HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 2020
The House met at 9 a.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Cicilline).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC, September 17, 2020.

I hereby appoint the Honorable DAVID N. CICILLINE to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

NANCY PELOSI,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Assistant Parliamentarian, Kyle T. Jones, offered the following prayer:

O Father of mercies and God of all comfort, our only help in time of need; we humbly beseech Thee to behold, visit, and relieve all Thy sick servants for whom our prayers are desired.

Look upon us all with the eyes of Thy mercy; comfort us with a sense of Thy goodness; preserve us from the temptations of the enemy; and give us patience under our affliction.

In Thy good time, restore us to health and enable us to lead the residue of our lives in Thy fear and to Thy glory, and grant that finally we may dwell with Thee in life everlasting.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 4(a) of House Resolution 967, the Journal of the last day’s proceedings is approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Norman) will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. NORMAN led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

AUTHORIZING THE CLERK TO PRODUCE A DUPLICATE ENGROSSMENT OF H.R. 1812

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk be authorized to produce a duplicate engrossment of H.R. 1812.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina? There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain up to five requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

QUINTIN WASHINGTON

Mr. CUNNINGHAM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STAUBER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the life of Mark Sertich.

A hockey legend and leader in the Duluth community, Mark passed away last month at 99 years old.

Upon graduation from Duluth’s Denfeld High School in 1939, Mark served his country in World War II as a radio operator under General Patton. When he returned home from the war, Mark dedicated his time and efforts to building and maintaining hockey rinks in the Duluth community because he knew the true power of hockey was its ability to bring people together.

Mark helped build hockey rinks, coached youth teams, and served as the head of the Duluth Amateur Hockey Association—all helping to ensure his passion would pass down to the next generation.

Mark’s love for the game of hockey lasted his entire life. In fact, he holds the Guinness World Record as the oldest hockey player, and he continued to play with his former colleagues in the Duluth Fire Department for over 30 years. I had the great honor of playing with Mark during some of those games, and I am thankful to everyone at the Fire Department who made those games possible.

Mr. Speaker, I know that Mark Sertich is already missed by his family, friends, and all of the Duluth community, but I hope they are comforted in knowing that his life as a hockey legend, community leader, World War II veteran and a member of the greatest generation will be long remembered and celebrated.

CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES

(Ms. ESHOO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, it is wonderful to see the gentleman in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker and colleagues, a month ago yesterday, a siege of lightning strikes ignited the CZU Lightning Complex fire in my congressional district, and it is now the 10th most destructive wildfire in California's history.

Over the past month, the fire has destroyed nearly a thousand homes in my district and forced 77,000 of my constituents to evacuate. Thanks to the extraordinary—and I mean, extraordinary work—of thousands of first responders, the fire is now over 90 percent contained.

As we work toward recovery, much of the Bay Area and the entire western United States is still breathing the toxic smoke from these fires, which can have lasting effects and worsen chronic heart and lung diseases and have a terrible impact on children whose lungs are still developing.

Congress should immediately pass my legislation, the Smoke Planning and Research Act and the Smoke Planning and Research Act to help local governments address this public health crisis. I am also calling on Congress to pass the WIRED Act to allow States to require wireless companies to deploy infrastructure that is resilient enough to support cell phone networks during disasters.

NATIONAL POW/MIA RECOGNITION DAY

(Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to recognize tomorrow, September 18, as National POW/MIA Recognition Day.

This important day of respect, reflection, and recognition was established through a 1979 proclamation by President Jimmy Carter. To date, more than 63,000 Americans are still missing from World War II, the Korean war, the Vietnam War.

The brave Americans who rose to the occasion to protect and defend our country are the bravest among us.

Many return home. Far too many do not. We owe it to those individuals and to the families of those individuals to continue the search. The pain that these families endure due to uncertainty is unfathomable.

To ensure that the children and women are never forgotten, a flag, that I am sure all of us recognize, was designed in consultation with Evelyn Grubb, wife of an Air Force POW, and Mary Helen Hoff, wife of a Navy man deemed missing in action.

Today, that flag is displayed in the U.S. Capitol rotunda, serving as a reminder that we must continue our work on behalf of military families and continue the search for our POW/MIA servicemembers.

HEROES ACT FOR THE PEOPLE

(Mr. RUZI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RUZI. Mr. Speaker, nearly 200,000 Americans have tragically died from COVID in the United States. In Riverside County, California, 1,136 have died and 56,201 people have been infected.

We have record-breaking unemployment in our Nation, with 13.7 percent unemployment in Riverside County.

They are our family, our neighbors, our friends. My constituents are struggling, and they urgently need relief. The Senate must get their act together. Their delay in stalling is a shame, and to make matters worse, their skinny-aid excuse of a proposal is much worse than a day late and a dollar short.

In fact, it has been 125 days since the House passed the HEROES Act. They must meet the HEROES Act at least halfway to provide another round of stimulus checks, extend unemployment benefits, small business support, and money for local and State governments to pay for essential services, like for police, firefighters, and teachers.

The Senate must act. The Senate must step up and bring this legislation for a vote. Meet us halfway to slow the spread and save lives as quickly and safely as possible. We need the HEROES Act for the people.

ABRAHAM ACCORDS

(Mr. LAMALFA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAMALFA. Mr. Speaker, for our friends and allies in Israel, the Abraham Accords are the first agreement with a neighboring Arab country since 1994. Peace agreements between Israel, Bahrain, and the United Arab Emirates bring a significant shift in the balance of power in the Middle East, and strengthens the American position against Iran, which is a leading sponsor of terror in the world.

Thanks to President Trump's bold vision for American foreign policy, we have rebuilt trust with our regional partners and show a united front against the oppressive regime in Tehran.

After decades of division in the Middle East, the Abraham Accords will lay the foundation for peace and prosperity in the region for decades to come. Normalized relations across the region will accelerate growth by expanding diplomatic, economic, and financial ties.

Mr. Speaker, I am much more optimistic about, these recent historic Abraham Accords will bring a new wave of peace and prosperity in the Middle East.

HEROES ACT AND THE PEOPLE

(Mr. CICILLINE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. CICILLINE. Mr. Speaker, more than 4 months ago, the House passed the HEROES Act, legislation that protects our HEROES on the front line of this pandemic, our police officers, firefighters, healthcare workers, sanitation workers, it provides stimulus payments for up to $6,000 per family, extends unemployment benefits of $600 per week through January, and gets hazard pay and much-needed resources to frontline workers.

This bill has sat on my MITCH MCCONNELL's desk since then.

In the meantime, tens of millions of Americans are out of work with unemployment levels four times higher than they were before this pandemic. More than a million layoffs and State and local budget cuts that are crippling services for those who need them the most. A total of 6.3 million Americans have been infected and nearly 200,000 have died.

Mr. Speaker, instead of voting on the HEROES Act, the Senate Republicans put forward their own bill that didn't come close to addressing the problems we face: The economic catastrophe and the public health crisis.

The American people deserve better. They need help. They deserve a Senate and Republicans in the Senate that work for them, and a President who tells them the truth.

Rest assured, Democrats are going to continue fighting for all those that our Republican colleagues in the Senate and that President Trump have left behind.

WE THE PEOPLE

(Mr. NORMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NORMAN. Mr. Speaker, today is a special day in which we pause to cherish the bedrock of our union that is the Constitution.

The great experiment that is this Nation rests upon the spirit that Madison enshrined in this document. It is the unwavering commitment to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, the American ethos that sustains us to this day.

The essence of our democratic republic lies in the words, “We the People.” This creed is the glue that holds our United States together, and it ought to be revered. When held close, our Nation will continue to prosper through generations to come. As Henry Clay once said, “The Constitution of the United States was made not merely for the generation that then existed, but for posterity—unlimited, undefined, endless, perpetual posterity.”

Unique to the world is our tireless belief in a better tomorrow. If we are to sustain this hope, we must maintain our enduring commitment to the ideals of the Constitution.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage every American, young and old alike, to study the framework and celebrate the greatest Nation that this world has ever known. Let this day serve as a reminder of everything that was and everything that can be so long as we remain united under the articles of the Constitution.

__0915__ CONDEMNING ANTI-ASIAN SENTIMENT
(Ms. TLAIB asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. TLAIB. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 908, condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID.

I cast my “yes” vote today in memory of Vincent Chin. The anti-Asian racism and hate that led to his murder in Highland Park, Michigan, in my district, is alive today, and it is what led to the June 9 horrific attack in 1982.

I am proud to stand with my sister in service, the first Asian-American woman in the Michigan Legislature, State Senator Stephanie Chang, to say that the disgusting wave of hate against our Asian-American friends and neighbors we are witnessing in our country will not stand.

In this moment, I think of one of our Nation’s greatest heroes, Detroit's Grace Lee Boggs. While she would be proud of our vote here today, she would remind us that our work is not done.

We must commit, as she did for over 100 years, to the revolutionary struggle to liberate our world from hate, embrace all humankind with love, and grow our own souls in the process.

I thank so much Congresswoman Meng for her leadership, and I urge my colleagues to please vote “yes.”

SUPPORTING HYPERBARIC OXYGEN THERAPY FOR VETERANS
(Mr. MURPHY of North Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MURPHY of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring importance to a treatment issue that faces our Nation’s veterans suffering from traumatic brain injury, TBI, and post-traumatic stress disorder, PTSD.

In line with the Department of Veterans Affairs’ National Traumatic Brain Injury Prevention Month, I am introducing the Veterans National Traumatic Brain Injury Treatment Act today. This bill will help many of our veterans who are suffering from TBI and PTSD by creating a pilot program, increasing their access to hyperbaric oxygen therapy, HBOT. There are presently many treatments for PTSD and TBI, but they do not work for everyone.

As a physician for over 30 years, I have long been a strong advocate for HBOT, since I was in the North Carolina legislature. This type of treatment has restored the lives of so many of our veterans when all else failed. But the Department of Veterans Affairs has refused to use this treatment despite many requests by Members of Congress.

This is a bipartisan issue. It is time for Congress to authorize this treatment on some of our veterans’ suffering from TBI and PTSD by creating a pilot program, increasing their access to hyperbaric oxygen therapy, HBOT. There are presently many treatments for PTSD and TBI, but they do not work for everyone.

chair and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. JORDAN) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Res. 908.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 908, a resolution condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID–19.

Among other things, the resolution, introduced by my colleague from New York, Representative GRACE MENG, calls upon all public officials to condemn and denounce anti-Asian sentiment, calls on Federal law enforcement officials to investigate and document all credible reports of hate crimes against Asian Americans, to collect data on the rise of hate crimes incidents due to COVID–19, and to hold perpetrators accountable.

The COVID–19 pandemic is an ongoing crisis for our country. Over 6.6 million Americans have been infected, and almost 200,000 have died from COVID–19. It has upended the lives of almost every American in some way, and it will continue to do so for some time as we brace for a potential second wave of infections.

On top of the bearing the burdens that the pandemic has imposed on all Americans, Asian Americans have been forced to carry the added anxiety of confronting racial prejudice, including racially motivated harassment and violence stemming from the stigma that has unfairly associated them with COVID–19 because of the virus' origin in China, a stigma that has been reinforced by rhetoric suggesting such a link.

According to the Asian Pacific Policy and Planning Council, since March 19, there have been nearly 3,800 cases of anti-Asian discrimination related to COVID–19.

According to the resolution, at the pandemic’s earliest stage in this country, between February 9 and March 7, there were over 400 such incidents. These included the stabbing of an Asian-American father and two young children, ages 2 and 6, in Texas.

Public health entities, including the World Health Organization and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, have recognized that labeling a virus by geographic or ethnic terms unfairly stigmatizes certain communities and ultimately harms public health. For this reason, Secretary of Health and Human Services Alex Azar rightly condemned the use of the phrase “Chinese virus” in testimony before the Ways and Means Committee, stating that: “Ethnicity it is not what causes the virus. It is not the racial group.

It is incumbent on all public figures, including elected officials like us, to publicly condemn bigotry and the stigmatization of racial or ethnic groups unfairly targeted for blame. We must speak out clearly against such attitudes whenever they occur, but particularly in the face of public panic or fear during a national emergency, when society can be especially vulnerable to racist appeals and prejudices.

While many public figures have admirably sought to end COVID–19-related animosity, some, unfortunately, appear not to share the same sense of moral duty. Rather than using their bully pulpits to confront prejudice and racial divisiveness, they have repeatedly to use derogatory and prejudicial phrases and remarks, reinforcing the exclusion and stigmatization of Asian Americans in the face of a national crisis, a tactic that sadly has a long and shameful history.

Left unchecked, this type of rhetoric has, in the past, led to grave injustices like the Chinese Exclusion Act and the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II.

In the year 2020, condemning bigotry and racial scapegoating should not be hard for any Member of this House to do. It is long past time to leave the days of yellow peril hysteria and unjustified blame of the other behind.

The House can take an important step in that direction by passing H. Res. 908 unanimously. I urge strong support for this resolution, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, we oppose this legislation. Everyone knows racism is wrong, but that is not what this legislation is about.

I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. COLLINS).

Mr. COLLINS of Georgia. Madam Speaker, let’s be clear. There is no denying where the virus originated. It was China.

There is no denying the Chinese Communist Party has done everything in its power to cover up their role in the origin of this virus, misleading the global community and forcing their friends in the World Health Organization to do their bidding.

That being said, how is that Democratic Party has done nothing to improve the American people’s lives. In fact, we have seen a complete lack of leadership from the Democratic Party for almost two years. It seems like the route the Democrats would like us to take is to pretend that the Communists in China abjectly played no role in the global pandemic and blame it all on the President.

To be clear, Madam Speaker, all forms of racism and discrimination are abhorrent, including anti-Asian sentiment. If that is what we were talking about today, that would be even better. But this is not what we are talking about today.

The underlying tone, even from the chairman, is discussing how we deal with this in words. I have stood on this floor several times over the past year-and-a-half in denouncing all forms of hatred on both sides.

But let’s be honest. That is not what this bill is really about. This bill is exactly what this entire Congress has been about the entire time: Democrats ignoring the real issues plaguing Americans, just for the opportunity to criticize President Trump.

Despite their overwhelming failure to undermine the Trump administration through the Russian collusion hoax and the sham impeachment, the Democratic playbook has not changed at all.

Now, a little over 6 weeks from the election, Democrats are leaning on the global crisis to continue their ad hominem attacks against President Trump at the expense of American families and businesses desperate for relief.

Democrats have taken no issue in ignoring the coronavirus’ effects on the ground in favor of criticizing the President of the United States for anything other than their collective offense at President Trump calling the virus the “China virus” or the “Wuhan virus.”

Democrats would love for the American people to forget the work that the administration has done to tackle the virus, including shutdown travel for China in the early days of the virus. Instead of applauding the move, Democrats and Joe Biden accused the Trump administration and President Trump of fanning the flames of hate, fear, and xenophobia, when his actual actions kept others from getting it and kept it from spreading because it was coming from China.

For the last 3 years, Democrats have repeatedly claimed that Russia must have something on Donald Trump. The real question is, frankly, during a presidential election, what does the Chinese Communist Party have on Joe Biden?

Democrats would also love for the American people to forget that many viruses are named for where they originated. Take the Spanish flu, the Middle East Respiratory Syndrome, Ebola, and German measles. Because the Democrats seem to be so bankrupt on this floor, and no criticism is enough, the Democrats would love for the American people to forget that many viruses are named for where they originated. Take the Spanish flu, the Middle East Respiratory Syndrome, Ebola, and German measles. Because the Democrats seem to be so bankrupt on this floor, and no criticism is enough, the Democrats seem to be so bankrupt on this floor, and no criticism is enough.

That is all we are doing, wasting the people’s time with this right here. If you want to work on politics, go outside the Capitol, not here on the floor of this House.
President Trump and Republicans have made it clear where the blame of this virus begins. It begins and ends with the Chinese Communist Party and their refusal to acknowledge the problem they had and let it go into all the world. Refusing to acknowledge that fact will failing to address it in the House, in favor of political messaging bills like this, is nothing more than political attempts to take down this President.

Mr. CICILLINE. Madam Speaker, last March, as the COVID–19 pandemic first began to affect our day-to-day lives, the FBI warned that we could soon see a rise in hate crimes committed against Asian Americans.

In this moment, President Trump could have tried to bring Americans together. That is not the path he chose. Instead, he has poured gasoline on the fire, using terms like “kung flu” and “China virus.” The White House has stoked racial tensions and fed into our country’s worst xenophobic impulses.

President Trump, in June of this year, our country saw more than 2,100 reported hate crimes targeting Asian Americans. More than 3 in 10 Asian Americans now say that they have been the subject of slurs or racist jokes since the start of this pandemic.

These slurs and jokes aren’t just words. They are actions designed to make Asian Americans feel less than equal, and they have no place in this country. But that is the reality of life in Donald Trump’s America.

This administration has tried to turn back the clock on racial equality. This administration has demeaned, belittled, and ostracized nearly every minority community.

Today, the House is saying no more. We will not stand by as this administration attacks innocent men, women, and children of Asian descent.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this excellent resolution.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Posey).

Mr. POSEY. Madam Speaker, I was hopeful that this resolution would lead us to common ground. None of us here believes in discriminating against our fellow American neighbors.

On March 23, President Trump said the Asian-American community ought to be “totally protected” in light of the xenophobic attacks during the coronavirus pandemic. “It is very important that we totally protect our Asian-American community in the United States and all around the world,” President Trump tweeted.

“They’re amazing people, and the spreading of the virus is not their fault in any way, shape, or form,” he said. “They’re working closely with us to get rid of it,” the President added. “We will prevail together.”

I have restauranteurs in my district who suffered from bullies because of their heritage, so I asked my staff to prepare a resolution to echo the President’s sentiments. My staff reported to me that such a resolution already existed, H. Res. 908, ostensibly to protect Asian Americans.

On April 7, I signed onto what I considered to be a good faith effort to protect Asian Americans. I am more than saddened to see that this resolution and today’s debate is being used for nothing more than to malign and vilify the President of the United States, just as the President and congressional Republicans have been called domestic enemies in the last couple of days. I would hope for more, but, sadly, this body has chosen to take the low road.

This debate has devolved into finger-pointing, name-calling, and scoring political points. Rather than reaching a high watermark for bringing us all together, it has further ripped apart the fabric of America. My staff is deeply disappointed and will not be a party to today’s partisan exercise that is more about scoring political points than re-building America.

We should be working together to help all Americans recover, to investigate COVID–19, which has resulted in hundreds of thousands of deaths around the world, trillions lost and trillions more spent responding to COVID. Lives and dreams have been shattered.

We have a duty to all Americans to find a cure, to get to the bottom of just how this pandemic started, and to do what we can to prevent it from happening ever again in the future.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. KRISHNAMOORTHI).

Mr. KRISHNAMOORTHI. Madam Speaker, today I rise in support of H. Res. 908, condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment related to COVID-19.

Since this pandemic began, there have been thousands and thousands of reports of discrimination and xenophobic attacks against Asian Americans in the United States, including in my district, which has one of the highest concentrations of Asian Americans in the country.

As an Asian American myself, this is deeply personal and offensive to me. When people, including those in the White House, refer to COVID–19 as the “Wuhan virus,” the “China virus,” they encourage bigotry or discrimination against Asian Americans.

It is important to not perpetuate that anti-Asian sentiment or anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID–19 is un-American, which is why I am proud to cosponsor this resolution and encourage my colleagues to vote “yes.”

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, again, we all know racism is wrong, but that is not what this is about. This is just another effort of the Democrats to attack the President.

The third whereas in the resolution, the gentlemen just spoke about this. The third whereas in the resolution says you perpetuate anti-Asian bias if you use the terms “Chinese virus” or “Wuhan virus.” Well, someone should have told the media this.

CNN lied about the Wuhan virus. MSNBC called it the Chinese coronavirus. ABC and CBS called it China’s coronavirus. CNBC called it the China coronavirus. So someone should have told the media that you couldn’t use these terms.

Frankly, someone should have told the Democrats a few months ago that a few months later the mob, the cancel culture, would say this is a term you can’t use, because the Democrats used it on their committee notice.

In the January 29, 2020, committee notice, House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Asia, the Pacific, and Nonproliferation, Mr. NADLER, the chairman, stated that the subject line of the hearing for the following week: “Subject: The Wuhan coronavirus.”

Someone should have told the Democrats you can’t use that term, but in the new woke world you can’t state the truth.

And as Mr. COLLINS pointed out:

Did the virus start in China? Yes.

Did the virus start in Wuhan, China? Yes.

Did China lie to the United States about the severity and the origins of this virus? Yes.

Did China lie to the world about the virus? Yes. They did.

Did the World Health Organization lie to the United States? Yes, they did.

Did China lie to the world about the virus? Yes. They did.

And today’s debate is being used for nothing more than to malign and vilify the President of the United States, just as the President and congressional Republicans have been called domestic enemies in the last couple of days. I would hope for more, but, sadly, this body has chosen to take the low road.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. KRISHNAMOORTHI).

Mr. KRISHNAMOORTHI. Madam Speaker, today I rise in support of H. Res. 908, condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment related to COVID-19.

Since this pandemic began, there have been thousands and thousands of reports of discrimination and xenophobic attacks against Asian Americans in the United States, including in my district, which has one of the highest concentrations of Asian Americans in the country.

As an Asian American myself, this is deeply personal and offensive to me. When people, including those in the White House, refer to COVID–19 as the “ Wuhan virus,” the “China virus,” they encourage bigotry or discrimination against Asian Americans.

It is important to not perpetuate that anti-Asian sentiment or anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID–19 is un-American, which is why I am proud to cosponsor this resolution and encourage my colleagues to vote “yes.”

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, again, we all know racism is wrong, but that is not what this is about. This is just another effort of the Democrats to attack the President.
the way they want you to say it, and this is dangerous. You can’t say China virus today, and tomorrow who knows what it will be.

But, like I said, a few months ago, even the Democrat committee chairman at the very term that is in the resolution, they’re saying you can’t use today because somehow it is anti-

Asian bias. I think it has more to do with the fact that we are 7 weeks before an election, and this is one more way to go after the President.

But if you recall, this is dangerous when you start saying certain things can’t be said. If you don’t say it the way we, the politically correct, the cancel culture mob wants you to say it, you have to be quiet.

Silence is the biggest threat to the First Amendment, and that is what we are seeing. And they want to just say—this is broader, this is bigger.

I would say look at the sports world. Look at the sports world. Drew Brees says this week he stood for the national anthem; he gets attacked.

Mike Gundy, football coach at Oklahoma State, goes fishing with his kids and wears what the mob says is the wrong T-shirt; he almost loses his job. He was asked what had happened. He said they had a conservative news outlet on the T-shirt. Oh, my goodness.

You can’t coach football if you wear the wrong T-shirt with your kids, according to the mob. You can’t say a term today that just a few months ago they used on their committee notice. You can’t say it today because that is what the mob says.

James Harden says “Back the Blue” on a mask. He has to answer for that.

Last week, two high school football players—on 9/11—ran on the field with a Back the Blue flag and a flag supporting our firefighters, and they get suspended because today the mob says that is not okay.

We need to understand the cancel culture restricting, limiting, telling you what you can and can’t say is so darn dangerous, and it will never stop, because the mob never—it never quits.

You don’t believe me? Two weeks ago—2 weeks ago—the mayor of this city, our Nation’s Capital, has a proposal to remove and relocate the Washington Monument and the Jefferson Memorial. This is how ridiculous—this is how ridiculous it gets.

And I just want to finish with this. Maybe the most ridiculous thing is the last clause, the last page of their resolution. The last page says: “recommits United States leadership in building more inclusive, diverse, and tolerant societies . . . to combat misinformation.”

Now, think about this for a second. If you state the truth, the virus started in China, you are a bad guy. You are not allowed to state the truth. This resolution says that is misinformation.

The very misinformation that happened was China misinforming the world, lying to the world. You are not allowed to talk about that. You have to do what—this resolution says you have to do it the politically correct, the woke way, the cancel culture way, and that is why this is so darn wrong, so darn wrong.

I hope we don’t continue to travel down the road where the left wants to take the country, so dangerous for the First Amendment and free speech rights.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Kim).

Mr. KIM. Madam Speaker, I rise today in strong support of this resolution and in strong opposition to the rise of hate crimes and acts of racism toward Americans of Asian descent.

We all know that these are divisive times. They are tough times. Hateful language, petty name-calling, and acts of violence are not the way for us to move through times. This resolution allows Congress to come together to speak with one voice, that hate targeted at the Asian-American community has no place in this country and must be condemned.

I am especially proud to speak here today with the very term that is in your honor, the gentleman from New Jersey, a member of the Freedom Caucus.

Mr. BIGGS. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and also for his tremendous leadership. And also, I acknowledge my colleagues to vote “no.”

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. Lee).

Ms. LEE of California. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and also for his tremendous leadership. And also, I represent this Asian American and Pacific Islander community for spearheading this important resolution.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 908 to condemn all forms of anti-Asian hate speech related to COVID-19.

Now, this pandemic is leading to an alarming rate of hateful speech directed at people of Asian and Pacific Islander descent in the United States. And the truth is, as an African American, I know that hate and racism is and I know the violence that results.

And the facts are: Since March, there have been over 2,500 reported cases of anti-Asian discrimination related to COVID-19, including over 1,100 cases in my home State of California.

At the same time, by no accident or coincidence, the White House coincidentally, the White House coincidentally, the White House coincidentally is recognizing the virus as originated in China.

When I heard the chairman of the Judiciary Committee just refer to calling the virus that originated in China the Wuhan virus, I realized that this is dangerous for the First Amendment and free speech rights.

If this would have been a condemnation of the Chinese Communist Party, I know what hate and racism is and I know the violence that results.

But when the White House once refers to this as the “Wuhan virus” or the “China virus,“ and other officials, including folks from this party over here, it is not because they have an existing racist sentiment, but it is rather to describe its origination as has been done historically.

This resolution today is even more than a measure to appease the woke and tolerant and politically correct leftists. It is an attack on President Trump and all who support President Trump.

It is a crying shame that you can’t take the actual issue that you want to address and address it. You have to expand it that way for political purposes.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no.”

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from California (Ms. Lee).

Ms. LEE of California. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and also for his tremendous leadership. And also, I represent this Asian American and Pacific Islander community for spearheading this important resolution.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 908 to condemn all forms of anti-Asian hate speech related to COVID-19.
"China virus" and "kung flu" trying to shift attention and blame away from this administration’s inadequate response and poor leadership. They would rather scapegoat Asian Americans, exacerbating anti-Asian hate and violence.

Congress needs to send a clear message that we will stand with our AAPI community, especially during these challenging times, to fight bigotry and racism within our country.

Hate speech does lead to violence and discrimination. It is the truth.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. TAKANO).

Mr. TAKANO. Madam Speaker, I rise today to condemn the xenophobic anti-Asian rhetoric that President Trump and his allies have been using to distract us from their woefully inadequate response to COVID-19.

By referring to COVID–19 almost exclusively as the "China virus," the President is fueling racism and inspiring violent attacks on Asian Americans and Asian immigrants. Rather than condemning this divisive language and unifying our Nation in response to the pandemic, my Republican colleagues are blindly following suit.

This partisanship is so pervasive that Congresswoman Meng’s simple resolution condemning this anti-Asian sentiment could not be passed unanimously out of this Chamber. This is a disgrace.

A disgrace.

The COVID–19 pandemic has become a defining moment in our Nation’s history. Instead of unifying to confront this disease head-on, Republicans have instead weaponized this to revive the racist blemishes of the past.

Madam Speaker, I urge passage of this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. KELLY of Illinois). Members are reminded to refrain from engaging in personalities toward the President.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Was it a disgrace a few months ago when the Democratic chairman called it the " Wuhan coronavirus," or is it just a disgrace now when we are less than 7 weeks before an election and you want to continue to attack the President? Which is it? Because it can’t be a disgrace just now when you used the exact same language that the Democrat chairman, the Democrat staff used for their subcommittee hearing.

So you can get all fired up and start yelling at us, but the truth is you guys used it, the same terms you are now saying, oh, are so bad in this resolution.

The hypocrisy from the left and the mob of what you can say today and can’t say tomorrow is ridiculous, and the American people see it. They see it. They know this is complete BS. They know it is completely about the election, which is 7 weeks away.

Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARRINGTON).

Mr. ARRINGTON. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman of Ohio for yielding.

I am listening to my colleagues and the recent speaker. Where is that passion, where is that indignation over the violent mobs that are terrorizing our communities that are assaulting our law enforcement officers?

People are being killed in cold blood in once great American cities, and not a word is said in this great Chamber about what is happening to our fellow Americans whose rights are being trampled. Instead, they want to hyperventilate over this pettiness.

We know what it is about, and the American people know what it is about, Madam Speaker. They know what we need to be scoring political points. They have seen it over and over, day in and day out for the last 2 years under the Pelosi leadership of this great representative body; obstruction, more political theater, and just dividing.

This is dividing our country. This is opportunism like I have never seen before. You can’t refer to a virus by its place of origin? We have been doing that for time immemorial. And now we can’t call it the "Chinese virus," somehow this is offensive.

This is about dividing our country. This is about stoking the flames of racial division. It is un-American. It is unacceptable for our leaders to do what is happening today. I trust the American people; they are watching this.

This is the stark contrast in leadership that we have been talking about. Do you want more of this, America?

Do you want more resolutions to condemn calling the virus the " Wuhan virus" today, when prominent people in our country, whether they are Republicans or Democrats, or anybody in the media, encourage Americans to call COVID the "China virus," language that seems to blame this pandemic on a country and a people, they are not only doing something wrong, something that has already encouraged violence and discrimination against Asian Americans, they are playing right into the hands of a Chinese Communist Party that wants Americans to feel unwanted and unsafe in America.

Now, if you want to blame this on the Chinese Government, sign me up. If you want to blame them or anybody else for lying to the American people, sign me up. But if you are going to give this virus a nationality, you are doing something wrong. And if you don’t see the difference between those two things, then you don’t understand what is going on in this country in this moment.

Our country confronts not only the novel coronavirus but also a virus of racism and hate. We cannot allow the one to feed off the other.

On behalf of all Americans, we have a moral responsibility to cut out and condemn this wave of racist hate speech, harassment, discrimination, and physical violence driven by fear, disinformation, and even purposeful exploitation.

I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this resolution without reservation and speak out against racism against any group in any form at any time.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MALINOWSKI).

Mr. MALINOWSKI. Madam Speaker, after 9/11, President Bush never once called terrorism a Muslim virus or an Arab virus or a Saudi virus. He made clear that the enemy was not the place where the terrorists came from or the people who lived there, but "terrorism itself. He did that because it was right and because he knew that equating the evil of al-Qaeda with an entire faith or nationality or country was exactly what our enemies wanted. What is going on in our country today, when prominent people in our country, whether they are Republicans or Democrats, or anybody in the media, encourage Americans to call COVID the "China virus," language that seems to blame this pandemic on a country and a people, they are not only doing something wrong, something that has already encouraged violence and discrimination against Asian Americans, they are playing right into the hands of a Chinese Communist Party that wants Americans to feel unwanted and unsafe in America.

Now, if you want to blame this on the Chinese Government, sign me up. If you want to blame them or anybody else for lying to the American people, sign me up. But if you are going to give this virus a nationality, you are doing something wrong. And if you don’t see the difference between those two things, then you don’t understand what is going on in this country in this moment. This moment of danger that we face.

Madam Speaker, I am proud to support this resolution condemning anti-Asian rhetoric in any form. I ask my colleagues to vote for it, and I urge them to live up to it.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker. I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. CISNEROS).

Mr. CISNEROS. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment related to COVID-19.

The AAPI community in the 39th District has been an integral part of fighting the coronavirus. They are first responders, essential workers, educators, and small business owners.

Yet there have been too many stories in my district and across the country of racism, discrimination, and physical and verbal assault towards Asian Americans.

I had the opportunity to hear some of these stories during one of my town halls, including the emotional encounter of a constituent from Brea, California. This young woman was unable to pick up her mother's prescription drugs due to racist aggressive remarks she received that were directed towards her. She left, running away in tears.

This resolution will assure that cases like hers are justly investigated and receive the attention they deserve.

I thank my colleague Representative MENG for her leadership, and I urge my colleagues to vote in support of this resolution to ensure protection, safety, and respect for our AAPI community.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker. I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding the time.

Madam Speaker, on this Constitution Day we will do well to heed the words of Dr. King when he reminded us that this House to denounce it.

It is incumbent on this House to make sure that the American people know that we do not stand with anyone, whether in the White House or anywhere else, who stokes deliberately anti-Asian sentiment.

We cannot abide, we must not abide, the use of public resources to stoke anti-Asian sentiment. We must not abide, the use of public resources to stoke anti-Asian sentiment.

Mr. JORDAN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. NADLER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio for a question.

Mr. JORDAN. Was The Washington Post on January 26, 2020, to use your words, stoking anti-Asian bias when they used the word “Chinese coronavirus”? Was The New York Times on February 20, 2020, stoking anti-Asian bias when they used the term “Wuhan coronavirus” in their headline?

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, re-claiming my time.

They learned their lesson. They stopped using such terms. They learned their lesson.

They understood what this House should understand. They understood that the use of such terms stokes racism, stokes anti-Asian sentiment, and they stopped using the term because they learned the lesson.

All we are saying is the White House should learn the same lesson, and they should stop using the term. For that matter, Members of this House should stop using the term because it deliberately stokes anti-Asian sentiment.

The Washington Post learned that lesson and ceased using such terms. The Washington Post learned the lesson.

We are not saying that everyone knew this initially, but it is clear. It is now.

The Washington Post learned its lesson and stopped using such terms. The New York Times learned its lesson when they realized that it was stoking anti-Asian sentiment and stopped using this term.

We are saying that the White House and Members of this House and anyone else should learn the same lesson and not stoke anti-Asian sentiment by continuing the use of terms that we know stoke anti-Asian sentiment.

Madam Speaker. I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BERA).

Mr. BERA. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 908, led by my colleague Representative GRACE MENG.

I do feel compelled, though, to respond to my colleague on the other side of the aisle, Mr. JORDAN. I was that subcommittee chairman. We held the first coronavirus hearing in this new pandemic addressing the issues.

Yes, we did identify it by its geographic origin as the Wuhan coronavirus. We also learned that as soon as we started to see instances of racism, violence against Asian Americans, that was a mistake. We stopped using that term. That is what we do as adults.

We are not here to instigate racism. We are not here to instigate violence against any ethnic group.

We are here to do is actually defeat this pandemic.

In that hearing, what we talked about is it is fine doing a travel ban from a country. That would buy us some time. But we also rightfully identified that that travel ban wasn’t going to prevent the virus from coming to the United States. It wasn’t going to protect us. We had to get ready.

We squandered that time.
Look, this is a virus. It doesn’t understand a country of origin. It doesn’t know whether you are a Democrat or Republican, what religion or God you worship. It is a virus.

It is shameful for Members of this body or anyone to continue to use language that potentially incites violence against any of our fellow citizens. That is what this resolution is about. Let’s actually learn from that.

I don’t call it by its geographic origin. I call it by its name. At that time, it didn’t have a name. It is called SARS-CoV2 or COVID-19.

We ought to call it by its name. We should not willfully or intentionally use language that potentially incites violence against any of our fellow citizens, that incites racism. We should be better than that.

Let’s show the American public that we can actually learn, and let’s lead by example. That is what we should be doing as Representatives.

Again, we called it by its area of origin because the virus didn’t have a name. We have learned from that. We don’t do that. And we shouldn’t intentionally use terminology that would incite violence against any religious group, racial group, or any of our fellow citizens.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Madam Speaker, what we should also do is denounce violence, all the violence, we see in our urban areas.

The Democrats were given that opportunity just 2 months ago when the Attorney General of the United States asked them: Why won’t you speak out against the violence in our cities? Why won’t you speak out against what the mob is doing in our cities?

Guess what we got from them? We got silence.

Let’s speak out against the violence we have seen for over 100 days in Portland and so many of our other great cities.

Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. McCARTHY), the minority leader, the leader of our great Conference.

Mr. McCARTHY. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The gentleman makes a very good point. Are we here condemning two sheriff’s from California getting shot while sitting in their car? No.

Are we here talking about the innocent lives that are being killed night after night in Chicago or other cities? No.

Are we here, in the last hours before this body rushes to the airport to leave? To debate the help that we need for COVID-19, the unemployed, or the small businesses that are going to continue to lay off somebody or are wondering whether they can survive the next day, or for the schools wondering if they will have the resources they need, or the States? No, we are not doing that.

We are not doing any of that. But I will make this one promise to you: If the majority was on the other side, we would have already done that.

Madam Speaker, Democrats are neglecting the real issues.

Month after month, they have refused to end our dependence on China or even acknowledge that the Chinese Communist Party is a national security threat.

I have read it in the paper. We have heard it out in the public domain that the Communist Chinese Party wants to influence the election even. They have picked a side.

Now, in January, Democrats were too busy impeaching the President to pay attention to what was happening in Wuhan.

There is a common denominator here. Let’s just go through the calendar.

In January, they were too busy with impeachment.

In February, they backed out of what should have been a bipartisan China Task Force. They actually said yes. The Washington Post actually had the article written. The members were already chosen. But the hour came, and the Democrats thought that was wrong.

Then, let’s move to May. Speaker PELOSI said focusing on China is a diversion. I look forward to hearing what the Speaker says about this resolution. Is that a diversion from solving the COVID relief we need?

In June, Chairman SMITH of the Committee on Armed Services on this very floor, just over at that mic, said this about China: It is not actually their job to tell the American people about the coronavirus.

Serious? Those were the words that were spoken by the chair of the Armed Services Committee.

In July, Chairman SCHIFF—remember who he is and what role he has. He is the chairman of the Committee on Intelligence. He said it was an escalation for the Trump administration to close down the Chinese consulate that was, according to the Secretary of State, the hub of spying and IP theft in Houston.

He was the only one who thought that.

And now, today, while Democrats deny the real threat of Communist China, they are delaying a coronavirus relief package because they despise the President.

I heard a Member here, Madam Speaker, who said we are adults, so we think differently. You know what adults do? They give adult supervision, and they focus on things that are important.

We only have a few hours left before people leave. I know Madam Speaker told us before August that we will not leave unless we get a COVID relief package.

I am not sure if I should believe her then or believe her now, because I know people are going to leave in a few short hours.

I know, as the majority, you have the power to schedule what comes to the floor. That was one of my jobs. So this is what they picked? This is what we are doing? Seriously?

My question to the Democrats is simple: Is debating a nonbinding resolution the best use of our hour? Apparently, you have made that decision. You though long and hard before we came to this moment in time. You spent hours on this.

I will promise you this: There is no kitchen in America that thinks this is the priority.

What makes today’s resolution so harmful is it does not stop discrimination. It simply spreads disinformation.

At the heart of this resolution is an absurd notion that referring to the virus as the Wuhan virus or the China virus is the same as contributing to violence against Asian Americans, which I will tell you nobody on this side of the aisle supports.

In fact, we have heard time and again—I just heard from my colleague on the other side. The Democrat-led Foreign Affairs Committee held a hearing titled “The Wuhan Coronavirus” in February.

Should we put an ethics complaint? Are Democrats saying that their own committee members are encouraging discrimination against Asian Americans?

Likewise, CNN, The Washington Post, NPR, The Guardian, all other major media outlets were referring to COVID-19 as the Wuhan virus long before most Americans knew what it was.

Now, let’s put this in contrast, because you are wasting our time; you are spending hours on it. You think it is the most important thing, when someone is sitting there in the unemployment line or a small business is questioning whether they can stay open.

So let’s take this moment in time on this floor talking about it.

Republicans condemn crime and discrimination in all forms. Listen to what the President said in March: “spreading of the virus is not their fault in any way, shape, or form.” But I guess you can’t take his word for it, so let’s waste another hour on this floor on a nonbinding resolution.

Madam Speaker, I wonder—because every Member who comes here works hard to get here, I wonder the number of times Members in a debate said they would take their time to have nonbinding resolutions on the floor. I wonder the number of promises they made.

Because I listened, Madam Speaker, to the Speaker up there when I handed the gavel on what they said they would focus on.

I have spent a lot of time trying to wonder what one problem this Democrat majority has solved. I have actually asked Democrats: Name me one that you solved.

I don’t read a tweet from probably the most prominent of the new party’s chief of staff. They had the same question. They couldn’t answer it.
The President’s words express what every good and decent American has known from the beginning: Asian Americans are not responsible for COVID-19.

Let us be very clear. Let me state that again. The President’s words express what every good and decent American has known from the beginning: Asian Americans are not responsible for COVID-19.

Now, let me tell you everything else every American understands. We have an economy. We have people unemployed. We have small businesses questioning whether they can stay open. We have schools that are wondering could they have the money to be able to open again.

But you chose an hour of this time on the last day before we leave to debate a nonbinding resolution. Congratulations. Well done. You fought hard for a majority, and this is what you decided.

Unfortunately, while Democrats wasted the House’s time on this ridiculous resolution, the opportunity costs of the inaction are rising. And do you know who is paying the price? The American people.

For months, every reasonable American understands that America must end our dependency on China; we must move our supply chain out of China for critical needs like medicine.

Do you realize we don’t make penicillin? We don’t make vitamins here, personal protective equipment that we strive so hard to get, and technology.

The American people want safety and security. They want to return to the American way of life.

I am not sure what this nonbinding resolution does, but I know we have done a lot of them since you have taken the majority.

Unfortunately, the Chinese Communist Party is trying to hack our vaccine research at this very moment. That is why I introduced legislation earlier this summer to sanction these cybercriminals. My bill had real consequences.

And you know what is so unique? I introduced the bill because there were reports out there that Russia, China, Iran wanted to hack our universities, our businesses to get that vaccine, not to work with us, but to steal it.

Do you know what happens when they do that? It slows the process down.

Do you know what happens when it slows the process down? It takes longer before people have a safe vaccine that would cure this virus.

It is very interesting. That moment on the floor, the day after I introduced it, we actually—the FBI found two Chinese who were doing this, coming into our country, slowing the process down.

We had the opportunity to have a motion to recommit on this floor. Nobody in America thought that would be partisan. It would only sanction those people who were caught, about right and wrong, about the safety, the security, a safe and effective vaccine being slowed down because of a foreign country coming in. So, as one, we had an opportunity to do something about it.

Do you know what happened? The Democrats voted against it and defeated it. Not only did they defeat it, but they also voted with the chairman of the Armed Services Committee, a man, an American, and that is why America must end our dependency on China.

They won’t work with Republicans to restore American manufacturing to rebuild the American medical supply right here, but they will call the House back into session to debate conspiracy theories about the post office.

And while we were here in that emergency meeting—and, Madam Speaker, I should probably talk about it, because there were a lot of Democrats who didn’t come even though it was an emergency meeting called by the Speaker. I think it was one-third of all of them did not come.

But while we were here, that one moment, the one opportunity that the Republicans had, we offered a motion, a motion to recommit, to put up funding for COVID relief. Once again, the Democrats did the exact same thing.

Instead of stopping the hackers from China, what they said no to, instead of giving another COVID relief bill that opportunity—because we were in an emergency, it was the only time we were coming back, even though, Madam Speaker, the Speaker said we would not leave—they voted it down. They voted it down, the only window that we had.

They won’t even work with Republicans on what was supposed to be a bipartisan China task force, but they wasted an hour on a nonbinding resolution.

Is this how you expect to manage the Chamber? Is this why you took the majority, to waste the American people’s time?

Madam Speaker, it is time for us to stop acting like the House of resolutions and start acting like the House of Representatives.

Make no mistake: China aims to displace America as the world’s economic superpower. If they succeed, we will have more than viruses to worry about.

The stakes are too high for petty partisanship. If we want safety, if we want independence, we know what we have to do. We have to rebuild our economy, bring back our supply chain, protect our vaccine research and, yes, end our dependency on China.

Our President is doing that. House Republicans have made a commitment to America to do just that. We have done it time and again, bringing the idea to the floor. Unfortunately, the majority has thought otherwise.

Madam Speaker, I make this promise to you: If the sides change, if we have the opportunity and the privilege to determine what comes to this floor, we will not waste America’s time in a time of crisis. We will not tell people they will not leave and then let them go. We will not have Members call it an emergency meeting and let them stay home.

We believe Congress is essential. We believe the American public expects that.

Madam Speaker, we have a COVID crisis. We have an economy crisis. We have a dependency on China that harms us when it comes to our health security. We have cyber that is crumbling, but a 5-year plan to make a difference. These are all the problems that, if the majority would switch, would be addressed.

But no, today, on our last day this week, we will once again have a non-binding resolution.

I hope you fought hard for this majority. I hope you spent a lot of time and a lot of hours deciding what would come to the floor. But if this is what it is, you have fallen well short of what America expects of this Chamber.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Members are reminded to address their remarks to the Chair.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield the gentleman from California (Ms. PELOSI), the distinguished Speaker of the House.

Ms. PELOSI. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for the recognition, but I also thank Mr. NADLER, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, for bringing this important statement of our American values to the floor of the House. I thank him and our colleagues from the Senate, Senators KAMALA HARRIS, TAMMY DUCKWORTH, and Mazie HIRONO, and American Members of the United States Senate who were so instrumental in advancing this important, as I said, statement of American values.

And yes, it is a good use of time for us in the House of Representatives to state our values, to remove all doubt that people in our country are respected, and that we are not using a pandemic to have people—I will go into that in a moment.

But let me just say this. Before the distinguished leader spoke, the gentleman on the other side said: Where are you when you are talking about violence, this or that?
We are there. We support peaceful demonstrations. We participate in them. They are part of the essence of our democracy. That does not include looting, starting fires, or rioting. They should be prosecuted. That is lawlessness.

I am very proud that President Joe Biden has pointed out the reality of that, making a distinction that I don’t think our colleagues quite understand but the American people do.

In a poll released today, it said that the American people support congressional efforts to stop the Russians from using cyber weapons to disrupt our elections, and forestall another election interference like the ones experienced by so many, including the United States, in the 2020 election.

It is interesting to hear the revisionist history that the distinguished leader put on the floor of this House when he asked us what have we done. It is a very long list, and I will go into some of it.

But I want to say to him, when you had the majority and the Presidency, the only tax bill you did was pass a tax bill that put $2 trillion of debt onto our children and giving 83 percent of the benefits to the top 1 percent in our country. And yet you resent the fact that we want to invest more money in making it safe for our children to go back to school; more money into crushing the virus, which is what we do in the HEROES Act; and that we want to help our heroes. That is why it is called that.

Our State and local employees, our State and local governments that provide services to the American people, our healthcare workers, our first responders, our police and fire, our transportation, our sanitation workers, our food providers, all of those people working make life go on for us; without them, we couldn’t. And our teachers, our teachers, our teachers, the custodians of our children for a good part of their day and of their lives.

Yet the disdain that the Republicans have for our heroes is clear because that is the obstacle to our bringing the coronavirus legislation to the floor that is so needed. I hope that we can reach agreement on that.

So when they talk about accomplishment, you had a President and you had two Houses of government. What did you do but take care of the top 1 percent to the tune of 83 percent of the benefits of the bill that would put $2 trillion of debt onto our children and their future?

In terms of China, I have taken second place to no one in this body in my opposition to China for all of my opposition to China for three decades. I have been on it every single day for over 30 years. I need no pontificating from the leader on the other side who seems to have newly arrived at this issue in order to deflect attention from the fact that the Russians are trying to, once again, infiltrate and jeopardize the security of our was heard with the fact that our elections must be dealt with, whatever country it is; but all of a sudden it is all about China and not about Russia. I think the American people should decide who the next President of the United States is, not Vladimir Putin.

So we come here today, and I say this about the legislation: We have had four bills that have been overwhelmingly bipartisan on COVID. Our first one on March 4 was testing, testing, testing; and there should be a commitment from this administration that we can crush the virus by testing, tracing, treatment, mask wearing, sanitation, ventilation, and separation—still. The solution is as plain as the nose on your face, which should be covered with a mask.

Yet the President said he didn’t want to cause panic, but he doesn’t mind causing panic that will result in some terrible things happening to the Asian-American community in our country.

He has brought about great angst as he shines a bright light on the injustices experienced by so many, including the surge of violence and discrimination being experienced by the Asian American/Pacific Islander community. So I thank the Asian Pacific American Caucus Chair, Judy Chu; the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Chair, Joaquin Castro; and the Congressional Black Caucus Chair, Karen Bass, for their leadership on this important resolution and this very necessary use of our time to condemn and combat anti-Asian sentiment. Grace Meng has led this drumbeat for justice for a generation. Together with the other leaders she has brought this legislation to the floor, and I salute her.

As the resolution states—and we have all seen—at the same time that the coronavirus pandemic has broken out, so too has a disturbing epidemic of hate against the AAPI community erupted. You may not have noticed it. You may have tried to ignore it, but it, in fact, exists.

According to the Stop AAPI Hate Reporting Center, more than 2,500 recorded incidents of anti-Asian hate have been perpetrated against the AAPI community since March. These include both physical and verbal attacks, commuters spat on, racial slurs lobbed at passersby, community members shunned, and owners having their businesses vandalized. I was heartbroken to witness the devastation of fear, stigma, misinformation.

