

should be determined by the Vietnamese people in an honorably supervised election.

Refusing to negotiate with the rebel front would have its parallel if King George III had expressed a willingness to negotiate with France while refusing to talk with George Washington and his rebel forces.

The most realistic way to achieve a settlement between Saigon and the local rebel forces, is for the outside powers to begin reducing their involvement on a reciprocal basis so that the struggle can be confined to a local rather than a global struggle.

President Johnson took a long stride toward localizing the war when he stopped the bombing of North Vietnam. Let us hope that our commanders will not be so foolish as to extend the bombing to Cambodia or other countries. I believe that the Russians and the Chinese, while giving some assistance to Hanoi, have limited their interference in the struggle because, no matter how beligerently they talk, they know it is no more in their interest than in ours to blow this local issue into a global war. The major powers ought to search for every possible way of confining the struggle to South Vietnam. There is no issue there that can possibly be of enough importance to justify a major war between the great powers.

Indeed, for the United States and the other major powers to waste their resources and their young men in a global slaughter over who is to be in charge in Saigon would be to create the conditions of chaos out of which could come a hundred Vietnam tragedies to curse our children for all their days.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

READING OF WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

The VICE PRESIDENT. Pursuant to the order of the Senate of January 24, 1901, the Chair appoints the Senator from Montana [Mr. METCALF] to read Washington's Farewell Address on February 22 next. It is the understanding of the Chair that the Senator from Montana [Mr. METCALF] will be the only man who has read this famous address in both the House and the Senate.

PARLIAMENTARY CONFERENCE WITH MEXICO

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair announces the appointment of the following Senators to attend the Mexico-United States Interparliamentary meetings to be held February 9 through 16, 1966, at Washington, Philadelphia, and San Francisco: Senators MANSFIELD, GRUENING, METCALF, NELSON, MONTOYA, KUCHEL, FANNIN, and MURPHY.

These Senators will serve along with Senator SPARKMAN, who is the chairman of the delegation, and Senators MORSE, GORE, and AIKEN. The last four mentioned Senators will serve for the full Congress.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I move, in accordance with the previous order, that the Senate adjourn until 12 o'clock noon, on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes) the Senate adjourned, under the previous order, until Monday, January 24, 1966, at 12 o'clock meridian.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

William Gorham, of the District of Columbia, to be an Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, to which office he was appointed during the last recess of the Senate.

U.S. TARIFF COMMISSION

Paul Kaplowitz, of the District of Columbia, to be a member of the U.S. Tariff Commission for the term expiring June 16, 1967.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1966

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D.D., used this verse of Scripture: Thy hands have made me and fashioned me; give me understanding that I may learn Thy commandments.

Eternal God, who art the help and hope in the thought and work of our days, be Thou our joy and consolation as we bring to Thee the nameless needs of our minds and hearts.

Keep us strong and steadfast as we bow in weakness, in sorrow, in temptation, in depression of soul and open to us the word of truth and break to us the bread of life.

Grant that in following Thee we may find the highest wisdom, the deepest delight, the sum of the duty and discipline of life, the ideal of its dedication, however complete and compelling its demands may be.

May the witness and testimony which we give to life be one of lofty faith, heroic character, and fruitful service and all for Thy glory in Christ's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Arrington, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H.J. Res. 767. Joint resolution authorizing the President to proclaim National Ski Week.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 30. An act to provide for participation of the United States in the Inter-American Cultural and Trade Center in Dade County, Fla., and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1446. An act to reserve certain public lands for a National Wild Rivers System, to provide a procedure for adding additional public lands and other lands to the system, and for other purposes.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. CORMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. CORMAN. Mr. Speaker, there is a clear and pressing need for an amendment to the Constitution extending the terms of Members of the House of Representatives from 2 to 4 years.

It is true that the original purpose of limiting the term of Representatives to 2 years was to keep them close to the people and assure responsiveness to the people's will. It was felt that if a Representative failed to measure up to what was expected of him, 2 years in office were enough.

The 2-year limitation, however, cuts both ways, and on balance I think that today it does far more harm than good.

As we all know from our own experience, it takes time for the House to be reorganized at the beginning of a session. It takes time for even a highly qualified freshman Member to learn the ropes if he is to contribute to the work of Congress and the needs of his constituents. Yet, whether he is new or a veteran, every Congressman must immediately begin giving extended thought and time to his next campaign. And he must be prepared to spend a considerable amount of time at home, even during a legislative session.

Such conditions are scarcely conducive for a Member to do his best work on matters before the Congress.

When the Nation was founded, economic and social conditions were relatively uncomplicated. Today, legislation requires careful study and a high degree of skill in drafting legislation, writing reports, and conducting hearings. In an age marked by continuing crisis, 2 years is barely time enough to learn the job. The time has come to extend the term of Representatives to 4 years.

It is my opinion, also, that, if any elections are to be eliminated, it should be the off-year elections. The election of a President and the Members of the House for a concurrent term of 4 years, as President Johnson proposes, will help to insure that the mandate of the people is carried out by the new administration.

I urge the adoption of this amendment in the form suggested by the President.

AIRLIFT OF MAIL FOR U.S. PERSONNEL OVERSEAS

Mr. DULSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. DULSKI. Mr. Speaker, several members of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee visited the European area during November and December last year, and one of the main purposes of our visit was to obtain on-site information concerning the operation of the U.S. Armed Forces postal service. The delegation was unanimous in its belief that legislative action should be scheduled immediately on legislation authorizing the airlift of priority mail to U.S. personnel stationed overseas.

I have today introduced legislation to carry out this recommendation. I will press for immediate consideration of this legislation before our committee.

The primary purpose of this legislation is to provide transportation by air of certain types of mail between the United States and Armed Forces post offices overseas.

The first section amends section 4169 (a) of title 39, United States Code, to remove the requirement that mail from a serviceman in a combat area, which is sent at no cost to the sender, be sent as "airmail." Airmail classification requires a higher rate of transportation than would be required under the proposed new authorization to transport all letter mail by air. This change would remove the requirement that the mail be transported by air inside the continental United States.

Section 2 rewrites paragraph (5) of 39 U.S.C. 4303(d), to provide new authority for transportation by air between the United States and the overseas military post offices when the mail is classified as: First, first-class letter mail; second, second-class publications having current news value; and third, fourth-class parcels not exceeding 5 pounds in weight and 60 inches in length and girth combined.

This legislation applies to any individual, military or civilian, receiving or sending mail at an Armed Forces post office overseas. The regular rate of postage for surface transportation will be required in all cases.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. WHITENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITENER. Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, when our Founding Fathers wrote our Constitution, they provided that Members of the House of Representatives would be elected directly by the people. In article I, section 3, of the Constitution they provided that the Members of the U.S. Senate would be elected by the legislatures of the several States, the theory being that the Senators would be the representatives of the States and that the Representatives would be the direct representatives of the people. In 1912 the 17th amendment to the Constitution was adopted, which destroyed the theory and philosophy of our Founding Fathers by providing that the U.S. Senators would be elected by direct vote of the people.

So, with this change of philosophy, it seems to me that the recommendation of the President that the House and the Senate submit to the States a constitutional amendment providing for 4-year terms for Members of the House of Representatives is long overdue. I support a constitutional amendment, therefore, fixing the term of the Members of the House of Representatives at 4 years. This amendment is long overdue. The fact that it is overdue is well indicated by the results of the polls which have been taken throughout the Nation by responsible poll-taking organizations. So, as we receive this recommendation from the President, I think that we should all consider it seriously. In my considered judgment the increase of the term of Members of the House of Representatives to 4 years would have the effect of meeting the public will. It would have the effect of increasing the efficiency of Congress and, as the President well said, would no doubt attract many to seek this high position who do not find themselves willing to do so because of the inconvenience and the expense of the regular 2-year campaigns.

Mr. Speaker, I am not one who is inclined toward changing our Constitution as readily as some of my friends may be. But in this case I believe it would meet the best interests of our society and our Nation. It would make the House of Representatives a more effective body in its service to the people.

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK BILL INTRODUCED

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter on the Asian Bank bill introduced today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced the Asian Development Bank Act. On Tuesday of this week the President of the United States sent up a message on this most vital piece of legislation. It is vital that the United States participate in this endeavor, as we have participated in the creation and active support of such similar institutions as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the Inter-American Development Bank. The creation of the Asian Development Bank can probably do more to create peace and promote rapid economic development in Asia than any other single action.

Recently, members of your House Banking and Currency Committee had the privilege and honor, at the request of the President of the United States, to participate in the signing of the charter of the Asian Development Bank at Manila. Prior to this time your House Banking and Currency Committee had been advised and consulted with by those in the administration charged with the responsibility of exploring the structure and functioning of this proposed bank and the determination as to whether or not the United States would participate.

The structure of this proposed institution resembles both the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, with which we are all familiar. These two institutions have done much to assist the developing nations achieve high levels of economic productivity. In addition, these institutions have done much to promote free democratic institutions in the developing nations. It is certainly anticipated that the same will be true of the Asian Development Bank.

I shall not at this time discuss all of the details of the proposal. Much of the background is contained in the U.S. Treasury Department's special report on the proposed Asian Bank, which I insert following my remarks.

Your House Banking and Currency Committee will begin hearings on this proposal immediately. I am sure that all Members of the House of Representatives, and the other body, will recognize the necessity and importance of this institution and speedily enact the legislation required for the United States to participate in this Bank.

U.S. TREASURY DEPARTMENT SPECIAL REPORT ON THE PROPOSED ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK, JANUARY 1966

I. SUMMARY AND RECOMMENDATION

This special report strongly recommends that the United States promptly accept membership in the proposed Asian Development Bank. Early congressional action in the 1966 session is required if the United States is to play its proper role in the formation of the Bank this year. The Bank springs from Asian needs and desires. It is enthusiastically supported by the Asian nations themselves, and has received pledges of financial support from a broad range of non-Asian countries as well.

The Bank is to have an authorized capital of $1 billion; its membership will number 30 or more countries including many capital-contributing developed countries as well as the developing countries of Asia. The Bank will make sound loans on conventional terms similar to World Bank loans. The U.S. subscription of $200 million will be equaled by that of Japan; the combined subscriptions of the other developed countries far exceed our own. The U.S. subscription should have a minimal effect on our balance of payments.

The Bank will be Asian in character and multilateral in form. Its operations will benefit both short- and long-range policy objectives of the United States. As a nucleus around which Asian cooperation can grow, the Bank can promote closer ties within the region which the United States has long sought; as a financial vehicle, the Bank can spread the burden of foreign assistance more broadly, serving as a channel for special funds which other donor countries may provide on special terms to meet special needs of the region; and, in its day-to-day operations the Bank can complement and thereby make more effective the extensive U.S. bilateral programs in the Asian region. U.S.

membership is, therefore, fully in our national interest. Establishment of the Asian Bank is a vital element in current efforts to offer the peoples of Asia a reason to hope for a better future and for an opportunity to enjoy the fruits of peaceful economic progress. It points toward those works of peace which are the true need of Asia and the center of the purpose and hope of the United States, there and everywhere.

II. BACKGROUND

A. History and origin of the proposal: In a broad sense, the concept underlying the Asian Development Bank goes back at least to the early postwar years, when the idea of a public international institution supported cooperatively by its member nations and designed to speed growth in developing areas found its embodiment in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank). In the ensuing dozen years, the idea of institutionalized multilateral cooperation in development financing was broadened with the establishment of two specialized affiliates of the World Bank, the International Finance Corporation and the International Development Association. In 1959, multilateral cooperation in the field of development finance was adapted and applied at the regional level through the establishment of the Inter-American Development Bank, the first such institution to have as its particular field of action a major geographic area. By 1964, a second regional bank, the African Development Bank, had come into being in order to help with the developmental problems of that major region. The Asian Bank would take its place along with the latter two institutions, as a regional development bank for a great continental land mass of the developing world.

In addition to the general evolution of the institutions of financial cooperation, several encouraging areas of regional cooperation were taking root at the same time among the Asian countries. Since 1947, the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE) has provided a forum for discussions and analysis of the economic problems and outlook for the broad area stretching from Iran to the Pacific Islands. The technical scope of ECAFE's concerns has broadened progressively, and its initiatives are increasingly resulting in specific cooperative actions being undertaken by the nations involved. Similarly, the activities of the nations cooperating under the Colombo plan have, since 1950, contributed substantially to the spirit of regional cooperation. As one feature under the Colombo plan technical assistance for key growth projects is made available not only from sources outside the region but from one regional country to another as well.

The more specific and immediate antecedents of the Asian Development Bank date from late 1963, when an ECAFE Expert Group on Regional Economic Cooperation first formally proposed the establishment of a regional bank for Asia. This proposal was quickly endorsed by ministers representing Asian nations at the ECAFE Ministerial Conference on Asian Economic Cooperation in Manila in December 1963. During 1964, detailed technical investigations were made by a working group of experts and a comprehensive report was made available to governments at the end of that year. In March 1965, the 21st session of ECAFE, meeting in Wellington, unanimously agreed to further efforts toward realization of the Bank project. It was agreed that a Consultative Committee drawn from nine Asian nations would meet to review the principal issues involved. The Consultative Committee held its first meeting in June in Bangkok. Mr. Eugene Black—the President's Advisor on Southeast Asian Development and former President of the World Bank—was invited to consult with the Committee. In July and August, members of the Committee visited capitals, including Washington, in order to gain the benefit of views from each of the governments interested in the establishment of the Bank. The Consultative Committee then met again in August in Bangkok to draw up a preliminary charter for the institution.

The decisive event insuring that the proposal would have major support from outside the Asian region was President Johnson's announcement in April 1965, that the United States would be prepared to become a member of a properly conceived Asian Bank.

The main negotiations on the charter of the Bank took place at the meeting of the Preparatory Committee on the Asian Development Bank in Bangkok, Thailand, October 21–November 1, 1965. The U.S. delegation was headed by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Merlyn N. Trued.

In its final form, the agreement establishing the Asian Development Bank was signed at Manila at a conference of plenipotentiaries held December 2–4, 1965. The agreement was signed on behalf of the United States by Eugene R. Black, Advisor to the President on Southeast Asia Economic and Social Development, and Joseph W. Barr, Under Secretary of the Treasury, head and alternate head, respectively, of a U.S. delegation which included Members of both Houses of Congress.

B. Need for an Asian institution: The proposal for an Asian Development Bank arose as an Asian initiative, and the Bank will be a predominantly Asian institution in location, in finance, and in management.

President Johnson summarized the advantages of establishing an Asian Development Bank in the following terms:

"I regard the organization of this great new institution as one of the most hopeful events of our times because the Asian Development Bank has been put together by Asians, and because they themselves are contributing the greater part of its capital and will direct its lending for development in Asia.

"But, most of all, it is an important and hopeful event, because the Asian Development Bank will bring so many of Asia's diverse peoples, who so long have gone their ways alone, together in a cooperative effort for peaceful development and human betterment in Asia."

The Asian Bank can, as could no institution either with extra-regional concerns or of subregional size, accomplish the following objectives:

Bring an explicitly Asian viewpoint to bear on the problems of complementary growth in the region.

Satisfy the widespread desire among countries of the region for an institution attuned specifically to meeting Asian economic needs.

Point toward that peaceful cooperation in Asia which is the region's most pressing need.

Offer an institution with its own tangible and constructive purpose to serve as a nucleus around which broader forms of economic and possibly political cooperation could grow. Asia as a whole enjoys no history of common political institutions comparable to the Organization of American States in Latin America. The political infrastructure must be built out of positive acts of economic cooperation such as the Bank would provide in its daily operations.

Elicit significant amounts of capital from the Asian countries themselves for use elsewhere in the Asian region, with a concomitant assumption of the responsibility for sound fiscal operations.

Stimulate a flow of public and private capital into Asia from outside the region.

Provide an administrative channel through which governments interested in national and regional development in Asia as a whole, or in specific subregions of Asia, could make potentially large sums available for special purposes or on special terms. A major contribution to southeast Asian development by the United States and other capital-providing countries, for instance, could be administered by the Bank, giving an appropriate Asian imprint to the funds thus provided.

C. Relationship to U.S. programs in Asia: The proposed Asian Development Bank can play a key role in the overall U.S. economic assistance strategy for Asia at the same time it is fulfilling the need of the Asians themselves for new cooperative institutions. In much the same manner, the Inter-American Development Bank is already serving successfully as a major vehicle through which U.S. funds are made available to support long-range development goals of the Alliance for Progress in Latin America.

Substantial U.S. bilateral development assistance in the form of loans and grants to Asian countries is now extended to many of the developing countries eligible for membership in the Asian Development Bank. A large proportion of this assistance is concentrated in a relatively few major program countries. The Asian Bank will not have the subscribed resources to replace any significant portion of current U.S. programs, nor is there reason to expect that its pattern of financing will necessarily reflect the same country emphasis as U.S. programs now have. Nevertheless, the Bank can be expected to complement U.S. programs in a number of important ways: through lending in conjunction with the United States and other donors for projects too large for any single donor to finance; through furnishing technical assistance which will improve the effectiveness with which U.S. and other external assistance is utilized; through financing of surveys and assistance in project formulation which will provide the Agency for International Development and other bilateral lenders with a better basis for assistance decisions; through eliciting contributions to its own capital; and through serving as a coordinating mechanism for numerous bilateral programs in particular countries. In addition to contributing to greater effectiveness of aid, these functions would help to spread the aid burden more widely.

The creation of a regional development bank by and for the Asian nations is particularly important in relation to the $1 billion program of expanded U.S. economic and social development assistance in southeast Asia announced by President Johnson in his speech at Johns Hopkins University on April 7, 1965. The President's design calls for a great international cooperative effort that would lift the hopes and spirits of the peoples of Asia by offering a promising alternative to the destruction of wars and the oppression of adverse economic circumstances.

The Asian Bank, with its authority to administer special funds made available over and above subscribed capital by member or nonmember donor nations, is well suited to serve as a channel for the President's southeast Asia program. Special funds handled in this manner through the Bank could, by agreement with the donor, be lent on concessional repayment terms appropriate to the country or project concerned. The extent to which the United States makes funds available to the Bank for administration would depend first, of course, on congressional approval of the necessary resources, but also on the indications from other donor countries of their intention to do likewise. Subject to these two conditions, U.S. representatives have already indicated U.S. willingness to consider a substantial contribution to a Southeast Asia Regional Development Fund. The earlier a sound, strong Asian Development Bank can be brought into being, the earlier plans can move forward for the Bank to receive and utilize such special fund contributions.

III. THE PROPOSED BANK

The form and functions of the proposed Asian Development Bank are laid down in its articles of agreement. These articles were negotiated at the meeting of the Preparatory Committee on the Asian Development Bank in Bangkok, Thailand, October 21–November 1, 1965. Along with two annexes subsequently completed and agreed at the Manila meeting, the articles form the body of the Agreement Establishing the Asian Development Bank. This agreement was signed by representatives of governments at a conference of plenipotentiaries in Manila, Philippines, December 2–4, 1965, subject to approval by legislatures. In broad outline and in many details, the articles themselves and the institution to be established under their authority follow the outstandingly successful pattern set by the World Bank.

A. Financial structure: The financial resources of the Bank consist of its paid-in capital, special funds, and funds it may raise in the future through borrowing in private capital markets. The Bank would also add to its resources through its earnings.

1. Authorized paid-in and callable capital: The authorized capital stock of the Bank is $1 billion, divided into 100,000 shares of $10,000 each. The Board of Governors of the Bank by a special majority vote may increase the authorized capital. Of the $1 billion authorized capital, $650 million is available for subscription by the Asian regional members, while the remaining $350 million is reserved for subscription by nonregional member countries.

Half of the authorized capital consists of paid-in shares and half consists of callable shares; the subscription of each member country to the capital stock of the Bank will consist of equal parts of paid-in and of callable shares.

Payment for subscriptions to the Bank's paid-in capital stock is to be in five equal installments of 20 percent each. If a country deposits its instrument of ratification before the agreement enters into force, then its first installment payment is due within 30 days after the entry into force. If a country deposits its instrument of ratification after the agreement has already entered into force, then its first installment payment is due on or before the date of deposit. The second and subsequent installments fall due at annual intervals after the date of entry into force of the agreement.

Not all of a member's subscription to paid-in capital is to be paid in cash at the outset. The articles require the Bank to accept non-interest-bearing demand notes or similar obligations in lieu of 50 percent of any installment on paid-in capital, provided the Bank does not need the cash for its operations.

Callable capital stock amounting to one-half a country's total subscription would be subscribed at the time of the first installment on paid-in capital. The function of the callable capital in the Asian Development Bank is the same as that of the callable capital in the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank, i.e., to provide a backing against which the Bank would be able in the future to sell bonds in the capital markets of the world. Payments would be made on callable capital only if at some future time it became necessary to call these shares in order to make good on borrowings by the Bank or on guarantees it had issued. Such calls must be ratable on all such shares.

2. Special funds: The Bank's articles (arts. 19–20) provide that the Bank may establish special funds by earmarking up to 10 percent of its paid-in capital for that purpose, and by accepting resources—outside the subscribed capital stock—from member governments or other sources for administration by the Bank. Special funds derived from such earmarking of a portion of the Bank's resources may be used to guarantee or make loans of high developmental priority, with longer maturities, longer deferred commencement of repayment and lower interest rates than ordinary bank loans.

Special funds received from members may be used as flexibly as the agreement between the Bank and the member permits, so long as the purpose is consistent with the purpose of the Bank.

3. Borrowed funds: The Bank's subscribed funds may be supplemented by borrowings in the name of the Bank in member countries or elsewhere (e.g., Switzerland) against the backing of its callable capital. No borrowing may take place in the territory of a member or in the currency of a member, however, without the prior approval of that member. The Bank may also add to its lendable resources by selling portions of loans from its portfolio, with or without its own guarantee, provided again that the prior approval of the member in whose territory the securities are sold is obtained.

B. Administrative aspects: The Articles of Agreement of the Asian Development Bank established it as a regional international organization with full juridical personality. The Bank's members would be national states and their territories, and its structure would consist of a Board of Governors, a Board of Directors, and a management consisting of international civil servants.

1. Membership: The Bank is open to membership by members and associate members of the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE) and by other regional countries and nonregional developed countries which are members of the United Nations or of any of its specialized agencies. Thus, Communist China, North Korea, and North Vietnam are not eligible for membership.

Countries eligible for membership as charter members are listed in annex A to the articles. Any of those countries that have failed to sign by January 31, 1966, and countries not mentioned in annex A desiring to become members can only be admitted after the Bank is organized. Admission to membership then will require an affirmative vote of two-thirds of the total number of Governors representing not less than three-fourths of the total voting power. The subscription of a new member would be fixed by the Governors at the time of admission.

2. Board of Governors: The senior policymaking body of the Bank is to be its Board of Governors, consisting of one Governor and one alternate for each member. Governors would normally be ministers of finance or central bank heads; the Board of Governors would normally meet annually and conduct its other business by mail. The fundamental powers of the Bank—including the power to admit new members, to change the authorized capital stock, to elect Directors and choose a President, and to amend the articles are reserved exclusively to the Governors.

3. Board of Directors: The day-to-day supervision of the general operations of the Bank rests with the Board of Directors. The Board is to consist of 10 Directors, 7 to represent the Asian regional countries and 3 to represent nonregional members. Each Director may appoint an alternate to act in his absence. The size of its subscription entitles the United States to elect its own Director from the three allocated to the nonregional countries.

Directors are elected for 2-year terms in accordance with procedures shown in annex B of the articles, and may be reelected. With regard to the three Directors for nonregional members, annex B provides that the third Director shall be elected when nonregional subscriptions total $345 million. It is hoped that this provision will be fulfilled at an early date. Article 30(1)(ii) provides that, after 2 years, the size and composition of the Board of Directors shall be reviewed by the Board of Governors. The reason for this subsection is the desire of the smaller developing countries for representation on the Board by the creation of one or more regional directorships. Any such change, however, would require approval by a majority of the total number of Governors having at least two-thirds of the total voting power. Moreover, a change in the number of Directors would not affect the number of votes cast by the United States or other countries, since voting strength is related to size of subscription.

The Board of Directors would pass on all loan or guarantee applications, oversee financial operations and approve the Bank's budget. Unlike the Governors, the Directors would meet at frequent intervals as demanded by the pace of the Bank's operations.

4. Voting: Like the other multilateral development financing institutions of which the United States is a member, the Asian Development Bank embodies the broad principle that voting strength is related to size of subscription. In recognition of the strong opinion among the Asian nations that a large proportion of total votes should be distributed equally among members without reference to size of subscription, it was agreed during negotiations leading up to the charter that 20 percent of total votes—so-called basic votes—would be distributed equally among the members and the remainder would be proportional to subscriptions.

On the basis of full subscription of the $1 billion authorized capital, the U.S. share of total voting strength would be approximately 16 percent. Ordinary voting in both the Board of Governors and the Board of Directors would be by a majority of the votes cast. On specified major matters, however, the articles require qualified majorities of two-thirds or three-fourths of total votes.

5. Management: The principal executive officer of the Bank is to be its President, who will be responsible for the organization of the Bank's staff and who will, under the supervision of the Board of Directors, conduct the Bank's current business. The President will be an Asian national, who will be elected by the Board of Governors, probably at the inaugural meeting. The President serves as Chairman of the Board of Directors, but would not vote except in the case of an even division.

The President will serve for a renewable 5-year term and will be assisted by one or more Vice Presidents, whom the Directors would appoint on the basis of the President's recommendation. In keeping with the Asian character of the Bank, the bulk of its staff is expected to come from the Asian countries themselves. The articles (art. 36) on the one hand prohibit the President, Vice President, and staff of the Bank from either interfering in the political affairs of members or taking noneconomic considerations into account in their decisions, and on the other hand, prohibit member countries from attempting to influence them in the discharge of their duties.

6. Privileges and immunities: The articles of the charter relating to status, immunities, exemptions, and privileges (arts. 48–58) are similar to those embodied in the charters of the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank. With respect to salaries or emoluments paid by the Bank to Directors, alternates, officers, or employees, including experts performing missions for the Bank, the charter provides that such payments to the nationals of a member may be taxed by that member only upon deposit of a declaration by it at the time of ratification that it intends to do so. It is intended that the United States would deposit such a declaration with its instrument of acceptance.

7. Site of the Bank: The site of the Bank is to be at Manila, Philippines, where the Philippine Government has indicated it will provide an appropriate building. The choice of Manila as site of the Bank was made by the Asian nations themselves just prior to the conference of plenipotentiaries in early December 1965. The United States maintained an attitude of strict neutrality throughout the discussion of the site question.

C. Operations: All of the lending and financial operations of the Bank are aimed at fulfilling the purposes set forth in article 1 of its charter; i.e., to foster economic growth and cooperation in the Asian region and to contribute to the acceleration of the process of economic development of the developing member countries in the region, collectively and individually.

The principal functions of the Bank toward fulfilling its purposes are (1) the promotion of public and private development capital inflow to the region and (2) the use of resources available to it for development financing in the region. In the latter connection, the Bank is to give priority to regional and subregional as well as national projects that will promote harmonious regional growth, and is to keep especially in mind the needs of smaller or less-developed countries in the region.

In addition to these direct financing activities, the Bank is expected to assist in the coordination of development policies so as to enhance complementary trade and other relations in the region and in development planning and project formulation. The Bank would cooperate with other international and national institutions in order to stimulate a maximum flow of funds to the region.

The Bank's lending operations are divided into two major categories: ordinary operations and special operations. Resources used for each category are entirely separate and distinct, and must be separately accounted for. Ordinary capital resources may not be charged with any losses or liabilities arising from special operations.

1. Ordinary lending and guarantee operation: The Bank's hard loan operations will normally take the form of direct loans from capital funds or funds borrowed in private markets, on terms similar to those of World Bank loans to developing countries. World Bank loans are presently made on terms of 5½ percent with maturities normally up to 25 to 30 years. The Bank's articles also confer authority to guarantee loans made by others and, at a future time to be decided, to invest in equity capital of entities or enterprises.

Ordinary loans would normally cover the foreign exchange costs of specific projects. In special cases, the Bank may provide financing for a reasonable portion of the local costs involved. In addition to its direct loans for particular projects, the Bank could lend to national development banks which would sublend for smaller projects. No loan could be made in a country if the government of the country objects. The guarantee of the government is not required if the loan is not to the government itself. The Bank may, however, if it deems it desirable, require such a guarantee. The Bank must pay due regard to the ability of the borrower to find financing elsewhere on reasonable terms before it approves a loan.

The articles do not specify any particular types of development projects for emphasis in the Bank's ordinary lending operations. Loans may be expected for the usual infrastructure projects such as roads, ports, power and the like, for agricultural projects such as irrigation systems and agricultural credit institutions, and for private enterprise activities in manufacturing and service industries. While specific loan terms are not prescribed, the Bank is required in its first

5 years of operation to charge a commission on its ordinary loans of 1 percent, the proceeds of which must be held in a special liquid reserve to meet possible future liabilities of the Bank. Such a special reserve was a feature of the charters of both the World Bank and the Inter-American Bank.

2. Special lending operations: Loans made from special funds earmarked from the Bank's own capital must be of high developmental priority and must conform to the same general operating guidelines as ordinary loans. Such funds shall be provided on a revolving fund basis and may be extended with longer maturities, longer grace periods and lower interest rates than those established for ordinary operations. Loans made with special funds given to the Bank for administration by donor nations may be for any purpose and on any terms not inconsistent with the overall purpose of the Bank.

3. Borrowing by the Bank: It is not expected that the Bank will be in a position in its early years to obtain funds in significant amounts from private capital markets. Accordingly, the Bank will rely for its initial period of operations on its subscribed capital. When the Bank does commence borrowing, the articles require it to follow the principle of spreading its borrowing equitably among the various financial markets, thus avoiding undue concentration on any one financial center. As already noted, no borrowing may take place in any member country or in any member's currency without prior approval by that member.

4. Procurement: Article 14(ix) of the charter prescribes the basic rule that the Bank's subscribed resources—whether for ordinary lending or special lending—be used only for procurement in any member country of goods and services produced in member countries. Thus no industrial country can expect to enjoy the benefits of Bank-financed procurement from its suppliers without making a contribution to the Bank's resources in the form of capital subscriptions. In special circumstances, as in the case where a non-member country, e.g., Switzerland (which is not a member of the World Bank but is eligible to provide goods and services for World Bank-financed projects) permits the Asian Development Bank to raise a significant amount of capital in its markets, the Directors may allow procurement for a particular loan to take place in that non-member country, or the goods of that non-member country to be purchased in a member country. Such permission by the Directors could only be given, however, by a special majority of two-thirds of total votes.

5. Currency provisions: All member countries, developed and developing alike, are required to make at least 50 percent of their subscriptions available in convertible currencies, and no member may make restrictions on the use by the Bank or its payees of this portion of its paid-in subscription. A developing country may restrict the other 50 percent of its subscription, which is payable in national currency, to payments for goods and services which it produces and which will be used in its territories. A developed country, on the other hand, is required to make the second 50 percent of its subscription, also payable in national currency which in most cases would already be convertible, available on the same restriction-free basis as the first 50 percent. In short, developed country subscriptions may be thought of as generally convertible. (Among the regional members, Japan, Australia, and New Zealand are considered developed; all of the nonregional members are likewise considered developed.)

Article 24(2) (ii) permits a developed country in the Asian region, if its exports of industrial products are not a substantial portion of total exports and it is therefore not in a position to compete effectively for Bank-financed business, to restrict the 50 percent portion paid in national currency—which therefore would normally have to be convertible—to purchase of national goods. Any country wishing to exercise this option must do so at the time it deposits its instrument of acceptance, and the continuation of the restriction is subject to periodic review by and consultation with the Bank. A country opting to restrict its subscription in this fashion would, however, be required to finance such national goods out of the portion of the subscription that would otherwise remain in cost-free non-interest-bearing notes. Only Australia and New Zealand will be in a position to take advantage of this provision of the articles.

The currency of each member is always freely available to the Bank to meet administrative expenditures in the country. Currency made available to the Bank for administration as a special fund, however, may be restricted in any manner specified in the relevant special fund agreement.

In the event of depreciation or appreciation of a member's currency, the member must pay to or may receive from the Bank a payment sufficient to maintain the original foreign exchange value of the Bank's holdings of the currency, other than holdings derived from borrowings or administered special funds.

D. Entry into force and interim arrangements: The entry into force of the agreement establishing the Asian Development Bank will take place after a two-stage procedure consisting of (a) signature and (b) ratification or acceptance. The United States and 21 other nations signed the agreement at Manila, and the remaining nations listed in annex A may do so until January 31, 1966. Signature, however, is an ad referendum act by an executive power, requiring in most governments—including the United States—approval by the legislative power. Ratification or acceptance by a signatory takes place by deposit of an instrument of ratification or acceptance with the depositary (the Secretary General of the United Nations) after any necessary legislative approval has been obtained. Instruments of ratification must be deposited not later than September 30, 1966. The articles of agreement make no provision for extension of this deadline. A signatory which has deposited its instrument of ratification becomes a member on the date of deposit or the date the agreement enters into force, whichever occurs later.

The agreement enters into force when 15 signatories having subscriptions or at least $650 million have deposited their instruments of ratification or acceptance. In order to insure broad support for the Bank within the Asian region, the articles require that not less than 10 of the necessary 15 signatories be regional members. The inaugural meeting of the Board of Governors, the election of the Board of Directors, the formal organization of the Bank management and the fixing of the date for commencement of operations would promptly follow entry into force of the agreement.

Since the subscription of the United States is to be $200 million and total anticipated subscriptions are in excess of $950 million, it is clear that unless the United States moves forward rapidly with the deposit of its instrument of acceptance, the agreement may enter into force prior to deposit by the United States. Although the United States could still become a charter member by subsequently depositing its instrument prior to the September 30, 1966, deadline, failure to participate in the inaugural meeting of Governors and its important work of organizing the Bank would both damage the idea of the United States as a supporter of the Bank and impair the ability of the United States to play an appropriate role in the important early period when the Bank's operating policies and procedures will be developed. Accordingly, legislation permitting final acceptance of the agreement by the United States should be obtained as early as possible in the spring of 1966.

In order to facilitate the early establishment of the Bank on a fully operational basis, the conference of plenipotentiaries established a 14-nation Committee on Preparatory Arrangements, 12 members of which are Asian countries and the remaining 2 (United States and Germany) are nonregional. This steering committee will supervise the operations of a small staff whose principal tasks will be to prepare for the Bank's inaugural meeting, make preliminary plans for acquiring and training staff, initiate arrangements for facilities and services at the Bank's permanent headquarters and otherwise promote an efficient commencement of Bank activities.

