The House met at 2 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker.

PRAYER
The Chaplain, the Reverend Patrick J. Conroy, offered the following prayer:

God of Heaven and Earth, we give You thanks for giving us another day. We ask Your blessing upon the Members of the people's House. Imbue them with wisdom, inspire them to act with justice, and empower them to work toward legislative solutions to the many challenges facing our Nation.

Bless all the people of our Nation during these days of Senate deliberation. While this action draws much attention nationally, may the work of our citizens’ hands issue forth in the betterment of their own lives and the strength and vitality of their local communities.

And may all that is done this day be for Your greater honor and glory.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL
The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House her approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. GONZALEZ) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

HONORING LIANE DOUGHERTY
(Mr. ROSE of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. ROSE of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay respect and honor to my great teacher, Liane Dougherty. Mrs. Dougherty passed away on December 5, 2019. She taught me in history class more than 20 years ago at Poly Prep, where she was a mentor. She is survived by her husband, Francis, and her children, Max and Sophie.

Her students recall—myself included—that, each and every day, she would approach the classroom with grace, compassion, incredible wisdom and intellect. I can say without a doubt, I would not be a Congressman today without Mrs. Dougherty.

There is only one person in all of America being honored on the floor of the United States House of Representatives today, and that is Liane Dougherty. She is deserving of that, the best teacher I could ever ask for.

Madam Speaker, may she rest in peace. We will always honor her incredible legacy.

CELEBRATING NATIONAL SCHOOL CHOICE WEEK
(Ms. FOXX of North Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, since 2011, National School Choice Week has been recognized as the largest annual celebration of opportunity and education in the world. In North Carolina, over 2,313 school choice events are scheduled for this week, including events in my district at the Quality Education Academy High School in Winston-Salem and at the DT Early Learning Center in Wilkesboro. Unfortunately, the media continues to conjure up misleading claims about school choice, and it is time we corrected the record. School choice is not about picking winners and losers; it is about letting families choose the educational options that meet the unique needs of their children.

A high-quality education is an indispensable tool, and America’s children deserve nothing less than an education that empowers them to reach their greatest potential.

HONORING GLENN SMITH
(Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the life of U.S. Navy veteran Glenn Smith, a Stark County World War II veteran who passed away last week at the age of 95.

Glenn was a Navy Seabee and served our country from August 1943 to July 1945. He was born in Indiana County, Pennsylvania, where his father was a coal miner for over 50 years.

In a story familiar to many in the heartland, Glenn made it through the Great Depression by scraping steel for extra money. He would grow up to be part of the greatest generation to ever live, the generation that freed the world from tyranny.

Glenn was drafted into the Navy at age 19 and shipped out alongside 7,600 other men to Honolulu on Christmas Eve 1943. Glenn would go on to serve in the Pacific theater and, at the end of the war, was flown from Saipan to Pearl Harbor, where he took the USS Constitution home.

My office had the honor of presenting Glenn, in October of last year, with his military service medals earned during World War II. Glenn received the World War II Victory Medal and Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal.

Madam Speaker, today we remember Glenn’s life and service and thank him...
It is such an honor to represent nearly one-third of all active-duty marines, who, like Corporal McDonell, are always faithful to their fellow marines, communities, and our Constitution.

HONORING SPECIALIST JOSEPH A. RAYMOND

(Mr. JOYCE of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. JOYCE of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Specialist Joseph Raymond of East Berlin, Pennsylvania, for outstanding achievement during the Soldier of the Year board for the 1st Battalion, 108th Field Artillery.

Specialist Raymond’s outstanding skills and high level of motivation contributed directly to him being selected as the Soldier of the Year, competing at the 56th Stryker Brigade Combat Team Soldier of the Year board.

Specialist Raymond’s exceptional performance reflects great credit upon himself, the 1st Battalion, 108th Field Artillery, the 56th Stryker Brigade Combat Team, the Pennsylvania Army National Guard, and the United States Army.

He is a credit to Adams County, to our Commonwealth, and to the entire United States of America.

Madam Speaker, today I salute Specialist Joseph Raymond and congratulate him and his entire family.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. JUDY CHU of California). Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule 1, the Chair declares the House in recess until approximately 4:45 p.m. today.

Accordingly (at 2 o’clock and 12 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Ms. KAPTUR) at 4 o’clock and 45 minutes p.m.

NEVER AGAIN EDUCATION ACT

Mr. NORCROSS, Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 943) to authorize the Secretary of Education to award grants to eligible entities to carry out educational programs about the Holocaust, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The text of the bill as follows:

H.R. 943

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The United States has demonstrated a commitment to remembrance and education about the Holocaust through bilateral relationships and engagement in international organizations such as the United Nations and the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance; the United States works to promote Holocaust education as a means to understand the importance of democratic principles, use and abuse of power, and to raise awareness about the importance of genocide prevention today.

(2) The Congress has played a critical role in preserving the memory of the Holocaust and promoting awareness, including by authorizing the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum as an independent establishment of the Federal Government to ensure that “the study of the Holocaust become part of the curriculum in every school system in the country”, as well as by establishing a national Holocaust Remembrance Day in 1978.

(3) 75 years after the conclusion of World War II, with the decreasing number of eyewitnesses and growing distance of students and their families from this history, it is important to institutionalize education about the events of the Holocaust such as the German Nazis’ racist ideology, propaganda, and plan to lead a state to war and, with their collaborators, kill millions—including the systematic murder of 6,000,000 Jewish people; as well as the persecution and murder of millions of others in the name of racial purity, political, ideological, and behavioral grounds, among them Roma, the disabled, the Slavs, Communists, Socialists, Jehovah’s Witnesses, and homosexuals.

(4) As intolerance, antisemitism, and bigotry are promoted by hate groups, Holocaust education provides a context in which to learn about the danger of what can happen when hate goes unchallenged and there is indifference in the face of the oppression of others; learning how and why the Holocaust happened is an important component of the education of citizens of the United States.

(5) Today, those who deny that the Holocaust occurred or distort the true nature of the Holocaust continue to find forums, especially online; this denial and distortion dis honor those who were persecuted, and murderous, making it even more of a national imperative to educate students in the United States so that they may explore the lessons that the Holocaust provides for all people, sensitizing communities to the circumstances that gave rise to the Holocaust, and help youth be less susceptible to the falsehood of Holocaust denial and distortion and to the destructive messages of his history, it is important to promote Holocaust education as a means to understand the importance of democratic principles, use and abuse of power, and to raise awareness about the importance of genocide prevention today.

(6) Currently, 12 States (California, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Rhode Island) require by law that schools teach students about the Holocaust; more schools and teachers including in underserved communities, can and should deliver quality Holocaust education.
(7) For more than 30 years, the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum has worked to build and support the field of Holocaust education, and advance the quality and sustainability of Holocaust education at the local, State, and national levels, by engaging teachers and students across disciplines and grade levels.

(8) The federal government, through support for educational activities of national museums established under Federal law, can assist teachers in efforts to incorporate historical instruction on human rights atrocities, including the Holocaust, in curricula.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act—

(a) ANTISEMITISM.—The term "anti-Semitism" means a certain perception of Jews, which may be expressed as hatred toward Jews. Rhetorical and physical manifestations of antisemitism are directed toward Jewish or non-Jewish individuals or their property, toward Jewish community institutions and religious facilities.

(b) DIRECTOR.—The term "Director" means the Director of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.

(c) ELIGIBLE PROGRAM PARTICIPANT.—The term "eligible program participant" means—

(A) a high school teacher, a teacher of one of the middle grades, or a school leader of a high school or middle school that includes one of the middle grades (as such terms are defined in section 8101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7801));

(B) an educational leader or expert who is not employed by a local educational agency (as defined in section 8101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7801)) or an elementary school or secondary school (as such terms are so defined) that is independent of any local educational agency; or

(C) a prospective teacher enrolled in a program of postsecondary education coursework or preservice clinical education.

(d) HOLocaust.—The term "the Holocaust" means the systematic, bureaucratic, state-sponsored persecution and murder of 6,000,000 Jews by the Nazi regime and its allies and collaborators during the era of the Holocaust, German authorities also targeted other groups because of their perceived "racial inferiority", such as Roma, the disabled, and others that includes one of the middle grades (as such terms are defined in section 8101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7801));

(e) INFORMATION DISTRIBUTION.—The Director, utilizing funds appropriated under subsection (a) and resources received under subsection (b), and including through the engagement of eligible program participants as appropriate—

(1) shall develop and nationally disseminate accurate, relevant, and accessible resources to promote understanding about how and why the Holocaust happened, which shall include digital resources and may include other types of such print resources and traveling exhibitions; and

(2) may carry out one or more of the following Holocaust education program activities:

(A) Development, dissemination, and implementation of principles of sound pedagogy for teaching about the Holocaust;

(B) Provision of professional development for eligible program participants, such as through—

(i) local, regional, and national workshops;

(ii) distance learning in conjunction with Holocaust education centers and other appropriate partners;

(iii) engagement with—

(I) local educational agencies (as defined in section 8101 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 21 7801)); and

(II) high schools and schools that include one of the middle grades (as so defined) that are independent of any local educational agency; and

(iv) operation and expansion of a teacher fellowship program to cultivate and support leaders in Holocaust education.

(C) Engagement with State and local educational agencies on the adoption of resources supported under this Act into curricula across diverse disciplines.

(D) Evaluation and research to assess the effectiveness of Holocaust education programs, which may include completion of the report required under section 8.

(E) APPLICATION.—The Director may seek the engagement of an eligible program participant under subsection (c) by requiring submission of an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and based on such competitive criteria as the Director may require.

SEC. 4. PROGRAM AUTHORIZED.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act $2,000,000 for fiscal year 2021 and each of the 4 succeeding fiscal years.

(b) DONATIONS, GIFTS, BEQUESTS, AND DEVISES OF PROPERTY.—In accordance with chapter 23 of title 36, United States Code, and in accordance with the purposes of this Act, the Director is authorized to solicit, accept, hold, administer, invest, and use donated funds; gifts, bequests, and devises of property, both personal and real.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—The Director, using funds appropriated under subsection (a) and resources received under subsection (b), shall include digital resources and traveling exhibitions; and

(2) may carry out one or more of the following Holocaust education program activities:

(a) Development, dissemination, and implementation of principles of sound pedagogy for teaching about the Holocaust;

(b) Provision of professional development for eligible program participants, such as through—

(i) local, regional, and national workshops;

(ii) distance learning in conjunction with Holocaust education centers and other appropriate partners;

(3) may carry out one or more of the following Holocaust education program activities:

(a) Development, dissemination, and implementation of principles of sound pedagogy for teaching about the Holocaust;

(b) Provision of professional development for eligible program participants, such as through—

(i) local, regional, and national workshops;

(ii) distance learning in conjunction with Holocaust education centers and other appropriate partners;

(iii) engagement with—

(II) high schools and schools that include one of the middle grades (as so defined) that are independent of any local educational agency; and

(iv) operation and expansion of a teacher fellowship program to cultivate and support leaders in Holocaust education.

(b) ENGAGEMENT PERIOD.—Engagement of eligible program participants under this Act shall be for a period determined by the Director.

(c) PRIORITY.—In engaging eligible program participants under section 4, the Director shall give priority to applications from participants such as individuals or local educational agencies, or a school that is independent of any local educational agency, that does not, at the time application is made, offer any Holocaust education programming.

SEC. 8. ANNUAL REPORT.

Not later than February 1 of each year, the Director shall submit to the Congress a report describing the activities carried out under this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. NORCROSS) and the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. STEFANIK) each will control 20 minutes. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and insert extraneous materials on H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise today on International Holocaust Remembrance Day in support of H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, introduced by my colleague, CAROLYN MALONEY, chairwoman of the House Committee on Oversight and Reform.

The Never Again Education Act will help ensure the atrocities of the Holocaust are never repeated. It will authorize $10 million over 5 years for a new program to help teach the Holocaust in schools. The program will be run by the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, which will develop curricula, train teachers, and partner with local organizations to promote Holocaust education.
The Holocaust was the systematic and state-sponsored persecution and murder of 6 million Jews and an additional 5 million others who the Nazis deemed inferior. Yet, while it might seem hard for the older generations to believe, many younger Americans today do not know the basic facts about the Holocaust.

A new study from the Pew Research Center found that half of Americans know that 6 million Jews were killed in the Holocaust. The research found that educators and trips to Holocaust museums directly impact respondents’ knowledge. The figures highlight the need for greater Holocaust education in America.

Today, anti-Semitism is on the rise. I hosted an event last week with leaders of the Jewish community and law enforcement. They talked about their security concerns, and they made a pledge to stand up for others by challenging bigotry in any form.

We must stand up against hate and educate one another to prevent and stop the rise of anti-Semitism.

Soon, younger generations will not be able to hear from Holocaust survivors, as we have firsthand. They will depend on their schools and their teachers to learn the facts.

We were recently in Belgium on a trip led by Speaker PELOSI to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge, where over 19,000 Americans died in that battle, joining with the Allies to fight against hate and evil.

We won, and after World War II, we said, “Never again.” But we realize this struggle continues, and it is very real today.

On the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz, I urge my fellow Members to support the Never Again Education Act and keep the lessons of the Holocaust alive.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, today, we honor International Holocaust Remembrance Day and commemorate the 75th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz concentration camp.

Today, an Auschwitz survivor from my district, Vladimir Munk from Plattsmouth, returned to Auschwitz after surviving the atrocities there.

We remember the Holocaust, the 6 million Jewish victims, and the many others who experienced the very worst of humanity, knowing that it is our duty to tell their stories and speak their names so that such depravity never again touches mankind.

Sadly, the hate and anti-Semitism that fueled the horrors of the Holocaust has not been extinguished from all corners of the globe or driven out of every heart.

In recent months, we have seen a startling rise in anti-Semitism and vicious high-profile attacks on Jewish life across the country, tearing at the very fabric of our society.

It has been little over a year since the massacre at the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh, which was the deadliest attack on Jewish life in our Nation’s history.

Just last month, a Beverly Hills synagogue was vandalized, a machete-wielding assailant terrorized a Hanukkah celebration in my home State of New York, and a gunman targeted a kosher grocery store in Jersey City.

As we condemn these horrific acts, we must also ensure that our children understand the dangers of rising anti-Semitism and that they recognize its history.

Yet, as the number of living Holocaust survivors and eyewitnesses continues to decline, studies show that the Holocaust is fading from public memory. By educating students about the horrors of the Holocaust, we can take proactive measures to reject the hate and bigotry that is fueling this dangerous trend.

I am proud to be leading H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, with my colleague from New York, CAROLYN MALONEY, as this legislation could not come at a more crucial time.

Our bipartisan bill, which has nearly 300 cosponsors in the House, will provide teachers throughout the country with the resources and training they need to teach our children the important lessons of the Holocaust and the consequences of intolerance and hate.

It will amplify the important work being done by the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, leveraging a combination of public and private funds to develop and disseminate high-quality Holocaust education resources, which can then be adopted by our local schools and included in their curriculum.

This bill has the support of more than 1,800 Holocaust survivors from 38 States, nearly every State with living Holocaust survivors, as well as 350 organizations from all across the country.

Its consideration today is the result of passionate advocacy from its supporters and the bipartisan efforts from the Education and Labor Committee.

Madam Speaker, I strongly encourage all of my colleagues to vote “yes” on H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), the chairman of the Education and Labor Committee.

Mr. SCOTT. Virginia, Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act.

With each passing year, there are fewer and fewer people who can provide firsthand accounts of the horrors of the Holocaust. We have a responsibility to ensure that the lessons of the Holocaust are not forgotten.

As Elie Wiesel once said: “Wherever men and women are persecuted because of their race, religion, or political views, that place must, at that moment, become the center of the universe.”

This legislation creates a grant program to fund Holocaust education programs across the country.

As we confront a disturbing rise of anti-Semitic bigotry and acts of hate, let us invest in the minds of young people, helping them understand the destructive powers of intolerance and how to use that knowledge to embrace understanding and insight.

Madam Speaker, I thank Chairwoman MALONEY, Mr. BACON, Mr. NORCROSS, and Ms. STEFANIK for their leadership, and I encourage my colleagues to support the bill.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. BACON).

Mr. BACON. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the Never Again Education Act.

Madam Speaker, I recognize Congresswoman WALORSKI for her decades of leadership on this issue, as well as Congresswoman STEFANIK, who served alongside us on this crucial issue.

Today, we have 300 of our Members cosponsoring this bill, compared to only 53 Members in the last Congress, and it took the leadership of many to make today a reality.

As we confront a disturbing rise of anti-Semitism and all of its manifestations, we must act today.

Madam Speaker, I also thank the Nebraska State Education Association for raising awareness of this bill to their counterparts at the National Education Association. We appreciate their efforts to secure the NEA endorsement.

As we remember the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz and other Nazi death camps, we must pledge to each other and ourselves to never forget the victims and the lessons learned.

This cannot be a partisan issue. We must remember that the fight against anti-Semitism is an American endeavor and does not belong to Republicans or Democrats. Stamping out this evil is an endeavor for all humanity. If we allow it to become the agenda of just a single party or to be used as a partisan weapon, then we will provide the fertile ground for the growth of this evil.

Anti-Semitism and all of its manifestations are plain evil, and the Holocaust illustrates the ultimate and horrible endpoint of where hatred leads.

As the firsthand witnesses of these crimes pass away, it becomes incumbent upon us to ensure that they are never forgotten and that their pain and suffering never become just a footnote in history.

In addition, the eyes of future generations are upon us, and this legislation is needed now more than ever. According to recent studies, nearly half of our millennials are unaware that 6 million Jews were murdered, and two-thirds of American millennials surveyed were not familiar with Auschwitz. Another statistic shows that over 60 percent of religious hate crimes are anti-Semitic in nature.

Our schools need the resources that this bill provides, and education is one of our strongest tools against anti-Semitism. This bill is especially important considering the increase in anti-Semitic incidents in this country and around the world.

Even in my home State, we have seen this evil. Most recently, the South Street Temple in Lincoln, Nebraska, was the target of anti-Semitic vandalism earlier this month, and the Temple Israel Cemetery in Omaha was desecrated. The cemetery attack also happened near Veterans Day, which, unfortunately, provided a dark reminder that the cause of defending freedom and combating hate never rests and that this is a cause that we all share the responsibility for, to fight.

When liberating the camps, General Eisenhower brought journalists, government officials, and military personnel to the camps, as he told the Congress about the Holocaust. I also thank the gentleman from the House floor on March 2, 1943, for his remarks—by the way, my father is Madam Speaker, I salute CAROLYN MOYER for her relentless advocacy in this regard.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues on this International Holocaust Remembrance Day in support of the Never Again Education Act, strong bipartisan legislation to ensure that “never again” are simply not words but a solemn, sacred pledge to be fulfilled with action.

Madam Speaker, I salute CAROLYN MALONEY, a longstanding leader in this effort to educate the next generation about the Holocaust. I also thank Chairman BOBBY SCOTT for his leadership in this regard and for his cooperation in bringing this to the floor.

I think all of us Members who have worked on this will be the reality of course. Exactly as it would be if it were American or British civilians who were being killed in a systematic campaign by the Nazis. The whole of the forces of the decent democracies would be utilized to find an immediate and effective solution.

The inauguration of such a new policy on behalf of the United Nations would logically result in enabling all those Jews who have managed to escape the European-German hell to right back. The first dictate therefore, would be the immediate approval of the demand for a Jewish army of the stateless and Palestinian Jews—an army 200,000 strong.

Suicide squads of the Jewish army would engage in desperate commando raids deep into the heart of Germany. Jewish pilots would bomb German cities to the point of destruction.

A Jewish army would imply a call to arms of all stateless Jews living in North Africa so that they may participate in the imminent liberation of the Jewish people.

A Jewish army would immediately give a decisive moral relief to the agonized Jews of Europe. Their psychology of despair and helplessness would be transformed into one of hope for revenge and survival. A Jewish army will give a meaning to their sufferings to the world.

They will then realize that they cease being helpless victims and become partners in the global struggle for a better world, in which we will live in freedom and equality as all other human beings.

The Jews of Palestine and the stateless Jews want to fight as Jews. They want to prove to the world that the Jews can be more than “the persecuted people”—that Jews can die in other ways than through murder. They want the right to fight for the world’s freedom, under their own banner.

To die, if needs be, but to die fighting.

Of course, these are not all the practical proposals which the human mind is capable of conceiving. It is unfair to ask for a single solution to such a disastrous problem. What we must realize is that it is our duty not to resign ourselves to the idea that our brains are powerless to find any solution; not to resign ourselves to the idea that the forces of democracy are too weak to enforce such a solution.

Remember when a few thousand British soldiers were put in chains by the Germans? How swift the retaliation? And how practical.

The Germans chained no more British soldiers.

Remember when a tiny town in Czechoslovakia was horribly punished? How swift the hurricane of world indignation that answered.

There have been no more Lidice.

Remember when small and encircled Sweden opposed vigorously and stubbornly the expulsion of Norwegian Jews. The Germans abandoned their plan.

The Jews of Norway are still there.

The American sense of justice and decency and American ingenuity must also find ways to overpower the diabolical plan to exterminate the Jewish people. It must find a way now, before millions more perish.

It is, therefore, our primordial demand that an intergovernmental commission of military experts be appointed with the task of elaborating ways and means to stop the wholesale slaughter of the Jews in Europe.

This is no idle demand, before the tremendous threat of the Holocaust, and the colossal threat of anti-Semitism.

Yet, from New York, to California, to Pittsburgh innocents are being attacked and lives are being brutally threatened, and too often, bigotry and persecution have been allowed to foster. More needs to be done.

Last spring, the House proudly passed H. Res. 183, which condemns anti-Semitism “... as hateful expressions of intolerance that are contradictory to the principles of our nation and of our people of the United States.” And soon after, we passed legislation to secure Jewish places of worship, which is now law.

Today, with this legislation, the House is taking another step to fulfill our pledge of: “Never again” thanks to all of our Members.

This legislation authorizes funding for the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum to support and strengthen their efforts to develop accurate, relevant, and accessible resources; to promote understanding about the Shoah, and the dangers of intolerance in our time.

We must educate the world about the dangers of what can happen when hate goes unchallenged, and when oppression is met with indifference.

Some of us were there the day the Holocaust Memorial Museum was dedicated. Elie Wiesel spoke so powerfully that day, and years later, I was honored to return to the museum to speak at Elie’s memorial service.

Inside the Holocaust Memorial Museum in the Hall of Remembrance before the eternal flame, the words of Deuteronomy are inscribed in stone. It says: “Only guard yourself and guard your soul carefully, lest you forget the things your eyes saw, and lest these things depart your heart all the days of your life, and you shall make them known to your children, and your children’s children.”

With this legislation, we pledge to keep alive the memory of the Shoah so that we can fulfill the promise: “Never again.”

I anticipate an overwhelming, unanimous vote in support of this bipartisan legislation, and I thank my colleagues for their leadership on both sides of the aisle for making that victory possible.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. JOYCE).

Mr. JOYCE of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I thank Congresswoman STEFANIK and my colleagues on the other side of the aisle for bringing this important legislation to the floor.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today on the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz in support of H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act.

I am proud to be a cosponsor of this bipartisan bill, to give schools across the United States the resources needed to incorporate Holocaust education into their classrooms and teach our children the consequences of intolerance and hate.

Sadly, we have seen a rise in anti-Semitism across the country, fueling horrific violence, including the shooting at the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh, and recent attacks over the holidays in New York.

Last year in our home State of Ohio, a 20-year old was arrested before he could carry out a violent attack against the Youngstown Jewish Community Center. I stand with Ohio’s Jewish community against all anti-Semitic threats and remain committed to ensuring that all Americans can practice their religion peacefully, without fear.

The freedom of religion is a fundamental right provided to all American citizens in the Constitution. Any threat to this right is an attack on one of our core pillars of our democracy and must be confronted. But the fact of the matter is that responding to anti-Semitism is not enough.

We must work to prevent it from ever taking root in the first place.

That is why I cosponsored legislation, the Never Again Education Act. As the number of living Holocaust survivors decline, studies show that the Holocaust is fading from public memory.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time for the gentleman has expired.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Ohio an additional 1 minute.

Mr. JOYCE of Ohio. Madam Speaker, unfortunately, the same cannot be said about anti-Semitism.

By educating our children on one of the cruelest times in human history, we can help eradicate the hatred that fuels these terrible acts. It is more important than ever before that we reaffirm our commitment to defeating anti-Semitism in all of its forms and ensure the stories of Holocaust survivors live on.

My family is one of the brave American soldiers who risked his life to defeat the scourge of Nazism during World War II, and I am proud to continue his fight against anti-Semitism here in Congress.

I strongly encourage all of my colleagues to vote “yes” on H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. CAROLYN B. MALONEY), the lead sponsor of the bill. Mrs. CAROLYN B. MALONEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding, and for his incredible leadership.

Madam Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on my bipartisan H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, which has over 300 cosponsors.

On this day, 75 years ago, Auschwitz-Birkenau was finally liberated, but not before more than 1 million people were murdered beyond all comprehension. We mark this day International Holocaust Remembrance Day as we witness the rise of anti-Semitism, racism, and bigotry across our country and around the world.

In fact, we observe this day of remembrance just weeks after a rise of violent anti-Semitic attacks in New York, including an attack at a rabbi’s home during the festival of Hanukkah.

An Anti-Defamation League report recorded that over 1,800 of these acts happened in 2018 alone. And yet, as we speak against these attacks and stand against hate with our Jewish communities, we are also called to act. Condemnation alone is not enough. We need to do all we can to create communities in which these incidents don’t happen in the first place.

We need to make a better future, one of understanding, acceptance, and mutual respect.

We must make sure our children and students understand the dangers of rising anti-Semitism.

In the resolution establishing today as International Holocaust Remembrance Day, the United Nations asked each member Nation to “develop education programs that will inculcate future generations with the lessons of the Holocaust in order to help prevent future acts of genocide.”

As a former teacher, I know that our children are not born with hate in their hearts, and it is up to us to make sure that they never learn it.

We need to give our teachers the resources they need to teach about the Holocaust and the dangers of bigotry and hate. This is not an easy subject matter for our students to understand, and our teachers need support, lesson plans, guest speakers, and training.

So along with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle, I introduced H.R. 943, which will expand the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum’s already impressive educational programs by requiring the museum to develop and disseminate accurate, relevant, and accessible resources to improve awareness and understanding of the Holocaust, and educate individuals on a means to promote the importance of preventing genocide, hate, and bigotry against any group of people.

By providing $10 million over 5 years to support key programs like having teaching in a central website, a database, where educators can find curriculum and lessons plans that are appropriate for every age group; to develop and disseminate and implement principles of sound instruction; and to increase engagement with State and local education leaders.

This was a huge effort over 20 years. I first introduced this bill in 1999, and I have been working on it in a bipartisan way ever since.

I particularly want to thank the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, Hadassah, the Jewish Federations of North America, and the Anti-Defamation League for all of their work that they have done, not only to support Holocaust education, but to support the passage of this bill.

I especially want to thank my colleagues on this bill, Representatives STEFANIK, BACON, and CARBAJAL for all of their hard work in gaining the 300 cosponsors.

As we recommit ourselves to the promise of “never again,” I am reemphasizing anti-Semitism but to all forms of hate and bigotry. I can think of no better way to honor the memories of those murdered than to make sure our students know their stories, for if we do not learn from history, we are doomed to repeat it.

Madam Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to vote together in support of this legislation. I thank all of my colleagues who have signed on to this legislation. I thank all of my staff, particularly Kelly Hennessy, and the staff of Chairman SCOTT.

Ms. STEFANIK. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Deutch).

Mr. DEUTCH. Madam Speaker, I thank my friend, Congressman NORCROSS, for yielding. I am thankful for Congresswoman MALONEY’s leadership and commitment to Holocaust education. I appreciate Chairman SCOTT’s leadership in helping to bring this bill to the floor.

I am thankful to all of my colleagues, Democratic and Republican alike; the Education and Labor Committee; the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum; and the Jewish community organizations, which all worked together to promote Holocaust education.

Last week, I was honored to participate in a bipartisan delegation led by Speaker Pelosi that visited Auschwitz-Birkenau. It was my first time there, and I walked through the gates where more than 1 million people perished.

The magnitude of the effort of the Nazis to try to eradicate the Jewish people was shocking. I was shaken by the sight of the crematorium, the gas chambers, and the piles of hair, glasses, personal effects, and everything gathered in a way to dehumanize the Jews before they were even slaughtered.

It has been 75 years since Auschwitz was liberated, and today, there are few remaining survivors who can share their stories firsthand. Six million Jews were killed in the Holocaust. We must carry on and honor their memories as a stark and enduring warning to future generations. But recent polls show that we are failing to live up to that solemn responsibility. Less than half of Americans know how many Jews died in the Holocaust. Among teenagers, it is just 25 percent.

We must do better. Some States like my home State of Florida mandate Holocaust education as part of the public school curriculum.
I am proud to represent Holocaust survivors living in south Florida. In my district, those survivors, their children, their grandchildren, and all of us who work to elevate their stories work so hard to make sure that this education is a part of every student’s education.

But not every State has the resources, whether textbooks or survivors and their powerful testimony. That is why this legislation is so important. It will empower the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum to promote Holocaust education around the country. It will do the vital work of bringing Americans together to say “never again.”

When we visited Yad Vashem, almost 50 countries in the world sent their leaders to speak up to remember the Holocaust and to speak out against anti-Semitism. President Macron pointed out that anti-Semitism is a poison.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Florida an additional 30 seconds.

Mr. DEUTCH. There are deadly attacks and anti-Semitic violence that is almost regular in occurrence, but with all of this poison of anti-Semitism, education is our antidote.

Today, on International Holocaust Remembrance Day, I am proud the House of Representatives is working to give the words “never again” real meaning and real purpose by educating American students about the horrors of the Holocaust and the responsibility that all of us have to fight anti-Semitism and hatred.

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SCHNEIDER).

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Madam Speaker, I thank my colleague for his leadership in moving this bill forward and my colleagues in the House for passing this bill later this evening.

I rise today in support of H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, of which I am proud to be a cosponsor.

Today is International Holocaust Remembrance Day, marking the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau, the Nazi’s largest death camp and genocidal machine that killed more than 6 million Jewish men, women, and children.

It also marks the continuation of our ongoing responsibility to keep a promise made after the Holocaust: “never again.” never again to allow the evils unleashed by anti-Semitism, extremism, and hatred to fester, never again to stand idly by in the face of genocide.

Last week, I had the solemn honor to visit Auschwitz with a bipartisan congressional delegation led by Speaker PELOSI. Standing before the gas chambers and furnaces, seeing what seemed like infinite piles of personal belongings taken from the victims, endless piles of hair of the people murdered at Auschwitz, I felt a deep responsibility to fulfill the promise once again.

Yet, today, in this moment, we are witnessing an increase in anti-Semitic attacks specifically here in the United States. In 2018, a gunman walked into the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh and killed 11 people. It was the worst anti-Semitic attack in our Nation’s history, but it was not the first. In February, in Poway, a kosher grocery in New Jersey, and a Hanukkah celebration in Muncie—across the country are increasing numbers of verbal and physical assaults, vandalism, and other acts against the Nation. The numbers are truly horrifying.

Here we are in this moment, 75 years since the horrors of the Holocaust came into full view, close to a time when there will be no survivors left to tell their stories.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Illinois an additional 15 seconds.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Yet, anti-Semitism is just as dangerous today as it was then, and a key lesson of the Holocaust is more important than ever, that in the face of a dramatic rise in anti-Semitism, we must not—and cannot remain silent.

This act is a step toward that aim by empowering the Holocaust Memorial Museum to develop and distribute national education materials for teachers across the Nation. Only by standing strong in our fight against these threats in our time and on our watch can we live up to the sacred promise of “never again.”

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote “yes.”

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, may I inquire how much time remains on either side, please.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey has 2 minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from New York has 12½ minutes remaining. Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NORCROSS. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. STOZZI).

Mr. STOZZI. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 943, the bipartisan Never Again Education Act, of which I am proud.

Never again is, sadly, not assured.

Today, as we mark the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz and honor the memory of 6 million Jews murdered in the Holocaust, it is more important than ever that we come together to fight anti-Semitism.

Anti-Semitism is real, and it is growing. I have seen it in my own community. Overall crime is down dramatically, but hate crimes are rising. Anti-Semitic graffiti was found spray-painted not once but twice at the Holocaust Memorial and Tolerance Center in my hometown of Glen Cove in Nassau County.

Why is it happening? Divisive rhetoric is one cause. Nefarious use of social media by the haters and by our foreign adversaries who wish to foment civil unrest is another. But most important is ignorance.

The ignorance regarding the Holocaust is shocking, with over 50 percent of Americans ignorant of the fact that over 6 million Jews were killed during the Holocaust.

We must recognize that education is the best tool to fight ignorance. That is why the Never Again Education Act is so very important.

I recently traveled to Belgium to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge. In preparation, I read the book “Band of Brothers.” In the book, it described how soon after the Battle of the Bulge, literally miles away from the concentration camps they were about to liberate in just a few weeks, the soldiers were debating whether the Holocaust was real. Or, was it just propaganda?

Think of it: literally miles away from the camps just weeks before liberation, after millions of people had already been killed, and they were questioning whether or not it was real. Imagine how dangerous ignorance was 75 years later, how much scarier that ignorance is 75 years later.

If we do not use the lessons of history to make enlightened moral choices, we risk turning a blind eye to the same ignorance is 75 years later. How much scarier that ignorance is 75 years later.

We must recognize that education is one cause. Nefarious use of social media by the haters and by our foreign adversaries who wish to foment civil unrest is another. But most important is ignorance.

Today, on the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz, we have the opportunity to reaffirm our commitment to remember, that we remember, H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, will give States and schools the opportunity to incorporate Holocaust education into their classrooms, ensuring that all students of the next generation understand the evils and poison of the Holocaust. In doing so, this bill helps honor the legacy of Holocaust survivor and Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel.

By shining a light on the horrors of the Holocaust and educating our youth about the dangers of anti-Semitism, we further our commitment to Wiesel’s call for the effort again.

I thank Mrs. Maloney for her decades of leadership on this bill and for working on the improvements that we are voting on today, and I thank all of those who have worked on this important issue.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote ‘yes,’ and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. Norcross. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Right up the road from where I live in New Jersey, there is a woman, Rosalie Simon, a Holocaust survivor, who settled there right after World War II. She returned this past week to Auschwitz for the first time since she was a child.

She returned this past week to Auschwitz.

In New Jersey, there is a woman, Rosalie Simon, a Holocaust survivor, who settled there right after World War II. She returned this past week to Auschwitz for the first time since she was a child.

I wish to yield the balance of my time.

Mr. David P. Roe of Tennessee. Madam Speaker, I express support for H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act. Today, January 27, marks Holocaust Remembrance Day, as well as the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz. We, as a society, have an enduring obligation to not only educate ourselves, but also future generations, on the atrocities that took place from 1933 to 1945 so that they are never repeated.

As Nobel Peace Prize winner, and Holocaust survivor, Elie Wiesel stated, ‘For the survivor who chooses to testify, it is clear: his duty is to bear witness for the dead and for the living.’ Mr. Norcross. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5671) to award a Congressional Gold Medal, collectively, to the United States Merchant Mariners of World War II, in recognition of their dedicated and vital service during World War II.

The Clerk reads the title of the bill.

The text of the bill is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2020’’.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS. Congress finds the following:

(1) 2020 marked the 75th anniversary of Allied victory in World War II.

(2) The United States Merchant Marine (in this section referred to as the ‘‘Merchant Marine’’) was integral in providing the link between domestic production and the fighting forces overseas, providing combat equipment, fuel, food, commodities, and raw materials to troops stationed abroad.

(3) Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King acknowledged the indispensability of the Merchant Marine to victory in a 1942 letter stating that, without the support of the Merchant Marine, ‘‘the Navy could not have accomplished its mission’’.

(4) President, and former Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, Dwight D. Eisenhower acknowledged that ‘‘through the prompt delivery of supplies and equipment to our armed forces overseas, and of cargoes representing economic and military aid to friendly nations, the American Merchant Marine has effectively helped to strengthen the forces of freedom throughout the world’’.

(5) Military missions and war planning were contingent upon the availability of resources provided by the United States merchant mariners of World War II, in recognition of their dedicated and vital service during World War II.

SEC. 3. CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL.

(a) AWARD AUTHORIZED.—The Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate shall make appropriate arrangements for the award, on behalf of Congress, of a single gold medal of appropriate design to the United States merchant mariners of World War II, in recognition of their dedicated and vital service during World War II.

(b) DESIGN AND STRIKING.—For the purposes of the award described in subsection (a), the Secretary of the Treasury (in this Act referred to as the ‘‘Secretary’’) shall strike the gold medal, appropriate design to the United States merchant mariners of World War II, in recognition of their dedicated and vital service during World War II.
Allied forces in both Europe and Asia. Though they had no military standing or government benefits, these civilian mariners often faced German U-boat assaults. These brave mariners paid a heavy price in service to their country, suffering the highest casualty rate of any branch of U.S. Armed Forces during World War II. An estimated 9,300 mariners lost their lives, and another 12,000 were wounded to make sure our uniformed servicemen could keep fighting. Unfortunately, their sacrifices are commonly underappreciated and often overlooked. They were not even considered veterans until Congress remedied that disservice in 1988, and many of our histories of World War II give them a passing mention or do not recognize their vital role in ensuring the success of the Allied forces. Now, on the 75th anniversary of the Allied victory in World War II, let us give these heroes the recognition they so richly deserve.

I thank Mr. GARAMENDI for introducing this bill this Congress, and I urge Members to vote “yes.”

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HILL of Arkansas. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of H.R. 5671, the Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2020.

Madam Speaker, it is fair to say that, when we look back on the many victories of World War II, unfortunately, too often, our Merchant Marine, our merchant mariners are overlooked. It is this exact reason why this Congress has come together to pass this bill to honor these brave sailors and their legacy.

During wartime, merchant mariners became an auxiliary to the Navy; and, as such, vessels were assigned to intercoastal bulk cargo routes for dangerous near-coastal and transatlantic shipping, hauling vital war cargo for our Allies.

It is in this exact scenario that 250,000 merchant mariners found themselves when World War II broke out. Many of these brave men perished at sea. In fact, Madam Speaker, 1 in 26 never made it home.

Madam Speaker, the merchant mariners who survived World War II were initially awarded veteran status in 1948. And if you walk down The Mall here in the Nation’s Capitol, you will find the World War II Memorial, and you will find the seal of the merchant mariners—which reads, “In Peace and War, Honoring those lost during World War II.”

The importance of the merchant mariners was not lost on our former Chief Executives. President Eisenhower, when he was the General of the Army, stated:

When final victory is ours, there is no organization that shared its credit more deservedly than the Merchant Marine.

President Franklin Roosevelt similarly stated:

The men of our American Merchant Marine have pushed through despite the perils of the submarine, the dive bomber, the surface raider; they have risked their lives, no matter how far away from their homes in order to safeguard the freedom of the entire world.

Indeed, America as ally, as arsenal of democracy, as manufacturer of the critical war material necessary to win in Europe and win across the Atlantic would be lost were it not for the merchant mariners.

These men deserve the recognition of this gold medal. Of the 250,000 World War II merchant mariners who were part of that global struggle, fewer than 2,000 merchant mariner veterans are believed to still be alive today. It is imperative that we commemorate their service, their sacrifice, their leadership, their integral role in the victory of the Atlantic and the Pacific.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this bill, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SAN NICOLAS. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SUOZZI).

Mr. SUOZZI. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 5671, the Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2020.

This act will award a Congressional Gold Medal, an extremely high honor, to the merchant mariners who served our country during World War II.

This legislation is particularly timely, as the Board of Visitors of the United States Merchant Marine Academy, of which I am a member, is meeting on campus next week in Kings Point, Long Island, in my district.

The United States Merchant Marine Academy is the only service academy whose students engage in combat during times of war. In fact, over 7,000 of these students answered our Nation’s call to duty. Six hundred are still alive today, but 142 of them did not make it back from World War II.

Edwin J. O’Hara was one of those students. In 1942, Edwin O’Hara was just another 19-year-old cadet and signed on aboard the new Liberty ship SS Stephen Hopkins in San Francisco, California.

On one foggy, hazy night aboard the ship, a German raider appeared out of the mist and began firing at close range. Bullets rained down on the crew, wounding the armed guard commander and taking him out of action. O’Hara, just a student, who was nearby, rushed forward to take his place, firing the shells left until being mortally wounded by enemy fire.

Only 19 of the 60 men aboard O’Hara’s ship made it to the lifeboat that night. O’Hara was not one of them. For his brave sacrifice, Edwin O’Hara was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Brave men and women like O’Hara at the Merchant Marine Academy in
Mr. McADAMS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

There was no objection.

Mr. McADAMS. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of my bipartisan legislation, H.R. 4704, the Advancing Research to Prevent Suicide Act, which directs the National Science Foundation to support fundamental, multidisciplinary research to further our understanding of suicide.

In Utah and across the country, communities are facing a mental health crisis. Public health and medical professionals are tracking an alarming rise in the rate of death by suicide, a 30 percent increase from 2006 to 2016 occurring in nearly every State.

Suicide is now the second leading cause of death among Americans age 15 to 24 and the first cause of death for Utahns in the same age range. Behind the statistics are heart-wrenching stories, such as the one I heard in Utah last month.

A local television news anchor courageously told her family’s personal story. Her 44-year-old son, who was a physical therapist working toward a doctorate degree, died by suicide. She thought their family was doing well, but what she did not know was that her husband had struggled with depression in secret for years.

A week after his death, she went through his phone and noticed a call to a national suicide hotline. The call was placed the day before he died. He didn’t say anything to his wife, not that he was struggling or having a hard time.

Now, she is using her platform in the newsroom to talk about her experience and break the stigma that surrounds mental illness. People need to understand, she says, that this is not something to be ashamed of and to ensure that we can get help and support to those who find themselves in crisis.

