme to defraud an Arizona chemical processing company of nearly $800,000 via false and inflated supplier billing. Hernandez, a maintenance manager for the victim chemical company, reached agreements with five separate suppliers to submit orders for unnecessary supplies and services, and then approved the invoices for which no product had been shipped, in exchange for kickbacks of fifty percent of the false invoice totals. Over a seven year period, the ring collected a minimum of $791,500 for product the victim never received. Preparing the case involved the analysis and organization of voluminous documents. The suppliers all agreed to cooperate and provide testimony against Hernandez, who ultimately pleaded guilty on the eve of trial.

7. United States v. Drizin, Docket Number 00-CR-00857-PHX-SMM (District of Arizona 2000-2006), Honorable Stephen M. McNamee presiding; 2007 WL 1853978 (9th Cir. June 25, 2007).

The case involved a multi-million dollar investment fraud scheme. The defendant solicited victims to invest in an empty shell corporation he owned by promising the shell would imminently merge with a private firm that had developed an HIV-inhibiting drug. Defendant also represented that the merger was backed by wealthy European investors who had already invested millions, and he produced false documentation to that effect. In reality, there were no such investors, and defendant was using the banking and corporate secrecy laws of the British Channel Islands to conceal this fact from victims.

I represented the United States, substituting into the matter in early 2003 to prepare the case for trial. Through the use of Fed. R. Crim Pr. 15 and the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty the United States has with the Isle of Guernsey, I compelled the appearance and testimony in a Guernsey court of a banker who refused to travel to the United States or give evidence voluntarily, and then introduced that video-recorded testimony at defendant's trial in Arizona. I prepared and served as lead counsel for the approximately four-week trial, after which defendant was convicted on multiple counts of wire fraud in late 2003. I briefed and argued the appeal, and defendant's conviction was affirmed in 2007, under Ninth Circuit Docket Number CA 05-10820.

8. United States v. Duarte, 99-CR-01053-PHX-SMM (District of Arizona 1999 – 2001), Honorable Stephen M. McNamee presiding; 2001 WL 1154631 (9th Cir. October 1, 2001).

The case involved a drug courier transporting nearly twenty-pound quantities of methamphetamine from Mexico through California and into Arizona. I substituted onto the matter in March 2000 with co-counsel to prepare and try the matter. The four-day jury trial centered on the government's expert testimony on the modus operandi of drug trafficking organizations to counter the defense that the defendant had no idea the methamphetamine was in his vehicle. The jury convicted the defendant of possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine. I briefed and argued the appeal, which the Circuit Court affirmed by memorandum decision under docket number CA 00-10552. I represented the United States in this matter from April 2000 through finality in October 2001.

Defendant was represented at trial and on appeal by Gerald A. Williams, Federal Defender's Office, 850 West Adams Street, Suite 250, Phoenix, AZ 85007; (602) 372-2564.

My co-counsel on the trial in this matter was Assistant United States Attorney Soo C. Song, now of the United States Attorney's Office for the Western District of Pennsylvania, United States Post Office and Courthouse, 700 Grand Street, Suite 4000, Pittsburgh, PA 15219; (412) 894-7420.

9. Hershey v. Conseco, Inc., et al., Docket Number CV 96-22453 (Superior Court of Arizona in and for Maricopa County 1996 – 1997), Honorable Rebecca S. Albrecht presiding.

This matter involved an attempt by a minority shareholder in an insurance company doing business nationwide, Capitol American Life Insurance Company, to use Arizona insurance regulations to hold up the $680 million acquisition of Capitol American by another national insurer, Conseco. Plaintiff Hershey sought an injunction in the Arizona courts against the closing of the acquisition on the ground that it would be "inequitable" to Capitol American shareholders, which would violate the Arizona Insurance Code. I was associate counsel for Capitol American. Lead counsel and I prepared for and executed a two-day bench trial on the injunction, where I was responsible for identifying and preparing affidavits or testimony from other substantial shareholders in Capitol American who would testify that the acquisition tender offer from Conseco was very favorable. Upon conclusion of the trial, the court denied the injunction, and the parties to the acquisition immediately filed the acquisition closing documents with all federal and state securities regulators and corporation commissions, obviating any appeal. Lead counsel and I represented Capitol American in this matter from January 17, 1997 until the conclusion of the trial on March 6, 1997 and the subsequent closing of the transaction that same day.

10. Cutler v. Crum, Docket Number CV 95-13079 (Superior Court of Arizona in and for Maricopa County 1995 – 1996), Honorable Crane McClennen presiding; 186 Ariz. 351, 922 P.2d 316 (Ariz. App. 1996).

This case culminated in a defamation trial over whether defendant had impugned plaintiff's integrity as an attorney and a businessman. As associate counsel for plaintiff, I prepared most of the discovery and pleadings and examined witnesses at trial. I also briefed and argued the interlocutory appeal in this matter. After a three-day trial, the jury found plaintiff had been defamed. I represented the plaintiff from September 1995 through conclusion of the trial in 1996.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

From 2002 through 2004 I was responsible for addressing all requests for assistance in the District of Arizona by foreign nations' prosecution agencies made pursuant to Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties, or MLATs, that the United States had with those other sovereigns. The district court in Arizona appointed me as a Commissioner under the relevant MLATs in approximately thirty matters, and I exercised that authority to compel the production of testimony and evidence for use by foreign prosecutors, in a format that would be admissible in their tribunals.

Since 2004 I have been the Professional Responsibility Officer for an office of 170 lawyers, advising them and answering their questions on a daily basis on issues that could affect their ability to practice law. That experience, coupled with my years of teaching Professional Responsibility at the O'Connor College of Law, has created a facility with critical ethical issues, such as prohibited contacts with represented persons, the law of privilege, the extent of discovery obligations and the variations of prosecutorial misconduct.

In the past three years I have drafted the United States Attorney's Office Criminal Policy Manual, its Criminal Discovery Policy, its Electronic Discovery Policy and its Operation Plan for Public Safety in Indian Country. These lengthy exercises have allowed me to analyze and reflect deeply on how to develop quality policy and procedure for large legal organizations with high case volume that nonetheless must deliver careful consideration to each individual matter, to ensure rights are observed in every case.

As Tribal Liaison I advised prosecutors and tribal government officials on the complex law of Indian Country jurisdiction, and applied that knowledge to resolving longstanding issues relevant to several of Arizona's tribal governments.

Finally, in my work as Chair of the Arizona Supreme Court's Committee on Character and Fitness and its Attorney Regulation Advisory Committee, I have worked to improve substantially the function of evaluating applicants for admission to the practice of law in Arizona, balancing the need to protect clients, the public and the judicial system from unfit practitioners, on the one hand, with the need to be fair and provide due process to every applicant, no matter what load the system may bear.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In the Fall 2001 academic semester, I taught the Business Associations I course at the Arizona State University College of Law (now the O'Connor College of Law). The course covered the creation, governance, liabilities, dissolution and winding up of partnerships and limited liability companies. I no longer have a copy of the syllabus for the course.

From 2002 through 2007, I taught the required Professional Responsibility course a total of six semesters at the O'Connor College of Law at Arizona State University. The course covered the duties owed by attorneys and their agents to clients, the court, other counsel and third persons under the American Bar Association Model Rules of Professional Responsibility, as well as the law of privilege. I no longer have a syllabus for the course.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have no deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts or other future benefits that I expect to derive from previous business relationships or any other sources.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, I have no commitments or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation. I currently serve on the Arizona Supreme Court's Attorney Regulation Advisory Committee, and since the beginning of 2012, as Chair of the Admissions Subcommittee, I have managed a comprehensive review of the current attorney admissions process. My Subcommittee is tasked with creating a complete written recommendation for a new applicant evaluation and admission process for Arizona. The information gathering process will conclude in November 2013 and final written recommendations are expected to be transmitted to the Supreme Court by Summer 2014. I would like to see this process through to completion and would consult with the Administrative Office of the Courts and the applicable judicial canons and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges to determine whether such volunteer work would in any way present a conflict of interest or the appearance thereof. If it did, I would resign from the relevant Arizona Supreme Court Committees and end my involvement with the review and recommendation process.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

Please see the attached financial disclosure form.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

Please see the attached financial net worth statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

Because all criminal and civil matters currently pending in the Phoenix Division of the United States Attorney's Office are under my supervision I would recuse from those cases. I am not aware of any other person or entity with whom I have a personal, financial or professional relationship that is likely to present a conflict of interest.

- b Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

To avoid any real or potential conflict of interest, I would consult the rules and decisions addressing what constitutes a conflict of interest, including 28 U.S.C. Section 455, Canon 3 of the Code of Judicial Conduct for United States Judges, and any and all other laws, rules, and practices governing such circumstances. If I had any uncertainty about a potential conflict issue I would consult with my fellow judges and or others designated by the court to advise on such issues.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

During my years in private practice, from 1995 to 1998, the law firm for which I worked was very active in pro bono legal representation of indigent individuals and not-for-profit organizations serving the poor and the public interest, and the firm provided several of those opportunities to me. I performed legal research and writing on a capital habeas matter and represented an indigent client in a consumer fraud matter involving the purchase of a used car.

During my time at the United States Attorney's Office from 1998 to the present, Department of Justice policies and ethical rules have prohibited my direct representation of indigent clients, so I have directed my pro bono service toward programs improving the justice system and the delivery of quality legal services. From 1999 to 2006 I served on the Supreme Court Merit Selection Commission for Trial Court Appointments, recruiting, evaluating and nominating to the Governor judges of the Superior Court bench for Maricopa County, one of the largest state trial benches in the United States. While on the Commission I participated in the selection of 43 superior court judges.

Since 2006, I have served on the Arizona Supreme Court's Committee on Character and Fitness, which evaluates the suitability of every applicant for admission to the State Bar of Arizona. Each Committee member reads the character reports of assigned applicants and participates in at least one formal applicant hearing and several informal hearings per month. Since 2011, I have served as Chair of that committee, where I rule on procedural and evidentiary motions made by applicants' counsel and preside over all formal hearings.

Since 2011, I have also served on the Arizona Supreme Court's Attorney Regulation Advisory Committee, where as Chair of the Admissions Subcommittee I am responsible for a systemic review of, and final recommendations to modernize, Arizona's process for evaluating applicants to the practice of law.

I have also volunteered outside of the legal community. From 1994 to 1998, my wife and I volunteered through the Tempe Cares Program to work shifts on local Habitat for Humanity build sites. Finally, my family and I have been regular volunteers preparing and serving meals at the Saint Vincent de Paul shelter and preparing food boxes at the Interfaith Missions food pantry in Phoenix since 2006 and 2011, respectively. Either through our associations with Boy Scouts, Boys' Team Charity or our children's school service organization, we currently serve about one shift a month as a family.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

On March 8, 2013, I submitted an application and cover letter to Senator John McCain's Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee. In April 2013, I sat for an interview in Phoenix, Arizona, with a member of this Committee, and on June 8, 2013, I sat for an interview with the entire Committee in Phoenix, Arizona. On June 28, 2013, the Chairman of that Committee advised me that Senator McCain was submitting my name to the President for his consideration. Since June 28, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy in the Department of Justice. On August 28, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On September 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

- 14. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

In 2002, I was confirmed by the Hopi Tribal Council as an Appellate Court Judge for the Hopi Tribal Court. I voluntarily served in that capacity without compensation up to the time I resigned in 2007. The Hopi Tribal Appellate Court’s jurisdiction is governed by the Hopi Tribal Constitution and Hopi Tribal law. The Court’s authority is limited to reviewing civil and criminal tribal court final judgments for matters arising on Hopi lands. The Hopi Constitution and tribal law authorize the Court to answer certified questions of law.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

I participated in several Appellate Court oral arguments. I was one of three or four Justices presiding over the arguments. As such, I did not preside over any trials.

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials: _____%
bench trials: _____%

civil proceedings: _____%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

A check of Hopi Tribal Court records shows that I participated in issuing the following majority decisions. I contributed, in part, to the drafting of each of the decisions and I do not recall wholly authoring any one decision.

1. In the Matter of Certified Question of Law Re: In the Matter of the Practice of Law, April 9, 2004 (No. 03AP000005). Opinion supplied.

The Appellate Court analyzed whether lay advocates should be permitted to practice in the Hopi Tribal Courts. The question was posed by the Tribal Court Chief Judge after a number of advocates were disciplined by the Trial Courts. The Appellate Court's answer recognized that lay advocates offered a benefit to the Hopi courts by providing information on traditional common law and customary practices within each of the twelve Hopi villages. The Appellate Court further recognized a need to facilitate the professional practice of law in the Hopi courts therefore it ordered the Chief Judge to establish a committee to develop professional practice rules and procedures for all Hopi Court practitioners.

2. Sekayumptewa v. Hopi Election Board, November 18, 2007 (No. 2007AP006). Opinion supplied.

The Appellate Court declined to exercise its jurisdiction to hear a Motion for Extraordinary Writ. Petitioner sought to appeal a decision of the Hopi Election Board finding that Mr. Nuvamsa met the qualifications to run for Hopi Tribal Chairman. Petitioners filed a claim seeking a review of the Election Board decision. The Election Board filed a Motion for Summary Judgment and Petitioner filed a Responsive Motion. The Trial Court held a hearing on the Motion and took the matter under advisement. Petitioner filed a Motion for Extraordinary Writ with the Appellate Court to compel the Trial Court's decision. While the Motion was pending, the Trial Court issued its order negating a need for Appellate Court review.

3. In the Matter of the Estate of Komaquaptewa, August 16, 2002 (No. 1AP000013). Opinion supplied.

The parties disputed the ownership of decedent's home in the Village of Bacavi. This matter of first impression required an analysis of the Tribal Court's jurisdiction and process for distribution of property located in a Village that is not organized by a Constitution and that waived its authority and jurisdiction to resolve internal village property disputes pursuant to the Hopi Tribal Constitution. The Appellate Court ordered the parties to brief the following legal questions: 1) when a Village decides not to exercise its Hopi Constitutional power to resolve internal Village property disputes, does the Constitution give the tribal court the power to distribute property according to a valid will; and (2) whether the Hopi Trial Court may validate, recognize and probate wills in the absence of a village or tribal statute authorizing and defining the process for recognizing such wills. The Hopi Appellate Court deemed this matter to have legal and procedural implications for all Hopi Villages. Therefore, the Appellate Court remanded the case to the Trial Court to have the parties develop a record on custom, tradition and familial property use and further invited each Hopi Village to submit amicus briefs on the questions.

4. Thomas v. Hopi Tribe, November, 22 2002 (No. 02AP000006). Opinion supplied.

The parties were involved in an employment contract dispute concerning a four-month termination provision. The primary issues were: (1) the Trial Court's admission of hearsay evidence based on Arizona Rules of Evidence 803(8), the public records and reports exception; and (2) the Trial Court's finding of Accord and Satisfaction to absolve the employer from further liability. The Appellate Court found that the trial court erred in admitting the hearsay statement but that the error failed to meet the clear abuse standard for appellate review of trial court evidentiary rulings and that admitting the statement was not prejudicial. The Appellate Court found Accord and Satisfaction when an employer makes a clear offer to settle a dispute by offering a check accompanied by an explanatory letter and the former employee subsequently cashes the check, regardless of the former employee's protest that the check does not fully satisfy his claim.

The Village appealed a Tribal Court Summary Judgment order finding for Appellee. The Village filed a claim in Tribal Court seeking an Order compelling Appellee to remove a body that he buried on alleged "Clan lands" and a finding of trespass by Appellee on the Clan lands. Appellee argued that the claim violated the Native American Graves Protection Act and alternatively, Hopi Ordinance 26 which required the Village to receive a license to remove human remains. He also claimed that he received authority to use the land from a Village Leader. Appellant claimed that the land was not owned by one individual but rather it is common use Clan land and disputed that the person granting Appellee land access was a bona fide Village Leader. After a hearing on Appellee's Summary Judgment Motion, the Trial Court informed the parties that he would take the matter under advisement and inform them of his decision. The Appellate Court reversed and remanded the case finding that the Trial Court erred because it failed to give the parties, orally or in writing, a basis for its ruling. The Appellate Court further found that abundant issues of fact remained warranting a remand of the case. I filed a dissenting opinion to indicate a concern that the Appellate Court's written decision overreached by prematurely invoking Hopi Ordinance 26.

6. Monestersky v. The Hopi Tribe, The Hopi Tribal Chairman Wayne Taylor, Jr. and the Hopi Tribal Council, June 24, 2002 (No. 01AP000015). Opinion supplied.

Appellant appealed a Trial Court's affirmation of an Order of Exclusion excluding her from the Hopi reservation issued by the Chairman of the Hopi Tribe pursuant to Hopi Tribal Ordinance 46. Appellant argued that Hopi Tribal Ordinance 46 violated her due process rights. A Trial Court affirmed the Hopi Tribe's administrative decision to exclude Appellant, a non-Indian, from the Hopi reservation. The Trial Court found that it had jurisdiction to review the Order of Exclusion and that no due process violations occurred during Appellant's the exclusion process. The Appellate Court affirmed the Trial Court's decision.

7. In Re the Order of the Upper Village of Moencopi, April 5, 2007 (No. 2007AP0001). Opinion supplied.

The Appellate Court affirmed the Trial Court's evidentiary hearing process and certification of the Village of Moencopi's order requiring Appellant to remove a mobile home from the Village. Appellant argued that the Trial Court lacked jurisdiction to hear an internal Village land controversy. The Appellate Court held that the Trial Court's review of the Village Board's decision, the evidence presented at the Village meeting, and the Order to remove Appellant's mobile home were appropriate and necessary to ensure that all parties were provided "minimal fundamental fairness" required by Honie v. Hopi Tribal Housing Authority, ____, 1998 (No. 96AP0007), and affirmed the Trial Court's certification of the Village of Moencopi's Order.

8. Day v. Chief Judge of the Hopi Trial Court, April 19, 2004; November 11, 2004 (No.04AP000003). Opinions supplied.

Appellant appealed an order suspending him from practicing in the Hopi Courts for violating various ethical rules of the American Bar Association and the Model Rules of Professional Conduct, imposing a fine and ordering him to attend an Arizona State Bar course on professionalism. The Appellate Court decided this matter as an Extraordinary Writ to facilitate an immediate resolution. On the merits, Appellant argued that the Trial Court lacked the authority to discipline him as such proceedings are administrative rather than adversarial and that lay counsel are not ministerial officers. As a matter of first impression, the Appellate Court analyzed whether the Trial Court has the authority to discipline Tribal Court practitioners in the absence of approved Hopi tribal ethics or professional rules. The Court found that Hopi Ordinance 21 generally provides the Court with authority to regulate and discipline members of the Hopi Bar so long as the Court's conduct is reasonable and appropriate to restore the conduct of its officers. The Appellate Court held that the Trial Court followed the ABA Model Code for Judicial Conduct by providing Day a fair hearing and ample opportunity to be heard. The Appellate Court affirmed the Trial Court's Order suspending Day from appearing in Hopi Tribal Court.

9. In the Matter of Certified Question of Law Re The First Mesa Consolidated Villages, November 19, 2004 (No. 4AP00001). Opinion supplied.

The Hopi Tribal Council requested that the Appellate Court answer whether the Tribal Council was required to allocate funding to the Village leader of one of the three First Mesa villages or if it could allocate funds to the First Mesa Consolidated Villages, a cooperative village entity. The question required the Appellate Court to analyze whether a Hopi Tribal Council's Resolution permitting it to disburse funding to the First Mesa Consolidated Villages, rather than to each of the three original villages, violated the Hopi Tribal Constitution. The Appellate Court analyzed the Hopi Tribal Constitution and its provisions that authorize the Tribal Council to provide for the welfare of the Hopi Tribe, generally. The Appellate Court held that nothing in the Tribal Council's Resolution violated the Constitution or the individual villages' governing structure and that payment to the Consolidated Villages was within the discretion of the Tribal Council under its authority to provide for the health and welfare of the Hopi Tribe.

10. Honyouma v. Nuvamsa, November 9, 2007 (No. AP0005). Opinions supplied.

The Appellate Court granted Appellee Nuvamsa's Motion to Dismiss an Appeal by the Hopi Tribe and the Hopi Tribal Council of the Trial Court's decision in Nuvamsa v. Honyouma, ___, 2006 (No. CV0068). The Appellate Court held that neither the Tribe nor the Council were parties in the underlying cause of action. Rule 37(b) of the Hopi Indian Rules of Criminal and Civil Procedure governs Hopi Court appellate practice. The Appellate Court interpreted HIRCCP 37(b) to apply to the real parties to an underlying case. Because neither the Tribe nor the Council were parties in Nuvamsa v. Honyouma, the Appellate Court concluded that they were not real parties pursuant to HIRCCP 37(b) and could not appeal the Trial Court's judgment.

e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

None.

f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

None.

g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

To the best of my knowledge, only three Hopi Appellate Court decisions that I participated in drafting were ever formally published. Generally, copies of court opinions were mailed to the parties and a copy of the decision is maintained in the Hopi Tribal Court Clerk's Office.

h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

No Hopi Appellate Court matter involved federal or state constitutional issues.

i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not served by designation on any federal court.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

I recused myself from all tribal criminal appeals. Tribal criminal violations have a high probability of being referred to the U.S. Attorney's Office for federal prosecution. At the time, I was heavily involved in violent crime prosecutions, many arising in Indian Country, including matters arising on Hopi lands. I sought to avoid future potential conflicts of interest for me and my office. The Hopi Tribal Court Clerk reviewed all cases that were referred to the Appellate Court to ensure that I was not assigned any criminal appeals or writs.

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

From approximately 2004 to 2007 I was on a list of Arbitration lawyers for Arizona. I was designated an arbitration judge on at least two matters. However, the matters settled or the parties elected not to use arbitration.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1993 to 1996 as Deputy Counsel to the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, I provided research and advice to Committee members and staff. I drafted federal legislation and prepared legal memoranda on pending legislation, staffed hearings, and drafted letters and talking points for the Committee Chairman.

From 1996 to 1998 as counsel to the Deputy Attorney General, I provided legal research and advice to the Director and staff of the Office of Tribal Justice on national issues affecting Indian tribal governments and the Justice Department, including Indian gaming, tribal courts, litigation involving the federal government and Indian tribes and the federal prosecution of Indian Country crimes and affiliated resource issues. In 1997 I was assigned to the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona as a Special AUSA, where I handled a variety of Indian Country related policy matters and cases.

In 1998 I was hired as a permanent AUSA for the District of Arizona. I was assigned to a general crimes group and later assigned to a violent crimes group. I handled a wide variety of cases from criminal complaint, grand jury proceedings, and trials through sentencing and appeal. In approximately 2001, I transferred to the civil division where I handled claims against the federal government and prosecuted federal bankruptcy claims. I appeared in the Federal Magistrate, District and Bankruptcy Courts and Phoenix City Court.

In approximately 2001, I was elevated to Senior Litigation Counsel to the United States Attorney where I handled a criminal caseload. I also supervised the Victim Witness Program staff and served as the Office's Victim Witness Ombudsman and the Tribal Liaison. As the Tribal Liaison, I provided advice to the U.S. Attorney on issues relating to our work with and for Indian tribes, developed training programs for tribal investigators and prosecutors, and interfaced with tribal government officials to build trust with our federal investigation agencies. I represented the U.S. Attorney on the Arizona State, Tribal and Federal Court forum.

In 2007 I was confirmed as the United States Attorney for the District of Arizona. I oversaw one of the largest offices in the nation with one of the highest caseloads (four offices with over 300 employees). I coordinated major federal investigations with federal, state and tribal law enforcement agencies. I was assigned to the U.S. Attorney General's Southwest Border Crimes Advisory Group and the Native American Issues Advisory Group. As part of my responsibilities, I testified before the U.S. Sentencing Commission on border crimes issues and the United States Senate on Indian Country crime issues. I worked with the Chief Judge of the Arizona District Court to address the high volume of immigration violations and border crimes cases affecting the federal courts in Arizona.

In August 2009 I was hired by the Hopi Tribe on a temporary emergency basis as the Acting Chief Prosecutor while the Tribe attempted to fill the vacant position. I handled a variety of tribal criminal cases from initial charging through disposition in the Hopi Tribal Court. I resigned that position in late September 2009 due to a prior employment commitment.

From 2009 to 2011 I worked in the Squire, Sanders and Dempsey law firm where I was assigned to the Federal Indian law and Environmental Law practices group. I represented clients, tribal and non-tribal, on federal Indian law, renewable energy development and water law issues. I was responsible for building client relationships with tribal governments or with clients who sought relationships with tribal governments. As the Principal in the Public Advocacy group, I provided a tribal client advice and counsel on federal agency rules, regulations and Tribal consultation.

In private practice, I was retained by Arizona State University (“ASU”) to work for the ASU President. In October 2011, I resigned my position in private practice to work full-time for ASU. As Special Advisor and Special Counsel, I provide research and advice on a variety of higher education law matters, including legal and policy matters affecting ASU and its relationships with Indian tribes.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

As an Indian Affairs Committee Counsel, I interfaced with federal agencies for which the Committee had oversight, including the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Indian Health Service. I met with tribal, state and local agency representatives on matters affected by federal law, government action or Indian legal issues.

As Deputy Counsel, my client was the Department of Justice. By Executive Order, I was required to consult with federal Indian tribes on matters affecting the Indian tribes and the federal government. As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, Senior Litigation Counsel and U.S. Attorney, I represented federal agencies and the interests of the federal government in the federal courts. As the Acting Chief Prosecutor for the Hopi Tribe, I represented the Hopi Tribe and its interests. I interfaced with the federal and local agencies assigned to investigate and enforce the laws of the Hopi Tribe. As Of Counsel and Principal with Squire, Sanders and Dempsey, I was retained by Indian tribes, private companies and public agencies on specific legal and public policy matters. As Special Advisor and Special Counsel for the ASU President, I represent ASU and its interests in negotiating agreements with Indian tribes, review federal regulation compliance. I represent ASU and its interests in addressing Arizona Indian tribal higher education issues.

As an Assistant U.S. Attorney and up to the time I was confirmed as the United States Attorney in 2007, I handled the initial stages of criminal cases including presentment of cases to Federal Grand Juries. I appeared regularly in initial court proceedings in U.S. Magistrate Court including representing the United States in initial appearances, detention and preliminary hearings. I regularly appeared in Federal District Court in pre-trial motion hearings, voluntariness hearings, change of plea hearings and sentencing hearings. I have tried approximately 20 cases to jury or judge verdict. My trial experience ranges from homicides and child sex crimes to defending federal agencies and their interests in City and Federal Courts, including Federal Bankruptcy Court. I have also handled Federal Juvenile Delinquency proceedings, including juvenile to adult transfer proceedings. As necessary, I researched and drafted appellate briefs arising from my cases.

As the Acting Chief Prosecutor for the Hopi Tribe from August to September 2009, I handled misdemeanor tribal court criminal offenses from making the initial charging decision through plea hearing and sentencing. I appeared in Hopi Tribal Court multiple times a day, four out of five days a week for approximately six weeks.

i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 98% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 1% |
| 3. other courts: | 1% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 0% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|

I have handled approximately 255 criminal or civil cases. I was lead counsel in all but approximately 12 cases. I tried approximately 20 cases to judge or jury verdict. I was co-counsel on three of the criminal cases that went to trial. As co-counsel, I generally shared responsibility for pre-trial motion research and motion drafting, witness preparation and an equal division of witness examination and opening and closing arguments. Of the cases that I have solely tried, I handled all aspects of the case from the Federal Grand Jury presentation of charges through pre-trial motion practice, trial preparation, trial and sentencing.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 2. non-jury: | 1% |

I have not appeared before the United States Supreme Court.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

1. United States v. James, CR 05-00172-PCT-DGC (2006 – 2007).

I obtained a conviction after a jury trial for Aggravated Sexual Abuse of a Minor, Abusive Sexual Contact and Attempted Aggravated Sexual Abuse of a Minor. The defendant was sentenced to thirty-years in federal custody, one of the longest sentences for crimes of this nature. The defendant, a transient tribal member, was an acquaintance of the victim's mother. He was invited to stay the evening with her family on the White Mountain Apache reservation. The minor victim awoke to the defendant sexually assaulting him. The defendant was immediately arrested and the Federal Bureau of Investigation conducted an investigation. The case was transferred to me after the matter was set for trial. Immediately before trial, I discovered that the defendant had a prior state court conviction for similar conduct occurring approximately 15 years prior. Upon motion, I was permitted to introduce the prior conviction. I handled all pre-trial pleadings, witness preparation, trial and sentencing. The presiding judge was David G. Campbell.

2. United States v. Rocc, CR 99-616-PCT-RGS (1999 – 2000).

I indicted and convicted by plea the defendant on one count of Aggravated Sexual Abuse with a Child Under Twelve for sexually assaulting his step-daughter. The defendant engaged in anal intercourse with an eight-year-old incapacitated victim and was discovered in the act by the victim's older sister. The child witness immediately called the tribal police and the defendant was arrested. The victim was transported to the local Indian Health Service hospital where a medical examination confirmed the sexual assault. In the examination, the victim revealed that the defendant engaged in at least ten sex acts with her. The Navajo Nation Criminal Investigation handled the investigation. I handled all matters from charging through sentencing. The presiding judge was Roger G. Strand. (In a related case, the victim's mother pled guilty to Witness Tampering for causing the victim to recant her statement. The court sentenced her to one year in federal custody. I handled all matters from charging to disposition. See United States v. Begay, CR 99-726-PCT-RCB (1999)).

3. United States v. Yazzie, CR 99-753-PCT-EHC (1999 – 2000).

I obtained a conviction after a jury trial for Involuntary Manslaughter, a lesser-included offense of Second Degree Murder. The defendant and his elderly father were consuming alcohol and driving around the area of Cameron on the Navajo Indian reservation. Sometime during the night, the defendant and his father fought. During the fight, the defendant struck his father on the head with a bottle. The defendant dumped his father's body off on the side of the road where he was later discovered. The victim's cause of death was a result of severe head injuries. The defendant's pick-up truck was found at his home. Evidence of blood spatter was detected in the truck's interior cab. The defendant was sentenced to 20 months in federal custody. I handled all pre-trial motions preparation, pre-trial witness preparation, jury selection, trial and sentencing. The presiding judge was Earl H. Carroll.

4. United States v. Nakai, Yazzie et al, CR 99-075-PCT-EHC (1999 – 2000).

I prosecuted two adult defendants and two juveniles for Second Degree Murder for the beating death of their aunt's boyfriend. One of the juveniles was convinced that the victim was a witch who had placed him under a curse resulting in his constant illness. The group lured the victim from the home, beat him and hid his body. I separately filed federal juvenile delinquency violations against the juveniles. I was the attorney of record and handled all matters from the federal grand jury proceedings, pre-trial motion preparation and witness interviews, through plea negotiation and sentencing in both the adult and federal juvenile delinquency proceedings. The Presiding Judge was Earl H. Carroll.

After a two-week jury trial, the defendant was convicted of numerous ARPA, NAGPRA, and Conspiracy and Theft of Government Property crimes involving cultural patrimony and archeological resources of two Indian tribal governments, the Acoma Pueblo and the Hopi Tribe. The case began as an undercover operation with the Bureau of Indian Affairs guided by former AUSA Paul K. Charlton. Charlton sought my assistance as co-counsel prior to the federal grand jury presentation due to my familiarity with the NAGPRA law and Indian Tribal matters. The division of labor was equally divided. We jointly presented witnesses and evidence at trial. The presiding judge was Earl H. Carroll. The trial verdict was affirmed on appeal. I helped to draft the appellate briefing. Charlton argued the appeal before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. The published appellate decision is recorded at United States v. Rodney Tidwell, 191 F.3d 976 (1999). This case was one of several cases that led to a new section in the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines for calculating sentences involving national heritage resource and tribal cultural resource crimes.

6. United States v. Thurman, CR 98 –005–PCT–EHC (1997–1998).

This case involved the five-year-old unsolved murder of a two-year-old child. There was no physical evidence or witnesses to the crime. The lead counsel, AUSA Wallace H. Kleindienst requested my assistance on the case as co-counsel. Together, we employed two lengthy federal grand jury investigations that spanned the course of one year. We re-interviewed witnesses, called uncooperative witness before the federal grand jury and developed numerous leads. Together, the FBI Special Agent assigned to this case and I identified a critical witness who led to information about prior physical assaults on another child by the suspect. I was also able to build rapport with a critical witness who eventually provided new evidence of the suspect's involvement in the child's murder. This information provided the momentum for other witness to come forward. The suspect later pled guilty to Second Degree Murder resulting in a 22-year sentence. AUSA Kleindienst and I jointly interviewed witnesses and presented federal grand jury testimony and appeared at the plea and sentencing hearing. The presiding judge was Earl H. Carroll.

I directed a joint Federal Bureau of Investigation and Bureau of Indian Affairs Criminal Investigation undercover operation that including telephonic monitoring between the child victim and the defendant. This type of investigation technique is rarely used in Indian Country crime investigations. The investigation resulted in a tribal grade school girls' basketball coach's conviction for two-counts of Sexual Abuse of a Minor. I guided the investigation, presented the case to the federal grand jury and handled all matters through sentencing. The presiding judge was Paul G. Rosenblatt.

8. United States v. Slowman, CR 97-496-PCT-PGR (1998).

The defendant pleaded guilty to Second Degree Murder and was sentenced to 216 months in federal custody. The victim was at home repairing his car. The defendant came by and the two men began drinking alcohol. A verbal confrontation took place, followed by a physical fight. The defendant punched the victim, who fell inside an unfinished portion of a home that contained various construction and mechanics tools. While the victim attempted to get up, the defendant heaved a car crank-shaft on his head. Thereafter, he picked up a pick-ax and struck the victim in the chest five times. The defendant fled into the mountains. A federal and tribal law enforcement manhunt located the defendant the next day. I handled this matter from the federal grand jury presentation through sentencing. The presiding judge was Paul G. Rosenblatt.

9. United States v. Zeena, CR 99-019-PCT-RCB (1999 – 2000).

On April 16, 1999 a federal trial jury convicted the defendant of Aggravated Sexual Abuse of a Child. The defendant was in a brief relationship with the victim's mother. Almost immediately, he moved in with her and her three children, including the eight-year-old victim. The victim's sexual abuse was disclosed as a result of a separate sexual abuse incident involving the defendant and the victim's ten-year-old sister. At trial, the defendant claimed that the children were jealous of his relationship with their mother and fabricated the crimes. The defendant was sentenced to 164 months in federal custody. I handled all matters from the federal grand jury presentation, trial motion preparation, pre-trial witness preparation, trial and sentencing. The presiding judge was Robert C. Broomfield.

10. James, Guardian Ad Litem v. United States, CR 99-0599-PCT-SLV (2000 – 2001).

The plaintiff filed a Federal Tort Claims Act claim against the United States for protracted neurological and physical injuries sustained by the fourteen-year-old minor while he was a youth worker for the Bureau of Indian Affairs. The minor claimed that he was no longer able to physically exert himself and complained of constant headaches. Through deposition of witnesses, the plaintiff's physician and detailed evidence collection, I discovered that the plaintiff's injuries were severely overstated. This matter was transferred to me with looming discovery and motions deadlines. I settled this matter for $16,000. The presiding judge was U.S. Magistrate Judge Stephen L. Verkamp.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

In 2002, as Senior Litigation Counsel, I assisted the U.S. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs Office of Justice Services and the U.S. Attorney Offices in Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah in developing a law enforcement initiative to recover cultural resources belonging to Indian Tribes from the general public. The "Four-Corners Amnesty Initiative" included a public campaign to educate the public about the Archeological Resource Protection Act and Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act laws. The initiative ran for approximately two months and permitted individuals to turn in cultural resources or human remains to partner museums without fear of federal prosecution. The initiative resulted in the return of significant items with cultural importance to numerous Indian Tribes in the southwest.

As the United States Attorney, I instituted an office-wide policy requiring AUSAs to issue a press release on all Indian Country crime convictions or civil verdicts to the affected Indian Tribe. The intent was to inform the tribes of the extent to which violent crimes occurred in their communities, the role of the federal judicial system in addressing those crimes and to share information on the federal and tribal law enforcement resources used to resolve such cases.

As an Advisor to the Education Committee of the National Crime Victim Law Institute, I have been able to integrate Indian tribal jurisdictional elements where appropriate to the Institute's curriculum and initiatives. I have provided education and training to the Committee and Institute conference participants on the interplay between the state, tribal and federal justice systems relative to crime victims.

I have not engaged in lobbying nor have I ever registered as a lobbyist.

In March 2013 ASU Public Advocacy Director Stuart Hadley and I met with various Arizona Congressional members staff and staff in the Bureau of Indian Affairs and U.S. Department of Education to express Arizona State University's support for the Navajo Nation, National Indian Education Association and the American Indian Higher Education Association requests to forward fund the Bureau of Indian Education higher education grants and scholarships.

In March 2010, while in private practice, I accompanied a tribal client to the Inter Tribal Council of Arizona Inc.'s legislative impact week. I accompanied my client, the Hualapai Tribe, and various ITCA members to meet various U.S. Congressional delegation staff on Arizona tribal issues. We met with staff of the following Congressional Members: Cong. Pastor, Cong. Grijalva, Cong. Norton, Senator Inouye and Senator Akaka. We met with Senator Tom Udall. I prepared my clients and I accompanied them to the meetings but they advocated on their own behalf.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have a deferred Thrift Savings Plan and federal retirement benefits from prior federal government service. This information is included in the attached Financial Statement.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans, commitments or agreements to pursue outside employment if confirmed.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See the attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See the attached Statement of Net Worth.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I do not believe any persons, parties, categories of litigation or financial interests will present a conflict of interest for me. As the U.S. Attorney for the District of Arizona and as a lawyer handling matters for the Office, I have handled numerous cases in Arizona federal court. Some matters may still be pending while others may involve defendants whom I previously convicted and who may appear on a violation of release conditions. If confirmed, I will diligently review all parties and cases to identify potential conflicts of interest. At all times, I will adhere to the Code of Conduct for United States Judges Canon 3 and Federal Rule 28 U.S.C. § 455 to avoid, prevent and address any potential conflicts of interest.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I will handle all matters through the diligent application of the United States Judicial Code of Conduct, including Canon 3(C) and (D) and Federal Rule 28 U.S.C. § 455.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

From 2009 to the present, I have participated as an advisor to the National Crime Victim Law Institute's Education Committee, a non-profit crime victim legal advocacy organization. I attend conference calls approximately six times a year and when able, provide training during the annual conference. Generally, I provide advice on educational programming designed to foster understanding of victims' rights in tribal, state and federal courts.

I also have been very involved in providing legal services to tribal communities. For example, I agreed to serve as an uncompensated Appellate Court Judge for the Hopi Tribe from 2002 to 2007. During that time, at least twice a year for two to three days I traveled to the Hopi reservation to preside over civil appellate court cases. I also participated in drafting the Hopi Tribal Court rules of practice and in developing standards of conduct for tribal court practitioners. From 2010 to 2011, I chaired a Hopi Tribal Court committee that was responsible for drafting professional practice rules. While in private practice from 2009 to 2011 I provided pro-bono services to the Western Apache NAGPRA Working Group comprised of the San Carlos Apache, Yavapai-Apache, White Mountain Apache and the Tonto Apache Tribes. I provided information and advice to the Working Group on federal agency and museum repatriation practices.

I have also been involved in moot court competitions. From approximately 1997 to 2001, I judged various Arizona State University law student activities such as client counseling, client negotiation and moot court competitions. In February 2013, I judged the National Cultural Heritage Moot Court brief writing competition for the DePaul University.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

I submitted a Federal Judicial Candidate Questionnaire to U.S. Senator John S. McCain on March 8, 2013. I interviewed with Senator McCain's Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee in Phoenix, Arizona, on June 11, 2013. On June 28, 2013, the Chairman of the Committee called me stating that Senator McCain approved the Committee's recommendation of me for a federal judge position. He advised that my name would be submitted to the White House for further consideration. Since June 30, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 15, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On September 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

DIANE:

1. INTRODUCTIONS
2. DISCLAIMERS

HYPOTHETICAL 1: [NICCOLE TO LEAD]

You are the chief legal counsel for your tribe. ZEN Energy, a renewable energy company, and TRY, a tribal enterprise, have proposed developing valuable tribal renewable energy resources to the tribal leadership. The leadership asks you to enter into a Letter of Intent and to carry out the development of the project for the tribe. You have limited experience in developing renewable energy resources for an Indian tribe.

Q. What ethical issues arise?

Who is the client? [Discuss: Council delegates, President or Chairman, committees of the Council, tribal enterprise, competing governmental entities?]

Q. Are you able to hire independent counsel for the other governmental unit?

Discuss:

- * Attorney role as mediator
- * Charter responsibility for representation
- * What are the objectives of representation?
- * Has a final decision been made to develop the project?

Q. If you question the viability of the project or question the competence of the ZEN Energy, is it within your responsibility to investigate these issues?

MRPC Ethical Rule 1.2. Scope of Representation and Allocation of Authority between Client and Lawyer

- (a) Subject to paragraphs (c) and (d), a lawyer shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation and, as required by ER 1.4, shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. A lawyer may take such action on behalf of the client as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation.
- (b) A lawyer's representation of a client, including representation by appointment, does not constitute an endorsement of the client's political, economic, social or moral views or activities.

DEVELOPMENT

- (c) A lawyer may limit the scope of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client gives informed consent.
- (d) A lawyer shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that the lawyer knows is criminal or fraudulent, but a lawyer may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client to make a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law.

Competence. A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

Q. How do you determine whether to handle the matter yourself or hire outside counsel?

Considerations: Competence

- * Evaluate your own competence; honestly.
- * Assess what you know about legal requirements for project development?
- * What don't you know? Do you have sufficient knowledge on the complex issues involved? Including complex laws and regulations that are constantly changing, e.g., permitting, federal subsidies, financing vehicles, tax credits, etc.
- * How much work will be required for you to get up to speed?
- * Do you have the time?
- * Whose ethical rules apply?
- * Expertise of a general practitioner is required.
- * Can you limit your representation?
- * How will due diligence be conducted?

DH Comment to 1.1: in determining competence – suggests focusing on the following factors: Relative Complexity of the Matter and the Specialized Nature of the Work

Q. How do you achieve competence to meet the parameters of the rule?

DH Practical Considerations that I assume every tribal general counsel must consider:

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

November 22, 2013

1:15-3:00

Q. If you need to hire outside counsel, how do you select a firm?

Discussion regarding selecting an outside firm:

- * References. Check out any references yourself.
- * Utmost care required
- * Due diligence quandary - How do you know which attorneys to hire prior to completion of diligence?
- * Lawyers do not know it all. You will also need industry experts. The right law firm should know of such experts. Insist on experts.
- * Experience in the specific subject matter – you want someone who has done it before
- * Expertise required of outside counsel
- * Indian law knowledge * Knowledge of laws governing the tribe

Q. What do you do in special situations? For instance, what issues arise when the enterprise has its own counsel and partners? Is there an implied “association”?

Discuss:

- * Be wary of sharing confidential information
- * Attorney has discretion to make limited disclosures

New Mexico Rule 16-104 Communication ABA MR 1.4

- A. Status of Matters. A lawyer shall keep a client reasonably informed about the status of a matter and promptly comply with reasonable requests for information.
- B. Client’s Informed Decision-Making. A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

Q. With a tribal government client – how do you comply with “Communication”?

- * Obtaining tribal approvals
- * Inclusion of approving committee members on project team
- * Hiring expert consultants
- * Committee reports

New Mexico Rule 16-106 Confidentiality of Information/ ABA MR 1.6

- A. Disclosure of Information Generally. A lawyer shall not reveal information relating to representation of a client unless the client consents after consultation, except for disclosures that are impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation, and except as stated in Paragraphs B, C and D.

DEVELOPMENT

November 22, 2013

1:15-3:00

- * Issue of disclosure to enterprise and ZEN Energy attorneys
- * Non-Disclosure Agreements
- * Executive Sessions
- * Tribal Access to Information Acts [[How many here work for or know of tribes who have enacted these kinds of laws]?
- * Who is authorized to consent to disclosure of confidential or attorney client privileged information?

New Mexico Rule 16-103 Diligence / ABA MR 1.3

A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

DH Comment states that lawyers shall pursue the matter despite opposition, obstruction or personal inconvenience.

Discuss diligence considerations:

- * Get expert consultants quickly.
- * If the tribe will contribute financing or guarantee the project
 - Do feasibility and market studies
 - * Bank loan will require bond counsel
- * What natural or renewable resources of the tribe will be utilized?
 - * If water is to be used, is there a water right and is there an available supply?
 - * Will the tribe discount the value of resources it provides to the enterprise?
 - * Beware of escalated commitment
 - * Enterprises' participation should be long term feasible
- * Infrastructure availability
 - * Transportation facilities
 - * Pipelines, transmission lines, railroads, trucking
- * Time to bring the project to completion
 - * Environmental assessments or EIS
 - * Federal action
 - * Endangered species Act compliance
- * Critical path
 - * Investment tax credit
 - * PPA with utility company necessary for financing
 - * Transmission and interconnection rights
 - * Environmental/endangered species/cultural resource studies
- * Construction within allowable time frames to qualify for tax credits

HYPOTHETICAL 2: [PETER TO LEAD]

Attorney A in your firm's Texas office represents Client A in a loan transaction. The matter is small and ongoing, although there has been no activity recently. After some time, Client B seeks to have Attorney B in your firm's Sacramento office represent Client B in an energy development project in California. Client A is one of many entities who have a role in the California transaction. 2 clients; same firm but 2 attorney's in the firm handling each client

What issues arise? What if Client A is a former client?

Conflicts of Interest!

MRPC Rule 1.7 Conflict Of Interest: Current Clients

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b), a lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation involves a concurrent conflict of interest. A concurrent conflict of interest exists if:

(1) the representation of one client will be directly adverse to another client; or

(2) there is a significant risk that the representation of one or more clients will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client, a former client or a third person or by a personal interest of the lawyer.

Q. What if you identify that adversity present? See Model Rules Comments 6 and 7 to Rule 1.7. ("Absent consent a lawyer may not act as an advocate in one matter against the person the lawyer represents in some other matter, even when the matters are wholly unrelated.").

Q. Could the representation of Client A or B materially limited? What if the firm represents Clients A and B in an economic development project?

Could the lawyer be limited in his representation due to the duty of loyalty to each?

Comment: consider whether the representation will interfere w/lawyers "independent professional judgment"

Accordingly, the lawyer may be limited in its ability to recommend all possible positions that each Client may take. See Model Rules Comment 8 to Rule 1.7.

Consider also attorney's knowledge of confidential information about a client that may be adverse the interests of other client. For example - What is Client B's source of funds?

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT
November 22, 2013

1:15-3:00

MRPC Rule 1.7(b). Waiver.[Informed Consent]

(b) Notwithstanding the existence of a concurrent conflict of interest under paragraph (a), a lawyer may represent a client if:

- (1) the lawyer reasonably believes that the lawyer will be able to provide competent and diligent representation to each affected client;
- (2) the representation is not prohibited by law;
- (3) the representation does not involve the assertion of a claim by one client against another client represented by the lawyer in the same litigation or other proceeding before a tribunal; and
- (4) each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.

What is the math on reasonable belief? Could the attorney undertake the representation despite the presence of a concurrent conflict?

Consider professional judgment, independence, duty of loyalty, potential for material limitation, potential for disagreements and prejudice from any conflict.

Consider how antagonistic the Client's interests are with respect to each other.

Can the Client consent? And more importantly, how would the lawyer's representation of each be impacted? Can the lawyer provide competent and diligent representation to each client. See MRPC Rules 1.1, 1.3.

[Informed consent is described in MR 1.0 (6)– terminology – Requires a reasonable effort to ensure that the client possesses information to make an informed decision]

Rule 1.1 Competence

A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

Rule 1.1 Comment 1: "In determining whether a lawyer employs the requisite knowledge and skill in a particular matter, relevant factors include the relative complexity and specialized nature of the matter, the lawyer's general experience, the lawyer's training and experience in the field in question, the preparation and study the lawyer is able to give the matter and whether it is feasible to refer the matter to, or associate or consult with, a lawyer of established competence in the field in question."

- What if a portion of the subject matter is outside of a lawyer's wheelhouse?
- o In for a penny in for a pound?

- o Coming to speed.
- o Association?
- o Limitation of representation. See Arizona State Bar Opinion 05-06. But see MRPC Rule 1.8(h) (“a lawyer shall not make an agreement prospectively limiting the lawyer’s responsibility to a client for malpractice unless the client is independently represented in making the agreement.”)
- Consider attorney “competence” vs. a wonderful opportunity for malpractice.

MRPC Rule 1.3 Diligence

A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client.

Rule 1.3 Comment: “A lawyer should pursue a matter on behalf of a client despite opposition, obstruction or personal inconvenience to the lawyer, and take whatever lawful and ethical measures are required to vindicate a client’s cause or endeavor. A lawyer must also act with commitment and dedication to the interests of the client and with zeal in advocacy upon the client’s behalf.” But see Arizona: removal of “and with zeal in advocacy upon the client’s behalf.”

- Attorney availability and responsiveness.
 - o Consider prejudice to client interests in business negotiations. See also Rule 1.4 – Communication. See the discipline section of the Arizona Attorney magazine for various transgressions involving failure to communicate and failure to take action by a required date.
- Assuming you have the time, subject matter expertise, and feel comfortable representing the client in a transaction where a conflict may be present, how does the client consent to such representation?
- Informed consent. What is informed consent? Comment 6 to Model Rule 1.0. It depends upon the situation.

“The communication necessary to obtain such consent will vary according to the Rule involved and the circumstances giving rise to the need to obtain informed consent. The lawyer must make reasonable efforts to ensure that the client or other person possesses information reasonably adequate to make an informed decision. Ordinarily, this will require communication that includes a disclosure of the facts and circumstances giving rise to the situation, any explanation reasonably necessary to inform the client or other person of the material advantages and disadvantages of the proposed course of conduct and a discussion of the client’s or other person’s options and alternatives. In some circumstances it may be appropriate for a lawyer to advise a client or other person to seek the advice of other counsel. A lawyer need not inform a client or other person of facts or implications already known to the client or other person; nevertheless, a lawyer who does not personally inform the client or other person assumes the risk that the client or other person is inadequately informed and the consent is invalid.”

1:15-3:00

- Consider how to request a waiver. Engagement letter or other writing with discussion.

The more detail the better. But consider Rules regarding confidentiality.

Organization as Client

- Entity Consent. Who is the client? Is it a state or tribal law entity? Governmental agency? A government?

- Illinois State Bar Opinion 07-01.

- o “We conclude that for the purpose of conflict of interest questions, there is not one entity, composed of all state agencies. But, we caution this does not mean that each state governmental agency is necessarily a separate entity from every other state governmental agency. On a case-by-case basis additional information must be considered, such as “whether or not each government entity has independent legal authority to act on the matter in question, and whether representation of one government entity has any importance to the other government entity. Because the state government is not one entity composed of all departments under the jurisdiction of the Governor for purposes of resolving conflict of interest questions, a lawyer may represent one government agency while representing a private party adverse to another state government agency.”

- Waiver of conflict of interest by Government? Some jurisdictions do not permit public entities to waive conflicts of interest. Look to particular jurisdiction.
- The identity of the entity client is largely dependent upon facts and law. NY City Ethics Opinion 2004-03.
- Limitation on scope of representation of entities in Arizona. Arizona Bar Opinion 02-06.

A lawyer may form a business entity for various individuals and be counsel only for the yet-to-be-form entity, if appropriate disclosures and consents occur. Alternatively, a lawyer may represent all of the incorporators collectively, with appropriate disclosures.

Consider:

- o MRPC Rule 1.6 – Confidentiality
- o MRPC Rule 1.7 – Conflict of Interest General Rule
- o MRPC Rule 1.13 – Organization as Client

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

1:15-3:00

- o What is informed consent for the entity? Are the individuals providing informed consent? What disclosures should be made? Representation of the LLC vs. representation of the members.
- Majority Rule re Corporate Families. A lawyer who represents a corporation or other organization does not by virtue of that representation, necessarily represent any constituent or affiliated organization, such as a parent or subsidiary. See Comment 34 to Model Rule 1.7. That being said, consider the facts and circumstances.

MRPC Rule 1.13 Organization As Client

- (a) A lawyer employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.
- (b) If a lawyer for an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is engaged in action, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law that reasonably might be imputed to the organization, and that is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. Unless the lawyer reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best interest of the organization to do so, the lawyer shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.
- (c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if
 - (1) despite the lawyer's efforts in accordance with paragraph (b) the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon or fails to address in a timely and appropriate manner an action, or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law, and
 - (2) the lawyer reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the lawyer may reveal information relating to the representation whether or not Rule 1.6 permits such disclosure, but only if and to the extent the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to prevent substantial injury to the organization.
- (d) Paragraph (c) shall not apply with respect to information relating to a lawyer's representation of an organization to investigate an alleged violation of law, or to defend the organization or an officer, employee or other constituent associated with the organization against a claim arising out of an alleged violation of law.
- (e) A lawyer who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the lawyer's actions taken pursuant to paragraphs (b) or (c), or who withdraws under circumstances that require or permit the lawyer to take action under either of those paragraphs, shall proceed as the lawyer reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization's highest authority is informed of the lawyer's discharge or withdrawal.

1:15-3:00

- (f) In dealing with an organization's directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, a lawyer shall explain the identity of the client when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the organization's interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the lawyer is dealing.
- (g) A lawyer representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rule 1.7. If the organization's consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7, the consent shall be given by an appropriate official of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

- Who speaks for the Entity Client? Confirm this early and often. Who gets to say yes?*
- What are the ultimate approvals? Are there delegations of authority in place?*
- When do you notify higher authorities within the entity?*

Former Clients

What if Client A is a former client? How might this impact your representation?

MRPC Rule 1.9 Duties To Former Clients

- (a) A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person's interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.
- (b) A lawyer shall not knowingly represent a person in the same or a substantially related matter in which a firm with which the lawyer formerly was associated had previously represented a client
 - (1) whose interests are materially adverse to that person; and
 - (2) about whom the lawyer had acquired information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter; unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.
- (c) A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter or whose present or former firm has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter:

1:15-3:00

- (1) use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client, or when the information has become generally known; or
- (2) reveal information relating to the representation except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client.

- Consider knowledge gained in prior representation.
- Informed consent waiver. Who provides?

Negotiation Ethics. Communication, Omissions and Truthfulness.

- The Model Professional Responsibility Rules have a number of communication rules to consider during the negotiation of any transaction.
- A large transaction may involve a number of players which may include both attorneys and the actual represented parties. Due to subject matter expertise, individual parties may take an active role within contract negotiations. The following are a few of the rules which can be triggered in the agreement negotiations.
- Don't lie.

Rule 1.4 Communication

- (a) A lawyer shall:
 - (1) promptly inform the client of any decision or circumstance with respect to which the client's informed consent, as defined in Rule 1.0(e), is required by these Rules;
 - (2) reasonably consult with the client about the means by which the client's objectives are to be accomplished;
 - (3) keep the client reasonably informed about the status of the matter;
 - (4) promptly comply with reasonable requests for information; and
 - (5) consult with the client about any relevant limitation on the lawyer's conduct when the lawyer knows that the client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.
- (b) A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation
 - o Confirm informed decisions with client. Consider communication reports when client is an organization.
 - o Clarity regarding legal counsel role.

Rule 4.1 Truthfulness In Statements To Others

In the course of representing a client a lawyer shall not knowingly:

- (a) make a false statement of material fact or law to a third person; or (b) fail to disclose a material fact to a third person when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting a criminal or fraudulent act by a client, unless disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6.
- o Note materiality standard.
- o Representation by omission?
- o Rule 1.6 – Confidentiality considerations.

Rule 4.2 Communication With Person Represented By Counsel

In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized to do so by law or a court order.

- o See Formal Opinion 92-362 (2002) and 06-443 (2006) of ABA Ethics Committee.
- o More recently, ABA Ethics Committee Formal Opinion 11-461.
- o Set expectations and obtain consent.

Rule 4.3 Dealing With Unrepresented Person

In dealing on behalf of a client with a person who is not represented by counsel, a lawyer shall not state or imply that the lawyer is disinterested. When the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the lawyer's role in the matter, the lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. The lawyer shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such a person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client.

- o Disclosure of role of attorney.

Rule 8.4 Misconduct

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to:

- (a) violate or attempt to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;
- (b) commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects;

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

November 22, 2013

1:15-3:00

- (c) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation;
- (d) engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;
- (e) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law; or
- (f) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.

This broad rule applies to communications with adverse parties and opposing counsel.

HYPOTHETICAL 3 [ROXANN TO LEAD]

Due to the complexity of tribal energy development transactions, a request for legal services by tribes and tribal entities asks responding firms to identify similar clients and transactions that they have worked on in the past.

Q. Is the identification of those clients or transactions a violation of the ethical rules regarding confidentiality?

Yes, a lawyer must have the consent of the clients prior to providing the responses or must identify the transaction so generally that the client cannot be surmised.

1.6 Confidentiality. A lawyer shall not disclose information about a client that the lawyer has gained in the professional relationship. Some rules are broad and would hold that even disclosure of the name would violate ethical rules and some rules say that only if the information is embarrassing or detrimental must the lawyer withhold it.

A lawyer may, however reveal the information with the consent of the client.

Bay Mills Code of Ethical Conduct Rule 2.303(E), California Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 3-100, ABA Model Rule 1.6

HYPOTHETICAL 4 [PETER TO LEAD]

During the course of negotiating the structure of a tribal energy transaction for Tribe X, the client asks the lawyer who is known to have recently worked on a similar transaction for Tribe Y, how Tribe Y structured their transaction.

Q. Can the lawyer reveal this information?

THE LEGAL LANDSCAPE OF TRIBAL RENEWABLE ENERGY DEVELOPMENT

November 22, 2013

1:15-3:00

Q. If the lawyer cannot reveal the information, can they nevertheless use the same structure?

1. Confidentiality 1.6. A lawyer shall not disclose information about a client that the lawyer has gained in the professional relationship.
2. Duties to Former Clients. A lawyer who has formerly represented a client shall not thereafter reveal information relating to the representation. Is this practical? ABA Model Rule 1.7 and 1.8

Q. What if Tribe X's energy project will compete directly with Tribe Y's energy project?

Duties to Former Clients. A lawyer who has formerly represented a client shall not thereafter use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client (except including when the information becomes generally known). ABA Model Rule 1.9

Q. Can the lawyer use documents from Tribe Y transaction as the base documents for the Tribe X transaction?

Q. If the same forms are used but adapted for Tribe X, can the lawyer charge the same amount for legal fees associated with drafting the documents?

1. Fees. A lawyer shall not make an agreement for, charge, or collect an unreasonable fee or an unreasonable amount for expenses. The factors to be considered in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:
 - (1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;
 - (2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the lawyer;
 - (3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;
 - (4) the amount involved and the results obtained;
 - (5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;
 - (6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client;
 - (7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the lawyer or lawyers performing the services; and
 - (8) whether the fee is fixed or contingent.

ABA Model Rule 1.5

HYPOTHETICAL 5 [NICCOLE TO LEAD]

The lawyer represents two separate tribal utility authorities both owned and operated by the same tribal nation. Both authorities provide energy and both want to apply for the same federal grant funds. Both entities have asked the lawyer to assist in the preparation and submission of their grant applications.

Q. Is it a conflict of interest for the lawyer to represent both entities in this situation? Is it a waivable conflict?

Conflict of Interest: A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of the client is directly adverse to another client, unless the lawyer reasonably believes the representation will not adversely affect the relationship with either client and the clients consent after consultation.

A lawyer shall not represent a client if the representation of that client may be materially limited by the lawyers responsibilities to another client unless the lawyer reasonably believes that the clients would not be adversely affected and the clients consent.

NOTE: Consent includes a full explanation of the implications of the common representation, the scope and the risks and advantages involved. Bay Mills Code of Ethical Conduct Rule 2.303(F), California Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 3-310; ABA Model Rule 1.7 and 1.8

A lawyer has developed an expertise for a specific type of tribal solar projects. Sometimes the lawyer is engaged by the tribe and sometimes by the development company. After completing a number of projects, the lawyer discovers an error in the project documents that could be fatal the project structure. The error is in the documents for most of the projects that have been completed.

Q. Does the lawyer have a duty to report the error to his existing clients? How about his former clients? What if fixing the error in the deal with Tribe X would harm his other client, Tribe Y or his current development client?

HYPOTHETICAL 7 [DIANE or ROXANN TO LEAD]

A lawyer represents a utility created by the tribal governmental authority. Most of the lawyer's work is requested by the entity's most senior employee, which is a CEO in this instance. The CEO calls the lawyer and tells him that the entity's Board of Directors is micromanaging him and asks for the lawyer's assistance in defining his and the Board's duties pursuant to the entity's governing documents. The lawyer agrees to the task. Later that week the lawyer gets a call from the Board chair complaining about the CEO and asking the lawyer to perform a due diligence investigation of the CEO.

Q. Is there a conflict now proceeding against the CEO when the lawyer was previously acting at his request?

California Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 3-600, ABA Model Rule 1.13

In representing an organization, a lawyer shall conform his or her representation to the concept that the client is the organization itself, acting through its highest authorized officer, employee, body or constituent overseeing the engagement.

If you find out that person is acting in a way that is or may be a violation of the law, the lawyer may take such actions that are in the best interest of the organization, including (i) urging reconsideration or (ii) reporting it to the next higher internal authority. If no response, then the lawyer must resign. Q. Is the work request by the CEO in the interest of the organization?

In dealing with the board, the lawyer must explain the identity of the client and must explain that the individual members are not the clients. The board cannot be misled into believing that they are entitled to individual confidentiality.

DH 1.13 "Comment : provides that the organization can only act through its officers, directors, etc... so if any of those officers, directors etc.. speaks to the organization's lawyer – and does so in his capacity as an officer – ABA MR. 1.6 -Confidentiality is also implicated [READ Comment]"

HYPOTHETICAL 8 [DIANE and/or ROXANN TO LEAD]

Similarly, the lawyer is engaged as borrower's counsel for a tribe borrowing money to make improvements to utility facilities. The tribe does not have sufficient expertise to operate the utility and has hired an outside management company. All of the lawyer's work is at the request of a senior employee of the management company and paid for out of the authority's operating account. One day the tribe decides to fire the management company and the new tribal president calls the lawyer and asks why the lawyer has been doing work at the request of the management company rather than at the request of the tribe?

Q. Has the lawyer committed an ethical violation by acting at the request of an outside management company, rather than the tribe? Who is the client?

Though it is unlikely that an ethical violation was committed in either instance, these are both areas where COMMUNICATION at the outset and identification of the client would likely have avoided the issues.

HYPOTHETICAL 9 [DIANE and/or ROXANN TO LEAD]

The lawyer is licensed in Arizona but is engaged as special counsel for a tribe located in Oklahoma. The energy project documents specify that state law will apply to certain portions of the contract (e.g., the perfection of security interests) and the documents contain a limited waiver of sovereign immunity. The lawyer is asked to give an opinion regarding the enforceability of the project documents. The opinion would therefore require the lawyer to opine on both tribal law and State of Oklahoma law.

Can the lawyer give this opinion without breaching the ethical rules?

Can the lawyer give this opinion if he relies on the opinions of other counsel whom he associates with for the deal, for example, the tribe's in-house counsel and an attorney licensed in the state of Oklahoma?

What if the tribe has adopted State law as a fill-in where they don't have applicable laws. Are you bound by State law?

1. The Unauthorized Practice of Law A lawyer shall not practice law in a jurisdiction where doing so violates the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction. Arizona Ethical Rule 5.5, California Rules of Professional Conduct Rule 1-300

DEVELOPMENT

1:15-3:00

2. Competence. A lawyer shall not handle a legal matter which the lawyer knows that the lawyer is not competent to handle, without associating a lawyer who is competent to handle it. Bay Mills Code of Ethical Conduct Rule 2.303(A)

HYPOTHETICAL 10 [DIANE TO /ROXANN TO LEAD]

A lawyer has served as counsel to the office of the tribal president for several years. In this capacity, the lawyer has advised the President X on projects related to coal technology. A new tribal president, President Y, has been elected and has decided to go in the direction of green technology. President Y has asked the lawyer to prepare materials to be used in a lobby effort against the use of coal and for the development of green technology instead.

Q. What are the potential conflicts involved?

Q. Is the lawyer obligated to complete this request? What if the lawyer knows that abandoning coal production will cause the loss of a significant number of jobs?

Lawyer as Advisor. In representing a client, a lawyer shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice. In rendering advice, a lawyer may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client's situation. ABA Model Rule 2.1

In order to get out of the coal business, President Y asks the lawyer to find loopholes in the contracts that the lawyer previously helped negotiate.

What should the lawyer do?

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

In 1993, I worked as a law clerk at Edgar and Soto, PLLC, while I studied for the bar exam. From 1993 to August 1994, my law practice was with the Pima County Attorney's office, first as a law clerk and later as a Deputy County Attorney. As a Deputy County Attorney I handled an average of 650 cases at a time, prosecuting indictments of driving under the influence, domestic violence and other misdemeanor charges. In that capacity I tried over 10 jury trials and over 30 bench trials.

In 1994, I joined the Office of the Legal Defender. As an Assistant Legal Defender, I represented indigent clients the Public Defender's Office could not represent due to conflict. I represented defendants accused of murder, violent crimes, and felony aggravated driving under the influence charges. I made daily court appearances and tried over 20 felony jury trials.

In 1996, I joined the Arizona Federal Public Defender's Office. As an Assistant Federal Defender, I represented indigent clients accused of government fraud, bank fraud, money laundering, immigration offenses, and drug conspiracies. By 1998, the majority of my cases consisted of assaults and sexual abuse crimes in the Tohono O'odham Nation. I also briefed and argued appeals in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Since 2000, I have been in private practice, first as a partner in a small law firm with two associates and later as a sole practitioner. My practice has centered on criminal defense in both state and federal courts and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. I have also litigated civil personal injury matters, civil forfeitures, immigration and deportation matters and appeals to the Board of Immigration Appeals.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

As a prosecutor, my clients were the people of the State of Arizona. As a state and federal public defender, I was appointed by the court to represent indigent defendants. While in private practice, the majority of my clients accused of criminal offenses have been through appointments pursuant to the Criminal Justice Act. In addition to representing criminal defendants, I have represented individual clients in civil matters, including immigration, deportation, forfeiture, school expulsion and personal injury matters.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My practice has always focused on litigation at the trial level. I handle an average of two appeals to the Ninth Circuit per year. I appear in court almost every day.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 90% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 5% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 5% |
- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 10% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 90% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried 35 cases to a jury. I was co-counsel on three cases, and sole counsel in the rest. I have tried over 40 cases before administrative law judges, immigration judges, hearing officers and justice court and city court judges.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 2. non-jury: | 54% |

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- the date of representation;
- the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1) United States v. Diane, CR07-0302-DCB (D. Ariz., closed Apr. 24, 2007)

I represented the defendant Diane. He was charged with Conspiracy to Smuggle Goods into the United States, Contrary to Law and Aiding and Abetting in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 371, 545, 2. I believe that this was the first charge in the country under a statute created to prevent "Blood Diamonds" from entering the United States from certain countries in Africa. In this case, the quality of the diamonds and the certification requirement was at issue. Diane eventually pled to a civil citation and received a sentence of probation. United States Magistrate Judge Glenda Edmonds presided over this case.

2) United States v. Juarez, CR06-1703-RCC (D. Ariz., closed Mar. 2, 2009)

This was a 55-defendant case with an over 500-count indictment. The charges related to an alien smuggling organization rooted in Arizona with ties throughout the United States. I represented defendant Leyva-Perez, who was charged with money laundering counts. We were able to prove to the prosecution that the majority of the funds in question stemmed from legitimate means. Leyva-Perez was a Legal Permanent Resident Alien and any type of criminal conviction would have rendered him deportable. Leyva-Perez pled guilty to a civil violation and was sentenced to a term of probation. United States District Judge John M. Roll presided over the case.

3) United States v. Brandon, CR99-920 (D. Ariz., closed Oct. 22, 2001)

The defendant was indicted in 1999 on eight counts of securities fraud. This case was declared a complex case by the court. I was appointed to represent the defendant. Brandon founded Work Recovery, Inc. ("WRI"), a company that manufactured and licensed products that evaluated people's recovery from injury and measured their ability to return to the work force. WRI stock was publicly traded on NASDAQ and such stock was regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. In 1995 the SEC began an investigation of WRI as a result of allegations regarding a scheme to defraud WRI due to a publication in the Wall Street Journal which caused the price of WRI stock to fall dramatically. Brandon pled guilty to one count of obstruction of justice and received 5 years probation. This case was heard by United States District Judge Frank R. Zapata.

4) United States v. Evans, CR99-1267-FRZ (D. Ariz., closed Aug. 30, 2002)

I represented defendant Evans. He was indicted on 18 counts of embezzlement and theft from an Indian tribal organization, theft or bribery concerning programs receiving federal funds, wire fraud, frauds and swindles. Due to severe flooding in 1993, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) granted the Tohono O'odham Nation ("the Nation") an award in excess of $4,000,000 to repair its flood-damaged San Lucy Farm. FEMA's grant supplied 75% of the monies to be expended on the San Lucy restoration, and the Nation itself was responsible for 25% of the funds. Evans was accused of engaging in a scheme to defraud the tribe and misapply funds received from FEMA and profits from the restoration project. It was alleged Evans was responsible for authorizing the payment of those funds to a company he owned, which constituted a conflict of interest and unauthorized self-dealing. Evans pled guilty to one count of filing fraudulent tax returns and all other charges were dismissed. Evans was sentenced to serve 15 months in custody. This case was heard before United States District Judge Frank R. Zapata.

5) United States v. Alvarez-Zavala, CR 07-0518-TUC-RCC (D. Ariz., closed Apr. 3, 2008)

I represented defendant, Alvarez-Zavala. He was arrested in a vehicle that was transporting large quantities of marijuana in the United States. While agents attempted to stop the vehicle, Alvarez-Zavala was shot in the nose. The agents alleged the driver attempted to run them over as they ordered the vehicle to stop. Based on my investigation of evidence in the vehicle and where the bullet entered the vehicle, the government allowed my client to plead to the possession of the marijuana and dismissed the aggravated assault charges. Alvarez-Zavala was sentenced to a term of time served. This case was presided over by United States District Judge Raner C. Collins.

I represented the defendant, Abril-Molina. He was charged under 8 U.S.C. § 1324(a)(1)(A)(ii)(a)(1)(B)(i) with Bringing in and Harboring Aliens. After an evidentiary hearing, the judge ruled there was no reasonable suspicion for the stop of my client and suppressed all evidence. Charges against my client were dismissed. I represented defendant, Ortiz-Maciel. Ortiz-Maciel was accused of being one of the many drivers used by Golden State Transportation to move undocumented aliens throughout the United States. This case involved numerous superseding indictments with over 50 counts, as well as separate forfeiture issues. Based on my investigation of the evidence and trial preparation, the government allowed my client to plead guilty to a non-deportable, lower class felony. He was sentenced to a term of probation. This case was presided over by United States District Judge Raner C. Collins.

8) United States v. Zarate-Martinez, 133 F.3d 1194 (9th Cir. 1998)

I was co-counsel for defendant on this appeal and argued the case in the Ninth Circuit. The defendant was convicted of Illegal Re-Entry after Deportation pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 1326. This case held that in a prosecution for Illegal Re-entry, due process requires meaningful opportunity for judicial review of the underlying deportation. If that deportation fails to provide this opportunity or violates due process the validity of the deportation may be collaterally attacked. The case was heard by Judge Ruggero J. Aldisert (of the Third Circuit, sitting by designation), Judge Dorothy W. Nelson, and Judge A. Wallace Tashima.

In 1991, defendant Grannis and a co-defendant were found guilty of the 1989 murder of a Tucson investment banker; they both received the death penalty. On appeal, the Arizona Supreme Court found that the trial court erred in its jury instructions and in the admission of certain evidence. 900 P.2d 1 (Ariz. 1995). Myself and co-counsel retried the case to a jury and the court granted our motion for a directed verdict. My client, Grannis, was released that evening. 10) Matter of Cruz (Executive Office for Immigration Review, 2003)

I represented respondent Cruz during her removal proceedings in Immigration Court in Florence, Arizona. After a Bond Hearing, Cruz was released on bond. After a motion for change of venue, Cruz' case was transferred to Immigration Court in Tucson, Arizona. Cruz had never had legal permission to live in the United States, but had resided in Tucson, Arizona for over ten years. During that time, she had a child. That child died from a rare disease at the age of nine. Cruz' younger child also suffered from the same disease and needed extensive medical treatment that was not available in Mexico. I filed an application for relief (EOIR-42A). The Immigration Court granted the cancellation of removal. Cruz is now a permanent resident alien and resides in the United States with her child. This case was tried before Immigration Judge Richard H. Knuck.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Throughout my career, I have been actively involved with the State Bar of Arizona. I have served on State Bar committees and have prepared and presented continuing education seminars. Since 2008, I have served on the State Bar Conflict Case Committee. Our committee reviews and prosecutes ethical complaints against lawyers, where the state bar has a conflict. In that capacity, I investigate the alleged ethical violation, make factual and legal determinations and decide what sanctions should be imposed. This requires researching the applicable professional code and ethical cannons, and preparing orders.

For over two years, I was a hearing officer for the Pima County Law Enforcement Merit System Council. I presided over administrative hearings and prepared orders in relation to the termination and disciplinary actions of Pima County employees.

As a Beacon Group board member, I manage investment funds as part of the finance committee. The Beacon Group is an organization that provides services and employment opportunities for mentally and physically disabled people.

My practice is very active in the defense of clients accused of having entered the United States illegally after having been deported. The vast majority of these cases are resolved by non-trial disposition. In addition, I have handled various civil matters, such as immigration, property forfeitures and personal injury. Although, these matters have settled, they involved significant litigation.

I have not performed lobbying activities on behalf of any client or organization.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have no deferred income arrangements or future benefits.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

None.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

My husband is an attorney in private practice. My sister is an Assistant Federal Public Defender, habeas unit. If I am confirmed as a judge, I expect to recuse myself from any case in which they represent a party.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed as a judge, I will apply all relevant guidelines, including the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, relevant Canons and statutory provisions to avoid any actual or potential conflicts.

- 25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Throughout my legal career, I have regularly performed legal services at no charge or on a reduced fee basis for financially disadvantaged clients. I have provided pro bono representation for many different clients in diverse areas of practice. Most recently, I represented a student athlete at the University of Arizona. I represented this client in both his criminal case and the expulsion proceedings from school. This case required lengthy witness interviews, extensive administrative hearings and a trial before a panel. Additionally, collateral issues existed such as his athletic scholarships and release from his eligibility-to-play contract.

I have also represented high school students in expulsion proceedings. I have represented clients in employment termination and demotion administrative proceedings without charge. I have represented clients in contract disputes with their landlords and contract disputes with their builders. Through the Florence Project and on a private level, I have filed briefs in immigration courts on behalf of clients who cannot afford an attorney but have potential relief from deportation available. I have also filed appeals of those decisions free of charge.

I also have engaged in pro bono work in areas that educate the community about the legal justice system. Through the State Bar of Arizona I have volunteered to answer legal questions for homeless veterans and people looking to become United States citizens. Through the Arizona Minority Bar Association, I assist in coordinating fundraisers to provide scholarship money to University of Arizona, College of Law students.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

There is no selection commission in Arizona. In February 2010, I expressed my interest in a letter and sent my resume to all the members of the Arizona Democratic Delegation in the House of Representatives. At the same time, I also expressed my interest in a letter and sent my resume to Senator Kyl and Senator McCain. In March 2010, I expressed my interest in a letter and sent my resume to White House Counsel Robert Bauer. In mid-March 2010, I was interviewed by Congresswoman Kirkpatrick, Congressman Pastor and Congressman Grijalva. I was also interviewed telephonically by Congresswoman Giffords. In July 2010, I met with Senator Kyl.

Since February 10, 2011, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On March 14, 2011, I met with representatives of the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On June 23, 2011, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
Chairman
Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Chairman Leahy:

I have reviewed the Senate Questionnaire I previously filed in connection with my nomination on June 23, 2011 for the position on the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. Incorporating the additional information below, I certify that the information contained in that document is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate.

- My service as a board member on the Pima County Bar Association ended in May of 2012 (Question 9).
- My service as a steering committee member of the Arizona Women Lawyers Association ended in December 2011 (Question 9).
- In my capacity as board member of The Beacon Group, I serve as Treasurer and also Chairperson of the Finance Committee (Question 11a).
- I have tried 36 cases before a jury (Question 16d).
- Since I filed my Senate Questionnaire in July 2011, I have handled many important cases, including the following argument before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals that I would consider one of the ten most significant matters that I have personally handled (Question 17):

United States v. Aguilar-Balbuena, CA 08-10503, 475 Fed. Appx. 222 (9th Cir. 2012)

I prepared the briefs and argued the case before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Appellant, Aguilar-Balbuena appealed a 30-month sentence following his guilty-plea conviction for illegal re-entry after deportation. The first issue was whether Mr. Aguilar-Balbuena's waiver of appellate rights was enforceable. The second issue was whether his prior burglary conviction qualified as a "crime of violence" justifying the trial court's enhanced sentence. The Ninth Circuit held that Mr. Aguilar-Balbuena did not knowingly waive his right to appeal and further found that his burglary conviction was not categorically a "crime of violence." As a result, the Ninth Circuit vacated the sentence and remanded the matter to the district court. I continued to represent Mr. Aguilar-Balbuena at the re-sentencing phase. District Court Judge David C. Bury, amended Mr. Aguilar-Balbuena's sentence to the eight months incarceration that he had already served, with no term of supervised release imposed.

- 13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

Since 2000, I have served as a judge on the Maricopa County Superior Court.

I was appointed by the Governor through a merit selection process. A nonpartisan Trial Court Commission screened the applications and sent the finalists to the governor who made the final selection. I have been retained in the required periodic, nonpartisan retention elections in 2002, 2006 and 2010. The Maricopa County Superior Court is a court of general jurisdiction with jurisdiction over cases and proceedings in which exclusive jurisdiction is not vested by law in another court. It has jurisdiction over civil cases involving disputes of more than $10,000, equity cases that involve title of possession of real property; the legality of any tax, assessment, toll or municipal ordinance; criminal cases amounting to a felony, forcible entry and detainer actions; actions to prevent or stop nuisances; matters of probate and dissolution of marriages. It also acts as an appellate court for justice and municipal courts.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

I have presided over thousands of cases that have gone to judgment by settlement, plea agreement, summary judgment or dismissal. I have presided over approximately 250 cases that have gone to verdict through a trial. I have estimated the relative percentages of the cases that went to verdict through trial below.

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	60%
bench trials:	40%
civil proceedings:	30%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

As a trial judge I make tens of rulings per week ranging from motions to extend time for service to summary judgments in multi-million dollar cases. Most of the rulings are two pages or less but some are lengthy. These rulings are found in the individual case files within the Maricopa County Superior Court and therefore are not readily searchable. On occasion I have sat as a judge pro tempore on the Arizona Court of Appeals and in that capacity I authored one opinion, Collette v. Tolleson Unified School District, No. 214, 203 Ariz. 359, 54 P.3d 828 (App. 2002).

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

1. State v. Lemke, No. CR 2002-019002 (Maricopa County Superior Court, April 10, 2006), aff'd sub nom. Lemke v. Rayes, 141 P.3d 407 (2006). Decision supplied.

This was a capital murder trial stemming from the death of a television auto-glass mogul. The defendant was charged with, among other things, felony murder. The predicate offense for the felony murder charge was a charge of armed robbery. The jury hung on the felony murder charge but convicted the defendant of theft, a lesser offense of the armed robbery charge. Because under Arizona law a felony murder charge cannot rest on a predicate offense of theft, the defense moved to dismiss the murder charge. I denied the motion ruling that double jeopardy did not bar a retrial of the murder charge. My ruling was affirmed.

2. State v. Al-Tarrah, No. CR2005-129547 (Maricopa County Superior Court, trial to the court, August 21, 2006 – August 23, 2006).

This case involved a foreign college student charged with leaving the scene of vehicular accident involving a death. She was ordered by the trial judge to surrender her passport to her attorney, David Cantor, and he was ordered to file an affidavit of her compliance with the court. The defendant did not surrender her passport to Cantor. The defendant left the country before trial and a criminal contempt action was brought against Cantor. I was specially assigned to try the contempt charges. I was required to weigh the evidence of Cantor's willfulness and clarity of the order. After three days of trial I found Cantor not guilty.

This case came to me as a special action. The Home Builders Association of Central Arizona brought suit to challenge the lawfulness of the City of Mesa's cultural facilities development fee. I found the City's cultural facilities development facilities to be "necessary" public services within the meaning of the applicable statute and granted summary judgment for the City of Mesa. The ruling was affirmed on appeal.

In this case the defendant was charged with murder. As the defendant, a gang member, stood near his vehicle holding an AK-47, a number of rival gang members stood nearby. Both sets of gangs had been at a birthday celebration. One of the rival gang members, unarmed, walked toward the defendant with his hands in the air daring the defendant to shoot him. Both rounds went into the victim's chest. Despite the defendant's claim of self-defense, he was found guilty by a jury of manslaughter. I sentenced him to fifteen years in prison. The conviction and sentence were affirmed.

The defendant was a clerk at a convenience store who had repeatedly been the victim of armed robberies and had observed his brother shot to death in an armed robbery. Despite his experience and despite being diagnosed and treated for post-traumatic stress, he continued to work as a store clerk. On the evening in question he observed a person take beer without paying for it. He chased the culprit down and after a confrontation, shot him as he drove away with the beer. The victim died. The defendant was found guilty by the jury of manslaughter and I sentenced him to a mitigated sentence of seven years. The verdict and sentence were affirmed.

This was a wrongful death trial. Plaintiffs' decedent, their teenage daughter, a back seat passenger, was killed when the vehicle lost control after hitting a speed bump. Plaintiffs brought suit against the owner of the roadway claiming defendants were negligent for the roadway design and maintenance. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiffs in the amount of $2.5 million, finding the defendants 50% at fault and the non-party driver 50% at fault. The verdict was affirmed on appeal.

This was a special action brought by the defendant, a Catholic priest charged with misdemeanor sex offenses, to challenge the justice court's denial of a jury trial. I found that sex registration is an "additional, direct, uniformly applied statutory consequence that reflects the legislature's judgment that the offense is serious." I ruled that because of that, the Arizona Constitution guarantees the defendant a jury trial. My ruling was reversed by the Court of Appeals, but affirmed by the Supreme Court.

This was an election law case that required me to consider whether a constitutional amendment proposed by voter initiative to define marriage complied with the separate amendment rule of the Arizona Constitution. After a hearing I found that the proposition constituted a single amendment pursuant to the test established by prior decisions of the Arizona Supreme Court. I ruled that the proposition would be placed on the ballot. My ruling was affirmed by the Arizona Supreme Court.

This was a medical negligence, wrongful death trial. It involved claims that a surgeon caused and then ignored internal bleeding that resulted in the death of a high school teacher survived by a wife and five children. The case involved many thorny legal and medical issues. The jury found for the defendant. I granted plaintiffs' motion for mistrial on the grounds that I had erred in allowing in certain evidence and for not granting plaintiffs' motion for judgment as a matter of law on Dr. Gray's claim that the hospital was a non-party at fault. The jury found in favor of the defendant in the second trial.

State of Arizona v. Falth, No. CR 2003-012660 (Maricopa County Superior Court June 23, 2003), rev'd sub nom. Romley v. Rayes, 206 Ariz. 58, 75 P.3d 148 (App. 2003). I found that an amendment to the Arizona constitution denying the defendant bail, which was adopted after the date of the offenses for which defendant was charged, was a violation of the ex post facto doctrine. The Arizona Court of Appeals reversed finding that the constitutional change allowing the denial of bail to certain classes of offenses when "the proof is evident and the presumption great" merely procedural. Decision supplied.

State of Arizona v. Reynaga, No. CR 2004-012417 and CR 2005-119508 (Maricopa County Superior Court, 12/07/2005), rev'd sub nom. Andrew Thomas v. Rayes, 214 Ariz. 411, 153 P.2d 1040 (2007). In this case the State's plea offer was not communicated to the defendant before it expired. The defense attorney was unaware of the offer because the office staffed had mishandled the offer. I found that counsel did not have actual knowledge of the offer and had no reason to know the plea offer was in her file. I did not find counsel ineffective but rather classified her conduct as excusable neglect. Because defendant had not been informed of the offer and never had the opportunity to choose to accept it, I ordered the state to re-open the offer. The Arizona Supreme Court reversed, holding that “a defendant may bring ineffective assistance of counsel claims only in a Rule 32 post-conviction proceeding - not before trial.” Decision supplied.

State v. Levens, No. CR 2005-108790 (Maricopa County Superior Court Aug. 15, 2005), rev'd 214 Ariz. 339, 152 P.3d 1222 (App. 2007). Pursuant to the conditions of his probation, the defendant, a sex offender, was required to submit to a polygraph. During the pre-test of a polygraph examination ordered by his probation officer, the defendant admitted to having firearms in his home. A petition was filed to revoke his probation. I granted a motion to suppress the evidence found in the defendant’s home, finding the statement to the polygraph examiner to be involuntary. The Arizona Court of Appeals reversed finding that his statements were not compelled. Decision supplied.

Neal v. Brown, No. CV 2006-001526 (Maricopa County Superior Court, Aug. 16, 2006), rev'd 219 Ariz. 14, 191 P.3d 1030 (App. 2008). Pursuant to the Small Tract Act, 43 U.S.C. Section 682a (repealed 1976), defendant’s property was patented by the federal government to defendant’s predecessors in interest in 1959. The patent included the reservation that it was subject to a 33 foot right-of-way for roadway along the east and south boundaries. Plaintiffs brought suit to require defendant to remove a fence she had erected blocking access to the right-of-way. I granted plaintiffs’ motion for summary judgment. The Arizona Court of Appeals reversed in a two-to-one decision, holding that because plaintiffs had other access to their property they were not entitled to enforce the right-of-way over defendant’s property. The dissent pointed out that the majority created a new rule governing express easements reserved in federal land patents that changes the settled law. Decision supplied.

Fushek v. State of Arizona, No. LC2006-000371 (Maricopa County Superior Court, Aug. 14, 2006), rev'd 215 Ariz. 274, 159 P.3d 584 (App. 2007), aff'd 218 Ariz. 285, 183 P.3d 536 (2008). This was a special action brought by the defendant, a Catholic priest charged with misdemeanor sex offenses, to challenge the justice court’s denial of a jury trial. I found that sex registration is an “additional, direct, uniformly applied statutory consequence that reflects the legislature’s judgment that the offense is serious.” I ruled that because of that, the Arizona Constitution guarantees the defendant a jury trial. My ruling was reversed by the Court of Appeals, but affirmed by the Supreme Court. Decision supplied in response to 13c.

Royal Palm Neighborhood Council v. City of Phoenix, No. LC 2006-000725 (Maricopa County Superior Court April 5, 2007), rev'd 2008 WL 2842072 (Ariz. App. July 17, 2008). This was a special action brought by a neighborhood to challenge the actions of the City Zoning Administrator and the City Board of Adjustment concerning the subdivision’s option requirements. I denied the petitioners’ request for special action relief, finding among other things that petitioners lacked standing and had failed to exhaust their administrative remedies. The Court of Appeals reversed finding that the assertions of the homeowners of particularized harm was sufficient to support their standing. The Court of Appeals further found that the petitioners had not been given adequate notice of the administrative decision and therefore did not have an opportunity to exhaust their administrative remedies. The matter was remanded to me for further proceedings. Decision supplied.

Carter v. Sun Health Corp., No. CV 2008-070031 (Maricopa County Superior Court October 27, 2008) rev'd sub nom. Jilly v. Rayes, 221 Ariz. 40, 209 P.3d 176 (2009). Plaintiffs, in a medical negligence case, challenged the constitutionality of the recently enacted statute as infringing on the Arizona Supreme Court's rulemaking authority. I ruled that the statute created requirements for preliminary disclosure of experts that were in direct conflict with rules enacted by the Arizona Supreme Court regarding expert disclosure in medical negligence. The Court of Appeals reversed holding that because the expert disclosure required by the statute was preliminary, the statute could be harmonized with the Supreme Court's rule and was therefore constitutional. Decision supplied.

Volpe v. Yavapai County, No. CV 2007-0392 (Yavapai County Superior Court Sep. 24, 2007 and Nov. 29, 2007), rev'd 2008 WL 4814362 (Ariz. App. October 23, 2008). This was an administrative appeal of employment termination brought by a deputy of the Yavapai Sheriff's Office. After briefing and oral argument by the parties and after reviewing the record, I found there was no substantial evidence to uphold the termination. After considering additional briefing I denied the defendant's motion for reconsideration. The Court of Appeals disagreed and reversed. Decision supplied.

State v. Moore, No. CR 1999-016742 (Maricopa County Superior Court June 7, 2012) rev'd sub nom. State v. Rayes 2012 WL 2929436 (Ariz. App. July 19, 2012) . In this capital Petition for Post-Conviction Relief (PCR), defendant sought to investigate possible juror misconduct. The state moved to prohibit defense contact with trial jurors. I ruled that such conduct could occur through a written questionnaire which required court approval before being sent. The Court of Appeals reversed ruling that until the PCR was filed, there is no right to seek discovery. In making its ruling the Court of Appeals noted that "neither party focused on Canion when arguing to the superior court. Accordingly, the superior court did not have the benefit of the parties' views on an opinion we find dispositive." Decision supplied.

State v. Chappell, No. CR 2004-037319 (Maricopa County Superior Court June 6, 2012) reversed sub nom. State v. Rayes, 2012 WL 2929434 (Ariz. App. July 19, 2012). As the presiding criminal judge I carried a calendar of approximately thirty capital case PCR proceedings which I managed through the briefing stage. The special action in this matter was brought by the State at the same time as the case above. The Court of Appeals ruled on these two cases on the same day. I granted the defense motion for the release of juror contact information, limiting initial defense contact to a letter attached to my order. The Court of Appeals reversed ruling that until the PCR was filed, there is no right to seek discovery. In making its ruling the Court of Appeals noted that “neither party appears to have cited Canion to the superior court. Accordingly, the superior court did not have the benefit of the opinion we find dispositive.” Decision supplied.

T.P. Racing v. Simms, No. CV2010-022308 (Maricopa County Superior Court 04/04/2013) special action relief was granted by the Arizona Court of Appeals, No. 1 CA-SA 13-0123, sub nom. Simms v. Rayes, in an order dated June 7, 2013, with a comment that a written decision will follow. I had found that defendants’ counsel had a conflict in interest in asserting derivative claims on behalf of an LLP against one of the limited partners while at the same time asserting individual claims against the LLP and defending the LLP’s claims against the defendant. The Court of Appeals’ written decision has not been released as of the date of this questionnaire. Decision supplied.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

When I sit as a Superior Court Judge, 100% of the decisions I issue are unpublished. They are stored in the individual files for the Maricopa County Superior Court Clerk’s docket and therefore are not readily available.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

I routinely rule on federal or state or constitutional issues, especially in criminal cases. I estimate I have ruled on over 200 cases where constitutional issues were raised including the right to counsel, the right to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures, the right against self-incrimination, the right to due process and the right not to be placed in jeopardy twice for the same crime.

Cases where I have ruled on state constitutional issues include the following:

State v. Vitasek, No. CR 2005-030514 (Maricopa County Superior Court, 09/24/2010). Decision supplied.

Arizona Together v. Brewer, No. CV 2006-010505 (Maricopa County Superior Court, 08/10/2006), aff’d 214 Ariz. 118, 149 P.3d 742 (2007). Decision supplied in 13c.

Cases where I have ruled on federal constitutional issues include the following:

State v. Moss, No. CR 2003-017379 (Maricopa County Superior Court, Feb. 5, 2005), aff'd, 215 Ariz. 385, 160 P.3d 1143 (App. 2007), depublished by, 217 Ariz. 320, 173 P.3d. 1021 (2007). Decision supplied.

