

TEXAS WARRIOR PETTY OFFICER
THIRD CLASS ZARIAN A. WOOD

HON. TED POE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, October 23, 2018

Mr. POE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, Navy Hospital Corpsman Petty Officer Third Class Zarian A. Wood, known as “Z” to his friends, died at Bagram Air Field, Afghanistan, on May 16, 2010 of wounds sustained from an improvised explosive device blast that occurred in Helmand Province, while on patrol two days prior. Zarian, a 29-year-old hospital corpsman from Houston, Texas, was assigned to 3rd Battalion, 1st Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, 1st Marine Expeditionary Force, Camp Pendleton, California. He was very well known as “Doc” in Afghanistan, serving on the front lines alongside Marine infantrymen.

Zarian graduated in 1999 from South Houston High School, where he competed on the wrestling team. He worked as a youth pastor and tutor for troubled kids on Houston’s northeast side and a merchandiser for Coca-Cola before enlisting in 2006. He dreamed of going back to school, studying radiology, and maybe even becoming a dentist. But always putting others before himself, he put his dreams on hold to fight for his country.

And fight he did—Zarian was a decorated soldier. His personal service awards include the Purple Heart, Combat Action Ribbon, National Defense Service Medal, Afghanistan Campaign Medal, Iraq Campaign Medal, Global War on Terrorism Expeditionary Medal, Global War on Terrorism Service Medal, and the Sea Service Deployment Ribbon.

A month before he was deployed on his second combat duty, he had some quality time with his family. Between video games and steak dinners, they bonded for what would be the last time. His father Daniel Wood, a Vietnam veteran, commented on his son’s honesty and integrity: “He’d tell you in a flat minute if you were wrong . . . then again; he’d stand up for you in a flat minute if you were right”.

The liberty we cherish in this Nation has come at a great cost. At times we can all be guilty of taking the simple things in life for granted. We thank men like Officer Wood for these simple liberties. We thank them that we can wake up in the morning and are not afraid, and that we can go to bed at night knowing we are safe. Your selfless heroism has not been forgotten, Zarian. “Some people live their entire lifetime and wonder if they ever made a difference to the world, Marines don’t have that problem.”—Ronald Reagan.

And that’s just the way it is.

CONSTITUENT COMMENTS ON SOBER LIVING HOME PROBLEMS

HON. DANA ROHRBACHER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, October 23, 2018

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise again regarding the hearing held by the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution and Civil Justice on September 28, 2018 on the issue of sober living homes. At that hearing, I had the privilege of testifying in support of my bill, H.R. 5724, to restore local oversight over sober living homes. As part of my testimony, I submitted to the Subcommittee letters from many of my constituents about problems with sober living homes caused by current federal law preventing appropriate local oversight. For the benefit of my colleagues and the American people, I include in the RECORD the sixth group of these constituent letters below:

Good Afternoon, I am a Registered Nurse. I am also in recovery 30 years. I have also worked with the homeless and indigent population. I have family members who suffer from addiction. I believe the sober living houses should be licensed so that they can care for addicts in the appropriate manner. I believe the houses should be regulated in that way: however, as far as zoning, I would have to review your whole bill to make sure it isn’t a NIMBY type of plan as is with the homeless population in our county. I will be more focused on the housing issues of our ill population and the homeless crisis in the State of California as being a disservice to the people who are here. Mental health and homelessness should be the priority in this state. Thank you.

CATHERINE ORLANDO,
Huntington Beach, California.

I understand the possible issues surrounding these sober living homes, however I haven’t heard anything about what would replace them if they are moved from residential neighborhoods. Rather than sticking our noses into these “businesses”, why don’t we work on actual crime? It sounds like you are proposing an easy way out method. If these owners are bad, do good old-fashioned police work and arrest them. We have plenty of laws on the books impeding business owners and home owners, how about spending less money on government and more money on drug programs and good police officers.

JAMES ETHEREDGE,
Westminster, California.

We had a sober living home behind our back fence in our single-family home. It was really a nightmare for the houses on both sides of them. They woke up at six 6:30 in the morning and went out in the backyard to smoke cigarettes. They were loud, obnoxious and used tons of foul language. Both families on either side of the home had small children. There were also numerous police calls and constant noise and shouting during the day and at night. After numerous warnings they tried to contain the house and have more control over it but still continued to fail. Even neighbors had arguments with clients who were outside acting up and talking loud using foul language. Eventually the problems became so great that the owner of the property was contacted that it was no longer acceptable to be renting out for Sober Living homes. Shortly after that, the sober living home was disbanded, and the house was put up for sale. It is now being used as a single-family home and the neighbors are all very happy including ourselves. Sober living homes need to be in buildings away from normal residential living. People do not have to put up with that kind of obnoxious noise and action 24 hours a day to feel like they’re helping people get sober. Put these homes somewhere in an industrial area near an airport or commercial buildings where they cannot disturb the other tenants or neighbors. We owe nothing to these people and they should not be distracting from our lives.

Costa Mesa, California.