In developing this legislation, I recently convened a panel of experts in Utah, including health researchers, advocates, and community leaders. One constituent shared with me that her school district has had three students die by suicide in this school year alone. The immense tragedy of this—young people who die far too early—has left an entire community grieving and reflecting upon how we can help those in need.

This epidemic has led to much-needed education in Utah to identify and support those at risk and those in crisis. It has also brought new attention to the need to understand suicide and to help develop interventions to support people at risk.

How we understand human behavior, our social ties, and the environments in which we live connects us to understanding what puts people at risk of suicide and how we can support those in crisis, not to mention the changing issues that people face, particularly young people, from economic change and the constant presence of technology that reshape how we live, how we connect, and how we communicate.
Suicide rate increased by 33 percent in the United States.

Nationally, the veteran suicide rate is 1 1/2 times the rate of nonveteran adults, with 6,139 veterans dying from suicide in 2017 alone.

Closer to home, according to a report published by the Northeast Ohio Youth Health Survey, between August 2017 and March 2018, the suicide rate among Stark County youth ages 10–19 rose to more than 7 times the national rate and 11 times the 2011-2016 Stark County rate. Furthermore, between 2000 and 2016, suicide rates increased by 36 percent in the entire State of Ohio.

Personally, three of my own college football teammates have taken their lives in the past 12 months alone.

We all know we have a mental health crisis in this country, but for me and my constituents, the suicide problem has impacted far too many close to home, as seen by the suicide rates in Stark County and the State of Ohio.

To make a dent in the issue at hand, we need to be more proactive in finding the causes of suicide clusters and suicide contagions. Our children, our veterans, and our neighbors cannot wait much longer. It is imperative that we dig in and put in the work to find the roots of this crisis.

The more we know about the fundamental causes, the better equipped we will be as a country to tackle the problem head-on, and that is what this bill does.

Madam Speaker, again, I thank Congressman Mcadams, Chairwoman Johnson, and Ranking Member Lucas for bringing this bill to the House floor today. I am encouraged by the bipartisan sponsorship already shown on this initiative, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to see this bill signed into law.

Suicide was the 10th leading cause of death in the United States in 2017 and the second leading cause of death among young people between ages 10 and 34.

In 2017, suicide accounted for more than 7 times the national rate of deaths from homicide.

Despite decades of research into the complex and multifaceted risk factors and circumstances that contribute to suicidal thoughts and behavior, the rate of death by suicide is rising. In 2017, 18 out of every 100,000 Americans lost to suicide. We have not seen a suicide rate this high since World War II.

We must do more to address this crisis. There is a clear need for additional research to improve our understanding of the factors that put a person at risk of experiencing suicidal thoughts and behaviors. The Advancing Research to Prevent Suicide Act directs the National Science Foundation to support much needed research on the science of suicide to inform prevention strategies and save lives.

I want to once again thank Mr. McAdams for his leadership on this issue. I also want to thank Science Committee Ranking Member Lucas and Representatives Gonzalez and Balderston for their bipartisan efforts to get this bill to the floor today.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Utah (Mr. McAdams) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4704, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

Mr. MCDAMS. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McADAMS. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

SUPPORTING VETERANS IN STEM CAREERS ACT

Mr. MCDAMS. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 133) to promote veteran involvement in STEM education, computer science, and scientific research, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The text of the bill is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,
SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act’’.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.
In this Act:
(1) DIRECTOR.—The term ‘‘Director’’ means the Director of the National Science Foundation.
(2) FOUNDATION.—The term ‘‘Foundation’’ means the National Science Foundation.
(3) STEM.—The term ‘‘STEM’’ has the meaning given the term in section 2 of the America COMPETES Reauthorization Act of 2010 (42 U.S.C. 6621 note).
(4) VETERAN.—The term ‘‘veteran’’ has the meaning given the term in section 101 of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 3. SUPPORTING VETERANS IN STEM EDUCATION AND COMPUTER SCIENCE.
(a) SUPPORTING VETERAN INVOLVEMENT IN SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH AND STEM EDUCATION.—The Director shall, through the research and education activities of the Foundation, encourage veterans to study and pursue careers in STEM and computer science, in coordination with other Federal agencies that serve veterans.
(b) VETERAN OUTREACH PLAN.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director shall submit to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a plan for how the Foundation can enhance its outreach efforts to veterans. Such plan shall—
(1) report on the Foundation’s existing outreach activities;
(2) identify the best method for the Foundation to leverage existing authorities and programs to facilitate and support veterans in STEM careers and studies, including teaching programs; and
(3) include options for how the Foundation could track veteran participation in research and education programs of the Foundation, and describe any barriers to collecting such information.
(c) NATIONAL SCIENCE BOARD INDICATORS REPORT.—The National Science Board shall provide in its annual report on indicators of the state of science and engineering in the United States available and relevant data on veterans in science and engineering careers or education programs.
(d) ROBERT NOYCE TEACHER SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM.—Section 10A of the National Science Foundation Authorization Act of 2002 (42 U.S.C. 1862k–1) is amended—
(1) in paragraph (a)—
(A) by striking ‘‘and students’’ and inserting ‘‘and veterans’’ and ‘‘students’’; and
(B) by inserting ‘‘and veterans’’ before the period at the end;
(2) in paragraph (b), by striking ‘‘and students’’ and inserting ‘‘students and veterans’’; and
(B) by inserting ‘‘and veterans’’ before the period at the end;
(3) in subsection (2), by inserting ‘‘and veterans’’ before the period at the end;and
(4) in subsection (d), by striking ‘‘and veterans’’ before the period at the end.
(e) GRADUATE TRAINERSHIPS IN COMPUTER AND NETWORK SECURITY RESEARCH UPDATE.—Section 5(c)(6)(C) of the Cyber Security Research and Development Act (42 U.S.C. 6740j(c)(6)(C)) is amended—
(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ‘‘Science and Technology Policy shall—
(A) specify and prioritize short- and long-term objectives;
(B) specify commonly accepted common metrics that will be used by Federal agencies to assess progress toward achieving such objectives; and
(C) identify barriers veterans face in reentering the workforce, including a lack of formal STEM education, career guidance, and the process of transferring military credits and skills to college credits;
(D) identify barriers military spouses face in establishing careers in STEM fields;
(E) describe the approaches that each participating agency will take to address administratively barriers described in subparagraphs (C) and (D); and
(F) identify any barriers that require Federal or State legislative or regulatory changes in order to be addressed.
(2) in paragraph (3)—
(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ‘‘transition to careers in computer and network security; and’’;
(2) in subparagraph (B), by redesignating subparagraph (J) as subparagraph (K); and
(C) by inserting after subparagraph (I) the following:
(J) creating opportunities for veterans to transition to careers in computer and network security; and
(K) working with the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy to identify barriers veterans face in reentering the workforce, including a lack of formal STEM education, career guidance, and the process of transferring military credits and skills to college credits.
(3) REPORT.—Not later than August 1, 2022, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the findings of the Comptroller General with respect to the study completed under subsection (a), along with recommendations for legislative or administrative action as the Comptroller General considers appropriate.

SEC. 4. COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES STUDY AND REPORT ON BARRENCE STUPID VETERANS PURSUING DEGREES IN SCIENCE, TECHNOLOGY, ENGINEERING, AND MATHEMATICS.
(a) STUDY.—Not later than August 1, 2022, the Comptroller General of the United States shall complete a study on academic success rates of student veterans pursuing covered degrees and barriers faced by such students in pursuing such degrees.
(b) ELEMENTS.—The study required by subsection (a) shall include the following:
(1) Assessment of available information on the percentage or number of student veterans pursuing a covered degree with educational assistance furnished under chapter 33 of title 38, United States Code.
(2) Assessment of available information on the percentage or number of students who pursue a covered degree and do not obtain such degree in four or fewer academic years.
(3) Identification of the reasons that such students do not obtain such degree in four or fewer academic years and whether such reasons are barriers to obtaining such degrees.
(b) VP TECHNICAL PLANS.—The development of legislative or administrative actions to better align the educational assistance furnished under chapter 33 of title 38, United States Code, with the needs of such students and address the reasons identified under paragraph (3).
(c) REPORT.—Not later than August 1, 2022, the Comptroller General shall submit to Congress a report on the findings of the Comptroller General with respect to the study completed under subsection (a), along with recommendations for legislative or administrative action as the Comptroller General considers appropriate.

Mr. McADAMS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on S. 153, the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Utah.
Business leaders have expressed concern that the STEM skills shortage will impact their ability to develop new technologies and to grow their companies. The veteran population represents an untapped pool of talent for our Nation’s STEM workforce. Often, the skills these individuals obtained during their military service are transferable directly to STEM occupations. We must do more to tap into this diverse, highly skilled, and experienced population to not only strengthen our STEM workforce but also empower veterans to pursue high-paying and rewarding STEM careers.

The bill also creates an interagency committee that will examine how Federal programs and policies can be best leveraged to equip veterans with the skills they need to transition into STEM careers. S. 153 is a good step toward addressing our STEM skills shortage and creating opportunities for those who have served our country.

Once again, I thank my colleagues in the House and the Senate for their leadership on this very important issue. I also thank Chair TAKANO from the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs for helping us to expedite consideration of this bill today on the floor.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” and to send this bill to the President’s desk for signature, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of S. 153, the Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act.

I thank Dr. NEAL DUNN and Congressman CONOR LAMB, who led the House version of this bill, for their work to support our Nation’s veterans.

S. 153 will help veterans put their training and experience in military service to new and important uses and help America stay competitive in research and innovation on a global scale.

In the last decade alone, jobs requiring some level of STEM expertise have grown by more than 30 percent, including jobs that do not require a bachelor’s degree. Nearly 7 million jobs are unfilled in the United States due to a shortage of skilled workers, many in STEM and related fields.

In my home State of Ohio, we have been focusing on boosting and expanding our cyber defense capabilities to the Ohio Cyber Range. In order for the program to be more efficient and ready for any cyberattack, we need a cybersecurity workforce properly trained in the STEM field.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this bill and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JOHNSON).

Ms. JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today to support S. 153, the Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act.

The future of this Nation will be driven by science, technology, engineering, and mathematics. STEM careers are among the fastest growing and highest-paying occupations. Despite these trends, we are failing to produce enough STEM workers to support the growth and innovation and ensure we continue to lead the world in science and technology development.

As a Nation, we are forever indebted to the men and women who choose to serve in the military and put their lives on the line to protect the freedoms that we hold dear. At a minimum, we must ensure veterans interested in pursuing STEM careers here at home have the support that they need.

Veterans are uniquely positioned to contribute to our STEM workforce, often having training in cybersecurity, avionics, nuclear physics, and medicine. However, significant obstacles often stand in their way when transitioning to a civilian STEM career.

S. 153 establishes an interagency working group to identify these obstacles and develop a plan for addressing them. The bill also directs the National Science Foundation to improve its outreach to veterans and report on veterans in the STEM workforce. These are important steps for honoring our veterans and helping them translate their experience into meaningful STEM work.

I urge my colleagues to support this bipartisan legislation and send it to the President’s desk.

I again want to thank Dr. NEAL DUNN and Congressman CONOR LAMB for their work to support our Nation’s veterans.

This bill will improve outreach to veterans through the National Science Foundation’s programs to support and train STEM workers. We can serve our veterans and help them translate their experience into meaningful STEM work.

I urge my colleagues to support this bipartisan legislation and send it to the President’s desk.

Mr. GONZALEZ of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I urge adoption of this measure, S. 153. I commend my colleagues for this important legislation and the impact that it will have on our veterans who have served our country and want to continue to serve and provide for themselves and serve in STEM fields.

Madam Speaker, I urge adoption of this measure, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD the following exchange of correspondence between myself and Veterans’ Affairs Committee Chairman TAKANO. I appreciate his willingness to work with us to pass this bill today and send it to the President for signature.

H27JAPT1dlhill on DSKBBY8HB2PROD with HOUSE consulting with the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs regarding the matters in S. 153 that fall within the Committee’s jurisdiction.

As a result of your consultation with us on this matter and in order to expedite moving the bill to the floor, I foreshadow further consideration of S. 153. The Committee on Veterans’ Affairs takes this action with our mutual understanding that we do not waive any jurisdiction over the subject matter contained in this or similar legislation, and the Committee will be appropriately consulted and involved in the bill or similar legislation moves forward so that we may address any remaining issues that fall within our jurisdiction. Further, I request your support for the appointment of an appropriate number of conferees from the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs during any House-Senate conference involving this or similar legislation.

Finally, I would appreciate your response to this letter confirming this understanding regarding S. 153 and would ask that a copy of our exchange of letters on this matter be included in the Committee Report and the Congressional Record during floor consideration of the measure. Thank you for the cooperative spirit in which you have worked regarding this matter and others between our respective committees.

Sincerely,

MARK TAKANO,
Chairman, Committee on Veterans’ Affairs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE, SPACE, AND TECHNOLOGY

Dear Chairman TAKANO: I am writing to you concerning S. 153, the “Supporting Veterans in STEM Career Act,” which was referred to the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology, and in addition to the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs on December 19, 2019.

I appreciate your willingness to work cooperatively on this bill. I recognize that the bill contains provisions that fall within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs. I acknowledge that your Committee will waive further consideration of S. 153 and that this action is not a waiver of future jurisdictional claims by the Committee on Veterans’ Affairs over this subject matter.

I will make sure to include our exchange of letters in the Congressional Record. Thank you for your cooperation on this legislation.

Sincerely,

EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON,
Chairwoman, Committee on Science, Space, and Technology.
Mr. GROTHMAN changed his vote from “nay” to “yea.”

So (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: “A bill to authorize the Director of the National Park Service to place a national memorial to honor the victims of the Holocaust at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum to support Holocaust education programs, and for other purposes.”

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MOMENT OF SILENCE IN MEMORY OF FORMER REPRESENTATIVE MIKE FITZPATRICK

(Mr. MCCARTHY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MCCARTHY. Madam Speaker, I rise in remembrance of Congressman Mike Fitzpatrick who passed away 3 weeks ago after a 12-year battle with cancer. Mike was a public servant in the best sense of the word, a tireless champion who loved his community and always worked to improve the lives of his neighbors. His long list of accomplishments—from the conservation of public land as a county commissioner to the creation of the Washington Crossing National Cemetery where he now rests, are achievements that any Representative would be proud to have.

But one cannot accurately capture Mike’s legacy without talking about the kindness that motivated his 20 years of public service.

Years ago, a county park officer called Mike about a homeless man who was living in a park and needed a place to stay. The shelters in town were full and the park officer didn’t know what to do. But Mike Fitzpatrick did. He let the homeless man stay on his couch for the night until he found him shelter the next day.

Not everybody here knows that story. But for those who know Mike, it comes as no surprise. Mike never stopped trying to help his neighbors, even after retiring from Congress and while battling a very terrible disease. He was focused on what the late columnist Charles Krauthammer called “the things that matter,” such as one’s family and community.

For Mike, politics wasn’t a career, but public service was a never-ending commitment—a passion to do good that was rooted in values like patriotism and faith and was shaped by his upbringing in Levittown.

Certainly, Mike will be remembered for his willingness to cross party lines. That is fitting. He believed the measure of a person went beyond their partisan label. His bipartisan spirit has united this body many times before, and he will be once again today even in one of the most divided times in recent memory.

He did not apologize for being a Republican or a conservative. But in truth, those were not the titles that mattered most to him. It was titles like: “father,” “Catholic,” and “brother” that mattered.

He was faithful and he was honest. He lived with integrity and honor. He did not apologize for being a Republican. He taught us in his personal life and career into examples of courage, grit, and grace. Most importantly, he never shied away from asking in the words of the old prayer: “Lord, make me an instrument of Your peace.”

In this body, we remember people and their legacies by portraits, and I am sure there will be public memorials for him, but legacies of change last so much longer. In fact, it grows from generation to generation, like compounding interest or a snowball rolling downhill.

Mike’s legacy is right here in Congress and back home in Bucks County. They will be a tribute to one man. It will be an internal reminder of the values he stood for, the hard work, the faith in God, and never giving up. I want you to join me in expressing our deepest condolences to his family. His wife, Kathy, his mother and father, and Mary and Jim; and we all know his brother BRIAN, living in his legacy. May God bring us comfort and strength in this difficult time.

Madmam Speaker, to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, Kathy, members of the Fitzpatrick family, and Members on both sides of the aisle from Pennsylvania who have lost a dear colleague with whom they served; he served with honor. He served with civility. He served as an example.

Madmam Speaker, at a time when rank partisanship has become sadly pervasive in Washington, Mike Fitzpatrick shone a bright light of consensus building, civility, and respect.

He was an example that all of us could follow. I was sad to learn of his passing. My thoughts, of course—and I know I speak for all of us, not in a partisan sense but in a Republican sense, but in a human sense—are with his wife, Kathleen, their six children, and his entire family which includes our colleague, of course, BRIAN, his brother who succeeded him representing Pennsylvania’s Eighth Congressional District.

Madmam Speaker, it speaks volumes that Mike had so many friends here on this side of the aisle in addition to his own side. The words that the Republican leader spoke could be spoken by all of us. That is because he looked past party labels and saw in all of us fellow Americans, drawn to service like he was, eager to do right by our constituents, as he was.

Our colleague from Washington State, Mr. DENNY HECK, shared a story about a bill he and Mike were working on together in 2013 when Republicans were in the majority. Mike was the lead sponsor. His party was in charge. But because the bill would have a better chance of getting on the suspension calendar if it were a minority bill, he gave over the lead sponsorship to Denney, giving up the greater measure of credit in order to get the bill done.

That is who he was: getting things done; not taking credit, but getting the substance realized. That was leadership—responsibility and focusing on substance and achievement rather than politics and process.

That was Mike Fitzpatrick. During his two periods of service in this House, Mike made a real difference to keeping children safe online, to help those affected by the housing collapse, and to track and stop the financing of terrorist groups around the world.

He will be remembered by all who served with him, by his constituents, all of his friends, and, certainly, his family; remembered for the kind person that he was, for the thoughtful person he was, for the public he was, and as an effective legislator, for his good nature and his integrity.

I want to thank my friend, the Republican leader, for leading this tribute, and I want to thank all of those on both sides who have taken the time to share stories about Mike and the impact he had on us, on this House, on Pennsylvania, on America.

The SPEAKER. The Chair now asks all present to rise and observe a moment of silence.

ADVANCING RESEARCH TO PREVENT SUICIDE ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. BARRAGÁN). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the unfinished business is the vote on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4704) to direct the Director of the National Institutes of Health to fund a multidisciplinary research on the science of suicide, and to advance the knowledge and understanding of issues that may be associated with several aspects of suicide including intrinsic and extrinsic factors related to areas such as well-being, resilience, and vulnerability, as amended, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MCADAMS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, as amended.

This is a 5-minute vote.
The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 385, nays 8, not voting 36, as follows:

1918

So (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mrs. KIRKPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I was absent today due to a medical emergency. Had I been present, I would have voted: “yea” on rollover No. 23, and “yea” on rollover No. 24.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3621, STUDENT BORROWER CREDIT IMPROVEMENT ACT, AND PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 550, MERCHANT MARINERS OF WORLD WAR II CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL ACT OF 2019

Mr. RASKIN, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 116-983) on the resolution (H. Res. 811) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 3621) to amend the Fair Credit Reporting Act to remove adverse information for certain defaulted or delinquent private loan borrowers who demonstrate a history of loan repayment, and for other purposes, and for providing for consideration of the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 550) to award a Congressional Gold Medal, collectively, to the United States Merchant Marine of World War II, in recognition of their dedicated and vital service during World War II, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

MEDICAL EDUCATION FOR A DIVERSE AMERICA ACT

(Ms. MUCARSEL-POWELL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. MUCARSEL-POWELL. Mr. Speaker, from maternal mortality rates to inaccurate drug prescriptions to cardiovascular procedures, it is clear that minority groups experience worse health outcomes in our healthcare system.

Although structural bias is a factor, the unconscious biases of even the most well-intentioned healthcare professionals play a role as well. And we can’t let this continue.

In a district as diverse as Florida’s 26th District, we must do more to ensure that every person, regardless of their background, can get the quality care that they need. That is why I introduced the Medical Education for a Diverse America Act, along with Representative PORTER, which would provide cultural competency and language training to medical students and prepare them to better serve minority populations.

This legislation would help not only patients in South Florida, but also all over the country in diverse communities.

OBSERVING INTERNATIONAL HOLOCAUST REMEMBRANCE DAY

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute to re-extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to observe International Holocaust Remembrance Day, commemorating the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz.

The Holocaust is responsible for the systematic murder of more than 6 million Jews, and it is remembered as one of the darkest periods of modern history.

In the wake of this tragedy, we often utter the words, “never forget.” But, as time passes and memory fades, this can become a challenge. We should ensure that this chapter of history does not slip through the cracks. Through storytelling, the teaching of history, and great organizations like the Holocaust Museum right here in Washington, D.C., we can ensure younger generations truly never forget.

Today, I ask my colleagues to pause and remember the pain caused by the Holocaust and the Nazi regime in Europe. I ask that we recommit ourselves to pursuing liberty and justice for all people across the globe.

The horrors of genocide still pervade the world today. We can honor the memory of the Holocaust victims by speaking out and acting against the perpetrators of such evil today and for years to come.

HONORING DR. JONATHAN HOLLOWAY

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the late Dr. Jonathan Holloway on becoming the first African American president of Rutgers University. Rutgers is getting a leader with exceptional credentials.

Dr. Holloway is the provost and chief academic officer at Northwestern University. He oversees the school’s academic priorities, annual budget, and faculty appointments. Previously, Dr. Holloway served as the dean of Yale College, the undergrad class of Yale University. Before that, he was the Edmund S. Morgan Professor of African American Studies, History, and American Studies at Yale University.

Dr. Holloway was appointed to the post on January 1, after a search that included more than 200 candidates. He will start the new position on July 1.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate Dr. Holloway. He will be a welcome addition to an outstanding university.

COMMEMORATING THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF AUSCHWITZ LIBERATION

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, last week, I was grateful to serve on a congressional delegation to Poland and Israel, led by Speaker NANCY PELOSI, with colleagues ELLIOT ENGEL, Chairwoman NITA LOWEY, Chairman TED DEUTCH, with DEBBIE WASSERMAN SCHULZ and BRAD SCHNEIDER.

On the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau, we saw, firsthand, the horrors of the innocent Jews at the death camps.

From the ashes of German Nazism and despotic Soviet communism, Poland is now a dynamic, prosperous democracy.

We were welcomed to Jerusalem by Ambassador David Friedman, then meeting with Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu. At the Fifth World Holocaust Remembrance Day, President Reuven Rivlin introduced Vice President MIKE PENCE, President Emmanuel Macron, Prince Charles, and President Vladimir Putin. Heads of state from over 30 countries attended, and I and fellow co-chair of the Bulgarian Caucus, BRAD SCHNEIDER, were honored to be with President Rumen Radev with our alliance for freedom.

America’s associations with Poland and Israel have never been stronger, citing President Trump’s placing 5,000 American troops in Poland to deter further Russian aggression and Israel still celebrating his moving of the U.S. Embassy to Jerusalem.

In conclusion, God bless our troops, and we will never forget September the 11th in the global war on terrorism.

SECRETARY OF STATE POMPEO’S COMMENTS ABOUT UKRAINE

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, over the weekend, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo cast doubt over American support for our Ukrainian allies when he asked veteran NPR reporter Mary Louise Kelly if she thought Americans care about Ukraine and if she could even find it on a map. How insulting.

Pompeo’s outburst came after Mary Louise Kelly questioned him about the administration’s shameful treatment of our Ambassador to Ukraine, Marie Yovanovitch.

As co-chair of the bipartisan Congressional Ukraine Caucus and representative of a large Ukrainian American population, I am deeply concerned about what Pompeo was insinuating with his comments to NPR that the administration can do whatever it pleases because the American public doesn’t care about Ukraine. I couldn’t disagree with him more.

Ukraine is the scrimmage line for liberty in Europe. Liberty lovers across the world care about Ukraine because its people are facing down Russian aggression.

Unfortunately, Pompeo’s comments reflect a larger pattern of the Trump administration advancing pro-Russian causes.

On Secretary Pompeo’s upcoming trip to Ukraine, I would urge him to support liberty in Europe. America and the world paid a heavy price for that.

HONORING DR. JAMES METTS

(Mr. CARTER of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARTER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remember the life of Dr. James C. Metts, Jr., who passed away on Monday, January 20, at the age of 88.

Dr. Metts had dedicated his life to public service, working as the Chatham County coroner for more than 40 years. He was sworn in 1979 when the officials associated with Chatham County asked for his help in finding a replacement for the retiring coroner. When nobody signed up to run for the county coroner position, Dr. Metts volunteered himself.

His colleagues remember him as someone who would always answer his phone, call you back, and perform his duties as coronor with class.

In one of his most famous cases, Dr. Metts was called to court to testify about the body of Mr. Danny Hansford, which eventually became the centerpiece for the book, “Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil.”

As a doctor, he continued his public service by working hard to lower the rate of heart attack and stroke deaths by founding the Community Cardiovascular Council.

Dr. Metts will be deeply missed throughout our community. His family and friends will be in my thoughts and prayers in this most difficult time.

HONORING IRENE G. NORMAN

(Mr. BURCHETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURCHETT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Yeoman 3rd Class Irene G. Norman, an American hero who served in World War II.

Irene Norman enlisted in the Navy WAVES on October 28, 1944. She began her service in Bronx, New York, where she learned the trade of sheet metal fabrication. She was then assigned to her permanent duty station at Naval Air Station Miami in Florida, where she was responsible for repairing damaged aircraft so that they could continue to be used in the war effort.

Additionally, Mrs. Norman married and raised three wonderful children after she completed her service.

Mr. Speaker, our country’s heroes are the men and women of our Armed Forces, like Mrs. Norman, who served and sacrificed for our freedom. It is my honor to recognize Yeoman 3rd Class Irene G. Norman as the Tennessee Second District’s January 2020 Veteran of the Month.

REMEMBERING RANDALL WISE

(Mr. GAETZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GAETZ. Mr. Speaker, today, I rise to honor and remember the life of one of northwest Florida’s great public servants, my friend and one of my mentors, Mayor Randall Wise.
Mayor Randall Wise was born in 1930 in Niceville, Florida, and spent his entire life as a dedicated servant to our town. He began his career in service in the 1950s as a member of the city council. In 1971, he was appointed to the position of mayor, and to the day of his death, he served as mayor. He was one of the longest serving public officials in America, and he was the longest serving mayor in the State of Florida. His life and career were dedicated to community service, and he was a part of many projects in our community, including a senior center, a library, and more.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the United States Congress, I recognize this remarkable man for his selfless service to our community, his State, and our Nation. I am grateful for his lasting contributions to our town.

RECOGNIZING NATIONAL HUMAN TRAFFICKING AWARENESS MONTH

(Mr. TAYLOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TAYLOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition of National Human Trafficking Awareness Month and the dedicated volunteers who work to end modern-day slavery.

As a parent, there is nothing scarier than the thought of children being removed from their families and trafficked.

Sometimes, when we think about human trafficking, we envision terrible situations across the globe, but according to the Texas attorney general, there were more than 300,000 victims of human trafficking just in Texas.

As we bring attention to this far-too-common tragedy, I thank some of the incredible organizations in Collin County that work tirelessly to help survivors. Traffick911, CASA of Collin County, Rescue Her, Treasured Vessels, New Friends New Life, and the Collin County Sheriff's Office are all helping lead the fight against human trafficking.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join in thanking these organizations and recognizing the importance of spreading awareness about human trafficking today and every day.

REMEMBERING LIBERATION OF AUSCHWITZ

(Mr. FULCHER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FULCHER. Mr. Speaker, 75 years ago today, Allied armies liberated the Nazi concentration camp at Auschwitz. Unfortunately, more than 6 million of God’s children perished before that happened. This can never be forgotten. I agree with General Eisenhower’s comments at the time: Educate people on the atrocities committed so they don’t happen again.

That is why I am proud to have cosponsored the Never Again Education Act. The bill authorizes Federal funds to be used to teach about the Holocaust. Ensuring that citizens know the uncensored truth of history will help punctuate the message that anti-Semitism is abhorrent and will not be tolerated.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, Representative CAROLYN MALONEY from New York, who took the lead on initiating this bill.

Finally, toed families of the victims so tragically lost: They will never be forgotten.

RECOGNIZING NASA DAY

(Mr. HILL of Arkansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILL of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the importance of NASA Day in my home State of Arkansas, which was recently proclaimed by Governor Hutchinson to be January 27, 2020.

In my district, Harding University, a member of the Arkansas Space Grant Consortium, has played an integral role in advancing aerospace priorities for 50 years. Between 1967 and 1979, Harding University’s faculty and students supported NASA’s Skylab and space efforts, including the 1969 landing of Neil Armstrong on the Moon. They conducted research examining the long-term effects of space on the human body.

As a part of the Arkansas Space Grant Consortium, a group of 17 colleges and universities that support NASA’s research activities, Harding continues its contribution and maintains strong ties to our Nation’s space program.

I thank Harding University for its commitment to our aerospace priorities, and I appreciate Governor Hutchinson for recognizing the importance of NASA in Arkansas.

47TH ANNUAL MARCH FOR LIFE

(Mr. SMUCKER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SMUCKER. Mr. Speaker, last Friday marked the 47th Annual March for Life, and for the first time in history, the march was attended by a sitting President.

Since 2017, the Trump administration has established more conscience protections than ever before, but there is still more work to accomplish.

For example, the Born-Alive Survivors Protection Act, which simply requires healthcare professionals to provide medical care to babies born alive during an attempted abortion, has support from nearly 200 bipartisan cosponsors. Yet, despite numerous calls to bring this legislation to the floor, my colleagues and I have been rejected time after time. It is a sad reality that we have to ask our Democratic colleagues to help us end infanticide, but it is a fight we will continue until innocent lives are protected.

Fighting for life also means fighting for individuals who are victims of sexual abuse, rape, incest, and human trafficking. Mr. Speaker, that is why I introduced legislation to update the new Title X abuse reporting rules, to ensure these victims are protected.

I hope to see these commonsense ideas signed into law and the lives of the unborn protected.

CONFRONTING ANTI-SEMITISM

(Mr. SPANO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to confront a cancer that has been rapidly spreading, and that cancer is anti-Semitism, here at home and around the world.

It is unsettling, and it is downright appalling. Day after day, I see new headlines about disparaging rhetoric and violence against the Jewish people.

The Anti-Defamation League reports that 90 percent of European Jews feel fear of physical attack, and 40 percent live in daily fear of physical attack.

In 2018, here at home, there were 1,879 reported anti-Semitic incidents in the United States. Our Nation was founded on freedom of religion and diversity, and we must do everything necessary to preserve it.

To that end, today, the House passed H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, of which I am a proud cosponsor. It funds Holocaust education programs around the country.

Mr. Speaker, America cannot and will not become a breeding ground for hatred.

RECOGNIZING EAGLE SCOUT DANIEL PAOLELLO

(Mr. VAN DREW asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VAN DREW. Mr. Speaker, today, I recognize Daniel Paolello from Mullica Hills in south Jersey on his attainment of an Eagle Scout rank.

Eagle Scout is the highest rank obtainable from the Boy Scouts of America. Only a very small percentage of all Boy Scouts will ever make it to this prestigious recognition.

Eagle Scouts continue to be more likely to dedicate their lives to service throughout their entire lives, becoming future leaders in military, business, or politics, and joining the ranks of other Eagle Scouts like Neil Armstrong, Steven Spielberg, and Gerald Ford, just to name a very few.

I was proud to attend Daniel’s Court of Honor ceremony earlier this month.

Mr. Speaker, I extend congratulations to Daniel, and we look forward to big things from him in the future.
We all look for heroes. We look to Washington. We look to celebrities. I know where my heroes are, and one of them, without a doubt, is Daniel. May God bless him.

CONGRATULATING VIRGINIA ON ERA RATIFICATION
(Mrs. CAROLYN B. MALONEY of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)
MRS. CAROLYN B. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate leaders in Virginia for their historic vote to become the 38th State to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment today.
For decades, ERA advocates across the country have been fighting so that equality for women and men is constitutionally protected. The momentum behind the effort has never been stronger.
I have sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment for many years because I believe it is the only way to make lasting progress on the goals we consistently fight for, like equal pay for equal work, ending pregnancy discrimination, and combating gender-based violence.
The ERA is a legal foundation that can withstand changing political whims of legislators, judges, or occupants of the White House.
Women are long past due equal treatment under the law. We will persist until it is firmly guaranteed. We demand full equality now. We demand that it be spelled out in the Constitution. And you spell it E-R-A.

RECOGNIZING KAYLEE TOLLESON
(Mr. OLSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. OLSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remind America that Fort Bend County, Texas, is the ice-skating mecca of our country.
Here is Fort Bend’s Tara Lipinski, the youngest woman ever to win a figure skating gold medal in Olympic history.
I regret that I have some bad news for Tara. She is about to become the second youngest woman to win a gold medal in skating.
Here is the soon-to-be youngest woman gold medalist. This is Kaylee Tolleson. She lives in Fort Bend County, just like Tara did. She has already won a gold medal—her life.
Last year, at 9 years old, young Kaylee found out that she had a cancerous tumor the size of a softball on her ovary. Kaylee fought to live. With the love of mom and dad; the miracle workers at Texas Children’s Hospital; and her personal idol, Channel 13 weatherman Travis Herzog, recently, Kaylee rang a bell. She is now cancer-free.
Mr. Speaker, I invite all of America to watch Kaylee skate in the World Olympics in 2026 in Milan, Italy. May God bless Kaylee, and we look forward to watching her on TV.

COMMEMORATING INTERNATIONAL HOLOCAUST REMEMBRANCE DAY
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOLDEN). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2019, the gentleman from New York (Mr. ZELDIN) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

GENERAL LIAVE
Mr. ZELDIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on the topic of my Special Order.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?
There was no objection.
Mr. ZELDIN. Mr. Speaker, tonight, over the course of the next hour on this House floor, Republicans and Democrats are coming together for the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz on International Holocaust Remembrance Day. For all of us, this is an extra special, extra personal moment.

Six million Jews, and millions of others, died during the Holocaust; 11 million people died at Auschwitz alone. Millions of lives were inhumanely cut short, tearing apart families, communities, and countries.
Thanks to the heroism of our Nation’s Greatest Generation, with their strength, and their will, and their courage, good ultimately triumphed over evil.
There must be a permanent, never-ending, never-yielding commitment to never allow this form of hate and evil to ever rise again. This pledge must include combating anti-Semitism and anti-Israel hate wherever it rears its ugly head, and even when it disguises itself as legitimate.
Today, and every day, we must reaffirm our pledge, “Never Again.”
For everyone who is watching at home, after votes, while we are here, at times of Commemoration of International Holocaust Remembrance Day. It is so imperative that we remember all of those who fought tirelessly to defeat the Nazi regime. With rising levels of anti-Semitic sentiment, we cannot let the acts of hate be commonplace. It is our duty to remember and recognize all of those who fought and died for freedom. It is our duty to rise and fight together.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today also to commemorate what that my good friend, LEE ZELDIN talked about, the Greatest Generation who, in their spirit, they fought, and many of them gave all to combat and liberating those downtrodden by the Nazis, those families who were forever destroyed under the German Nazis; liberating them from anti-Semitism in all forms. Anti-Semitism needs to be defeated today.
So, Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues today as we recommit ourselves to the protection of our Jewish brothers and sisters and the State of Israel against all those who seek to destroy them, no matter what form. Come what may—BDS, anti-Semitism, all of those, may God protect Israel and the Jewish people, as we proudly say; and remind our children—what I call the latest generation—who need to understand what the Greatest Generation knew, and that is that it can never be tolerated, never again.
Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).
Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in recognition of International Holocaust Remembrance Day.
Last week, I was honored to join the Speaker’s congressional delegation to Poland and Israel, where we visited Auschwitz and participated in the 75th World Holocaust Remembrance Day.
We cannot fight the scourge of anti-Semitism without remembering the horrors that can occur when hate is allowed to flourish. As we commemorate this important day, we remember those lost, and let the lessons from the Holocaust guide our work for the future.
As a co-chair of the House Bipartisan Task Force for Combating Anti-Semitism, I will continue to work with my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to identify long-term solutions to this age-old problem.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MARSHALL).

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, today, January 27, marks International Holocaust Remembrance Day and the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau.

As we pause to remember the greatest tragedy in human history, we must recommit ourselves to opposing the murderous and racist ideology of anti-Semitism which led to the genocide and death of over six million Jews and 11 million political prisoners at the hands of the Nazi regime.

We must also remember our continuing responsibility to educate the world about the horrible truth of the Nazi atrocities and ensure the lives of those who were brutally murdered are never forgotten.

My fellow Kansan, General Dwight Eisenhower, who, at the time was the Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in Europe, understood this responsibility. Upon receiving news of the concentration camps, he quickly visited for himself, stating: "The things I saw beggar description. While I was touring the camp, I encountered three men who had been inmates and by one ruse or another had made their escape. I viewed them through an interpreter. The visual evidence and the verbal testimonies of starvation, cruelty, and bestiality were so overpowering as to leave me a bit sick. In one room, where they were piled up 20 or 30 naked men, killed by starvation, George Patton would not even enter. He said he would get sick if he did so. I made the visit deliberately, in order to be in position to give the world the accounts of these things if ever, in the future, there develops a tendency to charge these allegations merely to 'propaganda.'"

After his visit, General Eisenhower ordered all concentration camps visited by thousands of soldiers stationed off the front lines, as well as hundreds of German civilians, journalists, Allied forces, and Members of Congress, to ensure the truth reached the public.

By the end of the war, the Nazi regime had succeeded in murdering one-third of the Jewish people in Europe. Its capacity to perpetrate absolute evil and hatred was on a scale never before seen.

Today, this hatred continues to manifest itself in different contexts and ideologies. Just in the past year, we have witnessed violent attacks and the murder of Jews at synagogues and other institutions.

Increasingly, we have watched as Members of Congress have promoted anti-Semitic slurs, stereotypes, and tropes, spreading lies about Jews controlling Congress in the media. It is the responsibility of every American to speak out against the hatred of these anti-Semites and educate others on the evil such hatred can bring.

While the Nazi’s "Final Solution" is unlikely to ever return in the form of concentration camps, in the words of Auschwitz survivor, Primo Levi: "It happened. Therefore, it can happen again."

Every American across our great country would be wise to carry the same responsibility passed along by Eisenhower: To remember those who perished in the hellish nightmare of the Holocaust, to teach others their stories, and to ensure it never happens again.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. GOTTHEIMER).

Mr. GOTTHEIMER. Mr. Speaker, I am humbled to be here this evening to commemorate International Holocaust Remembrance Day and, this year, the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz.

I would like to recognize all of my colleagues and fellow members of the Bipartisan "Never Again:" Combating Anti-Semitism for participating in this Special Order Hour; especially my friends, Congressman TED DEUTCH, Congresswoman DEBBIE WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, and Congressman LEE ZELDIN, for their leadership.

Mr. Speaker, today we remember the six million Jews, and millions more murdered in the Shoa. We must always remember the Holocaust and recommit to learning the lessons of the Shoah to prevent future genocides.

We all have an obligation to teach future generations about this evil, and to pledge "Never Again."

This day is deeply significant to my family and to me. I am the grandson of a World War II veteran who fought the Nazis, and my wife’s grandparents lost their entire family in the Holocaust.

It is critically important that we have come together to commemorate this solemn day, not just to remember the victims of the Holocaust, but to ensure that we all participate in the fight to prevent future genocides.

Therefore, we cannot, and must not, ignore the stunning rise in anti-Semitism and Holocaust denial across Europe, around the world and, increasingly, here at home in the United States. We must remain vigilant against anti-Semitic attacks we have experienced in New York and New Jersey in recent months.

Furthermore, the mounting evidence that knowledge about the Holocaust is beginning to fade should alarm us. As Elie Wiesel said, "Indifference, after all, is more dangerous than anger or hatred."

According to a recent survey by Pew Research Center, too many Americans know too little about the Holocaust. For instance, less than half of all adult respondents knew that approximately six million Jews were killed during the Holocaust; and just 43 percent knew that Adolf Hitler became chancellor of Germany through a democratic political process.

Unfortunately, these findings echo a series of surveys conducted in the United States, Canada, Austria, and France in recent years, which also found significant gaps in knowledge about the Holocaust.

We know how critical education, visiting a Holocaust museum, and meeting with survivors can be. That is why I am very proud to cosponsor H.R. 943, the Never Again Education Act, bipartisan legislation introduced by Congresswoman CAROLYN B. MALONEY and Congresswoman STEFANKI, to help support Holocaust education across the country.

This legislation was endorsed last year by the bipartisan Problem Solvers Caucus and has been cosponsored by nearly 300 Members of Congress. And I am very pleased that the House voted to pass this legislation earlier this evening.

I also believe it is more important than ever for our government to commemorate the Holocaust and educate citizens about its history. That is why I worked with my colleagues, Representatives TED DEUTCH and BRAD SCHNEIDER, to ensure that our country properly remembers the horrors of the Holocaust as part of the United States’ commemoration of the 75th anniversary of World War II.

Additionally, I am proud to be a cosponsor of the TIME for Holocaust Survivors Act, which would provide better care to approximately 80,000 survivors currently living in the United States.

Finally, I am deeply grateful for, and very proud to support the critical, ongoing work of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, the U.S. State Department’s Special Envoy for Holocaust Issues and for Combating Anti-Semitism, and the Holocaust Survivor Assistance Program.

This past fall, a bipartisan group of Members of Congress visited the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum to tour the permanent exhibition.

President Clinton observed at the opening of the museum: "One of the eternal lessons to which this museum bears witness is that the struggle against darkness will never end and the need for vigilance will never fade away."

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleagues from both sides of the aisle who have gathered here today to commemorate this very solemn day. Given the rise of anti-Semitism here at home and around the world, we need leaders willing to stand up now, and to stand together against anti-Semitism, and all forms of bigotry, hatred, and intolerance, which have no place in our country or world.