State v. Quinn, No. CR 2005-007496 (Maricopa County Superior Court, Sep. 19, 2005), aff'd 218 Ariz.66, 178 P.3d 1190 (App. 2008). Decision supplied.

State v. Springer, No. CR 2006-173781 (Maricopa County Superior Court, May 9, 2011). Decision supplied.

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have never sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

The Maricopa County Superior Court employs an automatic recusal system that compares a recusal list provided by each judge to the captions and appearances of counsel on the briefs. If a judge has listed a person or entity involved in a case on his or her recusal list, the court administrator automatically eliminates that judge from that case. I do not keep a record of my recusals. The recusals occur automatically but occasionally when an attorney on my recusal list was overlooked by the court administrator I recused myself. I recuse myself if either (1) my relationship with any person involved in the case would affect my ability to be impartial or (2) if there could be a perception or appearance that my relationship with any person involved in the case would affect my ability to be impartial. As to the first factor, if I feel that my association with that person would be relevant or if I feel that I would have any hesitancy or discomfort ruling in favor or against the person, I recuse. As to the second factor, if I feel that any attorney or party in the case would have a concern that the relationship would affect my impartiality, I recuse, even if I believe the relationship would not actually affect my impartiality. When I discover grounds for recusal after assignment, I return the case to the court administrator who re-assigns it to a different judge. I did so in June 2013, in the case of Mary Rose Wilcox v. William Montgomery. I did so because the defendant, Mr. Montgomery, was a member of the panel of attorneys Senator McCain had assembled to review applicants for the district court and I was one of the parties interviewed by that panel. To the best of my memory, I can recall recusing myself from two other cases that were not on my automatic recusal list. One case involved the divorce of my dentist and the other the divorce of my neighbor's daughter. To the best of my memory, no party or litigant has asked that I recuse myself or filed a motion to have me removed for cause. However, the Arizona Rules of Civil Procedure and the Rules of Criminal Procedure provide both sides one opportunity to strike a judge for no cause. There have been occasions where I have been struck under those rules.

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I have never held public office other than judicial office. I have had no unsuccessful candidacies for public office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

I have never held an office in or rendered services to any political party or election committee. I have never played a role in a political campaign nor have I volunteered for a political campaign.

16. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

I never served as clerk to a judge.

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I never practiced alone.

- iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

Maricopa County has mandatory arbitration for cases where the amount in dispute is less than $50,000. I was appointed as an arbitrator one time that I can recall, but I have no memory of the case and no means of locating it. I was selected on a few occasions as an arbitrator by attorneys pursuant to the uninsured or underinsured arbitration provisions of the insurance contract. Those occurred in the 1980's and 1990's. These were personal injury cases. I have no memory and no file to allow me to describe the cases with any more detail.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

During my three years in the Army JAG Corps I prosecuted and later defended soldiers charged with felony offenses in military court martials.

During my private practice years, I practiced primarily in the fields of personal injury and medical malpractice. I represented both plaintiffs and defendants. I also represented police officers for disciplinary matters in administrative hearings. I had a wide range of jury trials including car accidents, slip and falls, medical malpractice, road design and helicopter crash cases. I tried police discipline and retirement cases before several administrative bodies.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

During my JAG Corps years I represented the United States in the prosecution of felonies, and later represented soldiers in the defense of felony offenses. I also represented soldiers who were contesting administrative discharges before military administrative boards.

During my private practice the plaintiffs I represented were often seriously injured individuals with no previous contact with attorneys or the legal system and who were often economically stressed due to their injuries, medical expenses and loss of income. My insurance defense clients were typically businesses, corporations and insurance companies. My clients in administrative matters were police officers appealing disciplinary actions for violating departmental rules or officers seeking medical retirements.

Almost 100% of my practice was in litigation. In the Army JAG Corps, trials to a military court martial panel (the military's version of jury trials) were usually one day trials. Because of the military's sentencing system, even cases where there was a guilty plea could be a jury trial on sentencing. It was not unusual to try at least one case per month. In private practice I appeared in court regularly. I argued motions to dismiss, discovery motions, motions in limine, motions on jury instructions, motions for summary judgment and post-trial motions. Most of my trials were to a jury. I was first chair in most of my trials.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	0%
2. state courts of record:	85%
3. other courts:	5%
4. administrative agencies:	10%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	90%
2. criminal proceedings:	10%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

To the best of my recollection, I tried approximate 30 courts martials to verdict before military panels as sole or lead counsel. After the military, to the best of my memory, I tried 20 civil cases to verdict. In approximately 15 of those cases, I was sole or lead counsel; in the others I was associate counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 90%
 - 2. non-jury: 10%

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have never appeared before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

Pursuant to my former law firms' document retention policy, my practice files have been destroyed. The following list of litigation matters is based on a search of available data bases and my best recollection. Accordingly, this list is not exhaustive and some requested information is not available.

1. McGarvey v. State of Arizona, No. CV 303542 (Pima County Superior Court, Judge Raner C. Collins).

I was counsel for plaintiffs, the three adult children of a 55 year old truck driver killed in a single vehicle accident. I was significantly involved in the case, with my partner David Heller, from the assessment of whether the firm should accept it on a contingent fee basis, through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, trial and post-trial motions. The jury trial occurred in 1998. The jury found that the state had negligently designed a detour in a road construction project causing the truck operated by my clients' father to crash into a barrier, resulting in his death. The jury awarded each of the three surviving children $890,550 in compensatory damages for a total of $2,671,650, reduced by the decedent's fault of 19%.

2. Escobedo v. Southwest Helicopters, No. CV 94- 165/CV 95-236(consolidated)
(Gila County Superior Court, Judge Pro Tem, Stanley Goodfarb)

I was counsel for the mother of a game and fish officer. He was killed when the helicopter in which he was a passenger during an animal count, hit transmission wires and crashed in the rugged hills of Central Arizona. I was significantly involved in the case, with an associate in my firm, Michael Gaughn, from the assessment of whether the firm should accept it on a contingent fee basis, through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, trial and post-trial motions. The jury trial occurred in 1997. The jury found that the accident occurred as the result of pilot error and declined to assess fault to the United States for not marking the wires. Damages were awarded in the amount of $800,000.

3. Digirolamo v. Westfield, No. 31802 (Mohave Superior Court, Judge Leonard Langford).

I represented the plaintiffs in this malpractice trial. The jury trial occurred in 1991. Plaintiff, a 75-year-old man had been treated by his family doctor (Mastakas) and an ophthalmologist (Westfield) for headaches. The doctors failed to correctly diagnosis his underlying condition and he went blind. I was significantly involved in the case, with my partner, David Heller, from the assessment of whether the firm should accept it on a contingent fee basis, through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, trial and post-trial motions. After a three week trial, the jury awarded plaintiff $1,250,000 accessing Westfield 63% at fault, Mastakas 24% at fault and plaintiff 13% at fault.

This was a medical malpractice action stemming from a premature birth. I was significantly involved in the case, with my partner, David Heller, from the assessment of whether the firm should accept it on a contingent fee basis, through discovery, pre-trial motions, and settlement negotiations. 5. Beal et al. v. Capek et al., No. 87-018544 (Maricopa County Superior Court, Judge Mark Armstrong)

This was a motor vehicle personal injury case where the plaintiff claimed serious injury resulting from a rear-end collision when the defendants' vehicle collided with hers at a traffic intersection. I represented the defendant and was significantly involved in the case from the filing of an answer through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, trial and post-trial motions. I tried the case with my partner Patrick McGroder III. After a ten day jury trial in in 1989, in which plaintiff's counsel asked the jury to award $1,200,000, the jury unanimously found for the defendant and awarded no damages. On plaintiffs' appeal, I prepared the appellate brief and argued in the Arizona Court of Appeals. The verdict was affirmed.

This was an insurance subrogation case stemming from a fire in a shopping center. I represented the plaintiff, Exchange Insurance Company. I was significantly involved in the case through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, and trial. The case was tried as a binding four day summary jury trial in 1994. The jury found defendant to be 100% at fault and awarded my client its full damages of $176,000.

7. McFarland v. The Town of Paradise Valley, Maricopa County Superior Court Cause number and presiding judge is unknown and cannot be located.

Officer McFarland had been terminated for falling asleep while operating a city vehicle on the freeway causing a serious injury accident and for a separate incident when he drove his police vehicle into a flooded wash causing the vehicle to be damaged. I represented Officer McFarland in approximately 1985 through 1986 in an administrative hearing, on appeal to Superior Court and at a second administrative hearing. At the first administrative hearing the termination was sustained. On appeal to Superior Court the parties agreed to settle by having a second administrative hearing before a new administrative body. At the second hearing, the personal board overturned the termination and reinstated Officer McFarland.

8. Beltram v. Smith's Food & Drug Centers, No. CV 93-0693 (Yavapai Superior Court, Judge Robert Brutinel).

This was a personal injury case where plaintiff fell in the defendant's grocery store. I was retained by the plaintiff, at the request of her counsel to complete discovery, attempt settlement and if necessary try the case. With my partner, David Heller, the case was tried to a jury in 1994. The jury found plaintiff's damages to be $142,640 and defendant to be 85% at fault.

9. Didio v. Orchard Partners Limited, et al., No. CV 018008, (Maricopa Superior Court, Judge Paul Katz).

This was a personal injury trial where plaintiff, a K-9 officer with the Phoenix Police Department, stepped into a hole, tearing his knee while walking the perimeter of defendant's building with his police dog in response to a silent alarm. I was significantly involved in the case, with my partner, David Heller, from the assessment of whether the firm should accept it on a contingent fee basis, through discovery, settlement negotiations, pre-trial motions, jury instructions, trial and post-trial motions. After a four day trial in 1994, the jury awarded plaintiff $250,000 and found defendants to be 90% at fault.

10. U.S. v. Balance, General Court Martial Convening Order #119, April 13, 1981, HQ, 3rd Armored Division, APO New York 09039, Major General Ulmer, Convening Authority. (Judge LTC Joe L. Woodward, US Army Legal Services Agency).

In this case my client was charged with aggravated assault and first degree murder. He stabbed a barracks roommate in the face and in the chest with a switch blade in a dispute over the volume of the decedent's stereo. I and co-counsel, Captain Larry McPherson, were involved in the case from the initial charges, the Rule 32 investigation and the trial. The case was tried to a military panel (the military's equivalent of a jury) in Frankfurt, Germany in 1981. The military judge granted the defense motion to enter a judgment of acquittal on the aggravated assault charge at the close of the prosecution's case. The military panel found the defendant not guilty of murder.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

I litigated many matters in state courts involving civil disputes that were resolved before trial. Examples of my cases include medical malpractice actions, motor vehicle accidents, dram shop actions, insurance subrogation claims, negligent road design actions, aircraft accidents, legal malpractice and construction defect claims. As a judge I have held leadership positions and have been active in the training of judges and creation of innovative processes in the court. I was co-chair of the Veterans' Court Committee that created the Veterans' Court in Maricopa County. I was responsible for the creation of a program in the criminal department called "Settlement Conference on Demand" which received a National Association of Counties Achievement Award. I created formal procedures for quality assurance review of attorneys hired to defend major felonies and capital murder cases. I have been active in the New Judge Orientation program, mandatory two-week training for all Arizona judges in the first year of their appointment or election. As the co-chairman of that program, I helped create the curriculum, recruit presenters and mentors. I have taught classes and been a mentor at the New Judge Orientation training. I currently serve on the Phoenix Municipal Court Judicial Selection Advisory Board, one of the ten largest municipal courts in the country, averaging over 300,000 case filings per year. I was instrumental in developing the first electronic applications for search warrants program in Arizona. I submitted a proposal to the Arizona Supreme Court, through my presiding judge, which resulted in a Supreme Court Administrative Order for the electronic search warrant program on a trial basis, which has substantially decreased processing times. I have recently been appointed to serve on the Arizona Commission on Judicial Performance Review. This commission reviews the election year performance evaluations of the judges in the state who are appointed by the governor and makes recommendations that appear on the Secretary of State's Voter Publicity Pamphlets on which judges should be retained. I sit on the Arizona Supreme Court Judicial Leadership Council.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

Summer 2005: Professor, Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, class entitled "Lawyering Theory and Practice." I taught the class on how to prepare and try a civil case. The school provided a written scenario of facts and actors that allowed the class to role play. During the course of the semester the class experienced the entire litigation process: meeting the client, drafting a complaint, drafting written discovery, taking depositions and trying the case with a mock judge and jury. I am unable to locate a syllabus.

Fall semester 2011 and 2012: Professor, Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law, class entitled, "Professional Liability Litigation." I co-teach a law school class on litigating negligence cases against professionals such as doctors, lawyers and engineers. Syllabus is supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

As the result of a structured personal injury settlement in approximately 1986, when I was in private practice, I have an annuity with Aviva Insurance that began paying $3100 monthly on my 60th birthday.

I became vested in the Arizona Elected Officials Retirement plan after five years of service. Therefore, I will receive a pension upon retirement that will be calculated based on my years of service and the average of my three highest years of salary.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation during my service with the court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I am not aware of any family members or parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I will consult and abide by the rules and decisions that govern conflicts of interest for federal judges, including 28 U.S.C. Section 455 and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

I arranged for volunteer judges and court staff to set up Maricopa County Superior Court mobile court rooms at the Homeless Veterans Stand-Down in 2011 and 2012. I worked as a volunteer judicial officer and oversaw the operation of courts at the 2011 and 2012 Homeless Veterans Stand-Down.

I have also served the community in a non-legal capacity. I assisted boy scouts in the completion of their eagle projects. I teach courses on professional negligence at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law without compensation. I guest-speak in courses on the death penalty and criminal justice at Arizona State University and Mesa Community College without compensation. I have served on City of Phoenix, Judicial Selection Advisory Board since 2008. I served as the chairman of the Town of El Mirage Judicial Selection Advisory Board from 2006 through 2012. These two boards make recommendations to the City Council after screening applicants for Municipal Court judgeships and reviewing judges whose terms are up for renewal.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In April 2013, I submitted an application to the Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee established by Senator John McCain. On June 8, 2013, I was interviewed by the Committee in Phoenix, Arizona. On approximately June 24, 2013, I was notified by one of the members of the Committee that Senator McCain was recommending me to the White House for consideration. Since June 30, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On August 6, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington D.C. On September 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Chairman

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I have reviewed the questionnaire I submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee on October 22, 2013, in connection with my nomination to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. Incorporating the additional information listed below, I certify that the information contained in these documents is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate.

Q. 12(c)

As a member of the Arizona Commission on Judicial Performance review, I participated in a public meeting on November 22, 2013. I have no notes, transcripts or recording.

Q. 12(d)

Since my previously-submitted questionnaire, I have given the following presentations:

December 10, 2013: Panelist in a discussion for a group of approximately 30 people who were interested in the judicial selection process. A moderator led the panel of five active and retired judges and three attorneys in a general discussion of the merit selection and application procedures for the Arizona Superior Court, Arizona Supreme Court and the Federal District Court. I have no notes, transcripts or recording. The address of the sponsoring organization is Spirit of the Senses, Post Office Box 44273 Phoenix, Arizona 85064.

December 6, 2013: Guest speaker for the introduction of Judge Craig Blakey, the 2013 American Board of Trial Advocates' (ABOTA) Judge of the Year, at ABOTA's dinner to honor the Judge of the Year. I have no notes, transcripts or recording. The address of the Phoenix Chapter of the American Board of Trial Advocates is c/o Thomas K. Slack, Beale, Michaels & Slack PC, 7012 North 18th Street, Phoenix, Arizona 85020.

November 19, 2013: Moderator at a joint meeting of the Sandra Day O'Connor, Horace Rumpole and Thurgood Marshall Inns of Court using movie scene re-enactments from A Few Good Men to identify and discuss ethical issues. Outline supplied.

Q. 13(a)

I have presided over one civil bench trial that went to judgment and one civil jury trial that went to trial.

Brimet II, L.L.C. v. Destiny Homes Marketing, L.L.C., No. CV2009-015587 Maricopa County Superior Court, Oct. 4, 2013), rev'd sub nom. Brimet II, L.L.C. v. Rayes, (mandate has not issued). Decision and Court of Appeals opinion supplied.

In this case, a developer, with a loan from First Horizon Loan Corporation (First Horizon) purchased land for a construction project using an acquisition loan. After the acquisition loan was recorded, an Option contract involving Destiny Holdings II ("Destiny") was recorded. First Horizon later made a second loan on the project. From the second loan, the acquisition loan was paid off. Later, a new lender, Northern Trust (Northern) made a third loan from which the First Horizon was paid off entirely. Ultimately, Northern foreclosed and purchased the property at a trustee's sale. Northern filed a quiet title suit, seeking a ruling that Destiny's Option was extinguished when the property was foreclosed and purchased by Northern. While the quiet title action was pending, Northern sold the property to Brimet II, LLC (Brimet). The original trial court judge granted Brimet's motion for summary judgment, finding that the Option had been extinguished. The Court of Appeals reversed and remanded the case to the trial court with instructions "that summary judgment be entered in favor of Destiny." After the original trial court judge retired, the case was assigned to me. Destiny's counsel submitted a form of judgment, and, after objection and briefing by the parties, I found that the proposed form of judgment complied with the Court of Appeals' order and entered summary judgment in favor of Destiny. Brimet then brought a special action. The Court of Appeals granted relief, stating that in reversing the original trial court judge, it had not addressed the enforceability of the Option and that although Destiny's Option is an encumbrance, Destiny cannot maintain an action for quiet title. As a result, the Court of Appeals deleted paragraphs 2(a) and 2(f) from the judgment that I had entered.

Simms v. Rayes. Court of Appeals opinion supplied.

Since I filed my questionnaire, the Court of Appeals has issued its opinion explaining the basis for its ruling, finding that no conflict of interests exists with defendants' counsel by bringing a derivative action on behalf of the minority shareholder.

I am also forwarding an updated net worth statement and financial disclosure report as requested in the questionnaire. I thank the Committee for its consideration of my nomination.

Yours very truly,

Douglas L. Rayes
Judge, Maricopa County Superior Court

A Few Good Men

1. Being former JAG, movie is dear to my heart.
2. Got some things right and some things wrong.
3. Got wrong:
 - a. Defense attorney with no trial experience. In military, must prosecute first before defend.
 - b. No such crime as conduct unbecoming Marine.
 - c. "Just following orders" is no defense to an assault or murder charge.
 - d. No Military trial attorney would treat a colonel the way this attorney did.
4. Got right:
 - a. Military court procedures, military panel and judge.
 - b. Tension between commanders and defense attorneys.
5. My experience in JAG with a hostile commander.
6. Ethical issues:
 - a. One attorney team representing codefendants. Inherent conflict.
 - b. Misleading court, military panel and witness about what other witnesses will testify to.
 - c. After critical witness who gave defense attorney important information commits suicide, attorney decided to prove the missing facts by cross-examination of a hostile witness. Consider whether he should have discussed with his client and a more experienced attorney whether to withdraw from case and be a potential witness.

BRIMET v. HON. RAYES/DESTINY
Decision Order

DECISION ORDER

Judge Patricia K. Norris delivered the decision of the Court, in which Presiding Judge Peter B. Swann and Judge Kenton D. Jones joined.

N O R R I S, Judge:

¶1 This special action challenges provisions of a judgment entered by the superior court on remand that Petitioners, Brimet II, L.L.C. and ME 12, L.L.C. (collectively, “Brimet”), argue exceeded the instructions and mandate issued by this court in Brimet II, L.L.C. v. Destiny Homes Marketing, L.L.C., 231 Ariz. 457, 296 P.3d 993 (App. 2013) (“Brimet II”). Because the appropriate method of seeking review of a superior court judgment on remand entered pursuant to specific instructions by an appelland court is through special action, Scates v. Ariz. Corp. Comm’n, 124 Ariz. 73, 76, 601 P.2d 1357, 1360 (App. 1979) (citation omitted), the court accepts special action jurisdiction and grants relief.

¶2 As explained in Brimet II, Northern Bank, N.A., as Brimet’s predecessor in interest, filed a quiet title action against the real party in interest, Destiny Homes Marketing, L.L.C. (“Destiny”) to obtain “judicial confirmation” that a trustee’s sale of certain real property (“Property”) had extinguished an option contract (“Option”) granted to Destiny by Destiny Holdings II, L.L.C. (“Borrower”). 231 Ariz. at 458-59, ¶¶ 2-6, 296 P.3d at 994-95. Brimet moved for summary judgment and, pursuant to the doctrines of replacement and equitable subrogation, argued Destiny’s Option had been “wiped out” through the foreclosure. Id. at 459, ¶ 6, 296 P.3d at 995. In response, Destiny cross-moved for partial summary judgment. In its cross-motion, Destiny asserted the Option was senior to the interest acquired by Brimet and had not been extinguished by the trustee’s sale. Notably, Destiny did not seek summary judgment on its counterclaims in which it had requested a declaration that the Option remained a “valid, senior interest in the Property enforceable as against Brimet and all subsequent transferees of the Property . . . pursuant to . . . the Option’s express terms,” and an order “[e]stablishing [its] interests in the Property under the Option.”

¶3 The superior court denied Destiny’s motion and granted Brimet’s motion for summary judgment, ruling “the doctrines of replacement and equitable subrogation apply here and collectively have the legal effect of wiping out Destiny's option upon Northern Trust's foreclosure of its priority lien position."

BRIMET v. HON. RAYES/DESTINY
Decision Order

¶4 Destiny appealed. We reversed and held Northern's foreclosure had not extinguished the Option:

Destiny's Option was not extinguished when Northern foreclosed on its deed of trust and purchased the property at the trustee's sale. Therefore, Brimet did not acquire title to the property free and clear of the Option and the Option remains as a senior encumbrance on the property.

Brimet II, 231 Ariz. at 461, ¶ 21, 296 P.3d at 997. We remanded the matter to the superior court "with instructions that summary judgment be entered in favor of Destiny." Id. at ¶ 23.

¶5 On remand, over Brimet's objection, the superior court entered a judgment ("remand judgment") that, as relevant here, stated in paragraphs 2(a) and 2(f) the following:

(a) That title in the real property further described on Exhibit A attached hereto, also known as Lot Nos. 1, 4-10 and 13-16 of Mountainside Estates, located at the Northwest corner of 19th Street and East Dobbins Road, Phoenix, Arizona ("Property"), is hereby quieted in favor of Destiny Homes Marketing LLC ("Destiny");

(f) That the Option is valid and enforceable according to its terms against all current owners of the Property or lot(s) therein, and their successors and assigns.

¶6 Addressing paragraphs 2(a) and 2(f) in reverse order, we hold these provisions exceeded our instructions on remand. See Raimey v. Ditsworth, 227 Ariz. 552, 555, ¶ 6, 261 P.3d 436, 439 (App. 2011) (superior court does not have authority to transgress upon obvious intent of appellate court by contravening on remand decision and mandate previously issued; appellate mandate, along with decision it seeks to implement, is binding on superior court and enforceable according to its true intent and meaning).

¶7 First, the issue resolved by the superior court on summary judgment was whether the trustee's sale extinguished the Option or whether the Option remained as a senior encumbrance on the Property. Accordingly, that was the only issue we addressed and decided in Brimet II. When we instructed that summary judgment be entered in favor of Destiny, the true intent and meaning of our instruction was to direct the superior court to enter a judgment that confirmed the Option remained a senior encumbrance on the Property and that Brimet had not acquired title to the Property free and clear of the Option.¹ We did not address or decide the enforceability of the Option. Accordingly, paragraph 2(f) of the judgment that stated the Option was "valid and enforceable according to its terms against all current owners of the Property or lot(s) therein, and their successors and assigns" exceeded our instructions on remand.

¶8 Paragraph 2(a) of the remand judgment purported to quiet title in the Property in favor of Destiny. Although, as we explained in Brimet II, the Option remained a senior encumbrance on the Property, we did not direct the court to quiet title to the property in Destiny. A quiet title action provides a mechanism to determine and quiet title to real property and may be brought by anyone having or claiming an interest therein. See generally Ariz. Rev. Stat. ("A.R.S.") § 12-1101 (2003). The interest must be in the title, not merely in the land. Saxman v. Christmann, 52 Ariz. 149, 154, 79 P.2d 520, 522 (1938) (criticized on other grounds by Rundle v. Republic Cement Corp., 86 Ariz. 96, 97, 101, 341 P.2d 226, 227, 229 (1959)). A quiet title action may not be brought by a person who does not claim title to or in the property. Id. An option, until and unless validly exercised, does not convey title. Wilson v. Metheny, 72 Ariz. 339, 344, 236 P.2d 34, 37-38 (1951). Thus, as we recognized in Brimet II, the Option is an encumbrance, and an optionee, as Destiny is here, may not bring an action ¹The remand judgment recited that the Option "is a valid interest in, and encumbrance upon, the Property and each lot therein;" the foreclosure sale "did not extinguish or otherwise invalidate the Option;" the Option "has been and remains superior to all other interests in the Property since November 12, 2004;" and "all subsequent purchasers of the Property, or any lot therein, purchased such Property and/or lot(s) subject to the Option." Brimet has not challenged these provisions of the remand judgment and has conceded they fall within our remand instructions.

to quiet title. Santana, 52 Ariz. at 154, 79 P.2d at 522 (“encumbrancers cannot maintain an action to quiet title, for they have no title”). Although in Brimet II we held Destiny’s Option remained a senior encumbrance on the property, as a matter of law, Destiny was not entitled to assert a claim to quiet title in the Property, and paragraph 2(a) which purported to quiet title to the property in Destiny was improper.

¶9 For the foregoing reasons, we delete paragraphs 2(a) and 2(f) from the remand judgment. We express no opinion on the enforceability of the Option against all current owners of the Property or lot(s) therein and their successors and assigns. We also deny Brimet’s motion to consolidate this special action with its appeal from the remand judgment and the “Notice and Stipulation re: Motion to Consolidate Special Action and Appeal” as moot.

OPINION

Judge Randall M. Howe delivered the opinion of the Court, in which Presiding Judge Peter B. Swann and Judge John C. Gemmill joined.

HOWE, Judge:

¶1 This special action arises from the trial court's disqualification of Petitioners' counsel, Greenberg Traurig, LLP ("GT"), from representing Petitioners in pursuing derivative claims against TP Racing, LLLP. We accept jurisdiction because Petitioners have no adequate remedy by appeal and raise a legal issue that may recur. Sec. Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. Helm, 149 Ariz. 332, 333, 718 P.2d 985, 986 (1986) (holding that disqualification order was not appealable and special action jurisdiction was therefore appropriate); State ex rel. Romley v. Superior Court (Flores), 181 Ariz. 378, 380, 891 P.2d 246, 248 (App. 1995) (same). We grant relief because the trial court erred in disqualifying GT as Petitioners' counsel.

FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

¶2 Brothers Ron and Jerry Simms are the principal owners of TP Racing, a limited partnership that owns Turf Paradise Racetrack. Ron individually owns an 18 percent interest in TP Racing and his trust owns a 14 percent interest. Jerry owns a 55 percent interest in TP Racing. J&R Racing, LLC, is the general partner and manager of TP Racing. Jerry and

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.
Opinion of the Court

RASCD, Inc.—a corporation of which Ron is the sole shareholder—each have a 50 percent interest in J&R Racing. Jerry serves as J&R Racing’s manager and makes the day-to-day decisions, but other management decisions require RASCD’s consent.

¶3 In July 2010, TP Racing separately sued Ron and one of Ron’s corporations, and the trial court consolidated these actions. Ron answered the complaints and counterclaimed¹ against TP Racing,² alleging, among other things, breaches of contract and breaches of fiduciary duty. GT was Ron’s counsel in this litigation.

¶4 In August 2011, TP Racing moved to disqualify GT because the firm was representing Ron in his defense against TP Racing’s claims and in his counterclaims brought against TP Racing. Ron, in turn, moved to disqualify TP Racing’s counsel, alleging that Jerry and TP Racing were adverse to each other on some claims and that Jerry and TP Racing had hired their counsel without Ron’s consent. After oral argument on the motions, the trial court denied TP Racing’s motion because GT had never asserted that it represented TP Racing and was not seeking relief on TP Racing’s behalf, and denied Ron’s motion because Jerry and TP Racing were not adverse to each other.

¶5 In March 2012, TP Racing moved to dismiss Ron’s counterclaims. TP Racing argued that Ron lacked standing to bring certain claims because they were derivative: they sought redress for harms Jerry allegedly caused TP Racing, not for harms caused to Ron personally. TP Racing also argued that the remaining counterclaims failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. The trial court agreed and dismissed the counterclaims without prejudice.

¶6 Before refiling certain counterclaims as derivative claims, Ron filed a “Motion for a Determination of No Conflict,” asking the trial court to determine that GT could represent Ron on the derivative claims

¹ Included as counterclaimants are Ron’s wife and several trusts and corporations in which Ron has an interest. For clarity and ease of reference, the court will refer to the counterclaimants as “Ron.”

² Included as counterdefendants are Jerry, Jerry’s wife, and two other entities in which Jerry has an interest. For clarity and ease of reference, the court will refer to the counterdefendants as “TP Racing.”

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.
Opinion of the Court

brought in TP Racing's name without creating a conflict of interest between GT and TP Racing. Ron argued that no conflict existed because no attorney-client relationship existed between GT and TP Racing. TP Racing opposed the motion and moved to disqualify GT, arguing that GT had a conflict of interest because it was representing Ron simultaneously in defending against claims by TP Racing, in pursuing claims against TP Racing, and in pursuing derivative claims on behalf of TP Racing.

¶7 The trial court denied Ron's motion and granted TP Racing's motion to disqualify GT for the reasons set forth in TP Racing's motion. Ron now seeks relief from that order with the present petition for special action.

DISCUSSION

¶8 This Court reviews a trial court's ruling on a motion to disqualify counsel for an abuse of discretion. Smart Indus. Corp., Mfg. v. Bradshaw, 179 Ariz. 141, 145, 876 P.2d 1176, 1180 (App. 1994). When the trial court's decision is not based on the resolution of disputed factual issues but the application of legal principles, however, we review the decision de novo as an issue of law. See Tritschlar v. Allstate Ins. Co., 213 Ariz. 505, 518 ¶ 41, 144 P.3d 519, 532 (App. 2006) ("A court abuses its discretion if it commits legal error in reaching a discretionary conclusion."); Chih Teh Shen v. Miller, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d 783, 788 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012) ("[W]here there are no material disputed factual issues, the appellate court reviews the trial court's determination [on disqualification] as a question of law."). The nature of disqualification motions requires a "careful review" of the trial court's ruling. Chih Teh Shen, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 788 (quoting People ex rel. Dep't of Corps. v. SpeeDee Oil Change Sys., Inc., 980 P.2d 371, 377 (Cal. 1999)). Because disqualification interferes with a party's attorney-client relationship, disqualification motions are subject to "tactical abuse," id., and are "view[ed] with suspicion," Gomez v. Dawson, 149 Ariz. 223, 226, 717 P.2d 902, 905 (1986). They should be granted "[o]nly in extreme circumstances," and the party seeking disqualification has the burden of proof. Alexander v. D'Angelo, 141 Ariz. 157, 161, 685 P.2d 1309, 1313 (1984).

¶9 The issue in this case is whether GT has a conflict of interest in representing Ron on his derivative claims on behalf of TP Racing because GT also represents Ron in his defense against claims by TP Racing. Ron argues that no conflict exists because GT's only attorney-client relationship is with him, and not with TP Racing. TP Racing argues that although GT has no attorney-client relationship with it, GT still owes a fiduciary duty to it because the derivative claims are pursued on behalf of TP Racing, which impermissibly places GT as counsel on both sides of the litigation.

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.

¶10 Conflict of interest disputes are resolved under Arizona Rules of Professional Conduct Ethical Rule (“ER”) 1.7(a). That rule prohibits a lawyer from representing a client if (1) that representation will be directly adverse to another client or (2) a significant risk exists that the lawyer’s responsibilities to another client, a former client, a third person, or to the lawyer’s personal interest will materially limit the client’s representation. The “threshold question” is whether an attorney-client relationship exists between the lawyer and an adverse party. Gonzalez ex rel. Colonial Bank v. Chillura, 892 So.2d 1075, 1077 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2004).

¶11 As TP Racing concedes, no attorney-client relationship exists between GT and TP Racing. An attorney-client relationship exists when a person has manifested to a lawyer his intent that the lawyer provide him with legal services and the lawyer has manifested consent to do so. Paradigm Ins. Co. v. Langerman, 200 Ariz. 146, 149 ¶ 10, 24 P.3d 593, 596 (2001) (quoting Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 14). Nothing in the record shows that TP Racing manifested to GT its intent that GT provide legal services to it or that GT manifested any consent to do so. GT’s only attorney-client relationship is with Ron.

¶12 The fact that GT’s client Ron—in his capacity as a minority partner of TP Racing—has filed derivative claims on behalf of TP Racing changes nothing. Although no Arizona appellate court has considered the issue, courts that have considered the issue have held that lawyers are not disqualified from representing clients who are simultaneously pursuing direct claims against a corporation and derivative claims on behalf of that corporation. See Chih Teh Shen, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 789-91; Gonzalez, 892 So.2d at 1077-78 (applying Florida Rule of Professional Conduct 4-1.7, identically worded to ER 1.7); see also In re Dayco Derivative Sec. Litig., 102 F.R.D. 624, 630 (S.D. Ohio 1984) (“the case law is virtually unanimous in holding that one counsel can represent a stockholder bringing both an individual and a derivative action”) (footnote omitted). This is so because of the nature of derivative actions.

¶13 Derivative actions allow a minority shareholder to pursue a claim on behalf of a corporation when the management of the corporation has refused to pursue the claim itself. Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Serv., Inc., 500 U.S. 90, 95 (1991). The corporation is merely a nominal party in a dispute between a minority shareholder and the management that controls the corporation. See Chih Teh Shen, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 790-91; Gonzalez, 892 So.2d at 1078; see also Cohen v. Beneficial Indus. Loan Corp., 337 U.S. 541, 548 (1949) (noting that in a derivative action, the corporation is a nominal party). The corporation thus is not a “client” of the lawyer for the minority shareholder and the lawyer has no attorney-client relationship with it. If the filing of a derivative claim created an attorney-client relationship between the corporation and the lawyer for the minority shareholder, “there would be no way for the derivative plaintiff to ever have conflict-free counsel.” Gonzalez, 892 So.2d at 1078. The corporation would then control who could represent the minority shareholder, “letting the fox guard the chicken coop.” Id.

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.

¶14 Because the lawyer in a derivative action has an attorney-client relationship only with the minority shareholder, nothing prevents the lawyer from also representing the minority shareholder on any direct claims against the corporation or its management that arise from the same set of facts. The shareholder may sue directly for harms the mismanagement of the corporation has caused him personally, and derivatively for harms the mismanagement has caused the corporation. See Chih Teh Shen, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 795 (“Shen’s individual and derivative claims revolve around the same nucleus of facts alleging misconduct by corporate mismanagement.”) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted); Dayco, 102 F.R.D. at 631 (“The legal theory underlying the derivative suit and Lovorn’s complaint in state court is parallel and entirely compatible.”). The lawyer is not representing adverse interests in this situation.

¶15 The same analysis applies to Ron’s claims involving TP Racing. Just as a shareholder has the right to pursue a derivative action on behalf of a corporation, a minority partner in a limited partnership has the right to pursue a derivative action on behalf of a partnership. A.R.S. § 29-356. Ron’s direct claims are aligned with the derivative claims filed on behalf of and for the benefit of TP Racing. The direct claims are against TP Racing and Jerry for harm Jerry has caused Ron in his alleged mismanagement of TP Racing. These claims include breach of the partnership agreement, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and breach of the duty of loyalty. The derivative claims similarly allege mismanagement of TP Racing by its manager, Jerry. These claims include breach of the fiduciary duties of loyalty and due care. Because Ron’s interests in his direct claims and the interests of TP Racing in the derivative claims are aligned, GT is not representing adverse interests and has no conflict of interest cognizable under ER 1.7(a).³

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.

¶16 TP Racing argues, however, that the true issue is not whether GT can represent Ron on both his direct claims and his derivative claims, but whether GT can represent Ron on the derivative claims while defending Ron against claims filed by TP Racing. But the answer remains the same. GT has an attorney-client relationship with Ron, with all its attendant duties to Ron; GT has no relationship with or duty to TP Racing. The fact that the derivative claims are filed nominally in TP Racing's name and that the benefits of any successful prosecution will flow to TP Racing creates no duty on GT's part to TP Racing.

¶17 TP Racing nevertheless argues that even though no attorney-client relationship exists between GT and TP Racing, GT still has a conflict of interest under ER 1.7(a) because the derivative claims impose a fiduciary duty on GT to TP Racing that conflicts with GT's duty to Ron. Although a fiduciary duty does exist in a derivative action, it exists between the corporation or partnership and the minority shareholder or partner asserting the derivative claim. See Chih Teh Shen, 150 Cal. Rptr. 3d at 790; South v. Baker, 62 A.3d 1, 21 (Del. Ch. 2012). Thus, Ron, as the minority limited partner asserting the derivative claim, has a fiduciary duty to act in TP Racing's interest. GT is counsel for the person having the fiduciary duty to TP Racing; the firm itself has no separate fiduciary duty to TP Racing.

¶18 TP Racing relies on In re Estate of Shano, 177 Ariz. 550, 869 P.2d 1203 (App. 1993), to support its claim that GT has its own—or at least a derivative—fiduciary duty to TP Racing. The lawyer in Shano initially represented the beneficiary of a holographic will and moved the probate court to appoint the beneficiary as the special administrator for the decedent's estate. Id. at 552, 869 P.2d at 1205. The decedent's wife subsequently submitted an earlier will for probate, which named her and her children as beneficiaries. Id. The probate court, upon the parties' stipulation, appointed a new third-party administrator of the estate because of the conflict between the original administrator—the beneficiary of the holographic will—and the decedent's wife. Id. The lawyer then ceased representing the beneficiary of the holographic will and associated as co-counsel with the lawyer representing the third-party administrator. Id. The decedent's wife then filed several claims against the estate, and the lawyer, acting as counsel for the third-party administrator, opposed the claims. Id. at 553-54, 869 P.2d at 1206-07. The decedent's wife moved to disqualify the lawyer because he had a conflict of interest, and the probate court granted the motion. Id. at 554, 869 P.2d at 1207.

³ TP Racing argues that Ron has his own conflict of interest in pursuing direct claims and derivative claims against TP Racing that should be imputed to GT, and cites several federal district court decisions that hold that a minority shareholder may not pursue derivative claims against a corporation while being a member of a class action against the corporation. Not only does TP Racing fail to present any authority for the proposition that a client's conflict of interest may be imputed to the client's lawyer, the question whether Ron has some conflict of interest that prevents him from presenting derivative claims is not before us.

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.

¶19 On appeal, this Court affirmed the disqualification, ruling that the lawyer had represented conflicting interests. Id. We noted that the administrator had a fiduciary duty to the successor to the decedent's estate—the decedent's wife—and that the lawyer thus had a derivative fiduciary duty to the decedent's wife, which has been materially limited by his previous representation of the beneficiary of the holographic will. Id. at 554-55, 869 P.3d at 1207-08. We recognized that no authority had ever held that a lawyer for an administrator had a fiduciary duty to the successors to an estate, but held that the peculiar circumstances of estate administration justified the imposition of such a duty because the lawyer was compensated not by the administrator, but from the estate itself, and the lawyer, through his superior knowledge and position of trust, was able to influence the administrator in discharging its duties. Id. at 555, 869 P.3d at 1208.

¶20 Shano is distinguishable in two salient ways. First, the lawyer in Shano had a conflict of interest because he had represented one party in what developed into a will contest and then represented the administrator of the decedent's estate that had a neutral fiduciary duty to all of the will contestants. See ER 1.9 ("Duties to Former Clients"). Here, GT has represented only Ron in this litigation and had no prior relationship with or duty to TP Racing that would create a conflict. Second, none of the peculiar circumstances discussed in Shano are present here. Ron is responsible for paying GT's fees, not TP Racing, and this case has no neutral arbiter in the role of an administrator on which GT has special influence. Shano does not change the result here. GT has no fiduciary duty to TP Racing that constitutes a conflict of interest under ER 1.7(a).⁴

SIMMS v. HON. RAYES/TP RACING et al.
Opinion of the Court

¶21 GT's representation of Ron on his derivative claims against Jerry on behalf of TP Racing does not create an attorney-client relationship with TP Racing or impose on GT a fiduciary duty to TP Racing. The trial court thus had no basis to find that GT had a conflict of interest because GT also represents Ron in defending against TP Racing's claims and in pursuing direct counterclaims against TP Racing. The trial court erred in granting TP Racing's motion to disqualify GT from representing Ron on the derivative claims.

CONCLUSION

¶22 We accept jurisdiction and grant relief. We reverse the trial court's order granting the motion to disqualify Greenberg Traurig from representing Petitioners on the derivative claims.

- b. The American Bar Association's Commentary to its Code of Judicial Conduct states that it is inappropriate for a judge to hold membership in any organization that invidiously discriminates on the basis of race, sex, or religion, or national origin. Indicate whether any of these organizations listed in response to 11a above currently discriminate or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies. If so, describe any action you have taken to change these policies and practices.

During my period of membership in the Elks Lodge, from 1976 to 1980, membership was restricted to male citizens of at least 21 years of age who believed in a Supreme Being. Prior to my joining, membership was further restricted on the basis of race. The Superior Court in Arizona is a general jurisdiction trial court handling criminal, civil, family, probate, juvenile, mental health, and other types of cases.

I was appointed as the Presiding Judge in Santa Cruz County in December 2001 by the Chief Justice of the Arizona Supreme Court and have been re-appointed to successive terms as Presiding Judge for Santa Cruz County in 2004, 2008, and 2013.

1. Contreras v. Morgan and Cochise County, Case No. CV-201200327 (Cochise Cty. Super Court); 2012. Decision supplied.

This case was assigned to me as a visiting judge. The complaint was filed by a Deputy Cochise County Attorney alleging invasion of privacy and sought injunctive relief to prevent the release of certain records in plaintiff's personnel files by Cochise County and the Cochise County Attorney's Office sought by an online publisher under a public records request. The plaintiff, who at the time was also a candidate for Superior Court judge in Cochise County, sought to prevent the release of certain written information in plaintiff's personnel file sent to the Cochise County Attorney by the plaintiff's ex-wife alleging wrongdoing by the plaintiff during his period of employment as a deputy county attorney. The issue before this court was whether all, some, or none of the records in question fell under the Arizona Public Records Act. I found that with one exception, the records in question fell under the Act and ordered the release of said records to the publisher.

The defendant was sentenced to a series of prison terms totaling 20 years. This case is currently on appeal. Significant issues as to the defendant's mental health, competency, possible malingering, disruptive behavior by the defendant during courtroom proceedings, and lack of cooperation with the court and his appointed counsel were presented during the course of the case.

This was a criminal case over which I presided as a visiting judge in which the defendant was charged with sexual conduct with a minor under 15, molestation of a child, and burglary. The defendant was convicted on all counts and was sentenced to a series of prison terms totaling over 50 years. His conviction was affirmed on appeal in an unreported Memorandum Decision. Numerous evidentiary issues arose during the course of the case and most were resolved by the court in pre-trial motions. The Court of Appeals affirmed.

This was a family law case concerning child custody between a mother residing in Mexico and a father residing in Italy. At various times during their marriage the parties had lived in the United States, Italy, and Mexico. The case raised issues of jurisdiction, full faith and credit to orders from both Italy and Mexico, the Uniform Child Custody and Jurisdiction Act and the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. I ultimately gave full faith and credit to an order from an Italian court but retained jurisdiction in the case.

6. State of Arizona v. Gilliland, Case No. CR-05-276 (Santa Cruz Cty. Superior Ct.); 2011. Decisions and Court of Appeals opinion supplied.

This criminal case involved a United States Customs Officer who was found guilty by a jury of 317 counts of sexual conduct with a minor, molestation of a child, sexual exploitation of a child, and child abuse. The victim was the defendant's then five-year-old daughter. I ultimately dismissed 33 of the counts. Based upon the nature of the offenses and Arizona's sentencing laws, I sentenced the defendant to prison terms totaling over 6,000 years. The most significant issues in the case dealt with the constitutionality of a series of search warrants issued by a federal magistrate and by this court, whether the evidence seized should have been suppressed, and the issue of whether the 317 counts in the charging Information were multiplicitous in nature. The Arizona Court of Appeals affirmed the defendant's convictions and review was denied by the Arizona Supreme Court.

7. Desarrollo Inmobiliario v. Kader Holding Co., Case No. CV-03-047 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.); 2012. Decisions and Court of Appeals Opinion supplied.

This was a civil case involving a lease agreement, a guaranty agreement, and lease renewal agreements between a Mexican real estate corporation and a Hong Kong based multi-national corporation for a large commercial property located in Hermosillo, Sonora, Mexico. Among the numerous legal issues litigated were issues as to jurisdiction, choice of forum, choice of law, contract law, and guaranty law. The court found that it had jurisdiction, that Arizona law was controlling in the case, and that the defendant was liable as a guarantor of the lease obligations. The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, affirmed in Desarrollo Inmobiliario v. Kader Holding Company, 229 Ariz. 367, 276 P.3d 1 (App.). Review was denied by the Arizona Supreme Court.

8. White v. State of Arizona and Greater Arizona Bicycling Ass'n, Case No. CV-02-235 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.); 2007. Decisions supplied.

This civil case involved wrongful death claims filed by the wife and children of a bicyclist who was killed in a bicycle accident on the Arizona state highway system in a bicycle tour sponsored by the Greater Arizona Bicycling Association (“GABA”). The plaintiffs and the State of Arizona settled plaintiffs’ claims against the State of Arizona prior to trial and the case proceeded to a jury trial against GABA. At the conclusion of the trial, the jury apportioned comparative fault among the plaintiff and both defendants. The jury awarded damages to the surviving spouse but awarded no damages to the children. I ruled that it was within the province of the jury not to award damages to the children and denied plaintiffs’ motions for additur or a new trial. The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in White v. Greater Arizona Bicycling Association, 216 Ariz. 133, 163 P.3d 1083 (App. 2007) reversed. The holding of the Court of Appeals has since been overruled by the Arizona Supreme Court in Walsh v. Advanced Cardiac Specialists Chartered, 229 Ariz. 193, 273 P. 3d 645 (2012).

This was a criminal case over which I presided as a visiting judge many years after the trial and conviction of the defendant. While the defendant was serving a 20-year-prison sentence imposed by a judge previously assigned to the case, he filed a series of Petitions for Post-Conviction Relief including a Petition For Post-Conviction Relief seeking DNA testing of certain items of evidence. I ordered DNA testing of the items in question. Ultimately, the test results did not exonerate the defendant.

10. State of Arizona v. Martinez-Villareal, Case No. 4641-A (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.); 2005. Decision supplied.

Martinez-Villareal was a criminal case in which the defendant was convicted of various charges, including two counts of first degree murder. He was originally sentenced to death on the murder charges. His convictions were affirmed in both state and federal appeals. His case was eventually returned to the trial court for re-sentencing due to a finding of ineffective assistance of counsel at sentencing. It was at this point that the case was assigned to me after previously being handled by at least two judges over the span of many years. Prior to re-sentencing the defendant, the issue of the defendant's competency to be re-sentenced was raised. After numerous evaluations and an evidentiary hearing, I found that the defendant was not competent to be re-sentenced. The defendant remains at the Arizona State Hospital in Phoenix undergoing restoration to competency treatment. There are no appellate decisions or citations to the case since this case was assigned to me.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

Certiorari has not been requested or granted in any of my cases.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

No decisions issued by me have been reversed or criticized by the Arizona Supreme Court.

The following decisions, under advisement rulings, or orders issued by me were reversed by the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two:

Kelly v. Kino Springs Golf, L.L.C., Case No. CV-08-044 (Santa Cruz Cty Super. Ct.). Decision and opinion by Court of Appeals opinion supplied.

After a jury had returned a verdict in favor of plaintiffs and awarded damages in the amount of $2 million, I set aside the jury award of damages and ordered a new trial solely on the issue of damages. On appeal, the appellate court affirmed the granting of a new trial but expanded the scope of the new trial to also include the issue of liability. The appellate court found that the issues of liability and damages were so intertwined that a new trial on both issues was required. In addition, the appellate decision discussed the various elements of damages that could properly be considered at a new trial.

White v. State of Arizona and Greater Arizona Bicycling Ass'n, Case No. CV-02-235 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.) Decisions supplied in response to 13(c).

The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in White v. Greater Arizona Bicycling Association, 216 Ariz. 133, 163 P.3d 1083 (App. 2007), in a two to one decision, reversed my ruling denying plaintiffs' motion for additur or in the alternative a new trial after a jury had awarded no damages to the children of the deceased bicyclist. The holding of the Court of Appeals in White has since been overruled by the Arizona Supreme Court in Walsh v. Advanced Cardiac Specialists Chartered, 229 Ariz. 193, 273 P.3d 645 (2012).

Miidas Greenhouses, L.L.C., et.al. v. Global Horticultural, Inc. Case No. CV-2005-323 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.). Decision supplied.

I granted defendants' motions for summary judgment on all of plaintiffs' tort claims based upon application of the Arizona economic loss rule to the facts of the case as found by the court. The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in Miidas Greenhouses v. Global Horticultural, 226 Ariz. 142, 244 P.3d 579 (App. 2010) vacated the entry of summary judgment and remanded the case back to this court finding that the plaintiffs' tort claims were not precluded under the economic loss rule.

Holm v. Lincoln & Continental Owners Club, Case No. CV-04-033 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.). Decision and Court of Appeals opinions supplied.

In this civil case involving claims for defamation and invasion of privacy, I granted in part defendants' motion for summary judgment by dismissing claims against two of the defendants. The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in an unpublished Memorandum Decision reversed this court's ruling, finding that the two defendants at issue had a duty to use reasonable care to ensure that a published statement was not false and defamatory.

State of Arizona v. Nicholas Anthony Stemper and Susan Mae Stemper, Case No. CR-09-027 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.). Decision and Court of Appeals opinion supplied.

This was a criminal case alleging child abuse. The defendants were the mother and stepfather of the minor victim. Counsel had been appointed for the minor victim. The minor victim's father, not a defendant in the case, petitioned the trial court to substitute new counsel for his minor daughter. This court denied the request for substitution of counsel, finding that due to the professional arrangement between the attorney proposed for substitution and counsel for defendant mother, it was inappropriate to appoint that particular attorney as new counsel for the minor victim. The attorneys shared office space, including reception areas, filing rooms and other facilities. In addition, the attorneys often covered cases for each other and served as co-counsel in cases. The Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in a Memorandum Decision, found that this court had abused its discretion and directed this court to grant the request for substitution of counsel for the minor victim.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

As a state court trial judge, my decisions are not published. I rule from the bench at the conclusion of a hearing or trial in approximately 60 to 70 percent of the cases that I preside over and estimate the number of decisions made from the bench to be 600 to 700. In those cases, the findings and orders of the court are reflected in a minute entry prepared and signed by a court clerk and found in the court file maintained by the clerk of the court. In the 30 to 40 percent of the other cases where I do not rule from the bench, the matter is taken under advisement and a written order, ruling, or under advisement ruling is issued and signed by the court. I estimate the number of those cases to be 400 to 500 cases. In those cases, the ruling is filed in the court file maintained by the clerk of the court. Under the current case management system, all documents are scanned and available for viewing electronically by courts and court staff. Electronic access to court files by attorneys, parties, the media and the public is still being developed.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

State of Arizona v. Villa, Case No. CR-11-044 (Santa Cruz Cty. Super. Ct.); 2012. Decision supplied in response to 13(c).

State of Arizona v. Garcia, Case No. CR-13-063 (Santa Cruz Cty. Superior Ct.); 2013. Decision supplied in response to 13(d).

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

I recuse myself from all cases where my former law partners are representing one or more of the parties in the case. Although I have not been their partner for almost twelve years, I socialize with them on a regular basis and have a financial interest with them in a parcel of real property. I also recuse myself from all cases where I formerly represented one of the parties in the case. In addition, I recuse myself from cases where one or more of the parties is a friend or acquaintance. In addition because Santa Cruz County is a small county, both in size and population, I recuse myself in any cases where I may have inadvertently heard about the case or someone I may have had contact with has expressed an opinion about one of the parties to the case.

Under the Arizona Rules of Civil Procedure, the Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure, and the Arizona Rules of Family Law Procedure each party to a case has the right to one peremptory challenge to a judge assigned to a case without showing cause. Based upon the automated case management system in our court, I estimate that a peremptory challenge to my presiding over a case assigned to me to be approximately 10 to 15 cases over the last 12 years, predominately in the area of family law. A list of cases where a party has exercised his or her right to a peremptory challenge to a judge is not maintained by the court.

In State of Arizona v. Villa, Santa Cruz County Superior Court case number CR-11-044, discussed in response to 13(c) above, defense counsel did not file a motion for recusal or exercise a peremptory challenge, but asked the court to consider recusing itself from the case due to the court's knowledge of the victim's father in a murder case. I reviewed the applicable canons under the Arizona Code of Judicial Conduct and found that recusal was not required.

In Guzman-Velez v. Pesqueira-Tapia, Santa Cruz County Superior Court case number DO-12-158, a family law case, the attorney for respondent asked that all judges in Santa Cruz County be disqualified from hearing the case based upon the fact that the attorney for petitioner was formerly a Superior Court judge in the county. The former judge had retired as a judge prior to my becoming a judge in 2001. The case was referred to the Presiding Judge in an adjoining county and in a written ruling by said judge, respondent's motion was denied.

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I was appointed as Town Attorney for the Town of Patagonia in 1975 and served until approximately 1992. The position was part-time. I was appointed by Mayor V.J. Smith and confirmed by the Town Council of the Town of Patagonia.

I was appointed as Deputy City Attorney for the City of Nogales in 1975 and served until approximately 1983. The position was part-time. I was appointed by Mayor Arthur Doan and confirmed by the Nogales City Council.

I was appointed as a Deputy County Attorney for Santa Cruz County in 1979 and served for only a few months. The position was part-time. I was appointed by the Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors.

I have never been an unsuccessful candidate for elected or appointed office.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

I have served as the Santa Cruz County Chairman for three candidates: Eddie Basha for Governor (1994); Ed Pastor for Congress (1992 and 1994); and Morris K. Udall for Congress (1980 and 1982). In this capacity, I organized and coordinated the candidates' visits and events in Santa Cruz County, including fund raising events.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

None.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I practiced law from October 1975 to November 2001. Initially my practice focused on criminal defense, family law, and probate with frequent trial work. Over time, my practice evolved into a civil practice with a focus on representing local businesses and agricultural entities in both the United States and Mexico, although I continued to do frequent trial work in family law matters. The law firms I was associated with represented numerous Mexican growing entities that grew perishable commodities in Mexico and shipped their products to the United States for distribution and sales in Nogales, Arizona and McAllen, Texas. We also represented numerous U.S. based distributors of the produce who received and marketed the produce throughout the United States and Canada. I continued to represent clients in family law and probate cases with some limited estate planning.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

I initially served as a court-appointed attorney for indigent criminal defendants, while at the same time developing a base of business clients who were located along the U.S.-Mexico border. Eventually my criminal practice ceased and I maintained a civil practice representing businesses located along the border who sold goods into Mexico or to Mexican customers who came across the border as well as U.S. based distributors of Mexican produce. Representative clients would be the Fresh Produce Association of the Americas, a local trade association representing over 100 produce distributors and affiliates, many U.S. and Mexican customhouse brokers who facilitate the flow of goods and commerce across the border, 30 to 40 produce distributors based in Santa Cruz County, and 20 to 30 local businesses located along the border focusing on retail sales. As part of the representation of these business entities, I would provide legal services in the areas of family law, probate law, and estate planning.

Early in my legal career, over 80% of my practice involved trial work. As my practice evolved, I appeared in court less frequently. Prior to becoming a judge in 2001, I estimate that my practice was 25% trial work and 75% non-trial legal services. The non-trial legal services included such services as drafting contracts and agreements, business planning documents, wills, trusts and other testamentary documents.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	10%
2. state courts of record:	80%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	10%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	90%
2. criminal proceedings:	10%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I estimate that I tried 250 to 300 cases that resulted in a judgment, decree, or final decision. In most cases I was sole counsel, although in larger more complex cases, I provided legal services in conjunction with one or more of my law partners or associates.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:

1. jury:	10%
2. non-jury:	90%

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:
- a. the date of representation;
 - b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
 - c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.
1. Triple E Produce Corp. v. Soto, et al., Case No. 9881; Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable J. Richard Hannah (deceased); 1980-1992.

I served as co-counsel for the plaintiff in the case. The case involved a civil contract dispute between a United States produce distributor based in Florida with numerous offices throughout the United States, including Nogales, Arizona and two Mexican farmers in Sinaloa, Mexico. A second produce distributor in Nogales, Arizona was also named as a defendant because it received produce from the Mexican farmers in violation of the exclusive distribution agreement entered into between the plaintiff and the two growers. The legal issues involved jurisdiction, choice of law, choice of forum, contract law as well as other issues. Although the case was based in the Superior Court in Santa Cruz County, discovery was conducted in Arizona, California, and Mexico. Ultimately, plaintiff obtained a judgment against the defendant growers for over two million dollars. The plaintiff proceeded against the second distributor as defendant garnishee for damages as a result of improper disbursements of money to the Mexican growers in violation of Writs of Garnishment that has been served upon the second distributor. Judgment was obtained against the second distributor. The second distributor appealed the trial court's entry of judgment and the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division Two, in Triple E Produce Corp. v. Valencia dba Engebretson-Grupe, Co., 170 Ariz. 375, 824 P.2d 771 (1991) affirmed the trial court's decision. My co-counsel and I both actively participated in the pre-trial discovery and other proceedings, the two trials conducted in the case, and the appeal.

2. Babnew v. Linneman and Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors; Case No. 12486; Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable Roberto C. Montiel; 1986 – 1987).

I served as lead counsel for plaintiff in an election contest for the position of Chief of the Rio Rico Fire District. The complaint challenged the accuracy of the tally of votes by the election board. Numerous election law issues were litigated including the propriety of including or excluding certain votes that were cast or attempted to be cast in the election contest as well as the legal effect of a recount that was conducted on the initial election results. The trial court ultimately adjusted the vote totals and found for the defendants. On appeal, the appellate court affirmed the decision of the trial court, but on other grounds, in Babnew v. Linneman, 154 Ariz. 90, 740 P.2d 511 (1987).

3. Big Tower Produce v. Fontes, et.al., Case No. 13453, Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable Jose L. Lerma; early 1990s – mid 1990s.

I served as lead counsel for plaintiff in a civil contract case between a United States produce distributor and a Mexican farmer. The Mexican farmer claimed that the distributor had failed to handle and market his produce properly and had violated his obligations to the grower under the Federal Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act (“PACA”), claiming millions of dollars in damages. The distributor denied the claim and alleged that at the conclusion of the applicable growing season, the grower owed a small balance to the distributor. Significant legal issues litigated included jurisdiction, choice of law, trade practices in the industry, PACA regulations promulgated by the United States Department of Agriculture, and a series of contract law issues. After a lengthy bench trial, the trial court found in favor of our client and awarded damages.

4. Hockersmith v. City of Patagonia, Case No. 9179; Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable Roberto C. Montiel; 1978-1980.

I served as counsel for the Town of Patagonia, a municipal corporation. A former Deputy Town Marshall brought a civil action against the town alleging that he was due overtime wages for his "on call" time based upon a state statute that mandates overtime compensation under certain circumstances. The case had significant statewide implications for other law enforcement agencies in smaller jurisdictions. Because the plaintiff could not establish how many hours he actually worked in any particular week as opposed to merely being on call, the trial court found that under the statute he was not entitled to overtime compensation. The decision by the trial court was affirmed in Hockersmith v. City of Patagonia, 123 Ariz. 559, 601 P.2d 322 (1979).

Counsel for Plaintiff: L. B. Solsberry (deceased)

5. Ritclo Produce, Inc. v. Livacich Produce, an administrative hearing before the United States Department of Agriculture. Because this case was litigated from approximately 1982 to 1984 all client files have been destroyed and I do not have the case number or name of the hearing officer who presided over the hearing.

I served as sole counsel for the plaintiff in an administrative proceeding brought under the Federal Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act ("PACA") seeking to collect an amount due the plaintiff for a series of shipments of produce from a distributor in Nogales, Arizona to a purchaser of the produce in California. The defendant in the action had not directly purchased the produce but had agreed to guarantee the obligation of the purchaser by having the plaintiff directly invoice defendant for said produce.

Significant legal issues litigated in the action included the statute of frauds, contract and guaranty law, industry practices, and the applicability of PACA rules and regulations to the case. The hearing officer found in favor of the plaintiff in the case.

6. Cathey v. Cathey, Case No. D82826; Pima County Superior Court; Honorable Bernardo Velasco; 1989 – 1991.

I served as counsel for the defendant in this case, a dissolution of marriage proceeding involving significant assets and a variety of legal issues, including spousal maintenance, equitable division of community assets and debts, separate property as opposed to community property issues, and business valuation issues. Because of the nature of the produce business, including great risk factors and sometimes extreme variation in annual income amounts, numerous expert witnesses were retained. During the first day of trial, the parties were able to arrive at a settlement of the matter.

7. Clifton v. DeCillis, Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors and Damon, Case No. CV-96-129; Honorable Gilbert Veliz.

I served as lead counsel for Damon, a long time member of the Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors in an election contest case in which the plaintiff sought to enjoin the clerk of the board from allowing the names of Damon and another candidate to appear on the ballot in a contested election. The parties litigated numerous issues including the propriety of signatures on the nominating petitions, the propriety of the actions by circulators of the petitions, and the legal sufficiency of the nominating petitions. After a hearing over a number of days, the court ruled in our client's favor, and he was successfully re-elected and served many years thereafter.

8. Terpening v. Triad Transportation and Scarborough, Case No. CV-91-V-427; Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable Jose L. Lerma.

I served as co-counsel for the defendant in this case, which involved significant sums of money and a series of complex financing arrangements for commercial trucks and trailers purchased by the defendants from the plaintiff. Numerous contract issues were litigated, including the applicability of Arizona's version of the Uniform Commercial Code. After a lengthy civil bench trial, the plaintiff was successful in recovering most, but not all of the amounts being sought for damages.

9. Ramos Cabeiro v. Valencia, Case No. CV-93-184; Santa Cruz County Superior Court; Honorable Jose L. Lerma.

I represented the defendant in a civil jury trial involving a contract dispute between a resident of southern Mexico and a resident of Arizona. Issues litigated included jurisdiction, choice of law, contract law, and a number of equitable defenses to the plaintiff's claims. Although the jury rendered a verdict in favor of plaintiff, the court ultimately granted a defense motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

Counsel for Plaintiff: Jesus R. Romo Vejar

10. Ace Produce v. Loden Produce and Loden, an administrative hearing before the United States Department of Agriculture under the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act. These were two cases consolidated for hearing purposes that were litigated in approximately 1977. I do not have the case numbers or the name of the hearing officer who presided over the cases.

I served as counsel for the plaintiff, a produce distributing company located in Nogales, Arizona that filed two cases against defendant brothers seeking to recover damages for a series of loads of produce sold to the defendants but shipped to another receiver. The applicability of the Uniform Commercial Code to the transactions was litigated as well as who bore the risk of loss when shipments did not arrive at destination on a timely basis due to delays by the railroad company in delivery of the produce in question to its destination. Ultimately, the hearing officer found in favor of the plaintiff against Morris Loden, but not against Lou Loden Produce.

Counsel for Defendants: E. Leigh Larson (deceased)

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

While a practicing attorney, I represented the Fresh Produce Association of the Americas, a local trade association of U.S.-based produce distributors and affiliated businesses. As counsel for the Association, our firm dealt with significant legal issues, both domestic and international, seeking to promote the free trade of produce across the U.S.-Mexico border. In addition, we represented the Association in dealing with federal, state, and local governmental regulatory agencies, both in the United States and in Mexico, in representing the interests of U.S. produce distributors and Mexican farming entities that shipped their produce to these distributors. I was not required to register as a lobbyist.

We also practiced law in both federal and state courts, as well as before the United States Department of Agriculture regulatory offices, in representing produce clients seeking to collect on amounts owed to them for produce sold by produce client, in defending produce clients against claims for defective produce, and related issues.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

Between approximately 1977 and 1980, I taught law related classes in the evenings at the Nogales branch of Pima Community College, which is based in Tucson, Arizona. I taught substantive criminal law, criminal procedure, immigration law, and business law. No syllabuses for the courses are available.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I do not anticipate any potential conflicts of interest if I am confirmed as a United States District Court Judge. If any family member, friend, business associate, or former client were to have a case that might come before me, I would make full disclosure and immediately recuse myself from any case or possible case that might be assigned to me.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If confirmed, I would refer to the appropriate legal authorities, including 28 U.S.C. §144 and 455a, as well as the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, and make appropriate disclosures to the parties and, if appropriate, recuse myself from presiding over a case.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

During the twenty-six years that I practiced law, I represented a number of civic organizations in the community as their attorney. My policy, and that of the law firms that I was a member of or partner in, was never to charge the client a fee for any legal services performed on their behalf. This would include formation of legal entities for non-profit groups, assuring that all of the legal reporting requirements were complied with, referring them to other professionals such as accountants and financial advisors who we would recruit and who would also not charge for their services, assisting them in resolving personnel or other legal matters, and in general looking out for their legal interests.

A representative organization would be the Santa Cruz Training Programs, Inc. This organization provides job training, educational opportunities, health services, and housing assistance to both adults and children who are developmentally disabled. Another representative organization would be the Nogales Boys & Girls Club, which provides educational and recreational opportunities for hundreds of young people in our community.

In addition, because there is no legal aid office or other legal assistance organization in the community, my law office and its members would regularly provide pro bono legal assistance to persons unable to pay for those services, including drafting wills, probating estates, seeking to obtain child support orders or collect on previously issued child support orders, establishing guardianships and conservatorships, and initiating divorce proceedings or enforcing provisions of an existing divorce decree. From time to time, at the request of local judges, we would also provide legal services without charge in especially difficult cases where the welfare of a child, elderly adult, or other person was at risk.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In June 2013, a Senate Judiciary Committee staff person for Senator Jeff Flake called me to discuss a vacant position in the United State District Court for Arizona in Tucson. Since late September 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On December 4, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On December 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

Senator Grassley
Questions for the Record

John Tuchi,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. As Criminal Chief in the U.S. Attorney's Office, you worked frequently with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF). Please describe your interactions with ATF Special Agent in Charge William Newell regarding the Hernandez case in 2007, in which ATF allegedly planned to have the Government of Mexico intercept firearms traffickers after ATF observed them cross the border with guns.

2. According to one memo from Mr. Newell:

As for the involvement of the USAO, we have discussed the case with them since early on and most recently have had several discussions with John Tuchi, the Criminal Chief. As a matter of fact during a recent conversation with John Tuchi he agreed that if we could provide enough identifying information of [sic] the individuals receiving the firearms in Mexico that he would be willing to explore charging these individuals with conspiracy. It is no secret that we have had prosecution issues with the USAO in Arizona lately, however we are actively pursuing Federal prosecution of this case with them

Does this accurately summarize your interactions with Mr. Newell? Why or why not?

3. In February 2010, ATF Counsel in Phoenix, Thomas Karmgard, sent a memo to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona arguing that the office was imposing unnecessary requirements on gun trafficking cases by requiring ATF to have possession of a straw purchased firearm before permitting prosecution. Are you familiar with Mr. Karmgard's memo? Did you read it? If so, what was your response to the memo? Do you agree with Mr. Karmgard's analysis? Please explain why or why not.
4. The U.S. Attorney's Office position had apparently arisen in part due to a reading of United States v. Lopez-Alvarez, 970 F.2d 583 (9th Cir. 1992). How do you view this case as applying to this issue?
5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?
6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Questions for the Record

Douglas Rayes,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. Your opinion in Volpe v. Yavapai was overruled. The appellate court held that there was, in fact, “substantial evidence in the record” of an offense whereas you found there was not sufficient evidence. You will not be bound by this court if confirmed as a federal judge. Do you agree with the appellate court’s decision?
2. Your opinion in State v. Levens was overruled. The appellate court reversed held that the defendant’s response to questions by police were not compelled whereas you ruled that the defendant’s statements violated Miranda and should be excluded. You will not be bound by this court if confirmed as a federal judge. Do you agree with the appellate court’s decision?
3. While serving as a judge, you wrote an article detailing the steps you and others took to reduce the capital case backlog in the Superior Court. Part of that process entailed educating victims’ families on death penalty cases, including the time it took to litigate the case and execute the sentence, the possible appeals, and “an explanation of the high rate of reversals of the sentence as compared to almost no reversals from guilty pleas with a life sentence.” In that article, you state: “Victims’ families seeking justice and closure would often accept the information about the capital cases process more readily from a judge than from the attorneys litigating the case.” “Although that was not the goal of the court, sometimes after such meetings, the victims advised the state that they did not object to a plea agreement where the death penalty was waived.”
 - a. Why do you think the families of victims accepted this information more readily from the court than the attorneys litigating the case?
 - b. Given the court’s role as the final arbiter in the case, do you have any concerns that the court’s actions in advising victims’ families about the negative aspects of seeking the death penalty had an undue influence on their decision or pressured them to accept a plea agreement?
4. You listed the case of State v. Al-Tarrah as one of your most significant, but did not provide a written opinion. According to press reports, the case involved a foreign college student from Kuwaiti (Al-Tarrah) who was charged with hit-and-run and DUI after her vehicle struck and killed a man riding a motorized skateboard. The student’s blood alcohol was nearly twice the legal limit. At Al-Tarrah’s arraignment, the Judge Talamante directed her to surrender her passport to her attorney, David Cantor. He told Cantor, “I am going to expect that you take possession of that passport and that that passport remain in your possession during the pendency of these hearings.” The court order directed Cantor to “submit an affidavit to the court within 24-hours affirming that passport has been surrendered.” Cantor did not take possession of the passport and Al-Tarrah fled the country.

As a result, Judge Richard Gama held Cantor in contempt of court for failure to collect the passport and failure to file the affidavit with the court. You heard the case involving the contempt charges and found Cantor to be not guilty. According to press reports, you concluded Cantor could have interpreted Judge Talamante’s order to mean he should file an affidavit within 24-hours of taking possession of the passport whenever he received it. The author of the article called this a strained interpretation of the judges’ order. The author stated: “If one is to assume that ‘I am going to expect you to take ... that passport’ means accepting it from young Al-Tarrah whenever she happened to fishtail into Cantor’s parking lot, then you also have to wonder why the judge ordered Cantor to take the passport at all.”

Please explain why you found Cantor not guilty of contempt of court and provide any supporting information if possible.

5. Do you believe judges should look to the original meaning of the words and phrases in the Constitution when applying it to current cases? If so, how would you determine the original meaning?
6. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?
7. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?
8. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?
9. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?
10. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?
11. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?
12. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Steven Paul Logan
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

- 1. As a judge, what will your approach to legislative history be? When will you consult it and which types of legislative history will you consider?

Response: Adherence to precedent is what stabilizes our legal system. I would first start with the text of the statute. If the text is ambiguous, I would look to United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent to interpret the meaning of the text. If ambiguity remains, I would examine persuasive authority from other federal circuits that have addressed the issue and research statutory and legislative history. In this and all instances, if confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to follow the precedent of the United States Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

- 2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe integrity is the most important attribute of a judge. A judge with integrity makes decisions in a fair and impartial manner with full transparency to ensure the judicial process is carried out with faithful application of the law. I believe my experience as a United States Military Judge, United States Immigration Judge and United States Magistrate Judge demonstrates that I possess this attribute. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to conduct all court proceedings with utmost integrity.

- 3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must be patient and always conduct court proceedings in a dignified manner. It is very important to be respectful, patient and humble with all litigants, witnesses, and court staff. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to meet the standards I have set during my judicial career.

- 4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: The rule of law in the United States is dependent upon judges showing respect and following United States Supreme Court and Circuit Court precedent. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to follow the precedent set by the United States Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: I would review the plain language of the applicable statute and consider arguments raised by the parties. If the plain meaning of the statute is unclear, I would look to United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals cases for analogous authority. I would examine the statutory history to resolve ambiguity by applying the established canons of statutory construction. Further, I would look for persuasive guidance in the decisions of other federal circuits.

6. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: Throughout my judicial career, I have followed controlling precedent. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to apply the precedent of the United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, regardless of any personal views I may have.

7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A court should act only when presented by a justiciable case or controversy or if the statute violated a provision of the United States Constitution. Courts should not declare a statute unconstitutional unless it exceeds the authority of Congress.

8. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community", in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: A United States District Judge should only look to binding precedent when interpreting the Constitution. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to apply the precedent of the United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

9. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: The integrity of the United States legal system depends on lower court decisions supported by higher court precedent. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would continue to follow the precedent established by the United States Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

- 10. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: During my 8 years as a United States Military Judge, United States Immigration Judge and United States Magistrate Judge, I have demonstrated my commitment to treat each person who appears before me fairly and with respect. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to treat all litigants fairly and respectfully, and issue decisions grounded in precedent established by the United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

- 11. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: As a United States Magistrate Judge, I am familiar with the caseloads for the District Judges in the District of Arizona. I have extensive experience managing a heavy docket. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would set strict deadlines for discovery and the filing of pretrial motions. I would make myself available for any disputes that might arise during the discovery phase. I would set firm dates for motion hearings and trials. I would ensure that the Speedy Trial Act is properly adhered to. I would also take advantage of all the current tools available in the District of Arizona to manage case progress. I would refer appropriate matters to our United States Magistrate Judges. I would also consult with District Judges to adopt new case management practices to address a more complex caseload maintained by United States District Judges in the District of Arizona.

- 12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: I believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I would utilize the case management tools that would be available to me in the District of Arizona as well as implement the tools I described in my response to Question 11.

- 13. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: I review the case record and conduct the necessary research that is required to apply the controlling law to the facts at issue in the case. I consult the applicable federal statutes, as well as United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals binding precedent. If confirmed, I will continue to ensure that all of my decisions are well thought out and consistent with binding precedent.

- 14. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

15. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I read each question carefully and I prepared my responses to the questions. After I completed all of my responses, I forwarded my responses to the Department of Justice so that my responses would be submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

16. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Senator Ted Cruz
Questions for the Record

Steven Paul Logan
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: While applying binding precedent, a judge must always keep an open mind and carefully apply the law to the facts of the case. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to meet the standards I have set during my judicial career by continuing to apply binding precedent of the United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. I have not compared or contrasted the judicial philosophy of any Supreme Court Justice to identify if I have a judicial philosophy analogous to a current or past Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: In several cases, such as District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the United States Supreme Court employed originalism to interpret the United States Constitution. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to follow all applicable United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If I am confirmed as a United States District Judge and a decision is controlling precedent, I would not overrule that precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: I will continue to follow all United States Supreme Court precedent regardless of my personal views, including the binding precedent in Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Authority, 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that Congress has the authority to regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce, the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, and activities that substantially affect interstate commerce. United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-559 (1995); United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-609 (2000). If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to follow all binding United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The United States Supreme Court in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 635-38 (1952), held that the President can take executive action or issue executive orders if the United States Constitution or the United States Congress grants the authority to do so. In a judicable case or controversy, a federal judge can enforce that limitation if the President exceeds such authority.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that only fundamental rights and liberties “which are ‘deeply rooted in the Nation’s history and tradition’ and ‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty’” qualify for protection under the Due Process Clause. Chavez v. Martinez, 538 U.S. 760, 775 (2003) (quoting Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-721 (1997)). If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to follow binding United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: Heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause is appropriate when a classification burdens a fundamental right or when it is based on categories such as race, national origin or gender. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, Inc., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985); Massachusetts Bd. of Retirement v. Murgia, 427 U.S. 307, 312 (1976). If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to follow binding United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not possess any expectations regarding any form of preferences for public higher education. If confirmed as a United States District Judge, I will continue to follow binding United States Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent.

Senator Grassley
Questions for the Record

John Tuchi,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. As Criminal Chief in the U.S. Attorney's Office, you worked frequently with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF). Please describe your interactions with ATF Special Agent in Charge William Newell regarding the Hernandez case in 2007, in which ATF allegedly planned to have the Government of Mexico intercept firearms traffickers after ATF observed them cross the border with guns.

Response: I had no interactions with ATF SAC Newell or any other ATF personnel regarding the Hernandez matter. The Tucson Office of the United States Attorney, which has a separate Criminal Division supervisory structure with its own Criminal Chief, supported the investigation and prosecuted the matter. In 2007 I was Criminal Chief of the Phoenix Office, whose AUSAs were not involved in the Hernandez matter, so I was unaware of the case at the time.

2. According to one memo from Mr. Newell:

As for the involvement of the USAO, we have discussed the case with them since early on and most recently have had several discussions with John Tuchi, the Criminal Chief. As a matter of fact during a recent conversation with John Tuchi he agreed that if we could provide enough identifying information of [sic] the individuals receiving the firearms in Mexico that he would be willing to explore charging these individuals with conspiracy. It is no secret that we have had prosecution issues with the USAO in Arizona lately, however we are actively pursuing Federal prosecution of this case with them

Does this accurately summarize your interactions with Mr. Newell? Why or why not?

Response: No. I have never seen the memorandum referenced in this question so I am unable to put SAC Newell's statement in context to answer completely, but I can share my recollection of the one conversation I recall having with SAC Newell generally on this topic. I recall SAC Newell asking me, in or around mid-2009, for general information about what the Phoenix Office's evidentiary requirements were for charging recipients of trafficked firearms with conspiracy where the recipients were outside the United States. I recall outlining the kinds of evidence our prosecutors generally would require to charge a defendant so situated. SAC Newell never raised a specific case or investigation with me in our discussion, so I am unsure what case he might be referring to in the quoted excerpt above. To the extent the memorandum purports to tie my response to any specific case or any specific facts, it does not accurately summarize the interaction. I also do not recall more than one such conversation with SAC Newell about this issue. I do not know whether SAC Newell had conversations with the Tucson Criminal Division on the same topic.

3. In February 2010, ATF Counsel in Phoenix, Thomas Karmgard, sent a memo to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Arizona arguing that the office was imposing unnecessary requirements on gun trafficking cases by requiring ATF to have possession of a straw purchased firearm before permitting prosecution. Are you familiar with Mr. Karmgard's memo? Did you read it? If so, what was your response to the memo? Do you agree with Mr. Karmgard's analysis? Please explain why or why not.

Response: I am not familiar with Mr. Karmgard's memorandum and have not read it. At the time it was issued, I was outside the supervisory chain of the Criminal Division, working as the office's Tribal Liaison, and thus the memo would not have been shared with me. I therefore do not have a response to the memorandum or an opinion about its analysis.

4. The U.S. Attorney's Office position had apparently arisen in part due to a reading of United States v. Lopez-Alvarez, 970 F.2d 583 (9th Cir. 1992). How do you view this case as applying to this issue?

Response: The relevant portion of Lopez-Alvarez with respect to firearms trafficking cases is its holding on the corpus delecti rule, setting forth how much evidence independent of a defendant's admission is necessary to corroborate that admission. Lopez-Alvarez held that the test for what is sufficient corroboration of an admission is two-pronged: the government must introduce 1) sufficient evidence to establish that the core of the offense occurred; and 2) independent evidence tending to establish the trustworthiness of the statement, unless the confession is "by virtue of special circumstances, inherently reliable." Id. at 592. The test set forth by the Ninth Circuit in Lopez-Alvarez does not stand as a bar to bringing firearms trafficking cases involving defendant admissions. Whether the government will be able to meet the test in a given case will be determined by the specifics of the admission in that case and the other evidence gathered that relates to it. This is the current approach taken by the United States Attorney's Office in Arizona in assessing charges and because it remains binding Ninth Circuit precedent, if I am confirmed, it also would be my approach to evaluating admissions in criminal matters before me.

5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe the most important attribute of a judge is a mindfulness that every matter before them is the most important matter they have. The parties in every matter depend on that judge to be fastidiously prepared, completely focused, possessed of patience, to exhibit fairness and impartiality, and to adhere to precedent and the rule of law. I am confident that I possess this mindfulness, and that if confirmed, I would demonstrate these underlying attributes.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must remember he or she is there to serve and to get the job done right. From that realization flows the need for patience, respect and courtesy in dealing with all others, and for diligence and circumspection in addressing every decision. I believe my reputation among all quarters of my colleagues is for each of these qualities.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: As a United States District Judge, if confirmed, it would be my duty to follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent at all times. I am committed to do so because I am convinced that for our legal system to function appropriately and for litigants to maintain faith in it, courts must apply the law with consistency and predictability.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: I would begin by looking to the text of the statutory or constitutional provision at issue, to determine whether that text's plain meaning would resolve the issue. If not, I would next look at whether the Supreme Court or the Ninth Circuit had decided an analogous issue. Finally, if necessary, I would also look to persuasive authority from other circuit courts.

9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply the precedent.

10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Congressional enactments are presumed Constitutional, and a court should only declare otherwise if, in a justiciable case or controversy, the enactment directly violates a provision of the Constitution and the enactment further cannot be read in any way that would be Constitutional.

11. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No, unless specifically instructed to do so by binding precedent from a higher court.

12. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I understand that the justice system depends on all participants to fulfill their duty in their respective roles without regard to any underlying motivation. For the past 16 years as a prosecutor I have met my duty to reach charging and case disposition decisions dispassionately, focusing on the applicable law and my ethical obligations as an attorney. Political ideology has had no place in performing those duties. Similarly, if confirmed to the district court, my duty would be to follow precedent and to ground decisions in the text of the law, and I would continue to fulfill this duty without regard for any ideology.

13. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: In a prior answer I identified fairness as a core attribute of a judge because without it, the judicial process would lack any integrity or meaning. If confirmed to the district court, I would strive to be fair and objective to every litigant, putting aside any personal views in favor of applying facts to law.

14. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If I am confirmed to the district court, active case management on both criminal and civil dockets will be necessary immediately in light of Arizona’s very high caseload. Setting prompt trial dates, issuing standard pretrial scheduling orders, actively and timely addressing discovery issues, and promptly considering and ruling on dispositive motions will move matters assigned to me. I also would plan to adjust my approach to case management based on learning from the many successful district judges already sitting in Arizona and elsewhere.

15. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes. Because the judge is ultimately responsible for the management of his or her calendar, and therefore the delivery of justice to those many litigants who are waiting on that calendar, the judge must have a role in controlling both pace and conduct of litigation. In consultation with counsel, the judge should set reasonable limits on preparation and trial time that move matters forward while observing every litigant’s applicable rights to due process. If confirmed, I would focus on setting prompt and firm trial dates with continuances only for good cause shown. I also would rely on regular status conferences to keep preparation by counsel on track and to timely identify those cases needing additional attention.

- 16. You have spent your entire legal career as an advocate for your clients. As a judge, you will have a very different role. Please describe how you will reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you will look for guidance. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?

Response: As a starting point, I would take care to decide only questions properly before the court that actually require decision for resolution of the matter. I would approach each question from a neutral perspective, seeking to resolve it consistent with applicable precedent and in a way that is faithful to the text of the law at issue. I would apply that law to the facts as presented by the parties. I believe the most difficult part of the transition if I am confirmed would be managing the mix of larger or more complex matters, which present issues requiring bigger blocks of time to resolve, and a high volume of smaller or more straightforward matters that nonetheless require hearing time and decisions on motion practice. Interspersing these types of matters in a way that moves them all efficiently toward resolution will be a balancing and learning experience.

- 17. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: “To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator’s judicial selection committees”.
- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No, I have had no such contact.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No, I am unaware of any such endorsements or promises.

- 18. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: On the afternoon of February 4, I received these questions from the Department of Justice's Office of Legal Policy. I reviewed on-line the law and cases referenced in these questions and prepared my answers. I reviewed those answers with a member of the Office of Legal Policy and on February 10, I finalized them for submission.

19. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes, they do.

Response of John J. Tuchi
Nominee to be United States District Judge for the District of Arizona to the Written Questions for the Record of Senator Ted Cruz

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice’s judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: My judicial philosophy is one of restraint, to decide only those questions necessary for resolution of the matter and to do so through adherence to applicable precedent, remaining faithful to the text of the law to be applied. I would treat all participants in the process with respect, strive to be patient and always to listen, being mindful that no one has a monopoly on the right answers. I do not know enough about the judicial philosophies of the many justices who served on the Warren, Burger and Rehnquist Courts to identify which mine most closely follows.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the original public meaning of the Constitution at the founding should be used to interpret the Constitution. See, e.g., District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 601 (2008). If confirmed I would follow Heller and other applicable precedents.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: Under no circumstances would I overrule that precedent. The role of a United States District Judge is to follow all applicable precedent as handed down by the Supreme Court and the circuit court of which their district is a constituent.

Explain whether you agree that “State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power.” Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: In Garcia, the Supreme Court upheld Congress’s extension of the Fair Labor Standards Act’s protections to state employees under its Commerce Clause powers, rather than impose a “judicially created limitation” on its power. See Garcia, 469 U.S. at 551-56. If confirmed to the district court, I would be bound to follow the precedent of Garcia wherever it applied to the issues before me, and I would do so.

Do you believe that Congress’ Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that Congress may regulate under the Commerce Clause in three ways: it may 1) “regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce”; 2) “regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce”; and 3) “regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce.” United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558 (1995); see also United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000). If confirmed to the district court, I would apply Morrison, Lopez and any other controlling precedent to questions involving Congress’s power to regulate non-economic activity through the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: In Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952), the Supreme Court held that the courts have the authority in a justiciable case or controversy to invalidate presidential actions that 1) violate the Constitution or a statute properly enacted by Congress; or 2) exceed the authority granted to the President by the Constitution or by statute.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: In Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702 (1997), the Supreme Court found fundamental rights to be those “which are objectively, deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” Id. at 720-21 (internal citations omitted). If confirmed to the district court, I would apply Glucksberg and all other controlling precedent in analyzing substantive due process issues.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: Courts will apply heightened scrutiny under an Equal Protection Clause analysis to any classification created by law that abridges a suspect class or a fundamental right. The Supreme Court has found that race, alienage and gender, among others, are classifications meriting some level of heightened scrutiny. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432 (1985).

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not have an expectation either way. If confirmed and if facing a question involving race-conscious mechanisms in public higher education, I would identify and apply all controlling precedent.

Senator Grassley
Questions for the Record

Diane J. Humetewa
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. If confirmed, how will you use the Sentencing Guidelines in your decision making?

Response: The U.S. Sentencing Guidelines provide structure and uniformity in the nation's federal sentencing scheme. If confirmed, I intend to apply the Sentencing Guidelines to determine the applicable sentencing range to the individual to be sentenced along with the sentencing factors in 18 U.S.C. 3553(a) to determine an appropriate sentence within the guideline range.

a. Do you intend to utilize the Report of the Native American Advisory Group for the U.S. Sentencing Commission, to which you contributed?

Response: No. The 2003 Report of the Native American Advisory Group does not have the force of law and therefore it would be inappropriate to use it in sentencing. Rather, it is a report of findings and recommendations to the U.S. Sentencing Commission based on the Group's review of limited sentencing data and the operation of the sentencing guidelines at the time.

2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: A judge must adhere to the principle of applying the law, including all relevant precedent, to arrive at a decision. My myriad of legal experiences has enabled me to develop and hone this attribute. As a federal and tribal prosecutor I objectively applied the law to investigations to determine whether or not the facts met the elements of a criminal statute. From my service as a judge in the Hopi Court, I have experience in objectively applying the law to the civil legal issues at bar.

3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: The appropriate temperament of a judge includes demonstrating patience and respect for the litigants and their lawyers, regardless of their skill level, while controlling the pace of litigation. I believe I possess these attributes.

4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: If confirmed, I will faithfully apply the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent without regard to my personal views.

5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If faced with a case of first impression, I will apply the plain language of the statute, rule or regulation. If the language is vague, I would look to the full text of the statute, rule or regulation. If that does not resolve the issue, I would examine Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent interpreting analogous language. If necessary, I would also examine precedent from other Circuits that might be persuasive.

6. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I will never substitute my personal opinion for that of Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent.

7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Congressionally enacted statutes are presumed constitutional and federal district courts should only declare a statute unconstitutional if, in applying precedent, the Congress has exceeded its constitutional authority.

8. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: It is never appropriate for a federal judge to apply foreign law, world or community views when determining the meaning of the U.S. Constitution.

9. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: If confirmed, I will adhere to the principle of applying the law and precedent to all matters that come before me. Throughout the course of my legal career, I have operated within the parameters of the law, whether I was a prosecutor, a civil litigator or appellate court judge, and I have never used the positions I’ve held to espouse political ideology or motivation. My reputation for adhering to the application of law should ensure the Committee that I will continue to adhere to that principle.

- 10. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: My reputation in the Arizona legal community, including the defense bar, is one of fairness, equity and objectivity, even in adversarial proceedings. If confirmed, I will continue to maintain that reputation as a district court judge.

- 11. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I will learn and apply the Arizona district court case management tools that are specifically designed for its high volume of cases. I will apply the Federal Civil and Criminal Rules of Procedure. I will also rely upon the Federal Civil and Criminal Rules of Procedure to conduct meet and confer conferences early in the case and rule on dispositive motions as efficiently as possible to allow the parties to evaluate the case for settlement or trial. I will make myself available to the parties to settle discovery disputes and work with them to narrow the issues.

- 12. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: District court judges play an integral role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation, especially in districts like Arizona where the civil and criminal caseload is amongst the highest in the nation. In addition to using the methods described in the previous answer, I will also use the magistrate judges where necessary to move cases along.

- 13. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

As an appellate court judge, I examined the briefs, the record of the lower court proceedings, and if necessary, narrowed the issues on appeal. I then researched and applied the applicable law and precedent, or in the absence of controlling law or precedent, I looked to state and federal law and analogous precedent to arrive at a decision. I endeavored to be clear in my oral and written opinions.

- 14. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees."

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

- 15. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I reviewed each question, drafted my answers to each question and provided them to the U.S. Department of Justice for review. I authorized the Department of Justice to provide my responses to the Committee on February 10, 2014.

- 16. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: The answers to each of these questions reflect my true and personal views.

Senator Ted Cruz
Questions for the Record

Diane J. Humetewa
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: If confirmed, the judicial philosophy that I hope to embody is one of applying the law and precedent to each matter and by demonstrating respect and patience with the parties and all who appear in my court room. I have not studied the philosophies of individual Justices from the Warren, Burger or Rehnquist Courts so I am unable to comment on whether they have an analogous philosophy.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: Recently the Supreme Court analyzed the original public meaning of the Constitution in several cases, including in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), to determine whether or not a statute was unconstitutional. I will adhere to that precedent.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: As a federal district court judge, it would be inappropriate for me to overrule Supreme Court or Ninth Circuit precedent and I would not do so under any circumstances.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: I will apply the Supreme Court precedent, including the Garcia, case in analyzing questions of federal and state powers. I do not believe it would be appropriate for me to agree or disagree with any binding Supreme Court precedent.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: If confirmed, I will apply the Supreme Court precedent, including United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995), United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000) and Gonzales v. Raich 545 U.S. 1 (2005), which analyze the Congress' Commerce Clause authority.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The Supreme Court's decision in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952), provides precedent for determining the President's authority to issue executive orders or take executive action. The authority must derive from the Constitution or be authorized, expressly or impliedly, by Congress.

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: A right is fundamental for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine if that right is "deeply rooted in the Nation's history and traditions," and "implicit in the concept of ordered liberty" such that "neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed." See Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 721 (1997), citing Snyder v. Massachusetts, 291 U.S. 97, 105 (1934); Palko v. Connecticut, 302 U.S. 319, 325, 326 (1937).

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: Heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause should be applied when a classification burdens a fundamental right or when it involves categories such as race, gender, national origin or alienage. See City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center Inc., 473 U.S. 432 (1985).

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not have any personal expectations regarding this issue. If confirmed, I will apply Grutter, Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S.Ct. 2411 (2013), and other applicable Supreme Court precedent to issues involving racial preference in public higher education.

Senator Grassley
Questions for the Record

Rosemary Marquez,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

- 1. In your hearing, you said that it was important to you that the parties walk away “feeling that they were respected in the courtroom and that their views were respected and that they were heard.” What role should empathy play in a judge’s decision making process?

