

wages. So she has been on the side of these companies when workers tried to make sure they got fair wages and fair overtime and that child labor laws were protected and the Family Medical Leave Act. She has taken the other side, that of the corporations. Now the President has put her in a job where she is supposed to look out for workers, but who knows if she will really do that.

Let's look at some of her history: a decade defending corporations and then she headed South Carolina's workforce agency that manages State unemployment insurance. When accounting errors resulted in overpayments of unemployment insurance—these weren't errors made by workers; these were accounting errors made that the workers didn't have anything to do with. When accounting errors resulted in overpayments of unemployment insurance to workers looking for jobs, she went after the workers, garnishing their wages.

Maybe worst of all, interestingly, she failed to pay her own house cleaners until they took her to court. Think about that. The person who is supposed to be in charge of making sure corporations pay their workers, whether it is minimum wage, whether it is overtime, whether it is enforcing child labor laws, whether it is enforcing the Family Medical Leave Act—she is the person who is supposed to be in charge of making sure corporations pay their workers, and she didn't pay workers at her own house.

If you want to get a measure of a person, look at how they treat people whom they are allowed to mistreat, say it that way. Look at how they treat people who have less power than they do; how they treat the waitstaff at a restaurant, how they treat the entry-level staff in their office, how they treat the person who cleans their hotel room or cleans their office.

My favorite quote from the Bible—one of my favorite quotes—is from Matthew 25, when Jesus said as follows:

When I was hungry, you fed me; when I was thirsty, you gave me drink; when I was a stranger, you welcomed me. What you did for the least of these, you did for me.

I thought about that, and I know there is no way Jesus or Muhammad or Buddha or any of the great religious leaders would say somebody is worth less than somebody else, that a page is worth less than a Parliamentarian, for instance, or that the Presiding Officer is worth less than the person who is sitting at the desk.

So Matthew 25 is exactly right. No worker is worth less than Ms. Stanton. No Senator is worth more or less than anybody else. I mean, Matthew 25 speaks to equality, speaks to the sort of way we should be treating people who may have lesser titles than we have.

I think of that when I think about Ms. Stanton and the job she has been nominated for. The workers whom she will be in a position to help or hurt—her career so far, she has been in positions where she has hurt workers, but the position she is in that she can help or hurt workers, these workers shouldn't be treated with less respect. Their work has dignity. Whether they swipe a badge or punch a clock, whether they work for tips, whether they work on a salary, whether they raise children, whether they take care of an aging parent, their work has dignity.

If you love your country, you fight for the people who make it work, regardless of their kind of work. Whether they are working construction, whether they are a nurse, whether they are a housekeeper, whether they are a salesperson, whether they work at a counter in a fast-food restaurant, whether they are a page, whether they are a Senator, all work has dignity.

I think it is important, when you think about Ms. Stanton and the job she has, that these workers have earned this pay, whether it is minimum wage, whether it is overtime, whether it is child labor laws, whether it is the Family Medical Leave Act.

When work has dignity, people are paid the wages they earn; they are paid a living wage; they have power over their schedules. It is about wages; it is about benefits; it is about the dignity of work; and it is about a safe workplace; it is about childcare. It is about all of those things.

Workers should not be intimidated into accepting less just because they can't afford a fancy law firm. We need people in government who understand that. We need people who understand that, when you love this country, you fight for those people who make it work.

The last thing we need is an administration with more people serving in Washington who don't value work or respect the Americans who do.

This is another nominee from the President of the United States who will put her thumb or who has put his thumb on the scale to support corporations over workers, to support Wall Street over consumers, to support big insurance companies over sick people. We don't need another one of those in this administration, whether at EPA, whether at the Department of Labor, whether at the Federal Reserve, or whether at the White House.

I urge my colleagues, as this nomination comes forward, as Ms. Stanton comes forward to be Chief of the Wage and Hour Division—Cheryl Stanton—to be Administrator for the Wage and Hour Division, I urge my colleagues to listen a little more to the Americans whom we serve and a little less to big corporations that always have their way in this body—always have their way in this body. I urge my colleagues to listen a little less to those corporations trying to squeeze every last penny out of their workers and reject this nomination.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CASIDY). The clerk will call the roll.