Together, as we talk to our families, when I talk to my children, we should always remember the victims of the Holocaust and take care of the survivors.

May God continue to bless the United States of America, watch over them; and let us always remember.
Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART).

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, today we stand in support of the 75th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz concentration camp, to honor the memories of those victims of the Holocaust. January 27 is also the day, again, 75 years ago, when Auschwitz was liberated, a day to remember the atrocities of the Holocaust so we may never allow such a horror to happen again anywhere on this planet. We must reeducate ourselves to ensuring that we confront evil and oppose all forms of anti-Semitism.

Mr. Speaker, incredibly, some have the audacity to deny that the Holocaust happened. Others advocate for boycott, divestment, and sanctions in regard to our democratic ally, the State of Israel.

We have seen shocking anti-Semitic attacks waged against Jewish communities all over the world and even here in the United States. That is why I am so proud to join with my colleagues here in the House from both sides of the aisle in remembering our responsibility to confront indifference to evil whenever evil raises its head.

Last week, I met with friends from the American Jewish Committee back home in the district, and I learned that 25 percent of Jews are afraid to visit their place of worship or to proudly display their deeply held beliefs in public because they are concerned or potentially afraid for their safety.

Seventy-five years ago, the world saw this horrific revelation of the depths of human depravity. That is why, today, on the House floor, we stand united, together. Despite our potential differences, our religious traditions, our background, we stand united, together, to reiterate that anti-Semitism will not be tolerated, Mr. Speaker, and that Israel will always have the support of the United States of America.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. CICILLINE).

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlelman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today on International Holocaust Remembrance Day, the 75th anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz concentration camp, to honor the memories of the 6 million Jews and 5 million others murdered during the Holocaust and to tell the world that we will never forget. Today, we remember the lives lost during this incredibly dark period in human history.

Jewish children of my generation grew up seeing the dark numbers etched into the arms of friends, neighbors, and family. We heard the stories directly from survivors about the families they loved and lost, the unspeakable brutality they endured, and the freedom they felt so lucky to have secured here in America.

But today’s children are the last generation who will have the opportunity to see and hear for themselves the stories of survivors. It is, therefore, our responsibility to keep their voices alive, to tell their stories, to be certain they know this history, and, most importantly, to absorb the lessons of the Holocaust so we can prevent future evil, instead.

Sadly, we know that, in the United States today, fewer people are learning about the Holocaust. A Pew Research survey recently found that only 38 percent of American teens knew that 6 million Jews were murdered in the Holocaust.

At the same time that Holocaust education is declining, we see a significant rise of neo-Nazi and white supremacist movements being fueled by the ability to communicate online and a rise in anti-Semitic attacks in the United States and around the world.

If there is anything we can do to honor the lives of those murdered in the Shoah, it is to ensure that we don’t allow time to erase their stories, their memories.

We can’t just look back. We must apply the lessons learned from the Holocaust, as painful as they are, to fight against hatred, bigotry, intolerance, and to respond to Dr. King’s words, “Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.”

Our burden as policymakers is to make certain that we are engaged in that fight against hatred, bigotry, and anti-intolerance. I pray on this day of remembrance that we honor those who suffered and died at the hands of Nazi Germany by standing up to injustice wherever we see it.

I thank my colleagues for their support on this somber day, and I urge Americans everywhere to never forget.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. KUSTOFF).

Mr. KUSTOFF of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman for helping organize this evening.

Mr. Speaker, today, as we commemorate International Holocaust Remembrance Day and the 75 years since the liberation of Auschwitz, it is important that we honor the 6 million Jewish victims of the Holocaust and the millions of other victims of the evil Nazi regime—we honor their memory, we honor their bravery, and we honor their spirit.

It is also important that we pay tribute to the survivors who continue to share their stories to ensure that all of us, especially the younger generations, never forget the grave tragedy that took place. As Elle Wiesel said: ‘‘For the dead and the living, we must bear witness.’’

Sadly, the frequency and the scale of anti-Semitic incidents in our Nation and across the globe have increased, causing deep alarm. We must continue to speak up, and we must continue to play a part to keep the spotlight on the ugly resurgence of this hate.

Today, on the annual day of commemoration, my colleagues and I came together and we passed legislation, the Never Again Education Act, which will ensure our children, tomorrow’s leaders, are taught about the horrors of the Holocaust.

I appreciate my colleagues for joining me in being united in our opposition to the rise of anti-Semitism around the world, as well as taking this time to honor the victims of the Holocaust.

We must take this opportunity to reflect on the past in hopes of preventing future types of evil from occurring. Let us remember those who perished in the Holocaust and pray that this never happens again.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SCHNEIDER).

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. WEBER) for yielding. I thank all of my colleagues as we join today and we remember, as we rise in recognition of International Holocaust Remembrance Day, memorializing the genocide of more than six million Jews, including 1½ million children. This year’s observance holds special meaning, as it is the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz.

Auschwitz-Birkenau was the largest Nazi death camp, where more than 1.1 million people—men, women, and children—were brutally murdered. The Nazis sent many people, including political dissidents, intellectuals, Roma, and LGBTQ people to Auschwitz; but the vast majority, 90 percent of the victims, were Jewish.

Last week, I had the solemn and profound honor to visit Auschwitz with a bipartisan congressional delegation led by Speaker NANCY PELOSI. We walked through the gas chambers. We stood before the ovens built to burn up to 1,800 bodies each day. We visited the barracks where people slept five to a bed and three racks high. We saw what seemed like infinite piles of suitcases, shoes, eyeglasses, even human hair collected from the victims by their Nazi killers.

Notably, in a place representing humanity’s greatest crime, where people were denied the ability to even pray to their God, we joined with our Polish hosts to honor the memories of the martyrs by reciting the Kaddish, the Jewish mourners’ prayer.

In 2018, a gunman walked in Auschwitz in the days that followed, we all asked ourselves: How could the Holocaust happen? Could it happen in today’s world? And how do we ensure that such evil never happens again?

A key lesson of the Holocaust is that we cannot remain silent in the face of rising anti-Semitism. Right now, that lesson is more important than ever in the face of a dramatic increase in anti-Semitism around the world, including here in the United States.

In 2018, a gunman walked into the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh and killed 11 people. It was the worst anti-Semitic attack in our Nation’s history, but it was not the last: a synagogue in Poway, California; a kosher grocery in New Jersey; a Hanukkah celebration in Monsey, New York; across the country, a staggering increase in verbal and physical assaults, vandalism, and other acts of Jewish hate. The numbers are horrifying.

Globally, Jews are being told to not publicly wear a yarmulke or other outward symbols of their Jewish identity. Through Europe and increasingly here at home, armed guards are posted outside synagogues, Jewish schools, and community centers. Entire communities are living in fear.

We cannot remain silent. All of us, no matter who we are, where we live, or how we worship, all of us must speak out and condemn both anti-Semitic words and actions whenever and wherever hate raises its ugly head.

In that spirit of representation, we have and will continue to take action to confront anti-Semitism. Last year, the House passed the strongest resolution in our history to clearly state we reject anti-Semitic stereotypes and consign acts and statements to be hateful expressions of intolerance that are contrary to American values. We passed a bill to secure $90 million in funding to defend vulnerable houses of worship.

Congress continues to help fund the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum to preserve the memory, teach the lessons, and lead the work to stop future genocides. Today, this House passed legislation to increase our commitment to telling the next generation about the Shoah.

Congress isn’t just focused on anti-Semitism here at home. In 2016 and 2017, the House pressured the administration to fill the long-vacant position of Special Envoy to Monitor and Combat Anti-Semitism. Finally, last year, President Trump appointed E llen Carr to this role to coordinate America’s response to anti-Semitism around the world.

As for our trip, after visiting Auschwitz on Tuesday, our group flew to Israel to join delegations from 49 different nations, including 41 heads of state, at a historic commemoration ceremony at Yad Vashem on Thursday. In the largest diplomatic gathering in Israel’s history, flanked by Kings, Prime Ministers, and Presidents, we spoke with one common voice to honor the memories of the 6 million people lost. We celebrated the survivors and the righteous gentiles who defied the Nazis to save thousands of lives, and we renewed our commitment to fight anti-Semitism now and forever.

Returning home, the group had the chance to meet with several Holocaust survivors and hear their stories. It is said that, by hearing the testimony of a living witness to the Holocaust, we are made witnesses ourselves. As the remaining survivors age, soon there will be a point when we will have lost the last survivor’s voice. We, the living, must work to preserve their stories for future generations.

Only by remembering the lives lost and speaking out against intolerance in our own time can we live up to our sacred promise: Never again.

We remember. We will live up to our promise: Never again.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. HILL).

Mr. HILL of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I commend our bipartisan group of Members on this floor tonight for recognizing Holocaust Remembrance Day to pay tribute to all those who were affected by the enormity, the calamity, and the horrors of the Holocaust.

Today marks the 75th anniversary of the liberation of the camp at Auschwitz on January 27, 1945.

“For ever let this place be a cry of despair and a warning to humanity, where the Nazis murdered about one and a half million men, women, and children, mainly Jews from various countries of Europe.” Auschwitz-Birkenau 1940-1945.”

Two years ago, I will never forget reading those words as I paid my respects on a visit to this enormous Nazi death machine. This side of humanity’s greatest failure among millennia of human failure was a manufacturing facility. The Nazi’s product: murder.

Laying a wreath at the death wall, kneeling in prayer before the memorial where the Nazis murdered about one million people—Slavs, LGBTQ people, political dissidents, disabled people, and others—would lose their lives to Nazi terror before the war ended.

Today, we remember one of the darkest chapters in our history, the Shoah, when 6 million Jews were brutally murdered in a genocide that left an indelible mark on humanity.

This year marks 75 years since the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau Nazi death camp.

There alone, 1.1 million people, mostly Jews, were killed. Today, we remember them, and we say again: “Never again.”

International Holocaust Remembrance Day serves as a reminder of what depravity humans are capable of when we don’t make it a priority to end hate and intolerance. We must remember the victims now and always, and that includes making Holocaust education a priority in our schools. I am thankful that today my colleagues and I passed legislation to do just that.

There is no place for anti-Semitism, racism, hate, or intolerance in 2020. I join with my colleagues today in saying: “Never again.”

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for being here tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. SHALALA).

Ms. SHALALA. Mr. Speaker, today, on Holocaust Remembrance Day, we mark the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau.

We remember the 6 million Jews, as well as millions of other minority populations, who were systematically murdered by the Nazi regime and its collaborators. We remember the families who were separated and the sacrifices made by those who protected Jewish lives.

Fascist evil was committed against Jews, Roma, Catholics, LGBTQ individuals, people with disabilities, and others.

We honor the 10,000 Holocaust survivors who live in south Florida and the nearly 70,000 more who live around the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to honor my friend, Dr. Miriam Klein Kassenoff, who fled Nazi Europe as a child in 1941. An educational specialist for Holocaust studies at Miami-Dade County Public Schools and director of the Holocaust Institute at the University of Miami, Miriam has dedicated her life to educating the new generation of teachers and students about the horrors of the Holocaust.

Mr. Speaker, as we enter this new decade, we recommit ourselves to ensuring that “never again” means never again. We will never stop fighting virulent, hateful anti-Semitism and discrimination wherever and whenever it appears.

In this House, the people’s House, we stand together, united against hate. We stand together in pledging “never again.”

Never again.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Florida for her comments, and I yield to another gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ).

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, today, we remember the 6 million Jews and millions of others who were systematically murdered in the darkest chapter of human history.

Last week, I had the privilege of traveling with a bipartisan delegation led by Speaker Nancy Pelosi to two nations forever interwoven into the fabric of Jewish history: the first, a monument to tragedy; the second, a beacon of hope.

In Poland at Auschwitz-Birkenau, we saw firsthand the painful cruelty of the Nazi regime. We walked the train tracks that transported innocent people to captivity and the gas chambers, which led to their cruel and inhumane slaughter.

After our time in Poland, I, like so many Jews escaping the horrors they experienced in Europe, traveled to the Holy Land with my colleagues. In Israel, we witnessed hope, the homeland of the Jewish people.

I continued to be humbled to see that such generational trauma experienced by our people could be harnessed into something as powerful as democracy.

At Yad Vashem, Israel’s national memorial to Holocaust victims, we participated in a solemn commemoration to those who did not live to see a homeland that would be theirs. We heard the stories of the lives lost to hate and of the men and women who managed to survive that torture.

I represented the 23,000 Holocaust survivors of the Holocaust populations in the United States. As the last generation of survivors ends their twilight years, it is even more important now that we keep their memories alive and recorded for future generations.

In the face of rising hate and anti-Semitism at home and abroad, we all have a role to play in fighting bigotry wherever and whenever it rears its ugly head.

The legislation the House passed today, the Never Again Education Act, which provides teachers with resources to teach children the important lessons of the Holocaust and the consequences of bigotry and hate, is a critically important and vital step.

As co-chair of the Latino-Jewish Caucus and the Congressional Caucus on Black-Jewish Relations and a proud member of the Task Force on Combating Anti-Semitism, I am proud that we have all come together today to organize this Special Order in honor of International Holocaust Remembrance Day.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for making this a priority so that we could give voice to the notion of “never again.”

Today, we remember to ensure that never again will the horrors of the past be repeated.

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman being here for tonight’s Special Order, and I yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTCH).

Mr. DEUTCH. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Texas for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am so honored to be here on International Holocaust Remembrance Day with colleagues, Democratic and Republican alike, who understand the importance of giving real meaning to the words “never again.”

Standing at Auschwitz-Birkenau as we did with a bipartisan delegation last week, what you can’t help but be struck by is the effort, the enormous effort that the Nazis went to, to try to destroy the Jewish people, to wipe them from the face of the Earth. Yet, they failed.

The State of Israel is strong, the strong homeland of the Jewish people. I am proud that Adolf Hitler could never have imagined, that the Nazis could never have imagined, Jewish Members of the House, like myself, have the opportunity like the one now to remind America why this is so important.

Like my colleague from Florida, Congresswoman WASSERMAN SCHULTZ, I represent a lot of survivors. Twice a year, our local Jewish family service organization has a program called Cafe Europa. They bring together the survivors from our community for lunch and the opportunity to socialize, to enjoy music, and to be with one another.

They sit the survivors at tables based on the communities in Europe that the Nazis tried to eradicate all the Jews. Here they are now, most in their nineties, coming together, in this case in south Florida, with the opportunity to be with one another.

What is so remarkable is that at virtually every one of these meetings, there is a moment when a survivor from a community in Europe is able to reunite with another survivor from that community that he or she has not seen since before World War II. They have the chance to share their stories not just with each other, but they get to share their stories with all of us.

Some, like Norman Frajman, a dear friend of mine who lost 126 family members in the Holocaust, was clear when he said, in speaking about Cafe Europa: “We are disappearing, but when I see faces here, it does my heart good. There are still witnesses to this tragedy, and younger generations must learn about these so that it will not occur when hatred toward one another occurs. We must replace hate with love.”

Norman is right.

Sylvia Richter, also from south Florida, was at Cafe Europa and said this in describing what happened to her, she said:

“My sisters and I were chosen by Dr. Mengele. I was forced to lie about my age and say I was 17 instead of 14. A female Nazi officer wiped black soot off her arm and told me it was my mother, father and siblings that she was wiping away and if I didn’t keep lying, this would be me too. As she wiped away those ashes, she wiped away my smile. I never smiled again until 1946.

There are people in America, there are people in the world who deny the Holocaust. There are far too many people who don’t know the details of what happened during the Holocaust, and, sadly, these voices, these survivors will not be with us for too many more years.

That is why this is so important today. That is why it is so important for all of us to come together, to pledge
But this is from a man who goes by the name of Julius Goett. I think his real name is A. R. Moxon:
"Historians have a word for Germans who joined the Nazi party, not because they hated Jews, but out of a hope for restored patriotism, or a sense of economic anxiety, or a hope to preserve their religious values, or dislike of their opponents, or raw political opportunism, or convenience, or ignorance, or greed.
That word is 'Nazi.' Nobody cares about their motives anymore."

The motives which brought about the Nazi Party and the Holocaust need to be confronted in its nascent stages, and we need to do it when the Klan speaks, when David Duke speaks, and others.

Mr. WEBER of Texas, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his comments, and the ugly head of racism and ethnic prejudice and discrimination because it starts with the Jews, but it never ends.

Mr. WEBER of Texas, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his comments. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to be here today with my colleagues from both sides of the aisle. There is nothing partisan about standing up to hatred and bigotry and fighting anti-Semitism. That is what we are showing here tonight.

Mr. WEBER of Texas, Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Today, I had the opportunity to attend the anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau camp, which was held at the United Nations.

It was a stirring program with testimony from two survivors who told of the awful situation they had to survive and educate their parents and the other communities.

The bill we passed today was important and good. But we need to do more than just talk about it.

When the Klan raises its ugly head in Charlottesville, Virginia, and other places, we condemn it. I saw the Ku Klux Klan whose whole basis is against African Americans and against Jews because of their race and because of their religion.

Everyone who is against anti-Semitism should be against racism, should be against all kinds of intolerance and discrimination because it starts with the Jews, but it never ends with the Jews. The Jews are, indeed, a canary—African Americans have been, too. In the future, we have to do the same.

When the Klan speaks, we can’t say in any way that at all there are fine people among the Klan’s people. Nor can we do that with other groups. And when David Duke speaks up, we have to realize that David Duke hates Blacks and hates Jews and needs to be condemned by all people on both sides. I want to say that I am on social media. I am not a big fan of social media. I use it to some extent, but much of it is hateful.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. WEBER of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 8 o’clock and 37 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, January 28, 2020, at 10 a.m. for morning-hour debate.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The Senate met at 1:05 p.m. and was called to order by the Chief Justice of the United States.

TRIAL OF DONALD J. TRUMP, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The CHIEF JUSTICE. The Senate will convene as a Court of Impeachment.

The Chaplain will lead us in prayer.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Lord, through all the generations, You have been our mighty God. As millions mourn the deaths of Kobe and Gianna Bryant and those who died with them, we think about life's brevity, uncertainty, and legacy. Remind us that we all have a limited time on Earth to leave the world better than we found it.

As this impeachment process unfolds, give our Senators the desire to make the most of their time on Earth. Teach them how to live, O God, and lead them along the path of honesty. May they hear the words of Jesus of Nazareth reverberating down the corridors of the centuries: "And you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

And Lord, thank You for giving our Chief Justice another birthday. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Chief Justice led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

THE JOURNAL

The CHIEF JUSTICE. Please be seated. If there is no objection, the Journal of proceedings of the trial is approved to date.

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Sergeant at Arms will make the proclamation.

The Sergeant at Arms, Michael C. Stenger, made the proclamation as follows:

Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! All persons are commanded to keep silence, on pain of imprisonment, while the Senate of the United States is sitting for the trial of the articles of impeachment exhibited by the House of Representatives against Donald John Trump, President of the United States.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. Chief Justice, as the Chaplain has indicated, on behalf of all of us, happy birthday. I am sure this is exactly how you had planned to celebrate the day.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. Thank you very much for those kind wishes, and thank you to all the Senators for not asking for the yeas and nays.

ORDER OF PROCEEDURE

Mr. MCCONNELL. For the information of all Senators, we should expect to break every 2 or 3 hours and then at 6 o'clock a break for dinner.

And with that, Mr. Chief Justice, I yield the floor.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. Pursuant to the provisions of S. Res. 483, the counsel for the President have 22 hours and 5 minutes remaining to make the presentation of their case. The Senate will now hear you.

The Senate will now hear you, Mr. Sekulow.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, managers, what we have done on Saturday is the pattern that we are going to continue today, as far as how we are going to deal with the case. We dealt with transcript evidence. We deal with publicly available information. We do not deal with speculation, allegations that are not based on evidentiary standards at all.

We are going to highlight some of those very facts we talked about very quickly on Saturday. You are going to hear more about that. I want to give you a little bit of an overview of what we plan to do today in our presentation.

You will hear from a number of lawyers. Each one of these lawyers will be addressing a particular aspect of the President’s case. I will introduce the issues that they are going to discuss, and, then, that individual will come up and make their presentation. We want to do this on an expeditious but yet thorough basis.

Let me start with, just for a very brief few moments, taking a look at where we were. One of the things that became very clear to us as we looked at the presentation from the House managers was the lack of focus on that July 25 transcript. That is because the transcript actually doesn’t say what they would like it to say. We have heard—and you will hear more—about that in the days ahead. We know about Mr. SCHIFF’s version of the transcript. You heard it. You saw it.

I want to keep coming back to facts—facts that are undisputed. The President, in his conversation, was clear on a number of points, but so was President Zelensky. I mentioned that at the close of my arguments earlier, that it was President Zelensky who said: No pressure, I didn’t feel any pressure.

And, again, as this kind of reading of minds of what people were saying, I think we need to look at what they actually said and how it is backed up.

It is our position as the President’s counsel that the President was at all time acting under his constitutional authority, under his legal authority, in our national interest, and pursuant to his oath of office. Asking a foreign leader to get to the bottom of issues of corruption is not a violation of an oath.

It was interesting because there was a lot of discussion the other day about Lieutenant Colonel Vindman, and one of the things that we reiterate is that... he himself said that he did not know if there was anything of crime or anything of that nature. He had deep policy concerns. I think that is what this is really about—deep policy concerns, deep policy differences.

We live in a constitutional Republic where you have deep policy concerns and deep differences. That should not be the basis of an impeachment. If the bar of impeachment has now reached that level, then, for the sake of the Republic, the danger that puts not just this country but our entire constitutional framework in is unimaginable. Every time there is a policy difference of significance or an approach difference of significance about a policy, are we going to start an impeachment proceeding?

As I said earlier, I don’t think this was about just a phone call. There was a pattern in practice of attempts over a 3-year period to not only interfere with the President’s capability to govern—which in this way, they were completely unsuccessful at; just look at the state of where we are as a country—but also interfere with the constitutional framework.

I am going to say this because I want to be brief. We are going to have series of lawyers address you. So it will not be one lawyer for hours and hours. We are going to have a series of lawyers address you on a variety of issues. This is how we envision the President’s defense. The way that it is set up is not simply part of the record; it is entrusted to the National Archives. In contrast, Members of the House of Representatives do not take an oath in connection with impeachment. The Members of the Senate will know, once an oath or affirmation should be required—the Senate, yes; the House, no. Thus, each Member of the world’s greatest deliberative body now special—indeed unique—duties and obligations imposed under our founding document.

During the Clinton impeachment trial 21 years ago in this Chamber, the Chief Justice of the United States ruled in response to an objection that was interposed by Senator Tom Harkin of Iowa. The Senators are not sitting as jurors, Senator Harkin noted, and the Chief Justice agreed with that proposition. Rather, the Senate is a court. In fact, history teaches us that for literally decades, this body was referred to as the High Court of impeachment. So we are not a legislative Chamber during these proceedings. We are in a tribunal. We are in court.

Alexander Hamilton has been quoted frequently in these proceedings, but in Federalist 78, he was describing the role of courts—your role—and in doing so, he distinguished between what he called the exercise of judgment on the one hand, which is what courts do, and the exercise of will or policy preferences, if you will, on the other hand. That is what legislative bodies do.

According to Hamilton, courts were to be, in his word, “impartial.” There is that word again. You know, that is a daunting task for judges struggling to do the right thing, to be impartial—equal justice under law. It is certainly hard in life to be impartial. In politics, it is not even asked of one to be impartial. But that is the task that the Constitution chose to impose upon each of you.

Significantly, in this particular juncture in America’s history, the Senate is being called to sit as the High Court of Impeachment all too frequently. Indeed, we are living in what I think can aptly be described as the “age of impeachment.” In the House, resolution after resolution, month after month, has called for the President’s impeachment.

How did we get here, with Presidential impeachment invoked frequently in its inherently destabilizing, as well as acrimonious way? Briefly told, the story begins 42 years ago. The internal nightmare of Watergate, Congress and President Jimmy Carter collaboratively ushered in a new chapter in America’s constitutional history. Together, in full agreement, they enacted the independent counsel provisions of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978. But the new chapter was not simply the age of independent counsels; it became, unbeknownst to the American people, the age of impeachment.

In my service during the Reagan administration as Counsel and Chief of Staff to Attorney General William French Smith, the Justice Department took the position that, however well-intentioned, the independent counsel provisions were undercreative. Why? In the view of the Department, those provisions intruded into the rightful domain and prerogative of the executive branch of the Presidency.

The Justice Department’s position was eventually rejected by the Supreme Court, but most importantly, in helping us understand this new era in our country’s history. Justice Antonin Scalia was in deep dissent. Among his stinging criticisms of that law, Justice Scalia wrote this: “The context of this statute is acrid with the smell of threatened impeachment.” Impeachment. Justice Scalia echoed the criticism of the court in which I was serving at the time, the District of Columbia Circuit, which had actually struck down the law as unconstitutional in a very impressive opinion by renowned Judge Laurence Silberman.

Why would Justice Scalia refer to impeachment? This was a reform measure. There would be no more Saturday Night Massacres—the firing of Special Prosecutor, as he was called, Archibald Cox by President Nixon. Government would now be better, more honest, accountable. Independent counsel would be protected. But the word “impeachment” haunts that dissenting opinion, and it is not hard to discover why—because the statute, by its terms, expressly directed the independent counsel to become, in effect, an agent of the House of Representatives. And to what end? To report to the House of Representatives when a very low threshold of information was received that an impeachable offense, left undefined, may have been committed.

To paraphrase President Clinton’s very able counsel at the time, Bernie Nussbaum, this statute is a dagger aimed at the heart of the Presidency. President Clinton, nonetheless, signed the reauthorized measure into law, and the Nation then went through the long process known as Whitewater, resulting in the findings by the office which I led—Independent Counsel Walsh, and a written report to the House of Representatives. That referral to Congress was stipulated in the Ethics in Government Act of 1978.

To put it mildly, Democrats were very upset about what had happened. They then joined Republicans across the aisle who, for their part, had been outraged by an earlier independent counsel investigation, that of a very distinguished former judge, Lawrence Walsh.

During the Reagan administration, Judge Walsh’s investigation into what became known to the country as Iran-Contra spawled enormous criticism on the Republican side of the aisle, both as to the investigation itself but also as to statute.

The acrimony surrounding Iran-Contra and then the impeachment and the trial and President Clinton’s acquittal—were both led inexorably to the end of the independent counsel era. Enough was enough. Living through that wildly controversial, 21-year, bold experiment with the independent counsel statute, Congress, in a bipartisan way, had a change of heart. It allowed the law to expire in accordance with its terms in 1999.

That would-be and well-intentioned reform measure died a quiet and uneventful death, and it was promptly replaced by Justice Department internal regulations promulgated by Attorney General Janet Reno during the waning months of the President Clinton administration. One can review those regulations and see no reference to impeachment—none. No longer were the poison pill provisions of Presidential impeachment part of America’s legal landscape. They were gone. The Reno regulation seemed to signal a return to traditional norms. Impeachment would be, once again, sheathed. Had presidential impeachment remained sheathed. Had there been controversial Presidents? Oh, yes, indeed. Think of John Adams and the Alien and Sedition Acts. Think of Andrew Johnson and Henry Clay. Were partisan passions occasionally inflamed during that first century? Of course.

And lest there be any doubt, the early Congresses fully well knew how to summon from the floor, including against a Member of this body—Senator William Blount, of Tennessee. During the Jefferson administration, the unsuccessful impeachment of Justice Samuel Chase—a surly and partial jurist, who was, nonetheless, acquitted by this Chamber—became an early landmark in maintaining the preserved independence of our Federal judiciary.

It took the national convulsion of the Civil War, the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, and the counter-reconstruction measures aggressively pursued by Mr. Lincoln’s successor, Andrew Johnson, to bring about the Nation’s very first Presidential impeachment. Famously, of course, your predecessors in this High Court of Impeachment acquitted the unpopular and controversial John but only by virtue of Senators from the party of Lincoln breaking ranks.

It was over a century later that the Nation returned to the tumultuous world of Presidential impeachment, necessitated by the rank criminality of the Nixon administration. In light of the rapidly unfolding facts, including uncovered by the Senate select committee, in an over-hampered bipartisan vote of 410 to 4, the House of Representatives authorized an impeachment inquiry; and, in 1974, the House Judiciary Committee, after lengthy hearings, voted again in a bipartisan manner to impeach the President of the United States. Importantly, President Nixon’s own party was slowly but inexorably moving toward favoring the removal of their chosen leader from the Nation’s highest office, who had just won reelection by a landslide.

It bears emphasis before this high court that this was the first Presidential impeachment in over 100 years. It also bears emphasis that it waspow-
Presidential impeachment. That is what courts do. They weave the common law. There are indications within the constitutional text—I will come to our history—so that this fundamental question is appropriate to be asked—you are familiar with the arguments: Was the President's abuse of power a violation of established law alleged?

So let's turn to the text. Throughout the Constitution's description of impeachment, the text speaks always, without exception, in terms of crimes. It begins, of course, with treason—the greatest of crimes against the state and against we the people, but so misused as a bludgeon and parliamentary experience, to lead the Founders to actually define the term in the Constitution itself. Bribery—an iniquitous form of moral and legal corruption and the basis of so many of the 63 impeachment proceedings over the course of our history—again, almost all of them against judges, the members' terms—other high crimes and misdemeanors. Once again, the language is employing the language of crimes. The Constitution is speaking to us in terms of crimes.

Easily those references, when you count them—count seven, count eight—supports the conclusion that impeachments should be evaluated in terms of offenses against established law but especially with respect to the Presidency, the Constitution requires the Chief Justice of the United States and not a political officer—no matter how honest, no matter how impartial—to preside at trial. Guided by history, the Framers made a deliberate and wise choice to cabin, to constrain, to limit the power of impeachment.

And so it was, on the very eve of the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson, that the eminent scholar and dean of Columbia Law School, Theodore Johnson, that the eminent scholar and wise choice to cabin, to constrain, to limit the power of impeachment.

And so the appropriate question: Were crimes alleged in the articles of the common law of Presidential impeachment? In Nixon, yes. In Clinton, yes. Here, no—a factor to be considered as the judges of the high court. Come, as you will, individually to your judgment.

Even in the political cauldron of the Andrew Johnson impeachment, article XI charged a violation of the controversial Tenure of Office Act. You are familiar with it. And that act warned expressly the Oval Office; that its violation would institute a high misdemeanor, employing the very language of constitutionally cognizable crimes.

This history represents, and I believe, may it please the court, it embodies the common law of Presidential impeachment. These are facts gleaned from the constitutional text and from the gloss of the Nation’s history. And under this view, the commission of an alleged crime, the violation of established law, can appropriately be considered, again, a weighty and an important consideration and element of a historically supportable Presidential impeachment.

Will law professors agree with this? No, but with all due respect to the academy, this is not an academic gathering. We are in court. We are not just in court. With all due respect to the Chief Justice and the Supreme Court of the United States, we are in democracy’s ultimate court.

And the better constitutional answer to the question is provided by a rigorous and faithful examination of the constitutional text and then looking faithfully and respectfully to our history.

The very divisive Clinton impeachment demonstrates that, while highly relevant, the commission of a crime is by no means sufficient to warrant the removal of our duly elected President. Why?

This body knows. We appoint judges and you confirm them and they are there for life. Not Presidents. And the Presidency is up. The Presidency stands alone in our constitutional framework.

Before he became the Chief Justice of the United States, John Marshall, then sitting as a Member of the people’s House, made a speech on the floor of the House, and there he said this: The President is the sole organ of the Nation in its external relations, and its sole representative with foreign nations.

If that sounds like hyperbole, it has been embraced over decades by the Supreme Court of the United States, by Justices appointed by many different Presidents. The Presidency is unique. There is no other system quite like ours, and it has served us well.

As long as the Presidency, impeachment and removal not only overturns a national election and perhaps profoundly affects an upcoming election, in the words of Yale's Akhil Amar, it entails a risk, and these are Akhil's words, a "grave disruption of the government." Professor Amar penned those words in connection with the Clinton impeachment—"Grave disruption of the government." Regardless of what the President does, there must be a check on Presidential power through and within the Constitution.

We will all agree that the Presidents, under the text of the Constitution and its amendments, are to serve out their term absent a genuine national consensus, reflected by the two-thirds majority requirement of this court, that the President must go away. Two-thirds. In politics and in impeachment, that is called a landslide.

Here, I respectfully submit to the court, that all fairminded persons will agree there is no consensus. We might wish for one, but there isn't. To the contrary, for the first time in America’s modern history, not a single House Member of the President’s party supported either of the two Articles of Impeachment—not one, not in committee, not on the House floor.

And that pivotal fact puts in bold relief the Peter Rodino principle—call it the Rodino rule—impeachment must be bipartisan.

Again, sitting as a court, this body should signal to the Nation the return to our traditions—bipartisan impeachments.

What is the alternative? Will the President be King? Do oversight. The traditional words, President, is risen up. And the check on Presidential power throughout our history, and it continues available today.

In Iran-Contra, no impeachment was undertaken. The Speaker of the House, Jim Wright, from Texas, from Fort Worth, where the West begins, knew better. He said no. But as befits the age of impeachment, a House resolution to impeach President Ronald Reagan was introduced. It was filed, and the effort to impeach President Reagan was supported by a leading law professor whose name you would well recognize, and you will hear it again this evening from Professor Dershowitz. I have to try to identify the learned professor. But the Speaker of the people’s House, emulating Peter Rodino, said no.

So I, respectfully, submit that the Senate should close this chapter, this ideological chapter, on this increasingly disruptive act, this era, this age of resorting to the Constitution’s ultimate democratic weapon for the Presidency. Let the people decide.

There was a great Justice who sat for 30 years, Justice John Harlan, in the mid-century of the 20th century. And in a lawsuit involving a very basic question: Can citizens whose rights have clearly been violated by Federal law enforcement agencies and agents bring the Rodino rule. The House of Representatives could have acted, but it hadn’t. But he reluctantly came to the conclusion that the Constitution itself empowered the Federal courts to create this right for our injured citizens, to give them redress, not just an injunctive relief but damages, money recovery, for violations of their constitutional rights. Factors counseling restraint. He was somewhat reluctant to say that the Supreme Court, should grant this right, that we should create it when Congress hasn’t acted and Congress could have acted, but it hadn’t.

And Justice Harlan, in a magnificently contrived opinion in Bivens v. Six Unnamed Federal Agents, suggested that courts—here you are—should take into consideration in reaching its judgment—their judgment—what he called factors counseling restraint.

In recognizing the President’s profound interest in confidentiality, regardless of the world view or philosophy of the justice, the Justices were unanimous. This isn’t just a contrivance; it is built into the very nature of our constitutional order. So let me comment, briefly:

This constitutionally based recognition of executive privilege and then companion privileges—the deliberative process privilege, the immunity of close Presidential advisers from being summoned yet, are all firmly established in our law.

If there is a dispute between the people’s House and the President of the United States over the availability of documents or witnesses—and there is in each and every administration—then go to court. It really is as simple as that. I don’t need to belabor the point.

But here is the point I would like to emphasize. Frequently, the Justice Department advises the President of the United States not to follow the advice rendered by the Presidency calls—whatever the President might want to do as a political matter, as an accommodation in the spirit of comity—to protect privileged conversations and communications.

I have heard it, in my two tours of duty at the Justice Department: Don’t release the documents, Mr. President. If you do, you are injuring the Presidency. Go to court.

We have heard concerns about the length of time that the litigation might take. Those of us who have litigated know that sometimes litigation does take longer than we would like. Justice delayed is justice denied. We might take longer than we would like. Those of us who have litigated, those of us who have redressed, not just an injunctive relief but damages, money recovery, for violations of their constitutional rights.

But our history—Churchill’s maxim, study history—our history tells us that is not necessarily so. Take by way of example the Pentagon Papers case—orders issued preventing and sanctioning a gross violation of the First Amendment’s guarantee of freedom of the press, an order issued out of the district court June 15, 1971. That order was reversed in an opinion by the Supreme Court of the United States 2 weeks later. June 15.

The House of Representatives could have followed that well-trod path. It could have sought expedition. The E. Barrett Prettyman Courthouse is 6 blocks down. The judges are there. They are hard-working people of integrity. Follow the path. Follow the path of the law. Go to court.

There would have been at least one problem had the House seen fit to go to court and remain in court. The issue is before you.

But among other flaws, the Office of Legal Counsel determined—and I have read the opinion, and I believe it is correct—that with all respect, all House subpoenas issued prior to the adoption of H.R. 660, which for the first time authorized the impeachment inquiry as a House, all subpoenas were invalid. They were void. With all due respect to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, with all her abilities and her vast experience, under our Constitution, she was powerless to do what she purported to do. As has been said now time and again, especially throughout the fall, the Constitution does entrust the sole power of impeachment to the House of Representatives, but that is the House, its 435 Members elected from across the constitutional Republic—not one, no matter how able she may be. In the people’s House, every single person gets to know the concept: one person, one vote.

More generally, the President, as I reviewed the record, has consistently and scrupulously followed the advice and counsel of the Justice Department and, in particular, the Office of Legal Counsel. He has been obedient. As you know, that important office—many of you have had your own experiences professionally with that office—is staffed with lawyers of great ability. It has done such thoughtful work with both Democratic and Republican administrations. The office is now headed by a brilliant lawyer who served as a law clerk to Justice Anthony Kennedy. The House may use the guidance provided to the President by that office; the House frequently does disagree. But for the President to follow the guidance of the Department of Justice with respect to an interbranch legal and constitutional dispute cannot reasonably be viewed as an obstruction and, most emphatically, not as an impeachable offense.

History, once again, is a great teacher. In the Clinton impeachment, the HOUSE Judiciary Committee rejected a draft article asserting that President Clinton—and here are the words that were drafted: “fraudulently and corruptly asserted executive privilege.” Strong words, “fraudulently and corruptly.” That was the draft article.

Our view, my view, has veered through the facts and with all due respect to the former President, he did. He did it time and again, month after month. We would go to court, and we would win. Many members—not everybody—on the House Judiciary Committee agreed that the President had, indeed, improperly claimed executive privilege, rebuffed time and again by the Judiciary. But at the end of the day, that Committee, the Judiciary Committee of the House, chaired by Henry Hyde, wisely concluded that President Clinton’s doing so should not be considered an impeachable offense.

Here is the idea. It is not an impeachable offense for the President of the United States to defend the asserted legal and constitutional prerogatives of the Presidency.

This is, and I am quoting here from page 55 of the President’s trial brief, “a function of his constitutional and policy judgments, if not a judicial judgment, but a constitutional judgment.”

I would guide this court, as it is coming through the deliberation process, to read the President’s trial brief with respect to process. It was Justice Felix Frankfurter, confidante of FDR, brilliant jurist, who reminded America that the history of liberty is in large measure the history of process, procedure.

In particular, I would guide the high court to the discussion of the long history of the House of Representatives—over two centuries—in providing due process protections in its impeachment investigations. It is a richly historical discussion.

The good news is, you can read the core of it in four pages, pages 62 to 66, of the trial brief. It puts in bold relief, I believe, an irrefutable fact. This House of Representatives, with all respect, sought to turn its back on its own established procedures—procedures that have been followed faithfully decade after decade, regardless of who was in control, regardless of political party. All those procedures were torn asunder and all over the vigorous objections of the unanimous and vocal minority.

I need not remind this high court that in this country, minority rights are important. Minority rights should be protected.

But, then again, the House Members took no oath to be impartial. The Constitution didn’t require them to say by oath or affirmation: We will do impartial judgment—justice. When they chose to tear assuere these procedures, they were oathless. They could toss out their own rule book through raw power.

Here we have—tragically for the country and, I believe, tragically for the House of Representatives—in article II of these impeachment articles a runaway House. It has run away not only from its longstanding procedures; it has run away from the Constitution’s demand of fundamental fairness captured in those hallowed terms, “due process of law.” We have cared about this as an English-speaking people since the Magna Carta.

By doing so, however, the House has inadvertently pointed this court to an exit ramp. It is an exit ramp provided by the Constitution itself. It is an exit ramp built by the most noble of builders, the founding generation. Despite the clearest precedent requiring due process for the accused in an impeachment proceeding, and all over the vigorous objections of the unanimous and vocal minority,

The courts would not allow this. They would not allow this because—why? They knew, and they know, that the purpose of our founding instrument is to protect our liberties, to safeguard us, but to safeguard us as individuals against the government. Why? In the benedictory words of the preamble, to “secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity.” Liberty under law.

I thank the CHIEF JUSTICE. Mr. Sekulow.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, House managers: Judge Starr laid out before you the solemn nature of these proceedings and the solemn nature of these proceedings and what has been laid out before us from both a historical and constitutional perspective.

I want you to think about this, to history, the importance and solemnity of what we are engaged in in this body, with what took place in the House of Representatives upon the signing of Articles of Impeachment—pens distributed to the impeachment managers.

A celebratory moment—think about that; think about this—a poignant moment.

We are next going to address a factual analysis. To briefly reflect, my colleague, the Deputy White House Counsel, Mike Purpura, will be joining us in a moment to discuss more of the facts, to continue the discussion that we had on Saturday. But let me just recap very quickly what was laid out on Saturday.

First, the transcript shows that the President did not condition either security assistance or a meeting on anything. The paused security assistance funds aren’t even mentioned on the call.

Second, President Zelensky and other Ukrainian officials repeatedly said there was no quid pro quo and no pressure on them to review anything.

Third, President Zelensky and high-ranking Ukrainian officials did not even know the security assistance was paused until the end of August, over a month after the July 25 call.

Fourth, not a single witness testified that the President himself said that there was any connection between any investigation, security assistance, a Presidential meeting, or anything else.

Fifth, the security assistance flowed on September 11, and a Presidential meeting took place on September 25 without the Ukrainian Government—without the Ukrainian Government—announcing any investigations.

Mr. Counsel PURPURA. Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, good afternoon. I would inform the leader that I believe we will be ready to take a break at the conclusion of my remarks, if it meets with his approval.