Response: It would be my goal in every case that the litigants would walk away from the courtroom with the confidence that I listened carefully and gave fair consideration to their arguments. However, a judge should never allow empathy (if defined as sympathy) to engender favor for one party over another. Empathy should not play a role in a judge’s decision making process.

- 2. You have worked in criminal defense. How will you transition from being an advocate for defendants to an impartial judge in criminal matters?

Response: Although the majority of my criminal work has been in the area of defense, I have also worked as a prosecutor. I do understand that the role of a judge is different from the role of an advocate, whether in the defense or prosecution of a case. In addition to my advocacy role, I have also served as a Merits System Commission Hearing Officer. In that capacity, I was a neutral arbiter and made fair and impartial decisions based only on the application of the law to the facts of the case. I found that although the role of a judge is different from the role of an advocate, the respect for the law as written and its impartial application were the same. I believe this experience has given me valuable preparation for the work of being a judge, and if confirmed, I commit that I would approach every case from a neutral position and apply the law to the facts in a fair and impartial manner.

- 3. How will you use the Sentencing Guidelines in your decision making process?

Response: Although the Sentencing Guidelines are now advisory, I believe uniformity in sentencing is critical to our criminal justice system. Therefore, I would use them as the starting point in my sentencing decisions and give them substantial deference.

- 4. What is your understanding of when federal law requires individuals before you to be deported?

Response: The Department of Justice, through the Executive Office of Immigration Review, makes deportation determinations pursuant to 8 U.S.C. §1227.

- 5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is the ability to apply the law fairly and impartially to the facts of each case while exercising judicial restraint in deciding only those issues before the court. I believe I possess this attribute.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: The appropriate temperament of a judge is marked by respect. A judge should treat all who appear in court with dignity and respect. A judge should ensure that all litigants have a full and fair opportunity to be heard. A judge should demonstrate respect for each case by being prepared. A judge should have respect for the impartial application of the law. I believe these are the most important elements of judicial temperament, and that I meet this standard.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: The doctrine of stare decisis is fundamental to American jurisprudence. Court precedents and the legal analysis contained in them give the public notice and provide predictability and consistency. If confirmed, I would follow the precedents of higher courts faithfully and give them full force and effect regardless of whether I agreed or disagreed with those precedents.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If faced with a case of first impression, I would utilize the standard rules of statutory construction, beginning with the examination of the statute's plain language and its application. If the plain language is ambiguous, I would seek guidance from Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent from related contexts in order to reach a decision. Where appropriate, I would consider non-binding, but persuasive decisions, from other United States Courts of Appeals or other United States District Courts.

9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply binding United States Supreme Court or Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent regardless of whether I believe the court erred in its decision.

- 10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Statutes enacted by Congress are presumed constitutional. A court should declare a statute enacted by Congress to be unconstitutional only where the statute violates an express provision of the United States Constitution or where Congress clearly has exceeded its authority to act under the United States Constitution.

- 11. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. I am not aware of any instance in which I would be required to consider foreign law in interpreting the Constitution.

- 12. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: The rule of law depends on judges making decisions based on facts and precedent, not political ideology. I have never allowed any personal views I may hold to interfere with my advocacy on behalf of my clients. My primary strengths as an advocate have been my ability to think objectively about the law and my consistent respect for other parties and their arguments. If confirmed, I would never consider ideology in applying the law to the facts of the case before me.

- 13. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: I have represented clients from different backgrounds with different views and opinions and I have zealously advocated for each of them without regard to my personal beliefs. If confirmed, the principle that the Constitution and the law apply to the facts of each case without bias or prejudice will guide me in every decision I make.

- 14. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, my policy would be to schedule case management conferences, work with counsel to develop efficient case management schedules and to monitor cases throughout the process to ensure the case is not unnecessarily delayed.

- 15. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, judges play an important role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. If confirmed, I will follow the steps I outlined in my response to question 14 and strive to resolve matters fairly, promptly and efficiently.

16. You have spent your entire legal career as an advocate for your clients. As a judge, you will have a very different role. Please describe how you will reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you will look for guidance. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?

Response: If confirmed, I will resolve legal issues by looking to relevant constitutional or statutory provisions and apply relevant Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals precedent. If the case is in an area of law where I do not have familiarity, I will work diligently to read and learn all relevant law. I will also consult with other judges with experience in that area of the law. Although there will be a learning curve in some areas such as bankruptcy and patent infringement cases, I am confident I will be able to make this transition.

17. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

18. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on February 4, 2014. I drafted my responses to the questions and reviewed my responses with Justice Department officials. I authorized the Justice Department to submit my responses on my behalf.

19. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Responses of Rosemary Marquez
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: If confirmed, my judicial philosophy would be to treat all who enter the courthouse with courtesy and respect and to apply the law to the facts of each case fairly and impartially. I would respect precedent, and limit rulings to resolve only those issues properly before me. I have not studied in significant depth the Justices' judicial philosophies, so I am not able to say whose philosophy is most analogous to mine.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has used originalism to interpret constitutional provisions. One example of a binding decision where the Supreme Court has interpreted the Constitution using original public meaning is District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008). If confirmed as a federal district judge, I would apply all relevant precedents when deciding cases, including the United States Supreme Court's precedents that rely on original public meaning and those that rely on original intent.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: There are no circumstances under which I would overrule the precedents of the United States Supreme Court or the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit if I were confirmed as a federal district judge.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If I were confirmed as a federal district judge, I would apply Garcia and all other binding precedents of the United States Supreme Court regardless of my personal views, if any.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has, "identified three broad categories of activity that Congress may regulate under its commerce power." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558 (1995). According to Lopez, the federal government first “may regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce,” second “may regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce” and third may “regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce.” Id. at 558-59. The Supreme Court highlighted the non-economic nature of the activity being regulated in both, Lopez and United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000), when it struck down the statute at issue in those cases. If confirmed, I would follow the binding precedent of the United States Supreme Court.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The President’s authority to issue executive orders and take executive actions is limited by the Constitution and federal statutes. “The President’s power, if any, to issue the order must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself.” Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952). Therefore, the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions apply to those instances when the order or action is not authorized by Congress or the Constitution.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The United States Supreme Court has held that a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine where “deeply rooted in this nation’s history and tradition,” and “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (internal citations and quotations omitted). If confirmed as a federal district judge, I would follow all binding precedents of the United States Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, including precedents regarding whether a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: According to Supreme Court precedent, a classification should be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause when it differentiates based on race, alienage, national origin, gender or illegitimacy. The Supreme Court has also explained that heightened scrutiny should be applied when a classification burdens a right the Court has identified as fundamental.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: If confirmed, I would abide by Grutter and Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S.Ct. 2411 (2013), and all other Supreme Court precedents regardless of any personal views or expectations.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Douglas L. Rayes
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. Your opinion in Volpe v. Yavapai was overruled. The appellate court held that there was, in fact, “substantial evidence in the record” of an offense whereas you found there was not sufficient evidence. You will not be bound by this court if confirmed as a federal judge. Do you agree with the appellate court’s decision?

Response: Yes, the opinion of the appellate court represents the final word in the case.

2. Your opinion in State v. Levens was overruled. The appellate court reversed held that the defendant’s response to questions by police were not compelled whereas you ruled that the defendant’s statements violated Miranda and should be excluded. You will not be bound by this court if confirmed as a federal judge. Do you agree with the appellate court’s decision?

Response: Yes, the opinion of the appellate court represents the final word in the case.

3. While serving as a judge, you wrote an article detailing the steps you and others took to reduce the capital case backlog in the Superior Court. Part of that process entailed educating victims’ families on death penalty cases, including the time it took to litigate the case and execute the sentence, the possible appeals, and “an explanation of the high rate of reversals of the sentence as compared to almost no reversals from guilty pleas with a life sentence.” In that article, you state: “Victims’ families seeking justice and closure would often accept the information about the capital cases process more readily from a judge than from the attorneys litigating the case.” “Although that was not the goal of the court, sometimes after such meetings, the victims advised the state that they did not object to a plea agreement where the death penalty was waived.”
 - a. Why do you think the families of victims accepted this information more readily from the court than the attorneys litigating the case?

Response: I believe the families of the victims accepted this information more readily from the court because the judges conducting these conferences were some of the most experienced in capital cases, and unlike the attorneys, were not acting as advocates. The court’s role in the case resolution conference included the role of educating and informing families about the process.

- b. Given the court's role as the final arbiter in the case, do you have any concerns that the court's actions in advising victims' families about the negative aspects of seeking the death penalty had an undue influence on their decision or pressured them to accept a plea agreement?

Response: The court is very sensitive to the needs of victims and to the burdens brought on by their situation. Arizona has extensive and detailed victims' rights laws. In conducting the case resolution conference, the court followed the requirements of the Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure, Rule 17.4, regarding plea negotiations and Rule 39 and A.R.S. Section 13-4401, et. seq. regarding victims' rights. Judges with capital trial experience, who had no other connection to the case, conducted these conferences. By having experienced judges, other than the trial judge, as required by Rule 17.4 of the Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure, explain the unusual and unique procedures, time frames and consequences of a capital case to victims, I do not feel that victims were pressured into accepting a plea agreement. The judges helped victims better understand their rights, choices and the consequences to them of a capital murder trial. Victims often expressed gratitude for the time spent by the court educating them.

- 4. You listed the case of State v. Al-Tarrah as one of your most significant, but did not provide a written opinion. According to press reports, the case involved a foreign college student from Kuwaiti (Al-Tarrah) who was charged with hit-and-run and DUI after her vehicle struck and killed a man riding a motorized skateboard. The student's blood alcohol was nearly twice the legal limit. At Al-Tarrah's arraignment, the Judge Talamante directed her to surrender her passport to her attorney, David Cantor. He told Cantor, "I am going to expect that you take possession of that passport and that that passport remain in your possession during the pendency of these hearings." The court order directed Cantor to "submit an affidavit to the court within 24-hours affirming that passport has been surrendered." Cantor did not take possession of the passport and Al-Tarrah fled the country.

As a result, Judge Richard Gama held Cantor in contempt of court for failure to collect the passport and failure to file the affidavit with the court. You heard the case involving the contempt charges and found Cantor to be not guilty. According to press reports, you concluded Cantor could have interpreted Judge Talamante's order to mean he should file an affidavit within 24-hours of taking possession of the passport whenever he received it. The author of the article called this is a strained interpretation of the judges' order. The author stated: "If one is to assume that 'I am going to expect you to take ... that passport' means accepting it from young Al-Tarrah whenever she happened to fishtail into Cantor's parking lot, then you also have to wonder why the judge ordered Cantor to take the passport at all."

Please explain why you found Cantor not guilty of contempt of court and provide any supporting information if possible.

Response: This was a criminal contempt trial, which required proof beyond a reasonable doubt that Cantor had intentionally and deliberately violated a court order. There was no written opinion because I ruled from the bench. The contempt trial lasted three days and included the testimony of several witnesses including legal ethics experts presented by both sides. There was little, if any, dispute about the facts. The trial court's order was issued in October 2005 and the client fled in January 2006. During that time Cantor pursued an appeal of the trial court's order to the Court of Appeals and then to the Arizona Supreme Court. The Supreme Court declined jurisdiction of the appeal in January 2006 and Cantor's efforts to obtain his client's passport were unsuccessful. After the Supreme Court declined jurisdiction, Cantor scheduled a meeting with his client, but instead her father appeared to explain that she was sick. Sometime in the following two to three weeks, she fled. Cantor then moved to withdraw as her attorney.

The issue before me was whether Cantor had intentionally and deliberately violated the trial court's order. The expert witnesses were in agreement that the order was ambiguous and that Cantor's interpretation of the order was reasonable. Furthermore, the experts agreed that in the face of an ambiguous order, Cantor had an ethical obligation not to disclose his client's failure to surrender her passport. However, the state's expert faulted Cantor for not moving to withdraw sooner after she missed the January meeting. After considering this evidence I found that the state had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Cantor had intentionally and deliberately violated a court order. Even though he was unsuccessful in his efforts to obtain his client's passport, the evidence was that he had attempted to do so and that in light of the ambiguous order, his ethical duty of loyalty to his client prevented his reporting her non-compliance.

5. Do you believe judges should look to the original meaning of the words and phrases in the Constitution when applying it to current cases? If so, how would you determine the original meaning?

Response: An Arizona District Court Judge interpreting the Constitution should follow the methods of interpretation prescribed by the Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. For example, in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the public understanding of the constitution at the time it was adopted was used as the method of interpretation by the Supreme Court in its analysis of the Second Amendment. If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed I would faithfully follow Heller and other binding precedent.

6. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is the ability to decide cases impartially, following statutory law and legal precedent while treating those who appear in his courtroom with dignity and respect. As a state court judge for fourteen years, I have diligently adhered to those principles and applied those attributes.

7. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: I believe that it is not enough for the judge to be fair and impartial. I feel it is just as important for the lawyers and litigants to feel that they were treated fairly and impartially. In my view a judge's temperament should be respectful and patient so that those appearing in his court understand that an open-minded judge is carefully considering their evidence and arguments before a decision is rendered. I believe I possess that temperament.

8. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: I am committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and will give them full force and effect even if I personally disagree with such precedents.

9. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: As an Arizona State trial judge for fourteen years, the method I have employed when deciding cases of first impression has been to first determine the meaning of the applicable section of the statute. If the text of the statute is not ambiguous, then the inquiry ends there. If the meaning of the section of the statute in dispute is ambiguous, then I look to higher court precedence. I then try to determine the meaning from the statute as a whole, applying the rules of statutory construction established by the Arizona Supreme Court and the Arizona Court of Appeals. If from those efforts I am not satisfied that I have a correct interpretation I look for persuasive guidance from high court rulings from other states or federal courts on similar statutes.

10. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would disregard my opinion and follow the precedent of the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals.

- 11. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A judge should not reach the issue of the constitutionality of a statute if the case could be resolved without such a determination. If in a judicial case or controversy the constitutional issue cannot be avoided, a judge should follow well-established case law that the court must start with the presumption that federal statutes are constitutional and declare a statute unconstitutional “only upon a plain showing that Congress has exceeded its constitutional bounds.” United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 607 (2000).

- 12. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. Our Constitution is uniquely American and the meaning is not going to be determined by foreign law or the views of the “world community”.

- 13. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: My decisions have always been grounded in precedent and the text of the law. I have never let my political beliefs affect my decisions and I give the Committee my most solemn assurance that I will never do so.

- 14. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: I have never let my personal views affect my decisions and I give the Committee my most solemn assurance that I will never do so. If confirmed, I give my most solemn assurance that I will be fair to all who appear before me.

- 15. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: As a trial judge in Maricopa County, the fourth largest court in the country, I have spent fourteen years managing large caseloads. I have taught new judges at the Arizona Supreme Court’s New Judge Orientation Program caseload management. I believe it is the court’s responsibility to actively control the calendar and manage the cases. The court cannot let the attorneys control the court’s calendar. If confirmed I would establish a reasonable case management schedule for each case, schedule status conferences to monitor compliance with deadlines, enforce deadlines, promptly rule on motions, and be available for telephonic resolution of discovery disputes. I would set firm trial dates that are not continued without a showing of good cause and actively encourage alternative dispute resolution.

- 16. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes, I believe judges not only have a role, but also have a duty to control their caseload and the pace of resolution of cases. I would employ the methods set forth in my response to question 15 above.

- 17. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: When ruling on dispositive motions, such as a motion for summary judgment, I start with the parties' briefs and their arguments. I review the key cases cited by the parties and perform my own research. I then apply the applicable statutory and case law to the undisputed facts to reach a decision on whether there is a material issue of fact trial. When I am in a trial to the court, I gain an understanding of the factual and legal issues to be litigated before trial by reviewing the pretrial statements and by researching applicable statutes or precedent. I hear the evidence at trial, listen to arguments of counsel and then apply the law to the facts to reach my ruling. The sources of information for guidance on legal issues are the applicable statutes and decisions of the Arizona Supreme Court and Court of Appeals.

- 18. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

- 19. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the questions on February 4, 2014. After reviewing the questions I prepared my responses that day and the next day. I spoke with a Justice Department representative and authorized the submission of my answers to the Committee.

- 20. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Responses of Douglas L. Rayes Nominee, United States District Court for the District of Arizona

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: My judicial philosophy has been to consider each case before me to be an important case, to treat those who come into my court with courtesy and respect, and to decide the narrow issue before me fairly, and consistent with the controlling legal precedent. My philosophy is that a judge needs to be a judge, interpreting the law and not making the law. Although I am familiar with decisions rendered by the Supreme Court while each of those Justices acted as Chief Justice, and have applied precedent created by those decisions, I have not compared my philosophy with any Justice's. Therefore, I am unable to state whether my judicial philosophy is analogous to any of the Justices above.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: An Arizona District Court Judge interpreting the Constitution should follow the methods of interpretation prescribed by the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit. In District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the public understanding of the constitution at the time it was adopted, was used as the method of interpretation by the Supreme Court in its analysis of the Second Amendment. If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I would faithfully follow Heller and other binding precedent.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed, as a district judge, there would never be a circumstance that I would overrule precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: Because Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528 (1985), is Supreme Court precedent, all district judges are bound by it and must follow it. If confirmed, I would follow Garcia and all other relevant precedents.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has defined three broad categories of activity where Congress may use the Commerce Clause to regulate: (1) the channels of interstate commerce; (2) the instrumentalities of interstate commerce; and (3) activities that have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-609 (2000), United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-559 (1995). Those cases do not hold that the Commerce Clause authority could never be used to regulate non-economic activity. More recently in Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005), Justice Scalia authored a concurring opinion where he indicated that Congress had the authority under the Commerce Clause to regulate non-economic activity "if that regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce." If confirmed, I would follow applicable Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The Supreme Court spoke on the President's authority to act in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952) and in Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008). The Supreme Court has determined that the President's authority to act must come from either an act of Congress or from the Constitution. In judicial cases and controversies those are judicially enforceable limits on the President's authority.

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has decided that a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the Due Process Clause if it is "objectively, 'deeply rooted in this nation's history and tradition,' and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty," such that "neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed." Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997) (citations omitted). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent when confronted with an issue of whether a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has decided that a classification should be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause "when the classification impermissibly interferes with the exercise of a fundamental right or operates to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class." Mass. Bd. of Retirement v. Murgia, 427 U.S. 307 (1976). The Supreme Court has stated that strict scrutiny applies when characteristics of a class, such as race, seldom provide a relevant basis for disparate treatment, Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S.Ct. 2411, 2418 (2013), and that intermediate scrutiny applies to gender-based classifications. United States v. Virginia, 518 U.S. 515 (1996). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent when deciding any issue involving heightened scrutiny.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: If confirmed, I will follow whatever Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent exists at the time concerning the use of racial preferences in public higher education including Grutter and the Supreme Court’s more recent holding in Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013).

Senator Grassley
Questions for the Record

James Soto,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Arizona

1. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: A good judge must possess many important attributes. I believe that the most important attribute of a good judge is the ability to be fair and impartial and to decide a case based upon the applicable facts and law, setting aside any personal or outside considerations. I believe that my record as a trial court judge for over twelve years demonstrates that I possess that attribute.

2. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A good judge must be respectful, patient, and even-tempered. He must demonstrate to the parties that he has given their respective positions thoughtful consideration before he makes his decision. I believe that I have met that standard and that my record as a trial judge demonstrates that.

3. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: I would be fully committed to following the legal precedents of the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit regardless of my personal opinions or whether or not I agree or disagree with such legal precedents.

4. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: I would first consider the plain language of the statute or other provision in question. If the language was unambiguous, then I would apply the language as written. If the language was ambiguous at least as applied to the facts of the particular case before me, then I would apply the principles of statutory construction and look to precedents from the Supreme Court, the Ninth Circuit, and other circuit courts in analogous cases or issues in addressing the issues before me.

5. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: If confirmed, I would always follow the precedents of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals, notwithstanding any personal opinion I may have.

6. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A court should not address the constitutionality of a statute if the case can be decided on other grounds. A court should begin its legal analysis with the presumption that the statute is constitutional. A court should address the constitutionality of a federal statute only when it is absolutely necessary to decide the case before the court and applicable legal precedent clearly shows that addressing the constitutionality of a statute is required. A court should strike down a statute only when the court determines that a statute violates the Constitution or that Congress has exceeded its authority.

7. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No.

8. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: A judge must put aside his personal beliefs and opinions and decide cases based upon legal precedent as it applies to the facts of any particular case. I believe that my record as a trial judge for over twelve years demonstrates that I strictly follow the applicable precedent and do not allow personal ideology or opinions to affect my rulings.

9. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: The legal system in our country depends in great part upon a fair and impartial judiciary that can set aside their personal views in deciding cases and apply legal precedent. If confirmed, I pledge to continue to set aside any personal views and to treat all parties who may appear before me with fairness, respect, and patience, as I have done as a trial judge for over twelve years. I consider the oath of office to be a solemn oath, which I pledge to follow without reservation.

10. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: As a state court judge for over twelve years, I currently manage hundreds of active cases involving a wide variety of legal issues, including significant criminal and civil caseloads. I believe that early and active management of cases by the trial judge is essential to identifying and narrowing the issues in a case, avoiding unnecessary litigation and delays, and resolving cases in a fair and expeditious manner.

- 11. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Absolutely. The parties should always have the opportunity to discuss with the trial court the appropriate pace and manner in which litigation should proceed. However, it is ultimately the court's obligation to ensure that a case proceeds in a fair and speedy manner, giving consideration to the cost to the litigants occasioned by unnecessary delays. Trial judges have a number of tools available to them to control the pace of litigation, including issuing appropriate scheduling orders and setting regular status conferences.

- 12. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: I must first determine the facts of a particular case, considering the testimony and evidence presented at trial and applying any relevant rules of evidence and rules of procedure. I then apply the relevant law to the facts of the case considering applicable constitutional and statutory provisions in arriving at a decision.

- 13. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

- 14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received and read these questions on February 4, 2014. On February 5, 2014 I prepared my answers to the questions and forwarded them to an attorney in the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice for review. When they were final, I authorized transmittal of the answers to the Committee.

- 15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

James A. Soto
Nominee: U.S. District Court Judge for the District of Arizona

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: My judicial philosophy is that a judge must always handle each case with an impartial and unbiased mind. A judge should treat all parties with respect and patience and be willing to give the legal arguments of all parties to a case serious legal consideration. A judge must apply the law as written and follow binding precedent. This is a cornerstone of our system of justice. I do not have sufficient information to state which Supreme Court justice on the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts has a judicial philosophy most analogous to my own.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: My role as a judge in a case involving constitutional interpretation is to study the facts of the case before me and apply the applicable precedent to the case, including precedent which considers the original public meaning of the text, as the Supreme Court did in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), or the original intent of the drafters.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed, I would be bound by the precedent of the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit. I would not overrule any precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confirmed to serve as a United States District Judge, I would be bound by the Supreme Court's decision in Garcia and subsequent decisions which identify constitutional limitations on congressional power. I would apply the holding in that case without regard to whether or not I personally agreed with the decision.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: In Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005) (Scalia, J., concurring), the Supreme Court held that Congress may regulate non-economic activity that has a substantial relation to interstate commerce, or when a “regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation on interstate commerce.” In United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-559 (1995) and United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-609 (2000), the Supreme Court struck down federal statutes where Congress lacked authority under the Commerce Clause. If confirmed, I would follow the precedent of the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit in deciding issues on the extent of congressional authority under the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The authority of the President to act must stem from either an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself. Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008) (internal citations omitted). The applicable analysis for a court to determine whether executive action exceeds presidential authority is set out in Justice Jackson’s concurrence in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent in deciding any challenges to executive action.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: In Washington v. Gluckberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-721 (1997) (internal citations omitted), the Supreme Court held that fundamental rights include “the specific freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights,” and “those fundamental rights and liberties which are, objectively, deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition” and which are “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning fundamental rights.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has identified the classifications which are subject to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. They include race, alienage, and national origin, which are subject to strict scrutiny; and gender and illegitimacy, which are subject to intermediate scrutiny. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440-441 (1985). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit precedent in determining what classifications are subject to heightened scrutiny and how to apply such scrutiny to the facts of a particular case.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not have sufficient information or expertise to have any personal expectation on this issue, and in any event, my personal expectation would play no role in any judicial decisions. If confirmed, I would follow the holding of Grutter, Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013), and any other subsequent precedent on the use of race in admissions to public institutions of higher education.

Re: Nomination of John Tuchi to the U.S. District Court in Arizona

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

The Native American Bar Association of Arizona (NABA-AZ) supports the nomination of John Tuchi to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. Mr. Tuchi is an honest, hard working advocate whose virtues are fitting of that of a federal judge.

NABA-AZ is a nonpartisan organization committed to promoting the development of Native American attorneys and to the development of the practice of Indian law. Before endorsing any individual for a judicial appointment, NABA-AZ carefully considers the individual's background and qualifications, judicial temperament, leadership, and ability to fairly evaluate case matters. Of particular importance to NABA-AZ is an individual's ability to understand and evaluate Indian law jurisdictional issues because over a quarter of the land within Arizona is Indian Country.

Tribes and Native American people desperately need federal district court judges who are proficient in federal Indian law. Legal issues of critical importance to tribes, including the health, safety, and welfare of the individual members, are most often addressed in federal district court. When judges are not competently educated in the principles of federal Indian law, the decisions can be disastrous. For these reasons, NABA-AZ recommends that the nominees for the District Court, particularly in the District of Arizona, be competent in federal Indian law.

Consistent with these critical needs, NABA-AZ supports John Tuchi's nomination for the District of Arizona. As a lawyer and as the Chief Assistant United States Attorney for the District of Arizona, John has demonstrated principled and thoughtful decisions. It is clear that John has the qualifications to serve as a federal district judge, and the ABA has rated him substantial majority well qualified, minority qualified. Beyond his experience and commitment to public service, NABA-AZ is impressed with John's command of federal Indian law, including a demonstrated ability to apply and analyze legal issues relating to federal Indian law in the criminal context. Further, NABA-AZ is confident that John is competent in federal Indian law.

For the reasons explained above, NABA-AZ strongly urges you to confirm John Tuchi to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you need any additional information.

Sincerely,

Re: Nomination of Diane Humetewa for United States District Judge for the District of Arizona

Dear Senator Leahy:

I write in support of the President's nomination of Diane Humetewa for United States District Judge for the District of Arizona. By way of background, I am one of the former US Attorneys fired by then Attorney General Alberto Gonzales, and an admirer of yours for your efforts in the investigation that followed those firings.

I have known Diane Humetewa from our time together prosecuting cases when we were Assistant US Attorneys in Arizona. As Assistant US Attorneys in the early 90's I watched Diane try all manner of cases, from child sex abuse, to homicide. As an old prosecutor yourself, I know you would have appreciated and respected her skill in the courtroom.

More than that, I believe you would have found ample reason, as I did, to respect her for her keen sense of justice and profound understanding of the ethical responsibilities of a prosecutor. As you know, the qualities that make a good prosecutor are those that make a good judge. At all times she was, as the ethical rules require, a "Minister of Justice." She sought the truth in all of her cases, and in the words of Justice Jackson, tempered "zeal with human kindness." She carried these qualities through to her time as US Attorney, and insisted that the Assistant US Attorneys who worked under her leadership follow them.

A review of her resume proves that she is in every respect most qualified for this position. I would like to emphasize one other facet of Diane's background that in my mind makes her nomination not only appropriate, but right.

The federal court in Arizona has jurisdiction over all felony offenses that take place on Arizona's 21 Indian reservations. Those reservations cover one quarter of Arizona and include the nation's two largest tribes. That means that Native Americans must appear in Arizona's federal court, seek justice before juries that rarely have members of their own tribe, and be prosecuted by the federal government.

Yet, since 1848 – the date our country acquired Arizona – to the present, no Arizona tribe has had one of its own on the federal bench. Diane is an enrolled member of the Hopi Tribe. The Hopi have lived here in the Southwest, and what is now Arizona, for over a thousand years. They are a people rich in history and faith.

Appointing Diane Humetewa would reflect two great achievements for our nation: a stellar judge would join an already outstanding bench; and a bench that would be enriched by a member who reflects the community it serves.

If I may be of assistance to you on this or any other matter, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely yours,

Re: Nomination of Diane J. Humetewa to the U.S. District Court in Arizona

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

The Native American Bar Association of Arizona (NABA-AZ) supports the nomination of Diane J. Humetewa to the United States District Court for the District of Arizona. We write to encourage you to swiftly consider and confirm Diane to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona.

NABA-AZ is a nonpartisan organization committed to promoting the development of Native American attorney and to the development of the practice of Indian law. Before endorsing any individual for a judicial appointment, NABA-AZ carefully considers the individual's background and qualifications, judicial temperament, leadership, and ability to fairly evaluate case matters. Of particular importance to NABA-AZ is an individual's ability to understand and evaluate Indian law jurisdictional issues because over a quarter of the land within Arizona is Indian Country.

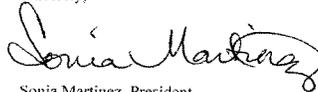

Diane is uniquely qualified to serve as an Arizona United States District Court Judge. She is an enrolled member of the Hopi Tribe and an Arizonan, who has spent the majority of her legal career working in the Department of Justice where she became the first Native American to serve as the United States Attorney for the State of Arizona. During her tenure as the United States Attorney for the State of Arizona, Diane worked closely with Arizona's Indian tribal governments in responding to law enforcement issues on Indian reservations. While in the United States Attorney's Office, Diane had extensive trial experience prosecuting a wide range of criminal cases from the simple to the complex, including homicides, child sex crimes and domestic violence offenses, archeological resource theft, gaming and political corruption schemes. Diane also has significant appellate experience arguing a number of cases before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. In addition to her other responsibilities in the United States Attorney's Office, Diane has been called upon to provide congressional testimony on Indian Country Crimes and to testify before the United States Sentencing Commission. The ABA has also rated Diane substantial majority Qualified, minority Well Qualified.

Diane is a well-respected member of the State Bar of Arizona. She has received a number of honors and awards, including the Department of Justice's Director's Award in 1999 and the President's Award from the Women in Federal Law Enforcement Foundation in 2009. Diane has also served on numerous committees and organizations to improve the quality of legal services throughout Maricopa County and the state. She is an active member of the Indian Law Section of the Arizona Bar, where she has served on the Executive Council. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the Morris K. Udall Scholarship & Excellence in National Environmental Policy Foundation.

Diane has been a member of the Native American Ad Hoc Advisory Council to the U.S. Sentencing Commission. In addition, Diane was appointed as an Appellate Court Judge for the Hopi Nation's Tribal Court. Finally, she has been a longstanding member of the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law's Indian Legal Program's Advisory Council. Diane is a nationally respected Indian law practitioner and highly-regarded for her talent, intellect, insight and judgment. In addition to her many other qualities, Diane's fair and balanced perspective make her an excellent candidate for appointment to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona. Appointing Diane to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona would mark another historic first; she would be the first Native American to serve on the federal bench in Arizona, the first Native American woman to serve on the federal bench, and be the only Native American currently serving on the federal bench.

For all these reasons, we strongly urge you to confirm Diane Humetewa to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you need any additional information about Diane's qualifications to serve as a United States District Court judge.

Sincerely,

Re: Nomination of Diane J. Humetewa to the U.S. District Court in Arizona

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

The National Native American Bar Association has endorsed the historic nomination of Diane Humetewa to the U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona and strongly urges you to support her nomination. Ms. Humetewa is an attorney who has practiced law in Arizona for over fourteen years where her skills as a trial attorney are renowned. An enrolled member of the Hopi Tribe, she is both a native Arizonan and Native American. Ms. Humetewa is eminently qualified to be a federal district court judge. If confirmed, Ms. Humetewa will be the first Native American woman in the history of our nation to serve on the federal judiciary and will be the only current American Indian on the federal bench.

The National Native American Bar Association represents over 2,500 American Indian, Alaska Native and Hawaiian Native attorneys throughout the United States. There are currently no active federal judges who are American Indian. Of particular relevance, the State of Arizona has 22 Indian tribes within its borders, and yet there has never been an American Indian federal judge in the history of Arizona.

Ms. Humetewa has served in many positions in her career that have prepared her for elevation to the federal judiciary. From 2007 to 2009, after being nominated by President George W. Bush and confirmed by the U.S. Senate, Ms. Humetewa served as the U.S. Attorney for the District of Arizona. In this role, she was – and continues to be – the first and only American Indian woman U.S. Attorney in the history of our country. Previously, she worked in the U.S. Attorney's Office in the District of Arizona from 1996 to 2009, serving as Senior Litigation Counsel from 2001 to 2007. During her tenure in the U.S. Attorney's Office, Ms. Humetewa also served as Counsel to the Deputy Attorney General from 1996 to 1998. From 1993 to 1996, she was Deputy Counsel for the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, working for Arizona's senior Senator John McCain.

Ms. Humetewa, who attended the Arizona State University School of Law, has also worked in a variety of other positions, including her current position as Special Advisor to the President and Special Counsel in the Office of the General Counsel at Arizona State University. Additionally, she is a Professor of Practice at the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law. Ms. Humetewa has also been a private practitioner and a judge on the Hopi Appellate Court. She is considered a national expert on American Indian legal issues. She also has served as an ad hoc member of the Native American Subcommittee of the U.S. Sentencing Commission. Previously, she was appointed by the U.S. District Court to serve three terms as the Chair of the U.S. Magistrate Selection Committee.

Ms. Humetewa is well respected by all who have worked with her whether as co-counsel, opposing counsel, or litigants before her as Hopi Appellate Judge. She maintains the demeanor expected of trial judges in reaching fair and equitable decisions. Her writing skills are excellent, and she presents logical and cogent explanations for the legal conclusions that she reaches. Her ethics are beyond reproach and her diligence to duty is outstanding.

Ms. Humetewa enjoys bipartisan support for her nomination, and the National Native American Bar Association urges the swift confirmation of Diane J. Humetewa because her legal skills meet and exceed those required to be a federal district court judge.

Re: Support for the Nomination of Diane J. Humetewa for United States District Judge for the District of Arizona

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

The Gila River Indian Community supports President Obama's nomination of Diane J. Humetewa to serve as the United States District Judge for the District of Arizona and we urge you to confirm her nomination as swiftly as possible. We also applaud Senator McCain's leadership in recommending Ms. Humetewa, who upon confirmation would be the first American Indian woman in history to serve as a federal judge.

Ms. Humetewa's has a long and distinguished career of service. Most notably, Ms. Humetewa served as the United States Attorney for the District of Arizona from 2007 -2009, which is one of the largest U.S. Attorney Offices with one of the highest caseloads in the nation. In addition, when she served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney prosecuting an assortment of federal crimes, Ms. Humetewa also served as the office's Senior Litigation Counsel/Tribal Liason, supervised the U.S. Attorney's Victim Witness Program, and helped establish one of the first federal victim service programs in the nation. In addition, Ms. Humetewa served as counsel to the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and counsel to the Deputy Attorney General for the U.S. Justice Department.

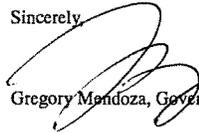

Ms. Humetewa, who has been nominated for important federal positions by both President Obama and President Bush, is highly qualified and will make an excellent judge. Further, her appointment is important given the many judicial vacancies in Arizona, a jurisdiction with a large case load of federal prosecution of crimes that occur on American Indian reservations. We urge the Committee to confirm her nomination as soon as possible.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Gregory Mandoza, Governor

Dear Honorable Patrick Leahy:

I am writing to support the nomination of Diane J. Humetewa, a Native American and a native Arizonan, to fill the current Federal District Court Judicial vacancy in Phoenix, Arizona. Ms. Humetewa is an experienced practitioner of law, and being born and raised in Arizona, she understands its landscape and the importance of the federal court to its citizens.

As Chairman of the Tohono O'odham Nation, and previously, as Vice-Chairman, I worked closely with Ms. Humetewa while she served as Senior Litigation Counsel/Tribal Liaison and then United States Attorney. Due to our proximity to the border, the Tohono O'odham Nation often experiences the highest human smuggling, drug and firearms trafficking and violent crimes in Arizona. Ms. Humetewa worked closely with my Administration to ensure that federal resources were available to assist the Nation in combating these crimes and to ensure justice was done when perpetrators were caught. Importantly, she respected the sovereignty of the Nation and our interests in being full participants in these efforts. Ms. Humetewa took her role as a "public servant" to heart by operating transparently and fairly, with the Tohono O'odham Nation.

I first became acquainted with Ms. Humetewa when I served as the Chief Judge of the Tohono O'odham Nation. At that time, Ms. Humetewa was an Assistant U.S. Attorney. She was an active participant in training and outreach on behalf of the federal government to the Tohono O'odham Nation. She understood Indian Tribal governments and Tribal courts, and fostered their relationships with representative agencies of the federal government in Arizona. It is this type of unique understanding and experience that Ms. Humetewa will bring to the U.S. District Court.

Beyond her "real world" experiences, Ms. Humetewa is an experienced lawyer who has prosecuted complex crimes including child sexual abuse cases, Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act cases, drug and homicide offenses. She has practiced in the civil and federal bankruptcy and the U.S. Magistrate courts, and importantly, as a Tribal Appellate Court Judge for the Hopi Tribe. Ms. Humetewa is well known and respected by the Arizona Tribal and Federal Court Judges. Indeed, she was appointed to three terms as chair of the U.S. Magistrate Judge Selection Committee by the Chief Judge of the Arizona District Court. Her nomination also has the support of both of Arizona's U.S. Senators, John McCain and Jeff Flake.

Ms. Humetewa's credentials and reputation alone warrant her confirmation. However, that she is a Native American from Arizona merits additional considerations. Currently, there are no sitting Native American judges on any federal bench in the Nation. Historically and currently, there has never been a Native American woman appointed to any federal court in Arizona or the Ninth Circuit. Indeed, all other ethnic groups are represented on the federal and state benches in Arizona.

Confirmation of Ms. Humetewa would bring hope to the twenty-two Arizona Indian Tribes and the Arizona Native American population that from now into the future, we have a chance for fair consideration in these important positions. For once in Arizona's history, we would see a Federal District Court that is truly representative of Arizona and the federal populations it serves.

RE: Diane J. Humetewa for Federal District Court for District of Arizona

Dear Chairman Leahy:

The 21 member tribes of the Inter Tribal Council of Arizona strongly urge you to confirm Diane J. Humetewa to be a United States District Court Judge for the District of Arizona. She has been an attorney practicing law in Arizona for over fourteen years, where her skills as a trial attorney are renowned. An enrolled member of the Hopi Tribe, she is both an American Indian and a native Arizonan.

Ms. Humetewa is uniquely qualified to serve on the federal bench in Arizona. As a Special Assistant U.S. Attorney, as an Assistant U.S. Attorney, and, finally, as the U.S. Attorney for Arizona, where she managed four offices and over 300 employees, and serving as council on the U.S. Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and working as council to the Deputy Attorney General for the U.S. Department of Justice, the breadth of her legal work makes her an exemplary candidate for the federal judiciary. Ms. Humetewa has handled a broad range of criminal cases, which included complex grand jury proceedings and evidentiary, competency, juvenile transfer, and sentencing hearings. As such, she has an intimate knowledge of federal law and procedure.

In short, we are confident that Ms. Humetewa possesses the experience, temperament, and high degree of professionalism required to succeed as the first female American Indian ever appointed to the federal bench.

Chairman Leahy, the ITCA appreciates your attention to this important and possible history making appointment. We ask that you strongly consider nomination of Ms. Humetewa as the United States District Court Judge for the District of Arizona. The 20 member Indian Tribes of the ITCA appreciate your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely,

UNITED STATES SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 9:01 a.m., in Room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Richard Blumenthal, presiding.

Present: Senators Blumenthal, Grassley, and Graham.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. RICHARD BLUMENTHAL, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF CONNECTICUT

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I am going to open the hearing, although we are missing some of our introducers. I want to welcome the nominees and their families to this very, very important occasion for you and for justice in our country. We are very proud and honored that you are here today and delighted that we will hear your testimony.

This occasion is a very serious and important step in the nomination process, and not all of our Members of the Judiciary Committee will be here this morning, as you know, but we will be reviewing the record, all of our Members will be reviewing the record, and I am going to ask Senator Graham of South Carolina to begin the introductions this morning. Senator Graham.

PRESENTATION OF HON. BRUCE HENDRICKS, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA, BY HON. LINDSEY GRAHAM, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Senator GRAHAM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I think you are all in good hands today with Senator Blumenthal. It will be fairly painless, I hope.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is my honor to introduce to the Committee our United States magistrate since 2002, Bruce Hendricks, and she is chosen wisely by the President to become a district court judge. She was ABA unanimously well qualified. She presided over the first pre-conviction drug program in the District of South Carolina, one of the first in the Nation.

Before becoming a magistrate, she worked as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in South Carolina for 11 years, very qualified to do the job she is being nominated for. A graduate of the College of Charleston and the University of South Carolina School of Law, married to her husband, Teddy, and one son and one daughter. And I can tell the Committee without any reservation she is highly respected by the bar and very much supported by Republicans and Democrats in South Carolina and will make an outstanding district court judge for our State.

I want to thank the Obama administration for making this nomination, and I look forward to supporting you in the Committee and on the floor.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Senator Graham.

Senator Graham has completed his introduction, and we are going to hear now from the Ranking Member, Senator Grassley.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. CHUCK GRASSLEY,
A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF IOWA

Senator GRASSLEY. Well, of course, we ought to congratulate the nominees and their families. They can be proud of this important milestone in their respective careers. We welcome all of you.

Before we turn to the nominees appearing before us today, I would like to say a word or two about the nominees pending on the Senate floor. Of course, over the last several weeks, I have heard some of my colleagues expressing frustration because the nominees on the floor have not yet been confirmed. I am somewhat surprised by that. As everyone knows, last year the majority of the Senate invoked what is called "the nuclear option." By voting to invoke the nuclear option, the majority stripped the minority of any ability to stop any nominee from being confirmed on the floor.

The bottom line is that the majority voted to cut the minority out of the process. As a result, under the precedent of that 52-vote majority, it established that the Majority Leader can bring up these nominations for a vote on the floor anytime he decides to do so. The minority simply has no ability to stop anyone from getting a vote. There is, in other words, no filibuster of a nominee anymore. And as anyone who watches the Senate proceedings can tell you, the Senate floor is not exactly working overtime. We certainly are not considering a lot of amendments to legislation. Instead, in most days very little is considered on the Senate floor, and we are rarely in session on Fridays. So there is really no reason why the leader of the Senate cannot bring these nominations up for a vote anytime that he decides to do it.

Finally, I would like to compare our progress so far this year compared to where we were at this point during the sixth year of the previous President, in other words, meaning President Bush's sixth year. So in regard to the sixth year of President Obama, during the 113th Congress we had hearings for 66 judicial nominees. After today, during this year alone we have had hearings on 15 nominees. By comparison, in 2006 the Senate confirmed only 32 judicial nominees during the entire year. So as of today, we have already held hearings for almost half that number.

So I will conclude by saying that I applaud the Chairman for his work. He continues to keep us busy as he makes sure that the Committee moves at a brisk pace. That applies to you as well as to Chairman Leahy.

Once again, thank you all for your willingness to serve the public.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

I am going to ask Senator Warren to introduce the nominee from Massachusetts.

PRESENTATION OF MARK MASTROIANNI, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS, BY HON. ELIZABETH WARREN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE
STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator WARREN. Thank you very much. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and thank you, Ranking Member Grassley, for holding this hearing and for allowing me to be here today. I apologize that I will have to leave right after this. We have got another hearing as well over in HELP.

But I am very pleased today to have the opportunity to introduce Mark Mastroianni, who has been nominated to fill a judicial vacancy in western Massachusetts for the District Court of the District of Massachusetts. Mark came highly recommended by the Advisory Committee on Massachusetts Judicial Nominations. The advisory committee is comprised of distinguished members of the Massachusetts legal community, including prominent academics and litigators, and it is chaired by former district court judge Nancy Gertner. Their recommendation reflects the strong sense of Massachusetts' legal community and, in particular, the legal community in western Massachusetts that he will make an excellent district court judge.

Mark Mastroianni is a true son of western Massachusetts. He was born in Springfield, and he is a lifelong resident of Hampden County. He is currently serving as the elected district attorney for Hampden County, a position he has held since 2011. He graduated with honors from the American International College in Springfield, Massachusetts, and he went on to earn his law degree from Western New England College School of Law, also in Springfield, Massachusetts. And today he is here with his wife, Carolyn, and his daughters, Christine, Jennifer, and Lauren. I know they must all be immensely proud to attend this hearing and to provide their love and support on this extraordinary day.

DA Mastroianni began his career in the Hampden County District Attorney's Office. He served there as an assistant district attorney for over 5 years, gaining prosecutorial experience in a wide variety of district and superior court matters. He then moved into private practice where he built a significant career as a defense attorney representing clients in civil and criminal matters.

Over the course of 16 years, he has represented clients in matters before the Massachusetts State trial courts and appeals courts as well as the district court to which he has been nominated. He frequently took on court-appointed defense cases in Massachusetts, reflecting his commitment to the integrity of our legal system and to the idea that everyone deserves representation.

In November 2010, Mark ran as an independent and was successfully elected to serve as the district attorney for Hampden County in the western part of Massachusetts, a position that returned him to lead the office where he began his career. As district attorney, he is responsible for managing the prosecution of all cases in the 23 cities and towns that make up Hampden County.

Aside from the impressive qualifications of this candidate, the fact of Mark's nomination is particularly important because the seat he has been nominated to fill has been vacant for too long. Since U.S. District Court Judge Ponsor took senior status in 2011, the vacancy has strained the Federal judicial system in western Massachusetts, causing cases to be postponed, forcing judges from Boston to travel to Springfield to hold hearings, and impeding the ability of citizens to get their day in court.

Filling this vacancy as quickly as possible has been a top priority for me since I arrived in the Senate last year, and DA Mastroianni's swift approval and confirmation is essential for ensuring the administration of justice for the people of Massachusetts.

I am proud to have recommended Mark Mastroianni to President Obama. He is an independent-minded district attorney whose diverse litigation experiences both as a top prosecutor and as a top defense attorney will enrich the Federal bench in Massachusetts. I look forward to his approval by this Committee and his swift confirmation by the full Senate.

Thank you.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Senator Warren.

Let me just briefly say at the outset of this hearing that I consider this hearing and others like it one of the most important things we do in the U.S. Senate. We confirm judges for life, and they become the voice and face of justice in this country. Particularly at the district court level but also at the court of Appeals, they are often the last stop for people. A lot of folks in America think of justice as the U.S. Supreme Court, but our district court judges and our circuit court judges are really the place in this Nation where Federal justice is dispensed. And I have been a lawyer for some time, practiced frequently in the Federal courts, so I know how important the quality of judging is not only to the lawyers but most especially to the men and women whose lives are dramatically and enduringly affected by what happens to them in those courts. Whether it is criminal or civil, their lives are changed, often forever, as a result.

So I want to thank the families of the judges who hopefully will be confirmed for their service as well because I know the kind of sacrifices that you will be making when your loved ones spend long hours, whether it is in the courtroom or doing their opinion writing and reading at home or in the office. And I know that that sacrifice will consist of birthdays missed and family occasions, but it is for one of the best causes in the United States—the cause of justice and democracy. We are unique as a Nation among all the countries in the world in placing that kind of responsibility on our judges, and so we thank you, thank the nominees, and thank their families.

And one last point before I introduce Senator Scott for his introduction. This process really is and should be a bipartisan one. The process of appointing and confirming judges is one that should be done without considerations of politics or party. What we are doing here is something for the Nation. And I know that you will hear questions here and perhaps debate on the floor that sometimes reflects differences and contention. But at the end of the day, I think we come together as a Senate to confirm the best possible people for these judgeships because it is so critical to the Nation and the national interest that we do so.

Senator Scott.

PRESENTATION OF HON. BRUCE HENDRICKS, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA, BY HON. TIM SCOTT, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Senator SCOTT. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. It is my privilege to say some words on behalf of Judge Bruce Hendricks, a fantastic person, a level-headed person, who is a great judge already in her own right. I am looking forward to seeing her serve on the Federal level. Bruce is, in fact, an amazing person who happens to be a proud Charlestonian. Being from Charleston, it gives me great honor to nominate her to be a U.S. District Judge for the district of South Carolina.

I had the opportunity to sit down with Bruce recently and talk with her about the things that are important to her and get to know her a little better. She is as bright as the dickens. There is no doubt she has an amazing resume. I know Senator Graham has spoken about her resume and her scores as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of South Carolina, an instructor at the College of Charleston, and a judge.

She is caring. Her pro bono work is the definition of community service. She has participated in many programs that have benefited the underprivileged, including unveiling an after-school program to provide food and tutoring for the Boys and Girls Club in Charleston. She has helped startup a marching band for a local high school and routinely hosts kids at the courtroom to introduce them to the judicial process and to the judicial system under positive circumstances and in a very positive way.

But the most important thing I have learned about you, Bruce, is that you are a College of Charleston basketball fan. Go, Cougars.

I believe the integrity of a judge is, in fact, the cornerstone of our judicial system. Her trial experience, her knowledge of the courtroom and the law, and her devotion to improving our communities leads me to believe she will be fair and devoted to justice.

I am proud to recommend Bruce to the Committee.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Senator Scott.

We are going to—and, by the way, both Senator Warren and Senator Scott probably have to leave for other engagements, as did Senator Graham. We have multiple hearings going on at the same time. So anytime you want to leave, Senator Scott, please feel free to do so, and we certainly do appreciate your being here.

Senator SCOTT. Thank you, sir.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I am going to introduce first on the first panel—and we may be interrupted by Senator Rubio or Senator Nelson if they arrive and wish to make statements—Judge Robin Rosenbaum, who is President Obama’s nominee to serve on the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. Judge Rosenbaum is currently serving as a United States District Court Judge for the Southern District of Florida, a position she was confirmed for in 2002 by a 92–3 vote in the Senate. She previously served as a magistrate judge in the same district from 2007 to 2012 and a Federal prosecutor from 1998 to 2007, including 5 years as chief of the economic crimes section.

Judge Rosenbaum began her legal career as a trial attorney in the Civil Division of the United States Department of Justice for 4 years before serving as staff counsel in the Office of the Independent Counsel for the investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown.

Judge Rosenbaum spent 2 years as an associate at Holland and Knight and clerked for Judge Stanley Marcus of the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals in 1998. She was born in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. She received her B.A. from Cornell University in 1988 and graduated magna cum laude from the University of Miami School of Law in 1991.

Judge Rosenbaum, would you please come forward?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Good morning.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Good morning. We would first of all ask you to please stand and be sworn. Do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before this Committee is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Judge ROSENBAUM. I do.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you. If you wish to make an opening statement, we would be happy to hear it.

STATEMENT OF HON. ROBIN ROSENBAUM, NOMINEE TO BE CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE ELEVENTH CIRCUIT

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal. I would like to thank the Committee for convening this hearing and Senator Blumenthal for presiding, Ranking Member Grassley for attending as well, and I would like to thank Senators Nelson and Rubio. I understand they may be here later this morning, and I very much appreciate that. And I would like to thank the President, President Obama, for nominating me for this position.

I would also like to, if it is all right with the Committee, briefly introduce my family.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Sure, absolutely.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you. My husband, Phil Rothschild; my daughters Evin and Rosie Rothschild; my mother, Hedy Rosenbaum; my father, Jerry Rosenbaum; my sister, Jodi Fiedler, and brother-in-law, Larry Fiedler, and their three sons, my nephew, Ben, Ryan, and Zachary Fiedler; my sister, Marci Rosenthal, and her son, Jake Rosenthal; and I am very fortunate to have some good friends here as well.

So I just wanted to thank everybody for being here.

[The biographical information of Judge Rosenbaum appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, and I know they are very proud of you.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Let me ask you at the beginning, what do you view as the greatest challenge you will have going from the district court to the circuit court?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, in the Eleventh Circuit, the Eleventh Circuit actually currently has the highest caseload per judge, so I think that the workload is challenging. But I feel fortunate that I have had an opportunity to get used to a heavy workload in the Southern District of Florida, where we routinely seem to have up at the top in the number of hours that we spend on the bench and also a huge caseload that we carry there. So I am hopeful and I expect that that should help to prepare me for a heavy caseload on the Eleventh Circuit if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. You have had a lot of different experiences both in litigating and as a judicial officer. Is there an area of law or specialty that you think will be most attractive and interesting to you?

Judge ROSENBAUM. I really enjoy all of it. When there is an area that I have not had the opportunity to work in previously, I love the challenge of learning about a new area. I really enjoy digging more deeply into areas that I have had the opportunity to work on before. So I am really hopeful that I will have the opportunity to work on everything.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Is there an area of law that you would prefer not to deal with?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Not really.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. And that is a good answer.

[Laughter.]

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Especially to your fellow future prospective judges, I am sure.

Is there something that you think ought to be done to either ease or alter the caseload in districts like the one where you are currently a trial judge to perhaps alleviate that caseload that you mentioned earlier?

Judge ROSENBAUM. I think that a lot of that will probably be addressed through time. I know recently there have been some vacancies, so we are looking at 4 down on a 12-judge court. So hopefully that will address itself eventually.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you. That is all the questions I have. Before turning to the Ranking Member, if he would agree, I would like to introduce Senator Rubio for his introductory statement.

PRESENTATION OF HON. ROBIN ROSENBAUM, NOMINEE TO BE CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE ELEVENTH CIRCUIT, BY HON. MARCO RUBIO, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF FLORIDA

Senator RUBIO. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I apologize for being a few minutes late, and I know Senator Nelson will also try to get here today. But I would like to thank the Chairman, Chairman Leahy, the Ranking Member, Senator Grassley, and Members of this Committee for holding this hearing and for the invitation to introduce my fellow Floridian, Judge Robin Rosenbaum.

She currently serves as the district judge in my home district, the Southern District of Florida. She has been honored by the President with the nomination to continue her service as a judge on the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals.

I am certain every Member of this Committee will agree that the Senate has few responsibilities more important than providing advice and consent on the President's judicial nominations. These are lifetime appointments, with great power, whose decisions directly impact the life, liberty, and the property of the parties who come before them.

The decisions of a circuit court judge can be particularly consequential. They impact people of several States, not just one district. And because the Supreme Court hears so few cases, circuit court rulings are often the final word on important matters.

For that reason, I take my duty to review nominations very seriously, as I know you do. The people of Florida and the people of the United States deserve the finest men and women we can find to occupy these judgeships. They deserve men and women of great character and unquestioned ability, people who understand the important but properly limited role of a judge, and a judge's job is simply to say what the law is without bias, without agenda. As passionately as a judge may feel about a particular issue, when she puts on that black robe, she must set aside her personal views.

The Judiciary Committee plays a critical role of diligently evaluating each nominee, and I know this Committee will thoroughly examine the record and the career of Judge Rosenbaum and ask her some questions today and perhaps in the followup. I trust and I know that she is up to the task. Judge Rosenbaum certainly comes before you prepared with an impressive background of public service. She graduated from my alma mater, the University of Miami Law School, in 1991, earning her degree magna cum laude—much better than me.

From there, she began an impressively good career focused on Government service. She served in the Federal Programs Branch of the Justice Department's Civil Division from 1991 to 1995 and in the Office of Independent Counsel in 1995 and 1996.

She returned to Florida in 1996 for a stint in private practice with the prestigious law firm of Holland and Knight. In 1998, she returned to public service when she served a clerkship with Judge Stanley Marcus, a legend in South Florida, on the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals. From 1998 to 2007, Judge Rosenbaum was a Federal prosecutor in the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District, including several years as the chief of the economic crimes section.

In 2007, she became a Federal magistrate judge in the Southern District. In 2012, she was nominated by President Obama and was overwhelmingly confirmed by the Senate as a U.S. district court judge.

Through it all, she has remained active in the community and has many supporters in South Florida who I continue to hear from until moments ago and, of course, throughout the State. And I wish her and her family all the best throughout this process, and I am certain the Committee will give her nomination a full and fair consideration, and I thank you for this opportunity and the opportunity to speak to you today.

Thank you.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Senator Rubio, and thank you for being here. As I mentioned earlier, many of our Senators have other meetings and hearings, and you are excused if you have another.

Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

Like the Chairman said, you have been a district court judge and have been there for about 2 years. I would like to get a better sense of what your approach to hearing appeals will be.

First, on the one hand, what characteristics have you seen in appellate court judges that you would hope to avoid, if confirmed? And, on the other hand, what characteristics would you hope to emulate?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, the ones that I think that an appellate judge should have would be patience, treating those who come before the court with dignity, and hard-working. It is very important for the judges to be hard-working and to be well prepared to understand the cases that come before them, whether they dispose of them on the papers or after oral argument, to be prepared for the oral argument if it is through oral argument; and I think to explain thoroughly the basis for the opinions that they issue. And those are the qualities that I would strive to emulate.

Senator GRASSLEY. Which ones have you seen either as a lawyer or as a judge that you would hope not to—or that you would not do because you considered those something a judge should not do?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, I would say that I have not really seen too much of that. I have been fortunate, because when I clerked on the Eleventh Circuit—

Senator GRASSLEY. Under what circumstances do you believe it is appropriate for a Federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Judge ROSENBAUM. In very rare circumstances, and only when there is no other way to dispose of the issue other than to rule on the constitutionality, and then only when the law clearly conflicts with a part of the Constitution.

Senator GRASSLEY. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? And what factors would you consider in reaching a decision to overturn such a precedent?

Judge ROSENBAUM. Well, of course, the circuit can overturn its own precedent only on an en banc hearing or, of course, when the Supreme Court has issued a ruling that is directly contrary to a prior ruling of the circuit. And the court should sit en banc under Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure only when we are talking about a matter of great importance or when there are conflicting panel opinions. So in order to resolve a conflict in the circuit, if there were one, that would be reason to overturn circuit precedent. Or if, for example, it were a matter of great importance, that would be another reason.

Senator GRASSLEY. I am going to ask a philosophical question based upon a statement that Justice Scalia made in a speech in 2005, and I do not want you to worry about Justice Scalia. I am just asking you about this philosophy.

“I think it is up to the judge to say what the Constitution provided, even if what it provided is not the best answer, even if you think it should be amended. If that is what it says, that is what it says.”

Would you agree with that philosophy?

Judge ROSENBAUM. I am not familiar with the speech that it comes from, but, yes, I would.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. And then, second, and my last, do you believe a judge should consider his or her own values or policy preferences in determining what the law means? And if you thought that a judge should, under what circumstances?

Judge ROSENBAUM. I absolutely believe that a judge should not consider his or her own personal policy preferences and that they should play no role in interpreting the law.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Judge Rosenbaum, and you are excused. Thank you.

Judge ROSENBAUM. Thank you very much.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. We are going to ask the next three nominees, Bruce Hendricks, Mark Mastroianni, and Leslie Caldwell, to please come forward.

Now that you have sat, would you please rise so we can swear you in? Do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before the Committee is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Judge HENDRICKS. I do.

Mr. MASTROIANNI. I do.

Ms. CALDWELL. I do.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Ms. Caldwell, I am going to introduce you because no one has. You have heard abundant and very full introductions of the other two nominees, so let me just say we are very honored to have you here today. You have a lot of great experience in courts, and you have been nominated to be Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division at the Department of Justice. I understand you are currently a partner in the New York office of Morgan, Lewis and Bockius and focus on white-collar crime and regulatory matters.

Previously, Ms. Caldwell served as special assistant to the Assistant Attorney General in the Criminal Division at the Department of Justice where she led the Department of Justice Enron Task Force from 2002 to 2004. Prior to that she served as an Assistant United States Attorney for 11 years in the Eastern District of New York and for 5 years in the Northern District of California. She began her legal career at two private law firms: Spengler, Carlson, Gubar and Brodsky, and then at Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft. I understand you were born in Steubenville, Ohio, and earned your degree, your B.A. summa cum laude at Pennsylvania State University in 1979 and your J.D. cum laude from George Washington University School of Law in 1982. Welcome.

And let me ask each of the nominees, give you an opportunity to make a brief opening statement, if you wish, introducing your family, as Judge Rosenbaum did.

STATEMENT OF HON. BRUCE HENDRICKS, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal. I would like to start by thanking Senators Graham and Scott for their very gracious remarks. Their roles in this process are difficult ones, and I am grateful for their confidence in me.

I would like to thank President Obama, most of all, and his administration for this nomination to the district court. It is a singular personal honor and experience for me.

To Senator Blumenthal, Chairman Leahy, and Ranking Member Grassley, my sincere thanks and appreciation for the invitation to appear here today.

I have family and many friends cheering me on. Today here with me is my husband, Teddy; my son; my daughter and her husband. I am particularly thrilled that my nieces Torrey Crawford and Sydney Howe are here.

Back home I have an anxious mother, siblings, and cousins watching along with other friends and colleagues in Charleston and in South Carolina. I am only here because of them.

My father has been deceased for some time now. He would be greatly pleased.

I look forward to answering any questions you may have.

[The biographical information of Judge Hendricks appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Mr. Mastroianni.

STATEMENT OF MARK MASTROIANNI, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

Mr. MASTROIANNI. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal.

Senator Blumenthal, I would like to thank you and thank you, Senator Grassley, for your consideration and involvement in this process; also Senator Leahy for his participation in this Committee.

I would like to thank President Obama for the nomination and having the faith in me and my background that I could be considered to serve in this position.

And I would very much like to thank Senator Warren who established the committee to look for an appropriate candidate to fill this judgeship in our State. I thank her for the selection process and, again, for her faith in me and my coming out of that process.

I would like to thank Senator Markey as well for his support of my nomination as well.

Present with me today, I am very fortunate to have the most important people in my life here with me. My wife, Carolyn, is here. My daughter Christine, my daughter Jennifer, and my daughter Lauren are all here with me.

Also, very special to me, very close family members: my sister-in-law, Joan, is present with my niece and nephews. My nephews Steve, Mike, and John, and my niece Meghan, are also here. I thank them very much for being here.

Senators Blumenthal and Grassley, I would also like to note that here supporting me today, it is quite an honor that several of the other elected district attorneys from the State of Massachusetts are here to support me in this. I did not see all who came in, but I know District Attorneys Blodgett, Sullivan, Connelly, Cruz, and Morrissey are here in the room. So out of the 11 elected district attorneys in the State of Massachusetts, we are well represented in this room today, and I appreciate their support.

[The biographical information of Mr. Mastroianni appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you very much.
Ms. Caldwell.

STATEMENT OF LESLIE CALDWELL, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Ms. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member Grassley, thank you. I am very honored to appear before you today as President Obama's nominee to be the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division of the Justice Department.

Here with me are my partner, Michele Kohler, and her daughter, Hannah Ryan, who are sitting behind me. Also here is my niece, Megan Caldwell, who is sitting in the second row; my fantastic administrative assistant, Donna Weekes; and several other friends and colleagues. I thank them all for their support and for being here today.

I know that if they had made it to this day, my parents, Key and Caryl Caldwell, would have been so proud of seeing their daughter sit before this Committee. My father, Key, was a native of Lookout Mountain, Tennessee, who at the age of 19 joined the Army Air Corps in World War II. He became a B-24 bomber pilot, assigned to the 8th Air Force, based in England. After many successful missions over Germany, his plane was shot down. He managed to keep the plane airborne until he could leave German airspace and land in a field in Switzerland. All but one of his crew survived. He was detained by the Swiss but escaped, and with the help of the French Resistance, made his way to safety. My father went on to become a successful businessman in Pittsburgh, but he was also a very humble man. In fact, I never even knew the story that I just shared with you until I was well into adulthood and stumbled upon my father's war diary. When I asked him with amazement about his exploits, he said very matter of factly that all he had done was serve his country as best he could. And he never spoke of it again.

My mother, Caryl, was a remarkable woman who set an example for me every day of her life. She grew up in a single-parent home on the north side of Pittsburgh, which at the time was a very poor neighborhood. Though she was the valedictorian of her high school class, there was no money for college. So she got a job as a secretary in the Legal Department at U.S. Steel and worked her way through the University of Pittsburgh at night. Around the time she was meeting my father and marrying him, she graduated from Pitt summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa. Though she never worked in a traditional job again, she raised three children, was in leadership roles in many community organizations, and volunteered countless hours as an adult literacy teacher. I like to think that if my mom had been 30 years later, she would have been the one sitting before this Committee today.

Our parents taught my brothers that the values that matter most in life are fairness, integrity, hard work, and humility. As I sit before this Committee, I am especially mindful of those values, and of the honor of public service, to which I have dedicated much of my career.

If I am fortunate enough to become head of the Criminal Division, I will do my best to ensure the vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws and to apply them with equal force whether the wrongdoing occurs in a boardroom, across a computer network, or on a street corner.

I thank you again for considering my nomination, and I am pleased to answer any questions you may have.

[The biographical information of Ms. Caldwell appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Ms. Caldwell.

Let me begin my questions with Judge Hendricks. What do you think are the two or three most important experiences that prepare you for this job?

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal, for the question. My experience as an Assistant United States Attorney for the——

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I do not know whether your microphone is on.

Judge HENDRICKS. It looks like it is on. There it is.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you, Senator Blumenthal. I think my experience as an Assistant United States Attorney for 11 years, trying cases before the district court, and handling investigations on behalf of the United States was a great experience in enabling me to be familiar with the district court and trial procedure, in particular the Rules of Evidence. Then transitioning into the role of United States magistrate judge I believe helps prepare me for the role of United States district judge as I am already working in the district court and handling cases there, some of which are under certain circumstances co-extensive with the Article III judges.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. That sort of anticipates my next question. In your district, do magistrates conduct trials? In the District of Connecticut they do, just as Federal judges, Article III judges, as you just mentioned.

Judge HENDRICKS. Yes, Senator. By consent of the parties and approval of the district judge, then a magistrate judge may conduct a trial, and I have had three jury trials in my career—well, two jury trials and one bench trial.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Civil or criminal?

Judge HENDRICKS. Civil. We cannot handle full felony jury trials, although we can take felony guilty pleas, and I have done that. And I handle some of the preliminary felony criminal work.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. In your view, what is the most difficult matter you have had to handle as a magistrate judge?

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you, Senator, for that question. Actually, every day, every case is important, and I give great pause before I issue a ruling or make a decision. I think in particular in the criminal law arena, decisions in regards to an individual's liberty are always tough decisions, and those would be my hardest decisions every day.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Mr. Mastroianni, let me ask you the same question. What do you think are the two or three most important experiences that would affect your judging?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. In my professional career, I have had several experiences which I think prepare me for this consideration, and it started out being in private practice and learning about the business world and how to make it in the business world. Being a criminal defense attorney, starting from the ground up and working to doing criminal defense at the highest level, and doing the same thing as a prosecutor, starting as a prosecutor at the lowest level and working my way up to be handling the highest cases, and ultimately have the good fortune to be elected as district attorney and run an office—those experiences have taught me so much about the law, about the respect that should be had for each opposing side. Although it is an adversarial system, fairness and integrity in the system is the common goal. And my experience I think comes together, so I fully appreciate the dynamic of our system.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. As district attorney, what are the most difficult decisions you have to make?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. The most difficult decisions oftentimes deal with selecting charges and selecting what penalties we will seek to impose on particular cases. Where there are victims involved, it becomes much more complicated when there are vulnerable victims involved, children and elderly people who cannot necessarily speak for themselves. And that was a source of their victimization that becomes especially difficult. So putting forward cases where our case is weakened by the inherent vulnerability of someone who was victimized is a difficult task, and we have taken a lot of pains to put procedures in place that will appropriately handle those cases.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. So victims' advocates or special counsels to represent victims are something that you value highly?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. I do value them highly. We do have a special victim witness unit within our office who is in constant contact with victims of cases and let them know what the system means, because also part of the circle of victimization, if you will, is when a victim comes into a courthouse that they are not familiar with and they have never been involved in a proceeding and they find themselves there on a regular basis and it is very intimidating for them. And so our office does provide support for them in the role of their own special advocates.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you.

Ms. Caldwell, I should have said at the very outset, although I spoke mainly of the judges that we have as needs, that your position is really one of the most important in the whole Federal Government because your recommendations very often will be final as to the charges that are brought either by a United States Attorney—and I know because I served as one quite a few years ago—or by the Department of Justice itself. And so you will have in your hands the fates of many individuals whose lives will hang in the balance. And obviously the interests of society also will be at stake because those individuals may have committed very serious and significant crimes with ramifications on national security or other kinds of very important issues at stake.

And I was moved by your stories of your parents. Obviously they are a source of your dedication to public service. You served, I believe, about 17 years as a Government attorney, which, in my view, is one of the highest callings of any attorney. So I want to thank you for your dedication to public service and just ask you whether you go into this job with any priorities. You mentioned that they are all important, whether it is white-collar crime or organized crime or drug dealing, whether you see any priorities for the Criminal Division at this point.

Ms. CALDWELL. Thank you, Senator, and I appreciate your comments. I certainly do see that things are moving very fast in the world of cyber crime, in the world of international crime. Things are always moving fast in the world of narcotics and organized crime and gangs. And white-collar crime is also something that I think is a very important priority.

So as you said, Senator, I think you are correct, they are all priorities, and I believe, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, my first priority will be to understand what exactly is being done currently and try to align that with what the Department's priorities perhaps should be.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Do you have a view as to what the division of responsibility should be between the United States Attorneys and the Department of Justice?

Ms. CALDWELL. I think that the United States Attorney—having been in both, I think that the United States Attorney's Offices are really the front lines of most Federal criminal prosecution. I think the Criminal Division has a very significant role in supporting those offices, particularly the smaller offices that may not have the resources to do certain kinds of cases. But the Criminal Division also has its own very important litigating role, as you know, Senator. The Fraud Section is a very large section that brings very sophisticated cases all over the country. The Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section is probably the premier expert on computer crime in the country.

So I think that it is going to be very important to continue working together, the Criminal Division and the U.S. Attorney's Offices, if I am fortunate enough to be in that role.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. And do you think that there need to be enhanced training programs for the attorneys in either the Criminal Division or the Department of Justice generally?

Ms. CALDWELL. I am certainly not—I am not familiar with what the current training programs are, but I know that it is very important to train particularly young prosecutors to understand the importance of their role and the power that they have, to make sure that that power is used in an appropriate, fair, and judicious manner.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. And one last question. You know, we had testimony—in fact, it may have been at our last hearing—on the issue of data breaches, the kinds of hacking and theft of information that has occurred at stores like Target and Neiman Marcus where the stores could be viewed as a victim and are a victim of criminal activity, but at the same time need to be held accountable for increasing the protections that they have, protections for themselves against that kind of invasion, but also protections for their customers whose information is entrusted to them.

Do you have views as to what the stores ought to be doing or what other enterprises should be doing to protect themselves better against this kind of cyber attack?

Ms. CALDWELL. I appreciate that the cyber attack as well as intellectual property theft are both extremely important issues. I am not familiar with the specifics other than what I have read in the media of the data breach issues. But I think it is clearly very important. I think one of the areas in which criminals are moving very quickly is cyber attack, cyber breach, intellectual property theft, and that is something that I would look forward to learning a lot more about and being very aggressive in connection with that.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Ms. Caldwell.

Ms. CALDWELL. Thank you, Senator.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes, I am going to start with Mr. Mastroianni and then Ms. Caldwell and then Judge Hendricks.

I am going to, first of all, talk about a gun prosecution you were involved in. Let me give some background before I ask a question.

In 2013, the Massachusetts Supreme Court upheld the State's gun storage law. The law mandated that gun owners keep their firearms in a locked container or equipped with a mechanical lock even inside their own homes. A defendant kept a loaded handgun in an unlocked drawer in his bedroom. Following an argument, the defendant's roommate took the firearm and threw it out the window where it was recovered by police. The defendant was charged with violating the storage law.

The defendant challenged the statute as an unconstitutional violation of the Second Amendment. The defendant argued that requiring firearms to be locked even within one's home effectively invalidated the right recognized by the Supreme Court in Heller, and the Massachusetts Supreme Court disagreed. You were district attorney at the time. I recognize that that was part of your job, to enforce State laws. However, you said in an interview that the court made the right decision in the case. In my view, the right to self-defense does not mean a whole lot if you cannot access your firearm in a real big hurry.

My question then: Would you explain why you believe the particular law does not violate the Second Amendment?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. Thank you, Senator. The Second Amendment is clear. Individuals do have rights to have firearms, and I respect that and recognize that as clearly the law of the land.

States have the authority to impose other regulations that affect the safety of their citizens, and the specific statute on which you are speaking went to the safety of citizens. Around the same time as that case came up, we were dealing with several other cases where firearms that were unlocked—one was in a private home. I believe both instances were in a private home. And access to those firearms was gotten by an individual who was drug-addicted and struggling with psychological issues in their life at that time, and there was an unlocked firearm, and that individual got a hold of that weapon and ended up using that weapon to end their life.

There have been other cases that have come into my office where unlocked firearms have fallen into the hands of unlicensed people and/or children, and there is rarely a good outcome when a youngster or teenager gets a hold of a gun, does not really know how to use it, and takes it out of the home. And that was the basis for the legislation in Massachusetts requiring those gun locks. It was in no shape or form meant to infringe upon the ultimate right given by the Supreme Court of an individual's constitutional right to have a properly licensed gun, but in Massachusetts we did prosecute those specific cases under the specific facts as were presented because they were violations of the Massachusetts law of the safety with how those guns were kept.

Senator GRASSLEY. I am going to stop and let Senator Nelson—

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I was going to ask you, Senator Grassley, whether you would be willing to pause for a moment, and I am going to ask Senator Nelson to please make his comments and remarks concerning Judge Rosenbaum.

PRESENTATION OF HON. ROBIN ROSENBAUM, NOMINEE TO BE CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE ELEVENTH CIRCUIT, BY HON. BILL NELSON, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF FLORIDA

Senator NELSON. Mr. Chairman, you all are so kind to extend the courtesy to your fellow Senators. To you, Mr. Chairman, to Chairman Leahy, to Senator Grassley, I am very appreciative and want to tell you of the bipartisan support for our nominee, Robin Rosenbaum.

Senator Rubio and I, as we have testified several times, we have a committee that we call a “judicial nominations committee,” and the intent is to find the very best candidates without regard to partisanship for judicial vacancies.

In this particular case, Judge Rosenbaum was a selection to the Federal district court a couple—several years ago and has apparently performed in such an outstanding manner that the President wanted to select her then for the circuit. And so Senator Rubio and I, well knowing her, have not only rendered no objection, we affirmatively support Judge Rosenbaum. And she will join the Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit, and, of course, that is in the southeastern United States.

She began her legal career in the U.S. Attorney General's Honors Program where she worked in the Federal Programs Branch of the Civil Division of the Department of Justice. She then worked in private practice in one of our very finest law firms—it is now a nationwide law firm—Holland and Knight. She worked as a clerk for a Federal judge, Judge Marcus, United States Circuit Court Judge for the Eleventh Circuit, and as an Assistant USA for the Southern District. So you see the breadth of her experience.

She then became a magistrate, which is often the route that we find now for so many of our Federal judges, because the magistrates render such important Federal service. And then in 2012, we confirmed her to the U.S. district court.

Judge Rosenbaum also works to inspire the next generation of legal minds in her teaching position at the University of Miami, where she earned her law degree magna cum laude. She has an undergraduate degree from Cornell.

And she is joined and I have just met with her family, her husband, Phil Rothschild; their daughters Rosie and Evin; her mom and dad; and her two sisters and their families.

So it is with heartfelt and enthusiastic support that we bring this to the Committee, and I want to particularly thank Senator Grassley, because we have been through a number of nominees. We have a judicial emergency in two of our three districts in Florida, and Senator Grassley, where he had questions once on one nominee, unrelated to this, he had an open mind to go back and re-evaluate, and I want to say for the record, Senator Grassley, how much I appreciate that.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you, Senator Nelson. We are honored and pleased you could join us today. We know that you and our colleagues are very busy, and we are glad also you had a chance to spend some time with Judge Rosenbaum. Thank you for coming.

Thank you.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you, Senator Nelson, for your kind words.

One more question for Mr. Mastroianni. In 2010, you were asked about decriminalizing possession of less than an ounce of marijuana. You said that doing so would be “a step in the right direction for trying to get rid of the backlog of cases in the court” and that “it was putting a strain on a lot of people’s criminal records which really should not be there.”

Since you made that statement, you have, in fact, served as district attorney. Has your opinion on this issue changed, or do you still believe possession of less than an ounce of marijuana should be decriminalized?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. Well, in Massachusetts, Massachusetts moved forward, and that is, in fact, the law now in Massachusetts relative to a very small amount. So consistent with what I said, that law does follow along with my opinion on the issue.

In developing the opinion on that issue and in developing the change in law of Massachusetts, the State and myself recognized and examined the time spent by law enforcement in investigation of certain offenses and the need for law enforcement to spend their time investigating other, perhaps arguably more serious offenses. So in reaching that determination, it is a balance of the resources that law enforcement and prosecution offices have in trying to recognize what may need the most minimal attention of each offices in trying to allocate resources for the best way to serve public safety.

Senator GRASSLEY. Has your view been reinforced as a result of being district attorney?

Mr. MASTROIANNI. Well, in my experience as district attorney, we have seen—we have seen the number of cases coming into the court lessen, but there is still—we are still early enough in the process for there to be this transition period where both law enforcement and prosecutors are trying to deal with and understand the new law relative to decriminalization of marijuana, because it affects law enforcement and prosecutions on many levels, including levels like motion to suppress levels and when can police officers conduct a search of someone or a search of someone's car if there should be less than a criminal amount of marijuana in the vehicle.

So those are all legal issues that we continue to work on, so we have not reached a level where we say we have achieved something and we can tangibly look at that and say this was positive, because we are still in the implementation stages.

Senator GRASSLEY. Ms. Caldwell, I am going to start out with the enforcement of the Controlled Substances Act, and then I am going to move on to Dodd-Frank and whistleblowers so you know what is coming up.

One of the problems with the Department's policy of selective enforcement of the Controlled Substances Act in Colorado and Washington is that the Federal priorities identified by the Department are already being negatively impacted by the failure of these States to regulate medical marijuana. I will use as an example one of those Federal priorities is preventing the diversion of marijuana to neighboring States. Yet the percentage of marijuana interdicted by law enforcement in Iowa that can be traced to Colorado has risen from 10 percent in 2010 to 25 percent in 2011 to 36 percent in 2012.

So my question: Do you agree with me that the Department should establish clear metrics in determining if its policy in this area is adequately protecting Federal interests so that, if necessary, it can re-evaluate its decision not to challenge these State laws?

Ms. CALDWELL. Senator Grassley, I recognize the importance of this issue, and I very much appreciate the question.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you.

Ms. CALDWELL. I think that enforcement of the Controlled Substances Act is extremely important. I was a narcotics prosecutor for several years in New York and saw the havoc that drug abuse could have on communities and, frankly, the entire New York City was at an all-time high homicide rate when I was a prosecutor there. So I have seen this firsthand, and I think it is very important.

I think that—I am not privy to the Department's internal decisions about policy or about the priorities that you mentioned, Senator. I am generally familiar with the priorities, and I think that they represent—they seem to represent well the things that should be prosecuted and, as you know, one of those priorities is the diversion priority. Other priorities are to keep marijuana away from minors, keep it away from cartels, keep cartels from taking control of distribution businesses in Colorado and Washington and any other State that may go in that direction.

So I think it is extremely important. I look forward to learning much more about the issue and about the internal thought process if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed to this position.

Senator GRASSLEY. I know that the policy was decided at, I assume, a level above what you will be doing, but since you are enforcing the laws, I hope that they listen to you; and if they say that they are going to make sure that Colorado and Washington enforce their laws in order to have this discretion of not prosecuting against the Federal law and they are not keeping the product within their State, I hope you will re-evaluate it, because I think my constituents in Iowa ought to be protected under Federal law.

Another question. I also understand that the Department may soon issue a guidance memorandum to make it easier for a marijuana business in those two States to use the banking system. Two questions, but I will ask one at a time—or, no, I have got three or four questions that maybe you can give me a short answer to, because I want to know that I am understanding Federal law. I just want to make sure about your view on Federal law in this area.

Distribution of marijuana is a Federal crime that is a predicate offenses for money-laundering prosecution. Is that correct?

Ms. CALDWELL. Correct, Senator.

Senator GRASSLEY. For example, if a business knowingly attempts to engage in a monetary transaction of $10,000 or more that are derived from distributing marijuana, that is a violation of Federal money-laundering laws. Is that correct?

Ms. CALDWELL. Yes, Your Honor—Senator.

[Laughter.]

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay.

Ms. CALDWELL. I am in the habit of saying “Your Honor.” I apologize.

Senator GRASSLEY. That is okay.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I think that is a mistake we commonly make.

Senator GRASSLEY. And if a business knowingly attempts to engage in a financial transaction of any amount of funds that are in the proceeds of distributing marijuana with the intent to promote the carrying on of the distribution of marijuana, that is also a violation. Would that be correct?

Ms. CALDWELL. Yes, Senator, that could be a violation.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. And then one more or two more short questions before I—well, then I am going to move on to Dodd-Frank—or whistleblowers. And the penalties for violating these Federal money-laundering laws can be up to 20 years in prison.

Ms. CALDWELL. I have to acknowledge that I have not looked recently at the current money-laundering penalties, but that sounds potentially correct, yes, sir.

Senator GRASSLEY. And then, finally, none of that will change unless Congress changes the Federal money-laundering laws, right?

Ms. CALDWELL. Certainly the laws as they are written will be enforced by the Criminal Division.

Senator GRASSLEY. I think you see what I am leading up to. I am afraid that there might be a decision made within the Department of these people using the banking system and somehow not be convicted of—or prosecuted for money laundering. Let us move on.

You probably—well, no, you would not know, but let me tell you, I very much believe whistleblowers are patriotic people, and that we would not be able to do our job of oversight or in your case prosecution if you did not have some of their information.

In a 2010 article that highlighted the whistleblower provisions of Dodd-Frank, you commented that these new whistleblower provisions “will have a huge impact” and would be, continuing the quote, “very significant.” You also said, “There are some number of people in large corporations who learn about things that could be considered violations of securities laws. Now they have a huge motivation to move forward.”

Based upon your extensive experience as a Federal prosecutor, how valuable are whistleblowers to Federal law enforcement and prosecution efforts?

Ms. CALDWELL. Senator, I appreciate the question. I also appreciate your leadership in the area of whistleblowers. I agree with you that whistleblowers are often very important sources of information. I know that the Dodd-Frank whistleblower program has led to very significant numbers of whistleblower reports to the Securities and Exchange Commission, some of which have turned into significant securities cases. I know that in the health care arena and a lot of other areas, there are whistleblowers who bring forward very significant information, and as a prosecutor, I recognize—when I was a prosecutor, I recognized that that information could sometimes have a lot of value in bringing a prosecution.

Senator GRASSLEY. Do you believe that providing financial incentives to whistleblowers assists in the enforcement of Federal laws?

Ms. CALDWELL. Certainly that is the status of the—from Dodd-Frank and the False Claims Act. There are financial incentives for whistleblowers, and I do think those financial incentives have contributed to whistleblowers coming forward.

Senator GRASSLEY. Yes. Now I am going to move closer to home where you will be home, the Department of Justice, and nothing you could have anything done with, but I have—I want to express to you that I have concerns about how the Department of Justice generally treats whistleblowers. I often feel that whistleblowers are kind of treated like skunks at a picnic, just as an example.

Will you commit as Assistant Attorney General that you will do everything in your power to ensure that these brave individuals who come forward, often at personal risk, will be treated fairly and that those who retaliate against whistleblowers will be held accountable?

Ms. CALDWELL. Senator, I am not familiar with the exact procedures of the Department of Justice with regard to whistleblowers, but I am confident that there are procedures in place, and I am confident that there is a recognition that whistleblowers should be protected and should not be retaliated against.

Senator GRASSLEY. Let me say to you that you are in a very good position where you are, since you know that whistleblowers are very important to getting the job done, that I hope when you run into some of this you will be an advocate for them within the Department as well as people within corporations or elsewhere.

I am going to now move on to Judge Hendricks. Thank you very much, Ms. Caldwell.

Ms. CALDWELL. Thank you, Senator Grassley.

Senator GRASSLEY. You founded the Bridge Program in your home district of South Carolina. You are a pioneer when it comes to Federal drug courts. Bridge is among the first Federal drug courts in the Nation—at least that is my understanding. How do you see the role of drug courts in the Federal judiciary?

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you, Senator Grassley. Yes, I was honored to be appointed the presiding judge for the district's first drug court program, and studies show and my experience has shown that for certain offenders, it is a very good thing. For those offenders whose criminal activity is fueled by addiction, for those offenders it has shown and I have seen that it improves their lives, it changes their lives, it reduces the cost of prosecution and incarceration. And by handling and dealing with their addiction, it also provides for community safety and a reduction of recidivism.

Senator GRASSLEY. As a Federal magistrate, where do you draw the line regarding who is admitted to drug court?

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you. Thank you, Senator. Well, the line in our program is clear. We would not admit in the U.S. Attorney's Office—we work with the U.S. Attorney's Office in choosing offenders to participate, would not involve—offenders who would not be involved with any kind of violent crime or crime involving child abuse or pornography.

Senator GRASSLEY. Before I ask the last question of you, I should go back to Ms. Caldwell. It probably sounded like only the Justice Department has problems with whistleblowers. It is throughout Government, so I am not just accusing the Justice Department of mistreating whistleblowers. Too often they are mistreated by bureaucracy generally.

Back to Judge Hendricks. If confirmed as a district judge, would you work to expand the Bridge Program in South Carolina's Federal courts?

Judge HENDRICKS. Senator, if asked to do so and if the rest of the district court were so inclined, I would be happy to participate in establishing a drug court program in other areas of the district.

Senator GRASSLEY. My last three small questions deal with a speech on employment discrimination that you gave for the South Carolina Trial Lawyers Association in 2008. You said that, "Summary judgment has a serious hurdle in the Fourth Circuit." Could you explain what you meant by that statement?

Judge HENDRICKS. Thank you. Your Honor—I mean, Senator, the standard for summary judgment in the Fourth Circuit is a tough one for certain litigants. I think my practice is to grant summary judgment motions where the law and the facts are clear and support it. But as part of that, there is always a danger in dismissing a case too early, and so you try to balance both of those equities in approaching motions for summary judgment.

Senator GRASSLEY. Okay. And, last, do you believe that the standard for summary judgment should be different for employment discrimination cases?

Judge HENDRICKS. Senator, I am not sure about that. I think there are rights on both sides of the issue, and it would not be up to me to make those decisions.

Senator GRASSLEY. Thank you very much, and thank you for your tolerance while I took so much time.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. Thank you. Not at all, Senator Grassley. Thank you. By the way, I want to join in expressing my appreciation for the work that you do on whistleblowers, really a profoundly important cause.

And thank you to the nominees who have appeared this morning and their families. In my personal opinion—I do not speak for the Committee—we have the good fortune and honor of hearing from some very, very exceptionally qualified individuals who I will support, and I really appreciate your being here today. And we need you quickly because, as you know, we have judicial crises in many parts of our country due to the lack of sufficient person power on the bench. Judge Rosenbaum made reference to the very heavy workload and caseload in the Southern District of Florida. I suspect that is true in each of the judicial districts that you have been nominated to fill positions.

And I want to say, Ms. Caldwell, I know that your position has been vacant since March 2013. You have been nominated since September 2013. I certainly hope that your nomination will be expedited.

I just want to say to my colleague Senator Grassley that I think Ms. Caldwell was a little bit modest about her prosecutorial record on narcotics and substance abuse in the Eastern District of New York, was it not, where you were a prosecutor? You did a number of very profoundly significant prosecutions while you were there, including Lorenzo Nichols, the Chinatown prosecution that you did, a number of extremely sensitive and challenging narcotics cases. So nobody knows better the importance of both organized crime and narcotics along with white-collar crime, as you testified today.

And on the subject of whistleblowers, I am not sure whether I recollect correctly, but did the Enron case involve a whistleblower?

Ms. CALDWELL. Yes, it did, Senator, a whistleblower named Sherron Watkins.

Senator BLUMENTHAL. I thought so, and as you know, Ms. Caldwell was responsible for the Enron prosecution, so she is certainly aware and sensitive to the importance of whistleblowers in major prosecutions.

All of that said, many thanks for being here today. Your families should be proud of you, and we are proud that you are potentially and hopefully filling very, very important positions in our system of justice. Thank you very much.

I am going to close the hearing, and the record will remain open for 1 week. Thank you.

[Whereupon, at 10:17 a.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

- b. The American Bar Association's Commentary to its Code of Judicial Conduct states that it is inappropriate for a judge to hold membership in any organization that invidiously discriminates on the basis of race, sex, or religion, or national origin. Indicate whether any of these organizations listed in response to 11a above currently discriminate or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies. If so, describe any action you have taken to change these policies and practices.

Before I was inducted in 1990, the University of Miami's Iron Arrow Honor Society limited membership to men. Iron Arrow has admitted women since 1985.

Membership in the Cornell University President's Council of Cornell Women is limited to women. Former Cornell University President Frank H.T. Rhodes established the group for the purpose of "advanc[ing] the involvement and leadership of women students, faculty, staff and alumnae within Cornell University and its many constituent communities, and to advise the President [of Cornell] on issues related to women." As a new member, I intend to propose that men who meet all of the membership criteria and who are interested in promoting the mission of the group be considered for membership.

To the best of my knowledge, none of the other organizations listed above currently discriminates or previously discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion, or national origin, either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies.

United States District Judge, United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, from June 27, 2012, to the present. United States Magistrate Judge, United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, from September 4, 2007, to the June 26, 2012. In addition, I handled criminal duty, including issuing criminal complaints, search warrants, and arrest warrants and presiding over criminal duty court.

1. Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Air Capital Grp., LLC, Case No. 12-20607-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

This case involved claims by the Democratic Republic of the Congo that the defendants had fraudulently induced the Democratic Republic of the Congo to enter into a contract for the refurbishment of an airplane owned by the country and that the defendants had thereafter breached the contract and defrauded the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The defendants counterclaimed, alleging that the Democratic Republic of the Congo had breached the contract by failing to make required payments for services rendered by the defendants under the contract. Trial in this case lasted for thirteen days. The jury found that the defendants had not fraudulently induced the Democratic Republic of the Congo to enter into a contract but that the defendants had breached the contract and had engaged in some fraud against the Democratic Republic of the Congo. In all, the jury awarded the Democratic Republic of the Congo approximately $2.2 million. As for the counterclaim, the jury concluded that the Democratic Republic of the Congo had not breached the contract. Trial began July 2, 2013, and finished August 1, 2013. Citations of significant opinions that I filed in this case include the following: Democratic Republic of the Congo v. Air Capital Grp., LLC, 2013 WL 3223686 (S.D. Fla. 2. United States v. Brown, Case No. 11-60285-CR-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

This case involved a series of attempted armored-car robberies, culminating in an armored-car robbery where the armored-car driver was shot and killed by one of the perpetrators. Although the Government charged six defendants, one (Madison) was not death-penalty eligible, so I tried his case separately while the Government determined whether it wished to pursue the death penalty against the remaining five defendants. Madison's trial started on July 31, 2012, and ended on August 13, 2012. Madison was found guilty of conspiracy to commit Hobbs Act robbery, one count of attempted Hobbs Act robbery, and one count of use of a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence. After the Government declined to seek the death penalty against the remaining five defendants, I tried the case against them. That trial started May 24, 2013, and ended July 15, 2013. One defendant (Simmons) was acquitted; one defendant (Williams) was convicted of conspiracy to commit Hobbs Act robbery, one count of attempted Hobbs Act robbery, one count of possession of a firearm in furtherance of a crime of violence, and one count of being a felon in possession of a firearm; and the other three defendants (Brown, Johnson, and Davis) were found guilty of conspiracy to commit Hobbs Act robbery. The jury hung on the remaining counts. Citations of significant opinions that I filed in this case include the following: United States v. Davis, 2013 WL 2156659 (S.D. Fla. May 17, 2013); United States v. Madison, 2012 WL 3095357 (S.D. Fla. July 30, 2012).