IV. U.S. PARTICIPATION IN THE PROPOSED BANK

As was the case with existing international financial institutions, U.S. participation in the Asian Development Bank will be pursuant to specific authorizing legislation to be passed by both Houses of Congress. Appropriations will be sought in the years required. U.S. representation in the Bank will likewise follow the general pattern established for existing institutions.

A. U.S. subscription: The U.S. subscription to the capital stock of the Bank is $200 million. The United States and Japan, each with subscriptions of $200 million, are the largest subscribers of capital. The subscriptions of the nations whose pledges for joining the Bank were indicated at the Manila meeting are shown below in table 1. The U.S. subscription represents 21.3 percent of such total subscriptions including the developing countries and 33.1 percent of the subscriptions of the developed countries alone.

Table 2 compares the paid-in portion of the U.S. subscription in the Asian Development Bank with U.S. paid-in subscriptions to the other international development financial institutions both as a percentage of total capital and as a percentage of the subscriptions of the advanced countries. The U.S. share in the Asian Bank represents a lesser relative burden on the United States than does the U.S. share in the institutions established earlier.

B. Form and timing of payments: As indicated in chapter III, section A of this report, half of a country's subscription is to be paid in five installments and the other half is to remain callable.

For the United States therefore, only $100 million is scheduled to be paid in, and $100 million will remain callable. Five payments, of $20 million each are due on the paid-in portion, the first at the outset and the remaining four at approximately annual intervals thereafter. Further, of the amounts to be paid in only one-half—amounting to $10 million per installment or $50 million in the aggregate—need be paid in cash. The remaining $10 million of each installment—aggregating $50 million in all—may be made in promissory notes or other obligations. For this portion, the United States will issue irrevocable letters of credit to the Bank which will not be drawn on until cash is actually required by the Bank. The letter of credit technique has already been adopted in connection with our participation in the International Monetary Fund, the International Development Association, and the Inter-American Bank.

The U.S. callable capital subscription of $100 million must be made at the time of the first paid-in installment. This $100 million subscription represents only a contingent liability on the part of the United States. Similar callable subscriptions by the United States in the World Bank and the Inter-American Development Bank have been on the books for 20 years with little prospect of being called. With prudent management in the Asian Development Bank, there is no reason to expect that its callable capital need be drawn on.

Table 3 summarizes, by fiscal year, the subscription obligations undertaken by the United States in joining the Bank. The first payments would be required during the spring of 1966, and accordingly a supplemental appropriation will be necessary in fiscal year 1966. Regular appropriations will then be sought in each of the fiscal years 1967–70 inclusive.

C. Legislative aspects: A draft Asian Development Bank Act is being submitted by the President for consideration by the Congress early in the 1966 session. The principal provisions of the draft legislation are those authorizing the acceptance of membership in the Bank by the President and the appropriation and payment of the U.S. subscription. In addition, the draft legislation provides for the appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of the U.S. Governor, Alternate Governor, and Director. The draft legislation further provides, inter alia, for periodic reports to the Congress on the policies and operations of the Bank, for reference to the Congress of any change in the Bank's articles and for such amendments to other legislation as are necessary and appropriate to facilitate the sale of the Bank's obligations in the United States at such future time as that may become feasible and desirable.

V. PARTICULAR QUESTIONS FOR CONSIDERATION

A. U.S. participation in the Bank in relation to the U.S. balance of payments: The need to achieve and maintain equilibrium in the U.S. balance of payments remains an urgent one. The initial impact on the U.S. balance of payments of the U.S. subscription to the Asian Bank, however, will be minimal at most, and the longer range probability is for no net balance-of-payments cost.

As described earlier in this report, the structure of required subscription payments to the Bank is such that the cash portion of our $200 million subscription—the only portion which enters the balance-of-payments accounts at the time of payment—amounts to only 5 percent of the total, or $10 million, in the first year. In view of the substantial advantages accruing from the successful establishment of the Bank, this level of balance-of-payments cost, even if fully realized, would be entirely justified. There is reason to believe, however, that some or all of even the minimal short-term balance-of-payments effects will be offset. Moreover, dollars held by the Bank do not represent a potential claim on gold.

Over a somewhat longer term the prospects are favorable that there will be no net balance-of-payments cost to the United States. Procurement by the Bank will be limited to member countries and the Bank will mainly finance capital goods imports of which the United States is a major international supplier. Further, the group of countries in which the bulk of Bank financing will likely take place includes many in which the United States enjoys a strong competitive position. The U.S. share of the convertible currency resources of the proposed Bank is about one-fourth, whereas the factors just enumerated offer the possibility that U.S. procurement could come close to or even exceed this proportion of total Bank-financed procurement with its convertible resources. Any U.S. funds supplied to the Bank as special funds over and above our capital subscriptions could, in accordance with the articles of agreement, be explicitly tied to U.S. procurement.

B. U.S. voting rights: The United States will enjoy sufficient voting strength in the Asian Bank to insure itself of a permanent seat on the Board of Directors and hence a continuing important voice in the Bank's affairs. It is characteristic of the international financial institutions that formal voting issues are extremely infrequent, and agreement is usually reached on the basis of consensus, taking into account the essential interests of the institution and the member nations concerned.

Table 4 shows the approximate voting strength in the Board of Governors (on which the voting power of Directors is based) computed on the basis of memberships and subscriptions known as of December 4, 1965. Since the U.S. share of paid-in capital is substantially lower in the Asian Bank than in the other international financial institutions, U.S. voting power is correspondingly lower than in such institutions. As a minority shareholder, the United States cannot expect to exercise a veto by itself. Our percentage of total votes in the Asian Bank further reflects the fact that 20 percent of total votes are distributed among the members without regard to size or subscription, while the remaining 80 percent are weighted proportionately to subscriptions. The non-weighted votes represent a substantially higher proportion of total votes than in other institutions.

Notwithstanding the differences in the voting arrangements between the Asian Bank and other institutions, the basic form and purpose of the Asian Bank is so similar to the other institutions that no significant difference in its basic policy framework or in the soundness with which it is operated need be anticipated. The Asian nations have given ample evidence—particularly through their subscriptions totaling $642 million—of their intention to have a Bank that would command the highest respect in financial circles. There is every reason for confidence that a capable and prudent management will be selected, and that the Board of Directors will endorse policies that will give the Bank the stature its sponsors seek. It is safe to conclude, therefore, that U.S. interests and those of the developed countries as a group will be adequately protected in the operations of the Bank.

the basis of experience. It is possible to say, however, that the new Bank gives every promise of following the same satisfactory policies that have characterized the existing financial institutions. The Bank's articles call for it to promote private as well as public investment for developmental purposes, to give priority to projects that contribute most effectively to regional economic growth, to cooperate with international and national entities concerned with the investment of development funds in the region, to pay due regard to the prospects of repayment, to ensure that financing is used for the purposes intended, and to be guided by sound banking principles.

D. Membership of the Soviet Union: In his April 1965 speech at Johns Hopkins University, President Johnson specifically welcomed participation by the Soviet Union in an expanded program of southeast Asian development. As far as can presently be determined, however, the Soviet Union does not now intend to become a member of the Asian Development Bank, despite attendance by its representatives at the Bangkok Conference. The Soviet Union has indicated that it may be interested in exploring other ways of cooperating with the Bank.

VI. CONCLUSION

The establishment of an Asian Development Bank along the lines described in this report would be a hopeful and important event in the long and troubled history of the Asian region. Such a bank could contribute greatly to a new spirit of cooperation among the nations of that area. The proposed Bank would have a capital of $1 billion and enjoy broad membership among the countries of the region as well as widespread support among capital-exporting countries. The Bank could not only provide needed new capital of its own but also administer funds made available to it by developed countries on special terms and for special purposes, as for example a portion of the President's southeast Asian multilateral program for economic and social development.

The U.S. participation in the capital subscription in the Bank would be $200 million, of which only one-half would have to be paid in, and that half would be spread over five annual installments. The benefits to U.S. political and economic objectives in Asia would be substantial, especially in comparison with the costs involved. The advantages of U.S. participation in such international lending institutions as the World Bank, its affiliates, and the Inter-American Bank have been amply demonstrated over the last two decades. Prompt action by the United States to join the Asian Development Bank would be in United States short and long-term interest. Early enactment of legislation to make membership in the Bank possible is therefore strongly recommended.

LARRY O'BRIEN, "MAN OF ACTION"

MR. CHARLES H. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend my remarks, and to include extraneous matter.

THE SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

MR. CHARLES H. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, when Larry O'Brien assumed office several months ago, he brought with him the reputation as a man of action. This well-earned reputation was justified recently when he announced a sweeping plan for the mechanization and modernization of the Post Office. As a member of the House Post Office Committee, I applaud Larry's leadership.

C. Consistency of Bank's operations with legislative guidelines on U.S. foreign aid program: The policies and operations of the existing international financial institutions of which the United States is a member have been fully consistent with the legislative guidelines laid down for the bilateral aid program of the United States. Inasmuch as the Asian Bank is to be a new institution, it is not possible to evaluate it in this regard on

The initial phase of the program scheduled for immediate implementation involves the installation of the most modern mail-handling equipment in 109 post offices which handle approximately 60 percent of the Nation's mail. The total mechanization program being accelerated by Mr. O'Brien will cost about $65 million between now and June 30.

High speed letter sorters and machines geared to read ZIP code addresses at speeds of 36,000 per hour are among the equipment to be installed. Orders have been placed for 4,000 additional mailsters and 100 new self-service post offices.

Other hardware to be installed in this accelerated mechanization program are facing and cancelling machines, edger-stackers, huge automatic sack sorting machines, parcel post systems designed to sort packages at very high speeds, machines capable of removing odd-shaped items such as motel keys from the mail stream, and closed-circuit televisions to pinpoint problem areas in the mechanized mail-handling systems.

It has been brought to my attention that five of these new mechanized aids will be installed in the Los Angeles Post Office, including the closed-circuit television system.

It must be emphasized that this mechanization program is not intended to offer an alternative to manpower, but to assist employees in doing their job better.

It is very gratifying to me as a member of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee to witness the new Postmaster General enacting programs that will provide our post office employees with the necessary tools to handle the huge and ever-growing mail volume.

I salute Larry O'Brien for a job well begun.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS SUBCOMMITTEE HEARINGS ON ASIA

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to announce that beginning next Tuesday, January 25, the Subcommittee on the Far East and the Pacific of the Committee on Foreign Affairs will conduct a series of hearings relating to Asia.

In the course of these hearings, the subcommittee will receive testimony from various experts on economic, political, military, and other conditions which prevail on that continent.

In addition, the subcommittee will seek information and expert opinions about developments which may be anticipated in these conditions—and about U.S. relations with that area of the world.

The holding of the hearings on Asia is consistent with our subcommittee's policy of keeping informed about developments in the area under its jurisdiction—and in making such information available to the Congress.

During the first week of our hearings, the subcommittee will receive testimony from 12 distinguished experts. Their names will be entered in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at an appropriate time. The public hearings will be held in room 2172, Rayburn Building, the main hearing room of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

FOUR-YEAR TERM

Mr. KING of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

Mr. KING of Utah. Mr. Speaker, today President Johnson sent to the Congress a proposed constitutional amendment to extend the term of office in the House of Representatives to 4 years. It also provides for House Members to be elected concurrently with the President.

I believe this is a sound and long-overdue reform. And I believe it merits prompt and favorable action.

Those of us now serving in the House of Representatives know only too well how seriously the existing 2-year term operates to interfere with the proper administration of Government business.

I need not elaborate on the cost and effort that go into election campaigns every second year: the time diverted from the important work to be done here in Washington; the strain and fatigue; the disruption of home and family life; the waste of experienced manpower in turning qualified men out of office before they have had a fair chance to be of useful service.

But we here in Washington are not the only ones aware of these self-defeating factors. As recent polls demonstrate, the voters are fully alert to them too—and have indicated a preference for a 4-year term.

It seems to me that we have in the President's proposal one of the major keys to effective government, and I am proud to announce my support of it.

LET HIM WARM HIS CHAIR

Mr. SELDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. SELDEN. Mr. Speaker, since Lyndon Johnson became President of the United States, the extremely important post of Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs has changed hands three times. Both Thomas Mann and his successor, Jack Hood Vaughn, performed extremely well in the short period of time they headed the Bureau of Inter-American Affairs. The newly appointed Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, Lincoln Gordon, has done a fine job as our Ambassador to Brazil and should be well qualified for the new post he expects to take over in February.

In an editorial appearing in the January 19, 1966, issue of the Washington Daily News, which follows, it was pointed out that three Assistant Secretaries for Latin America in the past 2 years is "needlessly risky." I concur with this conclusion, and I, too, trust that "if Ambassador Gordon proves himself as capable as we hope," he will be allowed to remain on the job considerably longer than his predecessors.

LET HIM WARM HIS CHAIR

Ambassador Lincoln Gordon seems a good selection for the all-important post of Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs since Jack Hood Vaughn had to give up that post which he was filling so superbly. (President Johnson has named Mr. Vaughn Director of the Peace Corps and promoted U.S. Ambassador to Brazil Gordon to succeed him.)

Mr. Gordon demonstrated in Brazil that he is an able exponent of the hard line Latin policies identified with President Johnson and Under Secretary of State Thomas Mann. And his elevation means there will be no change in these policies. Nor should there be. Among other things, the Johnson-Mann policy means that we don't sever relations or throw up our hands in horror because a new Latin government might not be as democratic as we would like.

As Ambassador, Mr. Gordon demonstrated thorough knowledge of Latin problems and how to deal with them. An economist and former Harvard business professor, he knew what help Brazil needed and what Brazil herself needed to do to pull out of her economic slump. His recommendations helped that giant South American country make impressive strides in the past year.

But what disturbs us in the picture of our dealings with our hemisphere neighbors is the speed with which our Government has been changing the Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs—the top man in formulating and carrying out policy in this most important sphere of foreign relations.

We've had five Assistant Secretaries for Latin America in the past 4 years—and three in the last 2 alone.

This is preposterous. And needlessly risky.

If Ambassador Gordon proves himself as capable as we hope, let's leave him on the job long enough to follow through with what predecessors Mann and Vaughn got underway.

FOUR-YEAR TERM

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, the applause which greeted the President's recommendation that the country adopt a 4-year term for Representatives in Congress was eloquent testimony to the popularity of such a measure among the Members.

I need hardly remind you that today every Member of Congress is virtually swamped by an avalanche of work which seems to increase with every session. Legislative life grows more formidable, complex and technical each day.

I believe that we should always be slow to tinker with the Constitution. But adherence to the 2-year term for Representatives, at this time of our history, is definitely a disservice to the people. It prevents Congress from acting with full efficiency and effectiveness. It tends to concentrate much of the thinking and energy of Representatives on their own reelection, and it constitutes a drain on the time that they would far prefer to devote to legislative affairs. The short term also deprives new Members in the House of a fair opportunity to demonstrate their legislative ability and achievement before going before the people for a verdict. Frequent election campaigns, furthermore, are too costly for persons of moderate circumstances to undertake.

A 4-year term, on the other hand, would not only promote efficiency, but also would help to remove many roadblocks to cooperation between the Members of the House of Representatives and the President in advancing programs required for this age of unprecedented danger. The President's proposal merits our full support.

FOUR-YEAR TERM

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, without doubt, public interest calls upon us to support a 4-year term for Representatives.

The average Member in the House today represents slightly over 400,000 persons; in the First Congress he represented about 45,000. In the 88th Congress, there were over 15,000 bills introduced; in the first session, fewer than 150. Comparable differences exist in every aspect of the legislative process.

With the tremendous growth and development of our country, the problems presented to a Member in Congress are not only infinitely greater in volume, but also are far more diverse and complex than they were more than 185 years ago.

A 2-year term is wholly inadequate for the Congressmen trying to cope with these problems.

In addition, the 2-year term causes great inconvenience to individuals who have families, and whose children are of school age. Representatives hesitate to move a family and interrupt attendance of their children at school when they face the uncertainty of elections every other year. This in turn creates pressures on him to return home for long weekends, legislative calendars are often adjusted for the benefit of such Members, and the progress of legislation frequently suffers delay.

Of the various 4-year proposals before us, I favor the one proposed by the President, providing that the election of Representatives shall coincide with the presidential term. Experience has shown that the off-year elections frequently interfere with action on the President's programs. When the people elect a President, they give him and his administration their mandate for the future conduct of the national government. That mandate is more likely to be carried out when a House of Representatives is elected at the same time as the President—and elected for 4 years.

ERNEST PETINAUD

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I thought I would call to the attention of the Members of the House today the birthday of a great American, our headwaiter, Ernest Petinaud. It was my good fortune to meet this wonderful person back 7 years ago when I first came to the Congress. I believe every Member of the House will agree with me that he is one of the most gracious persons in the Nation's Capital. His concern for the plight of his fellow man makes him a great man.

Ernest Petinaud is an untiring and faithful worker no matter how late the hour or how long the day. He is always ready at the House restaurant to greet the Members of Congress and their guests with a friendly smile and a cheery word.

Mr. Speaker, we in the Nation's Capital are very fortunate indeed to have the excellence of service, the quality of performance and the warmth of his personality.

This is Ernest Petinaud's 61st birthday, but I know that Ernest will always remain young at heart.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURKE. I am happy to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that the gentleman from Massachusetts has taken this time to call to the attention of the House the birthday of one of our real favorite employees of the legislative branch.

Ernest Petinaud's sartorial splendor is exceeded only by his perfect patience and pleasing personality. I know of no one who is employed by the legislative branch who regards the Members of Congress with higher esteem or treats them with greater courtesy.

So it is nice that our colleague is taking this time to call to the attention of the Members of the House the 61st birthday of Ernest Petinaud, and I join with my colleagues in these felicitations to this splendid and devoted employee of the legislative branch.

Mr. BURKE. I thank my good friend and colleague from Massachusetts.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURKE. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. I should like to join with the gentleman in his tribute to Ernest Petinaud, and to say that 2 years ago I had the good fortune to have him in my delegation, and he made a better ambassador than about 90 percent of the delegation.

Mr. O'NEILL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BURKE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. O'NEILL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I join Congressman JAMES BURKE in offering congratulations to Ernest Petinaud, headwaiter in the House restaurant, on his 61st birthday. He is a wonderful man, a credit to the House of Representatives. I have my breakfast there daily. It is great to start the day meeting a man so pleasant, so joyful, and so kind. He beams with personality and makes the day a brighter one for whomever meets him. The Members of the House can well be proud of Ernest Petinaud.

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. YOUNGER] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my colleagues in paying tribute to Ernest Petinaud on the occasion of his 61st birthday. "Ernie," as he is known to all of us, certainly typifies the ideal employee in the friendly manner with which he always greets us and the efficient manner in which he conducts the activities of which he is in charge. We are certainly fortunate in having as an employee of the House a man of his qualities.

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. ROGERS] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I would like to join my colleagues who have joined the many friends of Ernest Petinaud, of the House restaurant, in wishing Ernest a happy birthday.

Ernest is a remarkable man, possessed of wit, tact, perception, and generosity. He has given the House of Representatives great service, and I hope will continue to do so for many, many years.

Ernest's abilities and talent have contributed much to this House. A born diplomat, he presides daily with uninterrupted dignity over the Members' dining room.

Ernest Petinaud's attention and consideration of each Member of the House have earned him the respect of many friends. I extend to him best wishes for the coming year, and for many years of continued health and success.

HOW ARE MEN CALLED INTO THE SERVICE?

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROGERS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I think the appropriate committees of the House need to look into the matter of calling young men into the service. I just received a letter from a father, and I wish to read it to the House of Representatives:

MARGATE JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL,

Rayburn Building, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: My son is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He suffered a cartilage and ligament injury to his knee while playing football. He also had a broken bone in his foot that causes a slight limp after a strain has been placed on it. In college he had a bone chipped in his arm that has caused pain at different times. This was discovered while he was in the service. His nose has been broken three times and he suffers chronic bronchial infections.

With the 1st Cavalry in Vietnam, he fought in the battle at An Khe and Pleiku. He was in hand-to-hand combat at Plei Me and the Ia Drang Valley. At the present time he is on another search-and-destroy mission near the Cambodian border.

In order to understand the fairness and impartiality of the Selective Service Board, I would like to know why there is no menial duty that can be given to physical weaklings such as Joe Namath, of the New York Jets' professional football team so the physical giants such as my son can be freed to fight our country's battles.

To me and I expect most people who can think, issuing a physical deferment to a professional football player is the most asinine action of the year. I would like an explanation of this.

Sincerely,

E. H. CARNEY,
Principal.

I join with this father in asking that the appropriate committee of this Congress help to find such answers.

IN SUPPORT OF THEIR COUNTRY

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend my remarks, and to include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Speaker, in keeping with my intent to speak of patriotic Americans and their efforts in support of their country, I want, today, to tell the story of Mr. Paul Stewart, of Columbus, Ga., and of Vietnam Mail Call.

This dedicated American has just been chosen Man of the Year by the South

Columbus Merchants Association, and in this regard, I received a letter from the association's president, Mr. James L. Thomas, which included a letter from Gen. Harry W. O. Kinnard of the 1st Cavalry Division—Airmobile. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that these letters tell far better than I could the story of this courageous man—in support of his country:

Columbus, Ga.

HON. "BO" CALLAWAY,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SIR: I am writing to ask you to please bring to the attention of the House of Representatives the outstanding efforts of a fine Georgian and American, E. Paul Stewart, 2517 Dawson Street, Columbus, Ga., in behalf of our men in Vietnam and our country's defense effort.

He has given his time and energy to the most worthwhile project, Vietnam Mail Call full time since he singlehandedly started the project in July of 1965. He has conducted the project at a substantial sacrifice to his family and to himself, often working 16 to 18 hours a day. He has said he will discontinue the program when our boys are home with their loved ones and the people of South Vietnam are free.

Paul has typewritten over 900 letters to newspapers, radio and television stations, magazines, personalities, colleges, schools, etc. throughout the United States and many friendly countries around the world pleading support for our protective forces in South Vietnam. He mailed over 500 printed news releases to the news media around the United States and to friends of the United States around the world.

Paul's letters and news releases inspired hundreds of organizations, colleges, schools, clubs, and thousands of individuals throughout the Nation to start similar support projects to back our men in Vietnam and our country's defense effort. Paul and Vietnam Mail Call have been praised by privates to generals in Vietnam. Many editorials have been written praising the project.

The idea of the project is to flood our men in Vietnam with morale-building friendly letters of support and encouragement to offset the protests and demonstrations by a few misguided souls in this country who have received notice from the press far in excess of their importance. The letters, Christmas greetings, and gift packages let our men know freedom-loving Americans all over America and our friends around the world do appreciate the sacrifices they and their families are making in defense of freedom, and that we do back them 100 percent.

HON. "BO" CALLAWAY: To say Vietnam Mail Call is a success is the understatement of the year. Paul and his daughter, Mary Ellen, have sorted, stamped forwarding addresses on over 50,000 support letters and remailed them to our boys in Vietnam. VNMC shipped several thousand gift packages to U.S. troops in Vietnam. Paul is now going after the 100,000 mark in support letters.

Paul has not received 1 cent nor does he expect any money for his long hours of work on this project month after month.

I do hope you will bring this to the attention of the House. So many times people who work the hardest for our community and country never receive the thanks they deserve.

Best wishes in all your plans for the future.

Sincerely,

JAMES L. THOMAS,
President.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY,
HEADQUARTERS 1ST CAVALRY
APO San Francisco, Calif., January 5, 1966.
Mr. JAMES THOMAS,
Columbus, Ga.

DEAR MR. THOMAS: I take this opportunity and means to recommend Mr. Paul Stewart to be South Carolina Man of the Year. Lt. Col. John Rillovick (retired) has written me indicating that he has already nominated Paul for this honor. Since I am a near neighbor to South Columbus, I wish to express my position on this matter.

You well know that Paul was the founder and chief proponent of Vietnam Mail Call. This program has been an unqualified success and as such brought a touch of Christmas to the soldiers here in Vietnam. Even greater than the Christmas aspect, it indicated to all of us that we are being supported by the folks at home; this is important to soldiers away from their country. Unfortunately the spectacular type incidents such as demonstrations receive lurid publicity which can only be offset by great efforts and multitudes of good deeds. From my vantage point it appears that Paul has been a great contributor in this regard, and as such should receive some sort of public recognition from the people of South Columbus.

I thank you in advance for whatever consideration you may give to this matter. Best personal regards to all the friends at home.

Sincerely,

H. W. O. KINNARD,

MINIMUM WAGES AND PUERTO RICO

Mr. GLENN ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. GLENN ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, while the poor are being told that the war on poverty will provide them jobs, are these jobs to be snatched away from their hungry reach by another minimum-wage bill?

In the light of the threatening economic clouds which developed during the congressional races the Nation braces itself against the minimum-wage hurricane which the President promised in his state of the Union message.

The little island of Puerto Rico seems to be in the eye of this particular storm. With one-fourth the per capita income of New York has Puerto Rico pirated away too many industries from the mainland. On the other hand, will Puerto Rico be exempt from the rigors, the constrictions of a national uniform minimum wage in order that it continue to be the economic playground of special interests?

The hearing before the House committee on the subject of Puerto Rican minimum wages was strangely limited—almost hush-hush. A Senate subcommittee journeyed to the island 3 weeks ago to further explore Puerto Rico and minimum wages. I am told that only 1 Senator out of 15 appeared: the liberal press has observed its customary silence. Leon Keyserling, the liberal writer, made a 3-month study of Puerto Rican minimum wages which is unavailable for public examination.

Since Governor Rockefeller of the State of New York vetoed a $1.50 an hour minimum wage—for the wealthiest State in the Nation—stating that he did not wish to place New York at a disadvantage with other States—what is this administration planning for or against Puerto Rico in the way of minimum wages? Before Pandora's 1966 minimum-wage box is opened, I urge a closer study by the House committee on Puerto Rico and minimum wages.

LENGTH OF TERM OF MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. RUMSFELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. RUMSFELD. Mr. Speaker, today we have received the message of the President of the United States concerning his proposal for a 4-year term for Members of the House of Representatives.

I have been interested to hear the variety of brief speeches today supporting this proposal by Members of this body.

The various proposals apart from the 2-year term include a 4-year term with Members to be elected in presidential election years, a 4-year term with Members to be elected in nonpresidential election years, a 4-year term with half of the Members running for election in presidential election years and half of them running in nonpresidential election years.

All these proposals have been criticized: some as being too short, some as being too long, some as creating a House that would be too responsive to the executive, or that would be too unresponsive to the executive.

Last year I testified before the Joint Committee on the Organization of the Congress, recommending its consideration of a proposal which I believe is free of the various drawbacks inherent in the proposals which I have described.

Basically, the program I suggested would phase Members of the House into a 6-year election cycle, just as Members of the Senate are today, but Members of the House would run first for a 2-year term, and then for a 4-year term, then again for a 2-year term, on an alternating basis. In this way they would run twice every 6 years, rather than three times, as they do now. This would mean that Members of the House would run both during presidential election years and nonpresidential years over a period of time. Thus, this approach would avoid, I believe, the criticisms that the House would become too responsive or too unresponsive, depending upon when the 4-year term might be scheduled.

I personally see some serious drawbacks in the President's proposal for a 4-year term. I hope that the appropriate committees of the House will give careful thought to all the approaches, including the one I have outlined and on which I testified before the joint committee last year.

PROTECTION OF PUBLIC INTEREST IN LABOR DISPUTES

Mr. REID of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REID of New York. Mr. Speaker, the recent New York City transit strike has clearly demonstrated the need to reform existing laws to protect the public interest in serious labor disputes.

It is imperative that we give the President new and necessary powers to cover not only national emergency strikes, but also labor controversies which involve State or municipal employees engaged in transportation, transmission, or communication; or which imperil the health or safety of any substantial part of the population or territory of our Nation.

Today I am introducing legislation which would accomplish these aims. My distinguished colleague, the senior Senator from New York, Mr. JAVITS, is sponsoring a similar bill in the other body.

The legislation we propose, Mr. Speaker, would amend the Taft-Hartley Act and the Railway Labor Act to protect the public in a wide variety of controversies, from transit strikes to steel crises to rail work-rules disputes. The legislation would:

First. Authorize the President to appoint a board of inquiry to make public recommendations for a settlement based on fact-finding.

Second. Authorize the President to order a 30-day freeze, during which the parties would be under a duty to bargain upon the recommendations, although neither party would be required to accept the recommendations.

Third. Authorize the President to seek appointment by a Federal court of a special receiver to operate the struck facilities to the extent which, in the opinion of the court, is necessary to protect the public health and safety.

Fourth. Extend coverage of the emergency labor disputes provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, including these new provisions as well as the existing 80-day cooling-off provisions, to controversies which, though they may not affect an entire industry nor imperil the health or safety of the Nation as a whole, do affect interstate commerce and do imperil the health or safety of a substantial part of the population or territory of the Nation, and cover employees of a State or political subdivision if they are engaged in transportation, transmission, or communication.

This legislation, Mr. Speaker, would require a factfinding board and subsequent bargaining within a period of 30 days. During this time public opinion would have a chance to assert itself. The proposal does not involve compulsory arbitration—the negotiations would be voluntary and carried out by the parties themselves.

The record over the past few years is clear: existing machinery is inadequate. We have witnessed a severe transit strike in the largest city of our country, a steel crisis last fall, and a rail crisis in 1963—all of which had to be resolved on an ad hoc basis and not within an established procedure.

I am happy the President recognized the need for reform in his state of the Union message, and it is my hope that the distinguished chairman of the House Special Subcommittee on Labor, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. THOMPSON], will hold prompt hearings on this important legislation.

LOOPHOLE IN EXISTING ANTI-BOYCOTT PROCEDURES

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Speaker, I have been informed that the American President Lines has reinstated its previously scheduled visit to the Israeli port of Haifa for the cruise ship SS President Roosevelt, which reportedly had cancelled this scheduled stopover in acquiescence to the Arab boycott.

All governments involved evidently helped to make this possible. The announcement was carried in this morning's New York Times.

I do want to point out that this experience vividly illuminates a glaring loophole in existing antiboycott procedures, as administered by the Department of Commerce. I have written to the Secretary, urging that the Department study present rules and regulations with a view toward strengthening and broadening their effect, so that this lamentable table of events may be avoided in the future.

The Secretary has assured me that he is currently examining antiboycott provisions in line with my suggested improvements.

This recent acquiescence to foreign boycott pressure is deplorable, and it raises the question whether the United States has formulated realistic procedures aimed at preventing interference at the source.

The fresh reappraisal of the Commerce Department should shed some light on the matter. We must continue to keep a sharp eye on events of this nature and if need be, alter existing regulations to remove any ambiguity or subservience afflicting the American response.

THE COSTLY CONSONANT "T"

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, just a single consonant—the letter “T”—is going to cost the American taxpayer at least a billion dollars over the next 2 years.

The trouble began when the administration planned to set up a separate Government Department of Transportation, Housing, and Urban Growth. Then somebody pointed out that the new Department would have to be known as THUG—Thug for short. Well, that would not do.

So then they put it up to the computer and the computer came back with a new title, the Department of Transportation, Housing and Urban Development. More trouble for the administration. In Washington gobbledygook, that would work out as THUD—Thud for short—and that would suggest another administration flop. Surgery was called for. Cut off that deadly first letter “T” and you would come up with HUD, so that is the way it is. And that is why we are going to be saddled with an entirely new Department of Transportation, to take care of that extra letter “T.”

While we are changing names maybe it would be in order for the administration to retitle the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Under current directives, this agency ought clearly to be called the Department of Public Health, Education, and Welfare—PHEW—or Phew for what it has become under the Johnson administration.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNGER. Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that the President has sent a request that we change the term of our membership in the House to 4 years, with the election occurring at the same time as the presidential election. I think that would be a very disturbing action on our part. I would go along with the 4-year term, but, in my opinion, the election should be every 2 years, with half of the Members of the House elected every 2 years and a third of the Senate. I think one of the stabilizing influences that has supported this Government is the fact that the people can go to the election booth every 2 years and vote for a percentage of the House and Senate. If we change that, then I think we will lose one of the most stabilizing influences we have had for perpetuating this Government.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise as a result of the President's message recommending an extension of the term of Members of the House of Representatives of the Congress to 4 years, perhaps so that most all of them would eventually become “coattail riders,” as many did in the election of 1964. I for one resent very much the executive branch interceding with affairs of the House which governs its own rules and prerogatives, according to the Constitution. Further, I care not one whit about what political pollsters think, if they poll among uninformed people.

I rise today, Mr. Speaker, primarily to say that I noticed no lack of opponents for congressional seats, nor any Members of Congress who did not know full well before they ran for a 2-year term, the emoluments as well as the responsibilities of this high and privileged office. I think we are in trouble with the Senate also, as to concurrence at this point.

I particularly resent the intrusion upon the prerogatives and jurisdiction of the Committee on the Organization and Reorganization—of Congress which has been serving now for over a year and is the second in 60 years, and which we will ask be continued under Senate Concurrent Resolution 69 forthwith at considerable expense. It has not had a chance to express itself on this very vital matter after hearing testimony from political scientists, fellow Congressmen, and Members of the Senate and members of the executive branch of the Government, and so forth.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to warn this body in considering any change whatsoever of the constitutional dictates of our Founding Fathers that we are dealing with very basic essentials that have made this Nation great as far as the principle of separation of powers is concerned, the power by the executive if not indeed the judicial branch of the Government, and even the very basic consideration of majority rule. I think we should ponder, be pensive, perceive, and exercise slow but prudent judgment before we jump on any gravy train to change the time of election or period of service of Members of the House of Representatives. If indeed the Constitution is to remain in effect wherein trade, tariff, taxes, and levies must originate in this body, the body of the people's personal representatives—whom they have a right to turn out to pasture at any time in any 2-year period that they so desire—we must preserve this tenet and constitutional principle.

IS OUR NATO COMMITMENT REALLY AUTOMATIC?

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. FINDLEY. Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HAYS] as presented yesterday—RECORD, page 567—to this body, concerned statements I had made on Monday and Tuesday relative to a recently published exchange of correspondence between President Johnson and the Prime Minister of Turkey in 1964.

The gentleman from Ohio has on many occasions and over a period of years demonstrated his concern for Atlantic unity, and I admire him for the energy he devotes to the NATO Parliamentarians' Conferences each year. I am sure his comments of yesterday were made from a sincere desire to clear up facts, and that is my one and only purpose in replying to them.

The President's effort in June 1964 to discourage what appeared to be an unwise military intervention by an ally is certainly laudable.

My criticism of the President's hitherto secret letter to the Prime Minister of Turkey was limited entirely to the sentence in which he qualified the automatic character of the U.S. commitment to defend Turkey in the case of Soviet attack. The President's letter included this unfortunate statement:

I hope you will understand that your NATO allies have not had a chance to consider whether they have an obligation to protect Turkey against the Soviet Union if Turkey takes a step which results in Soviet intervention without the full consent and understanding of its NATO allies.

