

Sign Up

Donate Now →

Home / Blog / Immigrants Do Not Commit More Crimes in the US, Despite Fearmongering

Immigrants Do Not Commit More Crimes in the US, Despite Fearmongering

● Donate

Published: October 17, 2024

Author: Hannah Boyke and Yared Avalos Iniguez

Topics: Demographics, Immigration 101, Immigration and Crime

Share:

Sign UpDonate Now →

The American Immigration Council is a non-profit, non-partisan organization. Sign up to receive our latest analysis as soon as it's published.

---

Across the globe, immigrants are increasingly being blamed for committing crimes, with right-wing groups often leading the charge. In the United States, this rhetoric has intensified as politicians aim to demonize immigrants during the election season. However, a wealth of research has discredited this myth, demonstrating that higher shares of immigrants are not correlated with higher crime rates and that immigrants are not more likely to commit crimes than the U.S.-born.

As Immigration Has Risen, Crime Has Fallen

Immigration increased, the crime rate declined, according to the American Immigration Council's analysis of demographics and crime data. Between 1980 and

Sign UpDonate Now →

The same pattern holds true for data from recent years. Between 2017 and 2022, the immigrant population grew by 1.7 million people, with its share of the total population increasing from 13.7% to 13.8%. Meanwhile, the national total crime rate dropped from 2,758 per 100,000 people to 2,335 per 100,000 people, a 15.3% decrease.

Furthermore, in support of the research that immigrants do not raise crime rates is the data showing that immigrants are less likely to be incarcerated than U.S.-born individuals and have lower rates of felony arrests than the U.S.-born.

**A recent study** led by Stanford economist Ran Abramitsky found that immigrants have consistently had lower incarceration rates compared to U.S.-born individuals—a trend that has held true for 150 years.

Furthermore, immigrants—including undocumented immigrants—have lower rates of felony arrests than U.S.-born individuals. According to **a multi-year study of crime statistics** published by the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, undocumented immigrants are roughly half as likely to be arrested for violent and property crimes than the U.S.-born.

Using national data, **an economist from the University of California Riverside** found that undocumented immigrants are 33% less likely to be incarcerated than U.S.-born individuals.

Immigrants Do Not Increase Crime Rates

Research has made clear that the growth of the immigrant population in the United States is not correlated with higher crime rates. Instead, growing immigrant and property crime rates decreased as cities' immigrant concentrations grew. These findings hold up when examining specific groups of immigrants, including undocumented immigrants and Latino immigrants.

Sign UpDonate Now →

Sanctuary Policies Do Not Lead to More Crime

Another widespread myth is that sanctuary policies result in higher crime rates. While there is no universal definition of a sanctuary policy, they generally limit local law enforcement's cooperation with federal immigration enforcement authorities. Opponents argue that these policies protect criminals and compromise public safety. However, the evidence proves otherwise.

Sanctuary cities in the U.S. do not experience higher crime rates than non-sanctuary cities. A 2017 study by the Center for American Progress found that there are, on average, 35.5 fewer crimes committed per 10,000 people in counties that do not honor Immigration and Customs Enforcement's requests for a "detainer" compared to counties that honor them. ICE uses a detainer to request that local law enforcement hold a potentially deportable person in custody for up to 48 hours after their scheduled release date.

Numerous studies have confirmed that so-called "sanctuary policies," like limiting compliance with a detainer, are correlated with lower crime rates at the city and county levels. New York City, a sanctuary city since 2016, has experienced substantial growth in its immigrant population which has been accompanied by declining crime rates.

Sign UpDonate Now →

Researchers at Colorado State University estimated that the reductions in violent crime stemming from sanctuary policies can save county governments a total of $101 million annually, while honoring ICE detainers costs counties almost $3.3 billion annually. Importantly, limiting cooperation with federal immigration authorities often allows local law enforcement to build relationships and trust with immigrant communities – which can lead to more effective policing and safer communities overall?

The Bottom Line

The myths that immigrants increase crime and that sanctuary policies lead to lawlessness are not well supported, and on the contrary, research shows that immigrants, particularly first-generation immigrants, are less likely to commit crimes than U.S.-born citizens. Policies that protect immigrants do not result in higher crime rates but instead contribute to safer, more trusting communities for all residents.

Sanctuary CitiesUndocumented Immigration

Related Resources

Sign UpDonate Now →

Capture of Maduro Proves Trump Has Used Venezuelans as Political Pawns in Immigration Policy

Immigration 101 / January 9, 2026

With the capture and prosecution of Venezuela's President Nicolas Maduro, the United States' convoluted—and often...

Read More →

Whistleblower Report Reveals USCIS Is Circumventing Court Order on Immigrants' Access to their Records

Abuses / December 19, 2025

A whistleblower report published today in Government Executive shows how U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services...

Read More →

Sign UpDonate Now →

A Holiday Guide: Debunking 5 Myths about Immigration in the U.S.

Bridge Building / November 25, 2025

As families gather around the dinner table during the holidays, political debates are bound to...

Read More →

Load More

Map The Impact

Explore immigration data where you live

Explore Our Map →

Sign Up

Donate Now →

100+

datapoints about immigrants and their contributions

Give Today

Defend Immigrant Rights, Defend Democracy

Sign Up

Donate Now →

Sign Up

Donate Now →

email@email.com

Submit →

📞 202-507-7500

2001 L Street N.W., Suite 500
Washington, DC 20036

About Us

Tools & Resources

Our Impact

Building Connection

J-1 Cultural Exchange

Immigration Justice Campaign

Reports & Fact Sheets

Newsroom

Events

Sign Up

Donate Now →

American Immigration Council is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization. EIN number 52-1549711.

Privacy Policy

2026 © Copyright American Immigration Council. All rights reserved.