The House met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. GOTTTHEIMER).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, D.C., September 18, 2019.

I hereby appoint the Honorable Josh Gottheimer to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NANCY PELOSI,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING-HOUR DEBATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning-hour debate.

The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties. All time shall be equally allocated between the parties, and in no event shall debate continue beyond 11:50 a.m. Each Member, other than the majority and minority leaders and the minority whip, shall be limited to 5 minutes.

CONGRESS MUST PASS USMCA AGREEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) for 5 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, it is time. It is time for Congress to pass the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement, the USMCA. This is not, as many of you know, a new issue. The administration finished its work months ago—292 days ago, to be exact.

That is 292 days that Congress has had to ask questions. That is 292 days that we have had to assess the benefits of the agreement. That is 292 days we have had to analyze the text of that agreement.

During the August recess, I had conversations with hundreds, maybe thousands, of folks. Their message was clear: USMCA is a clearly better agreement, and Congress needs to do its job for the good of this country.

There are a number of ways in which the President has negotiated a USMCA that is stronger, that is better than NAFTA.

First, USMCA ensures that the digital economy will be more open and that it will be more secure. Second, the strong language on currency manipulation and on intellectual property provides a model for our way forward with other agreements, especially one with China.

Third, Mr. Speaker, the benefits to the ag community are compelling. My colleagues have heard me speak before about the fact that our ag producers have not had the easiest time of it lately. They need USMCA.

This agreement opens up new access to Canadian markets for wheat, wine, eggs, poultry, and dairy. It increases agricultural exports by $2 billion a year. That is why 1,000 ag groups from across the country have endorsed USMCA. They know that with fair access to markets, American producers can compete and win.

USMCA is not perfect, but collectively, these improvements would create 176,000 new American jobs and would increase our GDP by $68 billion. That is real value, and it is value that is stronger, that is better than NAFTA.

The administration has done its job. It has negotiated an agreement that powers economic opportunity and grows American jobs.

So, it is time. It is time for this body to act. It is time for the Speaker to bring this bill to the floor. Mr. Speaker, it is time for us to pass USMCA.

PUT PRINCIPLES ABOVE POLITICS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN) for 5 minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, and still I rise because I love my country. And I rise today because we are witnessing clear and convincing evidence of a Presidential coverup. We are witnessing this evidence live and in living color on national TV.

Just yesterday, before the Judiciary Committee, two witnesses did not appear pursuant to the coverup, and the one who did appear brought with him the clear and convincing evidence. He brought with him a letter from the President of the United States, by and through his agents, that indicates that he should not give certain testimony—clear and convincing evidence of a coverup.

The President of the United States is engaged in a continuation of obstruction that is creating the coverup. He obstructed. This is why we are having the Judiciary Committee hearings, in part.

He continues his obstruction, which means he is covering up. We cannot allow this to continue.

The President is making a bet. The President’s bet is this: The President is betting that we will put politics above principle, that we will not use Article II, section 4 of the Constitution as the radical Republicans did in 1868 to impeach President Johnson for merely speaking ill of Congress.

He is betting we won’t use that. He is betting we won’t put the principle above the politics. He believes that we will put winning the next election above the Constitution of the United States of America. He believes that we are going to put the politics above the moral imperative to do that which we know should be done when a President has committed impeachable acts.

I believe that we will not be driven by the polls. We will not. Those who crossed the Edmund Pettus Bridge weren’t driven by the polls. They were driven by a moral authority that they had to do that which was right, and we must do the right thing, too.

We cannot be driven by polls. We must stand for the polls. We must stand on principle. We will not allow the next election to determine what we will do now.

Mr. Speaker, it is a risky thing to make this kind of decision. You don’t know what the next election will bring. You have to use this power that the voters have given us, the constituents have given us, the people of this country have given us to do that which is right.

We must impeach this President. If we don’t impeach him, Article II, section 4 of the Constitution will become meaningless. There will be no guardrails. There are none now, as he sees it, because he has made a bet.

Well, I am betting that this Congress will do the right thing. I am betting that we are going to put principle above politics and the people of this country above our political parties. I am betting we are not going to try to save a few people at an election at the expense of all the people who are suffering because of the coverup and because of the insidious discrimination this President is perpetrating upon this country and his policies.

I am betting on the American people. I am betting that the American people will stand with us. I am also betting that principle above all is what we must stand with.

THE SPEAKER pro tempore. Members are reminded to refrain from engaging in personalities toward the President. ———

CONGRATULATING WICK’S PIES ON ITS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

The Speaker pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Pence) for 5 minutes.

Mr. Pence. Mr. Speaker, I rise with the sweetest news from the Sixth Congressional District of Indiana. On September 25, the famous Wick’s Pies will celebrate its 75th anniversary in business.

Hoosier families have come to know Wick’s for its delicious pies and baked goods that have been a staple in Randolph County since 1944. Duane “Wick” Wickersham started this business by delivering pies from his 1934 Buick sedan. Within 4 years, he was producing over 300 pies a day.

Wick’s is renowned for its sugar cream pie, a Hoosier specialty since that has become the State’s official State pie.

To this day, Wick’s Pies remains family owned and can produce 10,000 pies in a single 8-hour shift. Wick’s distributes to more than 40 States, though you can’t beat a fresh slice from Mr. Wick’s restaurant on Cherry Street in Winchester, which I have enjoyed.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate Wick’s Pies.

LACK OF HIGH-SPEED INTERNET ACCESS IMPACTS ALL AMERICANS

Mr. Pence. Mr. Speaker, earlier in the year, I had the privilege of sitting in Ranking Member Graves’ chair for a portion of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure Members’ Day Hearing. Regardless of the diverse backgrounds or districts we represent, my Republican and Democratic colleagues echoed familiar stories of how the lack of high-speed internet access is impacting their constituents.

To address this issue, I worked with my colleague and fellow Hoosier, Congressman Visclosky, to introduce the Broadband Interagency Coordination Act, legislation to close the digital divide and ensure Hoosiers and rural Americans are not left behind.

GUN VIOLENCE IS UNACCEPTABLE

The Speaker pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rush) for 5 minutes.

Mr. Rush. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to address the scourge of mass shootings currently plaguing my community and other communities around the Nation.

The Gun Violence Archive, Mr. Speaker, which is a not-for-profit corporation that tracks and disseminates information on mass shootings, defines mass shootings as incidents where four or more people are injured or killed as a result of gunfire. Using this metric, Mr. Speaker, there have been 33 mass shootings in my district in the past 5 years, and eight so far this year—33 mass shootings in my district in the past 5 years and eight so far this very year.

Mr. Speaker, our national consciousness has been shocked by the tragedies in Ohio and Texas, as it should very well be, but we seem increasingly numb to the everyday violence taking place in cities like Chicago and Baltimore and other places throughout the Nation, especially when that violence impacts people of color.

Mr. Speaker, clearly, the events that took place in Dayton, El Paso, and Odessa deserve our most serious and intense attention. These are despicable acts carried out by despicable actors. I only wish, Mr. Speaker, that every single mass shooting in our Nation received the same intense and unfiltered attention.

There are men, women, and children being murdered and maimed on an almost daily basis across our Nation. Their names, Mr. Speaker, are easily forgotten and quickly remembered. Their stories will not be read aloud on the national news. Their families’ pain will continue to be ignored.

There are many slow-moving massacres taking place in districts like mine that, unfortunately, do not receive the same widespread attention because the violence is occurring in poorer, minority communities where it is sadly seen as a normal place or par for the course: They deserve to be victims. They deserve to be mass murdered. They deserve to be killed by gunfire. They have earned that. That is how they live. They are subhuman.

Mr. Speaker, as you well know, this is unacceptable at its core. Throughout my tenure in this Congress, I have introduced and reintroduced legislation that will help reduce the mass shootings taking place today, yesterday, and days gone by in my district and beyond.

In 2007, I first introduced the Blair Holt Firearm Licensing and Record of Sale Act. I have reintroduced this bill in every Congress since; and in 2019, it is more necessary than ever, as it would forbid unlicensed firearm ownership, prohibit the transfer of firearms without a valid license, and require universal background checks.

Additionally, Mr. Speaker, this body has passed two important background check bills that have been passed out of this House, and I was the proud co-sponsor of each of these bills. They now, sad to say, are sitting collecting dust over on the Senate side.

WELCOMING AUSTRALIAN PRIME MINISTER SCOTT MORRISON TO THE UNITED STATES

The Speaker pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Courtney) for 5 minutes.

Mr. Courtney. Mr. Speaker, on Friday this week, September 20, our country will be welcoming the top official of the country of Australia, Prime Minister Scott Morrison, who will be arriving in Washington, D.C.

It is an important event, I think, for both countries, because this alliance between our two countries is so deep and the bond is so strong. The times that we are living in are so critical in terms of, again, just reaffirming all of the work that our two countries do together in so many ways, whether it is in terms of our military alliance, intelligence, trade, our cultures in terms of everything from movies to literature to music. Again, it is a deep and rich bond between our two countries.

Mr. Speaker, during the August break, we had a bipartisan group, a number of us, who actually went to the country of Australia for a joint Members of Parliament/Members of Congress conference that took place in Perth, Australia. There were about a dozen Members, bicameral and bipartisan. I can tell you that the prognosis is very good in terms of the connection between our two countries.

As I said, the integration of our two militaries could not be deeper and more connected. Again, it is a relationship that goes back to World War I, when U.S. troops, the first group that arrived in the expeditionary force in World War I, actually fought under an Australian general, John Monash. Obviously, that carried through during World War II, particularly in the Asia-Pacific region.

In Vietnam, they were our ally, one of the few that actually fought with our country during that conflict; and, obviously, in the Middle East, Australian troops have been part of, again, operations, to this day, between the two countries in terms of the fight against ISIS and others.

When we were in Australia, again, the situation that I think is most urgent and something I really think all of us need to pay attention to is that the environment in the Indo-Pacific region is changing dramatically.

We now have a leader in the country of China, Xi Jinping, who has declared himself President for life and who has openly and brazenly basically signaled that he is prepared to disregard all international rules-based order, which has really been the foundation of that region since the end of World War II, whether it is maritime law, where, again, they are building islands totally in violation of maritime law, or whether it is a claim of the Nine-Dash Line, which is a territorial claim far out into the South China Sea and the East China Sea.

Again, what is happening there is egregious. It is harmful in terms of safe passage and open lanes of maritime traffic in the region. They obviously are engaged in an unprecedented military buildup, again, developing missile technologies that put surface ships of both countries and others in the region at great risk.

So we have a lot of work to do. Rare earth minerals, which, again, China administrators they have a virtual monopoly. Everything from our cellphones to aerospace and maritime equipment require the use of that.

Western Australia, in particular, has deep deposits of rare earth minerals, and it is time for our two countries to work together to create a different supply chain that does not rely totally on the country of China to make that happen.

What we also heard was that the best way that our country can move forward is to really, I think, point to what makes us most attractive in the world today, which is our embrace of democracy, free speech, openness, and generosity.

Again, those are policies which we heard loud and clear from our colleagues in the Australian Parliament that they are looking to America, which has been the leader since the end of World War II, to promote, that type of international rules-based order.

That is really the question of the day for this administration, which is in a go-it-alone trade war with China. Again, they have got the symptom right, which is that China’s behavior is egregious and malign, particularly in terms of the trade practices that they engage in, but the question is: How do you push back? How do you execute a policy that should be multilateral, collaborative with our allies, to make sure that the World Trade Organization actually has real teeth in terms of enforcing egregious violations that China has been engaged in in terms of intellectual property and government involvement in terms of trying to capture different markets like solar panels and many, many others?

So, again, I just want to say to our friends in Australia that they are welcome in this country. We look forward to, again, a very rich and strong alliance moving forward. The coequal branch of our government in Congress is part of that message and part of that policy.

Again, we look forward to many years of productive work together based on common values as well as common interests and, obviously, the embrace of democracy for the region and for the rest of the world.
Mr. Speaker. SEAN will be remembered by me as a friend, a loving father, a dedicated husband, and a humble public servant. I, for one, hope this is not the last we hear or see of Congressman SEAN DUFFY.

HONORING RONNIE LUPE

(Mr. O’HALLERAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. O’HALLERAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay my respects to Ronnie Lupe, former chairman of the White Mountain Apache Tribe, who passed away last month at the age of 88.

During his time as a public servant, Mr. Lupe fought for Tribal sovereignty and worked extensively on water rights issues. Mr. Lupe’s efforts aided the passage of the White Mountain Apache Water Rights Quantification Act of 2009 and established a reservation-wide clean drinking water system.

For his service to his Tribe, he was recognized by former Arizona Governor Jack Williams on the Arizona Commission of Indian Affairs in 2006.

A veteran, Mr. Lupe was a member of the United States Marine Corps during the Korean war.

Arizona lost an awesome voice for Native American advancement. I feel truly humbled to have known him. Pat and I are keeping our thoughts with Ronnie’s family and the entire White Mountain Apache Tribe in our prayers as they mourn his passing.

RECOGNIZING SPRING LAKE’S 150TH BIRTHDAY

(Mr. HUIZENGA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUIZENGA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the village of Spring Lake on its 150th birthday.

This past weekend, friends and residents of the small village in west Michigan gathered together to celebrate and share memories of the community’s rich and storied history.

The village of Spring Lake first began as a lumber town in 1838 when Captain Benjamin Hopkins and his family arrived from Canada. Soon after, other settlers arrived and constructed additional sawmills, leading to the village officially incorporating in 1869. As the village developed, railroads, resorts, and telephone lines all helped the village grow into a bustling community.

Today, the village is situated on the beautiful shores of both Spring Lake and the Grand River in west Michigan, offering endless recreational opportunities and a wide variety of shops and services.

While the village has changed much throughout the last 150 years, one thing has remained constant: the close-knit and welcoming community continues to make the village a special place to live and raise a family.

HONORING CONGRESSMAN SEAN DUFFY

(Mr. BUDD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BUDD. Mr. Speaker, on September 23, Congress will lose one of its most dedicated Members as SEAN DUFFY retires from the House.

I will miss his unwavering commitment to conservative principles and the way that he never backed down from a fight. In fact, he welcomed them. But he also engaged in a battle of ideas, and he never made it personal.

It is because of this attitude that freedom and liberty will be sustained a little longer, and I wish we had more like him. I also respected his legislative accomplishments, particularly his commitment to protecting our State-based system of insurance regulation, just one of his many passions during his time as chairman and ranking member of the Housing and Insurance Subcommittee.

TIME IS NOW TO AX WIDOW’S TAX

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the conferees of the National Defense Authorization Act, NDAA, were announced, and I am deeply grateful to serve another year on this committee for fiscal year 2020.

I will continue to promote peace through strength and work to champion repeal of the widow’s tax. Our surviving spouses have waited long enough.

As of this week, my bill, the Military Surviving Spouses Equity Act, has 376 cosponsors from both sides of the aisle. In fact, it has the highest number of cosponsors of any bill in the current Congress.

In a time of constant disagreement, I am thankful to come together and for the bipartisan support this bill has received. I am disappointed it did not receive a standalone vote, but I will fight to keep it in the NDAA. It is now time to ax the widow’s tax.

I am dedicated to supporting our servicemembers, veterans, and military families. I look forward to working with the entire NDAA conference committee and President Donald Trump to advance this bipartisan legislation.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September 11th in the global war on terrorism.

VAPE IS QUICKLY BECOMING A PUBLIC HEALTH CRISIS

(Ms. BROWNLEY of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. BROWNLEY. Mr. Speaker, recently, it was reported that a seventh person has died from a vaping-related illness in the United States.

In response, the CDC recently announced that it has activated its emergency operations center to investigate what is quickly becoming a public health crisis. It is becoming abundantly clear that e-cigarettes are causing harmful health impacts among both teens, approximately 2.4 million students, and adults who use them.

While more research is needed, I believe this public health emergency requires swift action by Congress to prevent the marketing of these products to young people. That is why I have introduced the Stop Vaping Ads Act, which will close the loophole in current law and would ban e-cigarette advertisements on broadcast media.

I invite my colleagues to join me in support of this commonsense bill that will help curb the onslaught of harmful and dangerous e-cigarette ads.

HONORING BUFFALO FIRE DEPARTMENT

(Mr. HIGGINS of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, this week, I was pleased to announce the city of Buffalo Fire Department has been awarded a Federal grant of more than $8.9 million by the Department of Homeland Security’s Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response program. With this critical support, the Buffalo Fire Department will be able to hire 50 additional firefighters.

The purpose of this grant is to make certain that local fire departments are able to respond quickly to emergencies and at all hours.

Buffalo is home to an incredible team of firefighters who work to protect our community from fires and other emergencies. Just 1 month ago, the department received a separate grant of $422,000 for equipment and training. This Federal grant funding will go a long way in strengthening the city’s fire department and adding more dedicated personnel who work tirelessly to keep our community safe.

Mr. Speaker, SEAN will be remembered by me as a friend, a loving father, a dedicated husband, and a humble public servant. I, for one, hope this is not the last we hear or see of Congressmen SEAN DUFFY.

STATE OF GUN VIOLENCE IN THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

(Ms. PLASKETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PLASKETT. Mr. Speaker, every day, 100 Americans are killed with guns and hundreds more are shot and injured. That is 36,500 people a year who lose their lives to gun violence. The effects extend far beyond those casualties and shape the lives of millions of Americans who witness it, know someone who was shot, or live in fear of the next shooting. This senseless loss of life is all too common in the United States and its territories.

As of August 26, we have lost 26 lives to gun violence in the Virgin Islands. In 2018, the United Nations released a report naming the territory as the new murder capital in the Caribbean, with 32.64 murders per 100,000 people.

For the families, friends, and communities of victims in the Virgin Islands, this pain will never pass, just as it will not pass for the loved ones of thousands of other people who have died from gun violence in the U.S.

Time for action is overdue. Earlier this year, the House passed the Bipartisan Background Checks Act of 2019, requiring checks for all gun purchases. We need to push for universal background checks, assistance and increasing funds to border control for the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico to stop guns coming into the territories, and enhanced treatment and resources for mental health.

I look forward to working with all to come up with some form of sensible gun law legislation.

Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday, the House Rules Committee met and reported a rule, House Resolution 558, providing for consideration of H.R. 1423, the FAIR Act, under a structured rule.

The rule provides for 1 hour of general debate equally divided and controlled by the chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule.

Unfortunately, the real surprise was delivered to him 30 minutes after his party. Kevin was fired. His employer made it clear that his job would not be waiting for him when he got back from his deployment.

I wonder that my colleagues would do if forced with the same circumstance of choosing country over providing for their own families.

The Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act protects his rights as a reservist to deploy and keep his job.

When Kevin returned from serving his country in 2014 and tried to enforce his right, his employer filed a motion to compel arbitration, and it was granted.

Six months into his tenure with the company, Kevin had been required to sign several documents as a condition of keeping his job. Those documents included a forced arbitration clause, which meant that Kevin would have no access to the court system—ever. He would lose his right to a jury trial, to any meaningful appeal, and to a public or speedy proceeding of any kind.

Mr. Speaker, Kevin and the thousands of other Americans who have been forced into arbitration proceedings are why we are here today. We are here to ensure that Americans are not forced to unknowingly agree to surrender their constitutional rights.

Under the present system, when corporations harm workers and consumers, their cases are often funneled into the confidential quasi-legal arbitration system.

When thousands of Californians were charged early termination fees that were illegal under State law, DIRECTV responded by forcing individual customers into arbitration.

What exactly are consumers supposed to do when it costs more to pursue a case through the arbitration than it would if they were looking to recover a small amount?

Instead of victims fighting their cases together, big corporations can get away with making millions illegitimately by harming average Americans. By allowing forced arbitration and preventing class action lawsuits, we incentivize this very bad behavior.

 Mandatory arbitration has the potential to affect everyone. One story that haunts me is that of Sister Irene Morissette.

When she was 84 years old, Sister Irene, an elderly Catholic nun, moved to Chateau Vestavia, an assisted living facility outside of Birmingham, Alabama. While living at this facility, she was brutally assaulted at 84 years of age. The police found blood and semen on her bed and her clothing.

The medical examiner documented bleeding and injuries that indicated a rape had occurred, but after the police failed to solve the case, Irene’s family attempted to bring a civil suit against Chateau Vestavia. Instead of being able to pursue her case in court, she was forced to arbitration. Irene, unknowingly, had signed a forced arbitration clause buried in the documents required to live at the facility.

The arbitrator decided that, despite the physical evidence of rape, besides the blood and the semen on her clothing, the facility was charged with keeping her safe could not and would not be held responsible.

Unfortunately, forced arbitration is common practice among large chain nursing facilities. Ninety percent of these large facilities require forced arbitration agreements.

Mr. Speaker, can you imagine trusting your loved one, your mom or a grandma, to be cared for at one of these facilities and then finding out that they have been brutally harmed and that you could not seek a fair recourse, no justice?

These facilities argue that if you refuse to sign a forced arbitration clause, you can just take your loved one, your mom or your grandma, to be cared for at one of these facilities and then finding out that they have been brutally harmed and that you could not seek a fair recourse, no justice.

What I hope these stories make clear is that arbitration, contrary to claims of my colleagues, does not work for everyone. In fact, for most Americans, it serves as a barrier to justice and a legal shield for corporations. It is a system that deters defendants from seeking justice and small payouts. It is a system that is fundamentally based on giving American into giving up their rights.

That is why H.R. 1423 is so critically important. This bill would restore the rights of Americans by allowing them to make the choice for themselves whether and how to arbitrate. Ultimately, that is what this bill is about: freedom to choose for every American.

If arbitration is the amazing system that my colleagues claim it is, then Americans will flock to pursue their claims through it. But if arbitration is, in fact, the barrier to justice that it appears to be for so many Americans, then this bill will allow them to choose how they want to pursue their claims. Voting for this rule is a step towards fighting the special interests that oppress our constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would advise Members to not traffic the well while another Member is under recognition.

Mrs. LESKO. Mr. Speaker, I thank Representative TORRES for yielding me the customary 30 minutes, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we all want to protect innocent people, we all want to protect the little guy, and we all want to protect the elderly. That is why I would remind my colleague that courts can and have overturned unfair arbitration clauses, and, certainly, if criminal acts have been done, criminal charges should be pursued.

Today, we consider a bill that disregards private contracts and enriches the wealthiest trial lawyers. We con- sider a bill that my Democrat colleagues intended to protect the American people, but really it specifically carves out an application to labor unions. And why would it do that? Because the labor unions and trial lawyers are the Democrats’ most ardent supporters and donors. We consider a bill that will hurt businesses and the very consumers and employees it seeks to protect.

The bill’s proponents advance the idea that arbitration is unfair, coercive, and harmful, but that is far from the truth. In fact, I would like to read some of the things that the U.S. Supreme Court has said about arbitration agreements in various cases. They have said: The advantages of arbitration are many; it is usually cheaper and faster than litigation; it can have simpler procedural and evidentiary rules; it normally minimizes hostility and is less disruptive of ongoing and future labor relations; it is often more flexible in regard to scheduling of time and places of hearings and discovery devices; and the
Mr. Speaker, if you look at those contracts, it makes you waive your constitutional right, as Congresswoman TORRES just said.

We have a constitutional right to go to court to settle our disputes. Our Founding Fathers and people in the American Revolution fought and died for that constitutional right.

Mr. Speaker, with the stroke of a pen, you are allowed to give this away, even though it is in the fine print. Instead, you have to go to a rigged and secret arbitration process that the corporations control and usually win. It also means you can’t band together with other claimants.

Think of what that means, Mr. Speaker. It means if you have an account with a big corporation and they decided to charge you an extra $500 for the year, even through that is in violation of the contract, and it may be in violation of State law, who is going to bring a case for $500? A lawyer won’t take that case. These clauses prohibit banding together in class actions and doing the cases together.

What does the upshot of that mean? It means that these corporations that do act with impunity. They are immunized from accountability. They can do anything that they want without having to account for it in court.

This is a license to steal. It is wrong, and it goes against the American ideal of responsibility and accountability, what we try to teach our children. This is not something that really applies to small businesses. It applies to big corporations.

Eighty-one out of the Fortune 100 corporations use these forced arbitration clauses, and almost nobody goes to arbitration under them. Take Amazon Prime, for example. They have 101 million subscribers to Amazon Prime. In the last five years, there have been only 15 arbitrations. That is because it just doesn’t make sense. The economics don’t work. If you can’t band together and do it as a class action, then it doesn’t work.

Class actions keep American corporations accountable and responsible. That is why we don’t want to shut them down.

My friend from across the aisle, the gentlewoman from Arizona, just said that this bill shuts some people out of the justice system and that it is an important option. It is not an option. That is the point of this bill. It is mandatory. It is a rigged. These people have a choice. They go into a secret and rigged system.

Vote for the FAIR Act. I thank the gentlewoman, Mrs. TORRES, for yielding time.
Mr. RASKIN. Mr. Speaker, have our colleagues across the aisle forgotten that the right to a jury trial was as essential a cause of the American Revolution as was representative democracy and the denial of voting rights itself? The Adam Smith Institute, which I am pleased to represent here, said that the "heart and the lungs of liberty. Without them, we have no other fortification against being ridden like horses, fleeced like sheep, worked like cattle, and fed and clothed like swine and hounds."

The massive suppression of trial by jury rights by British authorities was a critical cause of our Revolution. One of the charges that Thomas Jefferson leveled against the British in the Declaration of Independence was "depriving us in many cases of the benefits of trial by jury."

Now, today, we have not a foreign king and government trying to impose a closed Star Chamber on the American people. It has worked for years. It has proven repeatedly that it is more cost-effective. In the cases of these studies, the employees actually got awarded more than they did, on average, when they went to court.

Let me remind you all of those people who have used trial attorneys. Mr. Speaker, you hear it over and over again, where the attorneys got all the money and the victims got hardly anything.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. LESKO of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

When Wells Fargo opened up 3.5 million fake accounts, including 178,972 from Arizona, Wells Fargo tried, since 2013, to use forced arbitration to block lawsuits, including a class-action case. These people were charged excess overdraft fees when their accounts were not overdrawn.