RECOGNIZING OFFUTT AIR FORCE BASE

Mrs. FISCHER. Mr. President, I rise to commend the incredible work done by the men and women of Offutt Air Force Base during the historic flooding that has affected the State of Nebraska.

Offutt Air Force Base is home to some of our Nation's most essential missions. The men and women of STRATCOM stand constant vigil. They provide command and control for the U.S. nuclear deterrent and maintain watch over space operations, missile defense, and global strike.

Airmen of the 55th Wing execute some of the most sensitive and complex missions, ensuring that battlefield commanders and the Nation's decision makers have the most up-to-date intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance information available.

The Air Force's only weather wing, the 557th Weather Wing, provides timely, accurate, and relevant weather information at any time and for any place around the globe.

Throughout Offutt, many other tenant units work in tandem with base leadership to fulfill vital missions that support our national security. These men and women pride themselves on being ready for every threat, but the arrival of a once-in-50-year weather event provided a test unlike any other they have previously faced.

In 2019, Nebraska has seen severe flooding—the worst and most widespread natural disaster in the history of our State. When the waters began to rise, the lives of those at Offutt and the base's critical equipment were put at risk, and the response was immediate. With less than 48 hours to prepare, highly essential aircraft such as the RC-135 were quickly routed to safe locations. The planes that could not be relocated were moved to higher ground. Contingency plans were put in place to ensure continuity of operations.

Across the installation, scores of airmen turned out to answer the call and move sensitive electronics and valuable equipment away from the reach of damage, fighting as a team against the oncoming flood.

Personnel worked around the clock to fortify facilities with more than 235,000 sandbags and 460 flood barriers to minimize damage as much as possible. These men and women mounted a Herculean effort to defend their base and do everything possible to protect their fellow airmen.

Across Offutt, we have seen a remarkable demonstration of what makes this base so very special: everyday airmen offering to do all they could to protect the base, personnel working tirelessly to ensure the highly critical operations of STRATCOM and the 55th Wing were not negatively impacted, and, above all, a unifying spirit of dedication and purpose that showed the world that, when disaster strikes, there is nothing that can keep the men and women of Offutt Air Force Base from answering the call of duty.

I am extremely proud to have the privilege of representing everyone who makes this base such a key part of our national security. There is no finer representation of what it means to serve than the selfless work of the personnel at Offutt who responded to this emergency.

Despite the outstanding efforts made in preparation for this natural disaster, Mother Nature took a toll on the base. At the flood's peak, one-third of Offutt Air Force Base was underwater. Eighty facilities at the base have been impacted, and waters crested at a depth of 16 feet. More than 3,000 personnel were displaced from their work centers, and 1.2 million square feet of office space was underwater.

The damage across the installation is extensive, and it will take a concerted effort to ensure that the impacts from the flooding are resolved and that the base is fully restored.

I urge my colleagues to work together with the Nebraska delegation to ensure that when the full accounting of the impacts from the flood are assessed, we provide the Air Force with the full resourcing it needs to repair that damage.

The good news is, our service men and women at Offutt are already hard at work on the process of putting Offutt back on its feet.

As the water recedes, personnel have been working hard to account for the damage and take action to resume the operations that were suspended as a result of this disaster.

One of the signature sounds of the Bellevue, NE, community is the distant rumble of the engines of the aircraft that depart from and land at Offutt every day. During the flooding, that unmistakable sound was absent. Now that sound is back at Offutt.

Last week, the runway was certified for operation, and the first of our relocated planes came home.

We should not operate under any misperceived notions that repairing Offutt will happen overnight. This is going to be a step-by-step process. But with the hard work of the Air Force, Congress, and the local community, we can rebuild Offutt Air Force Base even better than it was before.

