

evidence-based, prevention-focused approaches. The bill offers states much-needed federal funding to support mental health, substance abuse and in-home parenting skills programs for families of children at-risk of entering foster care.”—American Academy of Pediatrics

“[The Family First Prevention Services Act] takes historic and long overdue steps to direct federal child welfare dollars to improve outcomes for vulnerable children and families . . . [It] takes important steps to ensure children who need foster care will be placed in the least-restrictive most family-like setting appropriate to their needs, and gives special attention to children whose emotional or other special needs require residential treatment.”—Children’s Defense Fund

“We greatly appreciate the flexibility in federal funding for evidence-based prevention services and the strong focus in the [Families First Prevention Services Act] on child well-being”—Children’s Hospital of Wisconsin

“We strongly support the Family First [Prevention Services] Act and believe it would greatly improve the ability of child welfare agencies to keep children in their own homes and shorten their time in the system if they do enter.”—Juvenile Law Center

The [Family First Prevention Services Act] aligns very closely with what we consider an essential focus on preventing the occurrence and recurrence of child abuse and neglect whenever possible. It also supports the practice of keeping or returning kids safely home, rather than in foster care, whenever possible.”—Massachusetts Law Reform Institute

“Federal support for prevention services will be a win-win for children and families throughout the country”—Citizens’ Committee for Children

“The Act will expand the availability of such services and reflects the reality that many families, including adoptive families, need targeted, effective services to meet their children’s needs and prevent foster care entry.”—North American Council on Adoptable Children

“We firmly believe that far too many children are placed in group care for no therapeutic reason, which research suggests can harm children.”—North American Council on Adoptable Children

“We feel that the [Family First Prevention Services Act] offers the important possibility of allowing funds to provide vital mental health, substance use and in-home services that could help children stay with their own families.”—Child Welfare League of America

“Supports offered through the Family First Prevention Services Act such as individual and family therapy, home visiting and kinship navigator programs can offer relatives the support they need to keep children out of foster care and help them thrive.”—Generations United

IN REMEMBRANCE OF CAPITOL HILL POLICE OFFICERS JOHN GIBSON AND JACOB CHESTNUT

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, 18 years ago, the world tragically lost two Capitol police officers when a gunman shot his way into the Capitol and, in a barrage of violent chaos, took the lives of Officers John Gibson and Jacob J. Chestnut.

I rise today to commemorate the tragic deaths of these two courageous officers, in the hopes of remembering that the safety we often take for granted here on Capitol Hill is both delicate and precious.

On July 24, 1998, at a time when the Capitol was packed with tourists and staff alike, a gunman sparked mass panic and chaos when he shot his way through a security checkpoint, killing two Capitol police officers.

The shooting was the first in the Capitol in nearly fifty years, and the worst since Congress first met in the Capitol in 1800.

In just a moment, the tranquility of the Capitol was transformed into a scene of chaos and pandemonium, as staffers and tourists alike ran for their lives.

After the shooter failed to bypass a security checkpoint’s metal detector, he immediately shot and killed Officer Chestnut, and later exchanged gunfire with Officer Gibson before fatally shooting him as well.

Having been wounded by Officer Gibson before he managed to fatally hit the Officer, the gunman was overwhelmed by Capitol officers soon thereafter.

I rise today to remember and honor the lives of these fallen officers, who tragically died in true service of public safety, democracy, and the United States of America.

While our beloved Capitol has fortunately not seen such a violent disregard for life since, it is important to remember that we are all united in the fragility and beauty of human life, and that it is easy to take for granted our basic safety in our day-to-day lives.

As President John F. Kennedy once said, “A man does what he must in spite of personal consequences, in spite of obstacles and dangers and pressures, and that is the basis of all human mortality.”

The lives of officers Chestnut and Gibson exemplified and embodied this idea in the most sincere way possible.

They gave their lives in protection of ours, so that we may continue to effect positive change on our country.

In the immediate aftermath of the shooting, the reaction of the Capitol was one of sadness, shock, and outrage.

As we have said here before, however, “The worst thing we can do is cower in fear. We will not shut down the Capitol.”

It is this attitude of remembrance and respect without any trace of fear or cowardice that we must take from the tragic deaths of these officers.

As members of Congress, we must continue to remember the lives of the men who gave theirs for ours.

But we must also learn from them.

