IN REMEMBRANCE OF GEORGE WILSON, DEAN OF THE CAPITOL HILL BLACK PRESS, AND INTERNATIONAL CORRESPONDENT AND EYEWITNESS TO HISTORY

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 5, 2018

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in remembrance of a pioneer and trailblazer, George Wilson, the Dean of the Black press on Capitol Hill.

George Wilson, a veteran journalist and broadcaster whose reports were heard on radio outlets across the country for decades will be remembered as a powerful voice with a witty intellect.

George Wilson was born in New Orleans on October 10, 1947, to George II and Rose Wilson and raised in Washington, D.C.

After graduating from Calvin Coolidge High School, George Wilson attended Howard University before graduating from North Carolina A&T.

As a Capitol Hill correspondent for over three decades and host of Sirius XM’s “GW on the Hill,” George Wilson’s velvet voice was unmistakable over the airwaves.

During his time on air, George Wilson served as “Black America’s voice on the Hill.”

George Wilson’s character and reputation paved the way for other African American journalists in Congress.

George Wilson’s passion for journalism led him to stories around the world and particularly cultivated sources in the international and diplomatic community.

Wilson covered the fall of apartheid in South Africa, the reinstatement of former Haitian President Jean Bertrand Aristide, and chronicled the many revolutions in African countries.

George Wilson’s work made him more than a local reporter, he was an international journalist.

George Wilson will be missed greatly, not just in the hallowed halls of Congress but throughout the world.

George Wilson is survived by his wife Iris, his mother Rose, six children, seven grandchildren, one great-grandchild, aunts, cousins and a host of other relatives and friends.

I ask the House to observe a moment of silence in memory of George Wilson.

RECOGNIZING MARES STELLFOX

HON. PATRICK MEEHAN

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 5, 2018

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize Mares Stellfox, a Springfield High School graduate who relentlessly pursued her dreams to become a professional Open-Wheel race car driver.

From an early age Mares dreamed of proving herself in the male-dominated world of race car driving. It was no easy path to get there. She experienced barriers and setbacks. But Mares pushed forward, helping change auto-racing culture and becoming a model for other aspiring women.

When Mares first entered open-wheel auto racing, she set ambitious goals—to finish in the top ten in points her first year and the top five her second. She accomplished both and returned a third year to capture first place. She would go on to join The Outlaws racing club as the only woman among nearly 100 members, earning herself the nickname the “Lady Outlaw.” She continued to break stereotypes as she earned numerous honors and awards during her tenure, even landing on the cover of Open Wheel Magazine, a first for a woman.

I applaud Mares for her successful career and everything she has done to be a trailblazer for women. She has well-earned the Woman of Achievement Award.
