

Abuse in China (ET AC)—indicates that “prisoners of conscience,” especially Falun Gong practitioners, were usually targeted for organ harvesting. In 2006, a tour guide told visiting European Parliament Vice President, Edward McMillan-Scott, that he’d seen the cadaver of his friend—a Falun Gong practitioner—with numerous stitches across his body. That tour guide received five years in prison for speaking with Mr. McMillan-Scott. To this day, the Chinese government denies harvesting the organs of Falun Gong practitioners, yet reports indicate that the number of Falun Gong practitioners who are victims of organ harvesting is in, at least, the thousands, if not the hundreds of thousands.

The way the Chinese treated, and continue to treat the Falun Gong runs contrary to standards laid out by the WHO; incredibly, the WHO refuses to acknowledge the reality of China’s organ harvesting campaign.

According to the Council on Foreign Relations, between 800,000 and 2,000,000 Uighurs and ethnic Kazaks have been imprisoned in Chinese “re-education camps” since April 2017. In these camps, the CCP has condoned the practice of forced abortions and sterilization procedures on imprisoned women. Many cases of sexual abuse emanate from these institutions as well. Prisoners are placed under constant surveillance and have been forced to renounce their religious and political convictions.

In 2003, the People’s Republic of China waited three months before notifying its own people, as well as the World Health Organization, about the SARS outbreak. This pattern of late notice was repeated again last year, when the CCP hid knowledge of a new coronavirus. By December 31, both the WHO and Chinese authorities were alerted by Taiwanese officials that this virus could be spread by human-to-human transmission; but Beijing didn’t tell its own citizens anything until January 20. In the interim, China began a wholesale purge of any whistleblowers; arresting Dr. Li Wenliang and eight other doctors. Earlier this month, Dr. Ai Fei, the Director of Emergency Services at Wuhan Central Hospital and a former colleague to Dr. Li, disappeared. Untold numbers of doctors, reporters, lawyers, and other civil activists have been reported missing for defying the government’s draconian restrictions on information sharing.

Silencing whistleblowers and ignoring Taiwan weren’t the only sins the Communist Party of China committed during the pandemic. On December 31, the CCP began censoring social media, and launched a campaign to find those who’d criticized the government’s response to the virus. Shortly afterwards, both the Hubei Provincial Health Commission and the National Health Commission ordered gene sequencing companies and institutions to destroy testing samples; all in the hopes of preventing the spread of new information regarding the virus. On January 5, the Wuhan Municipal Health Commissions stopped issuing daily updates about the virus for almost two weeks; on January 6, the CCP declined a U.S. CDC offer of assistance. From January 8–9, CCP health officials stated that there was no evidence of human-to-human transmission of the virus; and it also finally announced the COVID–19 outbreak in public.

On January 12, the CCP provided the WHO with the virus’ genomic information. On January 14, the WHO stated that there was no evidence to suggest that the virus could be spread by human-to-human transmission. This raises many flags—given the fact that the WHO had access to the virus’ genomic information, and it’s troubling that an international institution would so quickly provide this kind of sweeping statement without a thorough analysis of the data.

Given the fact that the threat of COVID–19 was significantly downplayed by CCP’s health authorities, nearly 5 million people were able to leave Wuhan, China before the government imposed a quarantine on January 21. On January 22, the WHO stated that, while there was evidence of human-to-human transmission, more work was needed to determine the extent of the transmission. The very next day, WHO Director, General Tedros, voted against declaring the outbreak of the SARs–CoV–2 virus as a Public Health Emergency of International Concern, justifying his vote by saying there was no evidence of human-to-human transmission outside of China.

On January 27, the Mayor of Wuhan admitted that strict regulations imposed by the Beijing government prevented him from saying much about the new virus. On January 29, the WHO praised China’s reaction to the coronavirus pandemic, while also declaring a Public Health Emergency of International Concern the very next day. President Trump wisely closed off U.S. travel to Chinese visitors on January 31.

Well over a month passed before China allowed a restricted visit to the WHO; yet that institution continued to parrot the CCP line. Numerous other infractions colored China’s response to the coronavirus—from threatening criminal charges against those using social media to spread information regarding COVID–19, to blaming the United States Army for the outbreak.

This Congress should demand that China be held accountable for its gross negligence and cover-up during the current crisis. My hope is that everything we’ve discussed today demonstrates that this is more than just a one-off botching; lies and obfuscation form an essential part of the Chinese government methodology. China has given us every reason to believe that it’ll never be a good faith partner, and so our future efforts must include taking targeted actions to mitigate its influence.

Many actions need to be taken; the first of which has already been done. I applaud President Trump and his Administration for committing to withhold all future funding to the WHO until extensive organizational change is made. The mind-boggling irresponsibility of the WHO during this pandemic just proves that it’s powerfully influenced and irreparably compromised by the machinations of the CCP. The second step is for the U.S. to strongly advocate for the inclusion of Taiwan in the WHO. Our Nation has withstood some of the greatest challenges in human history, and we’ll rise to this one. Time is of the essence, though. The CCP is presently the greatest enemy to both global health and the United States, and our policies must reflect that.

Despite this sobering reality, we dare to hope for a better future for ourselves and for the Chinese people—the first victims of their government’s oppressive regime. With full acknowledgement of the imposing task in front of us, we’ll once again demonstrate to the world why the cause of freedom and peace is in good hands.

RECOGNIZING THE FISCAL IMPACT OF THE CORONAVIRUS PANDEMIC ON THE TOWN OF DOVER, NEW JERSEY

HON. TOM MALINOWSKI

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, May 1, 2020

Mr. MALINOWSKI. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the devastating impact the coronavirus pandemic continues to have on the Town of Dover, New Jersey and many local governments throughout my district and the country. The coronavirus has decimated local revenues and increased costs and only Congress can provide a lifeline to small towns through direct and flexible funding.

Due to COVID–19 the Town of Dover has been forced to take unprecedented measures to educate the community on the virus and CDC guidelines to ensure the residents understand and practice social distancing and other protocols. These measures have forced the Town to have a higher number of expenses that were not included in the budget, therefore, the Town has to suspend a number of services and activities for the residents. Furthermore, the number of unemployed residents has increased which has created a very high demand for basic essentials like food, personal hygiene items, baby food and diapers. The Town was forced to suspend all parking enforcement, permits, and sports activities which all have negatively impacted revenues. The Town was not able to hire additional firemen during this very difficult time, which puts the existing personnel at higher risk. We desperately need financial support to help ensure that our community is able to bounce back from this health and economic pandemic.