6. United States v. Thompson, Case No. 12-20106-CR-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

In this criminal case, twin brothers were charged with trafficking oxycodone. The alleged drug-trafficking operation involved both South Florida and Boston, Massachusetts. Trial began August 22, 2012, and ended September 5, 2012. The jury hung, and when the case was retried before another judge (due to scheduling conflicts), the defendants were convicted. Although I issued written opinions in this case, I did not issue any case-dispositive ones.

7. Shipco Transp., Inc. v. Abba Shipping Lines, Inc., Case No. 11-22055-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

This case involved a dispute over the shipping of certain cargo from Nashville, Tennessee, to Tin Can Island, Nigeria. When the shipment arrived in Nigeria, the Nigerian government refused to allow it to be unloaded because no appropriate license had been obtained. Therefore, the shipment had to be returned to the United States. The parties disputed whether the shipping company or the shipper should pay for the freight charges associated with the ill-fated shipment. The bench trial was held on July 25, 2012, and August 17, 2012. I entered judgment for the plaintiff shipping company. The Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law may be found at the following citation: Shipco Transp., Inc. v. Abba Shipping Lines, Inc., 2012 WL 6725875 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 27, 2012).

I presided over a jury trial in this employment discrimination case brought by a former hospital employee against the hospital that terminated her employment. The plaintiff, an executive secretary formerly employed by the defendant hospital, alleged discrimination based on her race, age, disability, national origin, and gender under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The defendant hospital argued that it had ended the plaintiff's employment as the result of a reduction in force that resulted in the layoff of numerous employees. Trial began on May 13, 2010, and ended on May 20, 2010. The jury returned a verdict for the hospital. The order on the motion for summary judgment may be found at the following citation: Lawson v. Plantation Gen. Hosp., L.P., 2010 WL 1258058 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 30, 2010).

This matter involved a United States Securities and Exchange Commission enforcement action against a defendant (Huff) and three relief defendants. The defendant was alleged to have used his companies to drain a publicly-traded company of approximately $130 million. I held a bench trial that began on February 16, 2010, and ended on February 25, 2010. Subsequently, I entered judgment for the SEC and against Huff and two of the three relief defendants and judgment for one of the three relief defendants and against the SEC. Under the judgment, Huff was required to disgorge approximately $10 million and was barred from serving as an officer and director of a publicly traded company. The Amended Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law may be found at the following citation: SEC v. Huff, 758 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (S.D. 10. Peters v. Peake, Case No. 08-81162-CIV-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla.)

I presided over a jury trial in this case brought by a doctor against the Veterans Administration. The plaintiff, who worked as a physician in the Veterans Administration hospital, alleged that after she complained about a sexually hostile work environment, the Veterans Administration retaliated against her by placing her in an administrative position. The Veterans Administration denied that it had done so and instead argued that it had transferred her to another position to compensate for the fact that three other physicians had been called to active duty, and the plaintiff had requested the hours that they worked. Upon transferring to the new position, however, the Veterans Administration contended that the plaintiff had acted in an unprofessional manner and had failed to attend work shifts without excuse. Trial began on December 7, 2009, and ended on December 11, 2009. The jury returned a verdict for the Veterans Administration. The order on the motion for summary judgment may be found at the following citation: Peters v. Peake, 2009 WL 5214997 (S.D. Fla. Dec. 30, 2009).

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

I am aware of no cases in which I ruled where certiorari was requested or granted.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Creative Hospitality Ventures, Inc. v. U.S. Liability Ins. Co., 655 F. Supp. 2d 1316 (S.D. Fla. 2009), rev'd in part, 444 F. App'x 370 (11th Cir. 2011). In applying Florida law's canon of contract construction interpreting any ambiguous provisions against the drafter, I concluded in a report and recommendation that, under Florida law, insurance-policy language covering "[o]ral or written publication, in any manner" provided protection for an insured vendor who allegedly violated the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions Act when it provided a customer with a credit card receipt that revealed more than five digits of that customer's credit card, even though no broader distribution of the information occurred. After I issued my decision, the Florida Supreme Court construed the term "publication" in a separate case as pertaining to only communication of information disseminated to the public. Ultimately, the district judge did not adopt the part of my report and recommendation that addressed the meaning of "publication" and later concluded that the insured vendor's conduct was not covered under the policy language because no "publication" had occurred. On appeal, the Eleventh Circuit agreed with the district court, in light of the Florida Supreme Court's ruling.

Grider v. Cook, Case No. 12-61429-CR-ROSENBAUM (S.D. Fla. Nov. 29, 2012), aff'd in part, vacated and remanded in part, 2013 WL 2981792 (11th Cir. June 17, 2013). In this case under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, I adopted the magistrate judge's report and recommendation recommending that the matter be dismissed for failure to state a cognizable claim. Although the Eleventh Circuit agreed that the case was properly dismissed, it noted that I should have provided the plaintiff with an opportunity to try to remedy the deficiencies by amending the complaint. Accordingly, the court remanded the matter with instructions to provide the plaintiff with the chance to amend his complaint.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

In nearly all cases, I have issued unpublished opinions. I have submitted fewer than ten opinions for publication. Nevertheless, a number of my opinions have been published by Westlaw and LEXIS, even though I have not submitted them for publication. I have listed all opinions published by Westlaw and LEXIS in response to Section b of this question. Besides these opinions, I have issued numerous opinions that do not appear on Westlaw or LEXIS. They are stored on the Court's CM/ECF electronic filing system under each case number in which they are docketed.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

All of my recusals have been sua sponte, and I do not believe that I have ever been asked to recuse myself. The judges on our court can give the Clerk's Office a list of individuals and entities in whose case we would recuse. I have provided such a list to the Clerk's Office, which provides automated conflict/recusal checks by email to ensure that no cases are missed. Thus, in any case where I have submitted the name of an attorney or party for whom I would recuse myself, I receive notification by email from the Clerk's Office that that case involves a lawyer or a party with whom I might have a conflict. I then make a decision regarding whether I need to recuse myself. As a general matter, I recuse in cases where an objective, disinterested, and fully informed lay observer would entertain a significant doubt about my impartiality. See 28 U.S.C. §§ 145, 455.

I have recused sua sponte from the following cases:

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or an arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I have spent nearly all of my twenty-two years as an attorney practicing almost exclusively in federal court. From 1991 to 1995, I served as a Trial Attorney at the Department of Justice. My practice was civil in nature, and I defended the constitutionality of numerous and varied federal statutes and the policies and procedures of the agencies that administered those statutes.

From 1995 to the beginning of 1996, I served as staff counsel to the Independent Counsel's Office on the investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ronald Brown. This was a criminal investigation. As staff counsel, I participated in the criminal investigation and provided legal guidance to the other team members when they requested it.

In my capacity as an associate in private practice with Holland & Knight LLP, from 1996 to 1997, I engaged exclusively in civil practice. My cases had subject matters ranging from a simple replevin issue to contractual issues to a case involving charges of false and fraudulent advertising. While at Holland & Knight LLP, I also worked on several matters involving federal employment law.

At the United States Attorney's Office from 1998 to 2007, I served as a criminal prosecutor and specialized in matters involving complex frauds, becoming the chief of the Economic Crimes Section for the Central Division (Fort Lauderdale). As the chief, at various times, I supervised between eight and ten other Assistant United States Attorneys. Additionally, I continued to perform the functions of every other Assistant United States Attorney in the Economic Crimes Section, handling my own full caseload. As an Assistant United States Attorney, I investigated, developed, indicted, litigated, and tried criminal cases involving allegations of all types of economic crimes, such as securities fraud, bank fraud, identity theft, tax fraud, telemarketing fraud, health care fraud, Internet fraud, computer crimes, and general mail and wire fraud. In this capacity, I practiced before the grand jury, prepared and filed numerous legal memoranda in support of the positions of the United States, argued various motions before the district court, and tried several cases.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

As a Trial Attorney at the Department of Justice, my client was the United States. I specialized in federal motions practice, often involving matters of constitutional and administrative law.

As a member of the Independent Counsel's Office, my client was the United States.

My clients at Holland & Knight LLP included individuals, small companies, and large companies. I specialized in employment law.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, my client was the United States. I specialized in prosecuting complex economic crimes.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

At the Civil Division of the Department of Justice, 100% of my practice involved federal litigation. I regularly argued motions in federal district courts, conducted two trials in federal district courts and one in a federal administrative court, and handled three appeals in federal circuit courts.

Before we could determine whether charges should be brought, the Independent Counsel's investigation of former United States Secretary Ronald Brown came to a premature end with the tragic death of Secretary Brown. Thus, other than grand jury work, which is noted in the public report of the Independent Counsel, I did not have any court appearances during this time.

At Holland & Knight LLP, 100% of my practice involved litigation. While there, I served as associate counsel on a week-long trial in state court. Other than that, my appearances in court during that period were few.

As an Assistant United States Attorney for nine years, 100% of my practice involved litigation. I regularly and frequently appeared in federal district court, handling duty court, grand jury, motions hearings, and trials.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 1. federal courts: 94.9%
 2. state courts of record: 5%
 3. other courts:
 4. administrative agencies: 0.1%
- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 1. civil proceedings: 40%
 2. criminal proceedings: 60%
- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

To the best of my recollection, I have tried at least fourteen cases to verdict, judgment or final decision. In addition, defendants entered guilty pleas following the beginning of trial and prior to verdict in other cases not included in this number. At the Department of Justice, I participated in two trials as an associate member of a litigation team, handling several of my own witnesses. Additionally, I tried one case as sole counsel. While at Holland & Knight LLP, I acted as associate counsel on a two-attorney team in trying a case to verdict. In my capacity as an Assistant United States Attorney, I tried at least twelve cases, with at least ten of those going to verdict. In all but two of these cases, I served as sole counsel. With respect to these two cases, in a thirty trial-day (over nine weeks) securities fraud trial, I served as lead counsel, and in the other, I served as associate counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 1. jury: 80%
 2. non-jury: 20%

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

The cases below are listed in chronological order.

1. Adolph Coors Co. v. Bentsen (D. Colo. 1992), aff'd, 2 F.3d 355 (10th Cir. 1993), aff'd sub nom. Rubin v. Coors Brewing Co., 514 U.S. 476 (1995).

Coors sued the United States Department of the Treasury, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (“ATF”), challenging the constitutionality of provisions of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act that precluded malt beverage producers from making numerical statements of alcohol content on the labels of and in the advertisements for malt beverages. As the junior member of a two-attorney team, I conducted extensive discovery, deposing numerous marketing executives at various malt beverage makers around the country, and finding and working with our expert. At trial, I presented and cross-examined some of the witnesses. The district court upheld the advertisement provision but declared the labeling aspect of the statute to be unconstitutional. Coors did not appeal, but ATF did. In a 9-0 decision (including one opinion concurring in the judgment), the United States Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the Tenth Circuit affirming the decision of the district court. I was not actively involved in the appeals. Trial in this matter lasted for three days, in approximately November 1992, before the Honorable Zita L. Weinshienk.

Plaintiff Barnes was a staff attorney at the Houston Branch Office of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”). She filed suit against the SEC alleging violations of Title VII and the Equal Pay Act. I was a member of the trial team and presented and cross-examined witnesses at trial. Although the district court (the Honorable Kenneth Hoyt) ruled for the plaintiff following a month-long bench trial, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, granting summary judgment for the defense and finding that Ms. Barnes had failed to exhaust her administrative remedies by refusing to participate in good faith in the administrative process for resolving her claims. I did not participate in the appeal.

3. Knobel v. Knobel, Eleventh Circuit Court in and for Miami-Dade County.

In this case a wife sued her husband regarding administration and ownership of their vocational school, the National School of Technology. The husband counter-claimed. Approximately two weeks before the trial, I was asked to assist the newly-assigned lead attorney in this matter because the previously-assigned lead counsel had a conflict during the trial period and, therefore, could not try the case. During the ensuing two weeks, we simultaneously conducted discovery and prepared for trial. Following a week-long trial in May 1997 before the Honorable David L. Tobin, the jury returned a verdict in favor of our client and awarded him in excess of $800,000, as I recall.

4. United States v. Garrahan, Case No. 98-6204-CR-ROETTGER (S.D. Fla.).

Defendant Garrahan obtained building contracts for schools in Broward and Dade Counties after fraudulently procuring bonds making him eligible to receive the contracts. He failed to complete the school buildings and defaulted on the bonds. He was charged with mail and wire fraud and, following an eight-day trial before the Honorable Norman Roettger, the jury returned a verdict of guilty on all counts. Defendant Garrahan was sentenced to just over five years' imprisonment. The judgment was affirmed on appeal. I served as associate counsel in this trial and conducted some of the witness examinations and cross-examinations.

5. United States v. Miller, Case No. 99-06115-CR-FERGUSON (S.D. Fla. 2000).

Defendant Miller had been convicted of multiple armed robberies. During the execution of an arrest warrant for Mr. Miller for yet another armed robbery, law enforcement found a stolen UZI sub-machine gun, along with a magazine and cartridges for the weapon. We charged Mr. Miller federally with being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm. As sole counsel for the United States, I handled all aspects of the prosecution, including the trial. Following a three-day trial in December 1999 before the Honorable Wilkie D. Ferguson, Jr., the jury returned a guilty verdict on both counts of the indictment. Judge Ferguson sentenced Mr. Miller to fifteen years' imprisonment.

6. United States v. Thurman, Case No. 01-6084-CR-FERGUSON (S.D. Fla.), aff'd, 54 F. App'x 491 (11th Cir. 2002).

This was one of a trio of cases brought against Defendant Thurman. The other two cases involved tax fraud and mail and wire fraud. The cases had to be brought separately because the subject matter of the violations alleged in each of the indictments was not interrelated. Consequently, in the interests of judicial economy, we proceeded by trying the two smaller cases before the largest of the three matters, which involved a massive Internet affinity fraud scheme. After Mr. Thurman was convicted in the first two cases tried, he pled guilty in the case involving the Internet affinity fraud scheme.

In this particular case, Mr. Thurman was charged with being a convicted felon in possession of firearms. While executing a search warrant that I had obtained in the fraud case, law enforcement found the firearms in a safe in Mr. Thurman's closet. During the course of the investigation, law enforcement discovered evidence that Mr. Thurman had, on occasion, threatened to use one of the firearms to commit suicide, including one incident where he had threatened to do so in a bank. As sole counsel assigned to the matter, I indicted and tried the case, making the opening statement and closing argument, as well as presenting all witnesses. Mr. Thurman was convicted and, as a result of this conviction, as well as the convictions in the two related cases I handled against him, he was sentenced to eight-and-one-half years in prison. This matter was tried over approximately three days in October 2001 before the Honorable Wilkie D. Ferguson.

7. United States v. Thurman, Case No. 01-06040-CR-HURLEY (S.D. Fla.).

This was another in the trio of Thurman cases brought by the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida. In this particular case, Mr. Thurman was charged with filing false tax returns for himself and six other individuals who sought and, in several cases, received fraudulent tax refunds. As sole counsel, I indicted and tried this case. Following the trial, the jury convicted Mr. Thurman. As noted above, as a result of Mr. Thurman's convictions in this case and the other two cases I prosecuted against him, Mr. Thurman was sentenced to eight-and-one-half years' imprisonment. This matter was tried over approximately seven trial days, I believe in October and November 2001, before the Honorable Daniel T.K. Hurley.

8. United States v. Johnson, Case No. 02-60012-CR-MIDDLEBROOKS (S.D. Fla.), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 440 F.3d 1286 (11th Cir. 2006).

In this securities fraud case, the lead defendant was alleged to have started a package delivery business, solicited approximately $20 million from investors, and caused the company to implode by systematically draining millions from the company for his own personal use and benefit. I served as lead counsel over thirty days of trial during a nine-week period in 2003 before the Honorable Donald M. Middlebrooks. I presented the opening statement and closing argument, as well as numerous witnesses in this matter. Mr. Johnson was convicted of every count in the indictment. A co-defendant was acquitted. On appeal, the Eleventh Circuit reversed a few of the money-laundering counts against Mr. Johnson, and he was ultimately sentenced on remand to sixteen years' imprisonment.

9. United States v. Livdahl, Case No. 05-60021-CR-COHN (S.D. Fla.) (criminal case); United States v. Livdahl, 356 F. Supp. 2d 1289 (S.D. Fla. 2005) (parallel civil case).

I litigated these related civil and criminal cases in tandem. The cases arose out of an incident at a local clinic where a doctor who attempted to create his own form of Botox using improperly diluted full-strength Botulinum Toxin Type A gave botulism to himself and three others to whom he administered his concoction.

Early in the investigation, we discovered that the doctor had apparently developed the idea of creating his own “Botox” when he appeared as a presenter at a seminar sponsored by two of the co-defendants, who owned a business that also created its own form of Botox. I spearheaded the investigation and the criminal litigation team. Shortly after initiating the investigation, I requested the assistance of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney’s Office to help us to file a civil action seeking an injunction against the co-defendants precluding them from continuing to sell their non-FDA-approved fake “Botox” while we conducted the criminal investigation. In order to obtain the injunction, we participated in a lengthy preliminary injunction hearing where, among others, the co-defendants testified. I cross-examined the lead defendant and made closing argument to the court. Upon hearing the evidence in the case, the court entered a preliminary injunction. See United States v. Livdahl, et al., 356 F. Supp. 2d 1289 (S.D. Fla. 2005). Once the preliminary injunction was in place, ensuring that no further fake “Botox” would be sold, we concentrated our efforts on the criminal aspects of the case.

Specifically, in the criminal case, we indicted four defendants, including the two who testified during the hearing on the preliminary injunction. The criminal case was vigorously defended and resulted in extensive motion practice. See, e.g., United States v. Livdahl, 459 F. Supp. 2d 1255 (S.D. Fla. 2005). I served as lead counsel throughout the district-court litigation of this matter. Two defendants pled guilty well before the trial. Along with co-counsel, we thoroughly prepared for trial of the other two defendants, but on the eve of trial, we learned that the two remaining defendants wished to enter guilty pleas. The sentencing of the first doctor was hotly contested in an evidentiary hearing and spanned approximately nine hours. Co-counsel and I presented several witnesses, multiple exhibits, and argument before the Court imposed the maximum sentence on the doctor. The co-defendants were sentenced to terms of imprisonment of nine years and approximately six years, respectively. Additionally, as a result of this investigation, the FDA obtained the names of approximately 200 physicians throughout the United States who had purchased the fake “Botox” from the co-defendants. Numerous United States Attorney’s Offices around the country consulted with our trial team and used the indictment I had prepared as a model to conduct prosecutions against those physicians who knowingly used fake “Botox” on their patients without the patients’ knowledge. I handled this matter before the Honorable James I. Cohn and the Honorable Lurana S. Snow in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

10. United States v. Vanmoor, Case No. 06-60064-CR-COOKE/BROWN (S.D. Fla.).

The defendant in this case was charged with a conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. He ran websites offering a purported guaranteed cure for cancer that would work within a six-week period. The websites discouraged customers who purchased the product from continuing their doctor-prescribed treatment courses, such as chemotherapy. During the course of the investigation, we obtained and executed search warrants on multiple locations.

Additionally, I enlisted the assistance of the Civil Division of the United States Attorney's Office to obtain an injunction shutting down the websites while we conducted the criminal investigation. During the course of the investigation, we obtained multiple search warrants for Mr. Vanmoor's e-mail and other electronic accounts and interviewed the family and friends of victims of Mr. Vanmoor's scheme.

After indicting the lead defendant, I obtained his extradition from the Netherlands, his native country. He arrived back in the United States shortly before I left the United States Attorney's Office to become a United States magistrate judge, and another Assistant United States Attorney tried the case in a two-week trial before the Honorable Jose Gonzalez, resulting in the defendant's conviction (other defendants pled guilty). I served as lead counsel in the matter before leaving the office.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

While at the United States Department of Justice Civil Division, I handled the matter captioned, Sarao v. NASA (D.D.C. 1993). In this case, the plaintiff sued NASA, seeking disclosure of certain photographs of the shuttle debris recovered in the Atlantic Ocean from the Challenger accident, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act. The National Air and Space Administration, which had already released several photographs of the recovered debris, opposed the plaintiff's complaint, concerned about the privacy interests of the astronauts' families. I represented NASA and conducted negotiations with the plaintiff. After ascertaining precisely the types of images for which he was searching, we were able to settle the case in a manner that was acceptable to both parties.

After leaving the Department of Justice, I worked on the Independent Counsel's Investigation of former United States Secretary of Commerce Ronald Brown and Nolanda Hill. Independent Counsel Dan Pearson was appointed by the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to conduct an investigation into certain matters related to former Secretary Brown's finances. The order conferring jurisdiction on Judge Pearson also authorized him to investigate the finances and operations of an associate of Secretary Brown's, Nolanda Hill, and her "organizations." Judge Pearson put together a team consisting of six attorneys to assist him in conducting the investigation. I served in one of two staff-counsel positions. My duties included conducting research and preparing legal memoranda in furtherance of the investigation, as well as participating in the investigation itself. More specifically, I provided the other attorneys on the team with legal opinions concerning issues arising during the investigation. On April 3, 1996, Secretary Brown perished in an airplane crash while on a trade mission to Croatia. As a result, Judge Pearson referred to the Department of Justice the responsibility for continuing the investigation as it pertained to allegations involving Nolanda Hill and others who were not members of the administration. Additionally, Judge Pearson submitted a final report to the Special Division of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The report concluded ultimately, "The unfinished state of the investigation and considerations of fairness preclude our office from drawing conclusions about the allegations regarding possible criminal conduct by the Secretary. . . ." Final Report at 19.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I occasionally acted as counsel to the United States Attorney's Office. For example, on one occasion I researched a group of federal regulations that appeared to be insufficient to address certain serious dangers that they were meant to prevent. At the request of the United States Attorney, I prepared a memorandum containing suggestions for improvements to the regulations, which was forwarded for consideration to the secretary of the agency in question. On another occasion, I was asked to research and prepare a proposed position memorandum regarding the advisability of the Office's prosecution of a group of cases, in view of the fact that prosecution of the cases (as opposed to dismissal of the federal employees allegedly involved) might conflict with a function of one of the federal agencies. Similarly, when the Office sought to prosecute crimes under relatively new statutes or under new theories of older statutes, I prepared model indictments. In at least two such matters, I drafted either the first or one of the first such indictments in the country.

As the chief of the Economic Crimes Section for the Central Division (Fort Lauderdale) of the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of Florida, I supervised between eight and ten other Assistant United States Attorneys. The position involved reviewing and editing indictments and other legal documents for clarity and correctness; consulting with and advising the Assistant United States Attorneys in my section; meeting with representatives of various law enforcement agencies regarding the intake, development, and progress of the respective law enforcement agencies' cases; and consulting with the management of the United States Attorney's Office regarding cases pending in my section. Each year while I served in this position, the Fort Lauderdale office significantly increased the number of indictments returned, as compared with the prior year – particularly within the Economic Crimes Section, even though the number of Assistant United States Attorneys in Fort Lauderdale had decreased.

As a practicing attorney, I was significantly involved in the Broward Chapter of the Federal Bar Association from approximately 2002 to 2007, having served on its board of directors and as the vice president, president-elect, and president. As the president, I presided over the chapter, which presented monthly speaker luncheons, brown-bag luncheons with federal judges, and other events designed to encourage a high level of practice among federal practitioners and to facilitate communications between the federal bar and bench in Broward County. As a judge, I continue to support the activities of the Federal Bar Association, attending nearly all of the Broward Chapter's functions and speaking regularly when asked.

I have not performed lobbying activities on behalf of any client(s) or organization(s).

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have taught as an adjunct professor at the University of Miami School of Law since 2009. In the fall of 2009 through the spring of 2010, I taught the full-year, first-year course called "Legal Research and Writing." The course sought to teach first-year law students the basics of conducting legal research and preparing legal written work product. Students prepared two drafts each of a case brief, two internal memoranda regarding a case, and an appellate brief. In addition, they presented oral argument on the appellate brief.

Since the summer of 2010, I have taught an upper-level legal writing class. The students learn about the federal court system and motions to dismiss. They prepare two drafts each of a memorandum in support of a motion to dismiss and an opposition to a motion to dismiss. In addition, they present oral argument on the motion to dismiss. On one occasion, during the spring of 2012, I taught an upper-level legal writing class on other federal motions, instead of the writing class on motions to dismiss. The students prepared two drafts of a discovery motion, two drafts of a motion to remand, and one draft of a motion for preliminary injunction.

Copies of the most recent syllabi for all courses described in answer to this question are supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I currently serve as an adjunct professor and teach a legal writing course at the University of Miami School of Law, and I have committed to teaching again in the spring of 2014.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If I am confirmed, I will continue recuse in all cases involving any of my family members. I will also recuse in any cases involving the University of Miami (where I teach), in cases involving Florida International University Law School (where my sister is employed as the director of legal research and writing), in cases involving Miami-Dade County (my brother-in-law is employed as an attorney with the County Attorney's Office), in cases where Holland and Knight LLP participates, in cases involving close friends as parties or witnesses, and, for two years following completion of their clerkships, in cases where my former law clerks are listed as counsel of record and have primary responsibility for litigating the matter. I would also recuse in any cases where a close friend served as counsel.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If I am confirmed, I will apply the standards set forth in 28 U.S.C. §§ 144 and 455 to any scenario involving a potential conflict of interest or appearance of partiality.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

As a judge, I am not allowed to practice law on behalf of others, so I have not engaged in any pro bono legal work since my confirmation in September of 2007. During most of my legal career, I have also been subject to limitations on my ability to engage in legal activities outside of my job because I have worked in government service for the vast majority of my legal career. Consequently, although I participated briefly in a program where attorneys assist victims of domestic abuse in court, I have mostly chosen to give back to the community in other ways. Among others, I participate in the Florida Bar's Justice Teaching program. The program aims to help educate every elementary, middle, and high school students about basic principles underlying our system of justice and our Constitution. I am paired with North Fork Elementary School.

Likewise, in the past, I have volunteered my time to assist with the Children's Ballet Theatre of Fort Lauderdale. The program allows children to put on a ballet such as Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, or Coppelia at the Broward Center for the Performing Arts, under the directorship and leadership of dance teachers who volunteer their time for the program. In addition to directing children in the production of a professional-type production, the program aspires to foster an appreciation of dance in the community, particularly among children, by making tickets available at an affordable price and by providing inexpensive or free tickets to certain financially eligible children. My volunteer activities on behalf of the program have included assisting with costuming, addressing marketing materials, and backstage supervision of some of the younger participants during dress rehearsal and the show.

In addition, I volunteer from time to time at my children's school, and year-round, I regularly provide internship opportunities for law-school students in my chambers and speak at Bar and law-school functions when requested.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

On August 13, 2013, I spoke to an official from the White House Counsel's Office, who inquired if I would be interested in being considered for a possible vacancy on the Eleventh Circuit. Since that time, I have been in contact with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 16, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On November 7, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
Chairman
Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I have reviewed my response to the Senate Questionnaire that I submitted on November 7, 2013, to the Senate Judiciary Committee, in connection with my nomination to serve as a United States Circuit Judge for the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. Incorporating the additional information set forth below, I certify that the information contained in both the November 7, 2013, response and in this letter, is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate.

Question 13.a.

I have presided over another criminal trial that resulted in a verdict. In addition, I have presided over another civil trial that was settled mid-trial.

Question 13.b.

I have attached a list of opinions responsive to this question and issued since November 7, 2013.

Question 13.e.

Certiorari was requested and granted but later denied as improvidently granted in Mulhall v. Unite Here Local 355, Case No. 08-CIV-61766-RSR (S.D. Fla. Jan. 24, 2011), reversed and remanded, Case No. 11-10594, 667 F.3d 1211 (11th Cir. Jan. 18, 2012), cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 2849 (June 24, 2013), cert. dismissed as improvidently granted, Case No. 12-99, ___ U.S. ___, ___ S. Ct. ___ 2013 WL 6410851 (Dec. 10, 2013). This case is not listed in response to Question 13.f. because the decision on appeal was issued by the judge presiding over the case before the matter was transferred to me.

Certiorari was requested but denied in Marshall v. United States, Case No. 10-CIV-20482-RSR (S.D. Fla. Aug. 14, 2012), aff'd, Case No. 12-13841, 514 F. App'x 936 (11th Cir. 2013), cert. denied, Case No. 12-9879, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 2749 (May 28, 2013). This denial of certiorari should have been included in my original response to the Senate Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees submitted on November 7, 2013. I regret that it was not. I was not aware of the denial at the time.

Question 14.

I have recused myself sua sponte in three cases since filing my November 7, 2013, response to the Senate Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees. First, in Hamilton v. Suntrust Mortgage, Inc., Case No. 13-CIV-60749, the plaintiffs were represented by, among others, two attorneys who had supported my nominations to be a district judge and a circuit judge, one attorney who had served as my reference when I applied to become a magistrate judge, and one attorney whose daughter is my neighbor and whose granddaughter is friends with my daughter. Second, in Wrubleski v. Blay, Case No. 13-CIV-62403, the defendants included, among others, a courtroom deputy who has assisted me from time to time, another district judge in the same courthouse, the magistrate judge with whom I am paired, and the deputy United States Marshal who supervises operations at my courthouse. Finally, in United States v. Handfield, Case No. 13-CR-20840, counsel included a lawyer who had offered to support my nomination to serve as a circuit judge. In all three cases, I recused myself to avoid an appearance of impropriety.

Question 19.

With the approval of the Chief Judge of the Eleventh Circuit, in the spring of 2014, I am scheduled to teach an upper-level legal writing class on federal motions, such as motions to remand, discovery motions, and motions for preliminary injunction, at the University of Miami School of Law. This is the same course that I taught during the spring of 2012. I have attached a copy of the Spring 2014 syllabus for the class.

I am also forwarding an updated Net Worth Statement and Financial Disclosure Report, as requested by the Senate Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees. I thank the Committee for its consideration of my nomination.

Sincerely,

Robin S. Rosenbaum

WINNING FEDERAL MOTION PRACTICE II

PROF. ROBIN ROSENBAUM
Mondays, 7:30-9:20 p.m.

SYLLABUS

Please review this syllabus to assist you in your understanding of the objectives of this course and to help you in planning your work for this semester.

OBJECTIVES:

This course has four objectives. First, the course seeks to develop further your legal analysis skills by requiring you to analyze case law and apply it to our course problems.

Second, the course will teach you substantively about three types of motions that are frequently filed in federal court: (1) the motion to remand; (2) a discovery-related motion; and (3) the motion for preliminary injunction.

Third, the course provides an opportunity for you to improve your legal writing skills. In this class you will prepare memoranda in support of a motion to remand, a discovery motion, and a motion for preliminary injunction. These assignments will require you to reduce to writing your analysis of federal law and the application of the law to our case-study facts, and they will demand clear and precise thinking and writing. Towards the end of meeting these goals, we will study usage, style, and writing recommendations that other accomplished legal writers have suggested. You will prepare two drafts of each of the first two memoranda and one of the third.

Finally, the course will familiarize you with the realities of federal motion practice in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida. In furtherance of this objective, you will learn about the Local Rules of the Southern District of Florida, and you will apply them in all of your assignments.

EVALUATION:

Evaluating your work serves two purposes. First, it enables me to determine the extent to which you have achieved a certain level of competence in each of the objectives described above. Second, it allows you to recognize and correct problems, thereby improving and sharpening your legal writing skills.

COURSE TEXTS:¹

Required:

The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation (19th ed.)

Deborah E. Bouchoux, Aspen Handbook for Legal Writers: A Practical Reference (3d ed.)

Local Rules of the Southern District of Florida (accessible at www.flsd.uscourts.gov under the link for "Local Rules")

Recommended:

William Strunk, Jr., & E.B. White, The Elements of Style (4th ed.)

Bryan A. Garner, The Winning Brief (2d ed.)

You may also find it helpful to have a copy of Black's Law Dictionary. Used copies are available through a variety of sources on the Internet and may sometimes be purchased at the campus book store. The law library also has a copy if you do not wish to buy the book.

CLASSES:

We will meet on Mondays from 7:30 p.m. to 9:20 p.m., except as otherwise noted in this syllabus or in class. Class attendance is mandatory and important to your understanding of the material offered in this class. If I must cancel a class for some reason, I will hold a make-up session.

With regard to classroom conduct, I do not permit cellular telephones to be used in my class. If you have one, you may bring it with you, but you must turn it off for class. Although I begin the semester by allowing students to use laptop computers in class, you may use your laptop computers for the sole purpose of assisting you in your preparation and understanding of class material. If laptop computers are used for personal or non-class-related activities, I will be unable to continue to permit their use in class. Of course, it should go without saying that I expect all students to treat each other and this class with respect and professionalism at all times. An important aspect of being a lawyer involves acting in a professional and courteous manner, and we will practice those principles in this class.

¹Some texts may be published in later editions than those listed here. You should purchase the latest edition, which is available at the book store.

CONTACT INFORMATION:

The best way to reach me is by e-mail, which I check regularly. If I think that I cannot sufficiently address your concerns by e-mail or by scheduling an appointment with you, I will call you in response to your e-mail. I will similarly call you if you request in an e-mail that I do so and you provide me with a telephone number where I can reach you. My contact information follows:

E-mail: ProfessorRosenbaum@bellsouth.net

Faculty Assistant: Gloria Lastres, G-477, 305-284-4438

In an emergency, you may contact my office by telephone at 954-769-5670. I am available for extra help after class and by appointment.

WRITTEN WORK:

All written assignments must conform to the specifications below:

All of your work must be typewritten. Your work must comply in all regards with the requirements of the Local Rules for the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida. Always retain one copy of your work for your records and always back up your work while using the computer.

I will evaluate and critique your first draft of each of the first two briefs, and I will grade your re-write. You must turn in all prior drafts with my comments along with the re-write, or you will not receive a grade. For the third brief, you will turn in a final draft only. Each assignment will be due at a specified time, date, and place. It is your responsibility to note that time, date, and place. Deadlines will be strictly enforced, and I will assess a half-grade penalty for each day (including any portion thereof) that an assignment is late. Citations and other format matters must always be in compliance with the standards set forth in The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation, unless otherwise noted.

Please remember that you must return all of your marked drafts with your final work product.

GRADING AND CURVE:

I will weight your work in this class according to the following valuation system:

Each final draft of a brief:	30%
First drafts, effort, and participation:	10%

Class participation encompasses not only your oral participation in class periods, but also your overall attitude towards the class and your professionalism. In other words, I look for students to put forth a good-faith effort to learn the material. Among other ways of demonstrating real effort, students should submit both quality first drafts and final drafts, and all students should complete all other homework employing their best efforts. I also find your reasonableness towards and cooperation with other students to be an important factor in evaluating class participation.

ETHICS:

Your reputation is everything in the legal profession. That reputation begins in law school. Please act at all times in accordance with the University of Miami School of Law Honor Code and the honorable ideals of our profession. As that relates to this class, students may not seek outside help with assignments. After I have graded your paper, however, you may obtain the assistance of the Writing Center. The point of these rules is to help you to learn how to become proficient in legal research and writing by doing the work yourself. Along these same lines, learning the material requires access to the material. Therefore, I expect you to cooperate with your classmates and act in an ethical, reasonable, and professional manner towards them, ensuring that you promptly return research materials to their correct locations so that everyone else can use them as well.

DISABILITIES AND EQUAL OPPORTUNITY:

The law school is committed to accommodating a variety of disabilities, including physical and learning disabilities. If you would like more information on this, please contact Iris Morera, the Disabilities Issues Coordinator, at 305-284-4551 or e-mail her at disabilityservices@law.miami.edu. Please also feel free to discuss this with me. I will keep our discussions confidential. Please seek accommodations for any disabilities as soon as possible.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

I have been a United States Magistrate Judge since 2002, when I was appointed by the district court judges for the United States District for the District of South Carolina. United States Magistrate Judges are judges in the United States District Court System, as provided for in 28 U.S.C. § 631 et seq. As a magistrate judge, I lack statutory authority to issue binding final orders on dispositive matters or take to trial any civil matter not consented to by the litigants and, thereafter, referred by the district judge. See 28 U.S.C. § 636. Likewise, in criminal matters, I have jurisdiction over only misdemeanor and petty offenses and over preliminary felony criminal matters.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

As a United States Magistrate Judge, I have presided over 42 cases that have gone to verdict or judgment. Because I can only preside over civil matters by consent of the parties and over criminal trials involving misdemeanor and petty offenses, I have only presided over a small percentage of the thousands of cases I have handled.

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	1%
bench trials:	99%
civil proceedings:	88%
criminal proceedings:	12%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

See attached list.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

I have presided over a limited number of cases in the way that term is described in Question 13(a). Moreover, consent trials before a magistrate judge are not common in this District. For purposes of this question, however, I have taken a broader view of that phrase. Accordingly, for this question, I have described the three trials over which I actually presided as well as a substantial piece of complex mediation to which I was appointed mediator by the district court. I have also described six other written Orders or Reports and Recommendations that I issued in significant cases before me.

1. Cantrell v. Target Corporation, No. 6:06-cv-2723 (D.S.C. May 15, 2009).
Order supplied.

Cantrell was a state-law defamation case. The plaintiff was wrongly accused of tendering a counterfeit $100 bill by employees of defendant Target. She left with the bill and had its authenticity confirmed at an area bank. In the interim, however, Target published, in unqualified terms, its accusations against the plaintiff to over 70 other retail establishments participating in a theft task-force program, including the department store Belk where the plaintiff was employed. On the strength of Target's representations, Belk called the Secret Service. Secret Service agents subsequently arrived at Belk unannounced, Mirandized the plaintiff, and interviewed her concerning the bill, eventually also confirming its legitimacy. The jury found in favor of the plaintiff on her sole claim of defamation. It awarded her $100,000 in actual damages and $3 million in punitive damages. My written post-trial order, affirming the award, attempted to balance deference for the verdict with respect for controlling constitutional precedent on the propriety of large punitive awards. The trial and post-trial arguments implicated a somewhat novel application of a defense in qualified privilege, which might have protected Target from publishing its beliefs about the plaintiff among entities whom shared a common interest. I ruled that evidence existed from which a jury might have reasonably concluded that the scope of the privilege had been exceeded and affirmed the award. The order was appealed but eventually settled before any disposition by the Fourth Circuit.

2. Reece v. Shealy, No. 8:04-cv-120 (Sept. 18, 2006); Shealy v. Reece, No. 8:04-cv-374 (Sept. 18, 2006). Order supplied.

These companion cases involved a state-law contract dispute over a hunting lease. The lease included contradictory terms as to its duration. In one portion of the agreement, it stated that the duration of the lease was for 99 years. In another portion of the agreement, however, the lease stated that “the hunting lease is for a full term of one year from the date hereof.” The matter was tried before me without a jury. I ruled that no meeting of the minds existed and, therefore, that under South Carolina law, the lease reverted to a month-to-month tenancy and was not for a 99-year duration. Judgment was entered in favor of Shealy in both cases. No appeal was filed.

3. Henley v. Atkinson, No. 8:06-2420-BHH (D.S.C. Oct. 1, 2006), aff'd, 326 Fed. App'x 201 (4th Cir. 2009).

Henley involved the alleged use of excessive force in the course of the plaintiff's arrest by the defendant state police officers. In the middle of the night, the defendant officer, along with another deputy, attempted to stop the plaintiff after observing him parked in the parking lot of a business. The deputies initiated their emergency equipment in an attempt to stop him, but the plaintiff continued in his vehicle. Eventually, the plaintiff exited his vehicle on foot and fled. The defendant officer released his K-9 unit service dog to effectuate the apprehension of the plaintiff. The plaintiff sustained bite wounds during the capture, including allegedly one to the groin, and was arrested for multiple criminal charges and then taken into custody. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant officer deployed the canine after he was restrained and handcuffed. The case was tried before a jury, which found in favor of the defendant. The verdict was affirmed on appeal.

4. Savannah Riverkeeper v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, No. 9:12-cv-610 (Sept. 2012-May 2013).

Savannah Riverkeeper involved various challenges by private conservation groups and state agencies of South Carolina to the Savannah Harbor Expansion Project (“SHEP”), a nearly $700 million congressionally authorized plan to deepen the Savannah River. The plaintiffs argued that the Army Corps of Engineers failed to obtain all necessary state permits from South Carolina for the project, as required by federal law. The Honorable Richard Gergel of the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina appointed Congressman John Spratt and me to preside over the mediation of this highly complex multi-state matter. The mediation took over seven months, four in-person mediation sessions, numerous teleconferences, and countless hours of preparation and effort to resolve. In addition to the unprecedented scope and scale of the project itself, all the various political and economic interests implicated, and the numerous parties with stake, the case posed a variety of novel legal issues under the Clean Water Act, National Environmental Policy Act, and state administrative law. Our efforts resulted in a global and court-approved settlement among three state agencies (between two states); the Army Corps of Engineers; and three private conservation groups.

5. Peter B. v. Sanford, No. 6:10-cv-767, 2010 WL 5912259 (D.S.C. Nov. 24, 2010).

The plaintiffs brought an action against the Governor of South Carolina and various South Carolina state agencies seeking declaratory and injunctive relief for allegedly violating Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), 42 U.S.C. § 12132; Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 54); and 42 U.S.C. § 1983. The district judge referred the plaintiffs' motion for injunctive relief to me. The plaintiffs asked the court to enjoin the defendants from reducing or terminating certain medical and personal-care services, the absence of which would allegedly force the plaintiffs from their homes and communities into disability institutions and other like facilities. I held a hearing on the motion and recommended to the district court that the defendants should be temporarily enjoined and ordered to maintain or return services in the quality, kind, and volume previously enjoyed by the plaintiffs. The district court adopted that recommendation.

6. Credell v. Bodison, No. 8:10-cv-18, 2011 WL 573425 (D.S.C. Jan. 26, 2011).

The petitioner, a state prisoner, sought habeas relief pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Among other less persuasive grounds, the petitioner argued that trial counsel was ineffective (1) for failing to object when the solicitor pitted his testimony against that of his mother; (2) in the handling of a witness's prior statements; and (3) in advising him not to testify. I recommended habeas relief on all three grounds. That recommendation was adopted by the district court. No appeal was taken.

The state, however, has indicated its intent to retry the petitioner.

The district court adopted that recommendation. See Humphries v. Ozmint, 8:02-cv-4276 (D.S.C. 2003). The petitioner appealed. The Fourth Circuit affirmed in a published decision. *See Humphries v. The plaintiff EEOC, on behalf of an individual complainant, pled claims for hostile work environment, on account of the complainant's sex, and for retaliation, pursuant to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended. I recommended denial of the defendant's motion for summary judgment as to all claims. The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation and dismissed the case. The reasoning of the Report and Recommendation was affirmed on appeal to the Fourth Circuit.

The plaintiff alleged that an agent of the defendant, Fred's, Inc., sexually harassed her in violation of the South Carolina Human Affairs Law, S.C. Code § 1-13-30 et seq. The defendant moved to dismiss the plaintiff's claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, for untimeliness, for failure to exhaust, and for a want of substantive merit. I recommended that the defendant's motions to dismiss and for summary judgment be denied. The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation. The reasoning of the Report and Recommendation was affirmed on appeal to the Fourth Circuit in a published decision.

10. Malik v. Ozmint, No. 8:05-cv-3472, 2010 WL 1052708 (D.S.C. Feb. 16, 2010).

I recommended that the South Carolina Department of Corrections' policy requiring all inmates to keep their hair short and their faces shaven did not violate a Sunni Muslim inmate's rights under the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act. The Fourth Circuit had approved a prior version of the policy, which applied to higher security inmates, but had not approved the policy in its amended form. The matter, therefore, was of some first impression. Although the inmate demonstrated that the policy substantially burdened his free exercise of religion, the policy furthered a compelling state interest and was the least restrictive means of furthering that interest. The district court adopted the recommendation.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

To the best of my knowledge, there are no such cases.

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

To the best of my knowledge, no final order of mine has been appealed to the district court or the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and reversed. However, the following Reports and Recommendations were not adopted, or were adopted only in part. Conservatively, I have issued over 1,200 Report and Recommendations. Every Report and Recommendation is subject to review by the District Court, and my recommendations have been adopted in approximately 96% of those cases.

Chambers v. Mueller, No. 2:12-cv-1372, 2013 WL 603349 (D.S.C. Jan. 11, 2013), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2013 WL 603348 (D.S.C. Feb. 19, 2013). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but rejected the recommendation that the plaintiff's proposed amendment to the Complaint would sufficiently allege deliberate indifference.

Patterson-Womble v. Mabus, No. 2:11-cv-834 (D.S.C. Jan. 4, 2013). The district court adopted the Report and Recommendation as to the plaintiff's race discrimination claim but rejected it as to claims for pregnancy discrimination, hostile work environment, and retaliation. The Report and Recommendation found that the plaintiff had been replaced by a black female and, therefore, that she could not make out any prima facie case. The district court interpreted the plaintiff's sex based claim more broadly, as one in pregnancy discrimination, and found she had been replaced by a non-pregnant individual. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Thomas v. Kmart Corp., No. 9:11-cv-669, 2012 WL 7808898 (D.S.C. Nov. 15, 2012), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2013 WL 1282019 (D.S.C. Mar. 26, 2013). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but rejected the recommendation that the "ulterior purpose" element of an abuse of process claim could not be established.

Smith v. InterSouth Properties, Inc., No. 2:11-cv-2177 (D.S.C. Mar. 15, 2012). The district court declined to adopt a recommendation that the defendant's motion for partial judgment on the pleadings should be granted as to the plaintiff's claim for wrongful termination in violation of public policy. The district court stated, without explanation, that at that early stage in litigation, the claim had been sufficiently pled. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Chappell v. Miles, No. 2:12-cv-303, 2012 WL 1570024 (D.S.C. Feb. 17, 2012), rejected by 2012 WL 1570020 (D.S.C. May 3, 2012). The district court rejected a portion of the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal, which was made as a part of this district's initial review procedure for pro se complaints. The district court believed there was a facially sufficient allegation of excessive force and equal protection such that issuance and service of process should be made.

Singletary v. South Carolina Dept. of Educ., No. 3:11-cv-1449, 2012 WL 714972 (D.S.C. Feb. 3, 2012), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2012 WL 714796 (D.S.C. Feb. 29, 2012). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but found that one defendant had not established qualified immunity. Amendment of the complaint was allowed.

Williams v. U.S. Services, Inc., No. 2:10-cv-1546, 2012 WL 590049 (D.S.C. Jan. 31, 2012), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2012 WL 601867 (D.S.C. Feb. 23, 2012). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but found that issues of fact existed as to whether a reasonable disability accommodation had been made for one of multiple positions alleged. The Report and Recommendation was affirmed as to the other positions.

Drayton v. Cohen, No. 2:10-cv-03171, 2012 WL 666844 (D.S.C. Jan. 11, 2012), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2012 WL 666839 (D.S.C. Feb. 29, 2012), aff'd, 474 Fed. App'x 991 (4th Cir. 2012). The district court disagreed with the Report and Recommendation that the plaintiff prisoner had created issues of fact concerning his failure to protect claim. The district court found insufficient evidence related to whether the plaintiff had notified prison officials concerning specific threats against him. The district court adopted the remainder of the Report and Recommendation. The Fourth Circuit affirmed the district court order.

Stewart v. Astrue, No. 2:10-cv-822 (D.S.C. July 21, 2011). The district court rejected the finding that the Administrative Law Judge had properly considered evidence of certain impairments and remanded the case to the Social Security Administration for additional consideration. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Solesbee v. Astrue, No. 2:10-cv-1882, 2011 WL 3099738 (D.S.C. July 12, 2011), rejected by 2011 WL 5101531 (D.S.C. Oct. 25, 2011). The district court rejected the finding that the Administrative Law Judge had properly considered evidence of certain impairments and remanded to the Social Security Administration for additional consideration.

Carter v. Centura College, No. 2:10-cv-907, 2011 WL 7429447 (D.S.C. June 16, 2011), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2012 WL 638800 (D.S.C. Feb. 27, 2012). The district court adopted the Report and Recommendation as to the plaintiff's retaliation claim but rejected it as to the religious discrimination one.

Bates v. Astrue, No. 8:09-cv-3355, 2011 WL 1113778 (D.S.C. Jan. 21, 2011), rejected by 2011 WL 1113474 (D.S.C. Mar. 24, 2011). The district court remanded for an additional administrative hearing because the claimant's legal counsel did not fully develop the record. The district court acknowledged that the Report and Recommendation correctly noted that no ineffective assistance type claim was available.

Folkes v. Byrd, No. 8:10-cv-22, 2010 WL 4721572 (D.S.C. Oct. 21, 2010), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 4721575 (D.S.C. Nov. 15, 2010). The district court modified the dismissal of certain unexhausted claims from "with prejudice" to "without."

Robinson v. Cannon, No. 8:10-cv-2236 (D.S.C. Sept. 8, 2010), rejected by 8:10-cv-2236 (D.S.C. Apr. 21, 2011). The district court rejected a portion of the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal, which was made as a part of this district's initial Report and Recommendation review procedure for pro se complaints. The district court allowed issuance and service of process and the plaintiff an opportunity to identify the proper defendant. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

reconsidered in part, 2012 WL 5305980 (D.S.C. Mar. 28, 2012), aff'd, 478 Fed. App'x 15 (4th Cir. 2012). The district court stayed the case pending resolution of a state criminal prosecution instead of adopting the recommendation for summary dismissal.

Field v. McMaster, No. 6:09-cv-1949, 2010 WL 3257908 (D.S.C. June 30, 2010), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 3257888 (D.S.C. Aug. 17, 2010), aff'd, 398 Fed. App'x 894 (4th Cir. 2010). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but also granted summary judgment as to the plaintiff's claim for injunctive relief against certain defendants.

Panchura v. Astrue, No. 8:09-cv-01014, 2010 WL 3521718 (D.S.C. May 19, 2010), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 3521719 (D.S.C. Sept. 7, 2010). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but remanded to the Administrative Law Judge for additional consideration of the plaintiff's depression.

Hopkins v. Astrue, No. 8:09-cv-01014, 2010 WL 2219330 (D.S.C. Mar. 3, 2010), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 2219328 (D.S.C. May 28, 2010). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but remanded to the Social Security Administration for additional explanation of the Administrative Law Judge's finding that the plaintiff could perform medium work.

EEOC v. Cromer Food Services, Inc. No. 6:08-cv-3249 (D.S.C. Jan. 6, 2010). (Report and Recommendation previously supplied in response to Question 13c.) The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation. See EEOC v. Cromer Food Services, Inc., 691 F. Supp. 2d 646 (D.S.C. 2010). The reasoning of the Report and Recommendation was affirmed on appeal to the Fourth Circuit. See EEOC v. Cromer Food Services, Inc., 414 Fed. App'x 602 (4th Cir. 2011).

Lisenby v. Lear, No. 8:09-cv-410 (D.S.C. March 18, 2009). The district court agreed, in part, on a recommendation that the plaintiff's case could not be removed to federal court because the plaintiff had three previous cases dismissed as "strikes," for their frivolous or malicious nature, and, therefore, remanded the case to state court. See Lisenby v. Lear, No. 8:09-cv-410, 2010 WL 758677 (D.S.C. Feb. 26, 2010). On appeal, the Fourth Circuit concluded that the prior "strikes" did not prevent removal of the case by the defendants. Lisenby v. Lear, 674 F.3d 259 (4th Cir. 2012). (Report and Recommendation attached.)

Malpass v. Gibson, No. 8:08-cv-3243, 2009 WL 5868578 (D.S.C. Nov. 13, 2009), rejected by 685 F.Supp.2d 573 (D.S.C. Feb. 11, 2010). The district court declined to adopt the Report and Recommendation and concluded that issues of fact existed as to whether "extraordinary circumstances" were present concerning the plaintiff's excessive force claim even though the plaintiff suffered de minimis injury.

Peoples v. Rogers, No. 8:10-cv-1312, 2010 WL 424203 (D.S.C. Jan. 12, 2010), rejected by 2010 WL 424201 (D.S.C. Feb. 1, 2010). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal, which was made as a part of this district's initial review procedure for pro se complaints. The district court believed questions remained concerning the timeliness of the plaintiff's claims and the application of res judicata such that issuance and service of process should be made.

Kelly v. Yates, No. 8:08-cv-2147, 2009 WL 6323747 (D.S.C. Dec. 17, 2009), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 1294109 (D.S.C. Mar. 29, 2010). The district court disagreed with the Report and Recommendation's recommendation that material facts existed as to the plaintiff's Fourth Amendment claim that his right against unreasonable seizure had been violated when he was removed from the scene of a traffic stop and taken to a motel.

Pellegrino v. United Parcel Service, Inc., No. 7:08-cv-180, 2009 WL 6325694 (D.S.C. Dec. 15, 2009), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2010 WL 1346415 (D.S.C. Mar. 30, 2010). The district court adopted the Report and Recommendation as to the plaintiff's Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) retaliation claim but rejected it as to the FMLA interference one.

Barnes v. Seymour, No. 8:09-cv-2616, 2009 WL 6547636 (D.S.C. Nov. 10, 2009). The district court agreed, in part, with a recommendation, made as a part of our district's initial review of pro se complaints, that a "strike" should be awarded to the plaintiff for filing a malicious or frivolous case. Barnes v. Seymour, No. 8:09-2166, 2010 WL 2293237 (D.S.C. Jun. 4, 2010). The Fourth Circuit concluded a strike could not be awarded where the case was dismissed "without prejudice." Barnes v. Seymour, 416 Fed. App'x 300 (4th Cir. 2011).

Landrum v. Bowens, No. 8:08-cv-2993, 2009 WL 3060359 (D.S.C. July 16, 2009), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2009 WL 3060356 (D.S.C. Sept. 24, 2009). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but disallowed the case to proceed against an additional defendant for supervisory liability.

Wolfe v. Cooper, No. 8:08-cv-869, 2009 WL 2929442 (D.S.C. May 20, 2009), rejected by 2009 WL 2929438 (D.S.C. Sept. 2, 2009). The Report and Recommendation found that a credibility issue existed as to whether the plaintiff prisoner had been raped and forced to perform oral sex on prison guards. The district court found that there was no other evidence of the allegations and that the credibility dispute was insufficient to survive summary judgment.

Whitten v. Fred's, No. 8:08-cv-218 (D.S.C. Jan. 13, 2009). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation. See Whitten v. Fred's, No. 8:08-CV-218, 2009 WL 364077 (D.S.C. Feb. 11, 2009). However, the reasoning of the Report and Recommendation was affirmed on appeal to the Fourth Circuit in a published decision. See Whitten v. Fred's, 601 F.3d 231 (4th Cir. 2010). (Report and Recommendation previously supplied in response to Question 13c.)

Peoples v. Davis, No. 8:08-cv-251, 2009 WL 483805 (D.S.C. Jan. 23, 2009), rejected by 2009 WL 483798 (D.S.C. Feb. 24, 2009). The district court rejected the recommendation of the Report and Recommendation that a portion of the plaintiff's excessive force claim should survive summary judgment.

Lawrence v. Astrue, No. 8:07-cv-3732, 2008 WL 5785183 (D.S.C. Dec. 11, 2008), rejected by 2009 WL 890655 (D.S.C. Mar. 30, 2009). Contrary to the Report and Recommendation, the district court found that the ALJ did not have substantial evidence to reject a lower IQ score of the claimant and remanded the case to the Social Security Administration for further findings.

Blackwell v. Astrue, No. 8:07-cv-1084, 2008 WL 4200305 (D.S.C. May 22, 2008), rejected by 2008 WL 4200302 (Sept. 4, 2008). The district court concluded that the case should be remanded to the Social Security Administration and not simply dismissed, as recommended by the Report and Recommendation and requested by the Defendant Commissioner.

Peoples v. SCDC, No. 8:07-cv-1203, 2008 WL 4442586 (D.S.C. May 13, 2008), rejected by 2008 WL 4442583 (D.S.C. Sept. 25, 2008). The district court rejected the recommendation of the Report and Recommendation that the plaintiff prisoner's excessive force claim should be dismissed.

Bostick v. Warden of Broad River Correctional Inst., No. 8:07-cv-727. The district court adopted and incorporated by reference my Report and Recommendation regarding the grant of summary judgment concerning a petition for writ of habeas corpus, in part because the ineffective assistance of counsel claim had not been exhausted. See Bostick v. Warden of Broad River Correctional Inst., No. 8:07-727, 2008 WL 474219 (D.S.C. Feb. 20, 2008). The Fourth Circuit reversed the district court's order and granted habeas relief, concluding that because the state exhaustion rule had been unevenly applied, it did not bar federal review of the claim. See Bostick v. Warden of Broad River Correctional Inst., 589 F.3d 160 (4th Cir. 2009).

Frost v. Toney, No. 8:07-cv-108, 2007 WL 4924758 (D.S.C. Oct. 30, 2007), rejected by 2008 WL 426286 (D.S.C. Feb. 13, 2008). The district court found that issues of fact existed as to the use of force that caused the plaintiff prisoner to hit his head.

Sturkey v. Ozmint, No. 8:07-cv-1502, 2007 WL 4901401 (D.S.C. June 19, 2007), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2008 WL 373610 (D.S.C. Feb. 7, 2008). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal of the case, a determination which is made as a part of this district's initial review procedure for pro se complaints prior to service of process. On objection to the district court, the district court believed there was a discernible equal protection claim in the complaint such that issuance and service of process should be made.

United States v. Clarkson, No. 8:05-cv-2734, 2007 WL 1988261 (D.S.C. May 14, 2007), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2007 WL 1988257 (D.S.C. Jul. 3, 2007). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but found that both forms of requested injunctive relief concerning false tax statements made by the plaintiff should issue.

Ashe v. Smith, No. 8:07-cv-537, 2007 WL 1423745 (D.S.C. Mar. 1, 2007), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2007 WL 1423730 (D.S.C. May 10, 2007). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal, which was made as a part of this district's initial review procedure for pro se complaints. The district court found that although there was no allegation of physical injury, the plaintiff prisoner's request for injunctive relief was still colorable such that issuance and service of process should be made.

Chavis v. Barnhardt, No. 6:05-cv-1793, 2007 WL 1032302 (D.S.C. Feb. 8, 2007), adopted in part, rejected in part, 2007 WL 1032300 (D.S.C. Mar. 31, 2007). The district court adopted the Report and Recommendation as to the plaintiff's race discrimination claim but rejected it as to the age discrimination and retaliation ones.

Koon v. Rushton, No. 8:05-cv-2523, 2006 WL 4046219 (D.S.C. Aug. 24, 2006), rejected by 2007 WL 465515 (D.S.C. Feb. 6, 2007). The Report and Recommendation was rejected by the district court for recommending "dismissal without prejudice" of a "mixed-application" habeas petition, which included both exhausted and unexhausted claims. The district court concluded that the petitioner was entitled to proceed on the exhausted claims.

Nicholas v. Ozmint, No. 8:05-cv-3472 (D.S.C. July 25, 2006). The district court substantially adopted the Report and Recommendation but permitted the plaintiff prisoner's Grooming Policy claim to proceed. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Hucks v. Allstate Insurance Co., No. 8:04-cv-23336 (D.S.C. July 10, 2006). The district court substantially adopted the Report and Recommendation but, out of an abundance of caution, modified the dismissal from "with prejudice" to "without." (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Nave v. Trans-Cor America, No. 8:06-cv-1065, 2006 WL 4681146 (D.S.C. May 16, 2006), rejected by 2007 WL 2156670 (D.S.C. Jul. 26, 2007). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation recommending summary dismissal, which was made as a part of this district's initial review procedure for pro se complaints. The district court disagreed that the complaint did not implicate the court's federal question jurisdiction.

Habeck v. Barnhart, No. 8:04-cv-1844 (D.S.C. June 28, 2005). The district court rejected the Report and Recommendation recommending remand to the Social Security Administration and concluded that the Commissioner's disability determination was based on substantial evidence. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

Nicholas v. Ozmint, No. 8:05-cv-1011 (D.S.C. Apr. 18, 2005). The district court substantially adopted the Report and Recommendation but disagreed that a "strike" should be awarded to the plaintiff for filing a malicious or frivolous case. (Report and Recommendation and Order attached.)

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

As a United States Magistrate Judge all of my decisions are filed on the United States District Court for the District of South Carolina's Electronic Case Filing System (ECF). The vast majority of my decisions are unpublished nondispositive matters, such as motions to amend scheduling deadlines, motions to amend pleadings, and motions to compel or resolve discovery disputes. To my knowledge, there is not a reliable way of estimating the number of such decisions. Those matters include either written work product uploaded to ECF or text entries made directly in it. I have prepared thousands of such unpublished items.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have never sat by designation on a federal appeals court.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

The Clerk of Court for the District of South Carolina keeps a recusal list that is updated periodically. Judges are asked to review their self-identified recusal list on a regular basis. In addition to recusals made based on this list, I searched my records as well as the court's electronic docketing system. To the best of my knowledge, the following is a complete list of recusal requests:

Mr. Koon requested my recusal in Koon v. Rushton et al., No. 8:05-cv-2523. This same individual also requested my recusal in Koon v. Ozmint et al., 8:06-cv-1072, and Koon v. Ozmint et al., 8:06-cv-2000. Mr. Koon contended that I was biased against him as a result of my rulings on various pretrial motions. In Koon v. Rushton et al. and Koon v. Ozmint et al., 8:06-cv-2000, I denied the request for recusal because the only alleged bias pertained to my rulings. In Koon v. Ozmint et al., 8:06-cv-1072, Judge Harwell denied Mr. Koon's motion for recusal as moot.

Mr. Peoples filed a motion seeking my recusal in Peoples v. SCDC et al., 8:07-cv-01203. Mr. Peoples contended I was biased as a result of my rulings in his case. I denied the motion because judicial rulings alone do not constitute a sufficient basis to warrant recusal.

In Stepheny v. Social Security Administration, 4:08-cv-03449, Mr. Stepheny filed a motion seeking my recusal. Mr. Stepheny sought my recusal because I denied his motion to appoint counsel. I denied Mr. Stepheny's motion for recusal because judicial rulings alone do not constitute a sufficient basis to warrant recusal.

Petitioner Weersing moved for my recusal in Weersing v. Cartledge, 8:09-cv-00088. Mr. Weersing contended that I was biased as a result of my rulings. I denied Mr. Weersing's motion because judicial rulings alone do not constitute a sufficient basis to warrant recusal.

Mr. Brown, Sr., moved for my recusal in Brown v. Norton et al., 8:09-cv-01628, contending that I had a conflict of interest. Judge Duffy denied Mr. Brown's motion as moot.

In Bell v. Cooks et al., 2:10-cv-03244, Mr. Bell, filed a motion for recusal wherein he contended that I was biased, presumably as a result of my rulings and recommendations in his case. I denied the Plaintiff's request because judicial rulings alone do not constitute a sufficient basis to warrant recusal.

Mr. Moore moved for my recusal in Moore v. Padula et al., 5:11-cv-1033. In his motion, Mr. Moore contended that I was biased against him because of the court's rulings in a previous case, Moore v. Padula, 8:07-cv-01471. I denied his request because the only alleged bias pertained to my rulings in a previous case.

Mr. Rogers moved for my recusal in Rogers v. Cartledge, 2:12-cv-01858. Mr. Rogers contended I was biased as a result of my rulings in one of his previous cases, Rogers v. May et al., No. 3:12-cv-00837. I denied Mr. Rogers' motion because the only alleged bias pertained to my rulings in a previous case.

Mr. McCrief filed a motion for recusal in McCrief v. Wachovia Bank et al., 2:12-cv-00072. In his motion, Mr. McCrief asserted I should be recused due to a "prior history of biased misconducts." I denied the motion. Mr. McCrief appealed that ruling to Judge Seymour, who agreed that no recusal was warranted. Mr. McCrief also filed an interlocutory appeal; the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit dismissed the appeal. Mr. McCrief's case remains pending in district court.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have never served as a mediator or arbitrator in private practice.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

While studying for the South Carolina bar and during my time before joining the United States Attorney's Office, I clerked for Michael Uricchio and then for Uricchio, Howe, Krell, Jacobson, Toporek, Theos & Keith P.A. My responsibilities included general legal research and writing.

After admission to the South Carolina Bar, I began my legal career in earnest as an Assistant United States Attorney in 1991. I handled a wide variety of cases, including typical drug and firearms offenses, complex civil rights, and bank fraud conspiracies. I represented the United States in proceedings at all stages of litigation in federal court in South Carolina, and I also represented the United States on appeal before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. I routinely evaluated evidence presented to me by law enforcement agencies to determine whether federal laws had been violated and, if so, whether to proceed with prosecution. I responded to and appeared for various and sundry pre-trial motions by defense counsel. If the case went to trial, I made all preparations necessary to present the Government's case in court. Preparation for trials included, but was not limited to, fully analyzing the facts and the applicable law, interviewing witnesses and agents, visiting the scene of the crime, preparing opening and closing statements, and preparing proposed jury instructions for submission to the trial judge. If the case proceeded to an appeal, I drafted briefs and argued before the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. In several cases, I was responsible for drafting the response to motions to vacate pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. I served as an Assistant United States Attorney from 1991 until I became a United States Magistrate Judge in 2002.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I always represented the interests of the United States. My practice was devoted exclusively to criminal law.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

The entirety of my practice was devoted to litigation. I appeared in court frequently.

1. federal courts:	100%
2. state courts of record:	0%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	0%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	0%
2. criminal proceedings:	100%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

While an Assistant United States Attorney, I tried 21 cases to verdict. I was chief, or sole, counsel in 14 of those cases.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:

1. jury:	100%
2. non-jury:	0%

I have not practiced before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

I represented the United States throughout the investigation and trial, from November 1994 through July 1996. Following a jury trial in August 1995, the defendants were convicted on all charges. In an unpublished table decision, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit vacated his sentences and remanded for resentencing. See United States v. Eubanks, 166 F.3d 335 (4th Cir. 1998) (unpublished table decision). On appeal after resentencing, the Fourth Circuit affirmed. *See United States v. On January 15, 1997, a federal grand jury sitting in the District of South Carolina indicted Eubanks for armed bank robbery and possession of a firearm during a crime of violence. A superseding indictment was returned, charging the defendant with armed bank robbery, possession of a firearm during a crime of violence, and possession of a weapon by a convicted felon. Following a jury trial in August 1997, Eubanks was convicted of all three charges. The defendant appealed, and in an unpublished opinion, the Fourth Circuit affirmed the convictions but vacated Eubanks' sentences and remanded for resentencing. Eubanks was resentenced, and he again appealed. The Fourth Circuit affirmed. 18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

In my role as a United States Magistrate Judge, I was appointed as presiding and supervisory judge over our District's first drug court program on November 1, 2010. The program identifies criminal defendants whose presence in the prosecutorial system is principally a function of substance abuse or addiction as opposed to independently motivated criminal behavior. In conjunction with the United States Attorney for the District of South Carolina, the United States Probation Office for the State of South Carolina, and the Federal Public Defender's Office, my chambers developed the program over a six-month period, including all governing and enabling documentation and processes. The above-described program team visited various other similar programs in federal and state jurisdictions, participated in training with a national drug court institute, and worked cooperatively to its completion. The drug court is an intensive rehabilitation process that relies on the existing probation infrastructure for drug screening and monitoring and the volunteerism of community businesses and organizations to provide substance abuse training and mentoring, vocational placement, and wellness education. The program is a substantial commitment by my chambers above and beyond my regular duties, on a weekly—even daily—basis. I preside over biweekly staffing meetings and in-court hearings with the program participants, who must account to me for their progress. Since its inception, the program has saved court resources and taxpayer dollars and produced numerous successful graduates.

I have worked as a board member for the Federal Bar Association. My participation has included planning and contribution to Continuing Legal Education programming. I have hosted various groups at the courthouse on behalf of the Federal Bar Association, including student groups and summer law clerks. I have also participated in the organization's charitable work.

I have never been involved in lobbying activities or registered as a lobbyist.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In the spring of 2000, I served as an Adjunct Professor at the College of Charleston and taught a course entitled "Law and the Legal System in the United States." This course focused on the three branches of government, the structure of the federal court system, the structure of the state court system, the differences between federal and state court, and the role of the various participants in the legal system. I do not have a copy of the syllabus.

In the spring of 2001, I again served as an Adjunct Professor at the College of Charleston and taught a course entitled "Civil Processes and Procedures." This course explained the rules and standards that courts use when adjudicating civil lawsuits. Major topics taught included the filing of a civil action, pleadings and motions, service of process, discovery, and the trial and appellate processes. I do not have a copy of the syllabus.

In the spring and fall of 2001, I taught another College of Charleston course, entitled "Criminal Justice," also in an adjunct capacity. This course provided an overview of the criminal justice system, including its history and philosophy. Major topics taught included constitutional issues arising under the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Amendments; theories of crime causation; and goals of corrections. I do not have a copy of the syllabus.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

My only source of deferred income arises from my participation in the Thrift Savings Plan (TSP).

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

None.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

The only potential conflicts of interest for me involve those individuals currently on my recusal list maintained by the Clerk of Court. More generally, I would handle any matters involving actual or potential conflicts of interest in conformity with the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and any other relevant statutes, ethical canons, and rules. Specifically, I would recuse myself from any case that I worked on, supervised, or on which I was consulted as an Assistant United States Attorney. Furthermore, as in the past, upon learning of any situation that a party or observer might perceive or identify as an actual or potential conflict of interest, I would alert the parties to the situation and invite their view and concern, if any.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

In resolving potential conflicts of interest, I would consult the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and the published Advisory Opinions issued by the Committee on Codes of Conduct.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

While serving as an Assistant United States Attorney, I was a founding member and past Chairman and Advisory Committee Member of the Lawyer Referral/Legal Assistance Program at the College of Charleston. The program, which was available to students, staff, and faculty, was a volunteer service project that was designed to offer the College of Charleston community access to legal assistance at a reduced fee or on a pro bono basis from members of the legal profession who are alumni or friends of the College of Charleston. I also participated in the Department of Justice's "Weed and Seed" program, which actively supported community service and community efforts in areas where our local office was also attempting to remove, through prosecution, the destructive criminal element. I also participated in a related federal program called "Project Jump Shot." In addition, I was active in several organizations that aid the disadvantaged, including the Boys & Girls Club in Charleston, South Carolina. I collaborated with the City of Charleston and the College of Charleston to launch an after-school program for the Boys & Girls Club. I devoted numerous hours to developing the program, which provided food and tutoring for disadvantaged children.

As a United States Magistrate Judge, I am precluded from the practice of law and ethically unable to personally accept any pro bono assignments. However, I still stay active in community charitable concerns. I have served on the Board of Directors for the YMCA and the Alumni Board of the College of Charleston. In Greenville, South Carolina, I remained an active contributor to the area Boys & Girls Club, participated in the development of a marching band for an area high school, and have collaborated with Coaches 4 Character. I have served as a judge for numerous moot court and mock trial competitions and, with regularity, hosted elementary and high school groups, summer law clerks, and bar groups at the courthouse and in chambers to share with them about the judicial system.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In January 2013, I met briefly with Congressman James E. Clyburn in Columbia, South Carolina, to discuss my interest in the anticipated vacancies on our federal bench. I was later informed by Congressman Clyburn's office that my name was submitted to the White House for consideration. Since April 9, 2013, I have been in contact with officials at the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On May 13, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, DC. On June 26, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
Chairman
Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I have reviewed the questionnaire submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee in connection with my nomination on June 26, 2013, to be a United States District Court Judge for the District of South Carolina. Incorporating the additional information listed below, I certify that the information contained in these documents is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate.

Q. 12(d)

Since my previously submitted questionnaire, I have given the following additional presentations:

December 20, 2013: I participated as a panelist in a discussion entitled, "Straight Talk from the Bench—A Conversation with South Carolina Federal Judges," in Columbia, South Carolina. The panel discussed tips for mediation, brief writing, and jury trials. The continuing legal education seminar was presented by the South Carolina Bar—Continuing Legal Education Division. I have no notes, transcript, or recording. The address for the South Carolina Bar is 950 Taylor Street, Columbia, South Carolina 29201.

October 11, 2013: I participated as a panelist in a discussion entitled, "Women in the Federal Judiciary—Weighing in on Leaning In," for the South Carolina Women Lawyers Association in Greenville, South Carolina. The topic of the panel was the practice of law while managing personal responsibilities. I have no notes, transcript, or recording. The address for the South Carolina Women Lawyers Association is Post Office Box 11910, Columbia, South Carolina 29211.

I have attached a list of opinions I have issued since my previously submitted questionnaire.

Q. 13(c)

(4) Since my previously submitted questionnaire, the Savannah Riverkeeper v. U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, No. 9:12-cv-610 matter reached a full and court-approved settlement.

Q. 13(d)

I have listed the three instances since my previously-submitted questionnaire in which a district judge declined to fully adopt one of my reports.

McFadden v. Fuller, Civ. A. 2:13-2290-JMC-BH11, 2013 WL 6181107 (D.S.C. Sept. 24, 2013). The district court agreed with the Report and Recommendation that 91 prisoners should not be allowed to proceed together in a single case, but the district court elected to "breakout" each of the plaintiffs' cases and assign individual numbers to them rather than dismiss the entire case with leave for each plaintiff to refile.

Bui v. ADT LLC, Civ. A. 2:13-126-PMD, 2013 WL 3967183 (D.S.C. June 19, 2013). The district court declined to adopt a Report and Recommendation that a pro se lawsuit not be limited to $500 recovery at the motion to dismiss stage. The district court found that the damages available to the plaintiff had been specifically limited by contract.

Woods v. Boeing Co., Civ. A. 2:11-2855-RMG, 2013 WL 5309132 (D.S.C. June 10, 2013). The district court predominately adopted the Report and Recommendation but found that the plaintiff's retaliation claim under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) should be dismissed.

I am also forwarding an updated net worth statement and financial disclosure report as requested in the questionnaire. I thank the Committee for its consideration of my nomination.

Sincerely,

Bruce Howe Hendricks
United States Magistrate Judge

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

I worked as an Assistant District Attorney for two different administrations between 1990 and 1995. My area of practice was purely criminal prosecution during that time with the exception of a four-month period in 1991 after an election related change in District Attorney administrations. From January to April 1991, I engaged in a private practice while waiting to be re-hired as a prosecutor by the newly elected District Attorney. I focused on court-appointed criminal defense, minor business contract matters and real estate. From 1995 to 2011, I returned to private practice, focusing on criminal defense work. I also had some involvement in other general law practice areas including personal injury, real estate and estate planning. From January 2011 to present, as the elected District Attorney for one of eleven districts in Massachusetts, my area of practice has been criminal prosecution.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

Both in my current practice as the District Attorney for Hampden and in my previous practice as an Assistant District Attorney for Hampden, my client has been the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In private practice, starting in 1995, my criminal defense specialization included representing indigent persons charged with crimes, primarily through court appointments. I continued to do public defender appointed work throughout my private practice career, but I transitioned to a majority of private paying clients by 2000. While primarily having a private paying cliental, I was also appointed to the Commonwealth's Committee for Public Counsel Services' list for homicide cases, as well as to the Federal panel in the District of Massachusetts for representation of indigent defendants.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

Over my entire career I have remained heavily focused on litigation, which has comprised approximately 90 percent of my practice. While employed as an Assistant District Attorney and then in private practice, I appeared in court at least one or more times each day on multiple cases. Presently, as District Attorney, my actual time in court has been drastically reduced from my years in private practice. Administrative responsibilities of my current position, since January 2011, have required my court appearances to be reduced to three or four times per month. However, I maintain a trial caseload and have litigated five jury trials to completion since being elected in 2011.

i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 25% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 75% |
| 3. other courts: | 0% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 0% |

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 5% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 95% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have litigated approximately 200 cases to verdict as sole or chief counsel. Among the jury cases that I have tried to verdict, I have served as the prosecutor in five murder trials, and the defense attorney in three murder trials. In addition to the numerous major felony trials in superior court and felony and misdemeanor trials in the Commonwealth's district courts, I have served as defense attorney in eight jury trials in federal court and I have made seven appearances at the Commonwealth's appellate courts.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 1. jury: | 75% |
| 2. non-jury: | 25% |

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have never appeared before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. Commonwealth v. Kirkland, Docket No. 11-044 (Hampden County Superior Court June 2013), Judge Tina Page.

I was the lead prosecutor in this matter, which resulted in convictions for murder in the first degree, multiple counts of armed assault with intent to murder, and weapons charges. The defendant had targeted a barber for a mid-day shooting while the shop was open for business and full of people. The person sitting in the barber's chair was killed when hit by multiple bullets. The barber was seriously wounded but survived. The defendant escaped the scene and was found hiding one block away in the trunk of car. The defendant emerged and shot two police officers wearing protective vests. The case involved detailed ballistics evidence, weapons, bullet, and shell casing comparisons from multiple weapons. There also was a challenge to the photo array procedures used and to how scientific forensic evidence was collected and interpreted. The defendant espoused a third party culprit theory, with the challenge to the identification of the shooter at that scene being a central issue.

2. Commonwealth v. Bell, Docket No. 07-0211 (Hampden County Superior Court December 2012), Judge John Ferrara.

I was the lead prosecutor in this matter, which resulted in a guilty verdict after trial for first degree murder by premeditation, felony murder, and extreme atrocity. This was the retrial of a case that had been reversed on appeal on issues of jury instructions and the law on first degree felony murder. The defendant filed motions to suppress challenging the voluntary nature of statements he made when he was suffering from his own burn injuries. There were detailed forensic evidence and testimony specifically relating to fire ignition and spreading. Both sides presented expert witnesses relative to injuries on both victim and defendant. The primary focus of the defense was on the collection of evidence and integrity of techniques used by investigators to make conclusions.

3. Commonwealth v. Denson, Docket No. 10-369 (Hampden County Superior Court October 2011), Judge Peter Velis (retired).

I was the lead prosecutor in this matter, which resulted in a guilty verdict after trial of first degree murder by premeditation and extreme atrocity and cruelty. The conviction is presently being appealed. This case involved a young man being stabbed in the throat at a crowded party. There were significant identification issues because the eyewitnesses gave primarily general clothing descriptions that could have matched a number of individuals at the party. There was detailed video enhancement evidence from a surveillance tape made at a neighboring convenience store. There was extensive testimony regarding evidence collection and examination, including DNA. Forensic issues included blood pattern analysis, evidence preservation and collection issues. The prosecution used new courtroom technology equipment for the presentation of the video surveillance evidence. Several experts were called by the prosecution and defense on various identification, scientific, forensic and medical issues.

4. United States v. Crooker, Docket No. 09-cr-30017-MAP (District of Massachusetts (Springfield) July 2010), Judge Michael Ponsor and Magistrate Judge Kenneth Neiman.

I was defense lead trial counsel in this matter, which resulted in a not guilty verdict after jury trial as to the charges of unlawful possession of firearms and ammunition by a user of controlled substances but a guilty verdict as to possession of marijuana. These charges were filed after an ongoing FBI investigation of defendant's uncle and father resulted in his residence being searched pursuant to a warrant. The investigation centered on suspicion and evidence of defendant's uncle and father being connected with biological weapons as well as firearms and explosives. The defense successfully argued for the use of Grand Jury testimony of a prosecution witness who was deceased but had testified relative to exculpatory issues. A motion to suppress relative to the warrant, its scope and defendant's statements was unsuccessfully litigated by the defense. Although the defendant was acquitted on the more substantial charge, he appealed his conviction on possession of marijuana. All suppression issues were reviewed in the decision which affirmed the simple possession of marijuana conviction. 688 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2012).

I was defense lead trial counsel in this matter, which resulted in a not guilty after jury trial as to the first degree murder charge. This case involved the prosecution for first degree murder of the defendant who was with a group of friends near a crowded area where a shooting resulted in someone being struck and killed. There were co-defendants involved and numerous witnesses relative to identification and circumstances surrounding the incident which led to shots being fired. The defense focused on contradictory eyewitness descriptions and testimony. There was detailed ballistics and firearms expertise issues that were litigated relative to the ability to make conclusions regarding the defendant's involvement.

6. United States v. Zayas, Docket No. 05-cr-30012-RGS (District of Massachusetts (Boston) June 2007), Judge Nancy Gertner (retired),

I was defense lead trial counsel in a matter that resulted in a not guilty verdict after trial on one indictment with guilty plea on remaining indictments. The defendant was charged after a search warrant was executed at a location that he was connected to for purposes of storing drugs. The defendant gave a statement after being arrested and Miranda issues relative to the admissibility of the statement were litigated. The defendant entered guilty pleas on multiple drug distribution charges, as well as possession of a firearm and ammunition. The defendant went to trial on the single charge that he had allegedly used the seized firearm in furtherance of his drug distribution, which carried a significant penalty. The defense successfully argued to the jury that the firearm possessed was not connected with drug distribution.

7. United States v. Moorer, Docket No. 05-cr-30057-MAP (District of Massachusetts (Springfield) September 2007), Judge Michael Ponsor and Magistrate Judge Kenneth Neiman.

I was the defense lead trial counsel in a matter that resulted in a not guilty verdict after trial on the charge of possession with intent to distribute cocaine base. In this matter, if convicted, the defendant would have been subject to a life-sentence based on the Government's filing of a notice of qualifying prior convictions. The prosecution's case was based on a combined local and federal law enforcement investigation into drug sales in a specific area. The police claimed an ability to make a positive identification of the defendant based on their surveillance and observations of street level drug sales. The defense challenged the surveillance techniques used by law enforcement, as well as the identification procedures utilized when another officer was the identifying witness. The defense raised issues relative to the bias of local police involved in the investigation based on their prior history with defendant.

I was the defense lead trial counsel in a matter that resulted in a not guilty verdict after trial on a first degree murder charge. This case involved allegations of a gang and drug related shooting in front of a group of people. The prosecution's evidence included voice recording and other material gathered from wire interceptions. Other evidence included statements of the defendant that were categorized as an admission. Civilian testimony was offered against the defendant under cooperation agreements, and the defense focused on the integrity of such testimony under the circumstances. There was detailed ballistics and forensic evidence offered relative to the distance and positioning of the firearm, including analysis of powder and contact wounds caused by a close distance firing.

9. United States v. Moriarty, Docket No. 96-cr-30055 (District of Massachusetts (Springfield) 1996), Judge Frank Freedman (deceased) and Magistrate Judge Kenneth Neiman.

I was the lead counsel for the defendant and replaced a prior attorney who withdrew after the arraignment in this matter. The case resulted in the most serious charge being dismissed and a plea disposition on remaining charges. The defendant was employed at the Hampden County Hall of Justice and charged with intercepting voicemail of various employees including the staff of the District Attorney's Office. The defendant was also alleged to have been conducting an illegal gambling business out of the Hall of Justice. The case received significant media attention and was subject to a defense challenge as to the legitimacy of three indictments charging wiretap, voicemail interception, and obstruction of justice. The defendant prevailed on a motion to dismiss the most serious wiretap charge and negotiated a further dismissal of the voicemail interception charge.

10. Commonwealth v. Allard, Docket No. 94-1953 (Hampden County Superior Court April 1995), Judge John J. Moriarty (deceased),

I was the lead prosecutor in this matter, which resulted in a guilty verdict after trial of first degree murder by way of extreme atrocity and cruelty and premeditation. This case involved the investigation into the disappearance of a teenage boy who had shown an interest in the girlfriend of another. The victim was reported missing by his parents after not returning home from a job interview at a local business. The investigation revealed that the purported job interview was used by the defendant to lure the victim to an area where he could be attacked. A vehicle used, as well as a pipe used as the weapon, were located in Connecticut, but the body was ultimately recovered in the woods near the supposed job interview. The issues included state jurisdiction between Massachusetts and Connecticut, as well as use of dental records to identify the victim. Forensics included blood spatter evidence, blood typing and matching, hair sample analysis, and fingerprint and palm-print examination. Among the witnesses used by the prosecution was an individual who assisted in hiding the body and was later prosecuted for that involvement. The conviction was affirmed on appeal.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

During my career I was fortunate enough to be involved in several significant legal matters. One was writing and arguing before the State Supreme Judicial Court on a case taken up from the Appeals Court in order to decide an important legal issue. This case was my first experience doing appeals work as a prosecutor. The matter set precedent which remains very relevant today on the issue of securing a premises before a search warrant is authorized as a way to prevent destruction of evidence; Commonwealth v. Blake, 413 Mass 823 (1992).

I have had multiple meaningful legal experiences litigating many murder cases over my career. These cases have allowed me to develop an expertise and appreciation for forensic sciences and how modern technology can be used in criminal investigations. I have used modern technology to successfully defend cases in my career. I have also used technology to open and conduct a re-examination of cold case murders as District Attorney. Recently, I have started a program to apply modern DNA extraction and analysis technology to unsolved cold cases. This resulted in solving and making an arrest relative to the murder and rape of an 89-year-old woman in 1991. Several other leads have been discovered in other cold cases using this same technology.

It has been very significant over the last several years that I have established or modified units in the District Attorney's Office to address child sexual abuse, domestic and elder abuse, and unsolved homicides. Numerous initiatives have been started for positive community impact including addressing middle and high school students on issues of drugs, violence and other things that affect their school and life experiences. I was able to use a program allowing a portion of seized drug forfeiture money to be donated to qualified non-profits doing community-based drug deterrent education and rehabilitation work in neighborhoods at high risk. The unique experience of being involved in both legally and community-based matters has been a rewarding and important legal activity for me.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I have not taught any courses.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have no future benefits arrangements.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no plans to pursue outside commitments other than holding open the possibility to consider teaching one or two college or law school courses.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If parties appearing were former clients from my private practice, a conflict or appearance of one would arise. Similarly, if individuals appeared who were part of any investigation that I was involved in as District Attorney, an obvious conflict assessment would have to be made. Dealing with a potential conflict situation would require a case by case analysis of the circumstances creating the actual or apparent conflict. I would resolve any such issues through strict adherence to the standard of 28 U.S.C. §455 and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would consult and apply the standards under the code of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, 28 U.S.C. §455, and any and all other laws, rules, and practices governing such circumstances. As needed I would consult with judicial colleagues.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

During my entire career in private practice I routinely did pro bono work including acceptance of court appointed assignments on a pro bono basis when special circumstances developed in court. I volunteered to take cases on a pro bono basis when there was no public defender available or a case was identified by a Judge as having a certain complexity. At one point in my private practice the Bar Advocate/Public Defender group refused to accept cases during a dispute with the State over their contract. I volunteered to take cases, many on a pro bono basis, as individuals were not being assigned attorneys. In my private practice I would accept clients regularly who had no financial resources but had some compelling legal issue that needed to be addressed.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In March 2013, Senator Elizabeth Warren announced the formation of an advisory committee to make recommendations for the district court vacancies in Massachusetts. On April 14, 2013, I submitted my application. On May 13, 2013, I met with the advisory committee to be interviewed in Springfield, Massachusetts. On June 15, 2013, I met with Senator Warren in Springfield, Massachusetts. Since June 19, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On July 26, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On September 24, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

RE: Captain Scott Savino and Administrative Employee Marianne Keating

Dear Chief Sienkiewicz:

The State Police Detective Unit assigned to this office has been conducting a work-related financial investigation of Marianne Keating, a civilian employee of the Police Department, and Police Captain Scott Savino. This matter was referred to the Hampden District Attorney's Office due to a potential conflict raised by the Hampshire District Attorney's Office. The investigation included a review of the financial compensation system for civilian employees of the Police Department. Interviews were conducted of both civilian employees and officers within the Department; additionally records were reviewed and an accounting was conducted of the salary and payment history for Marianne Keating. As the Northampton Police Department utilizes a "flex time" compensation system, the inherent flexibility of that system was specifically reviewed relative to how hours worked are monitored and recorded so that actual pay reflects actual time worked. The system of supervisory oversight as well as the signing and verifying of actual time worked was examined.

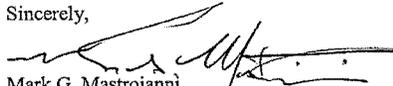

It is the determination of this office, after full review, there were clear improprieties relative to the compensation realized by Marianne Keating for the hours that she actually worked since January 2011. While she had a fixed salary that was not exceeded, the investigation focused on her actual hours working not adding up to the time required to justify the salary amount realized. Under the "flex system" any set hours established for her could be substituted by her coming to work at varying hours as long as the total hours required to be worked every week were satisfied and a supervisor verified in writing that she was actually on the job. The internal process of paying administrative employees and verifying or proving if hours were actually worked under the "flex system" is not a completely clear or concise one. There are facts present which potentially could be proven to support criminal charges relative to a larceny scheme where Ms. Keating was paid for hours that were actually not worked. Captain Savino of the Northampton Police Department was involved and he was responsible for knowingly verifying a small portion of the unworked hours at issue for Ms. Keating. The remainder of pay for unworked hours was realized through Ms. Keating having payments processed without verification of actual work. The total amount for unworked hours being paid to Ms. Keating has been determined to be $18,000.00.

The level of proof required to pursue criminal charges is more substantial than what is necessary for addressing this matter administratively and/or by means of a civil action. An agreement has been reached between the City and the two individuals being investigated which included full payback of money lost and also what was spent by the City in dealing with this matter. The agreement also addresses the employment consequences for the individuals involved. No other individuals were found to be implicated to any degree as being involved in this matter. I believe that administrative handling is appropriate under the circumstances and, therefore, decline to further pursue the possibility of this factual scenario supporting the standard of proof necessary for pursuing criminal charges.

Sincerely,

Mark G. Mastroianni
Hampden District Attorney

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

September 1982-July 1987 (Estimated), Associate: I was an associate handling litigation matters. I started by assisting partners and other associates in litigation arising from commercial disputes. As I developed an interest in trial work and matters involving fraud, I began to develop courtroom skills and participated in two trials, one each in state and federal court.

August 1987-December 1998, U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York: From 1987 until approximately December 1988, I was assigned to the General Crimes Section, where I handled cases involving narcotics trafficking and some smaller fraud and corruption cases, including approximately 7 jury trials. I was then promoted to the Narcotics Section, where I handled investigations and trials involving large drug organizations. My primary focus was on two violent inner city narcotics organizations run by Lorenzo "Fat Cat" Nichols and Howard "Pappy" Mason, which were responsible for dozens of murders, including the execution-style murders of a New York City Police Officer and a New York State Parole Officer. In approximately September 1991, I was promoted to Deputy Chief of the General Crimes Section, and held that role through approximately March 1993. I provided training for a group of new AUSAs, including serving as a supervisory "second seat" on more than a dozen trials, and also continued to handle my own docket of Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) murder and other cases. In approximately March 1993, I transferred to the Special Prosecutions Section (Public Corruption), and prosecuted numerous corruption cases, including cases against corrupt parole officers who assisted drug organizations. I also tried a major RICO case against the leaders of the murderous "Supreme Team" drug gang, whose leader had been acquitted repeatedly on state murder charges. In February 1994, I became the Chief of the newly-created Violent Criminal Enterprises Section, whose mandate was to prosecute non-traditional organized crime groups. As Chief of that Section, I oversaw many prosecutions involving Asian organized crime, Russian organized crime, and cases involving other major violent groups. I also continued to try cases, including: RICO cases against Chinatown businessmen who, while purporting to be civic leaders, were in fact the bosses of a violent Chinatown gang; the attempted murder of an AUSA by booby-trapped briefcase; a RICO case involving a criminal defense attorney who deployed his clients and others to engage in criminal conduct throughout the country; and a case involving an attempted murder at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in which an insanity defense was asserted. In approximately August 1996, I became Senior Trial Counsel in the Business and Securities Fraud Section, and prosecuted numerous cases involving market manipulation and other securities fraud. In total, while in the EDNY I successfully first-chaired approximately 25 jury trials, including numerous multi-defendant RICO matters, and handled more than 20 appeals to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. I also second-chaired at least a dozen other trials in a supervisory capacity.

January 1999-January 2002, U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of California: In January 1999, I joined the U.S. Attorney's Office in San Francisco after being recruited by then-U.S. Attorney Robert S. Mueller III. Initially I was Deputy Chief of the Criminal Division and Chief of the Economic Crime Section. As Deputy Chief, I supervised AUSAs in San Francisco, Oakland and San Jose in the prosecution of white collar crime, computer crime and intellectual property theft. As Chief of Economic Crime, I oversaw all of the District's major white collar cases, and personally handled major health care fraud cases involving Medicare fraud and unlawful drug promotion. At the same time, I initiated numerous securities fraud investigations.