As it relates to labor, there are 60.1 million workers who make up a majority of nonunion private-sector employees who are subject to forced arbitration clauses. These employees are told that if they want the job or want to keep their current job, they must sign away their right to their day in court and submit to forced arbitration agreements.

In contrast, the collective bargaining process includes protections that are unavailable to many nonunion workers, such as rejecting unfair employment terms. In collective bargaining, both the company and the union are represented by counsel and can agree on arbitration before the dispute arises to an informed and transparent basis. The collective bargaining process can also involve agreement over other important protections, such as truly neutral arbitrators, better procedures, and transparent decisionmaking.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. RASKIN), a distinguished member of the Rules Committee.

Mr. Speaker, sometimes I don’t understand why my Democratic colleagues put forward certain bills and not other bills, and this is not a bill that—I don’t know about my colleagues, but I haven’t had a lot of constituents talk to me about this bill and that.

In fact, I have in front of me a recent poll that was done. It was conducted in March 2019. There were 1,000 registered voters who were polled. In that poll, it asked: "Is arbitration viewed much more favorably than class-action and individual lawsuits?"

On this, it said in all cases that arbitration was viewed more favorably by our constituents than individual lawsuits.

It goes on to break this down among Republicans, independents, and Democrats. In this case, Republicans thought that arbitration was a better format by 47 percent; independents, 36 percent; and half and half, another 36 percent. Democrats thought arbitration was better than going to court, 44 percent, and then another 34 percent added to 10 percent. Our constituents—and I may not be reading this right because it is in black and white instead of colored—is the gentleman later.

If you add the two together, it clearly shows that Republicans, independents, and Democrats favor arbitration over going to court, and it is probably because of cases like this.

In fact, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau found numerous problems in its study to be associated with reliance on class-action lawsuits for recovery on consumer claims. In addition, class-action lawsuits also have presented other problems, including scandal involving fabricated testimony bought and sold to support false claims.

For example, multiple renowned class-action lawyers have been exposed and convicted of such behavior. One of them, William Lerach of Milberg Weiss, told The Wall Street Journal that illegal kickbacks to people recruited to file class-action lawsuits is an industry practice. He and fellow trial lawyer Melvyn Weiss engineered a $250 million criminal scheme to pay people to sue companies, lied about it in court, and became Federal prisoners.

Another of America’s most prominent class-action lawyers, Richard Scruggs of Mississippi, pled guilty in March 2018 to bribing a State judge to obtain more legal fees.

I have already talked about how the U.S. Supreme Court, through multiple cases, has said that arbitration is a good practice, better in many cases than going to court. I have already talked about multiple studies that have studied the analysis between arbitration and court; that employees, on average, get awarded more money than going to court; and that it helps employees and employers with flexibility of scheduling of time instead of going to court.
lost his case after appealing all the way to the Supreme Court.

Recently, some very large companies like Walgreens, CVS, and Safeway have taken American Express to trial over the very same issue. The difference here is that they are large enough to cover being sued in lawsuits without forced arbitration clauses. I have heard it said that the FAIR Act is bad for small businesses. It is quite the opposite. Corporate America claims that the FAIR Act breaks all arbitration clauses. That is simply not true. The FAIR Act does not apply to business-to-business arbitrations.

The bill protects workers, consumers, and small businesses with antitrust cases. Companies like Walmart or Exxon are not protected from forced arbitration under the FAIR Act.

I could share many more of these stories, but our time here is limited. It shocks me that my colleague is so opposed to legislation when our Founding Fathers recognized the importance of access to legal counsel, and every day on this very floor we pledge “with liberty and justice for all” — for all.

I do agree with my colleagues. Mr. Speaker, that the biggest special interest at play here is the corporations that want to protect their top executives who sexually assault their employees; the cable companies who charge illegal fees, making millions in profit, the pizza companies that charge exorbitant fees, crippling small businesses; and many others that use forced arbitration to escape justice.

There are plenty of special interests that are fighting to keep using this broken system, and my colleague has tried to flip that narrative to make it seem as if the underdog will be hurt by this legislation — the underdog of billionaires. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Let’s not forget whom this bill is for. This bill is about fighting for veterans like Kevin, for our loved ones in nursing homes like Sister Irene, for small businesses and every other victim of forced arbitration.

Mr. Speaker, we have tossed around a lot of legal terms in this debate, but at its core, this bill is about justice.

In conclusion, I would like to tell about a horrific experience suffered by a customer of Massage Envy in L.A. County.

Lilly was sexually assaulted by a therapist, and after the assault, Lilly tried and tried to cancel her membership to this service, but the company repeatedly put roadblocks in her way. A year and a half later, she demanded that the Massage Envy app on her phone to cancel her membership. Hidden in the fine print of the app was a forced arbitration clause. Lilly filed a lawsuit.

Like hundreds of other women who have been assualted, Lilly from Massage Envy is trying forced arbitration to prevent Lilly from getting justice, attempting to force her and other women into arbitration to keep it a secret.

Years later, she still has not seen an outcome.

By isolating survivors of sexual assault, wage theft, and discrimination and denying them the leverage of class action suits, we discourage other victims from coming forward. While the very same litigants in limbo, navigating a potentially rigged arbitration system, their perpetrators are free to continue to rape, to continue to steal, and to continue their bad behavior.

Forced arbitration is bad for working men and women, small businesses, and this bill is about giving Americans a chance to fight against powerful special interests.

Mr. Speaker, as my colleagues consider this legislation, I ask you: Will we continue to silence victims, or will we give them the freedom to make their own choice to fight against the injustice that they have suffered?

Mr. Speaker, I urge a “yes” vote on the rule and a “yes” vote on the previous question.

The material previously referred to by Mrs. LESKO is as follows:

AMENDMENT TO HOUSE RESOLUTION 558

At the end of the resolution, add the following:

SUC. 4. Notwithstanding any other provision of this resolution, the amendment printed in section 5 shall be in order as though printed as the last amendment in part B of the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution if offered by Representative Lesko of Arizona or a designee.

That amendment shall be debatable for 10 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess for a period of less than 15 minutes.

Accordingly (at 1 o’clock and 9 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess.

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS EXPIRING AUTHORITY ACT OF 2019

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Takano) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4285) to amend title 38, United States Code, to extend and modify certain authorities and requirements relating to the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

improve and expand the library when necessary, a successful venture that still exists today.

Ms. Gardner was project director when they built the first new library since 1962, a gorgeous new facility with community and children's areas that opened in 2004.

Ms. Gardner drove fundraising efforts for the library to have a bookmobile, one that provided residents with 2,000 books, computer terminals, and other media stations.

Most importantly, Ms. Gardner has been instrumental in the renovation and restoration of Jersey City's historic 120-year-old main library.

Ms. Gardner leaves the library and her city a much better place. Ms. Gardner will be sorely missed, and I wish her all the best in her retirement.

CELEBRATING 72ND BIRTHDAY OF UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

(Mr. SPANO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPANO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to and celebrate the birthday of the United States Air Force.

Today’s Air Force traces its lineage to the U.S. Signal Corps in 1907 but officially became its own branch as part of the National Security Act of 1947. During this period, the Air Force has been on the front lines of racial integration, helped keep the city of Berlin fed for 11 months, placed the first artificial communications satellite into orbit, and continually maintained round-the-clock flights of an airborne command post for three decades.

More significantly, their vigilance and reach have deterred aggression while their speed, power, and sacrifice of life have restored peace.

Today, on the 72nd birthday of the Air Force, the branch has grown into a staple of the United States defense community. With over 600,000 Active Duty, Reserve, and civilian personnel, thousands of whom serve at MacDill Air Force base in Tampa, it is imperative we give these American heroes, past and present, the respect that they deserve.

Please join me in wishing the United States Air Force a happy birthday and honoring the lives of all who have served.

HONORING CAROL SMOLENSKI

(Mr. OLSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLSON. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor an extraordinary leader on her retirement, Carol Smolenski.

She has been involved in ECPAT for 20 years as the executive director, a renowned organization with a single mission: end child exploitation and trafficking.

Two decades ago, Carol noticed that America did not have an ECPAT-like organization like some other nations had, and so she took charge. ECPAT-USA was born.

Carol’s mission has been pure and simple: raise awareness of modern-day slavery in America and end human trafficking in our world.

As Carol moves on, I would like to let her hear some Texas wisdom. Carol may not be in a class by herself, but whatever class she is in, it don’t take long to call the roll. I thank Carol. She has saved lives.

HONORING PURPLE HEART RECIPIENTS

(Mr. SEAN PATRICK MALONEY of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SEAN PATRICK MALONEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of my bill, the National Purple Heart Hall of Honor Commemorative Coin Act, which is scheduled for a vote on the House floor tomorrow.

George Washington himself created the Purple Heart in the closing days of the Revolutionary War. Since it was... revived to honor veterans of World War I, it has been awarded to nearly 2 million brave service men and women, yet there is no comprehensive list of Purple Heart recipients.

The National Purple Heart Hall of Honor is situated in my district in New Windsor, New York. It was created to collect and preserve the names and stories of the men and women wounded or killed in service of our Nation. The proceeds of this coin, which will be produced nearby at the West Point Mint, will support its mission, along with other programs that help veterans and their families.

Today, I am thinking of two men who inspired our work on this bill. One was my dad, who was a Navy vet who was hurt on the USS Manchester and who taught me the reverence we must have for our service men and women. The other was Republican Senator Bill Larkin, a dear friend who passed away just days ago. I worked closely to advance the mission of the hall.

I also thank the Military Order of the Purple Heart and volunteers like Stephanie Keegan, who helped round up 300 of our colleagues in support of this legislation and who will make tomorrow’s vote a reality.

SUPPORTING WITHDRAWAL OF THE WOTUS RULE

(Mr. LAMALFA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAMALFA. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commend Andrew Wheeler, Administrator at EPA, and R.D. James, administrator at the Army Corps of Engineers, for withdrawing the very devastating WOTUS rule, the waters of the United States rule that was put in about 4 years ago under the Obama administration which went beyond the bounds of what the Clean Water Act passed and was intended by this Congress in 1972.

It has been devastating to farmers, ranchers, and others outside that do things with the management of water seeming to be not just in what is called navigable waterways but every mud puddle across the United States.

This was a massive overreach by the previous administration on that, and we can put this back on a better path so that we have the type of management that actually does help keep our water clean in this country but also not onerous regulations that make it impossible to farm and ranch in this country.

We have seen farmers receive million-dollar fines because of merely re-engaging crops have been fallow for a while or changing a crop, which is way beyond the scope of what the Clean Water Act intended and had provisions for exceptions for agriculture.

It is a great step. Thank you, EPA and Army Corps, for the repeal of this measure.

IMPORTANCE OF TEACHING CLIMATE CHANGE IN SCHOOLS

(Ms. LEE of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LEE of California. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the importance of teaching climate change in schools.

This Friday, on September 20, students from around the world will be protesting the need to combat climate change. Led by Greta Thunberg, a climate activist from Sweden who boldly skipped school to protest the need for more climate action, her act of defiance has evolved into a movement and set precedent for a generation of climate activists. More than 25 percent of America’s students are taking action to urge us to address climate change.

In order to meaningfully act upon our climate change and eliminate climate change, young people need education on its causes, consequences, and possible solutions. That is why I am introducing a resolution to support climate change education in American schools.

It is a fact that American students do not learn enough about climate change. We need to teach every young person the human impacts of climate change and how to address our warming planet before it is too late. I urge my colleagues to support this important resolution and to hear the voices of the students protesting in Friday’s climate strikes.

HONORING THE MEMORY OF SERGEANT FIRST CLASS ELIS BARRETO ORTIZ

(Miss GONZÁLEZ-COLO´N of Puerto Rico asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Miss GONZÁLEZ-COLO´N of Puerto Rico. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Sergeant First Class Elís Barreto Ortiz, a hero and a proud Puerto Rican.

When Sergeant Barreto enlisted 10 years ago, he followed the tradition of many Puerto Ricans, including his father, in answering the call to defend America.

He served with distinction, earning many awards and the praise of his comrades. Now he joins those who also made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom.

The people of Puerto Rico share the pain that fills this hero’s family in his small hometown of Morovis and his unit’s base at Fort Bragg.

Nothing can fill the void for his parents or his wife and children, but we must resolve that his sacrifice will be remembered and honored, and his memory will endure. May you rest in peace, Sergeant Barreto, a hero and a proud Puerto Rican.

HONORING GENERAL ROBERT P. CARSON, THE CITADEL MASCOT

(Mr. CUNNINGHAM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the life of General Robert P. Carson, the beloved bulldog mascot of The Citadel, who passed away this Friday.

The General came from a distinguished lineage, and his relatives include former mascots of the University of Georgia, the United States Marine Corps, and Mississippi State University.

The General’s caretaker, Dr. John Bradford, reported that on game days, he would often find the bulldog waiting in the corner of his backyard, facing the stadium. He just couldn’t wait to fire those cannons, and his spirit helped his fellow Bulldogs pull off an incredible upset this past Saturday.

The General was with his fellow mascot, Boo X, when he passed away. The two were the pride of The Citadel campus and cherished members of the institution.

As a dog with a pet knows how deeply they impact our lives, and I offer my sincere condolences to the entire Citadel community.

Go ‘Dogs.
Mr. GOHMERT. Madam Speaker, today in our Judiciary Committee was quite interesting. For some people, it was quite a role reversal. We had a hearing on the potential reauthorization of the FISA courts and discussion about powers of our DOJ, FBI, and NSA under what is often referred to as section 215.

It was interesting in the way of role reversals because, for years, we have been told that Democrats are the real civil libertarians. They are the ones who are trying to defend privacy rights, rights of Americans to think what they want, do what they want, and without being interrupted or spied upon by the Federal Government.

Yet, today, over and over, we heard apologies basically from our Democratic friends to the representative of the Department of Justice, the FBI, and the Privacy Authority for comments of some Republicans.

There really was no need to apologize. We weren’t attacking these three individual witnesses, but there are issues that are still unresolved, and many of my friends across the aisle used to be concerned about, privacy and Fourth Amendment rights that are supposed to protect us from improper search and seizure or spying, or surveillances. And, of course, that is important. So we had these witnesses.

It was interesting, and if I were our friend Israel, I would be very concerned, because I asked these representatives, first of all, does the Department of Justice, the FBI, or the NSA consider Russia to be a known terrorist organization under section 215. Each of the representatives indicated, in turn, that they could not answer that question.

We also all seemed to speak volumes to me. It should have been an easy question to answer.

I asked about Israel. Does the DOJ, FBI, or NSA consider the Ambassador from Israel to be a representative of a terrorist organization, and they couldn’t answer that question.

That is quite interesting.

But my concern arose out of reading and hearing, in prior years, about how apparently Jeff Sessions was surveilled because he was speaking to a Russian Ambassador, and there were reports that the Ambassador from Israel had been surveilled.

So, under the law, they are supposed to be part of either a known terrorist or an ally, someone who identifies with a known terrorist organization. It is quite alarming.

But even since I first got here, my first term, when we took up reauthorization of the PATRIOT Act—and I understood when the PATRIOT Act was passed, it was just days after, maybe a week or so after 9/11, and we didn’t know what was going on. It is important that we continue to take a look at those. I think it is extremely important that we have subpoenas; otherwise, if there is not the chance that these powers will go away, then we always have trouble, no matter whether it is a Democrat or a Republican administration, always have trouble getting people to come up and speak frankly or get records so we know what may have occurred, whether it was abused or not.

But I go to section 215, and I have been concerned about some of this language since I first got here. As a former litigator, prosecutor, judge, chief justice, I know words mean things. This section says that, basically, the FBI can go to an application for an order requiring production of tangible things for an investigation to obtain foreign intelligence information not concerning a U.S. person or to protect against international terrorism or clandestine intelligence activity.

Now, I asked this several years ago when this was being pushed for reauthorization: What does “clandestine intelligence activity” mean? What does that mean? Because, to me, if I am the judge, I know what I have to see. I have to see probable cause to believe a crime was committed and that person committed it. That is not enough.

So, the question I asked today I asked years ago: Could that mean that, if my neighbor is peering, watching my yard from behind his or her curtain—well, that is clandestine. They are hiding behind a curtain. They are trying to see what is going on. That is gathering intelligence. So would that justify a warrant from the FISA court?

Well, they couldn’t answer that question, and they never have. They never have attempted to answer that question.

In fact, years ago, when it was reauthorized, the representatives of DOJ, CIA, NSA, they were all saying: “Look, that really doesn’t come into play, particularly.”

“Oh, well, good. Then let’s eliminate it.”

“Well, no. We don’t want to eliminate our ability to get a warrant based on clandestine intelligence activities.”

“Well, what does that mean? How has it been used?”

 Couldn’t get an answer, but they sure wanted to keep it in there.

What does that mean? It doesn’t say “foreign clandestine intelligence.” It doesn’t say “terrorist clandestine intelligence.”

So words mean things. Why do they keep wanting that language in there? Why have we not been more careful until we find out that the FISA courts, basically—we might call them the RS courts instead of the FISA courts. The FISA courts are basically RS courts, rubberstamp courts, basically, when the Federal Government comes in, they get what they want.

I was one, having, again, been a judge, I had law officers come before me many times. Sometimes they would come to my house at 2 or 3 in the morning. They would need a warrant quickly, and the requirements of the Constitution are very clear.

I just happen to have a copy of the Constitution. Amendment IV says: “The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.”

That particular description, those words, are very important, as are the two words, “probable cause.”

We were taught, and as a judge I applied it, that if a law officer wants a warrant—sometimes the FBI who would come and sometimes they would come with other law officers—but they knew, under the Constitution—they normally did a very good job—you have to have an affidavit that establishes there is probable cause to believe a crime was committed and probable cause to believe the person whose records were sought to be seized had probably committed the crime. It is not enough to just allege we have reason to believe a crime was committed and this person committed it. That is not enough. The affidavit must describe facts—not conclusions, but facts—that establish that, yeah, probably a crime was committed and probably this person did it and that is why we need this record, that is why we need this warrant, and that is why we need to go look for those specific records, specific things.

Imagine my surprise when a FISA court order was leaked—and it was an order by the FISA court here in Washington—and it says, it orders, it was ordered:

The custodian of records shall produce to the NSA on service of this order and consecutively, production on a daily basis thereafter for the duration of this order, unless otherwise ordered by the court, all call detail records or telephoning metadata created by Verizon for communications 1) between the United States and abroad, or 2) wholly within the United States, including local telephone calls. This order does not require Verizon to produce call details and metadata for communications wholly originating and terminating in foreign countries.
That was interesting to me because, first of all, what this order is going after, supposedly, under section 215, trying to monitor terrorist activity, it only wanted calls by Americans. Whereas, if you are an American in the United States, you have constitutional rights. It seems kind of silly, but we have been told that section 215—that I have read from here—was reformed and that the NSA ended their program of gathering records. But the thing is, as long as there is a FISA court, isn’t there is a section 215 that is even half as broad as it currently is, any of our law enforcement can go back into the FISA court and get a warrant rubber stamped, which is basically what happened, it appears, in the FISA orders regarding the Trump campaign.

The thing, as a former judge, that really grieves me most about the FISA court is that we have not had a FISA judge who had sufficient righteous indignation. For example, McCabe—or McCabe—if he participated—any of those participants, to come in before them and show cause as to why they should not go to jail for committing a fraud upon the court, which it sure appears they did.

They were not truthful about the Russia hoax, about the so-called Russian dossier that a discredited, dishonest former MI6 agent in England put together based on representations by Trump’s campaign. Maybe it is because they saw it was going for a good cause to try to stop the Donald Trump campaign or get him thrown out as President, that is a worthy cause. Even though it was a dishonest application affidavit and warrant, that is okay with the FISA judge.

I would really like to have the FISA judges come before our committee and testify about their lack of morality, their lack of integrity, and their not caring that people would come in and submit something they knew, and intentionally deceived about, being unverifiable.

We have some work to do. I am very grateful to Congresswoman Zoe Lofgren. I believe she was sincere today in a hearing when she looked down the aisles at me and my Republican friends and said, we know there are reforms that need to be made, we know that there are amendments that need to occur regarding the system, and we look forward to working with our friends on the other side of the aisle.

I hope that is true because this little experiment in a constitutional Democratic Republic is in jeopardy. I know people want to talk about climate change, but 12 years from now when we are told the world may end if we don’t do something about climate change, this little constitutional Democratic Republic will have ceased to be based on the Constitution, which has already set a record for being the longest basis for a country in the history of the world. So we have work to do, and I hope that we can do it in a bipartisan manner.

Even if you read in the Bible about King David, what you learn is that even the finest people in the world, if they are not held accountable, if there is not some accountability, can do some really egregious things. That is our obligation here in Congress. Let’s have some accountability.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

OFFERED BY MRS. LOWEY

H.R. 4378, making continuing appropriations for fiscal year 2020, and for other purposes, does not contain any congressional earmark, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits as defined in clause 9 of rule XXI.

DELETION OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions, as follows:
42. The SPEAKER presented a petition of the Mayor and City Commission of Sweetwater, FL, relative to Resolution No. 4554, urging the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) to reevaluate and grant Ramon Saul Sanchez’s application for permanent resident status; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.
The Senate met at 10 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. GRASSLEY).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal God, who judges justly our Nation and world, we honor Your Name. You are so patient with us. Cleanse our eyes, that we may see more clearly. Open our hearts, that we may love You more dearly. Lord, we confess that sometimes injustice seems to prevail. Avenge injustice, O God, and cause the godly to rejoice. Deliver us from those who seek to set an ambush for freedom.

Lord, give our lawmakers the wisdom to look to You for safety, for You are our strength and salvation.

We pray in Your loving Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The President pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAMER). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I ask unanimous consent to address the Senate for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HONORING MERLE DAVID HAY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to share some real Iowa history this morning.

Merle David Hay from Glidden, IA, was the first Iowa serviceman to die in World War I. Hay enlisted on May 9, 1917, with his father's blessing, as he was too young to be drafted. He was assigned to the 1st Infantry Division, Company F.

In the early hours of November 3, 1917, while posted in the trenches near the French village of Artois, the Imperial German Army attacked, and Merle Hay was killed. Hay's father said: "I am proud of my boy if he has given up his life for his country."

Merle Hay Road in Des Moines, IA, is a constant memory of this person's sacrifice.

I yield the floor.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

REMEMBERING DAVID JONES, SR.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment this morning to mourn the passing of a devoted son of Louisville, KY, and someone I was lucky to call a very dear friend.

I can say without exaggeration that David Jones, Sr., was the single most influential friend and mentor I have had in my entire career. I have never forgotten something he told me when I was starting out in Jefferson County. He said: "The most important word in the English language is 'focus.'"

David used his extraordinary focus and many other talents to build an extraordinary American business and to better his community. Whenever a local need had somebody—almost everybody, actually—stumped, David always seemed to end up in the thick of it, forging a path to success.

In the days ahead, many will rightly pay tribute to David’s brilliance and his determination, but he was also one of the kindest, most decent, most generous individuals I have ever met. I will sorely miss his friendship, and Kentuckians will miss his extraordinary leadership.

APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, on an entirely different matter, today the Senate will have an opportunity to take the first procedural step toward keeping the Federal Government funded and open.

At the end of July, the White House and the Speaker of the House reached an agreement to guide the appropriations process. Both parties, both Chambers, and both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue agreed to the terms. We laid out top-line funding targets for defense and nondefense; we swore off poison pill policy riders; and, unlike the past several budget deals, which took a full year to negotiate while appropriations languished, we finished this year’s deal much earlier to ensure we had enough time to move the appropriations bills.

In other words, congressional leaders and the President laid the ground for a sensible, bipartisan funding process, but instead, over the past week and a half, we have seen our Democratic colleagues suggest that they may try to shoehorn their longstanding disagreements with President Trump into this appropriations process. Even though we all agreed not to insist on poison pills or change existing Presidential authorities, Democrats are threatening to filibuster Chairman SHELY’s clean Defense bill over their disagreements with the President on immigration policy.

I sure hope that doesn’t happen. I hope our Democratic friends will allow the process to move forward when we vote later today. The stakes are high. We are talking about critical resources for the missions of the Department of Defense. Our military commanders have told us that this funding is vital to keeping peace with Putin’s Russia, China, and all their efforts to harm America’s interests. Just days ago, Saudi Arabian energy facilities literally went up in flames after what appears to be a massive, coordinated attack by Iran.
In a world this dangerous, uncertain funding and continuing resolutions will not cut it for our national defense. Our men and women in uniform do not deserve to have the funding for their tools, their training, and their own pay raise, but they—and they are used as leverage by Senate Democrats to try to extract concessions from the White House.

So, look, I would urge each of our colleagues to join me today in taking the first step toward fulfilling our obligation to keep this country safe and secure.

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, on another matter, we are closely monitoring events in the Middle East following that provocative and dangerous Iranian attack on Saudi energy facilities, which included the largest oil processing facility in the entire world.

As I said on Monday, Iran’s reckless behavior is not just a threat to the region but to the entire global economy, and it must be met with swift consequences from the international community.

As the United States and our allies continue to learn more and weigh our options, there has already been one positive lesson that should not go unnoticed. While the attack has shaken global energy markets, to be sure, the United States has been a much better position to weather the storm than we might have been in past decades.

For years and years, an international attack of this magnitude would have been virtually guaranteed to roil the U.S. economy and send gas prices soaring for Americans at the pumps, but so far, this time around, analysts don’t expect this event to yield the significant impacts we would have seen back in the seventies or even in the nineties. Why is that? The answer is three words: American energy independence.

Over the last decade and often over the strenuous, strenuous objections of Democrats, our Nation has made incredible strides toward energy independence. We have explored new technologies, new methods, and new ways to fuel America’s prosperity right here at home, and it is paying off big time. By 2015, our production had become so robust that I led the charge to lift the outdated ban on crude oil exports. Late last year, thanks in part to Republican policies, the United States became a net exporter of oil for the first time in decades.

