SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Children are entitled to special protections and due process rights under international human rights law and international humanitarian law, regardless of guilt or innocence or the gravity of an alleged offense.

(2) The Government of Israel and its military detains around 500 to 700 Palestinian children between the ages of 12 and 17 each year and prosecutes them before a military court system that lacks basic and fundamental guarantees of due process in violation of international standards.

(3) Israel has ratified the Convention on the Rights of the Child, which states—

(A) in article 37(a), that “no child shall be subject to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment”;

(B) in article 37(b), that the arrest, detention or imprisonment of a child “shall be used only as a measure of last resort and for the shortest appropriate period of time”;

(C) in article 37(c), that “every child deprived of liberty shall be treated with humanity and respect for the inherent dignity of the human person, and in a manner which takes into account the needs of persons of his or her age”; and

(D) in article 37(d), that “[e]very child deprived of his or her liberty shall have the right to prompt access to legal and other appropriate assistance, as well as the right to challenge the legality of the deprivation of his or her liberty before a court or other competent, independent and impartial authority, and to a prompt decision on any such action”.

(4) In the Israeli-occupied West Bank, there are two separate legal systems, with Israeli military law imposed on Palestinians and Israeli civilian law applied to Israeli settlers.

(5) Approximately 2,900,000 Palestinians live in the West Bank, of which around 45 percent are children under the age of 18, who have lived their entire lives under Israeli military occupation.

(6) Since 2000, more than 10,000 Palestinian children have been subject to the Israeli military court system.

(7) Israeli security forces detain children under the age of 12 for interrogation for extended periods of time even though prosecution of children under 12 is prohibited by Israeli military law.
(8) Human Rights Watch, in its World Report 2018, reported that Israeli Security Forces detained Palestinian children “often using unnecessary force, questioned them without a family member present, and made them sign confessions in Hebrew, which most did not understand”.

(9) Human Rights Watch documented, in a July 2015 report titled “Israel: Security Forces Abuse Palestinian Children”, that such detentions also included the use of chokeholds, beatings, and coercive interrogation on children between the ages of 11 and 15 years.

(10) The Israeli human rights organization B’Tselem issued a report in 2018 describing the treatment of Palestinian children under Israeli military occupation: “Every year, hundreds of Palestinian minors undergo the same scenario. Israeli security forces pick them up on the street or at home in the middle of the night, then handcuff and blindfold them and transport them to interrogation, often subjecting them to violence en route. Exhausted and scared—some having spent a long time in transit, some having been roused from sleep, some having had nothing to eat or drink for hours—the minors are then interrogated. They are completely alone in there, cut off from the world, without any adult they know and trust by their side, and without having been given a chance to consult with a lawyer before the interrogation. The interrogation itself often involves threats, yelling, verbal abuse and sometimes physical violence. Its sole purpose is to get the minors to confess or provide information about others.”.

(11) The United Nations Children’s Fund
(UNICEF) concluded, in a February 2013 report titled “Children in Israeli Military Detention”, that the “ill-treatment of children who come in contact with the military detention system appears to be widespread, systematic and institutionalized
throughout the process, from the moment of arrest
until the child’s prosecution and eventual conviction and sentencing”.

(12) The 2013 UNICEF report further determines that the Israeli system of military detention of Palestinian children profoundly deviates from international norms, stating that “in no other country are children systematically tried by juvenile military courts that, by definition, fall short of providing the necessary guarantees to ensure respect for their rights”.
(13) UNICEF also released reports in October 2013 and February 2015 noting that Israeli authorities have, since March 2013, issued new military orders and taken steps to reinforce existing military and police standard operating procedures relating to the detention of Palestinian children. However, the reports still found continued and persistent evidence of ill-treatment of Palestinian children detained by Israeli forces.

(14) In 2013, the annual Country Report on Human Rights Practices for Israel and the Occupied Territories (“Annual Report”) published by the Department of State noted that Israeli security services continued to abuse, and in some cases torture minors, frequently arrested on suspicion of stone-throwing, in order to coerce confessions. The torture tactics used included threats, intimidation, long-term handcuffing, beatings, and solitary confinement.

(15) The State Department’s 2013 Annual Report also stated that “signed confessions by Palestinian minors, written in Hebrew, a language most could not read, continued to be used as evidence against them in Israeli military courts”.