We must take with us the importance of continuing to stand for our country without fear or cowardice, as Officers Gibson and Chestnut once did for us.

Today, we pause to commemorate and remember the brave officers who passed away eighteen years ago.

Tomorrow, we take up the mantle that they once did for us.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE STERLING VOLUNTEER FIRE COMPANY’S 50TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. BARBARA COMSTOCK

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Mrs. COMSTOCK. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge the Sterling Volunteer Fire Company, which is celebrating its 50th year of service to the good citizens of the Sterling community this year. I would like to personally commend the courageous men and women who so selflessly volunteer themselves and put themselves in danger on behalf of neighbors, friends, and strangers, without asking anything in return. These brave citizens embody the very best of this nation’s values through their service to our community and their exemplary performance in the line of duty.

The Sterling Volunteer Fire Company has grown exponentially since its inception in 1966, which at the time was little more than an old barn on Holly Avenue housing a single tanker and two used pumers. Within a short two years, this small institution had flourished, now settled into two larger locations: Station 11, which it shares with the Sterling Volunteer Rescue Squad, as well as Station 18, also known as SVRS 25. Even more recently, the company expanded into Station 24 in 2013. This is a clear testament to the outstanding work which is conducted by these everyday heroes and they are deserving of recognition.

Mr. Speaker, it brings me immense pride to recognize such a fine group, and I sincerely hope that we all can live up to their tremendous example. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the Sterling Volunteers. I wish them good luck and hope that they remain safe in the fulfillment of their future duties.

IN HONOR OF BRENT OFFENBERGER, LUKE OFFENBERGER, AND CHRIS ATWELL FOR THEIR RESCUE OF THREE NAVY HELICOPTER CREWMEMBERS

HON. RICHARD HUDSON

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Brent Offenberger, Luke Offenberger, and Chris Atwell for their heroic efforts in rescuing three U.S. Navy helicopter crew members who crashed into the James River during a routine training mission on June 14, 2016. All three men should be recognized for their selfless attitude and willingness to help those in need.

Brent Offenberger was fishing with his son, Luke, and father-in-law, Chris, when they saw a U.S. Navy MH-60S helicopter flying at low altitude near their boat. While it is not uncommon to see helicopters in the area, the men noticed the helicopter was having issues as it began to hover a mere ten feet above the surface, throwing water into the air. Soon after, the propeller hit a metal buoy and shattered into pieces. Immediately after the propeller hit the buoy, the men sprang into action to lend assistance to the crew.

Approximately 30 seconds after the helicopter went down, the family was at the crash site and began assisting the crew members who were in the water. Because of the swift actions of these men, the entire crew was pulled to safety without any serious injuries. While the Navy is still investigating the incident to find out what went wrong, I am thankful these good Samaritans were there to lend a hand. It is an honor to celebrate their actions today.

Mr. Speaker, please join me today in recognizing these fine men for exhibiting bravery and fortitude in helping rescue the crew of the downed U.S. Navy helicopter.

COMMEMORATING THE 99TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE PASSAGE OF THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE ACT

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the centennial anniversary of the passage of the "National Park Service Act".

Because of the "National Park Service Act," the history and heritage of America is being preserved to teach and inspire future generations.

Since the mid-19th century, the National Park Service is responsible for carrying out the Historic Sites, Buildings, and Antiquities Act, the National Historic Preservation Act, and other laws relating to protecting and preserving sites that illustrate America's history.

The Centennial is about celebrating the achievements of the past 100 years, but today is about the future.

Today is the start of a second century of stewardship.

As many as 407 national parks inspire community-based recreation, conservation, and history preservation programs that positively impact their own communities.

According to the National Park Service, the economic contributions brought to the United States economy was $32 billion dollars in economic output and provided 295,000 jobs nationwide.

Texas is a proud home to 14 National Parks, 20 National Natural Landmarks, and 46 National Historic Landmarks.

In areas surrounding Houston, Texas, there are wonderful national parks including the Brazos Bend State Park, Galveston Island State Park, Huntsville State Park, Stephen F. Austin State Park and Lake Livingston State Park.

Tourists also enjoy educational sites and centers in the Houston Area as well, including the Sheldon Lake State Park and Environmental Learning Center, the Fanthorp Inn State Historic Site, and the San Jacinto Battleground State Historic Site.

It's no wonder that in 2015, 5,044,926 people visited national parks in Texas.

