A BILL

To enable the admission of the territory of Puerto Rico into the Union as a State, and for other purposes.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the “Puerto Rico Admission
5 Act of 2018”.

1 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

2 Congress finds the following:

3 (1) Puerto Rico was ceded to the United States
4 and came under this Nation's sovereignty pursuant 5 to the Treaty of Paris ending the Spanish-American 6 War in 1898. Article IX of the Treaty of Paris rec-7 ognized the authority of Congress to provide for the 8 political status of the inhabitants of the territory.
9 Puerto Rico remained under the direct control of 10 United States military forces until Congress enacted
11 the Foraker Act (Public Law 56–191) on April 12, 12 1900, bringing a civilian government, appointed by 13 the President of the United States, to the island.

14 (2) Consistent with the establishment of United 15 States nationality for the inhabitants of Puerto Rico
16 under the Treaty of Paris, in 1917, Congress exer-
17 cised its powers under the Territorial Clause of the 18 United States Constitution (article IV, section 3, 19 clause 2) to provide for the United States citizenship 20 status of persons born in Puerto Rico (Public Law 21 64–368).

22 (3) Under rulings of the United States Su-
23 preme Court, including Balzac v. People of Porto
24 Rico, 258 U.S. 298 (1922), only ambiguous, incon-
25 sistent and indirect application of the United States
26 Constitution has been established in the unincor-

1 porated territories of the United States including
2 Puerto Rico.

3 (4) In 1950, Congress prescribed a procedure
4 for instituting limited internal self-government for 5 Puerto Rico pursuant to statutory authorization for 6 a local constitution (Public Law 81–600). As a re-
7 sult, a local constitution was approved by the people
8 of Puerto Rico, ratified by Congress, subject to con-9 forming amendments enacted by Puerto Rico, and 10 thereupon given effect in 1952.

11 (5) The approved constitution established a re-12 publican form of government in conformity with the 13 United States Constitution and the principles of the 14 Declaration of Independence and is the functional
15 equivalent of a State constitution, but did not re-
16 strict the authority of Congress under the Territorial 17 Clause to determine the application of Federal law 18 to Puerto Rico. Congress’ plenary power under the 19 Territorial Clause was most recently and dramati-20 cally evidenced in 2016 with the enactment of the 21 Puerto Rico Oversight, Management, and Economic 22 Stability Act (Public Law 114–187).

23 (6) Congressional policies to date have disen-24 franchised the approximately 3,400,000 United 25 States citizens residing in Puerto Rico who do not

1 enjoy a democratic form of government at the na-
2 tional level as they cannot vote in the election of the 3 President and Vice President of the United States, 4 are not represented in the United States Senate, and 5 only have one Resident Commissioner in the United 6 States House of Representatives, who can only vote
7 in the Congressional committees to which she or he 8 is assigned.

9 (7) Furthermore, the Federal Government may,
10 and often does, treat the United States citizens re-11 siding in Puerto Rico unequally under most Federal 12 programs and other laws applicable to the several 13 States and their residents. In its December 14,
14 2016, Report to Congress, the Congressional Task
15 Force on Economic Growth in Puerto Rico estab-16 lished that the territory is not treated equally with 17 the States under more than 40 Federal statutes.

18 (8) The limitations of, and unequal treatment
19 under, territory status has left Puerto Rico under-20 developed when compared to the States and has sub-
21 stantially contributed to its fiscal and economic cri-
22 sis, forcing a massive exodus that has resulted in 23 5,400,000 United States citizens of Puerto Rican
24 ancestry living in the United States mainland.

1 (9) Puerto Rico has been under United States
2 sovereignty and within the United States customs
3 territory for close to 120 years, making Puerto Rico 4 the oldest, largest, and most populous colony in the 5 world, yet Congress has failed to respond to the peo-
6 ple of Puerto Rico’s continued quest for equality and 7 self-determination.

8 (10) It has been the longstanding policy of the 9 United States that the United States citizens of a 10 territory can democratically determine whether it
11 should eventually become a State or a sovereign na-
12 tion.

13 (11) On November 6, 2012, the Government of 14 Puerto Rico held a locally sanctioned, two-part plebi-
15 scite. This plebiscite was consistent with the rec-
16 ommendations set forth by the President’s Task
17 Force on Puerto Rico’s Status Report to Congress
18 of March 2011. The first question asked if Puerto 19 Rico should continue to be a territory of the United 20 States, and 54 percent of the voters rejected terri-21 tory status. The second question asked the voters to 22 express their preference among the three possible
23 and internationally recognized permanent alter-
24 natives to territory status—statehood, independence, 25 or nationhood in free association with the United

1 States—and 61 percent of the voters who selected
2 an option chose statehood. The number of votes cast 3 for statehood on the second question exceeded the 4 number of votes cast for continued territory status
5 on the first question.

6 (12) On June 11, 2017, the Government of 7 Puerto Rico held yet another status plebiscite to rat-
8 ify the results of the 2012 vote, on a ballot amended
9 to specifically comply with the United States De-
10 partment of Justice’s requirements pursuant to Pub-
11 lic Law 113–76. In this plebiscite, statehood re-
12 ceived 97 percent, free association/independence re-
13 ceived 1.5 percent, and current territorial status re-
14 ceived 1.3 percent of the votes cast.

15 (13) Puerto Ricans have contributed greatly to 16 the Nation in all fields of endeavor, both in war and 17 in peace. Over 250,000 have served in the United 18 States Armed Forces, many paying the ultimate sac-19 rifice. They not only deserve, but have earned the 20 right to have their voices heard.

21 (14) Last year marked the 100th anniversary 22 of the granting of United States citizenship to the 23 people of Puerto Rico by Congress, who remain
24 disenfranchised and trapped in a second-class citi-

1 zenship that denies them the same rights and re-
2 sponsibilities as their fellow citizens in the States.

3 (15) Equality within the Nation is required for 4 a healthy American economy and essential for Puer-
5 to Rico’s social and economic well-being as well as 6 for basic reasons of democracy. Puerto Rico should 7 be transitioned into equality within the Union.

8 SEC. 3. PURPOSE.

9 The purpose of the Act is to respond to, and comply
10 with, the democratic will of the United States citizens re-
11 siding in Puerto Rico as expressed in the plebiscites held 12 on November 6, 2012, and June 11, 2017, by setting forth
13 the terms for the admission of the territory of Puerto Rico
14 as a State of the Union.

15 SEC. 4. ADMISSION.

16 Subject to the provisions of this Act, and upon the 17 issuance of the proclamation by the President of the 18 United States required by section 6 of this Act, the terri-19 tory of Puerto Rico thereupon shall become a State of the 20 United States, and admitted into the Union on an equal
21 footing and in true permanent union with the other States
22 in all respects whatsoever.

5 cepted as the constitution of the State of Puerto Rico.

7 Immediately upon the enactment of this Act, the results