In February 2000, U.S. Attorney Mueller created a Securities Fraud Section, and named me Chief (while I continued to serve as Deputy Chief of the Criminal Division). That Section was charged with investigating and prosecuting financial fraud, insider trading and other securities violations in Silicon Valley and the Bay Area. Working closely with the FBI and the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) in San Francisco and Washington, D.C., the NDCA brought numerous insider trading, accounting fraud, and other securities fraud prosecutions, significantly raising the profile of the office and the San Francisco office of the SEC. In approximately May 2001, I became the Chief of the Criminal Division, overseeing the work of all criminal prosecutors in San Francisco, San Jose and Oakland. This included matters involving narcotics trafficking, securities fraud, health care fraud, public corruption, organized crime, and terrorism. In September 2001 I was appointed as Terrorism Coordinator for the NDCA. I also continued to handle my own docket of securities fraud matters until leaving the NDCA in January 2002.

January 2002-May-2004, Enron Task Force: In January 2002 I was asked by then Assistant Attorney General Michael Chertoff to lead a task force being created to oversee an investigation into the collapse of the Enron Corp. I served as Director of the Enron Task Force from January 2002 through May 2004, and oversaw all aspects of the Enron investigation, which resulted in the prosecution of approximately 30 individuals. The Task Force also prosecuted others associated with Enron, including the accounting firm Arthur Andersen, which was charged with obstructing justice through document destruction, and executives of banks that assisted in the Enron fraud. Also, two banks entered into deferred prosecution agreements as a result of their dealings with Enron.

May 2004-July 2004, Special Assistant to the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division: From approximately May-July 2004, at the request of then-AAG Chris Wray, I conducted a comprehensive review of DOJ's Fraud Section, and made recommendations regarding the Section's management, structure and mission.

September 2004-Present, Morgan Lewis & Bockius: Since 2004, I have been a partner at the law firm of Morgan Lewis & Bockius. The firm is a large full-service firm, with offices in 16 U.S. and 8 foreign cities. My practice is focused on white collar crime and other regulatory matters. At the firm, I have been Co-Chair of the Corporate Investigations and White Collar Practice Group (2004-08). I also have represented companies, corporate boards, board committees, senior executives and others in connection with internal investigations and government inquiries relating to various matters, including allegations of fraud.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

When I was a law firm associate, I did not have my own clients. I worked for a variety of clients brought in by partners of the firms. These included mainly corporations, and a smaller number of non-profit groups and individuals.

As a federal prosecutor, my client was the United States.

As a partner at Morgan Lewis, my clients have mainly been large corporations, as well as senior corporate executives.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

My practice has been 100% focused on litigation, including investigations. As an associate attorney from 1982-1987, I appeared in court occasionally, with more frequent appearances (including two trials) as I grew more experienced. As a federal prosecutor in the EDNY from 1987-1998, I appeared in court frequently (including approximately 25 first-chair jury trials, at least a dozen jury trials as a supervisory second seat, more than 20 appeals, and numerous other hearings and appearances). As a federal prosecutor in NDCA, I appeared somewhat less frequently given my mainly supervisory role. As Director of the Enron Task Force, I attended major court hearings but personally appeared only occasionally, given my role. As a partner at Morgan Lewis, I have appeared occasionally—the goal of my practice has been mainly to assist my clients in avoiding indictment or other events that would require court appearances.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts: Approximately 90%
2. state courts of record: Approximately 10% (higher as an associate attorney)
3. other courts: N/A
4. administrative agencies: N/A

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings: Approximately 40%
2. criminal proceedings: Approximately 60%

While in government, 100% of my practice was in federal courts. I did not practice in state court, other courts, or before administrative agencies. While an associate attorney in private practice, approximately 70% of my practice was in federal courts, and approximately 30% was in state courts. I did not practice in other courts or before administrative agencies. As a partner in private practice, approximately 90% of my practice is in federal courts or in matters that might end up in federal court. Approximately 10% involves matters that might be handled by a state court.

While in government, 100% of my practice involved criminal proceedings, although I often worked in coordination with civil enforcement authorities including the SEC and the U.S. Attorney's Office or Department of Justice Civil Division. In private practice, approximately 60% of my practice has involved criminal or potential criminal proceedings, and approximately 40% has involved civil or potential civil proceedings.

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

N.Y. State Supreme Court: one bench trial as associate counsel
 U.S. District Court, SDNY: one jury trial as associate counsel
 U.S. District Court, EDNY: approximately 25 jury trials as sole or chief counsel; at least a dozen jury trials as supervisory "second seat", supervising junior AUSAs
 U.S. District Court, NDCa: one jury trial as co-counsel
 U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit: Briefed and argued approximately 20 appeals while an AUSA in the Eastern District of New York

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
1. jury: All but one
 2. non-jury: One (NY state court)

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I had one matter in which my client's case was heard by the Supreme Court. I represented Kenneth Maxwell, who was the head of counter-terrorism in the FBI's New York Field Office at the time of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Special Agent Maxwell and several other government officials were named as defendants in a case where plaintiffs alleged that their rights had been violated as a result of their detentions in the aftermath of the September 11th terrorist attacks. The case, Iqbal v. Ashcroft, et al., was heard by the Supreme Court. The docket number is No. 07-1015. I did not participate in oral argument. Copy of brief supplied.

- 15. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. Securities and Exchange Commission v. Oracle Corp., No. C 12-4210 (CRB) (NDCA) that was responsible for collecting extortion payments from nearly every lawful business in its zone, as well as guarding and collecting payments from area gambling and "massage parlors". Lai pleaded guilty in 1995, on the morning of jury selection, in connection with the murders of two men whose Hong Kong triad had tried to wrest control of a tong-controlled gambling parlor.

- 16. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

In addition to the matters listed above, I have conducted numerous confidential internal investigations on behalf of a number of Fortune 500 clients and corporate boards and Audit Committees.

I also have represented numerous corporate and individual clients in matters under investigation by the DOJ and/or SEC in which no action was taken, or which are pending.

I have not performed lobbying services on behalf of any client or organization.

- 17. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I taught Trial Advocacy at New York Law School during approximately 1994-96. The course was designed to train law students in various trial skills, culminating in mock trials at the end of the course. Syllabus not available.

I also participated as an instructor in Department of Justice training programs, including at least once each in Washington, D.C. and at the National Advocacy Center in Columbia, S.C. I have searched my records and have been unable to locate the dates of or topics covered by those programs. Both would have occurred while I was an AUSA in the Eastern District of New York and would have related to criminal law.

- 18. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have no deferred income or other anticipated future benefits from previous business relationships, including membership in my firm. I have made no arrangements to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest. As a former U.S. Government employee, I participate in the Federal Thrift Savings Plan.

No.

Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached SF-278.

- 21. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Statement of Net Worth.

- 22. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, affiliations, pending and categories of litigation, financial arrangements or other factors that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

In connection with the nomination process, I have consulted with the Office of Government Ethics and the Department of Justice's designated agency ethics official to identify potential conflicts of interest. Any potential conflicts of interest will be resolved in accordance with the terms of an ethics agreement that I have entered into with the Department's designated agency ethics official.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

In the event of a potential conflict of interest, I would consult the Department's designated agency ethics official.

23. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each. If you are not an attorney, please use this opportunity to report significant charitable and volunteer work you may have done.

Legal Outreach: In 2013, I was a guest speaker for this group, which acts as portal for disadvantaged New York City children interested in pursuing careers in the legal profession. The group identifies promising young people in the eighth grade and provides mentoring and training to them through high school. I spent approximately six hours preparing and making my presentation to the group.

Batya: Between 2010 and 2013, I assisted this non-profit medical rescue organization, which provides emergency services primarily in Orthodox Jewish communities in New York and Israel, in exposing a bogus rescue organization to the New York State Office of Attorney General. In 2013, the AG sued the other "charity" for fraudulently soliciting donations for the bogus rescue organization and numerous other phony charities. I spent approximately 40-50 hours on this matter.

Supervisory FBI Agent: I represented an FBI supervisory special agent (now retired) in connection with an investigation by the DOJ Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR). OPR closed the inquiry without taking any action in April 2011. I spent approximately 100 hours on this matter. This was not a pro bono matter, but was billed at a greatly reduced rate.

Darfur Project: In 2007, I participated in the ABA-sponsored Darfur Project, in which I and other American lawyers provided trial advocacy training to a group of Sudanese human rights lawyers who would represent victims of the Darfur atrocities in the International Criminal Court. The program was an intensive two-week exercise in which I and other lawyers demonstrated advocacy skills, trained the Sudanese lawyers, and critiqued their performances. I spent approximately 120 hours on this matter.

Statement of Leslie R. Caldwell
Senate Judiciary Committee
February 11, 2014

Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member Grassley, and Members of the Committee, thank you. I am honored to appear before you today as President Obama's nominee to be the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice.

Let me take a moment to introduce my partner, Michele Kohler, and her daughter Hannah Ryan, who are sitting behind me. Also here with me are my niece Megan Caldwell, my fantastic administrative assistant Donna Weekes, and several other close friends and colleagues. I thank them all for their support and for being here today. I also thank my brothers Bruce and Douglas and their wives Teresa and Jean, who were unable to be here today.

I know that if they had made it to this day, my parents, Key and Caryl Caldwell, would have been so proud to see their daughter sitting here before this Committee. My father Key was a Tennessee native, who at the age of 19 enlisted in the Army Air Corps in World War II. He became a B-24 bomber pilot, assigned to the 8th Air Force, based in England. After many successful missions over Germany, his plane was shot down. He managed to keep the plane airborne just long enough to leave German airspace, and landed in a field in Switzerland. All but one of his crew survived. He was detained by the Swiss, but escaped, and with the help of the French Resistance, made his way to safety. While my father went on to become an engineer and a successful businessman in Pittsburgh, he was also a very humble man. In fact, I never even knew the story I just shared with you until I was well into adulthood, when I stumbled upon my Dad's war diary. When I asked him with amazement about his exploits, he said very matter of factly that all he had done was serve his country as best he could. He never spoke of it again.

My mother Caryl was a remarkable woman who set an example for me every day of her life. She was raised in a single parent home in a poor neighborhood on Pittsburgh's north side. Though she was the valedictorian of her high school class, there was no money for college. So she took a full-time job as a secretary in the Legal Department of U.S. Steel, and attended the University of Pittsburgh at night. At around the same time when she met and married my Dad, she graduated from Pitt summa cum laude and as a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Though she never again worked in a traditional job, she raised three children, and also played leadership roles in several community organizations, while volunteering many hours as an adult literacy teacher. I like to think that if she had been born 30 years later, my Mom would be the one sitting before this Committee.

Our parents taught my brothers and me that the values that matter most in life are integrity, fairness, hard work, and humility. As I sit before this Committee, I am especially mindful of those values, and of the honor of public service, to which I have dedicated much of my career.

As a young lawyer, I was fortunate enough to get a job as an Assistant United States Attorney in the Eastern District of New York, in Brooklyn. New York was a very different city then. Homicides and other drug-related violence were at an all-time high. As a young narcotics prosecutor, I was tasked with prosecuting members of a drug organization that was responsible for an especially notorious crime: the execution-style murder of a uniformed New York City Police Officer named Edward Byrne. More than 20 years later, I still consider the conviction of the druglord who ordered Officer Byrne's murder as perhaps my proudest professional accomplishment. During my 10 years in Brooklyn I prosecuted and tried many types of cases, including large-scale narcotics trafficking, violent organized crime and gangs, corrupt public officials, and securities fraud. During that time, I had the privilege to serve under three U.S. Attorneys who all understood that the interests of justice are best served when government remains mindful of its great power, and when enforcement is vigorous and swift, but fair.

In 1999, I was asked by former FBI Director Bob Mueller, who was then the U.S. Attorney in San Francisco, to join his team as chief white collar crime prosecutor. Working for Director Mueller was one of the finest experiences of my professional life. It is with his example in mind that I would approach my duties if I am confirmed as Assistant Attorney General. In 2002, I was honored when then Criminal Division Assistant Attorney General Mike Chertoff asked me to lead a task force that would investigate the collapse of Enron. For more than 2 years I was privileged to lead an extraordinary team of prosecutors, FBI agents and IRS agents, and to work with lawyers from the SEC, CFTC and other agencies as we unraveled that fascinating and complex case.

I believe that my experience as a prosecutor of nearly every type of federal crime, and in such diverse cities as New York, San Francisco, Washington D.C. and Houston, as well as my leadership and management experience in both government and private practice, have provided me with the perspective, judgment, and skill to lead the Criminal Division. If I become head of the Criminal Division, I will do my best to ensure the vigorous enforcement of our criminal laws, and to apply them with equal force whether the wrongdoing is in a boardroom, across a computer network, or on a street corner.

I am deeply honored to have this opportunity to serve our country, and to once again work alongside the dedicated career professionals that form the backbone of the Department of Justice. I thank you again for considering my nomination and I am pleased to respond to any questions you may have.

Statement of Senator SchumerNominations Hearing – February 11th, 2014

While I am unable to appear at today's hearing, I am pleased to offer my strong support for the confirmation of a highly qualified and accomplished New Yorker, Leslie Caldwell, who has been nominated by President Obama to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division at the Department of Justice. I ask that my remarks be included in the Committee's record of this hearing.

Leslie Caldwell is an eminently qualified prosecutor with the credentials and experience to lead the Criminal Division. Ms. Caldwell has given years of tireless service to protecting the people of New York, during her long tenure as an Assistant United States Attorney in the Eastern District of New York from 1987-1998, where she rose through the ranks to become Chief of the Violent Criminal Enterprises Section, prosecuting complex multi-defendant cases against violent organized crime syndicates responsible for drug trafficking, racketeering and murder. Her notable cases include winning a conviction against a Queens drug lord responsible for the murder of a uniformed New York City police officer, Edward Byrne.

The tenacity displayed by Ms. Caldwell in New York led her to be appointed to leadership positions in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of California by Robert Mueller. There, Ms. Caldwell led the Securities Fraud, Economic Crime sections and later rose to become Chief of the Criminal Division supervising prosecutors throughout the bay area in the prosecution of white collar crime, computer crime, intellectual property, health care fraud and securities fraud cases.

In 2002, then-Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division Michael Chertoff asked Ms. Caldwell to lead a task force created to oversee the investigation into the collapse of the Enron Corporation. From January 2002 until May 2004, Ms. Caldwell oversaw all aspects of the investigation, which resulted in the prosecution of approximately 30 defendants. After leaving government service, she returned to New York where she has been a partner with the law firm of Morgan Lewis & Bockius since 2004.

Ms. Caldwell graduated Penn State University summa cum laude, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and graduated from the George Washington University Law School cum laude, where she served as Articles Editor on the Law Review. In 2007, she was named by the National Law Journal as one of the 50 Most Influential Women Lawyers in America.

Ms. Caldwell's distinguished resume, experience and dedication to public safety exemplifies the kind of public servant that would well serve the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice.

Mr. Chairman,

First, I'd like to congratulate today's nominees and their families. It's an important milestone in all of your careers and I welcome you here today.

Before we turn to the nominees appearing before us today, I'd like to say a word about the nominees pending on the Senate floor. Over the course of the last several weeks, I've heard some of my colleagues in the Majority expressing frustration because the nominees on the Floor haven't yet been confirmed.

I must say, I find this somewhat surprising. As everyone knows, last year, the Senate Democrats invoked the “nuclear option.” By voting to invoke the so-called “nuclear option,” the Majority stripped the Minority of any ability to stop any nominee from being confirmed on the Floor.

The bottom line is that the Majority voted to cut the Minority out of the process. As a result, under the precedent 52 Democrats voted to establish, the Majority Leader can bring up these nominations for a vote on the floor anytime he decides to do so. The Minority simply has no ability to stop anyone from getting a vote. There is no filibuster of a nominee anymore.

And, as anyone who watches the Senate proceedings can tell you, the Senate Floor isn't exactly working overtime. We certainly aren't considering a lot of amendments to legislation. Instead, on most days, very little is considered on the Senate floor. And we are very rarely in session on Fridays.

So, there is really no reason why the Majority Leader can't bring these nominations up for a vote.

Finally, I'd like to compare our progress so far this year, compared to where we were at this point during 2006, President Bush's 6th year in office.

Thus far during the 113th Congress, we've had hearings for 66 judicial nominees. After today, during this year alone, we've had hearings for 12 judicial nominees. By comparison, up to this point in the 109th Congress, the Senate had held hearings on only 19 judicial nominees.

So as of today, we've held hearings for almost as many of President Obama's judicial nominees in just one month when it took the Committee over a year to reach a comparable number of hearings for President Bush's judicial nominees. This is just another example of just how fairly and efficiently the Committee is treating President Obama's judicial nominees compared to those of President Bush.

So I'll conclude by saying that I applaud the Chairman for his work. He continues to keep us busy as he makes sure that the Committee moves at a brisk pace.

Again, I welcome the nominees and their families today and look forward to their testimony.

Questions for the Record from Senator Dianne Feinstein

For Leslie R. Caldwell

Prosecution of Drug, Gun, and Gang Crimes

You have significant experience prosecuting drug, gang, and gun crimes, including as Chief of the Criminal Division in the U.S. Attorney's Office in my hometown of San Francisco. As you know, these often violent crimes continue to devastate many communities in California and across our country. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 11,101 homicides were committed with firearms in the United States in 2011, the latest year that data is available. The 2011 National Gang Threat Assessment found that gang membership increased by 40 percent between 2009 and 2011 and that "[g]angs are responsible for an average of 48 percent of violent crime in most jurisdictions and up to 90 percent in several others"

- If confirmed, will you vigorously enforce federal law against gang members and others who commit major drug or gun trafficking crimes, in coordination with the Offices of the U.S. Attorney?
- What will be your priorities in determining which drug, gun, and gang crimes will be prosecuted by attorneys in the Criminal Division and in formulating criminal enforcement policy for the broader Department of Justice?

Money Laundering – HSBC Case

As you and I discussed when we met in my office in December, the failure of some U.S. banks to comply with anti-money laundering laws fuels drug-related violence in Mexico. As you know, HSBC allowed over $670 billion in wire transfers and over $9.4 billion in physical money to enter the U.S. from Mexico unmonitored. Of that money, we know that at least $881 million in Mexican drug proceeds entered the U.S. illegally. On December 11, 2012, HSBC entered into a Deferred Prosecution Agreement with the Department of Justice and paid $1.92 billion in fines.

An April 2013 report by the Senate Caucus on International Narcotics Control, which I chair along with Senator Grassley, stated that it is unacceptable for monetary penalties to remain the cost of doing business for financial institutions that do not comply with U.S. anti-money laundering laws. I believe the individuals responsible need to be criminally prosecuted and barred from the financial sector.

- Do you agree with this assessment?
- If confirmed, what will you do to ensure that monetary penalties are not simply the cost of doing business for financial institutions that violate U.S. anti-money laundering laws?

Mark Mastroianni,
Nominee: U.S. District Judge for the District of Massachusetts

1. You have worked as both a prosecutor and a defense attorney. How have these experiences prepared you to become a federal judge?
2. During your hearing I asked you about Massachusetts gun storage law and case. You discussed the concept that states have authority to impose regulations on gun rights and listed safety as one of the legitimate reason for doing so. As I'm sure you would recognize, however, at a certain point excessive regulations effectively deny the right. With respect to the individual Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms, please provide examples of regulations that would be too restrictive, such that the rights guaranteed by the Second Amendment are abridged.

QUESTIONS SUBMITTED TO LESLIE CALDWELL
BY SENATOR GRASSLEY

Questions for the Record

Leslie R. Caldwell,

to be Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, Department of Justice

February 18, 2014

I am concerned that the Department is avoiding prosecuting institutions or executives at financial institutions for fear that the company is “too big to jail.” I certainly recognize that settlements and non-prosecution agreements have a place in the prosecutor’s playbook. But I find it disturbing how often they are relied on. In my view, this rewards and perpetuates criminal misconduct, and increases the risk that future criminal behavior will adversely affect financial markets and our fragile economy.

1. Do you believe that there is any corporation or any corporate executive that is “too big to jail?”
2. How much deference should the Department give a regulator’s advice concerning the collateral effects of a criminal prosecution or conviction on an institution’s viability or the broader economy in weighing criminal charges against that institution?
3. You certainly have extensive experience in prosecuting these types of cases. As a federal prosecutor, did you ever consult with an outside expert or with a regulator on the effects a criminal charge against a company or an individual could have on the economy or financial markets? If so, what factors did you and the Department consider before making a charging decision?
4. What factors should the Department consider relevant when a regulator expresses concerns over a potential criminal prosecution?

A few days after your hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary, the Department of Justice and the Department of the Treasury jointly released two memos providing further guidance on one of the issues we discussed: money laundering and marijuana business proceeds.

The February 14, 2014 memo issued by Deputy Attorney General James M. Cole, states the following:

“This memorandum does not alter in any way the Department’s authority to enforce federal law, including federal laws relating to marijuana, regardless of state law. Neither the guidance herein nor any state or local law provides a legal defense to a violation of federal law, including any civil or criminal violation of the CSA, the money laundering and unlicensed money transmitter statutes, or the BSA, including the obligation of financial institutions to conduct customer due diligence.... This memorandum is not intended, does not, and may not be relied upon to create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any matter civil or criminal. It... does not provide defendants or subjects of enforcement action with a basis for reconsideration of any pending civil action or criminal prosecution. Finally, nothing herein precludes investigation or prosecution, even in the absence of any one of the factors listed above, in particular circumstances where investigation and prosecution otherwise serves an important federal interest.

5. In light of the above paragraph in the Department's February 14, 2014 memo, do you agree that:
 - a. The possession, cultivation, and distribution of marijuana remains illegal in all states under the Controlled Substances Act;
 - b. The laundering of the proceeds of the possession, cultivation, and distribution of marijuana remains illegal in all states under federal money laundering statutes;
 - c. The Department's ability to enforce federal law in these areas remains unchanged; and
 - d. The memo does not create a "safe harbor" that an institution can rely upon as a defense to a prosecution under either of these types of laws.

The Treasury Memo attempts to offer guidance to financial institutions on how they may offer various financial services to business engaged in marijuana production or distribution despite federal criminal law clearly prohibiting the same.

6. Please confirm that the activities described in or that would require a bank to file a "Marijuana Limited" Suspicious Activity Report are, despite the Cole Memos, a direct violation of current federal anti-money laundering statutes.
7. If, within the statute of limitations of the federal money-laundering statute, the Department of Justice reverses course and fully enforces the Controlled Substances Act and federal anti-money laundering statutes, could the Department of Justice use these "Marijuana Limited SARs" in the criminal prosecution against financial institutions that file them?

- a. If no, please describe what would limit a federal prosecutor from using these SARs in a criminal prosecution, other than prosecutorial discretion.

The February 14, 2104 memos attempt to provide guidance to financial institutions on how they can simultaneously meet their reporting obligations under the Bank Secrecy Act (“BSA”) while providing banking services to individuals or entities engaged in the cultivation or distribution of marijuana in certain states. At the same time, according to recent media reports, the Department’s Civil Division has been aggressively pursuing certain legal practices by financial institutions in an operation named “Operation Choke Point.”

As a result, on one hand, the Department of Justice’s Criminal Division appears to be facilitating illegal behavior specifically prohibited by federal law by unilaterally limiting the scope of the BSA, while on the other hand, the Department’s Civil Division is using the BSA in order to stop legal online lending practices, such as pay-day lending, by pressuring the banking industry to cease providing legal third-party payment services.

Given this inconsistent application of the BSA, it is understandable that the financial services industry should not trust the Department’s assurances that those entities who engage in financial activities with marijuana cultivators, distributors, or retailers will not be prosecuted under existing federal law, including the BSA, the CSA, and federal money laundering statutes.

8. Will you commit that as Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division you will work to ensure that the various divisions within the department reach consensus on the Department’s interpretation of the proper scope or use of a statute?

I recently asked Attorney General Holder these questions and have not yet received response. As the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act falls within Criminal Division jurisdiction, would you please respond to the following questions.

9. What are the Department’s current enforcement priorities under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act?
10. What particular industries, markets or practices is the Department focusing on, and why?
11. What proportion of the Department’s enforcement activity during 2013 involved non-U.S. companies?
12. Has the Department seen a recent increase in whistleblower claims of FCPA violations?
 - a. If so, to what would you attribute that?
 - b. How has the Department responded?

13. Although the Department does not publicize each particular instance in which it declines prosecution despite evidence of an FCPA violation, what characterized the Department's declinations during 2013? Did the number increase from 2012? What factors were most important in leading the Department to decline prosecution?
14. In November 2012, the Department and the SEC issued the FCPA "Resource Guide," which reflected guidance from your agencies regarding the interpretation and enforcement of the FCPA. Does the Department anticipate updating, supplementing or amending the "Resource Guide" in the foreseeable future?
15. In 2013, the Department issued only one Opinion Release concerning the FCPA. Does the Department consider the "Resource Guide" a substitute for its opinion release program?

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Responses of Robin S. Rosenbaum
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Eleventh Circuit
To the Written Questions of Senator Chuck Grassley

- 1. What is your understanding of the constitutionality of states to provide “conscience rights” to pharmacists and health care providers who refuse to facilitate abortions or fill prescriptions for contraceptives if they are personally opposed to such practices?

Response: Neither the Supreme Court nor the Eleventh Circuit has considered this exact issue. Although some of the federal circuit courts have addressed this specific issue, their approaches to it have not been uniform. Under these circumstances, assuming that no Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent exists by the time that such a case might come before me, any opinion that I might develop on the issue would arise after thorough consideration of the parties’ briefs, the analyses contained in other courts’ opinions, and any Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent that might bear in a more general way on the matter. See, e.g., Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church v. EEOC, ___ U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 694 (2012) (holding that Free Exercise Clause and Establishment Clause both operate to create a ministerial exception to an otherwise-neutral law of general applicability); Employment Div. v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872 (1990) (upholding neutral law of general applicability in face of challenge based on Free Exercise Clause); Planned Parenthood v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833 (1992) (adopting the undue-burden test to evaluate abortion restrictions before viability). If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would consider and follow all applicable Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent.

- 2. The Supreme Court has held that there is a general right to abortion. What is your understanding of the constitutionality of sex-selective abortion?

Response: I have been unable to find any reported cases analyzing the constitutionality of sex-selective abortion. Thus, the law in this area is currently not well developed. In the absence of a concrete case or controversy, it is difficult to anticipate how the issue might arise and what concerns might bear on the analysis. Under these circumstances, assuming that no Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent exists by the time that such a case might come before me, any opinion that I might develop on the issue would arise after thorough consideration of the parties’ briefs, the analyses contained in any other courts’ opinions, and any Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent that might bear in a more general way on the matter.

- 3. If confirmed, what would be your judicial philosophy or approach in applying the Constitution to modern statutes and regulations?

Response: If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to employ the same approach that I have used as a district judge and as a magistrate judge. First, I would consider any applicable Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent and would look to the language of the statute or regulation and any applicable constitutional provisions to determine whether the question could be resolved by the plain language. If a question continued to exist, I would consider persuasive, non-binding precedent from other courts, as well as opinions involving analogous issues. In conducting this analysis, I would take care to avoid unnecessarily determining any constitutional questions and would ensure that any constitutional analysis required would be limited to resolving the narrowest possible question.

4. What weight or consideration should a judge give to evolving norms and traditions of our society in interpreting the written Constitution?

Response: The only circumstance of which I am aware where the Supreme Court has evaluated “evolving standards of decency” is in determining whether a penalty violates the Cruel and Unusual Punishments Clause of the Eighth Amendment. See, e.g., Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 102 (1976); Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005); Miller v. Alabama, ___ U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 2455, 2463 (2012). If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all relevant precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit.

5. What is your understanding of the current state of the law with regard to the interplay between the establishment clause and free exercise clause of the First Amendment?

Response: Since at least 1970, in Walz v. Tax Commission of City of New York, 397 U.S. 664, 669 (1970), the Supreme Court has explained that “there is room for play in the joints” between the First Amendment’s Free Exercise Clause and the First Amendment’s Establishment Clause. The Court has repeated this description several times since issuing Walz, most recently in Cutter v. Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709, 719 (2005) (citation omitted), where the Supreme Court again confirmed that “legislative action neither compelled by the Free Exercise Clause nor prohibited by the Establishment Clause” may constitutionally exist. If confirmed and the issue came before me, I would apply Walz, Cutter, and other relevant Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent.

6. Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment?

Response: In Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153 (1976), and in several subsequent cases, the Supreme Court has held that the death penalty, when applied with required procedural safeguards, is constitutional. If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit and the issue came before me, I would follow Gregg and other relevant Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent.

7. Do you believe there is a right to privacy in the U.S. Constitution?

Response: Although the Supreme Court has not identified a specific right to privacy in the Constitution, it has nonetheless characterized certain protections within the Bill of Rights and the Fourteenth Amendment as relating to privacy. For example, in Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 64 (1976), the Supreme Court described the First Amendment as protecting “privacy of association and belief”

Similarly, in Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347, 350 n.5 (1967), the Supreme Court again opined that the First Amendment regards “privacy in one’s association.” The Court further stated that the Third Amendment also protects an “aspect of privacy from governmental intrusion” in that it prohibits peacetime quartering of soldiers where the property owner does not consent. Id. (citation omitted). The Katz footnote likewise characterized the Fifth Amendment as “reflect[ing] the Constitution’s concern for . . . the right of each individual ‘to a private enclave where he may lead a private life.’” Id. (citation omitted).

In Johnson v. United States, 333 U.S. 10, 14 (1948), the Supreme Court referred to the Fourth Amendment’s protections as conferring a “right of privacy” and protecting privacy in the home. See also Kentucky v. King, ___ U.S. ___, 131 S. Ct. 1849, 1862 (2011) (describing the Fourth Amendment as protecting certain “privacy rights”); Missouri v. McNeely, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 1552, 1558 (2013) (stating that obtaining a blood sample “implicates an individual’s ‘most personal and deep-rooted expectations of privacy’”) (citation and quotation marks omitted).

As for the Fourteenth Amendment’s Due Process Clause, the Supreme Court has recognized that “marital privacy” is a part of the “liberty” that it protects. Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997) (citation omitted).

a. Where is it located?

Response: Please see response to Question 7 above.

b. From what does it derive?

Response: Please see response to Question 7 above.

c. What is your understanding, in general terms, of the contours of that right?

Response: Please see response to Question 7 above.

- 8. In Griswold, Justice Douglas stated that, although the Bill of Rights did not explicitly mention the right to privacy, it could be found in the “penumbras” and “emanations” of the Constitution.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Douglas that there are certain rights that are not explicitly stated in our Constitution that can be found by “reading between the lines”?

Response: In Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 721 (1997), the Supreme Court explained that, in order to determine whether a right that is not explicitly stated in the Constitution is nonetheless constitutionally protected, a court must examine whether the claimed right is “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition . . . and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty” (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). In addition, the proponent of the right must provide a “careful description” of the asserted fundamental liberty interest. Id. (citations omitted).

- b. Is it appropriate for a judge to search for “penumbras” and “emanations” in the Constitution?

Response: As a district judge and, previously, as a magistrate judge, I have not searched for penumbras and emanations in the Constitution. Likewise, if confirmed to the Eleventh Circuit, I would not search for penumbras and emanations in the Constitution. Instead, I would apply Glucksberg and all other relevant Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent.

- 9. What standard of scrutiny do you believe is appropriate in a Second Amendment challenge against a Federal or State gun law?

Response: In District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), and McDonald v. City of Chicago, ___ U.S. ___, 130 S. Ct. 3020 (2010), the Supreme Court did not specifically establish the appropriate standard of scrutiny to apply in a Second Amendment challenge against a federal or state gun law, but it did clarify that some heightened form of scrutiny applies. In GeorgiaCarry.Org, Inc. v. Georgia, 687 F.3d 1244, 1261 n. 34 (11th Cir. 2012), the Eleventh Circuit opined that a two-step inquiry adopted by several other circuits was appropriate for evaluating the constitutionality of a challenged provision. First, the court considers whether the restricted activity is protected by the Second Amendment, and, if so, the court then determines the appropriate level of scrutiny. Id. Because the Eleventh Circuit determined that the restricted activity in GeorgiaCarry.Org, Inc., was not protected by the Second Amendment, the court did not explain the methodology that it would employ to determine the appropriate level of scrutiny. But the cases that the Eleventh Circuit approvingly cited have generally determined that the appropriate level of scrutiny depends on the “nature of the conduct being regulated and the degree to which the challenged conduct burdens the right,” so that a law that “imposes a substantial burden upon the core right of self-defense protected by the Second Amendment must have a strong justification, whereas a [law] that imposes a less substantial burden should be proportionately easier to justify.” Heller v. District of Columbia, 670 F.3d 1244, 1257 (D.C. Cir. 2011); see also Ezell v. City of Chicago, 651 F.3d 684, 701-04 (7th Cir. 2011); United States v. Chester, 628 F.3d 673, 680 (4th Cir. 2010); United States v. Reese, 627 F.3d 792, 800-01 (10th Cir. 2010); United States v. Marzzarella, 614 F.3d 85, 89 (3d Cir. 2010).

10. In Brown v. Entertainment Merchants Association., Justice Breyer supplemented his opinion with appendices comprising scientific articles on the sociological and psychological harm of playing violent video games.

a. When, if ever, do you think it is appropriate for appellate judges to conduct research outside the record of the case?

Response: As a general rule, judges should not consider matters outside the record of the case. But, where appropriate under Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure 10 or 16 or under Federal Rule of Evidence 201, the record may be supplemented by materials outside the record. If confirmed, I would not consider materials outside the record of the case unless doing so was consistent with the law and with precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit.

b. When, if ever, do you think it is appropriate for appellate judges to base their opinions on psychological and sociological scientific studies?

Response: If, for example, a case involves expert testimony that complies with the requirements of Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 509 U.S. 579 (1993), and Federal Rule of Evidence 702, a court may be required to render a decision that accounts for expert psychological or sociological scientific studies that are a part of the case record. If confirmed, I would follow all precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit in considering any such evidence.

11. What would be your definition of an “activist judge”?

Response: In my opinion, an activist judge decides the preferred outcome of the case and then attempts to craft reasoning to justify it. An activist judge may alternatively or additionally be one who has a personal agenda and seeks to use the judicial position to advance it. In my more than six years on the bench, I have not engaged in such conduct, and

I would not engage in such conduct in the future, either in my current position or, if confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, as a judge of that court.

12. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe that the most important attribute of a judge is integrity. Integrity includes fairness, intellectual honesty, and diligence. I believe that I have integrity and that I have demonstrated it during my time on the bench as a magistrate judge and as a district judge.

13. Do you think that collegiality is an important element of the work of a Circuit Court? If so, how would you approach your work on the court, if confirmed?

Response: Yes, I believe that collegiality is an important element of the work of a Circuit Court. If I were confirmed, I would approach my work with diligence and an open mind, and I would be respectful to all involved in the process, including the other judges, the court staff, the attorneys, and the litigants.

14. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge should be fair, even-tempered, and patient, treating with dignity and respect all who come before the judge. I consider all of these aspects of the appropriate judicial temperament of a judge to be essential. I believe that I meet this standard.

15. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: I am entirely committed to following faithfully the precedents of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals and giving them full force and effect, even if I personally disagree with such precedents. If I were confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, the only conditions under which it might be appropriate to reconsider Eleventh Circuit precedent would be during en banc review in the extremely limited circumstances discussed below in response to Question 23. Under no circumstances, however, would I decide a case based on my personal agreement or disagreement with precedents.

16. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In a case of first impression involving a statute, I would examine the language of the provision. If the language were clear, my analysis would begin and end with the language. If an ambiguity in the language existed, however, I would look to the structure and framework of the statute as a whole to interpret the provision at issue. In so doing, I would be careful to avoid a construction that would result in the redundancy or meaninglessness of any portion of the statute. If the answer were still not clear, I would consider whether precedents involving any analogous statutes were instructive. Finally, if ambiguity continued to exist, as a last resort, I would consider plainly ascertainable legislative intent, such as a statement of purpose enacted as part of the governing statute or the fact that a statute was clearly enacted in response to the issuance of judicial interpretation of an earlier statute.

17. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: My opinion about the correctness of Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent would be irrelevant to my rendering of decisions. Regardless of my personal views, I would faithfully follow the precedents of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, giving them full force and effect -- even if I personally disagreed with them.

18. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: A statute should be declared unconstitutional only in rare circumstances where no possible fair constitutional interpretation can be discerned and only where the statute plainly violates a provision of the Constitution. Constitutional questions should be determined only if absolutely necessary and then, only in the narrowest possible way.

19. What weight should a judge give legislative intent in statutory analysis?

Response: A court should first consider the language of the statute at issue. If the language is clear, the court should conclude its analysis there. If an ambiguity in the language exists, the court should look to the structure and framework of the statute as a whole to interpret the provision at issue. In so doing, the court must be careful to avoid a construction that would result in the redundancy or meaninglessness of any portion of the statute. If the answer is still not clear, the court should consider whether precedents involving any analogous statutes are instructive. Finally, if ambiguity continues to exist, as a last resort, the court may consider plainly ascertainable legislative intent, such as a statement of purpose enacted as part of the governing statute or the fact that a statute was clearly enacted in response to the issuance of judicial interpretation of an earlier statute.

20. Do you believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor has any or should have any influence in the outcome of a case? Please explain.

Response: I do not believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor should have any influence in the outcome of a case. Cases should be decided solely on the basis of the law.

21. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community", in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: The Constitution is a uniquely American document. Consequently, except where Supreme Court or Eleventh Circuit precedent requires, see, e.g., Chauffeurs, Teamsters and Helpers, Local No. 391 v. Terry, 494 U.S. 558, 565 (1990) (reviewing and considering 18th-century English common law in determining whether the Seventh Amendment guarantees a right to a jury trial in certain types of civil cases), I would not rely on foreign law or the views of the world community in determining the meaning of the Constitution.

22. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: I can give my complete and unqualified assurances that I will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before me, if confirmed, as I believe I have in my service as a federal judge.

23. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? What factors would you consider in reaching this decision?

Response: The circumstances in which a circuit may overrule precedent are extremely limited and may occur only when the court sits en banc. Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure provides that en banc hearings and rehearings are disfavored and ordinarily will not be ordered except where they are "necessary to secure or maintain uniformity of the court's decisions" or the matter "involves a question of exceptional importance." In order to resolve conflicts among circuit precedent, abrogation of at least some circuit precedent is likely in the first situation. As for the second, however, reversal of circuit precedent may or may not be required. An example of a situation where abrogation by the court sitting en banc may be appropriate may occur where earlier circuit precedent conflicts with the reasoning — but not the holding — of a subsequent Supreme Court decision. See Main Drug, Inc. v. Aetna U.S. Healthcare, Inc., 475 F.3d 1228, 1230 (11th Cir. 2007) (“[W]ithout a clearly contrary opinion of the Supreme Court or of this court sitting en banc, we cannot overrule a decision of a prior panel of this court.”) (citation and quotation marks omitted). Similarly, where a case may present an “issue on which the panel decision conflicts with the authoritative decisions of other United States Courts of Appeals that have addressed the issue,” the court sitting en banc may determine that reversal of the panel’s decision is appropriate. See Fed. R. App. 35(b)(1)(B).

- 24. It appears that you have spent most of your legal career doing trial level work and have limited experience with appellate courts. Please describe how you will prepare to transition to the appellate level. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?

Response: Although I have spent much of my career doing trial-level work, I was fortunate to have had the opportunity to clerk for the Honorable Stanley Marcus while he was serving on the Eleventh Circuit. In addition, I have engaged in some limited federal appellate practice, having handled approximately eight appeals before various federal circuit courts, including the Eleventh Circuit. Besides this appellate experience, as a district judge, I regularly decide certain types of cases that are effectively appeals. These include Social Security cases, habeas matters, and bankruptcy appeals, among others. Finally, I have reviewed the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure and the Eleventh Circuit’s Rules and Internal Operating Procedures. While I fully expect that I would experience a transition period if I were fortunate enough to be confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would work exceptionally hard to hit the ground running, and I believe that, as a result of my experience and of my nearly twenty-three years of varied federal practice, I would be well equipped to serve as a circuit judge.

- 25. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: “To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator’s judicial selection committees”.
- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the nature of the communications.

Response: I have had no such contact.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: I am not aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ.

- 26. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: On February 18, 2014, I received these questions from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. I then conducted research, prepared my answers, and reviewed my answers with an attorney in the Office of Legal Policy. Thereafter, I made revisions and finalized my answers for submission to the Committee.

- 27. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Responses of Robin S. Rosenbaum
Nominee to be United States Circuit Judge for the Eleventh Circuit
To the Written Questions of Senator Ted Cruz

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: I believe that in deciding cases, judges should diligently ascertain the applicable law and apply it faithfully to the facts of the case. In so doing, judges should be fair and impartial, treating with respect and dignity all who come before the court. In addition, in order to promote the legitimacy and fairness of the system, judges should fully explain the reasons for their decisions. The role of judges in our constitutional system is a limited one. Judges do not make the law; instead, judges apply the law as it is written, impartially and fairly, ensuring compliance with our Constitution.

Although I would not characterize myself as sharing a judicial philosophy of a particular Justice, I strive to emulate the diligence and work ethic of all of the Justices.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The Supreme Court has employed originalism to interpret the Constitution. For example, in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), the Supreme Court considered the public understanding of the Second Amendment at and after its ratification in order to interpret the Amendment. In Boumediene v. Bush, 553 U.S. 723 (2008), on the other hand, the Supreme Court reviewed the Framers' intent when construing the writ of habeas corpus and the Suspension Clause. If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow the Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent applicable to the particular constitutional provision under consideration.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: The circumstances in which a circuit court may overrule precedent are extremely limited and may occur only when the court sits en banc. Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure provides that en banc hearings and rehearings are disfavored and ordinarily will not be ordered except where they are "necessary to secure or maintain uniformity of the court's decisions" or the matter "involves a question of exceptional importance." In order to resolve conflicts among circuit precedent, abrogation of at least some circuit precedent is likely in the first situation. As for the second, however, reversal of circuit precedent may or may not be required. An example of a situation where abrogation by the court sitting en banc may be appropriate may occur where earlier circuit precedent conflicts with the reasoning — but not the holding — of a subsequent Supreme Court decision. See Main Drug, Inc. v. Aetna U.S.

Healthcare, Inc., 475 F.3d 1228, 1230 (11th Cir. 2007) (“[W]ithout a clearly contrary opinion of the Supreme Court or of this court sitting en banc, we cannot overrule a decision of a prior panel of this court.”) (citation and quotation marks omitted). Similarly, where a case may present an “issue on which the panel decision conflicts with the authoritative decisions of other United States Courts of Appeals that have addressed the issue,” the court sitting en banc may determine that reversal of the panel’s decision is appropriate. See Fed. R. App. 35(b)(1)(B).

Explain whether you agree that “State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power.” Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: While it is true that procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system provide some protection for state sovereign interests, the Supreme Court has determined that state sovereign interests are protected in other ways as well. For example, in Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898 (1997), the Supreme Court judicially enforced limitations on federal power, finding provisions of the Brady Act to be unconstitutional because they violated state sovereign rights. See also New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992) (holding that federal law requiring states either to dispose of radioactive waste or to take title to it and be liable for it was an unconstitutional violation of state sovereign rights). If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable precedent.

Do you believe that Congress’ Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: In United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000), and United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995), the Supreme Court held that the federal laws under consideration in each case were unconstitutional because they exceeded congressional power under the Commerce Clause. In reaching these conclusions, the Supreme Court emphasized the noneconomic nature of the activities regulated, although the Supreme Court did not hold that noneconomic activity could never be regulated under the Commerce Clause. Moreover, in Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005) (Scalia, J., concurring) (citation omitted), Justice Scalia relied on the Necessary and Proper Clause in conjunction with the Commerce Clause to conclude that “Congress may regulate even noneconomic local activity if that regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce.” If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit in determining issues under the Commerce Clause and the Necessary and Proper Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: In Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 635-38 (1952) (Jackson, J., concurring), Justice Jackson set forth a framework for evaluating the constitutionality of executive actions. Under the three-part framework, the President's power reaches its zenith when the President "acts pursuant to an express or implied authorization of Congress." Id. at 635. A person challenging the President's actions in such circumstances bears a heavy burden of persuasion. Id. at 636-37. Where neither a congressional grant nor denial of power exists, the President acts in "a zone of twilight in which [the President] and Congress may have concurrent authority, or in which its distribution is uncertain." Id. at 637. Finally, the President's power sinks to its nadir when he acts contrary to the expressed or implied will of Congress. Id. Under those circumstances, the President can rely on only the President's "own constitutional powers minus any constitutional powers of Congress over the matter[.]" courts may uphold the President's actions only by precluding Congress from acting on the matter. Id. at 637-38. In Dames & Moore v. Regan, 453 U.S. 654 (1981), the Supreme Court favorably discussed Justice Jackson's framework for evaluating executive action. Since that time, in Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008), the Supreme Court described Justice Jackson's Youngstown concurrence as "provid[ing] the accepted framework for evaluating executive action . . ." If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent on the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to engage in executive actions.

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: In Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 721 (1997), the Supreme Court explained that, in order to determine whether a right that is not explicitly stated in the Constitution is nonetheless constitutionally protected, a court must examine whether the claimed right is "deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition . . . and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty" (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). In addition, the proponent of the right must provide a "careful description" of the asserted fundamental liberty interest. Id. (citations omitted). If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: In City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985), the Supreme Court explained that classifications that are "so seldom relevant to the achievement of any legitimate state interest" are subjected to strict scrutiny. These classifications include race, national origin, and sometimes alienage. See id. Classifications that "frequently bear[] no relation to ability to perform or contribute to society," such as gender and illegitimacy, are subjected to intermediate scrutiny. Id. at 440-41. If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable Supreme Court and Eleventh Circuit precedent concerning when a classification should be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: In Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003), the Supreme Court opined that twenty-five years from the date of that decision, it anticipated that race would no longer need to be considered in order to achieve diversity in the student bodies of colleges and universities. Since that time, in Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, ___ U.S. ___, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013), the Supreme Court has provided further guidance regarding consideration of race to obtain diversity in higher education. If confirmed to serve on the Eleventh Circuit, I would continue to follow all applicable precedent of the Supreme Court and the Eleventh Circuit regarding consideration of race in admissions to schools of higher education.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Bruce Howe Hendricks,
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of South Carolina

1. In 2009, you upheld a jury award of $3 million in punitive damages in a defamation case. That was 30 times more than the amount of compensatory damages awarded.

- a. What is your view on the amount of deference jury awards are entitled to?

Response: The jury system is foundational to our system of justice and constitutionally enshrined. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has recognized that, “[u]nder the applicable legal principles, a trial court ‘should exercise its discretion to award a new trial sparingly,’ and a jury verdict is not to be overturned except in the rare circumstance when the evidence ‘weighs heavily’ against it.” United States v. Smith, 451 F.3d 209, 216-17 (4th Cir. 2006) (quoting United States v. Perry, 335 F.3d 316, 320 (4th Cir. 2003)).

- b. Every case is different, but what are your views, generally, on the appropriateness of an award that large, where the plaintiff has suffered little or no physical injury?

Response: A district court judge should consider all punitive damage awards in accordance with the factors outlined in the United States Supreme Court decision, BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 574-75 (1996), including: (1) the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant’s misconduct; (2) the ratio of the actual or potential harm suffered by the plaintiff to the punitive damages award; and (3) the difference between the punitive damages awarded by the jury and the civil or criminal penalties authorized for comparable misconduct. The United States Supreme Court has stated that the most important of these three guideposts is the degree of reprehensibility of the defendant’s conduct, as it reflects the elementary notion that “some wrongs are more blameworthy than others.” Gore, 517 U.S. at 575.

2. In a 2008 speech you stated your belief that “there is certainly evidence of racial injustice and inequality in our court system.” Please explain what you meant by that statement.

Response: In the 2008 speech, I was attempting to remind attorneys in attendance that their obligations in representation should not be affected by the type of representation secured, whether retained or court appointed. I discussed an article that suggested that a defendant’s ability to pay for legal representation is more predictive of outcome than a defendant’s race. The statement quoted above was simply a prefatory acknowledgement that even as there exists evidence of some disparity of outcome in our judicial system along racial lines, the data indicates socio-economics may be more responsible than any sort of perceived racial bias.

3. In a September 2011 speech you described your caseload a “junk no one else wants to do.” (Emphasis in original). Please explain what you meant by that statement.

Response: Every case that comes before me is important. It is my privilege to hear them. By way of context, the District of South Carolina by Local Rule makes referral of certain substantive areas, to its magistrate judges, automatic. For their reoccurrence in some volume, those types of cases are well-suited for the specialization and institutional knowledge magistrate judges can accrue in them. Without such a system, these same cases might pose a challenge to the general efficiency of the Court. Continuing education is an annual requirement of lawyers at the bar. Any opportunity I have to speak with some levity to them, I do. Notwithstanding, the tongue-in-cheek sentiment above could have been phrased more tastefully or not at all. It does not reflect any view of mine, as my judicial record, and the seriousness with which I approach each case, plainly demonstrate.

4. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: A good judge must possess many important attributes, including conformity to the rule of law. But, before any element of one’s judicial philosophy or jurisprudential virtue, a judge must be humble first. A judge must possess humility before the law, humility before the bar and litigants, and humility before each case. A humble spirit allows a judge to see clearly and rule objectively. Over the last 12 years, as a United States Magistrate Judge, I have made it my goal to allow those who know better - the lawyers, litigants, experts, and witnesses - space to try their case without the unnecessary over-involvement of a too self-important judge.

5. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: Appropriate judicial temperament includes, in the least, the qualities of impartiality, fairness, respectfulness, humility, integrity and commitment to the rule of law. I believe my record as United States Magistrate Judge demonstrates my dedication to those ideals.

6. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: My personal view is not relevant to the adjudication of any case that would appear before me. If confirmed, I would faithfully apply the controlling legal precedents of the United States Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals regardless of my privately held opinions, if any.

7. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: I would first consider the plain language of any statute, regulation, or other provision applicable to the question. If the language was unambiguous, then I would apply the language as written. If the language was ambiguous, at least as applied to the facts of the particular case before me, then I would apply the principles of statutory construction and look to precedents from the United States Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit. If no analogous or instructive Supreme Court or Fourth Circuit precedent existed, I would look to other circuit courts of appeals in analogous cases which addressed the issue before me. Finally, if no such persuasive authority existed in the courts of appeals, I would look to consideration of the issue by the district courts, first of the Fourth Circuit and then elsewhere.

8. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: If confirmed, I would always follow the precedents of the United States Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, notwithstanding any personal opinion I may have.

9. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: As courts of limited jurisdiction and a co-equal branch, federal courts should presume the constitutionality of congressional action. A court, therefore, should not address the constitutionality of a statute if the case can be decided on other grounds. Should a court, however, determine that a statute enacted by Congress exceeded its authority or contradicts the Constitution it would be appropriate for a federal court to declare the statute unconstitutional if such a determination was absolutely necessary and appropriate to resolve the case and otherwise justiciably appropriate. I would follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in making such a determination.

10. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community," in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No.

11. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I have no agenda, political or personal. My record as a United States Magistrate Judge for 12 years proves my commitment to stare decisis and the rule of law.

12. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: My personal views are irrelevant to the judicial decisions before me. My record as a United States Magistrate Judge for 12 years attests to my objectivity and impartiality.

13. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: I have now had 12 years' experience managing a significant caseload as a United States Magistrate Judge. In addition to reports and tools available in the district court's electronic filing system, I have developed my own methodology for tracking the progress of cases assigned to me. If confirmed I would continue to actively manage my caseload with the assistance of chambers staff and staff from the clerk of court. I would make every effort to promptly dispose of motions and discovery disputes and I would strongly encourage the parties to engage in serious settlement discussions early in the case.

14. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Judges have an essential role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. Our judicial system would be overrun without active oversight. If confirmed, I would set firm scheduling deadlines, promptly decide motions, encourage settlement discussions early in the litigation, and promote the efficient resolution of discovery disputes. That being said, cases do not belong to the judge. They are chiefly the interest of litigants and their lawyers. I do not meddle. I believe that docket management is some balance of both judicial vigilance and restraint.

15. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: I read the written submissions of the parties, review the cases cited by the parties, listen and consider any oral argument presented, and apply the law as set forth in the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals to the facts of the case.

16. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees."

a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

17. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: The questions were provided to me on the afternoon of February 18, 2014, by personnel from the Department of Justice. I prepared responses to the questions and reviewed them with a representative of the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice, on February 20, 2014, and asked that my responses be submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

18. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: These answers reflect my true and personal views.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Bruce Howe Hendricks,
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of South Carolina

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: Although I do not ascribe to some fully unified judicial philosophy, there are certain rudimentary jurisprudential guidelines I follow, including a commitment to the rule of law, the doctrine of stare decisis, respecting the limited jurisdiction of federal courts, judicial economy, and considerations for federalism. My philosophical approach would also include impartiality, fairness, respectfulness, humility, and integrity. I think these principles have been exhibited by many, if not all, of the justices presiding in the courts identified above.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: My role as a district judge in a case involving constitutional interpretation would be to study the facts of the case before me and apply the applicable precedent to the case, including precedent which considers the original public meaning of the text, as the Supreme Court did in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), or the original intent of the drafters.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: As a district judge, I would never overrule precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: Respectfully, my personal view of the statement is not relevant. If confirmed to serve as a United States District Judge, I would be bound by the Supreme Court's decision in Garcia. I would apply the holding in that case without regard to whether or not I personally agreed with the decision.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: United States Supreme Court precedent, including the seminal decision, United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-59 (1995), provides that Congress may regulate under the Commerce Clause in three ways: it may (1) "regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce”; (2) “regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce”; and (3) “regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce.” Lopez, 514 U.S. at 558-59; see also United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000). If confirmed, I would follow the precedent of the Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit in determining the propriety of congressional action pursuant to the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The Supreme Court spoke on the President’s authority to act in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952) and in Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008). The Supreme Court has determined that the President’s authority to act must come from either an act of Congress or from the Constitution. If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in deciding any challenge to executive action.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: In Washington v. Gluckberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (internal citations omitted), the Supreme Court held that fundamental rights include “the specific freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights,” and “those fundamental rights and liberties which are, objectively, deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition” and which are “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.” If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning fundamental rights.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has identified the immutable and protected classifications which are subject to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. Government action that affects race, alienage, and national origin, is subject to strict scrutiny, while government action that implicates gender and illegitimacy is subject to intermediate scrutiny. See City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440-41 (1985). If confirmed, I would faithfully follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in determining what classifications are subject to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: Respectfully, I would not express any opinion or projection about the status of racial preferences in public higher education fifteen years from now. Such speculation is beyond my role as magistrate judge or, if confirmed, district judge.

Questions for the Record
Senator Grassley

Mark G. Mastroianni
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of Massachusetts

- 1. You have worked as both a prosecutor and a defense attorney. How have these experiences prepared you to become a federal judge?

Response: Being both a prosecutor and defense attorney has given me unique insight on the functioning of the criminal justice system. I recognize the system is adversarial and the design works to assure fairness and integrity. I have a complete understanding of how opposing sides on criminal cases will each look to the protection of the law and apply the same concepts in different ways. Legal concepts are open to good faith argument, differing views and challenge as part of advocacy in the system. However, the role of a judge is very different from that of an advocate. The judicial role in the system guarantees opposing sides are fully and fairly heard and matters are decided based on an unbiased application of the law to facts.

- 2. During your hearing I asked you about Massachusetts gun storage law and case. You discussed the concept that states have authority to impose regulations on gun rights and listed safety as one of the legitimate reason for doing so. As I'm sure you would recognize, however, at a certain point excessive regulations effectively deny the right. With respect to the individual Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms, please provide examples of regulations that would be too restrictive, such that the rights guaranteed by the Second Amendment are abridged.

Response: An individual's Second Amendment rights to possess a firearm for lawful use is recognized by the controlling precedent of District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008). An example of regulation which is too restrictive is that struck down in Heller where firearms were required to be "disassembled or bound by a trigger lock at all times, rendering them inoperable" when actually possessed by the lawful owner in the home. See id. at 628. Additionally, any regulations which effectively operate to prohibit the exercise of the right to legally own a firearm would be violative of the Second Amendment. See McDonald v. City of Chicago, 130 S. Ct. 3020 (2010).

- 3. Do you believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor has any or should have any influence in the outcome of a case? Please explain.

Response: Gender, ethnicity or other demographic factors should have no influence on the outcome of a case.

4. If confirmed, how will you use the Sentencing Guidelines in your decision making?

Response: If confirmed as a judge the Federal Sentencing Guidelines will serve as guidance when considering an appropriate and fair sentence for a particular offender under the facts of the case. The Guidelines serve the important goal of ensuring uniformity and consistency in sentencing. The Guidelines establish a general range which considers a specific type of offense as well as offender characteristics and criminal history, among other things. Accordingly, the Guidelines provide an organized way to assess an offender and the particular crime and are a valuable resource to include in the overall consideration of appropriate sentencing.

5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: I believe patience is the most important attribute for a judge. It would be difficult to gain a full and detailed understanding of matters upon which a decision must be rendered without patience. Fairness and integrity are the cornerstones of the justice system. However, patience is necessary to thoroughly gather all information relative to a case and allow opposing sides to fully and fairly present arguments so that fairness and integrity can be relied upon to render a decision. I believe I have this necessary and important attribute for a judge to possess.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament to you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge must be thoughtful, respectful, calm, patient and open-minded to allow an argument to be fully and fairly presented and developed before making a decision. I believe I have these elements of temperament.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: If confirmed, I will follow all binding precedent and I am committed to giving such precedent full force and effect whether or not I disagree with such precedents.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If I am confirmed as a judge, I would utilize the fundamental principles of legal analysis including first examining the plain language and text of a particular statute. Unambiguous language and text would resolve the matter but if ambiguity remained I would seek guidance from case law as persuasive authority including the examination of other circuits that may have an issue somewhat similar. Finally I would consider the legislative history to develop a full understanding of the matter presented as part of my approach to matters of first impression.

- 9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: If confirmed as a judge I would apply binding precedent in all cases including those in which I may disagree with the decision of a higher court.

- 10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: It would only be appropriate to declare a statute unconstitutional if there was a plain showing that Congress had exceeded its constitutional bounds. Respecting a presumption of constitutionality to all validly enacted statutes, if confirmed as a judge, I would rely on established precedent as a guide in such an analysis.

- 11. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the constitution? Please explain.

Response: No, it would not be proper for a judge to rely on foreign law or “world community” views in determining the meaning of the Constitution.

- 12. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: If confirmed, I assure the Committee that I am committed to and respect my obligation to render decisions grounded in precedent and not on underlying political ideology or motivation. In my current position as District Attorney I perform my duties with this same commitment.

- 13. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: If confirmed as a judge I assure the Committee that any personal views or feelings would be put to the side and all decisions would be rendered in a fair and impartial way. I am committed to working within the fair system of justice where matters are determined not on personal beliefs but on the neutral application of facts to the law.

14. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed as a judge I would utilize the court's Case Management System, having conferences scheduled soon after the filing of cases. The Case Management System will allow for schedules to be set for discovery as well as motions and other hearings. I would endeavor to decide all motions efficiently and monitor the status and development of cases through their various stages.

15. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: I believe that judges should take a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and if confirmed I would utilize the procedures generally outlined in my response to the previous question.

16. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: I have no previous experience as a judge but if confirmed I would thoughtfully consider all facts gathered during a case being processed and look to binding precedent in making decisions.

17. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

18. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received these questions on February 18, 2014 and drafted responses which were provided to the U.S. Department of Justice on February 20, 2014. I finalized my responses to the questions after discussing my draft with a representative of the Department of Justice and submitted my final responses on February 23, 2014.

19. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Mark G. Mastroianni
Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the District of Massachusetts

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: If confirmed, the philosophy that would guide me is that all judicial actions must promote and honor the fundamental principles of fairness, integrity and respect for the law. I have an insufficiently detailed understanding of the philosophies and practices of individual justices to make an analogous comparison.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The Supreme Court in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008) recognized that the public understanding of the Constitution, at the time it was ratified, is an important consideration relative to constitutional interpretation. If confirmed, I will follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent on the issue.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed I would not overrule precedent as that would be beyond my authority and I would be bound to follow and apply controlling precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests...are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confirmed, I would follow and apply Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528 (1985), as well as any other binding precedent on that or any other point of law.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has indicated Congress can regulate three identified areas of interstate commerce. These areas are “the use of channels of interstate commerce”, the “instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce, even though the threat may come only from intrastate activities” and “activities that substantially affect interstate commerce.” See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-610 (2000); United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995). If confirmed, I would apply and follow this and all other binding precedent.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The President's authority to issue executive orders or take executive action must come from an Act of Congress or the Constitution itself. See Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579 (1952). The Court in Youngstown has established an analysis for evaluating and determining the constitutionality of executive actions or orders. See id. at 635-638 (Jackson, J., concurring). If confirmed, I would follow the controlling precedent on this issue.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: A right is fundamental when “‘deeply rooted in this nation's history and traditions’, and ‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty.’” See Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-721 (1997) (internal citations omitted). If confirmed, I would follow the controlling precedent on this issue.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: Heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause is required by the Supreme Court when dealing with matters that burden a fundamental right or operate to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class. See, e.g. City of Cleburne, Texas v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 439-441 (1985). Classifications included for strict scrutiny are based on race, national origin and alienage, while gender and illegitimacy are given intermediate scrutiny. Id. If confirmed, I would follow all controlling precedent regarding application of scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: My personal expectation regarding racial preferences in public higher education will play no role in any judicial decisions if I am confirmed. I would follow the holding of Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306 (2003) and Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013) as well as other binding precedent on this issue.

Questions for the Record from Senator Charles Grassley

Leslie R. Caldwell

Nominee for Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, Department of Justice

February 24, 2014

I am concerned that the Department is avoiding prosecuting institutions or executives at financial institutions for fear that the company is “too big to jail.” I certainly recognize that settlements and non-prosecution agreements have a place in the prosecutor’s playbook. But I find it disturbing how often they are relied on. In my view, this rewards and perpetuates criminal misconduct, and increases the risk that future criminal behavior will adversely affect financial markets and our fragile economy.

1. Do you believe that there is any corporation or any corporate executive that is “too big to jail?”

ANSWER: No individual or corporation is above the law. As I said in my statement to the Committee, if confirmed, I will vigorously prosecute criminal wrongdoing whether it occurs in a boardroom, across a computer network, or on a street corner. Indeed, as a prosecutor I brought criminal charges against numerous senior executives and institutions and would draw on those experiences if confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division.

2. How much deference should the Department give a regulator’s advice concerning the collateral effects of a criminal prosecution or conviction on an institution’s viability or the broader economy in weighing criminal charges against that institution?

ANSWER: The Department has long-established guidelines that must be considered when weighing whether to bring criminal charges against an institution. One of several factors to be considered is what, if any, collateral consequences a criminal charge might have on innocent third parties. In considering claims by a prospective defendant institution that a criminal charge could have negative effects on the company or beyond, it would be prudent for the Department to consult with appropriate regulators to obtain their advice on the likelihood that the claimed consequences actually would come to pass. However, the Department alone would make the ultimate decision whether to bring a criminal charge in a particular case.

3. You certainly have extensive experience in prosecuting these types of cases. As a federal prosecutor, did you ever consult with an outside expert or with a regulator on the effects a criminal charge against a company or an individual could have on the economy or financial markets? If so, what factors did you and the Department consider before making a charging decision?

ANSWER: In my experience as a federal prosecutor, I never consulted with an outside expert on the effects that a criminal charge against a company or individual could have on the economy or financial markets. Nor did I ever consult with a regulator regarding the possible financial or economic effects of a charge against an individual. I can recall two occasions when I consulted with regulators regarding the possible collateral financial impacts of a potential corporate criminal prosecution. In one case, involving the prosecution of a national nursing home chain for Medicare fraud, I consulted and worked with the Department of Health and Human Services to ensure that residents of the homes would not be displaced or their care disrupted as a result of the prosecution. In the other case, I and others in the Department consulted with the Securities and Exchange Commission to determine whether a criminal charge against an accounting firm could be disruptive to the markets they regulate. In both cases, after weighing all the factors listed in the Department's guidelines for federal prosecution of business organizations, criminal charges were filed.

4. What factors should the Department consider relevant when a regulator expresses concerns over a potential criminal prosecution?

ANSWER: The Department has a long history of working collaboratively with a broad array of regulators who serve as valuable partners in the Department's law enforcement mission. Given that these regulators often have significant subject matter expertise, the Department may seek their input when appropriate in weighing whether to bring a criminal prosecution. As noted above in response to Question 2, however, a regulator's view as to the potential collateral consequences of a possible prosecution is just one factor the Department considers in deciding whether to file a criminal charge. The decision whether to bring a criminal charge in any given case rests solely with the Department, and if confirmed, I would make such decisions after consulting the factors enumerated in the United States Attorney's Manual.

A few days after your hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary, the Department of Justice and the Department of the Treasury jointly released two memos providing further guidance on one of the issues we discussed: money laundering and marijuana business proceeds.

The February 14, 2014 memo issued by Deputy Attorney General James M. Cole, states the following:

“This memorandum does not alter in any way the Department’s authority to enforce federal law, including federal laws relating to marijuana, regardless of state law. Neither the guidance herein nor any state or local law provides a legal defense to a violation of federal law, including any civil or criminal violation of the CSA, the money laundering and unlicensed money transmitter statutes, or the BSA, including the obligation of financial institutions to conduct customer due diligence.... This memorandum is not intended, does not, and may not be relied upon to create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any party in any matter civil or criminal. It... does not provide defendants or subjects of enforcement action with a basis for reconsideration of any pending civil action or criminal prosecution. Finally, nothing herein precludes investigation or prosecution, even in the absence of any one of the factors listed above, in particular circumstances where investigation and prosecution otherwise serves an important federal interest.

5. In light of the above paragraph in the Department’s February 14, 2014 memo, do you agree that:

- a. The possession, cultivation, and distribution of marijuana remains illegal in all states under the Controlled Substances Act;

ANSWER: Yes. If I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I will carefully review the memorandum issued to all United States Attorneys on February 14, 2014. I certainly support the Department’s continuing and vigorous enforcement of the Controlled Substances Act in a manner consistent with appropriate policies and priorities. As a federal prosecutor for 17 years, I prosecuted numerous drug crimes and drug trafficking organizations and know too well the devastating effect that gang and drug violence bring to our communities. I would draw on those experiences in confronting these issues at the Department.

- b. The laundering of the proceeds of the possession, cultivation, and distribution of marijuana remains illegal in all states under federal money laundering statutes;

ANSWER: Yes. As described above, if I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I will carefully review the memorandum issued to all United States Attorneys on February 14, 2014. I certainly support the Department's continuing and vigorous enforcement of federal money laundering statutes in a manner consistent with appropriate policies and priorities.

- c. The Department's ability to enforce federal law in these areas remains unchanged; and

ANSWER: Because I am not currently at the Department, I have not studied the memorandum issued to all United States Attorneys on February 14, 2014. If confirmed, I will review it carefully. In response to this question, I do note that the portion of the memorandum quoted above states in part, "This memorandum does not alter in any way the Department's authority to enforce federal law, including federal laws relating to marijuana, regardless of state law."

- d. The memo does not create a "safe harbor" that an institution can rely upon as a defense to a prosecution under either of these types of laws.

ANSWER: Because I am not currently at the Department, I have not studied the memorandum issued to all United States Attorneys on February 14, 2014. If confirmed, I will review it carefully. In response to this question, I do note that the portion of the memorandum quoted above states in part, "Neither the guidance herein nor any state or local law provides a legal defense to a violation of federal law, including any civil or criminal violation of the CSA, the money laundering and unlicensed money transmitter statutes, or the BSA, including the obligation of financial institutions to conduct customer due diligence...."

The Treasury Memo attempts to offer guidance to financial institutions on how they may offer various financial services to business engaged in marijuana production or distribution despite federal criminal law clearly prohibiting the same.

6. Please confirm that the activities described in or that would require a bank to file a "Marijuana Limited" Suspicious Activity Report are, despite the Cole Memos, a direct violation of current federal anti-money laundering statutes.

ANSWER: I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question. If I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I will carefully review the memorandum issued by the United States Department of Treasury on February 14, 2014, as well as the memoranda issued by Deputy Attorney General James Cole on August 29, 2013, and February 14, 2014. I certainly support the Department of Justice's continuing and vigorous enforcement of the Controlled Substances Act and federal money laundering statutes in a manner consistent with appropriate policies and priorities.

7. If, within the statute of limitations of the federal money-laundering statute, the Department of Justice reverses course and fully enforces the Controlled Substances Act and federal anti-money laundering statutes, could the Department of Justice use these "Marijuana Limited SARs" in the criminal prosecution against financial institutions that file them?
 - a. If no, please describe what would limit a federal prosecutor from using these SARs in a criminal prosecution, other than prosecutorial discretion.

ANSWER: As stated above, I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question. If I am confirmed, I look forward to carefully reviewing these issues.

The February 14, 2014 memos attempt to provide guidance to financial institutions on how they can simultaneously meet their reporting obligations under the Bank Secrecy Act ("BSA") while providing banking services to individuals or entities engaged in the cultivation or distribution of marijuana in certain states. At the same time, according to recent media reports, the Department's Civil Division has been aggressively pursuing certain legal practices by financial institutions in an operation named "Operation Choke Point."

As a result, on one hand, the Department of Justice's Criminal Division appears to be facilitating illegal behavior specifically prohibited by federal law by unilaterally limiting the scope of the BSA, while on the other hand, the Department's Civil Division is using the BSA in order to stop legal online lending practices, such as pay-day lending, by pressuring the banking industry to cease providing legal third-party payment services.

Given this inconsistent application of the BSA, it is understandable that the financial services industry should not trust the Department's assurances that those entities who engage in financial activities with marijuana cultivators, distributors, or retailers will not be prosecuted under existing federal law, including the BSA, the CSA, and federal money laundering statutes.

8. Will you commit that as Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division you will work to ensure that the various divisions within the department reach consensus on the Department's interpretation of the proper scope or use of a statute?

ANSWER: I am not familiar with Operation Choke Point or the concerns presented in this question. However, I can assure you that if I am confirmed, I will consult my colleagues in other components of the Department on areas of mutual interest.

I recently asked Attorney General Holder these questions and have not yet received response. As the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act falls within Criminal Division jurisdiction, would you please respond to the following questions.

9. What are the Department's current enforcement priorities under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address this question. If I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I assure you that I will be vigilant in pursuing cases under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

10. What particular industries, markets or practices is the Department focusing on, and why?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address this question. As noted above, if I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I assure you that I will be vigilant in pursuing cases under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

11. What proportion of the Department's enforcement activity during 2013 involved non-U.S. companies?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address this question. If I am confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I assure you that I will be vigilant in pursuing cases against U.S. and non-U.S. companies that violate the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

12. Has the Department seen a recent increase in whistleblower claims of FCPA violations?

- a. If so, to what would you attribute that?
b. How has the Department responded?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address these questions.

13. Although the Department does not publicize each particular instance in which it declines prosecution despite evidence of an FCPA violation, what characterized the Department's declinations during 2013? Did the number increase from 2012? What factors were most important in leading the Department to decline prosecution?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address these questions. While I have not been privy to the internal deliberations surrounding the Department's declination decisions, if confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I assure you that declination decisions will be based on the law and the evidence presented.

14. In November 2012, the Department and the SEC issued the FCPA "Resource Guide," which reflected guidance from your agencies regarding the interpretation and enforcement of the FCPA. Does the Department anticipate updating, supplementing or amending the "Resource Guide" in the foreseeable future?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address this question.

15. In 2013, the Department issued only one Opinion Release concerning the FCPA. Does the Department consider the "Resource Guide" a substitute for its opinion release program?

ANSWER: I am not in the Department; therefore, I am not in a position to address this question.

Questions for the Record from Senator Dianne Feinstein
For Leslie R. Caldwell
Senate Committee on the Judiciary
February 24, 2014

Prosecution of Drug, Gun, and Gang Crimes

You have significant experience prosecuting drug, gang, and gun crimes, including as Chief of the Criminal Division in the U.S. Attorney's Office in my hometown of San Francisco. As you know, these often violent crimes continue to devastate many communities in California and across our country. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 11,101 homicides were committed with firearms in the United States in 2011, the latest year that data is available. The 2011 National Gang Threat Assessment found that gang membership increased by 40 percent between 2009 and 2011 and that "[g]angs are responsible for an average of 48 percent of violent crime in most jurisdictions and up to 90 percent in several others"

- If confirmed, will you vigorously enforce federal law against gang members and others who commit major drug or gun trafficking crimes, in coordination with the Offices of the U.S. Attorney?

Answer: Yes. As a former federal prosecutor, I have prosecuted many violent gang cases and led the Violent Criminal Enterprises Section of the U.S. Attorney's Office in the Eastern District of New York, and oversaw the prosecution of violent drug traffickers, gangs and gun traffickers as Chief of the Criminal Division in the Northern District of California. I know too well the devastating effect that gang and drug violence bring to our communities. If confirmed, I certainly would vigorously enforce the law against this activity, in coordination with United States Attorneys' Offices.

What will be your priorities in determining which drug, gun, and gang crimes will be prosecuted by attorneys in the Criminal Division and in formulating criminal enforcement policy for the broader Department of Justice?

Answer: Since I am not now at the Department, I am not familiar with the current prosecution priorities for drug, gun and gang violence. If confirmed, I will familiarize myself with the Department's criminal enforcement policy and evaluate its current priorities. In any event, I would expect that prosecution of gangs and major drug and gun trafficking crime would be a significant Department priority. I also would expect to have a strong voice in formulating the Department's criminal enforcement policy.

Money Laundering – HSBC Case

As you and I discussed when we met in my office in December, the failure of some U.S. banks to comply with anti-money laundering laws fuels drug-related violence in Mexico. As you know, HSBC allowed over $670 billion in wire transfers and over $9.4 billion in physical money to enter the U.S. from Mexico unmonitored. Of that money, we know that at least $881 million in Mexican drug proceeds entered the U.S. illegally. On December 11, 2012, HSBC entered into a Deferred Prosecution Agreement with the Department of Justice and paid $1.92 billion in fines.

An April 2013 report by the Senate Caucus on International Narcotics Control, which I chair along with Senator Grassley, stated that it is unacceptable for monetary penalties to remain the cost of doing business for financial institutions that do not comply with U.S. anti-money laundering laws. I believe the individuals responsible need to be criminally prosecuted and barred from the financial sector.

• Do you agree with this assessment?

Answer: I believe no person or institution is above the law, and when the evidence warrants, individuals responsible for corporate wrongdoing should be held accountable. As I said in my statement to the Committee, if confirmed, I would enforce the law vigorously whether the wrongdoing occurred in a boardroom or on a street corner.

• If confirmed, what will you do to ensure that monetary penalties are not simply the cost of doing business for financial institutions that violate U.S. anti-money laundering laws?

Answer: While I have not studied the facts of the HSBC matter or the report that you reference, I agree that potential criminal cases against financial institutions or other business organizations must be evaluated by applying the many factors discussed in the Department's long-standing guidance relating to federal prosecution of business organizations. At times, application of those factors may result in a decision to file criminal charges against the business. At other times, a decision may be made to enter into a DPA, which involves filing criminal charges and imposing case-specific compliance or reporting requirements, in addition to monetary payments. I am aware from my time both as a federal prosecutor and in private practice that, from a company's perspective, the non-monetary reporting and compliance requirements imposed pursuant to DPAs can be quite onerous, and often include terms that could not be imposed by a court following a conviction of the company at trial. If confirmed, I would follow the evidence in each case and use the tools available to federal prosecutors to hold accountable institutions and individuals that violate U.S. money laundering laws.

Re: Leslie Caldwell, Nominee for Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are friends, admirers, and former Justice Department colleagues of Leslie Caldwell, and we write in strong bipartisan support of her nomination to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division at the U.S. Department of Justice. All of us have held, at one time or another, senior positions within the Justice Department, and have worked or are familiar with Ms. Caldwell.

Before entering private practice, Ms. Caldwell had a long and very distinguished career with the Department of Justice as an experienced prosecutor and manager. She has a depth and breadth of experience with criminal justice issues that will serve her well as Assistant Attorney General. She was an Assistant United States Attorney in both the Eastern District of New York and Northern District of California from 1987-2002. In the Eastern District of New York she tried numerous high profile RICO cases involving organized crime and the murders of law enforcement officers. During her time in the Northern District of California, she served as supervisor of the District's Securities Fraud Unit, as well as the Office's Criminal Chief. As a federal prosecutor, she tried more than 30 criminal cases and argued more than 30 appeals. In 2002, she was selected by the Department of Justice to lead the Enron Task Force and oversaw all aspects of the investigations, which resulted in the prosecution of more than 30 individuals. She received several awards for her service, including the prestigious Attorney General's Award for Exceptional Service, the Attorney General's John Marshall Award and the Attorney General's Award for Fraud Prevention. She also received numerous awards for Superior Performance as an Assistant U.S. Attorney and the New York City Bar Association's Stimson Medal for outstanding performance as an Assistant U.S. Attorney.

Ms. Caldwell has held several management positions and has the necessary management skills to oversee the 750 plus individuals working in the Criminal Division. She is thoughtful and pursues a principled approach to matters and policy issues. In addition, throughout her career, she has worked well with state and federal law enforcement agencies, as well as independent agencies such as the Securities & Exchange Commission and the Commodities Futures Trading Commission. This ability to work with those outside the Department of Justice is also an important component of her ability to lead. She is known throughout for her professionalism, legal acumen, ethics, and fairness.

We believe Ms. Caldwell possesses the characteristics to be a strong and effective leader of the Criminal Division. We thank the Committee for allowing us to present this information about her and believe that our country would be well-served to see her confirmed.

Re: Leslie Caldwell, Nominee for Assistant Attorney General,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I respectfully submit this letter in support of the nomination of Leslie Caldwell to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division at the U.S. Department of Justice. I have known Leslie for approximately twenty five years and I am very familiar with her many professional accomplishments, and strong personal attributes and outstanding character. These accomplishments and traits will serve her and the DOJ well in her new role as the AAG for the Criminal Division should she be confirmed for that very important position.

I served in the U.S. DOJ from 1988-1994 and that is when I first met Leslie. I served as an AUSA in the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of NY from 1988-1992, and then as a Deputy Chief in the Criminal Division of the U.S. DOJ in Washington, DC, from 1992-1994. During that time I (and my family) observed firsthand what an outstanding federal prosecutor and public servant Leslie was and would continue to be throughout her career. In the early morning hours of February 26, 1988, one of my younger brothers, rookie New York City Police Officer Eddie Byrne, was assassinated while he was on duty in a marked police car in South Jamaica, Queens. My brother Eddie was ambushed and assassinated by an extremely violent crack gang. That violent drug gang acted on the order from a jailed drug dealer and violent convicted felon, Howard "Pappy" Mason, to kill a cop. Mason had been sent back to NY state prison earlier in February 1988. Using a telephone for prisoners from his NY State prison, Mason ordered his gang to kill a cop to send a "message" to the cops that because he was sent back to jail, he and his violent drug gang would retaliate by killing a cop.

At the time that Eddie was assassinated (just 5 days after his 22nd birthday) he was on duty in a fixed post in the 103 Police Precinct in South Jamaica, Queens. Eddie was working the midnight to 8 am shift on February 26th guarding the home of a Guyanese immigrant named Arjune. Arjune had previously called the police several times about drug dealers in his neighborhood and he had agreed to testify against them. As a result of Arjune's heroic efforts, he and his family were repeatedly threatened and his home was firebombed prior to the night that Eddie was assassinated. To protect Arjune and his family, the NYPD established around the clock protection outside of his home with a marked police car manned by one NYC Police Officer at all times. When Mason's drug gang readily complied with the order from Mason to murder a NYC Police Officer, they already knew that a single Police Officer would be sitting alone in marked police car on the night they ambushed and assassinated Eddie.

The premeditated assassination of rookie NYC Police Officer Byrne by a jailed, convicted drug dealer and his violent drug gang was an unprecedented crime at the time (and since then). It was meant to send a message of intimidation to all Police Officers and law enforcement personnel by violent drug dealers who ravaged the South Jamaica, Queens's community (and many other parts of NYC) in the 1980's. This was a crime that shocked New York City and the entire nation. This crime was a terrible tragedy for my entire family. My Dad was a NYC Police Officer for 22 years; one of my other brothers has been an FBI agent for almost 25 years and my other brother served as an Assistant District Attorney in Queens and has been an SEC Enforcement attorney for the past fourteen years. But this notorious act of violence was much more than just a personal tragedy and terrible loss for my family. As many public officials have noted over the years and very recently again, including the Honorable Charles Schumer (a distinguished member of this Committee and a great supporter of law enforcement for his entire outstanding career as a dedicated public official), the assassination of rookie Police Officer Eddie Byrne posed a grave threat to the safety and protection of all Police Officers.

It was, therefore, extremely important as a matter of public policy and public safety that Mason and his gang who committed this notorious crime be brought to justice for it. Fortunately, then AUSA Leslie Caldwell led a great team of federal prosecutors and federal agents to investigate and prosecute Mason for this terrible crime. After a very complex, far-ranging investigation and a long, difficult trial (and lengthy, complicated post-trial proceedings) Mason was convicted and sentenced to life without parole for this terrible crime. Throughout that massive federal law enforcement effort to prosecute Mason, Leslie displayed what would become her customary tireless work ethic, good judgment, excellent investigative and trial skills, and the highest level of integrity and ethical behavior. She demonstrated the foregoing while being a forceful, effective and responsible advocate for the DOJ. I am confident that she will continue to use those many extraordinary strengths and talents should she be confirmed to serve as the AAG of the Criminal Division. I hope and strongly recommend that she be confirmed.

I want to thank you and the entire Committee for the opportunity to share this information with you. I hope it is helpful and I hope that our Great Nation will have the opportunity to be well served once again by Leslie in this extremely important position at DOJ. Please contact me at any point if you have any questions about the foregoing or Leslie more generally.

Respectfully submitted..

Re: Leslie Caldwell, Nominee for Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are friends, admirers, and former officials of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") who have worked with or know Leslie Caldwell, and we write in strong support of her nomination to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division at the U.S. Department of Justice. All of us have held, at one time or another, senior positions within the SEC, and have worked or are familiar with Ms. Caldwell.

Before entering private practice, Ms. Caldwell had a long and very distinguished career with the Department of Justice as an experienced prosecutor and manager. She has a depth and breadth of experience with criminal justice issues that will serve her well as Assistant Attorney General. She was an Assistant United States Attorney in both the Eastern District of New York and Northern District of California from 1987-2002, and was Director of the Department of Justice's Enron Task Force from 2002-2004. For much of that time, she worked on matters involving securities fraud, in partnership with various offices of the SEC. Starting in 1997, she prosecuted numerous securities fraud cases in the Eastern District of New York. In 1999, she was recruited by then U.S. Attorney Robert S. Mueller, III to the Northern District of California for the purpose of spearheading an increase in white collar crime prosecutions, with an emphasis on securities fraud. In that role, Ms. Caldwell proactively reached out to SEC officials in San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Washington, D.C., and developed close working relationships that led to many successful joint investigations and prosecutions, including of accounting fraud, insider trading, and market manipulation. As a result of her experience, management skills, and strong working relationship with the SEC, Ms. Caldwell was in 2002 named Director of the Department's Enron Task Force. In that role, she continued to work closely with the SEC in coordinating the very complex investigation that led to the criminal and/or civil prosecution of more than 40 individuals. In all these matters, Ms. Caldwell's respectful and collaborative approach ensured that the SEC and the Department were able to work efficiently and effectively toward successful outcomes, while not losing sight of the agencies' different enforcement goals.

Ms. Caldwell has held several management positions and has the necessary management skills to oversee the 750 plus individuals working in the Criminal Division. She is thoughtful and pursues a principled approach to matters and policy issues. We believe that her proven ability to work effectively and respectfully with those outside the Department of Justice is also an important component of her ability to lead. We believe Ms. Caldwell possesses the characteristics to be a strong and effective leader of the Criminal Division. We thank the Committee for allowing us to present this information about her and believe that our country would be well-served to see her confirmed.

Re: Leslie Caldwell, Nominee for Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are former Federal Bureau of Investigation colleagues of Leslie Caldwell and write to you in support of her nomination to be the next Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division at the U.S. Department of Justice. We have worked with Ms. Caldwell both as executives and investigators in the investigation and prosecution of some of the country's most complex and significant criminal investigations.

As a prosecutor in the Eastern District of New York and the Northern District of California she built a reputation for her prosecution of a range of cases from single defendants, to organized crime groups, as well as the most sophisticated and complex white collar crimes. She possesses a keen legal ability, tempered with the necessary prosecutorial discretion to only hold accountable those who have betrayed our society. She is a person of integrity and solid judgment, sensitive to the ordeals of victims and effective at balancing effective prosecution with the needs of the community.

In 2002, when she was selected to lead the Enron Task Force, Ms. Caldwell created a collaborative environment, building a national multi-agency effort, that resulted in more than 30 criminal prosecutions of individuals. For her leadership, legal acumen and skill, she was recognized with the Attorney General's Award for Exceptional Service, the Justice Department's most prestigious accolade for excellence in investigation.

As a distinguished prosecutor, Ms. Caldwell successfully worked in partnership with federal, state and local law enforcement as well as many federal and state regulatory agencies individually and through multi-agency task forces. Ms. Caldwell understands the important contributions of these agencies in investigations and successful prosecutions which will be a key element in leading the men and women of the Criminal Division.

Ms. Caldwell uses a grounded approach in decision-making and policy and will be a strong and decisive leader for the Criminal Division. We thank you for allowing us to provide you this perspective from law enforcement regarding Ms. Caldwell's nomination. We believe Ms. Caldwell's lengthy experience as a prosecutor, coupled with her recent private sector practice; provide her the skills and experience to lead the Criminal Division.

The nation and law enforcement community will be well-served by her confirmation and service to the country.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC.

The Committee met, pursuant to notice, at 10:05 a.m., in Room SD-226, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Al Franken, presiding.

Present: Senators Franken and Cornyn.

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. AL FRANKEN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MINNESOTA

Senator FRANKEN. This hearing will come to order. Welcome, everybody. We will hear from five nominees today, each of whom has a very impressive legal career, enjoys widespread support from his or her colleagues and home State Members of Congress, and is well qualified for the positions to which he or she has been nominated.

Judge Costa has had an impressive career as a Federal prosecutor and then as a district court judge.

Tanya Chutkan spent more than a decade with the D.C. Public Defender Service and now focuses on private enforcement of the antitrust laws at Boies, Schiller and Flexner.

Hannah Lauck has spent nearly a decade on the Federal bench as a magistrate judge, a position she assumed after a successful career as a Federal prosecutor.

Leo Sorokin has spent nearly a decade on the Federal bench as a magistrate judge, too, a position he assumed after service with the Federal Public Defender's Office.

And John Cruden has served at the Environment and Natural Resources Division for two decades, working in both Democratic and Republican administrations in various capacities, including as the Acting Assistant Attorney General. He has also had an impressive career in the army, both before and after becoming an attorney.

I hope that we can act quickly and in a bipartisan manner to give these nominees an up-or-down vote. I look forward to hearing from all of you today.

Ranking Member Cornyn, it is a great pleasure to chair this hearing with you. Would you like to give any opening remarks and introduce Judge Costa?

OPENING STATEMENT OF HON. JOHN CORNYN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF TEXAS

Senator CORNYN. I do. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and I am glad to be joining you on the dais this morning. I think we could have—we almost have a quorum of the U.S. Senate present today. So I know we have a number of good nominees to hear from, and obviously Representative Norton.

So I want to thank Chairman Leahy for convening today's hearing. We know the Founders vested the Senate with the authority and responsibility to provide advice and consent on the nomination of judges and officers for the executive branch. We all take these jobs very seriously, and one good reason to do it beyond the constitutional mandate is the fact that many of these Federal judges will long survive us in public service. They will serve for many, many years to come.

Today we will hear from five of the President's nominees. I want to focus my comments on Judge Costa of the Southern District of Texas who was nominated to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. He was raised in Texas. Following his graduation from Dartmouth—I am not sure how he got to Dartmouth from Texas, but to his credit, he attended Dartmouth and 2 years in Mississippi with Teach for America. He returned to the University of Texas to attend law school, where he was the editor-in-chief of the Texas Law Review. He served as a law clerk on the D.C. Court of Appeals, a Bristow Fellow in the Office of the Solicitor General, and a law clerk to Chief Justice William Rehnquist.

Even more impressive, he came back home to Texas, and after practicing in civil litigation for 2 years, he went into public service as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the Southern District. At the Department of Justice, he tried more than 15 cases to verdict, argued six cases before the Fifth Circuit, and directed the Hurricane Katrina Fraud Task Force. He received a departmental award for his prosecution of Allen Stanford.

Because of these qualifications, the Texas Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee evaluated Judge Costa for the district court seat that he now occupies, and it was with pride and admiration that Senator Hutchison and I recommended him to the President for that district court nomination. Now the President has given him a promotion after a short time on the trial bench, and the President's recent nomination follows hard work again of the same Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee, this time appointed by Senator Cruz and myself, in close consultation with the White House and important input from the members of the Texas congressional delegation, like Congressman Green, who is here in the audience.

His nomination is a testament to his hard work and his accomplishment, and I know he and his family are proud of his accomplishments, as they should be. I look forward to hearing from him and the other witnesses here today.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator.

Well, we have several Members of Congress who are here today to introduce the nominees from their home States, and I would like to give each of them an opportunity to go ahead with their remarks. I guess we will work our way across starting with Senator Udall.

PRESENTATION OF JOHN CHARLES CRUDEN, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, BY HON. TOM UDALL, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO

Senator UDALL. Thank you, Chairman Franken and Senator Cornyn, and thank you for the opportunity to introduce John Cruden, who has been nominated to be Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division. I have known John for many years. From the time I served as Attorney General of New Mexico, John was the chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section at the Justice Department. We often worked together on important environmental enforcement cases. He also joined me for a groundbreaking conference in New Mexico of all State Attorneys General where we focused on strengthening environmental compliance.

It has been a pleasure for me to follow John's career. He was a highly regarded Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division, a strong leader on the most important environmental cases, and he also pioneered a close working relationship with State Attorneys General, promoting joint enforcement and collaborative efforts.

John has an impressive background. He is a West Point graduate and served with distinction in the military. He then moved to the U.S. Department of Justice where he was responsible for all Federal civil environmental enforcement in the United States. He is a highly regarded litigator, one who fights for the best interests of the United States, and his work has resulted in major settlement negotiations.

While at the Department, he has received many honors, including the Muskie-Chafee Award, the highest honor the Environmental Division can bestow. He is the recipient of three Presidential rank awards from three different Presidents of both parties. John was the first Government attorney to be elected and then serve as the president of the District of Columbia Bar and the first Government attorney to be elected as the Chair of the American Bar Association's Section on Environment, Energy, and Natural Resources.

John left the Department of Justice in 2011 and became President of the Environmental Law Institute, a nonpartisan research institute with a long and distinguished history, providing education and training and some of the leading environmental publications in the Nation. The Environmental Law Institute gives a series of annual awards honoring individuals who benefit the environment through wetland protection. The most recent awards ceremony was at the Botanic Garden up here on Capitol Hill. John invited me to be the keynote speaker. It was a moving event. Local ranchers, community leaders, and city engineers were recognized for having a real on-the-ground impact. This is John's hallmark, pulling people together to get things done. ELI is renowned for its commitment to environmental protection, and John has served ably as its President.

Just a further word about ELI. ELI is a forum to find environmental ideas and policies that work, not a partisan focus, just results.

I cannot imagine a more qualified individual than John for this very important position. He has twice served as Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Division. He is a well-known expert in environmental law. While he led the Division, it was designated "the best place to work in the Federal Government," a tribute to his leadership skills.

I strongly support the nomination of John Cruden. He has experience, integrity, and dedication to the rule of law. He will make a superb Assistant Attorney General.

Thank you very much.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Udall, for being here this morning. I know you have a lot to do. You are welcome to stay for the rest of this, but certainly I know how busy we all are, so if you need to duck out, I totally understand.

Senator UDALL. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. We will go now to our Virginia Senators, first Senator Warner.