National Park Service estimates tourism in Texas contributed $372.6 million in economic output and supplied 4,100 jobs statewide.

The Centennial of the National Park Service is a day we acknowledge and celebrate the fruits of our investment, for every dollar invested in the National Park Service generates $10 in economic activity.

Investing in protecting America's National Parks is the right thing to do for our environment, for our people, and for our economy.

On the birthday of our nation's National Park Service, let us continue robust investment in protecting our environment and also improving the lives of millions of people.

I also want to commemorate the bipartisan efforts made leading to this day through passing H.R. 1068, "Title 54, United States Code, National Park System," becoming a law in December of 2014.

As we recall the great efforts made by Congress in the past century, let us also bear in mind the importance of continued bipartisan support as we embark upon this next century of protecting our beloved national parks.

IN HONOR OF ANDREW SHAPIRO'S SIGNIFICANT ACCOMPLISHMENT TO RAISE MONEY TO FIGHT CANCER

HON. BARBARA COMSTOCK

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Mrs. COMSTOCK. Mr. Speaker, please allow me to take a moment to recognize the significant accomplishments of Andrew Shapiro, a remarkable individual from my district. A junior at Langley High School in McLean, Virginia, Andrew has dedicated his time to breaking three world records in the name of cancer research.

Andrew's passion for combating cancer is laudable. Inspired by his father's battle against colon cancer, over the past year Andrew dedicated his time and energy towards training for the Relay For Life event held in Fairfax County, Virginia.

Preparing for several months, Andrew broke the world records for the most pullups over 6-hour, 12-hour, and 24-hour periods on Saturday, May 14th, as part of the annual fundraiser. Andrew completed 7,306 pullups over the course of 18 hours, raising over $7,000 dollars for the American Cancer Society. It is estimated that there will be 43,190 new cancer diagnoses in Virginia alone, resulting in an estimated 14,910 deaths. The money that Andrew raised will go towards giving cancer patients and caregivers free lodging for a year at an American Cancer Society Hope Lodge. This enables patients to concentrate less on how they will afford to stay near their treatment centers, and more on staying strong in their fight against cancer. In the future, Andrew hopes to qualify for American Ninja Warrior, a sports entertainment competition in which athletes compete in a series of obstacle courses that increase in difficulty at each stage.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in sending our most sincere congratulations to Andrew Shapiro for his athletic accomplishments and fundraising efforts for the American Cancer Society. His actions will have an incredible impact on others who have also been affected by cancer.

HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, July 1, 2016

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak today on the importance of Hispanic Heritage Month (HHM.)

American society today embraces a remarkable breadth of cultures, and Hispanics are an integral part of this diversity.

The Hispanic American community is a beautiful array of distinct groups, including people with roots in Central and South America, Mexico, the Caribbean, and Spain.

In 1968 President Lyndon Johnson designated a National Hispanic Heritage Week because of the growing impact of the Latin American culture in shaping the nation and society.

The week was expanded in 1988 to a 31-day period to provide all Americans the opportunity to participate and commemorate the contributions of the Hispanic culture to mainstream America.

Today in communities across the nation millions of American families come together to celebrate in this facet of American culture and participate in traditional comidas and fiestas.

There are over 54 million Hispanics living in the U.S. and Hispanics continue to be the fastest growing ethnic group.

Harris County has the second largest Hispanic population in the United States.

In 2010, 43.8 percent of the Houston population identified as Hispanic or Latino in the Census.

On behalf of my constituents and in my duties as a U.S. Representative, I am committed to speaking up for the rights of Hispanics and confronting the issues that affect them.

From lowering the uninsured rates and fighting to make higher education more affordable, to championing an increase in the minimum wage and addressing the economic challenges facing working women and families, my colleagues and I will continue working for the Latino community's top priorities.

Devoted to family, faith, country, and hard work, Hispanic Americans bring unique and bountiful perspectives and experiences to our national community and character.

The vibrant Hispanic influence can be seen in all aspects of American life and culture, from distinctive cuisine to colorful festivals, and from the rhythms and melodies of traditional music to the contagious beat of today's most popular songs.

The Hispanic community has persevered in the face of discrimination and hardships.

While significant barriers still stand in our way, I will continue fighting with a strong commitment, to achieve comprehensive immigration reform and to support an inclusive and unified country.