The World Health Organization and the CDC, the Centers for Disease Control, have explicitly warned against linking infectious diseases to a specific ethnicity because of the stigmatizing effects which have serious impact on health and defeating the virus. As the CDC chief medical officer said, stigma is the enemy of public health.

Anti-AAPI bigotry violates our bedrock American values and undermines our fight against the coronavirus, and it must end.

That is why we must do our part to combat hate, and that is why I am proud to support this resolution and am proud to bring it to the floor as an appropriate and excellent statement of values and good use of our time, instead of giving tax breaks to the wealthiest people in our country at the expense of our children and their future.

It calls on public officials to condemn and denounce any and all anti-Asian sentiment in any form, and it recognizes that the health and safety of our Asian Americans, not just our Asian American/Pacific Islander community, are fighting violence and bigotry.

In February, during one of my visits to San Francisco’s Chinatown—which I am overwhelmingly proud to represent—I was heartbroken to witness the devastating impact that fear, stigma, and misinformation are continuing to have on its families and businesses.

Nearly half of recorded incidents of anti-Asian hate, according to the Stop AAPI Hate Reporting Center, have occurred in California.

For many of the bay area who remember the systemic injustices and discrimination perpetrated against generations of Asian Americans, this resurgence is a traumatic reminder of the lingering specter of xenophobia.

Sadly, this bigotry is being fueled by some in Washington, D.C.—I thought there would be almost unanimous consent to condemn violence against Asian Americans—even from the White House itself, which uses dangerous, false, and offensive terms to describe the coronavirus.

Anti-AAPI bigotry violates our bedrock American values and undermines our fight against the coronavirus, and it must end.

That is why we must do our part to combat hate, and that is why I am proud to support this resolution and am proud to bring it to the floor as an appropriate and excellent statement of values and good use of our time, instead of giving tax breaks to the wealthiest people in our country at the expense of our children and their future.
This resolution has the support of hundreds of organizations, including from the medical and scientific communities.

Now I know science doesn’t mean much to you because you are anti-science, but the scientific community—well, the American College of Physicians, recently wrote a letter of support for this resolution, stating:

It is an essential step to support the health and safety of our Nation during a national crisis.

Hate crimes directed against individuals based on individuals’ race, ethnic origin, ancestry, primary language, cultural background, or nationality are a true public health threat.

He goes on to say:

It is imperative that physicians, and all people, speak out against hate and discrimination, especially during this national crisis caused by COVID-19.

At this challenging time, our Nation’s focus should be on respecting the dignity of everyone. That should always be the case. We cannot allow prejudice and discrimination to divide us.

So I am glad by adding this: we had a tremendous opportunity, as I said, we passed four bills that were overwhelmingly bipartisan. The CARES Act has done some good things for our country. It also gave an enormous practical 150 billion tax break to the wealthiest in our country and made it retroactive.

What did that have to do with the coronavirus, making a tax break for the wealthy retroactive?

They can’t pass a bill without doing something at the high end and then worrying when we want to help working class families in our country.

Anyway, our counter to that bill was called the Take Responsibility Act. Those two bills came together. We were able to find our common ground, even though we had to swallow some bitter pills in order to help America’s working families as well as small businesses in our country.

Why does it have to be so hard?

Because there is an anti-science attitude in this Congress and in this administration. There is an anti-governance; there is contempt of science; and there is disdain for State and local government which does so much for our country.

Don’t take it from me. The chairman of the Fed is saying that it recognizes that State and local government are an important part of our economy.

Don’t take it from me that we cannot open our economy unless we crush this virus. That is exactly what the Fed chairman said yesterday: it is essential to do this.

But it takes money, it takes respect for science, and respect for the advice of scientific leaders in our country that has been absent. Instead, they play a blame game.

Who pays the price?

The Hispanic, Asian-Pacific, and Black Caucus leadership today.

I thank, again, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee for his leadership in bringing this important legislation to the floor. It is one of many.

We have a virus. We have a crisis we have taken up and we will take up next week as we try to work together to find our common ground. One thing that we are working on right now is to keep government open, because while they may have an anti-governance attitude, two years ago, I have to make our compromises to keep government open.

So, Madam Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to use my Speaker’s 1 minute to salute the leadership and thank the sponsors of this legislation. You bring luster to the House of Representatives when you enable us to associate ourselves with the great values of our country and to respect the dignity and worth of everyone in our country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I want to remind all Members to address their remarks to the Chair.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, the Speaker of the House said that the Russians are trying to jeopardize the security of our election. So are the Democrats.

Democrats are trying to win the election after the election. Democrats in Pennsylvania have filed a lawsuit that says you can fix errors on absentee ballots after the ballot has been returned to the Board of Elections. I don’t even know what this means.

Can you vote in a race you didn’t vote in?

Can you change a vote?

What does that mean, you can fix errors after you have already submitted the ballot?

In Nevada, Democrats passed a law that says you can accept mail-in ballots 3 days after the election, even if the postmark date on the ballot on the envelope can’t be distinguished.

They are trying to win the election after the election. That is scary.

The Speaker said that the White House is using dangerous and offensive language. The premise of the resolution is that language can cause people to take action, and if you use the term “China virus” or “Wuhan virus”, somehow that will lead to bias against Asian-American people; even though they used the terms “China virus” and “Wuhan virus” everyone in the mainstream media used it. They used it in the committee hearing notice.

Even though all that is there, they now say, oh, if you use those terms it will lead to anti-Asian hate.

But they don’t talk about the language they use and the left uses, the language the Speaker uses and how that may create an environment that will lead to violence. The Speaker of the House called the President of the United States an enemy of the state and said his supporters in Congress—Republicans—are enemies of the state.

They don’t talk about that. No. China virus can lead people to action, but, no, not when the Speaker of the House calls the President of the United States and Republican Members of Congress enemies of the state.

Two years ago a Democrat Member of Congress, the chair of a committee said that 2 years ago to the chairman: If you see somebody in the Trump Cabinet, you create a crowd, you push back on them, you tell them they are not welcome anymore anywhere.

She encouraged her constituents to approach people in the Trump administration, harass them, and tell them they are not welcome anymore anywhere.

She encouraged direct action. That is far different from using the term “China virus” which they used and which they had in a committee notice.

This individual Member of Congress said, “Go harass people in the Trump Cabinet.”

The Speaker of the House calls Republicans “enemies of the State.” And that is all fine by them.

But, oh, you say, “the virus started in Wuhan, China,” and somehow you are terrible.

This is the crazy world the left is in today. The crazy world they are in today.

And, again, as said earlier by the gentleman from Texas and by others, I think the American people see right through this baloney, see right through it. This is ridiculous.

I hope we get our senses and start—as the Republican minority leader said—I hope we would actually start spending more on issues of more value to the American people.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON LEE).

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Madam Speaker, I thank our distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I thank and applaud the gentlewoman from New York for her outstanding leadership and championing the rights of all Americans.

Madam Speaker, from the unwarranted, unwanted allegations of hysterectomies in immigrant women around the Nation in detention centers, to the President of the United States taking to the bully pit to be able to call COVID-19 and the coronavirus the “China virus,” we are finding ourselves in the midst of confusion that is hurting the American people hurting them in two ways.

One, over 6 million COVID-19 infections in the United States, and now, predictions of upwards of 250,000 dead.
Every one of them we, as Members of the United States Congress, should mourn because families, sadly, are having to bury family members having not seen them in their last days.

What good is it to use that word—the “Wuhan virus”? That is not the scientific term for that. But it has created a hostile situation for our Asian-American friends, for Asian Americans who have been at the front lines fighting on behalf of this Nation.

The use of anti-Asian terminology and stereotypes associated with COVID-19, such as the Chinese virus, Wuhan virus, kung flu have perpetrated anti-Asian stigma and is reminiscent of dark and shameful chapters in America’s past where Asian Americans were labeled as the “yellow peril” and interned in relocation camps.

Madam Speaker, more than 23 million Asian American and Pacific Islanders account for 7 percent of the Nation’s population in the United States, but only 3 percent of Asian American and Pacific Islanders are working on the front lines of this COVID-19 pandemic in healthcare, law enforcement, first responders, transportation, super-markets, and other service industries. They feel threatened.

For example, in March 2020, an Asian woman wearing a mask was kicked and punched at a New York City subway station by individuals; two children and two adults were stabbed at a wholesale grocery store. This was anti-Asian racially and verbally. Let me say, my own constituent, Coco Ma, in Houston, was afraid to go into a grocery store.

Madam Speaker, include an article describing her concern.

In Houston’s New Normal, a Different Curve Emerges: Outward Racism Toward Asian Americans

(By Olivia P. Tallet)

Coco Ma knows it’s risky to leave her house amid the coronavirus pandemic, as the number of confirmed cases increases and the peak is yet to come.

The Rice University MBA student, however, doesn’t even do the occasional run to the supermarket, because, for her, the risk comes not only with battling against the virus but also against the vitriol aimed at Asian Americans like her, stereotyped as culprits of the pandemic.

“I have that fear . . . I ask my husband, who is white, to pick up the food we order. I’m afraid to go inside myself,” said Ma, aware of the increasing anti-Asian sentiment.

Unlike Chinese Americans and other groups of people who are the virus. The COVID-19 pandemic was first detected.

Almost all hate incidents against Asian American and Pacific Islanders in the U.S. have been reported to the STOP AAPI HATE initiative since it began tracking incidents March 17.

“We know that [that] number is only a drop in the bucket. We know that this is really ubiquitous now,” said lawyer Manjusha Narla, the executive director of the Asian Pacific Policy and Planning Council and founder of the tracking hate initiative, headquartered in California.

Although the number isn’t well known around the country, it has already received reports of incidents in 46 states, including Texas, said Kulkarni. The majority of the attacks are verbal, but some are also physical.

Hate and racist incidents against Asian Americans related to the COVID-19 pandemic can be reported to: Hate Is Contagious; racismiscontagious.com; STOP AAPI Hate; asianpacificpolicyandplanningcouncil.org/ stop-aapi-hate.

In West Texas, a man stabbed and cut members of a family from Burma, at a supermarket in Midland on March 14. The father and one of his daughters were severely wounded before a store employee subdued the attacker. The man allegedly said he did it because he thought the family was Chinese and spread the virus. Local media outlets reported that the FBI is investigating the case as a hate crime.

In Houston, a city known for its diversity and tolerance, a woman verbally attacked the owner of the Vietnamese restaurant Vietopia earlier this month in a parking lot in front of the business, screaming expletives and yelling, “You, get out of our country.”

“I felt unwanted here. We were very offended,” said Sammi Tran, co-owner and wife of the victim, who videotaped the incident. “My husband was born in America. We don’t harm anybody, but this is happening now. I’ve never felt like this before.”

“We go to the supermarket and they look at us as if we were dirty people,” Tran said. “Racism Is Contagious” At over half a million people, Asians make up 6 percent of the population in the Houston metro area. However, the U.S. Census Bureau.

Statewide, about 1.5 million residents identify as Asian, or 5.2 percent of the population.

In Houston’s Chinatown, the novel coronavirus hit businesses hard in January, well before residents were ordered to stay at home. Rumors spread on social media falsely claiming that an Asian supermarket in the area was shut down by the government due to coronavirus infections.

Although there’s only a single COVID-19 case in the state at the time, the rumors quickly propelled a fear of contagion and customers fleeing, driving losses that reached 70 percent overnight for many Asian American businesses.

Not long afterward, President Donald Trump called the agent of the pandemic “the Chinese virus,” stirring outrage and concern among Asian Americans.

“The community feels under siege. There is a genuine, palpable sense of fear in the Asian American community, they feel that they’re being targeted,” said Texas Representative Gene Wu, a Democrat from Houston.

And the Trump administration’s top medical voice says over a sinister music clip in a campaign ad currently running on local television stations for Kathaleen Wall, who is in the GOP runoff to challenge incumbent Democrat Leticia Van de Putte, representing the Sugar Land area.

Asked if she didn’t consider that her ad could negatively impact Asian Americans, she added, “I am from Houston, I am here to serve the people of Houston, not just the Asian community.”

For many Chinese Americans, the real story buried under the vitriolic noise is that their network of connections with China, Asian doctors and business people is proving what has helped others during the coronavirus crisis.

The North Houston Chinese American community and, for example, for the donation of masks and medical supplies to local healthcare providers via their connections in China, said Yanbo Wang, one of the organizers. They raised over $1 million in donations from 90 families and have helped over 100 nonprofit health providers and organizations.

“The love for the community initiative,” said Wang. The shipment arrived right when those supplies were difficult to find.

Similarly, The Pearl Fund Chinese Association collected and donated masks and other products from many Asian Americans who bought them earlier in the year. Hearing from their families in China about the epidemic gave them an edge to prepare and acquire products before the pandemic was well known in America.

Jie Wu, a board member of the association, said many Asian Americans who work in the Texas Medical Center also let them know early about their concerns.

They said they mobilized and raised thousands of dollars plus masks, gloves and protective gowns, in what the organization calls “The Love for the Community Initiative.”

They were among school parents, many of whom worry that the stigma can hurt Asian American children born in the U.S. Some reports nationwide have already pointed to hateful incidents against minors.

Coco Ma, the co-founder of #SnackForMedStaff initiative, is also concerned about the stereotyping.

“Also I want people to understand that I hope to start the campaign not to prove who I am and (that) people should not get mad at me” as an Asian person, said Ma.

“We Asians are doing this because we care.”

As the U.S. coronavirus cases rise, people working in hospitals with COVID-19 cases came to Ma while talking on the phone with her mother, who is an administrator at a hospital in China dealing with the pandemic. Initially, she sent snacks to a few healthcare providers, but the initiative grew with people sending her money for a GoFundMe campaign.

Ma, a Houston resident, and her classmate and program partner Kathleen Harcourt, who is Asian American, have now created a website to make all the #SnacksForMedStaff activities transparent to donors. They have raised around $12,000 of a $20,000 goal and have sent food packages to hospital teams in Texas and other four states among the hardest hit by the pandemic.

"We are getting very good feedback from doctors," Ma said. "They feel appreciated."

As the coronavirus is soon expected to peak locally, adding pressure to medical teams, this initiative will raise the funding goal and provide more packages.

"People are so polarized," said Ma. "Forget about politics, especially during this pandemic. Focus on what is the problem and coming up with a solution. This is about humanity first."

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Madam Speaker, I support this legislation because we have to stand to cure, to fix COVID-19, not to stigmatize and destroy the opportunity of saving America and doing the right thing by science.

Madam Speaker, as a senior member of the Judiciary and Homeland Security Committees, and the Budget Committee, I rise in strong support of this legislation which condemns anti-Asian sentiment in all its forms and manifestations, from whatever quarter, and from whomsoever, from the ordinary citizen up to and including the President of the United States.

Since January 2020, there has been a dramatic increase of hate crimes and incidents against those of Asian descent and the danger accelerates as the number of deaths attributable to COVID–19, which currently stands at 197,000, continues to increase and is expected to exceed 250,000 by Election Day on November 3, 2020. The use of anti-Asian terminology and rhetoric related to COVID–19, such as the “Chinese Virus”, “Wuhan Virus”, and “Kung-flu” have perpetuated anti-Asian stigma and is reminiscent of dark and shameful chapters in America’s past where Asian-Americans were escaped as the “yellow peril” and interned in relocation camps.

Madam Speaker, more than 23,000,000 Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders account for 7 percent of the Nation’s population in the United States and over 2,000,000 Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders are working on the frontlines of this COVID–19 pandemic in health care, law enforcement, first responders, transportation, supermarkets, and other service industries. Madam Speaker, there are approximately 2 million Asian American owned businesses that generate over $700 billion in annual revenue and employ nearly 4.5 million workers.

According to a recent study, there were over 400 cases related to COVID–19 anti-Asian discrimination between February 26 and March 7, 2020 with Asian Americans being harassed, assaulted, and scapegoated for the COVID–19 pandemic. For example, in March 2020, anti-Asian woman wearing a mask was kicked and punched at a New York City subway station; two children and two adults were stabbed at a wholesale grocery in Midland, Texas; a couple was assaulted and robbed by a group of attackers in Philadelphia; and a 16-year-old boy was sent to the hospital after being attacked by bullies in Los Angeles, California.

According to a report in the Houston Chronicle, during this pandemic a different curve has emerged in the Harris County metroplex, one of outward racism toward Asian Americans, where the increased use of anti-Asian rhetoric has also resulted in Asian-American businesses being targeted for vandalism.

Madam Speaker, the Secretary General of the United Nations called for international solidarity and an end to any ill-founded discrimination against the affected. The World Health Organization (WHO) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) counsels against that naming COVID–19 by its geographic location or linking it to a specific ethnicity because such linkage perpetuates stigma. For this reason, the WHO issued guidance calling on media outlets, scientists, and national authorities to avoid naming infectious diseases for locations.

On February 27, 2020, the Secretary of Health and Human Services stated “ethnicity is not what causes the novel coronavirus” and that it is inappropriate and inaccurate to call COVID–19 the “Chinese virus.” On February 28, 2020, Dr. Mitch Wolfe, the Chief Medical Officer of the CDC said, “Stigma is the enemy of public health” and on March 10, 2020, Dr. Robert Redfield, the Director of the CDC testified that use of the term “Chinese coronavirus” is wrong and inappropriate.

So, I am proud to be an original cosponsor and to strongly support H. Res. 908 introduced by my friend from New York, Congresswoman MENG. The resolution calls on all public officials to condemn and denounce any and all anti-Asian sentiment in any form and recognizes that the health and safety of all Americans, no matter their background, must be of utmost priority. The resolution condemns all manifestations of expressions of racism, xenophobia, discrimination, anti-Asian sentiment, scapegoating, and ethnic or religious intolerance and calls on Federal law enforcement officials, working with State and local officials to expeditiously investigate and document all credible reports of hate crimes and incidents and threats against the Asian-American community in the United States.

The resolution also calls upon federal, state, and local authorities to so, collect data to document the rise of incidences of hate crimes due to COVID–19; and to take action whenever appropriate to hold the perpetrators of those crimes, incidents, or threats accountable and bring such justice. Finally, and importantly, H. Res. 908 recommit United States leadership in building more inclusive, diverse, and tolerant communities and combatting misinformation and discrimination that put Asian Americans at risk.

I urge all Members to join me in voting for H. Res. 908 and I thank Congresswoman MENG for introducing this important resolution.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SPANBERGER. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Virginia (Ms. SPANBERGER).

Ms. SPANBERGER. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 908. I rise today in support of my constituents will raise.

Central Virginia is the proud home to a strong and vibrant Asian-American community. And since COVID-19 began, we have seen a disturbing increase in hate crimes directed at the Asian-American community across the country, including in Virginia.

Our neighbors, our fellow Americans, should never be the victims of discrimination, violence or derision. And today, I am proud to stand with them and support this resolution on the floor of the House.

We should all actively and forcefully condemn these acts of hate directed at our friends and our neighbors, at home, at our communities. Today, I am proud to do so with my vote on the floor of the House. A vote that affirms the following:

That we call on public officials to condemn and denounce anti-Asian sentiment.

That we recognize that the health and safety of all Americans of any background should be our priority;

That we condemn the manifestation and the expression of racism, xenophobia, and anti-Asian sentiment;

That we call on Federal law enforcement officials working with State and local officials to expeditiously investigate hate crimes; and

That we recommit the United States' leadership to build a more inclusive, tolerant society.

Madam Speaker, to my colleagues who agree with these principles, I urge them to vote "yes" in support of this resolution and in support of our neighbors, for one, will proudly vote "yes."

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on the resolution for all the reasons we have articulated here this morning. I think it is important to go back and just remember, this is not about people of Asian-American descent. This is not about the Chinese people. It is about the Chinese Communist Party. It is about the Chinese Government, a government that lied to us about the origins of this virus, lied to the world, used the World Health Organization to continue to mislead the United States and the world. That has been where the criticism has been targeted by the President.

But, again, 7 weeks before an election, Democrats don't care about the facts. They care about attacking the President, calling his supporters, as the Speaker of this House did, “enemies of the state,” bringing a resolution to the floor of this nature, but not being willing to condemn the violence and the mobs in the streets of our cities for certain periods of days straight, looting and violence and rioting and attacks on our law enforcement officers. No, can’t. We can’t bring a resolution. We can’t talk about that. When the Attorney General of the United States asked, the Democrat members of the Committee on the Judiciary won’t even speak up then.

Madam Speaker, I hope we defeat this resolution, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Madam Speaker, this is an important resolution that will put the House firmly on record against the insidious form of racism and racial scapegoating that we have seen since the COVID–19 pandemic began.

It is completely unacceptable to use derogatory and prejudicial terms, like “Chinese virus” or “Wuhan virus,” as if thereby the federal and local reality of where the novel coronavirus that causes COVID–19 originated.

First, this logic does nothing to justify the use of the term “kung flu,” another term often used by some to describe COVID–19, a term clearly designed to mock Asians and to associate them unfairly with this disease.

Madam Speaker, the need for this legislation is clear. I urge my colleagues to vote “yes,” and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. MENG. Madam Speaker, as millions across our nation continue to be impacted by the coronavirus, many continue to live in fear following the dramatic increase of threats and attacks against those of Asian descent since the COVID–19 outbreak.

Since January 2020, there has been a significant number of reports of anti-Asian incidents; wherein, due to scapegoating Asian Americans for the spread of COVID–19, many are being threatened, harassed, or assaulted, or have had their businesses vandalized. The upsurge of racial discrimination against Asian Americans has been fueled by misinformation about the coronavirus and usage of anti-Asian rhetoric and terms like “Chinese virus” and “Kung-flu.” All of our nation’s leaders must stop using these racist phrases that inflame hatred and fear.

That is why I introduced a resolution condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID–19. As I had the honor and privilege to serve with grace Meng, First Vice-Chair of the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus (CAPAC), for its long-standing efforts to highlight the contributions Asian Americans have made to our nation, I urge my colleagues to join me in this effort to keep all discrimination in this country. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution.

As the resolution states, there are over 2 million Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders communities all over the world, and nationwide has seen an alarming surge in anti-Asian bigotry and in hate crimes. There is no doubt that COVID–19 has resulted in the spread of hate, racism, and xenophobia towards the Asian American community.

As you may already know, the FBI warned all of us last week about the increase in hate crime incidents against Asian Americans to increase suddenly as the general public associated the coronavirus with the Asian American population. At its peak, there were nearly 100 hate incidents being reported each day. Yet, the President and his Administration failed to address this and fueled this misconception with their rhetoric.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, more than ever, it is important to stand in solidarity with the Asian American community. We cannot let the rise in hateful rhetoric and discrimination go unchecked. We must work to build a more inclusive and diverse society, and this resolution is a step toward achieving that, urging my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution to build on America’s diversity, which has proven to be one of our greatest strengths.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, now, more than ever, it is important to stand in solidarity with the Asian American community. We cannot let the rise in hateful rhetoric and discrimination go unchecked. We must work to build a more inclusive and diverse society, and this resolution is a step toward achieving that, urging my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution to build on America’s diversity, which has proven to be one of our greatest strengths.

Madam Speaker, in strong support of House Resolution 908, which condemns the anti-Asian rhetoric that has arisen because of the COVID–19 pandemic, Madam Speaker, our Asian friends, and family members are unfairly targeted by bigotry in the wake of the COVID–19 pandemic. Using terms like the “China Virus” and “Kung Flu” is offensive to the communities I represent in the Lower East Side and Brooklyn. Our friends and neighbors in these communities are essential workers and small business owners who provided critical services to our community as the pandemic raged across New York City, and continue to play an essential role in our city’s recovery from the virus. Unfortunately, New York City has seen a spike in bias crimes. We cannot let these crimes go unpunished, let alone condone them.

As the resolution states, there are over 2 million Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders who have helped lead us through COVID–19. I think of my district’s University of Toledo Medical Center’s molecular specialist, Dr. Ji-Youn Yeo, Ph.D., a Postdoctoral Fellow of South Korean descent. Dr. Yeo’s expertise helped the Center’s coronavirus pathology lab modify its test to keep employees safe during the pandemic. Professor Fei Li of Maryland, Professor Yumi Hogan, was instrumental in obtaining 500,000 testing kits for Maryland by working with the South Korean Ambassador to the United States, Lee Soo Hyuk. The people of South Korea were able to minimize the devastation of COVID–19 because they continue to learn from them.

We must condemn all forms of anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID–19. I praise my distinguished colleagues as related to COVID–19. I praise my distinguished colleagues as American women to ensure our nation’s Asian American community in Philadelphia and nationwide has seen an alarming surge in anti-Asian bigotry and in hate crimes. There is no doubt that COVID–19 has resulted in the spread of hate, racism, and xenophobia toward the Asian American community.

As you may already know, the FBI warned all of us last week about the increase in hate crime incidents against Asian Americans to increase suddenly as the general public associated the coronavirus with the Asian American population. At its peak, there were nearly 100 hate incidents being reported each day. Yet, the President and his Administration failed to address this and fueled this misconception with their rhetoric.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, now, more than ever, it is important to stand in solidarity with the Asian American community. We cannot let the rise in hateful rhetoric and discrimination go unchecked. We must work to build a more inclusive and diverse society, and this resolution is a step toward achieving that, urging my colleagues to join me in supporting this resolution to build on America’s diversity, which has proven to be one of our greatest strengths.

working on the frontline combatting against the pandemic. We must stand in solidarity with our friends and neighbors by denouncing the vitriol and anti-Asian sentiment. Our response to this pandemic should have been a unifying moment for our country. Instead, the administration has actively sought to inflame racial tensions. Today, we say “no more” to the anti-Asian rhetoric from the White House. I am proud to cosponsor this bill and I want to thank my colleague from New York Representative Grace Meng, for her leadership on this issue and urge all my colleagues to support his passage.

Ms. JOHNSON of Texas, Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of this resolution that condemns all forms of anti-Asian sentiment during this COVID–19 pandemic. This public health crisis has caused significant pain and suffering to communities across our nation, and we are especially concerned about an apparent increase in verbal and physical attacks, as well as discrimination, against Asian Americans.

Our society must clearly state that xenophobia must not and will not be accepted. Asian Americans are not responsible for the spread of COVID–19, and yet they have been repeatedly harassed, discriminated, and even attacked by some who wrongly believe they are at fault. There are over two thousand reported incidences of coronavirus-related discrimination by the Asian Pacific Policy and Planning Council. We must better protect our vulnerable communities during times of turmoil, and it is even more egregious that many of these same victims are simultaneously fighting this pandemic as doctors, nurses, and other frontline providers.

Therefore, I am proud to support this resolution that explicitly calls on all public officials to condemn and denounce all anti-Asian sentiment in any form. Additionally, I am pleased that this legislation recognizes that the health and safety of all Americans, no matter their background, must be our utmost priority.

On behalf of the constituents of the 30th Congressional District of Texas, I am proud to support this resolution condemning anti-Asian sentiment during this pandemic, and I urge my colleagues to pass this resolution in favor of this legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 1107, the previous question is ordered on the resolution and the preamble.

The question is on the resolution. The question is on the resolution. The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. JORDAN. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 965, the yeas and nays are ordered.

PREGNANT WORKERS FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia, Madam Speaker: Pursuant to House Resolution 1107, I call up the bill (H.R. 2694) to eliminate discrimination and promote women’s health and economic security by ensuring reasonable workplace accommodations for workers whose ability to perform the functions of a job are limited by pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. SPANBERGER). Pursuant to House Resolution 1107, the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Education and Labor, printed in the bill, is adopted and the bill, as amended, is considered read.

The text of the bill, as amended, is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Pregnant Workers Fairness Act”.

SEC. 2. NONDISCRIMINATION WITH REGARD TO REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS RELATED TO PREGNANCY. It shall be an unlawful employment practice for a covered entity (1) not make reasonable accommodations to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of a qualified employee; or (2) require a qualified employee affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions to accept an accommodation other than any reasonable accommodation arrived at through the interactive process referred to in section 5(f).

(3) deny employment opportunities to a qualified employee on the need of the covered entity to make reasonable accommodations to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of a qualified employee;

(4) require a qualified employee to take leave, whether paid or unpaid, if another reasonable accommodation can be provided to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of a qualified employee; or

(5) take adverse action in terms, conditions, or privileges of employment of a qualified employee on account of the employee requesting or using a reasonable accommodation to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of the employee.

SEC. 3. REMEDIES AND ENFORCEMENT.

(a) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY TITLE VII OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964.—In oher words, procedures, remedies, and procedures provided in sections 707, 706, 707, 709, 710, and 711 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e–4 et seq.) to the Commission, the Attorney General, the Board, or any person alleging an unlawful employment practice in violation of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1311(a)(1)).

(b) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY THE EMPLOYEE RIGHTS ACT OF 1991.—In general, procedures provided in section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1977A(a)(1)) or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(c) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY THE EMPLOYMENT PROTECTION ACT OF 1991.—In general, procedures provided in section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1977A(a)(1)), including the limitations contained in subsections (b) and (c) of such section 1977A, shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Board or any person, respectively, alleging an unlawful employment practice in violation of this Act against an employee described in section 5(b), except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection.

(d) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY GOVERNMENT EM-

PLOYEE RIGHTS ACT OF 1997.—In general, procedures provided in sections 302 and 304 of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16b, 2000e–16c) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(c) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY THE EMPLOYE-

MENT PROTECTION ACT OF 1991.—In general, procedures provided in section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1977A(a)(1)), including the limitations contained in subsections (b) and (c) of such section 1977A, shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 1977A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes.
SEC. 6. WAIVER OF STATE IMMUNITY.

Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall issue regulations in an accessible format in accordance with section 1194 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16). Such regulations shall provide reasonable accommodations addressing known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

SEC. 7. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to violate or limit the powers, remedies, and procedures under any Federal law or law of any State or political subdivision of any State or jurisdiction that provides greater or equal protections for individuals affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

SEC. 8. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstances is held invalid or found to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this Act and the application of that provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The bill was approved by the House, and sent to the Senate.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I might consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2984, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. No one should have to choose between financial security and a healthy pregnancy. Unfortunately, our pregnancy antidiscrimination laws urgently need to be updated to provide reasonable accommodations for workers.

Current Federal law does not clearly guarantee pregnant workers’ rights to reasonable accommodations in the workplace, such as water, seating, bathroom breaks, and lifting restrictions. These basic protections are critical to protecting pregnant workers from the tragic consequences of unsafe working conditions, and they are particularly important today, as early evidence suggests that pregnancy leads to an increased risk of severe illness from COVID–19.

In 2015, the Supreme Court allowed pregnant workers to bring claims for the interactive process that will typically be used to determine an appropriate reasonable accommodation.
reasonable accommodations under the Pregnancy Discrimination Act in the landmark case of Young v. UPS. However, that decision set an unreasonably high standard for pregnancy discrimination. Under the Young standard, workers must prove that the accommodations they were denied were provided to other workers who were similar in their inability to work.

This standard is onerous, in part, because it assumes that workers can access their coworkers' personal health information and establish a comparable group of workers. It also creates a perverse legal framework in which companies that treat all of their workers poorly can treat their pregnant workers poorly as well.

Since the Young decision, courts have ruled against pregnant workers seeking accommodations most of the time.

In the absence of Federal action, nearly one dozen states and multistate coalitions have filled the void by establishing their own protections for pregnant workers. This patchwork approach is bad for workers who are frequently left without strong protections and bad for multistate employers who have to comply with different States' workplace standards.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is a bipartisan proposal that will finally establish clear, nationwide protections to guarantee pregnant workers the basic rights to reasonable accommodations.

It will also grant victims of pregnancy discrimination the same remedies as victims of discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin under Federal civil rights laws. Similar to the Americans with Disabilities Act, employers are not required to make accommodations if it imposes an undue hardship on the employer or related business operations.

This legislation has broad support across the political spectrum and across our communities. Labor unions, civil rights groups, and the business community, including the Chamber of Commerce, have all endorsed this proposal.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter led by the nonprofit A Better Balance and over 200 worker advocacy organizations calling for Congress to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Re Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Dear Member of Congress: As organizations committed to promoting the health and economic security of our nation's families, we urge you to support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, a crucial maternal and infant health measure. This bipartisan legislation promotes healthy pregnancies and economic security for pregnant women and their families and strengthens the economy.

In the last few decades, there has been a dramatic demographic shift in the workforce. Not only do women now make up almost half of the workforce, but there are more pregnant workers than ever before and they are working later into their pregnancies. The simple reality is that some of these women—especially those in physically demanding jobs—will have a medical need for a temporary job-related accommodation to continue working or return to work.

Yet, too often, instead of providing a pregnant worker with an accommodation, her employer will fire her or push her onto unpaid leave, which can result in a loss of income and health insurance at a time when she needs them most.

Additionally, pregnancy discrimination affects women across race and ethnicity, but women of color and immigrants may be at particular risk. Latinas, Black women and immigrants are often required to hold certain inflexible and physically demanding jobs that can present specific challenges for pregnant workers, such as cashiers, home health aides, food service workers, and cleaners, making reasonable accommodations on the job even more important, and loss of wages and health insurance due to pregnancy discrimination especially challenging. American families and the American economy depend on women's income: we cannot afford to force pregnant women out of work.

In 2015, in Young v. United Parcel Service, the Supreme Court held that a failure to make accommodations for workers with medical needs will sometimes violate the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978 (PDA). Yet, even after Young, pregnant workers are often denied the accommodations they need to stay safe and healthy on the job and employers lack clarity as to their obligations under the law. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will provide a clear, predictable rule: employers must provide reasonable accommodations for limitations arising out of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, unless this would pose an undue hardship.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is modeled after the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and offers employers and employees a familiar reasonable accommodation framework to follow. Under the ADA, workers with disabilities enjoy clear statutory protections and need not prove how other employees are treated in order to obtain necessary accommodations. Pregnant workers deserve the same clarity and protections and employers should not have to ascertain how their employer treats others in order to understand their own accommodation rights, as the Supreme Court's ruling currently means.

Evidence from states and cities that have adopted laws similar to the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act suggests that providing this clarity reduces lawsuits and, most importantly, helps ensure that women can obtain necessary reasonable accommodations in a timely manner, allowing pregnant women healthy and earning an income when they need it most. No woman should have to choose between providing for her family and maintaining her health and her career. And the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would ensure that all women working for covered employers would be protected.

The need for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is recognized across ideological and partisan lines. Thirty states and D.C. have adopted pregnant worker fairness measures with broad, and often unanimous, bipartisan support. Twenty-five of those laws have passed within the last seven years. These states include: Alaska, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Mexico, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, West Virginia, Vermont, Virginia, and Washington.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is critical because it supports healthy pregnancies and provides a clear path forward for employers and workers. The right of a job seeker, expecting parents and the health of the American family depend on women's income: we cannot afford to force pregnant workers out of work.

Stress from job loss can increase the risk of having a premature baby and/or a baby with low birth weight. In addition, women who are not forced to use their leave during pregnancy may have more leave available to take following childbirth, which in turn facilitates breastfeeding and caring for a new child, and recovering from childbirth.

For all of these reasons, we urge you to support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. We also welcome the opportunity to provide you with additional information.

I urge my colleagues to support the bill, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina, Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

House Republicans have long supported protections in Federal law for all workers, but especially pregnant workers, and we believe employers should provide reasonable accommodations for pregnant workers, empowering them to achieve their highest potential.

I speak not only as a concerned Congresswoman on this issue but also as a mother and a grandmother. Discrimination of any type should not be tolerated, and no one should ever be denied an opportunity because of unlawful discrimination.

However, there are already important protections under Federal law to prevent workplace discrimination, including Federal laws that rightfully protect pregnant workers.

Take the Pregnancy Discrimination Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act, for example. These Federal laws require employers are not being unlawfully discriminated against and receive reasonable accommodations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

My Republican colleagues and I agree with the underlying goal of H.R. 2694. That is why Republican Members on the Education and Labor Committee negotiated in good faith with Chairman SCOTT to make important and necessary improvements to the bill, and I thank Chairman SCOTT for his willingness to do so.

H.R. 2694, as introduced, did not require a pregnant worker, in order to be eligible for an accommodation, to be able to perform the essential functions of the job with a reasonable accommodation. This is a significant limitation now included in the bill with additional language that a temporary limitation, which prevents performance of an essential function, may qualify for a reasonable accommodation.

Further, a definition of “known limitations” related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions was also initially excluded, but the bill now includes such a definition and a requirement that employees communicate the known limitation to the employer. This provision will help workers and their employers understand their rights and responsibilities more clearly.

Additionally, the original version of H.R. 2694 appeared to allow employees a unilateral veto over offered accommodations, but the bill now clarifies that reasonable accommodations will typically be determined through a balanced interactive process between employers and employees similar to the process implemented under the ADA.

The bill also now includes a provision ensuring that an employer makes a good faith effort to determine a reasonable accommodation through the interactive process with the employee, the employer is not liable for damages.

Finally, H.R. 2694, as introduced, did not limit its application to employers with 15 or more employees, as do title VII of the Civil Rights Act and the ADA. The bill now includes a 15-employee threshold.

These bipartisan changes were considered and incorporated in the bill passed out of the committee in January. Unfortunately, despite the necessary improvements made to the underlying bill, an important issue remains unresolved. Namely, the legislation before us today does not currently include a longstanding provision from the Civil Rights Act that protects religious organizations from being forced to make employment decisions that conflict with their faith.

To address this omission, Republicans offered an amendment to include... this narrow but longstanding provision when the bill was considered by the committee. The Civil Rights Act protection, which already exists under current law, ensures religious organizations are not forced to make employment decisions that conflict with their faith, but employers firing pregnant workers rather than finding ways for them to safely return to work. The purpose of America’s non-discrimination laws, and the agencies enforcing them, is to give all Americans the opportunity to succeed. That being said, overzealous government intervention often causes more harm than good. In the case of H.R. 2694, by failing to include a long-standing Civil Rights Act provision, we are doing just that. As it is currently written, H.R. 2694 will create legal risks for religious organizations and their religiously backed employment decisions.

Last year, a Democrat-invited witness at the committee hearing on H.R. 2694 highlighted Kentucky’s recently enacted pregnancy accommodation law as a template for Congress to follow. Madam Speaker, I would like to read that again. Last year, a Democrat-invited witness at the committee hearing on H.R. 2694 highlighted Kentucky’s recently enacted pregnancy accommodation law as a template for Congress to follow. Kentucky’s law includes a religious organization protection very similar to the one found in the Civil Rights Act and incorporated in the Republican-sponsored amendment.

At least 16 States and the District of Columbia in their pregnancy discrimination or pregnancy accommodation laws also include a provision similar to the Civil Rights Act religious organization protection. Even if certain Members believe including such a provision in H.R. 2694 is somehow unnecessary, it would do no harm to include the protection and, in doing so, address the concerns I have raised. I remain perplexed why Chairman NADLER and Chairman SCOTT continue to oppose the current law protection.

The First Amendment guarantees all Americans the freedom of religion, and for over 230 years, Supreme Court decisions and laws written by Congress have maintained strong protections for religious liberty. H.R. 2694 should do so as well.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), the sponsor of this legislation and the chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, pregnancy is not a disability, but sometimes pregnant workers need an easy fix, such as a stool or an extra bathroom break, to stay on the job. These accommodations are short in duration and typically cost very little to provide, but they can mean the difference between keeping your job or putting your pregnancy at risk. But for as long as women have been in the workforce, instead of being accommodated, they have been fired or forced out on leave when they become pregnant. These policies have become even more pronounced during the COVID-19 pandemic, as a wave of employers firing pregnant workers rather than finding ways for them to safely return to work.

These policies, as they too often do, are failing disproportionately on pregnant workers who suddenly find themselves without a paycheck, without health insurance, and in the middle of a global pandemic. The bipartisan Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will fix how pregnancy accommodation is treated under the Pregnancy Discrimination Act. Courts have said that employers must provide an accommodation to a pregnant employee if they accommodate nonpregnant employees similar in their inability or ability to work. That means pregnant workers must have perfect knowledge of the medical and employment histories of every other employee in their workplace, which is nearly impossible.

In fact, a recent study by A Better Balance found that in over two-thirds of cases, courts denied an accommodation because pregnant workers could not meet this test. I include in the record a letter in support of this bill from A Better Balance.

Re The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694).

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of A Better Balance, I write to express our strong support for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (‘‘PWFA’’; H.R. 2694). This legislation will ensure that pregnant workers, particularly low-income women and women of color, are not forced to choose between their paycheck and a healthy pregnancy. The bill will require employers to provide reasonable accommodations for pregnant workers unless doing so would impose an undue hardship on the employer, similar to the accommodation standard already in place for workers with disabilities.

Nearly forty-two years after the passage of the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, pregnant workers still face rampant discrimination on the job and treatment as second-class citizens. As I explained in detail in my Congressional testimony before the House Education and Labor Civil Rights and Human Services Subcommittee in October 2019 as well as A Better Balance’s May 2019 report, Long Overdue. We urge you to support healthy preg nancy accommodations but let us be clear: the need for this law preceded our current public health crisis and will remain in place beyond the pandemic.

CURRENT FEDERAL LAW IS FAILING PREGNANT WORKERS: THE PREGNANT WORKERS FAIRNESS ACT IS THE SOLUTION

Gaps in federal law mean many pregnant women in need of accommodations but without legal protection in non-PWFA states. As we explained in our report Long Overdue, ‘‘While the Pregnancy Discrimination Act leaves pregnant workers at risk of pregnancy-related discrimination, it requires employers to make accommodations only if they accommodate other workers, or..."" if an employee unearths evidence of discrimination. The Americans with Disabilities Act requires employers to provide reasonable accommodations to workers with disabilities. This includes some pregnancy-related disabilities. However, pregnancy itself is not a disability, leaving a gap wherein many employers are in no way obligated to permit pregnant workers in need of immediate relief to stay healthy and on the job."}

Original analysis conducted for Long Overview even though the supreme Court Young v. UPS case set a new legal standard for evaluating pregnancy accommodation cases under the Pregnancy Discrimination Act. However, over two-thirds of cases decided since Young employers were permitted to deny pregnancy workers accommodations under the Pregnancy Discrimination Act. This fact is... does not account for the vast majority of pregnant workers who do not have the resources to vindicate their rights in court. Beside many... working in the long term, having difficulties working the jobs they work about while maintaining a healthy pregnancy.

Three more of her co-workers, also Black, miscarried after supervisors dismissed their requests for reprieve from heavy lifting. As Cherisse Scott, CEO of Memphis-based Sister Reach, explained "It doesn't surprise me that this is the culture of that workplace. I think it's important to look at the fact that sites as well as Black and other minority groups are... are regarded as producers to fuel a labor force that couldn't care less for us..." The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is about... pregnant workers and their health are valued and that Black mothers, especially, are not treated as expendable on the job.

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, that is why the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act moves away from proving discrimination and creates an affirmative right to accommodation. Using the framework and language of the Americans with Disabilities Act, the bill requires employers to provide reasonable accommodations to pregnant workers, as long as the accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.

Conservatives know exactly how to interpret that language. Employers know exactly what their responsibilities will be. But most importantly, women will have the certainty they can safely stay on the job.

That is why over 200 organizations have endorsed the legislation and why 30 States have passed pregnancy accommodations laws similar to the PWFA.

Providing reasonable accommodations to pregnant workers helps businesses and families. Passing this bill is long overdue.

I thank Mr. KATKO for working with his Conference on this bill and Chairman SCOTT, Chairwoman BONAMICI, Eunice Ikene, and the committee staff for shepherding the bill to the floor today. I urge a "yes" vote.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. KATKO), the lead Republican sponsor of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, I am a Republican, and I rise in strong support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

I was proud to join Chairman NADLER and Representatives HERRERA BEUTLER, McBATH, and SCOTT in introducing this bill.

Simply put, no mother-to-be or mother in this country should have to choose between being a parent and keeping her job.

Unfortunately, current Federal law lacks adequate protections to ensure pregnant workers are able to remain healthy in the workplace. With 30 States having already passed laws to provide these protections, the need and support for a Federal standard is clear.

This bipartisan bill provides pregnant workers an affirmative right to reasonable accommodations in the workplace, while creating a clear and navigable standard for employees to follow.

These accommodations, as simple as providing an employee with extra rest-room breaks or a stool to sit on, should not be controversial.

The arguments against this bill made by some Members of our own party are based on inaccuracies and wrongfully detract from the importance of this commonsense policy.

Reflecting the widespread support for this legislation, the bill has received numerous endorsements from the business community, as well as over 180 women's health, labor, and civil rights organizations.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter of support from a coalition of business groups, including the Chamber of Commerce, the Society for Human Resource Management, and the National Retail Federation.

September 14, 2020.

To Members of the U.S. House of Representatives: We urge Congress to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694). This bill would provide pregnant employees with important workplace protections while also making sure that employers have clear and flexible options to ensure pregnant employees can remain at work for as long as they wish to do so.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (PWFA), as passed by the House Education and Labor Committee, is a balanced approach that clarifies an employer's obligation to accommodate the known limitations of employees and job applicants that accompany pregnancy. The PWFA uses an interactive, reasonable accommodation process similar to the Americans with Disabilities Act and specifies a pregnant employee may take leave only after the employer and employee have exhausted the possibility of other reasonable accommodations.

This bipartisan bill is a strong reminder that through good faith negotiations, legislative solutions to important workplace questions and problems can be found. We believe that Congress should pass the PWFA with no changes.

Sincerely,

H.R. POLICY ASSOCIATION,
INTERNATIONAL FRANCHISE ASSOCIATION,
NATIONAL RETAIL FEDERATION,
RETAIL INDUSTRY LEADERS ASSOCIATION,
SOCIETY FOR HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT,
U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Mr. KATKO. Madam Speaker, an excerpt from that says that this bipartisan bill is a strong reminder that through good faith negotiations, legislative solutions to important workplace questions and problems can be found.

It is high time for our Nation to provide women in the workforce with the basic rights and respect they deserve. I strongly urge my colleagues to support passage of this important legislation.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Last year, I chaired an Education and Labor Committee hearing on pregnancy discrimination. We heard very compelling testimony demonstrating that far too many pregnant workers are denied access to reasonable workplace accommodations despite the existing Federal law providing for equal treatment on the job.

Now my home State of Oregon is helping to lead the way by passing bipartisan legislation that requires reasonable accommodations for pregnant workers. The new law has protected pregnant women and also provided certainty to the business community. But we need to make sure that all pregnant workers, regardless of where they live, can access the protections they need to stay safe and healthy in the workplace.

The bipartisan Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is our opportunity to address pregnancy discrimination and protect the health, well-being, and economic security of pregnant and parenting workers and their families. By clarifying the right of pregnant workers to fair treatment in the workplace, we will ensure that all pregnant workers get the accommodations they need without facing fear of discrimination or retaliation.

Madam Speaker, I thank Chairman SCOTT and Chairman NADLER for their leadership and colleagues to support this bipartisan bill.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter from the National Women’s Law Center in support of this legislation.

DEAR MEMBER OF CONGRESS: On behalf of the National Women’s Law Center, we urge you to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694) and vote no on any motion to recommit. The National Women’s Law Center (“the Center”) has worked for over 45 years to advance and protect women’s equality and opportunity—and since its founding has fought for the rights of pregnant women in the workplace. For the last eight years, the Center has been a leader in advocating for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, and for pregnancy accommodation protections in states across the country. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would clarify the law for employers and employees alike, requiring employers to make reasonable accommodations for limitations arising out of pregnancy, childbirth, and related medical conditions, just as they already do for disabilities.

Providing accommodations ensures that women can work safely while pregnant instead of being pushed out of work at a time when their families need their income the most.

Even before the COVID-19 pandemic, pregnant workers were too often denied medically needed accommodations—including simple accommodations like a stool to sit on during a long shift or a bottle of water at a workstation. United States Census data from the sixth month of COVID-19 lockdown, the need for clarity regarding employers’ obligations to provide accommodations for pregnant workers has only increased. Across the country, as new information emerges about the risks COVID-19 poses during pregnancy, pregnant workers are urgently seeking, and far too often being denied, accommodations like proper personal protective equipment, telework, moving to a less crowded work area or changing start times so as not to risk riding public transit during peak hours. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act uses an already-familiar framework modeled on the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) to ensure that when such a request is made, employers and employees can engage in an interactive process to determine whether the employer’s accommodation can be reasonably accommodated without an undue hardship to the employer. This will help ensure that employers are not forced to choose between a paycheck and a healthy pregnancy.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will close gaps and inconsistencies in the law that have left too many pregnant workers unprotected for too long. The Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA), passed in 1978, guarantees that all pregnant workers are treated at least as well as other employees “not so affected but similar in their ability or inability to work.” Unfortunately, many courts interpreted the PDA narrowly and allowed employers to refuse to accommodate workers with medical needs arising out of pregnancy, even when they routinely accommodated other physical limitations. In Young v. UPS, the Supreme Court held that when an employer accommodates workers who are similar to pregnant workers in their ability to work, it cannot refuse to accommodate pregnant women simply because “it is more expensive or less convenient” to accommodate pregnant women too. The Young decision was an important victory for women that standard it set out still left many important questions unanswered and created uncertainty for employers and employees about when exactly the PDA requires pregnancy accommodations. In addition, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires employers to make reasonable accommodations for employees with disabilities. However, courts have consistently held that pregnancy is not a disability. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would fill the holes left in these protections with a common-ground and commonsense approach that ensures pregnant workers are accommodated when the accommodations they need are reasonable and do not pose an undue hardship to employers.