PRESENTATION OF HON. M. HANNAH LAUCK, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA, BY HON. MARK R. WARNER, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF VIRGINIA

Senator WARNER. Thank you, Chairman Franken and Ranking Member Cornyn. It is a real honor for me to be with my good friend and colleague Tim Kaine to introduce a fellow Virginian as President Obama's nominee to the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Judge Hannah Lauck. If confirmed, Hannah will become the first woman judge on the Federal trial bench in Richmond.

Hannah is exceptionally well qualified to carry out the duties and responsibilities of a Federal district judge. Hannah earned her bachelor's degree magna cum laude, actually also Phi Beta Kappa at Wellesley. She also—although since all of us I think were at—went to law school in Boston, she did go down toward New Haven for law school where she went to Yale and graduated in 1991 where she directed the homeless clinic and served on the board of the Initiative for Public Interest Law.

Hannah began her legal career in the Eastern District of Virginia, serving as a clerk for Judge Jim Spencer, and I think probably Senator Kaine will mention more about that. Judge Spencer is extraordinarily well regarded in Richmond for his legal acumen, honest nature, and service to community, and will actually go to senior status later this year.

Coming full circle, Hannah has now been nominated to fill the seat of Judge Spencer, her mentor and for whom she clerked right out of law school.

From 1994 to 2004, she served as Assistant U.S. Attorney in the Eastern District where she handled both civil defense matters as well as criminal prosecutions. Following a brief stint in the private sector, Hannah became a U.S. magistrate judge in the Eastern District of Virginia where she has served since 2005.

As a magistrate judge, she helped begin one of the first Federal re-entry courts, which is designed to reduce recidivism of individuals released from prison who have serious addictions. She is also an active member of the community where she has helped the next generation of legal experts. For many years she has taught at the University of Richmond, where, again, Senator Kaine also is active.

She has been highly recommended by all the appropriate bar associations, and I have gotten to know her over the last few years. I think she is extraordinarily well qualified, and I appreciate the Chairman's comment as well about the need to make sure that we fill all these judicial vacancies. She comes extraordinarily highly recommended. I am very proud that the President has nominated her, and she comes with my full 100 percent support.

And with apologies to my colleagues, I have got a hearing upstairs, and apologies to the nominee, but thank you, Mr. Chairman, for the opportunity to present this well-qualified candidate.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Warner, for your words on Judge Lauck.

We will go to Senator Kaine.

PRESENTATION OF HON. M. HANNAH LAUCK, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA, BY HON. TIM KAINE, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF VIRGINIA

Senator KAINE. Thank you, Mr. Chair and Ranking Member Cornyn. It is good to be here with you today on behalf of Judge Lauck.

Mark and I were together at Harvard Law School. I became a lawyer and he became a client. He was smarter than me. But—and he still is smarter than me. But it is good to be here together for this wonderful nominee.

Judge Lauck, just amplifying a point that Mark made, started her legal career after she graduated from Yale Law School, working with Judge Spencer, the person whose decision to go senior status has led to this opening. Jim Spencer is really a towering figure in the Eastern District in the Federal judiciary, and she has big shoes to fill. But since she started as a law clerk with him, judges kind of treat their law clerks almost as their children. They take a parental pride in what they do. And I have talked to Judge Spencer about this particular occasion. He is very, very proud of his law clerk, Hannah, and what she has done during her career.

Mark did a good job of laying out her professional background. She has been, in addition to a law clerk, in private practice, a corporate counsel with Genworth in Richmond, but her main work before she went on the bench as a magistrate was with the U.S. Attorney's Office for 10 years. As an Assistant U.S. Attorney, half of her time was focused on civil litigation, and then—I think the first half of her career was on criminal litigation, the second half on civil litigation. Very familiar with the docket in this court.

As a U.S. magistrate from 2005 to today, Judge Lauck's work has involved all Federal misdemeanors. Magistrates in Richmond Division try Federal misdemeanors, and they also try any civil matter completely and fully with the consent of the parties. So she has acted as a judge in virtually the entire range of cases that this court handles.

I will just say this in closing: This is a court I am very close to. My wife clerked for a Federal judge on this court when she started her legal career, and I was a litigator for 17 years, and the bulk of my practice was in the Richmond Division of the Eastern District of Virginia. It was a happy day for that court when I tried my last case in 2001, but I have stayed very close to the court. I know the judges, I know the bailiffs, I know the court personnel, I know the lawyers, I know many of the parties. They speak with uniform plaudits about the work that Judge Lauck has done as a magistrate, and they have the utmost confidence that she will be a wonderful Article III judge in this seat that is being vacated by her mentor, Judge Spencer. I recommend her highly.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Kaine.

And just for everybody here, as I introduce Senator Warren, not everyone in the Senate has an association with Harvard Law.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. Senator Warren.

PRESENTATION OF HON. LEO T. SOROKIN, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS, BY HON. ELIZABETH WARREN, A U.S. SENATOR FROM THE STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS

Senator WARREN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, thank you, Ranking Member Cornyn, for holding this hearing and for allowing me to be here today. I am very pleased to introduce Judge Leo Sorokin, who has been nominated to fill a judicial vacancy on the district court for the District of Massachusetts.

Judge Sorokin's nomination came after he was recommended to me for this position by the Advisory Committee on Massachusetts Judicial Nominations. The advisory committee is comprised of distinguished members of the Massachusetts legal community, including prominent academics and litigators, and is chaired by former Massachusetts District Court Judge Nancy Gertner. The committee's recommendation reflects the strength of Judge Sorokin's resume, the extraordinary support that he has received from those who have worked with him and appeared before him, and the conclusion of the Massachusetts legal community that he is a superlative nominee.

Judge Sorokin is joined here today by his wife, Dr. Pam Wolf, and their three children—are you back there? There you are. Good. Jake, who is a sophomore at Yale; Mikaela, who is a senior at Brookline High School; and Sascha, who is in eighth grade. And also here today are his sisters, Sharon Sorokin James—Sharon, are you back there? Okay, making sure—and Dr. Rachel Sorokin Goff and Rachel's husband, James Goff. I know they are all tremendously proud to be sharing this moment, and we are very proud to have them here.

Judge Sorokin is a 1983 graduate of Yale and a 1991 graduate of Columbia Law School, after which he clerked for Judge Rya Zobel on the district court in Boston. He served as a magistrate judge in Massachusetts since 2005, handling both civil and criminal matters for the district court in Boston, and he served as chief magistrate judge since 2012. Judge Sorokin's track record as a magistrate should give the Senate a high level of confidence in his ability to serve as a district court judge.

Judge Sorokin's prior legal career is also very impressive. He spent 2 years as an associate in civil litigation practice at Mintz Levin in Boston and then 3 years in the Attorney General's office before another 8 years as an assistant Federal defender in Boston. In that capacity, he handled both trials and appeals across a broad swath of Federal criminal law matters and all manner of cases from single defendant cases to complex multi-defendant cases.

Judge Sorokin has also truly distinguished himself in his time as a magistrate in Massachusetts. In particular, Judge Sorokin was principally responsible for the creation of the Court-Assisted Recovery Effort, known as CARE, a re-entry program that was developed in the District of Massachusetts. CARE is designed to help Federal offenders returning from prison avoid relapse behavior that might endanger the community. Participants are subject to a high degree of oversight, including more frequent drug testing, and review of their conduct by the courts as often as every week. They receive incentives like drug treatment and other resources, such as mock job interviews and courses on financial literacy. At the same time, they face swift sanctions, potentially including immediate jail or time in community service, for any noncompliance with the program, such as a failed drug test.

The CARE model was one of the first re-entry programs in the Federal system. To date, nearly half of the district courts in the United States have such a court or are considering starting one. Observers from all over the country have come to Boston to see it in action, and early data on the effectiveness of the program is significant. An academic study in 2009 comparing CARE participants to a control group of similarly situated individuals under regular Federal supervision concluded that CARE participants were a third less likely to be re-arrested in the first year after the program was put into effect.

Done right, programs like CARE reduce crime, improve the safety of our communities, and improve the lives of former prisoners. They represent the kind of work that can be done to improve our justice system when Federal judges have the diversity of professional experience to create and facilitate innovative solutions to persistent problems.

Judge Sorokin is a first-rate lawyer with impressive credentials and a demonstrated commitment to public service. I am proud to have recommended him to President Obama, and I look forward to his full approval by this committee and swift confirmation by the full U.S. Senate. Thank you very much.

I apologize, but I am supposed to be in a Banking hearing at this same moment, so I will excuse myself.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, then, go there.

Senator WARREN. I will go. I will, and I apologize to Judge Sorokin's family, but I know it is going to be a good hearing. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you for being here, Senator.
Representative Eleanor Holmes Norton.

PRESENTATION OF TANYA S. CHUTKAN, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, BY HON. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON, A DELEGATE IN CONGRESS FROM THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Ms. NORTON. Thank you, Chairman Franken, Ranking Member Cornyn. I appreciate this hearing. I appreciate the opportunity to introduce a highly qualified candidate for the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Tanya S. Chutkan.

Tanya Chutkan is the hiring and recruiting manager of a major DC law firm where she engaged in both civil and criminal litigation. She is currently representing plaintiffs in antitrust cases, which is her major focus, in Federal courts in New York, Pennsylvania, California, Tennessee, and Alabama.

Ms. Chutkan has also had extensive criminal experience at the Public Defender Service of the District of Columbia. She tried more than 30 cases there, argued two cases on appeal. Ms. Chutkan is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School. She also attended George Washington University here. At the law school, she served as an associate editor of the Law Review and as an Arthur Littleton Legal Writing Fellow.

Tanya Chutkan has won uniform praise from both her colleagues and opposing counsel and judges as well. I strongly recommend her based on her intellect and her character and her skills and diligence and temperament and her fairness. And, Mr. Chairman, if I may note, by coincidence, you are holding this hearing during Black History Month, and before the District has any courtesy to recommend judges to the President, there had only been one African American woman to serve on the district court until—here for 32 years. Since we have had this courtesy, we have had the second to serve, and Ms. Chutkan, if she is approved, as I am sure she will be by virtue of her extraordinary qualifications, will be only the second African American woman on the bench. We are very proud of what she has achieved, and we are very proud of our court that she, I hope you agree, should join, because it is a distinguished court, and she is, in my view, a highly qualified candidate.

I recommend her strongly to you for approval by this Committee and, of course, for confirmation by the senate.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Representative Holmes Norton, for coming to our side of the Hill, and I know that you are busy over there. You are welcome to stay, certainly, but if you have to leave, we certainly understand.

I would now like to ask Judge Gregg Costa to come forward, and as is customary—you may keep standing—I will administer the oath and swear in the witness.

Judge Costa, Gregg Cost, do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before the Committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

Judge COSTA. I do.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you. Welcome, Judge Costa, and congratulations on your nomination. I would like to give you an opportunity to make an opening statement and to acknowledge any friends or family who may be here with you today or watching from home.

STATEMENT OF HON. GREGG JEFFREY COSTA, NOMINEE TO BE CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

Judge COSTA. Thank you, Senator Franken, and thank you for presiding today. Thank you, Senator Cornyn, for your kind introduction, for supporting me for a second time. I also want to thank Senator Cruz and thank the Federal Judiciary Evaluation Committee that both Senator Cornyn and Senator Cruz have set up in Texas, which has treated me very fairly and supported me for a second time.

I certainly want to thank President Obama for nominating—this great honor of a second nomination, and I have someone here today as well who—a public official who is really the one who started me out on this path. That is Representative Al Green from Houston. I did not know the Congressman until a few years ago when he set up this process to start considering judicial nominees, and the fact that he started me down this path is something I will always be grateful for.

I do want to introduce my family who is here. A week or two ago, when I found out about this hearing, I sent my mother a very brief email that just said, “The White House called. The hearing is set for 2/25.” And my mother and father were at a restaurant when she got the email, and she said, “Wow, it is pretty remarkable when your son sends an email saying the White House called.” And that really did drive home for me what an amazing journey this has been and these amazing opportunities I have had. And as I said when I was sworn in to the district court bench, I think these amazing opportunities I have been able to enjoy speaks not just to the greatness of our country but to my mother and father’s greatness as parents.

My wife, Jennifer, my biggest supporter and my best friend, is here.

And then that brings me to the two people who are probably the biggest beneficiaries of my second nomination. That is my two boys, Elijah and Joshua, because it is giving them an opportunity to redeem their behavior from the last hearing they attended.

[Laughter.]

Judge COSTA. I will not know until I watch the video later today if they have improved.

And then making her debut in the Senate today is my 4-year-old daughter, Rebekah, but I have no concerns whatsoever about her behavior.

Senator Franken, being from Minnesota, this morning's snow was probably no big deal to you, but it was the first time my kids on the way over here had ever seen snow falling from the sky. So I promise you at least for them this morning's snow is going to be far more memorable than anything I say this morning.

But with that, I am ready to take the Committee's questions.

[The biographical information of Judge Costa appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator FRANKEN. Well, thank you, and welcome to your family.

Judge Costa, it is somewhat customary for this Committee to ask nominees to describe their judicial philosophies. I take this to mean the approach that you will take when deciding close cases, cases where the law is not quite as clear or where the evidentiary record is disputed. I would like to give you a chance to address that and, in particular, what we can expect of you and what litigants can expect of you when you are confirmed to the court of appeals.

Judge COSTA. Thank you for the question, Senator Franken. When I was a lawyer, the thing I most enjoyed about being in front of judges was when they approached the case with an open mind, when you did not think they brought preconceived notions to the case before they heard from the lawyers or looked at the evidence. And so I think the appropriate role of a judge is to view each case with an open mind and base the decision on the facts and law in that case.

In cases when there is not a precedent directly on point that you referred to, I think there are still, you know, standard, commonly accepted methods of interpretation that a judge can rely on to find what the appropriate answer is for that case.

Senator FRANKEN. Well, congratulations on your second nomination in such a close time period. When you were being considered for your current position at the district court, Senator Grassley submitted a written question for the record in which he asked you about judicial temperament. You gave an answer that included open-mindedness. This is what you said. You said, "The most important elements of judicial temperament are open-mindedness, respect for all parties, attorneys and other participants in the judicial process, and humility."

Now you have been on the bench for nearly 2 years. How would you respond to the same question? How has your experience—has it in any way changed your view on that question?

Judge COSTA. I do not think it has. All those qualities I think are still very important for a judge to have, and I have worked hard to try and exhibit those.

I think the one thing from the experience I have had thus far that I might add to that is, as a Federal judge, you really need a strong work ethic, because if you want to be open-minded, if you want to give fair consideration to the parties' arguments in each case, there are a lot of cases, and there is a lot of paper that gets filed. And so it is a lot of work to take the time to read everything and make sure everyone has got a fair hearing.

I know at the district court it is an incredibly demanding job. I know at the circuit, if I were fortunate enough to be confirmed, it would be as well. I think the Fifth Circuit has the second busiest docket behind the Ninth. But it is something I have been able to do during my time on the district bench, and I would hope to do the same, if confirmed.

Senator FRANKEN. So what you are saying is that 2 years ago you had no idea how hard you would be working.

[Laughter.]

Judge COSTA. Some idea, but until it really hits you, right?

Senator FRANKEN. Judge Costa, you clerked for Judge Randolph and Justice Rehnquist, and you have written about Justice Marshall. Are there any judges or Justices who you particularly admire, someone whom you might consider a role model?

Judge COSTA. Well, certainly the two judges I clerked for I learned an amazing amount from, as I hope my law clerks have learned something from me. And in many ways, the way I run my chambers, my writing style I think mirrors some of what I learned from Judge Randolph and Chief Justice Rehnquist. I think Justice Ginsburg has said Chief Justice Rehnquist was the best boss she ever had. He was my boss in a very different capacity than he was her boss, but I would echo her sentiment. So I look to both of them.

I also think given that I am being considered for the Fifth Circuit, it is worth mentioning there were four judges, including John Minor Wisdom, who the Fifth Circuit building in New Orleans is named for—three of them were Eisenhower appointees. They served during the 1960s. It fell to them the task of applying Brown v. Board of Education on the ground in the South. And they did so and applied the law—they were bound as lower court judges to apply the law, and they did so in the face of great social ostracism and sometimes threats of violence. And so I think their fidelity to the rule of law in very difficult circumstances is also a great example.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Judge Costa. I have heard about Judge Wisdom. How do you spell “Minor” in Wisdom?

Judge COSTA. M-I-N-O-R. A great judge name—Judge Wisdom.

Senator FRANKEN. But Minor Wisdom is just odd.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. It always struck as very Southern in some way. I do not know why.

Senator Cornyn.

Senator CORNYN. It is a sign of judicial humility.

[Laughter.]

Senator CORNYN. I could be wrong, Chairman Franken, but I believe Senator Alexander clerked on the Fifth Circuit, and I want to say he clerked for Judge Wisdom. I could be wrong there.

Senator FRANKEN. I think Senator Sessions may have as well. Well, anyway.

Senator CORNYN. So, Judge Costa, you and I are well acquainted with one another professionally, and I am glad to see you here today sitting in this seat at long last now for this hearing.

Just by way of some description, you alluded to the Federal Judicial Evaluation Committee process, and just to put a little meat on the bones, this is a bipartisan group of what I think are probably the top practitioners in the State to evaluate the professional qualifications and credentials of the candidates. And, of course, we work with the Texas congressional delegation, like Congressman Green and others, to make sure that we get the best talent to actually apply for these benches.

But could you describe a little bit about your interaction with the Federal Judicial Evaluation Commission, both when you applied for the district bench as well as the court of appeals?

Judge COSTA. Absolutely. On both occasions, they have a very open process. It is well publicized when they are accepting applications. Any lawyer in the State can submit an application, and then a certain number are notified who are selected for interviews. And both times I met with the full committee for interviews. They asked tough but fair questions. On the committee are some of the most respected lawyers in the State. When I was there last time, I was thinking how much they could have been billing if you added up all 35 members while I was sitting there spouting off on the law.

But, again, they take this very seriously, and it is refreshing to see that these lawyers who have so many other important things to do put so much care into making sure that there are people on the Federal bench who are well suited to being there.

Senator CORNYN. Well, you appreciated, I know, that the legal profession is made up of people who obviously advocate for clients and are not necessarily advocating for a cause. And what the legal profession depends on and what I believe the bedrock of America depends on is somebody at some point who is going to call balls and strikes and who is going to apply the law as written or based on the precedents established by the U.S. Supreme Court or superior court. Is that something that you are committed to doing?

Judge COSTA. Certainly, Senator, and I think my record in the year and a half or so that I have been on the Federal bench hopefully shows that. Judges are not here to make policy. We leave that to you all and to the President. Our job is to apply and interpret the law.

Senator CORNYN. Well, the policymaking can get pretty messy sometimes, but I appreciate your answer.

So let me talk about the 164 memoranda, opinions, and orders that you have written since you have been on the district bench. I note that the Fifth Circuit has reversed three of those, which, by my count, is not a bad record. I remember when I was in private practice, somebody pointed out that the only lawyers who never lose a case are those who never try a case. And I think there is probably an analogue here for judges, and obviously you call the balls and strikes in your capacity as a district judge, but it is the appellate court's responsibility to do its independent review of your work. And I would just note that 3 out of 164 ain't bad.

But could you tell me and tell the Committee what, if anything, you learned from the reversals? Sometimes I think we learn less when people agree with us than when people disagree with us.

Judge COSTA. Thank you for the question, Senator Cornyn. We said the same thing about trial lawyers losing cases in the U.S. Attorney's Office, and I have often said—I think I had two defendants who got a mixed verdict or were acquitted, and I always learned more as a trial lawyer in those two instances than I did when you win and you go home and think you did everything great.

And I think, you know, obviously the appellate court is there to have three judges look at an issue. The appellate court often has fuller briefing, often has more time to consider an issue. So I obviously give great weight to what the appellate court thinks and, you know, I review that and respond in future opinions I have accordingly based on the issues that they thought were incorrectly decided.

Senator CORNYN. Well, Judge Costa, I am happy to support your nomination, and I would say that in a Washington environment where very often there is polarization and where the White House and the Congress is at loggerheads, this is one area where we have been able to come together, and I think thanks to your hard work and outstanding record and commitment to the rule of law, we have been able to come together and agree on your nomination. So I just want to say congratulations to you and your family, and I look forward to your confirmation and to your outstanding record of public service now in the Fifth Circuit.

Judge COSTA. Thank you.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Senator Cornyn. I would like to echo that, and you are dismissed.

Judge COSTA. Thank you, Senator. We will go see the snow.

Senator FRANKEN. The kids behaved very well.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. I would now like to ask Tanya Chutkan, Leo Sorokin, Hannah Lauck, and John Cruden to come to the witness table, and you can remain standing.

Please remain standing to be sworn. Do you affirm that the testimony you are about to give before the Committee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Ms. CHUTKAN. I do.

Judge LAUCK. I do.

Judge SOROKIN. I do.

Mr. CRUDEN. I do.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you. Please be seated.

Welcome and congratulations to you all on your nominations. I would like to give you each an opportunity to make an opening statement and to acknowledge any friends or family who may be here with you or watching from home.

We will start with Ms. Chutkan.

STATEMENT OF TANYA S. CHUTKAN, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Ms. CHUTKAN. Good morning. Thank you very much, Senator Franken and Ranking Member Cornyn, for holding this hearing today. I realize that a tremendous amount of effort goes into preparing this, and I thank you and your staffs for doing that.

I also want to thank Congresswoman Holmes Norton for her very kind introduction and for the work her Judicial Nominations Commission did in reviewing my materials and the honor they do me in recommending me for this nomination.

I would like to acknowledge with me here today this morning my husband, Peter Krauthamer, who—we met years ago as young public defenders and whose service on the D.C. superior court bench has been an example and inspiration for me. And my two sons, Nicholas and Max Krauthamer, who are delighted to be missing school to be here today.

[Laughter.]

Ms. CHUTKAN. It is not always easy being the child of two trial lawyers or a trial lawyer and a judge or, worse yet, two judges, but they have become very effective advocates for themselves.

[Laughter.]

Ms. CHUTKAN. Quite skillful.

I would like to thank President Obama for nominating me. He has given me a great honor, and it is one I hope to uphold and live up to.

I want to thank my—here today with me, my sister, Dr. Robynne Chutkan, who is here, and with her husband, Eric Mann, who is from the Department of Homeland Security. My brother, Dr. Norman Chutkan, could not be here today. He is actually performing surgery right now, but I know if he could be here, he would.

And my wonderful, wonderful parents, Dr. Winston Chutkan and Noelle Chutkan, who could not be here today, but I am sure are watching on a webcast. My parents have been a steadfast source of love and encouragement and support for all three of their children, and any success that we have achieved has really been due to the wonderful example they have set for us. So I am thinking of them today.

I want to thank my mother-in-law, my father-in-law and his wife, my many sister- and brother-in-laws who are watching from near and far; my 12 nieces and nephews, who should all be in school today; colleagues from both my law firm of Boies, Schiller and Flexner, including my partner, William Isaacson, who is here today; and colleagues from the Public Defender Service, neighbors, and friends who are here today and watching by webcast. Thank you all.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Ms. Chutkan.

Judge Lauck.

STATEMENT OF HON. M. HANNAH LAUCK, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF VIRGINIA

Judge LAUCK. Thank you, Chair, Senator Franken. I also want to thank Ranking Member Cornyn for the opportunity to appear in front of this Committee and to the Committee for organizing this hearing for us.

I want to thank President Obama for the honor of the nomination and especially thank Senators Warner and Kaine for their gracious words of introduction.

I would like to introduce my family. My husband of 20 years is here, Jay Wood. He is my best friend. He is the source of all happiness in my life and a terrific father and teacher.

Our son is here, Frost Wood. He is a ninth grader in his father's school and has permission to be here today, both from his father and from the other teachers in the school.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. He did not get permission from me.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. From the Chair, but okay.

Judge LAUCK. They are having a great year because not only are they missing school today, they have had a lot of snow days. This is pretty much the winter of excellence for them in academia.

My daughter, Addie Wood, is here. She is a seventh grader in the sister school where Jay teaches.

Our parents, many of them have passed, including my mother, who was a Minnesotan. But we are hoping that Jay's father, Hank Wood, is successfully manipulating the webcast today, and there is a good chance of that.

With us in the room are my brother, Jett Lauck. My sister, Dede Cockerill, Dede has come in from Texas and has brought a Texan delegation with her. Her husband, Jim Cockerill, is in Texas still. My niece, Sarah Jones, may be gone because she has a little baby, Ella, whom she was gracious enough to bring just a few weeks after birth. I do not know if they are back here yet.

Senator FRANKEN. I see a mother with a little baby.

[Laughter.]

Senator FRANKEN. She is kind of blond.

Judge LAUCK. Yes.

Senator FRANKEN. Is that her?

Judge LAUCK. That would be it. And I would like to note for the record I certainly am a great aunt.

With Sarah is her husband, Brad, who is a graduate of SMU and works in the House across the way.

I also have numbers of supporters from—colleagues from work, good, long, dear friends who have taken the effort to come here, including law school friends.

Our cousins are here, Ted Bond and Ashley Silverberg, and we have members from our courthouse, which is a family in the Eastern District. My law clerk, L.A. Kirkendahl, is here, and Kristen Kirtos, and I know that Judge Spencer is here in spirit, and I appreciate the opportunity at all to be associated with the seat that he has occupied.

And I look forward to your questions.

[The biographical information of Judge Lauck appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, Judge, and welcome to all family members and also to Ms. Chutkan's family.

Judge Sorokin.

STATEMENT OF HON. LEO. T. SOROKIN, NOMINEE TO BE DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF MASSACHUSETTS

Judge SOROKIN. Thank you, Senator. I would like to thank you and the other Members of the Committee for convening this hearing; President Obama for the high honor and humbling honor of the nomination to the district court; Senator Warren for her kind words regarding me, her support in this process; and also Senator

Markey, who I know is not here today but who has also been supportive of my nomination.

As Senator Warren mentioned, I am joined by my wife, who has been the love of my life for over 30 years; our children, who are here today, relishing, I think, the opportunity to miss school; my sisters, who Senator Warren mentioned; my brother-in-law, Jim; and from your neck of the woods, Senator, I know on the webcast watching is my sister-in-law, brother-in-law, and their three children, who live in Rushford, Minnesota, on their farm.

Two people who I would just like to briefly acknowledge who are not here are my parents, my mother and father, proud graduates of the University of Connecticut School of Law in 1950 and 1953, respectively. Without them I would not sit here today. They taught me the importance of hard work, character, and commitment to the rule of law, and though I know that they are saddened—or at least I am, that they are not here to share this moment with me, I am sure that they are beaming with pride looking down upon us from the heavens.

Senator FRANKEN. I am sure they are.

Judge SOROKIN. So I thank you.

[The biographical information of Judge Sorokin appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you, and welcome to your family and friends.

Mr. Cruden.

STATEMENT OF JOHN CHARLES CRUDEN, NOMINEE TO BE ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. CRUDEN. Senator Franken, Senator Cornyn, thank you so much for chairing this, and I am really honored not just by the President's nomination and the support I received from the Attorney General, I am honored to be on this panel with judges that, if I am so lucky to be confirmed, I may be in front of at some time in my life.

I also want to thank Senator Udall, who is a superb Senator but was a wonderful Attorney General, and that was where I first encountered him.

Senator Udall told you a bit about my background, and it is relevant to some of the people that are in the audience supporting me today. It has been a somewhat unique career trajectory. I graduated from West Point, and in the audience today I have some of the individuals who graduated with me.

In my office, on the wall of my office is a print of the plains of West Point. Superimposed on that are the names of my classmates who died in Vietnam, and every morning I go into the office and I see the real price but also the importance of service and public service, but also my warm salute to those men and women in uniform who continue to do extraordinary things for the Nation.

I was fortunate leaving West Point to be selected to be the chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section, which Senator Udall already pointed out that is how we met. I was there also joined by extraordinary individuals, professionals who worked very hard every day promoting the rule of law, advancing the environment, and many of them are here today also in support of me, and I am so thankful for their public service and their friendship. It means a lot to me. Those career professionals in the Environment Division are really the backbone of that organization.

Listening on webcast, I know, because I have had the fortune of working with Federal officials and so many agencies across the United States, agencies that the Department of Justice served, but I have also had the chance of working with Attorneys General and local attorneys on efforts of advancing the environment, they have been very supportive, and I thank all of them.

And also in the audience today are individuals who served with me in two other ways. I was fortunate enough to be elected by my peers to be the president of the District of Columbia Bar Association, and then later the American Bar Association's Section of Environment, Energy, and Natural Resources, and there are individuals here from those two great organizations who dedicate their valuable time to advancing the rule of law and supporting attorneys.

But like others on the—here before you today, I would not be here today, clearly would not be here today without others that I do want to single out. Almost immediately after I graduated from West Point—maybe I waited a few days—I married my wife, Sharon, who is here today. She is a great professional in her own right, giving her life to teaching learning-disabled young people.

Wonderful professionals, I am so proud of my daughters, Kristen and Heather. They are here with their husbands, Major Scott Campbell and Travis Mason, but now I am at the stage of my life where I have been gifted with other things, and I have four grandchildren. They are boys and girls. With us today are Ryan Mason and Jonathan Mason. Watching us and here in spirit are Lauren Campbell and Katelyn Campbell, two extraordinary young girls.

So thank you again for the opportunity to appear before you today. Thank you for your consideration. I look forward to your questions.

[The biographical information of Mr. Cruden appears as a submission for the record.]

Senator FRANKEN. Well, welcome to all your family and grandchildren, the grandchildren watching, and thank you for your service. I will start the questioning with you, Mr. Cruden.

In your view, what are the most pressing challenges facing the Environment and Natural Resources Division today? And how will you address those challenges?

Mr. CRUDEN. Thank you, Senator. Although I served in the Environment Division for a number of years, I have been out of it now for 3 years in an environmental organization, and so as you would expect, the very first thing I would do going back to the Division would be learning and listening to all of those, so I can tell you in that learning and listening, here are areas that I will be clearly focusing on: Over half of the Division's resources are dedicated to environmental issues, either enforcing our Nation's laws or defending agency policies, and I want to look at that. I want to advance those things. It is extraordinarily important to me.

Another whole part of the Division's responsibilities is as a stewardship for natural resources, our public lands, our national parks.

And I want to work on that. It always has litigation and has litigation today. I need to familiarize myself with that, but I want to make sure that we are using our resources wisely.

And then a third area that I intend to concentrate on as well is there is a unique responsibility the Division has for Native American rights. They both represent tribes through the Department of Interior, but they also have litigation with tribes of the United States. It is an area where I have some familiarity because I have met with tribal leaders, but not a lot. And so I will need to learn. I will need to have that experience and expertise. I will need to meet with tribal members, as I will need to meet with State Attorneys General to actually not only figure out how best to use those priorities but, to answer better your question, how best do I implement the enormous responsibilities of the Environment and Natural Resources Division.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you for that thoughtful response.

It is going to be the rest of you, to be judges—or judges already and about to be a judge, hopefully. Ms. Chutkan, Judge Sorokin, and Judge Lauck, I would like to ask you the same question I asked Judge Costa, which is to please describe your judicial philosophy, the approach that you would take in deciding close cases, what we can expect of you, what litigants can expect of you when you are confirmed as a Federal district court judge. We will start with Ms. Chutkan.

Ms. CHUTKAN. Thank you, Senator. Like Judge Costa, as a trial lawyer, both at the Public Defender Service and in my career in private practice, I have had the opportunity and the privilege to practice before a wide variety of judges, both in Federal and State courts, and really the ideal judge has always been for me one who is open-minded, fair, and prepared. And that would be my philosophy, and that would be the guiding principles for me as a judge.

Impartiality is bedrock. Listening to both sides, treating all people who come before me, be they individuals or corporations, with respect and with dignity, and working very hard to review all relevant materials, do my own research, be prepared so that when I listen to the arguments of both sides, I am aware of the relevant case law and of the facts. And in the close cases, to really pay close attention to the language of the statute, if I am interpreting a statute, to the facts, to the binding precedent of the Supreme Court and the D.C. Circuit, and to treat each case individually and on its own merits, and apply the law to the facts without fair or favor or partiality to any side.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you for that answer.

Judge Lauck, I would like to nominate you not to use that answer.

[Laughter.]

Judge LAUCK. That is the universe of good judging that I will do my best to respond. Obviously Ms. Chutkan has an impressive description of what a good judge should be. I cannot say that I have a word that describes my philosophy. What I have tried to do in my years as a magistrate judge is to be both predictable and persuadable.

The predictability flows from following the rule of law, applying precedent clearly, applying the rules of procedure in an accurate and speedy manner.

The persuadability stems from some of what Ms. Chutkan talked about, which is being open-minded, creating an atmosphere in which everyone who walks in the courtroom feels as if they have a fair shot, listening carefully to what the litigants are trying, the case that they are bringing to you, so that whatever decision you reach and however it comes down, the individuals feel fairly heard and they know that the law has been fairly and impartially applied.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you.

Judge Sorokin.

Judge SOROKIN. Thank you. The litigants I think could expect that I would approach every case with an open mind; that I would come to court prepared, having reviewed carefully all the submissions that they had provided me; that I would treat them both with civility and respect; and that I would endeavor to render both a prompt decision and a decision that I could clearly explain to the parties so that they understood not only what the result was but why I was reaching the result that I had reached.

In terms of resolving close cases, what I would attempt to do is to identify exactly what it is in dispute between the parties and then look at both the general binding precedent from the Supreme Court and the First Circuit governing the question, the methodology to approach the question, analogous case law related to the issue before me, even if it is not deciding the issue before me, and then render an impartial decision under the law to the narrow question before me.

Senator FRANKEN. Thanks to all of you for that.

I want to talk a little bit about recidivism. Judge Lauck, you started a Second Chance Offender Rehabilitation Effort court in 2007, and, Judge Sorokin, you have done work with the Massachusetts drug re-entry court program. I have long advocated for mental health courts and drug courts as alternatives to traditional incarceration in appropriate cases.

Can each of you tell the Committee about your work in this area and whether you have identified effective ways to reduce recidivism and what those are?

Ms. CHUTKAN. Thanks, Senator. I have not done a tremendous amount of work on recidivism in my practice.

Senator FRANKEN. Okay.

Ms. CHUTKAN. But I can tell you that from my time as a public defender—and I spent 11 years as a public defender—I found that clients—I was less likely to see clients a second or third time if there were adequate supports for them in the community, especially drug treatment and assistance in transitioning back into society so that they would have the support and resources they needed so that they would not fall back into the kind of behavior that led them into the criminal justice system in the first place.

So I am a big proponent of programs to reduce recidivism.

Senator FRANKEN. Judge Lauck, you started an anti-recidivism program. Can you tell me about it and what your findings are?

Judge LAUCK. Yes, thank you, Mr. Senator. We have begun the SCORE program. It is called SCORE, a Second Chance Offender Rehabilitation Effort, and in our court we—it is a re-entry program so it is individuals who have already been convicted and are on supervised release. And the goal of this program is to identify individuals who are highly addicted to give them the skills to stop using, to become sober, but also other life skills. And I think one of the greater aspects of the success of the SCORE program has been the life skills of education, getting a GED, getting a driver's license, getting employed. All of those things have had, I think, a measurable effect on reducing recidivism with those individuals and leading them to a successful and employed and sober life within our community.

It has also the benefit of saving resources for individuals who are not going back into the jail system. I think it overall has a very positive effect on the community at large.

Senator FRANKEN. Thank you for that work.

Judge Sorokin.

Judge SOROKIN. Thank you, Senator, in 2006 our district started something called the "Court-Assisted Recovery Effort." Similar to the program that Judge Lauck mentioned, our program is focused on individuals who are returning from Federal prison onto supervised release who have serious drug—histories of drug addiction and drug abuse. And the aim of the program is to help the participants first to create and then to maintain a sober, employed, and law-abiding life.

We have found that by combining the public health approach of treatment with the criminal justice approach of accountability together, we are able to encourage and achieve success with these individuals returning from Federal prison. And as Senator Warren mentioned, we have studied it and found that we have effectively reduced recidivism. We have not studied the resource savings, but anecdotally it does appear that it is certainly cheaper for people in supervised release to provide them treatment than to jail them.

Senator FRANKEN. And they become more productive and on and on.

Well, I want to thank all of you, and I hope we get you confirmed as soon as possible. And I would like to congratulate you and your loved ones and family and friends who have come today.

We will hold the record open for 1 week for submissions of questions for the witnesses and other materials. This hearing is now adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 11:07 a.m., the Committee was adjourned.]

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

I was nominated to serve as a United States District Judge for the Southern District of Texas by President Obama on September 8, 2011, and I was confirmed by the Senate on April 26, 2012. As a United States District Judge, I have the authority to preside over civil and criminal matters filed in or removed to the Southern District of Texas.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

I have presided over nine cases that have gone to verdict or judgment.

jury trials: 78%

bench trials:	23%
civil proceedings:	67%
criminal proceedings:	33%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

See attached list.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

1. Gaalla et al. v. Citizens Medical Ctr. et al., No. Cv. V-10-14. For opinion dismissing board members on legislative immunity grounds, see 2012 WL 2870701. For opinion denying plaintiff's motion to file amended complaint, see 2012 WL 3205634. For opinion granting in part and denying in part hospital administrator's motion for summary judgment, see 2013 WL 66250.

Three cardiologists of Indian origin brought suit against a county-owned hospital alleging various actions of discrimination. The case was transferred to me after the Fifth Circuit remanded the case in an interlocutory appeal. Based on the Fifth Circuit opinion, I then granted summary judgment in favor of the hospital board members on legislative immunity grounds and granted in part and denied in part a summary judgment motion filed by the hospital administrator who had asserted a qualified immunity defense. A couple of weeks prior to the scheduled January 2013 trial, the case settled for the publicly disclosed amount of $8 million.

2. Coates v. Brazoria County et al., No. Civ. G-10-71. For order denying motion to disqualify counsel, see 2012 WL 2568129; for order dismissing Juvenile Board, see 894 F. Supp. 2d 966 (2012); for order granting in part and denying in part Brazoria County's summary judgment motion, see 2012 WL 6160678; for Order denying motion to certify interlocutory appeal, see 919 F. Supp. 2d 863 (2013).

Two former employees of the Brazoria County Juvenile Board sued a former county court judge, the Juvenile Board, and the County asserting section 1983 and Title VII claims based on allegations that the judge sexually harassed them and that they were fired in retaliation for reporting the harassment. The case had been pending for more than two years when it was transferred to me. Plaintiffs had recently filed an amended complaint adding the Juvenile Board as a new defendant. I denied a motion seeking disqualification of the Juvenile Board's counsel; granted the Juvenile Board's motion to dismiss based on a finding that the entity did not have the capacity to sue or be sued under Texas law; and then granted in part and denied in part the County's motion for summary judgment on the section 1983 claims. These rulings required a legal determination of whether the Juvenile Board is a state or local entity and whether it is a final policymaker for the county over employment decisions and policies. The case settled pursuant to a Rule 68 offer of judgment for $750,000 the weekend before trial.

3. United States v. Baker, No. Cr. G-11-8.

I presided over a bench trial in this child pornography case. This case arose when German police recorded the IP addresses of individuals making film clips available on a file-sharing network. German authorities referred the information to the ICE Cyber Crime Center. Summons served on the service provider identified the defendant as the user of three IP addresses used to make files available on the network. After execution of a search warrant, ICE authorities recovered computers containing more than 6,000 still images and 60 video clips containing child pornography. I found the defendant guilty on all three charged counts: receipt of child pornography; possession of pornography; and access with intent to view child pornography. In December 2012, I sentenced defendant Baker to a prison term of 132 months.

4. United States v. DeLeon, No. Cr. L-12-560-2.

I presided over a trial in the Laredo Division given the volume of criminal filings there. This case arose out of the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force's "Operation El Patron," which investigated a drug trafficking conspiracy that transported drugs and money from Mexico to Atlanta, Georgia, with Laredo, Texas serving as the place where the contraband crossed the border. After a three day trial in which the primary evidence came from cooperating codefendants and transcripts from wire taps, the jury convicted DeLeon of conspiring to possess with intent to distribute at least five kilograms of cocaine, conspiring to engage in money laundering, and two substantive drug offenses. The jury acquitted DeLeon on a substantive charge of international money laundering. Sentencing is set for March 7, 2014.

5. Luu v. International Inv. Trade & Serv. Group, No. Cv. G-11-182. For Order granting the defendant's motion to withdraw admissions and denying summary judgment, see 2012 WL 2450773.

More than fifty Vietnamese laborers who travelled to the United States to work as welders, filed suit against Vietnamese companies they contend engaged in an international human trafficking conspiracy. Plaintiffs assert claims under the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2005, the 13th Amendment, and the Alien Tort Claims Act. The plaintiffs sought summary judgment on the ground that the Vietnamese defendant had failed to respond to requests for admissions. I denied that request and ruled that the deemed admissions should be withdrawn because, among other things, the defendant did not have American counsel at the time, uncertainty existed concerning whether service of the requests was proper, and summary judgment on that basis would prevent any presentation on the merits of the dispute. Trial is currently set for May 2014.

6. Anderson v. BNSF Railway, No. Cv. G-11-270.

I presided over a jury trial in this Federal Employers Liability Act case. Anderson alleged that he was injured while pulling pins on railcars because BNSF Railway did not maintain a safe rail yard. The central dispute between the experts who testified concerned whether the ballast in the rail yard was properly balanced. After a four-day trial, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant finding no negligence.

7. Bear Ranch LLC v. HeartBrand Beef, Inc. No. Cv. V-12-14. For opinion denying motion to intervene, see 286 F.R.D. 313 (2012); for opinion granting leave to amend, see 2013 WL 4520425; for opinion on motion to dismiss, see 2013 WL 6190253.

Defendant HeartBrand claims to be the sole source for Akaushi beef in the United States. When it sells the cattle to the ranches, it includes a number of provisions requiring the registration of any offspring and restricting the sale of Akaushi semen. Bear Ranch, one of the ranches that had purchased Akaushi cattle from HeartBrand, filed suit alleging that the restrictions violate federal antitrust and Texas contract law. I denied a motion by another ranch to intervene and then granted plaintiff's motion to file an amended complaint. After the filing of the amended complaint, I then granted in part and denied in part a motion to dismiss claims in the amended complaint. I dismissed the claim seeking a declaratory judgment that the contractual restrictions on breeding and sales were void as a result of fraudulent inducement, concluding that such relief would amount to an impermissible partial rescission under Texas law. I denied the motion to dismiss the claim for damages resulting from any fraudulent inducement, finding that the plaintiff had sufficiently pleaded that it overpaid for the cattle as a result of the alleged misrepresentations. Trial is currently set for April 2014.

8. Blythe v. Bumbo International Trust, No. Cv. V-12-36. For opinion granting in part and denying in part motion for summary judgment, see 2013 WL 6190284.

This is a products liability case involving the Bumbo Baby Seat, which has been subject to separate recalls by the Consumer Products Safety Commission. Parents of an infant allegedly injured while sitting in the seat on a counter brought suit against Bumbo, the manufacturer, and Target, which sold the seat. I granted the defendant's motion on summary judgment on the marketing defect claim, finding that the warning used after the 2007 recall were sufficient as a matter of law. I denied summary judgment on the design defect claim, the gross negligence claims, and on the question whether Target had actual knowledge of the defect which would support an exclusion from the Texas statute immunizing nonmanufacturing sellers in products liability cases. I then presided over a six-day trial in Victoria. The jury returned a verdict finding no liability on the part of the defendants.

Nonprofit organizations that engage in voter registration activities sued the Texas Secretary of State and Galveston County Registrar challenging eight Texas statutes governing voter registration activities. I issued a preliminary injunction enjoining enforcement of five of the eight challenged provisions on either preemption or First Amendment grounds. The opinion also addressed the defendants' arguments that plaintiffs lacked standing to sue them. In a 2-1 decision, the Fifth Circuit stayed my order pending appeal. In a 2-1 decision by a different panel, the Fifth Circuit vacated the injunction.

10. Washington v. La Marque Independent School District, No. G-12-154. For opinion denying motion to remand and consolidating cases, see 2012 WL 5289682. For opinion granting former District Attorney Sistrunk's motion to dismiss and granting in part and denying in part La Marque ISD's motion for summary judgment, see 930 F. Supp. 2d 790. For opinion denying La Marque ISD's motion for reconsideration on the one claim that survived its summary judgment motion, see 2013 WL 2323122.

The former chief of police for the La Marque School District sued the district, members of the school board, and the former Galveston County District Attorney in two separate lawsuits. The suits raised various constitutional, statutory and tort claims arising out of the termination of Washington based on criminal charges brought against him that were later dismissed. I denied Washington's motion to remand one of the lawsuits to state court and consolidated the cases. I then granted former District Attorney Sistrunk's motion to dismiss on immunity grounds and granted in part and denied in part the school district's motion for summary judgment on due process claims.

- e. Provide a list of all cases in which certiorari was requested or granted.

I am not aware of any case of mine in which certiorari was requested or granted. In Voting for America v. Andrade, No. G-12-44, the plaintiffs filed an application with the Supreme Court seeking to lift the Fifth Circuit's stay. The Supreme Court denied the application, with Justice Sotomayor dissenting. 133 S. Ct. 99 (Sept. 25, 2012).

- f. Provide a brief summary of and citations for all of your opinions where your decisions were reversed by a reviewing court or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Voting for America v. Andrade, 888 F. Supp. 2d 816 (S.D. Tex. 2012), stay granted by 488 Fed. Appx. 890 (5th Cir. Sept. 26, 2012), rev'd 732 F.3d 382 (5th Cir. 2013). In a 2-1 decision, the Fifth Circuit stayed the preliminary injunction I issued in the Voting for America case and then later vacated that injunction. The court of appeals disagreed that voter registration activity was governed by the Supreme Court decisions on petition activity for ballot initiatives, held that the Texas law governing compensation for participants in voter registration drives could be given a narrowing construction, and concluded that the National Voter Registration Act did not preempt two Texas statutes.

Baker v. Cage, 2012 WL 4486273, rev'd, In re Whitley, 2013 WL 6596790 (5th Cir. Dec. 16, 2013). The Fifth Circuit reversed my decision affirming an order of the bankruptcy court that had required a debtor's counsel to return real estate he had received from the debtor but failed to disclose to the bankruptcy court. The court of appeals held that the bankruptcy court improperly relied on a provision of the bankruptcy code regulating excessive attorney compensation as opposed to the provision allowing sanctions against an attorney who violates disclosure requirements and remanded the case to the bankruptcy court where findings could be made concerning the latter.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

I file all my decisions with the federal judiciary's CM/ECF system, which makes all written decisions available to the public online. Westlaw and Lexis have published most of my substantive (i.e., non-scheduling) rulings on their websites.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

Voting for America v. Andrade, 888 F. Supp. 2d 816, stay granted, 488 Fed. Appx. 890 (5th Cir. Sept. 26, 2012), rev'd 732 F.3d 382 (5th Cir. 2013).

Washington v. Burley, 930 F. Supp. 2d 790 (2013).

De La Garza v. Brumby, 2013 WL 754260 (2013)

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

The United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas has an automated conflict check system. I list in that system the names of companies in which I hold stock and the names of any family members and close friends whom I have concluded should not appear before me. I recused myself sua sponte in the following cases, all of which were flagged by the automated conflict check system:

16. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

- a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

From August 1999 through July 2000, I served as a law clerk to Judge A. Raymond Randolph, United States Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit.

From July 2001 through July 2002, I served as a law clerk to Chief Justice William Rehnquist, Supreme Court of the United States.

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I have not practiced alone.

- iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have never served as a mediator or arbitrator.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

As a Bristow Fellow, I authored numerous briefs in opposition to petitions for certiorari, recommended to the Solicitor General whether the United States should appeal adverse district court decisions, assisted permanent office attorneys with drafting Supreme Court merit briefs and preparing for oral arguments, and argued an appeal in the Seventh Circuit.

During summer 2002, I returned to Texas and joined the Houston office of Weil Gotshal as an associate. I had primary day-to-day responsibility for civil litigation matters including intellectual property litigation, class actions, international arbitration, bankruptcy litigation and general commercial disputes. I also worked on appellate matters and a number of pro bono cases.

In early 2005 I joined the Houston United States Attorney's Office as an Assistant United States Attorney and worked there until I was appointed to be a United States District Judge in 2012. I worked in the Major Offenders and Major Fraud sections of the office, investigating and prosecuting criminal matters in the following areas: mortgage fraud, investment fraud, securities fraud, government benefit fraud, public corruption, importation of counterfeit products, internet fraud, child pornography, human smuggling, hostage taking, postal crimes, and narcotics and firearms violations. I also handled numerous appellate matters and argued six cases in the Fifth Circuit.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

When working in private practice at Weil Gotshal, the typical clients I represented were corporations involved in complex civil litigation. In pro bono matters I handled during that time, I represented a defendant in a criminal case and a nonprofit organization in constitutional litigation.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, I represented the United States in criminal prosecutions.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts | 90% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 10% |
| 3. other courts: | |
| 4. administrative agencies: | |

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 25% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 75% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

Seventeen (this includes two cases that were tried twice because the jury hung on some counts). I tried all of these cases as an Assistant United States Attorney. Two prosecutors typically handle a trial and evenly split the witnesses and jury addresses. (I may have tried one or two cases to magistrate judges in cases from the misdemeanor civil violations bureau docket, but I do not recall the specific cases and did not include those cases in the number of trials listed here.)

- i. What percentage of these trials were:

- | | |
|-------------|------|
| 1. jury: | 100% |
| 2. nonjury: | 0% |

- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

As a Bristow Fellow in the Solicitor General's office, I drafted numerous responses to petitions for certiorari. The only one I recall by name is United States v. Dusenberry, 534 U.S. 161 (2002), because the Supreme Court granted the petition in that case. Copy supplied.

I also recall providing research and other assistance to permanent office attorneys for the merits briefs filed in the following cases: Indianapolis v. Edmond, 531 U.S. 32 (2000); TrafFix Devices, Inc. v. Marketing Displays, Inc., 532 U.S. 23 (2001); Circuit City Stores, Inc. v. Adams, 532 U.S. 105 (2001); and Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001).

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:
- a. the date of representation;
 - b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
 - c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.
1. United States v. Stanford, et al., No. H-09-242 (S.D. Tex.); Judge David Hittner. Court of Appeals decisions relating to Stanford's pretrial detention are reported at 2011 WL 867057, 395 Fed. App'x 72, 367 Fed. App'x 507, and 341 Fed App'x 979.

I was co-lead counsel for the United States in the prosecution of Stanford, other Stanford Financial Group executives, and the former head of the Antiguan Financial Services Regulatory Commission. The indictment alleged that the defendants engaged in a $7 billion investment fraud relating to the sale of certificate of deposits by Antiguan-based Stanford International Bank. I was involved in all aspects of the case including trying the case; working with foreign governments to extradite a defendant, obtain evidence and freeze over $300 million in foreign bank accounts; and briefing four Fifth Circuit appeals and arguing the one in which oral argument was held. The CFO of Stanford Financial Group pled guilty. A jury found Stanford guilty on thirteen of fourteen counts after a seven-week trial. After I was appointed to the bench, Stanford was sentenced to a 110-year term of imprisonment, and the three remaining defendants, who had been awaiting trial, were convicted and sentenced to prison terms.

2. United States v. Barnes, et al., No. H-10-787 (S.D. Tex.); Judge Sim Lake.

This case involved an alleged $80 million dollar kickback and international money laundering scheme relating to the shipment of oil from Venezuela to a Houston area refinery. Barnes, who was the Marine Chartering Manager for LyondellBassell's Houston refinery, pled guilty to receiving more than $20 million in kickbacks from oil traders in exchange for agreeing to pay inflated prices for the shipping that the traders were arranging through companies they controlled. Barnes subsequently cooperated with the government and was sentenced to a seven-year prison term. Two of the oil traders plead guilty and were sentenced to terms of 54 and 66 months. The investigation in this case involved obtaining evidence from authorities in Switzerland, France and the British Virgin Islands. We also obtained forfeiture of approximately $25 million of the fraud proceeds.

3. United States v. Curtis, et al., No. H-08-323 (S.D. Tex.); Judge Nancy Atlas. The Court of Appeals decision affirming the convictions and sentences is available at 2011 WL 846703 (5th Cir. 2011).

This case involved nine defendants charged with conspiring to commit mortgage fraud in the Montrose neighborhood of Houston. The organizer of the scheme, Curtis, used his supposed investment company CLC Holdings to receive large profits from the sale of homes in which straw buyers were used to pay inflated amounts for the home. Some of the loan applicants used children's social security numbers, which were purchased from a Houston "credit repair" business. Eight of the defendants, including two mortgage brokers and the owner of the credit repair business, pled guilty and were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. Curtis went to trial and a jury convicted him of conspiracy, wire fraud, and aggravated identity theft. Judge Atlas sentenced Curtis to twelve years in prison. I worked with the Secret Service in investigating the case, presented the case to the grand jury, negotiated the plea agreements of the eight defendants who pled guilty, and, along with a colleague, tried the case against Curtis.

The defendant, who had a company that serviced government contracts, imported counterfeit Cisco products from China which he intended to supply to the Marine Corps in Iraq. After a hung jury resulted in a mistrial of the first trial, a jury convicted the defendant of trafficking in goods with counterfeit trademarks, and he was sentenced to a fifty-one month prison term. I worked with ICE in the initial stages of this investigation, another AUSA completed the investigation and obtained an indictment in the case, and I then tried the case with the other AUSA.

I managed the investigation and prosecution of these two defendants charged with creating a fraudulent Salvation Army website shortly after Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast, which falsely purported to collect donations for hurricane victims. Hundreds of individuals across the country donated to the website before it was shut down. To disguise their involvement with the website, the brothers used stolen identities, including Social Security numbers, to register the various PayPal accounts they used to collect money donated through the website. A jury convicted both defendants of conspiracy, wire fraud and aggravated identity theft. One defendant received a sentence of 111 months and the other received a sentence of 105 months.

6. United States v. Trevino, et al., H-07-664 (S.D. Tex.); Judge Randy Crane.

This public corruption case involved tens of thousands of dollars paid in bribes to the City Manager and Director of Parks and Recreation for the City of Mission, Texas. The contractors paid the bribes in exchange for favorable treatment in the awarding of contracts for debris and sludge removal, the construction of a skateboard park, expansion of a city pool and the painting of a downtown parking lot. The case arose from a longstanding FBI undercover investigation in the Rio Grande Valley which another AUSA oversaw. I handled the prosecution of the two public officials and two contractors charged in this case. All four defendants pled guilty. The two public officials and one of the contractors were sentenced to various prison terms; the other contractor received a sentence of probation based on his cooperation.

7. United States v. Speezia, H-07-31 (S.D. Tex.); Judge Ewing Werlein, Jr.

The defendant was associated with a human smuggling organization in Houston. A meeting was arranged at a gas station at which the smugglers planned to seek payment from the brother of one of the Mexican nationals who had been brought from the border to Houston. Upon learning that the brother did not have the smuggling fee, the defendant and others kidnapped him at gun point and took him to a motel room in the Houston area. Over the next few days, the defendant and his associates called relatives of the hostage and demanded payment of the smuggling fee, which they kept increasing. During the calls, the defendant tortured the hostage by, among other things, burning his forearms with an iron and hammering his toenails. The jury convicted the defendant of conspiracy, alien smuggling, and hostage taking. The defendant was sentenced to a 25-year prison term. Another AUSA investigated and charged the case. I joined him to prepare and try the case and then I handled the sentencing hearing.

A Houston lawyer and her legal assistant were charged with engaging in a complex visa fraud scheme. The fraud involved, among other things, intracompany transfer visas, which allow a foreign citizen to work in the United States as an executive at a foreign company's American subsidiary and can serve as a basis for permanent residence status. Chinese nationals paid large sums, up to $60,000 each, to obtain such visas under fraudulent pretenses. The defendants created legal documents, such as stock certificates and Board of Director minutes, falsely showing that Chinese companies had purchased American subsidiaries, which they submitted to support the fraudulent visa applications. Defendant Huang, the attorney, was convicted of conspiracy and four counts of visa fraud and sentenced to fifty-one months in prison. Defendant Liu was convicted of one count of visa fraud, acquitted on the other counts, and sentenced to eighteen months in prison. This case was reassigned to me after it was charged. I then prepared and tried the case with another AUSA, handled the sentencing hearings, and argued Liu's appeal.

9. Canatxx Energy Ventures, Inc. v. General Electric Capital Corp., Case No. H-09-4425 (S.D. Tex.); Judge Kenneth Hoyt. The Fifth Circuit decision reversing the judgment and rendering judgment in favor of GE Capital is at 2008 WL 4601691 (5th Cir. 2008).

My firm represented GE Capital in this lawsuit concerning the termination of a power plant project. Canatxx was the project developer and signed a Dissolution Agreement with GE Power Systems in which the parties agreed to terminate the joint venture to build power plants. Canatxx then filed suit against GE Capital, which was a financial advisor on the project, raising state-law claims of breach of fiduciary duty, unfair competition fraud, and civil conspiracy. During the time I was involved in the case, I drafted the motions, argued at a court hearing, and managed discovery, including attending depositions in London. After I left my firm, another firm was hired to try the case. A jury returned a verdict of favor of Canatxx, but the Fifth Circuit reversed and rendered judgment in favor of GE Capital based on its holding that the Dissolution Agreement also applied to affiliates of GE Power Systems, which included GE Capital.

My firm represented the speaker of the New York assembly in litigation against Governor Pataki related to disputes over the budget process in New York. The two related cases reached the New York Court of Appeals, which ruled 5-2 in favor of the Governor. I had significant involvement in crafting the arguments and drafting the briefs in both the intermediate appellate courts and in the New York Court of Appeals.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

While an associate at Weil Gotshal, in addition to the litigation I handled, I was involved in one antitrust counseling matter.

As an Assistant United States Attorney, in addition to prosecuting cases, I served as the Deputy International Affairs Coordinator for the United States Attorney's Office. In that capacity, I helped coordinate incoming and outgoing requests for foreign evidence gathering under Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties with numerous countries. In addition to this oversight role, I personally handled such requests on behalf of the governments of Malaysia, Turkey, Colombia, Lithuania, Greece, France, the United Kingdom, Trinidad and Tobago, Ireland, Norway, and Brazil. I also handled and provided guidance to other AUSAs on extradition matters.

I also served as the Hurricane Fraud Coordinator for the Southern District of Texas, a position created in 2005 after Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. I coordinated a multi-agency task force that investigated fraud cases relating to Hurricanes Katrina, Rita, and Ike. The United States Attorney's Office prosecuted more than 100 individuals for fraud relating to the hurricanes, including government-benefit fraud, identity theft offenses, charitable fraud, and investment fraud.

In addition, the Deputy Attorney General appointed the First Assistant United States Attorney and me to serve as special prosecutors in a public corruption matter arising out of another district in which the local U.S. Attorney's Office had a conflict.

I have not performed any lobbying activities.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

During the spring semesters of 2004 and 2005, I taught Federal Jurisdiction as an adjunct professor at the University of Houston Law Center. A copy of my 2005 syllabus is supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

None.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

I have no such plans.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I do not hear cases brought by the United States Attorney's Office in which I had any participation as an AUSA. I do not preside over any cases involving the company that employs my wife. I also do not preside over cases involving the few companies in which my wife and I own stock.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would follow the recusal statutes and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, as well as other legal authority, in resolving any potential conflicts of interest. I would also consult with colleagues and with ethics officials from the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

In 2003, I assisted the NAACP Legal Defense Fund in representing Timothy Towery, who was serving an 18-year sentence as one of the 38 individuals convicted as part of the Tulia drug sting. We prepared a motion for habeas corpus relief arguing that Towery's conviction should be overturned based on the ineffective assistance of his counsel who persuaded him to plead guilty. This involved investigating the case against Towery, researching the relevant legal issues and drafting the motion. On August 23, 2003, Governor Rick Perry pardoned our client and the other Tulia defendants.

In 2004, I assisted the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law in litigation involving two events that infringed on the voting rights of Prairie View A&M students in Waller County, Texas. One case was filed against the District Attorney who had warned college students that they were not allowed to vote in Waller County despite longstanding law (reflected in both case law and opinions from the state attorney general) that college students in Texas may choose to vote either where they attend school or where their parents reside.

The second case challenged Waller County's failure to seek approval under the preclearance provisions of Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act for attempts to reduce the number of hours that were available for early voting at the polling place closest to the Prairie View campus (the 2004 primary election took place during the school's spring break, making early voting the primary vehicle for student voting). After filing complaints seeking temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions against both practices, the defendants quickly settled and agreed to alter the challenged practices.

In Fall 2004, I assisted the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law in their nonpartisan voter protection project during the 2004 general election. We attended training on possible voting rights issues and manned a Houston phone bank on Election Day with a ready-response legal team.

While an associate at Weil Gotshal, I occasionally participated in the Houston Bar Association's Legal Lines program in which citizens could call a phone bank and receive assistance with general legal problems.

In addition to working on these legal matters, I am a co-founder and current board member of the Sunflower County Freedom Project, a nonprofit educational enrichment program created by Teach for America alumni in the Mississippi Delta county where I taught from 1994 to 1996. The program, which has been in existence for more than ten years, provides rigorous after-school and summer programs that prepare students from one of the nation's poorest regions for college. Graduates of the program have attended college at prominent institutions including the University of North Carolina, LSU, Berea College, and Mississippi State.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In October 2012, an official from the White House Counsel's Office contacted me to inquire whether I was interested in being considered for one of the pending Fifth Circuit vacancies in Texas. In late November 2012, I informed the White House that I was interested. Since that time, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice and the White House Counsel's Office. On December 20, 2012, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On June 21, 2013, I met with Senator Cornyn's and Senator Cruz's Federal Judiciary Evaluation Committee. On December 16, 2013, I met with Senator Cornyn and Senator Cruz and members of their staff in Washington, D.C. On December 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate. On January 6, 2014, the President submitted my renomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

When I first began practicing law after graduation from law school in 1987, I worked as an associate at the firm of Hogan & Hartson (now Hogan Lovells). My work consisted mostly of legal research, drafting legal and factual memoranda, reviewing documents, interviewing witnesses, and drafting discovery requests and responses. A typical case on which I worked was a railroad acquisition which involved determining and acquiring railroad trackage rights.

In 1990, I moved to the law firm of Donovan Leisure Rogovin Hugel & Schiller, where I continued to work on general civil litigation matters. I drafted discovery requests and responses, assisted in preparing partners for depositions, reviewed documents, and prepared memoranda and pleadings. A typical case on which I worked included engaging in discovery practice in commercial litigation between two communications companies.

In 1991 I joined the Public Defender Service for the District of Columbia as a staff attorney. I spent eleven years representing indigent defendants charged with crimes in the District of Columbia Superior Court. During that time I was lead counsel in numerous cases, starting with the representation of juvenile respondents and progressing after a year to representing adult defendants charged with general and then more serious felonies. I tried to jury verdict numerous cases as lead counsel, including many serious felonies, such as homicide, first degree sexual assault, and kidnapping. I also spent six months in 1995 in the Appellate Division, where I wrote several appellate briefs and argued two cases before the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

I joined Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP in 2002, and returned to a general civil litigation practice, with a concentration in antitrust class actions. I have also represented clients in governmental investigations. In the over ten years that I have been at the firm, I have been part of a lead counsel trial team in four jury trials in federal courts, three of which resulted in favorable verdicts for our clients, and one of which was settled mid-trial. I have also been part of a team that successfully represented a corporate client at a binding arbitration in 2011.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

During the first three years after graduating from law school, my typical clients were large companies involved in civil litigation or regulatory matters.

After joining the Public Defender Service in 1991, I focused exclusively on criminal defense work, mostly at the trial level, and I also handled two appeals as primary counsel. My clients were all indigent individuals who were charged with criminal offenses in the District of Columbia Superior Court. During the last six years of my time at the Public Defender Service, my cases were almost exclusively homicides, first degree sexual offenses, and complex matters such as blackmail and conspiracy cases.

Since joining Boies, Schiller & Flexner, my practice has focused on general civil litigation, including defending banking clients in class action lawsuits and contract disputes, as well as representing class plaintiffs in antitrust class action litigation in various federal courts. I have also represented several corporate clients in governmental and internal investigations.

More than 90% of my practice has been devoted to litigation. I have done some investigatory or advisory work for several clients, but the majority of my career has been as a litigator, in both criminal and civil cases.

During the first three years of my career, I appeared in court rarely, although I represented an individual seeking political asylum in an evidentiary hearing before an Immigration Judge.

While at the Public Defender Service, I appeared in court on a daily basis, often on multiple matters before different judges.

Since joining Boies, Schiller & Flexner, I have appeared in federal courts regularly, including being part of a lead trial counsel team in four jury trials in federal court. I have also appeared in state courts occasionally, including D.C. Superior Court. In the last eleven years, I have appeared in court between four to ten times per year, including status conferences, motions hearings, pre-trial conferences, and jury trials.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. federal courts:	48%
2. state courts of record:	50%
3. other courts:	0%
4. administrative agencies:	2%

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

1. civil proceedings:	50%
2. criminal proceedings:	50%

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried approximately 40 to 45 cases to verdict or final decision over the course of my entire career, the vast majority during my employment with the D.C. Public Defender Service. Since joining Boies, Schiller & Flexner, I have been part of a lead trial team in three cases which were tried to jury verdict and one case, for injunctive relief, that was tried to final decision.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 - 1. jury: 95%
 - 2. non-jury: 5%
- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have been on the brief in the following matters, although I was not the primary author in any matter:

Columbia Iron & Metal Co. v. Lincoln Elec. Co., 129 S. Ct. 1673 (2009) (Brief in Opposition, 2009 WL 526998).

Gillard v. Mitchell, Warden, 2006 WL 3425192 (Petition for Writ of Certiorari); 2007 WL 978481 (Petition for Rehearing); 2007 WL 407763 (Reply Brief in Support of Petition for a Writ of Certiorari).

Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. Members of New York State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105 (1991), 1991 U.S. S. Ct. Briefs LEXIS 972 (Amicus Brief).

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. In re Vitamin C Antitrust Litigation, Case No. 1:06-md-01738-BMC-JO (E.D.N.Y.) (Judge Brian Cogan, presiding).

Since 2005, I have been a member of the team representing class plaintiffs, who are bulk purchasers of Vitamin C. The case, filed in January 2005, was the first ever antitrust trial against Chinese companies held in the United States, and took seven years from the filing of the complaint to jury verdict. The case was also notable because for the first time, the Chinese government entered an appearance in a United States Court to argue that the defendants' actions were mandated by the Chinese government. Judge Cogan denied defendants' motions to dismiss and for summary judgment, ruling that Chinese law did not compel the defendants' actions, but allowed the defendants to present a compulsion defense which was rejected by the jury. After a three-week trial, class plaintiffs won a $54.1 million verdict – subject to trebling – on March 14, 2013. We continue to represent class plaintiffs in defendant's appeal of the verdict, as well as in efforts to enforce the judgment.

From April 2011 to July 2011, I led a team on behalf of Vensure Federal Credit Union in a challenge to the National Credit Union Administration's (NCUA) decision to place the credit union in receivership on the basis of the credit union's provision of automated clearinghouse services to member clients that processed payments for online poker companies. Plaintiff Vensure filed a complaint and request for injunctive relief, which was followed by an initial hearing on the request for injunctive relief, which was denied. After extensive briefing, and an evidentiary hearing at which both sides presented witnesses, the court, in a July ruling and opinion, upheld the NCUA's decision to place Vensure into receivership.

3. In re Scrap Metal Antitrust Litigation, Case No. 1:02-844 (N.D. Ohio) (Judge Kathleen O'Malley, presiding), 527 F.3d 517 (6th Cir. 2008).

From late 2002 to the present, I have been part of a team representing class plaintiffs, sellers of scrap metal in northeastern Ohio, who brought antitrust claims against scrap metal dealers in northeastern Ohio, alleging that the dealers had rigged bids and allocated markets for scrap metal, causing plaintiffs to receive lower prices for their scrap metal. Several of the defendants had pleaded guilty in a parallel criminal investigation by the United States Department of Justice. After a three-week trial in February 2004, the jury returned a verdict in favor of class plaintiffs for $11.5 million, pre-trebling, against one defendant. We represented class plaintiffs through the ensuing post-trial litigation, and on appeals filed by the defendant in the Sixth Circuit, and the U.S. Supreme Court, all of which were denied. We continue to represent the class plaintiffs in efforts to collect the judgment and distribute the proceeds.

(Judge Anne Thompson, presiding).

From late 2008 to March 2009, I was part of a team that represented the owners of Floorgraphics in a case alleging tortious interference with contractual relations and interference with business relationship and prospective contractual relations against News America. Floorgraphics claimed that, beginning in or around 1999, the News America defendants commenced a deliberate and malicious campaign to destroy Floorgraphics so that it could control, among other things, the floor advertising market. After several days of jury trial before U.S. District Judge Anne Thompson in March 2009, the case was settled at the close of the plaintiff's case.

5. In Re Vitamins Antitrust Litigation, MDL No. 1285, Case. No. 99-197 (D.D.C)
(Judge Thomas Hogan, presiding).

From October 2002 to July 2003, I was a member of the trial team that represented class plaintiffs, bulk purchasers of the vitamin supplement choline chloride, in a trial of antitrust claims against choline chloride manufacturers. The trial represented the culmination of a long investigation and prosecution of a world-wide vitamins cartel, in which the European Union and the Department of Justice prosecuted and fined several vitamin manufacturers and their employees for fixing prices. After multiple settlements, the case proceeded to trial against the two remaining defendants: Mitsui Co., Inc. and DCV, Inc. The jury returned a verdict of $53 million – subject to trebling – for the class plaintiffs. The case was the only one to proceed to trial and represented a historic recovery on behalf of hundreds of class members who had been damaged by paying higher prices as a result of the collusion.

6. United States v. Greer, No. F-7528-94, (D.C. Superior Court) (Judge Brooke Hedge, presiding), rev'd, 697 A.2d 1207 (D.C. 1997).

In 1996, while at the Public Defender Service, I represented Mr. Greer at trial in D.C. Superior Court. Mr. Greer was charged with and convicted of drug distribution. At trial, I requested an instruction that the absence of evidence can be considered in determining whether guilt has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. The court refused to give the instruction and on appeal, which was briefed and argued by the Appellate Division of the Public Defender Service, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals reversed the conviction, reaffirming the principle that reasonable doubt may be based on the absence of evidence. This case, which is frequently cited, is now part of the training for all new attorneys at the Public Defender Service.

7. United States v. Gervacia, No. F 8649-97 (D.C. Superior Court) (Judge Mary Ellen Abrecht, presiding).

In 1986, I represented Mr. Gervacia on charges of first degree sexual assault. At trial, the government introduced DNA and expert evidence linking Mr. Gervacia to the sexual assault. At trial, I cross-examined the government's DNA expert extensively about the potential unreliability of the source and composition of the DNA databases in light of the fact that both parties came from a geographic area with a relatively homogenous population. Mr. Gervacia was subsequently acquitted.

I represented Mr. Coleman on charges of arson and malicious destruction of property in November 1997. At trial, Mr. Coleman's sister stated on cross-examination that Mr. Coleman had set fires before. After my request for a mistrial was denied, I requested that the trial judge give the jury an immediate limiting instruction, due to the prejudicial nature of the witness' statement. The trial judge refused, although he did give a corrective instruction the next day at the close of the prosecution's case. The jury acquitted Mr. Coleman of arson but convicted him of malicious destruction of property. On appeal, the D.C. Court of Appeals reversed the conviction, holding that the trial court should have given an immediate cautionary instruction, and that failure to do so was reversible error. On remand, the government entered a nolle prosequi and the case was dismissed.

9. United States v. Smith, No. 95-CO-1523 (D.C. Superior Court) (Judge Henry Greene, presiding), 685 A.2d 380 (D.C. 1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 856 (1997).

While at the Public Defender Service, I represented Ms. Smith in 1995 in D.C. Superior Court. Ms. Smith was charged with several counts of stalking, blackmail, and threats. This case was significant because it was one of the first cases to be brought under the D.C. stalking law and was the first blackmail case to be tried in the District of Columbia in at least 20 years. The defense challenged the D.C. stalking statute on constitutional grounds, and after lengthy motions practice, the court granted the defense motions to dismiss. We proceeded to trial on the remaining counts and Ms. Smith was found not guilty on all charges except for one blackmail count, on which the jury was deadlocked. The government appealed the dismissal of the stalking charges, and the Court of Appeals reversed the dismissal and reinstated the charges. Ms. Smith eventually pled guilty to one misdemeanor charge.

10. Turner v. Bayly, No. 95-SP-1170 (D.C. Superior Court) (Judge John Bayly, presiding), petition for writ of mandamus granted, 673 A.2d 596 (D.C. 1996).

In January 1996, I represented Mr. English on a charge of misdemeanor threats. The D.C. City Council had enacted legislation that made misdemeanors punishable by more than 180 days in jail eligible for trial by jury. The offense of misdemeanor threats was punishable by up to six months in jail. On the day of trial, I therefore requested that Mr. English be tried by jury, on the grounds that an offense punishable by up to six months carried a maximum penalty of more than 180 days in jail – a position with which the U.S. Attorney’s Office agreed. The judge ruled that the charge was ineligible for jury trial and refused to postpone the trial to allow the defense to seek interlocutory appeal. Along with two other similarly situated defendants, and with the assistance of co-counsel from the Public Defender Service, I sought a stay of trial and a writ of mandamus from the D.C. Court of Appeals directing the court to impanel a jury to hear the case. The Court of Appeals granted the stay and, after briefing and oral argument, granted the writ and ordered that Mr. English be tried by jury. I represented Mr. English at trial, at which he was acquitted.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

In 2007, I represented a major corporate client in a grand jury investigation of alleged false statements to a governmental agency investigating environmental violations, in which my client produced hundreds of thousands of documents and in which several current and former employees testified before the grand jury. After a lengthy investigation, the Department of Justice closed the matter and decided not to pursue criminal charges against our client. I prepared and represented the client employees who testified before the grand jury and participated in meetings with the prosecutors from the Department of Justice in which we set forth our client's position.

I have participated in an internal investigation for a corporate client into possible leaks of secret and sensitive material to Chinese nationals. As part of that investigation, I conducted internal interviews of client employees and met with FBI agents regarding their investigation into the matter. The case did not result to my knowledge in the prosecution of any employee of the client or any finding that the client had violated any laws or regulations

I have not performed any lobbying activities.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In January 2013, I was guest faculty at the Harvard Law School Trial Advocacy Workshop for one week. I participated in student exercises and critiqued mock trials and exercises over the course of the week. No syllabus available.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

Since joining the firm, I have invested in a 401(k) plan administered by Fidelity Investments. I also have a 401(a) account administered by ING from my employment with the D.C. Public Defender Service.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, I do not have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during my service with the court.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

If confirmed, I would recuse myself from any matter being handled by Boies, Schiller & Flexner or in any case in which they were a party for a reasonable period of time. I would continue to recuse myself from such matters until there were no longer any potential conflicts of interest. Even after that time, I would advise the parties that I had been a partner at Boies, Schiller & Flexner were that firm to appear before me. In addition, cases involving former clients could present potential conflicts of interest. In the event of such a potential conflict, I would advise the parties of the potential conflict and seek their input, and refer to the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and other relevant canons and/or treatises. I would also evaluate any other real or potential conflict, or relationship that could give rise to the appearance of conflict, on a case by case basis and determine appropriate action with the advice of parties and their counsel, including recusal where necessary.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

If faced with a potential conflict of interest, I would advise the parties in the matter before me of the potential conflict and seek their input, and refer to 28 U.S.C. § 455, Canon 3 of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, as well as any other applicable canons, rules, and statutes.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

During the first three years of my career, while at Hogan & Hartson, I represented, on a pro bono basis and along with another associate, an individual from El Salvador who was applying for political asylum. After a hearing before an Immigration Judge, the client's petition for asylum based on a fear of political persecution was granted and he was permitted to remain in the United States.

Since leaving the Public Defender Service in 2002, I have handled, on my own, two pro bono cases, one for an individual charged with a misdemeanor in D.C. Superior Court, and one for a small business in a contract dispute. In the criminal matter, I made court appearances and negotiated a plea deal. In the contract dispute, I reviewed documents and worked with the client to prepare a demand letter to assist in negotiations.

Currently, I coordinate and supervise my office's pro bono program, which involves assigning associates to represent clients through the D.C. Bar Advocacy and Justice Clinic, which sends cases involving disadvantaged and low-income clients to associates in our office. I supervise the associates in their work on these cases, which includes assessing and assigning the cases, meeting with them and their clients, accompanying them to court when necessary, reviewing all pleadings and other written submissions, and developing strategy. I have supervised associates working on the following cases in the last two and a half years:

Meyers v. Charleston Management – D.C. Superior Court

Collins v. UIP Property Management – D.C. Superior Court
 Morgan – Social Security Administration
 Keys-Coleman/Child Custody – D.C. Superior Court
 Simpson – Social Security Administration
 Vaughan-Modification of Non-Custodial Parent Visitation – D.C. Superior Court
 Hall-Domestic Violence – D.C. Superior Court
 Jefferson-Eviction Proceeding – D.C. Superior Court
Green v. Willoughby Real Estate Co. – D.C. Superior Court
 Copeland-Child Custody matter – D.C. Superior Court
Jones v. UIP Management – D.C. Superior Court
United States v. Green – U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit
Vance v. Scutt – U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

On July 17, 2013, I submitted a Judicial Candidate Questionnaire to Representative Eleanor Holmes Norton's District of Columbia Federal Law Enforcement Nominating Committee. I met with the Committee on August 7, 2013, and with Representative Norton on September 4, 2013. Since September 11, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Department of Justice Office of Legal Policy. On October 31, 2013, I met with officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On December 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate. On January 6, 2014, the President submitted my renomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

- b. The American Bar Association's Commentary to its Code of Judicial Conduct states that it is inappropriate for a judge to hold membership in any organization that invidiously discriminates on the basis of race, sex, or religion, or national origin. Indicate whether any of these organizations listed in response to 11a above currently discriminate or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies. If so, describe any action you have taken to change these policies and practices.

Neither the Westwood Racquet Club nor The Club (an academic and professional book club) initially admitted women, or, in practice, minorities. Those policies ended decades prior to my association with these institutions. To the best of my knowledge, none of the other organizations listed above currently discriminates or formerly discriminated on the basis of race, sex, religion, or national origin either through formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies.

12. Published Writings and Public Statements:

- a. List the titles, publishers, and dates of books, articles, reports, letters to the editor, editorial pieces, or other published material you have written or edited, including material published only on the Internet. Supply four (4) copies of all published material to the Committee.

- b. Supply four (4) copies of any reports, memoranda or policy statements you prepared or contributed in the preparation of on behalf of any bar association, committee, conference, or organization of which you were or are a member. - c. Supply four (4) copies of any testimony, official statements or other communications relating, in whole or in part, to matters of public policy or legal interpretation, that you have issued or provided or that others presented on your behalf to public bodies or public officials.

None.

- d. Supply four (4) copies, transcripts or recordings of all speeches or talks delivered by you, including commencement speeches, remarks, lectures, panel discussions, conferences, political speeches, and question-and-answer sessions. Include the date and place where they were delivered, and readily available press reports about the speech or talk. If you do not have a copy of the speech or a transcript or recording of your remarks, give the name and address of the group before whom the speech was given, the date of the speech, and a summary of its subject matter. If you did not speak from a prepared text, furnish a copy of any outline or notes from which you spoke.

A thorough review of my schedule and the Internet shows that I have spoken at the following events, although it is possible I have not found a record of every presentation I have made. I indicate where I have found a copy of the notes of the talks as drafted. I often change and vary the text when I make a presentation.

As an attorney and as a magistrate judge, my policy was never to comment about on-going cases or trials, though newspapers did include quotations from my in-court statements from time to time. These have not been included here. Based on my review of my files and the Internet, I have listed the interviews I have given.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

Since my May 2005 appointment by the United States district judges in the Eastern District of Virginia, I have been a United States magistrate judge. I was, without opposition, reappointed in 2013 by the Court and via the merit selection panel process.

The authority of magistrate judges is derived from the Federal Magistrate Act of 1968, 28 U.S.C.A. § 631-37 (2006 & Supp. 2012). In the Eastern District of Virginia, the magistrate judges are given substantial authority to handle a wide range of criminal and civil cases. I am “on duty” every other week, meaning I preside over all initial proceedings, including arraignments, preliminary and bail hearings, arrests and search warrants, and grand jury matters. I also preside over all federal civil matters with consent of the parties and all federal misdemeanor offenses. In the Richmond Division, I am the judge who handles the prisoner litigation. I accept felony pleas on report and recommendation.

Magistrate judges in Richmond preside over settlement conferences for the district judges and for each other. I have mediated hundreds of cases, including complex class action and patent matters. Finally, I hold court once a week as part of our Second Chance Offender Rehabilitation Effort (“SCORE”) court for offenders released from prison on probation or supervised release.

- a. Approximately how many cases have you presided over that have gone to verdict or judgment?

I have handled hundreds of civil and criminal cases. A precise number is difficult to estimate because we do not track these numbers in chambers. I average one to two jury trials per year, with my estimate being that I have presided over approximately ten jury trials. In the past year, I presided over one civil and one criminal jury trial. I have presided over a much larger number of bench trials, including misdemeanor offenses. I estimate that, on average, I preside over two to four bench trials a month, which would total approximately 150 in my time as a magistrate judge.

- i. Of these, approximately what percent were:

jury trials:	5%
bench trials:	95%
civil proceedings:	50%
criminal proceedings:	50%

- b. Provide citations for all opinions you have written, including concurrences and dissents.

See attached list.

- c. For each of the 10 most significant cases over which you presided, provide: (1) a capsule summary of the nature the case; (2) the outcome of the case; (3) the name and contact information for counsel who had a significant role in the trial of the case; and (3) the citation of the case (if reported) or the docket number and a copy of the opinion or judgment (if not reported).

While some cases had pending periods that overlap with other cases, the cases are roughly listed in reverse chronological order below:

1. United States v. Bell, No. 3:13MJ86, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

In this case, the United States charged the defendant with driving under the influence and public intoxication on Naval Support Activity South Potomac in Dahlgren, Virginia. The driving under the influence charge went to the jury and the public intoxication charge was tried by the court. The jury returned a not guilty verdict with respect to the driving under the influence charge. I returned a guilty verdict on the public intoxication charge and sentenced the defendant to pay a $240 fine and $10 special assessment.

2. Drew v. Allstate, 12CV569-JRS, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I mediated this insurance recovery case stemming from the death of a seven-month old infant while the insured babysat. The mother of the infant sued the babysitter's insurance company regarding her homeowner's insurance policy as a result of the wrongful death of the child. The mother sought to overcome the babysitter's bankruptcy for collection purposes. Allstate claimed exclusions based on the business of babysitting and the commission of a crime. The mother's employer had a lien on the recovery based on its own coverage of the baby's injuries, a matter which also had to be negotiated. The settlement was the first time the parties had seen each other since the state criminal trial. Because the settlement also resolved a wrongful death claim, the state circuit court will conduct a hearing to approve the settlement.

3. Berry v. LexisNexis Risk & Info. Analytics Grp., Inc., No. 3:11CV754-JRS, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I presided over the court's settlement of this national class action involving Fair Credit Reporting Act issues. Under this court's supervision, and with the effort of an outside mediator, two classes were formed: an injunctive class of potentially extremely high numbers (over one hundred million people), and a second class of approximately thirty-one thousand plaintiffs. At issue was the LexisNexis product "Accurint." Following the final settlement presentation in my Court, the Hon. James R. Spencer, in another hearing, granted the Motion for Preliminary Class Action Settlement and Certifying Conditional Settlement Classes. The Final Fairness Hearing occurred on December 10, 2013.

4. United States v. Currie, No. 09CR519, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

In this jury trial, the defendant was found guilty by a jury of driving under the influence at Fort Lee, a military installation that allows civilians on base to visit its regimental club for social activities. I separately made a finding of guilt as to speeding 72 miles-per-hour in a 45 miles-per-hour zone. I sentenced the defendant to two days of imprisonment, a $360 fine, and one year of supervised release with a special condition of participating in mental health treatment.

5. United States v. Mabry, No. 3:07CR28, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia (Copy supplied).

The district judges regularly refer cases in which defendants claim their attorneys have rendered ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to file an appeal when asked. I handle all of those references in our division. I hold an evidentiary hearing when parties offer opposing sworn affidavits about whether the appeal request occurred. This case involved a one-day evidentiary hearing in which Mabry, a federal inmate, alleged his lawyer provided ineffective assistance of counsel when his lawyer failed to file a notice of appeal as instructed. After conducting the evidentiary hearing, I found that Mabry did not expressly ask his lawyer to file an appeal. My Report and Recommendation recommended dismissing Mabry's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel and recommended denying his motion to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence brought pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. The District Court adopted my Report and Recommendation and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit dismissed Mabry's appeal. United States v. Mabry, No. 3:07CR28, (E.D. Va. Nov. 11, 2011) (Lauck, M.J.), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, (E.D. Va. Jan. 5, 2012) (Payne, J.), appeal dismissed, 475 F. App'x 920 (4th Cir. 2012) (Copy supplied).

6. United States v. Bacas, Violation Nos. 1516466, 2117788, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This was a bench trial wherein the United States charged the defendant with speeding at Fort Lee, Virginia. At trial, I granted the motion of the United States to dismiss one violation notice. The United States then sought to admit into evidence certificates verifying the accuracy of the tuning forks used to calibrate the radar that detected the defendant's speed. Two of the certificates were certified and two were uncertified. After reviewing the post-trial briefing I had requested, I found that the certified and uncertified certificates constituted non-testimonial admissible evidence that did not run afoul of the Confrontation Clause or the Supreme Court of the United States' decision in Melendez-Diaz. See United States v. Bacas, 662 F. Supp. 2d 481 (E.D. Va. 2009). I also found that the certified certificates constituted admissible evidence to prove the reliability of the tuning forks used to calibrate the radar device. However, I found the uncertified certificates constituted inadmissible hearsay after examining Federal Rule of Evidence 803. During the status hearing after I issued the opinion, I granted the motion by the United States to dismiss the final violation notice.

7. Lathon v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:09CV57, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This case involved a slip-and-fall personal injury action against Wal-Mart stemming from the plaintiff's slipping on an unmarked, wet floor at a Wal-Mart store in Fredericksburg, Virginia. The complaint alleged three negligence causes of action. I denied Wal-Mart's motion to dismiss and found that the individual causes of action corresponded to the duties owed by a store to its invitees as articulated by the Supreme Court of Virginia and that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(d)(2) permitted a plaintiff to plead alternative theories. Lathon v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:09CV57, 2009 WL 1172864 (E.D. Va. Apr. 29, 2009). Plaintiff's discovery efforts languished. After discovery closed, the plaintiff filed a motion to voluntarily dismiss her action without prejudice. I denied the plaintiff's motion to voluntarily dismiss without prejudice because prejudice to Wal-Mart would result but continued the trial. Lathon v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:09CV57, 2009 WL 1810006 (E.D. Va. June 24, 2009). I denied Wal-Mart's motion to exclude the plaintiff's evidence and instead imposed the less severe sanction of reasonable attorneys' fees and continuing the trial. Id. After setting a new trial date, the case settled.

8. McDonald v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:07CV425, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This was a jury trial of a slip-and-fall personal injury negligence action. A minor, by and through her parent, sued Wal-Mart alleging she sustained injuries from slipping on a plastic wrap while on Wal-Mart's premises due to its negligence. Before trial, I denied the parties' cross-motions for summary judgment due to material disputes of fact as to whether Wal-Mart created the dangerous condition that caused the child's fall. McDonald v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:07CV425, 2008 WL 153783 (E.D. Va. Jan. 14, 2008). In a second written opinion, I granted in part and denied in part Wal-Mart's motions in limine. McDonald v. Wal-Mart Stores E., LP, No. 3:07CV425, 2008 WL 153782 (E.D. Va. Jan. 14, 2008). I made several evidentiary findings, including granting plaintiff's motion to allow an adverse inference instruction as to the spoliation of the plastic wrap. At trial, the jury returned a plaintiff's verdict and an award of $30,000.

9. United States v. V.D.A., No. 3:05MJ791, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This was a bench trial involving four juvenile defendants at Fort Lee charged with conspiracy to assault a juvenile and possess a dangerous weapon, assault on a juvenile, possession of a dangerous weapon, and simple assault/resisting arrest. The record is under seal as a result of the status of the defendants. I made a finding of delinquency as to all four defendants of conspiracy to assault a juvenile and to possess a dangerous weapon, as well as assault on a juvenile. I found one juvenile delinquent by possessing a dangerous weapon and simple assault/resisting arrest. One juvenile served one year of delinquent supervision and the other three juveniles received time served and one year of delinquent supervision.

10. Bacon v. City of Richmond, No. 3:05CV425-HEH, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I have mediated this case since its inception before the Honorable Henry E. Hudson in 2005 and continue to mediate the agreed settlement. The named plaintiffs brought this claim under the Americans with Disabilities Act against the City of Richmond and its School Board regarding the inaccessibility or noncompliance of the Richmond City Public Schools ("RPS"). The complaint alleged some level of noncompliance in every Richmond City School. Through mediation, the parties eventually agreed upon a five-year implementation plan, after which RPS school buildings and grounds would be ADA compliant. The settlement, whose progress is available online through the RPS website, is now in year five of five. Since 2005, I have met with the parties at least monthly, and often more frequently, reviewing what projects at which schools should commence to fulfill the dictates of the ADA, and the settlement, in the most economically feasible manner. No project has gone forward without School Board and City approval.

Harris v. Dir., Va. Dept. of Corr., No. 3:04CV70 (E.D. Va. Feb. 27, 2006) (copy supplied), rev'd and remanded, 282 F. App'x 239 (4th Cir. 2008).

Harris sought a writ of habeas corpus under 28 U.S.C. § 2254, which I dismissed as having been filed outside the one-year statute of limitations. I found that Harris's writ of mandamus, filed in state court, did not toll the statute of limitations applicable to his writ of habeas corpus because the writ of mandamus did not qualify as a "properly filed application for State post-conviction or other collateral relief" regarding his underlying conviction. In an unpublished decision, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reversed, finding the writ of mandamus properly filed because, even though it was time barred, it followed rules and laws governing filing in a court with jurisdiction. Harris v. Dir., Va. Dept. of Corr., 282 F. App'x 239, 240, 241-42, 244 (4th Cir. 2008).

Educ. Media Co. at Va. Tech, Inc. v. Swecker, No. 3:06CV396, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 45590 (E.D. Va. Mar. 31, 2008), rev'd in part, vacated in part, and remanded, 602 F.3d 583 (4th Cir. 2010), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 646 (Nov. 29, 2010). Educ. Media Co. at Va. Tech, Inc. v. Swecker, No. 3:06CV396 (E.D. Va. Sept. 7, 2012) (on remand) (copy supplied), rev'd sub nom. Educ. Media Co. at Va. Tech, Inc. v. Insley, 731 F.3d 291 (4th Cir. 2013).

This case involved a challenge by college newspapers to two Virginia regulations restricting college publications from advertising alcoholic beverages except in reference to restaurants, and by using certain words, while forbidding other words, such as advertising "Polynesian Drinks," "Exotic Drinks," or "Speakeasy." In a case of first impression, under the test articulated in Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation v. Public Service Commission, 447 U.S. 557 (1980), I found that Virginia alcohol regulations 3 VAC 5-20-40(A) & (B)(3), were unconstitutional because neither regulation directly advanced the substantial governmental interest of reducing underage binge drinking, meaning they did not present a reasonable fit between the means and the ends of the regulatory scheme. In a two-to-one decision on de novo review, the Fourth Circuit reversed and remanded as to the second regulation, concluding that it was narrowly tailored to advance a substantial governmental interest. Educ. Media Co. at Va. Tech, Inc. v. Swecker, 602 F.3d 583 (4th Cir. 2010).

On remand, and constrained by the Fourth Circuit's decision, I found the second regulation survived an as-applied First Amendment challenge. On appeal, a new panel of the Fourth Circuit, whose only consistent member switched from writing the majority opinion to writing the sole dissent, found that the regulation failed the fourth prong of the Central Hudson test on an as-applied basis. As I had found in my first decision addressing the facial challenge, the Fourth Circuit found in this second appeal that, as applied, the regulation violated the First Amendment because it prevented the dissemination of truthful, non-misleading advertisements to the majority of readers who were older than 21 years of age.