In my opinion, this sentence should have been omitted from the President's letter. With it omitted, the letter would have retained—in my view—adequate strength to deal with the Cyprus crisis and it would not have qualified in any way the automatic character of our commitment to defend Turkey against Soviet attack.

With the sentence included, however, it obviously caused the Turkish Government concern and raised the question of credibility of our treaty commitments elsewhere.

In replying to President Johnson, the Turkish Prime Minister wrote:

Our understanding is that the North Atlantic Treaty imposes upon all member states the obligation to come forthwith to the assistance of any member victim of aggression. The only point left to the discretion of the member states is the nature and the scale of this assistance.

If NATO members should start discussing the right and wrong of the situation of their fellow-member victim of a Soviet aggression—the very foundations of the alliance would be shaken.

Until the President's letter became public, it was universally assumed that the North Atlantic Treaty obligated each signatory automatically to assist each and all others in the event of attack. Indeed, the treaty was explicit on this point. The President's letter, however, suggested that the act of assistance would not be necessarily automatic but might depend on other circumstances, that is, what Turkey did in regard to Cyprus.

If the President deemed it necessary to make some reference to the NATO commitment, he could have put it in terms which would have left intact its automatic character.

Treaty commitments are based completely on faith between governments. The one we have made with our NATO allies is supremely important to all parties, and especially to Turkey, a nation literally in the shadow of the Soviet Union.

Since the affair news reports indicate that U.S.-Turkish relations have been chilly and Turkey has been quietly trying to improve its relations with the Soviet Union.

MEANS SHOULD BE MADE AVAILABLE FOR DELIVERY OF GIFTS TO SERVICE PERSONNEL IN VIETNAM

Mr. O'NEILL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend my remarks, and to include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'NEILL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, during the last week I had at least six inquiries directed to my office from organizations who are desirous of sending gifts to our boys in Vietnam. For example, the Arthur D. Little Co., the office located in my area, its employees collected and bought over $750 worth of gifts. They now find it is going to cost $52 to send these gifts to the boys in Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, in Charlestown, the VFW has also collected numerous gifts for our service personnel in Vietnam but they find it is going to cost an estimated $45 to send these gifts to our boys.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me it would be well to encourage these organizations, both civic and charitable, who desire to help build the morale of our boys overseas by sending them gifts and to work out some way whereby we can make available the franking privilege so that these organizations will not have to pay the postage.

Mr. Speaker, I have today written to the Postmaster General, the Honorable Lawrence O'Brien, asking him to look into this matter.

SARGENT SHRIVER TO DEVOTE MORE TIME AND ENERGY TO DIRECTION OF THE WAR ON POVERTY

Mr. FARNUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. FARNUM. Mr. Speaker, for the poor of this Nation no news could be more welcome than the President's recent announcement that Sargent Shriver will be able to devote even more of his time and energy to the direction of the war on poverty.

Mr. Shriver's stewardship of the Peace Corps and the war on poverty has been an inspiring example of devotion to public service—a devotion prompted neither by necessity nor ambition but springing from an intense consciousness of a citizen's responsibility in a free society.

Not only has Sargent Shriver found for himself the supreme satisfactions of action in the service of his country, but he has inspired others with his enthusiasm and energy and with his unique vision, which unites high purpose with high adventure. He has brought many talented people into Government service, and thousands of the young people of this generation have found a channel for their best hopes in the organizations he has headed. This Nation is already richer from what he has accomplished to date.

Mr. Speaker, no one in this body need be told of Mr. Shriver's quickness of mind, apparently inexhaustible energy, or attention to detail. Nor can it be said that any agency is more responsive to the will of the Congress than those directed by Sargent Shriver.

It was the intention of Congress that the injustice of poverty be banished and Sargent Shriver now addresses himself fully to that task.

Mr. Speaker, for those who wanly hope that this war can be carried on quietly and politely, with little disturbance of the status quo, with the least possible inconvenience to the conscience, Mr. Shriver's new schedule offers little solace. The war on poverty will now be carried on with greater intensity. For it is not the nature of this man to hold back.

Yet, no one need fear the outcome, for under Sargent Shriver we can rest assured that the war on poverty will be directed with the full understanding and respect of American freedoms and institutions. Few feel more deeply than he the vital importance of preserving those freedoms and institutions and none is more dedicated to assuring that they become the rights of all American citizens.

ERNEST PETINAUD, A VALUED HOUSE EMPLOYEE

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join the friends of our very delightful headwaiter in the House dining room, Mr. Ernest Petinaud, in extending to him on this, his 61st birthday, our great desire that he live for a long, long time and to wish for him many, many happy returns on this, his birthday.

As the Members know, Ernest is one of the most charming and delightful people that we have on Capitol Hill, and I am glad to recognize him on this, his birthday.

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANDRUM. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LANDRUM] in paying felicitations to Ernest Petinaud on his 61st birthday and to wish him many, many more birthdays.

PROGRAM FOR THE BALANCE OF THE WEEK AND FOR THE WEEK OF JANUARY 24

Mr. LAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAIRD. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to inquire of the distinguished majority leader of the program for the balance of this week and any possible program for next week.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAIRD. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, we have no further business for this week. So far as I know at the present time we will have no legislative business next week. There will be some messages sent up from the White House. However, we do not want to foreclose the possibility of business. We may have amendments to bills that come back from the other body. However, if the gentleman will bear with us, we would like to reserve the opportunity of announcing a further program, if necessary.

Mr. LAIRD. I thank the gentleman from Oklahoma.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY NEXT

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH BUSINESS IN ORDER UNDER THE CALENDAR WEDNESDAY RULE

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with next week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR HOUSE MEMBERS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 364)

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:
In 1816 Thomas Jefferson wrote:

Some men ascribe to the men of a preceding age a wisdom more than human, and suppose what they did to be beyond amendment. . . . I am certainly not an advocate for frequent and untried changes in laws and constitutions. . . . But I know also, that laws and institutions must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind.

I believe that in the interest of progress and sound modern government—and to nourish and strengthen our creative federal system—we must amend our Constitution, to provide a 4-year term of office for Members of the House of Representatives.

I believe that for the same reasons we must also eliminate those defects in the electoral college system which make possible the frustration of the people's will in the election of their President and Vice President.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR HOUSE MEMBERS

Debate over the length of the House term is not new. It began in the Constitutional Convention, where those who thought annual elections were essential to freedom clashed with others, such as Madison, who held that 3 years were required "in a Government so extensive, for Members to form any knowledge of the various interests of the States to which they did not belong," and that without such knowledge "their trust could not be usefully discharged." Madison's thoughts are ruefully familiar to Members of the House today: he was certain that a 1-year term would be "almost consumed in preparing for and traveling to and from the seat of national business," and that even with a 2-year term none of the Representatives "who wished to be reelected would remain at the seat of Government."

Between the advocates of a 1-year term—those who, bearing in mind recent English experience, feared the despotism of a government unchecked by the popular will—and those who saw a tenure of 3 years as necessary for wise administration, a compromise of 2 years was reached.

Thus there was little magic in the number 2, even in the year of its adoption. I am convinced there is even less magic today, and that the question of tenure should be reexamined in the light of our needs in the 20th century.

II

The authors of the Federalist Papers said about the House of Representatives:

As it is essential to liberty that the Government in general should have a common interest with the people; so it is particularly essential that the branch of it under consideration should have an immediate dependence on, and an intimate sympathy with the people. Frequent elections are unquestionably the only policy by which this dependency and sympathy can be effectually secured. But what particular degree of frequency may be absolutely necessary for the purpose, does not appear to be susceptible of any precise calculation; and must depend on a variety of circumstances with which it may be connected.

The circumstances with which the 2-year term is presently connected are—

The accelerating volume of legislation on which Members are required to pass. In the first Congress, 142 bills were introduced, resulting in 108 public laws. In the 88th Congress, 15,299 bills were introduced, of which 666 were enacted into public law.

The increasingly complex problems that generate this flood of legislation, requiring Members to be familiar with an immense range of fact and opinion. It is no longer sufficient to develop solutions for an agricultural nation with few foreign responsibilities; now a man or woman chosen to represent his people in the House of Representatives must understand the consequence of our spiraling population growth, of urbanization, of the new scientific revolution, of our welfare and education requirements, and of our responsibilities as the world's most powerful democracy.

Longer sessions of Congress, made necessary by the burden of legislation and outstanding public issues. In less turbulent times, Members of Congress might conduct the public business with dispatch during election years, and spend the summer and autumn campaigning in their districts. Congress adjourned in April of 1904, June of 1906, May of 1908, and June of 1910. But increasing workloads have substantially extended the sessions. Thus it was in August of 1958 that Congress concluded its work, in September of 1960, October of 1962, and again in October of 1964. The competitive pressures imposed by the 2-year term, when the incumbent must remain in Washington into the fall to attend the public business, reduce his capacity to do either task—campaigning or legislating—with the complete attention his conscience and the public interest demand.

The increasing costs of campaigning that biennially impose heavy burdens on those who represent vigorously contested districts, and that magnify the influence of large contributors, pressure groups, and special interest lobbyists.

It may be said that every elected official confronts similar circumstances in the 1960's. Yet it can be said of none that his power for the public good or ill is both so great as the Congressman's, and so sharply pressed in time.

For this public servant—part judge and author of laws, part leader of his people, part mediator between the executive branch and those he represents—is scarcely permitted to take his seat in the historic Hall of the House, when he must begin once more to make his case to his constituency.

The Congressman's effectiveness as a legislator is reduced by this.

His district's right to be fully represented in Congress is diminished by this.

The Nation's need to be led by its best qualified men, giving their full attention to issues on which our security and progress depend, is ignored by this.

In the States, in private business, and indeed, in the Federal Government itself, the wisdom of longer terms for senior officials has come steadily to be recognized. State after State has adopted a 4-year gubernatorial term.

This administration has made every effort to extend ambassadorial tours of duty, to promote career civil servants to posts of higher responsibilities, and to retain Cabinet and sub-Cabinet officers on the job for longer periods than before. For we have learned that brief and uncertain periods in office contribute—not to the best interests of democracy—but to harassed inefficiency and the loss of invaluable experience.

III

Thus I recommend that the Congress adopt this amendment to the Constitution in the belief that it will—

Provide for each Member a sufficient period in which he can bring his best judgment to bear on the great questions of national survival, economic growth, and social welfare.

Free him from the inexorable pressures of biennial campaigning for reelection.

Reduce the cost—financial and political—of holding congressional office.

Attract the best men in private and public life into competition for this high public office.

I am mindful of the principal reason advanced for maintaining the 2-year term—that it is necessary if the voice of the people is to be heard, and changes in public opinion are to be registered on the conduct of public policy. My own experience in almost three decades in public office—and, I believe, the experience of Members of Congress today—is otherwise.

For we do not live in a day when news of congressional action requires weeks to reach our constituents, nor when public opinion is obscured by time and distance. Communications media rush the news to every home and shop within minutes of its occurrence. Public opinion polls, and mountains of mail, leave little doubt about what our people think of the issues most vital to them. I do not fear deafness on the part of those who will take their seats in Congress for a 4-year term.

It is also vital to recognize the effect of a longer term on the authority of the House in making known the will of the people. Established in office for 4 years, the weight of the House in the councils of Government is certain to increase. For the sake of democracy, that is a development devoutly to be welcomed.

I recommend that the amendment become effective no earlier than 1972.

It is imperative that each Member of the House have the opportunity of campaigning during a presidential election year. To divide the House into two classes, as some have proposed—one elected during the "off-year," one with the President—would create an unnecessary and wholly unfair division in that body. It would also create severe problems in every State: as reapportionment is ordered and redistricting takes place.

"Off-year" elections are notorious for attracting far fewer voters—perhaps as much as 15 percent fewer—than presidential elections.

If our purpose is to serve the democratic ideal by making the people's House more effective in its performance of the people's business, then we must require that its Members be chosen by the largest electorate our democracy can produce. That, assuredly, is the electorate called into being during a presidential year.

I do not believe the Congress will wish to make the House the least representative of our three elective elements; by perpetually condemning half its membership to a shrunken electorate. Such a body could not long sustain its claim to be an equal partner in the work of representative government.

If this amendment is to serve the public interest—if Members are to be free of campaigning for a period sufficiently long to enable them to master the work of the House—it is right that they should remain at that work during the entire term to which they are elected.

It would defeat the purpose of the amendment, if a Member were free to campaign for the Senate without resigning his seat in the House. Because we seek to strengthen the House, and through it, representative government—not to provide a sanctuary and platform for further electoral contests—I recommend that no Member of either House be eligible for election as a Member of the other House until his own term has expired, unless, at least 30 days prior to that election, he submits his resignation from the office he holds.

Our democracy cannot remain static, a prisoner to the past, if it is to enrich the lives of coming generations. Laws and institutions—to paraphrase Jefferson—must go hand in hand with the progress of the human mind, and must respond to the changing conditions of life itself.

One law that should be changed limits the term of office for one of the great arms of our Government to a period too brief for the public good.

Let us no longer bind ourselves to it. Let us reform it. We shall better serve our people when we do.

Because I profoundly agree with former President Eisenhower, when he said, "Congressmen ought to be elected for 4 years, at the same time with the President," I urge the Congress promptly to consider a constitutional amendment extending the term of office for the House of Representatives to 4 years.

REFORM OF THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE SYSTEM

In my special message to the Congress last January, I urged an amendment to the Constitution to reform the electoral college system. I renew this recommendation and strongly reaffirm the need to reform the electoral college system.

There are several major defects in the existing system. They should be eliminated in order to assure that the people's will shall not be frustrated in the choice of their President and Vice President.

First, there presently exists the possibility that the constitutional independence of unpledged electors will be exploited, and that their votes will be manipulated in a close presidential race to block the election of a major candidate in order to throw the election into the House of Representatives. This grave risk should be removed.

Second, if the election is thrown into the House of Representatives, the existing system suffers from other fundamental defects. In such an election, the House of Representatives would be empowered to elect a President from the three highest candidates. However, each State casts only one vote, with the result that the least populous States have the same vote in the election of the President as the most populous States.

As early as 1823, Madison reached the conclusion that—

The present rule of voting for President by the House of Representatives is so great a departure from the republican principle of numerical equality, and even from the Federal rule, which qualifies the numerical by a State equality, and is so pregnant also, with a mischievous tendency in practice, that an amendment to the Constitution on this point is justly called for by all its considerate and best friends.

I firmly believe that we should put an end to this undemocratic procedure.

Third, if the electoral vote is indecisive under the existing system, the President is elected by the House of Representatives, but the Vice President is elected by the Senate. This creates the possibility of the election of a President and a Vice President from different parties. That possibility should not exist. To prevent its realization, the President and the Vice President should both be elected by the same body.

Fourth, the 23d amendment makes no provision for participation by the District of Columbia in an election of the President by the House of Representatives, or of the Vice President by the Senate.

I firmly believe that we should extend to the District of Columbia all the rights of participation in the election of a President and Vice President which the 50 States may exercise.

Fifth, existing law fails to provide for the death of the President-elect or Vice President-elect between election day and the counting of the electoral votes in December. There is also no provision in the Constitution to cover the contingency presented by the death of a candidate for President or Vice President shortly before the popular election in November. These gaps should now be filled.

Elimination of these defects in our Constitution are long overdue. Our concepts of self-government and sound government require it.

Congress can now, in the words of Daniel Webster, "perform something worthy to be remembered," by uprooting the more objectionable features in the system of electing a President and Vice President, and thereby helping to preserve representative government and the two-party system.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON.

A BILL FOR THE RELIEF OF MR. AMLETO ABBATANGELO

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CURTIS] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced today a bill for the relief of Mr. Amleto Abbatangelo, a present citizen of Italy who is in this country on a non-immigrant visa. Mr. Abbatangelo has peculiar talents of immediate value to the growing Missouri tourist industry. Although this individual is making efforts to avail himself of an administrative remedy, the machinery for the adjustment of his status will take some time. This bill will allow the opportunity for Mr. Abbatangelo's needed skills to benefit the country and the economy while his status is being clarified.

ALCOHOLISM—ONE COMPANY'S SPLENDID REACTION

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. TALCOTT] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. TALCOTT. Mr. Speaker, the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., has adopted a farsighted compassionate policy for its employees suffering from the disease of alcoholism. So that other company and union officials may profit from the experience of this company, I ask unanimous consent to have an article entitled "Alcoholism," which was contained in the December 1965 issue of P.T.M., the company magazine, be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at this point.

I urge other companies and labor unions, large and small, to consider this valuable report on a most commendable project of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co.:

ALCOHOLISM

More than 6 years ago, Pacific Telephone introduced a formal policy and program to help employees suffering from the disease of alcoholism.

This program has brought our company wide recognition and representatives of our medical and personnel departments have been asked to speak to groups throughout the country. Our general medical director, Dr. Clyde C. Greene, Jr., recently participated in the Industrial Workshop at the 1965 Utah School of Alcohol Studies. He traced the development of our program from its discussion stages to the present time. One of the early problems he mentioned was overcoming the reluctance of employees, including those in management, to accept the fact that alcoholism is an illness and not perverse or anti-social behavior. Recognition by Pacific Telephone people of the fact that alcoholism is, indeed, a serious disease, has now been generally accomplished through the efforts of our medical and personnel departments.

Last year, when the program had been in existence for 5 years, the company decided to review completely all aspects of the policy and program. This has now been done with the assistance and cooperation of all the areas and departments. The results are heartening. The overall program is considered to be of definite value to the company and its employees. Many employees have been helped because of the existence of the policy, a number of them persons who had not been diagnosed as alcoholics. Many recognized alcoholics have been rehabilitated. The review showed a need for some minor revisions in the program. The company is now working to bring about these changes.

Over the 6 years the program has been in operation there has been a significant change in the public attitude toward the severity and incidence of alcoholism. However, the stigma attached to the diagnosis has not disappeared and supervisors do not yet find the recognition and supervision of a person suffering from alcoholism an easy task.

An informal status report, cited by Dr. Greene in his recent talk before the Utah School on Alcohol Studies, indicates that our rehabilitation rate to date has been about 40 percent, with rehabilitation being defined as 2 years of work with no known use of alcohol. The remaining 60 percent of the cases were closed as failures. Among the failures, 11 percent resulted from death, 40 percent from retirement for any reason, including age; 15 percent from resignation, and 34 percent from dismissal. Many other cases are still open with the end result unpredictable.

The medical department has knowledge of other employees who have controlled their use of alcohol without having been officially recognized as alcoholics.

Employees being the company's single most valued asset, we cannot afford to lose them for any health problem, including alcoholism, without making a serious effort to maintain and/or restore good health. What does this mean to us as employees of this company? What it should mean, if we are aware of the policy and program, is that alcoholism is recognized as a serious illness, that the company stands ready to assist anyone suffering from it as quickly as the need can be recognized and diagnosed, and that the chances for successful treatment are much greater if it is detected early. The longer we wait, the harder the problem. Many of the failures detailed in this report resulted from late diagnosis.

In an accompanying interview, Dr. Greene offers additional insights into this widespread health menace and dispels some misconceptions about it.

AN INTERVIEW WITH DR. CLYDE C. GREENE, JR.,
OF ALCOHOLISM

Question. Dr. Greene, how serious is the alcoholism problem in the United States?

Answer. The latest estimates indicate there are some 5 million alcoholics in the country today, 2 million of them wage earners. There's no question but what it is one of the Nation's most severe public health problems, probably outranked only by emotional illness, heart disease, and cancer.

Question. What chance is there that I will become an alcoholic if I drink?

Answer. Statistics show that 1 out of 15 persons who drink at all will, sooner or later, develop alcoholism.

Question. How about age? Is a person with alcoholism likely to fall into any age bracket?

Answer. Yes. Most men and women contract the disease only after years of so-called normal drinking. This means that they tend to become ill in the middle years when their experience, maturity, and productive powers should be at their peaks. This is a terrible loss to their families and to the companies they work for. Needless to say, it's a tragedy for the individuals personally.

Question. What can be done to help a person who has alcoholism?

Answer. There are many things we can do. The treatment varies with each individual. Diet is important—and that includes vitamins and minerals. There is a wide variety of medication. Many tranquilizers are used, and for a very carefully selected few there are drugs which make it extremely dangerous if not fatal to drink. There is also the so-called aversion treatment where shots are given along with alcohol and the resulting violent illness is associated in the patient's mind with drinking. Some patients find most help through religion. Others respond to psychiatric counseling. One of the most successful groups, of course, is Alcoholics Anonymous, which employs a sympathetic but strong group approach through staying away from alcohol 1 day at a time.

Question. There have been a number of stories in the newspapers lately indicating that a person can be cured of alcoholism and taught to develop an acceptable pattern of moderate social drinking. Would you please comment on this?

Answer. There are a few physicians who say this is possible. I have never seen an example and do not believe that there is a cure in the usual sense for alcoholism. It can be controlled or arrested, that's all, and the way to control it is: No alcohol at all. End of quote.

Question. How can a person know whether he's just a normal "social drinker" or an alcoholic?

Answer. Anyone can tell whether or not he is in trouble because of drinking. However, no lay person can say whether or not he or someone else has alcoholism. That's a job for the physician. The one thing all persons suffering from alcoholism have in common is their loss of the ability to control their drinking. Once they take a drink, they've got to take more and they can't stop. Such a person may have been drinking socially for years. What makes it suddenly impossible for him to enjoy a couple and go home? We just don't know.

Answer. Very difficult. Remember this, only 3 percent of the alcoholics in this country fit the average person's stereotype of the "skid row bum." The great majority of alcoholics are able to cover up their problem for a long time of period. In fact, this is one of the common characteristics of the sufferers from this illness—they are extremely skilled at hiding their problem. Among other common characteristics are highly variable moods, attitudes and productivity.

Question. You say they hide their problem. How can they do this?

Answer. Usually with the aid of sympathetic family, friends or supervisors who tend to want to protect them and keep their plight a secret.

Question. This wouldn't seem to be a really helpful approach, would it?

Answer. Indeed, not. In fact, such people are lengthening the odds against our being able to help the sick person.

Question. In your own diagnosis of alcoholism, do you have any particular guideline?

Answer. Yes. In accordance with our company's policy, an employee can be said to have alcoholism if his drinking interferes with any major part of his life—job—health—family—social life or reputation in the community.

Question. What about the physical effects of excessive drinking, doctor?

Answer. If we ignore the acute poisoning effect of overdosage, which, of course, can be fatal, the physical harm is to a large degree the product of nutritional imbalances. Alcohol is a food of sorts, rich in calories, but it contains no vitamins or minerals. One of two things will happen to a person with alcoholism: (1) He'll get all the calories he needs and won't eat, bringing on a vitamin and mineral deficiency, or (2) he'll continue to eat, gain weight and develop complications associated with obesity. The degeneration of the liver and kidneys which so often accompanies alcoholism is due to nutritional deficiency or to excess fat in those organs.

Question. Is alcohol a stimulant?

Answer. No; it is a sedative—a kind of depressant or anesthetic. In concentrated form it irritates the intestinal tract, causing vomiting, thus complicating the nutritional problem.

Question. What is the most important thing a relative, friend or coworker can do for a person with alcoholism?

Answer. Try to make the sick person recognize that he or she has lost control and needs help. This, of course, should not be done when a person is intoxicated.

Question. Is early recognition important?

Answer. Extremely important. It does little good to recognize alcoholism when a person is dying from its long-term effects. The hidden alcoholic in the early or middle stages of the disease is now recognized as the person who can be most easily rehabilitated if found in time.

Question. What is the company's attitude toward the alcoholic employee?

Answer. The alcoholic employee who accepts the fact of loss of control of drinking, is entitled to all his benefits while cooperating toward rehabilitation. The basic objective here is one that I believe any employer, any union or any employee group could endorse and support if the administration of the policy and objective is as stated. I can assure you that it is.

Question. It's difficult to understand why people who know they are sick don't ask for help. Why is this?

Answer. There are many reasons. No one likes to admit that he cannot control a problem, physical or mental. Also, there is an ancient stigma about alcoholism. People feel that there's something morally bad about it, or they believe that their job or chances for promotion may be endangered, which, of course, is what will happen eventually if they don't get help. Another reason is that some just don't want to give up alcohol.

Question. Would you comment on the effect of drinking on the family?

Answer. Yes, and in addition to the social and economic problems as well as the all too common physical damage to family members by the alcoholic, there is still another important aspect. Children tend to reflect the drinking habits of their parents. A child with two alcoholic parents is in serious danger.

Question. One final question, doctor. What can we do to lessen the chance that we will become alcoholic?

Answer. Dr. William Terhune, one authority on the problem, has suggested "Ten Commandments." I think they are worth heeding:

1. Never take a drink just because you think you need one.
2. Sip slowly and pace your drinks—the second after 30 minutes and a third an hour after the second. Never a fourth.
3. Dilute alcohol. Have a long, weak drink—never on the rocks, never straight, and never right out of the bottle.
4. Keep an accurate and truthful mental record of the amount and number of drinks you take. Never take a drink every day.
5. Be vigilant and do not permit your host to give you doubles or triples.
6. Do not drink on an empty stomach.
7. Do not drink on "signal." Such signals as "luncheon," "left office," "dinner," "meeting people," and "celebration" should be skipped. Instead, substitute something else—a big cup of coffee, hot tea or a bowl of bouillon. Even a drink of water will help.
8. When tired or tense, soak in a hot tub instead of drinking. Follow with a cold shower.
9. Never take a drink to escape discomfort, either physical or mental.
10. Never take a drink in the morning, thinking it will offset a hangover.

NOW, WHAT ABOUT KANSAS?

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MIZE] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MIZE. Mr. Speaker, every State can point with pride to the attributes which make it stand out from all the rest as something special. This is certainly true of Kansas, where we feel we have a great many things going for us which make us the envy of those commonwealths less endowed. A recent editorial in the Topeka, Kans., Daily Capital sets forth a sparkling list of what Kansas is. Under leave to extend my remarks, I respectfully include this editorial, under the title "Know Your State," in the body of the RECORD:

KNOW YOUR STATE

For the benefit of argumentative barbarians who might boorishly demand, "Now what about Kansas?" the Kansas State Chamber of Commerce has the answers. With the cooperation of its research department, it has prepared a nutshell report on what Kansas is and stands for.

As projected, it will take the form of a pocket card of which two each, or about 8,000, will go to members of the State chamber. News media will also receive copies, and there is a possibility circulation will expand through the Kansas Economic Development Commission. It will read:

"Kansas is—

"The wheatheart of the Nation, ranking first in the production of wheat and in flour milling.

"The salt of the earth, with sufficient salt reserves to last the United States 375,000 years at the present rate of consumption.

"A State with a real sunny disposition—and people to match. (A 67-percent average percentage of possible sunshine; also, 92 percent of daylight hour weather is conducive to outdoor recreation.)

"A world leader and ranking first in the United States in the production of executive aircraft.

"A growing industrial center, with one out of every eight of the Nation's largest corporations having headquarters or branch plants in Kansas. Also, Kansas ranks among the top 10 States in the Nation in auto assembly.

"An important mineral producing State.

"A healthful place, ranking among the top 10 States in life expectancy.

"Ranking fourth in the number of producing oil wells.

"Ranking fifth in the production of natural gas.

"Ranking seventh in crude petroleum production.

"Ranking ninth in overall mineral production.

"A leading transportation center.

"Ranking third in total road and street mileage (exceeded only by Texas and California); enough mileage to reach literally half-way to the moon.

"Ranking sixth in total railroad mileage without a State debt.

"Leader in establishing direct primary elections and the legislative council.

"An acknowledged leader among the States in the field of mental health.

"A literary State, keeping up to date with more daily newspapers than all but nine other States.

"A State with four invigorating seasons and an average temperature of 55 degrees.

THE 103D ANNIVERSARY OF THE POLISH STRUGGLE FOR FREEDOM

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DERWINSKI] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DERWINSKI. Mr. Speaker, 103 years ago the people of Poland revolted against the autocratic rule of czarist Russia and fought heroically against far superior manpower. The Polish insurrection of 1863 failed, but the people of Poland persevered and finally achieved their independence in 1918.

This historic event has special significance at the present time since the current Communist dictatorship of the Soviet Union, which is substantially more diabolical than the czarist regime, actually holds Poland in bondage through the Communist regime which Russian military forces installed at the close of World War II.

On this historic occasion, the 103d anniversary of the Polish struggle for freedom against the czars, we encourage the brave people of Poland to remember that the defeat of that year was ultimately rewarded in independence, thus demonstrating the perseverance of the Polish people and the righteousness of their cause. Certainly, this historic perseverance and quest for freedom will again produce a government based on the true wishes of the Polish people.

It is certainly not asking too much of the U.S. State Department, which is giving lip service to the principle of self-determination, that it develop a foreign policy which would apply this principle to the oppressed people of Poland.

Mr. Speaker, a current note that relates to the Soviet puppet government in Warsaw is the recent action by the Polish Reds banning trips outside the country by Cardinal Wyszyński. One hundred and three years ago czarist officials persecuted the churches of Poland, just as their Communist successors persecute religion today. It is also pertinent to note that this year the people of Poland celebrate 1,000 years of Christianity. Throughout the world free Poles will commemorate this historic landmark and pray that the great faith of their people will help produce the freedom to which they are entitled.

CONGRESSMAN HORTON PAYS TRIBUTE TO HISTORIC VALOR OF THE POLISH PEOPLE

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, we are reminded that this Saturday, January 22, is the 103d anniversary of the Polish insurrection against Czarist Russia. This observance is important to us in a multitude of respects, and I believe properly of interest to a legislative body whose Members are dedicated to the cause of freedom from oppression.

I would like to share with my colleagues a brief historical account of this valiant uprising because I think it illuminates very clearly the noble qualities of the Polish people in their quest for self-determination and individual liberty. These are qualities which burn in the hearts of Poles today as they struggle to lift off the yoke of Soviet tyranny that harnesses their proud land.

Further, these national characteristics are prominently present among our fellow citizens whose ancestry is Polish. I have the honor to represent many people from Rochester, New York's Polish community, so that I feel confident in speaking from personal acquaintance of the love of freedom which is the heritage of every Pole.

In remembering the events of 1863, I ask that the United States reaffirm its support of the aspirations and yearnings of the people in Poland to join the family of free and independent nations.

Of the innumerable peoples under the autocratic regime of Czarist Russia the Poles were the most restless and proved most difficult for the Czar's officials to reconcile. They refused to submit passively to Russian rule and repeatedly during the 19th century they arose in rebellion. But each time they were put down with cruel severity. However, ruthlessness and cruelty could not subdue the Poles. They wanted to regain their political rights and national freedom. That was the goal of the Polish insurrection of 1863.

This abortive but heroic armed uprising had its beginning late in 1861. At that time the spirit of revolution flared up in Poland, and a conspiracy was formed with adherents in all parts of the country. In Warsaw there was a demonstration on October 15; the people took possession of the churches and refused to be dislodged. This led to the closing of the churches by the clergy. Then the Czar made overtures of peace, and the churches were reopened in February of 1862. Later on, through conciliation and concessions, a period of peace ensued, and it looked as though the revolutionary activity of the rebels was blunted. In the summer, however, an attempt to assassinate the Grand Duke—brother of the Czar—occurred in Warsaw, and the Russian Government hanged the persons charged with the attempted assassination. This provoked new uprisings. The Central National Committee was set up in Warsaw, and called itself the true government of Poland. Again the Czar made friendly overtures, and even promised autonomy to the Poles. But the Polish leaders sent an ultimatum to the Czar stating that they would accept nothing short of complete national freedom.

This daring move cut short the possibility of an easy settlement. In this hour of trial the Poles placed high hopes for the success of their rebellion on international diplomacy, expecting more than mere moral support at least from France. On January 16, 1863, Polish leaders called the nation to arms, even though they could organize no more than 10,000 men against the Czar's 100,000. The Poles then serving in the Russian Army responded to this call, resulting in simultaneous uprisings in many parts of the country. As there was no unified command, units of these soldiers operated for many weeks as guerrillas, until General Langiewicz emerged as leader early in March. Soon, however, he was defeated in a pitched battle, escaped to Austria, and there he submitted to arrest and internment. The peasants in the steppe country could not be united behind the rebels with any effectiveness, and the Russians had little difficulty in conciliating them. The rebel leaders soon realized the seriousness of their situation. While fighting through spring and summer against forbidding odds, they resorted to diplomacy.

They sent Wladislaw Czartoryski to London and Paris to plead the Polish cause. But this resulted in only token gestures on the part of England and France, and the Governments of these countries reminded the Government of Russia of its international guarantee in the Treaty of Vienna. But Russia did not heed and the diplomatic hopes of the Poles were dashed. Meanwhile they had found a new leader in the 37-year-old Romuald Trautmann, an ex-officer in the Russian Army. In mid-October he was in Poland with dictatorial powers. He hoped to draw upon the untapped fighting manpower of the peasantry. But his efforts were frustrated. Through devious and deceptive means the Czar's agents had succeeded in alienating the bulk of the peasantry from the revolutionary cause in Poland. This weakened greatly the chances of the revolutionists, and by the early spring of 1864 all seemed lost. With the capture and hanging of Trautmann on the public square in Warsaw on August 5, the glorious Polish Insurrection of 1863 came to an abortive end.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA.—BIRTHPLACE OF STONEWALL JACKSON

Mr. McDADE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. MOORE] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, my State of West Virginia was born of the strife of the Civil War. It was the scene of numerous Civil War battles which pitted brother against brother and friend against friend. Several of the great Civil War generals were born in the hills and valleys of West Virginia, as it was known prior to secession from Virginia and becoming officially admitted to the Union on June 20, 1863. Among the Civil War leaders who called western Virginia their home was Stonewall Jackson, who was born in Clarksburg, W. Va., on January 21, 1824. It was ironic that Stonewall Jackson was killed in battle in 1863—the year West Virginia became a State. He was 39 years old at the time. I would like to bring to the attention of my colleagues the following extremely well-written article which appeared in the January 21, 1966, edition of the Clarksburg, W. Va., Exponent on Stonewall Jackson:

STONEWALL JACKSON WAS BORN IN CLARKSBURG 142 YEARS AGO TODAY

Today marks the 142d anniversary of the birth of Gen. Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson, born in Clarksburg, January 21, 1824.

S. J. Birshstein, chairman of the Stonewall Jackson Historical Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, informed the press that two local organizations are honoring the occasion with appropriate wreaths.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy have placed a wreath on both the Stonewall equestrian statue and on the bronze plaque erected on the site in the 300 block of West Main Street where the famous general was born.