On Saturday, we walked through some of the evidence that the House managers put forward and continue to put forward during their 21-plus hours of presentation. The evidence that we recounted was drawn directly from the House managers’ own record, the case they chose to submit to this Chamber.

To echo my colleague Mr. Sekulow briefly, the House managers’ own evidence shows that President Trump did not condition anything on investigations during the July 25 call with President Zelensky and did not even mention or pause on the security assistance on the call. President Zelensky said that he felt no pressure on the call.

President Zelensky and the top Ukrainian officials did not learn of the pause on the security assistance until more than a month after the July 25 call, and the House managers’ own record—their record that they developed and brought before this Chamber—suggests that the President spoke with the President said that the President made clear that there was no linkage between security assistance and investigations.

There is another category of evidence that demonstrated that the pause on security assistance was distinct and unrelated to investigations. The President released the aid without the Ukrainians ever announcing any investigations or undertaking any investigations.

Here is Ambassador Sonlland.

(Text of Videotape presentation:)

Ms. STEFANIK. And the fact is the aid was given to Ukraine without any announcement of new investigations?

Ambassador SONDLAND. That’s correct.

Ms. STEFANIK. And President Trump did in fact meet with President Zelensky on September the 10th at the University of Washington, correct?

Ambassador SONDLAND. He did.

Ms. STEFANIK. And there was no announcement of investigations before this meeting?

Ambassador SONDLAND. Correct.

Ms. STEFANIK. And there was no announcement of investigations after this meeting?
Mr. Counsel PURPURA. So while the security assistance was paused, the administration did precisely what you would expect. It addressed President Trump’s concerns about the two issues that I mentioned on Saturday: burden-sharing and anti-corruption reforms.

A number of law- and policymakers also contacted the President and the White House to provide input on the security assistance issue during this period, including Senator LINDSEY GRAHAM, who was immediately on September 11, 2019. On that day, the President spoke with Vice President PENCE and Senator RON PORTMAN. The Vice President, in NSC Senior Director Tim Morrison’s words, was “armed with his conversation with President Zelensky from their meeting just days earlier in Warsaw, Poland, and both the Vice President and Senator PORTMAN related their view of the importance of the assistance to Ukraine and convinced the President that the aid should be immediately released. After the meeting, President Trump terminated the pause, and the support flowed to Ukraine.”

I want to take a step back now and talk for a moment about why the security assistance was briefly paused—again, in the words of the House managers’ own witnesses. Witness after witness testified that confronting Ukrainian corruption should be at the forefront of U.S. foreign policy towards Ukraine. Ambassador Volker testified that the President had longstanding and sincere concerns about corruption in Ukraine. The House managers, however, told you that it was laughable to think that the President cared about corruption in Ukraine, but that is not what the witnesses said.

According to Ambassador Volker, President Trump demonstrated that he had a very deeply rooted negative view of Ukraine based on past corruption, and the President specifically requested an anti-corruption plan from Ukraine. According to Ambassador Volker, most people who knew anything about Ukraine would think that.

Dr. Hill testified:

I think the President has actually quite quipped that, he was very skeptical about corruption in Ukraine. And, in fact, he is not alone, because everyone has expressed great concern about corruption in Ukraine.

The House managers have said the President has concern with corruption is disingenuous. They said that President Trump didn’t care about corruption in 2017 or 2018 and he certainly didn’t care about it in 2019. Those were their words. Not according to Ambassador Yovanovitch, however, who testified that President Trump shared his concern about corruption directly with President Poroshenko—President Zelensky’s predecessor—in their first meeting in the Oval Office. She said that meeting in June of 2017—17.

The President also has well-known concerns about foreign aid generally. Scrutinizing and in some cases curtailing foreign aid was a central plank of his campaign platform. President Trump is especially wary of sending American taxpayer dollars abroad when other countries refuse to pitch in.

Mr. Morrison and Mr. Hale both testified at length about President Trump’s longstanding concern with burden-sharing. Here is what they said:

(Text of Videotape presentation:)

Mr. RATCLIFFE. The President was concerned that the United States seemed to bear the exclusive burden of sending security assistance to Ukraine. He wanted to see the Europeans step up and contribute more security assistance.

Mr. HALE. We’ve often heard at the State Department that the President of the United States wants to make sure that foreign assistance is reviewed scrupulously and make sure that it is truly in the U.S. national interests and that we evaluate it continuously and that it meets certain criteria the President has established.

Mr. RATCLIFFE. And has the President expressed that he expected our allies to give their fair share of foreign aid as evidenced by the point that he raised during the July 25th phone call to President Zelensky to that effect?

Mr. HALE. The principle of fair burden-sharing by allies and other like-minded states is an important element of the foreign assistance review.

Mr. Counsel PURPURA. The President expressed these precise concerns to Senator RON JOHNSON, who wrote:

He reminded me how thoroughly corrupt Ukrainian officials revealed his frustration that Europe doesn’t do its fair share of providing military aid.

The House managers didn’t tell you about this. Why not? And President Trump was right to be concerned that other countries weren’t paying their fair share. As Laura Cooper testified, U.S. contributions to Ukraine are far more significant than any individual country, and she also said EU funds tend to be on the economic side rather than for security assistance. Senator JOHNSON also confirmed that other countries refused to provide the lethal defensive weapons that Ukraine needs in its war with Russia.

Please keep in mind also that the pause of the Ukraine security assistance program was far from unusual or out of character for President Trump. The American people know that the President is skeptical of foreign aid and that one of his top campaign promises and priorities in office has been to avoid wasteful spending of American taxpayer dollars abroad.

Meanwhile, the same people who today claimed that President Trump was not genuinely concerned about burden-sharing were upset when, as a candidate, President Trump criticized free-riding by NATO members.

This past summer, the administration paused, reviewed, and in some cases canceled hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign aid to Afghanistan, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, and Lebanon. Let’s test some of the reviews of foreign aid undertaken at the very same time that the Ukraine aid was paused.

So what happened during the brief period of time while the Ukraine security assistance was paused? People were gathering information and monitoring the facts on the ground in Ukraine as the new Parliament was sworn in and began introducing anti-corruption legislation.

Notwithstanding what the House managers would have you believe, the reason for the pause was no secret within the White House and the agencies. According to Mr. Morrison, in a letter to other officials throughout the executive branch agencies, the reason provided for the pause by a representative of the Office of Management and Budget was that the President was concerned about corruption in Ukraine and he wanted to make sure Ukraine was doing enough to manage that corruption. In fact, as Mr. Morrison testified, by Labor Day, there had been definitive developments to demonstrate that President Zelensky was committed to the issues he campaigned on: anti-corruption reforms.

Mr. Morrison also testified that the administration was working on answering the President’s concerns regarding burden-sharing. Here is Mr. Morrison.

(Text of Videotape presentation:)

Mr. CASTOR. Was there any interagency activity by either the State Department or the Defense Department coordinated by the National Security Council to look into that a little bit for the President?

Mr. MORRISON. We were surveying the data to understand who was contributing what and sort of in what categories.

Mr. CASTOR. And so you evinced concerns. The interagency tried to address them.

Mr. MORRISON. Yes.

Mr. Counsel PURPURA. How else do we know that the President was awaiting information on burden-sharing and anti-corruption efforts in Ukraine before releasing the security assistance? Because that is what Vice President PENCE told President Zelensky.

On September 1, 2019, Vice President PENCE met with President Zelensky. President Trump was scheduled to attend the World War II commemoration in Poland but instead remained in the United States to manage the emergency response to Hurricane Dorian. Remember, this was 3 days—3 days—after President Zelensky learned through the POLITICO article about the review of the security assistance. Just as Vice President PENCE and his aides anticipated, Jennifer Williams testified that once the cameras left the room, the very first question that President Zelensky had was about the status of the security assistance. The Vice President responded by asking about two things: burden-sharing and corruption.

Here is how Jennifer Williams described it:

And the VP responded by really expressing our ongoing support for Ukraine, but wanting to hear from President Zelensky, you know, what the status of the efforts were that he could then convey back to the President, and also wanting to hear if there was more that European countries could do to support Ukraine.

Vice President PENCE knows President Trump, and he knew what President Trump wanted to hear from President Zelensky. The Vice President was echoing the Vice President's focus on corruption and burden-sharing. It is the same, consistent themes every time.

Ambassador Taylor received a similar readout of the meeting between the Vice President and President Zelensky, including the Vice President's focus on corruption and burden-sharing. Here is Ambassador Taylor.

Ambassador TAYLOR. On the evening of September 1st, I received a readout of the Pence-Zelensky meeting over the phone from Mr. Morrison during which he told me that President Zelensky had opened the meeting by immediately asking the Vice President about the security cooperation. The Vice President did not respond substantively but said that he would talk to President Trump that night. President Trump did not, the President told his VP that President Trump wanted the Europeans to do more to support Ukraine and that he wanted the Ukrainians to do more to fight corruption.

Mr. Counsel PURPURA. On September 11, based on the information collected and presented to President Trump, the President lifted the pause on the security assistance. As Mr. Morrison explained, "our process gave the President the confidence he needed to approach the release of the security-secator assistance." The House managers say that the talk about corruption and burden-sharing is a ruse. No one knew why the security assistance was paused, and no one was addressing the President's concerns with Ukrainian corruption and burden-sharing. The House managers' own evidence—their own record—tells a different story, however. They didn't tell you about this, not in 21 hours. Why not?

The President's concerns were addressed in the ordinary course. The President wasn't caught, as the House managers allege. The managers are wrong. All of this, together with what we discussed on Saturday, demonstrates that there was no connection between security assistance and investigations.

When the House managers realized their "quid pro quo" theory on security assistance was falling apart, they created a second alternative theory. According to the House managers, President Zelensky desperately wanted a meeting at the White House with President Trump, and President Trump conditionally that meeting on investigations.

What about the managers' backup accusations? Do they fare any better than their quid pro quo for security assistance? No. No, they don't.

A presidential-level meeting happened without any preconditions at the first available opportunity in a widely televised meeting at the United Nations General Assembly in New York on September 25, 2019. The White House was working to schedule the meeting earlier at the White House or in Warsaw, but those options fell through due to normal scheduling and a hurricane. The two Presidents met at the earliest convenience without President Zelensky ever announcing or beginning any investigations.

The first thing to know about the alleged quid pro quo for a meeting is that by the end of the July 25 call, the President had already extended President Zelensky to the White House on three separate occasions, each time without any preconditions.

President Trump invited President Zelensky to an in-person meeting on their initial April 21 call. He said: "When you're settled in and ready, I'd like to invite you to the White House."

On May 29, the week after President Zelensky's inauguration, President Trump sent a congratulatory letter, again, inviting President Zelensky to the White House. He said:

"As you prepare to address the many challenges facing Ukraine, please know that the American people are with you and are committed to helping your new leadership achieve the vast potential. To help show that commitment, I would like to invite you to meet with me at the White House in Washington, D.C., as soon as we can find a mutually convenient time."

Then, on July 25, President Trump personally invited President Zelensky to participate in a meeting for a third time. He said: Whenever you would like to come to the White House, feel free to call. Give us a date, and we'll work that out. I look forward to seeing you. Those are three separate invitations for a meeting, all made without any preconditions.

During this time, and behind the scenes, the White House was working diligently to schedule a meeting between the Presidents at the earliest possible date. Tim Morrison, whose responsibilities included helping to arrange the White House visit, testified that he understood that arranging the White House visit with President Zelensky was a do-out that came from the President.

The House managers didn't mention the work that the White House was doing to schedule the meeting between President Trump and President Zelensky; did they? Why not?

Scheduling a Presidential meeting takes time. Mr. Morrison testified that his directorate, which was just one of several, had a dozen schedule requests in with the President for meetings with foreign leaders that we were looking to host. The House managers didn't mention the work that the White House was doing to schedule the meeting between President Trump and President Zelensky; did they? Why not?

As Mr. Morrison, due to both Presidents' busy schedule, "it became clear that the 'earliest opportunity for the two Presidents to meet would be in Warsaw' at the beginning of September."

The entire notion that a bilateral meeting between President Trump and President Zelensky was somehow conditioned on a statement about investigations is completely defeated by one straightforward fact: A bilateral meeting between President Trump and President Zelensky was planned for September 1 in Warsaw—the same Warsaw where we were just discussing without the Ukrainians saying a word about investigations.

As it turned out, President Trump was not able to attend the meeting in Warsaw because of Hurricane Dorian. President Trump asked Vice President PENCE to attend in his place, but even that scheduling glitch did not put off their meeting for long. President Trump and President Zelensky met at the next available date, September 25, at the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly.

As President Zelensky, himself, has said, there were "no preconditions" for his meeting with President Trump. Those are his words: "No conditions."

You are probably wondering how the House managers could claim there was a quid pro quo for a meeting with President Trump when the two Presidents actually did meet without President Zelensky announcing or beginning any investigations? Well, the House managers moved the goalpost again. They claim that the meeting couldn't be just an in-person meeting with President Trump. What it had to be was a meeting at the Oval Office and in the White House. That is nonsense.

Putting to one side the absurdity of the House managers trying to remove a duly-elected President of the United States from office because he met with a foreign leader in one location versus another, this theory has no basis in fact.

As Dr. Hill testified, what mattered was that there was a bilateral Presidential meeting, not the location of the meeting. She said:

"[I]t wasn't always a White House meeting per se, but definitely a Presidential-level, you know, meeting with Zelensky and the White House on the ground level, at whatever kind of level Presidential meeting."

The House managers didn't tell you about Dr. Hill's testimony. Why not? In fact, just last week they said that President Zelensky still hasn't gotten his White House meeting. Why didn't they tell you about Dr. Hill's testimony? How else do we know that Dr. Hill was right? Because President Zelensky said so on the July 25 call. Remember, when President Trump invited President Zelensky to Washington on the July 25 call, President Zelensky said he would be "happy to meet with you personally" and offered to host President Trump in Ukraine or, on the other hand, meet with President Trump on September 1 in Poland. That is exactly what the administration planned to do.
If it weren’t for Hurricane Dorian, President Trump would have met with President Zelensky in Poland on September 1, just as President Zelensky had requested and without any preconditions. As it happened, President Zelensky met with the Vice President instead and just a few weeks later met with President Trump in New York—all without anyone making any statement about anti-investigations. And, once again, not a single witness in the House record that they compiled and developed under their procedures that we have discussed and will continue to discuss, provided any firsthand evidence that President ever linked the Presidential meeting to any investigations.

The House managers have seized upon Ambassador Sondland’s claim that Mr. Giuliani’s requests were a quid pro quo because arranging a White House visit for President Zelensky. But, again, Ambassador Sondland was only guessing based on incomplete information. He testified that the President told him there was an “involuntary condition” for a meeting with President Zelensky. Why, then, did he think there was one?

In his own words, Ambassador Sondland said that he could only repeat what he heard “through Ambassador Volker from Giuliani.” So he didn’t even hear from Mr. Giuliani himself. But Ambassador Volker, who is the supposed link between Mr. Giuliani and Ambassador Sondland, thought that such talk was counter to Ambassador Volker testified unequivocally that there was no linkage between the meeting with President Zelensky and Ukrainian investigations.

I am going to read the full questions and answers because this passage is key. This is from Ambassador Volker’s deposition testimony.

Question. Did President Trump ever withhold a meeting with President Zelensky or delay it happening with President Zelensky until the Ukrainians committed to investigate the allegations that you just described concerning the 2016 Presidential election?

Answer. The answer to the question is no, if you want a yes-or-no answer. But the reason the answer is no is we did have difficulty scheduling a meeting, but there was no linkage like that.

Question. You said that you were not aware of any linkage between delaying the Oval Office meeting between President Trump and President Zelensky and the Ukrainian commitment to investigate the two allegations as you described them, correct?

Answer. Correct.

Over the past week, on no fewer than 15 separate occasions, the House managers played a video of Ambassador Volker saying that the administration’s investigation was a prerequisite for a meeting or call with the President—15 times. They never once read you to the testimony that I just did. They never once read you to the testimony which Ambassador Volker refuted what Ambassador Sondland claimed he heard from Ambassador Volker.

Here is what we know. President Trump invited President Zelensky to meet three times without preconditions. The White House was working behind the scenes to schedule the meeting. The two Presidents planned to meet in July. Then President Zelensky had asked, and ultimately met 3 weeks later without Ukraine announcing any investigations.

No one testified in the House record that the President ever said there was a connection between a meeting and investigating, plain and simple. So much for a quid pro quo for a meeting with the President.

Before I move on, let me take a brief moment to address a side allegation that was raised in the original whistleblowing complaint and that the House managers are still trying to push.

The managers claim that President Trump ordered Vice President Pence not to attend President Zelensky’s inauguration. And in favor of a lower ranking delegate to Ukraine. According to them—to single a downgrading of the relationship between the United States and Ukraine.

That is not true. As I am sure everyone in this room can greatly appreciate, those who had to align for the VP to attend.

First, dates of travel were limited. For national security reasons, the President and Vice President generally avoid being out of the country at the same time.

The President had scheduled trips to Europe and Japan during the period when our Embassy in Ukraine anticipated the Ukrainian inauguration would occur, at the end of May or in early June. Jennifer Williams testified that the Office of the Vice President advised the Ukrainians that, if the Vice President were to participate in the inauguration, the ideal dates would be around May 29, May 30, May 31, or June 1, when he would be in the United States. She said “if it wasn’t one of those dates, it would be very difficult or impossible” for the Vice President to attend.

Second, the House managers act as if no other priorities in the world could compete for the administration’s time. The Vice President’s Office was simultaneously planning a competing trip for May 30 in Ottawa, Canada, to participate in an event supporting passage of the “Pacific Alliance Canada Agreement.” Ultimately, the Vice President traveled to Ottawa on May 30 to meet with Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and to promote the passage of the USMCA. This decision, as you know, advanced the top administration priority and an issue of a few hours.

What you did not hear from the House managers was that the Ukrainian inauguration dates did not go as planned. On May 16—May 16—the Ukrainians surprised everyone and scheduled the inauguration for just 4 days later, on May 20—Monday, May 20. So think about that: May 16, May 20.
Ukraine in the form of defensive lethal aid, correct?
Ambassador TAYLOR. That is correct. Ms. STEFANIK. And that is more so than the Obama administration, correct?
Ambassador TAYLOR. The Trump administration.
Ms. STEFANIK. Defensive lethal aid.
Ambassador TAYLOR. Yes.
Ambassador YOVANOVITCH. And the Trump administration strengthened our policy by approving the provision to Ukraine of antitank missiles known as Javelins. They are obviously tank busters. And so, if the war with Russia—all—all of a sudden accelerated in some way and tanks come over the horizon, Javelins are a very serious weapon to deal with that.
Mr. Counsel PURPURA. Ukraine is better positioned to fight Russia today than it was before President Trump took office. As a result, the United States is safer too. The House managers did not tell you about this testimony from Ambassadors Taylor, Volker, and Yovanovitch. Why not?
These are the facts, as drawn from the House managers’ own record, on which they impeached the President. This is why the House managers’ first Article of Impeachment must fail, for the six reasons I set forth when I began on Saturday:
There was no linkage between investigations and security assistance or a meeting on the July 25 call. The Ukrainians said there was no quid pro quo and they felt no pressure. The top Ukrainians did not even know that security assistance was paused until more than a month after the July 25 call. The House managers’ record reflects that anyone who spoke with the President said that the President made clear that there was no linkage. The security assistance flowed, and the President specifically took place, all without any announcement of investigations. And President Trump has enhanced America’s support for Ukraine in his 3 years in office.
These facts all require that the first Article of Impeachment fail. You have already heard and will continue to hear from my colleagues on why the second Article of Impeachment fail. You have the record right through until 6 p.m. The CHIEF JUSTICE. Thank you, President’s counsel can continue with their case.
Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice.
Mr. Chief Justice. Members of the Senate, House managers, there has been a lot of talk in both the briefs and in the discussions over the last week about one of our colleagues, former mayor of New York, Rudy Giuliani. Mayor Giuliani was one of the leaders of the President’s defense team during the Mueller investigation. He is mentioned 531 times—20 in the brief and about 511, give or take, in the arguments, including the motion day.
We had a robust team that worked on the President during the Mueller probe, consisting of Mayor Giuliani, Andrew Eisenh, Stuart Roth, Jordan Sekulow, Ben Sisy, Mark Goldfeder, Mayor Giuliani, of course, and Marty Raskin. As Jane Sandburg has pointed out, Raskin was one of the leading attorneys on the Mueller investigation for the defense of the President.
The issue of Mayor Giuliani has come up here in this Chamber a lot. We thought it would be appropriate now to turn to that issue, the role of the President’s lawyer, his private counsel, in this proceeding. I would like to yield my time, Mr. Chief Justice, to Jane Serene Raskin.
Ms. Counsel RASKIN. Mr. Chief Justice, Majority Leader McCONNELL, Members of the Senate.
I expect you have heard American poet Carl Sandburg’s summary of the trial lawyer’s dilemma:
If the facts are against you, argue the law. If the law is against you, argue the facts. If the facts and the law are against you, pound the table and yell like hell.
Well, we have heard the House managers do some table-pounding and a little yelling, but, in the main, they have used a different tactic here, a tactic familiar to trial lawyers, though not mentioned by Mr. Sandburg. If both the law and the facts are against you, present a distraction, emphasize a sensational fact or perhaps a colorful or controversial public figure who appears on the scene, then distort certain facts, ignore others, even when they are the most probative, make conclusory statements, and insinuate the shiny object is far more important than the actual facts allow: in short, divert attention from the holes in your case. Rudy Giuliani is the House managers’ colorful distraction. He is a household name. He is a legendary Federal prosecutor who took down the Mafia, corrupt public officials, Wall Street racketeers. He is the crime-busting mayor who cleaned up New York and turned it around, a national hero, America’s mayor. And, after that, an internationally recognized expert on fighting corruption. To be sure, Mr. Giuliani has always been somewhat of a controversial figure for his hard-hitting, take-no-prisoners approach but it is not that he was respected by friend and foe alike for his intellect, his tenacity, his accomplishments, and his fierce loyalty to his causes and his country.
And then, the unthinkable happened. He publicly supported the candidacy of President Trump—the one who was not supposed to win. And then, in the spring of 2018, he stood up to defend the President—successfully, it turns out—against ‘‘subversive’’ his—dog is the real debunked Russia conspiracy theory; that the Trump campaign colluded with Russia during the 2016 campaign. The House managers would have you believe that Mr. Giuliani is at the center of controversy. They have anointed him the proxy villain of the tale, the leader of a rogue operation. Their presentations were filled with ad hominem attacks and name-calling: cold-blooded political operative, political bagman. But I suggest to you that he is front and center in their narrative for one reason and one reason alone: to distract from the fact that the evidence does not support their claims.
What is the first tell that Mr. Giuliani’s role in this may not be all that it is cracked up to be? They didn’t subpoena him to testify. In fact, Mr. SCHIFF and his committee never even invited him to testify. They took a subpoena to the backroom of Rudy Giuliani and when he lawyered responded with legal defenses to the production, the House walked away. But if Rudy Giuliani is everything they say he is, don’t you think they would have subpoenaed and pursued his testimony? Ask yourselves, why didn’t they?
In fact, it appears the House committee wasn’t particularly interested in presenting you with any direct evidence of what Mayor Giuliani did or why he did it. Instead, they ask you to rely on hearsay, speculation, and assumption—evidence that would be inadmissible in any court.
For example, the House managers suggest that Mr. Giuliani, at the President’s direction, demanded that Ukraine announce an investigation of the Bidens and Burisma before agreeing to a White House visit. They base this on a statement to that effect by Ambassador Sondland.
But what the House managers don’t tell you is that Sondland admitted he was speculating about that. He presumed that Mr. Giuliani’s requests were intended as a condition for a White House visit. Even worse, his assumption was on thirdhand information. As he put it, the most he could do...
Mr. McConnell. Mr. Chief Justice, will be addressing my colleague Pat Philbin, the Deputy White House Counsel, will be addressing his testimony, I touched on two areas: some of Mayor Giuliani's public statements in which he is clear and completely transparent about the fact that he is, indeed, the President's personal attorney, in which case, they conclude, ipse dixit, his motive would only be to further the President's political objectives.

The House managers also make much of a May 23 White House meeting during which the House managers suggested to Mr. Giuliani that he should talk to Rudy. The managers told you that President Trump gave a directive and a demand that the group needed to work with Mr. Giuliani if they wanted him to agree with the Ukraine policy they were proposing, but those words, “directive” and “demand,” are misleading. They misrepresent what the witnesses actually said.

Ambassador Volker testified that he understood, based on the meeting, that Giuliani was only one of several sources of information for the President, and the President simply wanted officials to speak to Mr. Giuliani because he wanted them to tell him about the facts they knew about Ukraine. As Volker put it, the President’s comment was not an instruction but just a comment. Ambassador Sondland agreed. He testified that he didn’t take it as an order, and he added that even if Mr. Giuliani wasn’t acting in an official capacity, he believed the President wanted him to be involved in the decision-making process.

So it may come as a surprise to you that after the May 23 meeting, the one during which the House managers told you the President demanded that his Ukraine working group, including Ambassadors Volker and Sondland, that they should talk to Rudy. The managers told you that President Trump gave a directive and a demand that the group needed to work with Mr. Giuliani if they wanted him to agree with the Ukraine policy they were proposing, but those words, “directive” and “demand,” are misleading. They misrepresent what the witnesses actually said.

Ambassador Volker testified that he understood, based on the meeting, that Giuliani was only one of several sources of information for the President, and the President simply wanted officials to speak to Mr. Giuliani because he wanted them to tell him about the facts they knew about Ukraine. As Volker put it, the President’s comment was not an instruction but just a comment. Ambassador Sondland agreed. He testified that he didn’t take it as an order, and he added that even if Mr. Giuliani wasn’t acting in an official capacity, he believed the President wanted him to be involved in the decision-making process.

Mr. Counsel PHILBIN. Mr. Chief Justice, I yield back to Mr. Sekulow.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, I yield back to the Senate, and House managers, we are going to now move to a section dealing with the law. There are two issues in particular that my colleague Pat Philbin, the Deputy White House Counsel, will be addressing, issues involving due process and legal issues specific to dealing with the second Article of Impeachment: Obstruction of Congress. So I yield my time now, Mr. Chief Justice, to Mr. Philbin.

Mr. Counsel PHILBIN. Mr. Chief Justice, Senators, Majority Leader MCCONNELL, Minority Leader SCHUMER, the other day, as we opened our presentation, I touched on two areas: some of Mr. Giuliani’s motive was purely political. That speaks volumes about the bias with which they have approached their mission.

The bottom line is, Mr. Giuliani defended President Trump vigorously, repetitively, and publicly throughout the Mueller investigation and in the non-stop congressional investigations that followed, including the attempted Mueller redo by the House Judiciary Committee, which the managers would apparently like to sneak in the back door here.

The House managers may not like his style—you may not like his style—but one might argue that he is everything Clarence Darrow said a defense lawyer must be—outrageous, irreverent, blasphemous, a rogue, a renegade. The facts is, in the end, after a 2-year siege on the Presidency, two inspector general reports, and a $32 million special counsel investigation, it turns out Rudy was spot-on.

It seems to me we are keeping score on who got it right on allegations of FISA abuse, egregious misconduct at the highest level of the FBI, alleged collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia, and proposed obstruction of justice in connection with the special counsel’s investigation. The score is Mayor Giuliani 4, Mr. SCHIFF 0. But in this trial, in this moment, Mr. Giuliani is just a minor player—that shiny object designed to distract you. Senators, I urge you most respectfully: Do not be distracted.

Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice.

I yield back to Mr. Sekulow.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, for Members of the Senate, and House managers, we are going to now move to a section dealing with the law. There are two issues in particular that my colleague Pat Philbin, the Deputy White House Counsel, will be addressing, issues involving due process and legal issues specific to dealing with the second Article of Impeachment: Obstruction of Congress. So I yield my time now, Mr. Chief Justice, to Mr. Philbin.

Mr. Counsel PHILBIN. Mr. Chief Justice, Senators, Majority Leader MCCONNELL, Minority Leader SCHUMER, the other day, as we opened our presentation, I touched on two areas: some of the due process violations that characterized the proceedings in the House and some of the fundamental mischaracterizations and errors that underpinned the House Democrats’ charge for obstruction. I will complete the presentation today on these points to round out some of the fundamentally unfair procedures that were used in the House and their implications in this proceeding before you now and also address in detail the purported charges of obstruction in the second Article of Impeachment.

On due process, there are three fundamental errors that affected the proceedings in the House. The first is, as I explained on Saturday, the impeachment inquiry was unauthorized and unconstitutional from the beginning.

No committee of the House has the power to launch an inquiry under the House’s impeachment power unless the House itself has taken a vote to give that authority to a committee. I noted that, in cases such as Rumely v. United States and United States v. Watkins, the Supreme Court has set out these principles, general principles derived from the Constitution, which assign authority to each Chamber of the legislative branch—to the House and to the Senate—but not to individual members or to subcommittees. For an authority of the House to be transferred to a committee, the House has to vote on that.

The DC Circuit has distilled the principles from those cases this way: “To issue a valid subpoena, a committee or a subcommittee must conform strictly to the resolution establishing its investigatory powers.” That was the problem here in that there was no such resolution. There was no vote from the House authorizing the issuance of subpoenas under the impeachment power. So this inquiry began with nearly two dozen invalid subpoenas. The Speaker had the House proceed on nothing more than a press conference in which she purported to authorize committees to begin an impeachment power. Under the Constitution, she lacked that authority.

As the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Peter Rodino, pointed out during the Nixon impeachment inquiry:

Such a resolution [from the House] has always been passed by the House. . . . It is a necessary step if we are to meet our obligation.

So we began this process with unauthorized subpoenas that imposed no compulsion on the executive branch to respond with documents or witnesses. I will be coming back to that point, that threshold foundational point, when we get to the obstruction charge.

The second fundamental due process error is that the House Democrats denied the President basic due process required by the Constitution and by the fundamental principles of fairness in the procedures that they used for the hearings. I am not going to go back in detail over those. As we heard from Judge Starr, the House Democrats essentially abandoned the principles that have governed impeachment inquiries in the House for over 150 years. I will touch on just a few points and respond to a couple of points that the House managers have made.

The first and fundamental error is that the House Democrats themselves had taken in the recent past, particularly in the Clinton impeachment proceeding.

I believe we have Manager NADLER's description of what was required. Perhaps not. Manager NADLER was explaining that due process requires at a minimum notice of the charges against you, the right to cross-examine witnesses against you, and the right to present evidence. All of those rights were denied to the President.

Now, one of the responses that the managers are making is to the defect that we pointed out in the secret proceedings, where Manager SCHIFF began these hearings in the basement bunker, is that, well, that was really just best investigative practice; they were operating in a way that was foolproofed by that. Those hearings operated nothing like a grand jury.

A grand jury has secrecy primarily for two reasons: to protect the direction of the investigation so others won’t know what’s being called in and what they are saying—to keep that secret for the prosecutor to be able to keep developing the evidence—and to protect the accused because the accused might not ever be indicted.

In this case, all of that information was made public every day. The House Democrats destroyed any legitimate analogy to a grand jury, because that was all public. They made no secret that the President was the target. They issued vile calumnies about him every day. They didn’t keep the direction of their investigation secret. Their witness lists were published daily, and the direction of the investigation was open. The testimony that took place was selectively leaked to a compliant media to establish a false narrative about the President.

If that sort of conduct had occurred in a real grand jury, that would have been a criminal violation. Prosecutors can’t do that. Under Article 3 of the Federal criminal rules, it is a criminal offense to be leaking what takes place in a grand jury.

Also, the grand jury explanation provides no rationale whatsoever for this second round of hearings. Remember, after the basement bunker—after the secret hearings where the testimony was prescreened—then the same witnesses who had already been deposed were put on in a public hearing where the President was still excluded.

Ask yourself, what was the reason for that? In every prior Presidential impeachment in the modern era where there have been public hearings, the President has been represented by counsel and could cross-examine witnesses. Why did there have to be public, televised hearings where the President was excluded? That was nothing more than a show trial. That’s what these hearings amounted to.

I also addressed the other day the House managers’ contention that they had offered the President due process; that when things reached the third round of hearings in front of the House Judiciary Committee, Manager NADLER offered the President due process. I explained why that was illusory. There was no genuine offer there because, before any hearings began, other than the law professor’s seminar over November 4, the Speaker had already determined the outcome, had already said there were going to be Articles of Impeachment, and the Judiciary Committee had informed the counsel’s office that they were going to be peremptory and that they would not allow the President any due process rights at all if he continued to refuse to turn over documents or not allow witnesses to testify, so that if the President didn’t give up his privileges and immunities then he had been asserting over executive branch confidentiality—if he didn’t comply with what the House Democrats wanted—then it was up to Chairman NADLER, potentially, to say: No rights at all. There is a term for that in the law. It is called an unconstitutional condition. You can’t condition someone’s exercise of some rights on his surrendering other constitutional rights. You can’t say: We will let you have due process in this way if you waive your constitutional privilege on another issue.

The last point I will make about due process is this: It is important to remember that due process is enshrined in the Bill of Rights for a reason. It is not just a process but an end in itself. Instead, it is a deep-seated belief in our legal tradition that fair process is essential for accurate decision making.

Cross-examination of witnesses, in particular, is one of the most important procedural protections for any American. The Supreme Court has explained that, for over 250 years, our legal tradition has recognized cross-examination as the greatest legal engine invented for the discovery of truth.

So why do House Democrats jettison every precedent and every principle of due process in the way they devise these hearing procedures? Why did they devise a process that kept the President blocked out of any hearings for 71 of the 78 days of the so-called investigation?
I would submit because their process was never about finding truth. Their process was about achieving a predetermined outcome on a timetable and having it done by Christmas, and that is what they achieved.

Now, the third fundamental due process error is that the whole foundation of these proceedings was also tainted beyond repair because of the interested fact witness supervised and limited the course of the factual discovery, the course of the hearings. I explained the other day that Manager Schiffer had a reason, potentially, because of his office's contact with the so-called whistleblower and what was discussed and how the complaint was framed, which all remained secret, to limit inquiry into that, which is relevant.

The whistleblower began this whole process. His bias, his motive, why he was doing it, what his sources were—that is relevant to understand what generated this whole process, but there was no inquiry into that.

So what conclusion does this all lead to—all of these due process errors that have infected the proceeding up to now?

I think it is important to recognize the right conclusion is not that this body, this Chamber, should try to redo everything—start bringing in new evidence, bring in witnesses because the President wasn't allowed witnesses below and redo the whole process. And that is not the conclusion.

One is, first, as my colleagues have demonstrated, despite the one-sided, unfair process in the House, the record that the House Democrats collected through that process already shows that the President did nothing wrong. It already exonerates the President.

But the second and more important reason is because of the institutional implications it would have for this Chamber. Whatever precedent is set, whatever that accepts now as a permissible way to bring an impeachment proceeding and to bring it to this Chamber becomes the new normal. And if the new normal is going to be that there can be an impeachment proceeding in the House that violates due process, that doesn't provide the President or another official being impeached due process rights, that fails to conduct a thorough investigation, that doesn't come here with facts established but that become the investigatory body and start redoing what the House didn't do and finding new witnesses and doing things over and getting new evidence, then, that is going to be the new normal, and that will be the way that this Chamber for all the years, and there will be a lot more impeachments coming because it is a lot easier to do an impeachment if you don't have to follow due process and then come here and expect the Senate to do the work that the House didn't do.

I submit that is not the constitutional function of this Chamber sitting as a Court of Impeachment, and this Chamber should not put its imprimatur on a process in the House that would force this Chamber to take on that role.

Now, I will move on to the charge of obstruction in the second Article of Impeachment.

Accepting that Article of Impeachment would fundamentally damage separation of powers under the Constitution by permanently altering the relationship between the executive and the legislative branches. The second Article, House Democrats are trying to impeach the President for resisting legally defective demands for information by asserting established legal defences and immunities based on legal advice from the Department of Justice.

In essence, the approach here is that House Democrats are saying: When we demand documents, the executive branch must comply immediately, and the assertions of privilege or defenses to our subpoenas are further evidence of obstruction. We don't have to go through the constitutionally mandated accommodations process to work out an acceptable solution with the executive branch. We don't have to go to the courts to establish the validity of our subpoenas.

At one point, Manager Schiff said that anything that makes the House even contemplate litigation is evidence of obstruction. Instead, the House claims it can jump straight to impeachment.

What this really means, in this case, is that they are saying for the President to defend the prerogatives of his office, to defend the constitutionally grounded principles of executive branch privileges of immunities is an impeachable offense.

If this Chamber accepts that premise, that what has been asserted here constitutes an impeachable offense, it will forever damage the separation of powers. It will undermine the independence of the executive and destroy the bounds between the legislative and executive branches that the Framers crafted in the Constitution.

As Professor Turley testified before the House Judiciary Committee, "basing impeachment on this obstruction theory would itself be an abuse of power... by Congress."

And I would like to go through that and explain so thing. I will start by outlining what the Trump administration actually did in response to subpoenas, because there are three different actions—three different legally based assertions for resisting different subpoenas that the Trump administration made.

I pointed out on Saturday that there has been this constant refrain from the House Democrats that there was just blanket defiance, blanket obstruction, as if it were unexplained obstruction—just, we won't cooperate with that warrant. And that is not true. There were very specific legal grounds provided, and each one was supported by an opinion from the Department of Justice's Office of Legal Counsel.

So the first is executive branch officials declined to comply with subpoenas that had not been authorized, and that is the point I made at the beginning. There was no subpoena from the House. Without a vote from the House, the subpoenas that were issued were not authorized. And I pointed out that in an October 18 letter from White House Counsel that specific ground was explained.

The second ground wasn't just from the White House counsel. There were other letters. On the screen now is an October 15 letter from OMB, which explains: Absent a delegation by a House rule or a resolution of the House, none of your committees have been delegated jurisdiction to conduct an investigation pursuant to the impeachment power under article I, section 2 of the Constitution.

The letter went on to explain that legal rationale—not blanket defiance. There were specific exchanges of letters explaining these legal grounds for resisting.

The second ground, the second principle that the Trump administration was was that asserted the subpoena purported to require the President's senior advisers, his close advisers, to testify.

Following at least 50 years of precedent, the Department of Justice's Office of Legal Counsel has said that three senior advisers to the President—the Acting White House Chief of Staff, the Legal Advisor to the National Security Council, and the Deputy National Security Advisor—were absolutely immune from compelled congressional testimony. And based on that advice from the Office of Legal Counsel, the President directed those advisers not to testify.

Administrations of both political parties have asserted immunity since the 1970s. President Obama asserted it as to the Director of the Office of Political Strategy and Outreach. President George W. Bush asserted it as to his former counsel and to his White House Chief of Staff. President Clinton asserted it as to two of his counsel. President Reagan asserted it as to his counsel, Fred Fielding, and President Nixon asserted it. This is not something that was just made up recently. There is a decades-long history of the Department of Justice providing the opinion that senior advisers to the President are immune from compelled congressional testimony, and it is the same principle that was asserted here.

Nobody has an important constitutional rationale behind this immunity. One is that the President's most senior advisers are essentially his alter egos, and allowing Congress to subpoena them and compel them to come testify would be tantamount to allowing Congress to sub rosa fire the President. If the President fired his counsel, he would come testify, but that in separation of powers would not be tolerated. Congress could not do more that with the President than the President could force Members of Congress to come to the White House and answer to him. There is also a second and important rationale behind this immunity, and that relates to executive privilege. The immunity protects the same interests that underlie executive privilege. The Supreme Court has recognized executive privilege that protects the confidentiality of the communications with the President and deliberations within the executive branch. As the Court put it in United States v. Nixon, “The privilege is fundamental to the operation of government and inextricably rooted in the separation of powers under the Constitution.”

So the Supreme Court has recognized the executive needs this privilege to be able to function. It is rooted in the separation of powers.

As Attorney General Janet Reno advised President Clinton, this is not a partisan issue. This is not a Republican or Democrat issue. Administrations of both parties have asserted this principle of immunity for senior advisers.

And why does it matter? It matters because the Supreme Court has explained that the fundamental principle behind executive privilege is that it is necessary for confidentiality in communications and deliberations in order to have good and worthwhile deliberations, in order to have people provide their candid advice to the President. Because if they knew that what they were going to say was going to be on the front page of the Washington Post the next day or the next week, they wouldn’t tell the President what they actually thought. If you want to have good decision making, there has to be confidentiality.

This is the way the Supreme Court put it: “Human experience teaches that those who expect public dissemination of their remarks may well temper candor with a concern for appearances and for their own interests to the detriment of the decision-making process.” That was also from United States v. Nixon.

So those are exactly the interests that are protected by having senior advisers to the President be immune from compelled congressional testimony. Because once someone is compelled to sit in the witness seat and start answering, it is very hard for them to protect that privilege, to make sure that they don’t start revealing something that was discussed.

So for a small circle of those close to the President, for the past 40 to 50 years, administrations of both parties have insisted on this principle.

Now, the other night, House managers, when we were here very late last week, suggested that executive privilege was a distraction, and Manager Nadler called it “nonsense.” Not at all—it is a principle recognized by the Supreme Court—a constitutional principle grounded in separation of powers.

They also asserted that this immunity has been rejected by every court that has addressed it, as if to make it seem that lots of courts have addressed this. They have all said that this theory just doesn’t fly. That is not accurate. That is not true.

In fact, in most instances, once the President asserts immunity for a senior adviser, the accommodations process between the executive branch and the legislature begins, and there is usually some compromise to allow, perhaps, some testimony, not in open hearing but in a closed hearing or a deposition, perhaps to provide some other information instead of live testimony. There are two.

But in the only two times it has been litigated, district courts, it is true, rejected the immunity. One was in a case involving former counsel to George W. Bush, Harriet Miers. The district court rejected the immunity immediately upon appeal; the Court of Appeals of the DC Circuit stayed that decision. And that decision means—to stay that district court decision—that the appellate court thought there was a likelihood of success on appeal, that the executive branch was not at a minimum, that the issue of immunity presented “questions going to the merits serious, substantial, difficult, and doubtful as to make them a fair ground for litigation.” The first decision was stayed.