Lucas v. Henrico Cnty. Sch. Bd., No. 3:11CV5, 2012 WL 1665428 (E.D. Va. Apr. 12, 2012), report and recommendation adopted in part and rejected in part, 2012 WL 1665427 (E.D. Va. May 11, 2012).

In this 2012 decision, where the district judge had published his 2011 adoption of my recommendations as to a motion to dismiss, I recommended granting defendant's Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings to dismiss plaintiff's remaining claims of conspiracy to retaliate in violation of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and the ADA and abuse of process. I recommended dismissal because the statute of limitations barred the plaintiff's conspiracy to retaliate claim and because the plaintiff failed to state a claim for abuse of process. I recommended denying without prejudice plaintiff's motion to amend, and made the day of oral argument on the motion for judgment on the pleadings, because the plaintiff did not attach a copy of her proposed amended complaint. The district court adopted my Report and Recommendation except with respect to the characterization of the dismissal. The district court dismissed the action with prejudice and denied the plaintiff's motion to amend with prejudice.

United States v. Brown, No. 3:08CR488-6, (E.D. Va. Jan. 3, 2013), report and recommendation accepted and adopted as modified, 2013 WL 3967335 (E.D. Va. Aug. 1, 2013), appeal docketed, No. 13-7263 (4th Cir. Aug. 6, 2013).

This case involved a one-day evidentiary hearing in which the defendant, a federal inmate, alleged his lawyer provided ineffective assistance of counsel when his lawyer failed to file a notice of appeal as instructed. After conducting the evidentiary hearing, I found that the defendant did not expressly ask his lawyer to file an appeal. My Report and Recommendation recommended dismissing the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel and recommended denying his motion to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence brought pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2255. Defendant filed objections, including objecting to the finding that the defendant pled guilty to a criminal information, instead of an indictment. The District Court accepted defendant's objection on this point only, and adopted my Report and Recommendation as modified to reflect that the defendant pled guilty to an indictment.

Ray v. Amelia Cnty. Sheriff's Office, No. 3:06CV834 (E.D. Va. Aug. 3, 2007), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, (E.D. Va. Aug. 22, 2007), vacated and remanded, 302 F. App'x 209 (4th Cir. 2008) (Copy supplied).

In an unpublished decision, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reversed a decision by the Hon. Robert E. Payne adopting my Report and Recommendation that a motion to dismiss plaintiff's Age Discrimination in Employment Act claim be granted. The underlying decision dismissed the case because plaintiff's own complaint articulated a legitimate, non-discriminatory basis for her dismissal. The Fourth Circuit vacated the District Court's order dismissing plaintiff's ADEA claim and remanded for further proceedings.

Gitter v. Cardiac & Thoracic Surgical Assoc., Ltd., 3:07CV546 (E.D. Va. July 15, 2008), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, (E.D. Va. Sept. 24, 2008), aff'd in part, vacated in part, and remanded, 338 F. App'x 348 (4th Cir. 2009), on remand, (E.D. Va. Dec. 22, 2009), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, 2010 WL 629843 (E.D. Va. Feb. 19, 2010), vacated and remanded, 419 F. App'x 365 (4th Cir. 2011) (first decision supplied).

The district judge twice adopted my Report and Recommendation granting defendants' motion for summary judgment because the parties, a doctor and hospital group, had not entered into a binding contract. The United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reversed in part twice. In the most recent decision, the issue surrounded whether the doctor could establish reasonable reliance on emails that he had been hired when he had submitted answers of questionable veracity on his credentialing application to the hospital with which he sought employment. One judge dissented to the reversal.

Sewraz v. Nguyen, No. 3:08CV90 (E.D. Va. Sept. 15, 2009), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, 2010 WL 517898 (E.D. Va. Feb. 10, 2010), vacated and remanded sub nom. Sewraz v. Long, 407 F. App'x 718 (4th Cir. 2011).

The district judge adopted my Report and Recommendation to dismiss a pro se federal inmate's action alleging numerous state law and conspiracy claims against his ex-wife, a defense attorney, and a law firm where the inmate had made conclusory allegations regarding the alleged conspiracy between his ex-wife and other defendants. Because the inmate did not meet his obligation to plead factual content to allow the court to draw reasonable inferences that an agreement or conspiracy existed, I recommended dismissal. The Fourth Circuit vacated and remanded, finding the District Court abused its discretion in dismissing the complaint.

Global Title, LLC v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., No. 3:09CV550, 2011 WL 1597446 (E.D. Va. Feb. 18, 2011), report and recommendation accepted and adopted, 788 F. Supp. 2d 453 (E.D. Va. 2011), vacated and remanded sub nom. First Tenn. Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 501 F. App'x 255 (4th Cir. 2012).

The district judge adopted my Report and Recommendation in this insurance coverage dispute stemming from a mortgage loan transaction and consequent litigation involving several parties. I recommended granting St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance Company's cross-motion for summary judgment, and granting judgment in favor of St. Paul on all counts of St. Paul's third amended counterclaim and crossclaim for declaratory judgment. I recommended that First Tennessee's claims asserted in the initial lawsuit and intervening complaint against Global Title did not trigger St. Paul's duty to defend or indemnify Global Title. The Fourth Circuit reversed, finding a possibility of coverage under the applicable insurance policy and that St. Paul was obligated to defend Global Title against First Tennessee's claims.

- g. Provide a description of the number and percentage of your decisions in which you issued an unpublished opinion and the manner in which those unpublished opinions are filed and/or stored.

As a Magistrate Judge, nearly all of my opinions are unpublished. In a few instances, a judge adopting my Report and Recommendation has published his adoption of my Report and Recommendation. I issue hundreds of orders on non-dispositive matters, including scheduling and discovery matters. I also handle some matters on a regular basis, such as finding whether a felony guilty plea is knowing and voluntary, and recommending that a district judge enter a finding of guilt. I have conducted 400 to 500 such hearings, and issued the concomitant Report and Recommendation in each.

The Eastern District adopted electronic filing in 2007, meaning that all decisions I have issued since that time can be found through the court's Case Management Electronic Filing System (CM/ECF). LEXIS and Westlaw also report many of my cases. I estimate that approximately 100 to 125 more decisions, or about five to ten percent, exist that cannot be located on LEXIS or Westlaw. These either were not captured by LEXIS or Westlaw, or they predate the Eastern District of Virginia undertaking electronic filing. These decisions are stored in the Court's hard copy files.

- h. Provide citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, provide copies of the opinions.

I list below, in reverse chronological order, five significant decisions on constitutional matters:

Joyner v. O'Neal, No. 3:10CV406, 2012 WL 560199 (E.D. Va. Feb. 21, 2012)

Bond v. Story, No. 3:09CV147, 2011 WL 5599390 (E.D. Va. Nov. 17, 2011)

Massenburg v. Adams, No. 3:08CV106, 2011 WL 1740150 (E.D. Va. May 5, 2011)

Puranda v. Johnson, 3:08CV687, 2009 WL 3175629 (E.D. Va. Sept. 30, 2009), appeal dismissed, 367 F. App'x 453 (4th Cir. 2010)

Barnard v. Piedmont Reg'l Jail Auth., No. 3:07CV566 (E.D. Va. July 17, 2009), report and recommendation adopted, 2009 WL 2872510 (E.D. Va. Sept. 3, 2009)

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on a federal court of appeals.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:

- a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
- b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
- c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
- d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

I decide recusal issues in accordance with 28 U.S.C. §§ 144 and 455, and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. My office maintains a list of cases in which I was involved as an Assistant United States Attorney. Before I review an incoming case, my office matches it against that list to determine whether or not I have a conflict as to any party.

Similarly, my office maintains a list of stock holdings that my husband, my children, or I have. Those are checked against any incoming cases and, if a conflict exists, I do not preside over the case. I have a system through which I, and my office, are informed immediately upon any change in holdings. I review that list periodically to ensure it is up to date.

When I handle a settlement conference, I do not "preside" over the case, and the conflict rules are less clear. Parties are freer to shape the nature of the mediation they seek. When I last sought input, the ethics division of the Administrative Office for United States

Judges had no final position on whether a judge can, during settlement, preside over a conference when “upon notice and without objection” he or she owns even just one share of stock. Early in my judgeship, I issued notices of potential conflict in an abundance of caution, including in mediation. These did not constitute actual conflicts, nor can I find an instance of recusal, except as noted below. I generally inform parties about stock ownership when conducting settlement conferences.

I handle a large number of cases brought by pro se litigants. I cannot recall ever recusing on a pro se litigant’s case. A thorough review of the cases I handled showed one case in which a pro se prisoner sought recusal, which I denied:

Goodman v. Everett, No. 3:06-CV-849 (E.D. Va. Dec. 31, 2007). Goodman brought a claim pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging that he had been transferred to a prison where other inmates threatened to harm him. The Honorable Richard L. Williams presided, but I handled some of the initial screening orders. Goodman moved to recuse both judges on the case because, he claimed, the defendants had so clearly filed a response lacking a basis in fact that my preliminary ruling favoring defendants demonstrated incompetence, bias against prisoners, and corruption. He also objected to the informal service agreement in place with the Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Virginia. I denied the motion to recuse because I did not harbor extrajudicial bias in the case.

I have recused sua sponte in two cases.

Gen. Elec. v. Open MRI of S. Va., No. 3:06CV705-RLW (E.D. Va. June 15, 2007). I ultimately did not conduct the settlement conference because of my stock ownership in a GE retirement plan and because I had recently left a GE Company. No party had objected to my handling the conference.

Francisco v. Verizon S., Inc., No. 3:09CV737 (E.D. Va. Sept. 16, 2010). I entered a recusal order after informing parties of the conflict. I realized, after deciding a preliminary issue, that I owned Verizon stock. The parties did not seek re-briefing of the issue with the new judge. I did not handle this case after the decision. The case was dismissed by a different judge on the defendant’s motion for summary judgment.

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I have not held any public office other than judicial office. I have not had any unsuccessful candidacies for appointed office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

In the summer of 1984, I had a paid internship with the Democratic Policy Committee in the United States Senate, where I created a daily report listing quotes of Democratic Senators from news programs.

16. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

- a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

From 1991 to 1992, I served as a law clerk to the Honorable James R. Spencer, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I have not practiced alone.

- iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I did not serve as a mediator or arbitrator in my law practice.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

From 1992 to 1994, I worked in private practice. I was employed by Anderson Kill Olick & Oshinsky (“Anderson Kill” which is now part of Dickstein, Shapiro), a Washington, D.C., branch of a New York law firm. Anderson Kill specializes in insurance recovery cases, but generally does so for large corporations seeking products liability or environmental coverage. I handled aspects of a products liability case while at Anderson Kill, handling depositions, summary judgment briefing, and attending court for hearings and the trial.

From 1994 to 1999, I was an Assistant United States Attorney handling criminal prosecution. The majority of my cases involved large scale drug organizations such as the L.A. Crips and the Hell’s Angels. I also prosecuted some white collar cases, including fraud and environmental charges. I handled several large scale jury trials, as well as misdemeanor cases and trials, and I defended and argued my own cases on appeal. During my tenure as a criminal prosecutor, then-Managing AUSA James B. Comey organized an Appellate Review Committee that reviewed every appellate brief filed out of Richmond. I was one of four attorneys to serve on that committee.

From 1999 to 2004, I worked on civil cases as an Assistant United States Attorney. The civil docket is varied, including medical malpractice, Title VII, immigration, and tax cases. When an employee or agency was sued, I represented the United States in those cases. The civil docket involves both trial work and participating in mediation on behalf of the United States.

From 2004 to 2005, I served as one of two Supervising Attorneys over litigation at the headquarters of a Fortune 500 company, Genworth Financial, Inc. In that capacity, I directed large scale litigation conducted by outside counsel, and assured compliance with regulations so that legal concerns did not arise.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

From 1992 to 1994, at Anderson Kill, I spent the bulk of my time handling a case for one large corporation seeking upper layers of insurance on a products liability matter.

From 1994 to 1999, as a criminal prosecutor representing the United States, I worked closely with federal investigative agencies such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Drug Enforcement Administration as they investigated crimes.

From 1999 to 2004 as a civil Assistant United States Attorney, my clients were federal agencies or employees. I worked with agency employees to defend particular events or decisions, as well as policies. Nearly all of these cases arose after an agency had been sued.

From 2004 to 2005, I worked closely with the General Counsel of Genworth Financial to advise the Chief Executive Officer about any existing or impending litigation matters. We worked on compliance and managing any large scale litigation.

100% of my career has involved litigation. As an associate at Anderson Kill, I appeared in Delaware Chancery Court occasionally, assisting lead counsel when motions were argued and trial began. From 1994 to 1999, I appeared in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia weekly if not daily, on criminal matters. I would occasionally appear in the United States Court of Appeals when a defendant appealed a verdict. From 1999 to 2004, as a civil Assistant United States Attorney, I still appeared frequently in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, although less than weekly. I also appeared in Virginia Circuit Courts if a federal employee was subpoenaed as a witness. From 2004 to 2005, while at Genworth, I guided outside counsel in litigation, but I did not appear in court.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
Rough estimates would be:

1. federal courts: 95%

1616

- 2. state courts of record: 5%
- 3. other courts: 0%
- 4. administrative agencies: 0%

ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:

- 1. civil proceedings: 50%
- 2. criminal proceedings: 50%

d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

I have tried approximately 15 to 20 criminal or civil cases (jury and bench trial) to verdict. When I first became a prosecutor, I was second chair in several cases. As I became more senior, I was generally lead or sole counsel, though I sometimes still served as co-counsel.

i. What percentage of these trials were:

- 1. jury: 5%
- 2. non-jury: 95%

e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not appeared before the Supreme Court of the United States.

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

While some cases had pending periods that overlap with other cases, the cases are roughly listed in chronological order below:

1. Hoechst Celanese Corp. v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co., No. 89C-SE-35-1-cv (1992 – 1994), before the Hon. Richard Gebelein, Delaware Superior Court.

In this coverage action, Anderson Kill Olick and Oshinsky represented Hoechst Celanese, which sought products liability coverage for issues surrounding plastic piping. Anderson Kill filed several summary judgment motions on separate insurance coverage issues. As an associate, I worked on the notice summary judgment motion and on depositions from 1992 to 1994. While we won a ruling that Hoechst Celanese had given proper notice of the claim, the court denied other summary judgment motions. I went with counsel to summary judgment arguments in court, and to trial. The case settled on the first or second day of trial.

2. United States v. King, No. 3:93CR40 (1994), before the Hon. Richard L. Williams, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

The defendant attempted to manufacture methamphetamine in the Cary Street row house where he lived with his children. He claimed he was experimenting with wood preservatives for a business to sell pilings for the Chesapeake Bay, for which he had created a sham business. I was the sole prosecutor of this case after the defendant returned from fugitive status and came back to Richmond. The defendant waived a jury trial at the last minute, and the court found him guilty of all counts after a bench trial.

3. United States v. Smith, No. 3:94CR79 (1995), before the Hon. James R. Spencer, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This was a multi-defendant, multi-count action charging drug conspiracy and money laundering. The group charged was called the “Whitcomb Court Crew” or the “Cook Em Up Crew.” They operated an open air drug market in a low income residential area. Four defendants went to trial before a jury. I was second chair, assisting at trial with pretrial briefing, witness preparation, witness examination, cross-examination, and closing statement. All defendants were convicted. Along with lead counsel, I also handled the appeals that followed, including those filed by some defendants who had pled guilty. On appeal, all convictions were affirmed.

4. United States v. Rivenbark, No. 3:94CR93 (1995), before the Hon. Robert R. Merhige, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I was sole counsel in two jury trials involving the defendant. The defendant tried to steal his neighbor's ten million dollar estate, which his neighbor had left in an educational trust for the impoverished children of Weems, Virginia. The victim of the fraud had amassed his money by playing stock options, despite a lifetime serving as a tugboat captain with a sixth grade education. As a felon, the defendant also illegally possessed weapons, including an assault rifle. Judge Merhige separated the fraud trial from the weapons trial. Both jury trials resulted in a guilty verdict in 1995. The convictions were sustained on appeal, which I also handled as sole counsel.

5. United States v. Zebrowski, No. 3:96CR41 (1996 – 1999), before the Hon. James R. Spencer, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This was a sixteen defendant drug conspiracy, in which I served as second chair. The charges stemmed from a multi-year investigation (including a Title III wiretap) of an organization that shipped multi-kilo amounts of cocaine, both crack and powder, between New Jersey, Virginia, and Florida. The lead charge alleged that the defendant operated a continuing criminal enterprise, the kingpin statute. Money laundering charges were included in the multi-count indictment. During the course of the conspiracy, the lead defendant was stopped on Interstate 95 in Virginia with approximately 3.5 kilos of powder cocaine and over $300,000 cash in his car. Each defendant pled guilty, leading to further indictments. We ultimately charged the source from Columbia for drug-related conduct. We did not extradite the source from Colombia as there was an open case in Florida against him.

6. United States v. Reid, No. 3:98CR064 (1998), before the Hon. James R. Spencer, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This case followed the prosecution of the Zebrowskis, which is described above. The defendant, with four others, was charged with conspiracy to distribute power cocaine. The defendant received kilogram quantities from the Zebrowskis and re-distributed the cocaine in Maryland. I was second chair. Judge Spencer denied the defendant's motion to suppress after hearing evidence and argument in open court. After a full day of trial and into the second day before the jury, the defendant decided to plead guilty as charged.

7. United States v. Garner, No. 3:97CR104 (1997 – 1999), before the Hon. Robert R. Merhige, Jr., United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I was the lead prosecutor in this seventeen defendant drug conspiracy case, dubbed Operation Crossfire. The charges stemmed from a multi-year investigation of a continuing criminal enterprise. This conspiracy operated between California and Virginia. Defendant and others, all associated with the L.A. Crips, procured and shipped multi-kilo amounts of powder cocaine to Richmond via UPS. A second defendant led the Richmond end of the organization, which received the cocaine, cooked it into crack, and sold it. The proceeds of the sales were sent to California by Western Union. Over seven million dollars of Western Union wires were identified. All defendants pled guilty (including to continuing criminal enterprise for the lead defendant) and several “cold homicides” were resolved. One cold homicide was resolved by a separate guilty plea to murder in state court.

8. United States v. Lewis, No. 3:93CR139 (1999 – 2001), before the Hon. Robert E. Payne, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

This case, which involved a Hell’s Angels organization, initially was indicted and tried by John Douglass. The defendant became a fugitive, and I later worked on his extradition from Mexico. Although I had formally joined the Civil Division, I tried the case with another Assistant United States Attorney because Professor Douglass had left the office. The defendant led the chapter of the Hell's Angels that tried to establish its home base in Hopewell, Virginia. He fled when initially indicted in 1993 (before I had joined the U.S. Attorney's Office). Along with other illegal conduct, the defendant and his organization attempted to manufacture and sell large quantities of methamphetamine. He was charged in a 25-count indictment with operating a continuing criminal enterprise and with money laundering. The jury found him guilty on nearly all charges, including the continuing criminal enterprise and money laundering counts. The convictions were sustained on appeal, which I handled with co-counsel.

9. Trigon Ins. Co. v. United States, No. 3:00CV365 (2002 – 2003), before the Hon. Robert E. Payne, United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

I worked closely with counsel in the Tax Division of the Department of Justice on this case. In a case of first impression, Trigon (formerly Blue Cross Blue Shield) sued the IRS, challenging decisions to deny Trigon tax refunds owed when Blue Cross Blue Shield became subject to taxation in 1986. This case involved a series of challenging motions and hearings before Judge Payne. The trial lasted at least seven days in which I facilitated logistics and handled some witnesses. Equally extensive post-trial briefing and argument followed. Judgment was entered in favor of the United States because the plaintiff could not reliably establish the value of the contracts for which it claimed deductions. After a motion to reconsider, Judge Payne entered final judgment for the United States, but ordered fees to be paid to the plaintiff for spoliation of electronic drafts prepared by some expert witnesses.

I was lead counsel in this case that consolidated seven complaints of discrimination brought by police officers at the Defense Supply Center, a federal property. Based on allegations about training and other policies, the officers complained that racial discrimination existed in the department. Because the case involved departmental policies, I led negotiations to see if programmatic changes could address the plaintiffs' concerns. The case was subsequently settled.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organization(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

I have never performed any lobbying, nor have I registered as a lobbyist.

The most significant legal activity I have undertaken as a magistrate judge is the formation of a Second Chance-Offender Rehabilitation Effort ("SCORE") court for offenders released from prison on probation or supervised release. This program attempts to offer necessary resources to re-enter society successfully. The program targets offenders who have a documented history of substance abuse, and offers court supervision to assist in rehabilitation when violations occur. The SCORE program seeks to develop long-term crime-free life rather than reincarceration due to drug use. When we began designing the program in 2007 or 2008, it was one of six in the nation. We were the first federal re-entry court in Virginia. This effort has been well received within the community.

The SCORE team consists of the two Magistrate Judges, the U.S. Probation Office, the U.S. Attorney's Office, the Federal Public Defender, and treatment professionals. Other SCORE members, including the Clerk's office and community volunteers, are integral to the success of the program we now have.

The reentry court is an intensive rehabilitation process that relies on the existing probation supervision process for drug screening, supervision, education, employment and community service. In order to graduate, our participants must be drug-free for at least six months, but generally they have been drug-free for a much longer time period. Participants usually have gotten a GED or vocational training, a valid operator's license, and are working unless disabled. The program is designed to save court resources and taxpayer dollars when participants engage in a substance-free and crime-free life. The alternative option, incarceration, would be costly to taxpayers as well as less desirable for the participants.

I have also been extensively involved with bar organizations. Each organization promotes community and civic involvement. For instance, the John Marshall American Inn of Court (JMIOC) encourages longstanding practitioners and judges, through educational and other opportunities, to mentor and provide career support to younger lawyers. Like all Inns of Court, the JMIOC encourages an open discussion about professionalism beyond knowing the law. The Metropolitan Richmond Women's Bar Association (MRWBA) similarly provides an environment where women lawyers can engage with each other to better each other's professional lives, to enrich the bar, and to encourage community involvement so that the bar betters the greater Richmond area. Like the Richmond Bar Association, the MRWBA has an active set of pro bono initiatives. For instance, members of the MRWBA prepared a domestic violence pamphlet – made available in English and Spanish – that distilled rights and resources available to those subject to domestic violence. The MRWBA has made these informational pamphlets available in local Juvenile and Domestic Relations Courts, and at places in the community who serve as a resource to women in need.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

2010 – 2013, Adjunct Assistant Professor, John Marshall Scholars Program, University of Richmond, T.C. Williams School of Law. The John Marshall Scholars is a class for the academic scholarship students. First, second, and third year students participate. This class discussed legal topics of interest, with an emphasis on engaging students in practical application of those topics. We have discussed leadership, medical ethics, and the financial crisis. The John Marshall Scholars Program hopes to promote excellence, and to expose students to the breadth of service their legal careers could encompass. Spring 2013 syllabus supplied.

1996 – 2006, Adjunct Assistant Professor, Lawyering Skills III – Trial Advocacy (Fall Semester) and Lawyering Skills IV – Appellate Advocacy (Spring Semester), University of Richmond, T.C. Williams School of Law. These classes are required for all second year law students at the University of Richmond. Fall 2004 and Spring 2006 syllabi supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I do not have such sources of income.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, I have no plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment. I have ceased teaching at the University of Richmond Law School due to time constraints.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I would decide recusal issues in accordance with 28 U.S.C. §§ 144 and 455, and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. I would continue the practice my office currently undertakes to maintain a list of cases in which I was involved as an Assistant United States Attorney. Before addressing any case, I would ask staff to match that case against my conflict list to determine whether or not I have a conflict as to any party.

Similarly, my office would continue to maintain a list of stock holdings that my husband, my children, or I have. Those would be checked against any incoming cases and, if a conflict exists, I would not preside over the case. I would continue to use the current system through which I, and my office, are informed immediately upon any change in holdings. I would review that list periodically to ensure it is up to date.

I do not know of any other conflict that any family members, parties, categories of litigators, or financial arrangements that could present potential conflicts of interest other than those identified immediately above.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

To the extent such potential conflicts were to arise, I would resolve them through careful adherence to 28 U.S.C. §§ 144 and 455, and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

While at Anderson Kill, I assisted on a case in which a woman sought a bone marrow transplant to treat her cancer. The insurance coverage had been denied because the treatment was considered experimental.

At the United States Attorney's Office and as Magistrate Judge, my ability to provide pro bono legal services has been restricted. However, I have considered engagement with bar organizations an important aspect of community service. All of the bar groups I have served with have significantly contributed to the Richmond community and the Commonwealth in varied and meaningful ways. For example, these bar organizations engage in pro bono services, tutoring, and providing information to litigants to increase access to the courts.

I also have served on the Board and, eventually, as Board President of my daughter's former preschool at St. Stephen's Church, a not-for-profit preschool which is part of the Episcopal Church associated with St. Christopher's and St. Catherine's school.

We do most of our community service as a family and through the schools where my husband teaches and my children attend. Over the years, this has been extensive and hands on. Generally, we have focused our service on schools, health/cancer programs, military needs, and animal shelters. As for schools, our family has collected and donated school supplies regularly for St. Andrew's School (a Richmond City Episcopal School for needy students) and, last year, for Connor's Heroes Backpack Project. For six years we have helped clean and supply other after-school community programs such as the Peter Paul Development Center and the William Byrd Community House, which provide a safe and educational environment in troubled neighborhoods for children to do homework, eat a healthy snack, or play. Through Peter Paul Development Center, we have helped "adopt" families during the holidays for the past ten years—raising money, purchasing gifts, and wrapping them.

Because we know people well who have been touched by these diseases, we have participated in collection, and/or fundraising walks, for breast cancer, cystic fibrosis, pancreatic cancer, and diabetes (including juvenile diabetes). Over the past twelve years we have regularly participated in food drives for the Virginia Food Bank and a few times for Ronald McDonald House. We have joined in as the schools sent out "Hero Boxes" for military members serving away from their home. Finally, there is an active community in Richmond that supports the welfare of abandoned animals. We have donated supplies to the local SPCA, the Richmond Animal Shelter (a no kill facility), and Hooligan's Rest, another shelter/placement program.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In May 2013, Senators Mark Warner and Timothy Kaine asked the Virginia State Bar to evaluate candidates for a vacancy on the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia. On June 6, 2013, I submitted an Evaluation Questionnaire to the Virginia State Bar and 11 other Bar Organizations. On July 8, 2013, nine of the eleven organizations conducted in-person interviews. I interviewed with all organizations who gave me the opportunity to do so. On July 22, 2013, I was interviewed in Washington, D.C. by senior staff for Senators Warner and Kaine. On July 31, 2013, I was interviewed in Washington, D.C. by Senators Warner and Kaine. On August 6, 2013, I was called by a member of Senator Warner's staff and told that my name would be sent with one other person's to the White House for consideration for this judgeship. Since August 14, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On September 12, 2013, I was interviewed by officials from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On December 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate. On January 6, 2014, the President submitted my renomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

13. Judicial Office: State (chronologically) any judicial offices you have held, including positions as an administrative law judge, whether such position was elected or appointed, and a description of the jurisdiction of each such court.

In 2005, I was appointed to serve as a Magistrate Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts by the Judges of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. In 2013, I was reappointed to a second eight-year term as a Magistrate Judge. My duties and responsibilities have included: presiding over the trial of civil cases, both jury and non-jury, with the consent of the parties; issuing recommended decisions on dispositive motions and orders resolving non-dispositive motions in civil cases over which District Judges preside; managing pretrial proceedings in both civil and criminal cases over which District Judges preside; mediating civil cases pending before District Judges or other Magistrate Judges; issuing criminal complaints and search warrants upon a finding a probable cause; hearing and deciding motions to detain defendants due to flight or danger risks in felony criminal cases; and handling all aspects, including trial, of petty offenses and criminal misdemeanors.

On February 1, 2012, I became the Chief Magistrate Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. In addition to my other duties, I have assumed administrative responsibilities.

(1) United States v. Cusick, No. 11-cr-10066-GAO

The grand jury charged Cusick (a crew member working on board a commercial fishing vessel) with two violations of 16 U.S.C. § 1857(1)(L), to wit: criminal sexual harassment and interfering with and impeding the duties of a federal at-sea monitor; and forcible assault and interfering with and impeding the duties of a federal at-sea monitor collector. My memorandum and order ruling that the size of the fine authorized by the statute entitled the defendant to a jury, rather than bench, trial on these misdemeanor charges can be found at 817 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2011). The jury convicted Cusick of one count and acquitted him of the other. This case was the first trial (or, at least, one of the first) in the nation of criminal charges under this statute. My order rejecting the defendant's post-trial motion claiming insufficient evidence to support the jury's determination that defendant had threatened to inflict bodily harm on the victim can be found at 2012 WL 442005 (D. Mass. Feb. 9, 2012).

and Carey v. New Balance Athletic Shoe, Inc., No. 11-cv-10632-LTS

My order resolving various discovery and procedural motions as well as deferring ruling on a partial motion to dismiss is supplied. The parties engaged in several mediation sessions with another magistrate judge. Although these sessions did not produce a settlement, the parties later settled the matter. In response to a joint settlement proposal from the parties, I certified a class for settlement purposes only in the final judgment, a copy of which is supplied.

(3) Zak Law Offices, P.C. v. Reed, No. 10-cv-10333-LTS

A software developer and several corporate entities related to the same legal practice brought an action for copyright infringement against an individual mortgage broker alleging that she wrongfully had accessed and copied a proprietary customer database. The defendant counterclaimed, alleging that she had formed a mortgage refinance business partnership with the attorney proprietor, and that she had been wrongfully excluded by him from the affairs of the partnership. She sought an accounting and her share of partnership profits. The parties settled the plaintiffs' claims. After I denied plaintiffs' motion to dismiss the counterclaim, the case proceeded to trial. A jury awarded damages to the defendant on her counterclaim. My memorandum and order on the plaintiffs' motion to dismiss the counterclaim can be found at 2010 WL 2802068 (D. Mass. July 13, 2010), and the First Circuit's decision upholding the jury verdict and the denial of post-trial motions is at Loan Modification Grp., Inc. v. Reed, 694 F.3d 145 (1st Cir. 2012).

(4) RBS Citizens, Nat'l Assoc. v. Aresty, No. 09-cv-10116-LTS

The defendant law firm deposited a client check into its account and wired the funds overseas. After discovering that the check was fraudulent, the plaintiff bank sued the law firm and the lawyer who owned the firm to recover the funds it lost in wiring the funds overseas. The parties disputed whether officials from the bank had informed the lawyer that the check had cleared. The case included substantial discovery disputes, as well as issues relating to the possible personal liability of the lawyer. I found insufficient evidence to render the lawyer liable by piercing the corporate veil of the law firm and, thus, entered summary judgment in the lawyer's favor. I also found that the remaining claims brought by the bank against the law firm presented disputed issues of fact requiring a trial. The parties settled the case on the day trial was to commence. My orders resolving motions in limine and summary judgment motions can be found at 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119237 (D. Mass. Oct. 14, 2011), and 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 57343 (D. Mass. May 26, 2011).

(5) Cameron v. Idearc Media Corp., No. 08-cv-12010-LTS

The defendant company terminated several union sales representatives ostensibly for failure to meet sales objectives outlined in the collective bargaining agreement. These sales representatives sued the employer, alleging age discrimination, violation of the Employment Retirement Income Security Act ("ERISA"), and violation of the collective bargaining agreement. They also sued their union, a union official, and the ERISA plan administrator, alleging breach of the duty of fair representation, and misrepresentation. I granted the union and union official's motion for judgment on the pleadings both on immunity grounds and the running of the limitations period for filing suit. I entered summary judgment in the employer's favor because the plaintiffs failed to adduce evidence from which a reasonable jury could find that the employer's stated reason for discharge to be pretextual, and because the claims were barred by section 301 of the Labor Relations Management Act. The sales representatives appealed my summary judgment ruling. The First Circuit affirmed on the employment discrimination theory and did not reach the preemption issue. My memorandum and order on motions to amend, dismiss, and for judgment on the pleadings can be found at 2009 WL 2496439 (D. Mass. Aug. 13, 2009); my memorandum and order on the motion for summary judgment can be found at 2011 WL 4054864 (D. Mass. Sept. 9, 2011); and the First Circuit's decision on appeal is at 685 F.3d 44 (1st Cir. 2012).

(6) Amicas, Inc. v. GMG Health Sys., Ltd., No. 08-cv-11589-LTS

A medical software company sued a customer for breach of contract. The customer counterclaimed for breach of contract, negligent misrepresentation, and violation of Chapter 93A of the Massachusetts General Laws. I entered summary judgment in the plaintiff's favor on the breach of contract claim and against the defendant on its counterclaims. The defendant sought reconsideration of the amount of damages pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). I reaffirmed the damage award, and the plaintiff also recovered attorneys' fees. My memoranda and orders on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, cross-motions for summary judgment, and a motion for reconsideration can be found at 2009 WL 943870 (D. Mass. Apr. 7, 2009), 2010 WL 5068142 (D. Mass. Dec. 3, 2010), and 2011 WL 1584369 (D. Mass. Apr. 26, 2011), respectively. (7) Cape Ann Marina v. Watson Ins. Agency, Inc., No. 07-cv-11983-LTS

A marina and motel suffered a fire destroying the motel. The owner of the complex alleged it had inadequate insurance proceeds to rebuild after the fire because the defendant insurance broker negligently failed to procure adequate insurance coverage and negligently failed to explain the effect of certain policy provisions. The parties disputed whether special circumstances existed under Massachusetts law that might impose a heightened duty of care. I denied summary judgment, and the case proceeded to trial. In response to a motion for a directed verdict, I found no breach of contract claim separate from the negligence claim arising out of the contractual relationship and no right to either lost profits or attorneys fees. The jury found the defendant negligent, but concluded that the plaintiff's comparative negligence was greater than the defendant's resulting in no award for the plaintiff. My order denying summary judgment is supplied; my order resolving motions for a directed verdict can be found at 2010 WL 2991664 (D. Mass. July 26, 2010).

(8) Kingsborough v. Sprint Commc'ns Co., No. 07-cv-10651-LTS

The plaintiffs in this putative nationwide class action were owners of land underlying or adjacent to railroad rights of way in 46 states, and the defendants were companies involved with the commercial use of fiber-optic telecommunications systems. The plaintiffs alleged that, beginning in the 1980s and without notice to them, the defendants entered into agreements by which they paid railroads to install their fiber optic cables in rights of way previously granted to the railroads by the plaintiffs, constituting a trespass. The parties negotiated 49 settlement agreements and a Common Administration Agreement, and filed a complaint in the District of Massachusetts. This was not the first proposed settlement. See Smith v. Sprint Commc'ns Co., 387 F.3d 612 (7th Cir. 2004); Zografos v. Qwest Commc'ns Corp., 225 F. Supp. 2d 1217, 1223 (D. Or. 2002). Class members were to be compensated based on the number of linear feet comprising their affected property at different rates, depending on a state-by-state analysis. The settlement provided for the Court to enter an easement on the titles of approximately 350,000 parcels of land adjoining the railroad tracks, authorizing a perpetual easement and right of way. The total value of the settlement was estimated at $188.5 million, with $41.5 million to be awarded by separate motion to Settlement Class Counsel. Objectors challenged the Court's subject matter jurisdiction to adjudicate trespasses to land located outside of Massachusetts. I rejected the settlement, determining that a trespass matter is inherently and uniquely local in nature, presenting determinations of title and land ownership, and jurisdiction over title to real property is vested in the courts of the state in which the property at issue is located. My decision, which can be found at 673 F. Supp. 2d 24 (D. Mass. 2009), was not appealed.

(9) Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Ripple Commc'n, Inc., No. 07-cv-10494-LTS

Ripple Communication provided hardware and software to enable conference calling, chat lines, and other such services over the phone company's telecommunications system. Men using Ripple's chat lines met a Jane Doe minor and sexually assaulted her. The minor, through her parents, sued the phone company and settled with them. The contract between Ripple and the phone company contained an indemnification provision holding the phone company harmless for claims arising from Ripple's equipment. In the action before me, Ripple's insurer sought a declaration that it had no duty to indemnify the phone company for the minor's claims against the phone company, arguing that her claim was not covered by its policy and that the indemnification agreement should not be enforced. The phone company cross-claimed seeking to enforce the indemnification agreement. I entered summary judgment in favor of Ripple and the insurer because the contract unambiguously did not provide a basis for indemnification. The First Circuit affirmed. My summary judgment memorandum and order is supplied; the First Circuit's decision is at 632 F.3d 777 (1st Cir. 2011).

(10) Mulligan v. Maritrans Operating Co., No. 06-cv-10492-LTS

The plaintiff sustained injuries while fighting a fire aboard an oil tender. He alleged that the fire resulted from the negligence of the crew, that the vessel was unseaworthy, and that the defendant had denied him cure (i.e., the payment of reasonable medical expenses) to which he was entitled under the Jones Act. At counsel's request, I reserved for post-trial decision the issue of whether the defendant acted in a callous, willful, or recalcitrant manner with respect to the payment of cure. The jury found for the plaintiff on the negligence claim and the claim for cure, and for the defendant on the unseaworthiness claim. I denied the defendant's motions to amend the judgment and for judgment as a matter of law, and awarded punitive damages for the willful and wanton disregard of the maintenance and cure obligation for a portion of the relevant time period. After considering additional evidence not previously presented, I amended my judgment and awarded no punitive damages or attorneys' fees. My Orders on the issues of punitive damages and fees can be found at 2010 WL 1930282 (D. Mass. May 12, 2010), and 2010 WL 3038091 (D. Mass. July 30, 2010). A copy of my unpublished order denying defendant's motion to alter or amend the judgment and a copy of my unpublished order denying the defendant's motion for judgment as a matter of law are supplied.

- i. Provide citations to all cases in which you sat by designation on a federal court of appeals, including a brief summary of any opinions you authored, whether majority, dissenting, or concurring, and any dissenting opinions you joined.

I have not sat by designation on any federal appellate court.

14. Recusal: If you are or have been a judge, identify the basis by which you have assessed the necessity or propriety of recusal (If your court employs an "automatic" recusal system by which you may be recused without your knowledge, please include a general description of that system.) Provide a list of any cases, motions or matters that have come before you in which a litigant or party has requested that you recuse yourself due to an asserted conflict of interest or in which you have recused yourself sua sponte. Identify each such case, and for each provide the following information:
 - a. whether your recusal was requested by a motion or other suggestion by a litigant or a party to the proceeding or by any other person or interested party; or if you recused yourself sua sponte;
 - b. a brief description of the asserted conflict of interest or other ground for recusal;
 - c. the procedure you followed in determining whether or not to recuse yourself;
 - d. your reason for recusing or declining to recuse yourself, including any action taken to remove the real, apparent or asserted conflict of interest or to cure any other ground for recusal.

I assess recusal in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 455. The United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts does not have an automatic recusal system. We do have a conflict checking feature in our electronic case management system, which alerts me if I have a potential conflict with someone or some entity that is a party in a newly filed case assigned to me.

Upon becoming a Magistrate Judge, I recused myself from any matters in cases pending in the Federal Public Defender Office on my last day of work there. In addition, I have recused sua sponte in the following cases:

Marchionne v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., No. 13-cv-10223-GAO (a family member held a financial interest, as that term is defined in Title 28, in Metropolitan Life Insurance Company)

15. Public Office, Political Activities and Affiliations:

- a. List chronologically any public offices you have held, other than judicial offices, including the terms of service and whether such positions were elected or appointed. If appointed, please include the name of the individual who appointed you. Also, state chronologically any unsuccessful candidacies you have had for elective office or unsuccessful nominations for appointed office.

I have not held public office other than judicial offices.

- b. List all memberships and offices held in and services rendered, whether compensated or not, to any political party or election committee. If you have ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign, identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

From 1977 to 1984, I served as an intermittent political consultant for Connecticut State Representative Richard Tulisano's campaign activities. This was primarily an unpaid volunteer position, except for a few periods between the fall of 1983 and the spring of 1985, when I held the position as a part-time, paid position. From May to September 1983, I was a paid field coordinator for Bob Kiley's campaign to be mayor of Boston. From May to November 1980, I was a volunteer field coordinator for Chris Dodd's campaign for U.S. Senate. While in high school, I volunteered with the West Hartford Democratic Party in get-out-the-vote efforts, voter registration activities, phone calling, and leafleting.

16. Legal Career: Answer each part separately.

- a. Describe chronologically your law practice and legal experience after graduation from law school including:

- i. whether you served as clerk to a judge, and if so, the name of the judge, the court and the dates of the period you were a clerk;

From September 1991 to August 1992, I clerked for the Honorable Rya W. Zobel, District Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts.

- ii. whether you practiced alone, and if so, the addresses and dates;

I have never practiced alone.

- iii. the dates, names and addresses of law firms or offices, companies or governmental agencies with which you have been affiliated, and the nature of your affiliation with each.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not formally served as a mediator or arbitrator in any alternative dispute resolution.

b. Describe:

- i. the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years.

Following my graduation from law school, and until my appointment as a Magistrate Judge, my law practice focused exclusively on litigation and trial of civil and criminal matters.

After completing my clerkship, I practiced at Mintz Levin from 1992 to 1994, where I handled, with other counsel, a variety of commercial litigation matters pending in both state and federal court. In addition, as part of a pro bono program, I represented victims of domestic violence seeking restraining orders.

While at the Office of the Attorney General from 1994 to 1997, I defended the Commonwealth in lawsuits. These included challenges to state statutes or programs for alleged violations of the Constitution or federal or state laws, appeals from agency decisions, and allegations of employment discrimination or civil rights violations by state employees. In each of my cases, I was responsible for all aspects of the Commonwealth's defense, from the answer through the conclusion of any appeals. I handled many preliminary injunction hearings and litigated numerous dispositive motions. My clients included the Governor's Legal Counsel Office, in cases with a larger impact, and, more typically, the Commissioner or General Counsel of a defendant agency.

During my almost eight years as an Assistant Federal Defender from 1997 to 2005, I represented indigent defendants indicted in federal court for criminal violations of federal laws. I represented my clients from initial appearance through the conclusion of all appeals. The cases I handled represented the full spectrum of federal criminal prosecutions. I defended numerous clients charged with fraud, ranging from individuals accused of passing altered or stolen checks, to a real estate developer accused of committing securities fraud in the course of selling shares for an overseas development to American investors. I regularly represented people charged with violations of federal criminal laws governing immigration, firearms, controlled substances, and the United States mail, as well as possession or distribution of child pornography. The cases ranged from small single-defendant cases, such as a letter carrier accused of throwing away mail rather than delivering it, to complicated multi-defendant drug or fraud prosecutions.

- ii. your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized.

From 1992 to 1994, I represented commercial entities. In addition, as part of a pro bono Domestic Violence Project, I represented victims of domestic violence seeking state-court restraining orders.

From 1994 to 1997, I represented the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and its agencies in civil litigation.

From 1997 to 2005, my typical client was an indigent individual facing criminal charges in federal court.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

Before becoming a Magistrate Judge, 100% of my practice was in litigation. I appeared in court daily during my time at the Federal Public Defender Office (1997 to 2005), frequently during my time at the Office of the Attorney General (1994 to 1997), and occasionally during my time at Mintz Levin (1992 to 1994).

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|-----------------------------|-----|
| 1. federal courts: | 67% |
| 2. state courts of record: | 33% |
| 3. other courts: | >1% |
| 4. administrative agencies: | 0 % |

- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
- | | |
|--------------------------|-----|
| 1. civil proceedings: | 40% |
| 2. criminal proceedings: | 60% |

- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

While at the Federal Public Defender Office, I tried between ten and 15 federal criminal felony cases to verdict before juries. In each case, I was lead counsel; in approximately half of these cases, I was sole counsel. Before becoming an Assistant Federal Defender, I had tried two or three civil non-jury trials to verdict. In each case, I was lead counsel.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
- | | |
|--------------|-----|
| 1. jury: | 83% |
| 2. non-jury: | 17% |

City of Edmonds v. Washington State Building Code Council, No. 94-23 (amicus brief on behalf of the Attorney General of Massachusetts, et al., supporting the circuit's ruling that the federal Fair Housing Act's exemption for reasonable restrictions in local zoning ordinances on the maximum number of persons who may occupy a dwelling did not apply. 1995 U.S. S. Ct. Briefs LEXIS 31).

17. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- the date of representation;
- the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

- (1) United States v. Martin, No. 04-cr-10200 (D. Mass.); Judge William Young. July 2004 indictment, February 2005 trial.

A grand jury indicted Martin for one count of distribution of cocaine base arising out of an alleged hand-to-hand sale of crack cocaine to an undercover informant.

The Court appointed me to represent Martin. Subsequently, Martin invoked his constitutional right to proceed pro se, at which point the Court (with Martin's consent) appointed me to serve as standby counsel to assist him with his defense at trial. Mr. Martin faced a mandatory minimum sentence of ten years, with an even longer range recommended under the United States Sentencing Guidelines. With my assistance, Mr. Martin defended himself at trial and the jury acquitted him.

- (2) United States v. Lewis, 375 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D. Mass. 2005), aff'd in part, vacated and remanded in part, 406 F.3d 11 (1st Cir. 2005); Judge Edward Harrington, and Judges Sandra Lynch, Kermit Lipez, and Pierre Leval. September 2002 entry of appearance, April 2003 trial, April 2005 decision on appeal.

I served as lead counsel for the defendant, Lewis, who was charged with the masked armed robbery of the restaurant. The government's evidence consisted primarily of jailhouse phone calls in which Lewis revealed substantial knowledge of the robbery in discussions with a co-defendant. Later the co-defendant pled guilty. At Lewis' trial, I introduced a novel theory of defense that he was the co-defendant's drug dealer and that after the robbery the co-defendant purchased drugs from Lewis and boasted of the robbery. This defense was based, in part, on physical evidence, not presented by the government, that Lewis had sold drugs. In addition, this case raised important questions regarding the authority of law enforcement officers generally to listen to the routine recordings made of pretrial detainees' telephone calls. The jury convicted Lewis and he was sentenced to 319 months imprisonment. On appeal, the defendant's sentence was vacated, and the matter remanded for resentencing, pursuant to United States v. Booker, 543 U.S. 220 (2005), which was decided after Lewis' sentencing.

- (3) United States v. Gomes, No. 00-cr-10327 (D. Mass.); Judge Douglas Woodlock. September 2000 indictment, January 2001 dismissal.

I served as lead counsel for the defendant, Eduardo Gomes. The state police stopped Gomes for driving a car with excessively tinted windows. During the stop, they discovered evidence of fraudulent immigration documents in the car. He was arrested for and charged with these offenses. My work revealed that the Massachusetts tinted window law does not apply to cars registered out of state, and, therefore, the stop of my client's car was without legal authority. This resulted in the outright dismissal of all charges against Gomes.

- (4) United States v. Daway, No. 98-cr-10241 (D. Mass.); Judge Richard Stearns. August 1998 indictment, February 1999 plea, October 2000 sentencing.

A grand jury indicted Daway for conspiracy to distribute cocaine base and three counts of distribution of cocaine base. The charges arose from three sales of narcotics Daway made to an undercover agent recorded on video. Although Daway had no criminal record, she faced a mandatory minimum sentence of ten years and a maximum punishment of life in prison. The Court appointed me to represent Daway at her initial appearance. Sometime after graduating from college, Daway had become an addict who used and sold crack cocaine. My advocacy helped Daway obtain pretrial release to an in-patient drug treatment program. She seized this opportunity, became sober, returned home, and reestablished a law-abiding life. Ultimately, she pled guilty. As a result of her safety-valve interview and cooperation, the government recommended a sentence of three years in prison. At the sentencing hearing, however, I persuaded the Court to impose only a period of probation, which Daway completed successfully.

- (5) United States v. Leviner, 31 F. Supp. 2d 23 (D. Mass. 1998), Judge Nancy Gertner. October 1997 indictment, December 1998 plea and sentencing.

Leviner was indicted for being a felon in possession of a firearm. The charges arose out of a traffic stop during which the police found a firearm. Leviner pled guilty. At his sentencing, I highlighted for the Court the effect certain motor vehicle violations had on Leviner's sentencing range under the United States Sentencing Guidelines and sought a downward departure. In response to this argument, Judge Gertner concluded that police stopped cars driven by African Americans in disproportionate numbers, as compared to stops of cars driven by non-African Americans. The media coverage spurred further efforts to study the problem and reconsider law enforcement practices regarding the treatment of African Americans. In the end, Judge Gertner imposed a sentence below the applicable Guidelines range. Although the government filed an appeal of Judge Gertner's ruling, it ultimately withdrew the appeal.

- (6) United States v. Meade, 986 F. Supp. 66 (D. Mass. 1997), aff'd, 175 F.3d 215 (1st Cir. 1999); Judge Edward Harrington, and Judges Bruce Selya, Norman Stahl, and Michael Boudin. July 1997 indictment, May 1998 trial, May 1999 decision on appeal.

I represented the defendant. A grand jury indicted him for possession of a firearm by one who has a prior misdemeanor conviction for domestic violence, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(9), and by one who was subject to a judicial anti-harassment or anti-stalking order, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 922(g)(8). The case raised questions of first impression concerning whether the underlying misdemeanor conviction must contain, as an element, the domestic relationship specified in the federal statute, whether the statutes violated the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and whether the restraining order statute violated the Due Process Clause by failing to require the state court to inform the subject of a restraining order of the federal criminal consequences of possession of a gun while the order is in effect. The District Court rejected these arguments and, after conviction at trial, the Court of Appeals upheld the statutes.

- (7) United States v. Daboul, No. 97-cr-10135 (D. Mass.); Judges Mark Wolf and William Young. May 1997 indictment, November 1999 plea, February 2000 sentencing.

The grand jury charged Daboul and a co-defendant with fraud arising out of statements they made in the course of seeking investments for the financing of a time-share development in Anguilla. I, along with co-counsel, developed substantial evidence from officials in Anguilla that these officials had supported or encouraged the project, which was contrary to the government's assertion that time shares were not permitted in Anguilla. As a result, the prosecutors dismissed all fraud charges, and the two defendants pleaded guilty only to the Indictment's obstruction charge. Daboul was sentenced to 12 months of probation, rather than jail time.

I was lead counsel for the Department of Revenue in its appeal from a Tax Board decision rejecting the Department's imposition of a use tax on prefabricated building parts. On behalf of the Department, I argued that Morton's transformation of raw lumber into trusses and other parts for its prefabricated buildings did not remove the raw materials from the reach of the use tax. The Appeals Court ultimately ruled in favor of the taxpayer, concluding that the principles governing application of the tax laws requiring the resolution of doubts in the favor of taxpayers precluded the court from closing the loophole found by the taxpayer.

In 1996, the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles ("RMV") made a major change to promote efficient service by allowing new car dealers to register, online, the cars they sold. A Massachusetts business specializing in waiting in line at the RMV, on behalf of new car dealers and others, sued the Commonwealth claiming that the new system violated both a 1972 Massachusetts law prohibiting private companies from using the RMV's computers or databases, and Massachusetts privacy laws. The union representing many RMV employees quickly filed a similar lawsuit. The cases received extensive media coverage. I argued that the dealer's access to the system did not violate individual privacy, that neither the union nor the company had standing to sue under the 1972 law and that the 1972 law precluded a different type of private use of RMV computers not at issue in this lawsuit. I made these arguments both in opposition to a motion for a preliminary injunction and regarding all parties' competing motions for summary judgment. The Superior Court rejected the plaintiffs' requests for a preliminary injunction, and entered summary judgment for the RMV (in an unreported decision by Judge Hinkle). After I left the Attorney General's Office, the Supreme Judicial Court affirmed the Superior Court's entry of summary judgment in favor of the RMV.

In the course of layoffs, a local police department provided a disabled veteran with preference over other more senior officers in determining which officers to layoff, but in the course of the layoffs demoted him from sergeant to patrolman. The police officer challenged the demotion under a state law providing disabled veterans with a preference in employment. The Civil Service Commission upheld the department's application of the preference and the officer appealed to court. In a brief order, the superior court upheld this decision. On further appeal by the officer, the case went directly to the Supreme Judicial Court. The case presented a question of first impression regarding the interpretation of this preference statute and the meaning of the phrase "retained in employment." I served as lead counsel for the Civil Service Commission in the proceedings before the Supreme Judicial Court. The Supreme Judicial Court followed my analysis that the terms "position," "employment" and "retained in employment" in the preference statute should be construed in the same fashion as those terms in other statutes governing public employment. The Court upheld the Civil Service Commission's ruling that the statutory employment preference the plaintiff enjoyed as a disabled veteran protected his employment with the police department, even during layoffs, but did not entitle him to a specific position within the department.

18. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s) or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

Court Assisted Recovery Effort: In 2006, at my suggestion, the District of Massachusetts formed the Court Assisted Recovery Effort ("CARE"), a reentry court over which I preside. CARE is aimed at helping federal offenders returning to Massachusetts from prison to create and maintain sober, employed, and law-abiding lives. Defendants participating in CARE face more frequent drug testing, closer supervision, ongoing judicial oversight, and the imposition of swift sanctions including jailing upon a positive drug test or other non-compliance. They also receive treatment, referral to resources provided by local bar associations or in the community, the Court's encouragement, and hope. CARE was one of the first reentry courts in the federal system; now, it is a model for such programs in other federal courts. United States Attorney General Eric Holder, Director of National Drug Control Policy Gil Kierlikowske, Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick, and Boston Police Commissioner Edward Davis each have endorsed CARE and spoken to CARE graduates.

Since June 2012, at my suggestion, the Federal Bureau of Prisons ("BOP") and the Court have been working to create a unique pilot program integrating the BOP's substance abuse treatment and reentry efforts with the Court's reentry programs. The proposed program will offer the prospect of reducing recidivism, improving public safety, and rehabilitating offenders without increased spending or changes to the law.

Assignment of Civil Cases to Magistrate Judges: Magistrate Judge Neiman and I spearheaded a proposal to assign a percentage of civil cases, upon filing in the District Court, directly to the Magistrate Judges in Boston and Worcester. The District Court approved the proposal as a pilot in 2008, then made the program permanent in 2010 due to its success.

Training, Education, and Administrative Activities: I have participated in numerous education and training programs, both as a practicing attorney and a Magistrate Judge, for groups including judges, lawyers, students, and public school teachers.

While an Assistant Federal Defender, I started a listserv email group so that attorneys representing indigent defendants in federal court could easily share information. I also led the Federal Defender Office's successful effort to provide indigent defendants with counsel at, rather than after, the initial appearance.

Lobbying: I have neither performed nor engaged in lobbying activities during my legal career.

19. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

I currently teach a section of trial advocacy at Boston University School of Law. I received an adjunct appointment to teach this class starting in the Spring 2013 academic semester. The class teaches law students how to conduct the various parts of a trial – opening statement, examination of witnesses and closing argument – and culminates in the students conducting a mock trial. Spring 2013 and Spring 2014 syllabi supplied.

20. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

To the best of my knowledge, I expect to receive no such income or benefits.

21. Outside Commitments During Court Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

If confirmed, my only future commitment is to teach trial advocacy at Boston University School of Law again during the Spring 2014 semester.

22. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

See attached Financial Disclosure Report.

23. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

See attached Net Worth Statement.

24. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, categories of litigation, and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

I am aware of no such persons, parties, categories of litigation, or financial arrangements, and anticipate no likely conflicts of interest.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

I would continue to follow the federal recusal statute and the Code of Conduct for Federal Judges. I also would continue to use the District Court's Judge Conflict/Exclusion List. This system sends me an alert if a listed person or entity is named as a party or counsel in any of my cases. I would continue to personally review each case assigned or referred to me for potential conflicts and, if necessary, I would seek advice from the Code of Conduct Committee of the Judicial Conference. I have erred, and always will err, on the side of caution.

25. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Each summer, I participate in the District Court's David Nelson Fellows Program, which is a mentoring program for disadvantaged high school students from Boston. One of the fellows is assigned to me from late June until mid-August. The fellows take classes arranged by the Court, meet with public officials, and become a part of chambers staff for the summer. In addition, I continue to mentor my former fellows.

Since 2005, I have volunteered with Discovering Justice, a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting civic education for young people in Massachusetts. The program brings teachers to the Courthouse for training in a civic curriculum it has developed; I regularly speak with these teachers. I also preside over a mock trial as part of Discovering Justice's annual mock trial program.

26. Selection Process:

- a. Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and the interviews in which you participated). Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, please include that process in your description, as well as whether the commission recommended your nomination. List the dates of all interviews or communications you had with the White House staff or the Justice Department regarding this nomination. Do not include any contacts with Federal Bureau of Investigation personnel concerning your nomination.

In 2013, Senator Warren formed a selection committee to consider applicants for the vacancies on the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts. I applied to the selection committee and was interviewed in May 2013 in Boston, Massachusetts. I met with Senator Warren and her staff on September 16, 2013, and then with Senator Markey and his staff on September 26, 2013 in Washington, D.C. Since September 30, 2013, I have been in contact with officials from the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. On December 3, 2013, I interviewed with attorneys from the White House Counsel's Office and the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C. On December 19, 2013, the President submitted my nomination to the Senate. On January 6, 2014, the President re-submitted my nomination to the Senate.

- b. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any currently pending or specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as seeking any express or implied assurances concerning your position on such case, issue, or question? If so, explain fully.

No.

VIII. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION OR EXPLANATIONS. (Indicate part of report.)

Part I Position - These positions were inadvertently omitted from my 2012 Annual Report. I earned no fees or income from any of these positions. Estate #1 held no reportable assets during the reporting period.

Lines 84, 104 (Trusts #s 4, 5) The valuation of each trust is listed as estimated because some of the assets of the trust are partial interests in illiquid limited partnerships. The value code was based upon the Cash Market value of the bank accounts and publicly traded assets combined with the trustee's estimate of the value of the partnership interests.

Line 233 - The income earned by this stock in 2013 was inadvertently omitted from my nomination report filed in December, 2013.

Line 237 This asset was inadvertently omitted from my nomination report filed in December, 2013.

Supplemental Notes With Amended Report

Line 15 - This asset appears on Line 14 of my 2012 Annual Report. It is the same asset with the name revised.

Line 59 - This asset appears on Line 96 of my 2012 Annual Report. It is the same asset with the name revised.

Line 204 - This asset appears on Line 250 of my 2012 Annual Report. It is the same asset with a new name.

The description of the asset listed on Line 121 of this report has been amended.

The asset listed on Line 59 of my 2012 Annual Report was sold in 2012, thus it does not appear on this nomination report. However, inadvertently, I omitted the Column D sale information from my 2012 Annual Report. The value code for the sale was L and the gain code F.

Trust #3 from my 2012 Annual Report (Lines 63-95 on the 2012 Annual Report), as of December 31, 2012, does not contain any reportable assets. On that date those members of my family who were beneficiaries of Trust #3 received a distribution of their proportionate share of the trust assets as reflected in Column D Line 63 of Part VII of my 2012 Annual Report. As of December 31, 2012, they ceased to have any interest whatsoever in Trust #3 or its remaining assets. Thus, neither Trust #3 nor its assets appear on this report.

The asset listed on Line 231 of my 2012 Annual Report was inadvertently omitted from this report. It now appears on Line 210.

The asset listed on Line 253 of my 2012 Annual Report was incorrectly listed on that report twice, once on Line 146 and again on Line 253. In preparing the nomination report, I corrected the mistake and listed the asset only once. It appears on Line 103.

- iv. whether you served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings and, if so, a description of the 10 most significant matters with which you were involved in that capacity.

I have not served as a mediator or arbitrator in alternative dispute resolution proceedings.

b. Describe

- i) the general character of your law practice and indicate by date when its character has changed over the years

While in the military, my initial years as a Judge Advocate were dominated by criminal trial practice in military courts-martial and general legal assistance to soldiers and their families in Europe. Later, in Litigation Division of the Department of the Army, my practice was entirely civil law in federal courts. Similarly, my work as General Counsel of the Defense Nuclear Agency and as Chief of the Administrative and Civil Law Division, The Judge Advocate General's Legal Center and School, was also primarily civil law. As Staff Judge Advocate, 3d Armored Division, Germany, I supervised a large legal (predominantly criminal) jurisdiction in central Europe with five separate offices.

Starting in 1991, my practice has been entirely in the area of environment, energy, and natural resources law. From 1991-1995, I served as the Chief, Environmental Enforcement Section, Environment and Natural Resources Division, and in 1995, was selected to be the career Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice. That practice has continued in my current position as President, Environmental Law Institute.

- ii) your typical clients and the areas at each period of your legal career, if any, in which you have specialized

In the military, my initial clients were soldiers that I represented in courts-martial and administrative discharge proceedings. As a military prosecutor, my client was the United States. Similarly, while at the U.S. Department of Justice, I represented the United States by and through many different federal agencies.

- c. Describe the percentage of your practice that has been in litigation and whether you appeared in court frequently, occasionally, or not at all. If the frequency of your appearances in court varied, describe such variance, providing dates.

While acting as a military judge advocate in my initial career, I practiced before military courts-martial and administrative elimination hearings. Later, in the Litigation Division at the Pentagon, my practice was predominantly before federal courts, and a few state courts, representing the Army and working with U.S. Attorneys and the U.S. Department of Justice. I also litigated one case before the Merit Systems Protection Board.

At the Department of Justice, my practice was almost all federal courts, with only a small part state courts or administrative agencies.

- i. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 1. federal courts 75%
 2. state courts of record 5%
 3. other courts (military) 15%
 4. administrative agencies 5%
- ii. Indicate the percentage of your practice in:
 1. civil proceedings 80%
 2. criminal proceedings 20%
- d. State the number of cases in courts of record, including cases before administrative law judges, you tried to verdict, judgment or final decision (rather than settled), indicating whether you were sole counsel, chief counsel, or associate counsel.

Although I participated in a large number of military cases, many of those were ultimately resolved by negotiated plea agreements. I estimate that about 12-15 reached a final verdict (and sentencing hearing). In addition, I was attorney of record in cases that I tried to completion in approximately five administrative hearings in the military and one case before the Merit Systems Protection board.

As Chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section, I supervised hundreds of cases and personally litigated in district court and argued appeals before the US Courts of Appeals for the 1st, 6th, and 9th Federal Circuits. As Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Acting Assistant Attorney General, I supervised several thousand cases, approved settlements and complaints, and led settlement negotiations in dozens of important cases.

- i. What percentage of these trials were:
 1. jury 25%
 2. Non-jury 75%
- e. Describe your practice, if any, before the Supreme Court of the United States. Supply four (4) copies of any briefs, amicus or otherwise, and, if applicable, any oral argument transcripts before the Supreme Court in connection with your practice.

I have not personally argued orally before the Supreme Court. I am a member of the Supreme Court Bar. During my time at the U.S. Department of Justice, I worked closely with the Office of the Solicitor General on cases arising before the Supreme Court for matters within the jurisdiction of the Environment, Energy, and Natural Resources Division. As Acting Assistant Attorney General, and in accordance with Department procedure, all briefs to the Supreme Court originating from work done by the Environment and Natural Resources Division included my name on the brief (including briefs filed at the certiorari stage and briefs filed at the merits stage).

15. Litigation: Describe the ten (10) most significant litigated matters which you personally handled, whether or not you were the attorney of record. Give the citations, if the cases were reported, and the docket number and date if unreported. Give a capsule summary of the substance of each case. Identify the party or parties whom you represented; describe in detail the nature of your participation in the litigation and the final disposition of the case. Also state as to each case:

- a. the date of representation;
- b. the name of the court and the name of the judge or judges before whom the case was litigated; and
- c. the individual name, addresses, and telephone numbers of co-counsel and of principal counsel for each of the other parties.

1. United States v Fleet Factors Corporation, 819 F. Supp. 1079 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

I supervised this litigation and jointly tried the case in District Court. This was an enforcement case brought under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) against owners of a textile printing facility and the secured creditor of the facility, seeking reimbursement of government costs associated with the removal of hazardous substances from the facility. The Court ruled in favor of the United States.

2. United States v Charles George Trucking, Inc., 34 F.3d 1081 (1st Cir. 1994).

I represented the United States in an appeal before the US Court of Appeals for the 1st Circuit and argued the case. The United States had agreed to two consent decrees that together resolved a majority of the cost recovery disputes associated with the cleanup of a hazardous waste site in Massachusetts. Appellants, who were the principal owners and operators of the site, appealed the district court's approval of the consent decrees. The Court upheld the position of the District Court, providing the standard of review for approving and reviewing federal consent decrees. This decision has been widely cited for its discussion of the correct legal standard for reviewing federal consent decrees, particularly those done under the authority of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act.

3. Environmental Protection Agency v Washington DC Water and Sewer Authority, U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia CV No. 1:CV00813TFH (December 2004)

I supervised this litigation and then was co-counsel for the settlement discussions. This was an enforcement case alleging illegal discharges of massive overflows of sewage contaminated storm water into the Anacostia River, Potomac River, and Rock Creek. During big storms and sudden snow melts, excessive runoff water was mixing with sewage in the District's combined sewer system, which exceeded the capacity of the sewer system. In an average rainfall year, District sewers were overflowing into the Anacostia River over 80 times. The parties reached a settlement. Under the settlement, virtually all of the District's sewage-laden storm runoff will be captured in three tunnels deep underground for processing later at a sewage treatment plant.

4. Environmental Protection Agency v. Production Plated Plastics, 955 F.2d 45 (6th Cir. 1992) RC 1415, 22 Env'tl. L. Rep. 20,899.

I represented the Environmental Protection Agency in this appeal and argued the case before the US Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit. This was an environmental enforcement case brought against the company and its owner for multiple violations of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and the Michigan Waste Management Act for the illegal discharge of hazardous substances. The District Court found the company and its president liable (United States v. Production Plated Plastics, Inc., 742 F.Supp. 956, 960-91 (W.D.Mich.1990), and they appealed. I presented the argument on behalf of EPA and the State of Michigan. The Court of Appeals upheld the District Court decision.

5. Environmental Protection Agency v City of New Orleans, Civil No 93-3212 (1998).

I supervised the litigation of this case from 1993 to 1998 and was lead counsel for the settlement, and later amendments, to the consent decree. This was an enforcement case brought primarily under the Clean Water Act for numerous unpermitted discharges by the City. After extensive litigation, the case was resolved in a well-publicized consent decree in April 1998 in which the Sewerage and Water Board agreed to renovate its sewage collection system to prevent future discharges, pay a $1.5 million penalty, and contribute $2 million for improving the water quality for Lincoln Beach on Pontchartrain Lake.

6. United States v ASARCO Inc. and Southern Peru Holdings Inc., No CV 02-2079-PHC-RCB, U.S. District Court, Arizona. January 2003

I supervised the litigation and was co-counsel for the negotiations. This was an enforcement case brought by the United States against the ASARCO Mining Company, and others, to recover past and future government restoration expenses for work at a large lead-contaminated site in Idaho. During the litigation ASARCO sought to divest itself of extremely valuable property and the United States moved in federal court to block the transfer of the property as it could render the company unable to meet all of its environmental obligations because of its precarious financial condition. To assure that the transaction would not take place without court review, the United States sought a preliminary injunction and ASARCO subsequently agreed not to transfer the asset until a settlement was reached with the United States. In settlement negotiations, which I led, the mining company agreed to set aside a fund of $100 million to fund an independent environmental trust to pay for cleanup of environmental contamination at sites for which ASARCO is responsible.

7. United States and State of Idaho v. ASARCO, Inc. and Hecla Mining Company, 430 F.3d 972 (9th Circuit 2005).

I supervised the litigation of this case and was co-counsel for settlement negotiations with Hecla Mining Company. This was an enforcement action brought by the United States and the Coeur d'Alene Tribe in 1996 against the Hecla Mining Company and others to establish liability for natural resource damages and recovery of government expenses for the cleanup of a heavily contaminated Superfund site in Idaho.

The case history included a 78-day trial in 2001. After many years of extensive litigation, including an appeal, the case against Hecla Mining Company was resolved by consent decree in 2011. Under the settlement, Hecla agreed to pay $263.4 million plus interest to the United States, the Coeur d'Alene Tribe and the State of Idaho to resolve claims stemming from releases of wastes from its mining operations. Settlement funds were dedicated to restoration and remediation of natural resources in the Coeur d'Alene Basin.

The settlement also includes a process for coordinating Hecla's future mining operations with cleanup activities in the Coeur d'Alene Basin.

8. United States v Marine Shale Processors, Inc., (W.D. La.) Marine Shale Processors, Defendant-Appellant, Cross-Appellee., 81 F.3d 1329, 91 F.3d 16 (5th Cir. 1996)

I supervised the litigation and appeal of this case, and directed all settlement negotiations. This was an environmental enforcement case brought by the United States in 1990 against Marine Shale Processors ("MSP") for alleged violations of a number of environmental statutes arising out of MSP's incineration of hazardous wastes in a 275 foot rotary kiln from 1985 to 1996. The State of Louisiana ("State") joined in the case as co-plaintiff. After a lengthy trial in 1994, the Court awarded the United States and the State civil penalties against MSP and its owner, totaling $8 million for violations of the Clean Air Act, Clean Water Act, and Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. On appeal in 1996, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed $4 million of the civil penalty award to the government, but remanded the remaining $4 million of the award for further district court proceedings. In 2006, the Court approved a settlement between the governments, MSP, and the site owner whereby the Court entered:

- a $6.2 million judgment for penalties in favor of the United States and the State against MSP; and
- a separate $7 million in proceeds from MSP were transferred to the State, which the State has used for the closure and remediation of the MSP facility.

I supervised the litigation and was co-counsel for the settlement negotiations. This was an enforcement case brought by the United States against BP for matters arising out of the Deepwater Horizon oil spill in 2010, which claimed the lives of eleven individuals and was one of the worse ecological disasters of our lifetime. The United States filed its civil complaint in 2009 under a number of federal statutes, including the Clean Water Act and the Oil Pollution Act. The litigation continues, but this interim settlement for $1 billion in restoration projects is being implemented now.

The following is an extract from the DoJ Press Release:

“Under an unprecedented agreement announced today by the Natural Resource Trustees for the Deepwater Horizon oil spill, BP has agreed to provide $1 billion toward early restoration projects in the Gulf of Mexico to address injuries to natural resources caused by the spill. The Trustees involved are Alabama; Florida; Louisiana; Mississippi; Texas; the Department of the Interior (DOI); and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA). The Department of Justice provided assistance in reaching the agreement.

“This early restoration agreement, the largest of its kind ever reached, represents a first step toward fulfilling BP’s obligation to fund the complete restoration of injured public resources, including the loss of use of those resources by the people living, working and visiting the area. The Trustees will use the money to fund projects such as the rebuilding of coastal marshes, replenishment of damaged beaches, conservation of sensitive areas for ocean habitat for injured wildlife, and restoration of barrier islands and wetlands that provide natural protection from storms.

“The agreement in no way affects the ultimate liability of BP or any other entity for natural resource damages or other liabilities, but provides an opportunity to help restoration get started sooner. The selection of early restoration projects will follow a public process, and will be overseen by the Trustees.

“The full natural resource damage assessment process will continue until the Trustees have determined the full extent of damages caused by the Deepwater Horizon oil spill. At the end of the damage assessment process, the Trustees will take into account any benefits that were realized from these early restoration projects. In addition to funding early restoration projects, BP will continue to fund the damage assessment and, together with the other responsible parties, will ultimately be obligated to compensate the public for the entire injury. BP is providing the early restoration funds voluntarily, and is not required to do so at this stage of the damage assessment process. The agreement will speed needed resources to the Gulf Coast in advance of the completion of the assessment process.”

10. Miller v Newbauer, No 87-6573 DC CV-85-7707-RMT, U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, 1988.

I argued this case on appeal. A former Air Force sergeant sued five Air Force officers for common law and constitutional causes of action and interference with an employment relationship. He sought a multi-million damage award. As the Court opinion observed, the plaintiff “had been having problems in his unit for some time,” and had received an unexcused absence letter and non-judicial punishment before resigning. The Court of Appeals upheld the District Court decision that the appellant’s suit was barred by Supreme Court precedent.

16. Legal Activities: Describe the most significant legal activities you have pursued, including significant litigation which did not progress to trial or legal matters that did not involve litigation. Describe fully the nature of your participation in these activities. List any client(s)

or organization(s) for whom you performed lobbying activities and describe the lobbying activities you performed on behalf of such client(s) or organizations(s). (Note: As to any facts requested in this question, please omit any information protected by the attorney-client privilege.)

- a. Serving as Deputy Assistant Attorney General or Acting Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resources Division. During the period 1995-2011, I served as Deputy Assistant Attorney General or Acting Assistant Attorney General (AAG), Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice. I served in that capacity in both Republican and Democratic Administrations for three different Presidents. As Acting AAG, I supervised over 650 individuals responsible for defending environmental challenges to government programs and activities, representing the United States in matters concerning the stewardship of the nation's natural resources and public lands, and bringing affirmative cases against those who violated the nation's anti-pollution laws. I worked with virtually every federal agency at all levels. During the time period that I was Acting AAG, the Environment and Natural Resources Division was rated the best place to work in the Federal Government.
- b. Advancing Environmental Enforcement. From 1991-1995, I was Chief, Environmental Enforcement Section, U.S. Department of Justice, supervising 250 individuals responsible for the nationwide enforcement of the nation's environmental statutes in federal court. During that time period, I supervised the consent decrees in Exxon Valdez oil spill, Love Canal, and all other federal civil environmental enforcement cases involving the United States. During that time period we had several record-breaking years in environmental enforcement extending over both Democratic and Republican Administrations. Subsequently, as the career Deputy Assistant Attorney General, I supervised all federal civil environmental enforcement from 1995 to 2011, over three different administrations. At the request of the State Department, I also lectured to the first South American judicial conference on environmental law, and later as the lead representative of the Department of Justice, provided keynote speeches at international environmental enforcement conferences.

Three examples of settlements that I supervised and/or negotiated during that time period are:

United States v Colonial Pipeline. I supervised this case which, at the time, was the largest civil penalty for an environmental enforcement case.

The following is an extract from the DoJ press release:

“The Department of Justice and the Environmental Protection Agency today announced a settlement with Colonial Pipeline Company, resolving charges that the company violated the Clean Water Act on seven recent occasions by spilling 1.45 million gallons of oil from its 5,500 mile pipeline in five states. Under the consent decree, Colonial will upgrade environmental protection on the pipeline at an estimated cost of at least $30 million, and pay $34 million, the largest civil penalty a company has paid in EPA history.

“The government maintained that pipeline corrosion, mechanical damage, and operator error in seven recent spills resulted in the release of approximately 1.45 million gallons of oil and other petroleum products into the environment, including numerous rivers, streams, and wetlands. Oil spills from the pipeline damaged a variety of aquatic systems. In one spill, more than 950,000 gallons of diesel fuel spilled into the Reedy River in South Carolina in 1996, killing 35,000 fish and other species of wildlife, and dispersing more than 34 miles downstream. It can take years for an ecosystem to recover from damage caused by an oil spill. Other spills forming the basis of the penalty occurred in Georgia, Tennessee, Louisiana, and North Carolina.”

United States v Virginia Electric Power Co. I supervised this case, which resulted in the largest Clean Air Act settlement of an enforcement matter against a utility. This settlement required Virginia Electric Power Co. (VEPCO), one of the nation’s largest coal-fired electric utilities, to install new pollution control equipment and upgrade existing controls on eight VEPCO plants, six in Virginia and two in West Virginia, comprising 20 electricity-generating units, costing an estimated $1.2 billion, dramatically reducing both sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxides emissions in Virginia and West Virginia. The settlement was the culmination of a well-coordinated partnership between EPA, the Justice Department and the states of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Virginia, West Virginia and the National Park Service. In addition to providing for major pollution reductions, VEPCO agreed to pay a $5.3 million civil penalty and spend at least $13.9 million for projects in each of the five states that participated in the case and its settlement to offset the impact of past emissions.

United States v Toyota. I led the settlement efforts in the environmental enforcement case against Toyota for alleged Clean Air Act violations. The United States alleged Toyota’s on-board diagnostic system, which advised drivers of emission control system leaks, did not work properly. The following is an extract of the DOJ press release:

“The Department of Justice and the Environment Protection Agency today announced a settlement of the government’s lawsuit against Toyota Motor Corporation for Clean Air Act violations involving 2.2 million vehicles manufactured between 1996 and 1998. Under the settlement, Toyota will spend $20 million on a supplemental environmental project to retrofit up to 3,000 public diesel fleet vehicles to make them run cleaner and extend the emission control system warranty on affected vehicles. In addition, Toyota will accelerate its compliance with certain new emission control requirements, and pay a $500,000 civil penalty.”

I continued this work as President of Environmental Law Institute. ELI has an active program training international judges in environmental law. I have spoken at training programs, coordinated study tours in the United States of judges and foreign enforcement or environmental officials, and advised federal and state agencies on creating effective and efficient enforcement programs. ELI does not lobby or litigate.

- c. Protecting the Public Fisc. From 1995-2011, I served as Deputy Assistant Attorney General or Acting Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resource Division, U.S. Department of Justice. In that capacity I supervised federal litigation designed to protect the public fisc, such as by seeking reimbursement for money spent by EPA in the cleanup of hazardous waste sites, defending the military from environmental challenges, defending federal agencies when money judgments were sought, and assuring that the government’s position was fully presented to each court.

The best example of this effort was my supervision of our action in bankruptcy against the American Smelting and Refining Company (ASARCO) mining company, the lead actor at sites across the United States with potential debts to many states and numerous federal agencies. After ASARCO filed bankruptcy, the United States filed the largest proof of claim in its history, and then litigated the claim before Judge Richard Schmidt of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Corpus Christi, Texas.

In August 2009, following lengthy litigation, the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas held a two-week hearing on competing plans of reorganization for ASARCO that would allow the company to be purchased out of bankruptcy.

In a case that I supervised and subsequently announced to the press, in December 2009 DoJ settled the largest environmental bankruptcy in U.S. history. ASARCO Mining Company agreed to pay $1.79 billion to fund environmental cleanup and restoration under bankruptcy reorganization of American Smelting and Refining Company LLC (ASARCO). The money from environmental settlements in the bankruptcy is being used to pay for past and future costs incurred by federal and state agencies at more than 80 sites contaminated by mining operations in 19 states, including Arizona, Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas, Utah, and Washington.

- d. Working constructively with States on Environmental Enforcement. As Chief of Environmental Enforcement, and later Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice, I made working cooperatively with State Attorneys General and environmental officials a high priority. I initiated meetings with the National Association of Attorneys General, worked on common projects, and visited State offices. And, I initiated a policy that we would alert and communicate with State Attorneys General before filing an enforcement case in their jurisdiction. As a result of these partnership efforts, ENRD has brought joint civil enforcement cases with nearly every state. These joint cases are particularly effective in achieving positive results in an efficient manner and build positive relationships.
- e. Advising Senior Military Commanders. While serving as a military judge advocate, I had the honor of teaching virtually every senior (brigade and higher) commander in the military in the mid-1980, in courses where we provided instruction on both criminal and civil law. In addition, I regularly traveled to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, to provide instruction to new battalion commanders on both criminal law and the law of armed conflict.
- f. Advancing trial practice education inside the U.S. Department of Justice. I instituted the very first set of instruction for new attorneys in the Environment Division, which has now led to a week long course on trial practice and legal ethics. I also emphasized mentorship and integrity to all new DoJ personnel and spoke to each new class of attorneys.
- g. Promoting Rule of Law. As President of the Environmental Law Institute (ELI), I oversee a staff of over 55 attorneys and scientists, united in working to assure that ELI “fosters innovative, just, and practical law and policy solutions to enable leaders across borders and sectors to make environmental, economic, and social progress.” ELI does not lobby or litigate, but works to advance the environment through publication, education, and research. Last year, for instance, ELI sponsored or co-sponsored over 80 educational programs while publishing the Environmental Law Reporter and The Forum magazine, as well as books and newsletters.

17. Teaching: What courses have you taught? For each course, state the title, the institution at which you taught the course, the years in which you taught the course, and describe briefly the subject matter of the course and the major topics taught. If you have a syllabus of each course, provide four (4) copies to the committee.

In the military as Chief, Administrative and Civil Law Division, The Judge Advocate General's Legal Center and School, Charlottesville, Virginia, I supervised all administrative and civil law instruction, lectured on a wide variety of subjects, and personally taught Federal Civil Litigation, Military Personnel Law, and Management. I also provided instruction to new General Officers and senior Commanders on military and administrative law. I have been unable to locate a course syllabus from this period.

18. Deferred Income/ Future Benefits: List the sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services, firm memberships, former employers, clients or customers. Describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

I have a 403(b) pension plan with the Environmental Law Institute. In addition, I am receiving a pension due to my prior federal government and military service.

19. Outside Commitments During Service: Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service? If so, explain.

None.

20. Sources of Income: List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, licensing fees, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (if you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here).

Please see SF-278 as provided by the Office of Government Ethics.

21. Statement of Net Worth: Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (add schedules as called for).

Please see attached Financial Statement (Net Worth).

22. Potential Conflicts of Interest:

- a. Identify the family members or other persons, parties, affiliations, pending and categories of litigation, financial arrangements or other factors that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest when you first assume the position to which you have been nominated. Explain how you would address any such conflict if it were to arise.

In connection with the nomination process, I have consulted with the Office of Government Ethics and the Department of Justice's designated agency ethics official to identify potential conflicts of interest. Any potential conflicts of interest will be resolved in accordance with the terms of an ethics agreement that I have entered into with the Department's designated agency ethics official.

- b. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedure you will follow in determining these areas of concern.

In the event of a potential conflict of interest, I would consult the Department's designated agency ethics official.

23. Pro Bono Work: An ethical consideration under Canon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each. If you are not an attorney, please use this opportunity to report significant charitable and volunteer work you may have done.

While in the federal government, I strongly advocated that government attorneys should be involved in pro bono service to the community, and often led that effort inside the Department of Justice. Although there are times where government attorneys could not be involved, we found that they could play a key role in staffing clinics and providing advice in conjunction with the District of Columbia Bar and local legal service providers.

As District of Columbia Bar President, I made federal government pro bono service my most significant initiative, which was recognized that year by the ABA President. In that capacity I wrote to each agency general counsel encouraging them to have their organization develop a pro bono program and to join in a council created at the Department of Justice to assist in pro bono work. To achieve my goals, I met with many of the federal agencies including the Department of Defense. We were quite successful. See one of my final DC Bar columns (attached) entitled "D.C. Bar Leads the Way in Government Pro Bono Service." Subsequently, I prepared an article on government pro bono for the Federal Bar Association entitled "Promoting Pro Bono Service for Government Attorneys," which is attached.

In 2008, I was elected to the Board of Governors for the District of Columbia Bar Foundation, a non-profit organization with a mission to "fund, support, and improve legal representation of the poor, vulnerable, and otherwise disadvantaged in the District of Columbia." The Foundation supports pro bono work and provides funds for civil legal aid and lawyer loan repayment assistance.

For the past ten years, I have been the swim coach of the Wakefield Special Olympic Swim Team, which now has approximately 70 mentally handicapped swimmers who practice weekly, and then compete in the spring and early summer of each year. In that capacity I am ably assisted by ten or more volunteer assistant coaches.

I have personally provided pro bono service by participating on numerous occasions in the monthly clinics sponsored by the District of Columbia Bar Association in Southeast Washington, DC.

I was appointed by the Chief Judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to be a member of the Standing Committee on Pro Bono Legal Services, and served in that capacity from 2006 to 2011. In that capacity, I authored or contributed to the federal agency portion of the annual pro bono reports, and met monthly with the Committee to advance pro bono service in the Federal Courts.

I am quite proud of the fact that the annual government pro bono award given in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia was named in 2011: "The John C. Cruden Federal Agency Pro Bono Leadership Award."

(NOTARY)

Statement for the Record of John C. Cruden
Before the Senate Judiciary Committee
February 25, 2014

Thank you, Chairman Franken, Ranking Member Grassley, and distinguished Members of this Committee.

It is an honor to appear before you today, and I thank you for considering my nomination. I appreciate the trust and confidence that both the President and the Attorney General have shown in me.

My career path may be considered unusual. I grew up in a small town in Michigan, the adopted son of a wonderful set of parents. After graduating from West Point, I became a military officer for the next several decades, first in ranger, airborne, and special forces units in Germany and Vietnam, and then as a military lawyer in a number of positions, starting as prosecutor and ultimately rising to the rank of Colonel and serving as the Chief Legislative Counsel of the Army. I am quite proud of my military service and continue to honor the patriotism and courage of our armed forces. The framed print on my wall in my office is of the West Point parade ground, with the names from the Vietnam memorial of my classmates who perished in that war superimposed, a constant reminder to me of what service means.

Following my military service, I became the Chief, Environmental Enforcement Section, Environment and Natural Resources Division, U.S. Department of Justice. In that position I was responsible for enforcing the nation's environmental laws in federal courts, and was fortunate to have an extraordinary group of attorneys and environmental professionals working with me. Later, I was selected to become the Division's career Deputy Assistant Attorney General, and was Acting Assistant Attorney General during two different Administrations. I continued in that position until I was selected to become the President of the Environmental Law Institute three years ago. ELI is a non-partisan organization that provides environment, energy, and natural resource publications, education, and research. The Institute has a governing board of distinguished corporate leaders, academicians, environmental organizations, and private practitioners, with a vision statement promoting "A healthy environment, prosperous economies, and vibrant communities founded on the rule of law."

It is a distinct honor to be considered for return to the Department of Justice to lead the Environment and Natural Resources Division, which has the responsibility of enforcing the laws enacted in Congress and defending federal agencies' implementation of those laws. In existence for over one hundred years, the Division is built upon a history of service, integrity, and adherence to the rule of law. It has broad responsibilities present in the thousands of cases under the Division's jurisdiction: enforcing the nation's civil and criminal pollution-control laws, defending environmental challenges to federal agency programs and activities, protecting the public fisc, representing the United States in matters concerning the stewardship of the nation's natural resources and public lands, acquiring real property, bringing and defending cases under the wildlife protection statutes, and litigating cases concerning Native American rights.

I am grateful to have had the opportunity to spend two decades at the Department of Justice and to have received the Presidential Rank Award from three different Presidents of both parties. During my time in the government I witnessed the extraordinary efforts of career public servants who work countless hours, representing the United States in federal courts across our great nation. The Division's backbone is those career professionals who have dedicated their lives to public service: upholding our laws, improving the environment, protecting our natural resources, and assuring the health and safety of our citizens. And I have had the pleasure of working with leaders from virtually every federal agency and the privilege to work collaboratively with a number of U.S. Attorneys and State Attorneys General. I have also enjoyed working with members of Congress and their staff in various roles, ranging from the critical oversight function that Congress serves as well as providing briefings and background information on important legal developments

If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I will focus on advancing the mission of the Environment and Natural Resources Division and zealously representing the United States in all of its activities, while adhering to the law, promoting integrity, listening to all sides of an issue, providing candid advice, treating everyone I encounter with fairness and respect, and honoring, supporting, and advancing the efforts of the career professionals who are the core of the Division.

Finally, I would like to recognize my family, for their love and support over the years. Without them, I would not be here. My wife, Sharon, who I first met in high school, married immediately after I graduated from West Point, and who has had a distinguished career as an educator of learning disabled young people. My two daughters, Kristen and Heather, are also superb professionals, who are also with me today, along with their husbands: Major Scott Campbell, and Travis Mason. Their children are Ryan, Lauren, Jonathan, and Katelyn and two of them are here today.

Thank you again for the opportunity to appear before you today and for your consideration. I look forward to answering your questions.

1. You were part of a judges panel on March 24, 2009. During the panel, one of the presenters said that all judges have biases and stereotypes they bring to the courtroom and that the judge needs to recognize them, set them aside and not let them cloud their views. Senator Chuck Grassley
John Charles Cruden, Nominee, Assistant Attorney General,
Environment and Natural Resources Division, United States Department of Justice

1. You have previously criticized the Clean Water Act's statutory framework establishing a permit system for regulation of so-called "point sources" of pollution and suggested that moving from a point-source-based regulatory structure to a broader statutory grant is something "[t]hat ought to be on everybody's wish list" in order to address more potential sources of water pollution.
 - a. Please describe the nature and scope of the regulatory framework that you envision as being preferable to the current point-source-based statutory grant.
 - b. If confirmed, how do you plan to address sources of water pollution like runoff areas and streets, i.e., non-point-source pollution, using the current regulatory framework?
2. The Clean Water Act restricts federal regulatory jurisdiction to the "navigable waters" of the United States, a term which has been variously defined in Rapanos and Carabell as those waters that are "relatively permanent" and have a "continuous surface connection," and also as waters that have a "significant nexus" to what was traditionally regarded as navigable waters. The EPA's position regarding Clean Water Act regulatory jurisdiction is that the Act empowers regulation of the "waters of the United States."
 - a. Do you agree with the EPA that "waters of the United States" is the proper extent of regulatory jurisdiction under the Act?
 - b. If so, will you advocate on behalf of the United States for regulatory jurisdiction over all "waters of the United States" under the Act?
 - c. If not, please describe what you believe to be the lawful extent of regulatory jurisdiction under the Act.
3. You have stated that the Department of Justice must be prepared to demonstrate Clean Water Act jurisdiction under the Scalia-plurality standard and the Kennedy standard outlined in Rapanos and Carabell and that "significant additional litigation resources must be devoted to addressing the concepts" related to the definition of "navigable waters" used in those opinions.
 - a. Please describe whether, if confirmed, you plan to devote "significant additional resources" to the litigation described above.
 - b. If so, please explain whether you anticipate taking resources from other areas of ENRD jurisdiction or whether reprioritizing ENRD's litigation goals would be necessary, in your view, to accomplish this goal.

4. In public statements you have routinely referred to the concept of “environmental justice.” For example, in a 2008 interview you suggested that promotion of “environmental justice” was necessary due to the “disproportionately high and adverse human health or environmental effects” of polluters’ “programs, policies, and activities on minority and low-income populations.” You have also publically stated that “[p]eople of color and the poor” bear a “disproportionate share of environmental burdens.”
 - a. Please explain what you mean by the concept of “environmental justice.”
 - b. Please describe how the concept of “environmental justice” will inform your decisionmaking if you are confirmed as Assistant Attorney General.
 - c. Please describe how the concept of “environmental justice” will inform the nature and scope of litigation you will undertake if confirmed as Assistant Attorney General.
5. In a 2013 article you described the EPA’s electronic reporting requirements imposed on states as “federalism, cooperative federalism at its best.” Please explain this statement.
6. Prior to your departure from ENRD in 2011, you had participated in the Deepwater Horizon Multidistrict Litigation that is currently underway in the Eastern District of Louisiana. If you are confirmed, please describe what role you anticipate ENRD will play in the litigation going forward and whether you plan to alter ENRD’s current litigation posture with respect to litigation strategy or potential settlement and discovery negotiations.
7. You have previously criticized Congress for its “failure...to enact comprehensive climate change legislation,” which, you maintained, “cost the United States its leadership position on this critical issue.” You also stated that “it is imperative for this Administration to accomplish as much as it can through implementing the Clean Air Act.”
 - a. Please describe in detail the steps you believe to be imperative with respect to the Administration’s implementation of the Clean Air Act.
 - b. Please describe how, if confirmed, you anticipate you will use Clean Air Act litigation to achieve the goals you described above.
 - c. Please describe how, if confirmed, you plan to demonstrate what you described as the United States’ “leadership position” in your work as Assistant Attorney General and, specifically, through Clean Air Act litigation.
8. You have previously stated that there is “much more we can and should do” than merely maintain a commitment to reducing domestic greenhouse gas emissions (“GHG”). Please describe what, if confirmed, you plan to undertake in ENRD to contribute to reduction of GHG emissions.