Accommodating pregnant workers is not only good for working women and families, it is good for business. Moreover, today, working women make up nearly 70% of the workforce. More women are continuing to work while they are pregnant, through later stages of pregnancy. For example, two-thirds of women who give birth between 2006 and 2008 worked during pregnancy, and 88 percent of these first-time mothers worked into their last trimester. When employers accommodate pregnant workers, businesses reap the benefits of avoiding the costs of turnover and keeping experienced employees on the job. And since pregnancy is temporary, pregnancy accommodations are, by definition, short-term; many of these accommodations are low and no cost.

The time is ripe for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. Thirty states and the District of Columbia have enacted provisions explicitly granting pregnant employees the right to accommodations at work, from Massachusetts, New York, and California, to South Carolina, Utah, Nebraska, West Virginia, and Tennessee. Millions of pregnant workers have been left out of these protections, but a pregnant employee’s ability to work safely should not depend on where she lives.

We strongly urge you to support pregnant workers by voting for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act and rejecting any motion to recommit. If you have any questions, please contact us.

Sincerely,

EMILY J. MARTIN
adjustments in their work activities are denied, many face being fired or are forced to take unpaid leave simply to protect their health and the health of their pregnancy.

This discrimination can take many forms and can be deadly. And, of course, these burdens fall disproportionately on people and women of color who are overrepresented in low-wage jobs that are physically demanding, lack adequate workplace protections, and both. This is also one of the key reasons why I founded the Black Maternal Health Caucus with Congresswoman LAUREN UNDERWOOD last year.

I am pleased that the House is taking up the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act today, which will create a clear set of rules for employers to follow that requires them to provide accommodations for pregnant workers to continue to work and support their families.

So sending the message that nowhere in America—nowhere in America—should you have to worry about the health of your pregnancy because your employer won’t accommodate you. Today we will tell millions of American pregnant women that we will prevent them from taking their dreams as far as they can take them.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter from the Maternal Health Coalition, a group of public health organizations, clinical and maternal health organizations outlining their support for this legislation.

Re Support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: As organizations dedicated to ending racial injustice and systemic racism, including dismantling the racism that contributes to this country’s Black maternal health crisis, we write in strong support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694). Congress must do all it can to end workplace Black pregnancy discrimination and promote healthy pregnancies for Black and Latinx and immigrant women, who are disproportionately likely to work in physically demanding jobs that may lead to workers needing modest accommodations to ensure a healthy pregnancy. Too often, however, these requests are refused or ignored, forcing pregnant workers to either work in unsafe conditions or to quit their jobs.

Black mothers have among the highest labor force participation rates in the country and 80 percent of Black mothers are their family’s primary breadwinner.” Yet, historically, Black women are exploited, Black the workplace, and that exploitation continues to this day. Though Black women only comprise 13.4 percent of the population, nearly 15 percent of pregnancy discrimination complaints are filed by Black women.” This is because of the multiple forms of discrimination Black workers and other workers of color often face in the workplace. As scholar Nina Banks has noted, “The legacy of black women’s employment in industries that lack worker protections continues to this day. Though Black women are concentrated in low-paying, inflexible service occupations ...” Black women in low wage jobs working during pregnancy face little support from employers, and Black women do not address pregnancy-related accommodations. Faced with the threat of termination, loss of health insurance, or other negative outcomes, Black women are often forced to keep working which can compromise their health and the health of their pregnancy.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will positively impact Black women’s health and economic security. When Black pregnant people must continue working without accommodations, they risk miscarriage, excessive bleeding, and other devastating health consequences. Black women have the highest incidence of preterm birth and yet we know that work-related risks such as reducing heavy lifting, bending, or excessive standing can help prevent preterm birth, the leading cause of infant mortality in this country.

Black women are also at higher risk of preeclampsia, which is one of the leading causes of maternal mortality. We are still learning about how to prevent this dangerous medical condition, yet we know that simply allowing pregnant workers to take bathroom breaks to reduce the risk of preeclampsia, which is “strongly associated with preeclampsia.” Similarly, ensuring pregnant workers can drink a sufficient amount of water can also help pregnant workers maintain their blood pressure, which is critically important since hypertensive disorders (high blood pressure) are also a leading cause of maternal morbidity and mortality. By putting a national pregnancy accommodation standard in place, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act has the potential to improve the health and wellbeing of Black pregnant people experience. Furthermore, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will help remove one of the barriers Black families at work face by ensuring they are afforded immediate relief under the law, and not thrown into financial dire straits for needing pregnancy accommodations.

Congress has the opportunity to pass legislation to support rather than subordinate Black pregnant workers and workers support from employers when safeguards are in place to take that work. We urge the House of Representatives to support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act and by extension, the health and economic wellbeing of Black pregnant people of color.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Ms. WILD), a member of the Committee on Education and Labor.

Ms. WILD. Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter from business leaders in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. These businesses range from Patagonia to Crab Grab to Chobani to Mastercard to Johnson & Johnson.

SEPTEMBER 15, 2020
DEAR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: Women’s labor force participation is critical to the strength of our economy and the financial security of most modern families. The private sector and our nation’s elected leaders must work together to ensure that working women and families have the protections and opportunities they need to participate fully and equally in the workforce. Twenty leading companies from across states and industries have come together in support of pregnant workers and their families by calling on Congress to pass H.R. 2694, the bipartisan Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, without delay.

More than 40 years ago, Congress passed the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978, which prohibited discrimination against most working people on the basis of pregnancy, childbirth or related medical conditions. Since that time, 30 states and the District of Columbia now require certain employers to provide accommodations to pregnant employees at work. It’s now time to clarify and strengthen existing federal protections for pregnant workers by enacting the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. This bill would ensure that pregnant workers who need reasonable accommodations can receive them and continue to work.

As a business community, we strive to create more equitable workplaces and better conditions for all.
support pregnant women and their families every day. We urge the passage of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act as an important advancement toward ensuring the health, safety, and productivity of our modern workforce—and the workforce of tomorrow.

Ms. WILD. Madam Speaker, as a former lawyer who worked long hours during two pregnancies, it is outrageous to me that, in 2020, 100 years after women finally secured the power to vote, current law does not explicitly guarantee every pregnant worker the right to a reasonable accommodation at work.

I had the luxury of a desk and chair and an office door that closed—not all workers do.

Currently, in order to get an accommodation, a pregnant worker must show that other nonpregnant employees are similarly accommodated. It is beyond absurd. Because the challenges of pregnancy are so unique, it is often difficult to find comparable nonpregnant workers who received similar accommodations.

Fatigue, vomiting, back pain, and frequent urination are more than just nuisances; these are symptoms that can make it impossible to work without accommodation. And that is without mentioning the more serious conditions related to pregnancy.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act secures for pregnant women basic rights to earn a living without jeopardizing their health or the baby’s.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. TORRES SMALL of New Mexico). The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield an additional 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. WILD).

Ms. WILD. Madam Speaker, it protects workers with known limitations related to childbirth, because it is time that all pregnant women and their families are treated equally.

Madam Speaker, I thank leadership, the AFL-CIO, and the Chamber of Commerce for endorsing this bill. I urge a ‘yes’ vote.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Unfortunately, too many pregnant workers, particularly pregnant people of color, face barriers to incorporating even these necessary workplace accommodations help safeguard a healthy pregnancy or prevent harm to a higher-risk pregnancy. Across the country, pregnant workers struggle to ensure simple, no-cost or low-cost, temporary adjustments in their work settings or activities and instead risk being fired or forced to take unpaid leave to preserve the health of their pregnancy. Low-wage pregnant workers in physically demanding jobs, which are disproportionately occupied by people of color, feel the impact most acutely. This impossible choice forces many pregnant workers to continue working without accommodations, putting women and their pregnancies at risk of long-lasting and severe health consequences.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is a measured approach to a serious problem. As the former lawyer who worked long hours with professional colleagues, I understand the importance of reasonable accommodations to ensure that pregnant workers can continue to work, protect their babies.

Women are half of our workforce, and 75 percent of those women will become pregnant at some point. Supporting women during their pregnancies is just as important as prenatel care, immunizations, and birth control, and public education. We can do that by passing this bill, as well as supporting programs like WIC that help new and expecting parents to provide the proper nutrition and developmental supports to their babies.

We all benefit from healthy pregnancy outcomes.

It costs us all when a baby is born prematurely and requires months in intensive care.

It costs us all when a fetus is exposed to toxins in utero because we couldn’t protect the mother from an unhealthy environment and that child then suffers a lifetime of damage that will require public support.

It costs us all when half of our workforce may lose or leave their jobs because pregnant women and mothers are not welcomed or supported in the workplace.

Madam Speaker, I include in the record a public letter from 40 health organizations, clinicians, and maternal health providers who support this bill.

September 14, 2020.

Re Support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Dear Representative: The undersigned public health professionals, health care clinicians, and national health organizations dedicated to the health and well-being of mothers, infants, and families enthusiastically support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 1). As proponents of the Americans with Disabilities Act, the bill would require employers to provide reasonable, temporary workplace accommodations to pregnant workers as the accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer. This bill is critically important because no one should have to choose between having a healthy pregnancy and a paycheck.

Three-quarters of women will be pregnant and employed at some point in their lives. Most pregnant workers can expect a routine pregnancy to go well, but complications can occur. However, health care professionals have consistently recommended that some pregnant individuals make adjustments in their work activities to support their needs and prevent adverse pregnancy outcomes, including preterm birth or miscarriage. These medically necessary workplace accommodations can include allowing additional bathroom breaks, opportunities to stay hydrated, lifting restrictions, or access to a chair or stool to ease time spent standing.

Ms. SCHRIER. Madam Speaker, the bipartisan Pregnant Workers Fairness Act simply ensures that reasonable accommodations are made to help pregnant women work safely, and, in turn, their families and their paychecks.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, can you advise how much time is remaining on each side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia has 15 minutes remaining, and the gentlewoman from North Carolina has 18½ minutes remaining.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAUNO), the chair of the Subcommittee on Labor, Health, and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies.

Ms. DELAUNO. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the bill, and I submit a letter from the National Partnership for Women and Families, a nonprofit, nonpartisan advocacy organization committed to improving the lives of women and families by achieving equity for all women.

September 15, 2020.

The National Partnership for Women & Families is a non-profit, non-partisan advocacy organization committed to improving the lives of women and families by achieving equity for all women. Since our creation as the Women’s Legal Defense Fund in 1971, we have fought for every significant advance for equal opportunity in the workplace, including the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978 and the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (FMLA). We write today in strong support of H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. This bipartisan legislation will support pregnant workers on the job, improving women’s and families’ economic security and achieving healthier pregnancies.

More than 40 years ago, Congress passed the Pregnancy Discrimination Act of 1978, outlawing discrimination on the basis of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions. Yet pregnancy discrimination is still widespread and impacts pregnant workers across industry, race, ethnicity and jurisdiction. Nearly 31,000 pregnancy discrimination charges were filed with the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and state-level fair employment practices agencies between 2010 and 2015, and the reality of pregnancy discrimination is likely much worse than illustrated by EEOC charges. As a result of this discrimination, too many workers choose between their paychecks and a healthy pregnancy. That’s not a choice anyone should have to make.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would create a clear policy standard requiring employers to provide reasonable accommodations to pregnant workers. Support for a law like the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is nearly universal and bipartisan. Eighty-nine percent of voters favor this bill, including 69 percent of voters who strongly favor it. Just this year, 61 weight leading private sector employers endorsed the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act in an open letter to Congress.

More than 85 percent of women will become mothers at some point in their working lives. And sometimes, an accommodation is needed in order for a pregnant worker to continue performing her job. These accommodations are often small changes to their work environment such as additional bathroom breaks, a stool to sit on or the ability to have a water bottle at their workstation. Although minor, these accommodations allow pregnant workers to stay in the workforce and continue to provide for themselves and their families.

Black women are much more likely than white women to file pregnancy discrimination charges; they are also at a higher risk for pregnancy-related complications like labors and preterm births and hypertensive disorders, making reasonable accommodations on the job even more important, and loss of wages and health insurance due to pregnancy discrimination especially challenging.

To date, thirty-one states including the District of Columbia and four cities have passed laws requiring employers to provide reasonable accommodations to pregnant workers. But the ability to maintain a healthy pregnancy and keep a job should not depend on where one lives. Women are a crucial part of the workforce and their participation matters for the growth of our economy and for the stability and wellbeing of families nationwide. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would strengthen existing federal protections, ensure more equitable workplaces and allow women to remain in the workforce, maintain their economic stability while having the accommodations necessary for healthy pregnancies. It is time for the Senate and House to act and for the Senate and House to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Sincerely,

DEBRA L. NESS,
President, National Partnership for Women & Families.

Mrs. CAROLYN B. MALONEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and for his leadership.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of this bill. As a member of the New York City Council, I became the first woman in history to give birth while in office as a council member. There had been many men who had become fathers, but I was the first woman. So I know firsthand how physically draining and stressful it is to work while pregnant.

Some of the only good news coming out of the COVID-19 lockdown is that there has been a dramatic drop in the number of premature births. In Denmark, the rate of babies born preterm dropped by 90 percent during the lockdown. So the accommodations in this bill can keep mothers and babies safe. It is strongly pro-family.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. mcBATH of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote “yes” on this legislation.

This bill is an incredible step in the right direction. Once we ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, we will have an anchor in the Constitution to pass more-employee threshold from the ADA.

Employers currently face great uncertainty about whether, and how, they are required to accommodate pregnant workers. The revised PWFA would clarify an employer’s obligation to accommodate a pregnant employee or applicant with a known limitation that interferes with her ability to perform some essential functions of her position.

The PWFA takes advantage of the widely known and accepted interactive process associated with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) that is used to find reasonable accommodations so they can work while pregnant. This is an important bill to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

In the year 2020, Federal protections for pregnant workers are stuck in the 1950s. Current law does not explicitly guarantee all pregnant workers the right to reasonable accommodations so they can work while pregnant. Safe pregnancies. Reasonable accommodations like a glass of water or a place to sit. These are sensible and, quite frankly, simple requests.

I was pregnant with my twins and then we welcomed our first daughter when I served in the State legislature. While there were obstacles, I could ask for accommodations and did so without fear, but it was still a struggle to secure them, even for a State legislator.

Unfortunately, this is the case for many pregnant workers.

We know that COVID-19 has only exacerbated health inequalities for women, especially women of color. In fact, the most common low-paid jobs for women, like nurses and home health aides, are on the pandemic front lines.

Pregnant women across this country are literally putting their lives on the line. Yet, too often, instead of providing an accommodation routinely given to other workers, her employer will fire her, depriving her of a paycheck and health insurance at a time when she needs them most.

Pregnant workers must never have to choose between maintaining a healthy pregnancy and losing their jobs, especially now when both their health and economic security are crucial.

The demand for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act even stretches across religious, ideological and party lines.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter on behalf of faith-based organizations in support of this vital legislation.

Sincerely, the undersigned:

DeAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of the undersigned religious and faith-based organizations representing a diversity of faith traditions and communities across the nation, we write today in support of healthy workplace environments and conditions for pregnant workers. We urge you to pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694).

People of faith across the ideological spectrum understand that prioritizing the health and safety of pregnant workers should not be a partisan issue. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would ensure that pregnant workers can maintain their health and the health of their pregnancies.

Our faith traditions affirm the dignity of pregnant individuals and the moral imperative of ensuring their safety. We also affirm the obligation of work and the obligation to treat workers justly. It is immoral for an employer to force a worker to choose between a healthy pregnancy and earning a living.

By passing the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694), Congress will ensure that workers who are pregnant will be treated fairly in the workplace and can continue to support themselves and their families. Efforts to distract from the central goal of ensuring pregnant workers can maintain their health and the health of their pregnancies by inserting unnecessary, harmful, and politically divisive language into this bill undermine our vision to protect pregnant workers across our country.

While many pregnant individuals continue working throughout their pregnancies, without this protection, there are instances when minor accommodations are necessary at the workplace to ensure the safety of the expecting mother and the baby. All too often, requests for simple workplace accommodations like a stool to sit, a water bottle, or a bathroom break are denied. Within the COVID-19 context, each critical accommodation might include proper protective equipment, telework, or staggered work schedules that offer employees commute times which avoid crowded public transportation and increased exposure. Currently, pregnant workers may continue to work without necessary accommodations because they fear losing their jobs and need the income, thus endangering their health or the health of their pregnancy.

Without these protections, it is not uncommon for pregnant workers to be let go or forced out onto unpaid leave for requesting accommodations. Many others must quit their job to avoid risking the health of their pregnancy.

Passing the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is a moral and economic imperative; two-thirds of women who had their first child between 2006 and 2010 were pregnant during pregnancy, and 88 percent of these first-time mothers worked into their last trimester. Keeping these women healthy and in the workforce is paramount to family economic security. Nearly 25 million mothers with children under 18 are in the workforce, making up nearly 1 in 6 of about 3 in 4 mothers in the workforce are working full time. Millions of families rely on their earnings. In 2017, 41 percent of mothers were the sole or primary provider for their families, while 20.3 percent of mothers were co-breadwinners. Whole families suffer when pregnant workers are forced out of a job.

We, the undersigned religious and faith-based groups are united in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. We strongly urge you to vote for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act and to vote against any motion to recommit that may be offered.

Sincerely, the undersigned:

Ms. WASSERMAN SCHULTZ. People of faith and across the ideological spectrum recognize that prioritizing the health and safety of pregnant workers should not be a partisan issue.

It is past time for workplaces to accommodate our families and protect pregnant workers. They are the ones... who keep our economy and communities running.

I urge my colleagues to vote "yes" on this long overdue legislation.

Re Support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Dear Representative: On behalf of the March of Dimes, one of the leading non-profit organization fighting for the health of all moms and babies and promotes the health of women, children and families across the life course, we enthusiastically support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act of 2019, color-coded after the Americans with Disabilities Act, the bill would require employers to provide reasonable, temporary workplace accommodations for pregnant workers as long as the accommodation does not impose an undue hardship on the employer.

This bill is critically important because no one should have to choose between having a healthy pregnancy and a paycheck.

Three-quarters of women will be pregnant and employed at some point in their lives. Most pregnant workers can expect a normal pregnancy and healthy birth. However, healthcare providers have consistently recommended women make adjustments in their work activities to sustain a healthy pregnancy and prevent adverse pregnancy outcomes, including preterm labor, low birthweight. Workplace accommodations are medically necessary and can include allowing additional bathroom breaks, opportunities to stay hydrated, lifting restrictions, or access to a chair or stool to decrease time spent standing.

Workplace accommodations are medically necessary and can include allowing additional bathroom breaks, opportunities to stay hydrated, lifting restrictions, or access to a chair or stool to decrease time spent standing.

Three-quarters of women will be pregnant and employed at some point in their lives. Most pregnant workers can expect a normal pregnancy and healthy birth. However, healthcare providers have consistently recommended women make adjustments in their work activities to sustain a healthy pregnancy and prevent adverse pregnancy outcomes, including preterm labor, low birthweight. Some of this stress may cause serious health problems, like high blood pressure, which could lead to problems like preeclampsia and premature birth, conditions that have higher impact at higher income rates than white women and contribute to this country’s Black maternal health crisis.

Therefore, it is imperative that pregnant women are protected and provided the necessary and reasonable accommodations, to ensure that they are able to continue working and maintain healthy pregnancies.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is a measured approach to a serious problem. March of Dimes understands the importance of reasonable workplace accommodations to ensure a healthy, full-term pregnancy. We urge swift passage of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Sincerely,

ARIEL GONZALEZ, ESQ.,
MA, Senior Vice President, Public Policy & Government Affairs, March of Dimes, Ms. TLAIB. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

In my district and across the country, pregnancy discrimination persists, especially against people of color and immigrant women.

When companies refuse to accommodate for pregnancy-related needs, it doesn’t just hurt the person being discriminated against, it hurts the entire family, especially when nearly half of working women are the sole or primary provider for their families.

It is time for families first over corporate greed. We must ensure that no pregnant person is forced to quit, coerced into taking unpaid leave, or fired because their employer refuses to accommodate them.

We must protect the more than 85 percent of women who will become mothers at some point in their working lives.

On behalf of all the beautiful mothers in my district, #13DistrictStrong, I thank Chairman NADLER for his leadership, and I urge support for this bill.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. NEGUSE).

Mr. NEGUSE. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

I thank Chairman NADLER for introducing this vital bill, and I also thank Chairman SCOTT for his incredible leadership and his work in getting it to the floor.

Ending discrimination against pregnant workers is a critical component in closing the economic divide between men and women in our country.

Before coming to Congress, I ran Colorado’s Consumer Protection Agency, which includes our State’s civil rights division, and I can close in the complaints that we adjudicated the unfortunate reality is that women are often denied even the simplest of workplace accommodations because they are pregnant, and too often women are forced out or not considered for hire due to their pregnancy. This must end.

And we have an incredible opportunity to do precisely that by getting this bill across the finish line today.

I am a proud supporter of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, and I would encourage every Member of this body to vote “aye” on this critical legislation.

Madam Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a letter from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, a 1.4 million-member organization highlighting their support for this critical legislation.

International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Washington, D.C.

Dear Representative: On behalf of the 1.4 million members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, I urge you to support H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, when it comes to the floor next week. The Teamsters Union is proud to support this important legislation which would promote healthy pregnancies and economic security for pregnant women.

In the last few decades, there has been a demographic shift in the workplace. Women now make up almost half of the workforce. There are more pregnant workers than ever before and they are working later into their pregnancies.

Yet, too often, instead of providing a pregnant worker with an accommodation, her employer will force her onto unpaid leave, depriving her of a paycheck and health insurance at a time when she needs them most.

What this discrimination affects women across race, ethnicity and economic status, women of color and low-wage workers are disproportionately impacted. Women of color are more likely to hold certain inflexible and physically demanding jobs that can present specific challenges for pregnant workers, making reasonable accommodations on the job even more important.

In 2018, the New York Times ran a front page article detailing the tragic loss experienced by a number of women working at a Verizon fulfillment center warehouse in Memphis, TN, operated by XPO Logistics and previously operated by New Breed Logistics. New Breed and XPO would be quite familiar at this point, as they have garnered considerable press attention in recent weeks. Postmaster General Louis DeJoy was CEO of New Breed and served on the XPO Board during the time at which these tragedies took place.

The women who worked at the Memphis warehouse generally shift hours, pulling moving boxes full of Verizon cell phones and other devices. Upon becoming pregnant, all had asked for reasonable accommodations, including light duty, but were denied. Women said that they even brought in doctors’ notes recommending less-taxing workloads and shorter shifts, but supervisors disregarded the letters.

Certainly, some of these women considered leaving their jobs with New Breed-XPO, or taking unpaid leaves to protect their and their unborn child’s health, but at an average hourly wage of $11/hr, unpaid leave and elective terms of unemployment are entirely unrealistic.

In response to the New York Times article and additional coverage by the Los Angeles Times and the PBS Newshour, nearly 100 members of the Teamsters submitted a letter to the House Committee on Education and Labor urging investigation into the discriminatory treatment of workers at the Memphis facility. With pressure mounting, XPO solicited the counsel of an outside expert to draft an internal policy to address the needs of pregnant workers. This was a step in the right direction, but it should not take congressional action and national press coverage to compel an employer to do the right thing. Make no mistake, this new XPO policy only exists because of the workers in Memphis who stood up and spoke out.

Unfortunately, XPO’s new policy has zero chance of being adopted at the Memphis facility. Two months after announcing the policy, XPO Logistics abruptly announced that it would shut down the warehouse where all of this was taking place. In the New York Times article had worked. This action creates a chilling effect on other workers who might choose to access reasonable accommodations at XPO. What is going to feel comfortable asking for reasonable accommodation when the end result of speaking up might be job loss? Key among its many protections is that H.R. 2694 would prohibit retaliation against pregnant workers who request accommodation.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act will provide a predictable rule: employers must provide reasonable accommodations for limitations arising out of pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions, unless this would pose an undue hardship. No woman should have to choose between providing for her family and maintaining a healthy pregnancy. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would ensure that all women working for covered employers would be protected.

The Teamsters Union is proud to stand with XPO workers and all pregnant workers demanding change. I urge you to stand up to unscrupulous employers like XPO and swiftly enact H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Sincerely,

JAMES P. HOFFA, General President.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is a great disappointment to me that I will be voting against this legislation more so today. My Republican colleagues and I have long been committed to policies and laws that empower all Americans to achieve success, and this includes protections in Federal law for pregnant workers. We agree that discrimination of any type should be eradicated, and no one should ever be denied an opportunity because of unlawful discrimination. I will repeat that, Madam Speaker. We agree that discrimination of any type should not be tolerated, and no one should ever be denied an opportunity because of unlawful discrimination.

After meaningful and necessary bipartisan improvements were made to H.R. 2694 during the committee markup, it is unfortunate today’s legislation falls short in protecting one of our Nation’s most treasured rights, freedom of religion, the first right mentioned in the Bill of Rights.

Democracy’s refusal to include a comprehensive provision that protects religious organizations from being forced to make employment decisions that conflict with their faith is short-sighted, disappointing, and easy to fix.

Madam Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Madam Speaker, I include in the RECORD a letter in support of the legislation from the National WIC Association, that is Women, Infants, and Children, Association, in favor of the legislation, and another letter from the ACLU, the American Civil Liberties Union.

NATIONAL WIC ASSOCIATION LETTER IN SUPPORT OF H.R. 2694, PREGNANT WORKERS FAIRNESS ACT.

On behalf of the National WIC Association, the 12,000 WIC state and local service provider agencies we represent, and the over six million mothers, babies, and young children our members serve, we enthusiastically support passage of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694). The accommodations established by this bill are urgently needed to assure healthy pregnancies for working mothers served by WIC.

WIC providers serve approximately half of all babies born in the United States with nutrition support and counseling throughout pregnancy, the postpartum period, and early childhood. WIC’s nutrition intervention has successfully supported positive birth outcomes by reducing preterm birth and other complications that can lead to lifelong health conditions and significant healthcare costs. Nutrition interventions and psycho-social hydration—is vital for the health of a pregnancy, but additional protections are needed to address the factors that influence pregnancy and birth outcomes.

This bill wisely extends the workplace accommodations framework—first developed in the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA)—to ensure that employers are taking reasonable steps to minimize risks to employees’ pregnancies. Simple modifications to the workplace such as a stool to sit on, relief from her heavy bottle to carry can contribute to the health of the pregnancy without taking drastic action that inhibits the pregnant worker’s economic security and basic human needs.

This balanced and effective approach, already familiar to employers from the ADA context, will work in tandem with other medical and nutrition precautions to ensure positive birth outcomes and healthy infants.

Women now constitute the majority of the American workforce. Three-quarters of working women are expected to be both pregnant and employed during their adult lives. Without a clear legal standard, pregnant workers may be forced to choose between working and maintaining food on the table, and the health of their pregnancy. This burden is even more acute for the approximately twenty percent of working women who live in households that earn less than 185 percent of the federal poverty line, which is the income threshold for WIC participation. Of these 15.2 million women, 59 percent (approximately nine million) are working part-time.

No pregnant worker should have to choose between the health of their pregnancy and their livelihood. As direct-service providers and advocates for pregnant and postpartum women, the WIC community strongly supports efforts that advance sensible policy to safeguard the health of pregnant women. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act is a thoughtful solution that will complement WIC’s tireless efforts to support expectant mothers as they seek a healthy start for their babies. We urge swift passage of this critical legislation.

Sincerely,

REV. DOUGLAS GREENAWAY, President & CEO, National WIC Association.

Re Vote YES for the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (H.R. 2694).

DEAR MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: On behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, and our more than 2.2 million members, supporters, and activists, we write to express our support for H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. This critical legislation would combat an all-too-common form of pregnancy discrimination while also providing employers much-needed clarity on their obligations under the law. Members of the House of Representatives vote in favor of this measure, bipartisan, and long-overdue legislation and to oppose the motion to recommit.

The ACLU has long fought to advance women’s equality and opportunity by challenging laws and policies that discriminate against women in the workplace and by dismantling the stereotypes that constrain women’s full engagement and participation at work. Although the Pregnancy Discrimination Act has played a critical role over the past 40 years in securing women’s place in the workforce, too many women continue to be marginalized at work because of their decision to become pregnant and have children. This kind of discriminatory treatment has become most obvious when pregnant workers’ demand for family-friendly accommodations that enable them to balance their careers, family and personal life is met with punishing and often retaliatory employment policies. This discrimination leads to unlawful termination and harassment from employers, punishment of co-workers, and the destruction of personal and professional relationships.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would address this problem by requiring employers with fifteen or more employees to provide reasonable and temporary accommodations to pregnant workers if doing so would not impose an undue hardship on the business.

PREGNANCY DISCRIMINATION, THE PDA, AND YOUNG V. UPS, INC.

Pregnancy and childbirth are often locus of gender discrimination within in the workplace. Policies excluding or forcing the discharge of pregnant women from the workplace were common in the 1970s and re-flected the stereotype that a woman’s primary or sole duties were to be a homemaker and raise children. The adoption of the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA) in 1978, an amendment to Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, established that discrimination because of “pregnancy, childbirth, and related medical conditions” was a form of disrimination “because of sex.” It was intended to dismantle the stereotype, and the policies based on it, that viewed pregnant women’s labor force participation as contingent, temporary, or dispensable without regard to their individual capacity to do the job in question.

September 17, 2020
The PDA also required employers to treat pregnant workers the same as other temporarily disabled workers because Congress recognized that working women contributed to the economic stability of their families and should not have to choose between a career and continuing a pregnancy. Despite the PDA, pregnancy discrimination persists, and for many pregnant workers, pregnancy is an employment-related medical condition that results in a temporary or permanent work restriction against workers who brought pregnancy accommodation cases where they alleged discrimination when an employer provided a job modification to a non-pregnant worker who was temporarily unable to work but failed to do the same for a pregnant worker.

In Myers v. Rural/Metro Corp., the Supreme Court granted certiorari to resolve a split in the Courts and for the first time addressed the PDA’s application in the context of an employee who needed an accommodation due to pregnancy. The Court concluded that the statute’s mandate applied with equal force in these circumstances and articulated a modified analysis for failure-to-accommodate cases. The Court also offered a new pretext analysis that plaintiffs may rely on when litigating claims under the PDA. Since Van Vliet and the reflexive approval of employer policies favoring workers with occupational injuries has largely disappeared. However, the bright-line deference to employer policies, and the overbreadth reading of such policies as “pregnancy-blind,” has been replaced, in many instances, with an unduly demanding standard for plaintiffs, leading to a showing of differential treatment—even at the initial pleading stage, prior to having the benefit of discovery. This trend undermines Young’s intent that employers make reasonable failures to accommodate pregnancy. Instead, they impose unwarranted—and often insurmountable—bureaucracy of proving on pregnant workers to avoid the condition, seeking “least favored nation” status on the protected trait of pregnancy. The stories of clients of the ACLU has represented—both as direct counsel and as lead amicus—illustrate the harm.

Lochner v. Suffolk County: Sandra Lochren and five other police officers sued the Suffolk County Police Department (SCPD) for refusing to temporarily reassign pregnant officers to deskwork and other non-patrol jobs, even though it did so for officers injured on the job for those officers who opted to keep working patrol. SCPD also failed to provide bulletproof vests or gun belts that would fit pregnant officers. The SCPD’s only option was to go on unpaid leave before their due dates.

Cole v. SavaSeniorCare: When Jaimie Cole, a certified nursing assistant, was in her third trimester, she developed a high risk of preclampsia, a condition that can lead to preterm labor or even death. Her doctor advised her not to do any heavy lifting. Cole’s job required her to help patients in and out of bed and assist with bathing, so she asked for a temporary light-duty assignment. Instead, her employer sent her home without pay for the rest of her pregnancy.

Myers v. Hope Healthcare Center: Asia Myers, a certified nursing assistant, experienced early labor in her pregnancy and was told by her doctor that she should not continue to work, but should not do any lifting on the job. Although her employer had a policy of second-shift duty to younger workers with temporary lifting restrictions, Myers was told not to return to work until her restrictions were lifted. She was out of work for over a month with no income or health insurance coverage.

Hicks v. City of Tuscaloosa: Stephanie Hicks, a narcotics investigator with the Tuscaloosa Police Department, was told in her third trimester to take a light-duty assignment due to an ill-fitting vest that put her at risk. Legg v. Ulster County: Corrections Officer Ann Marie Legg was told by her doctor that she could not do any lifting during her pregnancy even though Ulster County gave such assignments to guards injured on the job. In her third trimester, Legg had to intervene in a situation and go leave rather than face future risks.

Allen v. AT&T Mobility: Cynthia Allen lost her job because she accumulated too many points under the company’s punitive attendance policy due to pregnancy-related symptoms such as nausea. The policy makes accommodation for late arrivals, early departures, and absences due to thirteen enumerated reasons, some medical and some not, but none due to pregnancy and pregnancy-related symptoms.

Durham v. Rural/Metro Corp.: Michelle Durham was an EMT in Alabama whose job often required her to lift patients on stretchers into an ambulance. When she became pregnant, her employer imposed a restriction on heavy lifting. Durham asked Rural/Metro for a temporary modified duty assignment, but when her request was rejected, despite the company’s policy of giving such assignments to others. She was told her only option was to take unpaid leave.

It is indisputable that Young was an important step forward to combat pregnancy discrimination. Yet, too many pregnant workers continue to face insurmountable obstacles in HR offices, where employers misunderstand their obligations under the PDA, and in courtrooms across the country, where judges use Young to hinder access to needed accommodations. The current legal landscape leaves exposed and unprotected those pregnant workers who want to continue working while maintaining a healthy pregnancy. Similarly, many pregnant workers have not found protection or recourse under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 because absent accommodations, pregnancy is not considered a disability that substantially limits a major life activity. This legal reality means that many of the symptoms of a normal pregnancy that can disrupt a worker’s ability to do her job such as extreme fatigue, morning sickness, or limitations on her mobility are not entitled to accommodation. Moreover, pregnant workers seek accommodation precisely because they wish to avoid the conditions that might disable them or endanger their pregnancy. Yet because the ADA is so expansive with respect to other conditions that qualify as disabilities, the population of non-pregnant workers entitled to accommodations is exponentially larger than when the PDA was enacted more than 40 years ago.

Accordingly, without such express entitlement to accommodation, pregnant workers face an untenable “least favored nation” status in the workplace.

The simple solution to this no-win situation is the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. This legislation, modeled after the ADA and using a framework familiar to most employers, takes a thoughtful and measured approach to balancing the needs of working women and employers by requiring businesses with fifteen or more employees to provide workers with temporary, reasonable accommodations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions if doing so would not place an undue hardship on business. It also prohibits employers from discharging pregnant employees to take a leave of absence if a reasonable accommodation can be provided; prevents employers from denying job opportunities to an applicant or employee because of the individual’s need for a reasonable accommodation; prevents an employer from forcing an applicant or employee to accept a specific accommodation; and prohibits retaliation against individuals who seek to use PWFA to protect their rights.

Pregnant women constitute nearly 60 percent of the workforce and contribute significantly to their families’ economic well-being, passage of PWFA is a dire necessity. When a pregnant worker is forced to quit, co-opted into taking unpaid leave, or fired because her employer refuses to provide a temporary job modification, the economic impact is severe. If fight or flight, this primary breadwinner for her children, as nearly half of working women are, her entire family will be without an income when they most need it. She further may be denied unemployment benefits because she is considered to have left her job voluntarily. She may have few if any additional resources on which to rely. PWFA ensures that women would not face such devastating consequences. Instead, it treats pregnancy for what it is—a normal condition of employment.

PWFA promotes women’s health. Accommodations make a difference in physically demanding jobs (requiring long hours, standing, lifting heavy objects, etc.) where the risk of preterm delivery, maternal and infant death, and in courtrooms across the country, where judges use Young to hinder access to needed accommodations. This bill would be an important contribution in the fight to improve maternal health and mortality.

There is also a strong business case for PWFA. Providing pregnant employees with reasonable accommodations increases worker productivity, retention, and morale, and reduces health care costs associated with pregnancy complications. PWFA can also reduce litigation costs by providing greater clarity regarding an employer’s legal obligations to pregnant workers. In fact, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce stated that PWFA would establish “clear guidelines and a balanced process that works for employers and employees alike.” Additionally, a group of over 300 non-private sector employers expressed their support for PWFA and noted “women’s labor force participation is critical to the strength of our companies, the growth of our economy and the financial security of most modern families.”

Finally, 30 states across the political and ideological spectrum have recognized the benefits of providing reasonable accommodations to pregnant workers. Congress should ensure that all pregnant workers, not just some, have the protections they need.

It is time for Congress to act and pass the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

Sincerely,

RONALD NEWMAN,
National Political Director

GILLIAN THOMAS,
Senior Staff Attorney

VANIA LEVIELLE,
Senior Legislative Counsel

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, as I am sure each person in this Chamber can agree, it is simply unacceptable that many pregnant workers have to choose between their pregnancy and a healthy pregnancy because they cannot access reasonable accommodations to continue working safely.
As my colleagues have pointed out, most accommodations, which can include water, seating, and more frequent restroom breaks, are not complex or costly. Yet without these simple accommodations, health risks to pregnant workers can be significant and potentially tragic.

The COVID–19 pandemic poses increased risks for pregnant workers at a time when pregnant women comprise 62 percent of frontline workers, including more than 75 percent of healthcare workers.

Passing the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act today, we can take a strong bipartisan step to guarantee that all pregnant workers have access to basic workplace protections.

Madam Speaker, once again, I urge my colleagues to support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. HAALAND. Madam Speaker, today we act so that women will no longer experience the fear that they cannot earn their family’s financial security while they are pregnant.

As the number of women who work as the primary breadwinners in their households continues to rise, this financial insecurity rises as well.

While growing up, my mother was forced out of the Navy because she was pregnant. Although times have changed, mothers are still being forced out of their employment due to the absence of reasonable accommodations.

I know first-hand the pressures of being that single source of income for my household, and I have seen how Black and Latina workers are overrepresented in low-wage, physically demanding jobs that need pregnancy accommodations for them to stay safe.

More than a decade ago, the Americans with Disabilities Act was amended to better implement the principle that physical or mental disabilities should be met with reasonable accommodations.

Pregnancy is not considered a disability under the ADA, however, enabling employers to deny reasonable accommodations like allowing pregnant employees to sit on a stool rather than stand during a long shift.

This bill would correct that, and I would like to include in the RECORD a letter from the Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities addressing to Chairman SCOTT and Ranking Member FOXX in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

New Mexico is one of thirty states that have enacted laws to protect access to reasonable accommodations for pregnant workers. They may have safe working conditions and, if they are denied that, the right to receive lost pay and compensatory damages.

Millions of pregnant workers in these states have benefited from these protections, but a pregnant employee’s ability to work safely should not depend on where in this country she lives.

The Pregnant Workers’ Fairness Act, which is endorsed by nearly 200 worker advocates, civil rights groups and the business community, will hold every employer in our country, across state lines, to these same standards.

As we hear horrific stories of immigrant women forced to have hysterectomies and lose their ability to have children, we are reminded that the health, safety and wellbeing of all women is not something we can turn a blind eye to, whether those women work in boardrooms, on a factory floor, or in a hospital.

I support this legislation because no expectant mother should risk her health or that of her unborn child to stay financially stable.

I urge my colleagues to vote yes on this historic bill.

Mr. COHEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act. This meaningful legislation will protect pregnant workers who have suffered because of insufficient workplace protections, a story far too familiar to many workers who call Memphis home.

Two years ago, I was shocked to read of the disturbing workplace abuses in an XPO warehouse in Memphis. Warehouse workers were denied minor and reasonable accommodations like less taxing workloads and shortened work shifts. As a result, several women suffered miscarriages, some of which happened while they were still on the warehouse floor.

I, along with Congresswoman DELAUR and ninety-five of my colleagues, wrote to the Education and Labor Committee to urge the 115th Congress to take decisive action and consider the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

The 116th Congress has rightly given this bill the attention it deserves, and this bill will give pregnant workers the protections that are past-due. No employee should be forced to choose between their job and their health. I appreciated the opportunity to participate in the Education and Labor Committee’s Subcommittee hearing on this bill, and I am pleased to support the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act’s consideration today.

Ms. JACKSON LEE. Madam Speaker, as a senior member of the Judiciary, Homeland Security, and Budget Committees, I am very pleased to be here today. As a co-sponsor, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act (PWFA), which would ensure that pregnant workers can continue to do their jobs and support their families by requiring employers to make workplace adjustments for those workers who need them due to pregnancy, childbirth, and related medical conditions, like breastfeeding.

The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act would establish that private sector employers with more than 15 employees and public sector employers must make reasonable accommodations for pregnant employees, job applicants, and individuals with known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

Similar to the Americans with Disabilities Act, employers are not required to make an accommodation if it imposes an undue hardship on an employer’s business.

Pregnant workers and individuals with known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions cannot be denied employment opportunities, retaliated against for requesting a reasonable accommodation, or forced to take paid or unpaid leave if Workers denied a reasonable accommodation under the Pregnancy Workers Fairness Act will have the same rights and remedies as those established under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, including recovery of lost pay, compensatory damages, and reasonable attorneys' fees.

While the Pregnancy Discrimination Act (PDA) and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) provide some protections for pregnant workers, there is currently no federal law that explicitly and affirmatively guarantees all pregnant workers the right to a reasonable accommodation so they can continue working without jeopardizing their pregnancy.

The Supreme Court's landmark decision in Young v. United Parcel Service, 575 U.S. No. 12–1226, 135 S.Ct. 1338 (2015) allowed pregnant women to bring reasonable accommodation discrimination claims under the PDA.

But pregnant workers are still being denied accommodations because the Young decision set an unwieldy high standard for proving discrimination, requiring workers to prove that their employers accommodated non-pregnant workers with similar limitations.

As a result, in two-thirds of cases after Young, courts ruled against pregnant workers who were seeking accommodations under the PDA.

Providing accommodations ensures that women can work safely while pregnant instead of getting pushed out of work at a time when they may need their income the most. The Pregnancy Discrimination Act is especially important considering that many pregnant workers hold physically demanding or hazardous jobs, and thus may be especially likely to need reasonable accommodations at some point during their pregnancy.

Madam Speaker, research shows that pregnant workers are likely to hold jobs that involve standing and making continuous movements, which can raise specific challenges during pregnancy.

Such physically demanding work—including jobs that require prolonged standing, long work hours, irregular work schedules, heavy lifting, or high physical activity—carries an increased risk of pre-term delivery and low birth weight.

Twenty-one (20.9) percent of pregnant workers are employed in low-wage jobs, which are particularly likely to be physically demanding.

Pregnant black and Latina women are disproportionately represented in low-wage jobs, which means as a result, these workers are especially likely to walk or run continuously during work, and therefore may be more likely to need an accommodation at some point during pregnancy to continue to work safely.

Three in ten pregnant workers are employed in four of the occupations that make up the backbones of our communities: elementary school teachers, nurses and home health aides.

Employers can accommodate pregnant workers because pregnant women make up a small share of the workforce, even in the occupations where they are most likely to work, which means that only a very small share of an employer’s workforce is likely to require pregnancy accommodations in any given year since less than two percent of all workers in the U.S. are pregnant each year.

Not all pregnant workers require any form of accommodation at work, so only a fraction of that small fraction will need accommodations.

For example, pregnant women are most likely to work as elementary and middle school teachers but only three percent (3.2 percent) of all elementary and middle school teachers are pregnant women.

But workers employed in four of the ten most common occupations for pregnant workers—retail salesperson; waiter or waitress; nursing, psychiatric and home health aide; and cashier—who report continuously standing on the job would particularly benefit from this legislation.

Madam Speaker, prolonged standing at work has been shown to more than triple the odds of pregnant women taking leave during pregnancy or becoming unemployed.

Another four of the ten most common occupations for pregnant workers—cashier; and secretaries and administrative assistants—involving repetitive motions continuously on the job which have been shown to increase the likelihood of pregnant women taking leave during pregnancy.

Pregnant workers in low-wage jobs are particularly in need of this legislation granting them the clear legal right to receive accommodations because, in addition to the physically demanding nature of their jobs, they often face inflexible workplace cultures that make it difficult to informally address pregnancy-related needs.

For instance, workplace flexibility—such as the ability to alter start and end times or take time off for a doctor’s appointment—is extremely limited for workers in low-wage jobs.

Over 40 percent of full-time workers in low-wage jobs report that their employers do not permit them to decide when to take breaks; between two-thirds and three-quarters of full-time workers in low-wage jobs report that they are unable to choose their start and quit times; and roughly half report having very little or no control over the scheduling of hours more generally.

The second most common occupation for pregnant workers is housekeeping cleaners—is especially physically demanding because, according to the data, 80 percent of maids and housekeeping cleaners stood continuously, 38 percent were exposed to disease daily, and 70 percent walked or ran continuously on the job.

Occupations that have seen the most growth among pregnant women in the past decade expose many workers to disease or infection daily; depending on the disease, this can pose particular challenges to some pregnant workers at some points during pregnancy.

When pregnant workers are exposed to some diseases, they face particular risks; pregnant women with rubella are at risk for miscarriage or stillbirth and their developing fetuses are at risk for serious birth defects.

Madam Speaker, no one should have to choose between a paycheck and a healthy pregnancy, which is why they should have clear rights to reasonable accommodations on the job to ensure they are not forced off the job they they need to afford it.

I urge all Members to join me in voting for H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentlewoman opposed to the bill?

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I am in its current form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk reads as follows:

Ms. Foxx of North Carolina moves to recommit the bill (H.R. 2984) to the Committee on Education and Labor with instructions to report the bill back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Pregnant Workers Fairness Act”.

SEC. 2. NONDISCRIMINATION WITH REGARD TO REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS RELATED TO PREGNANCY.

It shall be an unlawful employment practice for a covered entity to—

(1) not make reasonable accommodations to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of a qualified employee, unless such covered entity can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its business of such covered entity;

(2) if a qualified employee affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions to accept an accommodation other than any reasonable accommodation arrived at through the interactive process referred to in section 5(7);

(3) deny employment opportunities to a qualified employee if such denial is based on the nonexistence of a qualified entity to make reasonable accommodations to the known limitations related to the pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions of the employee.

SEC. 3. REMEDIES AND ENFORCEMENT.

(a) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY TITLE VII OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in sections 705, 706, 707, 708, 710, and 711 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e–4 et seq.) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(b) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY CONGRESSIONAL ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 1995 OR 1996.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in the Congressional Accountability Act of 1996 (2 U.S.C. 1301 et seq.) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging a violation of section 101 of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1301) or any person alleging a violation of section 201(a) of such Act (2 U.S.C. 1311(a)(1)) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures provided to the Board or any person, respectively, alleging an unlawful employment practice in violation of this Act against an employee described in section 3(10)(a) as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this subsection.

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–4(b) and (c)) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the President, the Commission, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–4(b) and (c)) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Board or any person alleging such practice against the President, the Commission, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(b) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY SECTION 717 OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (2 U.S.C. 2000e–16) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice.

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(c) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY SECTION 717A OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1964.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717A of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (2 U.S.C. 2000e–16a) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 717A(a) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16a)(B) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice.

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 717A of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16a) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the President, the Commission, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(d) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE RIGHTS ACT OF 1991.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 302(a)(1) of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1311(a)(1)) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 302(a) of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1311(a)(1)) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice.

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 302(a)(1) of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (2 U.S.C. 1311(a)(1)) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the President, the Commission, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(e) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY SECTION 717 OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1995.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Civil Rights Act of 1995 (42 U.S.C. 1988) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 717 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice.

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(f) EMPLOYEES COVERED BY SECTION 717 OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1995.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Civil Rights Act of 1995 (42 U.S.C. 1988) to the Commission, the Attorney General, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(2) COSTS AND FEES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in subsections (b) and (c) of section 717 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission, the Librarian of Congress, or any person alleging such practice.

(3) DAMAGES.—The powers, remedies, and procedures provided in section 717 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988) shall be the powers, remedies, and procedures this Act provides to the Commission, the Librarian of Congress, or any person alleging such practice (not an employment practice specifically excluded from coverage under section 717A(a)(1) of the Revised Statutes).

(g) PROHIBITION AGAINST RETALIATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No person shall discriminate against any employee because such employee has opposed any act or practice made unlawful by this Act or because such employee made a charge, testimony, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under this Act.

(2) PROHIBITION AGAINST COERCION.—It shall be unlawful to coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with any individual in the exercise or enjoyment of, or on account of such individual having exercised or enjoyed, or on account of such individual having encouraged any other individual in the exercise or enjoyment of, any right granted or protected by this Act.

(h) REMEDY.—The remedies and procedures otherwise provided for under this section shall be available to aggrieved individuals with respect to violations of this subsection.