The second district court decision is still being litigated right now. It is the McGahn case that the House brought, trying to get testimony from former counsel to President Trump. And that case was just argued in the DC Circuit on January 3. So there is no established law suggesting that this immunity somehow has been rejected by the court. It is still being litigated right now. It is an immunity that is a standard principle asserted by every administration in both parties for the past 40 years. Asserting that principle cannot be treated as obstruction of Congress.

The third action that the President took—the third action related to the fact that House Democrats’ subpoenas tried to shut out executive branch counsel, agency counsel from the depositions of executive branch employees. Now, the Office of Legal Counsel concluded that congressional committees may not bar agency counsel from assisting an executive branch witness without contravening the legitimate prerogatives of the executive branch and that attempting to enforce a subpoena while barring agency counsel would be “unconstitutional.”

The President relied on that legal advice here. As Judge Starr pointed out, the President was consulting with the Department of Justice, receiving advice from the very respected Office of Legal Counsel, and following that advice about the constitutional prerogatives of his office and the constitutional prerogatives of the executive branch. Again, as both political parties have recognized the important role that agency counsel plays.

In the Obama administration, the Office of Legal Counsel stated that the immunity of agency counsel and potentially undermine the President’s constitutional authority to consider and assert executive privilege where appropriate. So why is agency counsel important?

As I tried to explain, the executive privilege of confidentiality for communications with the President for internal deliberative communications of the executive branch—are important legal rights. They are necessary for the proper functioning of the executive branch, and the agency counsel is essential to protect those legal rights.

When an individual employee goes in to testify, he or she might not know—probably would not know—they have the legal right for what is covered by executive privilege or deliberative process privilege—not things the employees necessarily know, and their personal counsel, even if they are permitted to have their personal counsel with them—sitting there. For employees don’t know the finer points of executive branch confidentiality interests or deliberative process privilege. It is also not their job to protect those interests. They are the personal lawyer for the employee who is testifying, trying to protect that employee from potential legal consequences.

We usually have lawyers to protect legal rights, so this makes sense when there is an important legal and constitutionally based right at stake—the executive privilege—that there should be a lawyer there to protect that right for the executive branch, and that is the principle that the Office of Legal Counsel enjoys.

This also doesn’t raise any insurmountable problems for congressional investigations for finding information. In fact, just as recently as April of 2019, the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform requested accommodation with the Trump administration after the administration had declined to make someone available for a deposition because of the lack of agency counsel. That issue was worked out and accommodation was made, and there was some testimony provided in other circumstances. So it doesn’t always result in the kind of escalation that was seen here—straight to impeachment. The accommodation process can work things out.
So those are the three principles that the Trump administration asserted. Now I would like to turn to the claim that somehow the assertion of these principles created an impeachable offense.

The idea that asserting defenses and immunity—legal defenses and immunity in response to subpoenas, acting on advice of the Department of Justice—is an impeachable offense is absurd and is dangerous for our government. Let me explain why.

How obstruction theory is wrong first and foremost because, in a government of laws, asserting privileges and rights to resist compulsion is not obstruction; it is a fundamental right. In Bordenkircher v. Hayes, the Supreme Court explains that to “punish a person because he has done what the law plainly allows him to do is a due process violation of the most basic sort, and for an agent of the State to pursue a course of action whose objective is to penalize a person’s reliance on his legal rights is patently unconstitutional.”

This is a principle that in the past, in the Clinton impeachment, was recognized across the board, that it would be improper to suggest that asserting rights is an impeachable offense. Harvard law professor Laurence Tribe said: “The allegation that invoking privileges and otherwise using the judicial system to shield information . . . is an abuse of power that should lead to impeachment and removal from office is not only frivolous, but also dangerous.”

Manager NADLER said that the use of a legal privilege is not illegal or impeachable itself—a legal privilege, executive privilege. Minority Leader SCHUMER, in the Clinton impeachment, expressed the same view:

(Text of Videotape presentation:)

Mr. SCHUMER. To suggest that any subject of an investigation, much less the President and the executive branch, be guided by the text of the Constitution according to its own interpretation of it.” It was recognized that there would be friction.

Similarly in Federalist 51, Madison pointed out that “the legislative, executive, and judicial departments . . . must, in the exercise of its functions, have confidence in the Constitution according to its own interpretation of it.” It was recognized that there would be friction.

The Founding Fathers expected the branches to have these conflicts. James Madison pointed out that “the legislative, executive, and judicial departments . . . must, in the exercise of its functions, have confidence in the Constitution according to its own interpretation of it.” It was recognized that there would be friction.

The House managers have pointed to the fact that article I, section 2, gives the House the final word. They said that “the Constitution gives the House the final word.” That is on page 154 of the House Judiciary Committee report.

What that is essentially saying—they point to the fact that article I, section 2, gives the House the sole Power of Impeachment, and they claim because it has the sole power of impeachment, that would suggest that the House could make itself superior over the Executive to dangle the threat of impeachment over any demand for information made to the Executive.

That is contrary to the Framers’ plan. Madison explained that where the executive and legislative branches come into conflict, in Federalist No. 49, “[n]either of them, it is evident, can pretend to exclusive or superior right of settling the batteries between their respective powers.” But that is exactly what the House managers have asserted in this case. They have said that the House becomes supreme. There is no need for them to go to court. The Executive must be wrong. Any resistance to their subpoena is obstruction. If you claim that our subpoena is invalid, we don’t have to do anything to address that concern; we will just impeach you because resistance is obstruction of Congress.

The House put it this way in their report to the Judiciary Committee. They effectively said that the House is the judge of its own powers, because what they said was “the Constitution gives the House the final word.” That is on page 154 of the House Judiciary Committee report.

What that is essentially saying—they point to the fact that article I, section 2, gives the House the sole Power of Impeachment, and they claim because it has the sole power of impeachment, the courts have no role; the House is the final word; it is the judge of its own powers. But that is contrary to constitutional design. There is no power that is unchecked in the Constitution. The Constitution assigns the power to the House simply means that power is given solely to the House, not anywhere else.
The Constitution does not say that the power of impeachment is the paramount power that makes all other constitutional rights and privileges and prerogatives of the other branches fall away. The Framers recognized that there could be partisan impeachments and there could be impeachments for the wrong reasons, and they did not strip the executive branch of any of its needs for protecting its own sphere of authority and its own prerogatives pursuant to the Constitution. Those principles of executive privilege and those immunities still survive, even in the context of impeachment.

The power of impeachment is not like the House can simply flip a switch and say now we are in impeachment, and they have constitutional kryptonite that makes the powers of the executive eliminated. So when there are these conflicts, even in the context of impeachment inquiry, the executive is not due to assert his privileges and prerogatives under the Constitution, and, indeed, it must in order to protect the institutional interests of the Office of the Presidency and to preserve the proper balance between the branches that we need to assert his prerogatives of the Executive.

Professor Turley, rightly, pointed out that by claiming Congress can demand any testimony or documents and impeach any President who dares to go to the courts, House Democrats were advancing a position that was intolerably untenable and abusive of impeachment." Other scholars agree.

In the Clinton impeachment, Professor Susan Low Bloch testified that “impeaching a President for invoking lawful privileges is a dangerous and ominous precedent.” It would achieve exactly the result that Gouverneur Morris, one of the Framers, warned against at the Constitutional Convention. He explained that “when we make him [the President] of the executive department liable to Justice however we should take care to provide some mode that will not make him dependent on the Legislature.” That is exactly what this Article of Impeachment would do. It would make the President dependent on the legislation because any demand for information, be it by Congress, could be used as a threat of impeachment to enforce compliance by the executive. The very theory that the House Democrats have asserted is that there can be no assertions of privileges and no constitutionally based prerogatives of the Executive to stand in the way.

If that theory were true, virtually every President could have been impeached. Virtually every President has asserted, at one time or another, these constitutional prerogatives. President Obama famously, in the Fast and Furiou.s investigation, refused to turn over documents that led to his Attorney General’s decision that he could not hold in contempt those that didn’t lead to impeachment. It could be a long list. Professor Turley testified there could be a very long list of Presidents who would have to be distinguished if the principles being asserted now in this case were applied to all past Presidents in history.

Now, House Democrats have given a few different justifications for this approach. It could be reconciled with the Constitution. They say that if we cannot impeach the President for this obstruction, then the President is above the law. Not so. I think I pointed out that the President is still bound by the law, asserting the legality of the subpoena, and relying on the legal advice from the Department of Justice to make his arguments based on long-recognized constitutional principles, and, indeed, is making the fundamental point, with respect to the subpoenas, that it is Congress that is not above the law. It is the House. The House has to follow the law as well. It has to issue valid subpoenas. And if the law isn’t followed, those subpoenas are null and void, and the Executive doesn’t have to comply with them.

The House Democrats say that they shouldn’t go to the courts because the courts have no role in impeachment. I think I pointed out that the House Democrats can’t say that they have the sole power of impeachment, that it is a paramount power, and that no other branch plays any role in providing a check on how the power is exercised. And in addition, the House Democrats have argued this point.

In the McGahn case that they are litigating right now, they have asserted that is part of the impeachment inquiry. The Trump administration has explained that it was not validly part of the impeachment inquiry, but that is the ground on which they are litigating under.

They say that they have no time for the courts. I think that what really means is they have no time for the rule of law, the President and the courts as well as litigating the validity of its subpoenas, that is also available to them, but impeachment as the first step doesn’t make any sense.

I should point out, in part, when the House managers say they didn’t have time to litigate, they didn’t have time to go to the courts, but they now come to this Chamber and say this Chamber should issue some more subpoenas, this Chamber should get some witnesses that we didn’t bother to fight about, what do you think will happen then? That there will not be similar assertions of privilege and immunity? That there wouldn’t be litigation about that?

And this goes back to the point that I made. If you put your imprimatur on a process that was broken and say, yes, that was a great way to run things, this was a great package to bring here, and we will clean up the mess and issue subpoenas and try to do all the work that wasn’t done, then that becomes the new normal, and that doesn’t make sense for this body.

A proper way to have things handled is to have the House—if it wants to have the impeachment here ready for trial—do the investigation. The information it wants to get, if there is going to be resistance, that has to be resolved, and it has to be ready to proceed, not transfer the responsibility to this Chamber to do the work that the House has already.

They also assert that President Trump’s assertion of these privileges is somehow different because it is unprecedented, and it is categorical. Well, it is unprecedented, perhaps, in the sense that there was a broad statement that a lot of subpoenas wouldn’t be complied with, but that is because it was unprecedented for the House to begin... these proceedings without voting to authorize the committee to issue the subpoenas. That was the first unprecedented step. That is what had never happened before in history. So, of course, the response to that would be, in some sense, unprecedented. The President simply pointed out that without that vote, there were no valid subpoenas.

There have also been categorical refusals in the past. President Truman, when the Committee on American Activities, in 1948, issued subpoenas to his administration, issued a directive to the entire executive branch that any subpoena or demand or request for information, reports, or files in the nature described in those subpoenas shall be respectfully declined on the basis of this directive, and he referred also to inquiries of the Office of the President for such response as the President may determine to be in the public interest. The Truman administration responded to none of them.

A last point on the House Democrats’ claim that privileges simply disappear because this is impeachment power of the House. They have referred a number of times to United States v. Nixon, the Supreme Court decision, suggesting that that somehow determines that when you are in an impeachment inquiry, executive privilege falls away. That is not true. In fact, United States v. Nixon was not even actually about assertions of privilege. As Judge Starr pointed out, in the Clinton proceedings, the House Judiciary Committee concluded that the President had improperly exercised executive privilege—improperly exercised executive privilege—and it did not have the ability to second-guess the rationale behind the President or what was in his mind asserting executive privilege, and it could not treat that as an impeachable offense. It rejected an Article of Impeachment based on Clinton’s assertions of privilege.

And as the House Democrat’s own witness, Professor Gerhardt, has explained, in 1943, President Tyler similarly was investigated for potential impeachment—his attempts to protect and assert what he regarded as the prerogatives of his office as he resisted demands for information from Congress. Professor Gerhardt explained Tyler’s attempt to protect and assert what he regarded as the prerogatives of his office were the function of his constitutional and policy judgments, and they could not be used by Congress to impeach him. President Trump’s resistance to congressional subpoenas was no different a violation of constitutional and policy judgment, and it provides no basis to impeach him.

I would like to close with a final thought. One of the greatest issues—and perhaps the greatest issue—for your consideration in this case is how the precedent set in this case will affect the future.

The Framers recognized that there would be partisan and illegitimate impeachments. In Federalist No. 65, Hamilton and Madison warned about impeachments that reflected what he called “the persecution of an improper or designing majority in the House of Representatives.” That is exactly what this case presents.

Justice Story recognized that the Senate provides the proper tribunal for trying impeachments because it was believed by the Framers to have a greater sense of obligation to the future generations, not to be swayed by the passions of the moment.

One of the essential questions here is, Will the Chamber adopt a standard for impeachment—a diluted standard—under which it fundamentally disrupts, damages, and alters the separation of powers in our constitutional structure of government? Because that is what both the first article—for reasons that Judge Starr and Professor Dershowitz have covered—and the second article, the obstruction charge, would do.

I will close with a quotation from one of the Republican Senators who crossed the aisle and voted against convicting President Andrew Johnson during his impeachment trial. It was Lyman Trumbull who I think explained the great principle that applies here. He said:

“Once [we] set the example of impeaching a President for what, when the excitement of the hour shall have subsided as insufficient causes, no future President will be safe . . . and what then becomes of the checks and balances of the constitution, so carefully devised and so vital to its perpetuity? They are all gone.”

Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice. I will yield to Mr. Sekulow.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, House managers, Mr. Philbin just concluded on the importance of executive privilege.

Professor Turley, who testified before the House, said we have three branches of government, not two. If you impeach a President, if you make a high crime and misdemeanor out of going to court, it is an abuse of power. It is your abuse of power.

With regard to executive privilege, it was Mr. NADEL who called it “executive privilege and other nonsense.”

When Attorney General Holder refused to comply with subpoenas, President Obama invoked executive privilege, arguing “compelled disclosure would be inconsistent with the separation of powers established in the Constitution”—“executive privilege and other nonsense.”

Manager SCHIFF wrote that the White House assertion of executive privilege was denied by precedent that has been recognized and has recognized the need for the President and his senior advisors to receive candid advice and information from their top aides—executive privilege and other nonsense.

We talked about this the other night. The nonsense is to treat the separation of powers and constitutional privileges as if they are asbestos in the ceiling tiles. You can’t touch them. That is not the way the Constitution is designed.

We are going to now turn our attention to a separate topic. It is one that... has been discussed a lot on the floor here and will be discussed now.

Presenting for the President is the former attorney general for the State of Florida, Pam Bondi. She is also a career prosecutor. She has handled complex cases. She is going to discuss an issue that the House managers have put pretty much at the center of their case, and that is the issue of corruption in Ukraine, particularly with regard to a company known as Burisma.

Mr. Chairman, I yield my time to former Attorney General Pam Bondi.

Ms. Counsel BONDI. Mr. Chief Justice, Senators, Members of the Senate, when the House managers gave you their presentation, when they submitted their brief, they repeatedly referenced Hunter Biden and Burisma.

They spoke to you for over 21 hours, and they referenced Biden or Burisma over 400 times. And when they gave these presentations, they said there was nothing—nothing—to see. It was a sham. This is fiction.

In their trial memorandum, the House managers described this as baseless. Why did they say that? Why did they invoke Biden or Burisma over 400 times? The reason they needed to do that is because they are here to say that the President must be impeached and removed from office for raising a concern, and that is why we have to talk about this today.

They say sham. They say baseless. They say this because if it is OK for someone to say, “hey, you know what, maybe there is something here worth raising,” then, their case crumbles.

They have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that there is no basis to raise this concern, but that is not what public records show.

Here are just a few of the public sources that flagged questions surrounding this very same issue. The United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office, the post-Obama White House Press Secretary Jay Carney, Hunter Biden’s former business associate, ABC White House reporter, ABC’s Good Morning America, the Washington Post, the New York Times, Ukrainian law enforcement, and the Obama State Department itself—they all raised this issue.

We would prefer not to be talking about this. We would prefer not to be discussing this. But the House managers have put this squarely at issue, so we must address it.

Let’s look at the facts. In early 2014, Joe Biden, our Vice President of the United States, led the U.S. foreign policy in Ukraine with the goal of rooting out corruption. According to an annual study published by Transparency International, during this time, Ukraine was one of the most corrupt countries in the entire world.

There is a natural gas company in Ukraine called Burisma. Burisma has been owned by an oligarch named Mykola Zlochevsky. Here is what happened very shortly after Vice President Biden was made U.S. point man for Ukraine. His son Hunter Biden ends up on the board of Burisma, working for and paid by the oligarch Zlochevsky.

In February 2014, in the wake of anti-corruption uprising by the people of Ukraine, Zlochevsky flees the country, flees Ukraine, flees Zlochevsky, the oligarch, is well-known.

George Kent, the very first witness that the Democrats called during their public hearings, testified that Zlochevsky stood out for his self-dealings, even among other oligarchs. House managers didn’t tell you that. Ambassador Kurt Volker explained that Burisma had “a very bad reputation as a company for corruption and money laundering.” House managers didn’t tell you that.

Burisma was so corrupt that George Kent said he intervened to prevent USAID from cosponsoring an event with Burisma. Do you know what this event was? It was a child’s contest, and the prize was a camera. They were so bad—Burisma—that our country wouldn’t even cosponsor a children’s event with Burisma.

In March 2014, the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office opened a money laundering investigation into the oligarch, Zlochevsky, and the company Burisma. The very next month, April 2014, according to a public report, Hunter Biden quietly joins the board of Burisma.

Remember, early 2014 was when Vice President Biden began leading Ukraine policy.

Here is how Hunter Biden came to join Burisma’s board in 2014. He was brought on the board by Devon Archer, his business partner. Devon Archer was college roommates with Chris Heinz, the stepson of Secretary of State John Kerry. All three men—Hunter Biden, Devon Archer, and Chris Heinz—had all started an investment firm together.

Public records show that on April 16, 2014, Devon Archer meets with Vice President Biden at the White House. Just 2 days later, on April 18, 2014, Hunter Biden quietly joins Burisma. That is according to public reporting.

Remember, this is just 1 month after the United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Office opened a money laundering case into Burisma, and Hunter Biden joins their board.

And not only 10 days after Hunter Biden joins the board, British authorities seized $23 million in British bank accounts connected to the oligarch Zlochevsky, owner of Burisma. Did Hunter Biden leave the board then? No.

The British authorities also announced that they had started a criminal investigation into potential money laundering. Did Hunter Biden leave the board? No.

What happened was, then—and only then—did the company chose to announce that Hunter Biden had joined the board after the assets of Burisma and its oligarch owner, Zlochevsky, were frozen and a criminal investigation had begun. Hunter Biden’s decision to join Burisma raised flags almost immediately.

One article from May 2014 stated that, “the appointment of Joe Biden’s son to the board of the Ukrainian gas firm Burisma has raised eyebrows the world over.”

Even an outlet with bias for Democrats pointed out Hunter Biden’s activities created a conflict of interest for Joe Biden. The article stated: “The move raises questions about a potential conflict of interest for Joe Biden.”

Even Chris Heinz, Hunter Biden’s own business partner, had grave concerns. He thought that working with Burisma was unacceptable. This is Chris Heinz. He was worried about the corruption, the geopolitical risk, and how bad it would look. So he wisely distanced himself from Hunter Biden and Devon Archer’s appointments to Burisma.

He didn’t simply call his stepfather, the Secretary of State, and say: I have a problem with this. He didn’t tell his friends today, hey, guys, I am not getting on this board. I want nothing to do with this.

He went so far as to send an email to senior State Department officials about this issue. This is Chris Heinz. He wrote:

Apparently, Devon and Hunter have joined the board of Burisma, and a press release went out today. I can’t speak [to] why they decided to, but there is no investment by our firm in their company.

What did Hunter Biden do? He stayed on the board. What did Chris Heinz do? He subsequently stopped doing business with his college roommate Devon Archer and his friend Hunter Biden.

Chris Heinz’ spokesperson said the lack of judgment in this matter was a major catalyst for Mr. Heinz ending his business relationship with Mr. Archer and Mr. Biden.

Now, the media also noticed. The same day, an ABC News reporter asked Obama White House Press Secretary Jay Carney about it. Here is what happened.

(Text of Videotape presentation:) Joe KARL: Hunter Biden is now taken a position with the largest oil and gas company—holding company in Ukraine. Is there any concern about at least the appearance of a conflict there—the Vice President’s son—Jay CARNEY. I would refer you to the Vice President’s Office. I saw those reports. You know, Hunter Biden and other members of the Biden family are obviously private citizens, and where they work does not reflect an endorsement by the administration or by the Vice President or President. But I would refer you to the Vice President’s Office.

Ms. Counsel BONDI. The next day, the Washington Post ran a story about it. It said: “The appointment of the Vice President’s son to a Ukrainian oil board looks nepotistic at best, nefarious at worst.” Again, “The appointment of the Vice President’s son to a Ukrainian oil board looks nepotistic at best, nefarious at worst.”

And the media didn’t stop asking questions here. It kept going. Here is an article:

(Text of Videotape presentation:) Vice President BIDEN. You have to fight the cancer of corruption.
When speaking with ABC News about his qualifications to be on Burisma’s board, Hunter Biden didn’t point to any of the usual qualifications of a board member. Hunter Biden had no experience in natural gas, no experience in the energy sector, and no experience with Ukraine or Ukrainian affairs. As far as we know, he doesn’t speak Ukrainian. So naturally the media has asked questions about his board membership. Why was Hunter Biden on this board? (Text of Video tape presentation:)

Amy ROBACH. If your last name wasn’t Biden, do you think you would’ve been asked to be on the board of Burisma?

Mr. HUNTER BIDEN. I don’t know. Probably not.

Ms. Counsel BONDI. So let’s go back and talk about his time on the board. Remember, he joined Burisma’s board in April 2014, while the United Kingdom was under investigation for money laundering case against Burisma and its owner, Zlochevsky. On August 20, 2014, 4 months later, the Ukrainian prosecutor general’s office initiates a money laundering investigation into the oligarch, Zlochevsky. This is one of 15 investigations into Burisma and Zlochevsky, according to a recent public statement made by the current prosecutor general.

On January 16, 2015, prosecutors put Zlochevsky, the owner of Burisma, on whose board Hunter Biden sat, on the country’s wanted list for fraud—while Hunter Biden is on the board. Then British court orders that Zlochevsky’s $23 million in assets be unfrozen. Why was the money unfrozen? Deputy Assistant Secretary Kent testified to it.

KENT. In a briefing call with the National Security Council and the senior principals, the then Deputy Assistant Secretary whose board Hunter Biden sat, on the Zlochevsky, the owner of Burisma, on whose board Hunter Biden sat, on the country’s wanted list for fraud—while Hunter Biden is on the board. Then British court orders that Zlochevsky’s $23 million in assets be unfrozen. Why was the money unfrozen? Deputy Assistant Secretary Kent testified to it.

Ms. Counsel BONDI. But House managers didn’t tell you that.

This is all while Hunter Biden sat on Burisma’s board. Did Hunter Biden stop working for Burisma? No. Did Vice President Biden stop leading the Obama administration’s foreign policy efforts in Ukraine? No. In the meantime, Vice President Biden is still at the forefront of the U.S.-Ukraine policy. He pledges a billion-dollar loan guarantee to Ukraine contingent on its progress in rooting out corruption.

Around the same time as the $1 billion announcement, other people raised the issue of a conflict. As the Obama administration special envoy for energy policy told the New Yorker, he raised Hunter Biden’s participation on the board of Burisma directly with the Vice President himself. This is a special envoy to President Obama.

The media had questions too. On December 30, the New York Times publishes an article that Prosecutor General Shokin was investigating Burisma and its owner, Zlochevsky. Here is their quote: “The credibility of the vice president’s anticorruption message may have been harmed by the association of his son, Hunter Biden,” with Burisma and its owner, Zlochevsky.

And it wasn’t just one reporter who asked questions about the relationship between Burisma and the Obama administration. As we learned recently through reporting on FOX News, on January 19, 2016, there was a meeting between Obama administration officials and Ukrainian prosecutors.

Ken Vogel, journalist for the New York Times, asked the State Department about this meeting. He wanted more information about the meeting “where U.S. support for prosecutions of Burisma Holdings in New York and the United Kingdom and Ukraine were discussed.” But the story never ran.

Around the time of the reported story—January 2016—a meeting between the Obama administration and Ukrainian officials and a Ukrainian press report, as translated, says: The U.S. Department of State made it clear to the Ukrainian authorities that it was linking the $1 billion in loan guarantees to the dismissal of Prosecutor General Viktor Shokin.

Now, we all know the Obama administration, from the words of Vice President Biden himself—he advocated for the prosecutor general’s dismissal.

There was ongoing pressure into the oligarch Zlochevsky, the owner of Burisma, at the time. We know this because on February 2, 2016, the Ukrainian prosecutor general obtained a renewal of a court order to seize the then oligarch Zlochevsky’s Kyiv Post article published on February 4, 2015, says the oligarch Zlochevsky is “suspected of committing a criminal offense of illicit enrichment.”

Over the next few weeks, the Vice President had multiple calls with Ukraine’s President Poroshenko.

Days after the last call, on February 24, 2016, a DC consultant reached out to... the State Department to request a meeting to discuss Burisma. We know what she said because the email was released under the Freedom of Information Act. The consultant explicitly invoked Hunter Biden’s name as a board member.

In an email summarizing the call, the State Department official says that the consultant noted that two high-profile citizens are affiliated with the company, including Hunter Biden as a board member. She added that the consultant wanted to talk with Secretary of State Novelli about getting a better understanding of how the United States came to the determination that the country is corrupt.

To be clear, this email documents that the U.S. Government had determined Burisma to be corrupt, and the consultant was seeking a meeting with an extremely senior State Department official to discuss the U.S. Government’s position. Her pitch for the meeting, as used by Hunter Biden’s name, and according to the email, the meeting was set for a few days later.

Later that month, on March 29, 2016, the Ukrainian Parliament finally votes to fire the prosecutor general. This is the prosecutor general investigating the oligarch, owner of Burisma, on whose board Hunter Biden sat.

Two days after the prosecutor general is voted out, Vice President Biden announces that the United States will provide $335 million in loan guarantees to Ukraine. He soon announces that the United States will provide $1 billion in loan guarantees to Ukraine.

Let’s talk about one of the Democrats’ central witnesses: Ambassador Yovanovitch. In May 2016, Ambassador Yovanovitch was nominated to be Ambassador to Ukraine. Her pitch for the nomination used Hunter Biden’s name, and according to the email, the meeting was set for a few days later.

On July 25, 2019, 3 days later, President Trump speaks with President Biden. He says he’s not—we are not going to give you the billion dollars. They said: You have no authority. You’re not the President. The President said—I said: Call him. I said: I’m telling you, you are not getting the billion dollars. I said: You are not getting the billion. I’m going to be leaving here in 1 hour. It was about 6 hours. If the prosecutor is not fired, you’re not getting the money. Well, son of a bitch. (Laughter.) He got fired. And they put in place someone who was solid at the time.

Ms. Counsel BONDI. What he didn’t say on the video—according to the New York Times, this was the prosecutor investigating Burisma, Shokin.

What he also didn’t say on the video was that his son was being paid significant amounts by the oligarch owner of Burisma to sit on that board.

Only then does Hunter Biden leave the board. He stays on the board until April 2019. In November 2019, Hunter Biden signs an affidavit saying he “has been unemployed” and has another “monthly income since May 2019.”

This was in November of 2019, so we know, from after April 2019 to May 2019 through November 2019, he was unemployed, by his own statement—April 2019 to November 2019.

Despite his resignation from the board, the media continued to raise the issue relating to a potential conflict of interest.

On July 22, 2019, the Washington Post wrote: “Former Prosecutor General Shokin ‘believes bill ouster was because of his interest in the company,’ referring to Burisma. The Post further wrote that ‘had he remained in his post, he would have questioned Hunter Biden.’

On July 25, 2019, 3 days later, President Trump speaks with President Zelensky. He said:

The other thing. There’s a lot of talk about Biden’s son, that Biden stopped the prosecution and a lot of people want to find out about that so whatever you can do with the Attorney General would be great. Biden went around bragging that he stopped the prosecution so if you can look into it... It looks horrible for him.

The House managers talked about the Bidens and Burisma 400 times, but they never gave you the full picture. But here are those who did: The United Kingdom’s Serious Fraud Unit; Deputy Assistant Secretary of State George Kent; Ukrainian investigative journalist; ABC White House reporter; ABC “Good Morning America”; the Washington Post; the New York Times; Ukrainian law enforcement; and the Obama State Department itself. They all thought there was cause to raise the issue about the Bidens and Burisma.

The House managers might say, without evidence, that everything we have heard has been debunked, that the evidence points entirely unequivocally in the other direction. That is a distraction.

You have heard from the House managers. They do not believe that there was any concern to raise here, that all of this was based. And they are saying is that there was a basis to talk about this, to raise this issue, and that is enough.

I yield my time.
identify for you who supposedly conducted any investigations, who supposedly did the debunking, who discredited it. Where and when were any such investigations conducted? When were the results published? And much more is left unanswered.

Attorney General Bondi went through for you some of what we know about Burisma in its millions of dollars in payments to Vice President Biden’s son and his son’s business partner. There is no question that any rational person could understand what happened. I am going to go through some additional evidence, which was easily available to the House managers but which they never sought or considered.

Based on what Attorney General Bondi told you in this additional evidence, you can judge for yourself whether the conduct was suspect. As you know, one of the issues concerned Hunter Biden’s involvement with the Ukrainian natural gas company, which paid Hunter Biden millions of dollars to serve on its board of directors. He did not have any relevant expertise or experience. He had no expertise or experience in the natural gas industry. He had no known expertise in corporate governance nor any expertise in Ukrainian law. He doesn’t, so far as we know, speak Ukrainian. So why—why—did Burisma want Hunter Biden on its board? Why did they want to pay him millions of dollars? Well, he did have one qualification. He was the son of the Vice President of the United States. He was the son of the man in charge of the Ukrainian portfolio for the prior administration. And we are to believe there is nothing to see here, that for anyone to investigate or inquire about this would be a sham—nothing to see here.

But tellingly, Hunter Biden’s attorney, on October 13, 2019, issued a statement on his behalf. He indicated that in April 2014, Hunter was asked to join the board of Burisma, then states Hunter stepped off Burisma’s board in April 2019.

Now listen to the commitment that Hunter Biden is supposedly willing to make to all of us. Hunter makes the following commitment: Under a Biden administration, Hunter will regularly comply with any and all guidelines or environmental impact statements? Did he know anything about the natural gas industry in Ukraine? Was he going to discuss how we set gas rates? Was he going to discuss pipeline development construction or environmental impact statements? Did he know anything about the natural gas industry at all? Of course not.

So what was the reason? I think you do not need to look any further than the explanation that Hunter Biden gave during the ABC interview when he was asked why.

Here is what he had to say.

(Text of Videotape presentation):

Ms. ROBACH. You were paid $50,000 a month for your position?

Mr. HUNTER BIDEN. Look, I’m a private citizen. One thing that I do is sit here and open my kimono as it relates to how much money I make or did or didn’t. But it’s all been reported.

Mr. Counsel HERSCHMANN. But when asked how much money Burisma was paying him, he responded he doesn’t want to “open his kimono” and disclose how much. He does refer to public reports about how much he was being paid, but as we now know, he was being paid far more than was in the public record.

(Text of Videotape presentation):

So what was the reason? I think you do not need to look any further than the explanation that Hunter Biden gave during the ABC interview when he was asked why.

Here is what he had to say.

(Text of Videotape presentation):

Ms. ROBACH. If your last name wasn’t Biden, do you think you would have been asked to be on the board of Burisma?

Mr. HUNTER BIDEN. I don’t know. Probably no. I don’t think there are a lot of things that would have happened in my life if my last name wasn’t Biden.

Mr. Counsel HERSCHMANN. And as if to confirm how absurd this whole argument was that it should be a concern to our country, Hunter Biden and his lawyer could not even keep their story straight. Compare the press release that was issued by Burisma on May 12, 2014, with Hunter Biden’s lawyer’s statement on October 13 of 2019. The May 2014 press release begins: “R. [Robert] Hunter Biden will be in charge of holding’s legal unit.” He was going to be in charge of a Ukrainian gas company owned by an oligarch’s legal unit. However, in his appearance in October of 2019, after his involvement with Burisma came under renewed public scrutiny, he now claims: “At no time was Hunter in charge of the company’s legal affairs.”

Which is it? What was Hunter Biden doing at Burisma in exchange for millions of dollars? Who knows? What were they looking to hide so much for his corporate governance and transparency?

But let’s take a step back and realize what actually transpired, because the House managers would have us believe this had nothing at all to do with our government—nothing at all to do with our country’s interests, nothing at all to do with our Vice President, nothing at all to do with the State Department. It was simply private citizen Hunter Biden doing his own private business. It was purely coincidental that it was in his father’s portfolio in Ukraine, in the exact sector—the energy sector—that his father said was corrupt.

But we have a document here—again, something that House managers did not show you or even put before the House managers. This document is on these baseless Articles of Impeachment. If you look at that email, it is an email from Chris Heinz. And as Attorney Bondi already told you, he is the stepson of the then-Secretary of State John Kerry, and he was a former business partner with Hunter Biden and Devon Archer. Our Secretary of State’s stepson and our Vice President’s son are in business together.

It was sent on May 13, 2014, to the official government email addresses of two senior people at the State Department. These two people are the Chief of Staff to the Secretary of State and the Special Adviser to the Secretary of State. The subject line in the email is not “corporate transparency.” It is not “corporate governance.” It is not “here’s a heads-up.” The subject line is “Ukraine.”

Chris Heinz certainly understood the sensitivity to our U.S. foreign policy. What would our Secretary of State’s stepson say about Hunter Biden and Devon Archer? He says this:

Apparently Devon and Hunter both joined the board of Burisma and a press release went out today. I can’t speak to why they did or did not do that. They said: You have no authority. You’re not getting the money.

What would Secretary of State’s stepson say about Hunter Biden and Devon Archer? He says this:

Mr. Counsel HERSCHEMMANN, are we really to believe it was the policy of our government to withhold $1 billion of guarantees to Ukraine unless they fired a prosecutor on the spot? Was that really our policy? We have all heard continuously from the managers and many agree about the risks to the Ukrainians posed by the Russians. We have heard the managers say that a slight delay in providing funding to Ukraine endangers our national security and jeopardizes our interests and, therefore, the President must immediately be removed from office. Yet, they also argue that it was the official policy of our country to withhold $1 billion unless one individual was fired within a certain matter of hours. Was that really or could it ever be our United States policy?

According to the House managers’ theory, we were willing to jeopardize our own national security unless someone new, who happened to be investigating Burisma, was promptly fired. Are we going to jeopardize a Ukrainian economy because a prosecutor was not fired in the 6-hour time period Vice President Biden demanded? Does it matter that it is alleged to ever have been our U.S. foreign policy? And, just in case, the managers or others tried to argue: No, no, no, he wasn’t serious about that; he was just bluffing. What kind of message would that send to the Russians about our support for the Ukrainians that we would bluff and bluff with the Ukrainian economy?

From 2014 to 2017, Vice President Biden claimed to be on a crusade against corruption in Ukraine. He repeatedly spoke about corruption being the cancer of Ukraine, hobbled Ukraine, how Ukraine faced no more consequential mission than confronting corruption, and he encouraged Ukraine to close the space for corrupt oligarchs who ripped off Ukrainian people. The Vice President railed against monopolistic behavior where a select few profit from so many sweet-heart deals that has characterized that country for so long.

On his last official visit to Ukraine, 4 days before he left office, he spoke out against corruption and oligarchy, that eats away like a cancer, and against corruption, which continues to eat away at Ukraine’s democracy within. Why was Vice President doing this? Was he so concerned about corruption in Ukraine—even singling out that country’s energy sector—because corruption in Ukraine is a critical policy concern for our country?

During this time, what else was happening? His son and his son’s business partner were raking in over $1 million a year from what was regarded as one of the most corrupt Ukrainian companies in the energy sector, owned and controlled by one of the most corrupt oligarchs. Were Vice President Biden’s words and advice to Ukraine just hollow? According to the House managers, the answer apparently is yes, they were empty words, at least when it came to anyone questioning him and his own sweetheart deal, his own son’s deal with Ukraine’s corruption and oligarchy.

Again, to raise Manager SCHIFF’s own question: What kind of message did this send to future U.S. Government officials? Your family can accept money from foreign corrupt companies? No problem. You can pay family members of our highest government officials, and no one is allowed to even ask questions?

What was going on? We have to just accept now the House managers’ conclusory statements, like “sham,” “discrediting,” even though no one has ever investigated why. And can you imagine what House Manager SCHIFF and his fellow Democratic Representatives would say if it were President Trump’s children on an oligarch’s payroll?

And when it finally appeared that a true Ukrainian corruption fighter had assumed the country’s Presidency, President Trump was not supposed to—he was not permitted to—follow up on Vice President Biden’s own words about fighting corruption and try to make sure words something other than empty?

According to the House managers, Ukrainian corruption is now only a private interest. It no longer is a serious important concern for our country.

Now I want to take a moment to cover a few additional points about the July 25 telephone call in which the House managers believe that the President of the United States, in their words, was shaking down and pressuring the President of Ukraine to do his personal bidding.

First of all, this was not the first telephone call that the President of the United States had with other foreign leaders. Think about this for a moment. This was not an Oval Office meeting but the Situation Room. It was a scheduled call. There were other people on the call. There were other people taking notes. Obviously, the President was aware of that fact.

The House managers talked about the fact that the President did not follow the approved talking points as if the President—any President—is obligated to follow approved talking points. The last time I checked—and I think this is clear to the American people—President Trump knows how to speak his mind.

Do you remember the fake transcript that Manager SCHIFF read when he was before the Intelligence Committee—his mob, fake rendition of the call? Well, I prosecuted organized crime for years. The type of description of what goes on—what House Manager SCHIFF tried to create for the American people—is completely detached from reality. It is as if we were supposed to believe that mobsters would invite people they do not know into an organized crime meeting to sit around and take notes to establish their corrupt intent.

Manager SCHIFF, our jobs as prosecutors—we would not have done one—would have been a lot easier if that were how it worked.

Think about what he is saying. Think about the managers’ position: that our President decided with corrupt intent to shake down, in their words, another foreign leader, and he decided to do it in front of everyone, in a documented conversation, in the presence of people he did not even know, just so he could get this personal benefit that was not in our country’s interest. That is flawed: is completely illogical—because that is not what happened, and that is why Manager SCHIFF ran away from the actual transcript. That is why he created his own, fake conversation.

I would like to just address another point, for the transcript, of the July 25 phone call.

The House managers alleged that an Oval Office meeting with the President was critical to the newly elected Ukrainian President because it would signal to Russia, which had invaded Ukraine in 2014 and still occupied Ukrainian territory, that Ukraine could count on American support. They actually argued that it was a quid pro quo, that the President withheld this critical Oval Office meeting that would deter the Russians and save the Ukrainians because he wanted something personal.

Now, if that were, in fact, critical to President Zelensky for the safety of his own citizens, he would have immediately jumped at the opportunity to come to the Oval Office, especially when President Trump offered him that meeting on July 25 call. Let’s see what President Zelensky actually said when he was invited to Washington on that call.

He does not say: Oh, this is what I would like to do. It is critical for my people. We will arrange it in a meeting. His response is:

I would be very happy to come and would be happy to meet you personally and get to know you better . . . On the other hand, I believe that it is very important to President Zelensky and the Russians know? They knew that President Trump did—provide that support. That, clearly, was the most material thing to him, much more important than a meeting in the Oval Office.

If an Oval Office meeting were critical to President Zelensky, that was the time to say so, not to suggest another venue.

When we look at the evidence that is before us, it is clear that the only people who talked about having an Oval Office meeting were lower level government employees who thought it was a good idea. But for the principals involved, those who actually make the decisions—President Zelensky, President Trump—to them, it was not critical, it was not material, and it was definitely never a quid pro quo. What was important to President Zelensky was not an Oval Office meeting but the lethal weapons that President Trump supplied to Ukraine and the sanctions that President Trump enforced against the Russians. That is what the transcript of the July 25 call demonstrates.

Let us now consider what President Zelensky knew about the support that President Trump had provided to Ukraine compared to the support—or more accurately, the lack thereof—that the prior administration had provided to Ukraine.

In February 2004, Russia began its military campaign against Ukraine. Against the advice and urgings of Congress and of many in his own administration, President Obama refused then and throughout the remainder of his presidency to provide lethal assistance to Ukraine.

In the House, Manager SCHIFF joined many of his colleagues in a letter-writing campaign to President Obama, urging “the U.S. must supply Ukraine with the means to defend itself” against Russian aggression, urging President Obama to quickly approve additional efforts to support Ukraine’s efforts to defend its sovereign territory, including the transfer of lethal defense weapons to the Ukraine military.

On March 23, the House of Representatives overwhelmingly passed a resolution urging President Obama to immediately exercise the authority by Congress to provide Ukraine with a lethal defensive weapons system.

The very next day, this Senate passed a unanimous resolution urging the President to prioritize and expedite the provision of defensive lethal and nonlethal military assistance to Ukraine, consistent with U.S. national interests and policies.

As one Senator here stated in March 2015, “Providing nonlethal equipment among other things would give the Ukrainian military campaign against Ukraine evasion, with no followup, really have had any effect on the election, as the managers claim? Would anyone have remembered the announcement a year or more later?”

Ironically, it is the House managers who have put Burisma and its connection to the Bidens front and center in this proceeding, and now the voters will know about it and probably will remember it. Be careful what you wish for.