The Stonewall Jackson Civic Club has remembered the 142d anniversary by placing a wreath on the striking equestrian statue located on the plaza of the Harrison County Courthouse.

The Clarksburg chapter of the UDC erected the bronze plaque in August 1911 to commemorate the famous general's birthplace. On May 10, 1953, the equestrian statue was dedicated.

The magnificent work of art was sculptured by the late Charles Keck of New York and the base of the statue was designed by William Grant, Clarksburg architect.

Birshstein furnished the press with the following information regarding Clarksburg's great general and renowned military tactician:

Clarksburg's brilliant officer during the War Between the States acquired the sobriquet or nickname of "Stonewall" with the stubborn defense of his 1st brigade in the first Battle of Manassas (Bull Run) on July 21, 1861.

Gen. Barnard E. Bee in rallying his men exclaimed "See, there stands Jackson like a stone wall." A near rout for the Confederate forces was turned into an overwhelming victory. Throughout the Confederacy and the world he became "Stonewall Jackson" from that moment on.

General Jackson was one of the ablest of the Confederate officers, and was probably the greatest corps commander on either side during the war. He had a deeply religious nature and has often been compared with the Cromwellian leaders in England, historians contend.

He deprecated secession but was a strong believer in States' rights, and when Virginia withdrew from the Union he maintained his allegiance to the State.

The military tactics of "Stonewall" Jackson are studied at West Point, Virginia Military Institute, Fort Knox, in St. Cyr, France, and at Sandhurst, England. It is said to be the consensus of military experts that his genius has seldom been equaled and never surpassed.

One of the finest tributes to "Stonewall" was sent in a telegram by the great general of World War II, Douglas MacArthur at the unveiling of the bronze bust of "Stonewall" in the Hall of Fame at New York University, May 19, 1957:

"Perhaps the most prized message I ever received came from the famous historian, Douglas Southall Freeman, who wrote me at the close of my campaigns in the Southwest Pacific area of World War II, 'The mantle of Robert E. Lee and "Stonewall" Jackson has now fallen on your shoulders.'"

Two of "Stonewall's" favorite maxims are "You may be whatever you resolve to be" and "Never take counsel of your fears."

Birshstein said that few persons in West Virginia realize that the Clarksburg Public Library has an original letter by Stonewall. This letter is on exhibit together with a miniature replica of the Polaris submarine, the Stonewall Jackson, and other diversified mementos dealing with General Jackson.

Miss Charlotte Bailey, librarian, has extended an invitation to the public to visit the Clarksburg Public Library and examine the Jackson items being displayed.

Also on display is an excellent sketch by Bruce Haymond of Jackson's birthplace (234-328 West Main Street) now occupied by a mercantile store. The sketch graphically reveals a neat 3-room brick cottage with semiattic and inset porch, of a type now fast disappearing.

A large oil painting by David Van Pelt is also on exhibit in the library. This painting of Stonewall is by Edwin F. Draughman and is a fine copy of the famous original by John A. Elder in the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

A ladderback rocker which belonged to Stonewall's mother can also be seen in the library.

The letter, postmarked West Point, is addressed to Jackson's sister, Mrs. L. (Laura) A. Arnold of Beverly, Randolph County.

Stonewall wrote his sister of his preparations for the annual examination at West Point and reported that his health was "very good at the present." He requested that his sister inform him as to the subscription rates of "the Democratic paper published in Clarksburg."

Jackson's paternal grandparents, his father Jonathan, and Stonewall's sister Elizabeth, are buried in the historic cemetery located in Jackson Park located on East Pike Street in Clarksburg.

The general's mother is buried in Ansted, W. Va. His sister, Laura, is buried in Buckhannon, and his brother Warren is buried near that city.

Stonewall Jackson died May 10, 1863, at the age of 39, near Guinea Station, Va., and is buried in Lexington, Va. He had led the army corps around Hooker's flank at the battle of Chancellorsville, routing the right wing of the Federal army.

He was wounded and died of pneumonia.

His death was a severe blow to Gen. Robert E. Lee and the southern cause. Jackson was a religious man who always prayed before battle. He was a tactician of the first rank and although a strict disciplinarian, was popular with his men. He was Lee's ablest and most trusted lieutenant.

EXPANSION OF EDUCATIONAL FIELD CALLS FOR ADDITIONAL TEACHERS

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HELSTOSKI] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELSTOSKI. Mr. Speaker, during the 1st session of this 89th Congress, we have had under consideration and passed several bills to aid in the advancement of education. We provided for educational facilities, and reported several measures to aid teachers in their desire to advance themselves in their chosen profession.

All this, we have done with the full knowledge that our educational system would be of the highest caliber that we can offer to our youth to face these times when our Nation is rapidly expanding its technological knowledge.

This expansion in the field of education necessarily needs additional teachers to keep pace in imparting to our youth the knowledge they possess.

In view of the fact that there is a critical need for well-qualified teachers, it is inconsistent that many local selective service boards have taken steps to induct into the services many teachers whose services are required on the home front. A fair number of teachers in the State of New Jersey have received their induction notices—to be taken in the middle of a school year into our Armed Forces. This is unfair to the school-teachers and to the institutions which they serve.

To correct this injustice, I am today introducing legislation—H.R. 12209—which would amend the Universal Military Training and Service Act, by adding a new subsection which reads as follows:

(p) Any person who is employed on a full-time basis as a teacher in a public or private elementary school, high school, college, university, or similar institution, shall, upon the facts being presented to the local board, be exempted from induction for training and service under this Act.

It is my hope that this legislation will receive early and favorable consideration so that our well-trained and qualified teachers will not be inducted into the armed services at a time when we experience the greatest need for their capabilities to teach the youth of our Nation.

AMENDING TARIFF SCHEDULES TO PROVIDE FOR EDUCATIONAL EQUIPMENT

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HELSTOSKI] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HELSTOSKI. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced legislation to amend the tariff schedules of the United States to provide for the free importation of certain specialized educational equipment.

This legislation would remove from the U.S. tariff list special educational equipment which is used in the so-called Montessori system of teaching preschool children, which is not manufactured in the United States because of a limited market.

This special apparatus is mandatory for the employment of the Montessori system. The child learns through his physical manipulation of the equipment and through its self-corrective qualities. The equipment is varied and diverse and I shall enumerate only a few of the most essential items.

Among others, one will find wooden graded touch boards, wooden geometrical solids, wooden color tablets, metal geometrical insets, sandpaper letters on wood, number frames, boxes with chromonickel temperature tubes, bead stairs, boxes of beads for subtraction with charts on wood, and many others.

The existing tariff schedules already permit duty-free imports of many kinds and types of educational materials. The need for this bill stems out of the fact that the equipment used in the Montessori system of teaching is unique in its nature and the restrictive definitions of the various duty-free materials currently listed in the tariff schedules.

Many of our most distinguished educators acclaim the Montessori system, which was evolved by Dr. Maria Montessori after she received her degree in medicine from the University of Rome late in the 1890's. Working in the university psychiatric clinic, Dr. Montessori was shocked by the lack of training facilities and lack of toys for retarded children. Her efforts to correct this situation led to the establishment of a state school for such children and there she developed simple teaching apparatus to help these children obtain even a simple education. Using her method, soon many of these children were reading, writing, and doing simple problems as well as children with a normal mentality of the same age.

Dr. Montessori continued her study, research, and experimentation and, in 1906 opened a school in Rome's worst slum district. It was quickly found that her techniques had even a greater effect upon normal children in the advancement of their education. The Montessori system of education soon spread to many parts of the world and it was clearly shown that it is effective with normal children, with retarded children, with children of any culture or social background. It knows no language barriers or religious beliefs.

This is a highly meritorious educational program, but we are hindering its use by maintaining a tariff on the apparatus used in the Montessori system of advancing education. The removal of the tariff will not in any way hinder any domestic industry, since none of these items are manufactured in the United States. It could, however, permit the expansion of this type of teaching among what we call the culturally deprived—the big city slum child who is a major target of President Johnson's antipoverty program.

Antipoverty programs, with a strong emphasis on preschool education, are seriously considering using the Montessori system as one of the time-tested and proven programs for this preschool age group. The removal of the tariff on the materials used in this method will greatly assist our educators in expanding this type of project in their communities.

EXTENSION OF EDUCATIONAL BENEFITS TO VETERANS

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. SICKLES] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. SICKLES. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced a bill designed to extend GI educational benefits to veterans who have served in the Armed Forces during the period February 1, 1955, until the Universal Military Training and Service Act terminates.

The educational and training allowances in my bill are identical to those of S. 9, passed by the Senate last year. The effective date of eligibility for entitlement is also the same as provided in S. 9, but my bill makes servicemen eligible as long as we find it necessary to draft young men for military service. The tendering of educational benefits to some veterans and not to others on the basis of cutoff dates is bound to produce inequities.

An important additional advantage of this bill is that it creates an incentive for our highly trained military personnel to remain in the service without forfeiting their educational entitlements. The bill provides that educational and training programs must commence within 3 years after his last discharge or release from active duty.

Now is an opportune time to give attention to a GI educational program on a long-range basis. We need a plan which is coherent and equitable, and applicable to all servicemen without regard to where they may be directed to serve in response to the exigencies of the cold war or crisis situations.

HARRY MARLEY

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. HANLEY] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. Speaker, last week, I was privileged to attend the annual meeting of the Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, here in Washington. The outgoing president of the institute is a resident of my congressional district and, I might add, one of central New York's most outstanding citizens—Mr. Harry Marley.

I am pleased to call Harry Marley my friend, and want, for a few minutes today to relate to the House some of his activities as president of the institute.

For purposes of clarification, it should be emphasized that the institute is an association of scrap processors. They are not junk dealers, nor are they auto wreckers. Scrap processors perform a yeoman's job in conserving our natural resources. They also play an integral role in preserving the natural beauty of our Nation.

During his tenure as president of the institute and before, Harry Marley played a leading role in the above-mentioned activities of America's scrap processors. He represented the scrap processing industry before Congress during the hearings on the highway beautification bill; at the White House Conference on Natural Beauty; on the National Advisory Committee on Highway Beautification; and at the annual international conference of scrap and salvage associations, held last year in England.

Mr. Speaker, Harry Marley is so esteemed in his profession that last year, the institute subscribed, in his name, $4,000 to the Scrap Research Foundation.

Harry Marley's personal dedication exemplifies the dedication of the institute to making America a better place in which to live. Both have contributed greatly to America's store of precious metals and both deserve recognition.

MODERNIZATIONS IN THE POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. HANLEY] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. Speaker, yesterday Postmaster General O'Brien announced at a press conference many long overdue modernizations in the postal service. As a member of the Modernization and Facilities Subcommittee of the House, I am most pleased with the Postmaster's actions.

The job Mr. O'Brien assumed is one of the most difficult in the Government. He must oversee the operations of a multibillion-dollar operation, and the performance of over 600,000 employees. That he has begun his task admirably is self-evident; that he will succeed in our efforts to bring the U.S. postal service into the mid-20th century is predictable.

Mr. Speaker, no activity of the Federal Government plays a more vital role in the continued expansion of our economy. Fast, efficient postal service is an absolute necessity for the business community, and a growing business community is an absolute necessity for a sound economy.

I salute the Postmaster General for his bold initiative and promise my own support in his efforts to improve the postal system.

We are fortunate in having this man, his energies, and his talents at the service of the American people.

NEW IDEAS—NEW SUCCESSES

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HATHAWAY] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. HATHAWAY. Mr. Speaker, the wings of a mighty airplane are built not rigidly but with great flexibility. Indeed, this flexibility makes them strong and enduring.

This is, in a sense, what is great about America and Americans. We have built new industries by trying new approaches. We have never closed doors just to prove that we could be rigid and thereby strong. We gain new solutions by new ideas. We are truly a nation of people who are willing to listen, to learn. We learn because we have not arrived at a point where we think we have all answers to all solutions down pat and easy.

In a recent editorial, the Christian Science Monitor pointed out:

The situation in Vietnam is difficult and complicated. But we are convinced that an answer to that situation is available.

Because this article will be of much interest to my colleagues, I have asked permission to insert it in the RECORD, as follows:

Seldom in its history has the United States had a greater need for the virtues of patience, wisdom, and care. Faced with the crucial question of where to go next in the Vietnamese war, America can afford no misstep, whether this misstep be a rash broadening of the conflict or a misguided failure to do what the moral and practical aspects of the situation require.

The United States has already made a major contribution to the effort to find a path to peace with its suspension of the bombing of North Vietnam.

Doubtless this suspension greatly helped bring about the direct contact between Washington and Hanoi, now confirmed by the White House. This, in itself, constitutes full justification for the American decision. In addition, the suspension responds both to the wishes of an anxious world and to the promptings of America's own conscience.

From most points of view, the road ahead is somber and obscure. To many observers it appears to offer a choice only between dishonorable retreat and a disastrous broadening of the war. It is at just such a moment that a nation, like an individual, needs to sit back, think calmly and carefully about the situation, and open its thoughts to those answers which come from a wisdom higher than man's own.

In Isaiah we read: "And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left." If we assume that America's aims in Vietnam are honorable and right (whatever doubts may be held about some of its methods) we have the right to expect that the correct method of achieving those goals will become apparent. History has often shown that rightness of motive brings rightness of action, and that a path through an apparently impenetrable wood will open up where at first all roads seemed blocked.

We believe that the United States is in the right frame of mind to look and listen for such an answer. Despite the frustrating aspects of the war in southeast Asia, it is still happily obvious that no war psychosis has yet gripped America. Nor, we believe, is America adamant on imposing any one preconceived solution on Vietnam. These facts bring a flexibility to the situation which is a necessary part of any openminded search for a just solution.

The situation in Vietnam is difficult and complicated. But we are convinced that an answer to that situation is available. It can be found through looking and listening.

COMMITMENT OF RELIGIOUS LEADERS TO THE ANTIPOVERTY PROGRAM

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GILLIGAN] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct the attention of my colleagues to a statement released in Washington this week by the Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty.

The newly formed, 45-member committee includes leaders from the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the National Council of Churches, and the Synagogue Council of America.

This committee represents millions of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant Americans and its purpose, as outlined in the lucid statement that follows, is both right and noble.

It represents a vigorous commitment by the Nation's religious leaders to expanding and strengthening the programs already laid out in antipoverty legislation passed by the Congress.

The statement follows:

STATEMENT OF INTER-RELIGIOUS COMMITTEE AGAINST POVERTY

The leaders of churches, synagogues, and organizations cooperating through the Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty are committed to the proposition that the persistence of massive poverty in our society is a moral blight which can and must be eradicated.

Recent Federal legislation marks a great stride forward in America's efforts to achieve this national purpose. The passage of the Economic Opportunity Act, the legislation for Appalachia, the Manpower and Development Training Act, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, the Civil Rights Act, social security amendments including medicare, expansion of the rehabilitative focus of public welfare, legislation for housing urban renewal, health, education, and other measures represent notable advances.

What is on the statute books must be implemented and augmented to translate the hopeful potentialities of these goals into effective realities.

Many programs are already demonstrating their value. They should be extended and intensified. And where experience has indicated opportunities for improvement, such constructive advances should be made.

In view of the magnitude of the task and the experimental nature of these programs, some mistakes may well occur in their conception and implementation.

While the duty of responsible criticism should be exercised, the entire effort should not be condemned because of occasional false starts, setbacks, or errors of judgment. Such problems are inherent in new programs and should be the stimulus to new and greater efforts and commitments.

THE PROGRAM MUST BE STRENGTHENED

Our military commitments in Vietnam have led some to suggest reduction or holding the line on domestic antipoverty, health and educational programs. We reject such proposals as a major retreat in the war on poverty and a major defeat for America. Hundreds of thousands of the poor are now participating in governmental antipoverty programs. Their opportunities must not be wasted or thwarted.

Those now being assisted and the millions not yet being assisted must be helped to escape from poverty and to make their contribution to the strengthening of our society.

We urge that increased appropriations be provided to strengthen and broaden the Nation's programs to eliminate poverty. Our country has both the material and human resources to expand and strengthen these programs. It would be a cruel injustice to require that the poor—the young, the old, the sick, the disadvantaged—should be the ones to make the major sacrifice for the other problems we must solve.

COMMUNITY ACTION

The Congress has wisely emphasized the importance of community action programs to encourage local initiative and responsibility for devising and administering programs best adapted to differing needs, problems and circumstances.

Greater awareness of poverty in each community, deeper understanding of its causes, a firm resolve to overcome it and the strengthening of communitywide bodies with the fullest participation of voluntary agencies are vital goals of antipoverty programs. We urge continuing and increased support for community action programs.

MAXIMUM FEASIBLE PARTICIPATION OF THE POOR

One of the most challenging aspects of the community action programs is the requirement that they be "developed, conducted and administered with the maximum feasible participation of residents of the area and members of the group served." This basic concept is an integral part of the religious and democratic commitment to help people to help themselves. We deplore any attempt, national or local, to dilute the concept of maximum participation of the poor. We affirm our faith in the fact that their involvement is feasible and should be viewed as a creative utilization of the natural human resources found in the community of the deprived who are themselves dedicated to ridding the Nation of poverty. Constructive participation of the poor in the conduct of these programs is achievable. The difficulties of accomplishing this purpose should not lessen our striving for its realization. We urge a redoubling of the efforts to encourage the full involvement of the poor in antipoverty programs.

The commitment to our antipoverty programs must not only be maintained but must be increased to achieve its noble purpose—the development of a just society.

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. FULTON] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULTON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, the Fifth District of Tennessee at Nashville will be experiencing over the next few days the celebrated Sing-Out '66 edition of the moral rearmament program of recent months.

In view of widespread distortions in our era regarding the attitudes and beliefs of our younger generation, I am in agreement with many Tennesseans and Americans in finding abundant stimulation from the conviction of these youngsters.

It is heartening indeed to note the message being delivered by this group who demonstrate the majority thinking of younger America. Of paramount importance, the moral rearmament movement has registered in a dignified manner what they are for, as opposed to what some minority groups and individuals are against.

The moral rearmament movement takes issue with the advocates of moral and military pacifism, noninvolvement, atheism, and the so-called new morality. These Americans are punctuating with exciting patriotism, colorful and meaningful alternatives to being communized, animalized, and modernized. It is such actions as these, manifested by the energy of our youth, which serve up the answer to some of the knottiest problems of our times and formulate concrete plans and action for attack.

I have requested permission for this notation to be entered into the Record; and with it, commendation to Mr. James Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, for his sponsorship of this program and support of the movement in general.

Also gratitude and congratulations to the Banner's Lee Bandy, in Washington, and Jacques Stubbel, in Nashville, whose reportorial endeavors applied measurable antidotes against beatnikism.

REDWOOD NATIONAL PARK

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. O'HARA] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'HARA of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure today to follow the lead of our very able and distinguished colleague, the gentleman from California [Mr. COHELAN], in proposing a Redwood National Park on the northern coast of California. The gentleman's efforts on behalf of conservation have appropriately earned him the gratitude of many of us who share his anxiety about the depletion of this great and natural wonder.

The bill I have introduced today is identical to that proposed last year by the gentleman from California.

The redwoods are a vital and historic national asset, and I know that many of us from throughout the Nation will support the efforts to save them. These giant trees, some of them reaching skyward more than 300 feet, belong not only to the great State and people of California but to all America. They stood before our Nation was established. In the minds of visitors to our country, they are as much a symbol of the United States as some of our famous landmarks and public buildings.

Over the years, 85 percent of the redwood stands have been cut for commercial and industrial uses. Only 15 percent of our country's original redwood forest remains, and it would be a monumental and irreparable loss if more of these virgin redwoods—the world's tallest trees—were destroyed.

The proposed Redwood National Park would preserve 90,000 acres identified as most desirable by the National Geographic Society, the Sierra Club, and the National Park Service. It includes the largest remaining concentration of virgin redwoods. I urge all of my colleagues to join in supporting the gentleman from California [Mr. COHELAN] in his effort to preserve the remaining redwoods.

REPEAL OF SECTION 14(b)

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FEIGHAN] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Speaker, high on the agenda of unfinished business of this 89th Congress is repeal of section 14(b) of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Section 14(b) has permitted 19 States to hold down wage rates by banning the union shop. Using this lure of lower wage scales, these areas have conducted a series of raids on established industries in other States.

In my own home State of Ohio, union leaders claim that we have lost 15,000 jobs in the past 7 years to these areas.

This loss of industry has injured the economy of Ohio, and has also damaged the national economy by unfairly curtailing the income and buying power of 15,000 men and women. In the long run, the States which now welcome these runaway plants will find that they have also damaged their own economy.

It is ironic that a nation which is now engaged in a war on poverty should have a statute on its books which, in effect, condemns thousands of men, women, and children in 14(b) States to substandard wages, and consequently substandard living conditions. The causes of poverty are many, but there are few that would not yield to the remedy of full employment under minimum wage standards that provide a decent way of life for all wage earners. Business or industry that profits on substandard wages for its producers stand as a barrier to economic growth which is the key to full employment.

President Johnson has again called upon Congress to repeal section 14(b). It is an unfair law which damages the economy of every State in the Union. I urge Members of Congress to work to repeal this harmful law at the earliest opportunity.

ASIAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, early this week President Johnson sent up a proposed Asian Development Bank for our earnest consideration. This proposal, Mr. Speaker, I believe to be the most constructive and unifying program that has been suggested as a means of aiding the war-torn and economically deprived area of southeast Asia.

The Asian Development Bank promises to be an effective use of limited resources for Asia's economic development. This proposed Development Bank resembles the World Bank in its administrative setup and economic programs. It is a program developed by Asians and run by Asians. An initial $1 billion of capital has been authorized, 65 percent of which has already been subscribed by Asian countries. The United States has subscribed $200 million over a 4-year period. This initial subscription is to be paid in one-half in a member country's own currency and the other half in dollars or other convertible currency.

The Asian Development Bank will guarantee or make loans for economic development projects, such as dams, irrigation projects, highway systems, and agricultural development. These long-term development loans will have long maturities, low interest rates, and a long period prior to the initial repayment. A second program of this Development Bank will lend out funds for a relatively short period of time, much like regular short-term foreign aid loans, for instance, to strengthen a country's monetary and currency system.

The Asian Development Bank will be run by a Board of Governors who will act as policymakers. Each member nation will have one representative on the Board of Governors. The day-to-day operations of the Bank will be run by a 10-man Board of Directors, 7 of whom will be Asians and 3 non-Asians, 1 a representative of the United States. The Bank's headquarters will be located in Manila, the Philippines.

At the present time, Mr. Speaker, 21 nations have agreed to become members of this promising program. Membership and associate membership in the Asian Development Bank will be open only to those countries who are members of the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, thus excluding Communist China, North Vietnam, and North Korea.

The leadership has been taken by the countries of Asia. This aspect in itself represents the most promising start that could be imagined. It is about time, after 15 years of constant warfare that has almost destroyed the spirit and morale of the people of Asia, that a constructive effort has been undertaken to attempt to better the lives and provide a stronger and more viable economy for the countries of Asia.

I am pleased to see, Mr. Speaker, that this farsighted administration proposal has the strong bipartisan support in Congress. I was happy to see a number of my Republican colleagues this very week stand up and strongly support the Asian Development Bank. I believe that the Asian Development Bank is the most potent weapon that the administration has proposed in its recent peace campaign that would bring to an end the constant crises in southeast Asia. It is a promise of the future, a promise which will provide a better life for all the people of Asia.

MURDERING NEW HAVEN PASSENGER SERVICE MEANS CHAOS FOR CONNECTICUT

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MONAGAN] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the proposal of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad that it be authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to terminate all interstate passenger train operations effective March 1, 1966. It is obvious what chaos and disruption of the lives of the people of Connecticut would result from this wholesale ending of a traditional service. I informed the ICC of my position in a statement on the railroad's proposal on January 11, 1966.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I wish to include my statement at this point because I believe that the problem is not solely that of Connecticut, but it is a concern of all the New England States and indirectly of every person in the Nation who must rely upon railroad transportation:

STATEMENT OF CONGRESSMAN JOHN S. MONAGAN SUBMITTED TO THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION IN OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED DISCONTINUANCE OF PASSENGER SERVICE BY THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD, HARTFORD GAS COMPANY AUDITORIUM, HARTFORD, CONN., JANUARY 11, 1966

I oppose the discontinuance of all Connecticut passenger railroad service by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. It is unthinkable that the State of Connecticut, with its population of more than 2½ million, should be without passenger train service. It is true that the New Haven Railroad has been in a fiscal decline during the past several years and the standards of passenger service and facilities have likewise deteriorated but this does not justify a surrender of responsibility by responsible public bodies in a search for a solution to this problem.

Public service demands the continuance of railroad passenger service in Connecticut, and this factor must be given precedence over all other considerations. This service is essential to the livelihood and well-being of commuters, workers, business people, and ordinary travelers and to the economic welfare of the entire State.

My statement will be brief. The railroad's plan should not be authorized. Initially, the proposition was to discontinue a substantial part of its regular commuter service. The current hearings are on the proposal to discontinue all interstate passenger service. We can anticipate that the next request will be to abandon every vestige of passenger service in the areas served by the New Haven.

The notice of proposed discontinuances of passenger train service issued by the New Haven in pursuit of its proposal to terminate all interstate passenger train operations effective March 1, 1966, shows that the following runs would be terminated:

Greenwich to New York.....	2
New York to Greenwich.....	1
Stamford to New York.....	83
New York to Stamford.....	81
New Canaan to New York.....	2
New York to New Canaan.....	2
New York to Norwalk and South Norwalk.....	2
Danbury to New York.....	6
New York to Danbury.....	7
Pittsfield to New York.....	2
New York to Pittsfield.....	2
Worcester to New London.....	6
New London to Worcester.....	6
Boston to New York.....	41
New York to Boston.....	39
New Haven to Boston.....	1
New London to Boston.....	1
Providence to Boston.....	18
New Haven to New York.....	24
Springfield to New York.....	32
Springfield to New Haven.....	3
Providence to New London.....	1
Boston to Providence.....	17
New York to New Haven.....	30
New York to Springfield.....	27
New Haven to Springfield.....	8

It is obvious what chaos and disruption of the lives of the people of our State would result from this wholesale suspension of a traditional service.

Testimony has been given by a representative of the Bureau of Accounts of the Interstate Commerce Commission that the New Haven Railroad is not now meeting its operating expenses in either the freight service or the passenger service. I shall not burden the Commission with a discussion of the technical phase of the railroad's bankruptcy. Some of the figures are definitely in dispute and I ask that the Commission carefully review the allocation of expense items to determine their validity and necessity.

I do want to emphasize, also, that this question is a matter of concern not only to Connecticut, but to Massachusetts, New York, and Rhode Island as well. My immediate concern is for the patrons in the State of Connecticut and, particularly in the Fifth Congressional District which I represent, but I am keenly sensitive to the broader implications of the requested change.

The proposal to abandon 273 passenger trains by July 1966, if approved, will have immediate impact on service in the towns of Bethel, Danbury, Meriden, Wallingford, and Redding, and, of course, upon the contiguous cities and towns whose residents are served by these trains. Immediately and inevitably, there will be curtailment of any local service remaining in the State, and this will hit many other towns including Waterbury and communities of the Naugatuck Valley whose volume of industrial freight has done so much to keep the railroad from worse financial disaster.

The trustees of the New Haven Railroad have reached an agreement with the Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroads that the New Haven Railroad's freight operations will be continued in the event the proposed merger of the Pennsylvania and New York Central is consummated. This represents an attempt to gain the prize operation while declining all responsibility for the necessary and irreplaceable operation because it is more difficult. This should not happen.

I have consistently supported reasonable State and Federal aid which has and will continue to make possible the operation of the New Haven Railroad.

It is a matter of record that Connecticut and New York have each advanced $750,000 and that the HHFA has provided $3 million for the demonstration project which assures railroad service until July 1, 1966. In addition, Connecticut and New York have appropriated $5 million each to improve passenger service providing a stable arrangement is developed, and HHFA will be asked to provide $10 million additional when demonstration project expires in July 1966.

Tax relief also has been provided by the States of Connecticut and New York to a total value of $2,700,000 contingent upon maintenance of satisfactory standards of service.

I am aware that the New Haven and other railroads have been confronted with severe competition through the development of State and Federal highway systems which have contributed not only to greater and more effective use of passenger cars, but, also, to the growth of bus and truck services. The airlines and the shipping industries, like the bus and truck operators, have been the beneficiaries of direct or indirect supports which have aided their operations at the expense of the railroads. Even the helicopter passenger lines which supplement the long-line routes of air traffic enjoyed the benefits of Federal assistance.

If public support of competing modes of transportation for the benefit of the public is to continue, then we must make certain that the public which relies upon the railroad is also served. We must not permit the complete demise of railroad passenger service in Connecticut and in the adjoining States. Ours is one of the heaviest populated areas in the country. It is because of this heavy population that through the efforts of the new Congress and the President, the Department of Commerce is currently engaged in experimentation with high-speed trains to run between Boston and Washington, D.C. This is a program which I support and which I hope will come to fruition in the immediate future for the sole purpose of improving passenger train service.

The State of Connecticut, under the leadership of Governor Dempsey, has made broad-scale financial commitments including tax reductions in order to maintain the New Haven passenger lines. This action is in the public interest and in this same interest I urge the Commission to deny the petition of the trustees. Let us hope that such a decision will stimulate the tripartite efforts of State and Federal Governments and private enterprise to solve the problems of the New Haven Railroad without the abandonment of passenger lines.

If the vast rail network in Connecticut is used only for the movement of revenue-producing freight and passengers are to be denied what is a commonplace service in every other country in the world, this action will be contrary to any reasonable concept of public interest. This Nation can afford adequate passenger train service and it is a sad commentary on our country that we can put men in space and reach the moon, but we can't solve our transportation problems in one State of the Union.

Your decision will help bring such a day closer.

EQUAL POSTAL RATES FOR LOOSE-LEAF MATERIAL CONTAINING MEDICAL AND LEGAL INFORMATION

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. MULTER] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced H.R. 12182 that would apply the same postal rate to looseleaf material containing legal information as presently is applied to similar material containing medical information.

Under present postal law, looseleaf pages and their binders consisting of medical information for distribution to doctors, hospitals, medical schools, and medical students are carried at the lower book rate while similar material consisting of legal information for distribution to lawyers, courts, law schools, and law students takes the higher parcel post rate.

Section 4554(a)(8), title 39, United States Code, assigns the book rate to looseleaf pages and their binders containing medical information for distribution to doctors, hospitals, medical schools, and medical students. No similar provision is made for the looseleaf distribution of legal information to lawyers, courts, law schools, and law students. It, therefore, is carried at the parcel post rate. There seems to be no valid reason why medical looseleaf material should be carried at a lower rate while the legal looseleaf material should be carried at the higher parcel post rate.

This inequity should be rectified. The same compelling reasons which warrant a special rate consideration in the case of medical material operates with equal potency in the case of legal material. My bill would correct this injustice by amending paragraph (8) of subsection (a) of section 4554, title 39, United States Code, to include the distribution of looseleaf pages and their binders containing legal information to lawyers, courts, law schools, and law students.

LIMITING NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. WOLFF] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLFF. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make known my support of Senator PASTORE's resolution limiting nuclear proliferation.

To our best knowledge, there are now five members of the "nuclear club," but the exclusivity of this club can no longer be guaranteed. It has been amply demonstrated that no individual country has a monopoly on creative thinking; thus, inclusion in the club is for the most part a decision dependent upon a nation's economic and political willingness and tenacity.

The need to achieve atomic capabilities has and will continue to be justified, by those not in its possession, for a plethora of reasons. To obviate each of these supposed compelling reasons is a task that will necessitate lifetimes and lifetimes. Must each country on the brink of nuclear capability be individually deterred, be individually bargained with to refrain. Would not this system lead to inequities depending on one's point of view or inclination?

What is truly needed is a system that would impede completely the continued spread of atomic weaponry. If we can achieve a moratorium on the dispersal of these weapons, the peaceful planet we all seek is an attainable goal, if we do not achieve a moratorium, peace may be purely ephemeral.

I am not suggesting that we infringe on our present systems of defense—for I am equally adamant that our security remain strong and secure. The achievement of atomic limitation and remaining cognizant of our security needs presents a difficult dilemma. Frankly, I do not know how to achieve the result, but we must try.

The way to try is to dedicate ourselves to the solution. The executive branch must be made aware of our goal, and when this is achieved, the executive must know that we support his initiative toward this end.

MICHIGAN CITY (IND.) NEWS-DISPATCH ENDORSES 4-YEAR TERMS FOR CONGRESSMEN

Mr. PATTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BRADEMAS] may extend his remarks at this point in the Record and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADEMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record the text of an editorial dated January 20, 1966, from the Michigan City, Ind., News-Dispatch, published in my own congressional district, which endorses President Johnson's recent proposal for a 4-year term for Members of the House of Representatives.

FOUR-YEAR TERMS FOR CONGRESSMEN

President Johnson's proposal for a 4-year House term struck many Members as the most admirable idea they have heard from the White House since the last congressional pay raise.

The political rose that the Chief Executive offered the House in his state of the Union message looked good to many Members who hardly finish one campaign before starting another.

Under the Constitution, all 435 House seats are up for grabs every 2 years. In the 100-seat Senate, only 33 or 34 seats normally are at stake every 2 years and terms run for 6 years.

Thoughtful political scientists and campaign-weary politicians have been suggesting for years that the system be changed. But they never have had the kind of endorsement that Mr. Johnson gave.

As a result of Mr. Johnson's totally unexpected recommendation, a constitutional amendment providing for a 4-year House term probably will get early consideration.

Mr. Johnson said: "To strengthen the work of Congress I strongly urge an amendment to provide for a 4-year term for Members of the House of Representatives—which should not begin before 1972.

"The present 2-year term requires most Members of Congress to divert enormous energies to an almost constant process of campaigning—depriving the Nation of the fullest measure of their skill and wisdom.

"Today, too, the work of Government is far more complex than in our early years, requiring more time to learn and master the technical tasks of legislation. And a longer term will serve to attract more men of the highest quality to political life. The Nation, the principle democracy, and each congressional district will be better served by a 4-year term. I urge your swift action."

During his speech Mr. Johnson was applauded 60 times. His reference to changing the 2-year terms to 4 years understandably drew the most vigorous applause.

It's a good suggestion and should be put into effect as soon as possible.

YOUTH OPPORTUNITY INVESTIGATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FASCELL). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. QUIE] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. QUIE. Mr. Speaker, I have been reading Mr. Clark Mollenhoff's magnificent book, "Despoilers of Democracy." I commend it to the attention of all Members of Congress and every concerned citizen who believes that government should serve the people, rather than itself, or favored individuals.