Explanation.—No claim or action shall be brought under sections (a)(3), (b)(3), (c)(3), (d)(3), and (e)(3), if an unlawful employment practice involves the discharge of a complaining employee pursuant to this Act or regulations implementing this Act, damages may not be awarded under section 717A of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 2000e–16a). Such an action or proceeding demonstrates good faith efforts, in consultation with the employee with known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions which has informed the covered entity that accommodation is needed, to identify and make a reasonable accommodation that would enable such employee with an equally effective opportunity and would not cause an undue hardship on the operation of the covered entity.

SEC. 4. RULEMAKING.

Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall issue regulations in an accessible format in accordance with subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code, to carry out this Act. Such regulations shall provide examples of reasonable accommodations addressing known limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

SEC. 5. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—
(1) the term “Commission” means the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission;
(2) the term “covered entity”—
(A) has the meaning given the term “respondent” in section 701(n) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e(n)); and
(B) includes any employer, which means a person engaged in industry affecting commerce who has 15 or more employees as defined in section 77(e)(1) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e(b)), subject to the applicability to religious employment as set forth in section 702(a) of title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-1(a));
(3) an entity employing a State employee described in section 304(a) of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-16(a)); and
(4) an entity to which section 717(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-16(a)) applies;
(5) the term “employee” means—
(A) an employee (including an applicant), as defined in section 701(f) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e(f));
(B) an employee (including an applicant), as defined in section 101 of the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (2 U.S.C. 1301);
(C) a covered employee (including an applicant), as defined in section 411(c) of title 3, United States Code;
(D) a State employee (including an applicant) to which section 304(a) of the Government Employee Rights Act of 1991 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-16(a)) applies;
(E) an employee (including an applicant) to which section 717(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e-16(a)) applies;
(6) the term “person” has the meaning given such term in section 701(a) of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000e(a)); and
(7) the terms “reasonable accommodation” and “undue hardship” have the meanings given such terms in section 101 of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12111) and shall be construed as such terms are construed under such Act and as set forth in the regulations required by this Act, including with regard to the interactive process that will typically be used to determine an appropriate reasonable accommodation.

SEC. 6. WAIVER OF STATE IMMUNITY.

A State shall not be immune under the 11th Amendment to the Constitution from an action in a Federal or State court of competent jurisdiction for a violation of this Act. In any action against a State for a violation of this Act, remedies (including remedies both at law and in equity) are available for such a violation to the same extent as such remedies are available for such a violation in an action against any public or private entity other than a State.

SEC. 7. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to invalidate or limit the powers, remedies, and procedures under any Federal law or law of any State or political subdivision of any State or State or local governmental entity, or equal protection for individuals affected by pregnancy, childbirth, or related medical conditions.

SEC. 8. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act or the application of that provision to particular persons or circumstances is held invalid or found to conflict with Federal or State law, such invalidity or conflict shall not affect other persons or circumstances to which the Act and the application of that provision to particular persons or circumstances shall not be affected.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina (during the reading). Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from North Carolina is recognized for 5 minutes in support of her motion.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, this motion is the final opportunity to amend this legislation, and it would do so without any delay in passage.

Madam Speaker, Republicans support protections in Federal law for pregnant workers, and we believe employers should be required to make reasonable accommodations for pregnant workers.

I support the provisions in H.R. 2694, which were previously outlined during the general debate. I also recognize that improvements to the bill were made at a bipartisan discussion, and I commend Chairman SCOTT for his outreach in this regard.

Unfortunately, despite our agreement on these changes, there remains an important outstanding issue that must be resolved. The bill before us today does not include the longstanding provision from the Civil Rights Act that protects religious organizations from being forced to make employment decisions that conflict with their faith. The motion to recommit adds this important protection.

This very limited provision is already in current law, and it allows religious organizations to make religiously based employment decisions.

Without this longstanding Civil Rights Act provision, H.R. 2694 will create confusion and legal risk for religious organizations in their religiously based employment decisions.

At least 16 States and the District of Columbia in their pregnancy discrimination or pregnancy accommodation laws also include a provision similar to the Civil Rights Act religious organization protection.

In fact, a Democrat-invited witness at a committee hearing highlighted Kentucky’s recently enacted pregnancy accommodation law as a template for Congress to follow. Kentucky’s law includes a religious organization protection very similar to the one found in the Civil Rights Act.

At the Rules Committee hearing on H.R. 2694 earlier this week, the bill’s sponsor, Chairman NADLER, said it is not necessary to incorporate into H.R. 2694 the Civil Rights Act provision that protects religious organizations. He stated that because H.R. 2694 does not repeal this provision, it will still be effective if the bill becomes law.

At the same hearing, Chairman SCOTT said the religious organization protection should not be included in H.R. 2694 because it is overinclusive and would provide too much protection.

I strongly disagree with both of these perspectives, and I am not sure Chairman NADLER’s explanation is in line with Chairman SCOTT’s position.

Without the current law protection, H.R. 2694 will create legal jeopardy for religious organizations, as I have previously stated. But for the sake of argument, let’s assume the provision is superfluous.

Madam Speaker, what would the harm be in including the Civil Rights Act protection in H.R. 2694? At worst, the provision would be duplicative with the Civil Rights Act, causing no harm to workers or employers. At best, it will prevent a religious organization from being required to violate its faith.

By adding this simple reference to H.R. 2694 from the Civil Rights Act, we protect religious organizations whose bill are harmonized with the protections for religious organizations found in the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, PDA, and the Americans with Disabilities Act, ADA.

I would also briefly like to address recent comments made by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce—a trade association which represents few, if any, religious employers—that, under this bill, required workplace accommodations would not come into conflict with a religious organization’s beliefs.

The chamber acknowledges that leave, including paid leave, can be part of a reasonable accommodation under the ADA, from which H.R. 2694 incorporates the definition of reasonable accommodation. Therefore, if a religious organization has a paid leave policy, H.R. 2694 could require the organization to allow paid leave for purposes that conflict with its religious tenets. The chamber also contends that H.R. 2694 is not a bill that addresses hiring, unlike the PDA and the ADA, which apply to hiring. This is false. H.R. 2694 applies to both employees and job applicants, so it is indeed a hiring statute.

Therefore, the religious organization protections in the Civil Rights Act and the ADA are just as relevant to H.R. 2694 as they are to those statutes.

Madam Speaker, to conclude, the motion to recommit includes H.R. 2694 in its entirety, with one important addition related to religious organization protections. My amendment simply incorporates the title VII religious organization protection to ensure these organizations are not forced to violate their faith in making employment and accommodation decisions.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this simple but important addition to the bill, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, first, let me reiterate what I said about the Congressional Research Service that found that States typically do not enact separate or specialized religious exemptions for pregnancy accommodation laws.

Madam Speaker, this MTR would jeopardize women’s health and risk their pregnancies in order to provide a religious exemption for employers, to exempt them from the requirement to provide just basic and reasonable accommodations for the workforce. Employees who would want to deny these basic accommodations?

First, it is unnecessary. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act already exempts small private employers, including religious employers, with fewer than 15 employees. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 80 percent of religious organizations have fewer than 15 employees.

Second, the underlying bill does not in any way amend or change the underlying exemptions in title VII of the Civil Rights Act or Americans with Disabilities Act or any other bill. It doesn’t affect the Religious Freedom Restoration Act. But it would, if it is specified, give the employer the idea that they could deny reasonable accommodations if they for some religious reason don’t agree with the pregnancy: women who are pregnant and divorced, women pregnant out of wedlock, pregnant in a same-sex relationship.

What, you don’t have to give them a water break?

This amendment is unnecessary. The other exemptions are there for legitimate religious reasons, and this overbroad amendment would just cause mischief.

Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Ms. WILD).

Ms. WILD. Madam Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding.

I rise in opposition to this political poison pill of an MTR. Corporations are a legal creation. They don’t have religious beliefs. Their officers might, but they do not.

Let’s be clear about who inspired the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

It is women who have asked for accommodations in lifting requirements because their doctors told them they were at high risk of miscarriage or preterm birth.

It is women like the worker in Pennsylvania who was denied a schedule change and fired due to her uterus that landed her in the ER.

This MTR invites discrimination. It emboldens those who would use religion as a basis to discriminate against people who are pregnant and not married, workers in same-sex couples, women using IVF to get pregnant, even people with partners of a different race.

Something the proponents of this amendment aren’t saying out loud is that other religious exemptions would already apply to the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act.

This MTR frustrates the purpose of a good bill, a bill that is supported by the Chamber of Commerce and by 89 percent of voters.

Every year, an estimated quarter of a million women are denied requests for accommodation because current law forces pregnant workers to find other nonpregnant employees who received similar accommodations to make a case.

When pregnant women are denied accommodations, they face health risks, miscarriage, premature births.

Symptoms and conditions of pregnancy cannot be fully appreciated unless you have been pregnant yourself. So when you consider this vote on the MTR, remember that 80 percent of directors of ACWI Index companies are men. Men who have never experienced the struggles of pregnancy will be deciding whether to invoke an exemption to deny an accommodation to a pregnant worker. That is not right.

This bill is not some new burden on employers. They must already engage in a good faith interactive process over reasonable accommodations under the ADA.

This bill, as written, takes employer concerns into account. Employers with fewer than 15 employees or those who would suffer undue hardship need not provide accommodations.

Madam Speaker, I urge a resounding ‘no’ vote on this MTR because it dilutes the very protections for pregnant workers that the bill seeks to establish. Those protections are long overdue.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that those doors appeared to have it.

Ms. FOXX of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 965, the yeas and nays are ordered.

CONDEMN ALL FORMS OF ANTI-ASIAN SENTIMENT AS RELATED TO COVID-19

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the unfinished business is the vote on adoption of the resolution (H. Res. 908) condemning all forms of anti-Asian sentiment as related to COVID-19, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 243, nays 164, answered ‘‘present’’ 1, not voting 23, as follows:

PREGNANT WORKERS FAIRNESS ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the unfinished business is the vote on the motion to recommit on the bill (H.R. 2694) to eliminate discrimination and promote women’s health and economic security by ensuring reasonable workplace accommodations for workers whose ability to perform the functions of a job are limited by pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition, offered by the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Ms. Foxx), on which the yes and nays were ordered.

The Clerk will redesignate the motion. The Speaker pro tempore. The motion to reconsider is laid on the table.
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HECK). The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SMUCKER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The Speaker pro tempore. Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 965, the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 329, nays 73, not voting 28, as follows:

Messrs. NADLER, VEASEY, RAYAN, and MICHAEL F. DOYLE of Pennsylvania changed their vote from "yea" to "nay." So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Stated for:

Mr. GROTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall No. 194.

Mr. ARRINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained by a media hit across the Capitol complex. I would have been a strong 'yes' on rollcall No. 194.

Mr. GOODEN. Mr. Speaker, on the Motion to Reconvene from today's vote series, I incorrectly voted "no" when my intention was to vote "yea."

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. SCALISE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I rise for the purpose of inquiring of the majority leader the schedule for next week.

Madam Speaker, I am happy to yield to my friend, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the House majority leader.

HONORING RETIRING PARLIAMENTARIAN THOMAS J. WICKHAM, JR.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Before we begin the colloquy, let me make some remarks about someone who has made a real difference in this House.

Madam Speaker, every society that wants to be a successful society has to have rules. Thomas Jefferson, one of the great political thinkers of the centuries, observed that there had to be both comity and fairness if we were going to come together and have a democracy that was operational.

Dick Gephardt used to say that the legislative process was a substitute for armed confrontation, that the resolution of differences in a democracy needed to be done in a civil way, pursuant to rules.

Madam Speaker, we are losing, in a short period of time, a gentleman who has made a difference for this House, this Congress—House and Senate—has made a difference to the civility of this House, a gentleman who, by the way, is not responsible in any way for the lack of civility that, from time to time, breaks out in this House.

I refer, Madam Speaker, to our Parliamentarian, Tom Wickham. I have had the privilege of knowing him all of his days in the House of Representatives. He has been here for a significant period of time and has served as our Parliamentarian for essentially four Congresses, 8 years.

He stands—or sits, at this point in time—a short distance, at least 6 feet, distance, with his mask on, which is a unique experience for him, from the Speaker’s rostrum. He is there to ensure that we play by the rules. He is there to ensure that we do not take advantage of one another, but that as we resolve, in pursuit of the rules, the differences that we may have and do so in a way that, for centuries, essentially, have governed how we process in the legislative arena.

It is a nonpartisan role. Obviously, he served when there were Republican Speakers, and obviously, he is serving now with a Democratic Speaker. It is nonpartisan, but it is sometimes thankless, particularly when you have to make a ruling that the majority party does not like.

I must say that there is probably not a Member among us who hasn’t at some point in time said either, “Gee, I am sorry, Wickham made that ruling’’ or, “I don’t agree with Wickham.”

Therefore, it is a tough job because we are all pretty powerful people. We all think we are pretty smart people, and we know this, that, and the other. So, you have the courage of your convictions as well as the intellectual reasoning to go behind your decision.

Tom Wickham has had that every day he has served this House.

It is hard to see because the calls don’t always go the way people want. One of the hallmarks of the Parliamentarian’s Office, and Tom Wickham in particular, is they call them as they see them. No matter the effect of those rulings, they make the ruling that they believe is correct. You can disagree, but what you cannot disagree with is that the Parliamentarian’s Office prides itself on calling them as they see them.

Now, it was difficult, I am sure, for some to have to have to make these sorts of rulings, to make the ruling that they believe is correct. You can disagree, but what you cannot disagree with is that the Parliamentarian’s Office prides itself on calling them as they see them.

Mr. SCALISE will speak on behalf of his colleagues.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, regarding the rules.

So, Tom, congratulations on what you have done to preserve the integrity of this institution.

We come here as Republicans, Democrats, as Americans first, but people who all have their own views. Even if you are Republican, we don’t all think exactly the same way, as Democrats don’t always think the same way. But we come here to achieve certain things, to make this a more perfect Union in which our democracy flourishes. We are a democracy of 750,000, roughly, people elect us to come and be part of this democracy, the world’s greatest democracy.

You come and work with other people. Sometimes, you battle with other people in the arena of legislative ideas. It is not physical confrontation, as the majority leader pointed out. But sometimes, you have to persuade. Sometimes, you have to fight for your beliefs.

But ultimately, if you are going to achieve the things you came here to do, you have to change legislation. It takes an act of Congress, as they say. When you do that, you have to follow the rules.

The Jefferson Manual that goes back to 1801 are the rules that govern this great House. If there is a bill on the floor and you wish to make a change to that bill, you have to offer an amendment to the bill, bring a motion to reconsider the bill, you have to work within the rules. Those rules are interpreted not by the majority, not by the minority, but by the Parliamentarian.

The job you have done for 25 years in the Parliamentarian’s Office, but especially since 2011 as the House Parliamentarian, you don’t always tell people what they want to hear, but you tell people what is the right way to do something according to the rules that we have established so that there is a fair process. And a lot of people don’t see this back and forth. If the Parliamentarian rules against you, it is not a personal thing.

In many cases, a Member will go to the Parliamentarian, Republican or Democrat—I have done this myself—and said, “This is what I would like to achieve.”

Sometimes, they tell you that you can’t do it on that bill because there are reasons, and help them sometimes there is that gray area where if you are trying to do it this way, it won’t work, but if you try to do it another way, it actually would work. That is really the art of the ability of a Parliamentarian, to work with Members help them sometimes to do the things they are trying to do. We still have to go and get the votes, but at least allowing a Member that opportunity to go fight it out and make their case.

In many cases, that case wouldn’t be able to be made if the Parliamentarian wasn’t fair in offering that guidance to Members of Congress, whatever they are trying to achieve, whatever their background, whatever their district, to be fair, at least give them that opportunity to come here on the House floor and fight that battle, hopefully right that wrong, and advance the things that they were elected to do so to make this a more perfect Union.

I know Heather is probably watching on C-SPAN. I am not sure how many other people are, but Heather, hopefully, is your wife. She will have more time to work with you. I am not sure who the parliamentarian of your house is. I am the House Republican whip, but in my house, Jennifer is the one who plays that role.

But in your house, hopefully, Heather sees you more, because you are here, and sometimes those are long hours, and sometimes those are long weekends. We appreciate the sacrifices you have made. Hopefully, in this next role in your life, you will be able to enjoy more time with your wife, Heather, and your family.

We truly do thank you for playing this part of your role in history and adding to what is great about this great democracy.

Do you mind standing up so everybody in the Chamber here can see you and pay the proper tribute?

Madam Speaker, I yield to my friend.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

If I might wryly observe, Madam Speaker, that I have not seen the Parliamentarian pass you a note to instruct the gentleman to address the Chair.

Tom, I am going to address you.

Mr. SCALISE. As I was addressing it to the Speaker, of course.

Mr. HOYER. Tom Wickham, for those who are watching, is a wonderful example of the extraordinary patriotism, loyalty, and talent that has contributed to this House’s operation by all of our staff. He is one of the best, but we have the best.

Tom, I know you treated all the staff, certainly on my staff—and I know that this was a mutual respect because you knew how important they were. We all know how important you have been to the operations of this House.

I don’t know what you will be doing. But assuming you are probably this young age of yours—I told you that you were way too young for us to let you go, but you are going—you will be doing other things, and you will bring great value to whatever enterprise you pursue.

We have been blessed for a quarter of a century with your service, and we thank you for that service. Godspeed.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, re-claiming my time.

Madam Speaker, we all appreciate Tom’s service to our country and especially to this Chamber.

Now, if I may inquire of the majority leader the schedule for next week, and I would yield.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, on Monday, the House will meet at 12 p.m. for legislative business. No votes are expected in the House on Monday.

On Tuesday, the House will meet at 9 a.m. for morning-hour debate and 11 a.m. for legislative business.

I would remind Members that Monday is expected to be a travel day following the holiday. So, Monday we will have business on the floor, but we will have no votes.

On Wednesday and Thursday, the House will meet at 9 a.m. for morning-hour debate and 11 a.m. for legislative business.

On Friday, the House will meet at 9 a.m. for legislative business.

We will consider several bills, Madam Speaker, under suspension of the rules, a large number of suspension bills, in fact. The complete list of suspension bills will be announced by the close of business tomorrow.

The House will consider, as well, next week a continuing resolution for fiscal year 2021.

Madam Speaker, the House has passed 10 of its appropriations bills of the 12 appropriations bills we have.

Sadly, the Senate has not passed a single bill out of committee, has not voted on a single appropriations bill in its committee. As a result, clearly, we will now have to conclude the appropriations process, and we will have to have a CR to make sure that government stays serving the American people.

Hopefully, we can reach a bipartisan agreement, and there will not be a controversial continuing resolution. I know Democrats and Republicans and the administration are working toward that end.

I expect and hope a bill to be filed tomorrow. That is our hope. But we do expect to consider that bill next week.

The CR, as I said, is necessary to avert a shutdown that would only further damage our economy and undermine our efforts on COVID-19.

In addition, the House will consider H.R. 4447, the Clean Economy Jobs and Innovation Act. This bill, Madam Speaker, is a package of legislation reported out of the Energy and Commerce Committee and the Science, Space, and Technology Committee to invest in energy innovation and clean energy development.

In addition, the House may consider H.R. 6270, the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act, in consideration of the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act.

Members are advised that additional legislative items are possible.

I yield back to my friend, the Republican whip.
we may get an agreement, but we may not on a bigger relief package, and we see multiple bills that are out there. The Senate has been trying to advance something. The House has had a position. Some House Democrats yesterday filed a companion bill with some other House Republicans to try to get a third way, and the White House has been talking about a different option. In the meantime, we clearly don’t have an agreement yet on that.

I would ask if the gentleman would look at this as a bill by Representative CHABOT of Ohio. He is the lead Republican on the House Small Business Committee. This is a bill that would specifically target those small businesses that were part of the Paycheck Protection Program. This is not a new idea. This is taking the existing framework of a bill that we, both sides, came together to pass, a very successful bill.

As the gentleman knows, the Paycheck Protection Program still has over $130 billion remaining in its account, money that wasn’t spent. We were able to help every business that asked. Every business that was eligible was able to go to their local bank, didn’t have to go to an SBA lender.

Again, I want to thank our small community banks that played such an important role. We would not have been able to help all those small businesses stay afloat if our local community banks hadn’t participated in doing the customers that they usually see on a daily basis who are struggling.

But as that money is sitting in that account, the program has expired, so we need to pass, we believe, the supplemental nutrition program.

We need to make sure that States, in my view, have the ability to function. They are hemorrhaging revenues because of COVID-19, because of the decrease in the economy. States, cities, municipalities, counties are suffering, and many other aspects, including testing, which is one of the components of us confronting COVID-19.

So while I agree with the gentleman that the program that he talks about of course, we created that program and we passed it in a bipartisan fashion, and it was very bipartisan in the Senate. I know Mr. CARDIN and Mr. Rubio were both involved in that. It was very important to pass that.

But I will tell the gentleman that I was pleased that the President indicated that he was very significant sums, which he then said would come back to the U.S. or help the U.S. economy. I think that was a positive step forward.

I would also observe, as the gentleman observed, that Speaker PELOSI and Secretary Mnuchin reached four major deals, compromises—four. One was, we thought, very big at the time, $8.3 billion, which now looks somewhat small. But we reached four of those. We brought them to the House floor, the Senate floor, and they passed overwhelmingly in bipartisan votes.

Secretary Mnuchin and the Speaker have been discussing trying to get to, for four months now—now, Mr. Mews is also in the room. Mr. MEADOWS and I have a very positive relationship, but my observation has been, through the years, Mr. MEADOWS is more about stopping deals than making deals.

But I agree with the gentleman, we need to act. I am hopeful that the administration and the Senate and the House will reach agreement ASAP, not only on the PPP, but all the other programs that I mentioned and many more that are in the HEROES bill.

The Speaker has indicated we are certainly prepared to negotiate what the expenditure is, and she has indicated a willingness to come down very, very substantially to try to reach an agreement, which is what compromise is all about. That hasn’t happened yet, but I am hopeful that it will happen in the near term, because I agree with the gentleman, we need to meet the administration and all of us to come to an agreement.

Unfortunately, in the Senate, their efforts have not been successful in passing a bill. So we have no alternative bill beyond the HEROES bill that passed, as I said, 4 months ago, so we have nothing to conference because there is no Senate bill.

In fact, Mr. MCCONNELL went from a trillion to half a trillion, which almost every economist, either at a trillion or half a trillion, says is not sufficient for health reasons and economic reasons and family reasons to confront the enormity of the challenges that still confront us as a result of COVID-19.

So I thank the gentleman for mentioning Mr. CHABOT’s legislation. He is right, of course, there is $130 billion in that right, of course, there is $130 billion in that, I think what we ought to purpose that to either a continuation of PPP or a continuation of PPP and other things. But I think we ought to do it, and what we are trying to do is a comprehensive package that deals with all challenges confronting American families, particularly the unemployment insurance.

As of July 31, as the gentleman knows, the supplemental payment lapsed. To some degree, the President has tried to put additional sums in there. Some States are pursuing it and some States have effectuated it.

But I hope that the bottom line is, in the next week, in the near term, and I think the President stated was helpful, and I hope, frankly, the Senators take that to heart, that we need to invest much more than they suggested if we are going to meet the scope of the problem that exists. I think the gentleman bringing to the House’s attention that particular bill, and certainly it will be under consideration as well, I think, by those who are negotiating, mainly Secretary Mnuchin and Speaker PELOSI. Mr. MCCONNELL has chosen to participate in those discussions, as you know. Mr. SCHUMER does, and I think Mr. McCARTHY does—I am not sure all the time, but I am sure he does as well.

We want to get an agreement. We want to do what we have done four times: reached an agreement, passed it overwhelmingly in both Houses for the people, because the people are hurting and we need to act and meet that challenge of their hurt and their need to support themselves, their families, and, as you point out, their businesses.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman.
As we look at the various topics that the gentleman from Maryland brought up on the negotiations, if you looked at the Senate bill—and, clearly, there are multiple bills out there—ultimately, it is going to take a bipartisan bill working with the administration. Mr. MSAوات أور اليسار عن طريق اجتماعات، اجتمع في بعض الأحيان، ولكن، في بعض الأحيان، لعدة ساعات، لا يمكن أن أجد القدرة على التوصل إلى اجتماعات مع بعض القادة.

But at the same time, if you look at the Senate bill, they did include some enhanced funding. This included more money for small businesses, for families, for testing. They had $10 billion for testing, $31 billion for vaccine, which I know—I want to bring that up. They had $35 billion for farmers, $15 billion for childcare.

They did have liability protection, which continues to be a very big issue many small businesses bring up. They want to make sure that, if they open safely, they are not going to be shut down again. That is something that there has been a lot of negotiation about as well.

But, ultimately, when you look at those differences, we will hopefully get that resolved. In the meantime, if that can't happen, at a minimum, if we can look at some of the money that is unspent because, in addition to the PPP, I think the gentleman knows, we also put about $150 billion in the CARES Act toward our States to help all of our States, formulas that allowed States and, in some cases, local governments get money to help themselves through these tough times.

There is not one State that has spent all that money. And I know some people want to talk about how much more money to give, but if they haven't spent the money they have already gotten, maybe we can look there as another way to help push more relief, including with schools.

If a School wants to reopen safely—and I would encourage all schools, the protocols have been out there. The Centers for Disease Control have put out very good, responsible safety protocols for safely reopening schools, and it varies, depending on the kind of region you are in. If you have a spike, there is a way to handle that. If you are in an area that has not seen a prevalence of COVID, then there is a different way to handle it. But in every case, there is a way to reopen. Within a formula that allowed States and, in some cases, local governments, we need to help them safely reopen schools as well.

So those are all conversations we will hopefully have.

I do want to then talk about where we are with a vaccine, because we have been seeing a lot more reports on the progress, the tremendous progress that has been made within the medical community. And we know from the very beginning of this disease that our front line heroes, medical workers, have been some of the heroes, probably the biggest heroes of all of this, those hospital workers, the nurses, the doctors, but also those people working in the labs.

Almost instantly after China lied to us about the origin of the disease, lied to us about even whether or not the disease could be spread from person to person they corrupted the WHO. But ultimately as we started to find out what was coming out of Wuhan, I don't know, even the Foreign Affairs Committee of this House majority had a hearing titled: "The Wuhan Coronavirus: Did they know?" I know where this started. It has been discussed.

But at the same time, we have been working feverishly to find a cure, to find a vaccine. We have seen therapies, President Trump implemented Operation Warp Speed, which was a way to get red tape out of the way. Nobody is cutting corners on safety, but ultimately what we are all doing is focusing all the energy and the weight of this Federal Government behind finding a cure and a vaccine, and what we are seeing now is remarkable success in progress.

Here are some of the companies that right now are in phase 3 of testing on an actual vaccine for COVID-19. These are all very respected companies, not only in America, but worldwide, globally respected.

I am concerned by some of the comments we are starting to see by some people trying to undermine the public's confidence in a vaccine if it were to be approved by the FDA. And let's keep in mind, the FDA would have to approve any vaccine. You have to get approved by the FDA to go to phase 2. You have to get approved to go to phase 3, and then ultimately after testing on tens of thousands of people at a pace we have never seen before—with money, by the way, that we helped pass, and again, the gentleman and I both were part of those coalitions, Republican and Democratic, working in place for that testing, for the work that is being done by these great companies to start now making the vaccine vials, a hundred million vials possibly that could be made before the drug is approved. If, in fact, it then gets that approval, so that you don't have to wait to start mass producing after the approval.

If the FDA does approve any or all of these drugs as a vaccine that would actually prevent COVID-19, I hope we would both encourage people, if they want to take that vaccine. And this is, hopefully, not going to be a debate within the country. Hopefully, it is going to be a recognition that America has the best scientific minds in the world. We have the most respected drug companies in the world, and they are working feverishly, not cutting a single corner on safety.

These would have to be safe and effective drugs for us to approve them, but if any one or all of them get approved, then I would hope we would encourage people to go and protect their families, if that is what they want to do. And I know a lot of people that would want to do it. But I have heard from some people, as I am sure the gentleman has, that they may want to wait a little while. But I also know that people want to be safe and secure in their homes. They want to have a confidence level that they are not going to be at risk of dying from COVID. And ultimately a vaccine and a therapy are the final answer that gets us over the hump, that gets us to where we can fully start reopening.

We are seeing more businesses at advanced levels of opening their economy, but we also know that we are not where we need to be, and a vaccine is probably going to be that biggest determining point that helps people return to a normal way. I hope we can at least agree that if that approval comes by the FDA that it is something we can all embrace and encourage people to pursue, if that is what they feel is best for their family.

Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, the whip mentioned undermining confidence. I will tell the whip with all due respect; nobody has undermined confidence in the healthcare system more than the President of the United States. No one has diverted more attention from the experts; no one has demonized the experts, than the President of the United States. And then, frankly, he conveyed to the American people, don't worry about it, it is going to go away. In a few days, a few weeks, it is going to go away.

No one has undermined the confidence of the American people in the CDC or the FDA or the NIH more than the President of the United States. He said they are wrong.

And I say that because confidence needs to be built by leadership. And if the vaccine can come out next month, hooray, if it can be done consistent with what the medical experts tell us, and the pharmaceutical experts tell us can give the American people confidence.

But I will tell my friend Mr. Caputo substantially undermined confidence because he wanted to tell the experts what to say apparently consistent with what the administration's policy was as opposed to what the scientific evidence was.
And so when you mention confidence, some people were trying to undermine confidence; we have had six, seven, eight months of undermining confidence.

And it is a shame. Because the gent- leman who is the doctor is right. People are going to need confidence. And they are going to have to take the vaccine because that is the only way this economy is going to get back to where it needs to be. People having confidence in the safety for themselves, their hus- band, their wife, their children to be about the business of America and their own personal business.

So I would hope that the President would leave it to the experts, not to his judgment, to the experts as to when a vaccine is ready to deliver to the pub- lic. And then I think all of us ought to have that confidence to—I certainly am going to get the vaccine when the medical experts tell me this is safe to take, and I am going to urge my family to do the same. And I am sure you have just indicated you would do the same. I think we will, hopefully, do that.

But the instilling of confidence, I would tell my friend, starts at the top and with all of us, as well, because peo- ple now read some respects some- times, and they think we have knowl- edge that they may not have, and therefore, they want to have confidence that, yes, this is good; no, it is not, don’t do it.

So I try simply say to my friend, I hope that we get a vaccine. I hope we get it as soon as possible. And I hope that the election has nothing to do with the vaccine. I hope the decision has everything to do with science and medicine. And I think all Americans hope that, as well.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I would tell the gentleman it is not hope that you have to have. This is all about science.

Name one of these companies that would put their name on a drug that would be injected into American people based on politics or based on a timeline that would have an impact on an elec- tion? Not one of these companies would do it. I would challenge anyone to name a company that would do that, because they wouldn’t do that. So it is not a hope.

If the FDA approves one of these drugs or all of these drugs, it is because they have worked. And you may actually get to an FDA-approved vaccine, as well, and they are all very well re- spected, too, but these are the only companies. There is no mystery company. These are the companies that are in competition, not with themselves, but they are trying to save lives. And from everything we are hearing, the re- sults are tremendously successful. We should be applauding that.

Operation Warp Speed has gotten us to this point, and while the President might not get credit—and I think it is an important point, as the gentleman talks about instilling confidence, where the President is on science. I have been in many of those meetings with Dr. Fauci, with Dr. Birx, with the whole team of the whole coronavirus task force.

Mr. HOYER. How about Dr. Redfield?

Mr. SCALISE. He has been in some of those meetings, too. And as the gen- tleman knows, not all doctors agree.

Mr. HOYER. Did you see what hap- pened in the last 48 hours?

Mr. SCALISE. There are some doc- tors who will say this is the way to do it, and some doctors will say that is the way to do it. You get 10 at- torneys in a room; you might get 10 opin- ions. The saying “go get a second opinion,” that is because maybe not all doctors agree.

But then when you are President of the United States you don’t have the lux- ury of waiting for every doctor to be in agreement. If there is an inflection point on a decision, and some doctors are over here, and some doctors are over there, guess what, it is the Presi- dent who has to make that final call, not because he has ignored science, but because he has looked to the science, and ultimately, he has to make that decision.

Dr. Fauci himself was in a committee hearing by the Select Subcommittee that the majority whip, Mr. CLYBURN, chairs. I am the lead Republican on that committee. We had Dr. Fauci in our committee. I asked him specifi- cally, initially, major decisions that had to be made by this President and whether or not science was used or not and whether or not it worked. I started, by the way, with the decision of whether or not to stop flights from China when we found out after China lied that they, in fact, did have this disease spreading widely in China, and President Trump made that decision to stop flights from China.

I know the Democrat nominee for President was against that decision, but President Trump worked with the experts, Dr. Fauci was part of that.

I asked him, I said, Was that the right decision by President Trump?

He said, Yes, it was.

I said, Did that decision save Amer- ican lives? He said, Yes, it did.

And we went down the line on deci- sion after decision, and they were all science-based. At no point was the President trying to undermine science.

In fact, some people were trying to suggest that Dr. Fauci was being side- lined, and yet, he was at the hearing, under oath, speaking on behalf of his role in the administration, and he said he has never been sidelined. He was ac- tually asked that question, Have you been sidelined? He said, “no” under oath.

Now, is he always in agreement with the decision doctors he made? No, he is not. Does that mean he is wrong? No. But maybe he is. But, again, doctors can disagree because that is what science is. It is not two plus two equals four every time because you are dealing with some very complicated issues because we knew nothing about less than a year ago.

Fortunately, with Operation Warp Speed, President Trump put together the best scientists, not just in Amer- ica, but I would argue in the world, to figure out how to solve this, how to come up with things like hydroxychloroquine, which some peo- ple might say doesn’t work. I have talked to many doctors who use it suc- cessfully to save lives even today. That is a safe drug. Some people want government to control all those decisions. I would rather the doc- tor being the one to work with his pa- tient.

You look at the other drugs that are out there today, but again, now we talk about a vaccine, there is not one company on this list—these are the only companies right now in phase 3. And if any of them are approved by the FDA, I hope nobody would question the in- teriority of that drug.

Do you think any of these companies would put their name on a drug that they don’t stand behind as a safe and effective vaccine for this disease? And that is really the point.

It is all about science here. It is all about science and some people are try- ing to undermine that. And we need to get away from that because that will cost lives. If somebody is reluctant to take one of these drugs because they don’t trust it if it comes from this President or that candidate, that is a dangerous game because lives would be lost if people didn’t take that vaccine because they didn’t have that confidence. We all need to have that confidence. We all work with science.

We have all had doctors who told us one thing, and maybe you wanted to go get that second opinion, but at the end of the day, you have got to make that decision. And you make it based on all the science that is available, and not all the time do all the scientists agree. In fact, many times on the complicated issues you get different opinions from different scientists. This President has worked with some of the best in the world. And according to Dr. Fauci himself, by and large, the President has fol- lowed even Dr. Fauci’s advice and has made the right decisions up and down the line based on science. And most im- portantly, President Trump’s decision following the science has saved Amer- ican lives, starting with that very first decision, which Joe Biden himself was against. How many American lives would have been lost if we didn’t ban the flights from China; if we didn’t ban the flights from Europe, when it was breaking out in Europe; if we didn’t do 15 days to stop the spread, which President Trump did; or even 30 if we did that? After that they said we needed to go another 30 days. President Trump did that, too. Every one of those decisions was based on science. Every one of those decisions saved American lives.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

This President doesn’t take responsibility for anything other than good things. If anything bad happens, this President does not take responsibility. He points to somebody else.

What I interrupted the gentleman on was he says, “the scientists.” Redfield is a scientist; he is a medical doctor. He is the head of the CDC. He made a comment, his best judgment as to when vaccines were going to be available, widely available.

The President contradicted him on both points he made just a few days ago, as he has done with Fauci, as he has done with Hahn, as he has done with others.

My confidence in those three companies is that they will come to the referee and will say: “Is this ready to go?” The referee, in this case the FDA, that the gentleman says is so respected has that responsibility.

What I don’t have confidence in, what I think so many of the American people don’t have confidence in, is they will get a call from the White House that says: “This is the judgment you are going to make.”

We have seen, over and over and over again, decisions modified because of White House direction. In fact, Caputo was there for exactly that reason at HHS, not CDC, but overseeing CDC.

I tell my friend, Madam Speaker, yes, we need to have confidence, but we need to be truthful with them. We need to tell them the truth. We need to take direction from the experts, not substitute our judgment.

The gentleman talks about hydroxychloroquine. Obviously, Fauci didn’t think that was a great recommendation to make. That was for doctors, but the President made it. In fact, most of the doctors thought that was not a good recommendation.

Certainly, Chlorox was even less than that, I say as an aside. Maybe it was tongue in cheek, but unfortunately, when the President speaks, people don’t necessarily think it is tongue in cheek, and it becomes dangerous.

I will say to my friend, hopefully, that this vaccine issue will be resolved by the experts and give confidence to the American people. But that means, in fact, rely on the experts and their doctor to take the vaccine because, hopefully, it will be in a position where, in fact, it will give the confidence and the result that is promised.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I would just remind the gentleman, with all due respect to Dr. Redfield, he is not the head of the FDA.

The FDA is the agency that approves drugs, and in fact, the FDA is the agency working every day with these companies. There is a very strict protocol for going through phases of testing.

Now, one thing that is important to point out on the testing, because, again, some people wonder because Operation Warp Speed has gotten us to a point quicker, maybe in the history of the world, at finding a vaccine for a disease we knew nothing about 8 months ago, but the reason they are doing it is not because they are cutting corners. No one in science that I have heard has suggested that they are cutting corners because they are not.

They have strict protocols.

When they are doing, number one, the President has money in place behind making sure that each of these drug companies has direct communication with the FDA every step of the way so they know if tests need to be run on more people or different demographic groups, as is done with other drugs, they can do it quickly. They have a wide range of people willing to be tested.

To the tribute of all Americans, over 300,000 Americans have signed up for these tests. This isn’t being tested on just a few people. Sometimes, a drug takes years and years to get to market for a lot of reasons. One is red tape.

President Trump has done a great job of getting the red tape out of the way to let the scientists actually do their job in real time. Something could sit on somebody’s desk for months, in many cases, delaying lifesaving drugs. We have gotten that red tape out of the way.

Frankly, we ought to look at work-
ting together as Republicans and Democrats at making that the norm, not the exception, to actually be able to get red tape out of the way to help save lives.

But as they are doing it, they are testing on more people than is normally the case. Sometimes, you might only have a few thousand people who are willing or in a position to be tested.

Today, you have hundreds of thousands of people who are being tested.

If they make it through each step, it is not based on who is in the White House. It is based on what the doctors at the FDA, working with the smart people in these drug companies, have come up with based on the test results.

If they test people and they are prob-lum, it doesn’t even make it to phase 2.

These are all in phase 3. They are all showing tremendous promise, but if one of them makes it through or if all of them make it through, it is not because somebody rushed it. It is because the doctors and the scientists said it works. Not one of these companies would put their name on that vaccine, not one of them.

Again, I would challenge anybody, Madam Speaker, if they think any of these companies would cut a corner, please let us know right now because if that is not the case, the narrative shouldn’t be out there because that narrative would be a false narrative and would cost American lives. If that narrative were to get out, there might be people who wouldn’t take the vaccine who otherwise would and should, where it could save their life, because this will save American lives.

And it is through American ingenuity. We ought to be proud of this.

We should put the politics aside and say thank God America is the leader in healthcare to the point where we have great American companies partnering, in this case, with a German company here in America, testing at a level we have never seen before on more people because we took the priority, through Operation Warp Speed, to put all the focus of these great agencies on finding a cure for COVID-19.

We are on the brink of doing it. It may not happen if the science doesn’t match. But if the science does say these things, we need to allow that and encourage people to explore, in a conversation with their doctor, whether or not they should take it.

Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I am not going to prolong this. The only thing I would say is, under the gentleman’s theory, Madam Speaker, we wouldn’t need the FDA because, clearly, these companies would not do anything just because of profit. And I don’t allege that they would do that.

But we have an FDA because we need a referee to look at it without thinking of the consequences of a yes or no answer but a scientific answer. That is the only observation we would make.

I get it. I get that the companies are reputable companies. I support them. They do great work.

But we have an FDA because we need somebody who is an independent arbiter, not just because no company would do this. Because if no company would do it, we wouldn’t need the FDA.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I never suggested that. In fact, I said at the outset that these companies are in direct communication with the FDA on a regular basis. That is what Operation Warp Speed is.

In the old way of doing things, these companies would have to wait for their data and would have waited months while some faceless bureaucrat let it sit on a desk and nothing happened.

Instead, what the President did was said there will be direct contacts where they can communicate with the FDA. They are not the enemy.

These companies aren’t the enemy. The FDA is not the enemy. But it shouldn’t be viewed as you are on one side, they are on the other.

They are both working together because they are both part of the smartest scientific community in the world.
They work together because the FDA wants to get it right and these companies want to get it right.

We saw one of them just a few days ago. They had a pause, which is the protocol. That is the safety protocol because there was a question in the testing, and they addressed it. I am sure there were many. I don’t know directly, but I am sure there were many conversations with the FDA.

But then they started up again, which means there wasn’t a problem. But it meant they followed the protocols, which say, if you see something that is going to be difficult or it is not going to work, wait off, and then you go check that out. That is what one of these did, and now they are back on track.

The others continue to go through, all of them, working with the FDA. I am sure the gentleman would agree. You want to make sure you have multiple people looking at it. You don’t just want the company that is making the drug looking at it. You want the regulator looking at it as well because, ultimately, you have to sign off on it.

They are not doing it blindly. No one suggests that. But they are doing it with a much sharper focus. It is the top priority, I think we would all agree. This needs to be the priority to get our country back on track, and it has to be done right. But it is not going to get signed off if it is not right. So, it is a partnership, and it is working incredibly well.

Again, this new partnership ought to be the model in the future. It shouldn’t be the exception just because of COVID. It is working incredibly well.

We worked together to pass the 21st Century Cures Act, which ultimately will find a cure for cancer, for Alzheimer’s, for ALS, for other diseases. It is because we put a sharper focus over at the National Institutes of Health, and we put additional resources over at the National Institutes of Health.

That priority, what we are learning from this, ought to be replicated to help find a cure for some of those other diseases so that maybe we can find even more cures for people who are living today, not just for somebody 30 years from now, but for somebody struggling today with one of those terrible diseases.

Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I have nothing left to say.

Mr. SCALISE. Madam Speaker, I know we will continue this conversation. Hopefully, the bill gets filed tomorrow, and we can resolve more of these issues next week. I look forward to seeing the gentleman and working with him on all of these.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

HONORING COMMISSIONER BILLIE DEAN

(Mrs. DEMINGS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mrs. DEMINGS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the life of Commissioner Billie Dean from the city of Apopka.

Mr. Dean was a guiding light for Apopka. From bravery in Korea, to the classrooms and commission, to the forefront of racial integration in the South, Commissioner Dean was a champion for his community. He was a local hero for his work to revitalize South Apopka and to fight for justice. As a teacher and a commissioner, he made the future of Apopka his ultimate cause.

There is no higher praise for a public servant than the love of his community. Apopka loved him, and he loved Apopka.

Madam Speaker, we are grateful for a life well lived.

AMERICANS ARE WAITING

(Mr. HILL of Arkansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILL of Arkansas. Madam Speaker, why were we brought back this week? Was it to provide much-needed relief and assistance to American families and small businesses because of the pandemic? No.

Instead, we continue to spend time on another set of mostly partisan messaging bills with little or no input from Republicans. My Democratic colleagues rely on grandstanding and talk more about the bills they have passed than the bills, Madam Speaker, they have actually gotten signed into law.

It is time for Democrats to get serious and stop trying to score political points and come back to the negotiating table. Let’s serve the American people by actually getting much-needed bipartisan legislation signed into law to fight this virus and get our economy back.

We have already proven how much good we can accomplish for American families and the American people when we work together.

RECOGNIZING HOPE LEE ON HIS 100TH BIRTHDAY

(Ms. OCASIO-CORTEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. OCASIO-CORTEZ. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Mr. Hope Lee, a revered constituent of New York’s 14th Congressional District who is celebrating his 100th birthday this year and has served so valiantly for our country.

During World War II, Mr. Lee received a Bronze Star Medal, two Purple Hearts, and a Combat Infantry Badge for his service to the country during World War II.

Mr. Lee, in fact, was supposed to go to Washington, D.C., this year to get his Congressional Gold Medal of Honor this May, but it was postponed due to the pandemic.

I think it is incredibly important to honor his work and his service here on the House floor.

He is extraordinarily proud of his service in the U.S. military and hangs the American flag outside his house for every U.S. holiday.

In fact, he and his wife, Rose Lee, have been happily married for 76 years, and Mr. Lee still does the cooking for himself and his wife.

Madam Speaker, I ask our colleagues to join me in recognizing Mr. Hope Lee.

Thank you for your service, and happy birthday, Mr. Lee.

SUICIDE PREVENTION AWARENESS MONTH

(Mr. WALTZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. WALTZ. Madam Speaker, as a combat veteran, I think a lot about my past experiences in battle and personally have dealt with my own struggles, from PTSD to survivor’s guilt.

But this year, we are in a collective battle, and the front lines look very different. We are fighting against an invisible enemy, against COVID-19, and we are forced to distance ourselves and to change our entire way of life. This isolation is causing anxiety, depression, and sometimes takes us to even darker places, even with suicidal thoughts.

September is Suicide Prevention Awareness Month, and I am teaming with a veterans group, Mission Roll Call, to raise awareness about suicide prevention, especially the 22 veterans per day we are currently losing.

In combat, we are constantly checking on our brothers and sisters to our left and our right, and we have to do the same back here at home. So I say to all veterans out there: Reach out. Ask your buddy how they are doing. Share a memory. Let them know that you are thinking about them and you have their back.

Together, we are stronger. Together, we can win this fight.

NATIONAL RECOVERY MONTH

(Ms. DEAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DEAN. Madam Speaker, recovery is challenging and isolating even during normal days, and this pandemic has made it more difficult for those who suffer from addiction and substance use disorder. That is why National Recovery Month, this month, takes on even greater meaning as many are navigating isolation and distance from family and support networks.

National Recovery Month is personal for me and my family. My son, Harry, is in recovery from addiction. Now he is healthy, he is well, and he works now to help others who struggle with substance abuse disorders.

In his work, he reminds me that, during the pandemic, so many have it even tougher on the road to recovery. He reminds me that not all are as fortunate as we have been, and we recognize National Recovery Month for its importantly shining a light on this issue.

I call on us to dedicate more resources to support those suffering with addiction and substance use disorder to live happy, rewarding, healthy lives.

And for those suffering with substance use disorders: You are not alone. There is hope.

STAND UP FOR POLICE

(Mr. GUEST asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GUEST. Madam Speaker, no matter your political affiliations in 2001, there were no greater heroes than our first responders who risked their own lives to save their fellow citizens on 9/11. Republicans and Democrats thanked our first responders, while children across our Nation looked up to them as examples of what it meant to be heroes, to risk their own well-being in service to their fellow citizens.

Now, across the Nation, we see a stark contrast to that scene from almost 20 years ago. Radicals now seek to defund the police. They threaten the men and women who risk their lives in service to our community, and, at times, they target our officers with violence, which, in the most tragic of cases, means these officers who are also fathers, mothers, sons, and daughters never return home to their family.

I am calling on Members of Congress who have remained silent in recent months to now publicly oppose the violence against our law enforcement community so that we can put an end to the basic attacks against our first responders.

NATIONAL SUICIDE AWARENESS MONTH

(Mr. CARTER of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARTER. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize September as National Suicide Prevention Month.

Every year, close to 800,000 people die by suicide, leaving their family and friends to navigate the tragedy of loss. This is one death every 40 seconds.

Studies by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention show that suicide rates are rising, and suicide is the 10th leading cause of death in the U.S. for all ages.

This important month is a time to share resources and stories in an effort to shed light on this stigmatized topic. It is beneficial to learn and pay attention to the signs of suicide and periodically check in with friends and family members, especially during these challenging times.

Additionally, talking about suicide in an open and caring way can help those struggling with suicidal thoughts. As the isolating effects of the COVID–19 pandemic continue to grip our world, it is imperative we take our physical and mental health seriously.

I encourage everyone to educate themselves about suicide and the patient-centered resources available so we can help protect those in our communities, friends, and loved ones.

ISSUES OF THE DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. DEAN). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2019, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GOHMERT) is recognized for 30 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. GOHMERT. Madam Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. SHIMKUS), my good friend, great patriot, and one of my favorite colleagues.

Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Speaker, as folks in the Chamber know, I have been taking some time to thank friends, family, and staff, for supporting me these 24 years as a Member of the House.

Today, before I go down the organizational chart and mention caseworkers, legislative assistants, legislative correspondents, staff assistants, schedulers, there are some outliers in my organization that I need to mention.

Mary Ellen, Mary Ellen Maxwell, and Maria Maxwell are all the same person. The Madonia family has strong roots in Springfield, Illinois, and in the Illinois Republican Party.

Mary Ellen was on the campaign staff with me in 1996. Upon our victory, she joined the congressional staff. She eventually moved away and then got married.

On returning to Illinois with Brad, she joined Team Shimkus as my campaign treasurer. Her family also grew, adding Zane and Lilly.