Manager SCHIFF—well, there he goes again. He is putting words in the President’s mouth that were never there. Again, look at the transcript of the July call. President Trump never asked about any announcement of any type of investigation, and President Zelensky told President Trump:

I guarantee, as the President of Ukraine, that all the investigations will be done open, openly, transparently. That I can assure you.

What happened next?

The House managers say President Zelensky did not want to get mixed up in U.S. politics, but it is precisely the Democrats who politicized the issue.

Last August, they began circling the wagons in trying to protect Vice President Biden, and they are still doing it in these proceedings. They contend that President Trump solicited millions of dollars of payments by a corrupt Ukraine company—owned by a corrupt Ukraine oligarch—to the son of the second highest officeholder in our land, who was supposed to be in charge of fighting corruption in Ukraine, to be a sham, debunked. But there has never been an investigation, so how could it be a sham—simply because the House managers say so?

Which brings me to yet another one of the House managers' baseless contentions—that President Trump raised the matter with President Zelensky because Vice President Biden had just announced his candidacy for President. But, of course, it was far from a secret that Vice President Biden was planning to run.

What had, in fact, changed?

First, President Zelensky had been elected in April and sworn into office July 19, running on the same platform, his party took control of the Ukrainian Parliament. That made it the opportune time to raise the issue because finally there was a receptive government in Ukraine that was committed to fighting precisely the kind of highly questionable conduct displayed by Burisma in its payments to Hunter Biden and his partner, just as Joe Biden had raised years before.

There are two other things.

In late June, ABC News ran a story entitled “Hunter Biden's foreign deals. Did Joe Biden's son profit off of his father's position as Vice President?”

Then, just a couple of weeks before President Trump's telephone call with President Zelensky, the New Yorker magazine—not exactly a supporter of President Trump's—ran an expose—“Will Hunter Biden Jeopardize His Father's Position as Vice President?”

The New Yorker reporter—again, this was in July, just a couple of weeks before the phone call—said that some of Vice President Biden's advisers were worried that Hunter would expose the Vice President to criticism.

And the New York Times--in a July 26 article--quoted a House aide told the New Yorker reporter that Hunter's behavior invited questions about whether he was “leveraging access for his benefit.” The reporter wrote: “When I asked members of Biden’s staff whether they did raise their concern with the Vice President, several of them said they had been too intimidated to do so.”

“Everyone who works for him has been screamed at,” a former adviser told the reporter. “I don’t know whether anyone has been intimidated by Vice President Biden or has been screamed at by him about Burisma or his son’s involvement.”

Do we want the type of government where questions about facially suspect conduct are suppressed or dismissed as illegitimate because someone is intimidating or screaming or is just too important? No. That is precisely when an investigation is most important.

Last Thursday night, Manager JEFFRIES provided us with the Democrats' standard for abuse of power. He said: “Abuse of power occurs when the President exercises his official power to bring about a corrupt personal benefit while ignoring or injuring the national interest.”

Mr. JEFFRIES and the House managers contend that, under this standard, President Trump has committed an impeachable offense and must be immediately removed from office. But if Manager JEFFRIES' standard applies, then where were these same Democrats' calls for impeachment when there were clearly for his own corrupt personal benefit while ignoring or injuring the national interest?

The American people understand this basic notion as equal justice under the law. It is as American as apple pie. Yet the House managers want to apply their own special justice—a standard that applies only to their political opponents. They want one system of justice for Democrats and another system of justice for everyone else. You do not need to take my word for it; let's walk through the facts.

On March 26, 2012, on the eve of the 2012 Nuclear Security Summit in Seoul, South Korea, President Obama met with Russian President Dmitry Medvedev to discuss one of the pressing issues in the U.S. national security interests—missile defense. How important was the issue of missile defense to the strategic relationship between the United States and Russia?

As President Obama's Defense Secretary Robert Gates said in June 2010, upgraded missile interceptors in development “would give us the ability to protect our troops, our bases, our facilities and our allies in Europe.”

There is no meeting of the minds on missile defense. The Russians hate it. They have hated it since the late 1960s. They will always hate it, mostly because we will build it, and they won’t.

During the Nuclear Security Summit, President Obama had a private exchange with Russian President Medvedev that was picked up on a hot microphone.

(Text of Videotape presentation:

President OBAMA. This is my last election. After my election, I have more flexibility.

President MEDVEDEV. I understand. I will transmit this information to Vladimir, and I stand with you.

President Obama said:

On all these issues, but particularly missile defense, this can be solved, but it’s important for him to come to a meeting.

President Medvedev responded:

Yeah, I understand. I understand your message about space. Space for you.

President Obama:

This is my last election. After my election, I will have more flexibility.

President Medvedev responds:

I understand. I will transmit this information to Vladimir.

As we all know, it is Vladimir Putin. As you just saw in 2012, President Obama asked the Russians for space after the upcoming 2012 election, after which he would have more flexibility.

Now, let me apply Mr. JEFFRIES' and the House managers' three-part test for abuse of power.

One, the President exercises his official power. President Obama's actions clearly meet the test for exercising official power because in his role as head of state during the nuclear security summit, after asking President Medvedev for space, he promised him that “missile defense can be solved.”

What else did that mean but solved in a way favorable to the Russians, who were dead set against the expansion of a U.S. missile defense system in Europe?

Two, to obtain a corrupt personal benefit. President Obama's actions were clearly for his own corrupt personal benefit because he was asking an adversary for space for the express purpose of furthering his own election chances.

Again, President Obama said:

This is my last election. After my election, I have more flexibility.

President Obama knew the importance of missile defense in Europe but decided to use that as a bargaining chip with the Russians to further his own election chances in 2012.

Three, while ignoring or injuring our national interest. As President Obama's Defense Secretary said, “Missiles would give us the ability to protect our troops, our bases, our facilties, and our allies in Europe.”

Surely, sacrificing the ability to protect our troops and our allies would injeure the national interest. Yet President Obama was willing to barter away the safety of our troops and the safety of our allies in exchange for space in the upcoming election.

In short, President Obama leveraged the power of his office to the detriment of U.S. policy on missile defense in order to influence the 2012 election solely to his advantage. And we never would have known had President Obama realized that the microphone was on; that there was a hot mic.

One could easily substitute President Obama's 2012 exchange with President Medvedev into Article I of the House's Impeachment Articles against President Trump.

Using the powers of his high office, President Obama solicited interference of a foreign government, Russia, in the 2012 U.S. Presidential election. He did so using a scheme or course of conduct that included soliciting the Government of Russia to give him “space” on missile defense that would benefit his reelection and influence the 2012 U.S. Presidential election to his advantage.

In doing so, President Obama used the powers of the Presidency in a manner that compromised the national security of the United States and undermined the integrity of the U.S. democratic process. He thus ignored and injured the interest of the Nation.

Does it sound familiar, House managers? It should, as the case against President Obama would have been far stronger than the allegations against President Trump.

President Obama’s abuse of power to benefit his own political interests was there and is here now for everyone to hear. It was a direct, unquestionable quid pro quo. No mind reading was needed there. Where were the House managers then?

And that points out the absurdity of the House managers’ case against President Trump. It was President Obama, not President Trump, who was weak on Russia and weak on support to Ukraine.

President Obama caved to Russia and Putin’s assertions of defense when he decided to scrap the U.S. plans to install missile bases in Poland. Yet he criticized Senator Romney during the 2012 Presidential campaign when Senator Romney said Russia was the greatest geopolitical threat to the U.S.

President Obama. I’m glad that you recognize that al-Qaida’s a threat because a few missile bases in Poland. Yet he criticized al-Qaida’s a threat because a few years ago when you were asked what’s the biggest threat facing America, you said Russia. Not al-Qaida, you said Russia, and the 1980s are now calling to ask for their foreign policy back because, you know, the Cold War’s been over 20 years.

Mr. Counsel HERSCHMANN. Now, when it is politically convenient, the Democrats are saying the same thing that President Obama criticized Senator Romney for saying. In fact, they are basing their entire politicized impeachment on a version of reality, this claim that President Trump is not supporting Ukraine far more than the prior administration.

President Obama caved on missile defense in late 2009. His hot mic moment occurred in March 2012. His re-election was months later. Two years later, in March 2014, Russia invaded Ukraine and annexed Crimea. President Obama refused to provide lethal aid to Ukraine to enable it to defend itself. Where were the House managers then?

The House managers would have the American people believe that there is a threat—an imminent threat—to the national security of our country for which the President must be removed immediately from the highest office in the land because of what? Because he had a phone call with a foreign leader and discussed corruption? Because he paused for a short period of time giving away our tax dollars to a foreign country? That’s the theory.

It is absurd on its face. Not one American life was in jeopardy or lost by this short delay, and they know it. And how do we know that they know it? Because they went on vacation after they adopted the Articles of Impeachment. They did not cancel their recess. They did not rush back to deliver the Articles of Impeachment to the Senate. They did not adopt them after that supposed terrible imminent threat to our national security. What did they do?

Speaker PELOSI. Urgency.

Mr. SCHIFF. Timing is really driven by the urgency.

Mr. SWALWELL. The urgency.

Mr. NADLER. Nothing could be more urgent.

Mr. RICHMOND. The urgency.

Speaker PELOSI. And urgent. And urgent.

Mr. SWALWELL. There is an urgency, you know, to this.

Mr. NADLER. Then we must move swiftly.

Mr. SWALWELL. We don’t have time to screw around.

Speaker PELOSI. It’s about urgency.

Mr. TAPPER. House Speaker NANCY PELOSI is still holding on to the Articles of Impeachment.

Mr. Counsel HERSCHMANN. Urgency? Urgency, for which you want to immediately remove the President of the United States? You sat on the articles for a month—the longest delay in the history of our country.

They adopted them on Friday, December 13, 2019—Friday the 13th—went on vacation, and finally decided after one of their Democratic Presidential debates had finished and after the BCS football championship game, that it was time to deliver them.

What happened to their national security interest argument? Wasn’t that the reason that they said they had to rush to vote? It is urgent, they told us. No due process for this President. It is a crisis of monumental proportion. Our national security is at risk every additional day that he is in office, they tell us.

The House managers also used the same excuse for not issuing subpoenas to the administration and they blame you if we don’t subpoena witnesses and have them before you.

Yet even in the face of this overwhelming evidence, they claim that the President is to blame for their decision to withdraw their own subpoenas or not issue others. Their choice, but the President is responsible. That is one of their claims. It is ludicrous.

They are blaming the President because they decided to seek judicial review and enforcement of their own subpoenas and for some witnesses never even issued subpoenas. In their minds, that is impeachable.

Manager NADLER spoke eloquently back before the House Judiciary Committee hearing in December of 1998. He said:

There must never be a narrowly voted impeachment or an impeachment substantially supported by one of our major political parties and largely opposed by the other. Such an impeachment would lack legitimacy, would produce divisiveness and bitterness in our politics for years to come, and will call into question the very legitimacy of our political institutions.

Manager NADLER was right then, and it is equally true today. Divisiveness and bitterness. Divisiveness and bitterness. Listen to his words. Impeachments by one party cause divisiveness and bitterness in our country. That is what a partisan impeachment leads to.

Sadly, when Manager NADLER eloquently warned against divisiveness and bitterness, the House did not follow his admonishment. They did not heed his advice, and that is one of the reasons we are sitting here today with Articles of Impeachment that are not found in our Constitution or the evidence and are brought simply for partisan politics.

This is a sad time for all of us. This is not a time to give out souvenirs, the pens used to sign two Articles of Impeachment, trying to improperly impeach our country’s representative to the world.

This is not the time to try to get digs in that the President will always be impeached because we had the majority and we could do it to you and we did it to you. It is wrong. It is not what the American people deserve or want.

Sadly, the House managers do not trust their fellow Americans to choose their own President. They do not think that they can legitimately win an election against President Trump, so they need to rush to impeach him immediately. That is what they have continually told the American people, and that—that is a shame.

We can only ur­ge our fellow Americans to choose their President. Choose your candidate. Let the Senators who are here who are trying to become the Democratic nominee try to win that election, and let the American people choose.

Many—many they are concerned that the American people like historically low unemployment. Maybe the American people like that their 401(k) accounts have done extremely well. Maybe the American people like prison reform and giving people a second chance.

Tellingly, some of these House managers worked constructively with this administration to give Americans a second chance. That was the public interest at that time the country demands. That that society deserves.

Maybe the American people like an administration that is fighting the opioid epidemic. Maybe the American people like secure borders. Maybe the American people like that we have better trade agreements with our biggest trading partners. Maybe the American people like other countries sharing in the burden when it comes to foreign aid. Maybe the American people actually like other countries doing their share.

In other words, maybe the American people like their current President—a President who has kept his promises and delivered on them.

If you think Americans want to abandon our prosperity and our unprecedented successes under this President, then convince the electorate in November at the ballot box. Do not try to improperly interfere with an election that is only months away, based on these Articles of Impeachment.

In your trial memorandum that you submitted here before the Senate, you speak about the Framers of the Constitution believing that President Trump’s alleged conduct is their “worst nightmare” and that they would be horrified.

In fact, sadly, sadly, it is the House managers’ conduct in bringing these baseless Articles of Impeachment that would clearly be their and our worst nightmare.

That is why.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. The majority leader is recognized.

RECESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. Chief Justice, I think we are looking at a 45-minute break for dinner.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess.

There being no objection, at 6:01 p.m., the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, recessed until 6:48 p.m., and thereupon reassembled when called to order by the Chief Justice.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE. The Senate will come to order. Ready to proceed?

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Yes, sir.

Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, House managers, we are going to do two things this evening. We are going to first hear from former independent counsel Robert Ray. He is going to discuss issues of how he was involved in the investigation, the legal issues of how that works, and then we will conclude this evening with a presentation from Professor Dershowitz.

With that, I yield my time, Mr. Chief Justice, to Robert Ray.

Mr. Counsel RAY. Mr. Chief Justice, Members of the Senate, distinguished House managers, and may it please this Court of Impeachment, I stand before you today in defense of my fellow Americans, who in November 2016 elected Donald Trump to serve the people as their President. Their reasons for that vote were as varied as any important decisions are, but their collective judgment, accepted as legitimate under our Constitution, is deserving of my respect and yours.

For only the third time in our Nation’s history, the Senate is convened to try the President of the United States on Articles of Impeachment. Those articles do not allege crimes. The Constitution’s history, the Senate is convened under our Constitution, is deserving of my respect and yours.

Tellingly, some of these House managers worked constructively with this administration to give Americans a second chance. That was the public interest at that time the country demands. That that society deserves.

Maybe the American people like an administration that is fighting the opioid epidemic. Maybe the American people like secure borders. Maybe the American people like that we have better trade agreements with our biggest trading partners. Maybe the American people like other countries sharing in the burden when it comes to foreign aid. Maybe the American people actually like other countries doing their share.

In other words, maybe the American people like their current President—a President who has kept his promises and delivered on them.

If you think Americans want to abandon our prosperity and our unprecedented successes under this President, then convince the electorate in November at the ballot box. Do not try to improperly interfere with an election that is only months away, based on these Articles of Impeachment.

In your trial memorandum that you submitted here before the Senate, you speak about the Framers of the Constitution believing that President Trump’s alleged conduct is their “worst nightmare” and that they would be horrified.

In fact, sadly, sadly, it is the House managers’ conduct in bringing these baseless Articles of Impeachment that would clearly be their and our worst nightmare.

That is why.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. The majority leader is recognized.

RECESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. Chief Justice, I think we are looking at a 45-minute break for dinner.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess.

There being no objection, at 6:01 p.m., the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, recessed until 6:48 p.m., and thereupon reassembled when called to order by the Chief Justice.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE. The Senate will come to order. Ready to proceed?

on by the House Judiciary Committee along party lines by a vote of 21 to 17. Republicans objected then to the third article in the face of the President’s good-faith prior claim to executive privilege by withholding certain evidence until such time as the matter was definitively resolved by the Supreme Court.

My point in mentioning these three votes by the House Judiciary Committee is simply this: Count votes, and do the math. I understand that you all have been deprived of your phones and, thus, a calculator app, so I will do it for you.

A 27-to-11 vote was not only bipartisan, as I have indicated, but overwhelmingly so—indeed, over 70 percent; that is to say, greater than a two-thirds supermajority.

That vote sent a powerful signal to the full House and indeed the Senate that impeachment was overwhelmingly bipartisan and, therefore, politically and legally legitimate.

President Nixon’s fate was sealed, and the result was inevitable. Thus, less than 2 weeks after that initial committee vote on impeachment, the President resigned.

During the course of those proceedings, my Congressmate commented simply and plainly that it was, in his words, “a great American tragedy.” But the greater point was—and is—that impeachment was never designed or intended to be undertaken only as a last resort.

This then brings me to what was intended by the Framers of the Constitution relative to impeachment. That subject was not addressed at some length by my colleague Professor Dershowitz, but, for now, let me just say that much has been said by House managers in reliance on Alexander Hamilton’s oft-quoted statement in Federalist No. 65. That is the one repeated section of context and text in favor of an expansive scope of jurisdiction by Congress over alleged offenses.

In Hamilton’s words, “which proceed from misconduct of [a] public [official constituting] the abuse or violation of some public trust.” The irony that Hamilton—the greatest proponent in this country of executive and Presidential authority that perhaps ever lived—should be front and center in this partisan impeachment effort to remove a duly elected President from office is apparently lost on House impeachment managers. I dare say that Hamilton would roll over in his grave at the end of Wall Street in New York City to know that, contrary to what he explicitly acknowledged in Federalist No. 69, a President can only be removed from office “upon conviction of treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.” We should just read the word “crime” right out of the impeachment clause of the Constitution and proceed merrily along the way toward an impeachment trial, with witnesses, no less, of a President duly elected by the people. And for what? Articles of Impeachment that do not even allege crimes.

President Trump is right. That course, if sustained, cheapens the impeachment process and, thus, is an American travesty. Indeed, during the impeachment trial 21 years ago in January 1999, none other than President Clinton’s highly respected White House Counsel Charles Ruff stated: “Consider then, as the managers do, that the phrase ‘other high crimes and misdemeanors’ was really meant to encompass a wide range of offenses . . . simply flies in the face of the clear intent of the framers, who carefully chose their language, knew exactly what those words meant and knew exactly what risk they intended to promote against.” Counsel Ruff went on to explain: One of those concerns and risks was that “impeachment be limited and well defined.”

For our purposes here, what is required is both that crimes be alleged and that those crimes be of the type that, in particular, are so serious that they—again, in Mr. Ruff’s words—“subvert our system of government and would justify overturning a popular election.” Otherwise, what you have—in Tocqueville’s words—is legislative tyranny.

I respectfully submit, Members of the Senate, taken in its proper context, that is what Alexander Hamilton well understood and meant, and so did my Congressmate. That Congressman was, of course, Mr. Jerry Ford. Actually, he was not really a junior but Hamilton Fish IV. His great-grandfather was also Hamilton Fish, who was born in 1808, later served as Governor of New York, a U.S. Senator immediately before the Civil War, and, notably, as President Ulysses Grant’s Secretary of State. But at the time back in 1980, what I didn’t realize—even though now, perhaps, it is so obvious—the original Hamilton Fish was named after his parents’ best friend other than Alexander Hamilton himself.

What Congressman Hamilton Fish, from the Watergate era, courageously understood is the same historical lesson that Jeffrey A. Engel, founding director of the Center for Presidential History at Southern Methodist University, has written about in a caustically authored 2018 book on impeachment: “The charge must be treason, bribery or ‘other high crimes and misdemeanors.’ It must be one for which clear and unmistakable proof can be produced. Only if the evidence actually produced against the President is in deed irrefutable such that his own conscience—the conscience of 50 million people, like me, who voted for President Trump—accept his guilt of the offense charged in order to overwhelmingly persuade a supermajority of Americans, and, thus, their Senators, of malfeasance, warranting his removal from office.

And, finally, because it is the President of the United States, after all, that we are talking about here, the repository of and entrusted under the Constitution with all of the executive power of the United States—in other words, an entire branch of government—removal from office cannot be based upon an impeachable offense or offenses which constitute more than—paraphrasing President Gerald Ford now—whatever a partisan majority of the House of Representa tives considers them to be.

To supplement that cited statement 50 years ago, in 1970, from then-Con gressman Jerry Ford in connection with the prospect of potentially impeaching a Supreme Court Justice, Ford pointedly clarified that executive branch impeachments are different because voters can remove the President, the Vice President, and all persons holding office at their pleasure at least every 4 years. To remove a President in midterm—it has been tried before and never done—would indeed, he said, require crimes of the magnitude of treason and bribery.

Professor Akhil Amar of Yale Law School made largely the same point during the Clinton impeachment about the danger presented through Presidential impeachment of transforming an entire branch of government:

When they remove a duly elected President, they undo the votes of millions of ordinary Americans on Election Day. This is not something that Senators should do lightly, lest we slide toward a kind of parliamentary government that our entire structure of government was designed to repudiate.

In hammering home the constitutional uniqueness of Presidential impeachments, he emphasized the case of Richard Nixon and distinguished it from Andrew Johnson; that is to say, only when extremely high crimes and gross abuses of official power indeed pose a threat to our basic constitutional system, a threat so truly as malignant to democratic government as treason and bribery, he reasoned, would the Senate ever be justified in nullifying the votes of millions of Americans and removing a President from office.

My point is this: History—our American history—matters. To listen to how the House managers would have it, Articles of Impeachment are merely—as Chuck Ruff warned a generation ago—empty vessels into which can be poured whatever number of charges, even those considered and abandoned.

At least in the case of President Clinton’s impeachment, the articles actually charged crimes. The Senate thereafter determined, by its vote in that case, in effect, that while those crimes—perjury and obstruction of justice—may have been committed, those crimes were not high enough crimes damaging to the body politic to warrant the President’s removal from office.

That judgment was, of course, within this body’s discretion to render, and it has been accepted as such by the country—whether you agreed with it or
The lesson for me was a simple one that I am sure every American citizen, whatever their own experience or political perspective, can understand: Be humble and act with humility. Never be too sure that you are right.

Today, and I find this especially concerning, we have learned from that experience? I fear that the answer to that question is nothing at all. If these Impeachment Articles now are sustained beyond summary resolution in favor of acquittal, impeachment in the future literally will mean not only that proof of high crimes is no longer necessary to sustain the effort but that no crime at all is sufficient so long as a partisan majority in the House says so.

Thus, during the past 4 months alone, we have witnessed the endless procession of legal theories used to sustain this partisan impeachment—from treason to quid pro quo, to bribery, to extortion, to obstruction of justice, to soliciting an illegal foreign campaign contribution, to the Impeachment of President Donald Trump. If the law is constitutionally deficient articles abandoned, any pretense of the need to actually charge it, it just ain’t so.

And, in the eyes of the law, the supposed offense—something of personal benefit to himself in return for an official act by the U.S. Government—was indeed high, and it stemmed, in part, from the need to vindicate the pernicious exercise of partisan power. Those means included a written acknowledgement by the President 2 years ago expressing his understanding that the investigation apparently creeps into this foreign campaign contribution to the President of the United States is fraught with doubt as a matter of law. Indeed, the Justice Department has said as much. So, too, have courts which have struggled since at least the early 1990s with application of the Federal anticorruption laws to situations like this when an in-kind benefit in the early 1990s with application of the Federal Internal Revenue Code to be exercised not on the merits, without fear or favor, but instead as a raw, naked, and pernicious exercise of partisan power and advantage.

I have spent the better part of my professional life, for over 30 years—as a Federal prosecutor for 13 years through two independent counsel investigations and now as a defense lawyer for over 17 years—trying my level best always to ensure that politics and prosecution do not mix. It must not happen here. A standardless and partisan impeachment is illegitimate and should be rejected as such overwhelmingly by this body. I hope and submit, or alternatively and, if need be, by only a party—by the other party—by the House of Representatives, which is historically consistent with Hamilton’s views and Madison’s, too, concerning the proper scope of impeachment as applied to a President.

When I entered the scene and succeeded Judge Kenneth Starr, as independent counsel in October of 1999, it was left for me to decide whether prosecution of President Clinton following impeachment, nonetheless, was warranted consistent with the Department of Justice’s Principles of Federal Prosecution. That matter was exhaustively considered in the midst of a Federal grand jury investigation that I commissioned in order to decide, first, whether crimes, in fact, had been committed. I found that they had, and I later said so publicly in the final report expressly authorized and mandated by Congress concluding the Lewinsky investigation.

Significantly, though, I also determined that the prosecution of the President, while in, or once he left office, would not be in the national interest, given alternative available means, short of prosecution, in order to hold the President accountable for his conduct, and permitted—indeed, demanded—the ability and discretion go hand in hand. The price paid by President Clinton, indeed, any President—occupies in our unique place that the President—in office, would not be in the national interest, given alternative available means, to prosecute; namely, that for the good of the country to move on, and it permitted—indeed, demanded—any President—occupies in our unique place that the President—in office, would not be in the national interest.

But back to Manager Jeffries’ contention, proof of an explicit quid pro quo by the President—which, parenthetically, as previously noted by Mr. Cipollone, is nowhere to be found in the Articles of Impeachment—would have required, a very different telephone call than the one President Trump actually had with Ukraine President Zelensky. As I tried to explain in the TIME magazine piece, an explicit quid pro quo for alleged interference with the 2020 election is hard. So, too, have courts which have struggled since at least the early 1990s with application of the Federal Internal Revenue Code to be exercised not on the merits, without fear or favor, but instead as a raw, naked, and pernicious exercise of partisan power and advantage.

In short, I was absolutely mindful of the need to vindicate the pernicious exercise of partisan power. Those means included a written acknowledgement by the President 2 years ago expressing his understanding that the investigation apparently creeps into this foreign campaign contribution to the President of the United States is fraught with doubt as a matter of law. Indeed, the Justice Department has said as much. So, too, have courts which have struggled since at least the early 1990s with application of the Federal Internal Revenue Code to be exercised not on the merits, without fear or favor, but instead as a raw, naked, and pernicious exercise of partisan power and advantage.

I have spent the better part of my professional life, for over 30 years—as a Federal prosecutor for 13 years through two independent counsel investigations and now as a defense lawyer for over 17 years—trying my level best always to ensure that politics and prosecution do not mix. It must not happen here. A standardless and partisan impeachment is illegitimate and should be rejected as such overwhelmingly by this body. upon his military experience, and hav- ing listened to on the call, by a super- rior officer—in this case, the Com- mander in Chief—as the same thing as an order in the chain of command. While all of this may be true in the military, it goes without saying that President Zelensky, as the leader and head of a sovereign nation, was not and is not in our military chain of com- mand.

I say that to you, Members of the Senate, as the son of a U.S. Army colo- nel and Vietnam war veteran buried in Arlington National Cemetery and as the father of a U.S. Army major cur- rently serving with President Trump's Space Force Command in Aurora, CO, near Denver.

With all due respect, Lieutenant Colonel Vindman’s testimony in this regard is at best, I submit to you, dis- torted and unpersuasive. Next, the implicit link between foreign aid and the investiga- tions, or the announcement of them, is weak. The most that Ambassador Gor- don Sondland was able to give was his presumption that such a link likely ex- isted, which was flatly contradicted by the President’s express denial of the existence of a quid pro quo to Ambassador Sondland as well as to Senator Ron Johnson.

The President was emphatic to Am- bassador Sondland. The President said: “I want nothing. I want no quid pro quo. I just want Zelensky to do the right thing, to listen to that last one for a moment, what exactly is left? It is not treason. Ukraine is our ally, not our enemy or our adversary. And Russia is not our enemy, only our adversary. It is not bribery. There is no quid pro quo. It is not extortion.”

It is also not an illegal foreign campaign contribution. The benefit of the an- nouncement of an investigation is not tangible enough to constitute an in- kind campaign contribution war- ranting prosecution under Federal law. It is also not a violation of the Impoundment Control Act. Let’s take a look at that last one for a moment, shall we. The U.S. Government Ac- countability Office, an arm of the U.S. Congress, in its wisdom, has de- cided, contrary to the position of the executive branch Office of Management and Budget, OMB, that while the Presi- dent may temporarily withhold funds from obligation—but not beyond the end of the fiscal year—he may not do so with vague or general assertions of policy priorities contrary to the will of Congress.

The President’s response to this interbranch dispute between Congress and the President to assert his authority over foreign policy to de- termine the timing of the best use of funds. Ultimately, this is a dispute that has constitutional implications under separation of power principles, about which this body is well familiar. It pits the President’s constitutional prerogatives to control foreign policy against Congress’s reasonable expecta- tion that the President will comply with the Constitution’s faithful execu- tion of the law requirement of his oath of office.

This issue has come up before with other Presidents. There is a huge con- stitutional debate among legal scholars about who is right. Law review articles have been written about it, one as re- cently as last June in the Harvard Law Review.

Congress, through its arm, the GAO, had an opposing view from that of the administration and OMB—big surprise.

I am reminded of one of President Kennedy’s famous press conferences, where he was asked to comment about a report that the Republican National Committee had voted that concluded he was a total failure as President. He famously quipped: “I am sure that it was passed unanimously.”

That is all that this is here: politics. No more, no less. And in the end, what are we talking about? The temporary hold was lifted and the funds were re- leased, as they had to be under the law and as acknowledged was required by none other than Acting Chief of Staff Mick Mulvaney, 19 days before the end of the fiscal year, early 2019.

In any event, an alleged violation of the Impoundment Act cannot more sus- tain an Impeachment Article than can an assertion of executive privilege in opposition to a congressional subpoena, amounting a final decision of a court or- dering compliance with that subpoena.

Mere assertion of a privilege or ob- jection in a legitimate interbranch dis- pute is a constitutional prerogative. It should never result in an impeachable offense for abuse of power or obstruc- tion of Congress. And, yet, in a last- ditch effort to reframe its first Article of Impeachment on abuse of power, House managers, as part of the House Judiciary Committee, have gone back into history—always a treach- erous endeavor for lawyers. They now argue that President Andrew Johnson’s impeachment, from over 150 years ago following the end of the Civil War and the Reconstruction, was not about a violation of the Tenure of Office Act, which, after all, was the violation of law charged as the principle Article of Impeachment but, instead, rested on his use of power with illegitimate mo- tives.

In an ahistorical sleight of hand worth- ily only of the New York Times recent “1619” series—a series, by the way, roundly criticized by two of my Prince- ton Civil War and reconstruction his- tory professors as inaccurate—House managers now claim that President Johnson’s removal of Lincoln’s Sec- retary of War Edwin Stanton without Congress’s permission in violation of a congressional statute, later found to be un- constitutional, is best understood with the benefit of revisionist hind- sight to be motivated not by his desire to violate the statute but on his illegit- imate use of power to undermine recon- struction and to protect his fellow African American Americans following the Civil War.

That all may be true, but it is an- other thing altogether to claim that that motive actually was the basis of Johnson’s impeachment. Professor Laurence Tribe, who was the source for this misguided reinterpretation of the Johnson impeachment, simply sub-stitutes his own self-described, far more compelling basis for Johnson’s removal from office from the one that the House of Representatives actually voted on and the Senate considered at his impeachment trial.

There has been an awful lot of that going on in this impeachment, and I've subjected them to thorough interpretations for the ones that the principles actually and explicitly insist on.

At any rate, a President’s so-called illegitimate motives in wielding power can no more frame and legitimize the Johnson impeachment than recasting the Nixon impeachment as really about his motives in defying Congress over the country’s foreign policy in Vietnam. Again, all of that may be true, but it has nothing to do with impeachment. Not only that, it is also bad history.

As recognized 65 years ago by then-Senator John F. Kennedy in his book “Profiles in Courage,” President Johnson was saved from removal from office by one courageous Senator who recognized the legislative overreach that the Tenure of Office Act represented.

Quoting now from Senator Edmund G. Ross in “Profiles in Courage,” who explains it as follows:

The independence of the executive office as a coordinate branch of the government was on trial. . . . If . . . the President must step down . . . upon insufficient proofs and from partial considerations of the office of President would be degraded.

So, too, here. Contrary, apparently to the fashion now, Senator Ross’s action eventually was praised and accepted several decades after his service and again many years later by President Kennedy as a courageous stand against legislative mob rule. Professor Dershowitz will have more to say about one other courageous Senator from that impeachment. More on that later.

For now, the point is that our history demonstrates that Presidents should not be subject to impeachment based upon bad or ill motives, and any thought to the contrary should strike you, I submit, as exceedingly dangerous to our constitutional structure of government.

If that were the standard, what President would ever be safe by way of impeachment from what Hamilton described as the “persecution of an intermittent or designing majority in the House of Representatives”?

The central import of the abuse of power Article of Impeachment—indeed, when added together with the obstruction of justice article—is a result not far off from what one citizen tweet I saw back in December described as article I. Democrats don’t like President Trump; article II, Democrats can’t beat President Trump.

President Trump is not removable from office just because a designing majority in the House, as represented by the government, believes that the President abused the power of his office during the July 25 call with President Zelensky. The Constitution requires more. To ignore the requirement of proving that a crime was committed is to sidestep the constitutional design as well as the lessons of history.

I know that many of you may come to conclude, or may have already concluded, that this impeachment is a charade. I have said on any number of occasions previously—and publicly—that it would have been better, in attempting to spur action by a foreign government in coordinating law enforcement efforts with our government, to have done that through proper channels. While the President certainly enjoys the power to do otherwise, there is consequence to that action, as we have now witnessed. After all, that is why we are all here.

But it is another thing altogether to claim that such conduct is clearly and unmistakably impeachable as an abuse of power. There can be no serious question that this President, or any President, acts lawfully in requesting foreign intelligence investigations into possible corruption, even when it might potentially involve another politician.

To argue otherwise would be to engage in the specious contention that a President is not in the same position that, for instance, any candidate enjoys absolute immunity from investigations during the course of a campaign. I can tell you that is not the case from my own experience. I did so during 2000 in investigating Hillary Clinton while she was running for office to become a U.S. Senator from New York, to which she was elected.

My point simply is this: This President has been impeached and stands on trial here in the Senate for allegedly doing something indirectly about which he was entirely permitted to do directly. That cannot form a basis as an abuse of power article sufficient to warrant his removal from office.

Turning now to the second Article of Impeachment, as we argued in our written trial brief, at the outset, it must be noted that it is at least a little odd for House managers to be arguing that President Trump somehow obstructed Congress when he declassified and released what is the central piece of evidence in this case. And that is, of course, the transcript of the July 25 call, as well as the call with President Zelensky that preceded it on April 21, 2019.

Release of that full call record should have been the end of this claim of obstruction, but apparently not. Instead, again, relying on the United States v. Nixon, House managers have proffered a broad claim to documents and witnesses in an impeachment inquiry, notwithstanding the Nixon court’s limited holding that an objection by the President based on executive privilege could only be overcome in the limited circumstances presented there where the President’s interest in confidentiality was integral to the preparation of the defense by his coconspirators in pending cases awaiting trial following indictments. In other words, a defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial in collateral proceedings was what the court actually found dispositive in rejecting the President’s claim of privilege to prevent Congress from gaining access to the Watergate tapes.

All subsequent administrations have defended that narrow exception against any general claim of access to executive branch confidential communications, documents, and witnesses who are the President’s co-conspirators. Thus, it should be a matter of accepted wisdom and historical premise that a President cannot be removed from office for invoking established legal rights, defenses, privileges, and immunities, even in the face of subpoenas from House committees. Back in 1998, Professor Tribe called out any argument to the contrary as frivolous and dangerous.

House managers respond now by arguing, nonetheless, that the President has no right to defy a legitimate subpoena, particularly, I suppose, when their impeachment efforts are at stake. And thus, it is an issue rising to the level of interbranch conflict that in our system of government only accommodation between the branches and, ultimately, courts can finally resolve.

The House chose to forgo that course and to plow forward with impeachment. House managers cannot be heard to complain now that their own strategic choice can form any basis to place blame on the President for it and, worse yet, to then impeach him on that basis and seek his removal from office. That is no basis at all, as Professor Jonathan Turley persuasively has explained.

Compliance with a legitimate subpoena is enforced over a claim of executive privilege or Presidential immunity only when a court with jurisdiction says so in a final decision.

In sum, calling a subpoena legitimate, as House managers have done does not make it good. Any analogy taken from baseball, which I believe the Chief Justice might appreciate, makes the point: A longtime major league umpire named Bill Klem, who worked until 1941 after 37 years in the big leagues, was once asked during a game by a player whether a ball was fair or foul. The umpire replied: It ain’t nothing until I call it.

I say the same thing to Chairman SCHIFF now. It’s not a legitimate and, therefore, enforceable subpoena until a court says that it is.

Preceding the Clinton impeachment and, indeed, in response to demands not just from the Whitewater independent counsel but also from several of the investigating committees, investigations that were ongoing at that time—and, again, I know, I was in one of them—the White House repeatedly asserted claims of executive privilege. Many of those claims were litigated for years.

When I hear Mr. SCHIFF’s complaint that the House’s request for former White House Counsel Don McGahn’s testimony, grand jury material, and other documents has been drawn out since April of last year, I can only say in response: Boohoo.

Did I think at the time that many of those claims of privilege were frivolous and an abuse of the judicial process? Of course. And, indeed, that was the determination of the House Judiciary Committee during the Clinton impeachment. What did they do about it? Nothing. The committee properly concluded that the House assertions of privilege, even if ill-founded, did not constitute an impeachable offense. Did I believe that the Clinton administration’s actions in this regard have adversely impacted our investigation? You bet I did. And I said so in the final report. But never did I seriously consider that those efforts by the White House, although endlessly frustrating and damaging to the independent counsel’s investigation, would constitute the obstruction of justice or any related impeachable offense for obstruction of Congress. Instead, I and my colleagues did the best that we could in reaching an accommodation with the White House where possible or through litigation, when necessary, in order to complete the task at hand, to the best of our ability to do so.

Any contention that what has transpired here involving this administration’s assertion of valid and well-recognized privileges and immunities is somehow contrary to law and impeachable is ludicrous. In short, to obstruct the House, although endlessly frustrating and damming to the independent counsel’s investigation, would constitute the obstruction of justice or any related impeachable offense for obstruction of Congress. Instead, I and my colleagues did the best that we could in reaching an accommodation with the White House where possible or through litigation, when necessary, in order to complete the task at hand, to the best of our ability to do so.

The President cannot be impeached and removed from office for asserting, subject to judicial review, what he has every right to assert. That is true now, as it has been true of every President all the way back to President George Washington.

In short, as to both Articles of Impeachment, all the President is asking for here is basic fairness and to be held for a trial on the merits. And the third is a matter of pure political advantage. I leave that to others. The second is whether, if these factual allegations occurred, did they rise to the level of abuse of power and/or obstruction of Congress?

I have always believed as an article of faith that in good times and in hard times and even in bad times, with matters of importance at stake, that this country gets the big things right. I believe that I have served and for my own experience, even in Washington, DC.

Well, Members of the Senate, this, what lies before you now, is just such a big thing. The next election awaits. Election day is only 9 months away.

As Senator Dale Bumpers eloquently concluded in arguing against President Clinton’s removal from office:

That is the day when we reach across this aisle and hold hands, Democrats and Republicans, and say we will abide by the decision. It is a solemn event, a Presidential election, and it should not be undone lightly or just because one side has political clout and the other does not.

Otherwise, as Abraham Lincoln warned us during his first inaugural address:

If the minority will not acquiesce . . . the government must cease.

So that rejecting the majority principle, anarchy . . . in some form, is all that is left.

This impeachment and the refusal to accept the results of the last election in 2016 cannot be left to stand. For the reasons stated, the Articles of Impeachment, therefore, should be rejected, and the President must be acquitted.

Members of the Senate, thank you very much.

With that, Mr. Chief Justice, I yield back to Mr. Sekulow.

Thank you.

Mr. Counsel SEKULOW. Mr. Chief Justice, we are going to now delve into the constitutional issues for a bit and our presenter is Professor Alan Dershowitz. He is the Felix Frankfurter Professor Emeritus of Harvard Law School. After serving as a law clerk for Judge David Bazelon of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, he served as a law clerk for Justice Arthur Goldberg at the U.S. Supreme Court. At the age of 28, Professor Dershowitz became the youngest tenured professor at Harvard Law School. Mr. Dershowitz spent 50 years as an active faculty member at Harvard, teaching generations of law students, including several Members of this Chamber, in classes ranging from criminal law to constitutional law, criminal procedure, constitutional litigation, legal ethics, and even courses on impeachment. He will address the constitutional issues raised by these articles.

Mr. Counsel DERSHOWITZ. Mr. Chief Justice, distinguished Members of the Senate, our friends, lawyers, fellow lawyers, it is a great honor for me to stand before you today to present a constitutional argument against the impeachment and removal not only of this President but of all and any future Presidents who may be charged with the unconstitutional grounds of abuse of power and/or obstruction of Congress.

I am here today because I love my country and our Constitution. Everyone in this room shares that love. I will argue that our Constitution and its terms, high crimes and misdemeanors, do not encompass the two articles charging abuse of power and obstruction of Congress. In offering these arguments, I stand in the footsteps and in the spirit of Justice Benjamin Curtis, who was of counsel to impeached President Andrew Johnson and who explained to the Senate that “a greater principle was at stake than the fate of any particular president” and of William Evarts, a former Secretary of State, another one of Andrew Johnson’s lawyers, who reportedly said that he had come to the defense table not as a “partisan,” not as a “sympathizer,” but to “defend the Constitution.”

The Constitution, of course, provides that the Senate has the sole role and power to try all impeachments. In exercising that power and obstruction of Congress, the Senate must consider three issues in this case.

The first is whether the evidence presented by the House managers establishes, by the appropriate standard of proof—proof beyond a reasonable doubt—that the factual allegations occurred.

The second is whether, if these factual allegations occurred, did they rise to the level of abuse of power and/or obstruction of Congress? Finally, the Senate must determine whether abuse of power and obstruction of Congress are constitutionally authorized criteria for impeachment.