I wish to offer my thanks to everyone at Offutt Air Force Base who dedicated their time and energy to responding to this disaster. I also want to thank the heroic men and women of the Nebraska National Guard who provided aerial damage assessment during the flooding. Thank you to the countless members of the Bellevue and Omaha communities who donated food, equipment, and offered to volunteer during the flooding.

As we look to the days ahead, I am confident that both Offutt and Nebraska will emerge from this disaster stronger.

Now is a time when we must focus on the future. We will rebuild and ensure that Offutt remains Nebraska Strong.

Thank you.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

NOMINATION OF CHERYL MARIE STANTON

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I come to the floor this afternoon to speak in support of my friend Cheryl Marie Stanton, who is well qualified to be the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division within the U.S. Department of Labor. In her previous role as executive director for the South Carolina Department of Employment and Workforce, she gained valuable experience that will prepare her well for the role she is about to take on within the U.S. Department of Labor. She is also someone who has vast experience in labor and employment law, both in public life and in the private sector. She also served as Associate White House Counsel, as liaison to the Department of Labor.

Cheryl currently works at the Social Security Administration as associate to the Chief of Staff. She previously served as the executive director for the South Carolina Department of Employment and Workforce, to which she was appointed by then-Governor Nikki Haley in 2013.

Cheryl is someone I have known for more than 20 years. Like me, Cheryl served as a law clerk to then-Judge Samuel Alito on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Although we never clerked at the same time—she clerked the year before, and I got to know her through mutual friends initially and then got to know her independently through that clerkship experience—she is someone who is well regarded within the Alito chambers as being a hard-working law clerk and someone who everyone enjoyed working with and getting to know.

I still remember many years ago, when she was serving at the White House Counsel's Office as Associate Counsel, she took my family and me on a tour of the White House and showed genuine interest in them. This is the kind of person who comes with a lot of academic and professional qualifications. When you add to that this X factor, this intangible factor of being someone who is genuinely interested in people, genuinely interested in their well-being, their welfare, and making sure they are informed and happy, this is exactly the kind of person we would want in a position like this one.

Her academic credentials are, of course, impeccable. She received her law degree from the University of Chicago Law School and her undergraduate degree from Williams College.

In short, Cheryl Stanton is someone I look forward to voting for and confirming to this position within the Department of Labor. I urge my colleagues to support her nomination.

Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

HEALTHCARE

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, it seems that every week now, I come to the floor to say the same thing, which is that healthcare is not political; it is personal. There is no part of healthcare that is more personal than the decision regarding if, when, and under what circumstances to have a child. And that certainly is the case when things go terribly wrong, which they sometimes do. These reproductive health decisions need to be made by women in consultation with their doctors, their families, and their faith. That is what the Supreme Court has ruled. They should not be made by politicians—mainly men—looking to score political points from women's personal tragedies. Yet, once again, that is what the Republicans are doing right now.

I have a question. How dare you pretend to care about the health of women and babies when all of your actions suggest otherwise?

Unfortunately, Republicans haven't noticed, but we have a real healthcare crisis involving women and babies in this country. In most of the world, fewer and fewer women are dying from childbirth—not here in the United States. Our maternal mortality rate is climbing. More women are dying. Our infant mortality rate ranks a shameful 32 among the world's 35 wealthiest nations. That means we have more babies who aren't surviving through the first year of their life because of lack of healthcare, nutrition, and other issues.

The Republican majority should be working with us and taking action to improve health outcomes for moms and babies. Instead, they are busy trying to take away their healthcare.

Between 2010 and 2018, the Republican majority in Congress voted to repeal or weaken the Affordable Care Act more than 70 times—7-0. Now the Trump administration has stepped in to help. Last June and August, they expanded access to association health plans and short-term plans. We just call them junk plans because they don't cover so many basics, like prescription drugs, mental health care, and—you guessed it—maternity care.

Let me remind everyone that before the Affordable Care Act, most insurance companies did not cover prenatal care and maternity care as a basic part of healthcare. Women had to go out