In the introduction to his book, Mr. Mollenhoff quotes the late President Kennedy, who in a special message to the Congress said:

There can be no dissent from the principle that all officials must act with unwavering integrity, absolute impartiality, and complete devotion to the public interest. This principle must be followed not only in reality but in appearance. For the basis of effective government is public confidence, and that confidence is endangered when ethical standards falter or appear to falter.

I gained personal insight last summer into some of the ways in which a Federal program, however outstanding its motives, can go astray and thus endanger public confidence because ethical standards "falter or appear to falter."

This faltering occurred in the President's so-called youth opportunity campaign. President Johnson announced that Federal departments and agencies would hire 1 young person for summer employment for each 100 regular employees. The President also appealed to State and local governments, private industry, and foundations, to make available another 100,000 jobs for young people.

When he announced the program on May 23, 1965, President Johnson said:

These opportunities will be given, so far as this is practicable to boys and girls 16 through 21 who need them the most because of economic or educational advantages.

The program was to provide some 25,000 summer jobs in the Federal Government, which were to pay the young people $1.25 an hour. As it turned out, some 8,600 of the jobs were ultimately to be in the Post Office Department.

It was in the first week of June that I received the first inkling that the manner in which the Post Office Department was distributing its share of the jobs might give the appearance that ethical standards were faltering. I received a telephone call from a newspaper reporter, who asked if I had yet been asked to submit names for possible hiring in the Post Office Department under the so-called youth opportunity campaign.

I had not received such a call at that time. I was to later learn, however, that members of the majority had been contacted at least several days earlier and had been given definite quotas of these jobs for which to recommend names. I was to learn that only after Nick Kotz, of the Minneapolis Tribune and Des Moines Register Washington Bureau, began asking questions did the Post Office Department begin contacting minority members and then no quotas were offered—they were simply told to submit names. I was to learn that at least some majority members were contacted by high-ranking officials of the Post Office Department.

Though the Post Office Department was to repeatedly claim that all Members of Congress had been contacted, a poll of the minority membership showed that 50 of the 140 had not.

The same afternoon that I was called by the newspaper reporter, I received a call from the Minneapolis regional post office and told that I could submit names for possible hiring under the President's so-called youth opportunity campaign. However, no quota was offered—as it was not in other calls to minority Members.

But most important, there was absolutely no mention of the criteria the President had established—that these jobs were to go to young people who needed them the most, due to educational or economic disadvantage. In fact, I was to learn that this criteria was never mentioned in any call to a Member of Congress—majority or minority.

The case was obvious. Youth opportunity campaign jobs, intended for educationally or economically disadvantaged young people who needed them the most, were being distributed as patronage with disregard of the Presidential criteria.

On June 10, I sent a telegram to then Postmaster General Gronouski, asking for clarification. Among the questions I asked was:

Why do high officials of your Department, in soliciting patronage appointments for certain Members of Congress, fail to point out that the President had designated these jobs as being created for economically and educationally disadvantaged young people?

Mr. Speaker, the same day I appeared before the House and disclosed the situation, including the full text of my telegram to Mr. Gronouski, which appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 111, part 10, pages 13287-13288.

A reply to my telegram was received on June 11, from Mr. Michael Monroney, executive assistant to the Postmaster General. In answer to the question which I have cited, Mr. Monroney wrote:

The 7,500 summer post office jobs (which later increased to 8,600) in the field will be used to substitute for regular mail handlers, letter carriers and postal clerks who take their vacation time during this period. These jobs do not involve manual labor, gardening or other less technical work and, as a result, the postal service is primarily interested in obtaining the highest quality young people available.

Mr. Speaker, this was the Post Office Department's explanation of why its officials failed to mention the President's need criteria when soliciting patronage appointments for Members of Congress. I must admit I was puzzled by the reply. Did it mean that because a young person was financially disadvantaged that he was not the highest quality young person available? This reply was even more confusing in light of what Mr. Monroney wrote two paragraphs later, in answer to a question concerning the employment of girls as well as boys. He wrote:

For the most part, these young people will be doing work which is normally done by male employees, such as handling heavy mail bags and working as letter carriers.

Mr. Speaker, I could not comprehend the difference between "manual labor, gardening, or other less technical work," and "handling heavy mail bags," or even serving as letter carriers.

Mr. Monroney included with his letter an official Post Office memorandum, dated June 9, which had been sent to all regional postmasters. It said:

These appointments will be as seasonal assistants, PFS-3, $2.29 an hour, for individuals who are in need of money to remain in school, or who are economically underprivileged.

It was interesting to note that, unlike other Youth Opportunity Campaign employees, those in the Post Office Department were to make $2.29 an hour—the same as regular summer postal employees.

But it was even more interesting that this official Post Office Department memorandum directed specifically that the President's "need criteria" be observed in hiring. This memorandum was dated June 9—after majority Members of Congress had already been contacted, but 2 days before Mr. MONRONEY told me that the criteria had not been mentioned to Congress because "the postal service is primarily interested in obtaining the highest quality young people available."

I was to confront this type of apparent evasion many times in the investigation which I undertook last June, and which did not end until January.

But I learned that some 3,380 of the 8,600 postal jobs were filled by congressional patronage and that close relatives of some Members of Congress and even of the Vice President of the United States, as well as many with well-developed political or social ties, found jobs under the Post Office Department's portion of the President's Youth Opportunity Campaign.

I was to find that in post offices from Maine to Hawaii, young people were hired with disregard for the President's need criteria.

Mr. Speaker, I shall not explore all of the details of the situation at this time, but the bulk of them are outlined in remarks which I made on the House floor and which appear in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 111, part 13, page 18145; volume 111, part 15, page 20792; and volume 111, part 17, beginning on page 22517.

Where did blame for this patronage distribution of jobs in disregard of the Presidential need criteria, lie? Patronage has long been a part of the Post Office Department operation and the high postal officials who first contacted majority Members of Congress did not mention any need criteria, nor did they mention it to minority Members at a later date. Thus—in light of the long-standing tradition of postal patronage—it is not surprising that few Members of Congress questioned the technique. I simply do not believe in such patronage as this, and thus was sensitive to the implications. I believe one of the greatest benefits of my investigation is that the Civil Service Commission has announced that future summer hiring of youth will be on a merit basis.

I hasten to add that I certainly do not blame the young people involved for accepting the jobs. Any student would find it useful to have a $2.29 an hour summer job. Those who had the opportunity to obtain them cannot be blamed and should be commended for their desire for employment.

If blame is to be attached, it is to those officials of the Post Office Department to whom political patronage has become so much a part of life that they disregarded the criteria of the President—which was reaffirmed in their own postal memorandum—in order to seek political gain by the distribution of jobs intended for the disadvantaged.

Patronage distribution of the jobs was also in violation of a U.S. Civil Service Commission directive, which instructed that the youth opportunity campaign employees were to be chosen from special rosters prepared by the U.S. Employment Service on the basis of the need criteria.

The Post Office Department was to excuse itself by saying that it did not have time to wait for these special rosters. However, the Director of the U.S. Employment Service says he was never told his organization was not meeting the need and State employment directors in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, and South Dakota said they supplied names by the date requested. In these States, as well as others, few employment service referrals were hired. But this is understandable. The patronage calls had already been made to Congressmen and their recommendations submitted to the Post Office Department.

Even granting the Post Office Department's assertion that it did not have time to wait for the special rosters, some questions should be raised concerning a program so hastily contrived that it is not announced until a week or two before the young people are flooding the job market.

But as it turned out, another major issue was raised by this case, in addition to serious diversion of the program from the President's intent. A major debate was to develop around the right of the Post Office Department to withhold the names of these young people from the public and even from Members of Congress.

On September 1, in a House speech, I said:

There is an issue which has developed out of this case that I believe must be dealt with promptly and judiciously. That is the issue of departmental secrecy regarding nonsecurity governmental information.

A clammy, gray cloud of secrecy has descended to envelop all who would inquire or anyone who might question the procedure of the Post Office Department.

For instance, I have requested the names of the people hired by the Post Office Department under the so-called youth opportunity campaign. My requests have been denied. I have introduced a resolution, pending before a committee of the House, which would require the Post Office Department to provide the information to Members of Congress.

I have written the President of the United States, pointing out to him that if Members of Congress cannot obtain the most innocent information from executive branch agencies and departments, that representative government is dead. I have respectfully requested him to require the new Postmaster General, the very able Mr. Lawrence O'Brien, to voluntarily provide this information to Members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, this innocent, nonsecurity information was repeatedly denied me, as it was other Congressmen and representatives of the press, throughout the summer of 1965. This denial was based on Postal Regulation No. 744.444. This regulation states, in part:

Lists of employees, including their designations, salaries, or addresses shall not be furnished to any individual, commercial firm, or non-Federal organization.

I can see no justification for a regulation which prevents Members of Congress or the American people from knowing who works for their Government, particularly in a department which has no reason to justify secrecy on grounds of national security.

The Post Office Department took the position that Members of Congress are individuals and thus not entitled to the information of the Department.

By this time, however, the public and the press were aroused, and other voices in Congress were being raised, asking for the information. Mr. Gronouski made a concession. He said that anyone could have the names, if they were obtained from individual postmasters.

What Mr. Gronouski failed to mention is that there are some 34,000 individual postmasters in the United States.

His concession, while operationally impossible, was philosophically meaningful, however. For it was an implied repudiation of Postal Regulation 744.444. This appeared to mean that the Post Office Department's refusal to release the information was entirely arbitrary, grounded neither in law nor regulation.

It was in this atmosphere that my resolution of inquiry to require the Postmaster General to make the names of the youth opportunity campaign employees available to the whole House came to the floor on September 16.

The appropriate subcommittee and the full committee had met hastily that morning, clearing the privileged resolution with an adverse report. I did not even learn that it was coming up on the floor until I arrived in the Chamber. During debate on the resolution, I stated my case in these words:

I believe the American people, who pay taxes, are entitled to know who is employed by the Federal Government in every area where it is not a security matter. I understand that with reference to security matters, this is not done. But on a nonsecurity matter, such as employment in the Post Office Department, where they are hired in local communities, anybody can go in and find out who is employed. I do not see that this has to do with any matter dangerous to the national security.

Mr. Speaker, when the resolution came to a vote, it passed on the first tally, but then enough votes were changed so that the final tally was 186 to 180 to kill a resolution designed to break through the serious matter of secrecy in government. I issued a statement, in which I said that this vote was "a bigger scandal than the scandal itself."

However, I continued to seek the information, as did other Members of Congress, the press, and the public. When the present Postmaster General, Mr. Lawrence O'Brien, was up for confirmation before a Senate committee, he was closely questioned regarding his position on the release of the names of postal employees. He said he saw no reason why they should not be released and has repeated this position on subsequent occasions.

I have recently written Mr. O'Brien and await his reply as to when he will live up to his Senate testimony and eliminate this ridiculous secrecy regulation. Mr. John Macy, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, was quoted in the Minneapolis Tribune as saying the Commission will adopt a Government-wide regulation eliminating such secrecy. I have also written Mr. Macy asking when he plans to eliminate such secrecy.

I immediately wrote to all of the regional postmasters requesting the information. A few days ago, my efforts were finally finished, as I obtained the final list.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to include all of these names in the RECORD today. I do so for two important reasons.

First, I believe that nonsecurity information concerning any department or agency of the Federal Government should be in the public domain. There are some limitations on this, of course, such as time of compilation and expense.

Certainly, no nonsecurity information should be withheld from a Member of Congress as the representative of the people, especially where the intent of a Government program obviously has been violated.

Second, I believe that the American people have a right to examine this information themselves, to determine whether or not the Post Office Department administered this portion of the President's youth opportunity campaign—which he closely identified with his so-called war on poverty—according to the intent of the program and the will of the people. Did the action of postal officials in offering the jobs as patronage with no mention of the need criteria tend to benefit or further deprive those young people who needed the jobs the most?

Mr. Speaker, I must stress two important qualifications.

First. In offering this information to the Congress and the people of the United States, I believe that the Members of Congress who accepted this patronage did so without being fully apprised of the intended nature of the program and I find no fault in Members of Congress. I do believe that Congress should take a long, hard look, however, at the use of patronage, especially in the Post Office where it has tenaciously lived on after it had become a sorry memory in most departments and agencies.

Second. The offering of this information is in no way an attempt to embarrass any of the people on the lists. As I have previously pointed out, the persons who accepted the jobs were simply seeking employment. I believe that it is good for any young person to seek and obtain gainful employment. However, these jobs were created within the Federal Government with a specific intent and that intent was to help those who might not otherwise have the opportunity to continue their educations or who might, in other ways, have pressing need of a job.

The conclusions of this case are two-fold:

First. When a program is devised and presented to the public as a means of helping the disadvantaged, the disadvantaged should be helped.

Second. Any attempt to withhold from the Congress and the people information regarding nonsecurity matters of the executive branch, should be opposed.

As I said on the floor of the House on September 1:

If the people see their elected representatives turned into rubberstamps and their free press turned into propaganda by the secrecy of departments and agencies, the people's right to know is gone.

And if that is gone, democratic government is gone.

I ask my colleagues to picture in their minds the spectacle of a huge department of the executive branch, charged with grave responsibilities, using the distribution of 3,380 summer jobs for 16- to 21-year-olds as political patronage. And, picture in your minds the spectacle of this same supposedly responsible department, having distributed these jobs for partisan political purposes, adopting a fierce stance of defensiveness toward Members of Congress and representatives of the press, as they wrap this episode in a cloud of bureaucratic secrecy.

If such unworthy actions are taken regarding a trivial matter, what of the important matters?

Mr. Speaker, following are the names of those employed by the Post Office Department during the summer of 1965 under the President's so-called youth opportunity campaign. One further clarification is needed. In a few cases, regional post offices did not differentiate in their records between regular summer hiring and the youth opportunity campaign. As a result, a small percentage of the people in the following list were regular temporary employees and not youth opportunity campaign employees. I regret that they are included, but evidently the few regions where this occurred did not choose to differentiate between the programs:

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. QUIE. Yes. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. HALL. I appreciate the gentleman taking the floor in behalf of this book by Clark Mollenhoff entitled "Despoilers of Democracy." Certainly none of us want democracy despoiled, no more than we want the representative Republic under the Constitution despoiled. This book hangs up some valiant red lights about how it can be done, not only in the areas which the gentleman has referred to, but this author, with his keen perceptiveness and his stick-to-it-iveness and his prudent judgment, the man who wrote "The Pinnacle of Power," I believe, just before this, wherein some of the goon administrations and gangster control of labor unions which were despoiled, or at least brought to light, so that normal processes of good government could despoil reprehensible practices in that movement, has clearly laid out deficiencies in the appointive system of the Cabinet office, errors documented and depicted in the administration of the Department of Defense, which has not only been policymaking in its lately assumed powers under the Curtis-McCormack amendment to an appropriation bill of a few years past, toward the end of empire building in more than 18 instances, that has again brought to public light and for considered consumption and decision of informed opinion by necessary repetitive process, such errors in administration as the Billie Sol Estes, the Bobby Baker cases and many others which have indeed despoiled the good name of democracy as spelled with a small "d" in the last few years.

Again I compliment the gentleman. Certainly this fine author will not be despoiled by expediency in what he has brought before the American public.

Mr. QUIE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

REGISTRATION OF VOTERS IN BIRMINGHAM, JEFFERSON COUNTY, ALA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FASCELL). Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BUCHANAN] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, following a period of peace, harmony and orderly progress in the city of Birmingham which it is my honor to represent, we find ourselves in recent weeks once again in the glare of the spotlight of the news as a result of riotous demonstrations, led in the city of Birmingham and the neighboring city of Bessemer, by one Hosea Williams of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and others.

The purpose of these demonstrations is, as I am given to understand from the lips of Mr. Williams and those of others, twofold. In the first place, to press for night registration, neighborhood registration, and more lately, the bringing in of Federal registrars to facilitate the registration of all Negro citizens in the area in the immediate future.

There is a second purpose about which Mr. Williams has spoken: that Birmingham was so successfully used by certain elements before that they are using our city again. I gather this to mean that they will try to use our city as a stage for a drama in which the people are the props and our city is an object lesson to be held up before other cities.

As the pressure in all areas has grown for the facilitation of Negro registration and voting, and since this has been taking place in recent weeks in the city of Birmingham, I felt it would be useful to insert into the RECORD the truth and the facts to make clear the status of registration of voters in my county at this time.

First, may I say that it is my conviction and the conviction of many others of both major racial groups in my area, that there is no discrimination in the registration of voters in Jefferson County, Ala., at this time.

As of July 31, 1965, there were registered in my county some 153,974 white persons and some 24,088 Negro citizens, for a total registration of 178,062.

Since the white adult population constitutes about 70 percent of the adult population of the district, and the Negro population about 30 percent, there was a larger percentage of registered Caucasian persons than Negro persons, as of July 31, 1965.

However, in the month of August 1965 there were registered in Jefferson County 150 white and 2,220 Negro citizens.

In September there were registered 462 Caucasians and 2,155 Negroes.

In October 1965 there were registered 413 whites and 1,444 Negroes.

In November there were registered 399 whites and 1,443 Negroes.

In the month of December 1965 there were registered 858 Caucasian persons and 3,859 Negro citizens.

In the first half of January 1966 there were registered 714 white persons and 4,160 Negro citizens, bringing the total registration at this point to 196,339, of which 156,970 are Caucasian citizens and 39,369 are Negro citizens.

Now, these new figures indicate that as of the beginning of January, 1966, 21 percent of the registered voters in my county were Negro citizens, against a 30-percent population figure.

It is estimated that at the present rate, estimated by responsible local officials, the Negro registration by April 1, 1966, will be 30 percent of the total registered voters in our county, thereby bringing into balance the percentage of Negro citizens registered to vote and the percentage of Caucasian citizens registered to vote, on a population basis.

Mr. Speaker, not only has there been no discrimination practiced, I can testify to the fact that as early as the fall of 1964 the people who were having difficulty registering in my county were not Negro citizens. When the lines became heavy, near the election season, the lines were filled with Negro citizens who were being registered; the people who had difficulty registering were Caucasian rather than Negro.

Not only has there been no discrimination but steps have been taken to facilitate such registration. From the period August 6, 1965, the following changes have taken place:

On August 6, 1965, the Board of Registrars was staffed by six clerks. Since that time 15 additional clerks have been employed, such additions being made as per the following: on August 18, 4 employees; on December 15, 6 additional employees; on January 4, 1966, 5 additional clerks were employed, 3 of whom I believe were Negro clerks and 2 of these were serving on the last registration day which I checked.

Now the opening week of January 1966, is an indication of the present rate of registration. On Monday, January 3, 376 applied for registration. On Tuesday, 395 and on Wednesday, 366. On Saturday, January 15, more than 800 persons were registered in Jefferson County. On a normal day the Board of Registrars estimate they can easily register some 600 persons to vote. With the single exception of the Saturday on which 800 applied, and the 800 were handled by the Board with no undue delay, there has been no day to date when as many as 600 persons applied for registration.

In short, those who have wanted to register have been handled by the Jefferson County Board of Registrars at this time without delay.

In addition to employing extra employees, arrangements have been made to keep the board open for 5 days instead of 3 days which had previously been the case. Saturday was substituted as one of the registration days. Registration takes place on Saturday rather than Thursday to enable those who work and cannot obtain leave during the weekdays to register.

These things have been done to facilitate registration of voters in my county on a nondiscriminatory basis and to provide all citizens a reasonable opportunity to come to a centrally located place and to register themselves to vote.

The fact that there has not yet been a day on which there have undue delays in which the board has been unable to handle those who presented themselves is an indication that steps have been taken which appear to be sufficient to facilitate registration of all citizens in my county who have a reasonable and minimal interest in registering themselves in order to vote.

Now there has been a demand for night registration or neighborhood registration. Without commenting finally on whether this kind of registration is a good thing or not, may I say that night registration has been tried once and it was found not successful by the board of registrars.

Neighborhood registration presents a number of difficulties both in law and in the physical capability to handle such registrations.

But may I point out in this connection that there are available means for registration of all citizens for 5 days a week in a central location and these facilities are available regardless of race, color, or creed.

Now no one can guarantee that every citizen of either major racial group will in fact present himself to be registered and to vote. Because, as a matter of fact, not only in our city but in all America apathy is one of the problems in getting people to participate as they ought to participate in the political life of the Nation. This is a problem that I think a check of any district's voting record would indicate. In very few places if ever at all do 100 percent of the citizens present themselves to register to vote and participate actively in the processes of selecting their leaders in government.

Apathy has been one of the problems in our city. The militant group which came into our city to organize demonstrations to press for these changes in registration and in voting had great difficulty in arousing enough interest on the part of the adult Negro community to get an impressive demonstration underway and to get such demonstrations carried out.

On a normal day of demonstrations some 100 persons have participated and the law enforcement agencies report approximately 52 out of the 100 are paid workers of civil rights organizations.

Therefore, there has been apathy on the part of the adult Negro community to the attempts to organize these demonstrations, and there is apathy on the part of both Negro and Caucasian citizens in the matter of registering to vote. No one can guarantee that every citizen will in fact, whatever arrangements are made, present himself to be registered and will in fact vote. But may I say that it would appear—and it is the conviction of most of the leadership of our community that it is the case—arrangements have been made to cover all normal reasonable demands for registration and voting.

May I say that if neighborhood registration did come to pass, our registration is at present on a nondiscriminatory basis. While there are some 76,000 Negro citizens who are not yet registered to vote, there are over 100,000 Caucasian citizens who are not yet registered to vote, and in light of the fact that many of those unregistered voters are Caucasian housewives who do experience some difficulty in leaving their homes in order to register to vote, if the neighborhood registration takes place, it would seem to me mandatory, obvious, and elementary that it should be on a nonracial, nondiscriminatory, countywide basis in every precinct and in every neighborhood, and not in selected neighborhoods; particularly since by April 1, according to the present rate, the percentage of Negro to Caucasian registered voters against the adult population figures for those two racial groups will be in balance in my district.

Therefore, to sponsor and to carry out registration in certain selected neighborhoods only, on a racial basis, would be to create a new discrimination, to create a new imbalance rather than to correct any present imbalance, and would be working against the rights of and that which could be considered equity for the majority of the citizens of my county.

It would seem from these facts that the Board of Registrars of Jefferson County has made reasonable effort to comply with the requirements of the 1965 Civil Rights Act, that there is no discrimination, that efforts have been made to facilitate registration, and that soon there will be a complete balance in registration figures, and that there is present ample opportunity for any citizen who desires to present himself to register to vote to do so without undue delay or inconvenience.

The leadership of our city has spoken emphatically on behalf of equal rights, but also for responsible action, in a statement published in the Birmingham News on January 11, 1966. That statement is as follows:

While this statement does not presume to speak for every elected or appointed official or every individual citizen, it does—in our sincere and considered opinion—represent the convictions of the great majority of the people of this area.

There are two cardinal principles of government which appear, in effect, as the mottoes of the governments of Jefferson County and the city of Birmingham. One is engraved above the 21st Street entrance of the county courthouse; the other on the walls of the city council chamber.

In city hall the words mean: "Cities Are What Men Make Them."

Those two phrases ought to be a part of the governmental fabric of every American city, county and State. But even when they are—as they now are part of the governmental fabric of Jefferson County and Birmingham—they cannot be effective until all qualified citizens, of all races and creeds, are ready and willing to undertake full participation and full responsibility as citizens.

In order to make voting participation possible as rapidly and practically as possible, the Jefferson County Board of Registrars has completely fulfilled its obligations, both moral and legal.

Its effort to accommodate those who wish to register as voters are now limited only by the physical requirements of State laws which may not be abridged except by due process of either legislative amendment or court orders.

The fact that some applicants may have had to stand in lines for short periods is hardly a challenge to either the capacity or willingness of the Board of Registrars to fulfill its duties under the civil rights or any other act, State or Federal.

Let it be noted that every year, regardless of months of notice and mail-in privileges, 10 times as many citizens stand in line from dawn till dark for automobile tags.

Several times yearly hundreds stay in line for 72 uninterrupted hours solely for the privilege of buying a football ticket. At least five times a year some 70,000 people ride bumper to bumper for 2 hours or more for the same purpose and thousands miss the opening kickoff because they did not start in time.

No week passes that people, regardless of color or creed, do not stand in tiresome checkout grocery lines, in front of theater box offices, at bus stops and in restaurants.

The world's richest grocer could not provide an instant checkout clerk for every grocery shopper; the richest county in America has not and cannot produce an instant registrar for every applicant.

Groceries and voting privileges are both fundamental to the full pursuit of life, liberty, and happiness. Both are worth, and usually require standing in line. But now, even that has been minimized.

We believe that it is the right of any qualified citizen to participate, as a voter, in government. We believe that under existing laws the exercise of that right cannot be limited by race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.

Certain groups have requested the Justice Department to send Federal registrars to Jefferson County.

We believe the Board of Registrars has the capacity and will to register all those who, within reasonable bounds, seek to register.

We believe the responsibility for encouraging registration and voting lies with local leadership at all levels.

We believe that as people are encouraged to register and vote, they must also be instructed in the obligations as well as the privileges of full citizenship. Strong and responsive democracy can only come as a by-product of the maintenance of law and order; the realization that self-determination also includes self-restraint; that no man or group of men may disrupt the peace, violate the law or otherwise unlawfully or violently expedite their own aims at the expense of the whole society in which they live.

Every citizen owes a duty to act in the best interest of his entire community.

Today there is rapidly developing a growing and responsible leadership in both the white and Negro communities. It is a leadership capable of communication and understanding.

That leadership recognized that local problems can be solved satisfactorily, and without rancor, only at the local level. They believe affirmatively that local opportunities can be fully realized and fully shared only by local cooperation and accommodation.

That leadership needs to grow and to be strengthened. It will be vastly strengthened when the qualified citizens register and vote in good conscience for the best interest of the city as a whole, Jefferson County as a whole, Alabama as a whole, and the Nation as a whole * * *. "One Nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

W. COOPER GREEN,

President, Jefferson County Commission.

E. H. GILMORE,

ALBERT BOUTWELL,

M. E. WIGGINS,

President, Birmingham Council.

These leaders, including the president of the county commission, the city mayor, and the president of the city council, point out that while they support absolute equality of opportunity, they do not believe it reasonable to expect them to guarantee instant registration to every citizen everywhere at this or any future time. They point out that every day more people stand in line to receive licenses of various kinds than stand in line to register to vote, that people are often subject to delays in supermarket lines and at football games. Certainly it would not be physically possible to guarantee instant registration for every citizen, but registration has proceeded without any undue delay or inconvenience that anyone can observe at this point for all citizens.

So much for the registration itself, which seems to be proceeding at an orderly and nondiscriminatory pace.

May I address myself now to the efforts that have been made to change the procedures of registration and to press for these various things—Federal registrars to come in, night and neighborhood registration in Negro neighborhoods only. As I indicated, our city has made peaceful, harmonious, and orderly progress in recent months and years. However, recently there came into our city a group of personalities, nonresidents of Jefferson County, who attempted first to inflame the passions of adult Negro citizens and, failing this, turned their attention to Negro high school students in my county.

These individuals sought to persuade these young people to leave school, to demonstrate, to defy authority, to press for their demands regarding registration.

On January 10, 1966, the following took place, according to an affidavit of Lt. David Wayne Orange of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department:

At the urgency of alleged nonresident civil rights leaders, students from the Brighton High School, a school under the jurisdiction of the Jefferson County Board of Education, left said school and went to Carver High School, a Jefferson County school, where they persuaded a number of students to leave said school and join in their march and continued on to Abram School, also a Jefferson County school, where they persuaded a number of students to join in their demonstration and continued on through the streets of Bessemer to the Jefferson County Courthouse, Bessemer Division.

On Tuesday, January 11, 1966, some 250 to 300 Negro students from Brighton High School lay down in the four-lane Bessemer superhighway between Birmingham and Bessemer, blocking vehicular traffic; later marching back to Brighton after a warning. On Tuesday, according to local reports published in the Birmingham News, Negro students hurled rocks and bottles at police and

School officials sought to restrain these young people.

May I say that these actions are not representative of the Negro community in the Birmingham area. These actions are not representative of the Negro leadership who live in our city and in our State. These actions were spurred and inspired and encouraged and incited by persons who are not residents of Birmingham, Ala., or of Jefferson County, and were carried out by young schoolchildren at the urging of these outside leaders.

In each instance in the school, the school officials pled with the young people to stay in school, sought to restrain them from demonstrating, and acted responsibly by trying to talk reason and good judgment into these young people who are in their charge legally as well as morally during the school hours.

Faculty members of the school forcibly prevented young Negro students from breaking out of the school grounds. One policeman, D. L. Faulkner, was hit in the outbreak of the rock throwing. Students went on the roof and kept up a steady barrage of rocks and bottles at police and passersby near the school at 330 Eighth Avenue North, Birmingham, Ala. A group of about 100 Negro students went to the Birmingham city hall seeking to enter this building.

From this the students went on, led by Mr. Williams, and others, and demonstrated in blocking main thoroughfares, in demonstrations blocking traffic in various ways in Birmingham, and between Birmingham and Bessemer.

On Tuesday, January 11, Hosea Williams spoke to a group of about 200 Negroes in front of the Jefferson County Court House. He said an attempt would be made to keep children out of all the schools in Jefferson County.

He said—and I quote—"We are going to turn this town upside down."

He said when he spoke on the courthouse steps to the students in his audience that they could give a year of their life toward the movement. When asked how he would keep them out of school he said: "We are professionals in keeping them out of the schools."

And this is the kind of incitement that was made by Mr. Williams and others in order to persuade young people in violation of law to come out of their school during school hours. The young people first threw rocks and bottles at the police and obstructed traffic. A police officer said that the mood was the ugliest he had seen. This was a mood inspired, as has been repeatedly said, by outside agitators and not by local Negro leadership.

Indeed, while there are many local leaders militantly supporting registration of all Negro voters at the earliest possible time, certain of these leaders have indicated they do not concur in Mr. Hosea Williams' approach in leading young people to violate law and to defy authority.

For example, a prominent Negro businessman in our area, Mr. Gaston, came forth with a statement in which he made clear his disapproval of the misuse of young people and, in fact, he deplored such action. Here is that statement:

As a native of Alabama and a taxpaying, first-class citizen of Birmingham and Jefferson County; as an employer of a large number of people whose total earnings are more than $1 million a year and with several million dollars invested in this area, I feel that I am qualified, and have a right, to be concerned not only about myself, or my businesses, but about the hundreds of employees and their families who are associated with me—as what affects the good name and economy of this community, good or bad, affects all of us who benefit from this community.

I would hope that the line of communication recently established with the leaders of the white community would not be adversely affected by the present unrest, but instead strengthened and enlarged to give more Negroes an opportunity to participate in our city and county governments on all levels of which they are capable, including counsel and advice to foster good will and growth in our community.

I feel that there is a reservoir of intelligent, dedicated, responsible Negroes in this community. If given a chance to do so they can and will, together with their counterpart in the white community, make Birmingham a real magic city in fact.

I am concerned about the more than 13,000 shareholders in the Citizens Federal Savings and Loan Association who have entrusted to us more than $8 million of their savings, of which more than $6 million has been invested, to enable our people to become homeowners. The security of the homes of these people and the protection of their savings are directly affected by the climate, the image, and the solid economy of this community.

As a responsible citizen of Birmingham, I deplore the invasion of our schools to enlist students for demonstrations during school hours.

"I would recommend that steps be taken to institute workshops to train our young people in discipline, nonviolence, and good law-abiding citizenship.

"I support the right of peaceful protest and freedom of assembly when across-the-table conferences fail to achieve the goals. When all of these fail, demonstrations are inevitable. Demonstrations reflect the dissatisfactions of Negro and white citizens alike, but should at all times be within the law.

"I think the Board of Registrars has demonstrated its willingness and ability to register all who apply. I think this is a challenge on the part of interested Negroes to present themselves to the Board of Registrars in large numbers and get their names on the voters list.

"I think it is the responsibility of all interested Negro citizens of our community to urge all capable Negroes who are interested in employment with our city or county government to qualify with the county personnel board for any vacancies in our city, county government, including the police and sheriff departments.

"The doors of opportunity are rapidly opening for qualified Negroes. In many fields firms are unable to locate capable personnel to fill many of the positions offered. The Booker T. Washington Business College, which we operate, is dedicated to training efficient personnel for commercial and automated technical positions. The demand for such persons is greater than we are presently able to supply.

"One of the great needs of our people today is a good education. I would urge our young people to stay in school and prepare themselves for these opportunities which are opening up very rapidly, and to also prepare themselves for first-class citizenship by assuming their responsibilities as law-abiding citizens of the community, contributing to the good and prosperity and best image of the community, as well as receiving the benefits therefrom.

"I do not condone violence or violation of the law on the part of anyone, and I am sure all responsible Negro citizens share this thought.

"The responsibility and conduct of our youth is first the responsibility of the parents and our local leadership. And I would hope that we as local, concerned, and responsible citizens will not shirk our responsibility for the conduct of our children in or out of school, and give our cooperation and support to our teachers and school administrators in training our children to be law-abiding, respectable, and responsible citizens."

This, Mr. Speaker, is an indication that the Birmingham Negro leadership does not endorse wrong methods toward achieving ends which many of them might applaud. The Negro newspaper, the Birmingham World, also came forth with a statement reminding citizens that the place to register was at the voter registration tables and not in the streets.

Dr. John Nixon, the chairman of the NAACP for the State of Alabama, stated that he deplored the use of schoolchildren in these demonstrations. So we see that such methods are not representative of the Negro leaders. Nevertheless, the outside agitators were determined to inflame the passions of these young people and incite them to commit acts of defiance and attacks on the persons of police officers and disobey the law. As a result, the Jefferson County Board of Education sought and received a temporary restraining order on January 13 pointing out that the young people were being abused by these demonstrations.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in the RECORD at this point the petition and the restraining order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FASCELL). Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ALABAMA SOUTHERN DIVISION—THE COUNTY BOARD OF EDUCATION OF JEFFERSON COUNTY, ALABAMA, A PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD UNDER THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF ALABAMA; GEORGE ROGERS, MRS. ROBERT GWIN, C. R. BOTTENFIELD, ROBERT L. ELLIS, JR., AND O. G. GRESHAM AS MEMBERS OF SAID BOARD AND KERMIT A. JOHNSON, SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION OF JEFFERSON COUNTY, STATE OF ALABAMA, PLAINTIFFS v. HOSEA WILLIAMS, EDWARD BEDFORD, ANDREW MARSETE, AND SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE, A CORPORATION, DEFENDANTS—CIVIL ACTION No. CA 66-24

I

That the County Board of Education of Jefferson County, Alabama, is a public school board under the laws of the State of Alabama. That George Rogers, Mrs. Robert Gwin, C. R. Bottenfield, Robert L. Ellis, Jr., and O. G. Gresham are members of the Jefferson County Board of Education and are all residents of Jefferson County, Alabama, and over the age of 21 years. That Kermit A. Johnson is Superintendent of Education in Jefferson County, State of Alabama, and is also a resident of Jefferson County, Ala., over the age of 21 years.