I am here today because I love my country and our Constitution. Everyone in this room shares that love. I will argue that our Constitution and its terms, high crimes and misdemeanors, do not encompass the two articles charging abuse of power and obstruction of Congress. In offering these arguments, I stand in the footsteps and in the spirit of Justice Benjamin Curtis, who was of counsel to impeached President Andrew Johnson and who explained to the Senate that “a greater principle was at stake than the fate of any particular president” and of William Evarts, a former Secretary of State, another one of Andrew Johnson’s lawyers, who reportedly said that he had come to the defense table not as a “partisan,” not as a “sympathizer,” but to “defend the Constitution.”

The Constitution, of course, provides that the Senate has the sole role and power to try all impeachments. In exercising that power and obstruction of Congress, the Senate must consider three issues in this case.

The first is whether the evidence presented by the House managers establishes, by the appropriate standard of proof—proof beyond a reasonable doubt—that the factual allegations occurred.

The second is whether, if these factual allegations occurred, did they rise to the level of abuse of power and/or obstruction of Congress?

Finally, the Senate must determine whether abuse of power and obstruction of Congress are constitutionally authorized criteria for impeachment.

The first issue is largely factual and I will address that to others. The second is a combination of traditional and constitutional law, and I will touch on those. The third is a matter of pure constitutional law. Do charges of abuse and obstruction rise to the level of impeachable offenses under the Constitution?

I will begin, as all constitutional analysis begins, with the text of the Constitution governing impeachment. will then examine why the Framers selected the words they did as the sole criteria authorizing impeachment. In making my presentation, I will transport you back to a hot summer in Philadelphia and a cold winter in Washington. I will introduce you to the patriots and ideas that helped shape our great Nation.

To prepare for this journey, I have immersed myself in a lot of dusty old volumes from the 18th and 19th centuries. I ask your indulgence as I quote from the wisdom of our Founders. This return to the days of yesteryear is necessary because the issue today is not what the criteria of impeachment should be, but what a legislative body or a constitutional body might today decide are the proper criteria for impeachment of a President but what the Framers of our Constitution actually chose and what they expressly and implicitly meant.

I will ask whether the Framers would have accepted such vague and open-ended terms as “abuse of power” and “obstruction of Congress” as governing criteria. I will review a close reading of the history of the articles that they did not and would not accept such criteria for fear that these criteria would turn our new Republic into a British-style parliamentary democracy in which the Chief Executive’s tenure would be, in the words of James Madison, father of our Constitution, “at the pleasure” of the legislature.

The conclusion I will offer for your consideration is similar, though not identical, to not what was advocated by the highly respected Justice Benjamin Curtis, who, as you know, dissented from the Supreme Court’s notorious decision in Dred Scott, and who, after resigning in protest from the High Court, served as counsel to President Andrew Johnson in the Senate impeachment trial. He argued that “there can be no crime, there can be no misdemeanor without a law, written or unwritten, express or implied.”

In so arguing, he was echoing the conclusion reached by Dean Theodore Dwight of the Columbia Law School, who wrote in 1867, just before the impeachment, that “unless the crime is specifically named in the Constitution”—treason and bribery—“impeachments, like indictments, can only be instituted for crimes committed against the statutory law of the United States.” As Judge Starr said earlier today, that is the way the Constitution intended that authority being on the side of that proposition at a time much closer to the framing than we are today.

The main thrust of my argument, however, and the one most relevant to these proceedings is that even if the position is not accepted, even if criminal conduct were not required, the Framers of our Constitution implicitly rejected—and, if it had been presented to them, would have explicitly rejected—such vague terms as “abuse of power” and “obstruction of Congress” as among the enumerated and defined criteria for impeaching a President.

You will recall in the many Articles of Impeachment against President Johnson there were accusations of non-criminal but outrageous misbehavior, including ones akin to abuse of power and obstruction of Congress. For example, article X charged Johnson “did attempt to bring into disrepute, ridicule, hatred, contempt and reproach, the Congress of the United States.”

Article XI charged Johnson with denying that Congress was [authorized by the Constitution] the legislative power and denying that “[t]he legislation of said Congress was obligatory upon him.” Those are pretty serious charges.

My first position is, that when the Constitution speaks of treason, bribery, and other crimes and misdemeanors, it refers to, and includes only, high criminal offenses against the United States, made so by some law of the United States existing when the acts complained of were done, and I say that this is plainly to be inferred from each and every provision of the Constitution on the subject of impeachment.

I will briefly review those other provisions of the Constitution with you. Judge Curtis’s interpretation is supported, I think, by implied views compelled—by the constitutional text. Treason, bribery, and other high crimes and misdemeanors are high crimes. Other high crimes and misdemeanors must be akin to treason and bribery. Curtis cited the Latin phrase “Noscitur a sociis,” meaning for my pronunciation—referring to a classic rule of interpretation that when the meaning of a word that is part of a group of words is uncertain, you should look to the other words in that group that provide interpretive context.

The late Justice Antonin Scalia gave the following current example. If one speaks of Mickey Mantle, Rocky Marciano, Michael Jordan, and other great competitors, the last noun does not reasonably refer to Sam Walton, Marciano, Michael Jordan, and other great competitors, the last noun does not reasonably refer to Sam Walton, the last five words should be interpreted to include only serious criminal behavior akin to treason and bribery.

Justice Curtis then reviewed the other provisions of the Constitution that hold true. First he reviewed article II, which started with the provision that says “the President of the United States shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons”—listen now—“for Offenses against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.” He cogently argued that if impeachment were not for “offenses against the United States”—was not based on an offense against the United States—there would have been no need for any constitutional provision for a presidential pardon.

He then went on to a second proviso: “The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by bound—by Justice Curtis’s arguments or those of Dean Dwight, but I am arguing that you should give them serious consideration—the consideration to which they are entitled by the eminence of their author and the role they may have played in the outcome of the closely contested case to the current occasion.

I want to be clear. There is a nuanced difference between the arguments made by Curtis and Dwight and the argument that I am presenting here today based on my reading of history. Curtis argued that there must be a specific violation of preexisting law. He recognized that, at the time of the Constitution, there were no Federal criminal statutes. Of course not. The Constitution established a national government, so we couldn’t have statutes prior to the establishment of our Constitution and our Nation.

This argument is offered today by proponents of this impeachment on the claim that the Framers could not have intended the criteria for impeachment to criminal-like behavior. Justice Curtis addressed that issue and that argument head-on.

He pointed out that crimes such as bribery would be criminal by the laws of the United States, which the Framers of the Constitution knew would be passed.” In other words, he anticipated that Congress would soon enact statutes punishing and defining crimes such as burglary, extortion, perjury, etcetera. He anticipated that, and he based his argument, in part, on that.

The Constitution already included treason as a crime, and that was defined in the Constitution itself, and then it included other crimes; but what Justice Curtis said is that you could include laws, “written or unwritten, express or implied”—by which he meant common law, which, at the time of the Constitution, there were many common crimes—and they were enforceable, even federally, until the Supreme Court, many years later, decided that common law crimes were no longer part of Federal jurisdiction.

So the position that I have derived from history would include—and this is a word that will upset some people—criminal-like conduct akin to treason and bribery. There need not be, in my view, conclusive evidence of a technical crime that would necessarily result in a criminal conviction. Let me explain.

For example, if a President were to receive or give a bribe outside of the United States and outside of the statute of limitations, he could not technically be prosecuted in the United States for such a crime, but I believe he could be impeached for such a crime because he committed the crime of bribery even though he couldn’t technically be accused of it in the United States. That is the distinction that I think would confound Pres. O. Who is a convicted extortion, perjury, or obstruction of justice, he could be charged with these crimes as impeachable offenses because these crimes, though not specified in the Constitution, are akin to treason and bribery. This would be true even if some of the technical elements—time and place—were absent.

What Curtis and Dwight and I agree upon—and this is the key point in this impeachment case; please understand what I am arguing—is that purely non-criminal conduct, including abuse of power and obstruction of Congress, are outside the range of impeachable offenses. That is the key argument I am presenting today.

This view was supported by text writers and judges close in time to the founding generation. John Russell, whose 1819 treatise on criminal law was a Bible among criminal law scholars and others, defined “high crimes and misdemeanors” as “such immoral and unlawful acts as are nearly allied, and in equal degree, to treason, piracy, or other treasonable offenses;—do not fall within the definition of a felony.” Similar views were expressed by some State courts.

Others disagreed. Wherever there were no Federal crimes, “high crimes and misdemeanors” included laws, “written or unwritten, express or implied,” by which means common law, which, at the time of the Constitution, there were many criminal and other crimes; but what Justice Curtis addressed was that you could by the generation of the Founders have “great opportunities of abusing the Constitution.”

Curtis’s considered views and those of Dwight, Russell, and others, based on careful study of the text and history, are not “bonkers,” “absurdist,” “legal claptrap,” or other demeaning epithets thrown around by partisan supporters of this impeachment. As Judge Starr pointed out, they have the weight of authority. They were accepted by the generation of the Founders and the generation that followed. If they are not accepted by academics today, that shows a weakness among the academics, not among the Founders. Those who disagree with Curtis’s textual analysis are obliged, I believe, to respond with reason, counter interpretations, not name-calling.

If Justice Curtis’s arguments and those of Dean Dwight are rejected, I think then proponents of impeachment must offer alternative principles and alternative standards for impeachment and removal.

We just heard that, in 1970, Congresswoman Gerald Ford, whom I greatly admired, said the following in the context of an impeachment of justice: “[A]n impeachable offense is whatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history.” et cetera. You all know the quote.

Congresswoman Maxine Waters recently put it more succinctly in the context of a Presidential impeachment.

Here is what she said:

Impeachment is whatever Congress says it is. There is no law.

But this lawless view would place Congress above the law. It would place Congress above the Constitution. For Congress to ignore the specific words of the Constitution itself and substitute its own judgments would be for Congress to say that it is accusing the President of doing—and no one is above the law, not the President and not Congress.

This is precisely the kind of view expressly rejected by the Framers, who feared having a President serve at the “pleasure” of the legislature, and it is precisely the view rejected by Senator James Grimes when he refused to accept impeachable crimes and misdemeanors that would change “according to the law of each Senator’s judgment, enacted in his own bosom.”

The Constitution requires, in the words of Gouverneur Morris, that the impeachment be “enumerated and defined.” Those who advocate impeachment today are obliged to demonstrate how the criteria accepted by the House in this case are enumerated and defined in the Constitution.

The compelling textual analysis provided by Justice Curtis is confirmed by the debate in the Constitutional Convention, by the Federalist Papers, by the writings of William Blackstone, and, I believe, by the writings of Alexander Hamilton, which were heavily relied on by lawyers at the time of the Constitution’s adoption.

There were at the time of the Constitution’s adoption two great debates. It is hard to imagine today, but the first was, Should there be any power to impeach a President at all? There were several members of the founding generation and of the Framers of the Constitution who said no—who said, no, a President shouldn’t be allowed to be impeached. The second—and the second is very, very important in our consideration today—is, If a President is to be subject to impeachment, what should the criteria be? These are very different issues, and they are often erroneously conflated.

During the broad debate about whether a President should be subject to impeachment, proponents of impeachment used words like “high crimes and misdemeanors” such as “obstruct,” “obnoxious,” “corrupt,” “misconduct,” “misbehavior,” “negligence,” “malpractice,” “perfidy,” “treachery,” “incapacity,” “peculation,” and “maladministration.” They worried that a President might “pervert his administration into a scheme of speculation and oppression”; that he might be “corrupted by foreign influence”; and—yes, this is important—that he might have “great opportunities of abusing his power.”

Those were the concerns that led the Framers to decide that a President must be subject to impeachment, but not a single one of the Framers suggested that these words justifying the need for an impeachment and removal mechanism should automatically be accepted as a specific criterion for impeachment. Far from it.

Gouverneur Morris aptly put it: “[C]orruption and some other offenses...ought to be impeachable, but....the cases ought to be enumerated and defined.”
The great fallacy of many contemporary scholars and pundits, with due respect, Members of the House of Representatives is that they fail to understand the critical distinction between the broad reasons for needing an impeachment mechanism and the carefully enumerated and defined criteria that should authorize the deployment of this powerful weapon.

Let me give you a hypothetical example that might have faced Congress or, certainly, will face Congress. Let’s assume that there is a debate over regulating the content of social media—whether we should have regulations or criminal, civil regulations over Twitter or Facebook, etc. In the debate over regulating the social media, proponents of regulation might well cite broad dangers, such as false information, inappropriate content, hate speech. Those are good reasons for having regulation; but when it came to enumerating and defining what should be prohibited, such broad dangers would have to be balanced against other important policies, and the resulting legislation would be much narrower and more carefully defined than the broad dangers that necessitated some regulation.

The Framers understood and acted on this distinction. But I am afraid that many scholars and others and Members of Congress fail to see this distinction, and they cite some of the fears that led to the need for an impeachment mechanism. They cite them as the criteria themselves. That is a deep fallacy, and it is crucially important that the distinction be sharply drawn between arguments made in favor of impeaching and the criteria then decided upon to justify the impeachment specifically of the President.

The Framers understood this, and so they got down to the difficult business of enumerating and defining precisely which offenses, among the many that they feared, might merit impeachment, should be impeachable as distinguished by those left to the voters to evaluate. Some Framers, such as Roger Sherman, wanted the President to be removable by “the National legislature” at its “pleasure,” much like the Prime Minister can be removed by a simple vote of no confidence by Parliament. That view was rejected.

Benjamin Franklin opposed decidedly the making of the Executive “the mere creature of the legislature.”

Gouverneur Morris was against “a dependence of the Executive on the Legislature, considering the Legislature”—you will pardon me for quoting this—“a great danger to be apprehended. . . .” I don’t agree with that.

James Madison expressed concern about the President being improperly dependent on the legislature. Others worried about a feeble executive.

Here is where the rest and other arguments against turning the new Republic into a parliamentary democracy, in which the legislature had the power to remove the President, the Framers set out to strike the appropriate balance between the broad concerns that led them to vote for a provision authorizing the impeachment of the President and the need for specific criteria not subject to legislative abuse or overuse. Among the criteria proposed were: malpractice, neglect of duty, malconduct, neglect in the execution of office, and—and this word we will come back to talk about—maladministration.

It was in response to that last term, a tɛrm used in Britain, as a criteria for impeachment that Madison responded: “So vague a term will be equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate.”

Upon hearing Madison’s objections Colonel Mason withdrew “maladministration” and substituted “other high crimes and misdemeanors.”

Had a delegate proposed inclusion of “abuse of power” or “obstruction of Congress” as enumerated and defined criteria for impeachment, history strongly suggests that Madison would have similarly opposed it, and it would have been rejected.

I will come back to that argument a little later on when I talk specifically about abuse of power.

Indeed, Madison worried that a partisan legislature could even misuse the word “misdemeanor” to include a broad array of noncrimes, so he proposed moving the trial to the nonpartisan Supreme Court. The proposal was rejected.

Now, this does not mean, as some have suggested, that Madison suddenly changed his mind and favored such misuse to expand the meaning of “misdemeanor” to include broad terms like “misbehavior.” No, it only meant that he feared—he feared that the word “misdemeanor” could be abused. His fear has been proved prescient by the fact that the words “treason, bribery, or other high crimes”—those words require criminal behavior. The debate is only over the words “and misdemeanors.” The Framers of the Constitution were fully cognizant of the fact that the word “misdemeanor” was a species of crime.

The book that was most often deemed authoritative was written by William Blackstone of Great Britain, whose words are what he says about this in the version that was available to the Framers:

A crime, or misdemeanor, is an act committed or omitted, in violation of the (public) law, either forbidding or commanding it. The general definition comprehends both crimes and misdemeanors; which, properly speaking, are mere synonymous terms.

Mere synonymous terms. He went on:

[Though, in common usage, the word “crimes” is made to denote such offenses are of a deeper and more atrocious dye; while smaller faults, and omissions of less consequence, are comprehended under the gentler name of “misdemeanors” only.

Interestingly, though, he pointed out that misdemeanors were not always so gentle.

There was a category called “capital misdemeanors,” where if you stole somebody’s pig or other fowl, you could be sentenced to death, but it was only for a misdemeanor. Don’t worry. It is not for a felony. But there were misdemeanors that were capital in nature.

Moreover, Blackstone wrote that parliamentary impeachment “is a prosecution”—a prosecution—“of already known and established law [presented] to the highest and Supreme Court of criminal jurisdiction”—analogous to this great court.

He observed that “[a] commoner [can be impeached] but only for high misdemeanors: a peer may be impeached for any crime”—any crime.

This certainly suggests that Blackstone deemed high misdemeanors to be a species of crime.
Hamilton is a little less clear on this issue, and not surprisingly because he was writing—in Federalist No. 65, he was writing not to define what the criteria for impeachment were, he was writing primarily in defense of the Constitution as written and less to delineate the criteria. But he certainly cannot be cited as in favor of criteria such as abuse of power or obstruction of Congress, nor of impeachment voted along party lines.

He warned that the “greatest danger” he feared in his words—the greatest danger [is] that the decision will be regulated more by the comparative strength of parties, than by the real demonstrations of innocence or guilt.

In addition to using the criminal terms “innocence” or “guilt,” Hamilton also referred to “prosecution” and “sentence.” He cited the constitutional provisions that states that “the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable to a civil suit.” As a reason for not having the President tried before the Supreme Court.

He feared a double prosecution, a variation of double jeopardy, before the same judiciary. These points all sound in criminal terms.

But advocates of a broad, open-ended, noncriminal interpretation of “high crimes and misdemeanors” insist that Hamilton is on their side, and they cite the following words regarding the court of impeachment. And I think I heard these words quoted more than any other words in support of a broad view of impeachment, and they are misunderstood. Here is what he said when describing the court of impeachment. He said:

“The subjects of its jurisdiction—

Those are important words, the subjects of its jurisdiction, by which he meant treason, bribery, and other high crimes and misdemeanors.

The subjects of its jurisdiction are those offenses which proceed from the misconduct of public power. In other words, from the abuse or violation of some public trust. They are of a nature which may with peculiar propriety be denominated POLITICAL, as they relate chiefly to injuries done immediately and noncriminal accusations to the public trust.”

Those are Hamilton’s words. They are often misunderstood as suggesting that the criteria authorizing impeachment include “the misconduct of public men” or “the abuse or violation of some public trust.”

That is a misreading. These words were used to characterize the constitutional criteria that are “the subject of” the jurisdiction of the court of impeachment: namely, “treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.”

Those specified crimes are political in nature. They are the crimes that involve “misconduct of public men” and “the abuse or violation of some public trust.”

Hamilton was not expanding the specified criteria to include—as independent grounds for impeachment—misconduct, abuse, or violation. If anything, he was contracting them to require, in addition to proof of the specified crimes, also proof that the crime must be of a political nature.

This would exclude President Clinton among other nonpolitical crimes. In fact, this is the interpretation. Hamilton’s view was cited by Clinton’s advocates as contracting, not expanding, the meaning of “high crimes.”

Today, some of these same advocates, you look at the same words and cite them as expanding its meaning.

Clinton was accused of a crime—perjury—and so the issue in his case was not whether the Constitution required a crime for impeachment. Instead, the issue was whether Clinton’s alleged crime could be classified as a “high crime” in light of the personal nature.

During the Clinton impeachment, I stated in an interview that I did not think that a technical crime was required but that I did think that abusing trust could be considered. I said that.

At that time, I had not done the extensive research on that issue because it was irrelevant to the Clinton case, and I was not fully aware of the controversy. So I simply accepted the academic consensus on an issue that was not on the front burner at the time.

But because this impeachment directly raises the issue of whether criminal behavior is required, I have gone back and read all the relevant historical material, as nonpartisan academicians should always do, and have now concluded that the Framers did intend to limit the criteria for impeachment to criminal-type acts akin to treason, bribery, and they certainly did not intend to extend it to vague and open-ended and noncriminal accusations such as abuse of power and obstruction of Congress.

I published this academic conclusion well before I was asked to present the argument to the Senate in this case. My switch in attitude purely academic, purely nonpartisan.

Nor am I the only participant in this proceeding who has changed his mind. Several Members of Congress, several Senators expressed different views regarding the criteria for impeachment when the subject was President Clinton than they do now. When the President was Clinton, my colleague and friend Professor Laurence Tribe, who is advising Speaker PELOSI now, wrote that a sitting President could not be charged with a crime. Now he has changed his mind. That is what academics do and should do, based on new information.

If there are reasonable doubts about the intended meaning of “high crimes and misdemeanors,” Senators might consider resolving these doubts by reference to the legal concept known as lenity.

Lenity goes back to hundreds of years before the founding of our country and was a concept in Great Britain, relied upon by many of our own Justices and judges over the years. It was well known to the legal members of the founding generations.

It required that in construing a criminal statute that is capable of more than one reasonable interpretation, the interpretation that favors the defendant should be selected unless it conflicts with the intent of the statute.

It has been applied by Chief Justice Marshall, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Felix Frankfurter, Justice Antonin Scalia and others.

Now, applying that rule to the interpretation of “high crimes and misdemeanors” would require that these words be construed narrowly to require criminal-like conduct akin to treason and bribery rather than broadly to encompass abuse of power and obstruction of Congress.

In other words, if Senators are in doubt about the meaning of “high crimes and misdemeanors,” they would be required to construe these words more narrowly rather than more broadly.

Now, even if the rule of lenity is not technically applicable to impeachment—that is a question—certainly, the policies underlying that rule are worthy and deserving of consideration as guides to constitutional interpretation.

Now, here I am making. I think, a very important point. Even if the Senate were to conclude that a technical crime is not required for impeachment, the critical question remains—and it is the question I now want to address myself to—do abuse of power and obstruction of Congress constitute impeachable offenses?

The relevant history answers that question clearly in the negative. Each of these charges suffers from the vice of being “so vague a term that they will be equivalent of tenure at the pleasure of the Senate,” to quote again the Father our Constitution.

Abuse of power is an accusation easily leveled by political opponents against controversial presidents. In our long history, many Presidents have been accused of abusing their power. I will now give you a list of Presidents who in our history have been accused of abusing their power. Those who would be subject to impeachment under the House managers’ view of abuse: George Washington, for refusal to turn over documents relating to the Jay Treaty; John Adams for signing and enforcing the Alien and Seditious laws; and Thomas Jefferson, for purchasing Louisiana without congressional authorization.

I will go on—John Quincy Adams; Martin Van Buren; John Tyler, “arbitrary, despotic and corrupt use of the veto power”; James Polk—and here I quote Abraham Lincoln. Abraham Lincoln accused Polk of abusing the power of his office, “contemptuously disregarding the Constitution, usurping
Abraham Lincoln was accused of abusing his power for suspending the writ of habeas corpus during the Civil War. The professor asks: ‘‘That is how abuse of power should be used, as a self-serving tool, and should be issued as statements of one political party against the other. That is the nature of the term. Abuse of power is a political weapon, and it should be leveled against political opponents. Let the people decide if that is true.’’

Barack Obama, the House Committee on the Judiciary held an entire hearing entitled ‘‘Obama Administration’s Abuse of Power.’’

By the standards applied to earlier Presidents, any corruption act by a Chief Executive could be denominated as abuse of power. For example, past Presidents have been accused of using their foreign policy, even their war powers, to enhance their electoral prospects. Presidents often have mixed motives that include partisan personal benefits, along with the national interest.

Professor Josh Blackman, constitutional law professor, provided the following interesting example:

In the bloodiest year of the Civil War, President Lincoln encouraged General William Sherman to allow soldiers in the field to return to Indiana to vote. What was Lincoln’s primary motivation, the professor asks?

He wanted to make sure that the government of Indiana remained in the hands of Republican loyalists who would continue the war until victory. Lincoln’s request risked undercutting the military effort by depleting the ranks. Moreover, during this time, soldiers in the remaining States faced greater risks than did the returning Hoosiers.

The professor continues:

Lincoln had personal motives. Privately, he sought victory for his party, but the President, as a President and as a party leader and Commander in Chief made a decision with life-or-death consequences.

Professor Blackman used the following, relevant conclusion from this and other historical events. He said:

Politics routinely promote the understanding of the general welfare while at the back of their minds considering how these actions will increase their popularity. Often the two concepts overlap. What is good for the country is good for the official’s reelection. All politicians understand that dynamic. Like all human beings, Presidents and other politicians, persuade themselves that their actions seen by their opponents as self-serving are primarily in the national interest. In order to conclude that such mixed-motive actions constitute an abuse of power, opponents must psychoanalyze the President and attribute to him a singular, self-serving motive. Such a subjective probing of motives cannot be the legal basis for an abuse of power that could result in the removal of an elected President.

Yet this is precisely what the managers are claiming. Here is what they said: ‘‘Whether the President’s real motive, the one actually in his mind, are at the time legitimate.’’

What a standard, what was in the President’s mind—actually in his mind? What was the real reason? Would you want your actions to be probed for ‘‘the real reason’’ why you acted? Even if a President were—and it clearly shows in my mind that the Framers could not have intended this psychoanalytical approach to Presidential motives to determine the distinction between what is impeachable and what is not.

Here, I come to a relevant and contemporaneous issue: Even if a President—any President—were to demand a quid pro quo as a condition to sending aid to a country, President obviously a highly disputed matter in this case—that would not, by itself, constitute an abuse of power.

Consider the following hypothetical case that is in the news today as the Israeli Prime Minister comes to the United States for meetings. Let’s assume a Democratic President tells Israel that foreign aid authorized by Congress will not be sent or an Oval Office meeting will not be scheduled unless the Israel agreement settlement—quid pro quo. I might disapprove of such a quid pro quo demand on policy grounds, but it would not constitute an abuse of power.

Quid pro quo alone is not a basis for abuse of power. It is part of the way foreign policy has been operated by Presidents since the beginning of time. The claim that foreign policy decisions can be deemed abuses of power based on subjective opinions about mixed or sole motives indeed was interested only in helping himself demonstrate the dangers of employing the vague, subjective, and politically malfeasible phrase ‘‘abuse of power’’ as a constitutionally permissible criteria for the removal of a President.

Now, it follows from this that, if a President—any President—were to have done what ‘‘The Times’’ reported about the content of the Bolton manuscript, that would not constitute an impeachable offense. Let me repeat it. Nothing in the Bolton revelations, even if true, would rise to the level of an abuse of power or an impeachable offense. That is clear from the history.

That is clear from the language of the Constitution. You cannot turn conduct that is not impeachable into impeachable conduct simply by using words like ‘‘quid pro quo’’ and ‘‘personal benefit.’’ It is inconceivable that the Framers would have intended so politically loaded and promiscuously deployed a term as ‘‘abuse of power’’ to be weaponized as a tool of impeachment.

It is precisely the kind of vague, open-ended, and subjective term that the Framers feared and rejected.

Consider the term ‘‘maladministration.’’ I want to get back to that term because it was a term explicitly rejected by the Framers. Recall that it was raised, Madison objected to it, and it was then withdrawn, and it was not a part of the criteria. We all agree that maladministration is not a ground for impeachment. If the House were to impeach, Madison insisted, it be rejected as a constitutional criteria for impeachment because ‘‘so vague a term would not, by itself, constitute a basis for impeachment. Blackstone denominated maladministration as a ‘‘high misdemeanor’’ that is punishable ‘‘by the method of parliamentary impeachment, wherein such penalties, short of death, are inflicted. He included among it imprisonment. In other words, you can go to prison for maladministration. Despite this British history, Madison insisted it be rejected as a constitutional criteria for impeachment because ‘‘so vague a term would not, by itself, constitute a basis for impeachment.’’

This important episode in our constitutional history supports the conclusion that the Framers did not accept, whole hog, the British approach to impeachment as some have mistakenly argued. Specifically, they rejected vague and open-ended criteria, even though that carried a lot of meaning in the context of imprisonment in Britain because they did not want to turn our new Republic into a parliamentary-style democracy in which the Chief Executive could be removed from office simply by a vote of no confidence. That is what they didn’t want.

Sure, nobody was above the law, but they created a law. They created a law by which Congress could impeach, and they did not want to expand that law to include all the criteria that permitted impeachment in Great Britain. The Framers would never have included and did not include abuse of power as an enumerated and defined criteria for impeachment. By expressly rejecting maladministration, they implicitly rejected abuse.

Nor would the Framers have included obstruction of Congress as among the enumerated and defined criteria. It, top, is vague and undefined, especially in a constitutional system in which, according to Hamilton in Federalist No. 78, “the legislative body” is not themselves “the constitutional judge of their powers,” and the “grave and immediate danger they put on them” is not “conclusive upon other departments.” Instead, he said, “the courts were designed as an intermediate body between the people [as declared in the Constitution] and the legislature” in order “to keep the latter within the limits assigned to their authority.”

Under our system of separation of powers and checks and balances, it cannot be an “obstruction of Congress” for a President to demand judicial review of a legal act in that branch. But once they are complied with. The legislature is not the “Constitutional judge of their own powers,” including the power to issue subpoenas. The courts were designated to resolve disputes between the executive and legislative branches, and it cannot be obstruction of Congress to invoke the constitutional power of the courts to do so.

By their very nature, words like “abuse of power” and “obstruction of Congress” are vague in the constitutional sense. It is impossible to put standards into words like that. Both are subjective matters of degree and amenable to varying powers of interpretations. It is impossible to know in advance whether a given action will subsequently be deemed to be on one side or the other of the line. Indeed, the same action with the same state of mind can be deemed abusive or obstructive when done by one person but not when done by another. That is the essence of the rule of law itself, not, when you have a criteria that can be applied to one person in one way and another person in another way and they both fit within the terms “abuse of power.”

A few examples will illustrate the dangers of standardless impeachment criteria. My friend and colleague Professor Noah Feldman argued that a tweet containing what he believed false information could “get the current president into a legal system in which prosecutors could charge a citizen with abuse of conduct? Can you imagine, abuse of power or obstruction of Congress?”

Professor Tribe, as I mentioned, argued that under the criteria of abuse of power, President Ronald Reagan could have been impeached.

Would any American today accept a legal system in which prosecutors could charge a citizen with abuse of conduct? Can you imagine, abuse of power or obstruction of Congress? Professor Tribe demonstrated how the constitutional protections against a statute that “either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application.” It is very difficult to imagine criteria that fits this description of what the Supreme Court has said violates the first essential rule of due process more closely than abuse of power and obstruction of Congress.

Constitutional scholars and Constitution watchers are accustomed to a much narrower standard of construction. That is that, when words can be interpreted in an unconstitutionally vague manner or a constitutional precise manner, the latter must be chosen. You are entitled to use that rule of interpretation as well in deciding whether or not obstruction of Congress or abuse of power can be defined as fitting within the criteria of high crimes and misdemeanors.

For the Senate to remove a duly-elected President on vague, nonconstitutional grounds, such as abuse of power or obstruction of Congress, would create a dangerous precedent and “be construed,” in the words of Senator James N. Grimes, “into approval of impeachment as part of future political machinery.”

This is a realistic threat to all future Presidents who serve with opposing legislative majorities that could easily concoct vague charges of abuse or obstruction of Congress. The criteria of abuse of power or obstruction of Congress is so far from what the Supreme Court has said violates the first essential rule of due process more closely than abuse of power and obstruction of Congress, it would create a dangerous precedent and “be construed,” in the words of Senator James N. Grimes, “into approval of impeachment as part of future political machinery.”

Nor can impeachment be based on a legal system in which prosecutors could charge a citizen with abuse of conduct? Can you imagine, abuse of power or obstruction of Congress? Professor Tribe demonstrated how the constitutional protections against a statute that “either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application.”

The Framers could have demanded that Presidents must meet Congressman SCHIFF’s standards of being honest, trustworthy, virtuous, and right in order to complete their terms, but they didn’t because they understand human fallibility. As Madison put it, “If men were angels, no government—certainly not a constitutional government—might be helpful. If a defendant were accused of dishonesty, committing the crime of dishonesty, it wouldn’t matter that the indictment listed as well the means toward dishonesty, a variety of false and more specific offenses. Dishonesty is simply not a crime. It is too broad a concept. It is not in the statute. It is not a crime. The indictment would be dismissed because dishonesty is a sin and not a crime, even if the indictment included a long list of more specific acts of dishonesty.

Nor can impeachment be based on a legal system in which prosecutors could charge a citizen with abuse of conduct? Can you imagine, abuse of power or obstruction of Congress? Professor Tribe demonstrated how the constitutional protections against a statute that “either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men and women of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application.”

In any event, it is the actual articles that charge abuse of power and obstruction of justice—neither of which are in the Constitution. It is the actual articles on which you must all vote, not on the more specific list of means included in the text of the articles.

The Framers understood that if they set the criteria for impeachment too low, few Presidents would serve their terms. Instead, their tenure would be at the pleasure of the legislature, as it was and still is in Britain. So they set the standards and the criteria high, requiring not sinful behavior—not dishonesty, distrust, or dishonor—but treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors. The Constitution was intended to be that high.

I end this presentation today with a nonpartisan plea for fair consideration of my arguments and those made by counsel and managers on both sides. I willingly acknowledge that the academic consensus is that criminal conduct and that abuse of power and obstruction of Congress are sufficient. I have read and respectfully considered the academic work of my many colleagues who disagree with my view and the few who accept it. I do my own research, and I do my own thinking, and I have never bowed to the majority on intellectual or scholarly matters.

What concerns me is that during this impeachment proceeding, there have been few attempts to respond to my arguments and other people’s arguments opposed to the impeachment of this President. Instead of answering my arguments and those of Justice Curtis and Professor Bowie and others on their merits and possible demerits, they have simply been rejected with negative epithets.

I urge the Senators to ignore these epithets and to consider the arguments and counterarguments on their merits, especially when they agree or disagree with the constitutional vagueness of abuse of power and obstruction of Congress.

I now offer a criteria for evaluating conflicting arguments. The criteria I offer have long called the “shoe on the other foot” test. It is a colloquial variation of the test proposed by the great legal and political thinker, my former colleague, John Rawls. It is simple in its statement but difficult in its application.

As a thought experiment, I respectfully urge each of you to imagine that the person being impeached were of the opposite party of the current President but that in every other respect, the facts were the same.

I have applied this test to the constitutional arguments I am offering today. I would be making the same constitutional arguments in opposition to the impeachment on these two grounds regardless of whether I voted for or against this President regardless of whether I agreed or disagreed with his or her policies. Those of you who know me know that is the absolute truth. I am nonpartisan in my application of the Constitution. Can the same be said for all of my colleagues who support this impeachment, especially those who opposed the impeachment of President Bill Clinton?

I first proposed the shoe test 20 years ago in evaluating the Supreme Court’s decision in Bush v. Gore, asking the Justices to consider how they would have voted had it been Candidate Bush, rather than Gore, who was several hundred votes behind and seeking a re-count. In other words, I was on the other side of that issue. I thought the Supreme Court in that case favored the Republicans over the Democrats, and I asked them to apply the “shoe on the other foot” test.

I now respectfully ask this distinguished Chamber to consider that heuristic test in evaluating the arguments you have heard in this historic Chamber. It is an important test because how you vote on this case will serve as a precedent for the voters of the United States of America, different parties, different backgrounds, and different perspectives vote in future cases.

Allowing a duly-elected President to be removed on the basis of standardless, subjective, ever-changing criteria—abuse of power and obstruction of Congress—risks being “construed,” in the words of Senator Grimes, a Republican Senator from Iowa, who voted against impeaching President Andrew Johnson, “into approval of impeachments as part of future political machinery.”

As I began, I will close. I am here today because I love my country. I love the country that welcomed my grandparents and made them into great patriots and supporters of the freest and most wonderful country in the history of the world. I love our Constitution—the greatest and most enduring document in the human kind. I respectfully urge you not to let your feelings about one man—strong as they may be—establish a precedent that would undo the work of our Founders, institutional future of our children, and cause irreparable damage to the delicate balance of our system of separation of powers and checks and balances.

As Justice Curtis said during the trial of Andrew Johnson, a greater principle is at stake than the fate of any particular President. The fate of future Presidents of different parties and policies is also at stake, as is the fate of our constitutional system. The passions and fears of the moment must not blind us to our past and to our future.

Hamilton predicted that impeachment would agitate the passions of the whole community and enlist all their animosities, partialities, influence, and interest on one or the other. The Senate—the Senate—was established as a wise and mature check on the passions of the moment with “a deep responsibility to future generations.”

I respectfully urge the distinguished Members of this great body to think beyond the emotions of the day and to vote against impeaching on the unconstitutional articles now before you. To do so would irreparably injure the President and to prevent the voters from deciding his fate on the basis of these articles would neither do justice to this President nor to our enduring Constitution. There is no conflict here. Impeaching would deny both justice to an individual and justice to our Constitution.

I thank you for your close attention. It has been a great honor for me to address this distinguished body on this important matter. Thank you so much for your attention.

The CHIEF JUSTICE. The majority leader is recognized.

I am sorry. Are you complete?

Mr. Cipollone.

Mr. Counsel CIPOLLONE. Mr. Chief Justice, Majority Leader McCONNELL, Democratic Leader SCHUMER, Senators, don’t worry, this won’t take very long. We are going to stop for the day, and we will continue with our presentations tomorrow. I just had three observations that I wanted to briefly make for you.

First of all, thank you very much, Professor Dershowitz and all the presenters from our side today.

I was sitting here listening to Professor Dershowitz, and believe it or not, my mind went back to law school, and I began thinking, how would this impeachment look as a law school hypothetical question. How would we answer that question? And I found myself thinking maybe that is a good way to think about it.

The question would go something like this: Imagine you are a U.S. Senator and you are sitting in an impeachment trial. The Articles of Impeachment before you had been passed on a purely partisan basis for the first time in history. In fact, there was bipartisan opposition to the Articles of Impeachment. They have been trying to impeach the President from the moment of his inauguration for no reason—just because he won.

The articles before you do not allege a crime or even any violation of the law. One article alleges obstruction of Congress simply for exercising longstanding constitutional rights that every President has exercised. The President was given no rights in the Constitution to seek themselves. When confronted with expedited court proceedings regarding subpoenas they had issued, they actually withdrew those subpoenas.

They are now criticizing you in strong, accusatory language if you don’t capitulate to their unreasonable demands and sit in your seats for months. An election is only months away, and for the first time in history, they are asking you to remove a President from the ballot. They are asking you to do something that violates all past historical precedents that you have studied in class and principles of democracy and take the choice away from the American people. It would tear apart the country for generations and change our constitutional system forever.

Question: What should you do?

Your first thought might be, that is not a realistic hypothetical. That could never happen in America.
But then you would be happy because you would have an easy answer and you can be done with your law school exam, and it would be—you immediately reject the Articles of Impeachment.

Bonus question: Should your answer depend on your political party?
Answer: No.

My second observation is, I actually think it is very instructive to watch the old videos from the last time this happened, when many of you were making so eloquently—more eloquently than we are—the points that we are making about the law and precedent. But that is not playing a game of “gotcha”; that is paying you a compliment.

You were right about those principles. You were right about those principles. And if you will not listen to me, I urge you to listen to yourselves. You were right.

The third observation I had sitting here today is, Judge Starr talked about that we are in the age of impeachment, in the age of constant investigations. Imagine—if all of that energy were being used to solve the problems of the American people. Imagine if the age of impeachment were over in the United States. Imagine that.

I was listening to Professor Dershowitz talking about the shoe-on-the-other-foot rule, and it makes a lot of sense. I would maybe put it differently. I would maybe call it the golden rule of impeachment. For the Democrats, the golden rule could be, do unto Republicans as you would have them do unto Democrats. And hopefully we will never be in another position in this country where we have another impeachment but vice versa for that rule.

Those are my three observations. I hope that is helpful. Those were the thoughts I had listening to the presentations.

At the end of the day, the most important thought is this: This choice belongs to the American people. They will get to make it months from now.

The Constitution and common sense and all of our history prevent you from removing the President from the ballot. There is no basis for it in the facts. There is simply no basis for it in the law. I urge you to quickly come to that conclusion so we can go have an election.

Thank you very much for your attention.
Thank you, Mr. Chief Justice.
The CHIEF JUSTICE. The majority leader is recognized.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 1 P.M. TOMORROW

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. Chief Justice, I ask unanimous consent that the trial adjourn until 1 p.m., Tuesday, January 28, and that this order also constitute the adjournment of the Senate.

There being no objection, at 9:02 p.m. the Senate, sitting as a Court of Impeachment, adjourned until Tuesday, January 28, 2020, at 1 p.m.

HONORING GLOVE CITIES VETERINARY HOSPITAL FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE THOMAS B. CONSTANTINO ENTREPRENEURIAL AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Glove Cities Veterinary Hospital for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Thomas B. Constantino Entrepreneurial Award.

Glove Cities Veterinary Hospital, led by Dr. Mark Will, has built a strong reputation thanks to its kind and professional staff and their commitment to offering high standards of care. The practice was established in 1939 by Dr. Mark "Doc" Crandall in Gloversville and now employs eight licensed veterinary technicians and two client service representatives. Glove Cities Veterinary Hospital is highly involved in the community, conducting an annual Shelter Supply Drive to support the local shelter pets. The practice's mission is "to promote responsible pet ownership, to communicate compassionately as we educate our clients, and to nurture a longer, more comfortable, and better quality of life for our patients."

Glove Cities Veterinary Hospital is a staple of the Gloversville community and on behalf of New York's 21st District, I would like to thank and congratulate Dr. Mark Will and his team for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

CELEBRATING LOU MAIELLO’S 100TH BIRTHDAY

HON. MAX ROSE
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. ROSE of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today in honor of Mr. Lou Maiello’s 100th birthday.

Born in 1920 to his Italian immigrant parents Elena and Benjamin, Lou is the fourth of seven siblings. He attended PS 78 and Benjamin Franklin High School, then moved out to Idaho as a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

Eventually Lou moved back to New York City to work for a series of construction companies. At the Rockefeller Construction Company, he met the love of his life, Nancy. Nancy and Lou will celebrate their 64th anniversary in June.

Although Lou retired in 1990, he has kept himself busy. An avid golfer, Lou won the Staten Island Senior League Club Championship against a man 43 years his junior. He followed up his victory a week later with the first hole in one of his golfing career.

