OVERSIGHT PLAN FOR THE 115TH CONGRESS

Clause 1(d)(2)(E) of rule XI also requires that each committee provide a delineation of any hearings held pursuant to clauses 2(n), (o), or (p) of rule XI. Those clauses require the Committee, or a subcommittee thereof, to hold at least one hearing on egregious instances of agency waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement, at least one hearing on agency financial statements, and one hearing on programs that, according to reports issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, are at high risk for waste, fraud, and mismanagement. As part of the Committee's oversight and authorization of the Intelligence Community budget, the Committee conducts numerous classified hearings and briefings that focus on issues of potential waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement in federal agencies. These Committee efforts result in the annual intelligence authorization bill. That bill is accompanied by a detailed classified annex on all Intelligence Community programs and budgets. A review of potential waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement within these programs is an inextricable part of the development of the classified annex. In addition to the classified annex, the Committee also conducted a number of unclassified oversight activities during the 115th Congress.

Investigation into Russian Active Measures During the 2016 Presidential Election

On March 1, 2017, the Committee announced its scope of investigation into Russian active measures during the 2016 Presidential election. The Committee sought access and custody to information as part of the Committee's oversight jurisdiction and investigative responsibilities. The Committee conducted a total of 73 witness interviews—including 55 transcribed interviews—held nine hearings and briefings, and reviewed more than 307,000 documents produced to the Committee.

Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act

Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) is a critical foreign intelligence collection authority signed into law in 2008 as part of the original FISA Amendments Act. Section 702 permits the U.S. Government to collect foreign intelligence information on non-U.S. persons located overseas with the assistance of U.S. electronic communication service providers. The authority was set to sunset in December 2017, thus requiring legislation to keep the authority.

Over the course of several years, the Committee hosted various hearings and briefings, both closed and open, regarding the reauthorization of title VII of FISA. After Committee passage of H.R. 4478 on December 1, 2017, the Committee coordinated with the House Committee on the Judiciary, as well as the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and Senate Committee on the Judiciary, to craft a compromise bill, which became S. 139. S. 139, which provided an additional six-year sunset to Section 702 of FISA, passed the House by a recorded vote of 256 ayes and 164 noes. S. 139 subsequently passed out of the Senate with a recorded vote of 65 ayes and 34 noes and signed into law by President Trump on January 19, 2018.

Roles and Missions of the Defense Intelligence Agency

In spring 2017, the Committee began a bipartisan review of the roles and missions of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) at the direction of the Chairman. The Committee reviewed DIA's creation and evolution of its roles and missions, assessed DIA's current contributions to defense intelligence, identified unnecessary redundancies, ambiguous or conflicting authorities, and made recommendations for increased effectiveness for defense intelligence support. For the review, the Committee analyzed documents about DIA's creation and evolution and interviewed: all major DIA elements; four Combatant Commands; ten Component Commands; three combat support agencies; each service intelligence center; the Joint Staff; key partners and customers; 106 offices; and past and present DIA leadership, as well as held focus groups at the Naval and Army War Colleges. Many of the Committee's findings from this review have also been included as direction in the draft Fiscal Year 2018 and 2019 Intelligence Authorization Acts.

Other Oversight Activities

The Committee also undertook a detailed examination of China's power-projection around the world. The Committee's review considered China's efforts to expand its influence through military basing, economic pressure, and other tactics. The result is contained in a classified report and unclassified summary.

While details of the vast majority of the Committee's oversight activities must necessarily remain classified, a complete list of hearings and briefings is provided in Part C of Appendix I.