(16) The State Department’s 2016 Annual Report noted a “significant increase in detentions of minors” in 2016, and that “Israeli authorities continued to use confessions signed by Palestinian minors, written in Hebrew”. It also highlighted the renewed use of “administrative detention” against Palestinians, including children, a practice in which a detainee may be held indefinitely, without charge or trial, by the order of a military commander or other government official.

(17) The nongovernmental organization De-defense for Children International Palestine collected affidavits from 739 West Bank children who were detained between 2013 and 2018, and concluded that—

(A) 73 percent of the children endured
physical violence following arrest;

(B) under Israeli military law, children do not have the right to a lawyer during interrogation;

(C) 96 percent of the children did not have a parent present during their interrogation;

(D) 74 percent of the children were not properly informed of their rights by Israeli police;
(E) Interrogators used stress positions, threats of violence, and isolation to coerce confessions from detained children;

(F) 29 children were detained and placed in administrative detention, or detention without charge or trial, since Israel renewed the practice against minors in October 2015, and

(G) 122 children were held in pre-trial, pre-charge isolation for interrogation purposes for an average period of 13 days.

(18) Amendments to Israeli military law concerning the detention of Palestinian children have had little to no impact on the treatment of children during the first 24 to 48 hours after an arrest, when the majority of their ill-treatment occurs.

(19) In 2013, the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child reviewed Israel’s compliance with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and declared that Palestinian children arrested by Israeli forces “continue to be systematically subject to degrading treatment, and often to acts of torture” and that Israel had “fully disregarded” the previous recommendations of the Committee to comply with international law.
The United Nations Committee Against Torture, in 2016, reviewed Israel’s compliance with the Convention Against Torture and reported: “allegations of many instances in which Palestinian minors were exposed to torture or ill-treatment, including to obtain confessions; were given confessions to sign in Hebrew, a language they do not understand; and were interrogated in the absence of a lawyer or a family member. The Committee is also concerned that many of these children, like many other Palestinians, are deprived of liberty in facilities located in Israel, thus hindering access to visits of relatives who live in the Occupied Palestinian Territory.”.

Existing Federal statutory provisions known as the “Leahy law” codified at section 620M of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, 22 U.S.C. 2378d and section 362 of Title 10 of the United States Code, prohibit the United States Government from using funds for assistance to units of foreign security forces where there is credible information implicating that unit in the commission of gross violations of human rights, including torture.

The United States provides in excess of $3.8 billion in annual foreign military assistance to the Government of Israel which enables the military detention and abuse of Palestinian children by Israel’s military system of juvenile detention.

SEC. 3. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Act is to promote and protect the human rights of Palestinian children living under Israeli military occupation.

SEC. 4. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the detention, prosecution, and ill-treatment of Palestinian children living under military occupation in a military court system that lacks basic and fundamental guarantees of due process by the Government of Israel—

(A) violates international law and internationally recognized standards of human rights;

(B) is contrary to the values of the American people and the efforts of the United States to support equality, human rights, and dignity for both Palestinians and Israelis; and

(C) undermines efforts by the United States and the international community to achieve a just and lasting peace between Israel and the Palestinian people; and
(2) Israeli and Palestinian civil society organizations working to advance human rights, justice, and equal treatment for Palestinians living under Israeli military occupation, as well as Jewish and non-Jewish citizens of Israel, are essential to promoting human dignity, democratic values, and international humanitarian law, and therefore deserve recognition and support from the United States and the American people.

SEC. 5. STATEMENT OF POLICY.

It is the policy of the United States to promote human rights for Palestinian children living under Israeli military occupation and to declare Israel’s system of military detention of Palestinian children as a practice that results in widespread and systematic human rights abuses amounting to gross violations of human rights inconsistent with international humanitarian law and the laws and values of the United States.

SEC. 6. LIMITATION ON ASSISTANCE TO SECURITY FORCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 620M of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2378d; commonly known as the “Leahy Law”) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

funds authorized to be appropriated for assistance to a foreign country may be used to support the military detention, interrogation, abuse, or ill-treatment of children in the use against children of any of the following practices:

“(1) Torture or cruel, inhumane, or degrading treatment.

“(2) Physical violence, including restraint in stress positions.

“(3) Hooding, sensory deprivation, death
threats, or other forms of psychological abuse.

“(4) Incommunicado detention or solitary confinement.

“(5) Administrative detention, including when a detainee is held indefinitely, without charge or trial,
by the order of a military commander or other government official.

“(6) Arbitrary detention.

“(7) Denial of access to parents or legal counsel
during interrogations.

“(8) Confessions obtained by force or coercion.”.
