

At the March on Washington, if you take a close look at that march, you will see persons of many hues, many stripes, persons from many walks of life.

So we are here today, proud to be here in the well of the Congress of the United States of America, but we understand that we didn't get here by ourselves, and we are proud to celebrate black history. But we are also proud to acknowledge that black history includes the history of a lot of persons who were associated with our efforts to acquire our freedom, our liberty, and the opportunities that we enjoy today.

Madam Speaker, I thank you very much for the time, and I proudly yield back the time such that you may continue with the business of the House.