We continue to joke about how Governor Edgar pointed to her at an event one time and said: ‘Oh, you are the one who is going to jail.’ Well, not only has she not gone to jail, she is a stickler for the law, keeping us both out of trouble.

Dora Rohan has spent 29 years working with me, protecting me, and being my friend. She started out as my executive assistant when I became treasurer of Madison County. As the only countywide elected Republican, I needed a confidential employee whom I could trust. Dora fit the bill and also brought with her amazing secretarial skills, including shorthand.

Dora followed me to my congressional office and became a caseworker for the remainder of her professional career. Oh, the stories she could tell, and someday, I hope she will.

I also appreciated the times when we did travel together. These trips provided me a different perspective and insight to the goings on in my office, much to the chagrin of some of my other employees.

I have had two great legislative assistants who informally became part of my senior staff. Chris Sarley and Jordan Haverly rose to prominence on their ability to handle policy, negotiations, and the politics that arise from public policy.

They both were what we called shared staff. Because of my role as either chairman or ranking member of their committees, they were my primary point person with the full committee. They also played key roles in negotiations with staff members of other offices, from Republican offices and Democratic offices.

Chris Sarley and I had a lot of legislative successes, and I could spend all my time on that. Another Illinois boy, but a Chicagolander, I was skeptical at first until I found out that he was a Sox fan, not a fan of that other team. Chris’ claim to fame is our success shepherding the Toxic Substances Control Act, commonly known as TSCA, through the legislative process and getting it signed by President Obama.

That piece of legislation took 5½ years. This was the first rewrite of a major environmental law since it was passed in 1976. Praised by the chemical manufacturers and the environmental community, it is a perfect example of threading the needle to reform and update an old law.

Thank you, Chris.

Jordan is from Pennsylvania and is also this second term out of college with my office. He handles my subcommittee now. With Democrats in charge, we attempt to prevent overreach which is not scientifically supported and would hurt jobs in the economy. Many times doing nothing is better than doing something poorly.

Jordan has a gift for working with social media. He also has a great handle on who I am and how I would like to respond to most issues. He never lets me down.

Jordan, like my legislative director, seems to want to go down with the ship. That is loyalty, which I appreciate. He will be a great pick-up for any office. As Madam Speaker, as I have said numerous times, one is only as good as the people they have around them. These are some of the best, and I thank them.

Mr. GOHMERT. Madam Speaker, I thank Mr. SHIMKUS for the wonderful tribute being paid. We will have to stand up here at some point and pay a wonderful tribute to Mr. SHIMKUS.
Obviously, there is a great deal of trouble going on, a lot of troubled people in this country. It is interesting, recently, my wife had flown up to be here in Washington for the President’s speech on the White House grounds and, flying back, she noticed there were people with the BLM, Black Lives Matter, paraphernalia, things on there saying “BLM.” “Black Lives Matter.”

It was interesting to hear, apparently, some of the comments, and the comments had to do with the free plane tickets they got to fly up to protest here. One person said, yeah, they got a free minivan the whole time they were here.

Somebody is paying for those items to come up and threaten and assault. Thankfully, there weren’t near as many batteries with the actual physical part of the assault, just threatened assaults.

My wife and I, when we left the White House grounds up from the closed part, they got to fly up to protest here. The mob was on its way, and they were very loud and aggressive as they ran toward us, so I thought we will cut down to our car in front of the Willard, we ended up being chased by a mob. The mob was on its way, and they were very loud and aggressive as they ran toward us, so I thought we would never make it all the way around the next block.

There was a door there, a glass door, and I kept knocking on the door, and there were people at the other end of the hall. They could see us. Nobody would come open the door.

Finally, the mob was getting closer as they were running toward us, and I said: Look, if they get here before this door gets open, you go ahead around the corner. I am sure they will be all enthralled with beating me. I don’t think they will come after you. Just get around the block. There are police at the other end of the next block. Just get there while they are after me. Don’t try to stay and defend me.

But there, this guy just comes up behind me—he worked for the Willard—scanned his card, opened the door right before the crowd got there.

But it is just amazing, you know, who wants to inflict violence like that, and, more particularly, who is it that is funding people to come up and create havoc like that?

In an article by Katharine Gorka a couple of days ago in The Federalist entitled, “How the 1960s Riots Foretold the Comitatus,” “Communist Weaponization of Black Pain,”—clearly, there has been pain this country. General William P. Barr told federal prosecutors last week to charge violent demonstrators with a range of offenses, including sedition, a charge usually reserved for someone plotting to overthrow the government.

But that brings looking back at the Federal sedition charge. 18 U.S.C. 2384 is seditious conspiracy.

Some people I hear talk about it as this is treason. If you look at treason, both in the Constitution Article III, section 3, it is more about levying war against the United States Government. 18 U.S.C. 2381 is treason, and it is giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States. So it is a tough go. But if you look at the sedition conspiracy, “If any person or class of its people is deprived of any privilege, immunity, or protection named in the Constitution and secured by law. . . .”

So it is wide open to being used in some of these riots where people’s life, liberty, and certainly their property is not being protected, it is being overwhelmed. I think the President is right to give Governors and mayors the chance to protect their people, but at some point if it is not done, this ought to make clear to those Governors and mayors who aren’t protecting their people, the President says to send in people to put down what appears to be sedition. This violence really is Marxist violence.

It says in its title, Black Lives Matter. But if you look at what they are in favor of, it is not about Black lives mattering; it is things like destroying the family. Of course, BLM calls it the Western-style family, and that alone is just completely fiction.

The families we have traditionally known in the United States slide, our very inception weren’t Western style. These were Middle Eastern. These came from Moses and from Christians.
or Jews who believed what Moses said was inspired or provided by God. He said that a man shall leave his father and mother, a woman will leave her home, and the two will become one. Years later Jesus is asked about marriage and how Jesus felt about marriage and divorce and then adds the line: What God has joined together let nobody separate. So we didn’t come up with that type of marriage. It is not Western style. We have to give credit where credit is due. It is Middle-Eastern style. It is from Moses. So you can’t really take credit for that.

But, then, again, when you are a Marxist group dedicated to the overthrow of the government and replacing it with a Socialist, Communist, Progressive, whatever you want to call it, that is the way they go. That is the direction. You destroy the history so you can’t learn from prior mistakes and you can’t learn from prior successes, you rewrite the history. Orwell had a lot to say about that.

There is a study—as this article from The Federalist points out by Joy Pullman—up to 95 percent of 2020 U.S. riots are linked to Black Lives Matter. That is quite a good article and quite informative.

But then this article by Edwin Mora says that a pro-Communist China group is funding a Black Lives Matter-linked organization. It points out that a pro-Communist China group, the Chinese Progressive Association in San Francisco, is actively funding a venture by Black Lives Matter cofounder and unabashedly anti-capitalist, Alicia Garza.

Another article by Peter Hasson from 2 days ago points out that Black Lives Matter cofounder Alicia Garza in 2015 said that capitalism must be abolished for Black lives to matter.

So, basically, they are pushing for the one thing our Constitution-based government, and they are creating all kinds of chaos.

So it shouldn’t surprise anybody who saw the article yesterday by Douglas Ernst that that Jesus statue that is 90 years old was destroyed at St. Patrick’s Cathedral in El Paso, the quote here is: I am in shock.

But that is what Socialist, Communist, Progressives push. If you look at what Communists, Socialists have done in the past, you have to get used to any belief in anything except the government.

As I have mentioned before, when I was an exchange student in the Soviet Union, there were eight Americans that summer from the U.S. We went to the former city—it was the only recognized Christian seminary in the Soviet Union at the time—of Zagorsk. There was a building—as you would turn into the walled area of Zagorsk, there was a building there with a painting of Lenin that said above it, Lenin, below it was “Lenin’s nami.” Lenin is with us. So you may be turning in here to learn about Jesus, but just remember it is Lenin who is with us, nobody else. That is the message.

It actually made me nauseous to go into an old church in Moscow that had a stained glass window with big gorgeous colors; instead of Jesus with all the children suffering to come under Him is often depicted surrounded by the children. It was a bit sickening to go into the massive cathedral there in what was then St. Petersburg originally, then it became Leningrad. But that beautiful architectural has been converted to a museum of atheism and evolution—just incredible.

But that is where this all has to go if you are going to have a successful destruction of the freedoms we have and go to government control and government ownership and no private property. That is where it all ends up, if we don’t get it stopped. It will mean the end of the country that afforded the greatest opportunities individually, the greatest opportunities individually, and the highest standard of living.

It is tragic that we have poverty in the United States, tragic that we still have any homelessness at all that hasn’t apparently improved a whole lot since the War on Poverty started trillions of dollars ago, but even so, we still had the highest standard of living and opportunities, I would submit, in history. It is what freedom and private property has brought—innovation, the greatest innovation in the history of the world. But that is all in jeopardy right now, and Americans better wake up. It is all at risk.

These Marxist revolutionaries need to be stopped. It is sedition. It is a violation of Federal and state law, and it is time to put it to an end. If the Governors and mayors who have been allowing this to go on—depriving Americans of their life, liberty, pursuit of happiness on their own property—then it will be time for the President to use these federal statutes to step in and bring peace to the country once again, so we can go through our lives without worrying about being chased by a mob that is upset with you just because you went and heard a speech.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

ADJOURNMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore, pursuant to section 4(b) of House Resolution 967, the House stands adjourned until noon tomorrow.

Thereupon (at 4 p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, September 18, 2020, at noon.

The Senate met at 9:45 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. GRASSLEY).

PRAYER
The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Eternal God, who makes us one, use our lawmakers today as agents of reconciliation. Lord, give them the wisdom to build bridges that will enable diverse people to accomplish Your purposes on Earth. Lord, inspire our Senators with such oneness of spirit and resolve that they will provide our Nation with a model of cooperation. Remind them of the wisdom of Matthew 12:25, which states that a house divided against itself cannot stand.

Lord, we thank You for giving Senator GRASSLEY another birthday. We pray in Your unifying Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE
The President pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HYDE-SMITH). The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 1 minute in morning business.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ELECTIONS
Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, first of all, I thank the chaplain for the happy birthday that was part of the prayer. So they heard it in Heaven, as well as throughout the United States.

Before the 2016 election, Democrats speculated very feverishly: Would Donald Trump accept the results of the election of 2016?

Then he won, and it is the Democrats who have refused to accept the result. They sought to delegitimize the election, citing Russia’s meddling or questioning our Presidential election system. On Inauguration Day, you know the famous Washington Post headline said it all: “The campaign to impeach President Trump has begun.” He was President about 1 hour at that time.

In fact, we now know that efforts to fabricate a Russia collusion narrative were already under way well before the President was inaugurated. The same people are again fretting that President Trump might not somehow accept the election results if he loses. And, of course, under our Constitution, no President has any option but to accept those results because the term ends on January 20.

But can’t we also ask the alternative? What if President Trump does win? Well, this was the advice from Hillary Clinton to former Vice President Biden: that Biden “should not concede under any circumstances.”

So will the Democrats respect the election results this time?

I yield the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER
Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, the Democratic leader is recognized.

PRESIDENT TRUMP
Mr. SCHUMER. Madam President, this morning I was planning to address a number of topics, but the President held a press conference yesterday afternoon that was so callous, so uninformed, so egomaniacal, so divisive that I am compelled to respond to it this morning.

We are in the midst of a global pandemic that has killed nearly 200,000 Americans, far more than the number of Americans who died in World War I—more than any other Nation on God’s green Earth, more than countries with larger populations, and more than countries with mere fractions of our wealth and power.

Here is how the President spoke about the number of American deaths yesterday at his press conference:

If you take the blue states out, we’re at a level that I don’t think anybody in the world would be at . . . [If you take the blue states out] we’re really at a very low level.

Yes, Mr. President, if you don’t count the total number of Americans who have died, you might think it is not so bad. If you close your eyes and pretend that half of the country doesn’t exist, maybe some might think you didn’t do such a spectacularly awful job.

What kind of person looks at the number of dead citizens in the country he is supposed to lead, and in an attempt to glamorize himself, dismisses every American who died in a State that didn’t support the President politically? What a disgrace. It is monstrous. There is not a shred of empathy, not an ounce of sorrow. What kind of President do we have?

The President just wants you to see a graph about how his catastrophic failure to fight COVID-19 could have been worse.

I suggest President Trump spend some time reading the stories of the men and women across the country who have passed away from this terrible virus.

This isn’t about a number. Oh, no, it is about the people families and communities have lost, whether they be in red States or blue States. Many of these families have been unable to hold funeral services to properly mourn their loved ones for fear of spreading COVID to another member of their family. That is why these remarks by the President are so horrific.

What does the outcome of an election determine? The President is saying that the deaths of David Pickman of Somerset, CT; and Patrick McNamee of Ypsilanti, MI; and Virgil Sutton of Dallas, NC, don’t count—don’t count. How about Ralph Davis, the high school basketball coach in Milwaukee, WI? Did his life not count because he lived in a State with a Democratic Governor? What kind of demented person would say that those American lives don’t count?

The President also said: “But some of those states, they were blue States and blue-state managed.”

I suppose that means that the life of Dennis Wilson shouldn’t count because he was an educator in Lenexa, KS. If only Mr. Wilson had lived 17 miles east in the Hickman Hills neighborhood of Kansas City, MO, maybe the President would think his life should have counted.

How about Captain Doug Hickok? If he lived—I don’t know—in Cheyenne, WY, I suppose the President might have valued his life. Unfortunately for Captain Hickok, he lived 1,700 miles east in Bangor, PA, so President Trump says his life isn’t worth counting.

Maybe I am giving the President too much credit. You never really know what the heck he means when he talks. So it is possible that his definition of blue States isn’t limited to States with Democratic Governors. Maybe his definition of blue States includes States with more Democrats than Republicans in their congressional delegations. That would mean Valentina Blackhorse’s life didn’t count because she lived in Kayenta, AZ, nor would the life of a Des Moines toddler who died from COVID in June.

What kind of demented person would make that calculation? President Trump, that is who.

Of course, there is no bottom with President Trump. He is so contemptuous of every virtue, so dishonorable, so dishonest that the vices parade themselves forward one after another.

At the press conference after his disgusting comments about ignoring American lives from blue States, President Trump lied, once again, about his support for Americans with preexisting conditions, a lie he has told and retold while his administration is in court suing to eliminate those very protections.

Don’t worry, though. President Trump promised that a brandnew, fantastic Republican healthcare plan is just around the corner. He said you will see it in 2 weeks, just like he told FOX News in July when he said he would sign a healthcare plan in 2 weeks, a full and complete healthcare plan, and again in August, just 2 weeks away—just like his infrastructure bill, a new middle-class tax cut, lower prescription drug costs, a new stimulus package, a report on COVID–19’s impact on minorities, and new COVID tests, all of which the President said would be “2 weeks” away but, in fact, never materialized, not in 2 weeks, not ever.

He must think the American people are chumps that he can say anything he wants with no accountability, not do it, and then do it again and again and again.

For centuries, American Presidents have faced challenges with honor and with courage. They have stepped up to the podium and used their bully pulpits to give honor to American lives. But when this President Trump stands at that great podium, he reveals his cowardice, his callousness, his selfishness, his ignorance, and, most of all, his insistence on dividing us. His inability and unwillingness to unite a grieving nation will be his legacy.

When Donald Trump took the stage at the 2016 National Republican Convention, he painted a false portrait of a country in crisis, and declared, “I alone can fix it.”

Four years later, the country faces actual crises—the greatest economic crisis in 75 years, the greatest public health crisis in a century—and President Trump now says: “It is what it is.”

“Could you have done more to stop it?”

“I don’t think so,” he says.

“If you take the blue States out... We’re really at a very low level.”

“I don’t take any responsibility at all.”

“A lot of people think the masks are no good.”

“I see the disinfectant, [where it] knocks it out in a minute... and is there a way we can do something like that, by injection?”

“I’m not a doctor, but I’m, like, a person that has a good, you know what.”

This man, who said all these ridiculous, harmful things, is leading the country through the worst public health crisis in a century.

Americans don’t have to ask themselves, as Reagan once asked, if they are better off now than 4 years ago. President Trump has told everyone exactly what the score is.

When Donald Trump said he was running for office, he said: “I alone can fix it.” When Donald Trump is running the country during the worst pandemic in this century, he says: “It is what it is.”

Five words. Both times, five words. Five words that sum up an approach to government and leadership that is completely antithetical to everything the word “leadership” means.

Promise big, deliver zero, deliver small. That is President Trump’s view of government. Boast when you don’t have any responsibility; shrink from it when you do. That is President Trump’s view of public service.

It has diminished our institutions and our democracy. He has cost our country its moral standing in the world; he has threatened the future of our planet; and he has cost Americans their healthcare, their jobs, and their lives. But it is not so bad if you don’t count the numbers.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

CORONAVIRUS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, our Democratic colleagues have sought to spend this week discussing election security. Well, they really have sought to discuss absolutely anything besides pandemic relief since their leaders are still blocking bipartisan negotiations that could actually get a result.

So our friends across the aisle have tried to change the subject to election security or immigration from Venezuela or anything besides the hundreds of billions of dollars in relief they have been filibustering.

But the integrity of our democracy is a crucial issue. We are fewer than 50 days from November 3. Every voter deserves to know their State and local authorities are as well equipped as possible to oversee fair, safe, and secure elections.

So let’s discuss the progress made since back in 2016, the threats still before us, and how it is when this nonpartisan issue gets hijacked—literally hijacked—for partisan point-scoring.

Here is how the Democratic vice chair of the Intelligence Committee described our vulnerability to foreign influence in 2016 during the Obama-Biden administration. This is the Democratic vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee about 2016. He said: "We were caught flat-footed." "We were caught flat-footed."

That administration’s relationships with State governments were dysfunctional; information sharing was weak; cross-sector partnerships hardly existed; information sharing was weak; and our Democratic colleagues have sought to change the subject to election security or immigration from Venezuela or anything besides the hundreds of billions of dollars in relief they have been filibustering.

But the integrity of our democracy is a crucial issue. We are fewer than 50 days from November 3. Every voter deserves to know their State and local authorities are as well equipped as possible to oversee fair, safe, and secure elections.

So let’s discuss the progress made since back in 2016, the threats still before us, and how it is when this nonpartisan issue gets hijacked—literally hijacked—for partisan point-scoring.
Now, for the last 4 years, thanks to the actions of this Senate and the leadership of the current administration, a huge number of dedicated experts have worked hard to improve our defenses and regain America’s trust.

In 2016, the Department of Homeland Security was on an island, but under this administration, DHS officials have built partnerships with State and local officials who run our elections and stood up massive intelligence-sharing efforts that connect them with Federal authorities and intelligence community, as well as the private sector.

In 2016, the outgoing administration hid their limited grasp of the threat from Congress and the American people. The Trump administration and intelligence experts have been far, far more transparent.

In 2016, only 14 State or local authorities had high-tech sensors to detect cyberattacks. Now all 50 States—all of them—have them. The Trump administration has imposed real pain on Russia: closing consulates, expelling spies, sanctioning oligarchs and agents of influence, and equipping neighbors that are threatened by Moscow to deter further aggression.

Here in the Senate, multiple committees have become major players in this effort. Our colleagues on the Intelligence Committee spent, literally, years producing their 5-part, 1,300-plus-page report on what happened back in 2016. Some of their bipartisan recommendations are already taking effect.

And then there is funding. The Senate has led the efforts to set aside more than $1 billion in extra election assistance from foreign interference to COVID-19. Through the end of the primaries, more than 70 percent of the huge sum we provided in the CARES Act is still unspent. As recently as a few months ago, more than 60 percent of the money we provided all the way back in fiscal 2018 was still unspent. So we have made sure money is not an obstacle.

So these threats are still with us, and they have evolved. Not only Russia but also China, Iran, and other adversaries are looking constantly for ways to interfere in our politics, divide America, and erode confidence in our institutions. That is a fact.

The work goes on, but we certainly aren’t flat-footed any longer. This progress should be cause for bipartisan celebration, but one side of the aisle seems to prefer pretending—pretending—there hasn’t been any progress at all. Frankly, while nonpartisan experts worked around the clock to fight our adversaries’ destabilizing efforts, too many Democrats have been undermining America’s confidence in our democracy to the degree that those adversaries could only dream of. The baseless accusations that the last election was stolen; casual assertions that this one, too, must be illegitimate if they don’t win.

On a monthly basis, we have heard new, hysterical pronouncements that our democracy was on death’s door. Even sensitive intelligence became grist for the partisan mill.

This has not been universal. There has been good bipartisan work in some committees, but the Democratic leadership appears to make a conscious choice instead of treating election security like the unifying, bipartisan issue it ought to be. They would use it as a partisan cudgel to hit the other side, playing right into our adversaries’ hands.

This week, the Democratic leader attacked Republicans and basically questioned our patriotism because we did not rush to meet his latest demands for empty theatrics. He proposes to crowd out 4 years of bipartisan work from actual committees by inventing a brandnew Senate committee and pull experts off the frontlines during the home stretch for theatrical hearings here on Capitol Hill.

He says we must allocate more money. Never mind that the millions and millions of dollars we have already set aside remain unspent. He proposes that the administration pull experts off the frontlines to continue briefing him. Never mind that ODNI alone has supported 53 election security briefings to Congress since 2018—53 election security briefings to Congress since 2018. I am sure 54 will be the magic number that finally makes our colleague a reasonable voice on this issue.

The truth is, briefings are ongoing; the Intelligence and Armed Services Committees will be briefed this week; and all Senators will have access to written intelligence analysis by career professionals if new developments arise since last month’s all-Senate briefings.

The Democratic leader’s demands aren’t solutions. These aren’t what the experts say we need; they are just empty gestures concocted so the Democratic leader can complain that Republicans hate democracy and apple pie when we don’t go along with them.

So remember, fear and division, reduced confidence in our democracy, Americans divided against ourselves: that is exactly what Russia wants—exactly. That is what China wants too. That is just what our adversaries want to achieve, and it is exactly what the Democratic leader helps them achieve when he turns to a bipartisan national issue that should unite us into one more pretext for partisan finger-pointing.

Our colleague from New York said recently that “Republicans are the enemy of the good.” No, Republicans and Democrats are not enemies. No fellow Americans are enemies.

Our people, our democracy, have real enemies in some corners of the world. I expect they are absolutely thrilled to hear our own politicians talking that way.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to resume consideration of the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant legislative clerk reported, pursuant to nomination of Franklin Ulyses Valderrama, of Illinois, to be United States District Judge for the Northern District of Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority whip.

HOT SPRINGS VA FACILITY

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, South Dakota’s veterans and the Hot Springs community are currently celebrating the VA’s announcement that it has begun the process of resceding its order to close the Hot Springs VA facility. This was a hard-fought victory in a battle that we weren’t always sure we would win. It started almost a decade ago. In 2011, when the Obama administration announced its plans to realign—when I say “realignment,” it means to close—the Hot Springs VA facility.

I was well aware of what the Hot Springs facility means to South Dakota veterans and to the entire Hot Springs community, and I determined that there wasn’t going to be a closure if I could help it. I knew that closing the Hot Springs facility would put accessible care out of the reach of a lot of rural and Tribal veterans—not only rural and Tribal South Dakota veterans but rural and Tribal veterans from neighboring Wyoming and Nebraska who depend on the Hot Springs facility for care.

Traveling to Rapid City and Fort Meade for care, as the VA proposed, would be a real hardship, if not an impossibility, for many of these veterans. I also strongly disagreed with moving not only medical care but the vital Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder Program from Hot Springs. Only this put the program out of reach of some veterans, I believed it was also a mistake to remove a tremendously effective program from the place where it has been so successful and try to reconstitute it elsewhere.

I got to work in Congress, along with other Members of the South Dakota delegation. My first priority was simply trying to get Hot Springs’ veterans a hearing with the VA. In 2016, after years of trying, we persuaded then-VA Secretary Bob McDonnell to visit Hot Springs. Un fortunately, the visit didn’t work, and soon...
Agriculture is the lifeblood of my home State of South Dakota, and making sure our ag producers have what they need to keep feeding our Nation—and the world—is one of my top priorities here in Washington.

During the CARES Act—our largest coronavirus relief bill to date—I fought to make sure that we included relief for farmers and ranchers. The final bill included $14 billion for the Commodity Credit Corporation, plus an additional emergency support to allow the Department of Agriculture to provide income and price support for farmers and ranchers. USDA has been putting these resources to work to provide assistance to producers in South Dakota and across the country who were affected by the pandemic, and they have been a lifeline to many farmers. But more needs to be done to support our Nation’s agriculture industry. And part of doing that is the Commodity Credit Corporation in the continuing resolution—the appropriations measure that hopefully Congress will be considering soon.

The Commodity Credit Corporation ensures that USDA has the resources it needs to provide assistance through farm programs, including the programs included in the bipartisan 2018 farm bill—commodity programs like the Agriculture Risk Coverage, we call it the ARC Program; the Price Loss Coverage, what we call the PLC Program; and Marketing Assistance Loans; dairy programs like the Dairy Margin programs; disaster programs, like the Livestock Porce Disaster Program; and the Livestock Indemnity Program.

These programs are a critical part of agriculture producers' concerns.

I see my colleague, the chairman of the Agriculture Committee—the committee on which I serve—is here as well to talk about these issues and to point to the need to ensure that we are doing everything we can to support our Nation’s farmers and ranchers during this time of incredible challenge.

I look forward to working with the chairman of the Ag Committee and our other colleagues from our agriculture States—many of whom will be here momentarily to talk about this issue—to help our ranchers and farmers face down the challenges that are in front of them.

I urge my Democratic colleagues to work with Republicans to make sure that USDA has the resources it needs to support our agricultural producers—the men and women who feed not only this country but the entire world.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ROBERTS. Madam President, I want to thank Senator THUNE for his very pertinent and cogent remarks. This is an important topic, and a decision that affects all farmers and ranchers and growers all across our country during a time in which we are going through some very difficult times—weather and everything else that you can imagine.

I see Senator ENNIST over there, who will be following me, I am assuming.

I want to thank Senator HOEVEN for retaining this time, as other members of the Agricultural Committee come and speak on an issue that we shouldn’t really be having an issue.

As I said, I rise to engage in a colloquy on the importance of providing certainty and predictability. Those were the watch words we used when we crafted the Nation’s farmers, ranchers, and growers, by replenishing the Commodity Credit Corporation, there should not be an issue.

First, I would like to thank Senator HOEVEN, who has just arrived on the floor, for his leadership and speaking to this issue, and speak on an issue that we of the Agriculture Committee come to your attention.

Mr. President, while most sectors of our economy were thriving before the coronavirus pandemic hit, farmers and ranchers were hit the hardest. Tariffs. That is a terrible combination.

The battle wasn’t over. In 2014, I had succeeded in attaching a measure to an appropriations legislation prohibiting the closure of the Hot Springs facility until a national VA realignment strategy was proposed. In each year, with appreciation to the Appropriations Committee, I have managed to renew this provision before a new VA Secretary—Secretary Robert Wilkie—took the helm. I repeatedly urged him to come to Hot Springs and to check out our facility for himself. Early this year, the Secretary announced that he would visit the facility in March. I then organized a letter with the rest of the South Dakota delegation strongly urging the Secretary to make time to sit down with Hot Springs veterans and other stakeholders and listen to their concerns about the planned closure. To our great gratitude, the Secretary agreed.

Early in Secretary Wilkie’s visit to Hot Springs on March 2, I requested that he revisit the order to close the facility signed over 3 years ago. A bit to our surprise and much to our relief, the Secretary agreed.

To our great gratitude, the VA will be hosting a colloquy to draw attention to where we were bipartisan. We were. And even when we have to work together to get back to where we were bipartisan. We were. Eighty-seven Members in this Chamber voted in favor of this legislation, that the 2018 farm bill fund the resources it requires to help our agriculture producers weather this crisis.

I appreciate Senator HOEVEN's work to highlight this issue, and I hope my Democratic colleagues will hear agriculture producers' concerns.

As chairman of this committee—the Senate Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry Committee—we were successful in passing the 2018 farm bill in a bipartisan manner. Everybody says: Oh, we have to work together to get back to where we were bipartisan. We were.
Mr. HOEVEN, for asking for this time.

ranchers with certainty and predictability for commodities and input programs. I can’t imagine doing that. Farmers, ranchers, and others in farm country are counting on us to do our job. In fact, we have heard loud and clear from over 40 different organizations of farmers, ranchers, and other rural stakeholders across the country that the CCC must be reim-plemented before the end of the fiscal year.

I want to say this and make this emphatically clear: Failure to do so would result in delays of the 2018 farm bill programs. We are talking about other programs because of COVID–19 and the pandemic and all of that. But even during a global pandemic, U.S. farmers and ranchers continue to hold up their end of the deal by producing their crops for the world’s safest, most affordable food supply. The least we can do is to ensure that the 2018 farm bill—the piece of legislation that received 87 votes in this body right here in the Senate to be fully implemented, on time, and without delay.

I hope that we can reach a bipartisan agreement. This business of at least holding up the CCC funds—I understand what people have with regard to their own top things that they want to get accomplished, but holding up the CCC is not an answer.

I look forward to working with my Senate colleagues in a bipartisan way to ensure that we provide farmers and ranchers with certainty and predictability from the 2018 farm bill.

I thank the distinguished Senator, Mr. HOEVEN, for asking for this time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Madam President, I want to thank our Ag chairman. I want to thank him for being here today. I want to thank him for his many, many years of service in this body. And most of all, what I want to thank him for today is his leadership on farm issues, on ag issues, on working on behalf of our farmers and ranchers, and in working in a very bipartisan way. That is what he is here doing.

You hear from our whip, the Senator from South Dakota, an ag State. You heard from our Ag chairman, the Senator from Kansas, an ag State. You are going to hear from other members of our Ag Committee. You are going to hear from the Senator from Iowa, an ag State. You are going to hear from Sensor BOOZMAN from Arkansas, an ag State; from Senator FISCHER, Nebraska, obviously a big farm and ranch State; the Presiding Officer, I know, would be right here speaking with us if he wasn’t presiding—again, an ag State.

What this is all about today is makand the annual funding Congress provides to Commodity Credit Corporation, or the CCC.

I want to stress to my colleagues that now is not the time for partisan gamesmanship. If Congress does not replenish the CCC, it could significantly harm our important programs. I can’t imagine doing that. Farmers, ranchers, and others in farm country are counting on us to do our job. In fact, we have heard loud and clear from over 40 different organizations of farmers, ranchers, and other rural stakeholders across the country that the CCC must be reim-plemented before the end of the fiscal year.

I want to say this and make this emphatically clear: Failure to do so would result in delays of the 2018 farm bill programs. We are talking about other programs because of COVID–19 and the pandemic and all of that. But even during a global pandemic, U.S. farmers and ranchers continue to hold up their end of the deal by producing their crops for the world’s safest, most affordable food supply. The least we can do is to ensure that the 2018 farm bill—
the piece of legislation that received 87 votes in this body right here in the Senate to be fully implemented, on time, and without delay.

I hope that we can reach a bipartisan agreement. This business of at least holding up the CCC funds—I understand what people have with regard to their own top things that they want to get accomplished, but holding up the CCC is not an answer.

I look forward to working with my Senate colleagues in a bipartisan way to ensure that we provide farmers and ranchers with certainty and predictability from the 2018 farm bill.

I thank the distinguished Senator, Mr. HOEVEN, for asking for this time.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mrs. FISCHER. I want to thank my colleague from North Dakota.

It is so appropriate, Madam President, that you are in the chair right now presiding because you are a cattle farmer from the great State of Mis-issippi, and we have many, many dis-agriculture and on the importance of livestock and on the importance of agriculture to our States.

Nebraska is an ag State. In 2018, Nebraska generated around $21.3 billion in agricultural cash receipts. Agriculture, ag processing accounts for 9.4 percent of the State’s GDP. The ag-culture production complex accounts for approximately one-quarter of our GDP workforce. By these measures, ag-culture plays a greater role in my State of Nebraska than it does in the economy of any other State in the United States. When agriculture sufers, Nebraska suffers.

Over the last several years, our farmers and ranchers have done their fair market share. This Senate has already mentioned, USDA’s most recent farm income projections forecast that cash receipts will be at their lowest level in more than a decade. As a rancher, I know it is difficult to plan for the future when you are facing many factors that are outside of your control, whether it is low commodity prices or retaliatory tariffs or natural disasters that we have gone through and also a global pandemic. Nebraska’s farmers and ranchers have maintained their patience in these tough times, but they deserve to know without any kind of doubt that amidst all of this unpredictability they are experiencing, we here in Congress are going to hold up our end of the bargain.

For decades, the Commodity Credit Corporation has been routinely replenished to fund the programs that the Senator from North Dakota spoke about just now. The programs are so important to the farm safety net. Producers count on programs like the agriculture risk coverage, price loss cov-ervation, marketing assistance loans, the important conservation programs, and so many more.

For PLC alone, U.S. farmers are expected to receive $4.7 billion in October. Out of that total, Nebraska farmers are anticipating $180 million in program payments. Without that immediate CCC reimbursement, these pay-mants and these programs are going to be sigificantly delayed. That will jeopardize the nearly 46,000 farms and ranches in my State of Nebraska.

We have seen more than 40 agiculture and commodity groups who have stepped forward and written congressional leadership this week with a very, very clear message: Blocking the inclusion of that CCC reimbursement in a CR will hurt farmers and ranchers, no question.

We need to come together. We need to come together and fund the programs that we, Republicans and Democrats alike, have voted on in countless farm bills. Our farmers and ranchers rely on them, and they rely on them now more than ever. Congress must keep its commitment to these hard-working men and women.

I urge my colleagues in the House and Senate not to allow politics to stand in the way of upholding our commitment to those hard-working men and women who get up every morning and work tirelessly day in and day out to put food on our tables. We aren’t thinking only of just ourselves; they are planning for future generations that will proudly carry on their life’s work and continue feeding our world. Let’s make sure we continue to fund these programs so that we can ensure that they can do that.

My thanks to my fellow ag State colleagues who know the importance of agriculture, not just to the States we represent but to this country as a whole. Thank you to the Senator from North Dakota for organizing us to come to the floor so that we as a group can stress that importance.

Mr. HOEVEN. Madam President, I would like to thank the good Senator from Nebraska and turn to the Senator from Iowa, who has also been an absolute champion on behalf of agriculture. Thanks so much for being here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HOEVEN). The Senator from Iowa.

Ms. ERNST. Thank you, Senator HOEVEN and Senator PISCHER, as well. We have so many of our great ag State friends here on the floor today to join in the colloquy.

I did grow up on a small family farm in Southwest Iowa and grew up around hogs. We have row crops, of course, coming out of Iowa—soybeans and corn, which are very, very important.

This is an important discussion today because our farmers need certainty—I hear it time and again from Iowa’s ag community—whether it is trade, biofuels, or the supports that are coming out of USDA.

Just yesterday, I heard the message loud and clear as I was on a phone call with our farmers from the Iowa Farm Bureau. They said we need to make sure the CCC is fully funded. This isn’t just because of COVID–19 aid payments. That is something different. Those have been helpful to most of our farmers. This is because our farm bill programs depend on the CCC being funded. The important supports we have there for dairy, for conservation, for young and beginning farmers—you name it; it is the CCC.

Just a couple of weeks ago, USDA Secretary Perdue was in Iowa, and we toured one of the many conservation sites across the State and saw firsthand the good work that is being done with our farmers through USDA’s conservation programs. They are working to improve their operations while also cleaning Iowa’s water, air, and keeping our land healthy. Without these conservation programs funded through the CCC, this work simply would not be happening.

Folks, since 1987, Congress has replenished the CCC back to $30 billion every year. This is not the year to stop. Iowa farmers in particular have been suffering through COVID–19; plus we had a derecho and a drought. The last thing we need is when something they have to come to depend on.

Madam President, 2020 has been hard on everyone, and there is no time to play games with our farmers’ futures. I hope our friends on the other side of the aisle join us in supporting the replenishment of the CCC in the upcoming funding bill.

I yield back to Senator HOEVEN, the great Senator from North Dakota. Again, my thanks to the Senator and all of our farm State participants today for joining in the colloquy.

Mr. HOEVEN. I would like to thank the Senator from Iowa. Again, she directly brings that experience from the farm, growing up in agriculture.

Somebody else who is here represents Mississippi, so you can see we are going from North Dakota to Mississippi to Iowa to Nebraska. This is the whole country we are talking about.

The Senator also is somebody who has a long background in agriculture. I would like to thank the good Senator from Mississippi.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCOTT of Florida). The Senator from Mississippi.

Mrs. HYDE-SMITH. Mr. President, as a former commissioner of agriculture in Mississippi, this is so vital and so important. In Mississippi, agriculture is the No. 1 industry. One in every four jobs is related to agriculture. So this is very vital for my State.

With the end of the fiscal year fast approaching, we must act to ensure important agriculture and conservation programs administered by the Department of Agriculture do not come to a screeching halt on October 1.

The 2018 farm bill, which was supported by 87 Members of the Senate, authorized important safety-net programs to protect producers against sharp price and revenue declines; provide short-term loans and interim financing to help producers meet cash flow needs; assist dairy producers affected by low milk prices and high feed costs; compensate landowners for taking fragile land out of production and implementing conservation improvements; and assist producers when natural disasters destroy feed for livestock, cause above-average livestock mortality, and damage commercial orchards and fruit trees.

Current law requires many of these program payments to be made annually after October 1, which highlights the importance of this matter on this day.

As Congress discusses measures to keep the government open and Federal programs operating beyond the current fiscal year, it is essential for any continuing resolution to include a provision allowing the USDA Commodity Credit Corporation to continue financing these programs. Failure to include such a provision would pose a serious risk to America’s farmers and ranchers in these already challenging times. It would cause harmful delays in program funding and benefits at a time when many producers simply cannot afford to wait months to recover for these losses.

This issue is not just about supporting American agriculture; it is about Congress living up to its promise to more than 1.7 million producers signed contracts for the Agriculture Risk Coverage and Price Loss Coverage Programs. Millions of private landowners have signed conservation contracts to take their land out of production. These are contracts, and the terms of those contracts must be met.

I remind my colleagues that this is not a situation to be taken lightly. In recent years, America’s farmers and ranchers have experienced unfair farm policies, depressed catastrophic flooding and other natural disasters, market disruptions, and now COVID–19.

I applaud my fellow Republican colleagues on the Appropriations Committees for raising awareness on this issue. It is our job to feed this country. We need to be allowed to do that.

Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, again, I thank Senator HYDE-SMITH of the State of Mississippi. Not only is she a strong advocate for our farmers and ranchers, but as I say, all of these people you are hearing from this morning have backgrounds in agriculture. They have been out there, and they know what they are talking about, as does the next Senator, somebody who himself has raised cattle—the Senator from the good State of Arkansas.

This documents again that ag touches every region of the country and that the people you are hearing from have strong ag backgrounds. So, when they talk about this issue, they know how important it is, and know that this help is very much needed at this time.

I turn to the good Senator from Arkansas, Mr. BOOZMAN.

Mr. BOOZMAN. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BOOZMAN. I thank Senator HOEVEN and Senator ROBERTS for organizing this and getting us down here to talk about a topic that is so, so very important.

I am not going to say anything new. I am going to be saying that we need to include reimbursement to the USDA’s Commodity Credit Corporation in the upcoming continuing resolution. The CCC is the funding mechanism for the bulk of our Nation’s agriculture and conservation programs that are authorized with broad bipartisan support in the farm bill.
In order for these programs to work as intended, the CCC must be reimbursed by Congress on an annual basis. For decades, the CCC has been reimbursed by Congress without fanfare, and I am hopeful this year will be a continuation. Earlier this year, the Senate voted unanimously to allow the USDA to use $14 billion from the CCC to prevent, prepare for, and respond to the coronavirus. This provision was included in the CARES Act.

As our farmers and ranchers face the most challenging year in recent history, we have an obligation to advance this provision so the important farm and conservation program payments are made on time and in full to our farmers and ranchers. Earlier this week, over 40 agricultural organizations representing farmers and ranchers across the country sent a letter to the Appropriations Committee, urging this provision be included in the continuing resolution.

Preserving CCC reimbursement would only exacerbate the tremendous hardship and challenges facing our farmers and ranchers. So I am here with so many other members of the Senate Ag Committee and Members who make up States to ask the Senate to help farmers and ranchers and prevent the uncertainty that would come from not including this important provision.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HOEVEN. Mr. President, I thank Senator BOOZMAN for his strong leadership on ag. He said it very well and very clearly and very simply.

We have heard from more than 40 ag groups from across the country, including from the Presiding Officer's State. The last I checked, he has tremendous agriculture in his State of Florida, whether it be with the cattle raised in Central Florida or those wonderful oranges that we all enjoy all year round.

It is just one more example of how agriculture touches everybody's life every day in the most important ways.

Our farmers and ranchers feed the country. They feed the world. What could be more important? Look at the challenges they have faced. They have come into this cycle with very low commodity prices when they have had years of low commodity prices. We have agreements with countries like China and others have targeted us on trade. Then you put COVID on top of that. In the midst of that, they have continued to provide the food supply that feeds every American every single day. What could be more important? As we have said, that food supply is the highest quality, lowest cost food supply in the history of the world. Do you know what else? It is safe, and they have never missed a beat.

What we are talking about today, make no mistake, is of making sure that we fund the heart and soul of the farm program. The bill passed on a bipartisan vote in this body with about 87 votes. That is what we are talking about with regard to funding the CR. It is vitally important that we do it. I thank these members of the Ag Committee for making that point so clearly and so well.

We will wrap up, actually, pretty close to on time, which is fairly remarkable as seven Senators have just gone through this colloquy process, and I thank them all.

Remember what we are talking about here—the food supply that benefits every single American every single day.

Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon.

MEDICARE

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the election is only weeks away. Voting has already begun in some places. I know that folks at home in Oregon, where some of our communities are literally locked down because of the coronavirus, are thinking about how they are going to vote. They will have a lot on their minds when they fill out their ballots, obviously, and I hope all Americans will fill out their ballots early as a raging pandemic continues to spread from coast to coast, and across the West have taken a huge toll on our communities.

What I want to do this morning—and I am going to use public records to sound an alarm—is talk about another issue that isn't getting nearly the attention it deserves—not even close. A Medicare crisis is headed our way and fast. Whoever wins the next Presidential election will be in charge during the biggest crisis Medicare has ever faced.

Based on these public records, I want to warn the public—particularly seniors—about something I believe they already know: You cannot trust Donald Trump to protect Medicare, so you have to protect Medicare from Donald Trump.

Donald Trump has proposed extreme budget cuts to Medicare for 3 straight years. In 2018, he proposed cutting $500 billion, and in 2019, more than $800 billion. In 2020, Donald Trump proposed cutting $650 billion from Medicare. The Democrats blocked him from making those cuts, but in another Presidential term, he could undermine Medicare on his own. Here is how the situation comes to pass:

Our economy melted down earlier this year because the President downplayed the coronavirus. Millions were out of work, and businesses shuttered—whole sectors of our economy mothballed. The economy collapsed. Again, I base this on public records, it has been devastating to Medicare's finances. According to the nonpartisan experts in charge of Medicare's books, the Medicare trust fund is going to be insolvent within 4 years.

There is noional to Medicare as we know it. They pay for basic services that millions of seniors need each day—treatment for heart attacks and strokes, care for a broken bone or a bout with the flu that lands an older person in the emergency room, and access to skilled nursing care. Once you reach insolvency, you are sending this country's seniors out into no man's land.

Whether Medicare is going to continue to function the way it does today is a big unknown. If Donald Trump is in a position to be in charge, these Trump budgets are going to be the end of the Medicare as we know it. Since I was the director of the Oregon Gray Panthers, we always looked at that Medicare guarantee as sacred. It meant that there would be defined, secure, high-quality health benefits for America's seniors and that they would be available under any type of Medicare that older people received.

Based on some of these Trump budget proposals, older Americans are going to have to figure out some other way to pay for their healthcare and their prescription drugs. Millions and millions of seniors who have very modest incomes—who are just scraping by on Social Security. What we know based on the policies of Trump's favoritism for the insurance companies is that they could be in a position to be paid lower premiums and high deductibles that would put seniors out of pocket and across the country. We will wrap up, actually, pretty close to on time, which is fairly remarkable as seven Senators have just gone through this colloquy process, and I thank them all. Remember what we are talking about here—the food supply that benefits every single American every single day.

Thank you.
than 42 million adult survivors in America. As the stresses of the pandemic and lack of reporting have taken a violent toll across the country, there is an urgent need for Congress to act.

Over the years, I have listened to courageous victims in Texas who have worked to bring to light the need for reforms to prevent more children from experiencing this tragic abuse. One of those inspirational individuals is Jenna Quinn, a child abuse survivor and fierce advocate for children who are often suffering in silence. She was the driving force behind what is now known as Jenna’s Law in Texas, which requires training for teachers, caregivers, and other adults who work with children on how to prevent, recognize, and report child sexual abuse. The signs of child sexual abuse are unique from other forms of child abuse, and correctly identifying these signs is integral to bringing children out of a sexually abusive situation.

After it passed in 2009, a study found that educators reported child sexual abuse at a rate almost four times greater after the training they had received than before they had received that training. It was one of the first child sexual abuse prevention laws in the country. Since implementing this training, and now more than half of our States have adopted some form of Jenna’s Law.

The kicker is that in many States, including Texas, they don’t provide funding for the training. That is what Senator HASSAN, the Senator from New Hampshire, and I want to change. Last year we introduced the Jenna Quinn Law, which would take the successful reforms in Texas and other States and make them a reality for children across the country. This bill would allow current grant funds to be used for specialized training for students, teachers, and other caregivers to learn about child sexual abuse, demand reporting, and hopefully prevent future child sexual abuse. This legislation also encourages the States without similar laws to adopt it.

I yield to my friend from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Ms. HASSAN. Mr. President, I want to thank Senator CORNYN for his partnership and support his call. I urge my colleagues to support our legislation, the Jenna Quinn Law, and I, too, look forward to its being passed as part of wrapup this evening.

Every child has the fundamental right to be safe, to be treated with dignity, to be cared for, and to have the opportunity to seize their vast potential. Child sexual abuse robs children of those rights. Too often, these horrific crimes go unrecognized or unreported, and children are left in dangerous situations without access to safety and justice.

During my time as Governor of New Hampshire, I worked with Republicans and Democrats to sign into law a bill that mandated that child abuse prevention be taught as a part of the health education curriculum, and I am proud to work with Senator CORNYN to strengthen these efforts on a national level.

The Jenna Quinn Law would better protect children from sexual assault by helping ensure that teachers, caregivers, and other adults working with children are equipped with the tools and knowledge to prevent, recognize, and report sexual abuse and exploitation. It would also ensure that children receive age-appropriate education on how to recognize and report these heinous acts.

By encouraging States to provide training and education on child sexual abuse recognition and prevention, we can help keep our young people safe. But we know that there is much more work ahead of us.

The COVID–19 pandemic is exacerbating challenges that many vulnerable people face, including children who are abused, and as reporting of abuse has gone down during this pandemic, experts have made clear that it is because many children have been out of view of the people who often provide support and make reports, including teachers and school officials.

As we work to pass the Jenna Quinn Law today, we also have to focus on passing a broader bipartisan reauthorization of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act to provide even more tools to support children and families who are struggling. It is our duty to nurture and protect all of our country’s children, and the Jenna Quinn Law is a strong step to help move us forward in meeting that responsibility.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation and to work together on additional bipartisan measures to protect the safety and well-being of children across the country. Again, I thank my friend from Texas for his leadership in moving this important bill forward, and I look forward to continuing to work with him on these issues.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. CORYN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the cloture vote on Calendar No. 66, the nomination of Franklin Ulysses Valderrama, be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has voted to withdraw the nomination. The nomination is therefore withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

AGRICULTURE

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I rise to talk about what we need to be doing certainly to support the farmers across our country. I know Republican colleagues are speaking about the need to refill what we call the CCC accounts and give it to U.S. oil refineries out of the funds we are talking about—that those payments that are being done are supposed to be going to farmers. We have had 3½ years of this administration siding with big oil companies over our ethanol producers. And, by the way, ethanol biofuels are about jobs, about clean energy, and about supporting small towns in rural communities. Then, just this week, at the very last minute—it is election year—they announce that they are going to make a decision to help ethanol and be able to deal with some of the waivers that they have been doing for the oil companies. They announced that earlier this week, and then, guess what. Through the back door, they are going to—$300 million away in what is called in Reuters—$300 million away from our farmers to give back to Big Oil.

Every time we turn around, they are deciding to support Big Oil over farmers in our rural communities. I want to remind the Senate that I had hoped to get to the floor to ask the question directly, and I am certainly going to ask it of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who I know support ethanol and biofuels—when they are advocating for Jobs Act—they have chosen to be advocating for $300 million going to the oil companies? Because, oh, heavenly days, we couldn’t really side with ethanol.

You know, if we really sided with ethanol, they wouldn’t be worried about the oil companies who have been fighting this every step of the way, fighting the efforts to support ethanol and biofuels, and fighting the efforts that are critical for jobs in rural communities in my State and all across the country. If they really meant it, they wouldn’t be trying, through the back door, to find some way to go back and get hundreds of millions of dollars for the oil companies so they wouldn’t be upset.