Get this: Across all forms of energy, the Department of Energy projects that next year our Nation will export more energy than we import for the first time since 1953. Let me say that again. Thanks largely to Republican policies, our Nation is poised to become a net energy exporter for the first time since Eisenhower and in the entire world.

That is huge progress, not just for our economy but, as we have just been reminded, for our national security as well. You would think the country would be united in celebration, but not everyone is happy. Oh, no. Last week, just days before this massive disruption in the Middle East, House Democrats sent us several bills designed to limit domestic energy development and literally in the hands. One of those bills would have shut off exploration in a small portion of ANWR in remote Alaska. They want to reverse something that had been fought for 40 years until Republicans secured it in 2017.

So, as far as I can tell from the bills the House keeps sending us, the socialists who are calling the shots over there have never seen a pipeline they didn’t want to cancel. They have never seen a pipeline they didn’t want to cancel, a responsible development they didn’t want to kill, or a step toward American energy independence they didn’t want to reverse.

Along with the Democratic House, this also seems to describe their party’s Presidential candidates. Almost all of them have endorsed the radical idea of ending oil and gas exploration on Federal lands not only offshore but onshore. Too much to say that again. Almost all of them have endorsed the radical idea of ending oil and gas exploration on Federal lands, not only offshore but onshore, too. That is today’s Democratic Party. This ideology has consequences for American prosperity, but it also weakens our Nation’s footing in the world.

Just days after these Democratic votes, we were offered a sobering reminder of just how important American energy really is. Here is the good news: This Republican Senate is on the job, and we won’t let Democrats take us backward. We won’t let them reduce our prosperity or make us more vulnerable to overseas chaos. Republicans will keep working to help our Nation thrive.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The following nominations will be considered:

1. The nomination of Robert A. Destro, of Virginia, to be Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor.
last decade has nearly doubled. Meanwhile, these countries have continued to flex their military power outside the borders of their countries, underscoring the need for other nations to be prepared to deter their aggressions. Of course, by the time we contemplate great power competition, we still face threats from rogue states and terrorist organizations. We need to be prepared to meet multiple threats on multiple fronts if we want to ensure the security of our Nation.

Later today, the leader is planning to have the Senate vote to begin debate on a package of appropriations bills, including this year’s Defense appropriations bill. Less than 2 months ago, the Democrats in both the House and the Senate agreed on an increased funding level for our military, which is reflected in the Defense appropriations bill.

The Defense appropriations measure funds current military priorities and invests in the research our men and women in uniform need to be prepared for the future. It also provides for a 3.1-percent pay increase for our military, which is the largest pay increase in a decade and would be very disappointing if the Democrats chose now to play politics and put their personal political agenda over the security of our country and the welfare of our men and women in uniform.

The military needs to be funded through regular order appropriations bills, not through temporary funding measures that leave the military in doubt about funding levels and unable to start new projects. So I hope that our Democratic colleagues will honor the commitment they just made and will work with the Republicans to pass the Defense appropriations package before the end of the fiscal year.

Likewise, I hope the Senate Democrats will resist the temptation to play politics over this year’s national defense authorization bill and will work with us to take a conference with the House to resolve our differences. Our colleagues have the opportunity to take both of these important steps this week.

Recongizing the U.S. Air Force and South Dakota Air National Guard

Mr. President, before I close, I wish a happy 72nd birthday today to the U.S. Air Force, most especially to the airmen of Ellsworth Air Force Base in South Dakota.

I also wish a happy birthday to the South Dakota Air National Guard, which celebrates the 73rd anniversary of its establishment on Friday.

The Guard’s 114th Fighter Wing recently had a change of command. Col. Mark Morrell assumed command from Col. Nathan Alhollina on September 7. I wish the Fighting Lobos continued success under its new leadership, and I wish Colonel Alhollina the best and thank him for his many years of service.

While investing in equipment and technology that are essential to our Nation’s defense, as always, our greatest strength is found in the men and women of the U.S. military. It is, first and foremost, because of their dedication and sacrifice that all of us live in freedom.

I applaud the men and women of Ellsworth Air Force Base and the South Dakota Air National Guard enjoy their celebrations this week. They are well deserved.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Cigarettes

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, it started sounding like me. For a long time on Capitol Hill, I have been involved in public policy debates about Big Tobacco, about nicotine and cigarettes, and about the public health consequences of smoking. It is a personal issue, of course, for me and for so many of us.

Our families have been touched by tobacco-related disease and death. I lost my father to lung cancer. He was 53 years old. He smoked two packs of Camels a day. I stood by his bedside when I was called the student and saw what tobacco could do.

When I was elected to Congress, I decided to try to take on Big Tobacco. It was not an easy task. Those in Big Tobacco had very many friends in high places, and they made it clear in both political parties in the House of Representatives that tobacco was untouchable.

I offered an amendment, quite a few years ago now, to ban smoking on airplanes. It was really because of my irritation and strong feelings that the people who were on the plane who were nonsmokers shouldn’t have to breathe in secondhand smoke. To my surprise, we passed it in the House by a handful of votes even though the leadership of both political parties opposed it. Then it came over here, and Senator Frank Lautenberg, of New Jersey, passed it as well. It became the law of the land.

Neither Frank nor I could have predicted what the next, but as the American people noticed that secondhand smoke was taken off of airplanes, they started asking a lot of these questions about why you wouldn’t take it off of trains and buses and out of offices, hospitals, restaurants, and on and on. The net result was that of a change across America when it came to standards for smoking and tobacco cigarettes.

Then I enlisted a group that was showing extraordinary leadership in Washington, it was called the Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids. Matt Myers, the director, still works for that organization. We went to the heart of the issue, and that was the fact that Big Tobacco was doing its best to make teenagers its customers. It had to. It was losing too many of its best customers because they were dying from Big Tobacco’s product.

So we started to add children, and it was successful with ad campaigns. The Joe Camel ads, the Marlboro cowboy, and all sorts of cartoon figures were really appealing to children. It worked. It was able to replenish its smokers with kids who started smoking at earlier and earlier ages.

We went after them. Eventually, there was a national lawsuit against the tobacco companies. We changed the standards for selling tobacco in America. We made it much more difficult for kids to get their hands on cigarettes, and, over time, we reduced the percentage of kids who were using these tobacco products.

The tobacco companies faced a dilemma. They were losing their best customers—the kids. What were they going to do to maintain their profits?

Several years ago, it became pretty obvious that they had found an alternative product called e-cigarettes and vaping. What was good about this was that it would make health claims about e-cigarettes and vaping. They could argue that since you were taking tobacco out of the equation, merely sucking in some form of nicotine vapor was preferable from a health perspective. Yet, when it came right down to it, there was no proof of that whatsoever.

JUUL is the biggest e-cigarette/vapor device maker in America. Its full-page ads in newspaper have made these health claims that, in fact, e-vaping is a healthy alternative to tobacco cigarettes. Yet there is no proof—none.

Then something else started happening. We started noticing that all across America, kids—the same kids who once used to be the targets of Big Tobacco—were now the targets of Big Vaping. Vaping targets kids. The numbers tell the story. As of 2 years ago, 11 percent of high school students in America were vaping. A year later, there were 20 percent, and there are 27 percent today. More than one out of four high school students is using e-cigarettes and vaping today. Even worse, 10 percent of middle school students—10-, 11-, and 12-year-olds—are vaping.

The numbers are growing, and you wonder why. The people in the vaping industry know how to target kids. They target them with flavors that are designed just for kids—Razzleberry, Gummy Bears, Bubble Gum, Unicorn Milk, Hockey Puck, 50-years-old chain smokers can’t wait to get Unicorn Milk flavoring for their vaping devices? It is all about kids. The vaping industry, despite all of its public denials, has targeted these kids and has, effectively, reprogrammed our children to be the next generation of vaporers for life.

How much nicotine is in that little vaping device, the one that looks like it is a flash drive for your computer? There is an equivalent amount of nicotine in vaping as in a total pack of cigarettes. You get 20 cigarettes in one hit on a vaping device. Nicotine is a very addictive chemical. I know from my family experience, and we all know, from years of years of various times to quit using tobacco cigarettes, that the nicotine draws them back time and again.

This addiction was underway, and I started writing letters, which Senators do. I wrote to the Food and Drug Administration, to the Surgeon General, and to anyone else who would listen that this vaping epidemic was dangerous—dangerous for our kids and dangerous for our future. It took the longest time to get their attention. In fact, with those in this new Trump administration, they initially postponed any action against vaping until the year 2022, which would be beyond the President’s first term.

We went to Dr. Gottlieb, who then was head of the FDA, and said: You can’t wait 4 years. You have to do something right now about vaping.

He resisted for a while, but then he came around. He held a press conference and said he knew what he called this vaping situation? An epidemic. The head of the Food and Drug Administration, a medical doctor, Dr. Gottlieb, called it an epidemic.

So then he left for family reasons, and his successor was Ned Sharpless. Acting Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration. I appealed to him, saying: Do something. You have the power right now to take all of these children’s flavors off of the market for vaping. You could do it today.

Secondly, you could ban most of the vaping devices, which have never been approved by the government. He didn’t want to do it. He dragged his feet. It went on for months.

I will have to say, in all candor and honesty, last week there was a breakthrough. Last week, the Trump administration addressed this issue directly.

Last Monday, the Food and Drug Administration said to JUUL, the major manufacturer: Stop making health claims you can’t prove. Stop telling people your product is a healthy alternative to tobacco cigarettes. There are no clinical trials. There is no proof, no credible research. You can point to, to make that claim, so stop saying it.

Then, just a couple days later, they went even further, banning the use of these flavors that have enticed children into vaping and e-cigarettes. They have announced that probably within 30 days, as their estimate, these are all going to have to come off the market, and in May of next year, the companies that make them can apply to bring them back on the market if they can prove they are good for public health.

Well, Senator Lisa Murkowski of Alaska, a Republican, and I have had a bill for several months now on this issue. I thank her for her bipartisan cooperation in this effort. It is great to have her by my side. She is a terrific ally.

Shel and I believe none of these flavors should come back on the market until it is proven they are not dangerous to children and that they in fact do help adults stop smoking and can show positive results. I think that is a hard measure, a hard standard for them to meet, and it should be because the alternative is unacceptable—more children addicted to e-cigarettes and vaping.

There may be a place for e-cigarettes at some point in the future. I am not sure where it will be, but as long as they are endangering our children with their products and their flavors. I am going to continue to fight their efforts.

I want to say something else. Even in the midst of my battles against Big Tobacco, I still remember what my dad went through when he tried to stop smoking—dying of lung cancer, trying to stop smoking. It was so hard and painful, and I watched him as a young boy and saw the struggle he went through.

I have always said we have to show some empathy and compassion for the people who were once tobacco users and want to quit, and today we have to show the same level of caring when it comes to all of these high school students—5 million American high school students using e-cigarettes and should quit. We need to give them a path, a recommendation.

I wrote to the Surgeon General last week and asked him to come up with a plan, an educational approach, to allow these young people to get off this nicotine addiction before it is too late.

What has happened in the past, sadly, is that many of the high schoolers who were using e-cigarettes didn’t quit completely from anything; they moved to traditional tobacco cigarettes. This nicotine they were seeking in a different form.

So that is the challenge we face. After years of inaction and a lot of telephone calls and letters and meetings, the Food and Drug Administration has done the right thing. I hope by the end of this year, these flavors will be off the shelf, and I hope the Food and Drug Administration truly enforces what they announced last week.

It has been 10 years since Congress gave the Food and Drug Administration the legal authority to regulate all tobacco products, including e-cigarettes. There is no doubt about their legal authority.

Last year, 4 million children under the age of 18 were vaping in America. As I mentioned, today the number is 5 million.

Over the last 2 years, we have seen a 135-percent increase in America’s children using e-cigarettes.

Ask any public health official what this means. If we didn’t do something, the numbers would continue to grow unchecked. Schools are taking doors off of toilet stalls so kids can’t sneak in and use e-cigarettes and vape between classes. Some kids are bold enough to try to do it in class.

We have now linked e-cigarettes and vaping to over 380 cases of confirmed and severe respiratory illness nationwide. As of last night, in California, the seventh young person has died from vaping.

We have 52 confirmed cases and 1 reported death in Illinois, but I can tell you what on Monday morning one of my friends, a doctor in Chicago, told me in private that he had visited a major hospital, and three young people who had been vaping were hanging on by a thread to life. Kids as young as 15 have been hospitalized.

There is no specific device or substance that has been linked to all of these cases, but the one common denominator is e-cigarettes.

This nicotine addiction and what it leads to—especially JUUL’s devices, which are extraordinarily popular, with the highest levels of nicotine we have seen in products legally sold in America.

Nicotine is both toxic and highly addictive. It raises blood pressure, spikes adrenaline, and increases the risk of heart disease. It can have short- and long-term negative health impacts on the developing brain, particularly, including increased risk of addiction, mood disorder, and permanent lowering of impulse control.

Kids who use e-cigarettes are three times more likely to start smoking than those who have never used them. The transition to traditional tobacco cigarettes, and they, of course, kill almost half a million Americans a year. So that is our problem. That is our challenge.

I would add, too, that it is time for us to start taxing this product. For years, I have been sounding the alarm that the vaping industry is following Big Tobacco’s playbook when it comes to appealing to our children.

I have learned over the years, in all my battles against Big Tobacco, that the single most effective tool to prevent children from starting the use of tobacco cigarettes is to price it out of their range.

That is why we passed cigarette taxes years ago—and many States and localities followed suit—and why later this week I will be introducing the Tobacco Tax Equity Act. This legislation will establish the first Federal e-cigarette tax. It will close loopholes exploited by Big Tobacco to avoid the taxes, and it will double the Federal Government tax rate and peg it to inflation so it remains an effective public health tool in the future.

Studies have shown that even a 10-percent tax lowers tobacco use by as much as 5 percent. That is why General and World Health Organization have called it the most effective way to reduce tobacco use. I think the same will be true for e-cigarettes.

The FDA’s flavor ban announcement was the most important first step. Now we need to make sure the ban is implemented quickly and that it is enforced strictly.
We need the FDA to better regulate e-cigarette devices, many of which are easily tampered with and being used in conjunction with adulterated and counterfeit products. We need the Surgeon General to come to this nation to help the millions of kids who are now addicted, and we need to start taxing e-cigarette companies who have created today’s youth vaping epidemic.

We have seen before of Big Tobacco exploiting kids, finally—finally—resulted in public action against those tobacco companies, and the rate of teen tobacco cigarette smoking went down dramatically. Let’s not sit through that same movie again.

When it comes to vaping and e-cigarettes, let’s move quickly to protect our children. I yield the floor.

APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak in leader time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The outcome of the upcoming vote to proceed to defense appros is not in doubt. Leader McCONNELL knows that Democrats, as well as several Republicans, oppose moving funds to the President’s border wall that have been already allocated for other important purposes, all military. The fact that Leader McCONNELL has scheduled this vote, knowing it would fail, makes it nothing more than a partisan stunt. My friend the leader reminds us all the time that the Senate is the place to make laws, not engage in political theater. With the vote, Leader McCONNELL will shatter his own rule.

At the same time, Republicans are considering having a vote tomorrow to instruct the NDAA conference to backfill some of the money they want to divert for the President’s wall. The House already voted this down. Democrats—myself, Speaker PELOSI, Chairman LOWEY, and Ranking Member WYDEN—have been clear about the Republicans’ stunts. We are not going to bless the President’s stealing money from the military by backfilling it later. This would render Congress toothless and the appropriations process meaningless. If the President is allowed to take money from where Congress allocates it and puts it wherever he wants and we just give it back to him, what is the point? Democrats won’t vote for that ridiculous precedent.

Let’s remember what this is all about. The President pledged to build a border wall that he promised Mexico would pay for. He then broke that promise and demanded Congress appropriate taxpayer dollars for the wall instead. When Congress declined to do that, the President declared a legally dubious national emergency to divert already allocated military funds to his wall. Now he is trying yet again to appropriate taxpayer money for the wall, which is the same strategy that failed when Congress voted him down and then he threw a temper tantrum and promised the famous Trump shutdown.

I know my Republican friends want to wiggle out of this, but there is only one way to return the money to our troops, where it belongs: Republicans and Democrats join together in voting to terminate the President’s emergency declaration.

Mr. President, in the Appropriations Committee, there will be a vote on an amendment to increase election security funding for the coming year. Senate Republicans blocked a similar amount last year, and, since then, Leader McCONNELL has stonewalled election security legislation, even the most bipartisan, sensible compromises.

While we still greatly desire to move that legislation and believe it to be essential, additional funding for States to harden their election infrastructure and prevent Russian or Chinese or Iranian interference is what this amendment provides tomorrow and is a no-brainer.

On the Senate floor yesterday, Leader McCONNELL said: “As partisanship bogs us down here in Washington, Moscow and Beijing are not exactly slowing down to wait for us.” I agree. Foreign adversaries are lining up to do what Putin did in 2016.

With the Presidential campaign set to begin in earnest next year, the time is now to safeguard our elections from foreign interference. The country will be watching how Senate Republicans vote on the election security amendment tomorrow.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION AGENCY

Mr. President, it has been reported that the Trump administration is planning to finalize a rule that would block any State from getting ahead of the Federal Government to deal with carbon pollution from cars. That includes revoking a waiver granted to California that allows the State to place more stringent limits on carbon pollution than the Federal Government. In the Trump era, we are frequently confronted with the absurd, but this is beyond ridiculous.

The President is the leader of the self-proclaimed party of States’ rights. Yet he is blocking States from putting their own standards. This President has repeatedly said that “we have the cleanest air, the cleanest water,” almost like a mantra. Yet he is trying to prevent California and other States from cleaning up their air pollution.

The President’s position is, I say, simply put: this: No, California, I insist you pollute more. That is in effect what the President is saying.

Congress has spoken on this matter. The Clean Air Act says, in no uncertain terms, that California can go further than the EPA to reduce pollution from cars. So this is a terrible idea by the EPA, a terrible idea by the Trump administration, full of hypocrisy and contradiction, clearly illegal, and I am confident that it will be struck down.

NOMINATION OF ROBERT A. DESTRO

Mr. President, on one final issue, the Destro nomination, today the Senate will vote on the confirmation of Robert Destro to serve as the Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor, responsible for the State Department’s promotion of democracy, civil rights, and fair working standards across the world. Typical of the Trump administration, they have nominated someone whose record is diametrically opposed to the mission of the job to which he is nominated.

Mr. Destro has vocally opposed the movement for LGBTQ equality and has been a staunch supporter of State-level religious freedom laws that have acted as backdoors to discriminate against LGBTQ Americans. He has a long record of opposition to a woman’s constitutional right to make her own healthcare decisions. When asked about the requirement that insurance prevent coverage for contraception, his response was “the idea that you’re entitled to have someone pay for your birth control pill is kind of ridiculous.”

If confirmed, Mr. Destro—this very same Mr. Destro who is opposed to the rights of women, who is opposed to the rights of LGBTQ people—will be in charge of promoting civil rights around the world. What message would that send to women and members of the LGBTQ community who struggle under intolerant and oppressive governments? The answer is obvious. That is why yesterday every single Democrat, and even one Republican, voted against proceeding to his confirmation. I urge my Republican colleagues to study Mr. Destro’s record, consider the job he is supposed to do, and join us in voting no on his nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the motions to reconsider are considered made and laid upon the table. The President will be immediately notified of the Senate's action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding rule XXII, the Senate proceed to legislative session to resume consideration of the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740; further, that at 2:20 p.m., there be up to 20 minutes of debate equally divided between the chairman and ranking member; and that following the use or yielding back of that time, the Senate vote on the cloture motion on the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, with the mandatory quorum call being waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, EDUCATION, DEFENSE, STATE, FOREIGN OPERATIONS, AND ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2020—Motion to Proceed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to legislative session to resume consideration of the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, which the clerk will report.

Mr. CORNYN. Mr. President, one of the most poignant moments of my life—and certainly of my career here in the Senate—came in 2017, when a gunman opened fire on a Sunday service at the little Baptist Church right outside of Sutherland Springs, TX.

Twenty-six lives were lost that day; 20 people were injured; and the entire community—that small, little community outside of San Antonio—was shaken to its core by this hateful act.

It didn’t take us too long to learn about the shooter—a man with a record of domestic violence, animal cruelty, and mental illness. He had been court-martialed by the Air Force and convicted of serious domestic abuse, which is a felony.

By law, the shooter should have been prevented from purchasing or even possessing a firearm, but he wasn’t because the critically important information on his criminal background had not been uploaded into the relevant background check databases maintained by the FBI, even though a Federal statute clearly states that all Federal agencies are required to do so.

As a result, the gunman was able to legally buy three firearms, and used one of which he used to carry out this despicable act.

In the wake of any tragedy like this, you can’t help but ask: What if?

In this instance, it was our sad duty to ask those questions, but we knew the answer. If his criminal record had been uploaded into the FBI background check system, the shooter would have been prevented from purchasing these firearms that he used in the attack.

It was the system failure. I searched my conscience, and I searched the record to try to figure out exactly what we might be able to do to prevent acts like this from occurring in the future.

Ten days after the shooting, I introduced a bill called the Fix NICS Act. Now, it is a little bit confusing. NICS is the National Instant Criminal Background Check System. But it was clear that we needed to fix the National Instant Criminal Background Check System—hence, the name Fix NICS Act, which is now law.

That law broadened the background check system to prevent violent criminals who shouldn’t be able to purchase firearms from being able to do so. It was actually one of the good things that came out of this terrible tragedy.

At a time when division and partisanship were much more common than working together, we actually were able to overcome that partisan divide and division to pass this commonsense solution to a real problem, which I am convinced will save lives in the future.

This is the kind of thing our constituents expect us to do and what we need to do more of.

It has been 2 years since the shooting in Sutherland Springs. Unfortunately, that was not the last mass violence episode experienced by the State of Texas. On August 3 of this year, a gunman stormed the El Paso Walmart, killing 22 people and wounding two dozen others. Less than a month later, on August 31, a man went on a shooting rampage in Midland and Odessa, killing 7 people and wounding 25.

I visited each of these cities in the days following the shootings to pay my respects to those who had lost loved ones, to visit those who were still recovering in hospital rooms, and also to thank the law enforcement officers who I believe saved lives that would otherwise have been lost, for their quick and professional response.

In those early days, we were still gathering information and working to get to the bottom of how these shootings happened. Now that we have a pretty good idea about what happened and what didn’t happen that should have happened, it is time to work on solutions to help prevent these types of tragedies of mass violence.

Over the weekend, the minority leader here in the Senate and the House Speaker said that any proposal that does not include the House-passed universal background check legislation “will not get the job done.” But I would say to them that there is simply no evidence that if the House bill was law, it would have prevented any of these recent acts of violence.

I have to ask: If the solution that you proposed would not have prevented these acts from occurring, what is the point? Is this about making a statement? Is this about virtue signaling? Is this about politics? Or is this about trying to come up with solutions to the problem?

I am so proud of the Senate and the House for working together once again. Some of the folks who don’t believe in the Second Amendment are using these tragedies to advance an agenda rather than to try to solve a problem. That is not good enough, and this is not what the American people deserve.

I am not interested in introducing legislation just because we are being urged to “do something.” I am interested in trying to solve a problem and save lives in the process. That is what we did with the Fix NICS legislation, and that is exactly what we need to do by coming together once again.

In the wake of the shootings in El Paso, Midland, and Odessa, I have been working on some ideas that I believe can, once again, help to unite Congress and provide solutions to these tragedies to advance an agenda that is not what the American people deserve.

What is so important about assisted outpatient treatment programs is the alternatives available to a family member when your son or daughter or your spouse or your parent or your brother or your sister becomes mentally ill and is suffering a crisis, your options are extraordinarily limited. The assistant outpatient treatment programs provide alternatives to allow a family member to help somebody undergoing a mental health crisis who otherwise might be a danger to themselves and others.

We know that the most common cause of gun-related deaths are suicides. If we could somehow get people the mental health treatment they need early, before they even think about taking their own life, we would save many lives. If we can get people—like Adam Lanza, for example, in Sandy Hook—mental health treatment, so he does not become violent to others. Well, I think we have a very realistic opportunity to actually save lives going forward.

The Mental Health and Safe Communities Act also increases resources and training for improvements and for responders to identify those with mental illness and respond with treatment-based alternatives. By strengthening and expanding these programs and prioritizing a strong mental health workforce, I believe we can avert potential crises before they happen—not all of them, but I think we can make some real progress.

Additionally, I think there are things we could do to build on the success of the Fix NICS by enforcing current law and implementing the existing background check system.

We know we need to take decisive action against individuals who are violating current law by selling and manufacturing large numbers of firearms without a federal firearms license. It is clearly Congress’s intent to make sure that if you are in the business of buying and selling firearms in a commercial enterprise, you should be licensed by the Bureau of Alcohol and Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, or the ATF.

For example, the shooter in Odessa attempted to purchase a firearm from a licensed dealer, but because licensed dealers must perform background checks, he flunked it. He managed to circumvent the background check requirement by later purchasing his weapon from an individual who was obviously in the business of manufacturing and selling firearms, but who never registered as a firearms dealer. Thus, the shooter evaded a background check, because, as I said, all federally licensed firearms dealers are required to do that.

We know that, under current law, it can be difficult to prosecute individuals who are circumventing Federal law when they fail to register as a federally licensed firearms dealer. I believe Congress has a role—and there is a role—for the Senate and for the country, but the circus has somehow moved beyond this embarrassing chapter for the Senate and for the country.

This time, the wild accusations didn’t play out here in the Senate but rather in the New York Times. That newspaper ran a story over the weekend that publicized more unsubstantiated allegations against the Justice from way back when he was in college. The authors and editors managed to leave out the most critical detail of the entire story. The woman at the center of this reported alleged event declined to be interviewed by the journalists, and her friends say she doesn’t even recall such an event from occurring. But the New York Times printed it anyway.