II

The defendant Hosea Williams is over the age of 21 years and is a resident of the State of Georgia, whose present address is unknown. Edward Bedford and Andrew Marsete are both over the age of 21 years and nonresidents of the State of Alabama, their place of residence being to the plaintiffs unknown. The defendant Southern Christian Leadership Conference is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia with its principal office and place of business in Atlanta, Ga.

III

This court has jurisdiction pursuant to the provisions of 28 U.S.C.A., section 1332, and Civil Rights Act, 1960, as amended. The amount in controversy, exclusive of interest and consideration, exceeds the sum of $10,000.

IV

The Jefferson County Board of Education receives over 60 percent of its entire income from the educational trust fund of the State of Alabama and this income is based upon daily attendance which averages $1 per day. The continued absentees from the Jefferson County school will cause irreparable loss to the Jefferson County School System.

V

The plaintiffs are by law charged with the general administration and supervision of the public schools and educational interests in the Jefferson County schools with the responsibility to seek in every way to promote the interests of said schools and the welfare of said children who attend said schools, and with the duty of securing the prompt and regular attendance of students enrolled at and obligated by law to attend said schools. That during school hours the principal of each school and others in authority are in effect the personal guardian of said students and responsible for their safety and attendance in school. That said board of education and its superintendent are charged with the duty and responsibility under the laws of the State of Alabama and the constitution of the State of Alabama to see that said students attending said schools keep the peace and do not engage in any activity destructive of said properties of said board of education.

That commencing on or about January 10, 1966, and continuing each day since that date, the individual and corporate defendants individually and through their agents, employees, servants, members, followers, and other persons in active concert or participation with the defendants conspired to and did induce, coerce, encourage, or persuade large numbers of students enrolled at and attending public schools under the administration and control of plaintiffs to be absent from said schools on days and at times when said schools were being operated for the benefit of said pupils and when such pupils were required to attend said schools; that said individuals and corporate defendants individually and through their agents, employees, servants, members, followers, and other persons in active concert and participation with the defendants conspired to and did induce, coerce, encourage, or persuade said students to participate in unlawful activities sponsored or incited or caused to be sponsored or incited by defendants, including demonstrations, street parades or processions without permits, and congregating in mobs upon the public streets and other public places in Jefferson County, Ala.,

and in the city of Birmingham, Ala.; that agents, employees, servants, members, followers, and other persons in active concert and participation with the defendants have entered upon the school properties under the control and supervision of the plaintiffs and have encouraged, coerced, intimidated, induced, and persuaded said students to leave school during school hours and to engage in unlawful street demonstrations in Jefferson County and the city of Birmingham, during which demonstrations the students have been instructed to lie down in public streets thereby blocking traffic and did on, to wit, January 11, 1966, to cause students in the Jefferson County school system to leave their classes during school hours and to lie down in the Bessemer super highway, being a heavily traveled highway between Birmingham and Bessemer, designated as U.S. Highway No. 11 and block traffic for several minutes, resulting in over 300 cars being prevented from passing on said highway; that said individual and corporate defendants individually and through their agents, employees, servants, members, followers, and other persons in active concert and participation with the defendants have caused said students to organize demonstration groups and did induce, coerce, encourage, and attempt to persuade said students to attempt to be arrested by the commission of unlawful acts and have on many occasions requested the students to influence other students to boycott public schools operated under the supervision of plaintiffs; that such conspiracy of the defendants and others in active concert and participation with the defendants, as hereinabove described, has resulted in serious interference with the operation of said schools by plaintiffs and in irreparable harm to the education and welfare of said students and in substantial diminution of the amount of funds which can by law be apportioned and made available to plaintiff for operation of said schools and that the defendants, as hereinabove set out, have threatened and stated their intention to continue such conduct and conspiracy as aforesaid and thereby cause said students to continue to be absent from said schools and have threatened to close down the public school system of Jefferson County.

That the defendants by their conduct have caused mass demonstrations of county students to spread to Negroes attending the city schools of the city of Birmingham and several hundred students did abandon their classes and leave the Parker High School in the city of Birmingham on January 11, 1966, and did engage in mass demonstrations, in which bricks and rocks were thrown at law enforcement officers and traffic was obstructed on the public streets; that on each of the days of January 10, 11, and 12, 1966, said defendants have so caused approximately 500 students to be absent from the public schools operated by the plaintiffs and have caused said students to participate in unlawful activities as hereinabove stated.

The defendants have urged, persuaded, encouraged, and intimidated and caused large numbers of Negro pupils to withdraw from the public schools in Jefferson County on the 11th day of January 1966, and to participate in mass demonstrations in Jefferson County thereby preventing Negro pupils from continuing their academic courses and encouraging said students to violate the laws of the State of Alabama in keeping peace and in blocking the highways of said county preventing a free flow of traffic. This conduct on the part of the defendants has denied these students who desire to remain in school their civil right of attending school unmolested, unafraid, and without interference.

County as a result of threats, persuasion, and intimidation on the part of the defendants has caused a loss in appropriation from State funds of some $500 a day and will continue at the rate of $1 per day per student if continued.

The large number of Negro students having walked out of school without permission and participating in mass demonstrations, blocking public highways, defying lawful authority has created a situation wrought with danger and which could result in riot, insurrection, bloodshed, and injury to person and property in excess of $10,000.

VIII

That your plaintiffs are informed and do believe on such information and belief that the law enforcement officers of said county do not have adequate personnel and facilities to prevent a wholesale riot, insurrection, and breach of peace by said student demonstrators, and if the sheriff of Jefferson County would call upon the Governor of the State of Alabama to furnish adequate law enforcement officers to protect said school properties and public highways and to protect the lives and properties of other citizens of said county the expenses of providing such law enforcement personnel would unduly burden the taxpayers of the State of Alabama, and neglect of law enforcement to counties other than Jefferson.

1. That the court will enter an ex parte temporary restraining order, preliminary and permanent injunction restraining and enjoining defendants, their officers, agents, employees, servants, members, followers, successors, and all other persons in active concert and participation with them from conducting, encouraging or participating in demonstrations, boycotting the public schools in Jefferson County; from encouraging, coercing, enticing, intimidating and persuading said students to absent themselves from school or leave school during school hours, from marching, parading, or in any wise protesting and interfering with the operation of public schools in Jefferson County; from encouraging students to join any demonstration during normal school hours, from leading any demonstrations involving students who have absented themselves from school; from encouraging, persuading, inciting any students to commit any breach of the peace within Jefferson County; from leading any demonstration, obstructing the public streets in any manner so as to prevent or delay the orderly flow of traffic both vehicular and pedestrian; from in any manner or method encouraging students in the Jefferson County schools to become truants; from encouraging and advocating any boycotting of Jefferson County schools, and from in any manner committing acts of violence, endangering the lives and property of citizens.

2. That the court will grant such other, further and general relief to which plaintiffs may be entitled, including the costs and reasonable attorneys' fees.

TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Pursuant to the opinion of this court this day entered in this cause, the defendants, Hosea Williams, Edward Bedford, Andrew Marse, and Southern Christian Leadership Conference, a corporation, and each of them, their officers, agents, employees, successors, and all persons in active concert and participation with them, be and they are hereby restrained and enjoined from conducting, encouraging, or participating in a demonstration on or near any public school in Jefferson County, Ala.; from encouraging and enticing pupils to leave the public schools in Jefferson County, Ala.; from encouraging, aiding and abetting in any respect truancy on the part of any pupils in the Jefferson County school system; and from conducting, encouraging, or participating in demonstrations, picketing and boycotting the public schools in Jefferson County, Ala.; from marching, parading, or protesting the operation of the public schools in Jefferson County on or near the school premises; from encouraging or engaging in riotous conduct which would invade the privacy of property or injure citizens, and from obstructing the public streets in any manner so as to prevent or delay the orderly flow of traffic, both vehicular and pedestrian, and from in any manner committing acts of violence, endangering the lives and property of citizens.

A delay in the granting of this order will result in irreparable injury to the plaintiffs due to the fact that the actual operations of the schools of the Jefferson County school system will be interfered with and impaired if the boycott is carried out as threatened.

It is not possible to give notice to the defendants of the hearing on the temporary restraining order and the issuance of this order in time to prevent the interference and impairment referred to due to the fact that the defendants' movements and whereabouts are presently unknown.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, I think this raises before us a great moral question in our time and in our land. After the tragedy of Watts it would seem clear and elementary that every American citizen and certainly every public official at whatever level of government would understand the danger of the doctrine of civil disobedience, would understand the grave threat to all our institutions and to the liberty of all of us of these attacks upon the framework of law within which we have known our liberty. It would seem elementary and clear that the doctrine that we can disobey those laws with which we disagree, that we can defy any authority with which we disagree, and rightly do so, and believe that this is an acceptable way of moving toward the realization of our goals and ambitions in America—it would seem that everyone could understand by now the danger of this doctrine. Yet we see this doctrine applied once again in leading young people in acts of lawlessness.

I am grateful that certain voices both Negro and Caucasian in my district have been raised against this dangerous practice, this practice which led to great tragedy in Watts and could lead to national tragedy if left unchecked.

Mr. Speaker, I know of no practice or doctrine more dangerous in our time than the one of civil disobedience. The forces pressing for the changes in my district at this time have behind them the full force of Federal law and the sympathy of the Federal Government and the Federal courts. Why, then, is it necessary or why, then, is it acceptable to anyone that there should be those who press for unlawful means, for dangerous means, for riotous means to work toward their desired ends? It is not my desire that any person of any age of any race in my district or elsewhere in the State of Alabama, that any person who desires to register and vote, shall be denied such privilege of registering and voting. I am sure I express the will of the vast majority of the people of my district, but even those who are militantly supporting the cause of registration and of voting of the citizens—and I would do so strictly on a nonracial and nondiscriminatory basis—do not endorse nor subscribe to the methods which have been used by the officers of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in my district—in their use of young people and unlawful means, in teaching them to commit acts of defiance against authority, to break the law, and in teaching them that they are morally right in so doing. This is dangerous, and sooner or later this Government and its officials must face up to this danger and answer it emphatically and not compromise or give in to it. Liberty under law has been the political system in this country under which we have guaranteed our rights and liberties. America can only be sustained as a nation of liberty if we sustain it as a nation of law. So I would say that we have had both lawful and rational work toward the registration of people of all racial groups to vote in my county. We have had unlawful and unacceptable pressure by the leaders of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and some of their followers. One of these men was quoted as saying after the restraining order was issued that he understood he was violating it but nevertheless was trying to incite young people to go out in the streets and to leave schools. Another stated that Federal court injunctions are "made to be broken."

Mr. Speaker, we have made a national decision, and it is a very important part of our law and it is a part of what is taking place in our land, that there shall

I pray that this shall be the case and that we shall not create a new day of discrimination in areas like the one which it is my privilege to represent, in which we go into some neighborhoods but not into others, in which we create new imbalances and in which we create new discrimination.

But, Mr. Speaker, even more basic than this I would say, it is my profound hope, representing all of the citizens of my congressional district and on behalf of the 200 million American citizens, that we shall no longer heed and give any recognition to the voice of the prophets of civil disobedience, a dangerous diabolical doctrine which—left unchecked—could destroy our land.

AFFIRMATION VIETNAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FASCELL). Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CALLAWAY] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include extraneous matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

Mr. CALLAWAY. Mr. Speaker, I was recently visited by a group of young men from Emory University in Georgia who brought with them a very interesting story about a truly worthwhile project. Today I would like to present, in their own words, the story behind their project: Affirmation Vietnam.

The aim of Affirmation Vietnam is to show emphatic and positive affirmation of the U.S. commitment in Vietnam. We know that this country fully supports the commitment of American forces to the freedom of South Vietnam; but to our fighting men on the frontlines, and to the rest of the world, our dedication must be made crystal clear.

We students feel that fundamental to the success of America's commitment in Vietnam is the support of American public opinion. There is evidence to show that the Communist authorities in Hanoi are impressed by the draft-card burners and other protest movements in this country, and that the Communist resolve is hardened and strengthened by reports of these dissenters. To our great concern, one American newspaper said this: "In the world environment or our time, European and Asian observers, reaching conclusions out of their own environment, view our student demonstrations as somehow representative of a majority American opinion. Certainly those opposed to Vietnam have a right to be heard but for a long time I have been concerned that in the absence of some sort of effective reply to these negative demonstrations, our strength might be deteriorated. I have heard from Vietnam that the Vietcong casualties have been found with clippings about these student protests in their pockets. Our own troops have been receiving mimeographed propaganda from the more radical student protest movements in this country."

Such reports led us, as students in the State of Georgia, to try and show exactly how the people of Georgia and the Nation stand on the vitally important issue of Vietnam. Thus we have organized into a group called Affirmation Vietnam through which we hope to show the world that the people of the United States support our commitment to the Vietnamese people to freely develop as they see fit, without external interference and indirect aggression through so-called wars of national liberation.

Affirmation Vietnam intends to accomplish this purpose through the use of three complementary programs: a statewide opinion poll, an educational program, and a massive assembly in the Atlanta stadium.

The opinion poll will be conducted as thoroughly as possible among the citizens of Georgia through the services of the Georgia Youth Council. All persons interviewed will be asked to give a "yes" or "no" answer to the statement: "We, as Americans and Georgians, affirm and endorse our country's commitment in Vietnam."

College campuses will be especially well polled. We feel this is important because college students are the leaders of tomorrow, and because they are the ones who will have to fight this war, and they have much to lose through personal involvement. Clubs and other civic groups are being utilized to conduct the opinion poll, again under the control of the Georgia Youth Council. The nonpartisan Georgia Youth Council was organized over a year ago, and consists of outstanding high school and college students in all of Georgia's 10 congressional districts. Their numbers include some 325 students who, in the normal routine of their work, institute and maintain needed and worthwhile projects in each of the congressional districts.

During the months of January and February, over 50 qualified students from colleges across the State will speak to civic groups and student gatherings on the historical basis of the U.S. position in Vietnam. This series of lectures, in addition to the presentation of public discussions, groups, forums, panels, and the publication of papers and pamphlets, will form the backbone of their effort to educate the public regarding the background of the present situation in southeast Asia.

The assembly in Atlanta stadium will represent the culmination of the project and will involve the presentation of the results to a high-ranking Government official. Secretary of State Dean Rusk has agreed to be the keynote speaker at the assembly which will take place on February 12 at 2 p.m.

The Affirmation Vietnam movement has found enthusiastic support at all 50 of Georgia's accredited colleges, because the youth of Georgia and of our Nation want to take an active interest in national and international matters, and to do their part in helping the just and righteous cause of freedom and self-determination for the people of all countries.

Affirmation Vietnam has received endorsement and support from outstanding national leaders of business, government, and the press. Nevertheless, Affirmation Vietnam is entirely a student movement. It started with 2 college students at Emory University in Atlanta and grew to 6, then to 20, and 40, and now to its present size and state of organization. Affirmation Vietnam is maintained only by students of Georgia institutions of higher learning.

Together we students, in a concerted effort with the residents of Georgia, hope to impress the nations of the world with the fact that in one State, and presumably in all States, the majority of Americans are in support of our Government's commitment to South Vietnam.

This, Mr. Speaker, in their own words, is the story of Affirmation Vietnam. I am tremendously proud that this fine project originated in Georgia. But I daresay that I, or any of us, would be proud to have seen it originate in any

State, for I feel that it is representative not just of Georgia's, but of the high caliber of our youth throughout America. Mr. Speaker, we have always been proud of our young men and women, but I feel that at no time in our history could we be more proud than we are today, for, despite the bad publicity of the few, the many continue to uphold the highest traditions of American citizenship.

Mr. MARTIN of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALLAWAY. I am happy to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. MARTIN of Alabama. I want to commend the gentleman on his statement, but most of all I want to congratulate the students of Georgia. Being a Representative of one of your sister States, I think it behooves all of us in the Congress and all of us in all the States of the Union to look into the fine project the gentleman has just discussed. I thank the gentleman for bringing it to our attention.

I also would like to use a moment of his time to congratulate my colleague from Jefferson County and Birmingham for the very fine discussion he made to this House, and I hope the Members of this House will give their consideration and attention, and honor this fine record that our colleague has just given to this Congress.

To both of my colleagues, I express my sincere thanks.

Mr. CALLAWAY. I thank the gentleman from Alabama. I would like to say that many of us are involved in a great many worthwhile projects in Vietnam. In my own district which includes Fort Benning, the home of the 1st Air Cavalry Division, we have Vietnam Mail Call and other wonderful projects.

But in my experience I have never seen anyone quite so enthusiastic about anything as these students are. I met a few weeks ago with about 20 of them at the home of a friend and we talked until midnight about their projects. These students are calling on people throughout the State every day. A project like this does not just happen. The enthusiasm of the students makes the project possible.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALLAWAY. I am happy to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. HALL. Mr. Speaker, I too would like to add my words of commendation to the students of Georgia and to the gentleman in the well of the House for what he has so vividly brought to our attention about this program for the benefit of the people in this Chamber.

I hope his remarks will be read and that this program will be emulated by many people throughout the country and that it will bring you relief and encouragement in the fact that it has been started spontaneously, and may I say simultaneously, in other colleges.

On October 30, I had the privilege with one of my colleagues of this House to visit the Evangel College in my hometown of Springfield, Mo., where a "Back the Boys in Vietnam" program was started. Evangel College is generally a liberal arts college in my hometown which was originally church oriented to the Assemblies of God and who have their international headquarters there. This seems to be similar to the program that you have related about the students in Georgia and the "Back Our Boys" movement. And the student body has adopted a resolution which has been forwarded to the President of the United States as well as to General Westmoreland, the commanding general of the theater in South Vietnam. They also distribute bumper strips that encourage "Back Our Boys." It is an enlightened effort.

As a member of the Committee on Armed Services, it has been of vital interest to me—as well as to many others—to try to make an assessment of what the rabble-rousing, poorly informed, draft-card burners represent and portray of themselves to the troops in South Vietnam. It is an almost infinitesimal small percentage, less than one-hundredth of 1 percent. Of course, it is interesting though that the noisemaking, publicity-seeking, television-camera-crowding reaction of these extremists and ultrapoorly informed people suggests those who before World War I formed the "I Won't Work" organization, and the "Peace-at-any-prices" before World War II. We seem always to have these few with us. They are our cross to bear. But they amount to very little as far as the body politic and the informed opinion of our public is concerned. Thank goodness for the USO shows and the Bob Hope entourage at Christmastime which more truly reflects the attitude of the citizens, U.S.A.

I thank the gentleman for what he has done today.

Mr. CALLAWAY. I thank the gentleman from Missouri for his contribution. I feel sure that the gentleman agrees with me that the best thing that might happen in respect to the events in Georgia is further emulation of what is being done in other States. The gentleman is, of course, aware that even though the people who will protest our policies in Vietnam may be a small portion of our people, the national attention they get is much more than that.

I have been told that Ho Chi Minh once said that he did not win the war against France at Dienbienphu; instead, he won when the people of Paris no longer supported that war. I have been told also that he now sees the same sentiment in the United States that he saw in Paris.

I believe it is totally different. I think the people of the United States do support our commitment to Vietnam, but it is important that those of us who do support that commitment be heard. It is tough to be heard when the press quite naturally wishes to hear dissenting opinions and not people who agree. That is why the enthusiasm of these young people is so important. They are enthusiastic. They must be heard. They will be heard. Ho Chi Minh will hear about Affirmation Vietnam. When he does, perhaps he will realize that his policy of continuing the war waiting for the collapse of U.S. support will not work.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALLAWAY. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I wish to join in congratulating my colleague from Georgia for his remarks today, for his continued leadership in this field, and for the fact that he, for one, has certainly been vocal. He has demonstrated his interest in going to Vietnam and his repeated work in the House. I wish to congratulate also, and join my colleagues in congratulating, these young people in Georgia who have certainly set a fine example for the whole Nation. I think there is very little question that the American citizens stand behind our men in Vietnam.

As the gentleman has indicated, the tiny minority who take this opposite stand have received entirely too much press. I would say that in my own city we, too, have sought to demonstrate our support and make it concrete and real through the adoption of the 1st Infantry Division.

Various groups and clubs within my city of Birmingham have adopted various units of the division. Last Christmas they were flooded with mail, with gifts, and with other remembrances from the people of my city as an indication of our full support of what they are doing there.

I wish to congratulate your young people for an outstanding example of leadership in making concrete the support we all feel for the cause in Vietnam.

Mr. CALLAWAY. I thank the gentleman from Alabama. I commend the people of Birmingham for adopting the 1st Infantry Division, one of the fine units that is fighting in Vietnam today.

In closing I should like to say that these young people, in their enthusiasm, have not made the mistake of going off halfcocked. When I talked to them about it and explained to them how difficult it was to get publicity for those who supported our position as contrasted with those who do not support our position, they told me that they had an international press conference in New York with representatives of the international press, international editions of New York papers, and international magazines. At that time I asked them, "Why did you go to New York to do this?" realizing that Atlanta is the headquarters of this movement. They said, "Why, don't you know that New York is the headquarters for the international press?"

They had already been to people who were knowledgeable, who told them to get maximum international press coverage, they must go to the headquarters of the international press. They are working enthusiastically and hard in a very meaningful way.

It is a real privilege for me at this time to present this information about enthusiastic Georgia students to the Members of this Congress.

WE CAN WIN IN VIETNAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SIKES] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SIKES. Mr. Speaker, the things which I say today are based on studies made in the war theater in December. Recommendations were made at that time to the Department of Defense as a result of these observations. They reflect the advice and opinion of senior U.S. military and civilian leaders there.

The past year has seen a rapid escalation of the effort of the United States in the war in Vietnam. This escalation has been marked by additional appropriations for defense, foreign aid, and State Department activities. It has resulted in increased military operations, bombing of a portion of North Vietnam, and increased airstrikes, including B-52 missions, in support of allied military operations in South Vietnam. Similarly, nonmilitary activities, including the programs of AID and USIA have been increased. These escalated programs have served to hold in check the efforts of the Vietcong and the North Vietnamese Government for a takeover in South Vietnam. However, they have not succeeded in bringing about a negotiated peace settlement, nor have they strengthened the military posture of South Vietnam to the extent that Government forces, U.S. and allied troops supporting their position, have been able to seize and hold the initiative.

Increased allied effort in this area has been matched by the increased involvement of troops from North Vietnam over the Ho Chi Minh trail. This is not in reality a trail but is a well-developed, thousand-mile road system over which men and equipment flow steadily from North Vietnam, around the demilitarized zone into Laos, and southward in South Vietnam. Despite repeated bombings of military targets in North Vietnam and recently of the Ho Chi Minh trail, infiltration of weapons, supplies, and North Vietnamese regular army troops into South Vietnam is increasing. The monthly rate of these troops is estimated to be approximately 4,500.

These forces are well supplied with modern weapons and equipment of Communist manufacture which come through the port of Haiphong or over the two railroads from China. Other supplies move up the Mekong River and its tributaries or along the coast. The Communist forces are equally well supplied with food, most of which is obtained from the huge South Vietnam rice crop.

The present situation has been brought about by a variety of things, but in part by repeatedly underestimating the future actions of the Vietcong and the North Vietnamese. To some extent, our response to the requirements for the prosecution of the war have been based on estimates of what we thought the enemy would do rather than on their capabilities. Repeatedly these estimates have proven erroneous.

At the best, the prosecution of the war promises to be a lengthy affair. Under present ground rules, it can continue for many years. However, the war can be won and won speedily, if a determined effort is made which properly utilizes the power and capabilities of American fighting men and American resources, plus whatever help is available from our allies, and which reinforces the determination of the Vietnamese to win their own war.

Obviously, then, there is a necessity for the establishment of an atmosphere favorable to a stable government for freedom-loving people of a nation willing to stand up against Communist oppression. It can be created, but such a task will not be easy. We have given tremendous help in every category to South Vietnam. Nevertheless the efforts of this country to assist the Government of South Vietnam must be increased further.

This simply means that measures must be taken and taken at once to strengthen our position and that of the Government of South Vietnam for the prosecution of the war. This will require a number of actions. The cost will be high, but it is a cost which must be paid if we are to be successful. I will discuss primarily the military side of the picture.

Additional men and materiel must be supplied at once. We have about half enough of each in Vietnam to do the job. The South Vietnamese and their allies are already hard pressed for manpower sufficient to carry the war to the Communists. Many United States and South Vietnamese troops are required to pin down allied holdings and to perform other security duties. Last year's big buildup of forces seems at best to have resulted only in containing the Communists. Open invasion of South Vietnam by North Vietnamese regulars has changed the picture drastically. We cannot attain a healthy atmosphere until sufficient troops are available to search out, fight, and destroy Communist forces. We must be able to retake and hold South Vietnamese territory which is now largely in Communist hands. Bigger and bloodier battles are in store and it is essential that the forces and supplies necessary to win those battles be provided with a minimum of delay.

In other words, steps must be taken to increase our operational troop strength so that we cannot only contain the buildup of the North Vietnamese forces and those of the Vietcong, but be able to seize and hold the initiative. This is essential to victory. We cannot continue to operate at our present level and hope for more than a standoff. Failure to increase our forces and our effort will not only lead to a lack of success in the military field, but will place in jeopardy the lives of American military men now serving in Vietnam. Certainly no effort should be spared to give these troops, who are responding gallantly to their mission, the protection and support which they deserve.

If the present peace offensive fails, we can no longer afford to make a sanctuary out of the northeast industrial area of North Vietnam. This policy must be changed to permit essential military targets in the area to be neutralized by bombing or other effective measures. This means power, POL, airfield, and port facilities, including those at Haiphong which serves as a major source of supply for the war economy of North Vietnam. Failure to do this can only assist the Government of North Vietnam in its escalation of the conflict and result in the deaths of more Americans. If the Government of Cambodia allows its ports and facilities to be used to supply the enemy, effective quarantine of these ports should be established. The pure and simple fact is that delivery of personnel, equipment, supplies, and the weapons of war being made available in support of the Vietcong operations can best be stopped in North Vietnam or at least before it reaches South Vietnam.

Within South Vietnam itself, a large portion of the huge rice crop produced in this nation has, in recent years, gone to the Vietcong. In a limited way, inroads were made into the quantities of rice which Communists secured in 1965; however, far too much still went into their hands. This must be stopped. To do so will require larger military operation to protect those gathering the rice crops and to seize the rice-bearing areas now in the hands of the Vietcong. For areas where this cannot be done, it is better to destroy the crop than to permit it to fatten Communists to kill Americans.

If food and supplies are denied to the enemy, I believe the war can be won in 1 to 2 years, despite ready Communist access to ample manpower. Failure to take strong steps can result only in the loss of lives of additional American, South Vietnamese, and allied servicemen without resulting in successful military operations or the attainment of the just peace which we seek.

In major part, this is a war of logistics. Logistics and construction play an essential part and a limiting part in our operations in southeast Asia. Augmented U.S. forces—roughly twice as many as are now on duty there—must be sent into southeast Asia before success can be anticipated. We must be prepared to support them with food, weapons, equipment, bases, airfields, and ports. At this moment, it is barely possible to support forces already on duty there. Unless the required ports, airfields, and military camps can be constructed rapidly, our forces, and their supplies must be crowded somehow into existing facilities and effective military operations will necessarily be hampered, confused, and delayed. In other words we need additional troops and additional aircraft immediately. Yet there are limits on the numbers which can be sent to Vietnam simply because we cannot supply their needs. This is a situation which cannot effectively be overcome within months or even years at the present rate and method of procedures. Work has barely started or not started at all on some essential projects. Logistics is the limiting factor in the conduct of the war.

Let me reiterate, the construction effort in Vietnam, particularly the provision for port facilities and operational bases is vital to military operations. However, to this date there has been a marked lack of central authority and coordination in the construction efforts. Steps have been taken, in some instances effectively, to bring about a coordination between the construction and operational programs. But at best, it has been piecemeal. The proposal to establish a general officer position on the staff of the military advisory command to effectuate this coordination should be promptly implemented. This officer should report directly to the commanding general, and be responsible for the coordination of the construction effort and making it responsive to operational requirements.

An essential portion of the construction problem is the lack of a sufficiently skilled labor force in South Vietnam to meet the military construction effort which is required. Present contractor effort is requiring all of the available local labor force plus generating a requirement for the use of foreign labor. The latter proposal is not meeting with enthusiastic response from the South Vietnamese Government and will probably never be a fruitful source of labor for our construction effort. Still less desirable would be the importation of high-priced workmen from the United States because of price problems which their presence would generate. The construction battalions of the Navy and the Army are doing heroic work in their activities there. If the escalated construction program is to be successfully implemented, there is a need for more troop construction battalions from both the Navy and the Army. The requirement for these troops will be accentuated as additional facilities become operational and it is necessary to maintain them with troop labor. In order to meet the overall requirement for the construction and maintenance of facilities, steps should be taken as promptly as possible to drastically increase the troop construction units in South Vietnam including the activation of Air Force battalions to bolster the troop effort in this area.

The Reserve Forces of the Army and of the Navy also contain a large number of troop construction units. These are manned by skilled personnel who in most cases have been training for years to meet emergency situations. Certainly such a situation exists in southeast Asia today. There is a backlog of construction work in Vietnam today which could well be performed by troop labor. This requirement will be magnified by construction which will be necessary in support of the items in the January supplemental appropriation request. There will be questions on whether or not the transfer of all Navy Seabee construction battalions and Army Engineers construction battalions now deployed in other theaters of operation should be undertaken. Considerations must be given to whether we would seriously impair our military efficiency in the areas in which these troops are now operating. Regardless of this, there are available selected Reserve units capable of contributing to the construction effort in southeast Asia, either by their own presence there or by replacing Regular units who could then be transferred to this area without impairing our military requirements. Failure to utilize the services of all available units—Regular or Reserve—is handicapping and holding back the war effort at a time of great urgency.

Fourteen are now on duty in the theater. Their number can be increased fivefold by utilizing Regular and Reserve forces. They can make a tremendous contribution. It is inexcusable not to utilize their service. Whether to use them is one of the most important unresolved questions. We are fighting only one war and that is the place they are really needed.

Aside from troop labor considerations, your subcommittee finds that construction programs are based on the expectations that the contractor's labor supply can be increased threefold to fourfold. Contractor personnel at the time of the subcommittee's visit was 22,000. It is anticipated this number will have to be increased to 60,000 or possibly even 80,000. Completion of essential projects—ports, airfields, troop cantonments, and so forth—within the prescribed time is predicated upon securing additional contractor personnel. Witnesses in the theater stated that the supply of skilled labor is now virtually exhausted. I am convinced that very material contributions can be made through a more realistic vocational training program, but this will take time. It is planned to obtain approximately 10,000 third country nationals to alleviate the labor shortage. This still is a far cry from the 60,000 to 80,000 required. When it is taken into consideration that this number is needed to complete projects, programed for the troop structure already authorized, and that the percentage of completion on these projects is now quite small, the enormity of the task ahead to provide facilities and accommodations for a troop level of 400,000 can be seen. We can provide the uniformed personnel much faster than we can provide facilities for their use.

The tremendous distances which must be overcome in providing more equipment and supplies for the Vietnamese war are seldom comprehended in the United States. South Vietnam is half way around the world from Washington. The great stretches of the Pacific mean that the bulk of logistic support must move by sea transportation. It is a long, long trip from the U.S. west coast to the docks of South Vietnam. Most of the ships which make the 20- to 25-day trip must wait for a period longer than their travel time across the ocean before space for unloading is available at dockside. In late November 120 ships were in Vietnamese waters and the waiting time before discharging cargoes was 28 to 30 days each. There the crews receive the higher pay authorized for those in danger areas and this further multiplies the cost.

The lack of port facilities in Vietnam is both geographical and historical. Saigon is the only major effective deepwater port. Additional deepwater facilities of a limited nature have been made available at Da Nang. These are being improved and expanded under existing construction programs. A completely new logistics base including deepwater facilities is now under construction at Cam Ranh Bay. Every effort must be made to expedite the construction of these facilities and additional facilities in the Saigon area or where needed.

Proper advance planning must be accomplished to see that port battalions and other personnel required for the operation of facilities of this type will be available as soon as any of them can be effectively utilized. In the meantime and probably for an indefinite period, greater reliance must be placed on over-the-beach landing and shallow port operations which would lessen the strain on existing port facilities and permit an expedited flow of supplies more quickly than will be available through the completion of ports now under construction. Even with the completion of planned port facilities, any escalation in the military effort will require more effective logistics operations.

It is fallacious reasoning to think that the completion of deepwater port facilities will meet all logistics requirements for port facilities. The escalation in numbers of troops and military operations which must take place if we are to be successful in attaining our objectives in South Vietnam will place increasing workloads on all port facilities.

Shallow water ports do exist in South Vietnam and are available for shallow draft vessels. This will mean moving additional landing craft type vessels into the area as well as others of the type capable of utilizing such port facilities. It is essential that greater use be made of LST type vessels, and that greater reliance be placed on seagoing tugs and barges and on lighterage equipment. Steps should be taken to activate all required additional vessels of this type in the reserve fleet, including those available to the Military Sea Transport Service. Consideration should be given to transferring those vessels now serving in other parts of the world to the southeast Asia area wherever practicable in keeping with other military requirements and the obtaining of this equipment from stocks of other nations.

Many of the ships servicing the forces in Vietnam are chartered from private shipping firms. This is a necessary but costly requirement. The cost is compounded by the problem of the long wait to discharge their cargo. Certainly, consideration should be given to placing high priority cargo in these ships and to unloading them quickly so that costly delays are not incurred.

One basic requirement in the logistics-construction field is for additional funds to be made available for the construction of adequate facilities and for the logistical support essential to our troops in Vietnam.

Consideration should be given to making a large portion of these funds available directly to the Military Advisory Command in Vietnam—MACV—rather than to the individual military services. This is particularly true with reference to the construction portion of the logistics effort. Construction should be accomplished wherever possible without fiscal and programing restrictions and with complete flexibility. This has not been the case in the past but must be done now if our troops in this area are to be properly supported.

It is very difficult for the logistics effort to respond to the changing operation's program under present limitations and regulations. The military command in Vietnam should be provided with greater flexibility in the use of funds. Wartime conditions which are existent in Vietnam today, simply do not permit a continuation of peacetime operating conditions within the Office of the Secretary of Defense. To allow existing conditions in this area to continue will increase the number of costly delays which have taken place to the detriment of the overall military operations.

In addition to providing increased funds for specific construction line items, a reserve of funds should be established and made available to the command in Vietnam for changes in scope of projects and increased cost of construction as requirements change.

