

his paintings. Those passenger pigeons, once numerous and now extinct, are soaring through the air in a thick flock, warning us all of the fragility of nature.

I will always feel John's presence personally when I am in the woods of Southern Ohio, where I had the privilege of spending many hours with him hunting for edible wild mushrooms, hunting turkeys, and learning from an accomplished naturalist who had stories about every single tree, flower, and bird. It was a joy to learn from John. It wasn't a lecture; like every good teacher, John drew you in.

John was called a modern-day James Audubon, and there were striking similarities between the two. Both were naturalists, good hunters, artists, and authors whose work was influential in teaching us about the natural world. Like Audubon, John was rightly recognized as one of the most important ambassadors for nature of his time.

Starting with his delivery of a hummingbird to the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History at age 10, his name is on specimens he collected around the world and donated to museums. Four Presidents commissioned painters from John Ruthven, and his artwork is hung in the galleries of the Smithsonian and right here in the Halls of Congress.

Early in his career, John had the great honor of being selected as the artist for the annual Federal duck stamp. He has been featured in many major magazines and documentaries. He received numerous awards and honors, including from some of his favorite organizations like the Cincinnati Zoo, the Cincinnati Nature Center, the Museum Center, and so many others.

One accolade John was most proud of was when he and his wife Judy were inducted into the Brown County Hall of Fame. Judy and John had a beautiful farm and an art gallery in Brown County, 50 miles east of Cincinnati. They developed lifelong friendships there and dedicated time and energy to their adopted home, leading to the restoration of the historic courthouse in Georgetown, OH, and preserving and promoting the boyhood home of Ulysses S. Grant, one of John's heroes.

In 2004, I was with John and President George W. Bush at the White House when he became the first wildlife artist ever to receive the National Medal of the Arts, the highest honor that can be bestowed upon an artist.

Until his death, John continued to paint every day at his home studio. He still had a number of commissions he was working on. For countless young artists and lovers of nature, he was and will continue to be a true inspiration.

As we mourn our loss, we take heart in knowing that we will all continue to feel his presence, that John Ruthven will live on through his masterful artwork, his loving family, and all he did to advance the cause of appreciating and protecting the natural world.

I yield the floor.