Well, the reaction was predictable and immediate. As members of the media began pointing out this glaring hole in the story, some Democrats saw an opportunity to continue their smear campaign against this good man. They pounced on these unsubstantiated claims as evidence of wrongdoing by Justice Kavanaugh and began calling for his impeachment.

Once the paper fixed its colossal error, none of these folks washed down or apologized for calling for the impeachment of this good judge, this good man, even though the newspaper admitted their error.

This isn’t about the allegations or an investigation against even Justice Kavanaugh, for that matter. This is just the latest assault on the independence of the Federal judiciary by a party that is struggling to come to grips with reality.

From alarming court-packing calls to baseless allegations against a sitting Supreme Court Justice, I am not anxious to see what sort of reprehensible allegations and attacks they come up with next.

I would like to reiterate the commitment made by the majority leader earlier this week. As long as we remain in the Senate, we will prevent this type of mob rule and this sort of media circus and fight to preserve the rule of law and the independence of our judiciary.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROSENTHAL). The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, later in the day—certainly today or tomorrow—we will have a vote on whether we want to move forward on this year’s appropriations process. The vote would allow us to move forward. Frankly, it and I hope and should not be necessary to make any amendment they want and to debate this bill on the floor, as bills should be debated. If they don’t like the House bill that we will take up—and many of us would not like the House bill—they have an opportunity to substitute that with another bill or make amendments on that bill. I would like to see this process get started.

A significant part of the House bill was the Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education bill, which had moved beyond this embarrassing chapter for the Senate and for the country, but the circus has somehow returned.

This is not about the allegations or an investigation against even Justice Kavanaugh, for that matter. This is just the latest assault on the independence of the Federal judiciary.

I yield the floor.
to and I think, frankly, they would have liked to. Certainly, the ranking member and her staff have been an important part of this discussion.

This bill—the bill that would be our alternative today—includes funding that I think this Senate ultimately will have. Those are all things that we have tried to move forward on in a way that I am confident the minority is not opposed to. I think they will find little to criticize, frankly, in the bill.

We didn’t engage in a lot of new language. Some of the Republicans Members, including me, would like to see some further defining language in the bill, but that really gets to authorizing and not appropriating. That gets to passing legislation that should go through committees and not just deciding how much money we are going to spend on those activities that the Federal Government has to participate in, is authorized to participate in, starting with the Constitution itself, the specific authorization to defend the country.

In the Labor-HHS bill, we moved forward with things we have worked together on now for 4 years—a $3 billion increase in research and recovery that follows on our earlier commitments and moves that number to $3.9 billion. We strengthened the workforce in this bill, particularly the apprenticeships, with the idea that sooner rather than later, people should get a sense of the kind of job they would like to do and understand the pathway to work, which for some people involves a college education and for lots of people does not. I think if you will of the people ultimately graduated from college are working at jobs that don’t have anything to do with their college degrees. That doesn’t mean the college degree was bad; it just means it is not the universal pathway that I think for almost a generation now we have talked about—how that was going to lead to better incomes and stronger families and all of that. What leads to better incomes and stronger families is a good job. It is doing things. You get out of high school and get a job and get married. If you can do it in that order, you are much more likely to not have concerns about poverty than if you try to skip any of those or do it some other way.

For a long time, this bill has been one of the most difficult to negotiate. It has many of the hot-button issues that the country and the Congress deal with. Again, for the last 3 years—and that was for the first time in a while—we have had a bipartisan bill. I think at the end of the day this bill will have a bipartisan agreement again, but unfortunately our friends on the minority have—I think in their frustration about the allocation of money—decided: Well, even tough we have agreed not to fight about new issues—adding things to the appropriation bill that haven’t been there before—we are going to fight about that. We are going to say what the President can’t do or what we are going to do to say what doctors can do about that.

That is not what this bill does or is designed to do.

As I mentioned earlier, one of the things we have done is one of my top priorities as chairman, which is to move forward on this important time with health research. I can’t help but point out that 4 years ago, NIH hadn’t had a penny increase, not an inflationary increase, not any increase for 12 years. This was basically the same 12 years in which we began to figure out how important it was that we now understood the human genome. This was the same 12 years that cancer researchers were looking at immunotherapy. This was the same 12 years that people were beginning to talk about, well, maybe you can cut some editing with CRISPR technology that will prevent a future thing from occurring, that you could look at that genetic makeup and know it is going to occur. There was not a penny increase.

Four years ago, the research community said they were 22 percent below in research buying power—where they had been 12 years earlier. We caught up on that. If we are able to move forward with the $3 billion increase, we will have had a 40-percent increase over five budgets. Now we are probably talking about really new money beyond where NIH was a dozen years ago. This 40-percent increase matters.

The House and Senate have worked together. Congresswoman DeLauro and Congressman Cole have worked together with Senator Murray and me to make this a priority. I think we want to do that again. I think the facts will show that.

Why should it be a priority? The most expensive disease in America right now is Alzheimer’s. The cost to treat Alzheimer’s patients is anticipated to rise to $1.1 trillion by 2050 if we don’t find some way to get what is happening headed in a different direction. And $1.1 trillion, by the way, is essentially double the defense budget. I don’t know about you—I don’t have a very good sense of how much $1.1 trillion is, but I have a good sense of what we spend all over the world, as Americans, to defend the country and help defend the world. We will be spending twice that amount in today’s dollars—taxpayers—on Alzheimer’s and dementia treatment in 2050 if we don’t find a solution. So I think quadrupling the amount of money that we spend in this area would make more sense. We are spending a little more than 2 percent of the budget we are spending on treatment right now, and, again, that only gets to be a bigger problem.

Further, the bill increases funding for the BRAIN Initiative, to map the human brain, to $500 million.

I had somebody in my office this morning saying that pediatric brain cancer is now a bigger threat to kids than leukemia. We made a real effort on leukemia. We are now moving to another area that is now attacking the lives and ending the lives, perhaps, of more juveniles than leukemia has.

We have an investment for the first time in new ways of helping caregivers of patients with Alzheimer’s. The anticipation is that for every government dollar spent—and today that would be about $600 billion a year—for every government dollar spent, there are two private dollars spent, almost never insured. A lot of that is somebody deciding in their family that they are going to give up part or all of their work to take care of somebody they care about.

We are fully funding the administration’s request to end the HIV epidemic in 10 years. That is some further defining language. Some of the Republicans Members, including me, would like to see that language. Some of the Republicans Members particularly the apprenticeships, with the idea that sooner rather than later, people should get a sense of the kind of job they would like to do and understand the pathway to work, which for some people involves a college education and for lots of people does not.

We are moving forward with combating the opioid epidemic. Our committee was a little bit ahead of the authorizers in realizing this is a huge problem for so many people in the country today.

We are moving forward with increasing an additional $100 million national commitment in mental health. NIH says that one in four or one in five adult Americans has a diagnosable and almost always treatable behavioral health issue.

Those are just some of the many things this bill does.

There is $5 million requested by the minority to train professionals to provide mental health and substance abuse counseling. If you didn’t have a behavioral health issue before you got off the opioid or the drug addiction you have, you have to mentally get away from that addiction as well.

We also focus on education. There are workforce initiatives to prepare younger people for jobs that are out there and prepare our entire workforce for the jobs that come next. We shouldn’t be in the business of defending just any job; we want to defend viable jobs that are going to be viable today and hopefully part of the future. We want to ensure that workers are ready for the next job.

It maintains funding for campus-based student aid for people who are likely the first people in their families to ever attend college—I was the first person in my family to graduate from college—and the TRIO Programs, to get high school kids thinking about the fact that they can go to college as one of their options and what it would mean to them if they do that, to do things that help people stay in college.
If you live in Nebraska, you understand this fully. This knowledge doesn’t come from maps or directions. It springs from a true love of the land—working on it, cultivating it, raising a family, building strong communities, taking pride in your life’s work, and the sweat and tears of many generations of your family put into it. It means enduring its disasters and enjoying those cool peaceful nights full of stars. Chief Standing Bear and the Ponca Tribe understood this.

Imagine his surprise when on a cold January day in 1877, he and his Tribe were told to leave their beloved land. His Tribe had lived on their reservation for more than 200 years, and now they were being forced to travel nearly 600 miles to the south to Indian territory in Oklahoma.

Under the threat of bayonets, the Tribe reached the Ponca Trail. The tribe was suffering through the scorching months of summer. Harvest season had passed, and the Tribe could not grow crops for the winter months. Starvation was rampant, and mosquitoes swarmed the reservation with malaria. After a year and a half, the Ponca lost over one-third of their Tribe, including Chief Standing Bear’s son.

In the final moments of his life, his son made him promise that he would be buried in the Ponca Tribe’s homeland in Nebraska.

To give his son the sacred burial he wanted, Chief Standing Bear led a 600-mile quest back to Nebraska, but with only an estimated 2 days of travel left ahead, he was stopped by the U.S. Cavalry and arrested. Chief Standing Bear was thrown in prison and was forced to prove that he had God-given rights as a human being.

During this time, word began to spread throughout communities about his journey. People began to rally around this devoted father’s story. Eventually, cries for justice resulted in a historic trial in the U.S. District Court in Omaha.

The lawyers made their arguments. Then the judge granted Chief Standing Bear the opportunity to speak. The Chief rose and stood in silence while the packed courtroom anxiously waited. What followed was one of the greatest speeches in American history.

"This hand is not the color of yours, but if I pierce it, I shall feel pain. If you pierce my hand, you also feel pain. The blood that runs through my veins will flow from mine will be of the same color as yours. I am a man. The same God made us both."

Reports tell us that when Chief Standing Bear was finished speaking, the courtroom was filled with sounds of sobbing. A local Omaha World Herald reporter had recounted that he saw tears on the judge’s face. GEN George Crook, the defendant in the case, was one of the first in the sea of people to shake the Chief’s hand. Days later, the judge ruled in favor of Chief Standing Bear.

At long last, the landmark decision extended “equal justice under law” to Native Americans. Nearly 75 years later, a courageous woman carried a similar message of equality in Montgomery, AL. Rosa Parks, whose statue is also in Statuary Hall, knew that standing strong for her God-given dignity was worth risking everything she had.

Months after her arrest, she said she “would have to know for once and for all what rights I had as a human being and a citizen.” I will close with this. The room we will gather in later for the dedication ceremony is known as Statuary Hall. Until 1857, the House of Representatives met there, and their business was overseen by another statue, Cleo—the muse of history. She was the source of inspiration for the political leaders at the time and served as a reminder that they were part of history.

She is still there above the door leading to the Rotunda, keeping notes, documenting who we are and where we are going. Today she will turn a new page.

In Statuary Hall, the very room where she observed Congress shamefully passing the Indian Removal Act, we will dedicate a statue to honor the life of Chief Standing Bear. It is another important lesson in our Nation’s story that in the end, with bravery, determination, and empathy, human freedom will always prevail. It is a great honor to celebrate the life and contributions of Chief Standing Bear. I know his statue will inspire millions of visitors who visit the U.S. Capitol every year. I am proud that Chief Standing Bear’s legacy and the message of equality lives on in our great cathedral of democracy.

I yield the floor.

Ms. ERNST. Mr. President, it is typically tradition to exchange gifts on anniversaries, but yesterday we celebrated the anniversary of a truly remarkable gift given to each of us as Americans: the Constitution.

On September 17, 1787, our Founding Fathers concluded the Constitutional Convention by proposing a new form of government based upon inalienable rights and self-determination of the American people. The Founders of our great Nation devoted incredible foresight to the very structure on which our country is built, with the goal of protecting our rights as citizens for generations to come.

Folks, we celebrate Constitution Day with gratitude—gratitude for the unprecedented freedoms this document guarantees, freedoms which have endured more than 230 years. As the world’s oldest working national Constitution, the U.S. Constitution continues to withstand the test of time and remains among the most important documents ever to be written.
not only established our government institutions such as Congress, the Presidency, and the courts, but it also limited the power of each to protect against tyranny.

As constructed, our government can only exercise the limited powers specifically outlined in the Constitution, but the freedoms that all of us cherish deeply and that are so often taken for granted are forever guaranteed by the Constitution and its Bill of Rights.

The freedom of religion, so we may worship freely what we know to be true in our hearts; freedom of speech, to debate and openly discuss as we endlessly seek to become that “more perfect Union”; a free press, to share information with every citizen from north to south, from coast to coast, and to and from my home in Iowa; the right to peacefully assemble and enact change; due process, to ensure justice for every individual and protection against cruel and unusual punishment to those who are convicted; and the right of law-abiding citizens to bear arms.

Folks, the words of this Constitution, our sacred Constitution, have endured because they work. The Constitution sets the stage for the generations that follow to continue to expand its “Blessings of Liberty,” including: The 13th Amendment that abolished slavery, the 15th Amendment which guaranteed African Americans the right to vote, and the 19th Amendment, which was approved by Congress 100 years ago this past July, granting women the right to vote.

The Constitution does more to protect liberty than any political document ever composed. It actively guarantees life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness that our Founders merely hoped for at the drafting of the Declaration of Independence.

To tamper with any of the rights promised to us by the founding of our Nation is to weaken the structure upon which our liberty was promised. Even in polarized times, these principles continue to ring true and unite us as Americans.

Before each of us in this Chamber began our service to the people of our own great States, we first swore an oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Every man and woman who enlists in our Nation’s Armed Forces, as I have, begins their service by swearing a similar oath.

Folks, the political winds may blow left, and they may blow right, but we can rest assured that no one can take away these guaranteed freedoms. With every new bill we consider, we must always pause to ensure that it is adhering to the rights outlined in our Constitution.

There is nowhere in the world that enjoys such individual freedom that American citizens do today. Those rights and freedoms apply to each one of us equally. No one is above the law, and no one is beneath it.

The Constitution is a guidepost for justice and democracy and encompasses the bedrock of our ideals as Americans. Most importantly, the Constitution keeps a promise that power shall forever remain with “We the People.”

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PERDUE). The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAINES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DAINES. Mr. President, I rise in commemoration of Constitution Day, celebrated nationwide yesterday, the date, September 17.

Two hundred thirty-two years ago, our Founding Fathers gathered at Independence Hall in Philadelphia and signed a document that remains the supreme law of the land today. In those 232 years, the United States has become the most powerful, the most prosperous Nation in the history of the world, and that success has come as a result of the framework set by our Constitution.

The genius of the Framers was their determination to maximize the freedom of the individual while recognizing the need for a central government limited in size by the Constitution. The Founders understood the nature of man. The Founders understood that power corrupts.

Under the framework of federalism, we created a divide between the States and the Federal Government, allowing for powers to be shared. In fact, the 10th Amendment states:

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

At the Federal level, we established three coequal branches of government, which established a system of checks and balances to offset the concentration of power. To complement the laws established, our Founders put in place the Bill of Rights as a safeguard to protect the individual from the threat of government tyranny. Our sacred rights and freedoms endowed by our Creator are recognized as inherent and untouchable by the Government. As the Father of our Constitution, James Madison, stated:

In Europe, charters of liberty have been granted by power. America has set the example . . . of charters of power granted by liberty.

Our constitutional system of government is the envy of the world and has served as a model for countries worldwide that are seeking to create representative governments. That is why it is so important for us to observe days like Constitution Day. Americans of all ages should be learning and should be studying our Constitution. They should be taking in what makes our Constitution so uniquely successful in nurturing a free and a prosperous society. Our grand experiment has stood the test of time, yet we must continue to be vigilant in the preservation of this most important part of our American legacy.

So, today, I encourage every Montana and every American to read the Constitution. Discuss it at the dinner table. Discuss it with your family members. Discuss it in your classrooms. Discuss it with your friends. Discuss it with your neighbors. Discuss it with your legislators.

As the preamble states, “We the People” established our Constitution, and it remains up to “We the People” to ensure its success.

May God continue to bless this great Nation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. LANKFORD. Mr. President, on September 17, 1920, this great experiment was finalized to try to form what they considered a more perfect Union, and the birth of our Constitution happened. This was a radical experiment in self-government, and most of the rest of the world at the time stared at those people who we now call our Founding Fathers and thought, that will never work.

It wasn’t a parliamentary system. It wasn’t a monarchy. It was a representative republic, and it was pulling something out of the hearts of people to say: This is inherently what we think would work.

It began with the simple concept of checks and balances—that one person would check another person who would check another person. They were able to put that into a governmental structure that had three coequal branches—an executive, a legislative, and judicial branch—so that we don’t have one over the other. The three stand on equal footing. Each of them watches the other.

It was a unique system of putting a legislative branch together that had one body made up of the House of Representatives that would be large, boisterous, and up for election every two years.

The most painful parts of government—that are required of government—are put into the hands of the people who are closest to the people. Those are the powers of the purse, the power of the power, and the power of things that need to be done by government but can be done only by people who are closest to the government.

Then they were able to create a Senate with longer terms, closer to the States, and a larger perspective on how we would structure together to make sure that we protect the rights of the individual States and the uniqueness of, at that time, those 13 States all joining together. It was a radical idea and a complete shift from where we had just been.

As Americans, occasionally we forget that this wasn’t our first time to try to
Mr. LANKFORD. Under the Articles of Confederation that we had 12 amendments. They debated and they edited and they worked it through, and those 12 ended up becoming 10. Those 10 amendments were added as our Bill of Rights, but we continue to be able to edit and to be able to work together as a country.

Eventually, we fought a civil war—one of the most tragic parts of the entire history of our Nation. Yet this Constitution still kept us together at the end, and we still function together. Since the original 10 Bill of Rights, we have added 17 different amendments to the Constitution. This enduring document, after more than two centuries, continues to be the foundation of every single law in the United States. It is unlike any parts of the world even still today.

In much of the world, they change constitutions every time their Monarch changes. They change constitutions every time their government changes. And when an executive branch decides they don’t particularly like what is happening in the legislative branch, they just demand a new constitution and shift the laws of the entire country.

We didn’t. We started with a Constitution and started with the simple principle that the law matters. We continue to build on that basic law. When our preferences change, the law still exceeds our preferences. And if there is a change that we need to make in law, we agree together to make a change in law.

We still continue to respect the uniqueness of, now, all 50 States and of local authorities. We still have counties and parishes and municipalities. They oversee school boards. They make day-to-day decisions. They provide local first responders, garbage collection, recycling, public transportation, parks and recreation. They manage utilities. They decide street names, deal with local roads, street signs, and zoning laws. It is all done locally; it is not done federally. The Federal Government has nothing to do with that.

Then, larger than the local municipalities, we have the States. They establish local governments. They establish public schools, issue teaching certificates, and licenses for professionals like doctors, lawyers, psychiatrists—as many types of professions as they choose. They decide the time, manner, and places of elections because those are the responsibilities of the States. They determine motor vehicle registrations, driver’s licenses, marriage licenses, but they regulate commerce within their State.

Our simple system is not only broken up into three different branches of government, but it is also broken up into local governments, State governments, and Federal Government. That begins with our national defense, which is uniquely a role that we can do together as a Federal Government. Then there are interstate commerce and managing treaties with foreign entities. It is the responsibility of the larger government.

This unique experiment that was radical in its day is still the envy of the world to this day, and there is a reason we pause each year in September and remember Constitution Day. I think about how often we celebrate the Declaration of Independence every Fourth of July and think about Thomas Jefferson—his writing and all of the editing that then happened with his country. As that 2nd Bill of Rights, we sometimes lose track of a day in September when we can pause and think of that second document in our founding after the Declaration—the U.S. Constitution—that remains the foundation of every law and every amendment and every treaty with the world today. We could not be more grateful for a stable foundation for our Nation.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. President, I join my two colleagues who were just here and spoke while I was here—my friend from Montana and my friend from Oklahoma—to talk about, really, the uniqueness of the government we have in America, and the coming together of ideas in Philadelphia in 1787. They were ideas, frankly, that nobody had ever thought of in quite the same way before. We were going to form a more perfect Union.

I think about how often we celebrate the Constitution Day. It just suggests forming a more perfect Union. It just suggests that we could form a more perfect Union with the understanding of a range of vision of what might happen. There were people who were advocating for women to be able to vote as Abigail Adams had advocated during the Revolution itself. There were people advocating that slavery be ended. There were many things that were evidenced in that room as part of the debate that didn’t happen, but they didn’t want to have a perfect Union. They said they were going to form a more perfect Union and you have to believe they assumed it would get more perfect as time went on.

Here we are 200-some years later. Is it perfect yet? No, but it is, hopefully, more perfect than it has been and is less perfect than it will be because we the people are going to come together in this Convention and then, later, adopt it in a bigger setting to form a more perfect Union. That more perfect Union would include ideas that nobody has ever thought about.

If the people are forming the government, what kind of controls do you put on the government? Not too many controls.

I remember, with the Bicentennial of the Constitution, Warren Burger was the Chairman of the Bicentennial Commission and the Chief Justice of the United States. He said, when he was a boy, he measured the value of a horse by the little harness he had on and still get it to do the work you wanted done. You didn’t totally handicap the horse by piling all kinds of harnesses and all kinds of reins and all kinds of bits. A valuable horse was a real horse and it had all kinds of structure but had all the structure it needed. That is what the Constitution tried to put together, not a government that would overwhelm itself but a government that had enough to control itself.

They came up with this idea of a balance of power. As all of us would believe, they started describing the most important part of the government in article I. That is why it was article I that set up the Congress—the House and the Senate. They then came up with an executive who would execute the will of the article I body—the body that decided how to spend the money and the body that would decide what laws could get on the President’s desk and the body that had the ability, if the President didn’t sign the law, to override the President’s decision not to sign it.

All of that was there in that balance of power. It was where the Congress had strengths, where the executive had strengths, and where even the Court comes in to serve as a necessary third body in the relationship between the two. It is sometimes to tell the President what the President can do and what the Congress can’t do. Sometimes it is just the opposite and says: No, you can’t do this. You can appropriate it conditionally. You can’t appropriate the money and say, to get the money, the President has to do things that don’t have anything to do with the appropriations process. We just don’t have the President to behave differently. We can’t do that, and the President shouldn’t be able to do it either. The courts are often the group that decides that.

Again, in not having too many obligations in the Constitution, what does the Constitution say about the courts? It does not say a lot.

It reads there will be a Supreme Court and such other courts as the Congress in to serve as necessary thereto. That is not a very complex structure. It doesn’t say how many people are going to be on the Supreme Court. There have been different numbers over time. It doesn’t say how many other courts there will be. Yet the courts are out there, and the judges serve for life. Outside of the normal concerns that they might have that one of the other groups would decide whether they could continue to serve or not, that may be their greatest concern. And if they are there, no matter what they decide unless their decisions are so extraordinary that somehow the other power decides to remove them.

So here we are. It is a living document. It is amendable. It is a living document through its amendments, not through its interpretation.

The Founders and those who believe the Constitution continues to serve a constitutional purpose never thought well, we will decide later what the Founders would have thought that sentence meant. This has divided our country, by the way, for a while. Many people, along with me, think the Constitution means what it says it means and what you would have thought it means. It has been the basis for a government before. Yet here we are—we well over 200 years before. It says: The Constitution has been the model for all kinds of constitutions by all kinds of countries. Interestingly, many of them have almost the same Constitution we have, but they have the ability to figure out how to live with it or to let the balance of power or the power of people work.

Again, the most important part is that of the first three words—the most important in understanding the forming of a more perfect Union. It has not yet been accomplished and maybe never will be accomplished, but it always gives us a goal for things to be better than they have been. In our country, we have the opportunity to live under the Constitution, which provides a unique set of liberties and freedoms that others can only hope for.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate from Vermont.

H.R. 2740

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, later today, we are going to vote on whether to invoke cloture on the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, the House Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, Defense, State, Foreign Operations, and Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act. I must say I have to strongly urge Senators to vote no.

I am not using a “no” vote because the House bills are not good bills. The underlying House bills are good bills. If we were going to vote just to consider these bills, that would be easy, I and practically everybody in this Chamber would vote yes, but that is not what we are doing.

Senator MCCONNELL has made it very clear that he will bring up H.R. 2740 not to vote on the bills that have been passed by the House of Representatives but for the consideration of the Senate’s Defense appropriations bill, which was a partisan bill that was reported along party lines out of the Appropriations Committee. He is going to offer that as a substitute once we proceed to the underlying bills.

On top of taking a totally partisan bill as a substitute for legislation that could have easily passed, as part of the substitute, Leader MCCONNELL is going to offer the Energy and Water Appropriations bill as well as the State, Foreign Operations, and Labor-HHS and Education bills. Now, those last two bills have never been considered by the committee. They have not been voted on by the subcommittees, and they have not been voted on by the full committee. This is not how the committee markup last week because the Republicans were afraid to vote on amendments that would have received the support of both Republicans and Democrats.

Is that how we operate? Just because things get complicated and difficult, do we just skip parts of the legislative process? Do we say, “Oh, my goodness gracious, I am afraid to have a debate on something, either yes or no”? That is no way to proceed.

Not one Democrat on the Appropriations Committee voted for the Defense bill—not one—including me, and I have voted for more money elsewhere, the Department of Defense than any Senator who is serving in this body today.

The way the Defense bill was written, it does nothing to prevent the President from stealing billions of dollars more from our troops to pay for his cynical campaign promise of building a gigantic wall across our southern border. He will steal this money from our troops and their families even though he promised us that Mexico would pay for it.

In fiscal year 2019 alone, the President has already raided $6.1 billion from the Department of Defense’s accounts for his border wall. He did that without having congressional approval. He first diverted $2.5 billion from the fiscal year 2019 Defense Appropriations Act for the wall by using standard transfer authority. We provide this authority to the Department of Defense to ensure that the DOD has the flexibility it requires to meet the needs of the troops in an ever-changing environment. It is not intended to be used by the President as a piggy bank for a campaign promise or for a pet project that Congress has refused to support.

He took $3.6 billion more from military construction projects for a southern border wall. This was the wall he gave his word that Mexico would pay for. He, instead, is taking the money from projects like military schools, childcare centers, and improved training facilities that would improve the lives of our troops and their families to pay for his wall. We cannot let that happen again.