The lack of total funding now precludes adequate advance procurement of materials and restricts contractor mobilization. Both are essential if the construction program is to be responsive to operational requirements. These actions require long lead times of a minimum of 4 months. Advance funds should be made available for the immediate requirement. They should continue to be made available in the future because this requirement is a continuing one and will increase as the construction program escalates.

However, money is not everything. Money already is available which cannot be expended. There is still too much paperwork on programing, on requisitions for construction material, and on other needed supplies. Requisitions sometimes take weeks or even months for approval. The lack of preprograming to assess actual requirements for construction and the ability to meet these requirements is stressed. This is partially attributable to peacetime procedures which necessitate too much paperwork.

In another area too much equipment, especially construction equipment has been deadlined throughout the area for lack of spare parts. The situation is improving and will continue to improve as additional port facilities are made available. There is now a shortage of spares, worldwide, and this must be faced up to. There is a need, however, for greater emphasis, not only on making additional spare parts available, but also in changing the length of the time for replacement of equipment to one which is more in keeping with the conditions in Vietnam. For example, the construction contractor plans for the amortization of his equipment on the basis of 18 months usage. If this is realistic, and apparently it is from experiences to date, equipment of the troop construction units should also be programed on this basis rather than the 2- to 3-year cycles now anticipated.

I am disturbed by the fact that equipment and material requirements for the war in Asia do not command top priority in the American marketplace. Military witnesses state that other governmental programs, such as NASA, Polaris, and the missile program, all have a priority higher than the war effort. The moon will wait. The other programs are well along toward completion. It appears unrealistic not to give the highest priority to a program which is taking the lives of American youths.

The supply situation is further aggravated by the fact that most of the roads and railroads in Vietnam can be utilized only to a limited extent if at all by United States and South Vietnam forces. The Communists control most of the countryside and can cut many important highways almost at will. Only limited stretches of the country's one railroad can be used. That places the burden largely on air transportation and creates inordinate demands on our ability to provide and maintain a sufficient number of aircraft to supply U.S. forces who are located away from port areas. Thus far, the job has been done with remarkable ability. I found no instances where key operations have been prevented for lack of essential supplies. Nevertheless, the problem is a critical one and the situation will be greatly improved if sufficient forces can be made available to open and maintain essential highways and railroads.

Since it is necessary to supply many of our bases in South Vietnam by airlift, we must accept the fact that escalation of our efforts in this area will increase the requirements for airlift support of our troops. Consideration will have to be given to the utilization of C-123 and C-130 aircraft in much greater numbers than those now available in southeast Asia until highway and road transportation can be opened. This is a part of the story of the need for sufficient U.S. and allied assistance to enable the A.R.V.N. to seize and hold the initiative in land warfare.

The B-52 bombing activities in southeast Asia are required in support of our ground operations. As our military planners become more aware of their potentialities and more experienced in their use in a war of this type, their effectiveness will be even greater than at present. The aircraft presently used are based at Anderson Air Force Base, Guam. The flight to southeast Asia is long and requires refueling for a round trip mission. Steps should be taken to secure an additional site for these aircraft closer to the target area so that the present costly refueling and long and wearing flights on personnel and aircraft can be avoided. There are several locations available if proper authority can be obtained from other nations. In the case of utilization of one of these sites—Okinawa—no such additional authority would be required. But it would be necessary to move some tanker-type aircraft to other locations.

Naval aviation is playing an effective role in the conduct of the war. Due to the limitation on the number of carriers presently available to the 7th Fleet, it is not possible to provide sufficient naval aviation support on station at all times to meet the operational needs. The escalation of our military operations and the presence of additional troops will cause an added burden on the units providing air support. The construction of land facilities for Air Force and Marine aircraft even at an accelerated rate will still probably lag behind the operational requirements. Consideration should, therefore, be given to the assignment of additional carriers to the 7th Fleet so that this required air support can be made available to our operational troops.

The A-6A is a Navy aircraft newly assigned to the 7th Fleet. It is the only aircraft in any of our forces with a night reconnaissance and bombing capability. Although it may have minor deficiencies, this single factor dictates that its use and number in Vietnam be expanded. Consideration should also be given to adapting the night reconnaissance equipment of this aircraft to existing aircraft available to the Navy, Marine, and Air Force. Research and development should be implemented at once which would lead to the provision of adequate night reconnaissance and bombing capability for aircraft employed or to be employed in this area.

Naval gunfire has played a role in supporting the operations in Vietnam. The nature of the terrain and long shoreline of this country makes naval gunfire often effective when used in support of military operations. Consideration should be given to strengthening the 7th Fleet, so that additional naval gunfire might be made available. This might require the activation of ships from the reserve fleet, including some which are equipped with heavier guns than those presently available.

I should comment on the intelligence picture. It is generally agreed that the intelligence system in Vietnam requires more personnel who have better training for the job to be done. There is a definite need for better coordination and more skillful interpretation of information to permit a quicker response at policy levels.

For instance, there frequently is a lack of followthrough on bombing missions to assess results and to permit fullest advantage to be taken of enemy losses. Informed witnesses feel that intelligence-gathering is neither broad enough nor detailed enough and that stronger efforts are needed, both in military and in civilian application. As an illustration, our forces have no accurate information on Vietcong supply forces. Civilians and coolies seen on the streets may, in fact, be Vietcong pipeline forces. Undoubtedly, some U.S.-employed Vietnamese are also working for the Vietcong. Often, detailed information at the village level regarding Communist sympathizers and local Communist organizations is nonexistent.

Apparently there is a strong Communist underground which on occasion is able to report important events to Hanoi, where they are broadcast before they are known generally to United States and allied government forces. These are parts of the intelligence problem to be coped with.

Now to turn to the field of psychological warfare. I am convinced there is a definite need for improved program direction which can best be provided through having a director who is responsible solely for this program. Good work is being done in this area, but its potential is far from being realized. It should be kept in mind that the Vietcong is highly vulnerable to psychological warfare operations. There is much capital to be made of the fact that refugees flee only to the South Vietnamese. The Vietcong tax and conscript, and seize the rice crop, and offer nothing in return. The Saigon government offers a much greater hope to the villagers for the future. These things should be emphasized over and over again. They are only token examples among many.

Recreation facilities for American personnel, particularly for enlisted men, remains one of the serious problems throughout southeast Asia. Granted that there is not much time for recreation, the fact remains there are leave periods when our personnel can get away from their exacting duties for short periods. For these periods, there is in most areas a dearth of wholesome recreational facilities. The alternative is the nearest local counterpart of honky tonks and other places of questionable value. Additional emphasis on adequate recreational activities and facilities remains very important.

There is a need to train additional skilled labor throughout South Vietnam. This is not only true from the standpoint of our present military construction and logistics requirement, but from the standpoint of the future economy of the country. This should involve vocational training on a much larger scale than is taking place now or is contemplated through present programs. A realistic vocational training program would remove much of the necessity to seek additional skilled labor from foreign nations to meet anticipated needs in the construction field.

In addition steps should be taken to establish vocational and agricultural type training for skills of the type needed in the villages in order that more people can become self-supporting.

The increasing activities of the South Vietnamese and allied military operations have led to thousands of refugees leaving their homes to escape Vietcong oppression or because of the displacements which are a problem of any war. It is a problem which is helped in South Vietnam by the nature of the people who have a longstanding tradition of caring for their own and assisting those who are homeless. Yet it is a problem which cannot be resolved through reliance upon these means alone. The numbers are far too great even now. Escalation of military operations will increase these numbers and with it the problem. These refugees are basically anti-Communist because they have felt the heel of Communist oppression. As such, they can be effectively utilized to tell their story to others who may be wavering in their support of the Government or who do not know what oppression of this type can mean. These people cannot be used to get their story across nor are they likely to remain anti-Communist if they are caused to suffer unnecessary hardships and privations in their new homes. As they are a source for good today, they can become, as history has proven in other areas, a source of instability if their basic needs are not met.

It is obvious that a coordinated long-range program to meet the refugee problem is not available today. There seems to be too much of an attitude that the problem can be overcome by passing out limited material aid and allowing the local populace to attempt to assimilate the refugees. This is impractical. It cannot be accomplished. The South Vietnamese will assimilate every refugee humanly possible. It is their nature, but the numbers are far too great. There is immediate need for a large program for the resettlement of these refugees in areas where they can support themselves in new homes or at least until the time when they can return safely to their home villages. A little has been done but such areas must be established in a greater quantity than has been done to date. This resettlement should be coupled with increased vocational training, with primary emphasis on agriculture and in locally needed skills. Failure to accomplish this will add to the instability of the Government, but if accomplished it will allow these proud and industrious people to contribute, not only to their own support, but to that of the countryside about them.

Any report on the war in Vietnam should include an especial commendation for medical and hospital units whose responsibility it is to heal the wounded and sick and to contribute to the maintenance of health of U.S. personnel. Although faced with serious problems—some of them almost insurmountable due to large numbers of sick and wounded for whom no theater hospital facilities had not been made available—they improvised and met every requirement in admirable fashion. Unanticipated problems with new and virulent strain of malaria, which frequently exceeded battle casualties in number, added to the difficulties. However, your subcommittee found no instances of inability to meet the pressing demands placed upon medical personnel nor cases of shortage of essential medical supplies. In part the problems were met by air evacuating sick and wounded to the Philippines and thence to convalescent hospitals in other areas. There are cases where battle wounded were receiving treatment at Clark Field, Philippines, within 6 hours from the time the injury was received. This policy of air evacuating sick and wounded is not the most desirable procedure, but it served to insure prompt and adequate treatment. Additional hospital facilities are under construction which should soon permit in-theater treatment for all emergency and short-term cases.

We were briefed many times during the course of my work in southeast Asia. It is the belief of this committee that briefing procedures can be modified materially to the benefit of staff personnel without taking away from the value of the briefings. It was noted that in most instances, briefing teams comprised essentially all of the top staff members of the respective groups. Although 20, 25, or even more staffers might be present, the briefing was conducted essentially by 2 or 3 individuals. Most of the others took no part. Although appreciative of the efforts of the U.S. units to provide a detailed picture it is respectfully suggested that three or four well-informed staff members could do the job, freeing others for pressing work which always awaits them. It is suggested also that film clips showing areas and actions could well be substituted for much of the detailed information on organization and mission. In other words, a great deal of time for the briefing teams can be saved without taking away from the effectiveness of the briefings.

It would have been impossible for me and other Members of Congress to accomplish our mission in Vietnam without the outstanding cooperation and helpfulness extended by both the military and civilian personnel in the areas visited. Every effort was made to provide all possible assistance. The work of the staff of the Committee on Appropriations and of the legislative liaison officers involved in the planning and execution of the trip was outstanding. The wholehearted support of all those who participated in this endeavor is deeply appreciated.

No report would be complete without a high tribute to the morale and valor of America's fighting men in southeast Asia. Their contributions have been and are magnificent. Their will to win, their morale and their esprit de corps is of the highest. Their valor and ability in battle, their friendly relations with the local populace and their untiring efforts to assist these people in the problems which they face in their everyday lives are in the highest tradition of the American military service. They know why they are fighting in Vietnam. They are satisfied that their missions and objectives are proper ones and they are dedicated to the achievement of those objectives with every means at their disposal, including their lives. No lesser contribution is being made by the many civilians in our military and many of our non-military programs who are living and working side by side with many of our military personnel. Even a brief association with these people and a short glimpse into their lives in Vietnam makes one proud to be an American. In every area, they have the will to win. They deserve and they need the full and unlimited support of the American people and of their Government.

SUMMARY

This will be no easy war. Many unresolved problems confront us. The ground rules under which U.S. forces fight will have to be changed. It is necessary that the North Vietnamese port, power and industrial complex which supply Communist forces be neutralized or the war will go on indefinitely. Continuation of the sanctuary now provided those facilities in North Vietnam will mean continued escalation of conflict and more American deaths. Cambodian ports should be quarantined if that country insists on supplying the enemy. The bulk of South Vietnam's huge rice crop now goes to the Communists. This, too, will have to be stopped. If food and supplies are denied to the enemy, I believe the war can be won in 2 years despite ready Communist access to ample manpower.

Additional U.S. forces, supplies, bases, and port facilities must be provided at once. We appear to have underestimated Vietcong and North Vietnamese capabilities in number and supplies. The build-up of opposing forces has not permitted us to seize and hold the initiative. This is essential to victory. The lives of American servicemen are at stake in this operation and no effort should be spared to give them the protection and support they deserve.

Logistics and construction play an essential part in successful U.S. operations in southeast Asia. Unless ports, airfields and military camps can be constructed more rapidly, our forces and supplies must be crowded onto existing facilities and effective operations are delayed. The available labor force of South Vietnam is being utilized effectively but the number of skilled manpower is limited. Greater dependence should be placed in Seabees and Army engineer construction battalions through the transfer of additional units and call-up of reserves. Air Force aviation maintenance battalions should be activated to bolster construction forces in the combat area. Much broader vocational training programs should be instituted for South Vietnam and Thailand personnel without delay. There is a need for additional skilled labor throughout the area which can be provided from local sources. This is true not only from the standpoint of the future economy of the nations involved but also because of the requirement for skilled workers in military construction and logistics problems.

We recommend that steps be taken to develop another B-52 site closer to southeast Asia. Guam, the present site, is far removed from the target area and the long flights represent unnecessary wear and tear on men and equipment and require costly refueling operations. A number of such alternate sites are available.

More effective use can be made of naval aviation if additional carriers are provided. This will permit naval aircraft to be on station for a greater length of time than is presently possible. Strengthening of the surface craft in the 7th Fleet will also permit heavier gunfire to be made available to our land forces in operation near the coast.

Greater reliance on over-the-beach landing operations would lessen the strain on existing port facilities and permit an expedited flow of supplies more quickly than will be available through the completion of ports now under construction. This will mean making greater use of LST's and similar landing craft wherever available and placing greater reliance on seagoing tugs and barges. Through the use of such equipment, many ships which now wait for days in the rivers and harbors of Vietnam to discharge cargo can be offloaded onto

There is a need in the logistics construction field for additional money to be made available directly to the military command in Vietnam under regulations which provide greater flexibility. War-time conditions simply do not permit peacetime operating practices to be followed without costly delays. Some funds already provided through supplemental appropriations are not yet available. In other construction cases appropriation processes need to be speeded up in the field. A reserve of funds should be made available for changes in scope and cost of construction as requirements change in the theater. Work has barely started or not started at all on too many essential projects in the theater.

Additional preprogramming is needed and it is probable that this can be expedited if additional planning personnel are made available. However, it is apparent that high enough priorities are not being given construction requirements in the war theater. Top priority is not being given to some of the equipment and material needs in Vietnam.

Too much equipment has been deadlined throughout the area for lack of spare parts. The situation is improving but there is a need for greater emphasis on making spare parts available. Much equipment is in short supply and when equipment cannot be used for lack of spare parts, the loss is doubly costly.

In nonmilitary activities there is a requirement for more positive direction and emphasis, especially in our efforts in psychological warfare. In this connection, tribute is paid to American teams, including AID, Peace Corps, and Armed Forces medical teams, who through direct contact with villagers have presented a new and needed picture of the U.S. intentions and helpfulness to the Vietnamese.

The refugee program in South Vietnam also remains a problem. There is a need for a better coordinated refugee program with stress being placed on the resettlement of refugees in areas where they can contribute, primarily through agriculture, toward their own support and that of the countryside.

We wish to pay highest tribute to the morale and valor of America's fighting men in southeast Asia. Their contributions are magnificent. They have the will to win and they deserve the full and unlimited support of the American people.

THE TRICONTINENTAL CONFERENCE IN CUBA: A THREAT TO WORLD FREEDOM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PUCINSKI] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. PUCINSKI. Mr. Speaker, between January 3 and 15, some eleven hundred miles from Washington, but only 90 miles from Key West, Fla., a most significant event took place in the capital of Cuba.

Last July 26 in my speech on Cuba, I warned that a tricontinental meeting of Communist representatives would be held this January in Cuba. That meeting did in fact occur and its deliberations should be of monumental concern to all who value freedom.

Last Saturday, after 13 days of deliberation, this conference of the Asian, African, and Latin American Communists came to a close in Havana. Sponsored by the Communist powers, organized by known Communists, and attended by pro-Communist delegates and observers from 82 countries, including official delegations from the Soviet Union and Communist China, the tricontinental conference represents a direct and major threat to the stability of Latin America and, consequently, a danger to the whole of the Western Hemisphere.

As a cofounder of the Cuban Freedom Committee which operates Radio Free Cuba, I have followed the progress of this meeting with great concern.

Our staff, which maintains close contact with activities in Cuba, has compiled a comprehensive record of the conspiratorial meeting and I should like today to present briefly some of the highlights of this meeting which most directly affect us as free Americans.

I believe that the conclusions and objectives agreed upon at this meeting clearly show that this conference represents the beginning of the most important Communist effort to penetrate Latin America since the Castro takeover in Cuba in January 1959.

That the Castro regime is the willing tool and promoter of international communism's desire to intensify subversion and terrorism throughout the continent and the world becomes more evident daily.

Mr. Speaker, I believe there is a direct correlation between our struggle in Vietnam and the Communist meeting in Havana last week.

If the United States were ever to be driven out of Asia, such a defeat would give the green light for Communist subversion all over the world.

Last week's meeting of Communist leaders in Havana clearly spelled out the blueprint for waging subversion and terror as the new mode of coordinated Communist aggression.

In the last days of the tricontinental conference it was decided that the executive secretariat and liberation committee—with four representatives from Latin America, four from Africa, and four from Asia on each committee—should have their headquarters in Havana, Cuba.

The avowed purpose of the liberation committee is to channel aid and materials for insurrection throughout Latin America. This is the first time that Moscow and Havana have formally set up an office for international communism in Havana.

Because of the Havana conference's importance, the American people should know, and this Chamber should thoroughly investigate, the significance of the pronouncements made during its sessions, the role of Communist Cuba as host nation, and the final results and future consequences of the gathering.

Too often preoccupied with events in Vietnam, we unfortunately fail to attach proper importance to portentous events in our own backyard.

The aims of this conference greatly affect our security, the safeguard of which is our prime duty. President Monroe in 1823 outlined that responsibility when he declared that the United States would consider any attempt of an extra hemispheric power to extend its system to any portion of this hemisphere, dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States.

The celebration of the tricontinental conference in Havana was agreed upon in Cairo last May, when the so-called African-Asian Peoples' Solidarity Organization, on the initiative of the Soviet Union, decided to expand its activities and include Latin America in its ranks.

Although Communist Cuba is going through a serious economic and financial crisis, lavish preparations were carried out in Havana for the conference, and the best facilities were offered to about 600 delegates and observers, all declared guests of the Castro regime. The Havana Hilton Hotel—now called the Havana Libre—was the site of the meetings and was declared off limits for the public.

According to the official Cuban announcement, the principal points on the conference's agenda were as follows:

1. The struggle against imperialism, colonialism, and neocolonialism.
2. Support for Vietnam against U.S. imperialist aggression and for the liberation of South Vietnam and the reunification of the whole country.
3. Struggle for complete national liberation of the three continents; against imperialist aggression and foreign intervention of independent states and against the imperialist policy of isolating peoples that are fighting for national liberation.
4. Intensification of every form of struggle, including armed struggle, by the peoples of the three continents.
5. Support for the Cuban people's struggle against U.S. imperialism; support for the patriotic struggle of the peoples of Latin America against U.S. imperialism and its tools, such as the OAS.
6. Liquidation of foreign military bases on the three continents and action against the policy of military pacts.
7. Ways and means of helping liberation movements in Africa, Asia, and Latin America in general and armed struggle for independence in particular.

In an article on the tricontinental congress, the official Cuban newspaper Granma, in its issue of January 6 said:

The strategy of the revolutionary movements in their struggle against imperialism, colonialism, and neocolonialism and, especially against Yankee imperialism—principal enemy of peoples—calls for closer military ties and solidarity between the peoples of Asia, Africa, and Latin America, the working class, the progressive forces of the capitalist countries of Europe and the United States, and the Socialist camp.

The same article says it is obvious that military solidarity of the peoples of the three continents is an urgent necessity.

The belligerent tone of the tricontinental congress was set by Cuban President Dorticos in his inaugural speech on January 4, when he asked for the "overthrow of the United States."

He proclaimed that "the right as well as the duty of the people was to answer armed violence of imperialism with armed revolutionary violence."

Rashidov praised highly "the armed struggle" of the patriots from Venezuela, Peru, Colombia, Guatemala, against the lackeys of imperialism—referring to their governments.

Continuing to speak on the subject of Latin America, the Soviet delegate also expressed "the solidarity of his government with the peoples of the British, French, and Dutch Guianas, as well as the peoples of the Antilles, in general, and—of special note—to the peoples of Puerto Rico. Mind you, the Soviets now publicly proclaim their grand design to ultimately take over our territory in the Caribbean—Puerto Rico."

Particular importance was placed on the statements of the Latin American delegates: Pedro Medina Silva, chief of the Venezuelan delegation to the conference and supreme chief of the armed forces of the National Liberation Force of Venezuela said, on January 6:

The Tri-Continental Congress must make a base for the coordination of our movements in order to fight more effectively U.S. imperialism. We intend to see to it that no American ship will feel safe in any Latin American port, nor will the vast commercial enterprises of the North Americans, which cover our continent, feel safe.

Another militant Latin American delegate, Guido Gil, from Santo Domingo, said:

Peru's delegate paid warm tribute to Communist Cuba's influence on the armed struggle in that country.

Major Turcio Lima, head of the so-called Armed Liberation Forces of Guatemala also endorsed revolution as the only solution.

On January 7, Aluisio Palao, Brazilian extremist, said that the Brazilian Communists were "preparing the people to overthrow the present government in the armed struggle."

This was the tone and substance of the statements of all the delegates from Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

The tricontinental conference ended on January 15 with a 2½-hour vitriolic speech by Fidel Castro, which I recommend to all of you for a clearcut understanding of the grave situation which faces the United States as long as there is a Communist Cuba in this hemisphere.

Castro described all Latin American representatives as "men from national movements which are presently fighting, or will begin to fight for liberation."

tions, including Canada and Mexico, ripe for so-called national wars of liberation. The Cuban dictator added:

We Cubans are the only people truly liberated from Yankee domination.

His bellicose attitude was further evidenced in his pledge, not only to send civilian volunteers but also members of the regular Cuban armed forces to aid national liberation movements around the globe, especially in Latin America.

Referring to guerrilla activities in Venezuela, Peru, Colombia, and Guatemala, he added:

There should be no single movement fighting alone.

Castro urged that a simultaneous struggle be initiated at once, and mentioned the possibility of insurrections in Bolivia, Paraguay, Ecuador, Argentina, and other nations.

Castro criticized the anti-Communist activities in Indonesia. He paid special attention to insurrection in Portuguese territories in Africa; to the guerrilla activities against the Leopoldville government and he strongly backed terrorist activities against the State of Israel.

The conference closed by voting, among other things, to demand the withdrawal of North American troops from the three continents and the dismantling of U.S. bases, especially in Guantanamo.

In essence, the conference was a declaration of increased aggression and subversion against the United States and a pledge of concerted help in this effort from all Communist and pro-Communist movements.

The secretariat of the conference is to maintain headquarters in Havana, as stated earlier. Also a liberation committee has been set up in Havana to facilitate the channeling of men and materials to Latin America.

The New York Times in an article on January 19 discloses, on page 5, that "Cuba is to become a center of anti-U.S. activities in the Western Hemisphere."

The Cuban radio announced today that 27 delegations, in Cuba, for the tricontinental conference that ended in Havana last Saturday, had created the Latin American solidarity organization, with headquarters in Havana, which will unite, coordinate and impel the struggle against North American imperialism. The meeting at which the organization was created was presided over by Pedro Medina Silva, chief of the pro-Communist Venezuelan guerrillas. In addition to 20 Latin American delegations, representatives of leftist groups from Guadeloupe, British Guiana, Jamaica, Martinique, Puerto Rico, Trinidad, and Tobago were present.

This decision was entirely to be expected because Cuba, for some time, has been the training center for Latin American saboteurs. Since the tricontinental congress repeatedly recommends increased efforts in preparing cadres for guerrillas and subversive activities, Communist dominated Cuba can now be expected to enlarge its training facilities. As you know Cuba has for some time maintained schools for the training of saboteurs and agents, the most important of which is the Sierra Maestra

Evidence that Cuba is a base for Communist activities to infiltrate and, by violence and subversion, to overthrow national governments throughout the Western Hemisphere is not new. Since Premier Fidel Castro in 1959 established his Communist regime, Cuba has carried on, supported and directed in various ways a policy of intervention against independent countries of Latin America, according to an investigating committee report of the OAS made public on February 24, 1964. The report charged that Cuba had supplied military equipment to "support those movements that seek to subvert national institutions through force in order to install Communist regimes." It also revealed that Cuba's Communist Party and government has conducted extensive training programs in sabotage and guerrilla warfare.

OAS exposure of Cuba's aggressive intentions and methods is part of a long chain of evidence against the Castro regime. Soon after he had installed himself in power, Fidel Castro initiated the first phase of his plan to subvert Latin America by carrying out direct aggression, financing and organizing expeditions to overthrow the Governments of Panama, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, and Guatemala. In 1960, Castro embarked on a new, more subtle phase of penetration. Starting with the first Latin American Youth Congress in Havana in July 1960, Cuba began to attract students from other Latin countries, offering what she called scholarships, but which actually were courses of indoctrination and training in sabotage, guerrilla tactics and terrorism. Also, part of this plan was a vast propaganda campaign directed at Latin America, and the world through its powerful radio facilities.

These broadcasts include one in English to the United States. This is a virulent program called Radio Free Dixie, which is especially designed to arouse hatred and incite the Negro in the South.

Many of our Latin American neighbors are cognizant that this Havana conference represents a distinct and open threat to the entire continent. Principal newspapers of Latin America recognize that the conference has as its principal objective, the intensification of Communist subversion in the hemisphere. To cite only a few, La Prensa of Buenos Aires, said recently that the "dominant aim of the conference is the conquest of the Latin American peoples." In Bogotá, Colombia, El Tiempo said that the "plan for attacking imperialism," worked out in Havana, is in fact a "plan of Communist expansionism." The daily La Prensa Libre of Costa Rica said that Castro plans to "bleed the continent to deliver it to his bosses in the Kremlin." "What took place in Havana was not a conference but a conspiratory reunion, the danger of which is so clear, that only a blind person fails to see it," declared editorially the daily El Globo of Rio de Janeiro. The daily added that "once more the sinister shadow of subversion begins to cover the continent." In Caracas, Venezuela, the daily La Esfera called on Latin Americans to "be prepared as soon as possible for emergency and not to remain with our hands crossed."

This, Mr. Speaker, should be our attitude also. Because of the Havana Conference, the peoples and governments of the Americas now face the serious danger of a coordinated and intensified subversion campaign, handled by the international Communist apparatus.

This new thrust of terror, guerrilla activities, and violence creates conditions which make it increasingly difficult for public and private enterprises to achieve economic and social progress, essential to the success of our long-range economic and social goals envisioned by the Alliance for Progress.

Cuba is, of course, a small country, which cannot directly affect U.S. security. However, the Communist government there maintains the largest army in Latin America and is supported by the most cruel and tyrannical police state ever devised. The Castro regime is dedicated to the proposition of creating revolutions, effecting overthrows in Latin America, and, ultimately, in the United States. We must not forget that Castro's admitted motive is his pathological hatred of the United States and its powerful position in the world today. Nor must we forget that only 3 years ago he was a willing participant with the Soviet Union in the Cuban missile crisis.

I hope, gentlemen, that you will agree with me that this Conference is eminently destructive in its publicly announced purpose.

I urge that this body seek ways and means to help rid our hemisphere of the rapidly expanding Communist advance which seeks to debilitate and make impotent our efforts to maintain a free society based on democratic principles for all peoples.

I also urge that the delegates to the OAS take all steps within their power to meet the threat of the Tricontinental Congress held last week in Havana, Cuba.

At this moment I would like to quote a few paragraphs of a speech delivered on April 20, 1961, by President John F. Kennedy, which I believe to be even more meaningful today than they were 5 years ago:

It is clear that this Nation, in concert with all the free nations of this hemisphere, must take an even closer and more realistic look at the menace of external Communist intervention and domination in Cuba. The American people are not complacent about Iron Curtain tanks and planes less than 90 miles from our shores. But a nation of Cuba's size is less a threat to our survival than it is a base for subverting the survival of other free nations throughout the hemisphere. It is not primarily our interest or our security but theirs which is now, today, in the greater peril. It is for their sake as well as our own that we must show our will.

The evidence is clear—and the hour is late. We and our Latin friends will have to face the fact that we cannot postpone any longer the real issue of the survival of freedom in this hemisphere itself. On that issue, unlike perhaps some others, there can be no middle ground. Together we must build a hemisphere where freedom can flourish and where any free nation under outside attack of any kind can be assured that all of our resources stand ready to respond to any request for assistance.

Mr. Kennedy's words are as important today as they were 5 years ago. I hope the appropriate committees of Congress will immediately undertake a full analysis of this latest menace in our hemisphere and—in consultation with the President—outline an effective program to deal with the Communist menace.

WORK AS A PROCESS OF THERAPY IN A SCHOOL FOR EMOTIONALLY DISTURBED ADOLESCENT GIRLS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FASCELL). Under previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. HALPERN] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. HALPERN. Mr. Speaker, the extremely dedicated and experienced principal of Public School No. 621 in New York City, Dr. Esther P. Rothman, has sent at my request her cogent and authoritative appraisal of some elements involved in the process of educating emotionally disturbed children.

Dr. Rothman conducted a study on work as a therapeutic method at the Livingston School for Girls. Her report was made available to me and I commend its careful reading to all my colleagues in the House and Senate.

This is a field where we need increased research and facilities. It is a vocation requiring the very best of human instinct, energy, intelligence and compassion.

Dr. Rothman's thesis is forward-looking and promising. I hope it will serve to awaken further understanding:

WORK AS A PROCESS OF THERAPY IN A SCHOOL FOR EMOTIONALLY DISTURBED ADOLESCENT GIRLS

(By Esther P. Rothman, Ph. D.)

The Livingston School for Girls is New York City's only day school for emotionally disturbed adolescent girls. It is part of the educational system of the city, servicing those girls whose behavior has been so disruptive that they cannot attend the regular schools of the city. The school consists of 120 girls ranging in age from 13 through 19. A few girls are older, as any student in New York City has the legal right to attend school until the age of 21 if both the student and the school agree. Girls are referred to the school from several sources; hospitals and treatment centers, State training schools, or the regular schools from which they generally have been suspended. While the courts have no jurisdiction over the school, it is not uncommon for a judge or a probation officer to make referrals to the school. Girls travel from all parts of the city to attend the school which is located in the borough of Manhattan.

The guidance counselor is the liaison between the school and all referring agencies. She collects all pertinent data and meets individually with each girl and her parent. This initial interview is the girl's first therapeutic contact with the school. Most of the girls are frightened, expecting to find a prisonlike atmosphere. The guidance counselor often dissipates these fears as she encourages the girls to speak freely about these fears and explains the many resources of the school in terms of both personnel and programs.

immediately. It has been found, however, that often the girls most eager for admission are not always the candidates with the best prognosis for a successfully therapeutic school experience. Very often these are the girls who have not attended any school for several years because of severe emotional instability. Equally often, these are the girls who had been released from treatment centers or training schools because they presented severe problems of management and did not seem to profit from the treatment offered. If the guidance counselor seriously questions the advisability of admitting any girl, the clinical team consisting of a psychologist, social worker, and psychiatrist, is consulted. Actually, however, very few girls are ever denied admission as professional ability to predict adjustment and behavior is simply not definitive enough in our present systems of psychology to enable valid predictions of adjustment at the school. Because there is a great margin of error in the prediction of future behavior both in school and in the community, almost every girl who is referred to the school is admitted and given her last chance for schooling within the public school system. She then attends the Livingston School for Girls.

The Livingston School girls are all in emotional trouble. A large percentage of them are in trouble with their communities as well. For instance, approximately 80 percent of the girls have been adjudged delinquent at some time in their lives; almost every one of them, however, or 100 percent of the school population has appeared in court as witness to crime or as victims of rape, parental disharmony, neglect or abuse. The girls appear to live in a milieu of violence. For instance, when some particular crime rocks the city, it is not unusual to find that some girl in the school is the sister, girl friend, cousin, or daughter of the person arrested for the crime. It is therefore almost axiomatic that the tenor of any particular school day is related to the tenor of the city at large. That is to say, when the city is gripped by a specific act of violence, the girls are extremely anxious, aggressive and unpredictable. These are the most difficult school days. For instance, when a popular singer was murdered several years ago, it took the school staff several days to calm, soothe, and quiet aroused feelings of anger and anxiety. When, on the other hand, men were catapulted into space or presidential elections were held, the girls showed little or no interest. War, peace, politics, space in short, the world around them has no real meaning to the girls for they shut themselves off from the rest of the world. They are essentially isolated girls who are concerned primarily with their own needs and lives in the immediate present. One girl in describing herself put it this way: "When June was born, she was born alone and when she dies, she dies alone." Between the two, there seems to be little room for interest in other people and in conditions of life other than what they themselves are experiencing at the moment.

For instance, while every one of them travels to school daily, some of them traveling as much as 2 hours one way to get to school, very few of them take the opportunity to explore other neighborhoods in the city. Thus, each girl takes a direct route from the block of her neighborhood to the block of the school, and does not often deviate from it. Considering the fact that the school is in the heart of one of New York City's most interesting and picturesque neighborhoods, Greenwich Village, very few girls, in the 7 years of the school's existence, have ever returned to the neighborhood after they had left school for the day. Similarly, although Broadway and Times Square is only a 15-minute subway ride from the school, few girls have ever detoured there. The girls appear to be insulated against curiosity by hatred—self-hatred, as well as hatred directed against others. This apparent lack of curiosity and interest in their environment, is but an inability to make an emotional investment in others which in turn stems from their own self-perceptions as something lesser than human beings. It is not only that they feel unloved primarily by their parents, and secondarily, by the world, but that they feel unworthy of love because they see themselves as unlovable. Referral to the Livingston School convinces them that their parents, their schools, and their communities were really right in rejecting them, that they are indeed unlovable. Their behavior and their feelings become then cyclical, "If I am really worthless so that no one can love me and no one, not even my parents, love me, so I must be worthless." The girls seem to accept the unalterability of this position and they face the future with depression and fatalism. They seem to feel that their destinies are already created, that they cannot dare to hope for control over their own lives.