So I find this pretty outrageous today. We are certainly going to dig deep, and, certainly, we are in the process right now of putting together a letter—remember, there is a letter that over and over again there is a lot of lip service for farmers and a lot of money going to Big Oil, and there is a lot of lip service to small and medium-sized farmers across Michigan and across the country, while a significant percent of these payments that are being done are going to big operations with political friends in the South.

It is not fair. It is not fair. It is creating a situation where too many family farms are barely making it, or, in fact, not making it and having to put the farm up for sale, and that is wrong. It is not good for America. It is not good for diversity in agriculture. We don’t need just a few huge farms in America. We need to make sure that we are supporting our small farmers and medium farmers. This is the foundation of so much of the economy in small towns like in agriculture, where I grew up in Northern Michigan.

What we have seen is an administration that has chosen to basically throw the farm bill out the window. My colleagues speaking about the great bipartisan farm bill. I agree. As the partner with Senator ROBERTS in putting that together, I agree. It was a great bipartisan effort that the USDA has basically torn up and thrown out the window. It had the authority to dip into agricultural markets for our farmers and supporting them with risk management, now it is back to big government payments. By the way, let’s make sure they are focused on our friends. That is basically what they got from the administration.

I am very concerned that one more time there is a lot of lip service for farmers, and we are going to see—and we are certainly going to stop this, by the way—$300 million going to oil companies out of our agriculture support fund. It is stunning to me.

By the way, I would just conclude by saying that the Secretary of Agriculture has said he didn’t have the authority to help the ethanol producers, couldn’t help our corn growers, couldn’t help our biofuel and soybeans growers—he didn’t have the authority. He didn’t have the authority to help our farmers, but somehow he has the authority to dip into agriculture markets for our farmers, and supporting them with risk management, now it is back to big government payments. By the way, let’s make sure they are focused on our friends. That is basically what they got from the administration.

I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who were here speaking about the importance of supporting agriculture will join us in saying to the USDA: You do not have the authority to use dollars for producers that have been hit so hard by the chaos of their trade policies and every other effort that has gone on in the real world that has lowered their prices and created havoc for our farmers. You don’t have the right to take their funds and give them to Big Oil.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

WILDFIRES

Ms. CORTEZ MASTO. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about what we are seeing in this country in the West with the wildfires. I think our colleagues talked about the great bipartisan farm bill. I agree. As the partner with Senator ROBERTS in putting that together, I agree. It was a great bipartisan effort that the USDA has basically torn up and thrown out the window. You know, I am thinking of the hundreds of thousands of people in Oregon under evacuation orders, of the brave firefighters in California who are battling flames in the middle of a pandemic, of Nevadans whose skies are blanketed with hazardous smoke—everyone in the West is pooling all of their efforts and resources to support one another from Washington to Oregon, to California, to Nevada—everywhere that we have had.

I also want to honor the efforts of two courageous pilots who died in a crash off Caliente, NV, in July while dropping fire retardant on the Bishop Fire. David Blake Haynes and Scott Thomas lost their lives while protecting the people of Nevada, and I join all Nevadans in sharing my condolences with their families.

You know, Americans are up against the brutal reality of the climate crisis. Science tells us that climate change is making the West hotter and drier and contributing to wildfires. Scientists have been sending a consistent message about climate change for the past 30 years. In the entire Western United States, we have seen just some of the dire effects scientists have predicted. That is why we need Federal action to slow the very clear effects of climate change.

We have seen those effects in my home State of Nevada where, this year alone, almost a quarter million acres have burned to date. Since I have been in the Senate, over 2 1/2 million acres in Nevada have burned in tragedies like the Poeville Fire, the South Sugarloaf Fire, the Range 2 Fire, and the Martin Fire, which was the State’s largest fire in our country. That is why the entire Nevada delegation has worked so hard to get Nevada the resources it needs to prepare for these fires, combat them when they occur, and rebuild afterward.

We have helped get funds to the University of Nevada, Reno, for its ALERTWildfire Program, which uses state-of-the-art cameras to monitor the fires. We have requested that the Nevada Air National Guard get the tools it needs to combat these fires, including C-130J aircraft that could fight fires all over the West. Yet, inexplicably, this request was turned down earlier this year.

Along with my colleagues in the Senate, we have worked to pass provisions creating a Fire and Forest Service contingency account so that Federal agencies aren’t left empty-handed when they need the money the most.

Last summer, I convened the first of its kind wildfire summit in Nevada. I was joined by our firefighters, our ranchers, our conservationists, our scientists, our power companies, and representatives of government agencies in thinking through new ways to coordinate and collaborate around how to address these tragedies and rural areas alike because the truth is that it is not getting cooler.

Anyone in Los Angeles, which saw temperatures of 120 degrees Fahrenheit this month, or in Las Vegas, which hit 113 degrees in July, can tell you that. Taking climate seriously shouldn’t be a partisan issue. This is about safeguarding property, protecting local economies, and saving lives—lives of first responders who have too much to do with too few resources and lives of civilians throughout Nevada and the West frightened by what they are seeing literally in their backyards.

So I plan to listen to what the scientists are telling us. I am listening to the stories of Nevadans like the Winnemucca and Elko, where ranchers and local officials have lived through these fires. I am listening to Nevada’s Tribal leaders, whose people have been stewards of the land for millennia, and to other communities of color that are among the hardest hit when disaster strikes. And, yes, I am listening to my colleagues who have devastating stories of what is happening to their constituents in their States right now.

The climate crisis is all around us—from the wildfires we are seeing in the West to the hurricanes we are seeing right now in the South. It is time for us to take bipartisan action, address the climate crisis, and make sure we are doing what we do best: funding short-term and long-term policies and goals to address these issues.

I look forward to working with my colleagues around the States.

CORONAVIRUS

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Madam President, I don’t think anyone would disagree if I said that 2020 has truly been a difficult year. No one could ever have expected what we have faced this year, and it has been a tough one for Tennesseans. We hear about it regularly. We know it is a tough one for constituents and for our citizens all across the country.

The months of lockdowns will constitute a defining moment for multiple generations of Americans. My kids and I were talking about how we think that, in years to come, our grandkids are going to talk about what they did during the COVID summer and how they went to school during the COVID pandemic.
Unfortunately, Congressional Democrats have decided not to let the opportunity that moment presents go to waste. Democrats are taking advantage of the American people’s uncertainty and pain in an attempt to force them to lose faith in their government, in their fellow countrymen, and in themselves. We are hearing from people that this causes them concern because they want to see us work together; they want to see us address these issues that are causing heartache together.

I have to tell you, Mr. President, I think it was so unfortunate that last week, some of our friends across the aisle blocked yet another targeted relief package that would have brought billions of dollars in support to the American people. I think we have to realize that this was not a vote on final passage; this was a vote to end cloture and begin the debate on that package.

Basically, what our friends across the aisle said to the American people last week is, “don’t want to talk about this. We don’t want to discuss it. We don’t want to debate it.”

That is unfortunate. If you look at the bill that the Senate Republicans proposed and brought forward on a cloture vote last week, it is hard to tease out exactly what the problem was with it. It included another round of paycheck protection plan funding. I will tell you, in Tennessee, a lot of our entertainment venues and a lot of our restaurants need this. They need that consideration to stay afloat.

There was funding for vaccine development. Is there anybody who does not think we need a vaccine for coronavirus? I haven’t met a person who thinks we don’t need to be working on that. Everybody is saying: Let’s get this to market as safely and quickly as is possible.

There was support for healthcare workers.

There was support for students and teachers who are still trying to adapt to online learning.

I was just doing a virtual town hall with one of our counties in Tennessee. One of their issues is, when will there be additional funding to help us with technology, because 30 percent of our students elected an e-learning format.

Do you know what? There was even money for the post office. Back in August, our friends across the aisle thought it was a crisis, but I guess it was their drama of the day because they voted against all of this funding.

They voted for weakening the economy, I guess, and they voted against the prospects of American workers. But what they were doing was strengthening the false premise that they are the only ones capable of sparking an economic recovery. This, of course, is demonstrably false.

This week, the Census Bureau released its annual report. I will tell you that the Trump administration’s pro-growth policies are working. The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act that we passed in 2017 is working. It has spurred economic growth. It has spurred an economy like I have never seen in my lifetime.

In 2019, incomes grew at the highest pace ever recorded. Last year, the official poverty rate fell to an all-time record low. Think about that—10.5 percent. A decade ago, there were more people than ever on assistance. Between 2018 and 2019 alone, more than 4 million Americans rose out of poverty. Think about those numbers. That is a good thing. It was the largest reduction in poverty in over 50 years.

The Black poverty rate fell below 20 percent for the first time in history, and child poverty also fell to a near 50-year low.

Our record on this is very clear: The Trump administration policies worked. The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act worked. That is what the American people are wanting to get back to.

I encourage all of my colleagues in this Chamber to read that report and look. Everyone should remind themselves of the progress we have made as a nation on growing this economy over the last 4 years.

Politically, everybody talks about how this is a divided nation, but we have to come together and work under an umbrella of policies that will make life better for all Americans. For the life of me, I cannot fathom why my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would want to rip that opportunity away.

Our citizens want us to work on a relief package that is going to help them get back to work, help our children get back to school, and allow our communities, our schools, our governments, and our businesses to safely operate with liability protections.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

TRANSPORTATION

Ms. CANTWELL. Madam President, I come to the floor this afternoon to talk about the importance of aviation and continuing to focus on the workforce employed in aviation. I want to speak about the importance of the thousands of workers, including pilots, flight attendants, gate agents, baggage handlers, mechanics, catering workers, and many others, who are feeling the impact of the COVID–19 pandemic.

I believe we should continue to address the important issues of the health aspects of the pandemic and the economic impact of the pandemic, but while we are working on developing a vaccine and developing better therapeutics and testing and stopping the spread of this virus, we also need to keep in mind that we do need transportation.

Prior to the pandemic, the aviation industry supported nearly 11 million American jobs, put $1.8 trillion to work in our economy, and contributed to about 5.2 percent of our GDP. In fact, civilian aviation is the seventh leading contributor of overall productivity. These are skilled, high-wage jobs that are critical to our economy that cannot be easily replaced. Maintaining our aviation sector is vital to the long-term economic success of our country.

When the pandemic hit, we saw a 96-percent drop in air travel, which in turn jeopardized thousands of jobs in this sector. We worked very hard in the CARES Act to create the right balance of capital for the aviation sector to continue because it is essential. We also have workers who are essential to their jobs, so we must keep moving to deal with these problems from the pandemic.

The Payroll Support Program, which was created in the CARES Act and is being administered through the Department of the Treasury, was designed to compensate aviation industry workers and preserve jobs in order to help protect the essential aspects of aviation and airline services. The program continues to cover the costs of keeping people employed and keeping this vital transportation sector strong.

It is critically important because, in just a very short period of time, September 30, this program is going to expire.

Congress needs to act to extend the program. It is important that we provide the support that the PSP program for the aviation workers who are so essential to continuing to deliver these services. Aviation not only helps people move around the country for personal reasons and essential business services, but it also delivers medicine and essential mail services. The fact is that most people probably have forgotten how important airlines are to delivering the U.S. mail, but they are important.

The CARES Act included requirements to ensure that smaller markets continue to receive air service and its associated benefits. As you can see, many of the airlines, in the uncertainty of what is happening with the CARES Act extension, are now cutting services to those communities. Doing another CARES Act bill would help us to keep those services in those smaller communities. It was announced that as many as 50,000 airline jobs will be at risk if we don’t continue the Payroll Support Program.

Now is not the time to be uncertain. Now is the time to give the airline sector the importance that it deserves by having airline workers continue to do their jobs. Every reason a transport worker earns less. It means the slow-down of the economy as a whole. It means that consumer spending, which is a big engine of our economy, will slow down, and 70 percent of our GDP comes from that consumer spending. So, it also means that the States also add to the GDP, so we are not helping the GDP unless we come to a resolution within the CARES Act.
Unemployment doesn’t cover the cost of a full salary. Each worker would have less to spend on gas and groceries, on a mortgage, and on medicine. In the downturn of the economy that we have been facing, we can’t afford more loss. Our current situation is showing some signs of modest recovery as the result of the economic stimulus from the CARES Act, but many of those benefits are expiring. I can tell you, as a member from the Pacific Northwest, I hear a lot from businesses that didn’t get help and support in the PPP program and want it to continue so that they, too, can be on par with some of their friends and neighbors who have been able to succeed economically.

Right now, we are at a turning point at which we need the PSP program to continue and to help give certainty about transportation. Nationally, on average, we know an aviation mechanic takes home about $1,600 per week in pay, but when these jobs are cut, these people have to face a 75-percent cut in weekly income. So I ask our colleagues to consider, as you think about shifting these transportation workers from these salaries that they are getting now to unemployment benefits, how these large cuts will be in some of these States.

I am proud that I come from a State in which we have a pretty robust unemployment benefit. I thank our State and the people who vote for and support a robust unemployment benefit, but if we continue to not act on the CARES Act and the PPP, we will be sending people home to States with unemployment benefits that will be much less robust than in my State. Right now, to face a 75-percent cut in one’s weekly income I don’t think is good for the aviation sector.

On average, when you look at the weekly income for ramp agents in Georgia, it is about $850, but now that any additional weekly benefits have run out, these workers face a 57-percent income cut. In State after State, we see these cuts in these weekly incomes. This means, as I said, less money to spend on groceries and less money to put in the weekly income. Without any additional weekly benefits, in Florida, pilots will see a 92-percent drop in income, flight attendants a 75-percent drop, mechanics an 83-percent drop, and ramp agents a 68-percent drop. In Texas, pilots will see an 85-percent cut, flight attendants a 57-percent drop, mechanics a 68-percent drop, and ramp agents a 48-percent drop.

My point here is to think about the need for us to continue this program in that not all States are going to be treated equally in how aviation workers will be affected. We have to think about how we are going to keep that important air travel moving for our economy.

Without the extension, flight crews, flight attendants, and others will be impacted in another way, in that, when you stop air transportation services, people, after a period of time, will have to be retrained and re-certified. Many times here, I have participated in debates about tax credits or tax policy. Oftentimes, we go past our deadline of December 31 and into the year in which we can’t be sure if we can reach a conclusion, most people think: Well, that is OK. We will make it retroactive, so going past our deadline doesn’t impact anything. In this case, it does impact something because, once we hit the October 1 deadline and we start seeing these people in unemployment situation, the time starts ticking for the cost of re-certifying them to be in that cockpit or to be of service.

For example, pilots have to meet certain flying requirements to maintain currency and validity of licenses. So, without an extension of the PSP, flight crews and flight attendants would need to be retrained at the cost of starting up again. A PSP extension also means supporting their wages and making sure people have available healthcare during this time period.

I don’t want to see one more American lose one’s healthcare benefits because of COVID. We are in a COVID crisis. We want people to be covered with healthcare so that we can help to fight this pandemic. I know people here in Congress are looking at the very short time period that we have left before September 30. I call on my colleagues to set aside our differences and come back to the table and make sure that we address these issues before this major layoff.

This is important because, as I said, this affects the GDP of our country. We still have an opportunity to sustain our aviation industry, which is so important to helping our economy recover. As I said, it is important because aviation helps to grow opportunities for the future.

My colleague Senator Scott and I will tomorrow be announcing another aviation legislation that we, too, think will help the aviation sector. For every 10 percent of travel that returns to aviation, it drives more than $1.5 billion into our economy. Those are salaries for the workers of this sector. That is the economic impact that we will have by returning flight service.

The original premise around the COVID bill was for us not to decimate the airline industry so much, because of the COVID impact, that it wouldn’t recover and so that we wouldn’t be there to retrain and take advantage of the upside as the public responds. We have now gone from that 95-percent loss of travel to, right before the Labor Day weekend, about 40 percent of airline capacity and travel. We want to continue being ready to serve the public who has to fly, and we want to make sure it is safe for the public to fly. Getting this extension of the COVID bill done before September 30 still remains a key priority.

On the point of aviation, I would say to my colleagues, besides the Cantwell-Wyden bill, which is to start seeing some of the PSP, flight crews and flight attendants a 52-percent drop, mechanics an 83-percent drop, in Florida, pilots will see a 92-percent income cut. In Texas, pilots will see an 88-percent cut, and ramp agents a 68-percent cut. In California, we have 5,000 firefighters helping as we fight fires. Unfortunately, it didn’t make it into the big fire fix bill when we stopped fire borrowing. Nonetheless, it remains a big priority.

What we have come to learn now is that trying to do prescribed burns in the summer months, when you have clear air, doesn’t really help—it is not helping us because we have such large-scale fires and these very unhealthy smoke events that last for days and days. Now, thanks to the new fire forecasting models that we have and the new fire forecasters that we put in the previous bill, we are now seeing how unhealthy those conditions really are. They are so unhealthy that they are cause of major concern for health officials across the whole West. So what do we need to do?

We need to pass this proposal that I support, along with my colleague Senator Wyden, to move prescribed burns to other parts of the year. Yes, will it create a few smoky days here or there during parts of our year? Yes, but it will help us to better fight these fires when it comes to these very hot, dry climates that we are now seeing with greater frequency in the Pacific Northwest throughout the United States.

It is time for us to take dramatic action in responding to these fires. We have taken action, but now we need to use these tools that are right in front of us today. Get more firefighters and get these prescribed burn policies and move forward with protecting some of our most vulnerable communities throughout the United States of America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 1135

Mr. SULLIVAN. Madam President, I am going to be talking about a bill of mine that is, I think, very appropriate and very needed, the Protect Our Heroes Act, which will federalize certain violent crimes against public safety officers across the country, like the police and first responders, in order to deter these kinds of crimes and show the men and women in our law enforcement community that we have their backs.

Before I get into the details of my bill, I want to talk a little bit about a very moving event. I was back home last week in Alaska. I was at the American Legion Post No. 15 in Palmer, AK, and it was on the commemoration of September 11. It was a wonderful remembrance dinner. There were tons of veterans, patriots. My State is blessed with more vets per capita than any State in the country.

But it was focused on law enforcement. We had the Palmer police chief there. We had members of the police department from Anchorage there because we were focused on so many things that came out of that day—9/11.

But honoring our first responders is something that I think America learned—that we need to respect the men and women epitomized by the police and firemen who went up the Tower. Many of them knew they were going to die, and they did that. They did that to protect us, and there was this newfound respect for our first responders that came out of that day.

Now, in my remarks to my fellow veterans in Palmer at the American Legion post last Friday, I did mention that one of the elements of what is happening in our country, unfortunately, is that these memories are fading. They are fading, and in some ways the respect for the police is not just fading. It is being reversed.

You see these movements, these national movements of defunding our police—horrible ideas, in my view. My State has focused law enforcement. Most less. We have seen on our TV screens and our social media channels that there are people—criminals—who are focused on harming the police, killing the police, attacking the police, and even taking glee in the killing and the violence against law enforcement.

So we have all seen in the past few years—a dramatic increase in killings, in ambushes in Iowa, New York, Massachusetts, Colorado, Pennsylvania, and Georgia; this has been happening. It certainly hit home in my State.

In Anchorage, in 2016, we had a brave police officer, Arn Salao, who was the victim of a cowardly ambush in 2016. Thankfully, he survived, barely. What was the result of the arrest of the individual who tried to kill him? He ended up being a serial killer, killing five others in Anchorage. But this brave police officer found him, stopped him, and almost lost his life.

Unfortunately, another officer in a shooting in Alaska the same year, 2016, in Fairbanks, wasn’t so fortunate. On October 16, 2016, Sergeant Allen Peck, a veteran of the Fairbanks Police Department, pulled over a suspect to question him, and he was shot five times. He eventually succumbed to the complications related to his injuries.

I went to the memorial service. There were hundreds of Alaskans. He had a young family, a young wife. It was brutal to watch this.

These are selfless men and women in my State, who are every day getting up to risk their lives and to wear the uniform in the line of duty.

All of this inspired me to put together my Protect Our Heroes Act, which will enhance Federal penalties for the killing or assaulting of public safety officers and first responders, especially increasing penalties for criminals who ambush or lure law enforcement officers for the purpose of committing crimes against them—dramatically enhancing penalties.

This is something that I think the vast majority of us in the Senate agree with.

Now, I take the opportunity to go running most days, whether I am here or back home. And when I go running on Capitol Hill, what I see every morning—and I saw it this morning—are police officers. No matter the time of day, Capitol Police are sitting in their vehicles or on patrol. Their sole purpose is to protect this institution and the Members.

This morning, as I usually do when I run past them sitting in their car, I just gave them a thumbs-up. Thank you. Thank you. We respect you, and we certainly have your back.

So that is why I am offering this legislation today. I hope my Senate colleagues can come together to support this. I think it would be inconceivable to vote against this bill, especially now when we are seeing these kinds of heinous atrocities like we saw in California.

But what I also want to send a message to our first responders and law enforcement: We are watching. We are going to pass laws to disincentivize this kind of heinous action against you, and we have your back and the back of your family members, who are probably worried when you go out on your duty every day.

Mr. President, as if in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent that the Sullivan substitute amendment at the desk be considered and agreed to; that the Sullivan substitute amendment be considered read a third time and passed; and that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. YOUNG). Is there objection?

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. President, thank you for the recognition.

As a former assistant U.S. attorney and New Mexico attorney general, I was hard to prosecute violent crimes, including those committed against law enforcement.

The recent shootings of two law enforcement officers in California were heinous. My deepest condolences and prayers go out to the officers and their families.

The perpetrator must be brought to justice. All such violence is appalling.

However, this bill is both unnecessary and, potentially, a problematic expansion of Federal criminal law. It is already a Federal crime to kill or attempt to kill an officer or employee of the United States.

Most, if not all, States already make killing a police officer a specific crime, and, of course, murder and assault are crimes in all 50 States and Territories.

So it is unclear that this bill will increase deterrence, and the bill is very broad, covering not only murder and attempted murder but also any assault against hundreds of thousands or perhaps millions of people.

One new crime created by the bill is death eligible, raising historic concerns about executing the innocent and the death penalty being arbitrarily applied.

This bill has not gone through the regular order, with no hearings on such a sweeping change in the balance of State and Federal criminal law.

For many years, the Heritage Foundation, the Hoover Institution, the Federalist Society, and congressional Republicans have all spoken out against the expansion of Federal criminal law. It is not just conservatives.

There is bipartisan support for that view and broad consensus among criminal law experts and the Federal judiciary itself.

The Judicial Conference of the U.S. courts has testified to Congress against the over-criminalization of Federal law, citing the burdens they already face.
And former Reagan Attorney General Ed Meese wrote for the Hoover Institution over 20 years ago, in 1999, highlighting the following problems with over-criminalization of Federal law. He warned about these:

An unwise allocation of scarce resources needed to address genuine issues of crime.

An unhealthy concentration of policing power at the national level;

An adverse impact on the federal judicial system;

Inappropriately disparate results for similarly situated defendants, depending on whether essentially similar conduct is selected for federal or state prosecution;

A diversion of congressional attention from criminal activity that only federal investigation and prosecution can address.

The potential for duplicative prosecutions at the state and federal levels for the same course of conduct, in violation of the spirit of the Constitution’s double jeopardy protection.

I think the Senate should consider those warnings and should not rush to approve such a measure without hearing testimony and a long and careful study.

Therefore, I object.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—S. 2843
Mr. UDALL. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to call attention to key legislation that addresses violence, and this piece of legislation should come to the floor. That is the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act.

VAWA reauthorization expired over a year and a half ago, on February 15, 2019. Funding continues, but key improvements are being delayed by the lack of reauthorization.

The Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2019 is supported by all 47 Democratic Senators. The House passed the bill 236 to 158. Thirty-three House Republicans voted yes on that bill.

The bill would extend VAWA for 5 years, through 2024, while making key improvements.

As the vice chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, I know how critical VAWA reauthorization is to Indian Country.

Data from the U.S. Department of Justice indicates that Native women face murder rates that are more than 10 times the national average murder rate. There are more than 5,000 cases of missing American Indian and Alaska Native women. And nearly 65 percent of Native women have experienced domestic violence. More than four in five American Indian and Alaska Native women experience violence in their lifetime.

Without the enactment of a VAWA reauthorization, these Tribes will lack the jurisdictional tools they need to keep their communities safe.

The House-passed bill strengthens Tribal sovereignty, provides important protections for LGBTQ people, and bars datingimens convicted of domestic violence from having handguns.

The bill would make a real difference in preventing violent crimes against women and making Native communities safer, and I ask that the Senate take up its consideration immediately.

As if in legislative session, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of S. 2843, the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act, and the Senate proceed to its immediate consideration: further, that the bill be considered read a third time and passed; and that the motion to reconsider be considered made and laid upon the table with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I have to say this sounds a lot like yet another attempt to just change the subject and obfuscate.

I was on this floor earlier this week. The Senator was just speaking about his goal here. Both of us have slightly different approaches to try to achieve the same thing, which is to discourage these attacks on law enforcement officials.

It seems like almost every day we read about some horrific attack on men and women across the country just because they are police. It is absolutely appalling, and we are trying to do everything we can to discourage that, to create incentives, and to make sure that violent criminals know that they will pay a very steep price if they commit the appalling kinds of acts that we have seen.

I commend the Senator from Alaska for an approach to this. Yet, again, our Democratic colleagues refuse to support this effort and instead say: Let's change the subject to VAWA.

Well, let's talk a little bit about VAWA. Look, there is a very real problem with violence against women. I don't know anyone who would dispute that. And VAWA, the legislation, has a number of programs, some of which are very constructive.

I voted in favor of the last reauthorization of VAWA because I do think it is that important, and I have led the effort in this body to ensure that crime victims—very much including women—get the resources they are supposed to get from the Crime Victims Fund, which they historically have not been. But that bill is a big bill, it is a complicated bill, and there are multiple programs, and some of it is very controversial.

So the way we have actually gotten an outcome and achieved something with VAWA, is through a bipartisan process. That is what was done in the past, and that effort has been underway, Senator Ernst, working with Senator Feinstein, has tried to find common ground. I think they are not quite there yet. But this legislation is not that different from that effort.

This is a bill that our Democratic colleagues have declared they know has no chance of actually passing. So rather than changing the subject and putting forward a bill that everybody knows can't pass, I wish our Democratic colleagues would join me and my colleague from Alaska in doing something we can do, something modest but constructive that would help to diminish this violence against the men and women that we call friends and neighbors. And without question, our Tribal police folks take every single day. So, Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Alaska.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I want to thank my colleague from Pennsylvania. I know he and I both share a passion on this issue. I think the vast majority of the Senators share a passion on this issue—that we should be standing here in the U.S. Senate to make sure our law enforcement knows that we have their backs.

As Senator Toomey just mentioned, this is happening all across the country. The men and women who put on the uniform to protect us. If this is not an issue that criers out for some kind of action, some kind of discussion to prevent this and tell these brave men and women that whether in Alaska or Pennsylvania or New Mexico, that we have their backs, I don't know what that topic is—I don't know what that issue is.

Unfortunately, Senator Toomey tried to move his legislation the last couple of days, and it was thwarted. Now my legislation to send the message that we are not going to let criminals get away with these kinds of heinous crimes, that the Senate is watching, and that we have the backs of law enforcement and their families—that is a really important message to send right now.

I am disappointed in my colleague for objecting. We will continue to work on this issue and, as Senator Toomey mentioned, the violence issue, which is a hugely important issue in my State for my constituents. But right now, I think we should be acting on the issue we are seeing, and that issue is, there is a movement across the country that is really focused on perpetrating violence against the men and women who are sworn to protect us. I can't believe anyone here thinks that is a good movement, but it is happening in America right now. We need to send a message that it is unacceptable and that we are going to do everything in our power to stop it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. ROUNDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote scheduled for 1:30 p.m. be allowed to start at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is, Will the Senate advise the President of the Senate of his nomination?

Mr. ROUNDS. I ask for aye and nays.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. THUNE. The following Senators are necessary to present: the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. BURR), the Senator from West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO), the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. JOHNSON), the Senator from Kansas (Mr. MORAN), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. PERDUE), and the Senator from Florida (Mr. SCOTT).

Further, if present and voting, the Senator from Florida (Mr. SCOTT) would have voted “yea.”

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from California (Ms. HARRIS), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS), and the Senator from Arizona (Ms. SINEMA) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 77, nays 14, as follows:

ABRAHAM ACCORDS

Mr. LANKFORD. Mr. President, a few days ago, Flight 971 took off from Tel Aviv Airport. You may say: Of course the flight took off from Tel Aviv; that happens every day—but not like this flight. You see, Flight 971 took off from Tel Aviv Airport, flew south, directly over Saudi Arabia, which hasn’t happened, and landed in Abu Dhabi because the United Arab Emirates has formed a peace agreement with Israel—recognizing its right to exist, opening up Embassies in Israel and in the United Arab Emirates, beginning trade in commerce. Just days ago, the first cargo aircraft took off and flew, taking supplies, technology, medicine—engagement between the Nation of Israel and the Arab nation of the United Arab Emirates, forming a new alliance in the Middle East.

Flight 971 is significant because 971 is the country code if you are going to call the United Arab Emirates. The return flight, by the way, leaving from Abu Dhabi and flying back to Israel is Flight 972—the country code for Israel. That first flight that took off, on the outside of the plane were emblazoned three words—one in English, one in Hebrew, and one in Arabic—all translated, the word “peace.”

It is a new day. And this week, when President Trump and the Foreign Ministers from the United Arab Emirates and from Bahrain and the Prime Minister of Israel all stood at the White House and spoke of each other in a new partnership and then all sat at a table and signed documents together, beginning a new relationship not just with UAE but also with Bahrain, it was a remarkable day in world history.

In 70 years of Israel’s history, only two nations that are Arab nations have recognized the existence of Israel, even—Jordan and Egypt. In 1 day, 2 more nations joined—the UAE and Bahrain. It was significant to be able to see the journey on that and to be able to hear the Foreign Ministers of Bahrain and UAE compliment President Trump, Mike Pompeo, and Jared Kushner for their leadership and, as the Foreign Minister from Bahrain said, President Trump’s statesmanship in this process.

It was a negotiation that was turned on its head. For decades, American negotiators have tried to work to solve the issues with the Palestinians first and then to work to solve every other relationship second. That has been the American focus. The Trump negotiations reversed it. They believed that many in the Arab world were tired of the Palestinians holding their foreign policy hostage, and they flipped it and said: Why don’t we start negotiating with the Arab world first and see if they want to open up trade negotiations with Israel and be able to stabilize those negotiations?

It has worked. Not only has it worked in two countries—in a single day signing an agreement—but there are multiple other nations that are currently looking at this same deal with Israel to say: Yes, we still need to resolve the issues in the Palestinian territory. Yes, that is still very important. But these nations can work toward peace and unity together as they resolve their differences.

They signed a document dealing with relationships diplomatically, but they also signed something they called the Abraham Accords Declaration. Let me read this accord to you because it is significant. It begins with this simple statement:

We, the undersigned, recognize the importance of maintaining and strengthening peace in the Middle East and around the world based on mutual understanding and coexistence, as well as respect for human dignity and freedom, including religious freedom.

That is a significant statement. Nations have spoken of religious freedom, but it has not thrived there.

The document goes on to say:

We seek tolerance and respect for every person in order to make this world a place where all can enjoy a life of dignity and hope, no matter their race, faith, or ethnicity.

We support science, art, medicine, and commerce to inspire humankind, maximize human potential and bring nations closer together.

We seek to end radicalization and conflict to provide all children a better future.

We pursue a vision of peace, security, and prosperity in the Middle East and around the world.

It was a document many people said would never be signed, but it is a stake in the ground to say it is a new day in the Middle East in peace negotiations and a pivot, as Prime Minister Netanyah said.

Nations like Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Qatar, Amman, Morocco, Sudan, and Lebanon should take notice and should see the benefit to economic trade and engagement, to economic engagement in the area that tries to destabilize so much of the Middle East, pushing back on terrorism, and developing partnerships in science and health and technology and prosperity for everyone in the region. That happened this week.

The MIDDLE EAST

Mr. LANKFORD. There is something happening on Monday that much of the world has missed as well in the Middle East. For a year, there has been a process ongoing to be able to confront Iran.
Iran has actively stated they are going to continue to pursue their nuclear ambitions. They have actively stated they are going to pursue weapons deals. They have actively stated they want to continue to break the arms embargo.

Some of our allies have stayed silent, but Iran is trying to purchasing weapons of all types from all places. We used to be united—regardless whether it was nuclear or not—that Iran should not continue to accelerate that. As the largest exporter of terrorism worldwide, we should confront what Iran is trying to do—continue to provide heavy arms.

As of Monday, the United States will move into a different mode with Iran. As of midnight Sunday night, snap back sanctions begin on Iran on Monday. And that is a different moment for us as a nation, to say we have stated as a country, now through multiple Presidencies, that we will not allow Iran to be a nuclear power or to continue to arm itself in such a way to do its neighbors harm.

When snap back sanctions occur on Monday, all of our allies should be aware that the United States is steadfast in that commitment. We would ask you to join us in that as well.

Over the past few months, thousands of troops have come back home from the Middle East—from Syria, from Iraq, from Afghanistan. By the end of this year, we will have 4,500 troops still in Afghanistan; that is from a high just a few years ago of 100,000 boots on the ground.

Ongoing negotiations for peace continue between Afghan leadership and the Taliban. Those are problems that have existed for decades and in some areas, generations.

While I don’t believe Afghanistan will suddenly break out and be a bastion of peace for the world, we do have a responsibility to help them where we can to bring the negotiation to work for our sons and daughters. Our blood and our treasures spilled in Afghanistan for decades. We shouldn’t lose the investment of that blood and treasure. But it is good to see so many people coming home.

In Europe, a free-trade agreement is actively being negotiated with the UK. We are pleased to be able to partner with such a special-relationship country like the United Kingdom. We have had a long-lasting friendship with them since we settled a little conflict in 1776 and another dustup in 1812. That special relationship with the UK should continue on with a very good trade agreement.

I am pleased that the administration continues to push forward in the area of trade—an area that it is amazing to me how many people didn’t even notice was the powder keg of Europe that just recently was resolved.

For generations, the area around Serbia, Kosovo, has been a hotbed area for conflict.

In the past few weeks, the Trump administration has negotiated a peace deal between Serbia and Kosovo that leaves Serbia to actually officially recognize Kosovo. Again, that may not seem like a big deal to many other people, but to Oklahomans—many of whom have served in our 45th and who have served there in Kosovo, helping to protect and stabilize that country and provide security there in that region—it is very significant to us to be able to see peace breaking out between Serbia and Kosovo.

I am pleased that, while many people in the world don’t even pay attention to what is happening in Serbia and Kosovo, the Trump administration has, and their diplomatic team has been very engaged in negotiations dating and bringing to them some stability.

Interestingly enough, in the negotiations both Serbia and Kosovo also agreed to designate Hezbollah as a foreign terrorist organization and to recede that experiment in democratisation of the capital of Israel and to be able to move their embassies to Jerusalem, which is another affirmation of what is happening in the Middle East in the string of what is going on.

One last comment that many people may have missed, we all grieve for what is happening in Lebanon. That experiment in multiracial, multifaith, and cooperative government has been a struggle, but there has been a strong hold for religious tolerance in Lebanon. Watching the hundreds of people who were killed and thousands who were injured in the explosion at their docks in Beirut was painful for the entire world. The United States has stepped up as being the top donor to humanitarian aid to Lebanon during this time period, and we are engaging in multiple ways.

At the end of the day, if we are going to help Lebanon be stable, we have to go about it in a way that allows them to build off the capital there in the Middle East to be able to thrive with transparency.

I partnered with Senator Murphy and several other colleagues to help set up the National Development Finance Corporation, called the DFC, to help them in their infrastructure projects; to push out China, which is trying to work their way into the Middle East and dominate there; to allow the people of Lebanon to decide their own future; to leverage leadership in the International Monetary Fund to prevent multilateral bailouts that don’t allow them to improve their conditions in their banking system; and to push out corruption and push out Hezbollah.

There are things we can do that are not of a partisan nature on which Senator Murphy and I cooperate together to try to help the Lebanese. It is important that they continue to be a stable force in the region. This is a real time of testing for them as a country. I am proud the administration has pushed our diplomats in Lebanon to be able to find ways where we can practically help now and long term for real reforms for them. There is a lot going on around the world.

While we are focused on COVID, rightfully so for our own health, while we focus on our economy, rightfully so, and while we focus on the issues of racial inequality, rightfully so, we cannot lose track of the issues we also need to be engaged in around the world. It is important that America continue to be a leader in diplomacy and a leader in bringing religious liberty and freedom and opportunity for all people.

Whether you are in Hong Kong, as we discussed before, or whether you are in Abu Dhabi, all people deserve the recognition of their humanity and respect and an opportunity to be able to live their lives with freedom. Let’s continue to stand for the values that define us and define us together.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

CORONAVIRUS

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am sure you and I and all the Members of this body remember that night in late March. It was late at night. I remember being standing in the Chamber to see one of the truly historic votes. It was a unanimous vote of the U.S. Senate to pass the CARES Act. It was an amazing achievement to see the Senate and the Congress come together in that way with the White House, with the President, to help meet the needs of the American people.

When we passed that bill back in March, September seemed a long way away. We thought we had provided enough aid for people, unfortunately, who have fallen into unemployment through no fault of their own but the fault of this dreaded COVID, but we didn’t provide enough.

I am pleased that we provided enough aid for first responders, for schools, for healthcare professionals, for testing, and for all the things that were necessary to get us out of this terrible pandemic. It turns out that wasn’t the case. Here we are in September facing a renewed version of this virus that is now spreading in parts of the country that weren’t affected back in March.

I want to address, No. 1, that we must do something. We have to respond to the needs of the American people just as we did in March. I don’t understand why this time it seems to be a partisan issue; why this time we can’t just as we did in March. I don’t understand why this time it seems to be a partisan issue; why this time we can’t have the same spirit that we had then of negotiation, of give and take, of compromise to reach a bill that all realize now was a really significant accomplishment.

For some reason, now just it seems to be much harder. I understand the concern about the debt and the deficit. I usually am a Governor. I know about balance in budgets. States have to balance their budgets, but now is not the time. If we don’t take further action to shore up the economy and protect the people who are being impacted by this, the fiscal cost in the long run will be worse. The revival of the economy will take longer. The cost to the Treasury will be greater than what we are proposing to spend now.

I believe and hope that we are moving slowly toward some kind of agreement that will allow us to provide the support to the American people and the American economy that will make such a difference in how we are able to cope with this terrible disease over the next several months—at least through the end of the year. That is really the mission that is before us.

The Democrats made a proposal back in May. They passed the Heroes Act of over $3 trillion. They have moved. The Speaker and the minority leader here have moved $1 trillion. They made a counteroffer a few weeks ago of about $2 trillion. The White House apparently, over the last couple of days, has said we are now talking about something to $2 trillion. Those are two solutions. The parties are moving, and I hope today that they will continue to discuss and that the table will have people sitting at it trying to find a solution. I think there is hope that we can do that.

I deeply hope that we can come to an agreement. Schools across the country are seeing, unbelievably, additional expenditures in all areas to try to get back to normal, to try to get back into the classroom. Those are huge costs. They need more teachers. They are going to need more teachers. They are going to need more people. They are going to need more cleaning materials. They are going to need all kinds of additional expenditures they weren’t anticipating.

Small businesses are continuing to teeter. I hear awful stories about small businesses that between now and the end of the year are in danger of closing their doors forever. That would be a tragedy for our country.

We are continuing to see people lose their jobs. We are continuing to see people on unemployment. We are continuing to see people who can’t put food on the table because the aid that we provided in the CARES Act in March ran out at the end of July.

I am urging, No. 1, discussions. That is pretty obvious. I hope that the representatives of the two parties and representatives within the White House can come together and reach an agreement. Part of this agreement has to contain within it support for States, towns, and cities. They are suffering, too, and they are providing the very services that the people need in this pandemic.

States can’t borrow money the way we can. They have to balance their budget on a year-to-year basis. If they are being clobbered by the effects of this disease, not only in expenditures but in loss of revenues, they only have two choices. I have been there. They only have two choices. One is drastic cuts, and the other is raising taxes, neither of which is an acceptable alternative in the midst of a recession, and neither of which makes any sense for the American people. They have either to cut or raise taxes. Those aren’t good options.

By the way, I can only speak for the States that I don’t know how other State budgets work. But in Maine about one-third of our budget—between 25 percent and 33 percent of our State budget—goes back to our communities. It goes to the capital city of Augusta, makes a U-turn, and goes back into the counties that mostly go in the form of general-purpose aid to education, also in the form of revenue sharing, and in other kinds of grants and contracts.

When we talk about the State, it sounds like we are talking about these big, impersonal entities, but we are really talking about towns—small towns—and school districts. That is where a lot of this impact is going to fall.

It is a double-edged sword that cuts both ways. It is hurting people—the people who are being laid off, the people who are going to have to be laid off, whether they are in a town or city, a county or the State. That hurts the economy. It is one who is buying things in the stores, going to restaurants, and going to grocery stores. They are going to places to buy clothes, and if they can’t do that, then, the entire economy is pulled down.

If we don’t help the States and the cities and towns in this situation, the estimates are that it is going to hit GDP by 2 to 3 percent. That is huge. That is a huge economic loss that is going to translate into a fiscal loss for us and a tragic loss for the American people.

The estimate in Maine is a $1.4 billion shortfall of our State budget over the next 3 years—a half-billion dollars in this fiscal year that we are in right now.

Towns and cities across Maine are already starting to furlough first responders. Who is it that works for the towns? Who is it that works for the cities? Police and fire are the biggest components. They are not hiring people. I think we need to face the fact that those who are opposing aid to our cities and towns are the people who are defunding the police. That is who is defunding the police because their budget has got huge cuts if they don’t get some assistance from this body and this government.

Let’s be real. Let’s talk about facts. Let’s talk about the real impact of our lack of attention to this issue. This is a personal tragedy for these families, and it is one more blow to the economy.

By the way, this is not a blue State issue. Here are some States whose budgets have been hit by more than 10 percent by the loss of revenues caused by COVID: Alaska, which is not much of a blue State; Indiana; Kansas; Kentucky; Montana; Oklahoma; and Iowa. Those States are hurting, too. This blue State-red State stuff bothers me.

I don’t know how many emergency appropriations for natural disasters, wildfires, floods, and hurricanes I have voted for. It never occurred to me to ask what color the State was. It never occurred to me to ask who was manufacturing this—not coincidence. This is one country. I don’t ask how Florida voted if there is a hurricane that strikes that State or Georgia or Alabama, which is being hit right now. If they need help, we should provide it.

I think there is hope that we can get over this motion fiscal hurricane that is hitting many, if not all, of the States of the United States. We should come together and help them. As for this business about that, well, we don’t want to bail out somebody’s pension program, look, this is an easy calculation. The Treasury Department is capable of making the calculation. What were your revenues last year? What were your projections before COVID? What is the difference? That is what we are talking about.

Make no mistake, we are talking about real, concrete, on-the-ground losses of jobs and losses of the services that those jobs provide. Whether they are public health workers, first responders, firefighters, or police—yes, police—they are who are being impacted here, and it is we as citizens who are the customers of those services who need the protection and who need the services they provide. They are who are being hurt.

I hope that we can come to an agreement and that we can get over this nonsense that this is somehow a blue State-red State thing and that we are bailing out States that were not prudent. I am tired of hearing that. We are talking about people’s lives here. We are talking about the protection of public services. We are talking about teaching our kids. We are talking about people who are providing the basic protections that we all take for granted in our daily lives.

Finally, I have two simple messages: One, let’s make a deal. Two, that deal should include support for those people and institutions in our States, in our cities, and in our smallest towns so that we will have the wherewithal to be able to help us all get through this thing together. That is what this is all about, and those are the people on the ground who are helping us get through this together.

We can do this. We proved in March that we could do it. I think we must and can and will do it again.

INTERNATIONAL DAY OF DEMOCRACY

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, today I rise to commemorate the International Day of Democracy. Since 2005, September 15 has offered an opportunity each year to reflect on the democratic values that we cherish and to recommit ourselves to promoting them around the world.

The democratic project is especially important at this moment. Although some communities are experiencing greater rights and freedoms than ever before, there are alarming signs of democratic backsliding in many corners of the globe.

Countries that were becoming increasingly open and egalitarian are moving back toward authoritarianism under the guise of lawful, oppressive leaders.

Meanwhile, countries that were already unfree are suffering even more disturbing civil and human rights abuses.

If we turn a blind eye to these developments, it will embolden bad actors to continue undermining freedom, peace, and equality. The United States must lead all democracy-loving people in calling out subversions of democratic rights wherever they exist and holding those responsible to account.

One country that requires our urgent attention is China. The Government of China has not adhered to democratic norms for a long time, but we should never allow that failure to normalize ongoing human rights abuses such as the vicious opposition to the Uighurs.

International nongovernmental organizations have documented China’s mass surveillance, arbitrary detention, torture, and political indoctrination of these communities for no reason other than their religious and cultural differences.

We must do everything possible to fight for the freedom and equality of the Uighurs to help end this atrocity. We must do everything possible to fight for the freedom and equality of the Uighurs to help end this atrocity. We must do everything possible to fight for the freedom and equality of the Uighurs to help end this atrocity.

President Trump has completely failed to hold Putin accountable for his own people’s human rights and attacking the United States. Even worse, President Trump appears to have taken a page out of Putin’s book, suggesting that if he were not reelected this November, he may not accept the results of that election. It is a sad commentary on the state of our domestic affairs that we have to take such a ludicrous statement seriously. We know that global democracy is in trouble when the leader of the country that is copying undemocratic heads of state instead of condemning them.

These are but a few snapshots of what is happening in many countries around the world. If there is anything that I have learned in my many years of public service, it is that we can never take democracy—and all the freedoms, rights, and opportunities it entails—for granted. My work in the House and the Senate on the Helsinki Commission really embodies that commitment to the people and the principle that we should all be able to unite in pursuit of a healthy, functioning democracy. That requires us to take action against foreign powers to interfere in our election, and his encouragement has been effective. The same external factors that we know influenced the elections in 2016 have once again actively planning on different tactics to interfere in the election. Regardless of party affiliation, we should all be able to unite in pursuit of a healthy, functioning democracy. That requires us to take action against the foreign actors seeking to spread misinformation and divide Americans for their own benefit.

When we fail to protect democracy in the United States, it has consequences all over the world. Over the past several months, we have confronted about his recent brutal crackdown on protesters, journalists, and opposition members. Belarus President Lukashenko said he had the United States “should sort out their own affairs before attempting to interfere in Belarus.” His statements made clear that President Trump and his administration and supporters’ undemocratic behavior is eroding our credibility on the global stage as a voice for human rights. Let today, International Day for Democracy, be a reminder for us to stand up in defense of democracy, whether we are talking about China, Venezuela, Belarus, or here in our own backyard. The world is counting on us. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRAUN). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to use, during my remarks, two exhibits of the Federal aid application form.

FAFSA

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. President, I am here this morning to talk about a hearing that we had in the Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee this morning that affects 20 million families who have to fill this out every year. This is called the FAFSA. Usually, there is an adjective ahead of it. It is called the “dreaded” FAFSA.

There are 400,000 Tennessee families who fill it out every year. If you want to go to college and you need a Pell grant or a student loan, you have to fill this out—108 questions. And then after you fill it out, the way it has been working and still works today, you have to send in their information on 22 of the questions to two different agencies: one to the IRS and one to the Education Department. And then they go through an elaborate process to check to see whether you have made any mistake.

So it’s true you are a homeless student or a student in foster care or you are not able to identify your parents or you are living with your grandparents or any of those people have an aversion to filling out the 108-question Federal form. They are giving you their information to the government twice, then you don’t go to college. That is what happens.

In Tennessee, we have had a Governor named Bill Haslam in the legislature that said everybody in Tennessee without a degree, that you can have 2 more years of college free, but first you have to fill out this Federal form. They say this is the single biggest impediment to having the opportunity to have those 2 free years of higher education in our State.

So you would think somebody would do something about that, right? Well, somebody has or at least has been trying to. Here is what it could be. This is 33 questions. Almost everybody agrees that this is better than this—the State counselors, the Governors, the teachers, the students, the families. You could fill it out more easily. It keeps many fewer students from walking away from the opportunity to go to college.

So you would ask: Why don’t you pass it? Well, Mr. President, that is exactly what Senator MICHAEL BENNET, the Democratic Senator from Colorado, and I said 7 years ago in a hearing before the Senate Education Committee when we had four witnesses and we talked about this. And I said at the end: There seems to be a lot of agreement about this. Why don’t the four of you experts—and these are people who work in financial aid who try to help students—turn to each other and say: We are going to help minority work in financial aid who try to help you experts—and these are people who talked about this. And I said at the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago in a hearing be—objection, it is so ordered.

September 17, 2020

America today. What do we do about students who try to help minority work in financial aid who try to help experts—and these are people who talked about this. And I said at the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago in a hearing before the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago in a hearing before the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago.