I offered an amendment during committee markup of the Defense appropriations bill that would protect the money we appropriated for our troops by prohibiting the President from using it to build a border wall, but that amendment was defeated on a party-line vote.

Now the Republican leader accuses Democrats of not standing with the troops by voting against this bill, but it is exactly the opposite.

We are the ones saying we want funds that should go to support the troops and their families to go to them, and we voted against letting the President take the money from the troops and their families for the wall.

Taking that money is tantamount to telling military families: You may serve loyally, but we care more about a failed campaign promise—a wall in the middle of the desert that the President promised Mexico would pay for—than we do about providing schools and
The majority leader has said there is no education in the second kick of a mule. I agree, but now we find ourselves in this position again. We have been down this road. It was the President’s failed strategy that led to the lengthy government shutdown in the history of our country just 9 months ago and cost Americans billions of dollars.

It was the President’s failed strategy to hold the government of the American people hostage to pay for a wall that he gave his word Mexico would pay for.

There is a bipartisan path forward. We have bipartisan bills that have gone through the Appropriations Committee with overwhelming support of Republicans and Democrats. The majority leader ought to just bring those bills up while we sort out these other issues.

The Energy and Water Appropriations bill was reported out of committee last week on a unanimous vote; every Democrat voted for it. Tomorrow the Appropriations Committee will consider the Agriculture appropriations bill and the Transportation, Housing and Urban Development appropriations bill.

I expect that most Democrats and most Republicans will vote for them, and we could bring these bills to the floor. Instead, we are forced today to vote cloture on a partisan defense appropriations bill, a partisan state-federal operations bill, a partisan labor-HHS-education bill, the last two of which were never even considered in committee.

The State-Foreign Operations bill continues the President’s discriminatory Mexico City policy, which prohibits funding for private organizations that support family planning and reproductive health, and it caps funding for family planning at an arbitrarily and unacceptably low level. It eliminates all funding for the U.N. Population Fund. That is a fund that provides lifesaving assistance to women and girls in Yemen and dozens of other countries where USAID does not have programs.

For the past 30 years, I have been either chairman or ranking member for the State, Foreign Operations Subcommittee. That subcommittee has a long record of producing bipartisan bills. That was true when the majority leader, then Senator SHELBY, was chairman, when former Senator Judd Gregg of New Hampshire was chairman, while Senator GRAHAM has been chairman, and during the years I was chairman. We were ready to mark up that bill last week, but because one Senator wanted to offer an amendment related to family planning—an amendment that had both Republican and Democratic support of a majority of members of the committee—the markup was canceled.

We were not allowed to vote on it. Rather than vote, the majority canceled the markup. What kind of process is this? What kind of democracy is this? We are better than this. We are the 100 Members of the U.S. Senate—100 men and women—who represent 325 million Americans. That is an awesome responsibility.

Senators should not be afraid to vote. Senators should show courage, not hide behind procedural actions so they never have to take a position. That is not why people come to the U.S. Senate. That is not what is expected of the 100 people here to represent this great country.

So I would urge Members to vote no on the cloture motion. It is nothing more than a political stunt.

We have bipartisan bills with overwhelming support of Republicans and Democrats. Bring them up. Let’s not waste time on show votes.

I will continue to work with my good friend Chairman SHELBY and the majority and Democratic leader to find a way forward, but let’s not have show votes. Let’s have real votes. Let’s have all 100 of us stand up and say what we stand for.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I listened to some of the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Vermont and friend. I think we are both trying to find a path forward to move our appropriations bills, but we are not there yet.

This afternoon, I urge my colleagues to oppose cloture on the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, the first package of appropriations bills sent over by the U.S. House of Representatives. This package includes the Defense; Energy and Water; Labor, HHS, and Education; and State-Foreign Operations appropriations bills.

My Democratic colleagues have said they are opposed to proceeding to this package because we must pass domestic funding bills before we pass the Defense bill, but this package before us right now does both. In fact, it accounts for more than 40 percent of domestic spending. As I said before, it mirrors the package sent to us by Speaker PELOSI and the Democratic-controlled House. So this excuse, I believe, for delaying consideration of this package doesn’t hold water this afternoon. We need to move the process forward.

I want to make a few points about the Senate versions of these bills that we will bring up if we invoke cloture today.

Last week, the Appropriations Committee reported the Defense and Energy and Water bills. The Energy and Water bill, as Senator LEAHY has just remarked, garnered unanimous support. My Democratic colleagues similarly praised the bipartisan nature of the Defense bill. Yet they voted against it in the committee. They did so because the bill, as I understand it, from what they tell me, does not restrict the President’s ability to transfer defense support to the border.

The terms of the bipartisan budget deal governed the fiscal year 2020 appropriations process. That is why they entered into this agreement. They were agreed to by Republican and Democratic leaders, all the way up to the President, the Speaker of the House, the majority leader, the minority leader, and so forth. Those terms expressly prohibit restrictions on the President’s ability to transfer funds. It is plain as day.

Our Democratic colleagues may now regret having agreed to those terms, but that does not change the fact that they did agree to them, and we want to go by them.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to place this term sheet into the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BIPARTISAN BUDGET AGREEMENT FOR FISCAL YEARS 2020 AND 2021

1. The 2019 Bipartisan Budget Agreement for fiscal years 2020 and 2021 (“Agreement”) is an agreement among the leaders of Congress and the administration of Donald J. Trump. The bipartisan congressional leadership and the administration agree to cooperate in the implementation of the Agreement.

2. The Agreement modifies the discretionary spending caps imposed by the Budget Control Act (“BCA”) for fiscal years 2020 and 2021 pursuant to the table below. Spending cap adjustments are intended to reflect the elimination of the BCA sequester for two years, plus a slight increase in spending for both defense and non-defense programs.

3. The parties agree to partially offset the Agreement’s modifications to the discretionary spending caps by requiring that Congress ensure that any BCA mandated sequestrations and customs user fees be used to offset a total offset level of $77.4 billion as scored by the Congressional Budget Office.

4. The debt limit will be suspended for two years, through July 31, 2021. No additional restrictions will be placed on the Secretary’s extraordinary measures authorities. The debt limit suspension, spending cap adjustments, offsets, and any necessary procedural matters, will be included as part of a single piece of legislation.

5. Appropriations bills: Specific spending decisions shall be left to the members of the Appropriations Committees, with 320(b)s set through the regular process of the committees. Congressional leaders and the administration agree that, relative to the FY 2019 regular appropriations Acts, there will be no poison pills, additional new riders, additional CHIMPS, or other changes in policy or conventions that allow for higher spending levels, or any non-appropriations measures, unless in a bipartisan basis by the four leaders with the approval of the President. Current transfer funding levels and authorities shall be maintained, and any modifications agreed to on a bipartisan basis by the four leaders with the approval of the President. Any emergency spending levels must be agreed to in a bipartisan basis by the four leaders with the approval of the President.

6. The Agreement also establishes a new cap adjustment for FY 2021 to help ensure the necessary resources for the decennial Census are provided.

7. Senate Leaders agree that if a bill has been reported on a bipartisan basis from the Senate Appropriations Committee and is consistent with the BCA spending caps, and has the support of the Chairman and the Ranking Member, they will work together to minimize procedural delays. The Majority Leader will continue to consult with the Democratic Leader to sequence bills in a bipartisan way, and acknowledges that bipartisan concurrence is required to expedite the consideration of any appropriations bill.

8. The President, Congressional leaders and the leadership of the Appropriations Committees shall work together to reach bicameral and bipartisan agreement on the order and timely consideration of FY 2021 appropriations bills to avoid a government shutdown, and a 12-bill omnibus. The President, Congressional leaders and the leadership of the Appropriations Committees shall work together to reach bicameral and bipartisan agreement on the order and timely consideration of FY 2021 appropriations bills to avoid a government shutdown, and a 12-bill omnibus.

Mr. SHELBY. Lack of adherence to the terms of the budget deal also explains why we are unable to mark up the other two bills in this package: Labor, HHS, and Education and State, Foreign Operations. Just like the Defense and Energy and Water bills, these bills were crafted in a bipartisan way. Yet some of my Democratic colleagues threatened to amend these bills with abortion-related poison pills. Poison pills, as we all know—just like restrictions on transfer authority—are expressly—expressly—prohibited by the budget deal that we all agreed to just a few weeks ago. Again, both parties agreed to those terms.

Regardless, I am interested in moving the appropriations process forward, and we hope they will set aside partisan politics and do right by our military, the numerous agencies that would receive funding in this package, and our constituents—the American people—and let us get on with the business of the people.

Again, this afternoon I urge my colleagues to vote yes on cloture.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

Meet the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby, to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, a bill making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies for fiscal year ending September 30, 2020, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is it the sense of the Senate that Senator Durbin, our sponsor on the motion to proceed to H.R. 2740, a bill making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2020, and for other purposes, shall be brought to a close?

CONSTITUTION DAY

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, one of the occasions that we celebrate every year is Constitution Day, and that actually took place yesterday. It was an excellent opportunity to visit with students, talk to constituents, and celebrate Constitution Day and the fact that we have this document.

Our Constitution is a disarmingly short document to read. When you sit down to read it, it doesn’t really take a lot of time to digest it. When you are done with it, you might easily walk away thinking: That wasn’t that hard. After all, is it pretty simple, right? We all know that’s not necessarily the case. It is easier to understand, but it is so important that we look at it in its entirety.

There is an entire body of law dedicated to tearing apart that Constitution. It is mind-boggling when you think about that. We have this document. It puts this foundation in place, and there is law that would rip it apart. There are those who would rip it apart, who are looking for answers to problems our Founders never dreamed of.

There has been a lot of talk lately concerning the Founders and how their backgrounds and status in society informed the document that eventually became what is known as the Constitution of the United States. But I think it is even more important to think of the Founders as human beings who came to the Constitutional Convention harboring ambitions and goals equal in gravity to our present passions—their desire to have a United States of America.

They wanted freedom from their oppressors on the other side of the world and from a system of government that would inevitably lead to oppression. They said: No more. Let’s write this into the fiber of this Nation—freedom; freedom from our oppressors. They wanted to reforge the chains that broke during the Revolution into ties that would bind the several States together under a common goal—bound together, united in purpose and in freedom. After years of blood and uncertainty, they desperately wanted control over their own lives and over their future, individual freedom—freedom to choose.

Because they were human, yes, they wanted power, and so they argued. They argued about everything. They argued about a nation having a debt. They argued about the Confederacy and compacts versus the Federalists’ vision of “a more perfect Union.” But through all that, the Founders still managed to create a document that set forth the government—a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. It is a form of governance that is responsible not to the government but is responsible to the people.

They gave us a framework, but there are a great many things that they declined to set in stone. They made a conscious choice, which is why we continually find ourselves engaging in philosophical combat. Unfortunately, as part of that battle, many of my friends on the other side of the aisle have gone so far as to undermine the very institutions that define this country.

Supreme Court confirmations have turned into a circus. Policy debates devolve into personal attacks. Distinguishing between news and opinion is all but impossible on many days of the week. Many of my friends on the other side are always able to describe the Constitution as a living document, but I don’t really follow that line of thinking. Describing our Constitution as a living document is really just a prelude to changing the rules to fit the circumstances, and, in my opinion, that is a dangerous concept.

As our Founders signed on the dotted line, the rest of the world looked toward America’s shores with skepticism, and, at times, derision. They didn’t understand how a government by the people and for the people could possibly fit into the existing mold.

After over 200 years of progress, there are still those who remain skeptical of the country that broke the mold and transformed from a struggling cluster of Colonies into a shining city on a hill.

I urge all of my colleagues to respect the Constitution. It is not an intellectual straitjacket. Not once has the sum of its contents acted as a barrier to progress. The Constitution is not the source of the freedoms it guarantees, but it does state definitively that its execution secured the blessings of liberty to those who bore witness to America’s beginnings and to those who would come after. It is a legacy worth fighting for. Happy Constitution Day.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2020

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate the message to accompany S. 1790.

The Presiding Officer laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the House insist upon its amendment to the bill (S. 1790), entitled “An Act to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2020 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such fiscal year, and for other purposes,” as the Senate, by a majority vote, agreed to a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

COMPOUND MOTION

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I would note that the Senate disagree to the House amendment, agree to the request of the House for conference, and authorize the Chair to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.
CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. MCCONNELL. I send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerks to count the votes.

The bill clerk reads as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to disagree in the House amendment, agree to the request from the House for a conference, and authorize the Chair to appoint a conference in proportion to S. 1790, a bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2020 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such fiscal year, and for other purposes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum call be waived and that the cloture vote occur at a time to be determined by the two leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO LAMAR ALEXANDER

Mr. MCCONNELL. Now, Mr. President, this week our friend and colleague, the senior Senator from Tennessee, will mark a major milestone in his State's history.

As of tomorrow, LAMAR ALEXANDER will have served as Tennessee's Governor or U.S. Senator for 24 years, 8 months, and 15 days—more combined years and offices than any other Tennessean.

Of course, Senator ALEXANDER also remains the only Tennessee Governor ever popularly elected to the Senate. He is the only Tennessee Republican to be undefeated in six statewide primary elections. And his 2008 general election vote total of 1,579,477 votes is still the largest ever recorded by a Tennessee statewide candidate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a statement from the Tennessee secretary of state, Tre Hargett, who has calculated each of these political accomplishments, be printed in the Record following my remarks.

As impressive as these statistics are, all of LAMAR ALEXANDER’s colleagues know that political record-setting is not what makes him tick. Here is something he likes to say about serving in the Senate:

It’s hard to get here. It’s hard to stay here. So while you’re here, you might as well try to accomplish something.

Well, he certainly lived out his own advice. During Senator ALEXANDER’s very first term, he got 70 Senators to support his bipartisan America COMPETES Act to help our country stay competitive with the rest of the world. He even persuaded the Democratic and Republican leaders to join forces as the principal sponsors. When it was enacted in 2007, everyone knew who the chief engineer had been.

Senator Dan Inouye said at the time: “I wish to commend my colleague, Senator Alexander, for his broad and very intricate history of bipartisanship. If all of us in this body follow this process in all major legislation, that would be a historic session…” I thank the Senator from Tennessee very much.

That was Senator Dan Inouye from Hawaii.

Then in 2012, after being elected three times by his peers as chairman of the Republican conference, LAMAR did something that is not often done around here: He gave up that power and his future ambitions for elected Senate leadership in order to “spend more time working to achieve results on the issues I care the most about.”

Since then, not coincidentally, there have been a steady stream of important new laws dealing with those very issues. Time after time, LAMAR has taken the lead, often as the principal sponsor or chief engineer. He has worked behind the scenes. He has collaborated across the aisle to get things done. He hasn’t often stepped into the spotlight himself, but he has almost always been the key driving force.

As chair of Senate HELP Committee, he worked with Senator PATTY MURRAY to fix No Child Left Behind. President Obama called it “a Christmas miracle,” and the Wall Street Journal said it was the greatest devolution of power to States in a quarter-century. The Nation’s Governors and the National Education Association recognized LAMAR with awards. We are dealing with a rare public servant who can literally win plaudits from the Wall Street Journal editorial board on largest teachers union at the same time.

In 2013, Senator ALEXANDER was one of a group of Senators who revamped Federal student loans with a new market-based interest rate to save hundreds of millions of dollars for students attending college.

In 2016, he and Senator MURRAY sponsored the 21st Century Cures Act. It is landmark legislation that I was proud to be involved with and view as the most significant law of that entire Congress.

In 2018, again with Senator MURRAY, he offered the landmark Opioid Crisis Response Act. President Trump called it “the single largest bill to combat a drug crisis in the history of our country.”

Last year, working with Senator Hatch, he was the chief engineer of once-in-a-generation legislation to ensure America’s songwriters are paid fair-market value for their work.

For the last 5 years, as chairman of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Subcommittee, he has worked with Ranking Member FEINSTEIN to deliver record funding for our National Laboratories, funding to keep America No. 1 in supercomputing, and 6 years of full funding for inland waterway infrastructure.

This is quite a distinguished record, and this is far from all of it.

I have heard that Senator ALEXANDER explains to Tennesseans that they can think of Congress like a split-screen television show. On one side are the dramatic public fights, the partisan showdowns, but on the other side, he explains, you see huge bipartisan majorities working diligently on issues that directly affect the daily lives of millions of Americans. Well, that side of the screen is where you will find Senator ALEXANDER. In fact, he is a star player.

Senator ALEXANDER has announced he won’t seek a fourth term in 2020. That’s far from imminent in his eyes, but it certainly may be in sight. I am confident the catalog of his hard work and leadership is nowhere near complete just yet. As chair of HELP, he and Senator MURRAY have reported the Lower Healthcare Costs Act to the full Senate. They are working together to reauthorize and update the Higher Education Act. He and Senator FEINSTEIN have produced an appropriations bill—passed by the Appropriations Committee—that would provide a fifth year of record funding for the National Laboratories, a sixth year of full funding for our inland waterway infrastructure, and the resources to keep America No. 1 in supercomputing. And there is almost certainly more to come over the next year and a half. Lamar’s service reminds us that there are many ways to be a transformational leader in this body.

As a young man, I was an intern for Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky. He was never an elected leader but was always regarded by his colleagues as a leader because of his willingness to do what he thought ought to be done. Senator Cooper once said to me:

I not only represent Kentucky. I represent the Nation, and there are times you follow, and times when you lead.

In fact, two of the three Senate office buildings are named for Senators who were never elected the leader of their party’s caucus. LAMAR ALEXANDER is just that kind of leader.

We are proud to celebrate this milestone as Senator ALEXANDER notches more combined years as Senator and Governor than anyone else from his State, but even more, we recognize the example the Senator has set for all the rest of us. It is just like he says:

It’s hard to get here. It’s hard to stay here. So while you’re here, you might as well try to accomplish something.

Congratulations, my friend.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SIGNED: SEPTEMBER 17, 2019.

Hon. Lamar Alexander,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ALEXANDER: I am writing to congratulate you on your record years of service to Tennessee. On September 19, 2019, you will have served more combined years as either Governor or United States Senator from Tennessee than any other Tennessee.

This is a milestone that illustrates your dedication to public service and to Tennessee. September 19, 2019, marks your 9,624th day in office—either Governor or United States Senator from Tennessee. Your 24 years, 8 months, and 15 days of service will surpass the previous longest serving Governor and United State Senator from Tennessee, Isham Harris.

This is just one of your many elections records in the state. You are the only Tennessee Governor who has been popularly elected to the United States Senate. You have won more Tennessee Republican statewide primary elections—six—than any other Tennessean. And your 2008 general election vote total—1,579,477 votes—is the largest vote total ever recorded by a Tennessee statewide candidate.

I congratulate you on this, and your many other, great accomplishments and I thank you for your service to our great state.

Sincerely,

TRE HARGETT,
Secretary of State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, it is an honor and a privilege to be here following Leader McCONEL and talk about the achievements of our State's senior Senator and recognize his wonderful work, not only in DC but also in Tennessee. I want to touch on just a few of those highlights and the importance to our State.

For me, being a State senator involved in our community, coming to serve in Congress, and now serving in the Senate with our senior Senator is something that is a wonderful experience.

The majority leader just mentioned that our senior Senator will retire at the end of next year. Of course, we are all going to miss seeing him around Capitol Hill. Senator ALEXANDER has really distinguished himself as a man who is committed to Tennessee tradition and to helping Tennessee find prominence on the global stage.

Anyone who has ever entered Senator ALEXANDER's office knows that he is a music lover. What they may not know is that he is also both a classically trained pianist and a pretty good gospel and country pianist. He has even performed on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry, and rumor has it that he really rocked the house the night he was there. His love of music and of Tennessee's musicians has caused him to work tirelessly in these efforts.

In the House, I started a songwriters' caucus. He did likewise in the Senate, bringing the issues that confront our Nation's performers into the Senate, finding solutions, and, as the leader mentioned, passing and being instrumental in the crafting—not just the passing—of the Music Modernization Act. He was honored just this week by the Songwriters Association International, which gave him the White Hat Award. This is an honor that he and I share.

It is important to note that the White Hat Award has only been given 15 times in the 52 years of that organization's history.

As Governor—then Governor, now Senator ALEXANDER opened the doors of the auto industry, including Saturn, GM, Nissan and auto parts producers, which solidified Tennessee's place in the global economy. As Senator, he has focused on improving Tennessee from the inside out, giving priority to practical concerns. He led the charge in health education and, as the leader mentioned, the opioid crisis. He has supported teachers, stood up for working moms, and enacted tax policies that kept more money in the wallets of Tennesseans.

Today, I rise to honor a leader, a friend, and, I have to say, the team captain for our annual Crockett Cup baseball game. And they were the winners. They are the holders of the Crockett Cup.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. UDALL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. BLACKBURN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. UDALL. Madam President, I rise to urge this body to protect the Constitution, to defend the separation of powers, and to prevent an unauthorized, unconstitutional war with Iran.

The Constitution is clear. Under our article I powers, the Constitution spells out that Congress shall have the authority to declare war.

The Founders debated which branch of government should be given the sovereign power to wage war. Entering into battle had been the personal prerogative of Kings, and Kings had shown that they would bankrupt their countries and risk lives because of self-serving, power-seeking feuds.

Therefore, our Constitution's Founders placed the decision to go to war with the people's representatives. They wanted any decision to wage war to reflect the will of the people. They deliberately rejected giving this most consequential decision only to the President.

Yet, despite the clarity of the Constitution, President Trump insists—without any equivocation—that he does not need congressional approval to engage in military hostilities against Iran and now, instead of working with the U.S. Congress, he is publicly deferring to the royal family of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Our President said we are waiting for Saudi Arabia to say "under what terms we would turn on the pumps." When discussing retaliation for the attack on a Saudi oil-processing facility, our President has praised the Saudis as good customers who "[pay] cash."

President Trump explained further as follows:

[The] fact is that the Saudis are going to have a lot of involvement in this if we decide to do anything. They are very much involved, and that includes payment. And they understand that fully.

Does this Congress think the patriotic men and women of our military are mercenaries at the service of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia? I reject that idea completely. When a President is threatening a military attack because of a foreign King's oil interests, it is well past time for Congress to assert its institutional authority.

Congress needs to make it clear: The President cannot begin a war with Iran without coming here first, coming here to the Congress.

In June, we voted on a bipartisan amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act that prohibited any war with Iran unless authorized by Congress.

Getting a vote on the Udall-Kaine-Paul amendment was historic, and a bipartisan majority of Senators voted to support our amendment. That day that amendment and its companion provision prohibiting war against Iran were tabled.

The House of Representatives has sent us its NDAA, which includes a bipartisan provision prohibiting war against Iran without congressional approval. The NDAA is now going to a Senate-House conference committee. The conference committee must adopt our amendment that prohibits unauthorized war against Iran.

Since our vote in June, tensions with Iran have not subsided; they have only increased. The threat of miscalculation and unauthorized war has only gotten more serious. This week, the President, on Twitter, is threatening that the U.S. military is "locked and loaded" on behalf of the Saudi Kingdom. Iran's behavior in the region is highly problematic, but Saudi Arabia's oil interests do not determine whether the United States goes to war. Congress determines that, Congress and Congress only, based on our national interests.

Rather than threats of war, the right move is active diplomacy to lower tensions in the region.

We are at this point in the Middle East because of the Trump administration's failed policies. Its unilateral withdrawal from the Iran nuclear agreement, its maximum pressure policy, its abandonment of diplomacy—these policies are only causing more chaos in the region and doing nothing to advance U.S. interests.

When the President unilaterally withdrew from the Iran nuclear agreement in May 2018, against the advice of his military and intelligence Chiefs, he promised he would get us a better deal.

The deal we had in place secured for the United States and the world an Iran that would not develop nuclear weapons. The agreement that had strict verification requirements and a deal his advisers and outside independent groups said Iran was complying with.
It has now been 16 months since the President tore up that deal and said he could get us a better one. Well, the President’s supposed deal-making prowess has only produced increased tensions, bringing us to the brink of war.

In June, we were 10 minutes away from an attack that likely would have cost Iranian lives. Even after that aborted strike, the President threatened Iran with “obliteration like you’ve never seen before.” Now we are “locked and loaded.”

While it is a positive development that John Bolton is no longer whispering in the President’s ear—urging regime change in Iran—this mercurial President could get us into a war before we know it, but these are my own views about the President’s foreign policy. I understand others in this body do not share them, including others who voted to support this amendment previously.

I want to underscore that this is not about what you think of the President. This is about defending the separation of powers as outlined in the Constitution, and this is about standing up for the will of the American people. The President not only was not wrong, but he was right.

Make no mistake, our amendment retains the President’s authority to defend against any attack upon us. While the chief complaint from opponents of the amendment was that it tied the President’s hands from attack, this is a false argument. The amendment expressly reserves the President’s powers to defend the Nation. The Department of Defense’s rules of engagement remain. The President is still the Commander in Chief to repel an attack and defend the Nation remains intact.

If there are still concerns, we can continue to consult experts and refine language in conference. That is part of the regular order, but the Defense bill must prohibit an unauthorized war with Iran.

For too long, Congress has abdicated its constitutional duty to decide matters of war and peace. We have hidden from the hard votes. We have allowed the Executive to fill the vacuum.

We in this body need to step up to the plate and assume our constitutional responsibilities. This is not about partisan politics. This is not about trying the hands of the President in defense of our country. This vote is not even about whether you think we should or should not go to war against Iran. Even if you think military action on behalf of the downed drone or Saudi oil is justified, the place to debate and make that decision is on this floor in this Congress. It is not the decision of one man in the White House.

I am making this call to our conference: Affirm the Constitution. Affirm our sworn responsibility to uphold the Constitution. Affirm that our men and women in uniform will not be sent off to risk their lives in war unless the people’s representatives make that somber decision.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAMER). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZATION FOR USE OF MILITARY FORCE

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, Members of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives face many votes on many subjects. Most of them you vote on and forget very quickly. There are some votes that are so necessary, the right response, and here we sit with two of the longest wars in the history of the United States.