During his retirement, Lou learned to paint while watching Bob Ross on PBS. His artwork now hangs in the homes of his friends and family. Lou is also known for his gardening skills, often sharing his harvest with the neighbors.

Lou and Nancy moved to Staten Island in 1960 from the Bronx. They raised their four children, Anne Marie, Barbara, Robert and Rick, in Westerleigh. Lou’s children are all proud of their father and thrilled to be celebrating this huge milestone together, and I ask my colleagues in the House to join me in celebrating with them.

I wish Lou a very happy 100th birthday surrounded by his loving family.

HONORING CRYSTAL GROVE DIAMOND MINE & CAMPGROUND FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BARBARA V. SPRAKER TOURISM PARTNER AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Crystal Grove Diamond Mine & Campground for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Barbara V. Spraker Tourism Partner Award.

Crystal Grove Diamond Mine & Campground offers visitors a unique and memorable North Country camping experience. In the mines, visitors can personally sift and dig for Herkimer Diamonds, which are only found throughout Herkimer County and the Mohawk Valley. These diamonds are precious to collectors worldwide and recognized for their unique properties and beauty. The grounds also attract campers, who are drawn to the spacious and quiet upstate setting, which is dotted with hardwood trees and traversed by the bubbling Timmerman Creek. Billie Jo and Joel Davis are on-site managers for both the Crystal Grove campsite and mines. The couple was asked to manage the property by their dear friend, owner Marion "Bessie" Bartlett, who passed away in January of 2018. The site is now owned by Bartlett's children, Christopher Evans and Madigan Evans Rollins.

Crystal Grove Diamond Mine & Campground showcases the natural beauty and treasures of the North Country for all to see. On behalf of New York's 21st District, I would like to congratulate Billie Jo Davis, Joel Davis, Christopher Evans, Madigan Evans Rollins and their entire team for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

HONORING THE LIFE OF FORMER TORRANCE MAYOR KEN MILLER

HON. TED LIEU
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. LIEU of California. Madam Speaker, I rise to celebrate the life of Ken Miller—a beloved husband, father, and grandfather—who passed away on January 19, 2020 at the age of 97. Ken was a beloved community member who formerly served as the Mayor of the City of Torrance in my congressional district.

Born on August 20, 1922 in Torrance, California, Ken remains the only Mayor of Torrance to have been born in Torrance. After graduating high school in 1941, Ken joined the U.S. Army Air Corps and served in China, Burma, and India during World War II. Upon the conclusion of the war, Ken returned to his education, graduating with a Bachelor of Arts from Occidental College. He later received his teaching credential from the University of Southern California. Shortly after receiving his credential, Ken discovered a love for real estate and founded Ken Miller Realty, which he ran with his wife, Judy, in 1952, and they married that same year.

Ken’s career in local government began with his service on the Torrance Planning Commission from 1960 to 1962. Ken went on to serve as a City Councilmember from 1962 to 1970. Following his service on the City Council, Ken was elected Mayor in 1970. Ken served two terms as the Mayor of Torrance, leaving office in 1978.

During his tenure as Mayor, Ken successfully spearheaded efforts to impose a two-term limit on the mayoral office through changes to the city Charter. The City of Torrance also owes much of its park space to Ken and his efforts to acquire land for public use. While in office, Ken helped to establish the Torrance Sister City Association, a program that aims to foster relationships between two different countries. Through his efforts, the City of Torrance developed a relationship with the City of Kashiwa, Japan that still exists today.

After ending his political career, Ken co-founded South Bay Bank in 1982, serving as a chairman until 2007. Ken’s civic service commitments extend to his presidency of the Torrance-Lomita Board of Realtors, his board membership at Torrance Memorial Medical Center, and his presidency of the Switzer Center Board of Directors. In 1990, the City of Torrance honored Ken with the Jared Sidney Torrance Award. Ken is survived by his wife, Judy, their three children, Randy, Jim, and Cathy, six grandchildren, and one great-grandson, whom I hope take comfort in the way Ken lived his life serving the city that he loved. Torrance loved him back. May his memory be a blessing to us all.

DWAYNE CAMERON
HON. ED PERLMUTTER
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. PERLMUTTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Dwayne Cameron for receiving the 2019 Ambassador of the Year Award from the Arvada Chamber of Commerce.

Dwayne has shown incredible commitment to the Arvada Chamber and the Arvada community through his role as an Arvada Chamber ambassador. As an ambassador, he consistently attends events and meetings and offers support and a friendly face to other business owners. It is clear Dwayne has a deep understanding of the local business community and is invested in the success of businesses in Arvada.

In addition, Dwayne contributes to the Arvada community through his ownership of the Minuteman Press, a full-service marketing and print and design company based in Arvada. With years of experience and unparalleled expertise in the print industry, Dwayne and his staff offer a variety of offerings—from business cards and brochures, to labels and calendars—but always reliable service and affordable prices.

Congratulations to Dwayne for this recognition from the Arvada Chamber, and I extend my deepest appreciation for his contribution to our community.

HONORING DR. DEXTER CRIS FOR HIS WORK WITH THE PLATTSBURGH STATE GOSPEL CHOIR AND THE LIFE OF HIS SON, DALTON CRIS
HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Dexter Criss for his work with the Plattsburgh State Gospel Choir and the life of his son, Dalton Criss.

Dr. Dexter Criss is an Associate Professor of Chemistry and Music Director at SUNY Plattsburgh. He has been involved with the Plattsburgh State Gospel Choir since 2001. The choir actively performs on campus, in the community, and throughout the region. They average 25 appearances each year in settings including colleges, campus events, K–12 schools, churches, memorial services, weddings, and other community events. For many years, Dr. Criss has led the choir during the annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Day events. Sadly, Dr. Criss is not leading the choir in remembrance of Dr. King this year.

Dr. Criss’ wife Barbara and his son Dalton were involved in a serious car accident. On August 20th, Dalton tragically passed away from his injuries at just 18 years old, while Barbara remained in critical condition in Burlington. Dalton had just graduated from Peru High School and was planning on beginning his first semester at SUNY Plattsburgh the very next week. Dalton was an accomplished football player and wrestler for Peru High School, winning the Section VII title in the 285-pound class his junior and senior years. He also took after his father in his musical ability, playing drums and bass for the Faith Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church of Glen Falls.

Dr. Criss’ absence is a further reminder of this tragedy that has rocked the Plattsburgh community. On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to thank Dr. Criss for his amazing work and honor the life of his son, Dalton. My thoughts and prayers are with him and his family.

CELEBRATING THE SERVICE OF SANDRA FERNIZA
HON. RUBEN GALLEGO
OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. GALLEGO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to celebrate Sandra Ferniza’s service to the community of Phoenix. After 5 years of working in my District Office as the Director of Intergovernmental Relations, Sandra has served as the Director of Constituent Services. Sandra is retiring. I am grateful for her many years of dedication to our state.

Constituent casework provides Congressional offices with a unique and vital opportunity to engage with individuals in the moments that they need us most. From passport applications to grant proposals, Sandra has connected with constituents and guided them through problem-solving processes, many of which involve federal agencies. She has used her own wealth of experience and connections in all sectors of the Phoenix community to help our office and go above and beyond in helping our constituents, organizations and local government entities.

In addition to her work in our office, Sandra has an illustrious legacy of breaking barriers for the Latino community. She has helped Latinos win groundbreaking elections at many levels of government, provided visibility as a Latina leader within the banking and investment world, and served as the CEO of the Arizona Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. Throughout her long and varied career, two consistencies that stand out are service and leadership. Her professional commitment has been matched only by her dedication to her family and friends. She has selflessly cared for multiple ailing family members and serves as a model of a value-driven life for her extensive network of younger family members and friends.

I am grateful to have worked alongside Sandra for the entirety of my time in Congress. While I wish her only the best in her retirement, she will also be missed. She has been an asset and an advocate that I have been grateful to have on my team. Her selflessness, attention to detail, and determination are remarkable traits that have allowed her to advance good in Arizona over the entirety of her career.

On behalf of myself, the countless constituents of Arizona’s seventh district that she has helped, and the entire State of Arizona, I want to express my gratitude for the service of Sandra Ferniza. I have no doubt that she will continue to be a leader within the Phoenix community. We will thank her by continuing to dedicate ourselves to constituent services and the improvement of as many lives as possible.

RESOLUTION COMMEMORATING THE 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE LIBERATION OF AUSCHWITZ
HON. GRACE MENG
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. MENG. Madam Speaker, I rise today to announce the introduction of a resolution commemorating the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz.

Today, International Holocaust Remembrance Day, marks the 75th anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz. On this day in 1945, Allied troops entered the Auschwitz concentration camp and liberated the more than 7,000 still-living prisoners.

During World War II, the Nazi regime systematically killed approximately 6 million Jews, as well as millions of other minority populations. At least 1.3 million of these people were deported to Auschwitz, 1.1 million of whom were murdered.

Today, we not only remember the Jewish lives cut short by the heinous crimes perpetrated by the Nazi regime, but we honor the nearly 80,000 Holocaust survivors still living in the United States and telling their stories to ensure that the adage “never again” is realized.

Anti-Semites in America and around the world continue to invoke Nazi ideology and use symbols like the swastika to vandalize synagogues and Jewish institutions. This resolution emphasizes the importance of Holocaust education in schools, urges Federal agencies and the American people to commit to addressing unchecked intolerance and prejudice, and encourages Federal and local social services agencies to support Holocaust survivors so they may live their remaining years in dignity and comfort.

I thank my colleagues, Congressmen Ted Deutch and Lee Zeldin, for leading this bipartisan resolution with me, to the 98 original co-sponsors of the resolution, and to over a dozen American Jewish organizations who have endorsed it. I urge my colleagues to join with me and pass this important resolution.

THE CAREER LINKS TEAM AT JEFFERSON COUNTY PUBLIC SCHOOLS

HON. ED PERLMUTTER OF COLORADO

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. PERLMUTTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Career Links Team at Jefferson County Public Schools for receiving the 2019 Behind the Scenes Award from the Arvada Chamber of Commerce.

Jeffco Career Links is a one-stop resource providing tools and building connections between classrooms and careers for industries and schools. Career Links supports the work-based learning opportunities for Jeffco students to ensure their experience is connected to learning targets and real-world experience. The Career Links team is committed to providing support for Jefferson County schools in order to support quality programming and successful career paths for every student.

The Career Links team has been integral in positively shaping conversations with local partners around the skills and knowledge needs to improve Arvada and Jefferson County’s local talent pipeline leading to economic mobility and skill alignment for the future workforce in our community. By connecting and collaborating with industry partners, Career Links helps Jeffco Public Schools train and prepare the future workforce. Their work makes a long-lasting impact on the success of Jeffco students, builds meaningful connections with the local business community, and helps grow the local economy.

Congratulations to the Career Links Team at Jefferson County Public Schools for this recognition from the Arvada Chamber, and I extend my deepest appreciation for their contribution to our community.

HONORING DOLLAR GENERAL DISTRIBUTION CENTER FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FMS WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT BUSINESS OF THE YEAR AWARD FOR MONTGOMERY COUNTY

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK OF NEW YORK

Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the Dollar General Distribution Center in Amsterdam for receiving the FMS Workforce Development Business of the Year Award for Montgomery County.

The Dollar General Distribution Center has a new state-of-the-art and highly efficient facility that was built to support their growing network in New York and throughout the northeast. Dollar General has garnered a great reputation for their commitment to the community and producing quality products that promote a cleaner environment. Strong partnerships are key to developing a great workforce, and Dollar General has worked closely with the Amsterdam Career Center to recruit and interview prospective employees. Additionally, they have held successful hiring events that have attracted hundreds of job seekers from the surrounding community. Dollar General has made significant contributions to community organizations in the North Country, including $5,000 to the Workforce Career Center and a donation to the United Way in Amsterdam to help support their mission.

The commitment Dollar General has made to the community and workforce is significant and on behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to thank and congratulate Elijah Braemer and the entire staff for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

RECOGNIZING SOUTHEAST PENNSYLVANIA’S NEWEST EAGLE SCOUTS FOR 2019

HON. BRIAN K. FITZPATRICK OF PENNSYLVANIA

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Madam Speaker, the following individuals have attained the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest achievement of the Boy Scouts of America. Since its inception in 1911, only four percent of boy scouts achieve this rank after a lengthy review process.

LIMB LOSS AWARENESS MONTH

HON. ERIC A. "RICK" CRAWFORD

OF ARKANSAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. CRAWFORD. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the importance of Limb Loss Awareness Month. Over 2.1 million Americans live with limb loss or difference, and over 500 Americans lose a limb every day. The number of Americans living with limb loss or difference is projected to over 3.6 million by 2050.

April is an appropriate month to designate as Limb Loss Awareness Month as spring is a time of renewal and inspiration. I encourage everyone to learn about the issues affecting people with limb loss and express gratitude to families and caregivers who are a source of support and motivation.

Finally, I salute our veterans who have lost their limbs in service to this country or in retirement.

KEVIN GARCIA

HON. ED PERLMUTTER

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. PERLMUTTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Kevin Garcia, Communications Supervisor at Jeffcom 911, for his exceptional performance and contributions to our community and for his recognition of an Industry Professional by the NG911 Institute.

Kevin is one of 20 Communication Supervisors at Jeffcom 911, overseeing the day-to-day operations of a large Communications Center and the management of 118 Emergency Communications Specialists. As a dispatcher of 23 years, Kevin played a critical role in Jeffcom 911's first 18 months of operations since launching as the new consolidated regional communications center. Kevin was one of the select few line-level personnel involved in the implementation of the Public Safety Answering Point (PSAP) and 24 agencies that serve 600,000 residents and produced a call volume of 971,254 emergency and non-emergency calls.

Kevin was instrumental in using his experience for developing organizational policy and user guides for a multitude of systems, including individual training for major upgrades on the ‘Safe-to-Tell’ software—which was particularly time sensitive for informing local School Resource Officers of potential threats to staff and students within Jefferson County. Kevin also worked hand-in-hand with the IT department with the development and functionality of the CAD system at Jeffcom 911 from the start when the operations floor was an empty shell all the way through construction and set-up to the state-of-the-art facility it today, resulting in an enormous resource of information and guidance for the 150 Jeffcom 911 staff. In addition to his technical acumen, Kevin is equally valuable to the Jeffcom 911 staff for his leadership in personnel matters and does a tremendous job managing a difficult watch schedule, assessment of trainees on the floor and providing in-the-moment guidance to employees on organizational policy, Kevin is truly a force-multiplier for management as a leader on the operations floor and has solidified himself as the “go-to” Supervisor for guidance on any issue.

Over the past year, Kevin has also served as an instructor in the Jeffcom 911 Academy, a six-week course for training new Emergency Communication Specialists, where he has provided over 40 hours of instruction and brings both experience and great passion to the training. Congratulations to Kevin for earning recognition as an Industry Professional from NG911, and I extend my deepest appreciation to Kevin Garcia for his leadership and contributions to Jeffcom 911 and the Jefferson County community.

HONORING CG ROXANE LLC FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FMS WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT BUSINESS OF THE YEAR AWARD FOR FULTON COUNTY

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor CG Roxane LLC for receiving the FMS Workforce Development Business of the Year award for Fulton County.

Since 2013, CG Roxane LLC has been bottling and shipping Crystal Geyser Alpine Spring Water in a state-of-the-art facility located in Johnstown, NY. In addition to the Johnstown plant, CG Roxane owns and operates eight other water bottling plants in New Hampshire, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Florida, Arkansas, and California. Last year CG Roxane became the first U.S. beverage company to invest in a plan dedicated to manufacturing bottles from recycled materials, specifically recycled polyethylene terephthalate. CG Roxane's new bottles will soon be made entirely of this recycled material; closing the sustainability loop. CG Roxane is also dedicated to hiring local. The New York’s 21st District, I would like to congratulate the entire CG Roxane LLC team for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

BIG BEAR LAKE CITY MANAGER JEFF MATHIEU RETIRES

HON. PAUL COOK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. COOK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the career and service of Big Bear Lake City Manager Jeff Mathieu, who will retire from his position on January 27, 2020.

Before coming to Big Bear Lake, Jeff Mathieu served the cities of Santa Monica and Long Beach for a combined 31 years. He came to Big Bear Lake in 2006, where he immediately hit the ground running. He has been responsible for numerous capital improvement projects, including major street improvements, the construction of new trails, the upgrade of city parks and the creation of the iconic Boulder Bay Park. Additionally, Mathieu spearheaded the Village Renaissance Project which transformed the Village “L” into one of the most popular attractions in Big Bear Lake.

Jeff Mathieu has been an outstanding city manager, and I am grateful to have had the pleasure of working with him during my entire career in Congress and the California State Assembly. He truly embodies the term public servant, and his leadership, experience, and dedication to improving Big Bear Lake will be sorely missed.

IN MEMORY OF FIRE CHIEF TIM TITTLE

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. BURGESS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the career and service of Big Bear Lake City Manager Jeff Mathieu, who will retire from his position on January 27, 2020.

to the fire service will continue to be an ideal of servanthood and integrity for his colleagues. Under his leadership, Chief Tittle was responsible for oversight of the 155 fire fighters who compose the Lewisville Fire Department. As Fire Chief, he oversaw the department’s response to over 11,000 incidents annually in the City of Lewisville from eight fire stations. Chief Tittle was born and raised in Lewisville, and he graduated from Lewisville High School in 1974. He played basketball and was captain of the varsity baseball team. Years later, he was named to the Lewisville High School Hall of Fame in recognition of his accomplishments both as a student and for his public service as an adult.

Chief Tittle was a “Fireman’s Fireman;” he joined the Lewisville Fire Department in 1977 and worked his way up the ranks, serving in nearly every position within the department. He had the distinction of being one of the city’s first paramedics and fulfilled a lifelong dream and reached the pinnacle of his career when he was named Lewisville Fire Chief in 2011.

Tim Tittle was married to Lisa for more than twenty years and raised two sons. According to their proud and loving father, these young men were the greatest accomplishments of his life. Chief Tittle passed away on January 20, 2020 after a courageous battle against leukemia.

Since being diagnosed in 2013, he aggressively battled the cancer into remission several times. His leadership, professionalism and dedication will not be forgotten in the City of Lewisville and Denton County. Chief Tim Tittle’s devotion to his profession and his fellow firefighters was absolute and his service to the community made it a safer place to live and work. His service and leadership will be deeply missed.

HONORING CENTURY LINEN & UNIFORM FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE CENTENNIAL BUSINESS AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020
Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Century Linen & Uniform for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Centennial Business Award.

Century Linen & Uniform is a legacy company headquartered in Fulton County since 1915. The company was founded in Gloversville as Robison & Smith, and the name was changed in 2015 to mark a new era for the “next 100 years” of the company. Today, the company has over 400 employees operating out of three locations, including a brand-new facility in Fulton County. They serve a range of customers, including acute healthcare facilities, surgery centers, nursing homes, assisted living centers, doctors’ offices and other businesses throughout New York State and western Massachusetts. Their weekly laundry output, now at 500,000 pounds, is expected to rise to over one million pounds in the future. CEO Richard Smith attributes the success of Century Linen “to hard work, consistency with our business philosophy, focusing on our core values and having a properly trained and educated workforce.”

Century Linen and Uniform has been providing jobs and investment to our communities for 105 years. On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to congratulate Richard Smith and the entire Century Linen & Uniform for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

HONORING THE JUVENILE DIABETES RESEARCH FOUNDATION FOR ITS FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

HON. TOM REED
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020
Mr. REED. Madam Speaker, today I rise to recognize the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and its Western New York Chapter upon its fiftieth anniversary. For years, this organization has been the leading global organization to fund Type One Diabetes research, and I am honored to recognize their work today.

Type One Diabetes is an autoimmune disease that causes the pancreas to stop producing insulin suddenly, and has no link to diet or lifestyle and impacts both adults and children.

The Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation was founded in 1970 upon the desire to cure Type One Diabetes. The organization was founded by parents hoping to find a cure for their children who had the disease. Since that time, the organization has worked to cure this disease that affects so many by raising funds and advocating for research. Currently, there are dozens of locations across the nation and six international affiliates. The organization has raised more than two billion dollars for research.

This organization has done great work throughout the country, including the Western New York Chapter that I have often been involved with over the years. This year, we are glad to also be celebrating the Gala’s twentieth anniversary, Journey To A Cure Gala, one of the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation of Western New York’s largest fundraisers. This extraordinary event draws about six hundred community members together, united for the cause of raising funds for Type One Diabetes research.

Given the above, I ask that this Legislative Body pause in its deliberations and join me to honor the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and its Western New York Chapter upon its fiftieth anniversary.
Mr. PERLMUTTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Ron Slinger for receiving the 2019 Chairman’s Choice Award from the Arvada Chamber of Commerce. The Chairman’s Choice is selected annually by the Chairman of the Arvada Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors to recognize a member of the community who has shown leadership and outstanding support to the Arvada Chamber. For more than 10 years, Ron has been a staple of the Arvada and Jefferson County community. During that time, Ron served as Red Rocks Community College’s Vice President of Institutional Advancement, Strategic Partnerships and Workforce Solutions as well as Associate Vice President for Institutional Advancement and Executive Director of the Red Rocks Community College Foundation. Ron’s extensive involvement, leadership and contributions in Arvada have resulted in a significant and long-lasting impact in the community. His sense of humor and kindness bring positive energy and perspective to any opportunity he undertakes. In addition, Ron positively impacted the community through active and abundant volunteerism, leadership and advocacy. He is a true advocate for the Arvada Chamber and has fully dedicated himself to the betterment of the community.

Recently Ron took a new position as President of Miles Community College but has left a legacy in our community that will be difficult for anyone to fill. Congratulations to Ron on this recognition from the Arvada Chamber, and I extend my deepest appreciation for his contribution to our community.

HONORING TOWNSEND LEATHER FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE EDWARD L. WILKINSON INDUSTRY OF THE YEAR AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Townsend Leather for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Edward L. Wilkinson Industry of the Year Award. Townsend Leather Co., Inc. in Johnstown has been offering high-quality leather products to its customers for the past 50 years. This third-generation-business, founded in 1969 by Albert “Red” Kucel, along with his wife Doro-thy and their children, now employs more than 160 partners. They maintain 128,000 square feet of manufacturing space in three buildings on Townsend Avenue, complemented by the recent opening of a 62,000 square foot building on Grove Street. Known by many as “The Stitch,” this new space is located in a refurbished 1900s knitting mill. Townsend Leather Co. offers a wide range of residential, hospitality/hotel and corporate applications including jet interiors, as well as for luxury motor coaches, show cars and yachts in more than 1,000 colors, textures, and qualities. Townsend Leather Co. is an industry leader and reflects the best qualities of the business community in the North Country. On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to congrat- late the entire Townsend Leather team for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

HONORING DR. JAMES DENNIS
HON. MIKE BOST
OF ILLINOIS
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. BOST. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. James Dennis, President of McKendree University in Lebanon, Illinois, for dedicating a quarter century to strengthening the school’s mission and expanding its national profile. Born in Los Angeles, Dr. Dennis had teaching in his DNA. With both his parents working as teachers, he spent his childhood living on a college campus, where he gained his passion for reading and learning. After receiving a Ph.D. in education and a law degree, Dr. Dennis began his career at the University of Southern California before beginning his ten-ure at McKendree in 1994. Dr. Dennis has helped transform the local college into a large university with a high percentage of out-of-state and international students. One of Dr. Dennis’s most important goals is to create a relationship with every student that he can; he wants them to understand how much he values their success. When he’s not focused on administration of university, Dr. Dennis enjoys traveling and spending time with his five grandchildren.

Madam Speaker, please join me in recognizing Dr. James Dennis for his commitment to making McKendree University a top desti-nation for young people charting their path for a lifetime of success.

INTRODUCTION OF THE PROMOTING HEALTHIER LIFELONG IMPROVEMENTS IN FOOD AND EXERCISE ACT OF 2020

HON. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. NORTON. Madam Speaker, I rise to introduce the Promoting Healthier Lifelong Improvements in Food and Exercise Act (LIFE Act), which authorizes a national initiative to attack a major health problem in the United States that cannot be remedied through the health care system alone. Increasing rates of over- weight and obesity are now found among Americans of every age, race and major de-mographic group, and threaten the health of Americans like no disease or condition. In fact, the key to eliminating many of the most seri-ous health conditions is not only to reduce overweight and obesity but also to encourage exercise of all kinds.

The LIFE Act would provide $25 million to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) for a coordinated national effort to reverse increasingly sedentary lifestyles and diets that are high in fat and sugar. Specific-ally, my bill would require the CDC to establish the first national strategy to combat the obesity epidemic. The CDC, either directly or through partnerships with local organizations, would train health professionals to recognize the signs of overweight and obesity early in order to educate Amer-cans about proper nutrition and regular exercise; conduct public education campaigns about how to recognize and address overweight and obesity; and devise intervention strategies for use in everyday life, such as in the workplace and community settings. In 2017, estimates from the CDC National Center for Health Statistics showed that since 1971 to 1974, the percentage of children and adoles-cents who are obese has increased from 5 percent to 18.5 percent. The CDC also reports that Type 2 Diabetes, once considered an adult disease, is now widespread among children. The rising cost of the health care system, including insurance premiums, reflects this epidemic. Today, chronic diseases, many of which are caused or exacerbated by over-weight and obesity, account for 70 percent of all deaths in the U.S., and 75 percent of U.S. medical care costs. A focused national health initiative would provide guidance to the states to engage in similar programs, as mayors of some cities have done.

A national focus could lead to changes, such as greater participation in high school physical education classes, which dropped from 42 percent in 1991 to 25 percent in 1995 and has remained constant through 2015. Changes in nutrition are equally critical be-cause more than half of all young people consume too much fat, a factor in the increase of overweight youth. Data also show an increase in unhealthy eating habits for adults and no change in physical activity.

To cite an example of the need for action, the District of Columbia is one of the fittest cit-ies in the United States, according to a 2019 study by the American College of Sports Medicine, yet even here, obesity continues to be a serious problem. Approximately one-fifth of District residents are overweight or obese. Most of the obesity epidemic is exercise-and-food-related.

I urge support of this important bill to mobilize the country now before entirely prevent-able health conditions, which often begin in childhood, overwhelm the nation’s health care system.

THRIVE WORKSPACE

HON. ED PERLMUTTER
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. PERLMUTTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Thrive Workplace for receiving the 2019 Chairman’s Choice Award from the Arvada Chamber of Commerce. Since opening in Arvada just one year ago, Thrive Workplace—or Thrive West Arvada—has proved their commitment to the Arvada com-munity. By offering a place for individuals and businesses to come together, they have shown their investment in the success of local entrepreneurs and businesses and their focus... on resiliency, leadership and building community.

The workspace features ample desk space laid out to foster a welcoming, vibrant space where people feel inspired to work, the lively energy that permeates our dedicated and mobile/drop-in workspace is captivating. Our workspaces are designed to establish a sense of community and a familiar atmosphere that strives to promote collaboration and innovation. With more than 50 private offices and a number of private phone booths, Thrive’s third location also offers a serene escape from the bustling energy of downtown spaces. It also offers a 1,400-square-foot training room designed to accommodate a variety of events and is equipped with whiteboard walls and a projector as well as three conference rooms of varying sizes and a private rooftop deck.

Thrive West Arvada has become the “go-to” spot, from lunch-and-learns to corporate training sessions for the whole team, happy hours for networking and so much more, our new venue is equipped with the versatility to meet the needs of teams large and small.

It is also conveniently located near RTD’s G Line and I–70, connecting the thriving Arvada community to downtown Denver.

Congratulations to Thrive Workplace for the recognition from the Arvada Chamber, and I extend my deepest appreciation for their contribution to our community.

HONORING RUGGIERO REALTY LLC
FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE SMALL BUSINESS AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Ruggiero Realty LLC for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Small Business Award.

Small businesses are the backbone of our economy and I am proud of the strong small business community in the North Country. Lana Ruggiero, owner of Ruggiero Realty LLC, is a Fulton County native and lifelong resident of Gloversville. Lana holds numerous real estate designations, is a notary public, and has been honored numerous times; including as a top producing agent and REALTOR of the year in Fulton County. She is very active in the community and in various business organizations, currently serving as a member of the Fulton-Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce, President of the Gloversville Women’s Alumni Club, and on the board of the Parkhurst Field Foundation. She previously served as treasurer of the Fulton County Board of REALTORS. During her sixteenth year as a REALTOR, Lana attributes her success to her desire to serve her clients as if they were part of her own family.

Lana’s deep knowledge and passion for the community has led to her continued success. On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to congratulate Lana and the Ruggiero Realty LLC for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.
May God rest his soul and bring comfort to his family and friends as we mourn his loss and celebrate Lonnie’s life here on earth.

HONORING CREEK’S EDGE ELK FARM & CRUM CREEK CSA FOR RECEIVING THE FULTON MONTGOMERY REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AGRICULTURAL BUSINESS OF THE YEAR AWARD

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Creek’s Edge Elk Farm & Crum Creek CSA for receiving the Fulton Montgomery Regional Chamber of Commerce Agricultural Business of the Year Award. Creek’s Edge Elk Farm & Crum Creek CSA is a collaboration between two local family farms that seek to offer the broader community a wide selection of locally-raised, high-quality, healthy meats. The farms, owned by husband and wife team Israel and Stacy Handy of Handy Hills Farm; and Susan Keith of Creek’s Edge, work together to market their products to customers throughout Montgomery and Fulton counties, as well as the Little Falls, Cooperstown and Cherry Valley areas. They have made significant investments in their farms and work tirelessly to ensure that their customers have high confidence in their products. Creek’s Edge Elk Farm & Crum Creek CSA takes pride being able to provide the community with meats from healthy, well-cared for animals because as they say, “not everyone is able to raise a steer or pig in their backyard.”

Agriculture is an essential component of the economy in Northern New York and Creek’s Edge Elk Farm & Crum Creek CSA exemplify the best of North Country agriculture. On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to congratulate Israel Keith, Israel Handy, and Stacy Handy for this well-deserved recognition. I look forward to their future success.

RECOGNIZING MARTIN FERRELL NEVINS

HON. GREGORY F. MURPHY OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. MURPHY of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Martin Ferrell Nevins of Elizabeth City, North Carolina on the occasion of his 100th birthday. A native of Iowa, Mr. Nevins, or “Matty” as he was known to friends, enlisted in the Coast Guard in 1941. During WWII he was a boatswain’s mate aboard ships in San Francisco and Alas-ka. By the end of WWII Matty had advanced to Aircraft Structural Mechanic. He retired from active duty in 1962 as a Chief Aviation Structural Mechanic. From 1962 to 1980 he worked as a civilian at the Coast Guard Base in Elizabeth City, and retired as Superintendent of the Aircraft Repair Division. He was then awarded the Distinguished Civilian Service Award for his 38 years of service to the Coast Guard.

After his retirement, Marty enjoyed spending more time with his wife Helen. He also volunteered with Meals on Wheels, served as an officer in his Kiwanis Club, and tutored others in reading, writing and basic math. Matty was quoted as saying: “If you take something from the community, you ought to give something back, and Elizabeth City has given us so much.”

Unfortunately, Mr. Nevins is predeceased by his wife Helen who passed away in 2007 at the age of 92; and also by their daughter Christine, who lost her courageous battle with cancer in 2013.

Madam Speaker, please join me in honoring this incredible war hero and public servant, Mr. Martin Ferrell Nevins.

RECOGNIZING MAJOR THORNTON

HON. BILL POSEY
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. POSEY. Madam Speaker, in celebration of Black History Month, I rise today in recognition of Major Milo Thornton, an exemplary constituent of mine and African American Pio- neer who has served our community for 23 years in law enforcement.

Major Thornton began his career in 1997, as a correctional deputy with Saint Lucie County’s Sheriff Office, under the leadership of the now retired Sheriff Robert “Bobby” Knowles. After a year and a half tenure, he became a patrolman with the Vero Beach Po-lice Department.

Major Thornton quickly rose through the ranks, being hired by Sheriff Roy Raymond at Indian River County Sheriff’s Office four years later, becoming sergeant in 2012, receiving assignment to uniform patrol, and in 2016 being promoted to lieutenant, where he was reassigned to criminal investigations. In this role, he was afforded the opportunity to attend advanced training courses that would prepare him for the rest of his career. He worked closely with general assignment detectives, the narcotics division and criminal analysts to get to the bottom of various criminal investigations.

In 2017, Sheriff Deryl Loar promoted Major Thornton to the rank of captain, reassigning him to the Uniforms Operations Division in which he oversaw the operations of all men and women who patrol the county, special op-portunities, including the K9 Unit, Traffic Unit, Agriculture and Marine Unit, among many oth-ers. Additionally, he worked with dispatchers in the Communications Unit and the Victims Assistance Unit.

In 2019 he was again promoted, this time to rank of major, where he was to serve in the Bureau of Administration. In this position, he managed aspects of human resources, infor-mation technology, homeland security, Judicial Services, and the School Resource Unit, just to name a few.

Major Thornton also serves our community in many capacities outside of his day job, one of which, as an adjunct instructor at Indian River State College, his alma mater where he earned his Associates and Bachelor’s de-grees. He has worked within their College of Public Safety Training for 14 years now, teaching subjects such as Introduction to Law Enforcement, Criminal Investigations, and Interviewing and Report Writing.

Major Thornton is a member of the International Associations of Chiefs of Police, a graduate of the Southern Police Institute’s Command Officers Development Course (class No. 80) at the University of Louisville, and the Florida Department of Law Enforce-ment Leadership Academy. In his free time, Major Thornton serves as volunteer board member of several charities and non-profit organizations.

On Tuesday, February 18, 2020 in celebration of Black History Month, the Indian River County Board of Commissioners will honor Major Thornton’s long-standing service to the community. The Board is dedicated to cele-brating African American Pioneers in the commu-nity such as Major Thornton, who have paved the way for future generations.

I ask my colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives to join me in recognizing Major Thornton for his dedication to protecting residents and his service to our community.

RECOGNIZING THE PUBLIC SERVICE AND RETIREMENT OF GAIL STOLL PATTON

HON. CAROL D. MILLER OF WEST VIRGINIA
Monday, January 27, 2020

Mrs. MILLER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Gail Stoll Patton, who is retiring from her position as Executive Director of Unlimited Future Inc. Mrs. Patton has been in-volved in the start-up of many small busi-nees in the Greater Huntington region. She is a visionary, a dreamer and has left quite a legacy behind for others to enact. She is a friend.

Mrs. Patton is truly a dedicated community member whose work has sought to signifi-cantly benefit the life in Southern West Vir-ginia and the Tri-State Region surrounding Huntington. She is happily married to her hus-band Paul, and they own their own business, Top Hat Ballroom, a social ballroom dance studio. She also has two daughters, Phoebe and Lydia and two grandsons.

Mrs. Patton has devoted much of her life to ensuring the success of small businesses, es pecially those operated by women and people of color. In 2018, she was instrumental in securing a $1 million grant from the Rockefeller Foundation and the Chan Zuckerberg Initiative to increase economic opportunities in the Tri-State area. This grant went toward improving the economy of 100 local communities.

Mrs. Patton has proven time and time again that she is a true asset to Huntington and the Mountain State. She helped lead the creation of The Wild Ramp, a year-round, non-profit farmers market-based in Huntington, West Vir-ginia. It has already helped support countless local farmers and producers and revitalize the economy in the Central City District. It is be-cause of people like Mrs. Patton who make me proud to represent West Virginia’s Third Congressional District. Madam Speaker, I would like to again formally recognize Mrs. Patton to this moment. I ask you and my colleagues to join me in sending her gratitude and best wishes upon her retire-ment.
Mr. PERRY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to offer my heartfelt congratulations to the Camp Hill Lions Girls Soccer Team for their victory at the PIAA Class A State Soccer Championship, and for their excellence throughout their undefeated season, untied, 2019 season.

Led by Coach Jared Latchford—just named the Pennsylvania Soccer Coaches Association “Girls Class A Coach of the Year”—the Lions dominated the season, achieving a stunning overall record of 25–0–0.

This is the Lions’ second appearance in the State Championship in the last three years. They were able to take an early lead in their contest against Shady Side Academy, and hold it throughout the game. Aggressive and selfless offense, vigilant defense, and stellar goalkeeping earned the Lions a 2–0 victory, and their first State Championship trophy.

These amazing athletes are the epitome of remarkable dedication and discipline, outstanding skill, exceptional sportsmanship, and an unyielding team spirit. Their dedication to excellence—to say the least—earned them this Championship.

On behalf of Pennsylvania’s Tenth Congressional District, I commend and congratulate the Camp Hill Lions for their incredible performance. We’re proud of them.

HONORING THE CAMP HILL LIONS GIRLS SOCCER TEAM ON THEIR UNDEFEATED CHAMPIONSHIP

HON. SCOTT PERRY OF PENNSYLVANIA

Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the work and dedication of Mr. Habeeb Quadri, an educator and Superintendent of the Muslim Community Center Academy (MCCA) in Morton Grove and Skokie, Illinois. Mr. Quadri was one of five private educators in the country to receive the National Distinguished Principal award from the National Association of Elementary School Principals.

Habeeb Quadri is recognized for his important work in growing the size and status of the MCCA and helping the community be welcoming and inclusive through education. He is also recognized for his work to make MCCA one of the first Islamic parochial schools to receive national accreditation.

Mr. Quadri is always engaged in the classroom and with students. He leads a light-hearted weekly all-school assembly to recognize students for their good deeds and encourage acts of compassion. Mr. Quadri sits with students in the lunchroom, participates in classroom activities, and adds a unique character to the MCCA.

In addition to his role as Superintendent of the MCCA, Mr. Quadri has had a career committed to education and inclusivity. He has served as an educator for both the Chicago Public Schools and Detroit Public Schools systems. Mr. Quadri has also been a committed advocate for the Muslim community, dedicating himself to challenging work in order to provide opportunities for Muslim students to learn about their identity and engage with their community.

I am proud to have the Muslim Community Center Academy in my district and to honor its important role in educating both its students and the community.

Habeeb Quadri is a caring, talented, creative educator and leader, and I deeply admire his dedicated effort to provide a home and a safe space for Muslim students. His commitment to education, inclusivity, and encouraging compassion is honorable. On behalf of the constituents of the 9th Congressional District, I thank Habeeb for his service and congratulate him on his award.

HON. VAN TAYLOR
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Mr. TAYLOR. Madam Speaker, today, I rise in recognition of National Human Trafficking Awareness Month and the dedicated volunteers who work to end modern-day slavery.

As a parent, there is nothing scarier than the thought of children being removed from their families and trafficked. Oftentimes, when we think about human trafficking, we envision terrible situations across the globe. According to the Texas Attorney General, there are currently more than 300,000 victims of human trafficking just in Texas.
As we bring attention to this far too common tragedy, I would like to thank some of the incredible organizations in Collin County who work tirelessly to help survivors.

Traffick 911, CASA of Collin County, Rescue Her, Treasured Vessels, New Friends New Life, and the Collin County Sheriff's office are all helping lead the fight against human trafficking.

I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me in thanking these organizations and recognizing the importance of spreading awareness about Human Trafficking today and every day.

We must continue the battle to keep all children safe.

HONORING MARIA PAPANASTASSIOU

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 27, 2020

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the work and dedication of Ms. Maria Papanastassiou, a librarian and Kids’ World assistant manager at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library. Ms. Papanastassiou was one of 10 librarians in the county to receive the national “I Love My Librarian Award” for 2019–2020 from the American Library Association.

Maria Papanastassiou was nominated by her colleagues who felt that through her work, families with diverse needs have found a home and a welcoming, inclusive place at the library. Ms. Papanastassiou works hard to help families connect with one another and receive crucial support.

Ms. Papanastassiou leads play groups for children with Down Syndrome, Cerebral Palsy, sensory processing disorders and language delays. She organizes creative learning opportunities such as story boards with felt characters to help with language development, crafts for fine motor development, instant tent for children who require low-sensory environment, stepping stones for gross motor skills, and activities to facilitate imaginative play. And she instituted “Early Open for Families” so that children of diverse needs can experience library visits in a quiet setting before the library opens the door to the public.

In addition to her service to children with special needs, Ms. Papanastassiou created meetups for parents, caregivers, and developmental therapists to get together in an informal setting. She also leads the Arlington Heights Memorial Library’s partnership with C.I.T.Y. of Arlington Heights Memorial Library to ensure that our shared constituents receive effective and efficient assistance. My district staff holds regular neighborhood office hours in the library.

Maria Papanastassiou is a dedicated, compassionate and creative librarian and I deeply admire her conscientious work to provide a safe place and learning environment for families with diverse needs. On behalf of the constituents of the 9th Congressional District, I thank Maria for her service and congratulate her on this award.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate of February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the times, dates, and purposes of the meetings, when scheduled and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Committee Meetings

Student Borrower Credit Improvement Act; Senate Amendment To the Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2019

Committee on Rules: Full Committee held a hearing on H.R. 3621, the “Student Borrower Credit Improvement Act” [Comprehensive CREDIT Act of 2020]; and Senate Amendment to H.R. 550, the “Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2019” [No War Against Iran Act; To repeal the Authorization for Use of Military Force Against Iraq Resolution of 2002]. The Committee granted, by record vote of 8–4, a rule providing for consideration of H.R. 3621, the “Student Borrower Credit Improvement Act” [Comprehensive CREDIT Act of 2020], and the Senate Amendment to H.R. 550, the “Merchant Mariners of World War II Congressional Gold Medal Act of 2019” [No War Against Iran Act; To repeal the Authorization for Use of Military Force Against Iraq Resolution of 2002]. The rule waives all points of order against the motion and provides that the Senate amendment and the motion shall be considered as read. The rule provides that the question shall be divided between the two House amendments, that no further division of the question is in order, and that the divided question shall be considered in the order specified by the chair. The rule provides that if only one amendment is adopted, that amendment shall be engrossed as an amendment in the nature of a substitute to the Senate amendment to H.R. 550. Testimony was heard from Chairman Waters, and Representatives Levin of Michigan, Chabot, and McHenry.