9. You have described the D.C. Circuit's holding in Coalition for Responsible Regulation v. EPA, as "critical" and a "superb start" to the regulation of GHG emissions. Assuming that the EPA's actions are upheld by the Supreme Court, please describe what role enforcement of the EPA's endangerment finding, tailoring rule, and the so-called "tailpipe rule" will play in litigation involving the ENRD if you are confirmed at its Assistant Attorney General.
10. In a recent ELI report entitled "Climate Change and New York City," you suggested that anthropogenic climate change was the likely cause – or at least a contributing cause – of Superstorm Sandy.
 - a. Please explain what role, if any, you believe anthropogenic climate change and, specifically, GHG emissions, played in Superstorm Sandy.
 - b. Please explain what role, if any, you believe anthropogenic climate change plays in (1) the variation in worldwide sea levels; (2) Arctic and Antarctic snow/ice coverage; (3) global average temperatures; and (4) the recent drought in California's Central Valley.
11. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving the Secure Border Initiative if you are confirmed.
12. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving so-called R.S. 2477 litigation if you are confirmed.
13. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving tribal-trust issues if you are confirmed.
14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.
15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Questions for John Cruden (AAG for Environment and Natural Resources Division)

Senator Cornyn:

- 1) The major environmental statutes (Air, Water, Waste, Endangered Species and others) have citizen suit provisions that allow environmental groups to bring suit against both the federal agency and private parties for failure to comply with statutory or regulatory provisions.
 - a. In the last five years, how many citizen suits have been filed against the federal government?
 - b. In the last five years how many citizen suits have been filed by environmental groups against private parties for alleged violations of any permit condition or emissions limitation?
 - c. In the last five years, how many citizen suits has the DOJ settled with outside organizations?
 - d. In the last five years, how many have resulted in the payment of attorneys' fees?
 - e. When the DOJ or the agency you represent pays attorneys' fees, what is the source of appropriated funds for the payment of these awards?
 - f. If confirmed, will you provide me a list of all citizen suit cases in which the U.S. paid attorneys' fees and the amount of each payment?
- 2) In 2011, two environmental groups settled a multi-district litigation with the Fish and Wildlife Service that resulted in a "work plan" for the agency to make endangered species list determinations for hundreds of species and the payment of expensive litigation fees to the plaintiffs. While the determinations may impact numerous states, communities, businesses and citizens, the settlement involved just one federal agency and two environmental groups willing to drown it in litigation. As head of ENRD, would you support efforts to improve the transparency of the settlement process and allow affected stakeholders to participate?
 - a. Would you commit to the DOJ posting on its website copies of all complaints filed against any agency as a result of notices of intent to sue?
 - b. Would you commit to DOJ posting on its website copies of all proposed consent decrees 30 days before submitting them to a court of law, to give stakeholders notice?
 - c. Would you commit to meeting with local officials when a settlement agreement is being worked out if a substantial part of their jurisdiction will be impacted?
- 3) What would you do to ensure that the agency does not agree to deadlines through settlements that do not provide sufficient time for EPA or DOI to meet its obligations under the Administrative Procedure Act, the Regulatory Flexibility Act, the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act, OMB Circular A-4, and other requirements that apply to EPA or DOI?

- 4) In a recent denial of several environmental groups' petition for a rulemaking under the Clean Air Act, Acting Administrator Robert Perciasepe stated that, "[e]ven under the best circumstances, the EPA cannot undertake simultaneously all actions related to clearly determined priorities as well as those requested by the public, and so the agency must afford precedence to certain actions while deferring others.... The EPA must prioritize its undertakings to efficiently use its remaining resources."
 - a. How should DOJ prioritize the rulemakings that EPA or DOI decide to pursue through the use of Consent Decrees?
 - b. Would you agree that the new commitments that EPA or DOI agree to in "sue and settle" agreements with environmental groups, including timetables for rulemakings or the listing of species, have an impact on EPA's or DOI's priorities as to the rulemakings or listings that it undertakes?
 - c. Would you agree that the new commitments that EPA or DOI agree to in "sue and settle" agreements with environmental groups, including timetables for rulemakings, have an impact on EPA's or DOI's budgetary resources?
- 5) Out of all of the rules for which EPA has deadlines, how many of them have been met? And, how many of those deadlines have been missed?
- 6) Once an agency submits to a Consent Decree it is under the jurisdiction of the federal court and subject to contempt should it not comply with the Consent Decree. Since EPA issues between 300 – 400 regulations a year while entering into an average of 15 Sue and Settle Consent Decrees, it appears that those 15 Sue and Settle Consent Decrees under court supervision become the agency's priority rules for implementation. Isn't it correct that under Sue and Settle private parties are setting priorities for EPA and DOI?
- 7) Since, according to a CEI study, EPA cannot meet over 90% of all its statutory deadlines, the agency could theoretically be subject to a lawsuit on several hundred more regulations a year. How would you address this dilemma? Should we restrict citizens' suits or should we legislate longer time periods for agency regulatory actions?
- 8) Senator Vitter sent the Department of Justice a letter in October 2013 raising serious concerns about an armed raid conducted by EPA agents of a mine in Alaska.
 - a. Are you aware of this letter?
 - b. Would you commit the Department to answering Senator Vitter's letter?

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Do you "expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary" in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Gregg Jeffrey Costa
Nominee, Circuit Judge
United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

- 1. Do you believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor has any or should have any influence in the outcome of a case? Please explain.

Response: No. The outcome of a case should be determined by an objective evaluation of the relevant facts and legal authorities.

- 2. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is a commitment to fairly and impartially administering the law. This requires approaching each case with an open mind rather than any preconceived views, giving careful consideration to the arguments of both sides, and reaching the legally correct result regardless of the result's popularity. I believe that I have exhibited this quality during my time serving as a district judge.

- 3. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge should keep an open mind about the issues in a case; respect the parties, lawyers, and other participants in the judicial process; appreciate that every case is significant to the parties involved regardless of its broader ramifications; and maintain a sense of humility when exercising the significant power our system entrusts to federal judges. I have strived to demonstrate these qualities while serving as a district judge and would continue to try and exhibit these qualities if I am confirmed to serve on the court of appeals.

- 4. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts, and Federal Circuit precedents are binding on the Court of International Trade. Are you committed to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Yes.

- 5. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In interpreting a constitutional provision, statute or regulation, I would first analyze whether the provision's plain language resolved the issue. If ambiguity existed, I would apply commonly accepted canons of construction, take into account the structure and purpose of the term at issue and related provisions, and consider case law interpreting analogous terms.

6. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply the decision even if I believed it was wrongly decided.

7. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: The principle of constitutional avoidance counsels that a court should avoid declaring a federal statute unconstitutional when an alternative basis exists for ruling in favor of the party making the constitutional challenge. When an alternative basis does not exist, a federal court should declare a federal statute unconstitutional only when the law exceeds the scope of the federal government's enumerated powers, impermissibly infringes on an individual constitutional right, or violates some other constitutional provision.

8. Please describe your understanding of the workload of the Fifth Circuit. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: My understanding is that the Fifth Circuit is one of the busiest federal courts of appeals, second only to the far larger Ninth Circuit in terms of caseload. Managing that caseload in a manner that allows for both careful consideration of each case and prompt dispositions depends primarily on two things. The first is having procedures in place that maximize the efficiency of chambers' staff. On that issue, if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I will seek advice from Fifth Circuit judges about their procedures and implement those that seem to be the most efficient. The second factor is a willingness to work hard. If confirmed, I will bring to the Fifth Circuit the same work ethic I have displayed as a teacher, lawyer, and district judge.

9. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community," in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: I do not believe it is appropriate to rely on foreign law or the views of the "world community" when determining the meaning of the Constitution and would not rely on those materials unless required to do so by binding Supreme Court or circuit precedent.

10. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: First, as a district judge I have based my decisions on precedent, text, and other legal authorities rather than political ideology. Second, I have a strong belief that an independent judiciary committed to the impartial administration of justice is one of the most important features of our constitutional system.

- 11. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: Please see above response to Question 10.

- 12. Under what circumstances, if any, do you believe an appellate court should overturn precedent within the circuit? What factors would you consider in reaching this decision?

Response: Overturning circuit precedent is rarely appropriate. A federal court of appeals can only overturn its own precedent when it sits as a full court. Such an en banc hearing is ordinarily warranted only when (1) it is needed to “maintain uniformity of the court’s decisions” or (2) the case “involves a question of exceptional importance.” See FED. R. APP. P. 35.

- 13. As a district judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: If the case involves the interpretation of a statute, regulation or procedural rule, the first thing I read is the text of the provision. Next I read the parties’ briefs. After reading the briefs, I review Supreme Court and Fifth Circuit precedent that addresses the issues. If the proper decision is not clear at that point, I will consider persuasive authority from other courts and rely on that case law to the extent I think the opinion is well reasoned.

- 14. Do you think that collegiality is an important element of the work of a Circuit Court? If so, how would you approach your work and interaction with colleagues on the Court?

Response: Yes. One of the biggest differences between the work of trial and appellate judges is that the latter make judicial rulings in consultation with colleagues. Discussing and deciding cases with colleagues is one of the aspects of the court of appeals position that I most look forward to if I am fortunate enough to be confirmed. Collegiality requires keeping an open mind, listening to the views of one’s colleagues, and, when disagreement remains after that process, doing so in a respectful manner that avoids personal attacks.

- 15. At a speech in 2005, Justice Scalia said, “I think it is up to the judge to say what the Constitution provided, even if what it provided is not the best answer, even if you think it should be amended. If that’s what it says, that’s what it says.”

a. Do you agree with Justice Scalia?

Response: Yes.

b. Do you believe a judge should consider his or her own values or policy preferences in determining what the law means? If so, under what circumstances?

Response: No.

16. Do you think judges should consider the “current preferences of the society” when ruling on a constitutional challenge? What about when seeking to overrule longstanding Supreme Court or circuit precedent?

Response: No. The premise of the Constitution, including its amendments, is that the American people have decided that principles or rights are so vital that they should be elevated to constitutional status and therefore are immune from future changes in public opinion (absent the supermajoritarian process of a subsequent constitutional amendment). The Constitution thus must be applied regardless whether a particular provision continues to enjoy popular support. Therefore, absent binding Supreme Court or Fifth Circuit precedent directing otherwise, I would not consider the “current preferences of the society” in ruling on a constitutional challenge or deciding whether to overrule circuit precedent (and I would not have the authority to overrule Supreme Court precedent).

17. What is your judicial philosophy on applying the Constitution to modern statutes and regulations?

Response: The Constitution applies to modern statutes and regulations the same way it has applied to older legal enactments.

18. What role do you think a judge’s opinions of the evolving norms and traditions of our society have in interpreting the written Constitution?

Response: As discussed in response to Question 16 above, allowing the modern-day popularity of a constitutional provision to affect its interpretation is inconsistent with the very notion of a written Constitution. Therefore, unless Supreme Court or circuit precedent dictated otherwise, I would not consider the evolving norms and traditions of our society when interpreting the Constitution.

19. What is your understanding of the current state of the law with regard to the interplay between the establishment and free exercise clause of the First Amendment?

Response: The Supreme Court has explained that “‘there is room for play in the joints between’ the Free Exercise and Establishment Clauses, allowing the government to accommodate religion beyond free exercise requirements, without offense to the Establishment Clause.” Cutter v. Wilkinson, 544 U.S. 709 (2005). I have not been confronted with an issue involving the interplay of the religion clauses as a district judge. If confronted with such an issue in the future, as with all issues, I would keep an open mind and reach a decision after careful consideration of the parties’ arguments, the factual records, and the relevant legal authorities, including Cutter.

20. Do you believe that the death penalty is an acceptable form of punishment?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the death penalty is constitutionally permissible when applied to certain categories of crime and when certain procedures are followed. I would follow binding Supreme Court and Fifth Circuit precedent with respect to the death penalty, as I would for any other area of the law.

21. Some people refer to the Constitution as a “living” document that is constantly evolving as society interprets it. Do you agree with this perspective of constitutional interpretation?

Response: One of the greatest achievements of the Constitution is that the system of government it created has endured and continues to thrive in a twenty-first century environment that is far different from the eighteenth-century environment in which it was created. That does not mean however that the meaning of its provisions “is constantly evolving as society interprets it.” The principles enshrined in the Constitution at different times in this nation’s past do not change or evolve based on current public opinion. A judge’s responsibility is to apply those historic principles to modern situations.

22. Do you believe there is a right to privacy in the U.S. Constitution?

a. Where is it located?

Response: The word “privacy” does not appear in the Constitution, but the Supreme Court has recognized that the Fourth Amendment protects privacy interests, see United States v. Jones, 132 S. Ct. 945, 950 (2012) (explaining that the Supreme Court has often determined when a search occurs by deciding whether “government officers violate a person’s ‘reasonable expectation of privacy’” (citing Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347, 360 (1967) (Harlan, J., concurring))), particularly those associated with the home, see, e.g., Wilson v. Layne, 526 U.S. 603, 610 (1999) (“The Fourth Amendment embodies this centuries-old principle of respect for the privacy of the home.”). The Court has also held that the Due Process Clause protects an interest in “marital privacy.” See Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720 (1997).

b. From what does it derive?

Response: Please see response to Question 22(a).

c. What is your understanding, in general terms, of the contours of that right?

Response: If a case came before me that invoked the privacy interests described in response to Question 22(a), as with all issues, I would carefully consider the facts of the case and legal authorities related to the precise issue presented.

23. In Griswold, Justice Douglas stated that, although the Bill of Rights did not explicitly mention the right to privacy, it could be found in the “penumbras” and “emanations” of the Constitution.

- a. Do you agree with Justice Douglas that there are certain rights that are not explicitly stated in our Constitution that can be found by “reading between the lines”?

Response: The Supreme Court’s current approach to determining whether the Constitution protects an unenumerated right is to evaluate whether the claimed right is “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition” and “‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty’ such that neither ‘liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.’” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (citations omitted). Glucksberg is the precedent I would follow in this area.

- b. Is it appropriate for a judge to go searching for “penumbras” and “emanations” in the Constitution?

Response: That approach is not consistent with current Supreme Court precedent.

24. In Brown v. Entertainment Merchants Ass’n, Justice Breyer supplemented his opinion with appendices comprising scientific articles on the sociological and psychological harm of playing violent video games.

- a. When, if ever, do you think it is appropriate for appellate judges to conduct research outside the record of the case?

Response: In terms of the factual record, as a general matter appellate judges should consider only the trial court record. I would rely on outside sources to supplement the factual record only when authorized to do so by court rules.

- b. When, if ever, do you think it is appropriate for appellate judges to base their opinions psychological and sociological scientific studies?

Response: This would be appropriate if the trial court record contained such studies. That situation would typically arise if an expert witness relied on such studies in his or her trial testimony.

25. The Fifth Circuit recently reversed your opinion in Voting for America, Inc. v. Andrade and disagreed with your holdings that a variety of provisions of Texas election law ran afoul of the First Amendment and the National Voter Registration Act. The Circuit disagreed with your holding that various activities comprising voter registration drives constituted expressive conduct within the meaning of the First Amendment.

a. What is your view of the scope of non-speech conduct that qualifies as expressive activity protected by the First Amendment?

Response: The Supreme Court has found that non-speech conduct qualifies as expressive activity in a number of situations in which the expressive activity conveyed a political message. See, e.g., Tinker v. Des Moines Indep. Cmty. Sch. Dist., 393 U.S. 503 (1969) (finding that wearing arm bands to protest the Vietnam War was entitled to First Amendment protection); United States v. O'Brien, 391 U.S. 367 (1968) (indicating that burning a draft card was entitled to First Amendment protection, though holding that the government was justified in prohibiting the practice); Brown v. Louisiana, 383 U.S. 131 (1966) (finding that sit-ins to protest segregation were entitled to First Amendment protection). Most commonly, though not exclusively (see Barnes v. Glen Theatre, Inc., 501 U.S. 560, 566 (1991)), such expressive activity will convey a political message, as such messages lie at the core of the First Amendment.

b. Do you believe that the Circuit correctly held that the activities in question in Andrade are not entitled to First Amendment protection?

Response: The Fifth Circuit held that “there is nothing ‘inherently expressive’ about receiving a person’s completed [voter registration] application and being charged with getting that application to the proper place.” Voting for America v. Steen, 732 F.3d, 382, 392 (5th Cir. 2013). The Fifth Circuit did find that regulating the compensation of persons involved in voter registration activity implicated First Amendment concerns, see id. at 398 (“Because the provision applies to all persons—not just [volunteer deputy registrars]—and covers any activity that facilitates voter registration, it encompasses activities that involve expression, including voter drives where canvassers seek to persuade eligible voters to register.”), but adopted a narrowing construction of those statutes that avoided the constitutional concern, see id. at 397-98. As with all binding precedent, this is the law that I would follow on this issue.

c. Do you believe that the Circuit’s decision is consistent with the Supreme Court’s decisions in Meyer v. Grant and Buckley v. American Constitutional Law Foundation?

Response: When I issued my decision, there was no Fifth Circuit precedent addressing whether those cases, which addressed First Amendment protections applicable to circulators of ballot-initiative petitions, also applied to voter registration campaigns. My approach was similar to the other federal district courts that had addressed the issue, all of which had found that Meyer and Buckley did extend to voter registration activity. A majority of the Fifth Circuit panel disagreed with respect to the Texas laws aimed solely at volunteer deputy registrars and distinguished Meyer and Buckley, and as a judge I am bound to follow that precedent.

d. Please explain the legal reasoning that led you to criticize the Texas Secretary of State for not producing evidence of “rampant fraud” committed by out-of-state VDRs.

Response: During the course of this litigation, I held a two-day hearing on the plaintiffs’ motion for a preliminary injunction. Among the criteria judges have to weigh when deciding whether to grant a preliminary injunction is the balance of harms—in this case, whether plaintiffs could demonstrate that the harms they would suffer if an injunction was not entered outweighed any harm the state would suffer if an injunction was entered. The Texas Secretary of State, as a defendant, elected not to call any witnesses or introduce any exhibits. I was not criticizing this litigation decision, but pointing out its impact on the balance of harms I was required to conduct. As a consequence of the evidence that was submitted during the hearing, the plaintiffs could point to a substantial evidentiary record in support of the claimed harm to their registration activities whereas the Secretary of State did not have any evidence in the record demonstrating how the injunction would undermine her efforts to combat voter fraud (which is a recognized state interest under the Supreme Court’s decision in Crawford v. Marion County Election Bd., 553 U.S. 181 (2008)).

e. Do you believe that a State must demonstrate voter fraud before enacting provisions that require voters to present identification prior to voting?

Response: In Crawford, the Supreme Court recognized a state interest in preventing voter fraud even when the “record contain[ed] no evidence of any such fraud actually occurring in Indiana at any time in its history.” 553 U.S. at 194.

f. If so, what quantum of voter fraud do you believe is necessary?

Response: According to Crawford, no quantum is necessary to recognize that the state has an interest in preventing voter fraud.

26. In a 1999 law review article, you applied what you described as a “textual-contextual framework” in analysis of certain historical texts. Do you believe the “textual-contextual framework” is a tool of statutory interpretation appropriate for judges to apply?

Response: I discussed that framework, which is used by some historians, in the context of a note I wrote during law school. The note provided a historical account of Chief Justice John Marshall’s views on free speech issues that he confronted prior to his appointment to the Supreme Court, focusing primarily on the controversy over the Sedition Act. That framework, which is used for historical scholarship, is not an approach that I would use for statutory interpretation. For questions of statutory interpretation, different considerations of text and context are commonly accepted as appropriate. See, e.g., Lawson v. FMR LLC,

No. 12-3 (U.S. Mar. 4, 2013) (Scalia, J., concurring) (holding that the majority's resolution of a question of statutory interpretation "logically flows from [the statute's] text and broader context" but noting his disagreement with "the Court's occasional excursions beyond the interpretative terra firma of text and context").

27. In a 2012 interview you expressed your view that white-collar criminals are "more blameworthy" than socially disadvantaged offenders. Please explain this statement.

Response: I was asked the following during an interview: "As a prosecutor, what motivated your focus on white-collar crimes?" My full answer was as follows: "There are a lot of crimes in our society born of desperation. That doesn't excuse them, but it's worth considering that these are people who see themselves as having no other options. Other crimes are born of greed or arrogance. To me, that's more blameworthy in a sense. Often the 18-year-old who has never had any real opportunities is getting a stiffer sentence than the businessman who has had every opportunity, and that's no way to build trust in the justice system." I was trying to capture the idea that in order for society to have confidence in our criminal justice system, they need to see rich and poor individuals alike held accountable when they violate the law. Of course, personal motivations for prior career decisions, like any other personal views I have, do not influence my rulings as a judge.

28. As a judge, does a criminal defendant's social, economic, or class status inform your judgment as to what is the appropriate sentence to render?

Response: No, unless the Sentencing Guidelines provide for enhanced punishment based on a defendant's employment status when the crime was committed as is this case for those who abuse a position of public trust or use a special skill, see U.S.S.G. § 3B1.3, or, for violations of the securities laws, if the defendant was an officer or director of a publicly traded company, a registered broker or dealer, or an investment advisor, see U.S.S.G. § 2B1.1(18). Apart from these and other situations in which the Sentencing Guidelines provide status enhancements, social, economic, or class status should not inform the sentencing decision. Congress has directed that among the many factors a judge must consider when sentencing a defendant is the "nature and circumstances of the offense," 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(1), which might include consideration of the motive for the criminal activity.

29. Do you believe that socially disadvantaged defendants are entitled to less severe punishment than other defendants who commit the same offense conduct?

Response: No. Uniformity in sentencing when the offense conduct and other relevant factors are similar is an important principle. It was a concern about sentencing disparities that motivated the comments I made in the 2012 interview. I was expressing a concern that defendants who lack significant financial resources often receive "stiffer sentence[s]" than white-collar criminals who typically have greater financial resources. That is a common perception of the criminal justice system—and a perception that is borne out by what I observed during my years as a federal prosecutor and my knowledge of federal sentencing statistics. In terms of sentencing data I have seen, white-collar defendants receive below-Guidelines sentences and sentences of probation at higher rates than other offenders.

30. What standard of scrutiny do you believe is appropriate in a Second Amendment challenge against a Federal or State gun law?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that a more exacting level of scrutiny than rational basis applies to Second Amendment challenges. See District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 628 n.27 (2008). However, the Supreme Court has not announced the precise level of scrutiny lower courts should apply in such cases. In reaching a decision on this issue, I would of course be bound by Fifth Circuit case law. See, e.g., NRA v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives, 700 F.3d 185, 195 (5th Cir. 2012) (explaining, in case involving challenge to federal laws that prohibit federally licensed firearms dealers from selling handguns to persons under the age of 21, that a “regulation that threatens a right at the core of the Second Amendment—for example, the right of a law-abiding, responsible adult to possess and use a handgun to defend his or her home and family—triggers strict scrutiny” . . . but intermediate scrutiny applies as to “less severe regulation [] that does not encroach on the core of the Second Amendment”).

31. What would be your definition of an “activist judge”?

Response: An activist judge is one who follows his or her own policy preferences rather than the law.

32. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: After reading the questions, I conducted research and drafted answers. I then shared my draft answers with the Office of Legal Policy at the Department of Justice. After discussing my answers with an attorney in the Office of Legal Policy, I made revisions and finalized the answers for submission to the Committee.

33. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Gregg Jeffrey Costa
Nominee, Circuit Judge
United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

- 1. Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: Etched into the facade of the law school I attended are the words "That they may truly and impartially administer justice." Though intended as a command for all the future lawyers entering the law school, it is a particularly apt description of a judge's duty. "Truly," meaning a judge should faithfully apply precedent and other governing legal authorities to the facts of the case. "Impartially," meaning a judge should follow the law without regard to the wealth or status of the litigants or public reaction to the decision. In terms of Supreme Court Justices, given the variety of issues that they decide, I am unable to select one whose philosophy would most closely mirror mine. I did have the great honor of serving as law clerk to Chief Justice William Rehnquist, from whom I learned a number of important lessons. Perhaps most relevant to the court of appeals position to which I have been nominated, Chief Justice Rehnquist always maintained very good relationships with his colleagues, an accomplishment attributable in large part to his sense of humor and humility.

- 2. Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: A court should consider originalist sources when interpreting a constitutional provision on which precedent has not provided an answer. Evidence concerning original public meaning is typically the most persuasive originalist evidence. See District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 605 (2008).

- 3. If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed as a court of appeals judge, I would not have the authority to overrule Supreme Court precedent. A court of appeals only has authority to overrule one of its own precedents when sitting as a full court. One of the limited circumstances in which it would be appropriate for an en banc court to overrule circuit precedent is when such a ruling is "necessary to secure or maintain uniformity of the court's decisions." See FED. R. APP. 35. Another situation would be when an intervening Supreme Court decision has cast doubt on the circuit precedent.

4. Explain whether you agree that “State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power.” Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confronted with the issue presented in Garcia, I would be bound to follow its holding, as with all Supreme Court precedent. In other cases involving federalism issues, however, the Supreme Court has found limitations on federal power to be judicially enforceable and rejected arguments that political safeguards alone are sufficient. Compare United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 590, 616 n.7 (rejecting the dissent’s argument that Garcia means that the scope of federal power would be “defined solely by the political branches”), with id. at 649 (Souter, J., dissenting) (arguing that the “Garcia Court’s rejection of ‘judicially created limitations’ in favor of the intended reliance on national politics was all the more powerful . . .”); see also Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898 (1997) (finding that provisions of the Brady Bill violated state sovereign rights over a dissent which cited Garcia for the argument that “the principal means chosen by the Framers to ensure the role of the States in the federal system lies in the structure of the Federal Government itself”). If a case presenting these issues came before me, I would carefully examine and take into account all relevant Supreme Court decisions.

5. Do you believe that Congress’ Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has emphasized the non-economic nature of the activity being regulated in decisions holding that federal laws exceeded the scope of the Commerce Clause. See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 610-11, 613 (2000); United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 560-61, 566-67 (1995). The Supreme Court has not held, however, that an exercise of the Commerce Clause power could never reach non-economic activity. In his synthesis of the caselaw in this area, Justice Scalia concluded that “Congress may regulate even non-economic activity if that regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce.” Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005) (Scalia, J., concurring).

6. What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: A President’s ability to issue executive orders or actions “must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself.” Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952). The Supreme Court has adopted the “tripartite scheme” set forth in Justice Jackson’s concurrence in the Steel Seizure Case as the legal framework governing this issue. See Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008) (quoting Youngstown, 343 U.S. at 635 (Jackson, J., concurring)).

7. When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine when it is “deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition . . . and implicit in the concept of ordered liberty.” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 721 (1997) (internal quotations and citations omitted).

8. When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that classifications that are “so seldom relevant to the achievement of any legitimate state interest,” such as those based on race, are subject to strict scrutiny. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Center, 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985). Classifications that “frequently bear[] no relation to ability to perform or contribute to society,” such as sex, are subject to intermediate scrutiny. Id. at 440-41.

9. Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: Regardless of any personal expectations I may or may not have, I would follow Grutter (and other precedent in this area such as Fisher v. University of Texas, 570 U.S. __ (2013)) when confronted with an issue concerning the use of racial preferences in public higher education.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Tanya S. Chutkan
Nominee, United States District Court for the District of Columbia

- 1. Do you believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor has any or should have any influence in the outcome of a case? Please explain.

Response: I do not believe that a judge's gender, ethnicity, or other demographic factor has or should have any influence in the outcome of a case.

- 2. You have spent part of your career working as a criminal defense attorney.

- a. How will you transition from the role of advocate to that of a judge?

Response: In my career, I have represented a wide range of clients in criminal and civil litigation, and have tried close to 40 cases. As a result, I fully appreciate the separate role of the judge as a neutral arbiter, and while the transition from advocate to judge will be significant, I do not anticipate that it will be difficult. If confirmed as a District Judge, I will at all times bear in mind that my duty is to be impartial, to follow binding precedent, and to maintain the rule of law.

- b. What assurances can you provide that will assuage any concerns that you will have a bias in criminal cases?

Response: As a practicing lawyer, I have represented both plaintiffs and defendants in criminal and civil matters. As a result, I understand the importance of appearing before judges who are open to hearing arguments on both sides and who will rule impartially, without any bias whatsoever. I believe that I have a reputation in the legal community as someone who is reasonable, fair, and unbiased.

- 3. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: The most important attribute of a judge is the ability to hear and decide cases based on applicable law and precedent and with complete impartiality. I believe I possess that attribute.

- 4. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A judge should be open minded, prepared to listen, and should treat everyone who enters their courtroom with courtesy, patience and respect. I believe that I possess those qualities.

5. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: Stare decisis is the bedrock of our legal system. If confirmed, I will faithfully follow controlling Supreme Court and D.C. Circuit precedent and apply them to the cases that come before me, regardless of whether I personally agree or disagree with those precedents.

6. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In deciding a case of first impression, I would first review the text of the applicable law or statute at issue, to determine if applying the plain language of the law or statute would allow me to decide the case. If the meaning of the provision was not clear from its text, I would look to Supreme Court or D.C. Circuit precedent involving analogous provisions. Absent such precedent, I would look to relevant cases from other circuits and districts for their persuasive authority, and in limited circumstances, where appropriate, I would examine the intent and history of the provision.

7. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply all controlling Supreme Court or D.C. Circuit precedent, regardless of any personal opinion I might have regarding that precedent.

8. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Statutes enacted by Congress are presumed to be constitutional, and a court should declare a statute unconstitutional only in the most limited of circumstances. Such circumstances may include when a statute clearly violates a provision of the Constitution, or where Congress has exceeded its constitutional authority. In considering a constitutional challenge, a district judge must apply any controlling Supreme Court or relevant Circuit Court precedent.

9. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the “world community”, in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No.

10. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: A judge's rulings should never be affected by political ideology or motivation. I can state unreservedly that should I be confirmed, my rulings will be based on text and precedent, and my decisions will be made solely on the application of the law to the facts.

11. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: I have been a criminal and civil litigator for more than 25 years, during which I represented individuals, corporations, and small businesses. Throughout my career, I have represented all parties with equal diligence, regardless of any personal beliefs and without regard to my clients' political beliefs, social status, or economic status. I have endeavored to maintain the highest ethical standard, and to treat people fairly, and with respect. If confirmed, I intend to be faithful to my judicial oath and to uphold the rule of law with impartiality.

12. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I intend to manage my caseload by maintaining reasonable and efficient schedules in all matters, deciding motions and other issues promptly, making appropriate use of Magistrate Judges, and encouraging dispute resolution through mediation where appropriate.

13. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Judges play an important role in conducting the fair and prompt resolution of matters that come before them. If confirmed, I intend to ensure that cases move efficiently by ruling on motions promptly, encouraging dispute resolution, and adhering to scheduling orders.

14. You have spent your entire legal career as an advocate for your clients. As a judge, you will have a very different role. Please describe how you will reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you will look for guidance. What do you expect to be most difficult part of this transition for you?

Response: If confirmed, I intend to resolve legal issues based on applicable constitutional and statutory provisions, along with Supreme Court and D.C. Circuit precedent. I have been fortunate to have had substantial criminal litigation experience in the District of Columbia courts, which adhere to the Federal Rules of Evidence, and to have experience in a wide range of civil matters in federal courts throughout the country. However, I have not had extensive experience in federal sentencing issues, and I expect to fully familiarize myself with the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines, which serve a very important function by helping to ensure consistency and uniformity in sentencing, and to thoroughly avail myself of the substantial resources available to assist me in making a smooth transition.

15. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

16. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the questions on March 4, 2014. I personally drafted my responses that evening and the next day and forwarded my draft to members of the Department of Justice Office of Legal Policy for review and comment. I then finalized my answers and authorized them to be submitted on my behalf.

17. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Senator Ted Cruz
Questions for the Record

Tanya S. Chutkan
Nominee, United States District Court for the District of Columbia

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: I believe a judge should be impartial, open-minded, prepared, and respectful to all who come before him or her. I do not consider myself to be a student of the philosophies of the Supreme Court justices, and therefore do not have a view as to whose philosophy is most analogous with mine.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The Supreme Court has examined the original public meaning of constitutional provisions in deciding on the constitutionality of statutes, see, e.g., District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), and, if confirmed, I will follow this and all other binding precedent.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: I would not under any circumstance overrule precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confirmed to be a District Judge, I would apply Garcia and all other binding precedents, regardless of whether I agreed or disagreed with them.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that the Commerce Clause authorizes the regulation of three categories of activity: (1) "the use of the channels of interstate commerce," (2) "the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce," and activities that threaten such instrumentalities, persons or things, and (3) "activities that substantially affect interstate commerce." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-559 (1995); see also United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 613 (2000) and Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005) (Scalia, J. concurring) ("Congress may regulate even noneconomic local activity if that regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation of interstate commerce.”). Although the Court highlighted the non-economic nature of the activity being regulated in Lopez and Morrison before striking down the statute or portion of the statute that was at issue in those cases, it has not specifically excluded non-economic activity from congressional regulation. If confirmed, I would apply the analysis set forth in Lopez, Morrison, Raich, and other applicable precedents in determining whether an activity is covered by the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The President’s ability to issue executive orders or take executive action is limited by the authority granted to him in the Constitution or by an act of Congress. In Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 635-638 (1952), Justice Jackson, in his concurrence, defined the judicially enforceable limits on presidential acts, and the Supreme Court has adopted his analysis. If confirmed, I would apply that analysis to any cases in which I am required to assess the legality of presidential executive orders or actions.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has “regularly observed that the Due Process Clause specially protects those fundamental rights and liberties which are objectively, ‘deeply rooted in the Nation’s history and tradition’ and ‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty’ such that ‘neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed.’” Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-721 (1997) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). If confirmed, I would follow that binding precedent.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has ruled that certain classifications, such as race, gender, national origin, or classifications that burden a fundamental right, are subject to a higher level of scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. See City of Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440-442 (1985); Zablocki v. Redhail, 434 U.S. 374, 388 (1978). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court precedent with respect to the evaluation of classifications and levels of scrutiny for purposes of the Equal Protection Clause, as in all other cases.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: If confirmed, I would apply binding Supreme Court precedent concerning the use of racial preferences in public higher education, including Grutter and the Court’s decision in Fisher v. Univ. of Texas at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013), regardless of any personal view or expectation I might have.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Responses by M. Hannah Lauck, Nominee, U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of Virginia

1. You were part of a judges panel on March 24, 2009. During the panel, one of the presenters said that all judges have biases and stereotypes they bring to the courtroom and that the judge needs to recognize them, set them aside and not let them cloud their views. And that if judges don't admit that they have biases and stereotypes, they're not telling the truth.

- a. Do you agree with this assertion?

Response: I cannot speak for other judges, but I feel that I do not bring any bias or stereotype to the courtroom. I have followed the rule of law in a fair and impartial manner. In my nearly nine years as a magistrate judge, I have approached each case by objectively and carefully assessing the factual record while impartially following the precedents of the United States Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, giving those precedents full force and effect. If I were fortunate enough to be confirmed as a district judge, I would continue that practice.

- b. If so, what biases and stereotypes do you bring to the courtroom that you need to set aside and how do you do so?

Response: I do not feel that I bring any bias or stereotype to the courtroom. I believe that my record as a magistrate judge demonstrates my ability to render thoughtful, even handed, and impartial decisions in a wide array of cases, civil and criminal.

2. In your questionnaire you indicated that you have been a member of The Club since 2012. Will you please tell us more about this organization?

Response: The Club is a group largely made up of academics who meet monthly during the academic year. Members have included local university presidents and other scholarly leaders at the university and secondary school levels, teaching medical doctors, leaders in the local arts community, historians, authors, university chaplains, and judges. The members are lifelong learners with an interest in hearing from others about their areas of expertise. An in-depth topic of academic study and a book review are presented each month, but I have not yet made a presentation to the group.

3. You have expressed admiration for Justice Frankfurter. What do you admire about him?

Response: Justice Frankfurter served on the Supreme Court of the United States as a naturalized citizen. I conduct naturalization ceremonies, and when I welcome newly naturalized citizens, I mention several accomplished naturalized citizens in this nation's history. I include Justice Frankfurter as an admirable example of how much any citizen (naturalized or natural born) can, with hard work, achieve in the United States.

4. In your notes from a "Women's Networking Forum" on June 22, 2005, you write "In our courthouse, we distinguish between bureaucrats and public servants." Can you please explain what you mean by distinguishing between bureaucrats and public servants?

Response: In the Eastern District of Virginia, we strive to create an atmosphere in which all court employees, including judges, operate with courtesy and professionalism. I was trying to indicate that the ethos in the Eastern District was to act as public servants, and not as someone getting a job done for the sake of finishing. I meant to describe what constitutes a key component to public service: being patient, helpful and courteous to the public that is served. I expressed my belief that, generally, employees in our court embody that desire to help individuals find where to get an answer, even if they have received a call from someone that they, themselves, cannot answer directly. Any reference to bureaucratic actions was in contrast to how individuals, including me, in our court operate.

5. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: While a judge must possess many vital attributes, the most important would be the commitment to follow the rule of law while fairly, impartially, and objectively deciding cases. I believe my decisions as a magistrate judge demonstrate that I strictly adhere to the rule of law, and render decisions fairly and impartially.

6. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: A trial judge should be respectful, patient, hard-working, and courteous. Each litigant should be given a full and fair opportunity to be heard while a judge applies the rules and the law to the facts with fairness and clarity. I believe I have displayed this temperament while serving as a magistrate judge for nearly nine years.

7. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: A bedrock responsibility of a district judge is to follow controlling precedent. If confirmed, I would follow the binding precedent of the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit at all times, regardless of my personal views.

8. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: In cases of first impression I would first turn to the text of the applicable regulation, statute, or constitutional provision and apply the canons of statutory construction to determine whether the provision's meaning was clear and unambiguous. If the meaning were clear and unambiguous, the statute would be applied as written. If the language were ambiguous, following the same canons of construction, I would turn to precedent from the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit for guidance, such as looking to whether they have interpreted provisions in other laws with similar wording. If further guidance were needed, I would review case law from other jurisdictions within the United States analyzing the same or analogous regulatory, statutory or constitutional provision.

9. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: A district judge cannot render a decision inconsistent with controlling precedent regardless of his or her personal views regarding the correctness of the binding precedent. I have followed controlling precedent as a magistrate judge, and I would continue to do so if I were fortunate enough to be confirmed as a district judge.

10. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Statutes enacted by Congress are presumed to be constitutional. Without reaching constitutional questions it need not address, a federal court should declare a statute unconstitutional only in the rare circumstances when Congress has clearly exceeded its authority under the Constitution when enacting the statute, or when the statute itself violates the Constitution. If it became necessary to consider the constitutionality of a particular statute, I would apply the standards established by the Supreme Court of the United States and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in my analysis.

11. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community," in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No. It is not proper for judges to rely on foreign law or the views of the "world community" in determining the meaning of the Constitution.

12. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I am deeply committed to the rule of law, which requires strict adherence to stare decisis independent of any judge's ideology or motivation. My record over nearly nine years as a magistrate judge demonstrates that I ground my decisions in precedent, the text of the law, and the facts before me. I have never allowed my personal beliefs to influence my judicial decision-making, and, if confirmed as a district judge, I would continue this strict adherence to the rule of law.

13. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: My record as a magistrate judge over nearly nine years provides the best evidence of my commitment to putting aside personal views and treating all who come before me fairly, respectfully, and impartially. A review of my decisions attests to my objectivity and impartiality. If confirmed as a district judge, I would continue to adhere to the principle of equal treatment under the law.

14. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed, I would continue to manage my caseload as I have the significant caseload I have carried for the past nine years as a magistrate judge. I currently utilize the reports available under the district court's electronic filing system. In addition, I have developed my own system for case management, which includes issuing scheduling orders with strict discovery deadlines and firm trial dates in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and our local rules. If confirmed, I would continue to manage actively my caseload with the assistance of chambers, and clerk's office, staff. I would work to promptly dispose of motions and discovery disputes, including being available for status conferences. I would encourage the parties, early on and during all aspects of the case, to consider settlement options while they continue to litigate assiduously.

15. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: I believe that judges have an essential role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation. Evenly applied, final, and predictable deadlines ultimately serve all who participate in the judicial system well. If confirmed, I would play an active role in managing my cases. I would set firm scheduling deadlines, promptly decide motions, and efficiently resolve discovery disputes. I would encourage consideration of settlement options, which, in our division, often involves referral to a magistrate judge for that purpose. I would abide by the Speedy Trial Act in criminal cases. I would, however, look to the needs of each case individually, allowing attorneys to establish a record as to the matters at issue, and their needs in discovery and litigation. I would balance efficiency alongside assuring that each litigant had a full and fair opportunity to be heard.

16. As a judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: In addressing the record before me, I begin with a thorough review of the facts because any legal analysis must flow from the facts at bar. I then study the controlling law and precedent, consider the parties' arguments, and issue a decision fairly and impartially, applying the controlling law from the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit under the appropriate standard of review. When issuing a written decision, I strive to communicate clearly in an organized and understandable manner. In deciding cases, I seek to assure that, even when parties do not prevail, they believe they have had an opportunity to be heard and that their case has been given full and fair consideration.

17. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees."

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

18. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received the questions from personnel at the Department of Justice on the afternoon of March 4, 2014. I prepared responses and reviewed them with a representative of the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice, and asked that my responses be submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee after that review.

19. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes, these answers reflect my true and personal views.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Responses from M. Hannah Lauck,
Nominee, United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Virginia

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: I cannot say that my approach to judging can readily be captured in a word describing a judicial philosophy. I do, however, approach judging with certain principles in mind. I exhibit a strong commitment to stare decisis and the rule of law, I respect the limited role of the federal courts within the separate branches of government, and I seek to apply binding law to the facts in a fair and impartial manner. I work hard and attend court prepared, approaching each matter mindful of how important the case is to the litigants. I also hear cases with an open mind, seeking to give each litigant a fair shot within the appropriate constraints that binding precedent places on all of us. While I do not claim to know the philosophies of the justices of the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist courts sufficiently well to compare my approach to any of theirs, I believe that many, if not all, of the justices presiding in those courts might likely embrace the practices I describe.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would follow the precedent of the United States Supreme Court and the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, including the analysis in cases such as District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008), where the Court considered the original public meaning of the text.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed, as a district judge, I would not, and could not, overrule precedent.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I would be bound by, and would follow, the Supreme Court's decision in Garcia without regard to any personal agreement or disagreement with its reasoning. This would be true of any Supreme Court or Fourth Circuit case.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: United States Supreme Court precedent dictates that the Commerce Clause allows congressional regulation of commerce in three ways: Congress may (1) "regulate the use of the channels of interstate commerce"; (2) "regulate and protect the instrumentalities of interstate commerce, or persons or things in interstate commerce"; and, (3) "regulate those activities having a substantial relation to interstate commerce." United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-59 (1995); see also United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598 (2000). If confirmed, I would follow binding Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in assessing the scope of congressional authority under the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President's ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The Supreme Court has articulated the judicially enforceable limits on the President's authority to act in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 585 (1952) and Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008). Those cases provide that the President's authority to act must flow either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution. If confirmed, I would apply that Supreme Court precedent and any Fourth Circuit precedent defining the limits of executive action.

When do you believe a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that rights are "fundamental" for purposes of substantive due process when they are freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights that are "objectively, deeply rooted in this Nation's history and tradition" and are "implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed." Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (internal citations omitted) (internal quotation marks omitted). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning whether a right is "fundamental" for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has held that government actions affecting the immutable and protected classifications of race, alienage, and national origin are subject to strict scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause, while government actions implicating gender and illegitimacy are subject to intermediate scrutiny. See City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440-41 (1985). If confirmed, I would follow Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent in determining what classifications are subject to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: Respectfully, as a magistrate judge or if confirmed as a district judge, I would not express any opinion or projection as to the status of racial preferences in public higher education 15 years from now. If confirmed, I would, impartially and objectively, apply the binding precedent established in Grutter and in the Supreme Court’s recent decision of Fisher v. Univ. of Tex. at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013), as well as any Fourth Circuit decisions, when addressing racial preferences in public higher education.

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record

Leo Theodore Sorokin,
Nominee, United States District Judge
United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts

1. What is the most important attribute of a judge, and do you possess it?

Response: Commitment to rendering impartial decisions under the rule of law is the most important attribute of a judge. I believe that my record as a magistrate judge for almost nine years demonstrates that I possess this attribute.

2. Please explain your view of the appropriate temperament of a judge. What elements of judicial temperament do you consider the most important, and do you meet that standard?

Response: Judges must treat each person before the Court with respect and civility. Judges must also possess the patience to listen, with humility, to the parties, witnesses and counsel. I believe I possess these qualities and that I have demonstrated these qualities in the course of my service as a magistrate judge since 2005.

3. In general, Supreme Court precedents are binding on all lower federal courts and Circuit Court precedents are binding on the district courts within the particular circuit. Please describe your commitment to following the precedents of higher courts faithfully and giving them full force and effect, even if you personally disagree with such precedents?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I will follow the legal precedents of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit regardless of any personal opinions or whether I agree or disagree with those precedents, as I have done for almost nine years as a magistrate judge.

4. At times, judges are faced with cases of first impression. If there were no controlling precedent that was dispositive on an issue with which you were presented, to what sources would you turn for persuasive authority? What principles will guide you, or what methods will you employ, in deciding cases of first impression?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, in deciding a case of first impression, I would first turn to the text of the applicable statute, regulation or provision. If the language of the applicable text was unambiguous, that language would control. If the language was ambiguous, I would use the canons of construction established by the Supreme Court and the First Circuit to assist me in interpreting the text. I would also consider precedents from other courts (i.e., courts other than the Supreme Court and the First Circuit) that have interpreted the same or similar texts --- precedents from other courts would not be controlling, but would be worthy of consideration if persuasive. Finally, I would follow the principle of judicial restraint by endeavoring to decide only the issue requiring decision in order to resolve the case before the court.

5. What would you do if you believed the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals had seriously erred in rendering a decision? Would you apply that decision or would you use your best judgment of the merits to decide the case?

Response: I would apply the binding Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent without regard to my personal opinions.

6. Under what circumstances do you believe it appropriate for a federal court to declare a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional?

Response: Judges act consistent with their duties in declaring a statute enacted by Congress unconstitutional when the statute in question, considered under the applicable precedent, necessarily either exceeds Congress's authority or violates a provision of the Constitution despite the presumption of constitutionality assigned to such statutes and when the case at hand requires resolution of the constitutional question.

7. In your view, is it ever proper for judges to rely on foreign law, or the views of the "world community", in determining the meaning of the Constitution? Please explain.

Response: No.

8. What assurances or evidence can you give this Committee that, if confirmed, your decisions will remain grounded in precedent and the text of the law rather than any underlying political ideology or motivation?

Response: I am committed to rendering impartial decisions under the rule of law. I believe that my record as a magistrate judge for almost nine years demonstrates that commitment.

9. What assurances or evidence can you give the Committee and future litigants that you will put aside any personal views and be fair to all who appear before you, if confirmed?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I pledge to decide cases based upon an impartial application of the law after considering with an open mind the arguments of all parties before the Court. I will treat all parties before me with fairness, respect, civility and patience. I consider the oath of office to be a solemn oath. I pledge to follow the oath without reservation as I believe I have done in my service as a magistrate judge.

10. If confirmed, how do you intend to manage your caseload?

Response: If confirmed as a district judge, I will manage my caseload as I have managed my cases (both consent and referred) as a magistrate judge. In accordance with the Federal Rules of Criminal and Civil Procedure as well as the District of Massachusetts Local Rules, I establish scheduling orders with firm deadlines and trial dates. I regularly convene status conferences to ensure that cases move forward expeditiously, and I issue prompt rulings on motions filed by the parties. I have found active management of cases promotes their fair and timely resolution.

- 11. Do you believe that judges have a role in controlling the pace and conduct of litigation and, if confirmed, what specific steps would you take to control your docket?

Response: Yes. The parties should always have the opportunity to discuss with the Court the proper pace and manner in which the litigation should proceed. The Court, however, must ensure that the case proceeds in a fair and timely manner giving consideration to the relevant facts and circumstances of the individual case. Trial judges have a number of tools available to them to control the pace of litigation, including issuing scheduling orders, convening regular status conferences to review the case and establishing firm trial dates.

- 12. As a Magistrate Judge, you have experience deciding cases and writing opinions. Please describe how you reach a decision in cases that come before you and to what sources of information you look for guidance.

Response: First, I determine the question presented for decision by the case and the relevant facts in light of the testimony or written factual submissions to the Court. To arrive at a decision, I apply the relevant law to the facts of the case considering the applicable constitutional or statutory provisions. Finally, I try to explain the reasons for my decision to the parties in clear and understandable terms so that each party, win or lose, understands that I listened to and considered fully and fairly their arguments.

- 13. As a Magistrate Judge, you proposed the creation of the District of Massachusetts's Court Assisted Recovery Effort.

- a. Do you envision an altered or expanded role for the program in the District Court's criminal docket?

Response: I have not considered altering or expanding the District of Massachusetts Court Assisted Recovery Effort (CARE) which has operated, under my direction, for almost eight years. If I did consider altering or expanding it, I would consult with the other judges of the court, the Probation Office, the United States Attorney's Office and the Federal Public Defender's Office, as I did when starting CARE. On behalf of the District of Massachusetts, I have proposed a pilot program to the Bureau of Prisons (BOP) that would coordinate the BOP's Residential Drug Abuse Program (RDAP) with the CARE program so that drug addicted defendants participating in RDAP in prison transition seamlessly into the CARE program upon the commencement of supervised release. This proposal to the BOP is referenced in response to Question 12(c) of my Senate Judiciary Questionnaire. If implemented, the coordination would not change the eligibility standards for admission to CARE.

- b. If so, please describe what defendants would be eligible and whether you think the current eligibility standards for admission should be changed.

Response: Please see my response to Question 13(a).

14. According to the website of American Association for Justice (AAJ), it has established a Judicial Task Force, with the stated goals including the following: "To increase the number of pro-civil justice federal judges, increase the level of professional diversity of federal judicial nominees, identify nominees that may have an anti-civil justice bias, increase the number of trial lawyers serving on individual Senator's judicial selection committees".

- a. Have you had any contact with the AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals you had contact with, the dates of the contacts, and the subject matter of the communications.

Response: No.

- b. Are you aware of any endorsements or promised endorsements by AAJ, the AAJ Judicial Task Force, or any individual or group associated with AAJ made to the White House or the Department of Justice regarding your nomination? If yes, please detail what individuals or groups made the endorsements, when the endorsements were made, and to whom the endorsements were made.

Response: No.

15. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Response: I received and read these questions on March 4, 2014. On March 5, 2014, I prepared my answers to the questions and forwarded them to an attorney in the Office of Legal Policy of the Department of Justice for review. On March 7, 2014, I finalized my responses and authorized transmittal of the answers to the Committee.

16. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Response: Yes.

Questions for the Record
Senator Ted Cruz

Leo Theodore Sorokin,
Nominee, United States District Judge
United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts

Describe how you would characterize your judicial philosophy, and identify which U.S. Supreme Court Justice's judicial philosophy from the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts is most analogous with yours.

Response: My judicial philosophy is that a judge must always handle each case with an impartial and unbiased mind. A judge should treat all parties with respect and patience and give the legal arguments of all parties serious consideration. A judge must apply the law as written and follow binding precedent. This is the cornerstone of our system of justice under the law. I do not have sufficient information to state which Supreme Court Justice on the Warren, Burger, or Rehnquist Courts has a judicial philosophy most analogous to my own.

Do you believe originalism should be used to interpret the Constitution? If so, how and in what form (i.e., original intent, original public meaning, or some other form)?

Response: The Supreme Court in District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570, 605 (2008), recognized that the public understanding of the Constitution, at the time it was ratified, is an important consideration relative to constitutional interpretation. If confirmed as a district court judge, I will follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent on this issue.

If a decision is precedent today while you're going through the confirmation process, under what circumstance would you overrule that precedent as a judge?

Response: If confirmed as a district court judge, I would not overrule any precedent. I would be bound by the precedent of the Supreme Court and the First Circuit.

Explain whether you agree that "State sovereign interests . . . are more properly protected by procedural safeguards inherent in the structure of the federal system than by judicially created limitations on federal power." Garcia v. San Antonio Metro Transit Auth., 469 U.S. 528, 552 (1985).

Response: If confirmed as a district court judge, I would be bound by the Supreme Court's decision in Garcia and subsequent decisions which identify constitutional limitations on congressional power. I would apply the holdings in those cases without regard to whether or not I personally agreed with the decisions.

Do you believe that Congress' Commerce Clause power, in conjunction with its Necessary and Proper Clause power, extends to non-economic activity?

Response: In Gonzales v. Raich, 545 U.S. 1, 37 (2005), Justice Scalia observed in a concurrence that Congress may regulate non-economic activity that has a substantial relation to interstate commerce, or when “regulation is a necessary part of a more general regulation on interstate commerce.” In United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 558-59 (1995), and United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 608-09 (2000), the Supreme Court struck down federal statutes where Congress lacked authority under the Commerce Clause. If confirmed as a district court judge, I would follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning the extent of congressional authority under the Commerce Clause.

What are the judicially enforceable limits on the President’s ability to issue executive orders or executive actions?

Response: The authority of the President to act “must stem from either an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself.” Medellin v. Texas, 552 U.S. 491, 524 (2008) (internal citations omitted). The applicable analysis for a court to determine whether executive action exceeds presidential authority is set out in Justice Jackson’s concurrence in Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 634-55 (1952). If confirmed as a district court judge, I would follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent in deciding any challenges to executive action.

When do you believe a right is “fundamental” for purposes of the substantive due process doctrine?

Response: In Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702, 720-21 (1997) (internal citations omitted), the Supreme Court held that fundamental rights include “the specific freedoms protected by the Bill of Rights,” and “those fundamental rights and liberties which are, objectively, deeply rooted in this Nation’s history and tradition,” and which are “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, such that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed[.]” If confirmed as a district court judge, I would follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent in deciding issues concerning fundamental rights.

When should a classification be subjected to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause?

Response: The Supreme Court has identified the classifications which are subject to heightened scrutiny under the Equal Protection Clause. They include race, alienage, and national origin, which are subject to strict scrutiny; and gender and illegitimacy, which are subject to intermediate scrutiny. City of Cleburne v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440-41 (1985). If confirmed as a district court judge, I would follow Supreme Court and First Circuit precedent in determining what classifications are subject to heightened scrutiny and how to apply such scrutiny to the facts of a particular case.

Do you “expect that [15] years from now, the use of racial preferences will no longer be necessary” in public higher education? Grutter v. Bollinger, 539 U.S. 306, 343 (2003).

Response: I do not have sufficient information or expertise to have any personal expectation on this issue, and in any event, my personal expectation would play no role in any judicial decisions. If confirmed as a district court judge, I would follow the holdings of Grutter, Fisher v. University of Texas at Austin, 133 S. Ct. 2411 (2013), and any other Supreme Court or First Circuit precedent on the use of race in admissions to public institutions of higher education.

Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

Thank you again for giving me the opportunity to appear before the Committee on February 25, 2014. Enclosed please find my responses to the Questions for the Record that I received from Ranking Member Grassley and Senator Cornyn.

Sincerely,

John C. Cruden

Enclosure

Senator Chuck Grassley
Questions for the Record
John Charles Cruden, Nominee, Assistant Attorney General,
Environment and Natural Resources Division, United States Department of Justice

1. You have previously criticized the Clean Water Act's statutory framework establishing a permit system for regulation of so-called "point sources" of pollution and suggested that moving from a point-source-based regulatory structure to a broader statutory grant is something "[t]hat ought to be on everybody's wish list" in order to address more potential sources of water pollution.

- a. Please describe the nature and scope of the regulatory framework that you envision as being preferable to the current point-source-based statutory grant.

Answer: If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resources Division (ENRD or "the Division"), I would be enforcing the law as enacted by Congress and interpreted by relevant courts. As I have served over two decades in ENRD, during the administrations of two Republican and two Democratic Presidents, I understand that ENRD is not a policy making entity, but dedicated to law enforcement. Proposals to change the Clean Water Act would come from Congress or other federal agencies charged with that responsibility.

- b. If confirmed, how do you plan to address sources of water pollution like runoff areas and streets, i.e., non-point-source pollution, using the current regulatory framework?

Answer: If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, my responsibility would be to enforce existing law. I note that, in most enforcement cases, ENRD receives a referral from the responsible federal agency. If facts confirm that water pollution from runoff areas and streets violates the law, I would take appropriate action to enforce the law.

2. The Clean Water Act restricts federal regulatory jurisdiction to the "navigable waters" of the United States, a term which has been variously defined in Rapanos and Carabell as those waters that are "relatively permanent" and have a "continuous surface connection," and also as waters that have a "significant nexus" to what was traditionally regarded as navigable waters. The EPA's position regarding Clean Water Act regulatory jurisdiction is that the Act empowers regulation of the "waters of the United States."
 - a. Do you agree with the EPA that "waters of the United States" is the proper extent of regulatory jurisdiction under the Act?

Answer: Various provisions of the Clean Water Act (CWA) define the jurisdictional scope of the CWA as “navigable waters.” Section 502(7) defines “navigable waters” as “the waters of the United States, including the territorial seas.” Agencies have then published regulations defining that term. Accordingly, “waters of the United States, including the territorial seas” as interpreted by federal courts and in regulations of federal agencies, is the proper extent of the jurisdiction of the Act.

- b. If so, will you advocate on behalf of the United States for regulatory jurisdiction over all “waters of the United States” under the Act?

Answer: If confirmed, I would be bound by applicable law. Specifically, the jurisdiction of the United States in applying the CWA is over “the waters of the United States, including the territorial seas,” as interpreted in applicable court decisions and federal regulations.

- c. If not, please describe what you believe to be the lawful extent of regulatory jurisdiction under the Act.

Please see answer to question 2.b. above.

3. You have stated that the Department of Justice must be prepared to demonstrate Clean Water Act jurisdiction under the Scalia-plurality standard and the Kennedy standard outlined in Rapanos and Carabell and that “significant additional litigation resources must be devoted to addressing the concepts” related to the definition of “navigable waters” used in those opinions.

- a. Please describe whether, if confirmed, you plan to devote “significant additional resources” to the litigation described above.

Answer: My statement about significant additional resources was intended to mean that because the standards articulated in the Scalia and Kennedy opinions may require detailed fact-finding by the courts in certain cases, it may be necessary to expend additional resources to litigate some of these jurisdictional issues. As I have not been involved in any of this litigation since 2011, I do not know the current dedication of resources to this type of litigation. If confirmed, I will learn about the dedication of resources to this important subject, as well as other areas of the Division’s responsibility.

- b. If so, please explain whether you anticipate taking resources from other areas of ENRD jurisdiction or whether reprioritizing ENRD’s litigation goals would be necessary, in your view, to accomplish this goal.

Answer: Since I am not at the Department now, I lack sufficient information to determine whether additional resources would be needed to handle CWA matters or other areas within the Division's responsibility.

4. In public statements you have routinely referred to the concept of "environmental justice." For example, in a 2008 interview you suggested that promotion of "environmental justice" was necessary due to the "disproportionately high and adverse human health or environmental effects" of polluters' "programs, policies, and activities on minority and low-income populations." You have also publically stated that "[p]eople of color and the poor" bear a "disproportionate share of environmental burdens."

Please explain what you mean by the concept of "environmental justice."

Answer: EPA defines the term as "the fair treatment and meaningful involvement of all people regardless of race, color, national origin or income with respect to the development, implementation and enforcement of environmental laws, regulations and policies." I think the EPA definition fairly summarizes my own views of the term.

- a. Please describe how the concept of "environmental justice" will inform your decision-making if you are confirmed as Assistant Attorney General.

Answer: If confirmed as Assistant Attorney General, I would abide by the rule of law. In that regard, I would remain committed to ensuring that all Americans receive full protection under our environmental laws, regardless of their race, color, national origin or income.

- b. Please describe how the concept of "environmental justice" will inform the nature and scope of litigation you will undertake if confirmed as Assistant Attorney General.

Answer: If confirmed, I would abide by the rule of law, making certain that ENRD enforces the law as enacted by Congress, based on a fair assessment of facts. In that regard, I would remain committed to ensuring that all Americans receive full protection under our environmental laws, regardless of their race, color, national origin or income.

5. In a 2013 article you described the EPA's electronic reporting requirements imposed on states as "federalism, cooperative federalism at its best." Please explain this statement.

Answer: In February 2013, I moderated a panel discussion of three experts concerning "Key Legal Issues Facing the Administration in 2013: Environment, Energy and Natural Resources." After the experts spoke, I read questions given to me by the audience. Specifically, I read this question: “Scott, I have a question for you from our listening audience. This comes from someone at GAO [U.S. Government Accountability Office]. How can EPA push down further on states given the budget climate? Haven’t states resisted efficiency measures such as electronic reporting requirements? This is federalism, cooperative federalism at its best.” The entire discussion, including this question, was printed verbatim in 43 Environmental Law Reporter 10395, with this particular question at page 10404.

Although I do support electronic reporting as a valuable concept, I do understand that all States may not agree. While electronic reporting on environmental matters is within the domain of EPA, I remain committed to working collaboratively with States, particularly State Attorneys General, in those areas in which ENRD is charged with primary responsibility.

6. Prior to your departure from ENRD in 2011, you had participated in the Deepwater Horizon Multidistrict Litigation that is currently underway in the Eastern District of Louisiana. If you are confirmed, please describe what role you anticipate ENRD will play in the litigation going forward and whether you plan to alter ENRD’s current litigation posture with respect to litigation strategy or potential settlement and discovery negotiations.

Answer: It is my understanding that the United States continues to be represented in the Deepwater Horizon Multidistrict Litigation by a joint trial team composed of experienced attorneys from both the Civil Division and ENRD. As the trial is ongoing, I anticipate that ENRD will continue to play the same role in the future that it has so far. If I am fortunate enough to be confirmed, I will confer with the trial team to determine whether there should be any changes to the current strategy.

7. You have previously criticized Congress for its “failure...to enact comprehensive climate change legislation,” which, you maintained, “cost the United States its leadership position on this critical issue.” You also stated that “it is imperative for this Administration to accomplish as much as it can through implementing the Clean Air Act.”
 - a. Please describe in detail the steps you believe to be imperative with respect to the Administration’s implementation of the Clean Air Act.

Answer: I firmly believe that the Administration should adhere to the language and requirements of the Clean Air Act, including relevant court decisions and regulations, in addressing this important issue. I note, however, ENRD is not a policy-making entity, and the implementation of the Clean Air Act is the responsibility of other federal agencies.

- b. Please describe how, if confirmed, you anticipate you will use Clean Air Act litigation to achieve the goals you described above.

Answer: If confirmed, then my mandate will be to carefully apply the law in an equal and fair manner. As ENRD is not a policy-making entity, it will be up to other agencies with that statutory responsibility to determine how best to implement the Clean Air Act to meet its statutory goals.

- c. Please describe how, if confirmed, you plan to demonstrate what you described as the United States' "leadership position" in your work as Assistant Attorney General and, specifically, through Clean Air Act litigation.

Answer: ENRD is not a policy-making entity. Accordingly, leadership on this important issue is the responsibility of other federal agencies. If confirmed, my "leadership" role would be to uphold the law. ENRD is responsible for representing EPA and other federal agencies in the courts. Consistent with its responsibility, ENRD would defend Clean Air Act rules issued by EPA and would enforce compliance with the Act and implementing regulations.

8. You have previously stated that there is "much more we can and should do" than merely maintain a commitment to reducing domestic greenhouse gas emissions ("GHG"). Please describe what, if confirmed, you plan to undertake in ENRD to contribute to reduction of GHG emissions.

Answer: The Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division does not make policy and is charged with upholding and enforcing the law. If confirmed, I will use my position to uphold existing law. Other federal agencies are charged with developing Administration policy on reducing GHG emissions.

9. You have described the D.C. Circuit's holding in Coalition for Responsible Regulation v. EPA, as "critical" and a "superb start" to the regulation of GHG emissions. Assuming that the EPA's actions are upheld by the Supreme Court, please describe what role enforcement of the EPA's endangerment finding, tailoring rule, and the so-called "tailpipe rule" will play in litigation involving the ENRD if you are confirmed at its Assistant Attorney General.

Answer: The unanimous decision by the Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit has now been appealed and argued before the Supreme Court, in a case now titled Utility Air Regulatory Group v. EPA. If the Supreme Court upholds EPA's regulations, enforcement of violations of those rules would then be governed by the normal process by which the Department of Justice makes all enforcement decisions. Enforcement decisions would be based on the law and the facts presented.

10. In a recent ELI report entitled "Climate Change and New York City," you suggested that anthropogenic climate change was the likely cause – or at least a contributing cause – of Superstorm Sandy.

- a. Please explain what role, if any, you believe anthropogenic climate change and, specifically, GHG emissions, played in Superstorm Sandy.

Answer: The information in this question came from a one page column I wrote in January 2013. I began that column by honoring New York City for its response to Superstorm Sandy, stressing the importance of planning and preparation in advance of those serious events. I stated, "Even those who disagree with its cause cannot disagree that the results of Superstorm Sandy were monumental and that we should prepare for such devastation in the future. We can debate the cause and still work together in combating possible weather effects." As I am not a scientist, I cannot – and have not – stated that Superstorm Sandy was the direct result of anthropogenic climate change or GHG emissions. Rather, I have used it as an example of a devastating impact that coastal communities should be prepared to address.

- b. Please explain what role, if any, you believe anthropogenic climate change plays in (1) the variation in worldwide sea levels; (2) Arctic and Antarctic snow/ice coverage; (3) global average temperatures; and (4) the recent drought in California's Central Valley.

Answer: As I am not a scientist, I do not believe I am competent to discuss the impact of anthropogenic climate change in these important areas. Moreover, if confirmed, I will not be making policy or scientific judgments of this nature, but rather applying existing law to litigation under the purview of ENRD.

11. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving the Secure Border Initiative if you are confirmed.

Answer: I believe this question refers to work by ENRD on behalf of the Department of Homeland Security to secure our borders. I am not aware of what the Division is currently doing in that regard and lack sufficient information to determine whether there should be any alterations.

12. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving so-called R.S. 2477 litigation if you are confirmed.

Answer: I am aware that there has been litigation concerning the application of R.S. 2477, which granted a right of way across public lands in some circumstances. If confirmed, I would seek to learn about the nature of any current litigation. I lack sufficient information to determine whether there should be alterations in the current litigation.

13. Please describe what alterations, if any, you would make to ENRD's current litigation involving tribal-trust issues if you are confirmed.

Answer: I am aware that there has been litigation concerning trust issues with some Native American tribes. I do not, however, have any current information. If confirmed, I would seek to learn about the nature of any current litigation. I lack sufficient information to determine whether there should be alterations in the current litigation.

14. Please describe with particularity the process by which these questions were answered.

Answer: I reviewed your questions and personally prepared my responses. I had conversations with representatives at the Department of Justice who are familiar with this process, and I asked a friend to review my draft to identify grammatical errors. I sent my responses to the Department of Justice for submission to you.

15. Do these answers reflect your true and personal views?

Answer: Yes.

Questions for John Cruden (AAG for Environment and Natural Resources Division)

Senator Cornyn:

- 1) The major environmental statutes (Air, Water, Waste, Endangered Species and others) have citizen suit provisions that allow environmental groups to bring suit against both the federal agency and private parties for failure to comply with statutory or regulatory provisions.

- a. In the last five years, how many citizen suits have been filed against the federal government?

Answer: I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question.

- b. In the last five years how many citizen suits have been filed by environmental groups against private parties for alleged violations of any permit condition or emissions limitation?

Answer: I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question.

- c. In the last five years, how many citizen suits has the DOJ settled with outside organizations?

Answer: I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question.

- d. In the last five years, how many have resulted in the payment of attorneys' fees?

Answer: I am not currently at the Department; therefore I am not in a position to respond to this question.

- e. When the DOJ or the agency you represent pays attorneys' fees, what is the source of appropriated funds for the payment of these awards?

Answer: Some statutes, like the Clean Air Act and Clean Water Act, contain provisions authorizing payment of attorney's fees to a prevailing party. In those instances, attorney's fees are generally paid from the Judgment Fund. If the relevant statute does not contain an attorney's fees provision, a litigant may seek fees under the Equal Access to Justice Act. In those instances, it is my understanding that any award of fees is typically payable from the appropriations of the agency involved.

- f. If confirmed, will you provide me a list of all citizen suit cases in which the U.S. paid attorneys' fees and the amount of each payment?

Answer: If confirmed, I will work with the Committee to accommodate its oversight needs, consistent with law and the Department's responsibilities.

- 2) In 2011, two environmental groups settled a multi-district litigation with the Fish and Wildlife Service that resulted in a "work plan" for the agency to make endangered species list determinations for hundreds of species and the payment of expensive litigation fees to the plaintiffs. While the determinations may impact numerous states, communities, businesses and citizens, the settlement involved just one federal agency and two environmental groups willing to drop it in litigation. As head of ENRD, would you support efforts to improve the transparency of the settlement process and allow affected stakeholders to participate?
- Would you commit to the DOJ posting on its website copies of all complaints
 - Would you commit to DOJ posting on its website copies of all proposed consent decrees 30 days before submitting them to a court of law, to give stakeholders notice?
 - Would you commit to meeting with local officials when a settlement agreement is being worked out if a substantial part of their jurisdiction will be impacted?

Answer to Questions 2a, 2b, and 2c: I was not at the Department of Justice at the time that the settlement you describe in this question was prepared or completed. However, I strongly support transparency and public participation in government decision-making. Congress has enacted somewhat different processes for settlements involving particular statutes and agencies, so the details of public participation will vary among situations. In all cases, I will act in accordance with law. However, in my experience, complaints and settlement agreements are public documents and available to the public. And, where the settlement results in a deadline for the future issuance of agency rulemakings, then that proposed rule would be subject to notice and comment, thereby allowing the public an opportunity for participation. If confirmed, however, I will be briefed on the current policy of the Department on these issues, current agency practices, and applicable legal requirements. In addition, I would be willing to meet with local or state officials in appropriate cases.

- 3) What would you do to ensure that the agency does not agree to deadlines through settlements that do not provide sufficient time for EPA or DOI to meet its obligations under the Administrative Procedure Act, the Regulatory Flexibility Act, the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act, OMB Circular A-4, and other requirements that apply to EPA or DOI?

Answer: If confirmed, it will be my responsibility to assure that agreements reached by the Department of Justice on behalf of any federal agency are consistent with the law, and meet the needs of the federal agency involved.

- 4) In a recent denial of several environmental groups' petition for a rulemaking under the Clean Air Act, Acting Administrator Robert Perciasepe stated that, "[e]ven under the best circumstances, the EPA cannot undertake simultaneously all actions related to clearly determined priorities as well as those requested by the public, and so the agency must afford precedence to certain actions while deferring others.... The EPA must prioritize its undertakings to efficiently use its remaining resources."

- a. How should DOJ prioritize the rulemakings that EPA or DOI decide to pursue through the use of Consent Decrees?

Answer: If confirmed, I would need to meet with federal agencies, including the EPA, to understand their priorities. If a consent decree were to be negotiated, that should be done in close collaboration with the agency involved to assure that it meets their priorities, that they are capable of meeting the terms of the agreement, and that any term of the agreement is in accordance with applicable law.

- b. Would you agree that the new commitments that EPA or DOI agree to in "sue and settle" agreements with environmental groups, including timetables for rulemakings or the listing of species, have an impact on EPA's or DOI's priorities as to the rulemakings or listings that it undertakes?

Answer: As I am not in the government, I do not have any current information about commitments that DOI or EPA may be making in settlement agreements with environmental groups, or other petitioners. If I am confirmed that is an area I would want to understand better to assure that all actions taken by the ENRD are in compliance with the law.

Would you agree that the new commitments that EPA or DOI agree to in "sue and settle" agreements with environmental groups, including timetables for rulemakings, have an impact on EPA's or DOI's budgetary resources?

Answer: As I am not in the government, I do not have any current information about commitments that DOI or EPA may be making in settlement agreements with environmental groups, or other petitioners, or the impact of such commitments on agency budgets. If I am confirmed, I would want to be briefed on current practices to assure that all ENRD actions are in compliance with the law, and meet the needs of the federal agencies ENRD is representing.

- 5) Out of all of the rules for which EPA has deadlines, how many of them have been met? And, how many of those deadlines have been missed?

Answer: As I am not in the government, I lack sufficient information to respond to this question.

- 6) Once an agency submits to a Consent Decree it is under the jurisdiction of the federal court and subject to contempt should it not comply with the Consent Decree. Since EPA issues between 300 – 400 regulations a year while entering into an average of 15 Sue and Settle Consent Decrees, it appears that those 15 Sue and Settle Consent Decrees under court supervision become the agency's priority rules for implementation. Isn't it correct that under Sue and Settle private parties are setting priorities for EPA and DOI?

Answer: As I am not in the federal government, I do not know how many regulations EPA or DOI is issuing or the number of consent decrees that the Department is negotiating on either agency's behalf. Accordingly, I lack sufficient information to respond to this question.

- 7) Since, according to a CEI study, EPA cannot meet over 90% of all its statutory deadlines, the agency could theoretically be subject to a lawsuit on several hundred more regulations a year. How would you address this dilemma? Should we restrict citizens' suits or should we legislate longer time periods for agency regulatory actions?

Answer: I am not aware of the CEI study or the number of times that EPA cannot meet its statutory deadlines. If confirmed, I will work with federal agencies to determine the best and most efficient way for them to meet congressionally-mandated requirements.

- 8) Senator Vitter sent the Department of Justice a letter in October 2013 raising serious concerns about an armed raid conducted by EPA agents of a mine in Alaska.
- a. Are you aware of this letter?
 - b. Would you commit the Department to answering Senator Vitter's letter?

Answer to 8a and 8b: As I am not in the Department and have no knowledge of this letter, I am not in a position to respond to this question pertaining to activities of the EPA.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

By this letter, I express my strong support for the confirmation of John Cruden to be the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice.

Having served as AAG for ENRD from 1981 to 1983, and thereafter as the Deputy Attorney General in 1984-85, I am very familiar with the Division and what is required to lead it effectively. Without question John possesses the experience and personal qualities that will ensure the Division will be in the best possible hands. John joined ENRD after my departure, so my experience with him in the Division has been on opposite sides of the table, not always successfully for my clients. John was unfailingly courteous, attentive, available, and reasoned in his response. It is always gratifying to know one can rely on the preparation, wisdom and integrity of the public officials with whom one deals. John exemplifies the highest level of all those qualities.

It has also been my privilege to serve in other professional arenas with John. He is one of my successors in chairing the American Bar Association's Section on Environment, Energy, and Resources. For many years we have been members of the faculty for the American Law Institute's short courses on environmental litigation, and we were both elected Fellows in the early years of the American College of Environmental Lawyers. As Chair of ABA President Karen Mathis' Appointments Committee, it was my privilege to recommend that she appoint John to chair a standing committee, which she did.

John's exemplary military record is one of his many outstanding qualifications to serve as AAG, and his leadership in the Division as Chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section and subsequently as the Deputy AAG left an ineffable font of goodwill among the career people in ENRD. John's sterling and richly-deserved reputation within the Department as a whole will contribute to John's being among the most effective AAGs ever appointed to head ENRD.

I recommend John with great enthusiasm and without reservation.

Sincerely,

Carol E. Dinkins

The Honorable Charles E. Grassley
Ranking Minority Member, Judiciary Committee

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are writing to express our enthusiastic support for John Cruden's nomination to become Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division (ENRD) of the Department of Justice.

The undersigned are professors of environmental law who recognize the importance of continuing the ENRD's long tradition of even-handed enforcement and defense of our nation's environmental and natural resources laws. We strongly believe that John Cruden is a superb choice to fulfill this role.

Mr. Cruden has devoted nearly his entire working life to public service, including a distinguished career in the military and two decades of service in the very Justice Department division that he has been nominated to lead. Following his graduation from West Point, John served in airborne, ranger and Special Forces units in Germany and Vietnam. After graduating from law school, he served as legal counsel to the military for 14 years in a variety of positions including General Counsel to the Defense Nuclear Agency and Chief Legislative Counsel of the Army.

Mr. Cruden's more than twenty years of experience at the ENRD make him superbly qualified to lead the division. During his service as Chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section and as the career Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Cruden played a leading role in nearly every major environmental case handled by the ENRD. He acquired a reputation as a "lawyer's lawyer" who represented the interests of the United States with enormous skill and unflinching fairness.

Mr. Cruden has distinguished himself in virtually everything he has done. For his military service Mr. Cruden was awarded the Bronze Star, the Legion of Merit, the Defense Meritorious Service Medal, the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with Silver Star. For his service in the U.S. Department of Justice, Mr. Cruden received the Presidential Rank Award from three different Presidents, the Department's Muskie-Chaffee Award, the Federal Bar Association's Younger Award, and the American Bar Association's Mary C. Lawton Award for Outstanding Government Service. In addition Mr. Cruden was the first government attorney to be elected and serve as president of the D.C. Bar.

In his current position as president of the Environmental Law Institute, Mr. Cruden has worked tirelessly to improve understanding of environmental law and policy and to bring diverse groups together.

Those of us who have worked directly with John feel privileged to have been able to collaborate with him. All of us know of his outstanding reputation and we are confident that, if confirmed, he again will serve the United States with the greatest distinction. We endorse his nomination with the utmost enthusiasm.

For all of these reasons we urge the Senate to confirm John Cruden to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the ENRD.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are writing to express our strong support for John Cruden's nomination to become Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice.

The undersigned include the current chair and past chairs of the American Bar Association ("ABA") Section of Environment, Energy, and Resources ("SEER"). We are a diverse group of lawyers who come from private practice, academic institutions, government service and non-governmental organizations. For many of us our professional association with John includes handling matters on behalf of clients, as well as working for the profession through the ABA.

Our support represents our personal endorsement and not that of the ABA. However, we all know and have worked with Mr. Cruden throughout his distinguished service to our organization. SEER has some 10,000 members who enjoy member benefits of educational programming, publications and outreach to lawyers and society. Mr. Cruden was chair of SEER for 2009-2010. All of us hold him in the very highest regard, and admire his leadership skills, his ability to work with people in a positive way, his integrity, his exceptional intellect, and his superb legal judgment.

Mr. Cruden is uniquely qualified for this position. He is currently the President of the well-respected Environmental Law Institute ("ELI"), a nationally recognized non-profit association that provides research, education, and publications in the area of environmental law and policy. Prior to his career at ELI, he had a distinguished career with the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice, holding several leadership positions, including Deputy Assistant Attorney General for 16 years and Chief of Environmental Enforcement for five years. He has also served as Acting Assistant Attorney General. During his career at the Department of Justice he was known by environment and resource lawyers as hard working as well as fair and even-handed with a keen sense of the true meaning of "justice." He encouraged government lawyers at all levels to better themselves by associating with lawyers in the both the D.C. Bar Association, where he was a past president, and in SEER. We can assure you that Mr. Cruden's leadership in SEER has provided substantial benefit to all lawyers practicing in the area of environment and natural resources.

As chair of SEER, Mr. Cruden led a number of initiatives. These initiatives included recognition of distinguished environmental advocates and focus on environmental justice initiatives. In addition, he brought more awareness of environmental and resource issues through his highly acclaimed speaking roles and participation in SEER educational programs.

We believe that now more than ever Mr. Cruden's skills are needed at the Department of Justice. Certainly, protection of our environment and natural resources cannot be overstated; however, having the right person to lead this important Division of the Justice Department will provide a legacy of environmental protection into the future. Mr. Cruden's leadership skills allow him to balance strong environmental enforcement with the rights of the regulated community.

For all these reasons we hope that the Senate will confirm Mr. Cruden promptly to serve as the Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division.

Sincerely,

William L. Penny (2013/2014)

Dear Senators Leahy and Grassley:

I'm writing to express my enthusiastic support for the nomination of John Cruden to serve as Assistant Attorney General, Environment and Natural Resources Division, at the U.S. Department of Justice.

I have come to know John well during the last two and one half years. In addition to my role at IBM Corporation, I served as Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Environmental Law Institute (ELI) and Chair of the Board's Finance Committee when John was hired as ELI's President in June 2011. I worked closely with John on several occasions from then until my departure from ELI's Board of Directors in December 2013.

I have been thoroughly impressed not only with John's professional skills but also with his personal demeanor on all occasions. John exemplifies leadership. During my experience working with John, he has been attentive, prepared, thorough, and fair. John earned respect quickly at ELI, demonstrating an extraordinary ability to meaningfully engage people at every level of the organization. John showed great diligence and capability in discharging his professional responsibilities. At the same time John showed he cares deeply about people. The way in which John courteously related to people of all backgrounds and points of view has made him a role model to me.

John conducted himself as I've described no matter how challenging or contentious an issue may have been. John is a man of great personal integrity. He sought and considered all sides of topics during his leadership of the Environmental Law Institute. He ensured ELI reached out to its many constituents across the legal profession, government, non-governmental organizations, and business. I've seen John bring out the best in people. I've seen him demonstrate conviction and resilience, equity and good judgment. He is a uniter. Our nation is most fortunate to have mature leaders of John's caliber willing to serve the public interest.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

The undersigned strongly endorse the confirmation of John Cruden to be the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice.

We have known John Cruden both personally and professionally for nearly 50 years. We stood beside John at the United States Military Academy on July 1, 1964, and swore to support and defend, and to bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of the United States. In the 50 years since, John has held firm to that oath and has lived his life according to the values of 'Duty, Honor, Country' which West Point teaches. John's personal character and ethics are exceptional, without question.

John Cruden has a unique blend of education, training, professional experience, and leadership style to enable him to be superbly capable of leading this division of the Department of Justice to enforce the law and defend the interests of the United States according to the law.

John Cruden is an accomplished leader of the highest character and committed to the best interests of our nation. We recommend John without reservation. Our nation deserves none better.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I respectfully recommend that John C. Cruden be confirmed as the Assistant Attorney General of the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the U.S. Department of Justice.

I have known John since 1979 when he was a litigation attorney in the Pentagon. He was the most impressive officer-attorney I met then and has continued to be absolutely superb, first as an Army attorney and then as a leader at the Department of Justice.

John and I were assigned to Germany at the same time in mid-1980s where I observed first-hand not only his inestimable legal skills but also his leader and interpersonal skills. John was available to all—peers, younger lawyers, and superiors, though he had no peers and clearly was destined to surpass all his superiors. He is one of a kind—superior intellect, unsurpassed work ethic, completely dedicated to service to the nation, and a warm, caring human being.

Please do not hesitate to contact me personally regarding this recommendation.

Respectfully submitted,

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are all former employees of the Environment and Natural Resources Division (ENRD) of the Department of Justice who are proud of our service and contributions to that important organization. We are each especially proud and privileged to have either served with, and under the outstanding leadership of, John Cruden or (for those of us who completed their service to ENRD prior to John's arrival) to have gotten to know and respect John from his outstanding accomplishments and impeccable reputation. Each of us enthusiastically supports John's confirmation to be the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice. John's confirmation would recognize the extraordinary accomplishments and skills of one of the truly great public servants of our time, would be eagerly welcomed by the hundreds of hard working career employees in ENRD who uniformly share our respect and admiration for John, and would strongly advance ENRD's important mission, including the fair and effective enforcement of our nation's environmental laws and the vigorous protection of our natural resources.

As you know, before joining the Department of Justice, John had a long and exemplary military career, as a West Point graduate, a distinguished officer in Special Forces and other units in Germany and Vietnam, and, after graduating from law school, serving the Army in a number of leadership roles, culminating with his being named Chief Legislative Counsel of the Army. None of us knew John during this period of his public service, but we all came to admire and respect him when John was selected to be the Chief of the Environmental Enforcement Section (EES), the largest Section within ENRD, in 1991. Many of us served in EES while John was its Chief or later when he was promoted to Deputy Assistant Attorney General, with supervisory responsibility for EES. Among us, some served in attorney positions and others in administrative ones; some served in management positions and others in operational ones. But whatever our position and assignments, John valued and supported the work and contributions of every one of us. And even more importantly, he worked tirelessly to get to know each of us personally, and to support us in whatever way he could. As a result, we each consider John to be a friend and a mentor.

John is also an outstanding leader and manager, who brought his decades of wide ranging experience, and his great skills and wisdom, to his management of EES and ENRD. He quickly studied and mastered substantive environmental law (in which he is now recognized as a leading national expert), and he learned and then led the mission and day to day functioning of EES and ENRD in enforcing the environmental laws and doing so in close and effective coordination with the Section's partners, including client agencies (like EPA, DOI and DOD), other components of DOJ (like the 94 U.S. Attorney's offices) and state enforcement officials (who are responsible for most environmental enforcement in the United States). John was also very effective in working with ENRD political leadership from both parties. Equally importantly, John established constructive relationships with the leaders of the private environmental bar (of which some of us are now members) who always knew that John would give them a fair audience on important enforcement and policy issues impacting U.S. industry, even as John remained focused on the Section's mission of protecting the environment through enforcing the law.

Some of us worked in other Sections within ENRD and got to work closely with John when he assumed the position of Deputy Assistant Attorney General, which he held from 1995 to 2011. He demonstrated to each of us as well the same skills, judgment and caring for which he had already become well known in ENRD during his tenure as Chief of EES. Others of us served in ENRD before John arrived but have maintained our respect and interest in ENRD's important work, and have, in a variety of contexts, gotten to know John well and have come to admire his unique leadership style and his absolute credibility.

The great respect in which John held across the spectrum of the legal community (both the public and private bar, and across political lines) is evidenced, among other things, by his having been the first government official to serve as the elected President of the District of Columbia Bar, by his selection as Chair of the American Bar Association Section on the Environment, Energy and Resources, and by his tremendous accomplishments the past two years while serving as the President of the Environmental Law Institute.

In short, there is not a better person in the United States to serve as Assistant Attorney General of the Environment and Natural Resources Division. We each recommend John to you with great enthusiasm.

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

We are writing to express our strong support for the nomination of John Cruden to become Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division of the Department of Justice. He is a proven leader, a superb lawyer, and a patriot.

The undersigned are 26 former Presidents of the District of Columbia Bar. With more than 100,000 members, the D.C. Bar is the second largest unified bar in the United States. Its core functions include licensing lawyers, operating a disciplinary system to deal with professional misconduct, and maintaining a Clients' Security Fund. The Bar also undertakes educational and public service activities, including an award-winning program to provide pro bono legal representation to the poor. The President of the D.C. Bar is elected by the entire active membership.

John Cruden was President of the D.C. Bar in 2005-2006. He was the first person to serve as Bar President while working as a government lawyer. Leading by example, he strongly encouraged other government lawyers to provide pro bono legal assistance to people unable to afford a lawyer. He worked at Saturday morning clinics providing legal advice to low-income residents of the District of Columbia. He made the Bar more responsive to the needs of government lawyers and recruited government lawyers to participate for the first time in Bar activities. His legacy is a Bar that better serves the needs of its community, particularly those who cannot afford to pay for a lawyer; that reflects the diversity of law practice in its community; and that provides better support to its members in the public sector.

John's entire career has been devoted to public service. A graduate of West Point and a former Army Ranger, he had a distinguished career in military. He took the Law School Admission Test while he was serving in Vietnam. He was awarded the Bronze Star, the Legion of Merit, and the Defense Meritorious Service Medal. The quality of his work as a lawyer for the Army and as Deputy Assistant Attorney General in the Environmental and Natural Resources Division is reflected in numerous citations.

The vision and leadership John exhibited in getting elected President of the Bar and then in serving so ably in that position are talents he would bring to bear as Assistant Attorney General. John's integrity inspires trust. His unceasing good humor inspires loyalty. His intellect and judgment inspire confidence. Based on John's work with the Bar and on his long distinguished career in public service, we have no doubt that he would be a highly effective leader for the Division.

We urge that John be confirmed as Assistant Attorney General for the Environmental and Natural Resources Division.

Sincerely,

Re: Nomination of John C. Cruden for Assistant Attorney General for the Environment

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

I am a happily retired former Trial Attorney who worked in the Environmental Enforcement Section of the Department of Justice for almost 20 years. I support the confirmation of John C. Cruden as Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division at the Department of Justice (DOJ) based on my experience as lead attorney on a very difficult and very political case against a municipality. After contentious litigation, the Mayor requested the Assistant Attorney General for the Environment to provide high level involvement in negotiations. The Assistant Attorney General directed Deputy Assistant Attorney General John Cruden to participate in those negotiations. During the negotiations John Cruden displayed characteristics which are very valuable in an Assistant Attorney General. He asked relevant questions about the case, he listened to the advice of the DOJ and EPA staff and the expert witnesses, he considered the positions expressed by the municipality, and he approved a fair and reasonable settlement.

As a result of his environmental experience and the characteristics shown during these negotiations, I believe John Cruden would be an outstanding Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth A. Edmonds

Dear Chairman Leahy and Ranking Member Grassley:

By this letter, I am strongly supporting John Cruden's confirmation as Assistant Attorney General for the United States Justice Department's Environment and Natural Resources Division (ENRD). I have worked closely with Mr. Cruden in various capacities over the last twenty years, through both Republican and Democratic Administrations, principally in my role as a senior leader in one of ENRD's most significant client agencies – the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). During his fifteen years as ENRD's Deputy Assistant Attorney General (and his service as Acting Assistant Attorney General), I was one of his most immediate counterparts while serving, successively, as EPA's Deputy General Counsel and General Counsel (2009-2013). In earlier years, when John was Chief of ENRD's Environmental Enforcement Section, I was a senior leader in EPA's enforcement program. As these experiences suggest, I have had the opportunity to observe him in many different settings, and have many times over been the beneficiary of his tremendous legal skills and outstanding counsel. I count him as one of the top lawyers, senior executives, and public servants that I encountered in my 31 years of public service.

Through the years, John responded to the needs of my former Agency, EPA, with remarkable skill, grit, and steadfast determination. Our successes in court through the years were in no small measure attributable to John's sound judgment, legal expertise, litigation understanding, and tactical abilities. He also demonstrated remarkable deftness in working through EPA/DOJ disagreements and proved masterful in brokering solutions to disputes between his client agencies that surfaced in the litigation process. John is unfailingly thoughtful and even-tempered in his approach, is articulate and compelling in expression, and holds himself to the highest ethical standards.

It is no wonder John is one of most trusted and respected attorneys in his field, or, for that matter, in the legal profession at large. He inspires those who work for him, commands the respect of those who work beside him, and engenders trust and confidence in those he serves.

In short, John possesses every possible attribute one would look for in a successful Assistant Attorney General. Having served myself in a Presidentially Appointed/Senate Confirmed position, and understanding well the demands and intensity of this kind of role, I have every confidence that John is not only up to the task, but will prove to be one of the best who has ever held the post.

It is our country's good fortune that he has accepted the President's nomination for this position and has once again responded to his country's call to service. With great enthusiasm and without reservation, I endorse his nomination.

Sincerely,

Dear Senators:

I am honored to submit this letter of recommendation in support of John C. Cruden who is under consideration for appointment to be the Assistant Attorney General, Environmental and Natural Resources Division.

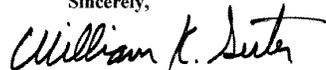

I have known John since the early 1970s when we served together as career Army Judge Advocates. He first came to my attention when I was director of JAG Personnel. I was always on the lookout for young officers with great potential. John was at the top of my list. His past assignments as a combat arms officer in Vietnam and, after law school, as a Judge Advocate, reflected that he had "the right stuff." He quickly proved himself as a talented attorney, manager and leader. He is also very scholarly. His seminal article on the War Powers Resolution continues to be cited by scholars and appellate courts as the defining work on that contentious law.

My predictions about John were correct. He quickly moved through the ranks to the top, performing superbly in every assignment. In the early 1980s, when I was Commandant of the Judge Advocate General's School, I requested that he be assigned to the School to head the most important academic division. He was so assigned. His work exceeded my expectations. I relied on him for the most difficult assignments. On one occasion, the Chief of Staff of the Army appointed me, a Colonel, to conduct a study of the Army-wide confusing issue of fraternization. I tasked John with demanding tasks that had to be accomplished in a short period. He produced just what was needed. The policies the study group developed continue in existence today.

John is one of the very best officers with whom I served in three decades in the Army. He demonstrated his exceptional abilities time and again. He was admired and respected by subordinates, peers, and superiors. He sets and maintains high standards and has an unimpeachable character.

I strongly recommend John for this appointment. The Department of Justice and our Nation will benefit greatly by his talent and leadership.

Sincerely,