Now the question is, Are we preparing for another war? I hate to say this, but I believe this is the case. I have no doubt that President Trump is leading us toward another endless war in the Middle East.

While our military is the most capable on Earth, no conflict with Iran would be easy. Iran has twice the population of Iraq and is four times the size. Even so-called targeted strikes could escalate into a much wider war.

Make no mistake, our amendment retains the President’s authority to defend against any attack upon us. While the chief complaint from opponents of the amendment was that it tied the President’s hands from attack, this is a false argument. The amendment expressly reserves the President’s powers to defend the Nation. The Department of Defense’s rules of engagement remain. The President is still the Commander in Chief to repel an attack and defend the Nation remains intact.

If there are still concerns, we can continue to consult experts and refine language in conference. That is part of the regular order, but the Defense bill must prohibit an unauthorized war with Iran.

Even if you think military action on behalf of the downed drone or Saudi oil is justified, the place to debate and make that decision is on this floor in this Congress. It is not the decision of one man in the White House.

What is our message to those who turn around and attack the United States and kill so many innocent people? So I saw Afghanistan different than Iraq, and I voted for the military effort that was undertaken to go after the worst terrorist organization responsible for 9/11, the al-Qaeda organization.

It took us years to find Osama bin Laden, who was responsible for masterminding that deadly day in our history, and to finally bring him to justice. The fact is, 18 years later, we are still in Afghanistan today. It is hard to explain. Thousans of American lives have been lost there. Millions, billions, maybe even trillions of dollars have been spent. And most people agree, the day after we leave, whenever it is, the country will revert to what it was before we walked in. There have been 18 years of sacrifice, 18 years of suffering, and even death, for America’s patriotic soldiers. It is a reminder about these wars that seem like such a good idea, so necessary, the right response, and here we sit with two of the longest wars in the history of the United States.

Now the question is, Are we preparing for another war? I hate to say this, but I believe this is the case. I have no doubt that President Trump is leading us toward another endless war in the Middle East.

We do not want to go to war against Iran. We do not want another endless war in the Middle East. are leading up to a confrontation to engage in. Now the questions are. Will we, in fact, go to war, and if we are prepared to, will this President—Donald Trump—follow the Constitution of the United States? The questions talked about 18 years ago gave the people of the United States, through their elected representatives, a decision-making part of the process. Their Members of Congress voted. The question is whether President Trump will follow his constitutional responsibility to Congress for authority to engage in a war in Iran.

I certainly don’t believe the vote I took 18 years ago, before many of the Members of the Senate were even here, has authorized him or any President to invade Iran. That was never even considered when we were in that debate.

Now the question is. Will he come forward and give the American people a voice in this process in deciding whether we are going to war? It is, in fact, at this with great skepticism and even negativity. A war is so much easier to get into than it is to get out of. We have proven that over and over again. Politicians who make the speeches and rationalize these wars are usually the ones who face the true bat and death on the battlefield. That is turned over to our young women and men in uniform who bravely fight for the causes we identify as politicians.

I would sincerely hope what Senator Udall, as the floor, to open a conversation and discussion, is really taken to heart by the American people and, more importantly, by the White House. As Senator Udall has reminded us, any President—this President—needs the constitutional authority to bring this Nation into a war. Without that authority, he cannot and should not move forward.

They point to the recent attacks on Saudi Arabia and their oilfields. Of course, terrible. Whether they came from Houthi rebels in Yemen or whether they came from Iran itself, it is terrible, but the fact is, the United States has not signed an agreement saying we are prepared to defend Saudi Arabia, whoever attacks them.

We want to have a good alliance with them—it is difficult with the current leadership—but we haven’t entered into a mutual defense pact by any means. When Saudi Arabia is attacked, we are not going to respond to defend American troops in their defense. We should take care and be thoughtful and not escalate this situation.

Senator Udall’s amendment regarding Iran is a straightforward and timely reaffirmation of what is already in article I, section 8 of the U.S. Constitution—only the U.S. Congress can declare war. I am pleased to join him and others in this legislative effort to reaffirm that without the consent of Congress, no war with Iran is authorized. I hope the Defense Authorization Conference will keep this in mind.

This Congress has rubberstamped too many of the President’s worst instincts. We must not do so again and march into another war in the Middle East. Two wars still going, still costing American lives, even to this day, are way too many. A third war at this point is unthinkable.

I yield the floor to The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I am on the floor to talk about a problem that is far too common in Washington; that is, Federal Government shutdowns. They don’t make any sense. If we don’t do something in 12 days, Congress, once again, will face an unnecessary and costly government shutdown. We have to avoid that.

I have been through five different government shutdowns since my time working in the George H. W. Bush White House back in 1990, and three shutdowns just over the last 5 years. None of them worked.

I don’t know anyone who likes them now because we found out that when you shut down the government, taxpayers actually pay more, not less. It might seem like if you shut down the government, that is good for taxpayers, but it isn’t, is project it. They foot the bill for the backpay of Federal workers for the days they weren’t allowed to go to work, and they pay for other things, too, that they wouldn’t have to pay for if Congress didn’t shut down the Government. Delayed projects, late payment fees, lost productivity, deferred maintenance—it all adds up. Shutdowns also disrupt government services, of course.

By the way, it is not just the poor government programs and services at the time—that continues. So even now, 9 months since the last government shutdown, you have the Agencies and Departments saying: Well, we would like to give you your tax return or we would like to be able to open up, as I found out last week, process your 501(c)(3)—which is a charity return to give you a nonprofit status, you get contributions that are deductible—but because of the shutdown, we are still backed up. They are delayed and late. That hurts everybody.

Federal contractors, of course, are hurt. A lot of those are our constituents, private sector individuals. Federal contractors, of course, get hurt, especially those who are considered essential. They have to go to work even though they are not getting paid. A lot of people, whether it is TSA personnel at the airports or our Border Patrol down at the border, are doing their best to protect us. Yet they are told they can’t get paid, so they can’t make their car payment, their mortgage payment, or their rent. It puts them in a tough situation. Again, it also hurts taxpayers and families and communities all across the country.

No shutdown was more frustrating than the one that was in late December. The American people were hurt, especially those who were working. Families were hurt. Again, even after the government opened and backpay was sent to the furloughed workers, a lot of that damage had already been done.

What we have learned is, it wasn’t just Federal workers and their families who felt the effects of the shutdown. The economy as a whole suffered too. The Congressional Budget Office has done some estimates of this. After the shutdown, they estimated it had reduced economic growth by a combined $11 billion for the fourth quarter of 2018 and first quarter of 2019. Only that, but CBO—the Congressional Budget Office, a nonpartisan group that looks at these issues—later projected that the rate of economic growth would have been 0.4 percent higher in the first quarter of 2019 than it was if not for the government shutdown. That sounds like a small number, 0.4 percent, but that is a big deal. That means economic growth in the first quarter of this year would have been 3.5 percent, not 3.1 percent. That is a big deal. That is billions of dollars in lost growth, not just because people weren’t working who should have been working but because there was lost productivity in our economy and billions of dollars lost because we couldn’t figure out how to keep the lights on here in Washington, DC.

All of this is negative, not just of the loss of purchasing power for Federal employees but also a serious ripple effect to Federal contractors, small businesses, and others who serve the Federal Government.

Shutdowns have another effect. Each time our government fails to fund itself, the public’s faith in our institutions, including, of course, in this body, the Senate, the House, the Presidency, falls even further, not just here but around the world. It just seems crazier that the government can’t stay open. People can’t get that, and I understand why they don’t get it.

Now, with the threat of another government shutdown looming just a few weeks away, let’s not make the mistakes of the past. The reason our Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations looked at this issue over the past 9 months was to learn the lessons and to get the actual numbers to determine what the real impact was of the shutdown.

This week, the Permanent Subcommittee, of which I chair, released a bipartisan report signed by me and the ranking member, Tom Carper, the result of which is what we are reporting today. We learned that the total cost of the three government shutdowns that have occurred in the last 5 years alone have cost the country a total of 53 days of partial or full government closure. During those three periods of shutdown, the pricetag to the American taxpayer was $4 billion. So the three government shutdowns that have happened in the last 5 years, taxpayers had to pay $4 billion—three shutdowns, $4 billion.

We also learned that a lot of that number comes from the loss of productivity. Furloughed Federal workers who were prohibited from going to work during that shutdown were owed $3.7 billion in backpay, which they got even though they weren't working because they couldn't work. Compounding that was at least another $338 million in other costs, including extra costs for employees paying interest; late fees on interest payments, and other costs.

On top of everything else, the workers who weren't able to come in to work represented a combined lost productivity of almost $57.000 years of productivity. Think about that—almost 57,000 years of productivity loss. Again, this is from folks who are Federal employees who weren't allowed to work because the government was shut down and got paid nothing.

These figures, the $4 billion in costs to the taxpayers and the 56,938 years in lost productivity, are relatively low numbers. It is actually higher than that. Do you know why? It is because although we got figures from 26 different Agencies and Departments—and over the 9 months we did this research, we sent this questionnaire around to all the Agencies and Departments—a bunch of them, comprising less than half but close to half of the workforce, refused to respond to us. Why? Because they said they didn't know how many of their workers were furloughed. They didn't know how many of their workers were essential employees. They didn't know what the lost productivity was. That is equally disturbing. That included the Department of Defense, the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Justice, the Commerce Department, and the EPA. They wouldn't give us enough information about employee furloughs and backpay because they said they just didn't have the information. The cost is even higher than indicated here. We don't know much higher, but we know it is at least this high.

We sent sending letters to the Agencies that were unable to provide the complete financial information related to employee furloughs and backpay to find out why and to ask them how they plan to address those issues going forward. Over the 9 months we did this research, our Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations is not done with its work because, in the process, we uncovered another problem, which is Agencies not even knowing the basic information about their workforce and what happens during the shutdown.

Our report also documents examples of how the shutdown negatively affected the government's ability to conduct important operations on a wide range of issues. I encourage people to take a look at the report. While we shut down the government over fighting about border security—remember, that was the issue at the time, whether we are going to have a wall or not and what kind of funds were going to go to border security—the Department of Homeland Security had to delay important facility maintenance, which had a serious impact on law enforcement officer operations and safety, including at the border. The lack of these critical maintenance and repair services actually made it more risky, even endangered the lives of some law enforcement officers, and it made the job harder. The Department of Homeland Security didn't want to work.

The shutdown certainly didn't work in that regard. Meanwhile, the Department of Justice was forced to cancel about 60,000 immigration hearings for nondetained aliens during the 35 days of the shutdown. During the 35 days, you couldn't have immigration hearings. There were 60,000 immigration hearings canceled. We already had a big backlog in these hearings, as some have said, and it got to the point that often it takes a couple of years to have your case heard by an immigration judge. Now it is even worse. Again, we still haven't resolved that issue. That is a problem that is compounded so that today you have so many of these hearings that are still outstanding.

A lot of my constituents back in Ohio were affected too. Let me give you an example. We have a poor neighborhood in Cleveland, OH. A guy wanted to start a deli there, which was a great idea. It is kind of a food desert there. This deli was ready to go, ready to be put into operation, but they couldn't get the approval by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to use the machines to accept the SNAP benefits—the food stamp benefits—so they had a really hard time launching. They couldn't make much money because a lot of people in the area were SNAP recipients. The USDA couldn't certify the machines to work because of the shutdown. That one was really frustrating for me.

At the Piketon, OH, uranium enrichment plant, a lot of employees were unsure if their healthcare premiums would be paid. It is a large potentially being exposed to levels of radiation that could be dangerous to them.

At a vineyard in Lorain, OH—Lorain County is a place where there is more wine being grown. It is exciting—it's where we submitted six label approval requests to the Alcohol and Tobacco and Tax and Trade Bureau. The Alcohol and Tobacco and Tax and Trade Bureau has to approve these labels. The owners of the vineyard were left in limbo throughout the entire shutdown as they waited for approval. They lost sales because in that business, it is all about the new thing. You want to have your new label out there, your new product. Business is not flourishing to me too. These are small business owners—again, entrepreneurs who are taking a chance, trying something exciting that has been a growth to business in our State, but they couldn't get approval.

The National Transportation Safety Board stopped an investigation of a plane crash in Wayne County, OH, that took the lives of two individuals in January because of the government shutdown. It doesn't just affect the border or TSA or others I have talked about; it affects a lot of our constituents.

Ohiolines applying for Customs and Border Protection Trusted Traveler Programs had their applications suspended during the shutdown and then facing long delays in getting the applications approved once the government reopened because of the backlog.

Home loans across the State were unable to get processed because of the backlogs at the IRS, where employees were still working overtime and weekends to catch up on work as caseloads doubled. Even last week, I talked about this nonprofit that couldn't get its 501(c)(3) status because of the backlog, the IRS said, even though it happened 9 months ago.

There are only a few examples here I have been able to give you. Again, I would encourage you to look at the report. Go onto our website for the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations and take a look at it. There are so many issues and vulnerabilities that happen in all of our States. It is clear we need to find a way to prevent this from happening again.

Part of the problem we face here is that this constant threat of shutdowns has become kind of the norm. People are already talking about it 12 days from now. Are we going to shut down or not? It has kind of a chilling effect on our economy just to talk about it.

For the past two decades, the government has routinely operated on temporary funding because we don't get these appropriations bills, which comprise all the Agencies and Departments. Last year, we did a pretty good job of getting close to the 12. You have to go back to 1997 to find a year when we completed all 12 of the spending bills. If we don't complete a spending bill and have it signed off by the House and the Senate and signed into law by the President, we do these temporary spending bills. They are called continuations. You just kind of continue the spending from the previous year. They are always short term.
So there is discussion right now of, in 12 days, having a continuing resolution. That is a lot better than a shutdown. It is not what we should be doing, because at the end of that CR, we will have another impasse, likely, and we will be back in the same situation and have another threat of a shutdown. It is much better to pass the actual appropriations bills.

Since 1997, we have had a total of 117 continuing resolutions to fund the government. It used to be very rare. Now it is common; it is the norm. So moving forward, I hope one thing we can all agree on is that we should do the appropriations process, do the individual bills, and have the debate. We are going to have differences, and that is fine. At the end of the day, we have a vote on the floor.

Today, we tried to go to the so-called minibus, a group of four different appropriations bills. It shouldn’t be that hard. We should be able to get these things done. I hope we can agree that no matter what, we should not have government shutdowns.

One recommendation our report makes—again, this is a bipartisan report coming out of our subcommittee—our report says that the Congress should work to introduce automatic continuing resolution to permanently prevent the Federal Government from shutting down, so forever not to have shutdowns by just saying: If you don’t get your spending bills done, you will simply have a continuing resolution that is automatic.

During the shutdown in January, I once again introduced our legislation called the End Government Shutdowns Act. It is legislation that now has 33 cosponsors here in the Senate. That is about a third of the Senate. It is legislation that has mostly Republicans—almost two-thirds are Republicans. In the past, it has been bipartisan. This year, it has not been. I hope it will be. I hope we will introduce this legislation every Congress since 2010.

My hope is that we will never have to publish this kind of a report again that talks about how many days we had a shutdown, what the cost was to taxpayers—$4 billion in this case—over the last 5 years alone, and the 57,000 hours of lost work productivity. We shouldn’t have to have these kinds of reports because we shouldn’t have shutdowns. We do need to put legislation on the floor and have a vote on it to be able to stop it.

Our legislation is pretty simple. It says that you continue the spending from the previous year if you can’t come to an agreement, and then after 120 days, you reduce the spending by 1 percent across the board. Why? To give the Appropriations Committees—the people who write these spending bills—the incentive to get to work, because none of them, Republican or Democrat, like across-the-board 1 percent spending cuts. They would rather make per diem decisions as to where the funding goes, and they don’t want the funding to be reduced. Then, every 90 days, it reduces it another 1 percent. Again, it is to give them the incentive to get their work done.

There is other legislation out there, one of which passed the HSGAC Committee—the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee—about a month and a half ago. It had some other elements to it—that during a shutdown, we would be restrained from doing certain things on the floor. The government couldn’t travel, including the executive branch. I think these are odd and whistles that were put on it are not great policy, but I think it is so important that we end government shutdowns, we have to figure out a way to come together as Republicans and Democrats to get this done.

I think we are at the point now where, if Democrats won’t support the 1-percent cut, which is what they are saying despite supporting it previously—some of them—and the House sets a bipartisian bill, then let’s look at just an auto CR, just automatically avoiding the shutdown and continuing the spending from the previous year.

The point is, we need to figure out a way to keep the lights on and not have these periodic continuing resolutions. We need to stop putting our taxpayers in a bad situation where you do a shutdown at enormous cost to them. We need to put our Federal employees in a better position, where they are not being furloughed and they are not being told: You have to go to work, or we are not going to pay you. That is not fair either.

So let’s pass legislation to provide for a continuation of government spending, and let’s do all we can to try to get our spending bills done to avoid getting in that situation. I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will not allow us to fall back into this 12 days from now, and I hope instead to work to push our efforts to push the spending bills on time into the future and immediately look at legislation that says: Let’s end government shutdowns forever to avoid this problem going forward.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

HEALTHCARE

Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, I rise this evening to talk about healthcare. I will not take up a lot of time, but I do want to highlight a report that was just issued last week. The report I am holding is from the Census Bureau. The report is entitled “Health Insurance Coverage in the United States: 2018,” by the U.S. Census Bureau, dated September of 2019.

On page 2, this fairly lengthy report, which goes on for about 29 or 30 pages, to the general population, shows the number of uninsured people in healthcare coverage of uninsured numbers—those without insurance in 2017 versus 2018. This is what it says on page 2 of the report under “Highlights”:

In 2018, 8.5 percent of people, or 27.5 million, did not have health insurance at any point during the year. The uninsured rate and number of uninsured increased from 2017 (7.9 percent or 25.6 million).

And then it refers to a figure and a table.

Basically, what is outlined is a drop in the number of Americans covered. Looking at it another way, there was an increase in the number of uninsured from 25.6 million Americans to 27.5 million Americans—a difference of 1.9 million. Just for general reference, I will round that off to say that roughly 2 million people who had insurance in 2017 were uninsured in 2018. That is deeply troubling because the number of uninsured is up, not just generally from 2017 to 2018 but more broadly. It is a change in the trend lines where we have been for most of the last decade.

I think it is pretty clear that the Trump administration’s sabotage of health insurance is, indeed, working. It is reversing coverage gains that were made under the Affordable Care Act in the years after enactment and implementation of the Affordable Care Act. We are told, as well, that the number of uninsured children is up, so more children were without insurance from 2017 to 2018.

Here is what one observer, whose name is Phil Galewitz, from the Kaiser Health News said: “For the first time in a decade, the number of Americans without health insurance has risen—by about 2 million people in 2018—according to the annual Census Bureau report released Tuesday.”

That was Tuesday of last week. He goes on to cite the numbers that I just cited.

Here is another comment from Katie Keith from Health Affairs:

Coverage losses are expected to continue in 2019. This is due to a number of factors, including repeal of the individual mandate penalty, the expanded availability of non-ACA plans, and the final “public charge” rule.

She goes on from there.

These are people who spend their lives on the issue of healthcare.

A third commentator, Joan Alker, from Georgetown University Center for Children and Families said: “As a result, 4.3 million kids were uninsured in 2018—a statistically significant increase of 425,000.”

Another commentator who follows healthcare, Matt Broaddus, from the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said:

“(Today’s Census data provide the clearest evidence yet that ‘Trump Administration efforts to weaken health coverage under the...”

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 18, 2019
ACA are taking a toll. They include canceling most federal outreach efforts for the open enrollment period for 2018 marketplace coverage, supporting new state policies that make it harder for people to enroll or stay enrolled in Medicaid, issuing rules to expand short-term and association health plans . . . and creating public confusion about the ACA’s future by refusing to defend its constitutionality in a lawsuit by Republican state officials.

Then I turn to the last reference by groups that follow this information. I will call this chart. This is a chart by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. This chart depicts where we have been over the decade and where we could be at the end of the decade on healthcare. This is a reference to the uninsured rate for nonelderly Americans. That number was over 17 percent in 2009. So 17.2 percent of Americans were uninsured at that time. The chart says it then fell each year, especially after the Affordable Care Act’s major coverage provisions took effect in 2014. You see it still going in 2009, and then you see the big drop. Of course, that big drop of uninsured is good news. When that chart depicts the number going down, that is obviously good news.

Then you see the Trump administration sabotage has begun eroding this progress. You see it flattening out. Now, instead of a continual diminution or decline in the uninsured number, you see kind of a flattening out of that. Then you factor in the census report, which documents at least for 1 year an increase in the number of uninsured. Then the last part of the chart says: “If the administration gets the courts to strike down the ACA, the uninsured rate would almost double.”

It goes all the way up to 18.7 in 2019. Of course, the last part of the chart is a projection. The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities is asserting that if a lawsuit is successful in the Fifth Circuit court, which we know now was successful at the district court level and is now on appeal—if they are successful, this think tank, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, says that in 2019, the number of uninsured could go up to 18.7 percent, surpassing where we were in 2009, when we started to pass and then implement the Affordable Care Act, reducing substantially the number of people who were uninsured.

If you look at it this way, roughly over 6 years, the uninsured number went from about 47 million Americans down to about 27 million Americans. Twenty million-plus people gained insurance coverage in about 6 years—not even a decade.

The concern I have is that efforts undertaken by the administration, unfortunately, are seen as successful, according to the Census Bureau numbers, because the number of uninsured is going up at a time we want the number to go down. When you add in the lawsuit, which, in my judgment, is more likely to succeed than not—I don’t want it to succeed; I want it to fail because I think it is an insult to declare the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act unconstitutional, therefore destroying protections for more than 100 million Americans and ripping away coverage from so many Americans that the number of uninsured would skyrocket. Why would we ever go back to the days when the number of uninsured was that high and potentially growing? Why would we ever take any step—whether there is a lawsuit or whether it is sabotage or whatever—to drive up the number of uninsured?

Let me conclude with a couple of headlines. The front page of the New York Times, dated September 11, 2019 reads: “Fewer Insured Amid Administration’s Attacks On Health Act.” If you go to the inside of the paper, on page A15 there is a longer headline that says: “Fewer Are Insured Amid Administration’s Attacks On Health Act.” The Wall Street Journal—a newspaper, when I last checked, that was not necessarily supportive of the Affordable Care Act, editorially—dated September 11, page 83, reads: “Insured Rate Is First Drop in a Decade.” That means the number of uninsured is getting larger.

I would say in conclusion that we need to sound the alarm about the threat to healthcare, sound the alarm about the threat to a growing number of uninsured Americans. This is not even factoring in the lawsuit, which, as the chart depicts, would make the uninsured number skyrocket. It wouldn’t go up by 1.9 million or a percentage point or two. It would go up exponentially larger.

I hope that Members of this body in both parties not only would be concerned about these trends and concerned about what would happen if the lawsuit were successful but also would take action to prevent this dark result from playing out for the American people because the number of uninsured would explode instead of continuing to go down. The number of uninsured was that high and potentially growing.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BROWN. Thank you, Senator Casey, for speaking out on such an important issue. He and I talked yesterday about the number of people who now have insurance because of the Affordable Care Act. It is over a million; in my State it is over 900,000 because of the Affordable Care Act, because of Medicaid expansion, for a number of other things.

Seniors have more. Seniors are getting more preventive care, and the cost of drugs is less in spite of the fact that this institution and the President do nothing to keep the prices of drugs down. We know the White House looks like a retreat for drug company executives, so this body has not done nearly what it should.

The Affordable Care Act is so important. I appreciate Senator Casey always standing up for kids and standing up for Medicaid and standing up for the Affordable Care Act and the impact it has made on our States. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S. 1790

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, for the information of Senators, the cloture vote on the compound motion to go to conference on S. 1790 will occur at this time. I ask unanimous consent that if the compound motion is agreed to, it be in order for the following motions to instruct, which are at the desk—Van Hollen, Cotton, Jones, Schatz, Peters, McSally, McConnell or designee—to be considered at a time to be determined by the majority leader in consultation with the Democratic leader, but prior to September 26, in the form of Senate resolutions taken up and considered on the same day with no amendments in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The senior assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to disagree in the House amendment, agree to the request from the House for a conference and authorize the Chair to appoint conferees in relation to S. 1790, a bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2020 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such fiscal year, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By unanimous consent, the mandatory quorum call has been waived.

The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the compound motion to go to conference and appoint conferees on S. 1790, an original bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2020 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such

CONFIRMATION OF JOHN RAKOLTA

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, I wish to express my reservations about the nomination of John Rakolta, Jr., to be Ambassador to the United Arab Emirates. Historically, the United States has sent career foreign service officers to serve as ambassadors to the United Arab Emirates, men and women well-versed in the complexities and challenges facing the region. Mr. Rakolta would be the first political nominee to serve as Ambassador to this critical post. The U.S. mission in the United Arab Emirates has benefitted from experienced, trained diplomats who can adroitly navigate our important security partnership while also addressing some policy disagreements, particularly regarding involvement in conflicts throughout the Middle East.

In nominating Mr. Rakolta, this administration is putting a political nominee with no diplomatic experience at the helm of one of our critical Middle East posts. While Mr. Rakolta possesses extensive business experience, he lacks knowledge of the arms sales process, security commitments, and complex diplomacy that we should demand of our emissaries to the United Arab Emirates. This is a risky venture that could jeopardize our effectiveness in the region. It also is part of a concerning trend that has reduced the number of career ambassadors serving abroad. The historical balance between political and career nominees is becoming further skewed toward political ambassadors.

Mr. Rakolta’s nomination is also indicative of the lack of due diligence and forthrightness demonstrated by a number of this administration’s nominees. It took months for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to obtain an accurate and complete picture of the extent of Mr. Rakolta’s business holdings, litigation history, and the role he played at a questionable nonprofit, ostensibly related to economic development.