Before the Senate Education Committee, I said 7 years ago in a hearing before the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago in a hearing before the Senate Education Committee and I said 7 years ago.

In 2013, I introduced legislation called the FAST Act that would reduce it to the size of a postcard. It only had two questions on it. Well, that was too simplified. What we found out, for example, was that the State of Indiana and the State of Tennessee have their student aid, and they rely on some of this information to decide what aid to give in addition to the Federal aid. So we took the questions away, but we would have to ask the questions, so we really hadn’t solved any problems.

So we kept working. Senator MURRAY, the Democratic leader of our committee, and I worked together on this during these 7 years, and we began to make some progress. The progress we made first was with the Obama administration, and they agreed to what sounded like a simple change. They just administratively allowed you to use your previous year’s tax returns rather than your current year’s tax returns to fill out the 22 tax questions on this form. You can imagine how hard it would be to use this year’s tax returns, so that was a big help.

Then the administration put this 108-questionnaire on an app so you can use your iPhone to fill it out. Now, that would be pretty hard for me, but I have seen a lot of the youngsters in Tennessee in the Sevier County High School, for example, who went right to work. They did a pretty quick job of doing this. That helped a lot.

Then, Senator MURRAY and I, Senator JONES from Alabama and Senator SCOTT from South Carolina—last year introduced the FUTURE Act, and the FUTURE Act did two things. It said that for 22 of the questions here, the ones that you have to give to the government twice—you give it to the Education Department and you give it to the IRS, and then they check to see if you made a mistake, and if they do, they slow down your aid. We said: Let’s simplify that. Let’s just say all you have to do is check a box, and the IRS will answer those 22 questions for you. That is a huge savings of time and years to implement because, again, we are talking about 20 million families a year. So we saved them that trouble.

Now, guess what else we saved. We saved enough money to permanently fund historically Black colleges. How about that? Filling out all this form didn’t save the government money; it cost the government money. So we will save in one act, and there are many Senators who have been involved in this, in addition to Senator MURRAY. Senator BOOKER has had an interest, and Senator COLLINS, Senator KING, Senator BURR, and Senator BENNET earlier. You can see Republicans and Democrats all see the wisdom of this, as well as everyone who you have ever had who comes before us. So we have a new bill that says: Let’s get rid of 53 questions and turn this into this. That is what the hearing was about today.

Now, why wouldn’t we do that? Almost everyone says we should. Should we deliberately require 20 million families to answer 53 unnecessary questions that discourage many low-income students from going to college? Should we insist on that? I don’t think so.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, this would probably mean that about 400,000 more students would apply for Pell grants. That is what the Pell grant is for. It is to encourage low-income students who want a ticket to the head of the line, a ticket called higher education, a ticket that the college board said increases your earnings by $1 million over your lifetime if you get a 4-year degree, and this is our effort to help low-income students get that ticket to a better life and a better education and more money.

So why wouldn’t we do it and why wouldn’t we do it during this pandemic? This has to be the strangest year of college in a century—at least a century. Students are stressed out, families are stressed when we are going to add to the stress by saying: And in addition, your friendly Federal Government, in order for you to get a Pell grant, is going to insist that you answer 53 questions that everybody agrees are unnecessary for the government to determine whether you are eligible for the loan or for the grant.

And then there is one final reason we should do it. The act that Senator MURRAY and Senator SCOTT and I introduced and became law last year with President Trump’s signature, the one that saved enough money to permanently fund historically Black colleges, that is going to take a couple of years to implement. So if we go ahead and pass the law that turns this into this before the end of this year, we can do both of them at the same time.

I think the American people would feel pretty good about the U.S. Congress that, in the midst of a pandemic, finished its work on such an important piece of legislation.
Our hearing today was well attended. We had four of the same witnesses who came 7 years ago and said: There is no need to ask all these questions. Nobody needs them. Nobody needs the answers. All it does is turn away from college students whom we want to encourage to go.

Now, think about that. That is a de-liberate act by the Federal Government not to change that. It doesn't save any money. It doesn't eliminate any fraud. All it does is turn away from college the people whom we want to encourage to have a chance to go.

I am hopeful that the hearing today and our repeated efforts will help us create approval of this before the end of the year. Since nobody tells me they are against it, you would think we would do it. Sometimes people say: Well, we need to agree on everything before we pass anything. Sometimes that is true. But when something is this important, when it affects this many families, when it comes at a time when families are under stress anyway, let's turn a 108-question FAFSA into a 33-question FAFSA. Let's make it simpler and easier for deserving Americans to go to college.

There are lots of other things we need to do about higher education. We need more accountability. We need to deal with student loans. There are many things we need to do. We have had a lot of discussions about those. We are not going to get agreement on that this year, but just as we were able to do for the historically Black colleges last year and the first step of the FAFSA, I think it would be wise to finish the job.

I was very pleased with our hearing. I am grateful to Senator MURRAY for her kind comments this morning that she made and for her friendship and her willingness to work with me on this, and I would hope that, for the benefit of those 20 million families, we would have some success.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNIZING IGIUGIG, ALASKA

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. President, it is Thursday, and as you know, it is one of my favorite times of the week.

The Presiding Officer has the good fortune of listening to a number of the “Alaskan of the Week” speeches when he gets to come down to the floor—typically every Thursday—to talk about a person or group of people who are doing great things for my State. As I said, so many of my colleagues here—even some of the reporters—know this is the person we call our Alaskan of the Week, but sometimes we call them our Alaskans of the Week.

This week, we are going plural in a big way. This week, we are recognizing 20 of our communities. It is my favorite times of the week. I was very pleased with our hearing. It was really a nice evening.

Before I get into the story, let me say that community is everything. Living in one of the most magnificent places in the world is not without its challenges. We depend on each other. Communities often come together to help each other. Typically, in our rural communities, traditional knowledge is critical and so is hard-won ingenuity and determination to overcome many of the challenges in living in the great State of Alaska.

I would like to transport you to one of those communities. It is the village of Igiugig in Southwest Alaska. Rich in Native traditions, Igiugig is home to around 70 year-round residents, growing to over 200 in the summer months.

The name “Igiugig” originated from a Yupik word meaning “like a throat that swallows water,” referring to the village’s location where the Kvichak River meets Iliamna. Going all the way back to the purchase of Alaska from Russia over 150 years ago, Igiugig has maintained a commercial fishing and subsistence-based economy. They have been incredibly innovative with alternative energy there—wind and hydro—and most importantly, this community has maintained a strong sense of connection with each other, which is so important for communities like this. This is evidenced by what happened just a few weeks ago when a young girl needed to be airlifted out of the community to Anchorage—some 250 miles away—for medical help by every member of the community pitched in to help.

What happened? Here is what happened. On the night of August 28—so about 3 or 4 weeks ago—around 11:30 a.m., the Tribal administrator and village council vice president Karl Hill was sitting at home when he saw the LifeMed Alaska flight, which he knew was coming in to help this young girl, circling above the small runway.

Over 200 of our communities aren’t connected by roads, so a lot of them have very small airports and landing strips. Karl got this phone call when the pilot was above circling. There was a problem with the runway lights; they weren’t working. He ran out to the airport to try to turn the lights on manually. That didn’t work, so he got into his plane—he was one of only two pilots in the village with a plane. He got on the plane just to talk to the pilot, who was circling above, over the head of the runway. The pilot said “Medevac” and he told him he was getting low on fuel. He wouldn’t be able to circle much longer, and he couldn’t land. But this young girl needed help as soon as possible.

In so many of our Native communities and rural communities, there is no hospital. There is barely even a medical clinic sometimes. So she needed to be medevacked.

While Karl communicated with the pilot over his headset, other community members began calling people in the community asking for help. Ida Nelson immediately called her friend in the community who came out in her four-wheeler and headed to the airport. Community leader Christina Salmon, whose sister is Alexanna Salmon—who was our Alaskan of the Week in 2017, by the way—made around 30 phone calls. Health aide Amanda Bybee. Jeff Brinhurst, and so many others started calling and rallying this community, and they all came out. They all came out in any kind of vehicle with lights that they had—trucks, cars, ATVs, kids on four-wheelers, many still in their pajamas. They all came out in the middle of the night. They arrived to provide enough light on the runway for the pilot to see the landing strip. They staggered the vehicles facing east and running the whole length of the runway, lighting the path with their headlights.

They waited intensely. Ida Nelson told a reporter: “I was anxious and nervous. . . . I was like, ‘What if that was my baby waiting for that plane?’ What if it was my young girl who needed lifesaving help?”

They waited for the plane to touch down, for the girl to be transferred, and for the plane to take off again. All of this happened with the lights provided by the community in a makeshift lighting of the runway.

By this time, it was around a little past 1:30, closer to 2 o’clock, but when the plane took off, the community, of course, was in a celebratory mood.

“We were pumped up,” Karl Hill said.

“It was really an amazing feat that we were able to pull together so quickly” in the middle of the night. He added, “I’m really a nice pilot.”

That young girl who needed to be medevacked and airlifted in Anchorage is now back in the community, and she has recovered, thank God.

We are so proud to be a State full of such tight-knit communities that work together every day to make Alaska so special. We are particularly proud as we recount the events of August 28 in Igiugig and so grateful to all the people in the community who came out in the middle of the night, some in their pajamas, to make sure that young girl could get the medical help she needed.

Thank you to Igugig for being such an amazing community with great determination, great heart, and great innovation. Congratulations to all of you for being our Alaskans of the Week.
I yield the floor. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the package of four Illinois district court nominees who are scheduled to receive votes on the floor this week.

In my State, Democrats and Republicans have long worked together in a respectful, bipartisan way to select Federal judges.

For example, when two Illinois vacancies opened up on the 7th Circuit in 2017, back when Senate Republicans decided to abandon the circuit court blue slip, we were able to negotiate a package of two well-qualified nominees, Amy St. Eve and Michael Scudder, who were confirmed by the Senate unanimously.

For district court vacancies, Illinois has a longstanding “three to one” system.

Under this system, the President’s party gets to select the candidates for three out of four district court vacancies, and the other party gets to select the candidate for the fourth. Then the parties negotiate until they reach an agreement on packages of nominees that can move forward to confirmation.

Under this system, Democrats and Republicans have to work together and compromise. Neither side gets everything they want, but for several decades, this bipartisan process has kept both parties at the table and has served the State well.

During President Trump’s tenure, there have been two packages of Illinois district court nominees that we have negotiated with the senior Member of the Republican congressional delegation—Representative JIM BUMBAUER—and the White House.

The first was a package of four Chicago nominees—now judges—that included Federal pick Mary Rowland, a former Federal public defender and the first openly LGBT judge on the Chicago bench.

The second package of Illinois nominees, which we negotiated throughout 2019 and agreed upon last December, includes Federal Magistrate Judge IAIN DUGAN; Illinois 3rd Judicial Circuit Judge David Dugan of Madison County; Illinois 20th Judicial Circuit Judge Stephen McGlynn of St. Clair County; and the Democratic pick, Judge Franklin Valderrama of the Chicago bench.

All of the nominees in the current Illinois package have significant judicial experience and were rated well-qualified by the American Bar Association.

Each nominee was also reviewed by judicial screening committees that we established, including a Southern District judicial screening committee, chaired by former Federal Judge Patrick Murphy, and a Northern District committee, chaired by former Federal Judge David Coar. Each nominee received screening committee approval based on their qualifications and their record as judges.

I want to say that I recognize and respect the opposition that has been expressed to two of the Republican picks in this package, Judges Dugan and McGlynn.

These nominees have made statements and expressed views with which I disagree, particularly on matters involving reproductive rights.

These nominees would not have been Democratic picks in our Illinois system, but under the system, Democrats and Republicans have to work together on bipartisan packages, and neither side gets everything their way.

While I disagree with statements that Judges Dugan and McGlynn have made, I agreed to this package of nominees as part of our bipartisan State process, and I will support all four nominees in the package.

I also want to briefly discuss the Democratic pick in this package, Judge Franklin Valderrama.

For the past 14 years, Judge Valderrama has served as an associate justice on the Circuit Court of Cook County. He has extensive experience both as a judge and as a practitioner and is highly respected.

When a Chicago-based Federal judgeship became vacant last year, we put out a public call for applications. An extraordinary group of 50 candidates applied. Our screening committee vetted them all, and Judge Valderrama was at the top of the list.

I believe he will be an outstanding addition to the Federal bench in Chicago.

HONORING RYAN PHILLIP HENDRIX

Mr. TILLIS. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to Sheriff Deputy Ryan Phillip Hendrix, 34, of Hendersonville who passed away on Thursday, September 10, 2020, while in the line of duty. He was born December 9, 1985, in Asheville, North Carolina to his parents Donald L. and Heidi J. Hendrix. Ryan was a devoted Christian and attended Grace Blue Ridge Church with Pastor Chas Morris.

Shortly after graduating from Hendersonville Christian School in 2004, Ryan enlisted with the U.S. Marine Corps and graduated as a lance corporal in 2005. He was in the Marine Reserves for 5 years and volunteered to serve a tour of duty in Iraq in 2006. Ryan began his career with the Henderson County Sheriff’s Office as a detention officer in June 2012. In May 2015, he completed basic law enforcement training and became a patrol deputy and later a field training officer.
He was an active member of the Henderson County Sheriff’s Office SWAT team and was assigned as a patrol detective to Charlie Squad.

Ryan excelled in sports, especially baseball and soccer, and enjoyed fishing, hunting, biking, kayaking, and camping. Ryan and his wife Melissa, who were high school sweethearts, were the love of his life and always his greatest priority. He spent all of his free time with them and continually involved them in outdoor activities. He enjoyed teaching them how to raise animals and spending time with their extended family of grandparents, aunts and uncles, and many cousins.

Ryan had a keen instinct and could see things most couldn’t. He was swift to action and was very intuitive while possessing a magnanimous heart. He would choose not to fight with a fool, but rather help them to find a better way. Ryan loved to bring humor to every situation, and even during the roughest times, you would always see a smile on his face.

Ryan tragically lost his life during the early morning hours of September 10, 2020, while in the line of duty. As the world slept, Ryan responded to assist a family in need of help when they became the innocent victims of a violent encounter. We all know the tragic outcome, but Ryan refused to let the story end there. While his death will leave a giant void in the hearts of those who love him, he continues to exemplify a champion’s heart even in passing. Ryan was also an organ donor and will continue helping strangers for a lifetime, even after making the ultimate sacrifice. He was doing the job he was born to do and died doing the job he loved.

As the U.S. Senator from North Carolina, I am forever grateful for Ryan’s service to our State and Nation. He gave his life protecting his fellow citizens, and we will never forget the sacrifice he made.

REMEMBERING MELISSIA DAVIS

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, today I wish to honor the life of Mrs. Melissa Davis of Kennedy, AL, who passed away on September 7, 2020. She will be remembered as a dedicated public servant who was committed to bettering her community and State.

Melissia worked diligently for 26 years, first as an accountant, and later as a franchise owner for the Internal Revenue Service, and I was eager to hire her. I knew she would be an exemplary employee. Over the years, Melissa gained a deep understanding of constituent services and remained dedicated to working with Federal, State, and local agencies on behalf of all of her constituents.

Melissia served with distinction on the board of trustees of her alma mater, Stillman College in Tuscaloosa, AL. She was the chairwoman of the Stillman House Restoration Committee for 13 years. Under her leadership, the historic Stillman House was placed on the Alabama Historic Register and National Register of Historic Places. In placing Stillman College on the Alabama Register of Landmarks and Heritage, designating the campus as an Alabama Historic District.

Outside of her professional career, Mrs. Davis was heavily involved with Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., the West Alabama United Way Campaign, Habitat for Humanity, and several other local endeavors. Additionally, Melissa was a dedicated member of Elizabeth Baptist Church, where she taught Sunday school and served as a matron. Not only did Melissa live a life of service, she embodied it.

Melissa’s many accomplishments and contributions to the State of Alabama will long be remembered. Melissa was passionate about her hometown of Kennedy, AL, and she served as one of its strongest advocates. She will be remembered for her great sense of humor and style. Melissa touched the lives of many over the years, and she will be greatly missed.

I offer my deepest condolences to Melissa’s husband, Burkles Davis, II, and her two children, Alecia Nicole Davis and Burkles ‘Trey’ Davis, III, and to all of their loved ones as they celebrate her life and mourn her passing.

100TH BIRTHDAY OF THE NFL

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to commemorate the 100th birthday of the National Football League. On September 17, 1920, 15 people who shared a love of football met in an automobile showroom in Canton, OH, to form what would become the National Football League. From these humble beginnings, the NFL has grown into a preeminent American sports league and become a fixture in American life. Today’s NFL is an American institution that brings together millions of individuals of all ages, races, and backgrounds through a shared love for the game of football. In fact, last season, the NFL concluded the celebratory centennial by running a Super Bowl championship that was viewed by over 100 million Americans.

At the same time, the NFL has never forgotten its roots in Ohio. Every year, millions of football fans travel to Canton, which now hosts the Pro Football Hall of Fame and the accompanying Hall of Fame game that rings in every new NFL season. Today, in an effort to commemorate the League’s 100th birthday, Canton and the Cleveland Browns will host my hometown Cincinnati Bengals in a classic rivalry game, known as the Battle of Ohio. The game will highlight the formation of the league and its origins in Canton, honor the more than 25,000 players who have played in the league, and showcase the work the NFL is doing to ensure its second century is just as successful as the first.

I wish the league all the best as it embarks into its second century as the foremost steward of “America’s Game.”

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

CELEBRATING 50 YEARS OF SPECIAL OLYMPICS ARKANSAS

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. President, I rise today in light of a significant anniversary for a crucial organization in the state of Arkansas. Fifty years ago, Special Olympics Arkansas was founded under the idea of an equal and opportunity Arkansas. On this special day of celebration, I would like to recognize and thank Special Olympics Arkansas for its dedication to a virtuous mission that has transformed my State in more ways than one.

Special Olympics Arkansas was designed to fulfill and uphold a specific vision to transform lives through sports and education. To make this ambition a reality, the organization provides individuals with intellectual disabilities the opportunity to participate in year-round sports and athletic training. Just as Special Olympics Arkansas has a positive impact on the field, it is also a powerful and effective catalyst for social change off the field. By offering a range of programming efforts that encompass health, education, community building and leadership, Special Olympics Arkansas is doing exactly what it set out to accomplish.

Since its inception, the organization has seen increasing and overwhelming demand. Special Olympics Arkansas has 15,000 participating athletes and 5,000 volunteers. Additionally, it offers training in 15 different sports with 260 statewide competitions and has cultivated participation in all 75 of the State’s counties. While the transformative power of sports is at the organization’s core, competition is merely a gateway to creating avenues for individuals, both with and without intellectual disabilities, to experience personal growth, find joy and gain confidence. The additional new programs such as the Inclusive Health Program, Unified School Program, and the Unified Leadership Program has proven tremendously valuable in breaking down barriers and creating accepting and inclusive communities.

Thanks to Special Olympics Arkansas, our State has experienced great social progress and meaningful change over the past 50 years.

I cannot thank Special Olympics Arkansas enough for its continued dedication to creating where enhanced opportunity and acceptance take center stage. Arkansas citizens of all backgrounds, their families, and our communities are forever grateful for five decades of hard work and dedication to a better tomorrow.

REMEMBERING THOMAS KANE GILHOOL
- Mr. CASEY. Mr. President, today I rise to recognize and pay tribute to Thomas Kane Gilhool, who championed the rights of inclusion for children and adults with disabilities and changed public policy in our country for all people with disabilities. His work was pivotal in affirming the constitutional right of children with disabilities to a public education, increasing community-based services for people with developmental disabilities, and creating a pathway for people with autism and other developmental disabilities to leave institutions and live with neighbors, friends, and family.

Tom Gilhool was an originating member of the Philadelphia Community Legal Services. At the start of his career, he helped to organize, train, and then represented the Philadelphia Welfare Rights Organization and the Residents Advisory Board, as well as other organizations serving residents in low-income neighborhoods. The recognition agreements he secured empowered those organizations to effectively represent welfare recipients and public housing tenants and served as models that were replicated throughout the country.

Tom Gilhool’s seminal accomplishment was his groundbreaking representation of plaintiffs in the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Citizens (PARC) v. the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, the Nation’s first civil rights case brought on behalf of children with disabilities. Kate Flakowski, sister of two boys represented in the case, remembers Tom as “an intellectual giant, lawyer, and legal historian,” someone “who used his gifts not for self-aggrandizement, but instead to raise up the lives of others, including those with intellectual and developmental disabilities.” Prior to this case, children with disabilities were all but excluded from attending public schools. The decree of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in 1972 paved the way for the 1975 passage of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, now known as the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act—IDEA—which affirmed every child’s right to a free and appropriate public education in the least restrictive environment.

Tom Gilhool’s work on PARC v. Pennsylvania led to another landmark case on behalf of people with disabilities. In Pennhurst State School and Hospital v. Halderman, 1981, Tom Gilhool was lead counsel for residents of Pennhurst State School and Hospital, the residential home to almost 3,000 people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. By 1968, Pennhurst was exposed as an overcrowded, violent, and abusive setting. Through Tom’s work, the right to habilitation in non-segregated settings was established. The ruling in Pennhurst v. Halderman was the fore-runner of the 1999 Olmstead v. LC Supreme Court decision, establishing the right to treatment and services in community-based settings. Since that case, nearly 200,000 people have moved from abusive, segregated settings where they had been deprived of dignity, respect, and their basic needs. Tom Gilhool’s work made it possible for millions of people with intellectual and developmental disabilities to avoid such places.

The cases Tom Gilhool argued laid much of the foundation for the passage of the 1990 Americans with Disabilities Act. Judith Gran, a long-time colleague of Tom Gilhool at the Public Interest Law Center said, “Tom was the most effective civil rights lawyer of his generation. Without his vision and strategic gifts, [people with disabilities] might not have the right to education and the right to live in the community.”

In 2012, Pennhurst v. Halderman was cited by Chief Justice John Roberts in upholding the constitutionality of key provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act in the National Federation of Independent Business v. Sebelius.

When my father was elected Governor of Pennsylvania in 1986, he asked Tom to serve as Secretary of Education. Tom worked hard for the children of Pennsylvania from 1987 to 1999.

Thomas Gilhool’s tremendous contributions to the lives and rights of people with disabilities and their families are immeasurable. His accomplishments will continue to benefit all people with disabilities and inspire all who continue to work to protect the rights and freedoms of people with disabilities.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

By Mr. LEE (for himself, Mr. COTTON, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mrs. BLACKBURN, Ms. MCSALLY, Mr. BERNSTEIN, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. CRAMER, Mr. DAINES, Mr. BLUNT, Mrs. LOEFLER, Ms. ERNST, Mr. RISCH, Mrs. HYDE-SMITH, Mr. BARRASSO, Mr. BRAUN, Mr. ROMNEY, Mr. CORNYN, Mr. THUNE, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mr. HOOVER, and Mr. TILLIS):

S. 4608. A bill to amend the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act to provide for the portability of professional licensees and to provide for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, tomorrow marks an important day in our Nation’s history—the birth of the U.S. Air Force.

For 73 years, countless brave American women and men have protected our liberty and our homeland from the skies. They have embarked on air combat missions, guarded our bases and missile sites, and undertaken heroic rescues. They have flown, fought, and won in the air on behalf of our great country. This year also marks another important anniversary in my home State—the 80th year of Hill Air Force Base’s service to that mission.

In 1939, Congress approved the construction of an air depot in Northern Utah. The following year, on January 2, the surrounding community came together and purchased the land that is now known as Hill Air Force Base. Ever since then, it has played an invaluable role in building up our Air Force and supporting our air and women throughout World War II, Korea, Vietnam, and the conflicts that we still face today.

Tucked between the beautiful Wasatch Mountains on the east and the Great Salt Lake on the west, Hill Air Force Base is today home to 22,000 U.S. military personnel. It is the largest military installation in Utah—probably nearly $1.5 billion in jobs each year, with an overall economic impact of about $3.7 billion annually. Hill houses and ensures mission readiness for some of our best and brightest personnel, including the 75th Air Base Wing, the 388th Fighter Wing, and the 419th Reserve Fighter Wing.

It is also home to the Ogden Air Logistics Complex, which repairs and maintains some of our most cutting-edge aircraft, including the F-22 Raptor, the F-16 Fighting Falcon, the A-10 Thunderbolt II, the T-38 Talon, and, of course, the F-35A Lightning II, the most advanced fighter jet in the world.

The Air Force Nuclear Weapons Center on Hill has since 1959 been responsible for supporting the Minuteman Intercontinental Ballistic Missile program, the ground-based leg of our nuclear triad.

Just a short distance west of the base, the Utah Test and Training Range contains the largest block of special-use airspace in the continental United States. The range provides an ideal location for the evaluation of weapons and training grounds for combat, ensuring that our airmen are prepared to win any conflict we enter into with decisive and conclusive airpower.

There is no question that Hill Air Force Base oversees vital national security assets for the U.S. Air Force. The Air Force and our country are better off as a result of its existence. Yet there is something even more important that makes Hill aational place that it is, and that is its people. The patriotism, work ethic, and community support are unmatched anywhere else in the country—or in the world for that matter.

Every commander who serves a 2-year rotation at Hill always says the same thing—that the community’s support is stronger at Hill Air Force Base than at any other base where any one of them happens to have served.

I am proud to say that, in Utah, we go above and beyond to aid our military and to support their families, as well we should. According to the 2019 “Support of Military Families” report, Utah ranks among the top destinations for military families transitioning to a new duty station. Two of the three highest ranking Air Force installations are in Utah—Hill Air Force Base and the Roland R. Wright Air National Guard Base in Salt Lake City. have previously acquired years or even decades of experience in licensure in another State. Oftentimes, by the time the new license in the new State and in the new duty station has been processed, it is already time for the family to move, yet again, for the next military assignment.

This isn’t fair. It is not right. It is not how we ought to treat the families of our brave military men and women.

The Department of Labor estimates that 15 percent of military spouses are unemployed or underemployed. A recent Department of Defense study put the rate even higher, at 24 percent. This, needless and unjustly, burdens military members and their families. In some instances, it prevents servicemembers from recertifying and, in others, it prevents spouses from entering their desired fields in the first place.

Thankfully, some States have already taken steps to move forward in the right direction. They have already stepped up to the plate to address this problem in a meaningful way. In fact, thanks to the diligent work of two prominent Utah lawmakers, Senator Todd Weiler and State Representative Brian Greene, my home State has been one of the first to allow licensure reciprocity for military spouses as long as they meet certain established criteria. I commend Senator Weiler and Representative Greene for their efforts, and I am encouraged to see other States following the example set by Utah.

The Federal Government has a role to play here, too. While occupational licensing is a field that is generally controlled by the State, we have a role to play insofar as the activities of the States. The regulations imposed by the States end up impacting our military families. Military readiness and talent retention, as well as movement of our troops across the Nation and throughout the world, are among the most important responsibilities of Congress. We at the national level should be doing everything in our power to ensure that licensing laws are friendly and flexible and certainly not hostile to or prohibitive of the activities of military spouses and their families.

That is why I am introducing the Military Spouse Licensing Relief Act. This bill will simply ensure that, when servicemembers are relocated on military orders, their spouses can receive reciprocal professional licenses across State lines regardless of where within the United States they might be reassigned.

In order to receive reciprocity under this bill, a license would have to be in good standing, according to the requirements of the jurisdiction that issued the license in the first place, and the spouse must still comply with the State’s standards of practice, of discipline, and the fulfillment of any continuing education requirements.

As a State function, protected under principles of federalism and explicitly by the Tenth Amendment, the bill does nothing to preempt the State’s rightful authority to set licensing standards within each State.

We owe a great debt of gratitude to the men and women who give so much to protect our Nation, whether on the land, the seas, or in the skies. This bill will help them relieve some of the burden placed on them. It will not fix all of the problems, and it will not make easy all of the sacrifices that are made by our military spouses and their families. It will not make it easier. That is the least we can do.

As we commemorate the birthday of the Air Force and the anniversary of Hill Air Force Base this week, this bill’s passage is the least we can do for our military and their families. We need to get this passed. I invite all of my colleagues to join me in securing its immediate passage.

By Mr. COTTON:

S. 4609. A bill to withdraw normal trade relations treatment from, and apply certain provisions of title IV of the Trade Act of 1974 to, products of the People’s Republic of China, and to expand the requirements for the products of the People’s Republic of China to receive normal trade relations treatment in the future, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, 20 years ago this week, Joe Biden and other politicians from both parties gave a gift to the Communist Party: permanent most favored nation status. Permanent most favored nation status is a trade privilege we grant most countries that are members of the World Trade Organization. It places lower tariffs and fewer restrictions on those countries’ goods. But historically our trade laws have treated hostile countries—differently—Communist China, countries that cheat on trade, human rights abusers; in other words, countries exactly like Communist China.

A few of those countries, like Cuba and North Korea, are denied most favored nation status outright. What few goods their miserable socialist economies produce face steep tariffs, sanctions, and other restrictions, which is one reason you don’t see too many “Made in North Korea” items on your local store shelves.

Other countries historically have faced a yearly review of their trading privileges with the United States in which the President and Congress can assess the human rights and trade abuses ongoing in those countries and then determine whether it is in our interests to grant those trading privileges for another year.

Communist China was one of those countries subject to yearly review—at least it was until 20 years ago. This remarkably reversed a pattern that had led the spirited debates about whether Communist China should be stripped of its trading privileges or whether it deserved a temporary reprieve. It put a spotlight on the crimes of the Chinese Communist Party, and it used our market as leverage to advance our interests. Of course the Chinese Communist Party didn’t like that—not one bit; neither, sadly, did many bankers and businessmen here in America. And that is why we were more concerned about making money than pressuring Communist China to reform. This China lobby pushed hard to get rid of the annual vote and give China permanent most favored nation status. And 20 years ago this week, they finally won.

Here is how Senator Joe Biden defended his vote at the time to give a big gift to Communist China. He said:

Trade concessions are all one-way in this deal. They drop tariffs. They drop non-market barriers. They agree to increased protection of our intellectual property laws.

That is what Joe Biden said at the time, but is that what actually happened? Were all the trade concessions “one way,” as he predicted? In fact, they were, but not the way Joe Biden intended because as trade concessions ended up benefiting Beijing, while devastating America.

The main consequence of that decision was to make it harder to put tariffs on China in response to human rights and trade abuses, and it sent a strong signal to businesses and banks that China was open for business for good. The gold rush to China was on.

In the two decades that followed, America invested more than $200 billion in China. Most of that money went to building factories and training workers over there, while our factories were dismantled and our workers were laid off.

In the 6 years that followed that vote, manufacturing employment plunged by 18 percent as cheap Chinese goods flooded our market and as our factories were dismantled and offshore to China.

The vote to give trade privileges to Communist China is just more evidence of the alternate reality that politicians like Joe Biden have been living in for decades. There is a consistent pattern. They treat our enemies like friends and our friends like enemies, and the American people suffer because of it.

Twenty years of getting ripped off by China is more than long enough. That is why I am introducing a bill that would repeal China’s permanent most favored nation status and return us to the older way, where China’s trade status would be assessed by the President and Congress every year.

My bill would make businesses think twice before sending more American jobs overseas to China, and it would add new human rights and trade standards that China must work toward to qualify for most favored nation status.

The fact is, a majority of support for the Communist Party’s most recent crimes, including its use of slave labor and concentration camps in Turkestan.
Ultimately, repealing China’s most favored nation status would force regular votes in Congress, so politicians like Joe Biden would have to go on the record about whom they serve—the American people or the interests of the Chinese Communist Party.

By Mr. THUNE (for himself and Mr. ROUNDS):

S. 4616. A bill to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to transfer certain National Forest System land to the State of South Dakota, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 4616

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Gilt Edge Mine Conveyance Act”.

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) FEDERAL LAND.—The term “Federal land” means all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to approximately 266 acres of National Forest System land within the Gilt Edge Mine Superfund Boundary, as generally depicted on the map.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Agriculture, acting through the Chief of the Forest Service.

(4) STATE.—The term “State” means State of South Dakota.

SEC. 3. LAND CONVEYANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the terms and conditions described in this Act, if the State submits to the Secretary an offer to acquire the Federal land for the market value, as determined by the appraisal under subsection (c), the Secretary shall convey the Federal land to the State.

(b) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyance under subsection (a) shall be—

(1) subject to any other terms and conditions as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States;

(c) APPRAISAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Before submitting an offer under subsection (a), the State shall complete an appraisal to determine the market value of the Federal land.

(2) STANDARDS.—The appraisal under paragraph (1) shall be conducted in accordance with—

(A) the Uniform Appraisal Standards for Federal Land Acquisitions; and

(B) the Uniform Standards of Professional Appraisal Practice.

(1) AVAILABILITY OF MAP.—The map shall be kept on file and available for public inspection in the appropriate office of the Forest Service.

(2) CORRECTION OF ERRORS.—The Secretary may correct any errors in the map, including—

(e) CONSIDERATION.—As consideration for the conveyance under subsection (a), the State shall pay to the Secretary an amount equal to the market value of the Federal land, as determined by the appraisal under subsection (c).

(f) SURVEY.—The State shall prepare a survey that is satisfactory to the Secretary of the exact acreage and legal description of the Federal land to be conveyed under subsection (a).

(g) COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—As a condition on the conveyance under subsection (a), the State shall pay all costs associated with the conveyance, including—

(1) the appraisal under subsection (c); and

(2) the survey under subsection (f).

(h) PROCEEDS FROM THE SALE OF LAND.—Any proceeds from the sale of land from the conveyance under subsection (a) shall be—

(1) deposited in the fund established under Public Law 90–171 (commonly known as the “Sisk Act”); and

(2) available to the Secretary until expended, without further appropriation, for the maintenance and improvement of land or administration facilities in the Black Hills National Forest in the State.

(i) ENVIRONMENTAL CONDITIONS.—Notwithstanding section 120(h)(3)(A) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9603), the Secretary shall not be required to provide any covenant or warranty for the Federal land conveyed to the State under this Act.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 701—URGING THE GOVERNMENT OF BURMA TO HOLD FREE, FAIR, INCLUSIVE, PARTICIPATORY, AND CREDIBLE ELECTIONS ON NOVEMBER 8, 2020

Mr. CARDIN (for himself, Mr. Young, Mr. Van Hollen, Mr. Cramer, Mr. Durbin, Mrs. Blackburn, Mr. Merkley, Mr. Wyden, Mrs. Gillibrand, and Mr. Markey) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 701

Whereas the Union Election Commission of Burma announced that the country will hold general elections on November 8, 2020;

Whereas Burma’s previous elections were characterized by controversy, conflict, and disenfranchisement instigated by the military (the “Tatmadaw”), including in May 1990, November 2010, and the April 2012 special elections, and November 2015;

Whereas the ongoing Tatmadaw offensives in Rakhine, southern Chin, Kachin, and northern Shan states are causing significant displacement of ethnic groups, creating substantial challenges for the Union Election Commission to generate a verified electoral roll before elections on November 8, 2020;

Whereas the Government of Burma instigated a blackout, that is still ongoing as of September 17, 2020, of mobile internet services and restricted internet service quality in Rakhine and Chin States, beginning in June 2019, thereby inhibiting the ability to hold free and fair elections;—

Whereas Burma’s 2015 election saw the disenfranchisement of a significant segment of the population, particularly of Rohingya ethnicity, but also including those of Chinese and Indian descent, Muslimes, and other internally displaced persons;

Whereas ongoing conflict in 2015 was used to justify the cancellation of elections in 7 townships and more than 400 ward and village tracts, mostly in Kachin, Shan, and Kayin states;

Whereas Bosnia’s 1992 citizenship law stripped Rohingya of their Burmese citizenship and subsequent policies rendered them stateless and disenfranchised, despite having the right to vote as recently as 2010 and ability to serve in parliament as recently as 2015;

Whereas in 2017, the Tatmadaw continued a genocide against Rohingya civilians in Rakhine state, causing over 740,000 Rohingya refugees to flee into Bangladesh, joining over 200,000 who had been previously displaced in previous waves of anti-Rohingya violence, resulting in more than 1,000,000 Rohingya refugees not present in Burma for the election;

Whereas the Government of Burma has not created conditions conducive to repatriation, ethnic political party has repeatedly failed to uphold and protect the rights of ethnic and religious minorities since coming to power in 2015;

Whereas, as of March 31, 2020, during the first four years of Aung San Suu Kyi’s civilian government, over 500 lawsuits against more than 1,000 individuals have been brought before Burma’s legal system to repress peaceful expressions critical of the Tatmadaw, civilian government, and Aung San Suu Kyi, resulting in the arrest of protesters such as Reuters reporters Wa Lone and Kyaw Soe Oo, ethnic activists, and student protestors;

Whereas the Political Parties Registration Act of 2010 limits the right to form and join political parties only to full citizens, thereby severely curtailing the political participation of religious and ethnic minorities, including Rohingya, those of Chinese and Indian descent, internally displaced populations across Rakhine, Kachin, and Shan states, and Burmese refugees in Thailand, Bangladesh, and elsewhere in the region, many of whom had citizenship documents canceled and who face multiple hurdles in gaining citizenship doing so.

Whereas the Government of Burma instigated a blackout, that is still ongoing as of September 1, 2020, of mobile internet services and restricted internet service quality in Rakhine and Chin States, beginning in June 2019, thereby inhibiting the ability to hold free and fair elections;—

Whereas the National League of Democracy political party has repeatedly failed to uphold and protect the rights of ethnic and religious minorities since coming to power in 2015;
International Criminal Court and the International Court of Justice; and

Whereas the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the Situation of Human Rights in Myanmar stated on July 13, 2020, “The people of Myanmar deserve a free and fair election this November and this includes respect for the right to vote regardless of one’s race, ethnicity or religion, freedom of expression and assembly, and access to information and a free press. It will also require that steps are taken now to assure that those who will be able to exercise their rights.”; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 2020 as “National Prostate Cancer Awareness Month”;

(2) calls on the President to—

(A) to raise awareness about the importance of screening methods for, and treatment of, prostate cancer;

(B) to encourage research—

(i) to improve screening and treatment for prostate cancer;

(ii) to discover the causes of prostate cancer; and

(iii) to develop a cure for prostate cancer; and

(C) to observe National Prostate Cancer Awareness Month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

SENATE RESOLUTION 702—DESIGNATING SEPTEMBER 2020 AS “NATIONAL PROSTATE CANCER AWARENESS MONTH”

Mr. MENENDEZ (for himself, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. MARKEY, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. KING, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mr. VAN HOLLEN, Mr. COONS, Mr. BOOKER, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. CARDENAS, Mr. HARRIS) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

Whereas more than 3,100,000 men in the United States are living with prostate cancer; and

Whereas 1 in 9 men in the United States will be diagnosed with prostate cancer in their lifetimes and 1 in 41 men in the United States will die from prostate cancer; and

Whereas prostate cancer is the most commonly diagnosed non-skin cancer and the second-leading cancer-related deaths among men in the United States; and

Whereas the American Cancer Society estimates that, in 2020, 191,930 men will be diagnosed with, and more than 33,330 men will die of, prostate cancer; and

Whereas 40.9 percent of newly diagnosed prostate cancer cases occur in men under the age of 65; and

Whereas the odds of developing prostate cancer rise rapidly after age 50; and

Whereas African-American men suffer from a higher prostate cancer mortality rate than that of White men and have more than double the prostate cancer mortality rate than that of White men; and

Whereas a brother with prostate cancer more than doubles the risk of a man developing prostate cancer, with a higher risk for men who have a brother with the disease and the highest risk for men with several affected relatives; and

Whereas screening by a digital rectal examination and a prostate-specific antigen blood test can detect the disease at the earlier, more treatable stages, which could increase the chances of survival for more than 5 years to nearly 100 percent; and

Whereas 18 percent of men survive more than 5 years if diagnosed with prostate cancer after the cancer has metastasized; and

Whereas there are typically no noticeable symptoms of prostate cancer in the early stages, making appropriate screening critical; and

Whereas, in fiscal year 2020, the Director of the National Institutes of Health will support approximately $287,000,000 in research projects focused specifically on prostate cancer; and

Whereas, in fiscal year 2020, Congress appropriated $110,000,000 for the Prostate Cancer Research Program of the Department of Defense; and

Whereas ongoing research promises further improvements in prostate cancer prevention, early detection, and treatment; and

Whereas educating people in the United States, including health care providers, about prostate cancer and early detection strategies is crucial to saving the lives of men and preserving and protecting families; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates September 2020 as “National Prostate Cancer Awareness Month”;

(2) states with the people of Burma in their ambition for sustainable peace, a genuine democracy, and the realization of fundamental human rights for all; and

(3) calls upon the President and the Secretary of State to—

(A) to support Burma’s democratic transition, including by emphasizing the importance to that transition of this election as well as of the Government of Burma undertaking a credible and transparent process of genuine national and ethnic reconciliation;

(B) to support fair, free, inclusive, transparent, participatory, and credible elections in Burma; and

(C) to observe all Burmese elections in their ambition for sustainable peace, a genuine democracy, and the realization of fundamental human rights for all; and

(4) calls upon the United States Government, political parties, military, or Union Election Commission to limit civil society participation in the election, including by prohibiting voter education and election observation, or otherwise restrict civil society or humanitarian space in the lead up to the election or in the post-election period;

(5) recognizes that the Tatmadaw and its affiliates do not interfere with vigorous public debate or the mechanism of the electoral process and that other government officials do not use official resources for electioneering;

(D) to condemn any action taken by the government, political parties, military, or Union Election Commission to limit civil society participation in the election, including by prohibiting voter education and election observation, or otherwise restrict civil society or humanitarian space in the lead up to the election or in the post-election period;

(E) to ensure that the Department of State’s democracy, human rights, and the promotion of political participation in the election, including by prohibiting voter education and election observation, or otherwise restrict civil society or humanitarian space in the lead up to the election or in the post-election period;

(F) to condemn any action taken by the government, political parties, military, or Union Election Commission to limit civil society participation in the election, including by prohibiting voter education and election observation, or otherwise restrict civil society or humanitarian space in the lead up to the election or in the post-election period;

(G) to observe all Burmese elections in their ambition for sustainable peace, a genuine democracy, and the realization of fundamental human rights for all; and

(6) calls on the President to consider sanctions and other punitive measures against local officials and those engaging in obstructionist behavior; and

(7) calls on the President to consider punitive measures against local officials and those engaging in obstructionist behavior; and

Mr. VAN HOLLEN, Mr. COONS, Mr. BOOKER, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. CARDENAS, Mr. HARRIS) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. Res. 703

Whereas 539 Hispanic-Serving Institutions operate in the United States; and

Whereas Hispanic-Serving Institutions represent 17 percent of all non-profit institutions of higher education, yet serve 26.8 percent of all students and 67 percent of all Hispanic students, enrolling 2,533,333 Hispanics; and

Whereas, as of September 2020, the number of “emerging Hispanic-Serving Institutions” defined as institutions that do not yet meet the threshold of 25 percent Hispanic full-time equivalent undergraduate enrollment but serve a Hispanic student population of between 15 and 24.9 percent, stands at 352 institutions operating in 34 States and Puerto Rico; and

Whereas Hispanic-Serving Institutions are located in 25 States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico;
Whereas Hispanic-Serving Institutions are actively involved in stabilizing and improving the communities in which the institutions are located;

Whereas Hispanic-Serving Institutions are leading efforts to increase Hispanic participation in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (commonly referred to as "STEM");

Whereas Hispanic-Serving Institutions are engines of economic mobility and a major contributor to the economic prosperity of the United States;

Whereas, of the institutions of higher education ranked by Opportunity Insights based on the economic mobility of the graduates of those institutions; the top 10, including the top-ranked institution, are Hispanic-Serving Institutions;

Whereas celebrating the vast contributions of Hispanic-Serving Institutions to the United States strengthens the culture of the United States; and

Whereas the achievements and goals of Hispanic-Serving Institutions deserve national recognition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes the achievements and goals of Hispanic-Serving Institutions in the United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico;

(2) designates the week beginning September 14, 2020, as "National Hispanic-Serving Institutions Week"; and

(3) calls on the people of the United States and interested groups to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs to demonstrate support for Hispanic-Serving Institutions.

SENATE RESOLUTION 704—HONORING THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF GENERAL THOMAS P. STAFFORD AND RECOGNIZING HIS CONTRIBUTION TO THE UNITED STATES SPACE PROGRAM

Mr. INHOFE (for himself and Mr. LANKFORD) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. Res. 704

Whereas General Thomas Patten Stafford was born in Weatherford, Oklahoma, on September 17, 1930, to Thomas and Mary Ellen Stafford;

Whereas General Stafford graduated with honors from the United States Naval Academy in 1952, after which he joined the newly formed United States Air Force;}

Whereas General Stafford entered the United States Air Force Experimental Test Pilot School at Edwards Air Force Base in 1958 and graduated in 1959, receiving the A.B. Honte Award as the outstanding graduate, and thereafter becoming an instructor and writing the performance and aerodynamics textbooks for the school;

Whereas, in 1962, General Stafford was chosen among the second group of astronauts by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) to serve in projects Gemini and Apollo;

Whereas General Stafford developed techniques for and piloted Gemini VI in 1963, completing the first rendezvous in space, and commanded Gemini IX in 1966, demonstrating 3 different types of rendezvous, including the rendezvous that would be used in future Apollo lunar missions;

Whereas, in 1969, General Stafford commanded Apollo 10, piloted the first lunar module to develop within 9 miles of the Moon, designated the first lunar landing site, performed reconnaissance of future Apollo landing sites, and completed each of the essential steps in the final preparation for the upcoming Moon landing, including the first rendezvous around the Moon;

Whereas General Stafford and his crew won the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences Special Trustees "Emmy" Award for initiating development of and taking the first color video images from space;

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes General Stafford's immense contribution to the Space Race and the United States' advancement in space policy and exploration;

(2) commends General Stafford for his extraordinary dedication and service to the United States throughout his distinguished career; and

(3) directs the Secretary of the Senate to transmit an enrolled copy of this resolution to General Stafford.

SENATE RESOLUTION 705—PROCLAIMING THE WEEK OF SEPTEMBER 21 THROUGH SEPTEMBER 25, 2020, TO BE "NATIONAL CLEAN ENERGY WEEK"

Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. WHITEHOUSE, Mr. ALEXANDER, Ms. ROSEN, Mr. TILLIS, Ms. BALDWIN, Mr. BRAUN, Mr. COONS, Mr. ROMNEY, Mr. KING, Mr. GARDNER, Ms. WARREN, Mr. BURR, Mr. MANCHIN, Mr. THUNE, and Mrs. SHAHEEN) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. Res. 705

Whereas, across the United States, clean and readily abundant forms of energy are powering more homes and businesses than ever before;

Whereas clean energy generation is readily available from zero- and low-emissions sources;

Whereas the clean energy sector is a growing part of the economy and has been a key driver of economic growth in the United States in recent years;

Whereas technological innovation can further reduce costs and increase deployment of clean energy sources;

Whereas the "2020 U.S. Energy and Employment Report" found that—

(1) at the end of 2019, the energy sector in the United States employed 6,800,000 individuals; and

(2) in 2019, the energy sector in the United States generated more than 120,000 new jobs;

Whereas the scaling of clean energy is essential to reducing harmful pollution;

Whereas clean energy jobs are inherently local, contribute to the growth of local economies, and cannot be outsourced due to the on-site nature of construction, installation, and maintenance; and

Whereas innovative clean energy solutions and clean energy jobs are part of the energy future of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) proclaims the week of September 21 through September 25, 2020, to be "National Clean Energy Week";

(2) encourages individuals and organizations across the United States to support commonsense solutions that address the economic, environmental, and energy needs of the United States in the 21st century;

(3) encourages the Federal Government, States, municipalities, and individuals to invest in clean, low-emitting energy technologies; and

(4) recognizes the role of entrepreneurs and small businesses in ensuring the energy leadership of the United States in the global marketplace and supporting low-cost, clean, and reliable energy in the United States.

Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. MENENDEZ, Mr. YOUNG, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. CRAMER, Mr. COONS, Mr. BLUNT, Ms. ROSEN, Mrs. CAPITO, Mr. BLUMENTHAL, Mr. PERDUE, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. BARRASSO, Mr. REED, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. KAINE, Mrs. BLACKBURN, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. HOEVEN, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. MORAIS, Mr. BENNET, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. CASEY, Mr. ROMNEY, Mr. JONES, Mr. SULLIVAN, Mr. WARNER, Mr. HAWLEY, Mr. KING, Mr. GARDNER, Mr. SCHATZ, Mr. BRAUN, Ms. KLOBUCHAR, Ms. MCSALLY, Ms. SMITH, Mr. THUNE, Ms. SINEMA, Mr. WICKER, Mrs. GILLBRAND, Mrs. FISCHER, Mr. BOOKER, Mr. JOHNSON, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. LANKFORD, Ms. LOEPFLER, Mr. CASSIDY, Mr. BOOZMAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. SCOTT of South Carolina, Mrs. HYDE-SMITH, Ms. ERNST, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. PAUL, and Ms. MURKOWSKI) submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes September 1, 2020, as "National Concussion Awareness Day";

(2) recognizes that mild traumatic brain injury (mTBI), otherwise known as a "concussion", is an important health concern; and

(3) encourages eligible people to help America vote in the 2020 election by serving as poll workers.

