

Aaron Solem is a staff attorney at the National Right to Work Legal Defense Foundation, where he represents both private and public sector employees in state and federal courts, as well as before administrative agencies.

Aaron earned his law degree with honors from the University of Notre Dame Law School and currently resides in Bethesda, Maryland.