Mr. Rakolta initially failed to include key details in the paperwork he submitted to the committee. He did not disclose dozens of companies that he had owned or managed, including many with an international presence, and omitted dozens of foreign lawsuits, among other details. More concerning, however, he did not disclose that he had served on the board of a nonprofit that had been the subject of intense public scrutiny, including questions about payments the board approved for its executive director. These issues and omissions not only slowed down Mr. Rakolta’s nomination, but raised concerns about Mr. Rakolta’s candor and forthrightness with the committee.

The committee relies on nominees to be transparent and forthcoming about relevant information to ensure that there are not actual or potential conflicts of interest or issues that call into question a nominee’s fitness for public service. When these details are obscure, omitted, or hard to obtain, it further erodes the confidence that a nominee is well-qualified and committed to serve in a given position. Mr. Rakolta’s failure to provide accurate details to the committee did not just impede the confirmation process, but also displaying a lack of transparency.

Further, the details that the committee did obtain raise concerns about the type of leadership that he would bring to a critical U.S. embassy. Therefore, I opposed his nomination.

EMERY COUNTY PUBLIC LAND MANAGEMENT ACT

Mr. ROMNEY. Mr. President, I rise today regarding the Emery County Public Land Management Act, that was included in S. 47, the John D. Dingell, Jr. Conservation, Management, and Recreation Act. This became Public Law 116-9 on March 12th, 2019.

Throughout 2018 and early 2019, Senator Hatch, Congressman CURTIS, and I engaged with the Emery County Commissioners and Emery County Public Lands Council on this important piece of legislation. After Senator Hatch’s retirement, I was honored to help carry the ball across the finish line.

This law is the result of over 23 years of deliberation, and I find it important to have some areas of congressional intent to maintain the integrity of the process. While congressional intent should be evident in the legislative text and corresponding map, the historical context of how we arrived at some of these decisions may be of benefit to the Department of the Interior and future members of the Utah delegation, and those in Utah. The residents of Emery County, the Utah delegation, and I look forward to the implementation of this new law.

Fundamental to this process was the effort to avoid any action that would end a current ongoing use. For example, it was important to not close a road, trail, airmirst, or prohibit other existing use in the legislative text or corresponding map with a wilderness designation. Further, to avoid applying more restrictive designations, such as wilderness, to areas it would limit ongoing activity, such as grazing or recreation. Designation boundaries were drawn along geographic and physical features or just outside cherry-stemmed roads to ensure management made sense for the area.

Any designation boundary that does not follow this approach, particularly any designation that puts at risk an existing use due to a poorly drawn boundary, was a clerical error and should be resolved under the authority clearly provided in Sec. 1221. Given the scale of this bill and legislative map, this authority is a vital tool to resolve such errors.

I would also highlight the clear intent within Sec. 1232, section (e), which clearly states that non-wilderness activities or uses that can be seen or heard from areas within wilderness are to be left uninterrupted by this legislation. The clear intention of the bill was to avoid any type of a buffer zone management plan.

On the topic of roads, stakeholders worked with BLM to ensure all roads in the 2008 Resource Management Plan were “cherry-stemmed,” meaning they were not included in a wilderness designation. Our intent was to maintain these roads and for those designated as “open” to stay open. These cherry-stems are of various sizes and were intended to ensure an adequate corridor exists to facilitate necessary maintenance. In the Recreation Area, Sec. 1222 includes language to ensure that necessary to existing roads may continue and allow rerouting of roads or trails to protect the resources of the Recreation Area.

The driving force for this compromise bill was the desire for countywide land use certainty and thus prevent the designation of a national monument under the authority granted to the President under the Antiquities Act. As so many know, in my home State of Utah national monument designations under the Antiquities Act have been the source of extreme controversy and deep division in our communities. In my own view, land management is most effective when it is driven by local voices and well-reasoned planning. Promises of via Presidental proclamation are often politically motivated, lead to poor management of the lands they intend to protect, and erode trust between the Federal Government and local residents. With the passage of the Emery County legislation, the need for a national monument is obsolete because a clear plan has been laid out for the long-term management of the San Rafael Swell. To be clear, this is a view that was shared by the many parties, including conservationists, recreationists, and others that were intimately involved in the forging of this compromise legislation. Any advocacy of a future national monument designation under the Antiquities Act or other large-scale land use designation in Emery County would be a violation of the good-faith agreement that was shared among those that negotiated during this bill’s process. I believe this bill is a victory for all stakeholders, and I look forward to watching this quarter-century journey for Emery County finally come to fruition.

NATIONAL POW/MIA RECOGNITION DAY

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I call attention to National POW/MIA Recognition Day. One of the statements, such as this, each year to try to help keep national focus on the return of American servicemembers and help their families to know that our country stands with them as work continues to find the answers they more than deserve.

As we observe this National POW/MIA Day on September 20, 2019, a special tribute must be paid to the families and friends of missing servicemembers. Too often, their quiet, ceaseless, and courageous service to our Nation is overlooked. Many have carried on through years and even decades of sorrow and uncertainty. Their questions must be replaced with answers. Their loss must be softened, if possible, by resolution.

Those working hard through challenging conditions to get needed answers and bring all American servicemembers home also deserve appreciation and steady encouragement. Thank you to those who work for and assist the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency and related efforts. So far this month, the agency has reported accounting for more than 20 missing servicemembers, many of whom were lost in the attack on Pearl Harbor and the Korean war. Piecing together the circumstances, whereabouts and lives of those lost cannot be easy, but bringing them home is critical to honoring their service. To help with this effort, I have continually fought for the Bring Our Heroes Home Act that is meant to address obstacles preventing families and caseworkers from accessing the records needed for recovery efforts by prioritizing and facilitating the declassification of records related to missing servicemembers.

Thank you to the members of the POW*MIA Awareness Rally Corp. of Pocatello, ID, and other groups that hold rallies and other events to keep a spotlight on the immense service of our Nation’s veterans and the need for an ongoing focus on bringing them all home. Bringing all of the 82,000 Americans the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency remains missing home will certainly not fill the losses felt in far too many American families, but those who have served our Nation deserve no less than to rest at home, and we cannot rest until they do.

200TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF THE CONGDON STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

Mr. REED. Mr. President, today I join with my colleague Senator Whitehouse, the city of Providence, and the State of Rhode Island in celebrating the 200th anniversary of the founding of the Congdon Street Baptist Church, Rhode Island’s oldest Black congregation. For generations, it has been a spiritual home for the community and an unwavering beacon for religious and civil liberties in Rhode Island. The church’s founding members left the First Baptist Church, where they were forced to attend segregated services, and established their own house of worship in 1819. Initially named the African American Union Meeting House, the church aimed to provide a place of worship and education for Black Americans. This mission positioned the congregation as a focal point of the African-American community and paved the way for its continuing advocacy for meaningful social change.

As one of the earliest African-American churches in the State and the first schoolhouse for African-American children in Providence, the African Union Meeting House opened its doors to a variety of different denominations. Beyond these religious and educational roles, the church offered a meeting place for African Americans to discuss civil rights and other vital issues and hosted literary clubs, youth groups, and numerous other social organizations.

Unfortunately, the original church structure, which was renamed the Meeting House Baptist Church in 1830, was torn down in the 1860s without the congregation’s approval amid tensions with its White neighbors. However, the congregation persevered, and a new structure was built on a nearby plot of land in 1875.

The new church was renamed the Congdon Street Baptist Church and to this day continues to be a pillar of support and advocacy for Rhode Island’s African-American community. Its congregations supported Black Brown University students during their 1968 walkout protesting the university’s lack of recruitment of and support for students of color. In a testament to Congdon Street Baptist Church’s importance to Black Rhode Islanders, the students chose to march from the university to the church and remained there until their demands for change were met. During the mid-20th century, the church also pressured the state to investigate and end discrimination in employment and marched with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. More recently, the church has, among its numerous activities, increased its outreach to college students, embarked on mission trips to help disadvantaged communities around the world, and tutored local children in reading, math, and writing.

Today, after 200 years of worship and public service, Congdon Street Baptist Church continues to uplift our state while adhering to its vision of being a “radically authentic community.” I join community members in Providence and Rhode Islanders across the state in congratulating Pastor Justin R. Lester and the entire Congdon Street Baptist Church congregation on this significant milestone.

Mr. WHITEHOUSE. Mr. President, today I wish to celebrate a milestone in the lives of everyone in the community. Filling that mission did not come without adversity. The original church was demolished in the 1860s at the behest of White neighbors. Unbowed, the congregation rebuilt. The new church, completed in 1875, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Rhode Island was founded on the principles of freedom and tolerance. I am proud to have Congdon Street Baptist Church as a cornerstone of that tradition, and I wish the congregation centuries of peaceful worship to come.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

REMEMBERING WALTER TURNBOW

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the life of Walter Turnbow, who passed away on September 9 at the age of 95. Walter was a longtime leader in northwest Arkansas and truly represented what it meant to put the needs of others above one's own.

Walter Turnbow served on the Springdale Industrial Commission, Springdale Public Facilities board, Baxter Water District board, and the Springdale Water and Sewer Commission. In addition to these positions, he also served on the Springdale School Board, Northwest Arkansas Community Care Foundation, and the Arkansas State Board of Education.

He dedicated his life to public service and the education system in Springdale. While serving on the water and sewer commission, he oversaw the construction of what was, at that time, the state’s largest water tank. This proved to be a forward-thinking decision since the city’s continued growth would require greater infrastructure investment. Because of Walter’s leadership, Springdale was prepared for the changes and completed the project without having to borrow money.

Walter saw education as the gateway to a better future for his community. In 2006, the Springdale School District honored his contributions to the community and the school board by naming an elementary school after him. He has often visited the school to meet with students and read to them. In addition to the elementary school, other sites and meeting spaces in the Springdale community have also been named in his honor, a testament to his very real impact and incredible legacy.

As one of Springdale’s most well-known public servants, he touched the lives of everyone in the community. From overseeing economic development to ensuring a quality education system, he left a mark on the community of Springdale that no one will soon forget. I extend my condolences to his loved ones and the entire Springdale community and pray that future leaders will follow his remarkable example.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 316—SUPPORTING THE CLEAN VEHICLE EMISSIONS STANDARDS OF THE UNITED STATES AND DEFENDING THE AUTHORITY OF STATES UNDER THE CLEAN AIR ACT TO PROTECT THE PEOPLE OF THOSE STATES FROM HARMFUL AIR POLLUTION

Ms. Harris (for herself, Ms. Feinstein, Mr. Markey, Mr. Blumenthal, Ms. Cortez Masto, Ms. Cantwell, Mr. Merkley, Mr. Booker, Mr. Schatz, Ms. Hassan, Mr. Carper, Mr. Bennet, Mr. Van Hollen, Mr. Coons, Ms. Warren, Ms. Gillibrand, Ms. Hirono, Ms. Baldwin, Mr. Sanders, Mr. Reed, Ms. Smith, Ms. Klobuchar, Mr. Cardin, Mr. Wyden, Mr. Kaine, Mr. Whitehouse, Mr. Lankford, Mr. Udall, Mr. Casey, Mr. Menendez, Mrs. Murray, Ms. Duckworth, and Mr. Durbin) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Environment and Public Works:

WHEREAS Congress enacted the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.), which requires the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (referred to in this preamble as the “EPA”) to set standards controlling air pollutant emissions from motor vehicles to prevent the endangerment of public health and welfare;

WHEREAS motor vehicle pollution contributes to serious health problems faced by the people of the United States, including—
(1) asthma attacks; (2) heart attacks; (3) lung cancer; and (4) premature death.

Whereas, through climate change, greenhouse gas (referred to in this preamble as “GHG”) emissions from motor vehicles contribute to climate change burdens, including—

(1) worsened air pollution; (2) extreme heat; (3) increased spread of infectious diseases; and (4) exacerbated natural disasters.

Whereas all people of the United States are vulnerable to the health impacts of GHGs, but many environmental and communities are at a greater risk of experiencing these impacts, including—

(1) children; (2) elderly; (3) individuals with lung and heart disease; (4) low-income communities; and (5) communities of color.

Whereas recent reports from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change and the United States Global Change Research Program affirm the need to mitigate climate change and the effects of climate change;

Whereas section 209 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7543) preserves the authority of the State of California to adopt, in lieu of the Federal requirements, the standards set by the State of California, which, in the aggregate, are at least as protective of public health and welfare as applicable Federal vehicle emissions standards;

Whereas section 177 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7570) allows States other than California to adopt, in lieu of the Federal requirements, standards set by the State of California, which, in the aggregate, are at least as protective of public health and welfare as applicable Federal vehicle emissions standards;

Whereas the EPA has authority under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) to regulate GHG emissions from vehicles;

Whereas the States of Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and Washington have exercised the authority to adopt, pursuant to the rights of those States preserved under section 177 of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7570), vehicle emissions standards that, in the aggregate, are at least as protective of public health and welfare as the otherwise applicable standards set by the Federal Government;

(1) aligns, as closely as possible, the Federal light-duty vehicle GHG emissions standards and fuel economy standards for vehicles of model year 2012 and each model year thereafter with the light-duty vehicle GHG emissions standards and fuel economy standards adopted by the State of California; and

(2) sets achievable standards for light-duty vehicle GHG emissions and fuel economy that decrease in stringency through model year 2025;

Whereas the EPA, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, and the California Air Resources Board have collaborated on an extensive analysis that clearly demonstrates that the Federal GHG emissions standards and the Federal fuel economy standards adopted in 2012 for model years 2017 through 2025—

(1) can be met with a wide range of technologies; and

(2) are expected to be met with advanced gasoline technologies; and

(3) will accommodate contemporary consumer purchasing trends;

Whereas in January 2013, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency issued a final determination to maintain the existing GHG emissions standards for vehicles of model year 2022 through 2025, based on the extensive technical record showing that those standards are appropriate and achievable;

(4) support more than 286,000 automobile manufacturing jobs across 1,200 facilities in the United States;

(5) keep automobile companies in the United States globally competitive as other countries adopt strict clean vehicle emissions standards; and

(5) protect consumers in the United States from dirtier and more costly technology.

Whereas transportation sector has surpassed the energy sector as the largest source of GHG emissions in the United States;

Whereas the light-duty vehicle GHG emissions and fuel economy standards of the United States—

(1) reduce the consumption of oil in the United States by 2,400,000 barrels per day;

(2) save consumers in the United States $130,000,000,000 at the gas pump by 2030; and

(3) reduce GHG emissions in the United States by 770,000,000 metric tons by 2030;

Whereas the light-duty vehicle GHG emissions and fuel economy standards of the United States protect low-income communities and communities of color from being disproportionately affected by public health and economic burdens; and

Whereas 77 percent of people in the United States—

(1) support maintaining strong clean vehicle emissions standards; and

(2) want automakers to continue to improve fuel economy for all types of vehicles: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the existing set of regulations, known as the “One National Program”, which consist of—

(A) reducing greenhouse gas (referred to in this resolving clause as “GHG”) emissions and oil usage;

(B) protecting national security; and

(C) protecting human health and welfare; and

(2) meet those goals, supports policies that—

(A) achieve maximum feasible reductions in oil use; (B) reduce GHG emissions from mobile sources; (C) recognize the rights and importance of States under cooperative federalism to choose to set and follow vehicle emissions standards under the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.) that are stronger than those set by the Federal Government; and

(3) ensure that the President, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency solicit input from State parties impacted by any changes to the existing GHG emissions standards for light-duty vehicles and the associated standards for corporate average fuel economy.

Whereas the light-duty vehicle GHG emissions and fuel economy standards adopted in 2012 are expected to be met with advanced gasoline technologies; and

With the recognition that—

(1) reduces the consumption of oil in the United States by 2,400,000 barrels per day;

(2) save consumers in the United States $130,000,000,000 at the gas pump by 2030; and

(3) reduce GHG emissions in the United States by 770,000,000 metric tons by 2030;

Whereas the light-duty vehicle GHG emissions and fuel economy standards of the United States protect low-income communities and communities of color from being disproportionately affected by public health and economic burdens; and

Whereas polycystic ovaries syndrome (referred to as “PCOS”) is a common health problem among women and girls involving a hormonal imbalance;

Whereas research has found genetic evidence of a causal link between depression and PCOS;

Whereas research has indicated PCOS shares a genetic architecture with metabolic traits, as evidenced by genetic correlations between PCOS and other cardiometabolic traits, including high blood pressure, type 2 diabetes, lipid levels, and coronary artery disease;
Whereas adolescents with PCOS are at markedly increased risk for type 2 diabetes, fatty liver disease, and heart disease;

Whereas PCOS negatively alters metabolic function independent of, but exacerbated by, an increased body mass index (BMI);

Whereas an estimated 50 percent of women with PCOS are undiagnosed, and many remain undiagnosed due to their experience fertility difficulties or develop type 2 diabetes or other cardiometabolic disorders;

Whereas the cause of PCOS is unknown, but researchers have found strong links to a genetic predisposition and significant insulin resistance, which affects up to 70 percent of women with PCOS; and

Whereas there is no known cure for PCOS:

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes polycystic ovary syndrome (in this resolution referred to as “PCOS”) as a serious disorder that impacts many aspects of health, including cardiometabolic, reproductive, and mental health, and quality of life;

(2) expresses support for the designation of September 2019 as “PCOS Awareness Month”;

(3) supports the goals and ideals of PCOS Awareness Month, which are—

(A) to increase awareness of, and education about, PCOS and its connection to comorbidities such as type 2 diabetes, endometrial cancer, cardiovascular disease, nonalcoholic fatty liver disease, and mental health disorders, among the general public, women, girls, and health care professionals;

(B) to improve diagnosis and treatment of PCOS;

(C) to disseminate information on diagnosis, treatment, and management of PCOS, including prevention of comorbidities such as type 2 diabetes, endometrial cancer, cardiovascular disease, nonalcoholic fatty liver disease, and mental health disorders; and

(D) to improve quality of life and outcomes for women and girls with PCOS;

(4) recognizes the need for further research, improved treatment and care options, and a cure for PCOS;

(5) acknowledges the struggles affecting all women and girls afflicted with PCOS in the United States;

(6) urges medical researchers and health care professionals to advance their understanding of PCOS to improve research, diagnosis, and treatment of PCOS for women and girls; and

(7) encourages States, territories, and localities to support the goals and ideals of PCOS Awareness Month.

SENATE RESOLUTION 318—TO SUPPORT THE GLOBAL FUND TO FIGHT AIDS, TUBERCULOSIS AND MALARIA, AND THE SIXTH REPLENISHMENT

Mr. RISCH (for himself, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. ISAKSON, Mr. COONS, Mr. RUBIO, and Mr. CARDIN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. Res. 318

Whereas the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria has been an effective partnership of governments, the private sector, civil society, and affected communities to galvanize political and financial efforts to improve the response to these epidemics since 2002;

Whereas, in 2017, the Global Fund contributed to extraordinary improvements in global health that would otherwise not have occurred, including a more than 50 percent reduction in the number of AIDS-related deaths since the peak in 2005, a 37 percent decline in tuberculosis (TB) deaths since 2000, and a 60 percent decline in the number of malaria deaths since 2000;

Whereas, since the Global Fund’s creation in 2002, more than 27,000,000 lives have been saved in the countries where it invests;

Whereas the Global Fund and its partners work to maintain a steadfast commitment to transparency and accountability and have received high marks in multilateral aid reviews and by independent watchdog groups;

Whereas a 2019 study published in the Annals of Global Health evidenced of associated improvements in government accountability, control of corruption, political freedoms, regulatory quality, and rule of law that are significant in countries where the Global Fund invests;

Whereas, despite progress in combating AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria, challenges such as drug and insecticide resistance, reaching marginalized and vulnerable populations, and complacency in the fight against infectious diseases threaten further progress;

Whereas United States leadership has been critical to the success of the Global Fund, both as its largest donor and through its oversight role on the Board of the Global Fund;

Whereas Global Fund programs and activities support and complement United States bilateral health programs, including the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, the President’s Malaria Initiative, and the United States Agency for International Development tuberculosis program;

Whereas the United States is limited by law from contributing more than 33 percent of the Global Fund budget, thereby encouraging other donors to significantly increase their contributions;

Whereas the Global Fund’s requirements for co-financing have spurred domestic investments, with recipient countries committing 41 percent more of their own funding to fight AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria for 2018-2020 compared to 2015-2017;

Whereas the Global Fund has called on donors to support its Sixth Replenishment by mobilizing a minimum of $14,000,000,000 in donor commitments for 2021-2023;

Whereas Canada, the European Union, Germany, India, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Japan, Portugal, Switzerland, and the United States have pledged to the call by significantly increasing their respective pledges for the Sixth Replenishment;

Whereas recipient countries also are expected to increase their co-financing by 46 percent, growing to $46,000,000,000 in 2021-2023; and

Whereas, with these resources secured, the Global Fund would reduce the number of deaths due to AIDS, TB, and malaria by nearly 50 percent, averting 234,000,000 infections or disease cases, and save an additional 16,000,000 lives; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) commends the work of the Global Fund and its partners for their contributions aimed at ending the epidemics of AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria;

(2) affirms the support of the United States for the goal of securing a minimum of $14,000,000,000 in donor commitments for the Sixth Global Fund Replenishment, to be held on October 10, 2019, in Lyon, France;

(3) urges donor countries to step up the fight and increase their pledges for the Sixth Global Fund Replenishment;

(4) urges Global Fund recipient countries to continue to make and meet ambitious co-financing contributions aimed at sustaining progress in ending the epidemics of AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria; and

(5) encourages United States bilateral aid programs to continue their collaboration with the Global Fund to maximize the life-saving impact of global health investments.

HON. JOHN B. LARSON
OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the important work of Chicken of the Sea International and its investment in Georgia’s 12th Congressional District.

Ten years ago, we received exciting news that our nation’s leading seafood provider was returning its tuna canning operations to the United States. Specifically, we learned it was opening its first domestic operations in Lyons, Georgia.

I had the opportunity to visit the Lyons facility and learn more about their operations and how they have expanded over the last decade. Chicken of the Sea has invested millions in state-of-the-art technology and helped to train our next generation of skilled workers through their apprenticeship program, creating more jobs and promoting economic opportunity throughout Toombs County.

I thank Chicken of the Sea for its continued investment in the community, and I congratulate the Lyons facility on a successful 10 years of serving quality seafood to Americans all across the country.

THE MODERN ASSOCIATION OF GRADUATES TAKES SHAPE AOG HISTORY PART III (1946-1955) SECTION A

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS
OF ILLINOIS

Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. SHIMKUS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise to include in the RECORD section A of the third installment of an article by Keith J. Hamel honoring the 150th Anniversary of the West Point Association of Graduates: "For the first 30 or so years of its existence (1869-1900), the Association of the Graduates was predominantly social in nature and was rebranded the WPAOG that West Point graduates know today. Back then, its mission was ‘... to cherish the memories of our Alma Mater. Graduates in the years immediately prior to the association’s founding were interested in the fraternity fellowship of its graduates;’ its activities consisted of an annual meeting and the publishing of an annual report (dominated by a ‘Necrology’ section of obituaries for those graduates who died the previous year); and its finances primarily relied on an estate gift from George Cullum, Class of 1856, who bequested $250,000 to build the Memorial Hall that bears his name and left $10,000 to fund the ‘current and necessary expenses’ of the nascent Association. In its second stage of existence (1901-1945), changes were made to the structure and operations to improve efficiency and effectiveness of AOG’s mission, governance, and operations signaled its desire to become more like a contemporary alumni association. Some of the initiatives from that era included ‘Alumni Day;’ featuring a wreath-laying ceremony at Thayer Statue that is still practiced nearly 100 years later; the ‘Stained Glass Windows’ project, a precursor to Class Giving, where classes purchased windows in the Cadet Chapel (with some classes also purchasing an entire floor); ‘Class Giving’ of the class that graduated 100 years earlier which had no living members; and the introduction of ASSEMBLY magazine, which replaced the monthly alumni publication established by that of the Naval Academy, should give us an additional, material, and much-needed source of revenue for the Association.”

There was, however, one rather larger sticking point to the AOG’s plan.

At this point in time, AOG’s Secretary and Treasurer (who was also a member of the Select Committee on Energy Independence and Global Warming) had an active duty officer on its staff, it was prohibited from soliciting advertisers for its publications.

To solve this dilemma, Danford and Chauncey Fenton, also from the Class of 1901, who were members of the AOG Board of Trustees, pushed for the formation of a separate corporation, that became the West Point Alumni Foundation (WPAF), which was to be operated entirely by persons not on active duty. According to Michael Krisman, WPAF’s last Executive Director, the purpose of WPAF was to increase revenues for the Association. ‘To acquire and disseminate information about the history and traditions of the military or naval schools; to receive, protect, and maintain funds and apply the income therefrom in furtherance of these purposes.’

WPAF was first established as a Maryland corporation, but on August 6, 1946, New York authorities granted its request to incorporate in the state as a foreign corporation—with a governing board of nine officers and directors, no membership other than its Board, a paid staff of civilians and retired military, and a headquarters in New York City (with a satellite office in Callum Hall). The first Register, with Danford as its editor, was published shortly thereafter. It contained short biographies and photos of 161 graduating cadets, listed 7,847 former cadets. It also contained well over 100 advertisements, everything from full-page spreads by Curtis-Wright Corporation and Coca-Cola to one-eighth-page, classified-type ads by Mall Portable Power Tools and The Loesch & Green Construction Company. What's more, in the "Acknowledgment of the Inaugural Register," the officers and directors of WPAF, "with grateful appreciation," all the advertisers who published in the Register, "wish to express the sentiments upon our subscribers." The 1946 Register also placed a half-page, in-house ad on page 338 that said, "The West Point Alumni Foundation, Inc., wishes to take this opportunity to express its sincere appreciation to the advertisers in this, the 1946 Register of Graduates of the United States Military Academy, for their part in making possible the production of this volume.