Whereas SCD causes the rapid destruction of sickle cells, which results in multiple medical complications, including anemia, jaundice, gallstones, strokes, restricted blood flow, damaged tissue in the liver, spleen, and kidneys, and death;

Whereas SCD affects an estimated 100,000 individuals in the United States;

Whereas approximately 1,000 babies are born with SCD each year in the United States, with the disease occurring in approximately 1 in 365 newborn African-American infants and 1 in 16,300 newborn Hispanic-American infants, and can be found in individuals of Mediterranean, Middle Eastern, Asian, and Indian origin;

Whereas more than 3,000,000 individuals in the United States have the sickle cell trait and 1 in 13 African Americans carries the trait;

Whereas there is a 1 in 4 chance that a child born to parents who both have the sickle cell trait will have the disease;

Whereas the life expectancy of an individual with SCD is often severely limited;

Whereas the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has reported, based on the evidence available as of September 2020, that individuals who are affected by SCD are at increased risk of developing severe illness from the Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19);

Whereas, while the hematopoietic stem cell transplantation (commonly known as "HSCT") is currently the only cure for SCD and advances in treating the associated complications that occur when HSCT is contraindicated, more research is needed to find widely available treatments and cures to help individuals with SCD;

Whereas September 2020 has been designated as Sickie Cell Disease Awareness Month in order to educate communities across the United States about SCD, including early detection methods, effective treatments, and preventative care programs with respect to complications from SCD and conditions related to SCD: Now, therefore, be it Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) supports the goals and ideals of Sickle Cell Disease Awareness Month; and

(2) encourages the people of the United States to hold appropriate programs, events, and activities during Sickle Cell Disease Awareness Month to raise public awareness of preventative care programs, treatments, and other patient services for those suffering from sickle cell disease, complications from sickle cell disease, and conditions related to sickle cell disease.

SENATE RESOLUTION 716—PROVIDING FOR FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF THE DESIGNATION OF SEPTEMBER 2020 AS “SICKLE CELL DISEASE AWARENESS MONTH” IN ORDER TO EDUCATE COMMUNITIES ACROSS THE UNITED STATES ABOUT SICKLE CELL DISEASE AND THE NEED FOR RESEARCH, EARLY DETECTION METHODS, EFFECTIVE TREATMENTS, AND PREVENTATIVE CARE PROGRAMS WITH RESPECT TO COMPLICATIONS FROM SICKLE CELL DISEASE AND CONDITIONS RELATED TO SICKLE CELL DISEASE

Mr. SCOTT of South Carolina (for himself, Mr. BOOKER, Mrs. HYDE-SMITH, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. RUBIO, Mr. BROWN, Mrs. BLACKBURN, Mr. VAN HOLLEN, Mr. CASSIDY, Mr. JONES, Mr. BRAUN, Mr. COONS, Mr. YOUNG, Ms. WARREN, and Mr. LANKFORD) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. Res. 706

Whereas sickle cell disease (referred to in this preamble as "SCD") is an inherited blood disorder that is a major health problem in the United States and worldwide;

Whereas SCD causes the rapid destruction of sickle cells, which results in multiple medical complications, including anemia, jaundice, gallstones, strokes, restricted blood flow, damaged tissue in the liver, spleen, and kidneys, and death;

Whereas SCD causes acute and chronic episodes of severe pain;

Whereas SCD affects an estimated 100,000 individuals in the United States;

Whereas approximately 1,000 babies are born with SCD each year in the United States, with the disease occurring in approximately 1 in 365 newborn African-American infants and 1 in 16,300 newborn Hispanic-American infants, and can be found in individuals of Mediterranean, Middle Eastern, Asian, and Indian origin;

(2) recognizes that mild traumatic brain injury (mTBI), otherwise known as a “concussion”, is an important health concern;

(3) commends the organizations and individuals that raise awareness about mild traumatic brain injury;

(4) encourages Federal, State, and local policymakers to work together to raise awareness about the effects of concussions; and

(5) to improve the understanding of proper diagnosis and management of concussions; and

(6) encourages further research and prevention efforts to ensure that fewer individuals experience the most adverse effects of mild traumatic brain injury.
agreement on the full normalization of relations between Israel and the Kingdom of Bahrain;
Whereas the United Arab Emirates is the first Gulf Arab state to announce formal relations with Israel, followed closely by Bahrain;
Whereas, under each agreement, the two countries agreed to the establishment of reciprocal embassies and the exchange of Ambassadors;
Whereas opening direct ties between Israel and the United Arab Emirates could begin to transform the region by spurring economic growth, enhancing technological innovation, and forging closer people-to-people relations;
Whereas the agreements could promote investment, tourism, direct flights, security, telecommunications, technology, energy, health, and the environment;
Whereas the United States, Israel, and the United Arab Emirates share a commitment to promoting stability through diplomatic engagement, increased economic integration, and closer security cooperation;
Whereas Israel and the United Arab Emirates will partner with the United States to launch a Strategic Agenda for the Middle East to expand diplomatic, trade, and security cooperation;
Whereas President Donald J. Trump, His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Salman Al-Khalifa of the Kingdom of Bahrain, and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel announced on September 11, 2020, the establishment of diplomatic relations between Israel and the Kingdom of Bahrain;
Whereas the United States, Bahrain, and Israel said in a joint statement that "opening direct dialogue and ties between these two dynamic societies and advanced economies will continue the positive transformations in the Middle East and increase stability, security, and prosperity in the region";
Whereas opening direct ties between Israel, the United Arab Emirates, and Bahrain could begin to transform the region by spurring economic growth, enhancing technological innovation, and forging closer people-to-people relations;
Whereas these historic agreements could help advance peace between Israel and other Arab nations and further diplomatic openings to the region;
Whereas, in 2019, His Highness Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed al Nahyan proclaimed the year 2019 "the Year of Tolerance" in the United Arab Emirates and also established the United Arab Emirates share a commitment to supporting and expanding diplomatic, trade, and security cooperation; and

SENATE RESOLUTION 710—COMMENDING THE HIGH HOLIDAYS CELEBRATED AND COMMEMORATING THE JEWISH PEOPLE IN THE UNITED STATES, IN ISRAEL, AND AROUND THE WORLD, AND RECOGNIZING THE MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE JEWISH COMMUNITY IN THE UNITED STATES

Mr. CRAMER (for himself and Ms. ROSEN) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Whereas the Jewish community in the United States has contributed in varied and significant ways to all areas of life in the United States since Jewish immigrants first arrived on the shores of the United States in 1654;
Whereas, in 2020, the High Holidays recognized and celebrated by the Jewish people in the United States and around the world will begin on September 13, 2020, with Rosh Hashanah, and conclude on September 20, 2020, with Yom Kippur;
Whereas Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, begins at sundown on September 18, 2020, the first day of Tishrei, 5781 on the Hebrew calendar;
Whereas Rosh Hashanah is also known as "Yom Teruah", the Day of Sounding of the Shofar, the ancient ram horn; and
Whereas the traditional greeting for Rosh Hashanah in Hebrew is "Shaana Tova u' Metukah", which means "have a happy and sweet new year";
Whereas Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, begins at sundown on September 27, 2020, the tenth day of Tishrei, 5781 on the Hebrew calendar, and is the holiest day of the year for the Jewish people, who spend the day praying united as one people; and
Whereas traditional greeting for Yom Kippur in Hebrew is "G'mar Hatima Tova", which means "may you be inscribed in the book of life" and is an offering of a healthy, safe, peaceful, and fulfilling year: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the Senate—
(1) demonstrates solidarity with, and support for, members of the Jewish community in the United States, in Israel, and throughout the world;
(2) recognizes and celebrates the many accomplishments and contributions of the Jewish community in the United States;
(3) recommit to combating all forms of anti-Semitism, which threaten Jews and non-Jews alike; and
(4) wishes the Jewish people of the United States and around the world a "Chag Sameach" ("happy holidays") in Hebrew and a sweet new year full of peace and prosperity.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HONORING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FOUNDING OF DUANE VOLUME FIRE CO. INC.

HON. ELISE M. STEFANIK
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Ms. STEFANIK. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the tremendous commitment to service and duty that the men and women of the Duane Volunteer Fire Co. Inc. have shown to their community for the last 50 years.

In September of 1970, a small group of Duane residents established the volunteer fire company as a private corporation on land that was donated in perpetuity to the Fire Department. Over the next two years, generous donations and fundraising helped the Duane Volunteer Fire Co. Inc. to become fully operational, constructing a firehouse and obtaining the necessary equipment. In 1972, the department entered into a longstanding contract with the Town of Duane to provide firematic operations, the scope of which has expanded greatly today to provide many additional services. The Duane Volunteer Fire Co. Inc. has highly trained and certified personnel up to the paramedic level that can assist in any emergency.

The Duane Volunteer Fire Co. Inc. embodies the spirit of the North Country, cultivating a strong sense of community and lending a helping hand whenever needed. These volunteers not only aid their fellow neighbors when emergencies arise, but also provide a space to bring the community together. The firehouse serves as an ad-hoc community center, used for a wide variety of purposes such as hosting town board meetings and serving as the local election site as well as the area’s food bank. The department truly is a cornerstone of the community.

On behalf of New York’s 21st District, I would like to thank the brave men and women, past and present, of the Duane Volunteer Fire Co. Inc. for their long-term commitment to safeguarding the community. I congratulate them on their hard-earned achievements thus far and know they will continue to be a pillar of support to the town for many years to come.

HONORING PEYTON THOMPSON

HON. SAM GRAVES OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. GRAVES of Missouri. Madam Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize Peyton Thompson. Peyton is a very special young man who has exemplified the finest qualities of citizenship and leadership by taking an active part in the Boy Scouts of America, Troop 1376, and earning the most prestigious award of Eagle Scout.

Peyton has been very active with his troop, participating in many scout activities. Over the many years Peyton has been involved with scouting, he has not only earned numerous merit badges, but also the respect of his family, peers, and community. Most notably, Peyton has served his troop as Assistant Senior Patrol Leader and attended the Seabase High Adventure in the Bahamas. Peyton has also contributed to his community through his Eagle Scout project. Peyton constructed two raised garden beds for Pharis Farm, an antebellum Clay County Historic Site outside of Liberty, Missouri.

Madam Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in commending Peyton Thompson for his accomplishments with the Boy Scouts of America and for his efforts put forth in achieving the highest distinction of Eagle Scout.

IN RECOGNITION OF CONSTITUTION DAY

HON. ROBERT J. WITTMAN
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. WITTMAN. Madam Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the Anniversary of Constitution Day in the United States. On September 17, 1787, our Founding Fathers met and signed the most influential document that shaped American history, the United States Constitution.

On this day every year, we celebrate Constitution Day to commemorate our Founding Fathers working together to construct our supreme law of the land. The United States Constitution’s first three words—‘‘We The People’’—affirm that the government of the United States exists to serve its citizens. Collectively, the U.S. Constitution is not only the source of all government powers, but places limitations on the government that protects the fundamental unalienable rights of U.S. Citizens.

Today we honor Constitution Day to ensure all people broaden their knowledge on how the Constitution has shaped our history and each and every one of our lives. Knowing the content of the U.S. Constitution is the key to making sure that we operate within the parameters established by our Founding Fathers. It ensures that the Constitution remains a living, breathing document and the bedrock of our democracy. Only by knowing our freedoms and rights are we able to safeguard them from attempts to dilute them. Only by knowing the boundaries of what’s permissible can we prevent threats to the more perfect union that was created over 200 years ago. All laid out for us, together today, we celebrate unity, freedom, and democracy.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, I ask that you rise with me in celebrating Constitution Day in the United States of America.

CELEBRATING REVEREND DOCTOR GREGORY M. HOWARD

HON. A. DONALD McEACHIN
OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. McEACHIN. Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor and recognize Rev. Dr. Gregory M. Howard, a pastor, academic, and author, who has dedicated his life to promoting community spirit in others.

Dr. Howard has shown dedication and passion for spreading the Gospel of Jesus Christ through his many roles as a servant leader. The Commonwealth of Virginia is indebted to him for his years of service to our academic and religious institutions, including his time as Interim Dean and Associate Professor of Homiletics and Practical Theology at the Samuel DeWitt Proctor School of Theology at Virginia Union University, and a committed, past president of the Baptist General Convention of Virginia. He has shared his experiences and deep knowledge with us through his writing, including authoring Black Sacred Rhetoric: The Gospel According to Religious Folk Talk and Voices Crying Out in the Wilderness: Theological Reflections Where Context Matters.

Dr. Howard’s leadership within the Black church has advanced the cause of social justice, and I am confident that he will continue to lead that fight for years to come. He continuously motivates us to work with humble devotion to improve the lives of those around us. I have no doubt that he will continue to inspire generations of young people to pursue a life of service through faith, community, and love.

IN HONOR OF MAJOR GENERAL KENNETH D. JONES

HON. KEVIN BRADY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. BRADY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor Major General Kenneth D. Jones for his 38 remarkable years of leadership and dedicated service in the United States Army.

General Jones was born and raised in Brazos County and now calls Iola, Texas home. In 1980, General Jones graduated from Texas A&M University, where he was a member of the Corps of Cadets’ V-1 Vipers. After graduation, General Jones chose to serve his country and was commissioned as a Second Lieutenant, Ordnance Corps. General Jones began his career as a Soldier in the 82nd Airborne Division during the Cold War, later commanding at the company, battalion, brigade, and major command levels. Throughout his career, General Jones spent over 35 months deployed overseas in Southwest Asia. His deployment includes Operations Iraqi Freedom/Iraqi Freedom/New Dawn, and Enduring Freedom/Spartan Shield.

During his time in the Army, General Jones also found time to further his education and training, earning a master’s degree from the United States War College in 2008. He served in multiple flag officer assignments across the country. After he earned the rank of Army Reserve two-star general, General Jones was promoted to Commander of the 81st Readiness Division in 2017. In this position, General Jones was responsible for ensuring his units—a group amounting to 50,000 soldiers—were fully trained throughout the Southeastern United States region.

During his career, General Jones exemplified excellence and service. He has earned multiple decorations in his career, including Legion of Merit Medals, Bronze Star Medals, and Meritorious Service Medals, to name a few. In his civilian career, General Jones worked for Hallmark Cards Inc. for 28 years as a Plant Engineering Manager before deciding to return to his roots in Texas, where he works for the family insurance business in Bryan as the Business Development and Human Capital Manager.

It is an honor to celebrate General Jones’ leadership and unwavering commitment to our great country. I am proud to join his wife Cheryl, their two daughters, and two grandchildren to thank him for a long, devoted career of service and wish him well as he begins this next chapter of life.

DEBATE ON H.R. 1668, THE IOT CYBERSECURITY IMPROVEMENT ACT

HON. ROBIN L. KELLY
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Ms. KELLY of Illinois. Madam Speaker, in regards to a technical question from some of my colleagues, H.R. 1668 will set the minimum security policies and vulnerability disclosure guidance for the procurement of government Internet of Things devices. To ensure that devices do not slip through the cracks, Section 7 of this bill includes a simplified acquisition threshold. The intent of this section is to ensure that all contracts, even those below the simplified acquisition threshold, are subject to the standards and guidelines developed under section 4 or the guidelines published under section 5.

TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH T. MCELVEEN, JR.
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. CLYBURN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a dear friend and the retiring Mayor of my hometown, Sumter, South Carolina. Joseph T. McElveen, Jr. is a dedicated public servant and an ardent advocate for Sumter. His leadership will be missed, but I know he will continue to be an active part of his beloved community.

Joe McElveen and I share the hometown of Sumter and are blessed to have had entrepreneurial parents to teach us. His father, John, owned a bicycle shop and ice cream parlor on Liberty Street across from my mother’s beauty shop. The two of them created a partnership that resulted in my brothers and me spending our summers selling his ice cream from our mothers’ push carts in our neighborhood. I am grateful that through all of these years our families developed into a lifelong friendship between us.

Joe attended public schools in Sumter and graduated from The Citadel in 1968. He was a Gold Star student and a Distinguished Air Force Reserve Cadet. Graduating college, Joe went on to attend the University of South Carolina Law School, where he served on the Editorial Board of the South Carolina Law Review and published two articles. He graduated and was admitted to the Bar in 1971.

After law school, Joe served in the U.S. Air Force as an administrative officer for the 728th Tactical Fighter Support Squadron. When his active duty service ended, he continued in reserve duty as a Staff Judge Advocate until 1977. Joe joined the Bryan Law Firm and became a partner in 1975. His legal career focused on family law and workers’ compensation.

Joe served on the House of Delegates and Board of Governors for the South Carolina Bar Association, and as a board member of the Workplace Litigation Group. He also received the Gold Compleat Lawyer Award by the South Carolina School of Law in 1996.

In addition to his success as a lawyer, Joe is also dedicated to serving his community. He has served on the Chesterfield County Drug Abuse Council and as a member of the City of Sumter Zoning Board of Adjustments and the City/County Planning Commission. He has also served as president of the Sumter Jaycees, the Sumter Optimist Club and the Greater Sumter Chamber of Commerce. He also served on the board of the Sumter Family YMCA and was recognized for his service by the March of Dimes and the Heart Association.

Joe has also held elective office. He was elected to Sumter City Council for two years, serving from 1984 to 1986. In 1986, he began representing Sumter County in the South Carolina House, where he served on the Judiciary and Rules Committee. He also served two terms as Majority Leader and left the State Legislature in 1996. In 2000, Joe ran for and was elected Mayor of our hometown.

With his retirement this year as Mayor of Sumter, Joe leaves as the longest serving Mayor in the city’s history. He also leaves a legacy of making the City of Sumter a better place because of his service, and that Sumter continues to grow and thrive. It is a better place because of his service, and that is a tremendous legacy of which he should be extremely proud.

CELEBRATING 100 YEARS OF THE NFL

HON. TIM RYAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. RYAN. Madam Speaker, I rise today with my fellow representative, Mr. Bob Gibbs, to wish the National Football League a happy 100th birthday. One hundred years ago today, 15 people met in an automobile showroom in Canton, Ohio to form what would become the National Football League. From these humble beginnings, the NFL has grown into a preeminent American sports league, comprised of 32 teams from 22 states across the country. Over its first 100 years, the NFL has become a fixture in American life. The league is an American institution that brings together individuals of all ages, races, and backgrounds through a common enthusiasm for and appreciation for the game of football. Through good times and bad, the NFL has consistently reflected the spirit of the American people, displaying resilience, optimism, and resolve through periods of war, economic distress, natural disasters, and the current pandemic. Last season, the NFL concluded the celebration of its 100th season with a thrilling Super Bowl championship that was viewed by over 100 million Americans.

Although the league celebrated its 100th season in 2019, the League’s 100th birthday is a historic day as well. Today, in an effort to commemorate this momentous occasion, my Cleveland Browns will host the Cincinnati Bengals in a classic rivalry game, known as the “Battle of Ohio”. The game will highlight the formation of the league and its humble roots in Canton, honor the more than 25,000 players who have been a part of the league, and showcase the work the NFL is doing to ensure its second century is just as successful as the first.

We, therefore, recognize the National Football League on its 100th birthday, and wish the league all the best as it embarks into its second century as the foremost steward of “America’s Game.” Go Browns!

HONORING THE LIFE AND SERVICE OF JOHN KUSMITCH

HON. JACK BERGMAN
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. BERGMAN. Madam Speaker, it is my honor to recognize the life and service of John Kusmitch of Kingsford, Michigan. Through his extreme courage and selflessness, John has become an indispensable part of the state of Michigan.

John enlisted in the United States Army in August of 1949 at just 18. During the Korean War, he served in the 25th Infantry Division as a motor transport operator, and was responsible for supervising and operating vehicles to transport personnel and cargo. The vital work of motor transport operators like John were the backbone of our military operations during this conflict—providing advanced mobility both on and off the battlefield. In April of 1951, John was captured by hostile forces and endured 27 months of harsh conditions as a Prisoner of War.

Observed annually on the third Friday of September, National POW/MIA Recognition Day honors those who were Prisoners of War and those who are still Missing in Action in service to their nation. We owe the men and women in uniform who were captured, missing, or unaccounted for a debt which can never be repaid. By coming together to honor those who stood up to defend and to serve, the people of Michigan’s First District can ensure that the service and sacrifice of those in uniform is never forgotten.

Madam Speaker, it is my honor to recognize the service of John Kusmitch. Michiganders can take immense pride in knowing that the First District is home to such a selfless individual. On behalf of my constituents, I wish John all the best in his future endeavors.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. SUSAN W. BROOKS
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mrs. BROOKS of Indiana. Madam Speaker, I was not present for the following roll call votes. Had I been present for them, I would have voted as follows:

HONORING THE BRAVE SERVICE OF CHARLES E. COOPER OF TENNESSEE

HON. MARK E. GREEN
OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. GREEN of Tennessee. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Army Private First Class Charles E. Cooper for his distinguished service to this nation.

PFC Cooper served honorably in the United States Army during World War II, beginning in 1942 at the age of 25. He was sent to Company K, 3rd Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment of the 4th Infantry Division, participating in rigorous training exercises that included amphibious assaults that would later be employed for the D-Day assault. On that fateful day, June 6, 1944, the 4th Infantry Division crossed the English Channel to the front lines of the War, assaulting a German-held beach under heavy enemy fire.
PFC Cooper’s regiment was one of the first surface-borne United States units to hit the beaches at Normandy, providing much-needed relief to the 82nd Airborne Division. The division’s advance took the Cotentin Peninsula and resulted in the capture of Cherbourg. They also supported the German Seventh Army’s march toward Avranches, ultimately leading to the liberation of the Paris.

The 4th Division later crossed into Belgium and broke through the Siegfried Line, slowly progressing through the heart of Germany. On November 6, 1944, a severe, month-long battle broke out at the fortified Hütten Forest, resulting in PFC Cooper being mortally wounded by enemy fire. He died of his wounds on November 19, 1944, at the age of 27.

PFC Cooper will forever be memorialized as an American hero. We remember him for his exemplary service and courageous spirit as he modelled for servicemembers everywhere what it means to sacrifice. As a monument of gratitude to his service, Wayne County in Tennessee has chosen to dedicate a bridge in his honor. On behalf of the United States Congress, I wish to pay tribute to this American hero who made the ultimate sacrifice in our nation’s hour of need.

RECOGNIZING USHER SYNDROME AWARENESS DAY

HON. JAMES P. McGOVERN
OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. McGOVERN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Usher syndrome and, in particular, to recognize the Usher Syndrome Coalition, a nonprofit organization based in Massachusetts that is building and connecting the global Usher syndrome community to help speed the search for a cure. This Saturday, September 19, 2020, is Usher Syndrome Awareness Day.

Usher syndrome is a rare genetic disease that affects at least 25,000 people in the United States. It causes deafness or hearing loss from birth, and retinal disease that slowly and progressively leads to blindness. Currently, there are no treatments or cure for Usher syndrome—but that can change with awareness and support. Finding a cure has never been more urgent or more achievable.

Some of the world’s most innovative researchers are leading efforts to develop treatments for Usher syndrome at institutions across the country including in my home state of Massachusetts. Scientists at Massachusetts Eye and Ear, Harvard Medical School and Boston Children’s Hospital are pursuing promising paths to treatment, including a stem cell therapy trial and gene therapy strategies to treat the vision loss and hearing loss caused by Usher syndrome.

As a nation, we need to do more to find a cure. Usher syndrome not only impacts our families but our communities, our health care system, our educational system, and our economy. For the past six years, federal spending on Usher syndrome has remained flat. This must change if there is to be any real progress toward finding a cure.

Targeted research supported by sufficient funding and serious agency attention are critical components to finding a cure. The COVID–19 pandemic and the daily challenges facing the Usher syndrome community could not be more pressing and finding a cure more paramount.

I am proud to recognize the work of the Usher Syndrome Coalition, and the commitment to finding a cure for Usher syndrome. I stand with those who suffer from Usher syndrome and hope with the dedicated efforts of the Usher Syndrome Coalition, there will soon be a cure.

COMMEMORATING THE 100TH SEASON OF THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE (NFL)

HON. BOB GIBBS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. GIBBS. Madam Speaker, I rise today, with my fellow Representative Tim Ryan (OH–13) to wish the National Football League a happy 100th birthday. IN RECOGNITION OF SOUTHERN CRESCENT WOMEN IN BUSINESS INC.

HON. DAVID SCOTT OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Ariel Shaw and Southern Crescent Women In Business Inc. Southern Crescent Women In Business Inc. is a conglomerate of women-owned businesses and women in business who are working to change the economic landscape in the Southern Crescent. This organization seeks to level the economic playing field in assisting women-owned businesses, using its platform to help strengthen and build key relationships.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor Statistics, the fastest growing market of entrepreneurs are women, and women have contributed more than $40 billion dollars in revenue over the last ten years. With this increase, Southern Crescent Women In Business Inc. work to provide the foundational support that is needed for women-owned businesses and women in business in the Southern Crescent area and beyond and will help build upon important relationships with the key stakeholders, and community and business leaders to provide access of information and funding to women-owned businesses.

Understand that the challenges that women entrepreneurs face, Southern Crescent Women In Business Inc. has developed key partnerships with the banking and finance industry to help open access to capital. This organization continues to bring influential leaders in economic development, finance, and entrepreneurship in order to strengthen communities, reach economic advancement and open opportunities for other dynamic women. Madam Speaker, please join me in recognizing Ariel Shaw and Southern Crescent Women In Business Inc. for their outstanding service in the Southern Crescent.

HONORING THE FALLEN CLEVELAND CITY POLICE OFFICERS

HON. MARCY KAPTUR
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Ms. KAPTUR. Madam Speaker, it is with terrible sadness and grief that I rise today, for in my district the Cleveland community is laying to rest two Cleveland City Police Officers, whose fates were met far too early.

Detective James Skernivitz, 53, was working an undercover drug operation when he and his informant, Scott Dingess, 50, were ambushed and killed, a tragic incident marking Detective Skernivitz as the first on-duty officer to be fatally shot in Cleveland in more than a decade. Officer Skernivitz was a devoted husband to his wife Kristen, and father to Matthew, Bayleigh and Peyton. Officer Skernivitz was a brother, a son, and a friend to many.

We are also mourning the terrible loss of Cleveland Police Officer Nick Sabo, 39, who was found dead as a result of a tragic and sudden suicide. Officer Sabo will be remembered as a devoted husband to his wife.
Brienne, beloved father to his four children Isaiah, Elijah, Camryn, and Kinsley, and treasured son, brother, friend and fellow officer. The sudden deaths of Detective Skernivitz and Officer Sabo serve as a constant reminder of the dangers and stresses put on public safety officers every single day. Both men lived and died as heroes and the Cleveland community will never forget their service and sacrifices.

My sincerest condolences and prayers are with their families, the Cleveland Police Department, and the entire Cleveland community during this difficult time.

In their memory, I will request that American flags be hoisted over the U.S. Capitol in their memorial honor and recognition as a token of our everlasting gratitude for their ultimate sacrifices to Protect and Serve.

CELEBRATING HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Ms. JOHNSON of Texas. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize and celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month. Observed from September 15th to October 15th, Hispanic Heritage Month honors those of Hispanic heritage, praises the extraordinary contributions that they have made to our society, and reaffirms our commitment to protecting their culture.

Hispanic Americans are among the fastest growing ethnic groups in the United States. For evidence, simply turn to my home state of Texas. In the 30th District alone, Hispanic Americans account for nearly 40 percent of my constituents. The inclusion of their voices and values in the community make my district, and the United States, stronger as whole.

Sadly, as a result of systemic inequalities, Hispanic Americans face a higher risk of contracting and dying from the coronavirus. Additionally, many have been forced to choose between returning to work in unsafe environments or losing their jobs—quite literally a choice of life or death.

Madam Speaker, as we celebrate Hispanic Heritage Month, let us be mindful of the pain this community has felt these past few months, and continue to push for the passage of bills—such as the HEROES Act, the DREAM Act, and Raise the Wage Act—all of which would greatly improve this community has felt these past few months, and continue to push for the passage of the United States Constitution, a document that has embraced freedom and been a shining light of democracy since its adoption in 1787.

In 1787, at a time when it was unheard of, the founding fathers set out to establish a bold, new way of life that warded against governmental tyranny and instead embraced freedom and democracy. The founders sought to replace the flawed and insipid Articles of Confederation with a new document that better encapsulated a balance between sovereignty and cohesion to guide the fledging country. The framing process itself was grueling, entailing several hour-long debates inside of a hot room in Philadelphia, during which the framers clashed over ideas of sovereignty, distribution of power, and individual liberties. Out of this grueling process eventually arose the United States Constitution, which establishes the United States government and outlines its relationship to the people, along with other rules and inalienable rights guaranteed to its citizens.

The Constitution serves as an example of American tenacity and embodies our commitment to freedom, democracy, and honor. Since its adoption in 1787, dozens of other countries have followed suit and have adopted measures to enhance freedom and democracy in their own lands. During this celebratory week, we take a moment to pay respect to this document, which has had such positive benefits for human civilization, both domestically and abroad.

I ask that all Members join me in recognizing Constitution Week.

TRIBUTE TO SENATOR JOHN W. MATTHEWS, JR.

HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. CLYBURN. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a dear friend and a true public servant. Senator John Wesley Matthews, Jr. is retiring after 46 years of service in the South Carolina State Legislature. He is renowned for his commitment to education and job creation especially in Berkeley, Colleton, Dorchester and Orangeburg counties, which he proudly serves. His leadership and tireless dedication will truly be missed.

John, a son of South Carolina, was born to Reverend John Wesley, Sr. and Victoria Williams Matthews. He is a graduate of South Carolina State College (now University), Orangeburg-Calhoun Technical College, and Lincoln Electrical Institute.

John began his career as a public-school teacher and rose to become a school principal. He was also a small business owner. These experiences led him to seek elective office and he ran for the South Carolina State House. He served as a State Representative from 1975 to 1984, when he ran for the State Senate. He has held the Senate District No. 39 seat since 1985.

While in the Senate, John served as a member of the Senate Education, Finance, Banking & Insurance Committee, the Agriculture & Natural Resources Committee, and the Ethics and Interstate Cooperation Committee. He currently serves as the Assistant Minority Leader in the State Senate and as Chairman of the Orangeburg County Legislative Delegation. He has previously served as Chairman of the South Carolina Legislative Black Caucus and as a member of the South Carolina Regional Education Board, the Internal Operations Oversight Committee, a member of the 2016 Democratic National Platform Committee and a member of the Governor’s Middle Grades Task Force.

In 2004, I was proud to be on hand, when the Orangeburg County Council renamed U.S. Highways 301 and 176 the John W. Matthews Industrial Park. Our alma mater, South Carolina State also honored John in 2006 with the naming of the John W. Matthews Jr. 1890 Extension Building. Last year, the South Carolina Senate unveiled a portrait of their colleague, currently the longest serving South Carolina State legislator. The portrait hangs in the Chamber. These honors are richly deserved and represent the impact that John has had on his native state.

In addition to his service in the General Assembly, John has served his community in many other capacities. He has served as a member of the South Carolina Education Association, the Orangeburg County Education Association, the Clemson University Board of Visitors, the Medical University of South Carolina Board of Trustees, the Winthrop Board of Visitors, the Human Affairs Commission Board of Trustees, the Voorhees College Board of Trustees, and the Claflin University Capital Campaign Steering Committee.

John has received numerous awards over the years including induction into the South Carolina Black Hall of Fame and being named Minority Business Advocate of the Year by the U.S. Small Business Administration and South Carolina Primary Health Care Legislative of the Year. He is also a recipient of the South Carolina Independent Colleges & Universities Legislative Champion Award, the Wilkins Legislative Leadership Award, the Ernest Finney Chairmen’s Award, the Orangeburg Chapter of the National Legislative Exceptional Service Award, the Congressman Clyburn and Congresswoman John Spratt Public Service Award, the SC Alliance for Mobile Infrastructure Electrification of the Year Award and the National Trends and Services Award of the Orangeburg Chapter of the Links, Inc.

He has received honorary doctorates from South Carolina State University, the College of Charleston and the Medical University of South Carolina.

John was married to the late Geraldine Hillard Matthews, and the couple had five children. He attends Pineville United Methodist Church and is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity.

Madam Speaker, I ask that you and our colleagues join me in celebrating the tremendous service John W. Matthews has provided to the State of South Carolina. He embodies the true definition of a servant leader, and his longevity in the South Carolina General Assembly has left a lasting mark on the State and its citizens. We are all better for his service, and I know he will continue to serve his community for years to come.
CONSTITUTION DAY

HON. JOE WILSON OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Madam Speaker, today is the 233rd anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution by our Founding Fathers in Independence Hall in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The seven articles of the Constitution give clarity to our three branches of government: the executive, legislative, and judicial branches, and explains the separating of duties for each.

As an attorney, a retired member of the United States Armed Forces, a Member of Congress, and a member of the House Armed Services Committee, I appreciate the Constitution each day and hold fast to how the Founding Fathers envisioned limited government to provide for expanded freedom. I encourage all Americans to read and discuss the U.S. Constitution today with family, friends, coworkers, and others in honor and celebration of Constitution Day.

In conclusion, God Bless our Troops, and we will never forget September 11th in the Global War on Terrorism.

RECOGNIZING DALE BRIGHT'S DISTINGUISHED SERVICE TO LABORERS 242

HON. ADAM SMITH OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Madam Speaker, it is my privilege to rise to recognize Dale Bright on his many years of service as a laborer and then as the Political Director of Laborers Local Union 242 and congratulate him on his retirement.

My staff and I were lucky to have the privilege of working with Dale on labor rights for several years. Dale has always been a champion of workers' rights and through his advocacy he has been able to improve the lives of countless workers in Washington. Dale has fought relentlessly to ensure everyone has access to a fair and equal workplace including living wages, good benefits, and more. He was instrumental in implementing Community Workforce Agreements and apprenticeship utilization throughout the region. This work has had a profound impact on historically marginalized communities. These programs have proved to be incredibly successful and helped many people start union careers. Dale continually demonstrated time and again that he is a community builder and passionate leader. Dale encouraged and helped facilitate civic engagement and voter registration among members of the Laborers Local Union 242. His leadership, knowledge, and personal efforts greatly contributed to one of the strongest labor unions in the country. The thoughtfulness, work ethic, and enthusiasm Dale brought to the Laborers as Political Director will be deeply missed by all.

Dale Bright for his dedication to the Laborers 242 where he never stopped working to advance the rights of workers, and I wish him a happy retirement.

HONORING DR. HELEN LEVINE

HON. CHARLIE CRIST OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. CRIST of Florida. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Helen Levine, the Regional Vice Chancellor for External Affairs at the University of South Florida St. Petersburg (USFSP), for her 14 years of service to the USF system and for being a remarkable and powerful force for good in the community.

During a tenure that spanned multiple campus administrations, Dr. Levine used her position to fight for the advancement of higher education. From her work championing the construction of the historic Kate Tiedemann College of Business to her advocacy on behalf of the internationally recognized La Florida Project, which tells the story of Spanish Florida, Dr. Levine has changed many lives for the better. She is someone who has long lived up to the ideals of bipartisanship and civility, working across the aisle with city councils, the state legislature, and Congress to secure funds for research, scholarship, and a more equitable University of South Florida St. Petersburg.

Madam Speaker, to speak for just one minute on the full legacy of Dr. Levine is impossible. She is a groundbreaking leader, a champion for education, and a role model for all who seek to improve the lives of others in their community. As she retires from her senior position at USFSP, it is my privilege to wish her the best in all her future endeavors both personally and as a valued member of our community.

HONORING JUDGE LISA BLOCH RODWIN FOR HER DEDICATED SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. HIGGINS of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Erie County Family Court Judge Lisa Bloch Rodwin as she retires from the bench after over thirty years of public service. Throughout her career as a judge, and previously as a prosecutor, Judge Bloch Rodwin's dedication and ingenuity helped secure the promise of equal justice before the law more fully for victims of domestic violence and others to whom it had previously too often been denied.

As an assistant district attorney, Judge Bloch Rodwin was the founder of one of the first domestic violence bureaus in a prosecutor's office nationally. Her work helped change the culture of the criminal justice system in Western New York; in important ways Judge Bloch Rodwin's efforts led the re-shaping of that system to more comprehensively address the scourge of domestic violence and related crimes with the vigor and the tenacity that justice requires.

After her appointment to the bench in 2007, and subsequent re-elections, Judge Bloch Rodwin continued this important work, developing and expanding programs to aid victims of domestic abuse and other crimes in under-served communities. She was the founding board chair of the Erie County Family Justice Center, as well as a founder of the Alexa Foundation, which serves child abuse and sexual assault survivors. We in Western New York have not been the only beneficiaries of Judge Bloch Rodwin's work; she has been generous in providing the benefit of her widely sought-after expertise nation-wide to professionals in the criminal justice system, to national media outlets and to academics. It is appropriate that as a result of her work, Judge Bloch Rodwin has been the recipient of numerous national, regional and local awards and honors.

I ask my honorable colleagues to join me in thanking Judge Bloch Rodwin for her exemplary and courageous efforts, and in recognizing her extraordinary career and accomplishments. In specific, tangible ways, Western New York and the United States have become more just because of the Judge's good work, and we are all in her debt.

HONORING REVEREND LONNIE AND ELISHA MITCHELL

HON. CATHY McMORRIS RODGERS OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mrs. RODGERS of Washington. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the lifelong service of Reverend Lonnie and Elisha Mitchell. As the Pastor and First Lady of Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, Reverend Mitchell and his wife Elisha have faithfully and selflessly guided the Spokane community for nearly thirty years.

Reverend Mitchell is retiring to empower a new generation of leaders to continue his work and take the church to its next level. He leaves a remarkable legacy, and I'm grateful for the time we have spent together building unity in Spokane. His wisdom and perspective were always valued and trusted in many courageous conversations we have had. He is someone who has long lived up to the ideals of bipartisanship and civility, working across the aisle with city councils, the state legislature, and Congress to secure funds for research, scholarship, and a more equitable University of South Florida St. Petersburg.

Madam Speaker, Lonnie became a pastor in 1989 following his military service in the United States Army. In 1991, he was assigned to Bethel A.M.E. by Bishop Vinton R Anderson. Under Reverend Mitchell's leadership, Bethel A.M.E. grew from 13 members to more than 200. While Lonnie served from the pulpit, Elisha served from the choir as a gospel singer. She ministered to many through her music and talent. During their time at Bethel A.M.E., Lonnie and Elisha have focused on a mission to love people—a mission as relevant today as it was in 1991.

Reverend Mitchell and his wife Elisha have been long-term leaders in our community, helping found multiple nonprofits. In 1994, Lonnie and Elisha created Unity in the Community, an event to showcase Spokane’s diversity and unite our community around respect, trust, and collaboration. In 1995, they founded the AHANA Business and Professional Organization, a nonprofit that supported minority and women-owned businesses in Spokane. Additionally, in the early 2000s, Reverend Mitchell and Elisha were key fundraisers for the Emmanuel Family Life Center, a community center in the Perry District.
In 1982, Lonnie joined me on a Civil Rights pilgrimage to Alabama with the late Congressman John Lewis. On that pilgrimage, we walked the steps of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King as fellow Americans on a journey together for a more perfect union. In 2017, Lonnie also joined me in Washington, D.C., and I opened the House of Representatives in prayer. I will forever be grateful for the lessons I have learned from Reverend Mitchell. He has made a difference in my life and so many others.

Madam Speaker, I join the Bethel A.M.E. congregation and the Greater Spokane community in wishing Lonnie and Elisha Mitchell the best in their future endeavors. They are, and will continue to be, important leaders in our community and an example to us all. Their dedication and sacrifice have made them powerful role models we will greatly miss; though we know they’re never far away.

On behalf of the People’s House, I ask for everyone to join me in honoring Reverend Lonnie and Elisha Mitchell’s service, which I know will inspire generations to come.

IN HONOR OF CHIEF EDWARD K. WAGNER

HON. CHRIS PAPPAS
OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. PAPPAS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor Chief Ed Wagner, who is retiring after 25 years of service to the citizens of New Hampshire. Chief Wagner served in the United States Marine Corps before joining the Conway Police Department in 1995. Throughout his distinguished career, Chief Wagner has served as a patrolman, detective, sergeant, lieutenant, and, most recently, as the Chief of Police since 2005.

Chief Wagner, a down-to-earth and supportive leader, has dedicated his career with the Conway Police Department to protecting and serving Conway’s citizens and visitors. In retirement, Chief Wagner will be staying in Conway where he will spend quality time with his family, including his first granddaughter, EdynRose.

Chief Wagner served in numerous roles at the Conway Police Department over the years, but his commitment to community service helped him adapt to the ever-changing environment. He approached his work with the utmost professionalism, integrity, and courage. His embodiment of these values served as a model to other officers and will continue to be a guiding principle in the Conway Police Department for decades to come.

On behalf of my constituents in New Hampshire’s First Congressional District, I want to thank Chief Wagner and his family for their decades of dedication to our community. I congratulate him on his accomplished law enforcement career, and I wish him all the best in his well-deserved retirement.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. BRADLEY SCOTT SCHNEIDER
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Madam Speaker, I rise today regarding votes I missed on September 14, resulting from a family emergency, and September 15, 2020, due to a historic signing ceremony at the White House of two agreements decades in the making.

Had I been present for Roll Call Votes 183, H.R. 4894, the Congressional Budget Justification Act and 184, 2191, the CHARGE Act, I would have voted yea. These bills have my full support, and I hope they are swiftly signed into law.

Additionally, had I been present for Roll Call Votes 185 and 186, on ordering the previous question and agreeing to H. Res. 1107, reprogramming the Children’s Hospital Act, I would have also voted yea. The bills brought to the House floor by this rule are long overdue for consideration. In particular, H.R. 2694, the Pregnant Workers Fairness Act, of which I am a cosponsor, is vitally important legislation. No woman should ever be forced to choose between a healthy pregnancy and her career, but for too long, that has been the reality for many women. Despite existing laws, many workers still face pregnancy discrimination, including job loss, hiring discrimination, or an unsafe work environment. The Pregnant Workers Fairness Act establishes clear, reasonable accommodations for pregnant employees, and further ensures that pregnant employees cannot be retaliated against, denied employment opportunities, or be forced to take paid or unpaid leave due to their pregnancy. I look forward to supporting this legislation, as well as others brought forward by this rule.

HONORING THE LIFE AND SERVICE OF JOHN MODDIE

OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. BERGMAN. Madam Speaker, it is my honor to recognize the life and service of John Moddie of Iron Mountain, Michigan. Through his extreme courage and selflessness, John has become an indispensable part of the state of Michigan.

John enlisted in the United States Army in 1942 directly following his graduation from Niagara High School. After completing training at Fort Sheridan, Camp Roberts, and Camp Atterbury, John was shipped overseas to Germany. He fought for three months as a part of a field artillery unit, where he and his fellow men in uniform fought to repel the last German offensive of WWII during the Battle of the Bulge. John received a shrapnel wound and was captured on December 19, 1944. His time imprisoned as a POW would expose him to the horrific and inhumane treatment by the Nazis—facing severe hunger and the near constant fear of death. John and his fellow POWs would eventually be freed as Allied forces advanced through the region. Upon return home, John married his wife, Betty, built their home in Quinnesec, MI, and started their family.

Observed annually on the third Friday of September, National POW/MIA Recognition Day honors those who were Prisoners of War and those who were still missing in action in service to their nation. We owe these men and women in uniform who were captured, missing, or unaccounted for a debt which can never be repaid. By coming together to honor those who stood up to defend and to serve, the people of Michigan’s First District can ensure that the service and sacrifice of those in uniform is never forgotten.

Madam Speaker, it is my honor to recognize the service of John Moddie. Michiganders can take immense pride in knowing that the First District is home to such a selfless individual. On behalf of my constituents, I wish John all the best in his future endeavors.

HONORING DANIEL L. “‘DAN’ GROSS

HON. SUSAN A. DAVIS OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Madam Speaker, I and the other members of the San Diego Congressional delegation, rise with admiration and respect to honor and recognize the tremendous legacy of Daniel L. “Dan” Gross, who retired from Sharp HealthCare as Executive Vice President of Hospital Operations on April 3, 2020.

Born in Independence, Kansas, Dan’s early childhood experiences created the blueprint for his education, career, and philanthropic contributions. He experienced hospitals as a place for healing when serious medical issues meant repeated hospitalization for his mother. He was also very interested in science. His comparison of the hearts of five animals “off the farm” led to first place in the science fair when he was in 4th grade.

Like many San Diegans, in 1979 Dan came to visit but decided to stay. Planning further education, he was attracted by California’s outstanding higher education system—which at that time was also affordable. He interviewed at all the San Diego hospitals but chose Sharp Memorial Hospital because of its commitment to professionalism.

While working his way up the clinical ladder at Sharp, Dan realized his graduate education goals earned a Masters in Nursing Administration from San Diego State University and his Doctorate in Nursing Sciences from the University of San Diego.

The first in his family to attend college; Dan knows the importance of nurturing the next generation of health care providers. He has advised on curriculum at San Diego’s charter Health Sciences High and Middle College (HSHMC), and created internships at all Sharp hospitals for HSHMC students.

Dan’s childhood experience on a farm also had a role in leading him to Sharp, where he was able to contribute edge research in cardiac services, including Jarvik Hearts, transplants, and left ventricular assist devices. Dan’s graduate education ensured that nurses played critical roles during exciting times in clinical innovation. Patients throughout the country have also benefited, as he has raised over $3 million for the American Heart/Stroke Association, consistently turning out the largest team for the annual fundraising walk for research and education.

Dan has worked at Sharp for over four decades, moving from clinical care to overseeing operations for four acute-care hospitals, three specialty hospitals including Sharp Mary Birch Hospital for Women & Newborns, the largest freestanding women’s hospital west of the Mississippi, and Sharp Mesa Vista Hospital, the largest private inpatient psychiatric hospital in California.

Not content with just ensuring a range of health care services that span cradle to hospice, Dan has led efforts to improve health care policy, quality, and affordability through leadership roles with both the California Hospital and the American Hospital associations. He has advised federal, state and local elected officials, federal and state agencies, and business and civic organizations.

In retirement, Dan could not step away from Sharp during a major public health crisis such as COVID–19, therefore he has continued to lend his expertise and steady leadership. Dan continues to be involved as an active board member for the California Health Care Foundation, an independent, nonprofit philanthropy that focuses on improving the health care system for families in California.

Dan has been a champion for access to high quality health care in San Diego, California and the nation. He has worked tirelessly to expand San Diego’s health care infrastructure, provide opportunities for the next generation of health care providers, promote excellence in nursing, and support science education, research and advances in the treatment of chronic diseases. Madam Speaker, we ask that you please join us in recognizing Daniel L. Gross.

HONORING THE FAITHFUL SERVICE OF MARINE CORPS SERGEANT DAVID H. BROWN OF TENNESSEE

HON. MARK E. GREEN OF TENNESSEE IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES September 17, 2020

Mr. GREEN of Tennessee. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Marine Corps Sergeant David H. Brown for his distinguished service to this nation.

Sergeant Brown joined the Marine Corps in 1963 at the age of 17, and in 1966, he was sent to Vietnam as a Platoon Sergeant with Lima Company, 3rd Battalion, 26th Marines, 3rd Marine Division. His unit participated in multiple operations to prevent the North Vietnamese from assaulting South Vietnam across the DMZ. As a result of these operations, Sergeant Brown was wounded several times and awarded the Purple Heart.

Sergeant Brown’s indomitable spirit and dedication to his fellow Marines led him to stay and fight with his brothers, rather than leaving Vietnam. On September 8, 1967, Lima Company came under heavy fire that killed one marine and wounded 28 others. With Sergeant Brown’s leadership, they resisted the attack and were able to establish a command post.

On September 10, Sergeant Brown’s platoon once again took heavy fire from the NVA. Without hesitation, Sergeant Brown established a defensive position and repulsed the enemy attack by charging them with grenades that momentarily disrupted the onslaught, and after running out of grenades, he used a wounded marine’s M–79 grenade launcher to prevent further enemy assault while simultaneously killing several NVA members. He then dragged the wounded to safety and rallied his men to the fight, until he was struck and killed by enemy fire.

Even on the day that Sergeant Brown was supposed to be on a flight home, he chose to fight and die alongside his brothers. As a monument of gratitude to exemplary service and courageous spirit, Wayne County in Tennessee has chosen to dedicate a bridge in his honor. On behalf of the United States Congress, I wish to commend Sergeant Brown for his heroic service and to thank him and his family for making the ultimate sacrifice for freedom.

CLARIFYING POSITION ON H. RES. 908

HON. DANIEL WEBSTER OF FLORIDA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Thursday, September 17, 2020

Mr. WEBSTER of Florida. Madam Speaker, regretfully, when the electronic vote was taken on H. Res. 908, I was recorded incorrectly. I oppose all forms of discrimination against any American on the sole basis of race, color, national origin, religion, age or sex. I oppose this politically-motivated and flawed resolution and intended to vote NO. Furthermore, I have and will continue to speak openly about The Chinese Communist Party, their hatred of American ideals and liberty and their attacks on our county.”