One girl, talking of her life, put it this way, "All this static for nothing." This attitude of hopelessness does not mean that girls accept their lots with equanimity and passivity for just as they rebel against their lives, so do they equally resist any attempts at intervention or change. As one girl said, "I'm just growing inside me for everybody just plain hate."

How does the school dissipate this hatred so that personal emotional growth and learning can take place? The curriculum of the school cannot be considered from the usual educational framework. It cannot be discussed primarily in terms of subjects taught. Rather, the curriculum is the milieu of the school, a place where girls are taught to see themselves as adequate human beings.

Primarily they are taught that they are important to themselves. This is the first step. Once they perceive themselves to be important, they can then begin to feel important to other people. They can then afford to give of themselves to another person. The second step therefore is a process of making meaningful interpersonal relationships that are both emotionally satisfying and socially acceptable. The process sounds simple; yet, it is extremely difficult to achieve. The teacher is the important figure in the process. It is the teacher who must begin to provide opportunities for the girl to feel adequate, and who must have sufficient ego strengths so that each girl may borrow from some of these strengths—it is the teacher who in essence must be the girl's ego, who must set the limits for her. At the same time the teacher must always provide areas of success for each girl giving her tasks, especially at first, which he knows she can accomplish with ease.

Each girl must be praised for everything she does that deserves praise. Sometimes, searching for an ear of praise makes a gargantuan task, for everything a girl may do may defy conformity and praise. As little a thing as keeping margins straight, however, may be deserving of praise even if everything written on the page is wrong. When the girl feels secure in the teacher's strength and in the teacher's ability to accept her even though she knows that her behavior is unacceptable she begins to want to achieve. Her attempts to achieve may at first be only to please the teacher, but as his words of praise become rewarding to her, so do the knowledge gained. She begins to want to achieve for the sake of achievement. Perhaps for the first time in her life, she feels successful. This is not an easy educational process. It starts with a staff who are above all insightful into their own problems and who can differentiate their problems from the problems of the girls. Staff is asked to empathize with each girl, particularly with those girls with whom they are not immediately successful at establishing a good relationship. A teacher who learns to ask himself "How would I act if I lived in a slum, had an alcoholic for a mother and a crippled father dying of cancer? How would I act if my brother were in prison? With such self-imposed questions, teachers develop a new respect for the dignity of each girl and for the struggle each girl has undergone in trying to make her own way in life. With such soul searching, teachers develop a new respect for each individual's right to feel the way she does, even though they may not approve of her behavior. Thus, each teacher never preaches or moralizes, trying to convince a girl not to hate. Rather, the teacher accepts each girl's feelings of hatred and tries to lead her into patterns of behavior which will alleviate her feelings but not cause hurt or distress to her or to someone else.

Teachers do not indulge in fatuous sentimentality. Rather, they train themselves to utilize the resources within themselves to be emphatic and compassionate. Sentimentality becomes a trap of do-nothingness in that it is relatively easy for a teacher to weep figuratively with a girl but do nothing therapeutic for her. It requires much more strength and ability on the part of a teacher to refrain from weeping and to act constructively. Sometimes acting constructively requires strong action such as sending for the police. In the long run, strong community action may help a girl much more intensively than merely feeling sorry for her and permitting her to continue in her destructive course of action. Police action can be most therapeutic. Arresting a girl for an assault, for instance, holds up reality to a girl. Accepting the assault and doing nothing about it, does nothing for the girl but confuse her. The question the girl then logically asks herself, "What can I get away with?" becomes a very real threat to her because it is answered with, "I can get away with murder." It means no limits are set for her. It means that she begins to fear her own aggressive impulses and where they will lead.

The Livingston School program sets limits. It makes demands upon the girls, but demands that are reasonable and that can be met. This does not mean that each teacher always maintains a stable relationship with each girl and that each teacher is always in control of each girl. On the contrary, the teacher is not always in control of a girl, but with self-understanding, the teacher is always in control of himself and of the situation.

The program of the school is divided into two parts, known respectively as the Lower School and the Upper School. They are, of course, housed in the same building. In the Lower School, classes are organized on the basis of cores of interest rather than on grades. Classes are therefore called dance, music, dressmaking, cooking, business practice, and nursing. All these areas have a high interest level for adolescent girls. Some areas are of particular importance because they are evocative of creative expression. The expressive qualities of music and dance are obvious. Not only do girls learn how to perform but they also create. Not so obvious, however, is the creativity and expressions inherent in business practice, dressmaking, cooking and beauty culture. The business practice provides opportunity for typing original stories, poems, etc. The cooking program centers upon cooking in the glamorous tradition. Experimentation with foods and with different methods of preparation of foods often results in chocolate mousse rather than chocolate pudding or in a soufflé instead of scrambled eggs.

Dressmaking, centering upon making oneself attractive, and beauty culture, equally centered are classes geared toward exploration of the self, making oneself attractive.

Turning out a beautiful dress or a stunning coiffure is creative in that the individual reshapes an old pattern of appearance into a new pattern. It is therefore emotionally satisfying. These are personal skills, that are extremely important to every adolescent girl and adult woman in the world today. The focus of these areas is not on vocational training but if some vocational interest in a particular area is sparked, the girl is, of course, motivated to explore the full potentialities of the field in which she is interested.

The nursing program deserves particular mention because adolescent girls are particularly concerned with their own bodies. Moreover there are the girls who very often care for babies, either as babysitters or because they care for younger siblings at home. Some girls have children of their own. The nursing program therefore includes child care, as well as personal hygiene and care of the sick.

Classes are heterogeneously formed in terms of ages, grades, and achievement levels. Thus, 13-year-olds may be grouped with 15-year-olds, and second-grade readers may be in a class with high school readers. As the basis of the class is the activity involved, and as the activity does not depend primarily on academic skills, the level of achievement is of little importance in grouping.

It simply makes no difference in baking a turkey or performing a dance if a girl reads well or is proficient in arithmetic. All classes however, are scheduled for academic work in mathematics, English and social studies. Because the top register of each class is no more than 10, individual instruction is completely feasible in the academic areas. There are some girls, however, who find it difficult to approach reading or arithmetic even within a very small group structure. They find it shameful to display their difficulties in front of other girls. They cannot work in a room with other girls present. These girls need their dignity preserved, and for them, completely individualized lessons in privacy are provided. To achieve this goal, there are three remedial reading teachers on staff and one remedial mathematics teacher. Ninety girls attend the lower school. They are placed in an official class, after an initial placement in the orientation class. In orientation, the girls learn the rules and the program of the school. In addition they also study the other girls in the school and quickly find their place in the scheme of things. They really learn, "Who acts big, but isn't big and chickens out," and who "is big" and within this framework they learn to find their own niche. The orientation class usually lasts for approximately 10 days. During this time girls remain with one official teacher for most of the day.

At least once a day, they go to a specific subject area. That is, during this time the class goes to nursing, dance, dressmaking, etc. Each teacher in the school therefore gets to know each new girl in the orientation class. In addition, each new entrant is evaluated completely in reading, and arithmetic skills, and is also examined by the school doctor. At the end of her stay in orientation, a faculty conference is held at which each girl is discussed and decisions made jointly for her future class placement. As each girl's case history is presented and as her present behavior is discussed, teachers learn about each girl's behavioral modes of adaptation and they make tentative judgments about the girl's future adjustment at school. Teachers can often predict the possible areas of difficulty each girl will encounter and with some anticipation, serious difficulties can often be averted by preventive measures.

The question is often asked how long must a girl be in the lower school before she goes to the upper school. There is no definitive answer. For some girls the answer may be 1 year, for another, 6 months, or 2 years. It depends entirely on the girl herself and upon how long it takes her to learn how to exercise some inner controls. In other words, she must have learned to inhibit her impulses, to tolerate frustration and delay, to cope with external and internal pressures without "letting off steam."

Behaviorally, the pattern changes from overt explosive, volatile aggression to aggression expressed only verbally, usually in the form of threats or obscenities, to verbal control with an ability to express a grievance and a point of view. When a girl reaches a state of control, when she can come to school every day and on time, when she can accept direction and suggestions from teachers, when she looks for ways "out" of troublesome situations rather than "in" to troublesome situations, she has shown that she is ready for a work situation.

Faculty conferences are held weekly. At this time, the staff suggests those girls who may be ready for the upper school. The guidance counselor takes the next step. She interviews such girls and in a counseling relationship, the girl decides for herself whether she feels she is ready for this program. Readiness implies a willingness and an ability to assume the obligations of an employee. It also assumes the ability to tolerate more freedom of movement within the school structure than she had formerly enjoyed. All girls are not ready for obligation, responsibility, and freedom and many girls ask for deferment into the upper school. Nevertheless, the fact that the faculty feels they are ready for the work program is a therapeutic experience in itself. The girl often begins to see that other people have faith in her even though she may lack faith in herself.

Many girls have to be weaned away from the sanctuary of the lower school. The weaning process is slow and often painful to the girl. During this period, each girl is placed in a class called preparation or prep, as it is commonly known. In this official class, girls prepare themselves for their approaching new status in school. While prep is part of the lower school, it is a bridge to the upper school. Girls know that more is expected of them than previously had been expected. Teachers demand more academic work. The girls begin to make more demands of themselves. They become more critical of their own achievements and social behavior. How long a girl remains in prep depends upon two things; her own needs and the availability of openings in the upper school. Some girls remain a matter of weeks, some a matter of months, some only a few days, even as few as two. It would also be accurate to say that some girls have not really "earned" their way from prep to the upper school. That is, they are still extremely aggressive. Yet, in many cases, the upper school is really the girl's last chance to succeed in both the school and her community. To deny her this opportunity would be most unfair to both her and the community at large for very often the upper school keeps the girl functioning in the community. Very often a girl catapulted into a situation of responsibility assumes that responsibility even though her previous behavior did not indicate that she would be able to tolerate the stress of work.

To say that she was psychologically ready for the responsibility is probably a truism, yet, readiness could not be attested to by her behavior, nor, perhaps even by psychological testing and psychiatric interview. Thus, it does happen, that girls are placed in the upper school even though they have not truly merited it. At first, there were some questions about this procedure. Many staff members felt that the other girls in the school would object, that putting a girl into the program who did not merit it, would deter other girls from trying to merit it. If a girl can be bad and get into the program, the faculty reasoned, a girl might feel, "Why should I be good?" Yet, this probability did not become a reality. Because the program of the school is so tailor made to each girl's needs and because the girls themselves are so ego-centered, they pay too little attention to another girl's school achievements. The philosophy of the school reinforces the positive aspects of this psychological isolationism. "Never mind what so-and-so does or what class she's put in, that's right for her. What's right for you? Is a faculty statement and question that is generally accepted by the girl. Thus, "right" for one girl may be a 2-day stay in prep, for another a 3 month stay. When a girl moves from prep into the upper school, she again goes through counseling sessions, exploring her own feelings about the move, as well as learning about the realities of the work world.

During this time of intensive counseling, she gets her working papers and her social security card. These procedures are not easy for the girls. It entails traveling to other parts of the city to other government offices. It involves learning how to dress appropriately, fill out forms, travel, ask for information. It also involves a physical examination. Because of the tremendous anxiety of each girl during this process, it sometimes takes weeks for a girl to complete all these details. It is not unusual for girls to "get lost" on the subway, "lose their papers" or come to an office too "late," etc. They fear the responsibilities of their new status and they often anticipate "failure." Thus, they put many obstacles into their own paths. Eventually, however, each girl is finally placed in the school to employment program (STEP).

STEP is the first level of the upper school. Girls work 3 hours each morning and attend school 2 hours each afternoon. Their work assignments are in neighboring schools, but the schools are not in close proximity so that each girl must travel to her job. In schools they act as librarians, assistants to kindergarten, first grade teachers, secretaries and guidance counselors. They do many secretarial tasks as well as work directly with the children. They escort children to clinics and homes, help them with clothing, tell stories, play games. They form new perceptions of children, of people in authority, of work, of themselves.

Working with little children, for instance is extremely provocative of self-insight. At first, the girls are most often critical of the behavior of children. They do not seem to expect them to be children, but rather miniature models of adult conformity. They expect the children to respond automatically to their demands and commands. These girls, the ones who have been the least conforming to adult standards, expect the children to obey them without demur. With very little time, however, the girls begin to empathize with the children and to understand why a child cries in school or refuses food or hits another child. They become invaluable to the cooperating teacher in assisting her in handling these moments of crises. Of much more value, however, is the insights the girls develop into their own behavior and feelings. They look at the child from two frames of reference, the teacher's and the child's, and they begin to see themselves from the same two points of view, their own and society's. It is indeed cathartic for a girl to be able to undergo an emotional experience with a child and to interpret this experience from the school's point of view as well as from the child's. Moreover, in this kind of experience, the girls are filling in a gap in their own lives. For the first time many girls are learning the songs, games, and poems of childhood that they themselves had never learned. As most of the girls had never had a kindergarten experience or enjoyed an uninterrupted period of elementary education, many of the childhood games, stories, and learning experiences made available to the young school child were not made available to them. In the guise of teacher, a girl may teach a nursery rhyme to a child, when, she in fact, is learning and enjoying the same material for the first time.

STEP is an arduous program. Girls may become proficient at clerical tasks. Acquiring these skills, however, is relatively easy. Much more difficult to acquire are the work attitudes and habits necessary for maintaining a job. For instance, many girls can learn to type well within a few weeks. It takes a much longer time, however, for the girls to learn that they have to report to work when it rains even though they rebel against getting their hair wet. It takes self-discipline and control to do assigned tasks when they do not want to do these jobs, or when they do not approve of the way in which they are asked to do them. The girls are extremely sensitive. They demand that their employers be excessively polite, saying "please" and "thank you" at every turn. Yet, they reserve the right to be sullen, impolite, or unresponsive.

The second level of the upper school is the Neighborhood Youth Corps program (NYC). The Neighborhood Youth Corps consists of girls who worked at least a year in STEP and who demonstrated by faithful attendance, devotion to work, controlled behavior, and the good performance of their duties that they were ready for more responsibilities. Instead of working in a school, the girls in this program work in community agencies such as hospitals, settlement houses, nurseries, and welfare agencies. Their duties remain very much the same, but their school- and workday is longer. They work from 1 to 4 p.m. and attend school in the morning. For the longer day that they put in, for their responsibility to an agency rather than a school, they receive $1.25 hourly, an increase of 25 percent over the STEP girls. Here too, the therapeutic experience still holds. Something extremely important however has been added. These girls, most of whom have been on the "taking" end of agencies' services, are now on the "giving" end.

They began to identify with giving service, rather than receiving it; they became the authority themselves. For most of the girls, social workers and social agencies have played a very important role in their lives. Many of the families have received public assistance at one time or another, and social workers are received most often as the dispenser of funds. Generally they feel that one must "put the social worker on." Social workers are perceived as people about whom one must maneuver in order to gain one's ends. The ability to maneuver successfully around another person in order to gain one's end, most often implies that the person about whom one maneuvers is a fool. He is a fool simply because he can be manipulated. Social workers, whether they are dispensers of welfare funds or associated with other agencies, are therefore often viewed as ridiculous figures. When the girls become identified with the agencies in which they work, when they develop an investment in the welfare of the agency, they begin to appreciate its values rather than deprecate its services. Not only do they respect the agency, but they begin to wish to be part of it, not as a recipient of services, but as a contributor. This is the greatest therapeutic value of the program—an identification with authority and a recognition of the need for authority. It would be extremely beneficial to the girls, if in addition to community social agencies, they were permitted to work in courts and police stations. In these positions, they would be in a unique position to see the "other" side of the law and to perceive law-enforcing personnel not as ogres and sadistic brutes, but as people who are doing a job that needs to be done. To date, girls have not been placed in these positions as many problems, namely, the confidentiality of these agencies precludes the placement of girls in these positions.

Thirty girls are enrolled in the upper school, twenty in STEP and ten in the NYC program. Each class has its own teacher who coordinates the program, supervises the work, and teaches the academic skills related to their jobs. In addition, there is a business practice teacher and a remedial mathematics and remedial reading teacher. The funds for the program come from both the State and the Federal Governments. Most recently they come from the Office of Economic Opportunity under the anti-poverty legislation. Periodically as new budgets emerge each year, there is trepidation lest funds be slashed. This anxiety is shared by both staff and girls. There were times when appropriations were cut and the staff and the girls utilizing their prerogatives as citizens, wrote letters of protest to their legislators. Girls are not interested in government in the abstract. They become intensely interested in the workings of government, however, when government affects them. Thus, by writing letters, by becoming a pressure group, they learn at first hand about democratic procedures. This is indeed a lesson worth learning.

Money is extremely important to the girls and their families as it is to everyone. Equally as important, however, is the status that goes with the money and the job. Girls are not placed in menial positions. They are placed in offices, libraries, classrooms, and hospitals. They are now the authority figures. Girls who had once been rejected from their schools now return to the schools, not as students, but as assistants to the staff. The pride of the girls at this accomplishment is unmeasurable. Unfortunately, in many schools, students who are put into a work program are on their way out of the school. Generally they are placed in a work study program because they have failed in the academic program. It's a downward process from school to a labor market. The work program at the Livingston School, however, is an upward program. Pupils must earn their right to be in it. They must exhibit by demonstrated self-control, achievement, and good attendance that they are the elite of the school. Quite remarkably, it is this elite of the school who often find that they want to continue their own education. Working in positions of prestige, they learn the importance of more educational skills. They begin to want to continue their education on a more intensive basis. From the upper school, comes our greatest number of girls returning to the regular schools. Eventually they graduate from high schools, a few graduate from college. Approximately 25 percent of the entire school population returns to the regular school.

Almost all of this number have gone through our school-work sequence. It is not all an upward climb, however; there are incidents that were impossible to predict and therefore control. For instance, one girl with her first paycheck, left home. Another girl spent her entire salary on records and was brutalized by her parent. A third girl's parents took the girl's entire salary for themselves. Individual problems each one of them—but each was handled clinically and therapeutically by teachers, guidance counselors and members of the clinical staff.

The key to the success of the upper school lies in the qualities of the teachers. Because girls in STEP have just come from the lower school, they need more external controls imposed upon them than do the girls in the NYC program. When the girls are ready for the NYC program, they have internalized these controls. The controls and values of the teacher are now their controls and values. As this process takes place, the girls need to borrow less of the teacher's own strengths. In essence, they have developed egos of their own. The final success therefore for the girls going from the lower school through prep to STEP and finally to NYC is the development of their own self-concepts. They emerge from the upper school as young ladies of substance and quality.

INTER-RELIGIOUS COMMITTEE AGAINST POVERTY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. FOGARTY] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. FOGARTY. Mr. Speaker, this week an event of historical significance took place in this Capital City of Washington. Leaders of our three great religious faiths formed an Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty. Forty-five distinguished Americans, clergymen and lay leaders, have united in a most significant undertaking—support of a national commitment to wage war against poverty and to seek its broadest and most effective prosecution.

It comes as no surprise, of course, that the religious leaders of our Nation should enlist in this thoroughly holy war. What is significant is that it has been possible to forge a unity the like of which has rarely been seen. I append a list of the organizers of this great movement. I salute particularly the six cochairmen of this committee. They are: Rabbi Seymour J. Cohen, president of the Synagogue Council of America; Mrs. Louis Stern, former president, Council of Jewish Federation and Welfare Funds; Most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, S.T.D., Archbishop of San Antonio; Most Rev. Raymond J. Gallagher, D.C., Bishop of Lafayette, Ind.; Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, stated clerk, United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America; member, National Advisory Council to OEO; Dr. Norman J. Baugher, general secretary, General Brotherhood Board, Church of the Brethren, Church Division of Christian Life and Mission, National Council of Churches.

This committee, let me stress, is not an official Government-inspired committee. These religious leaders on their own organized themselves for this great cause. They are not and will never be apologists for any Government program. Theirs is an independent voice. It is particularly gratifying, therefore, that in the first statement issued by this committee, the committee halls recent actions of this Congress, including the Economic Opportunity Act. This statement recognizes that many of the programs "are already demonstrating their value." They ask that these programs be extended and intensified.

Mr. Speaker, these leaders of America know what they are talking about. They are not motivated by blind partisanship—as others have been recently—to attack and derogate vital programs. Who better than religious leaders know the needs of our people—know whether programs are in fact reaching the poor—know whether corruption has taken over these programs?

It is a great tribute to the work of this Congress and to the administrators of the war on poverty that such a distinguished group speaks out not only in support of the program but for its extension. This is the most eloquent answer imaginable to those who have made petty and uninformed attacks on the program.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to append the prospectus of the program, the statement adopted at an organizational meeting on January 18, and an article on the meeting from the New York Times. I should like to note, finally, that two of the leaders of this group are serving this Nation not only in this new capacity, but also as members of the National Advisory Council to the Office of Economic Opportunity. Appointed by President Johnson, Archbishop Lucey and Dr. Carson Blake have been kept fully informed about developments in the war on poverty and are in a unique position, therefore, to bring to the Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty relevant and up-to-date information about the program.

PREAMBLE

The problem of poverty and its solution have been the concern of Judaism and Christianity through the ages. Deeply imbedded in the prophetic literature of our religious heritage are the moral imperatives calling for the elimination of poverty. Among these are the conception that God created the earth and all its resources and found them good; that man was created and ordained for dominion over the earth and its fruits; that man has the obligation of trusteeship over the natural resources of earth; and that the will of God for man includes abundance of life, justice in human dealings and sharing of his gifts in charity and equity.

For the first time modern science and technological development make the elimination of poverty in the United States of America a possibility. United in the conviction that toleration of persistent poverty amidst our national affluence is morally indefensible and that the combined efforts of both voluntary and governmental agencies are required for the successful waging of a total war upon this social and moral blight, the Synagogue Council of America in cooperation with other Jewish bodies, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States, of America, and the National Catholic Welfare Conference are joining in the creation of an Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty.

PURPOSES OF THE COMMITTEE

The purposes of the Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty shall be:

1. To symbolize and communicate to their own constituencies and to the Nation the moral conviction that the persistence of involuntary poverty in a society possessing the resources and the technological capacity to eradicate it is both economically and politically indefensible and morally intolerable.

2. To identify major issues and areas of moral concern which emerge in connection with the total efforts to eliminate poverty in the United States, of America, and to study and evaluate current policies, programs and experiences in the war against poverty, both in the public sector and in the religious communities.

3. To apply the common ethical insights of the major religious traditions to formulation and application of goals and standards for the Nation's antipoverty efforts.

4. To stimulate and coordinate the antipoverty efforts of religious groups, agencies and institutions and to provide facilities for communication and liaison between such religious groups and the poverty-combating activities, both public and private, of the general community.

5. To encourage the creation where alternative means are nonexistent, unavailable or clearly inadequate, of instrumentalities for the utilization of resources—governmental, religious, private or foundation—for combating poverty.

6. To encourage the creation of such corporate or other instrumentalities as it may find necessary to mobilize and bring to bear the impact of the three religious communities, including their various local churches and synagogues, councils and judicial units, agencies and institutions, upon the elimination of poverty in the United States.

STRUCTURE OF THE COMMITTEE

The committee shall be composed of 50 to 60 persons of the highest standing chosen from the Jewish, Protestant and Orthodox, and Roman Catholic communities selected respectively by the Synagogue Council of America and cooperating Jewish bodies, the National Council of Churches, and the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The committee shall be an agency of the above-mentioned sponsoring bodies. The sponsoring bodies shall determine the personnel of the committee and their terms of office; determine and underwrite its budget; receive regular reports from the committee; and retain the power to terminate the committee.

The committee shall be brought into being by a joint declaration of duly authorized spokesmen of the three sponsoring bodies as soon as its members have been designated. It may be terminated at any time by a 3-months' written notice from any one of the sponsoring bodies.

The committee shall establish its rules of procedure and shall elect its own officers and standing committees.

OTHER ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS

Frequency of meetings: The committee shall meet at least semiannually, and may meet more frequently at its own discretion.

Budget: The committee shall formulate its own budget with the approval of the sponsoring bodies. The budget shall be funded in equal shares by the sponsoring bodies.

STATEMENT OF INTER-RELIGIOUS COMMITTEE AGAINST POVERTY, JANUARY 18, 1966

The leaders of churches, synagogues, and organizations cooperating through the Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty are committed to the proposition that the persistence of massive poverty in our society is a moral blight which can and must be eradicated.

Recent Federal legislation marks a great stride forward in America's efforts to achieve this national purpose. The passage of the Economic Opportunity Act, the legislation for Appalachia, the Manpower Development and Training Act, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, the Civil Rights Acts, Social Security Amendments including medicare, expansion of the rehabilitative focus of public welfare, legislation for housing, urban renewal, health, education, and other measures represent notable advances. What is on the statute books must be implemented and augmented to translate the hopeful potentialities of these goals into effective realities.

Many programs are already demonstrating their value. They should be extended and intensified. And where experience has indicated opportunities for improvement, such constructive advances should be made.

In view of the magnitude of the task and the experimental nature of these programs, some mistakes may well occur in their conception and implementation. While the duty of responsible criticism should be exercised, the entire effort should not be condemned because of occasional false starts, setbacks, or errors of judgment. Such problems are inherent in new programs and should be the stimulus to new and greater efforts and commitment.

THE PROGRAM MUST BE STRENGTHENED

Our military commitments in Vietnam have led some to suggest reduction or holding the line on the domestic antipoverty and health, and educational programs. We reject such proposals as a major retreat in the war on poverty, and a major defeat for America.

Hundreds of thousands of the poor are now participating in governmental antipoverty programs. Their opportunities must not be wasted or thwarted. Those now being assisted and the millions not yet being assisted must be helped to escape from poverty and to make their contribution to the strengthening of our society.

We urge that increased appropriations be provided to strengthen and broaden the Nation's programs to eliminate poverty.

Our country has both the material and human resources to expand and strengthen these programs. It would be a cruel injustice to require that the poor—the young, the old, the sick, the disadvantaged—should be the ones to make the major sacrifice for the other problems we must solve.

COMMUNITY ACTION

The Congress has wisely emphasized the importance of community action programs to encourage local initiative and responsibility for devising and administering programs best adapted to differing needs, problems, and circumstances.

Greater awareness of poverty in each community, deeper understanding of its causes, a firm resolve to overcome it, and the strengthening of communitywide bodies, with the fullest participation of voluntary agencies, are vital goals of antipoverty programs.

We urge continuing and increased support for the community action programs.

MAXIMUM FEASIBLE PARTICIPATION OF THE POOR

One of the most challenging aspects of the community action programs is the requirement that they be developed, conducted, and administered with the maximum feasible participation of residents of the area and members of the groups served.

This basic concept is an integral part of the religious and democratic commitment to help people help themselves. We deplore any attempt, national or local, to dilute the concept of maximum participation of the poor. We affirm our faith in the fact that their involvement is feasible, and should be viewed as a creative utilization of the natural human resources found in the community of the deprived who are themselves dedicated to ridding the Nation of poverty. Constructive participation of the poor in the conduct of these programs is achievable. The difficulties of accomplishing this purpose should not lessen our striving for its realization. We urge a redoubling of the efforts to encourage the full involvement of the poor in antipoverty programs.

THREE FAITHS JOIN TO COMBAT POVERTY

(By Nan Robertson)

WASHINGTON, January 18.—Roman Catholic, Protestant, and Jewish leaders formed a coalition today against poverty, which they assailed as "morally intolerable" in this rich Nation.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference, the National Council of Churches and the Synagogue Council of America, working with other Jewish groups, created a 45-member Inter-Religious Committee Against Poverty.

Its mission is to rally the full weight of their constituencies behind the poverty campaign.

Those on the committee, both laymen and clergy, directly represent hundreds of religious bodies of the three great faiths and indirectly represent tens of millions of Americans.

Vice President HUMPHREY and Sargent Shriver, Director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, were present at the news conference announcing the group's formation. Both expressed enthusiasm.

The Reverend Dr. Eugene Carson Blake of Philadelphia, stated clerk and highest official of the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, said the committee would support, coordinate, and criticize existing private and governmental programs for the poor, and perhaps would suggest additional ones.

RESOUNDING ACTION

Mr. HUMPHREY said the members were translating their faith into resounding action that will transform America.

The formation of the committee is an important extension of the all-faith cooperation that helped produce the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The Vice President said that "there wouldn't be any civil rights legislation without the margin of difference contributed by the clergy bringing their moral persuasion to bear. Every Member of Congress knows that fact."

The committee immediately issued a joint statement by the six cochairmen for more poverty funds (which Mr. HUMPHREY assured them would be asked in the President's budget message next Monday), and maximum participation for the poor in poverty programs.

"Hundreds of thousands of the poor are now participating in governmental antipoverty programs," Dr. Blake said. "Their opportunities must not be wasted or thwarted."

Calling participation of the poor "an integral part of the religious and democratic commitment to help people help themselves," the group deplored "any attempt, national or local" to dilute their involvement. Some big city mayors have resisted the demands of the poor for a voice in shaping community projects.

The group rejected suggestions that antipoverty programs be cut back or held at the present levels because of the increasing military commitment in Vietnam. They called such proposals "a major retreat in the war on poverty, and a major defeat for America."

The only other private antipoverty organization to compare in scope with the committee formed today is the Citizens Crusade Against Poverty. That coalition of more than 125 groups and leaders in civil rights, labor, agriculture, teaching, and business is headed by Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers. His union has given $12 million to the crusade.

There is some cross-fertilization between the crusade and the interreligious committee.

REUTHER ON COMMITTEE, TOO

Mr. Reuther is a member of the interreligious committee and attended today's meeting. Dr. Blake is chairman of the crusade's Commission on Community Activity and Organization. The crusade also includes some religious groups, among them representatives from the three bodies that joined forces today.

When asked if the committee would direct ministers, priests and rabbis throughout the Nation to "mount their pulpits" to preach involvement in the campaign against poverty, Dr. Blake replied:

Another of the cochairmen, Rabbi Seymour Cohen of Chicago, president of the synagogue council, rose in the conference room at the Capitol to give his answer.

IDEALISM AND REALITY

"There is a concrete need to close the gap between the idealism of our faith and the stark realities of society," he said. "We have a moral imperative to rise, to speak, to stir to action."

The four other cochairmen are Louis Stern of New York City, past president of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds; the Reverend Dr. Norman Baugher of Elgin, Ill., general secretary of the Church of the Brethren General Brotherhood Board; the Most Reverend Robert E. Lucey, Catholic bishop of San Antonio, Tex.; and the Most Reverend Raymond J. Gallagher, Catholic bishop of Lafayette, Ind., and formerly executive director of the National Conference of Catholic Charities.

The National Catholic Welfare Council is an association of about 300 American bishops. The National Council of Churches represents 30 Protestant, Anglican, and Greek Orthodox denominations. The Synagogue Council of America represents Orthodox, Conservative and Reform rabbis and presidents of congregations.

In another development tonight, Mr. Shriver said he believed that "one of the great contributions of the War on Poverty" was that the plight of 30 million poor Americans had been made visible and understandable to other, more fortunate Americans.

He said that to him one of the most interesting developments was the creation of Women in Community Service.

"It's composed of all four of the major religiously oriented women's organizations in the United States, and for the first time these four groups—Protestants, Catholics, Jewish people, and Negro women—have all gotten together" to fight poverty.

Mr. Shriver's remarks came during an interview on national educational television.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Msgr. John O'Grady

EXTENSION OF REMARKS OF

HON. JOHN W. McCORMACK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, January 20, 1966

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, under leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD, I include the following:

MSGR. JOHN O'GRADY

The death of Msgr. John O'Grady, while it has brought sorrow to all who knew him, has also brought rejoicing in the triumphant conclusion of a splendid life. The nature of the man, and the value placed upon him by those who best knew his character and achievements, are well expressed in the editorial with which the Washington Post saluted his passing. Evidently speaking from the heart, the editorial writer began with the memorable exclamation: "What a glorious, triumphant, robust, and joyous Christian life came to a close when the Right Reverend Monsignor John O'Grady died on Sunday." It is a strong temptation to make the eloquent words of this editorial tribute my own, as they compress so tellingly the many and varied contributions of this great man to America and to mankind, and carry over effectively to the reader the qualities of energy and compassion that made Monsignor O'Grady such a fighter for human needs and against injustice and intolerance.

Millions who have never heard of Monsignor O'Grady, and who presumably never will hear of him, are deeply in debt to his labors, and to those who have followed his lead. For more than 40 years he served with distinction as secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, holding the title of secretary emeritus at the time of his death on January 2, 1966. In this office, he was a major organizer of Catholic social welfare work both here and abroad, bringing both his scholarship and his boundless energy to bear on the many enterprises that came within the scope of this organization between 1919 and 1961, when he retired on account of ill health.

Even while carrying out the extensive duties of this position, Monsignor O'Grady became a founder of the National Catholic School of Social Work, in the Catholic University of America, and served as dean of that school from 1934 to 1938.

Monsignor O'Grady's was an effective voice in contributing to the study of legislation in social matters, since he combined the scholar's mastery of details with the executive's grasp of essentials. In housing, in social security, in employment of the physically handicapped, in nondiscrimination in employment, in immigration policies, in the resettlement of displaced persons, in the community approach to social welfare programs, Monsignor O'Grady has been a major contributor in the making of laws and in the establishment of government policy.

We who come of Irish stock take particular pride in the fact that Monsignor O'Grady was one of the great number of fine priests that have been contributed to America by Ireland. He was born in County Clare and ordained in Dublin; at his death he was survived by a brother living in County Clare, and a sister in Limerick.

Monsignor O'Grady's concerns and activities went beyond the borders of this country, not only in matters of the resettlement of refugees, and the liberalization of immigration laws, but in the far-flung benefactions of War Relief Services (later named Catholic Relief Services) of which he was vice president, and in his service as Consultant to the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations. In this capacity, he visited Africa to work on community development projects, and in 1959 he was cited by Pope John XXIII for his contributions to the welfare of Africa through this work. The Most Reverend Patrick A. O'Boyle, archbishop of Washington, said, upon hearing of Monsignor O'Grady's death: "His influence on charitable works of the church in this country and throughout the world for widespread social reforms will be long remembered. He was truly a modern apostle of Christian charity."

Monsignor O'Grady's theoretical emphasis on community service was also carried out in his life. Despite his national and worldwide interests, in the National Conference of Catholic Charities, and in his services as a consultant to various branches of the U.S. Government and to the United Nations, he was active locally as organizer of the Catholic Charities of Washington, which he headed from 1920 to 1938, and as professor of sociology at Trinity College for many years, besides his continuing interest in the National Catholic School of Social Work.

A great priest, an outstanding American, a valued friend of mine for many years, Monsignor O'Grady was "One of God's noblemen," during his many years of active, progressive, and constructive life. When things looked dark, Monsignor O'Grady was not only a bulwark of strength, but an inspiration to progressive Members of the Congress to fight successfully for the passage of progressive legislation in the best interests of the people.
