

government-to-government relationship with nations, tribes and pueblos and highlights challenges Congress must address. With this responsibility, I recognize that Congress must respect and value the sovereign governments that have long called New Mexico home before I was privileged to represent it.

Indian Country plays a critical role in our country's history, and too often these stories are not told. By designating November as Native American Heritage Month, we can collectively reflect on our nation's past and pay tribute. We owe it to those who came before us—and those to come—to tell the full truth about our nation's history and uplift voices that have been systematically suppressed: Most recently, I joined members of the Acoma Pueblo in celebrating a long overdue return of a sacred, ceremonial shield. After nearly four years of public appeals, a sacred piece that disappeared in the 1970s was rightfully returned to the Acoma Pueblo. Sadly, this is not an isolated event. The illegal acquisition and sale of sensitive Native American items is widespread, and I am committed to working with tribes to end the export of unlawfully removed items and return them home.

In addition to fighting to preserve the culture and traditions of the pueblos and tribes in southern New Mexico, we must recognize our responsibility to ensure Native communities are provided with the proper support to build a better future. It's why this year I supported advanced appropriations for the Indian Health Service (IHS) and the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) to grant stability to Tribal programs and ensuring that Tribal Governments are not negatively affected by impasses in the federal appropriations process. I was also proud to support the passage of the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act and the additional protections added this year for Native women. Lastly, I worked with my Republican colleague Rep. DUSTY JOHNSON to fight for full funding for the New Beginnings for Tribal Students Program, which provides competitive grant funding for Land Grant institutions that are actively seeking to increase recruitment, retention, and graduation rates for Native American students.

As a Representative for southern New Mexico, I have the privilege of representing many tribes and pueblo communities. I know firsthand that our state's past, present, and future is tied to the vibrancy of its Native American communities. Native American Heritage Month is an important step towards fulfilling the trust and responsibility owed to our Native American sovereign governments. I am proud to join my colleagues, Reps. DEB HAALAND (NM-01), TOM COLE (OK-4), SHARICE DAVIDS (KS-3), RUBEN GALLEGOS (AZ-7), RAÚL M. GRIJALVA (AZ-3), BETTY MCCOLLUM (MN-4), and MARKWAYNE MULLIN (OK-2) in recognizing November as Native American Heritage Month.

THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE
KENAN-FLAGLER BUSINESS SCHOOL, UNC-CHAPEL HILL

HON. DAVID E. PRICE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 26, 2019

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the 100th Anniversary of the University of North Carolina's Kenan-Flagler Business School. Over the course of the last century, Kenan-Flagler has set a high standard for business education, becoming one of the top ranked business schools in the country.

Originally founded as the School of Commerce, its doors were opened in 1919 with a class of only 12 students. The school continued to grow: the first Ph.D. was awarded in 1928 and the MBA and executive programs were introduced in 1952. Now, 100 years later, Kenan-Flagler graduates more than 3,000 students every year, ranging from undergraduate to Ph.D.s.

Kenan-Flagler is constantly evolving and improving the way it teaches the next generation of business leaders. For example, the school has shifted its teaching model to focus on understanding the contours of international business. By offering immersive study abroad and international internship opportunities, the school reaffirms its commitment to global education. Additionally, through the UNC-IDB Strategic Studies Fellows Program, Kenan-Flagler partners with the Institute for Defense and Business to educate Defense Department and national security professionals about the foundations of national security through a strategic thinking and innovative lens.

While not every student studies abroad, Kenan-Flagler finds alternative ways to bring the global experience into the classroom. Last year, with the use of virtual reality goggles, students were transported to a boardroom in the central African country of Cameroon. Kenan-Flagler pushes the envelope on traditional teaching methods, serving as an example for professional schools across the world.

Kenan-Flagler's commitment to global education and diversity go hand in hand. With over 37,000 living alumni spanning 86 countries, the impact of the Kenan-Flagler Business School is evident all over the globe. In 1973, the school became the first southern institution and sixth nationwide to join the Consortium for Graduate Study in Management, a network of universities committed to providing minority populations the education and tools needed to succeed in business and industry. This dual commitment is symbolized by the multitude of flags greeting you upon entrance into the McColl Building, which houses the business school on campus. These flags represent the many different nationalities of Kenan-Flagler students and the affinity groups represented by the community.

Madam Speaker, as an alumnus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, I am immensely proud of the Kenan-Flagler Business School's commitment to the future generations of business leaders. I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating Dean Douglas Shackelford, the entire leadership, and the student body of Kenan-Flagler on this momentous anniversary.

RECOGNIZING RECRUIT CLASS
2019-01 OF THE PRINCE WILLIAM
COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF FIRE
AND RESCUE

HON. GERALD E. CONNOLLY

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 26, 2019

Mr. CONNOLLY. Madam Speaker, I rise to congratulate the recent graduates of the Prince William County Department of Fire and Rescue, the "Hellfighters." These men and women will soon join the ranks of those who have served and continue to serve Prince William County as first responders who place themselves in harm's way to protect and preserve the lives and property of county residents.

Each member of the recruit class has successfully completed a rigorous application process, followed by more than 1,200 hours of exhaustive academic and physical training over the course of 26 weeks. Upon successful completion of this program, each recruit is eligible to graduate and become a Fire and Rescue Technician with the Prince William County Department of Fire and Rescue.

The training and certification required to achieve the status of a Fire and Rescue Technician cannot be accomplished without significant dedication and hard work. Today's graduates have completed more than 600 hours of the required coursework for certification in Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), Infection Control, Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM), Emergency Medical Training (EMT-Basic), Firefighter I, Firefighter II, Emergency Vehicle Operator Course 1, Emergency Vehicle Operator Course 2, Emergency Vehicle Operator Course 3, Flashover Simulation, Rapid Intervention Training (RIT), Mayday, Hazmat Awareness/Operations, Swift Water Rescue Awareness, Liquid Petroleum Gas (LPG) with Simulation, Rural Water Supply, Basic Life Support (BLS) Protocols, Rope Rescue Awareness, Vehicle Rescue Awareness, and Child Passenger Safety Seat Installation.

It is my honor to include in the RECORD the following names of the Prince William County Department of Fire and Rescue recruit class graduates:

As the newest members of the Department of Fire and Rescue, the graduates join the department as integral parts of the emergency response and community safety team.

Madam Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in congratulating the newest members of the Prince William County Department of Fire and Rescue. I am confident that recruit class 2019-01 will serve the residents of Prince William County with honor and distinction. In the tradition of their new firefighting family, I say: "Stay safe."

RECOGNIZING THE RETIREMENT OF MARK BLISS

HON. JASON SMITH

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, November 26, 2019

Mr. SMITH of Missouri. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of journalist Mark Bliss, who is retiring after a 40-year, distinguished career in journalism, which included over 30 years spent reporting for our local