WPAF was evidently staking its fortunes, and those of AOG, on advertising, now and in the future. To the January 18, 1946 edition of ASSEMBLY, AOG expected that the advertising included in the Register, "amongst the hardest hit by the continually rising costs of paper, printing, labor and shipping threatened the solvency of the Association." Later, in the fall 1948 issue of ASSEMBLY briefly references the surveying costs. "At press time there was little information available except the fact that generally the alumni strongly favored the firm later recommended that such a fundraising appeal unconsciously have been suggesting something more? Major General Gar- rison Gar, Davidson 27, the 4th West Point Superintendent, thinks so and envisioned a future in which AOG could directly assist West Point financially. In a speech before West Point alumni on September 26, 1948, Davidson said, "There are quite a few facilities that are necessary at the Military Academy for which it is probable that appropriated funds will not be available in the foreseeable future. Earlier, he had asked the AOG Board of Trustees to hire a Kansas City survey firm to conduct a study of funds; and, financially in Fall 1958 issue of ASSEMBLY briefly references the surveying costs. TAX-EXEMPT DONATIONS

Help came from an unexpected source: the Internal Revenue Service. In a letter dated December 1, 1948, the Commissioner of the IRS granted tax-exempt status to the Association, confirming that gifts to AOG for operating expenses could now be treated from the income tax of the donor. Interest-

ly, it was WPAF's purpose statement, which AOG later adopted in modified form at its June 1949 annual meeting, that AOG could now look forward to income derived from the interest of the fund. During the formative stages of the Association, the military needs the Military Academy had that could not be met from appropriated or other sources. In addition, the alumni activities in the fields of education and history," stated an article in the Summer 1961 issue of ASSEMBLY. Nine months earlier, in the Fall 1960 issue, Westmoreland addressed the matter in his regular Super-

West Point Superintendent's Fund

Davidson's successor, Major General William C. Westmoreland '36, also saw opportunities for asking grants. As depicted by the U.S. Army Foundation Board, the last sentence of WPAF's mission statement read, "... to receive, provide, and maintain funds and apply the income therefrom in fur-ers of Change," written in 1992 by AOG's first President, remarked, "A subscriin the field of education. Accordingly, the belief was that such a fundraising effort would put AOG's relatively recent tax-exempt status in jeopardy.

Early publicity for the West Point Superintendent's Fund went to great lengths to establish that this new fund would be used for purposes different from those from AOG. "The Associate of Graduates is alumni-oriented and its fund-raising [sic] efforts are generally directed toward awards and other alumni activities in the fields of education and history," stated an article in the Summer 1961 issue of ASSEMBLY. Nine months earlier, in the Fall 1960 issue, Westmoreland addressed the matter in his regular Superintendent's letter, writing, "The Superintendent's Fund, on the other hand, provides a development fund which, through its limited and specific academic and extracurricular projects, will stimulate interest, guide donors into giving for useful purposes, provide an organized approach to such fundraising activities..." Coincidentally, just as the Superintendent's Fund was being established, AOG received the gift of $1 million from the will of Agnes Pierce, widow of Palmette Pierce, Class of 1891, who served as AOG Treasurer (1905-07), President (1931-34), and Trustee (1940). The announcement appeared in the Annual Report as the "Palmer E. Pierce Memorial Fund," the terms of the gift simply stated that "the Trustees of the Association, in order to perpetuate the memory of my late husband..." "With no restrictions on the gift, AOG invested the money in U.S. Treasury bills, earning $184,797 in interest in the first year, and eventually used it to build the semi-circular dining room extension of the West Point Club. In 1962, another graduate, Gilbert Hubbard, Class of 1890, left AOG in his will, which the Association also deposited in its Endowment Fund.

By the mid-1960s, both AOG and WPAF were beginning to lose momentum, and it did not do much good that the association had facilities for the Academy and for use by the Corps of Cadets," later defined by Major General James B. Lampert '36, West Point's 31st Superintendent, as "any worthwhile projects which have a direct bearing on cadet welfare." In a WPAF brochure outlining the goals of the Fund and addressing questions raised by graduates, Clay wrote the following: "Today, the alumni of other schools and colleges, including state-supported institutions, are able to support their schools and in doing so become more deeply interested than ever... Become a part of West Point's development and future..."

HON. KEVIN MCCARTHY OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. MCCARTHY. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of Curtis Creel, the General Manager of the Kern County Water Agency (KCWA), whose steady hand helped guide our community and agricultural producers through some of the worst years of drought that Kern County and California experienced in recent history.

Curtis was born in Lakeview, Oregon, but has spent most of his life in California. A graduate of California State University, Humboldt, in 1986, Curtis quickly found a position in California’s Department of Water Resources (DWR), and eventually rose to the position of Chief of the State Water Project (SWP) Operation and Planning Branch. In March of 2005, Curtis was hired as the Water Resources Manager for the Kern County Water Agency (KCWA). The KCWA contracts about 25% of the water on the SWP system, which supports some of the most fertile and productive agricultural lands in the United States.

Promoted to KCWA General Manager in 2016, Curtis recognized the strategic importance of planning for the long-term needs of our community. During negotiations on the California WaterFix, Curtis proposed provisions of the Water Infrastructure for Improvements to the Nation (WIIIN) Act of 2016, Curtis’ advice and counsel was invaluable. This bipartisan law provides increased flexibility to move water from northern California to the Central Valley and southern California to meet our communities’ needs, while protecting fish and the environment. He has also played a critical role in increasing water supply reliability for our region through his support of new surface water storage projects and existing reservoirs. In addition, Curtis has served on the Board of Directors of the State Water Contractors Association, including as president.

Most recently, Curtis played a major role in advocating for our community as various federal and state agencies work to update the regulations that govern water exports from the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta. His ability to draw on his more than 14 years of experience as a champion for the SWP at the KCWA, combined with his technical expertise from his time at DWR, has been crucial during this initiative. In California, they say that “whiskey is for drinking, and water is for fighting over.” I have always been impressed by Curtis’ steady hand, his soft-spoken nature, and his continual focus on results, even when things get heated. In his office, there is a quote from President Theodore Roosevelt prominently displayed that says, “Far and away the best prize that life has to offer is the chance to work hard at the work worth doing.” Curtis loved working in water management and it was critical work worth doing.

Although bittersweet to see Curtis leave, I know that Curtis is looking forward to spending more time with his wife, Traci, his son Michael, and his daughter Courtney and her husband Joshua. Curtis can rest assured that the planning and work he has done will continue to put the KCWA, farmers, and our community in the Central Valley of California in the best position possible. On behalf of the 23rd Congressional District of California, I want to thank Curtis for his dedication over the last decade and as he helped lead our community through crippling drought and fought for commonsense reforms to federal and state regulations to ensure our community received the life-sustaining water it needs to thrive.

RECOGNIZING THE RETIREMENT OF BOBBY AND RUTH WOOD
HON. BILLY LONG
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. LONG. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the retirement of Bobby and Ruth Wood from the Walnut Lawn Funeral Home. After 50 years of service to the residents of southwest Missouri, Bobby and Ruth Wood, owners of the Walnut Lawn Funeral Home in Springfield, Missouri, have decided to retire. The Wood’s established Walnut Lawn Funeral Home in 1989 and over the years have earned their trademark “tender moments-tender care.” The Wood’s have a long and respected history in the funeral industry. Bobby Wood started his career as a teenager, working in different roles at a local funeral home. Bobby then attended the Gupton-Jones Institute of Mortuary Science in Dallas, Texas, becoming a first-generation licensed funeral director and embalmer. In 1960, Bobby met his wife Ruth who is a registered nurse and a graduate of St. John’s School of Nursing. Bobby and Ruth live by their trademark “tender moments-tender care.” Along with being licensed funeral directors, both are preneed counselors and know how to tend to the needs of those in their community. They know how to give members of the community the care they need in order to make them feel comfortable in their most difficult moments. While the Wood’s are leaving their business in good hands with their daughter, there is no doubt that Bobby and Ruth will be missed.

Madam Speaker, it is clear that the Wood’s care for their community deeply and have put in their years serving the residents of southwest Missouri. I wish Bobby and Ruth a long and happy retirement. It is well deserved and well earned.

COMMEMORATION OF CONSTITUTION WEEK WITH THE CORPUS CHRISTI DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION
HON. MICHAEL CLOUD
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. CLOUD. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the 232nd anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution. Thanks to the tireless efforts of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR), like the DAR Corpus Christi Chapter I represent, we pause every year from September 17 to September 23 to celebrate Constitution Week. In 1785, James Wilson stated, “Without liberty, law loses its nature and its name, and becomes oppression. Without law, liberty also loses its nature and its name, and becomes licentiousness.” The Constitution enshrined the timeless yet precious principles of limited government and protection of God-given liberties. It not only established a nation, but it became the foundation of a self-governing, free people. The United States Constitution remains as a testament and beacon of hope to those that do not share our freedom. One hundred and sixteen congresses and forty-five presidents later—through many challenges, our Constitution has withstood the test of time. We must continue to guard these blessings earnestly and never take them for granted.

This is precisely the mission of the DAR Corpus Christi Chapter. Since its conception in 1927, the DAR Corpus Christi Chapter has promoted citizen education and the preservation of American history. They have worked to connect the past with the present by digitizing genealogical records and helping others identify their patriot ancestors for the betterment of education for our children. I know our community joins me in thanking DAR Corpus Christi Chapter, for their volunteer efforts to preserve American history, promote patriotism, and secure the values of our Constitution.

I ask my colleagues to join me, and the Corpus Christi Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter, in observing Constitution Week, and the God-given, blessings of liberty it established.

HON. JOHN KATKO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the 100th Anniversary of the League of Women Voters in Syracuse and New York.

HON. JOHN KATKO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, today I reintroduce the Aircraft Maintenance Outsourcing Disclosure Act. I wish to thank Congressmen LEE ZELDIN of Long Island, New York (R-NY) and GILBERT RAY CISNEROS, Jr. (D-CA) for their support as original cosponsors.

Our bipartisan legislation would require airlines to disclose the maintenance history for their aircraft fleets, specifically the location and date an aircraft underwent heavy maintenance. Airlines would be required to post this information online, distribute it with tickets, and communicate it to passengers upon request.

Airlines would also be required to report to a new Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) database that tracks the maintenance history of their aircraft fleets. This public database will also indicate whether maintenance was conducted in the United States or abroad; by FAA-certified mechanics or not; or by airline employees or third-party contractors.

Recent airline incidents raise serious concerns about the increasing trend of maintenance being outsourced, particularly to countries in Central America and Southeast Asia. Foreign outsourcing do not have to be FAA-certified, and are not subject to the drug and alcohol testing required in the United States for mechanics. Outsourcing has eliminated thousands of middle-class jobs in the United States and created significant safety concerns for passengers.

Aircraft passengers have the right to know if planes are serviced by qualified mechanics in the United States, or whether maintenance is outsourced to foreign countries with lower safety standards. Our bipartisan bill prioritizes transparency for passengers and supports the creation of new middle-class jobs in the United States.

Madam Speaker, I urge all Members to join us in cosponsoring the Aircraft Maintenance Outsourcing Disclosure Act.

HONORING THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS IN SYRACUSE AND NEW YORK

HON. JOHN KATKO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, I rise to honor the 100th Anniversary of the League of Women Voters in Syracuse and New York. We recognize and honor the individuals named below for receiving this distinguished award.
Women Voters in Syracuse and New York on September 19, 2019. For 100 years, the League of Women Voters has successfully engaged and educated millions of women, promoted female participation in government, and advocated for significant public policy change. Tracing its origins to the National American Woman Suffrage Association, the League of Women Voters in Syracuse and New York was created after New York State gave women the right to vote in 1917. Since its founding, the League has operated as a non-partisan organization, dedicated to educating and empowering women voters. In the spirit of this mission, the League of Women Voters today puts out periodic legislative newsletters to inform members on major public policy issues. Additionally, the League of Women Voters works to improve female participation in elections by hosting voter registration events and Get-Out-The-Vote drives.

Along with improving civic education and participation in government, the League of Women Voters in Syracuse and New York undertakes advocacy efforts at the national, state, and local levels. As part of a national effort, the League's first historic legislative success came with the passage of the Sheppard-Tower Act, which provided federal aid to maternal and child programs. Later, the League advocated for the Social Security and Food and Drugs Act, which passed in 1938 to remove hundreds of federal jobs from the spoils system and place them under the Civil Service. Most notably, they also lead efforts to form the United Nations and encourage American participation in the organization. In recognition of the League of Women Voters’ contributions to help create the United Nations, it became the first American organization to receive a United Nations designation as a non-governmental organization.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my colleagues in the House join me in honoring the 100th Anniversary of the League of Women Voters in Syracuse and New York. Since its formation, the League has made great contributions to empower women voters and has played a significant role in positively shaping public policy in our country.

He held this position from 2009 to 2012, and then again from 2016 until his appointment to the Wayne County Circuit Court by Governor Whitmer on March 28, 2019.

Madam Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me today in honoring Helal Farhat for his appointment to the Wayne County Circuit Court. His legal expertise, character, and public service experience will make him an excellent judge who will dutifully serve the people of Michigan.

HONORING CWD CHUCKY AND CWD MAKO

HON. THEODORE E. DeUTCH
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. Deutch. Madam Speaker, I am honored to rise today in recognition of two of our country’s Military heroes, Contract Working Dogs Chucky and Mako, who are being honored for their service with a celebration hosted by Mission K9 Rescue and its founders: Kristen Maurer, Louise Kastner and Bob Bryant. This special event has been underwritten by former magazine publisher and charter organizer, Mindi Rudan and attorney Debra Rochlin.

Both CWD Chucky and CWD Mako are retired explosive detonation dogs who served our country with honor and saved countless lives throughout their service. Around the world, our military is dependent on the valuable, selfless, and heroic contributions of our highly trained working dogs. These dogs faithfully serve right alongside our service men and women and, after a lifetime of service, many never make it home to spend their senior years knowing the safety and love they so deserve after giving so much.

Winner of Petco Foundation’s “Helping Heroes” Award and ASPCA’s Henry Bergh Founders Award in 2017, Mission K9 Rescue is a non-profit organization whose sole purpose is to rescue retiring and retired Military Working Dogs, Contract Working Dogs and other Dogs who’ve given so much to our country. Mission K9 Rescue provides money, transportation, adoption, veterinary care and professional assistance for these retired hero dogs. In addition, Mission K9 Rescue helps re-home them and whenever possible reunite them with their military handlers, many who owe their own lives to these dogs and want to provide that love and home.

Once again, I would like to recognize our military heroes CWD Chucky and CWD Mako for their service, Mission K9 Rescue for their unbelievable service to our often forgotten servicemembers, and to Mindi Rudan and Debra Rochlin for their support of this event. May they go from strength to strength.

RECOGNIZING WILLIAM McVEY

HON. TIM WALBERG
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. Walberg. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize William McVey of Jackson, Michigan as he is posthumously presented the Bronze Star Medal. McVey, and his entire M4A1 Sherman tank crew, are receiving this high honor because of their heroism during World War II.

The crew’s story of battling enemy forces outside Cologne, Germany was the subject of the recent book, “Spearhead,” by author Adam Makos.

Outgunned by German tanks, and facing harrowing odds, McVey and his band of brothers pushed eastward across Europe after D-Day, gaining critical ground for Allied forces.

Our nation is forever grateful to the Greatest Generation and soldiers like William McVey who fought for freedom around the world. Their actions, which came at great personal cost, changed the course of history.

While William McVey is now gone, may this long overdue Bronze Star serve as a reminder for generations to come of his incredible valor and service to the country he loved.
RLS is at its strongest in the evening and nighttime hours, severely disrupting sleep. Treatment is life-long, and there is no cure. The sleep loss caused by RLS robs people of the ability to work and live normally and may lead to depression, anxiety and suicidal thoughts. Profound sleep loss also poses people with RLS at risk for hypertension, diabetes, heart attack, stroke and Alzheimer’s disease.

I ask my colleagues to join me in working to raise awareness of this devastating disease by recognizing September 23rd as RLS Awareness Day.

HONORING THE LIFE OF RAYMOND OSHANA

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to share my deepest condolences with the family and friends of Raymond Oshana. Ray was a dear friend of mine and my district office team for over two decades, and a prominent leader in the Assyrian community. Ray unexpectedly passed away earlier this week, and my heart breaks for his wife, Nadia, and his children Pierre, Ninos, and Mary, and everyone in the community who feels the weight of his passing, including me. His exuberant personality and generosity touched everyone he met, and anyone who knew Ray was better for it. He will be missed deeply.

Born in Baghdad in 1951, Ray came to the United States as a young man in 1970. Ray's story and contributions exemplify the fact that immigration makes our nation and our communities stronger and better. Shortly after arriving in the United States, Ray started the Assyrian Athletic Club. This club has supported thousands of Assyrian youth since its inception and next year, the organization will celebrate its 50th anniversary. During this same period, Ray helped found a group called the East Bird Band, helping create an iconic Assyrian Nationalist song, despite the fact that the band members didn't know how to play musical instruments in the beginning.

Ray was an active member of dozens of civic organizations including the Assyrian American Association of Chicago, and he was the Midwest Regional Director for the Assyrian American National Federation at the time of his passing. His name and contributions were known by everyone in the Assyrian community, and my office and I worked closely with him and the community in the 9th Congressional District on many issues and projects. Ray Oshana had a smile and personality that brightened every room he entered. He was one of the kindest people I have ever met, and I looked forward to catch up each opportunity that he would down and talk about our families and what we could do to help Assyrians here in Illinois and back in the Middle East, where they face many deadly challenges. Ray was a lifelong fighter for and an effective advocate on behalf of his community. On behalf of a grateful nation, I thank Raymond Oshana for his tireless work. We will miss him.

REMEMBERING UNDERSHERIFF STEPHEN B. McLOUD

HON. JOHN KATKO
OF NEW YORK
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to remember the life of Undersheriff Stephen B. McCloud, a loving husband, father, and grandfather, and a devoted public servant, who passed away on August 28, 2019. For nearly 25 years, Undersheriff McCloud worked in law enforcement, selflessly dedicating his life to service of those in our community and nation. A lifelong member of the Central New York community, Undersheriff McCloud graduated from Weedsport Central High School and from Cayuga Community College with an associate degree in criminal justice. After college, Undersheriff McCloud became the first full-time police officer for the Village of Weedsport. In 1983, Undersheriff McCloud joined the Cayuga County Sheriff's Office, starting as a patrol deputy. From there, Undersheriff McCloud was promoted to investigator in 1991 and again to Undersheriff in 2003. He held this position until retiring in 2006.

Along with Undersheriff McCloud's work in law enforcement, he was also a 35-year member of the Weedsport Volunteer Fire Department. Additionally, he served with the Finger Lakes Drug Task Force and as a Cayuga County Fire Investigator.

Following the attacks on the World Trade Center on September 11th, Undersheriff McCloud bravely traveled to New York City to assist in search and rescue efforts at Ground Zero. Tragically, Undersheriff McCloud developed an illness stemming from his work to aid in the recovery efforts.

Outside of his work in public service, Undersheriff McCloud was a member of the Weedsport Presbyterian Church, a former member of the Brutus Town Board, and owner of Oakland Acres Firewood, a family operated firewood and land management company. Undersheriff McCloud was also an avid outdoorsman, and a loving family man who cared deeply for his wife, children, and grandchildren.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my colleagues in the House join me in honoring the life of Undersheriff Stephen B. McCloud. A lifelong public servant and beloved member of our Central New York community. Undersheriff McCloud will be dearly missed. I ask my colleagues to keep him and his family in mind as we remember the selfless contributions he has made to our community and country.

HONORING ALISON CUNNINGHAM, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF COLUMBUS HOUSE

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Ms. DELAURO. Madam Speaker, it is an honor for me to rise today to join friends, family, colleagues, and community leaders who have gathered today to celebrate Alison Cunningham as she bids farewell to Columbus House, the organization she has fearlessly and adeptly led for more than two decades.

There is no one reason why an individual becomes homeless and so there is no one solution that will end it. More than three decades ago a group of folks concerned with the plight of the homeless came together and began what has become one of the strongest, most respected advocacy organizations for the homeless in our state. For most of its existence, the mission of Columbus House has been guided by Alison Cunningham, whose unparalleled passion to make a difference is reflected in every success they enjoy. Alison's commitment is nothing short of inspiring and it has encouraged hundreds of supporters to volunteer their time and energy to support this extraordinary organization.

Under Alison's direction, Columbus House has continued to grow and expand to meet the ever-changing needs of our growing population. Today, the small staff of ninety come from all walks of life—many are former clients themselves which provides them a unique perspective not only from which to provide services, but also to direct the organization's efforts. Columbus House also partners with a variety of local service agencies with the goal of ensuring that all of their clients receive access to every possible opportunity to transition from homelessness in our state. For most of its existence, the mission of Columbus House has been guided by Alison Cunningham, whose unparalleled passion to make a difference is reflected in every success they enjoy. Alison's commitment is nothing short of inspiring and it has encouraged hundreds of supporters to volunteer their time and energy to support this extraordinary organization. professional life. Her students will be learning from one of the best and that can only benefit those non-profits that they will eventually lead. It is my great honor to stand today to extend my deepest thanks and appreciation to Alison Cunningham for the visionary leadership and tireless advocacy she has brought to Columbus House, the City of New Haven and the State of Connecticut. I wish her all the best in this new endeavor and have no doubt that it will be a great success.

CONGDON STREET BAPTIST CHURCH BICENTENNIAL

HON. JAMES R. LANGEVIN
OF RHODE ISLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. LANGEVIN. Madam Speaker, I rise with my colleague, Congressman DAVID CICILLINE, to celebrate the bicentennial of the Congdon Street Baptist Church. Over the last 200 years, the church has been a pillar of the black community in Providence, serving as a place of worship, education, and fellowship for Providence residents.

From its founding, the church has thrived in the face of adversity. In 1819, under the backdrop of racial segregation and slavery, a small group of residents came together to create a safe space for black members of the Providence community. In 1869, hostile neighbors had the church demolished. Nonetheless, the community rallied together to rebuild the church in 1875, and it was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1971.

Over the years, the church has continued to carry out the mission of its founders: supporting civil rights for the black community. In 1968, the church became a sanctuary for black students at Brown University and Pembroke College during the student walkout, and during the 1960s, members of the congregation marched down Cranston Street with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., in the fight for equal voting rights. In 1971, the church became a sanctuary for the City of New Haven and the State of Connecticut. I wish her all the best in this new endeavor and have no doubt that it will be a great success.

CELEBRATING MR. JAMES TURNER'S 85TH BIRTHDAY AND 45 YEARS OF TEACHING AT LIBERTY HIGH SCHOOL

HON. BRIAN BABIN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. BABIN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to celebrate Mr. James “Coach T” Turner, on his 85th birthday as well as recognize his 45 years of teaching at Liberty High School.

Mr. Turner was born and raised in Liberty, Texas. Upon graduating from West Liberty High School in 1954, he was named valedictorian and subsequently received a full scholarship to the State University in Grambling, Louisiana. After earning his master's degree from Texas Southern University, he traveled back to his hometown where he began teaching and coaching at West Liberty High School. During his time there, he was named Liberty ISD Secondary Teacher of the Year once and Liberty High School Teacher of the Year nine times. While instructing students, he coached the University Interscholastic League (UIL) high school team for math, calculator, and number sense for 17 years. As a UIL coach, he was awarded the UIL Southwestern Bell Academic Sponsor Excellence Award and the Texas Math and Science Coaches Association Salute for UIL Excellence Award for his outstanding contributions to the team and students. Mr. Turner also received the City of Ames Award for devoted years of service to West Liberty High and Elementary Schools.

While attending graduate classes at Texas Southern University, Mr. Turner met the love of his life, Mrs. Dorothy Robbins Turner. During their more than 51 years of marriage, they raised one son, Mr. Dedric James Turner. Dedric followed in his dad's footsteps by becoming a math teacher—leading the math department at C.E. King High School—and athletic and academic coach. However, he now works for the ExxonMobil corporation. Throughout his life, Mr. James Turner has continuously made significant contributions to his Southeast Texas community, and it is an honor to recognize him for his outstanding dedication to his fellow citizens.

Madam Speaker, it is because of excellent citizens like Mr. Turner that we have wonderful role models for the next generation of students to aspire to. I am proud that Mr. Turner is a constituent of Texas’s 36th Congressional district, and I am thankful for the positive impact he has made in the lives of students. I applaud Mr. Turner for his many accomplishments, and I wish him a very happy 85th birthday and congratulations on his 45 years of teaching.

TRIBUTE TO THE HIGH PLAINS HONOR FLIGHT

HON. JOE NEGUSE
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 18, 2019

Mr. NEGUSE. Madam Speaker, I recognize the participation of 120 veterans from Northern Colorado who visited Washington DC this past weekend with the High Plains Honor Flight. I am tremendously grateful each of these individuals had the opportunity to visit the memorials built in their honor in our nation’s capital and to be recognized for their service to our country. With strong courage of conviction, these veterans took flight from Loveland, Colorado and traveled to Washington, DC to visit the memorials which recognize their contributions to our nation and world.

The Northern Colorado community, as well as the American people, extend a debt of gratitude to these veterans and all of their fellow service members for their service and for all they have done to maintain and preserve the rights of the American people at home and promote peace and democracy abroad.

I commend High Plains Honor Flight for continuing the mission of Honor Flight Northern Colorado and advancing their effort to serve and honor the veterans of Colorado. I know I join with all my fellow Coloradans who witnessed their departure in expressing our gratitude and recognition of this historic Honor Flight.

These veterans, above all, understand the gravity of the sacrifices that Washington, DC’s memorials document, and I am grateful they had the opportunity to visit these monuments in-person, both to reflect on the enormous service they contributed to our nation and to pay respect to the fallen soldiers on behalf of each of us.

I send my sincerest gratitude to the participants of the High Plains Honor Flight for all they have done for our Northern Colorado community and for the American people. Their service will never be forgotten.
